THE GREAT OBJECT OF ALL THESE GATHERINGS IS SPREADING THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD. WHILE THE CONVENTION WAS NOT HELD BEHIND CLOSED DOORS AND VARIOUS VISITORS ATTENDED, ONE INQUIRER COMING SEVERAL HUNDRED MILES TO LEARN ABOUT SO GREAT A CAUSE—YET THE ONE GREAT PLAN OF THE CONVENTION FOR SPECIAL CONTACT WITH THE PUBLIC WAS THE MEETING FOR TEACHING AT THE END. THIS WAS HELD IN THE TEMPLE FOUNDATION UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY. THERE WERE FLORAL DECORATIONS AND MUSIC WITH INSTRUMENT AND VOICE. THERE CAME AN EAGER CROWD OF INQUIRERS WHICH MADE EXTRA SEATS NECESSARY AND PLACED EVEN STANDING ROOM AT A PREMIUM. LESS THAN AN HOUR AND A HALF IN DURATION, IT WAS PLANNED SO AS TO REFRESH WITHOUT WEARINESS TO SO FINE AN AUDIENCE. THE SPEAKERS WERE MR. BISHOP BROWN OF PITTSBURGH AND MR. HOOVER HARRIS OF NEW YORK. MR. GREGORY WAS ASKED TO SERVE AS CHAIRMAN.

The first speaker, introduced as a man of affairs and student of modern trends, presented the Divine Cause as a means of illumination, life, and unity to all mankind. The spirit and scholarly polish of this address held the complete attention of the audience as it shed light on the mysteries of the ages and removed the clouds of today.

The second speaker, Mr. Harris, a veteran teacher experienced in service east and west, clarified the meaning of ancient prophecies and their fulfillment in this the Day of God. He traced the signs which indicated the appearance of the Divine Manifestation, proving their logic with irresistible arguments. The close attention which this meeting, especially the inquirers, gave to the messages was one more indication of the capacity of hearts nowadays. It is the train of the Manifested Glory of God, Bahá’u’lláh, which fills His Holy Temple. Peace be to His sincere servants and worshippers. His blessings are complete.

Beloved friends:

Ten years ago the affairs of the Bahá'í Faith in America began conscientiously and vigorously to reflect the laws of the new era released from the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá through the spirit of the Guardian. Regular and frequent correspondence with local Assemblies was initiated after the 1924 Convention. In December of that year the Bahá'í News Letter was established in order to convey full information, and especially the general letters received from the Guardian, to every recognized believer in the United States and Canada. It is significant to note at this time that in that first number of the News Letter the National Treasurer reported that during the period of six and one-half months ending October 16, 1924, the donations received amounted to $12,167.22. In that number also the National Spiritual Assembly announced that it had received $7,075 upon improvements in the Temple Foundation Hall, so that it might be usable for Bahá'í meetings. The Convention held in 1925 was the first Convention composed of ninety-five delegates in accordance with the Guardian's plan conveyed in the letter dated March 12, 1923. At that Convention, also, was presented the first written report ever delivered by the National Bahá'í representatives. Within a few months, the first Plan of Unified Action was adopted and issued to the American believers, and the gathering of the spiritual forces necessary for constructing the Temple of Bahá'ulláh in the Western World had definitely begun. The Convention held in 1926 was composed of delegates from forty-two local Bahá'í communities; this year delegates have been elected in fifty-seven communities. Since that modest sum of a little over $7,000 was spent upon the Foundation Hall, within less than eight years well-nigh $600,000 has been contributed and spent upon Temple construction. During 1924, the Guardian approved the idea of an international Bahá'í year book.

This brief glance back over the path traversed in ten years reveals the first indications of that mighty and irresistible momentum which shall continue unchecked until the whole world of humanity is embraced in one Faith and one Order. It should be more than sufficient evidence that any momentary doubt in the heart of any believer is but shadow lacking substance—it is in truth more than sufficient to confirm our collective courage, clarify our vision and redouble our efforts to render real and enduring services to the glorious Kingdom.

For far greater than any material gain achieved in this decade has been the spiritual progress. In 1924, it can be asserted without fear of contradiction, the American Bahá'ís had no clear standard to uphold even in the fundamentally important matter of passing upon the qualifications of members in the Bahá'í community. The doors were held open for the entrance of applicants entertaining views and opinions of extreme variety and contradiction and not compelled to show evidences that they possessed the spirit of unity. From that darkened twilight of half-truth and divided loyalty, the American Bahá'í community has now, thanks to the Guardian's wisdom, forever emerged. The standard of reality has been created on the field of human action and intercourse as it had been created in the field of the spirit by Bahá'ulláh.

But that progress has not been achieved without some degree of confusion, of perplexity, and of grief. The law of motion, which the Master declared to be the law of life itself, cannot be applied to a great community of human beings without some suffering caused by the need of individuals to readjust, some to the very fact of motion and progress, others to the direction, the goal, to which the movement is aimed. The spiritual history of this decade can be written in these few, simple words: We have moved forward from individualism to the organic community, from personality to the unified body of the Cause. The very basis of that confidence in the superiority of individual "inspiration" and "guidance" which in the past has prevented the attainment of true unity, has now been destroyed by these remarkable words written by the Guardian in his recent general con-munication published as "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh"—"They (referring to the Universal House of Justice)—They, and not the body of those who either directly or indirectly elect them, have thus been made the recipients of the divine guidance which is at once the life-blood and ultimate safeguard of this Revelation." These words make it perfectly clear that the blessings of the heavenly world are, in this cycle, to be released for the community of the believers and not granted as separate and distinct gifts to individuals. The individual who seeks to receive his share of this divine outpouring must be devoted, mind, soul and spirit, to the needs of the community and wholly consecrated to general ends raised high above the plane of selfish ambition. This conception of divine law is what, in essence, differentiates the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh from all previous Revelations. That we have attained to its understanding within the present year means surely that the time has come when we must cease being "Christian-Bahá'ís," or "Muhammadan-Bahá'ís," or any other kind of divided Bahá'í, and become Bahá'ís in the true meaning of that word. As the Guardian declared in that same communication: "It should be noted . . . that this Administrative Order is fundamentally different from anything that any Prophet has previously established."

Now let us visualize the present area and resources of the American Bahá'í community. When all reports have been received and passed on concerning local elections held on April 21, 1934, it is probable that the number of existing organized Bahá'í communities in the United States and Canada will be fifty-nine. In addition there are more than ten local groups which can elect a Spiritual Assembly, in all likelihood, within a few years. The task of properly registering the isolated believers is not yet completed, but among them we can count in addition one or two hundred believers any or all of whom, with assistance, may become the nucleus of Bahá'í communities in the future.

The properties held in trust for the American Bahá'ís now consist of the House of Worship with its surrounding land and also at Geyserville, by Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm at West Englewood, the house and land at Malden, Massachusetts left to Shoghi Effendi by the late Maria P. Wilson, and property at Dublin, New Hampshire which Mrs. Parsons expressly wish to donate as a memorial to 'Abdul-Bahá in letters written shortly before her recent lamentable death. While no arbitrary value can be set upon these Bahá'í properties, they represent more than a million dollars of assets to the Cause. Who would attempt to fix a price for the spiritual treasures deposited in the Archives?

The national Bahá'í activities are conducted through about thirty committees appointed annually by the National Spiritual Assembly. Taking into consideration the local Assemblies, the groups and the national committees, there are at present more than one hundred different Bahá'í bodies with which the National Assembly conducts correspondence and whose activities it endeaors to supervise within this country alone. Besides such purely Bahá'í activities of a spiritual character, its responsibility includes three summer schools, the publication and sale of books, pamphlets and magazines, and the construction and use of the House of Worship. To trace the ramifications of all these Bahá'í activities, it is necessary to follow with close attention the committee reports as submitted and published at the conclusion of each Bahá'í year.

The particular branch of activity maintained by each committee is capable of indefinite expansion. Teaching, publishing, publicity—to name only three activities—vigorously though they are now being promoted, will in the future, and perhaps in the near future, assume the proportions of tremendous national enterprises.

The records of the National Spiritual Assembly are complete for at least twelve years. It would be difficult to imagine any type of situation which has not been encountered in the deliberations of the National Assembly during those years.

For the coordination of all these activities, and the maintenance of conscious unity, the News Letter was established and has been continued without interruption. It may well be regarded in the light of constant reports of progress made to the believers, their source of information on general Bahá'í affairs, and above all, their medium of contact with the Guardian of the Faith. Its expansion and development, especially in the regular reporting of local Bahá'í news, is entirely a question of financial capacity on the part of the National Fund. When the resources are made available, that expansion will undoubtedly be undertaken by the National Spiritual Assembly then in office. The conviction freely expressed at the Convention last year, that local communities and individual believers should give more attention to Bahá'í News, is an indication that a new and more profound feeling of responsibility has arisen.

The American National Assembly has one international Bahá'í function given by the Guardian himself, the preparation of material, through a Committee, for The Bahá'í World, and the publication and sale of this biennial record.

Three Major Events

Turning now to the Bahá'í year which closes with this Annual Meeting. The current year has been characterized with three events of major importance. In their chronological order they were: the martyrdom of Mrs. Keith Ranson-Kehler during the performance of her important mission in Persia—a martyrdom not physically inflicted by enemies but voluntarily accepted by that noble spirit, whose efforts to remove the disabilities suffered by our Persian co-workers depleted her energies and opened the door to fatal disease; the completion of the external decoration of the Temple dome unit on March 3, 1934; and the receipt of the Guardian's extraordinary letter on "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh" written at Haifa on February 8, 1934, and distributed to the friends in pamphlet form a number of weeks ago. The completion of the dome unit also synchronized with the adoption of a new contract under which the clerestory section of the Temple is to be decorated during 1934.

An article commemorating Mrs. Ransom-Kehler's mission and martyrdom in Persia was published in Baha'i News of January, 1934. That statement culminated in the Guardian's words, conveyed in a cablegram dated October 30, 1933: "Keith's precious life offered up in sacrifice to beloved Cause in Bahá'u'lláh's native land. On Persian soil, for Persia's sake, she encountered, challenged and fought the forces of darkness with high distinction, indomitable will, unswerving, exemplary loyalty. The mass of her helpless Persian brethren mourns the sudden loss of their valiant emancipator. American believers grateful and proud of the memory of their first and distinguished martyr. Sorrow stricken, I lament my earthly separation from an invaluable collaborator, an unfailing counsellor, an esteemed and faithful friend. I urge the local Assemblies befittingly to organize memorial gatherings in memory of one whose international services entitled her to an eminence rank among the Hands of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh."

As to the aim of her services in Persia—the removal of the disabilities laid upon the Faith in that country—more detailed reference is made farther on in this report.

The Guardian's frequent and impressive statements on the subject of the continuance of Temple construction have quickened us all to a profounder understanding of the many significances attached to this tremendous enterprise. We know today that the collective responsibilities borne by the American Bahá'ís, since a resumption of Temple construction was undertaken about nine years ago, have had incalculable results in uniting the believers on the plane of sacrifice and action and in opening the door to a greater influx of spirit, for the strengthening and inspiration of the entire Bahá'í body. We behold clearly, furthermore, that the Bahá'í House of Worship, rising in the very heart of the Western World, has created a visible evidence of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh which has astonishing influence upon the public. Last of all, we are beginning to realize that, step by step with the successful prosecution of this mighty task, the Temple has the significance of increasing Shoghi Effendi's capacity to exemplify his station of Guardian and Interpreter of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh not merely for the little present company of Bahá'ís but for the entire world. By this concentration of effort, by this surpassing sacrifice, the believers are given the glorious privilege of hastening that consummation most to be desired in these days of suffering and confusion—the recognition by all mankind of the divine foundation which has been laid for Universal Peace in the Bahá'í institutions of the Guardianship and the House of Justice.

Touched by such thoughts, the National Spiritual Assembly several months ago inquired of Shoghi Effendi whether he would advise a continuance of Temple construction under a new contract calling for the decoration of the clerestory section this year. It was only after his sanction and complete approval had been received that the Assembly felt justified in bidding the Temple Trustees proceed with a new contract which prolongs the period of rigorous economy and sacrifice another year.

What now can be said of the third great event of this Bahá'í year—the Guardian's communication on "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh"? Is this not, in itself, a spiritual blessing far outweighing the extent of our collective sacrifices to the National Fund? Is it not a source of inspiration, of insight, of spiritual knowledge, of calm courage, more than sufficient to enable us to face and overcome the greater problems that lie ahead? Shoghi Effendi's letter has already penetrated the hearts and minds of the friends in every community, but let us recall at this time at least two quotations: "The world's equilibrium," (words of Bahá'u'lláh) "hath been upset through the vibrating influence of this most great, this new World Order. Man-kind's ordered life hath been revolutionized through the agency of this unique, this wondrous System—the like of which mortal eyes have never witnessed." And these words, also of Bahá'u'lláh: "By the sorrows which afflict the beauty of the All-Glorious! Such is the station ordained for the true believers that if to an extent smaller than a needle's eye the glory of that station were to be unveiled to mankind, every beholder would be consumed away in his longing to attain it. For this reason it hath been decreed that in this earthly life the full measure of the glory of his own station should remain concealed from the eyes of such a believer." With this quotation is paralleled these words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá: "The station which he who hath truly recognized this Revelation will attain is the same as the one ordained for such prophets of the house of Israel as are not regarded as Manifestations 'endowed with constancy.'"

Within this ocean of mystery, dear friends, we swim as fish ignorant of its nature; in such a Household we dwell as children unaware of the blessings it contains!

One important remark, however, the National Spiritual Assembly feels it is incumbent to express in relation to the Guardian's letter: namely, that it constitutes our standard of reality in understanding and in giving the true Message. It is our standard of truth in determining the qualifications of those who apply for membership in any Bahá'í community.

Underlying Trends

Each succeeding Bahá'í year is not only a sequence of external events but also the working out of certain underlying trends, often glimpsed but obscurely, which reflect the collective feelings and thoughts of the friends at the time.

Three underlying trends seem to emerge as careful study is given to the period traversed since the last Convention.

One of these trends was a poignant conviction that the believers, the Temple dome not having been completed by June 1, 1933, and the Guardian's appeal cabled to that Convention having no visible or rather perceptible response in action commensurate with its vital importance, had somehow failed in their Bahá'í mission and in this failure had become responsible for the possibility of general disaster to the country itself.

Such a conviction requires most careful consideration, because if deepened and prolonged it can weaken and divert the collective forces by which the entire Bahá'í community is sustained.

The direct outcome of that attitude was a suggestion received by the National Assembly soon after the Convention from a number of local Assemblies, urging on the one hand that the Guardian be invited to America, and on the other hand that a great public meeting be arranged in the House of Worship at which the rulers of all nations declare to have their attention called to Bahá'u'lláh's World Plan. This striking courageous and heart-felt suggestion was studied, with the result that the National Assembly became convinced that the hopes and thoughts of the friends should be rallied around the unfinished task of Temple construction, in which task our highest hopes can alone be fulfilled, and that no such impressive teaching effort could attain success if based upon failure in our Temple work given us by the Guardian himself.

These words, written to the Assembly by the Guardian on June 17, 1933, seemed to confirm that view: "The thing that is most urgent and of supreme importance is to insure . . . the uninterrupted progress of the organization work of the Temple." On July 26, the Assembly received this cablegram: "On early completion this mighty enterprise must chiefly depend satisfactory solution grave issues confronting Faith throughout East." On October 7, another cablegram was received as follows: "Maintenance full construction schedule indispensable agency (to) enhance worldwide prestige (of) American Bahá'ís. (to) further its aims, enrich its life, cement its unity and consecrate its outstanding achievements. Praying incessantly fulfillment its high destiny." Finally, the cablegram dated November 18, 1933: "Bahá'í communities East and West acclaim with one voice the stupendous achievements of those responsible for this latest manifestation of America's superb, sustained self-sacrifice. Supreme Concourse echo praises of those whose shining deeds are shedding on the Bahá'í name a great, imperishable lustre. My heart swells with admiration and gratitude as I contemplate the increasing evidences of American believers' well-deserved, steadily advancing fame. The hour of Victory is at hand—America's invincible heroism must and will achieve it."

It is surely helpful to trace an important Bahá'í attitude or conviction throughout its whole cycle of influence. We see from this brief record that a goal once established by the Guardian cannot be abandoned, cannot be replaced with any other objective, but remains the end of collective effort until completely attained. The power of service is surely given us in order to assist in the achievement of such universal goals as those which Shoghi Effendi from time to time sets up for the Bahá'í community, and not for the promotion of any temporary or local object. This thought is greatly confirmed by those words of the Guardian quoted in the special Temple letter issued by the National Assembly from Evanston on September 26, 1933: "Great as has been the measure of their self-sacrifice, yet unless they redouble their efforts and concentrate all their resources to bring the whole work to a successful completion, their energies will have been spent in vain."

The second underlying trend this year has been to clarify the important subject of the Annual Convention. The final result is that the Guardian has again explained this subject, and a compilation of all his references to this matter was published in November BAHÁ'Í NEWS and continued in the issue of February, 1934. The understanding which the National Assembly has of the nature of the Annual Meeting has been made the subject of a separate statement and therefore need not be duplicated in this report. It may well be remarked, however, that such trends are bound to develop from time to time as the Bahá'í community receives a new influx of vital power. The steady evolution from the dominance of personality to the emergence of the institution which is the history of the era which began with the Guardianship, makes it inevitable, and exceedingly desirable, that each and all the permanent Bahá'í institutions—the Convention, the local Spiritual Assembly, etc.—become the subject of vigorous discussion to the end that its full scope and proper operation be clearly comprehended by the entire community. Such discussion stimulates thought, enlarges the vision and confirms the true believers in the spirit of loyalty and devotion. It is not merely lack of knowledge but also confusion of motives which hinders our collective development from that degree of unity and power required for the full unfolding of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The third important trend this year may be termed the increasing importance of America in the international Bahá'í community, a trend whose spiritual source lies in the Guardian's letter entitled "America and the Most Great Peace," the text of which was read at the Convention last year. Before that Convention closed, as the friends will recall, the delegates adopted a powerful resolution pledging support to the National Assembly in its effort to alleviate the sufferings and remove the injustices still endured by the Persian Bahá'ís. That effort, reported in part in the article commemorating Mrs. Keith Ransom-Keh-

Decisions of the N. S. A.

In general letters and also in BAHÁ'Í NEWS, the National Assembly during the past year has discussed with the local Assemblies a number of important subjects. Among these were:

1. The election of new Assemblies at Indianapolis, Cabin John, Toledo, Spokane, Monroe and Colorado Springs.

2. The recommendation by local Assemblies of names of believers to be considered in the appointment of National Committees.

3. The reminder that traveling teachers are under the jurisdiction of the National Assembly in each city, and where no Assembly exists, they are under the jurisdiction of the National secutive Nineteen Day Feasts the believers join in the Master's Prayer for the Baha'i Community.

The suggestion that local As­ semblies bring up for discussion at Nineteen Day Feasts the articles and statements in Baha'i News which call for cooperative effort.
An explanation of the threefold character of the Nineteen Day Feast.
The reminder of the vital importance of the local Spiritual Assembly in creating the conditions estential to the success of every national Baha'i undertaking.
The hope that matters of local importance can be settled locally, to free the National Assembly from petty questions and enable it to consider larger questions of national policy.
The decision that the removal of believers from the voting list by local Assemblies be made conditional ject from Shoghi Effendi.

The decision to hold a national Baha'i meeting of thanksgiving and consecration in the House of Worship when the dome unit is completed and its cost entirely paid.
The decision that anonymous communications are not in conformity with the spirit or letter of the Teachings, and furthermore that the general distribution of any letter by an individual believer is an improper method of Baha'i consultation.
The issuing of the Convention
call on March 9, 1934.
The recommendation that each unincorporated local Assembly study carefully and follow the procedures and guiding principles defined in the local
By-Laws approved by the Guardian.
The distribution to the entire body of believers of the Guardian's letter, "The Dispensation of Baha'ullah," with the suggestion that it be made the subject of special consultation and that in preparing new believers for entrance into the community, the final teaching given then

The preparation of an Outline and Summary by the National Assem­ly as material to be filed in newspaper offices and other organizations where it is important that accurate information about the Cause be available.
The information that the Guardi­ ian does not wish us to pay attention to the erroneous publicity emanating from the New History Society.
The explanation that the circular letter issued by the Boston Assemby in April, 1934, was an improper method of Baha'i consultation.
The issuing to all local Assem­ bies of a photograph illustrating the completed Temple dome.
31. The reminder that traveling believers should carry Baha'i credentials.
32. The publication of Baha'i Directory.
33. The publication in Baha'i News of a statement summarizing the Guardian's instructions on the subject of the non-political character of the Baha'i Faith.
34. Continuance of the effort to make an accurate and complete registry of isolated believers and the memers of local groups, by means of an enrollment card to be signed by each believer desiring recognition as a Baha'i.
35. The publication in Baha'i News of a statement defining the rights of individual Baha'is.
36. The similar publication of a statement on the spiritual character of Baha'i elections.
37. The decision that local As­ semblies can hold Baha'i meetings at any convenient time, without regard to the customs and practices of the churches.
38. The decision that local Assem­ bies are to submit to the National Assembly for final approval their plans for local incorporation before the legal action is consummated.
39. The decision that Baha'i contact with Federal and State officials should be made through the National Spiritual Assembly.
40. The adoption of a list of topics to be discussed by individual memers of the National Assembly in visiting local Assemblies:
A. How is the Baha'i News distributed to all local believers and what steps are taken to discuss its contents?
B. How are the Nineteen Day Feasts carried on and are they attended by all members of the community?
C. How often does the Spiritual
Assembly hold its meetings?
D. How large a proportion of the local community is active in Baha'i service?
E. Does the entire community thoroughly understand the importance of meeting the Guardian's wishes for the immediate completion of the Temple Dome?
F. How can the local teaching activities be expanded?
G. How is Baha'i literature distributed to non-Baha'is, and how does the community handle the distribution of literature to believers?
H. How large a proportion of the believers support the Baha'i Fund?
I. Does the Spiritual Assembly take up and explain national and international Bahá’í matters, as explained in the Guardian’s letters and as from time to time reported in Bahá’í News?

41. The decision that the sole function of the Reviewing Committee is to examine and pass upon manuscripts with respect to their accuracy in conformity to the established Teachings, and that when the Reviewing Committee has passed upon the manuscript, the manuscript is then to be handed to the Editorial Committee to report to the National Assembly whether the manuscript is a desirable and useful contribution to Bahá’í literature. When the National Assembly has given its approval to a manuscript, it must have opportunity to see the final proof before the manuscript is published in book or pamphlet form.

42. The decision that the discount of 33 1/3 per cent given by the Publishing Committee shall be extended only to local Assemblies and not to groups.

43. The decision that the preparation of local groups for the election of a Spiritual Assembly shall be under the supervision of the National Teaching Committee.

44. The following views were recorded after consideration of a number of questions raised by a local Assembly. They are reported here as they touch upon matters of general interest.

A. Members of a local community have the right to the local membership list at local elections. The list can be prepared alphabetically, and copies handed out for use only during the period of balloting.

B. When a believer is admitted into membership in a Bahá’í community, he thereby receives all the rights, privileges and duties of Bahá’í membership, and it is for the Spiritual Assembly to postpone the admission of applicants until they have familiarized each applicant with the members of the community. In other words, it is part of the teaching responsibility of a local Assembly to make applicants acquainted with their fellow believers. Otherwise a new believer is unable to use his voting right intelligently.

45. The publication in Bahá’í News, November, 1933, of a statement emphasizing the spiritual basis of all teaching work.

46. The publication in the same medium of a general statement on Plans and Policies for the Coming Bahá’í Year, to rally the forces and unite the activities of the friends.

As is apparent, the above list is very long and the details are easily forgotten unless some effort be made to recapitulate such items at the end of every Bahá’í year.

Communications from the Guardian

The Guardian’s communications. The past year, notable in that it marks the writing of “The Dispensation of Bahá’ulláh,” has been enriched with many other letters and cablegrams from Shoghi Effendi. As far as possible, these have been shared with the believers in Bahá’í News and also in the general letters issued to local Assemblies. A number of more important subjects are referred to here, that they may be more firmly held in mind.

1. The conditions under which Bahá’ís may associate with the World Fellowship of Faiths and similar organizations. Published in August, 1933.

2. The “magnificent achievement of the American believers” in promoting the Temple construction. Printed in September, 1933.

3. The passionate appeal cabled on November 2, 1933, and at once shared with the local Assemblies:—

“Appeal! hard pressed American believers heed this, my last passionate entreaty, not to suffer slightest interruption in Temple construction to dim the magnificence of their epoch making enterprise. The fair name of our beloved Faith is at stake. Its American stalwart defenders will once again vindicate its triumphant glory. I promise one year’s respite upon successful conclusion first stage of the ornamentation of our glorious Temple.”

4. Explanations of a number of questions:—congregational prayer, the nature of the Nineteen Day Feasts, the instruction that prominent people should be approached by individual believers only with the assistance of the local or National Assembly, instructions on the conduct of Bahá’í Summer Schools. Published in October, 1933.

6. Letters to the National Assembly concerning the station of Keith Ransom-Kehler, requesting that a model of the Temple be sent for the International Archives, describing conditions in Persia and requesting further effort to bring about relief, and stating that any slackness in the energy and enthusiasm of the friends, at this critical and most decisive moment, will have severe repercussions on the Cause. Published in January, 1934.

7. Explanations and comments made to individual believers, in reply to questions on a variety of subjects. Published in January, 1934.

8. Cablegram heartily welcoming proposal that Temple construction be continued under a new contract. Published in February, 1934.

9. Explanation of the nature of the Guardian’s letters to individual believers. Published in February, 1934.

10. Approval of the teaching bulletin issued by the National Assembly. Published in February, 1934.

11. Letter to Mr. Joas, chairman of the Teaching Committee, March 5, 1934:—

“Concerning the abolition of the institution of paid national teachers, the Guardian wishes to reaffirm his former statements on this matter, and to stress once more that great care be taken to avoid the difficulties and the misunderstandings which in former days had caused so much trouble among the friends. The main point to be emphasized in this connection is that of making the teachings of the Cause not the work of a limited group but the chief duty and responsibility of every Bahá’í. This is why no salaried teachers should any longer exist. But occasionally to defray the expenses of a teaching trip of a certain Bahá’í, particularly when it is done spontaneously, can cause no harm to the Cause. Such an action, provided it is done with care and only when circumstances make it necessary, constitutes no violation of the principle already referred to. The danger in all activities of this nature is to give the impression that the teaching of the Cause is an institution, depending on the support of paid teachers. Those who willingly and with utmost detachment arise to promote the Cause should, undoubtedly, be helped in every way. But they have no claim whatever on the financial help which some friends may freely choose to extend to them.”

unauthentic character of the illustration of the Bab appearing in the work by Nicola, and the early signs of the spiritual renaissance, with a correction of a previous explanation of the teachers sent by the Master to America. Published in May, 1934.

15. In several communications Shoghi Effendi has given instructions concerning the relation of local Assemblies to the National Assembly. Writing the San Francisco Assembly on February 19, 1934, the Guardian, through his secretary, in acknowledging receipt of a copy of San Francisco Baha'i News, declared:

"On behalf of the Guardian I wish to thank you for your welcome letter of Jan. 23d, as well as for the enclosed December and January issues of the San Francisco news letter, all of which gave him a clear account of the progress of the Cause in that centre.

"He would greatly appreciate if you send him regularly two copies of your local news letter. He would also advise you to send to each of the Bahai National Spiritual Assemblies a copy of that circular which will, undoubtedly, prove of great interest to them.

"However, in view of the principle that local activities should always be subordinated to the national interests, needs and requirements of the Faith, he feels that your Assembly should be careful not to develop their local organ to the extent that would jeopardize the national activities of the Cause in their country. Just as all local institutions, whether administrative or otherwise, must under all circumstances be considered as subsidiary to national organizations, so also local circular letters should be viewed as secondary in importance compared to the national organ of Baha'i activities. This principle, however, should not be interpreted as being detrimental to the local interests of the Baha'i community, but as an essential, nay indispensable means, whereby the administrative system of the Cause can work with efficiency and order."

On February 20, a similar letter was sent the New York Assembly, from which the following excerpt is quoted:

"Just as the local Baha'i fund must under all circumstances be subordinated to the national fund, so also, every local circular letter should be considered as subsidiary to the national report of Baha'i activities in every country. Such a coordination between local and national efforts is indispensable, not only because of its economic advantages, but essentially due to the fact that upon the application of the principle underlying this process must inevitably depend the effective working of the entire administrative machinery of the Faith. There is order, coordination and system in the Cause, and not a jumble of conflicting interests and of continually clashing wills."

This question is decisively settled in a letter to the National Assembly dated May 10, 1934: "Concerning local Baha'i news letters, the Guardian strongly feels that they should be primarily devoted to the spread of local news and activities, and should under no circumstances contain any statement implying criticism of or even interference with the policy of the N. S. A. They may occasionally refer to items of a national scope, but this should be done only with the view of assisting and not hindering the national body of the Cause to carry out effectively its program and decisions. There is thus a definite line of demarcation between correspondence initiated by local and National Assemblies. Local activities should always be subordinated to those of a national character and importance. This is intended not to minimize the role of the local Assembly in the administrative order, but to establish and insure a sane relationship between that body and the national organism of the Cause."

Reference to other communications from Shoghi Effendi is made in other sections of this report.

Important Events of the Year

An effort will now be made to outline the more important events of this year.

Important donations have been made by Mr. and Mrs. John Bosch and Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm in the form of property. Mrs. Agnes Parsons made clear her intention to donate property at Dublin, New Hampshire, and her family will no doubt carry out this spiritual intention. A bequest in the amount of $1,000 has been received under the will and testament of the late Miss Elizabeth Sherman, and this donation was used in the form of a memorial to her by devoting it to the purchase of land on Mount Carmel.

The older believers throughout the United States and Canada have made an excellent beginning on the preparation of material for the history of the Baha'i Faith in America. The National Assembly appeals for the immediate cooperation of all local Assemblies and older believers in the completion of this important task laid upon us by the Guardian in 1933.

Mr. Louis J. Voelz has prepared and shipped to the Guardian a beautiful model of the Baha'i House of Worship.

The Archives Committee has begun to catalog the contents of the National Baha'i Archives, preparatory to the transfer of these treasures to an Archives Room in the Temple foundation when funds permit its construction. Believers having original Tablets from Abdul-Baha and other precious Baha'i papers and documents are urged to send these to the Archives Committee.

Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan has at the Guardian's request made a new translation of Seven Valleys and also Four Valleys which is to be published immediately.

Local Assemblies have reported a greater number of new voting believers this year than ever before. The general teaching effort has been greatly increased.

The Chicago Assembly, with the cooperation of many individual believers, and with the assistance of a special committee appointed by the National Assembly, conducted a display of the Temple model in the Hall of Religions during the 1933 session of the Century of Progress Exposition, in connection with which visitors were given an explanation of the Temple, of the teachings, and presented with free literature.

The House of Worship has become the center of spiritual attraction for people from all parts of the country. It is now recognized as one of the important features to be visited by all who come to Chicago.

The three Baha'i Summer Schools have greatly improved their teaching classes and discussion groups, and are to be regarded as vitally important institutions in our national Baha'i community.

Teaneck, New Jersey, Washington, D. C. and Montreal, Quebec, have prepared articles of incorporation, as reported in greater detail by the Legal Committee.

Mrs. Doris Holley has made an Index to Baha'i News from December, 1924, to November, 1933, containing some two thousand references. This Index is now being mimeographed and copies will be sent local Assemblies and also offered for sale to individual believers.

Steps have been taken to secure legal protection to confirm the use of the symbol of the Greatest Name to the Bahai's, preventing its misuse by non-believers.

A letter of appreciation has been written to Marie, Dowager Queen of Rumania, at the Guardian's request, expressing gratitude for her latest written tribute to the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh. This tribute will be reproduced in the next volume of The Bahá'í World.

Recent advices from Persia and also from Australia and New Zealand state that National Spiritual Assemblies have been elected in those lands. This is a matter of very great international Bahá'í importance which seem to call for careful consideration not only by the delegates but by local Assemblies and the body of the American believers.

The national By-Laws have been amended by striking out Section 12 of Article VIII, which defined the delegates as a consultative body existing throughout the year, Shoghi Effendi having made it clear that the continuous consultation is to be conducted through the local Assemblies. Article 7 of Article VIII has been amended by adding the words "by ballot" to the sentence referring to the election of the Convention Chairman and Secretary.

The activities of American believers in other lands are a very important part of our current Bahá'í history.

The great services rendered throughout so many years by Miss Martha Root, Miss Agnes Alexander, Mrs. Louis Gregory, Miss Leonora Holzapple, Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Max Greetven, Mrs. Emogene Hoag, Mrs. Lynch, Dr. Susie T. Moody, Mr. Mountfort Mills, Miss Edith Sanderson, Miss Marion Jack, Mrs. Edwin Scott, Miss Adelaide Sharp and Mrs. Sharp, Mr. Mark Tobey and Mrs. Marjorie Morton, we more recently have cause for profound gratitude in the sacrifices and accomplishments of Mrs. Keith Ransom-Kehler in Persia, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Carpenter in Thrain, Miss Louise Wright in Holland, Miss Julia Goldman in Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop at Geneva, and Mrs. Loulie Mathews during her recent travels to Australia and the South Seas.

Matters for Special Consideration

In conclusion, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to express a few thoughts on subjects of permanent Bahá'í importance which seem to call for careful consideration not only by the delegates but by local Assemblies and the body of the American believers.

1. The local Spiritual Assembly is a Bahá'í institution capable of expansion along many lines. Its power to render service to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is limited only by our own degree of collective local unity and understanding. Within its sphere of local jurisdiction the Spiritual Assembly must assume more and more responsibility in fulfilling the duties laid upon it in the Guardian's general letters. The maintenance of unity and capacity for community action, the solving of personal problems, the promotion of teaching plans, the explanation of national policies and plans which can be achieved only by the cooperation of every part of the American Bahá'í community, the continuous development of the true Bahá'í spirit and knowledge through the Nineeen Day Feasts and other local meetings, these and other obligations create the opportunity and capacity unequalled by membership in any other movement or organization in the world. Year by year more is demanded of every Spiritual Assembly, as the mysterious power of the Cause is released in greater abundance. The measure of service enlarges steadily as the needs of the world increase.

2. One of the supreme blessings of American believers for many years was to receive individual Tablets from the Master, revealed in answer to communications sent Him by hundreds of the friends. The Guardian has maintained this blessing in his special station, never failing in his expression of loving wisdom to his personal correspondents. But aAbsolute determination to spread throughout the entire world must inevitably develop to a point where the sheer number of adherents will make it impossible for the Guardian to continue personal contact with all individual Bahá'ís. Has not the time come when, as individual believers, we should ponder this vital matter, and scrupulously weigh the importance of our individual wishes and desires against the importance of the Guardian's mission, with its vital and irreplaceable responsibility for the achievement of universal ends? Does any one believer really wish to add unnecessarily to the burden of that task? Shall we, through mere thoughtlessness, bring Shoghi Effendi to the point of complete fatigue? Can any letter received by an individual believer convey more than is conveyed to us all in the Guardian's general communications? This is one of the most delicate and vitally important questions which American believers can consider at this time.

3. The three Bahá'í Summer Schools are institutions which deserve the whole-hearted support of every local Assembly. The world is full of organized sources of knowledge which mislead the minds and hearts of the younger generation, and confirm the older generations in their present religious, economic and social prejudices. The Bahá'í Summer Schools, feeble by comparison, are today the firm beginnings of our most effective effort to educate people in the divine teachings. An appeal is made to every American Bahá'í to do his utmost to enroll in one of the three Schools, deepen his spiritual knowledge, enlarge his personal acquaintance with his fellow believers, and contribute to the development of the future Universities reflecting into the world the light of God's holy Revelation.

4. The basis and foundation of collective Bahá'í progress and achievement is the right use of the universal principle of consultation. Let no personal limitations in our Bahá'í consultation, all griefs, suspicions and fears, all dependence upon personal influence, and frankly and whole-heartedly participate in those general discussions devoted to purely Bahá'í ends. It is a pity that here and there the Nineteen Day Feast is not yet appreciated, but some of the friends appear still to feel that conversation in a little, intimate group is more interesting and important than those general meetings held for the entire community. It should be apparent by now that the life of the Holy Spirit sustains the Tree, and only as we form part of that Tree as leaves upon its branches and twigs can we receive any portion of that true life.

5. The National Assembly believes sincerely that during the coming Bahá'í year two considerations should be kept uppermost—the completion of the new Temple contract for the external decoration of the clerestory section, including the repayment of the $10,000 borrowed in March to make up a deficit for the dome contract, and continuous study and discussion of the Guardian's letter on "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh" in order that we may be united in the inner reality of the teachings and regenerated for the greater duties and responsibilities which lie ahead.

The first is dated May 12, 1934: "Urge believers strictly adhere (to) National Assembly's instructions regarding anonymous letters." The second is dated May 18, 1934: "Prolonged negotiations (with) Palestine authorities (has) resulted (in) exemption from taxation (of the) entire area surrounding dedicated Shrines (on) Mount Carmel. Mountfort's notable share in securing implicit recognition (of the) sacredness (of the) Faith's International Center heightens (the) value (of) his services (to) Bahá'u'lláh's House in Bagdad."

May this note of spiritual victory sound throughout the coming Bahá'í year!

Yours faithfully,
National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada,
By: HORACE HOLLEY, Secretary

LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
To the America Baha'is through the Local Spiritual Assemblies.
Beloved friends:—
Shoghi Effendi has sent the following cablegram to the Convention:
"American believers inspired leadership steadily unfolding to Bahá'ís world over potentialities majestic edif-ce heralding formative period Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Their unerring vision conceived its matchless design. 'Abdul-Bahá's own hands laid its corner stone. Their dynamic Faith reared its structure. Their sustained self-sacrifice crowned it with immortal glory.
May flame their unconquerable enthusiasm continue glowing undimmed in their hearts till its naked frame is enveloped in its shining mantle."

(signed) SHOGHI.

The National Spiritual Assembly realizes the great responsibility laid upon us all in meeting Shoghi Effendi's standard of achievement set for the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

The financial report submitted to the Convention makes it clear that we are collectively called upon to contribute a total of $11,500.00 by June 15th.
This sum represents the amount due after deducting all contributions received during the Convention period.
The various items entering into this amount were duly reported at the Convention.

We are happy to report that already one-third of the work to be done under the clerestory contract has been completed and the first carload of new sections had arrived by the Convention date.

The appeal is made to each Local Spiritual Assembly to do its utmost in response to the Guardian's prayer by communicating the contents of this letter immediately to the entire membership of the local community and inspiring the believers to realize the sustained self-sacrifice and unconquerable enthusiasm which the Guardian expects.

The newly elected National Spiritual Assembly has received the following cablegram from Shoghi Effendi.
"Prayers, appreciation Assembly's distinguished record of service. Love."

(signed) SHOGHI.

Yours faithfully,
National Spiritual Assembly.

LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

To the local Spiritual Assemblies of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

In the last issue of Baha'i News it was stated that the National Spiritual Assembly would in future publish its general letters in this monthly bulletin rather than confine them to letters mailed to the local Assemblies.

The purpose of this decision is to save time in bringing important national matters to the attention of the body of the believers, and to assure that all are equally informed. In view of the urgent problems and greatly increased opportunities confronting the American Baha'is collectively, the National Assembly assumes that each believer will give full consideration to these monthly reports, and attend the Nineteen Day Feasts in a true spirit of responsibility for contributing his or her share to discussion and action.

A monthly financial statement will, however, be sent directly to each local Assembly, the contents of which are to be shared with the community at the Nineteen Day Feasts.

Last month we reported that the sum of $11,500 would be required by June 15th in order to meet all current obligations of Temple construction and other national activities sustained by the National Fund. This month it is necessary to state that the contributions received up to that date were insufficient by at least $6,000. The Treasurer was able to meet the bank loan of $2,500 in June, and final payment has been made on the dome contract to Mr. Earley, but the Temple Trustees have made no payment on the clerestory contract during the three months beginning April 30, 1934.

We are convinced that nothing more is required on the part of the believers than full knowledge and clear understanding of the facts. The living impulse of true faith will then enable us collectively to overcome every difficulty and solve every problem. The Faith of Baha'u'llah is in itself complete assurance of victory; there is no room for doubt, for hesitation, for indifference. What appear to be insurmountable problems are nothing else than our privilege of becoming further purified and disciplined for the glory of serving His Cause.

During the past ten years there have been countless impressive evidences of the capacity of the American Baha'is to join forces and achieve results previously impossible. But the World Order of Baha'u'llah is a constantly flowing stream. It constantly offers fresh impetus to the true believer, and its ceaseless force bears the body of its followers ever onward from victory to victory. It is for us to move with this current of invisible inspiration, and only those who move and grow in the mystery of unity are capable of service. The outlook of the former era is no longer the real Baha'i outlook; we have the divinely ordained institutions of unity, local, national and international, and apart from these there is no safe path leading through the wilderness of the world or the wilderness of the human heart.

The National Spiritual Assembly feels no need to urge the believers when special difficulties are to be overcome—the difficulty itself will always inspire those imbued with the spirit of faithfulness. What is necessary is the realization on the part of all believers that the essential tasks are national in character, and that Baha'i News is the source of full and correct information concerning Baha'i affairs.

The friends are informed that the National Assembly has decided not to publish any more excerpts from letters written by the Guardian to individual Baha'is. As Shoghi Effendi has stated, these letters are intended for the individual and are not instructions for the body of the believers. Moreover, the National Assembly feels very deeply the situation mentioned in the Annual Report, namely, that correspondence from individual believers in America has come to be a burden for the Guardian.

From letters addressed to the National Spiritual Assembly itself, the following important explanations and instructions are quoted:

Haifa, May 10, 1934. "He also wishes me to express his approval of your suggestion that as soon as the ornamentation work of the clerestory section of the Temple is completed no new contract be signed for the next unit unless the entire sum required for the contract has already been collected.
Economic conditions, both within and without the Cause, are nowadays too unstable to allow us to undertake any extensive scheme before insuring its interrupted and successful prosecution. He would urge the friends, however, to continue exerting themselves in order to complete the ornatmentation of the clerestory section of the Temple which they have spontaneously undertaken, towards the end of the summer, and if not, at least by the end of the year. Their resourcefulness, courage and self-sacrifice surely offer a sufficient guarantee that they will not fail in bringing their task to a happy and successful completion.

"Concerning local Bahá’í news letters the Guardian strongly feels that they should be primarily devoted to the spread of local news and activities, and should under no circumstances carry any statement implying criticism of or even interference with the policy of the N. S. A. They may occasionally refer to items of a national scope, but this should be done only with the view of assisting and not hindering the national body of the Cause to carry out effectively its program and decisions. There is thus a definite line of demarcation between correspondence initiated by local and National Assemblies. Local activities should always be subordinated to those of a national character and importance.
This is intended not to minimize the role of the local Assembly in the admministrative order, but to establish and insure a sane relationship between that body and the national organization of the Cause.

"The Guardian wishes you to convoy to the N. S. A., and through them to the entire body of the American believers the news of the successful negotiations initiated with the Palestine authorities concerning the exemption from taxation of the entire area surrounding the Shrines and of the importance and significance of the international center of our Faith. The exempted area has been purchased largely through the contributions sent for that purpose by the American believers. A section of it has already been transferred to the Palestine Branch of the American National Assembly, while a portion of the remaining part is still registered in the name of individual American believers.

"This exemption granted by the Government constituted, indeed, a triumph which the friends will certainly appreciate, and a step forward towards the further establishment and consolidation of the administrative order of the Cause, in both the Holy Land and beyond its confines. The title deeds which testify to the purchase and transfer of various plots to the name of your Assembly will soon be forwarded to your address. Negotiations are still pending in connection with further purchases and transfers which the Guardian is endeavoring to effect on behalf of the Palestine Branch of the American N. S. A.

"In connection I am directed to extend to you, as well as to the gen-ral body of the American believers, Shoghi Effendi’s abiding appreciation of the American Bahá’ís splendid cooperation in preventing the area surrounding the Shrines from falling into the hands of non-Bahá’ís. Now that the town of Haifa is developing so rapidly and so many buildings are being erected along the slopes of Mt.
Carmel, the friends can realize the full wisdom of their having kept such an extensive area as an open space around the Shrines. This is becoming increasingly manifest to the government of-officials and also to the increasing number of tourists and visitors who annually flock to the Holy Land and admire the beauty and impressions of so important a center in the Bahá’í world.
And the Guardian cannot, indeed, but feel deeply indebted to you and to those who have cooperated with you in taking such a vital and historic step, as a result of which the Faith has seen its prestige heightened and its interests effectively promoted and insured."

(In the Guardian’s hand) "The American believers have in recent years shoudered tremendous responsibilities and have acquitted themselves magnificently of their task. The erection of the superstructure of the Masriqu’l-Adhikár, the completion of the ornametation of the dome, their spontaneous decision to proceed with the decoration of the clerestory section, the purchase, the safeguarding and eventual recognition of the precincts of the Shrines on Mt. Carmel, the consolidation of the administrative machinery of the Faith in their country, the generous assistance extended by them to the needy, the harassed and suffering among their brethren in many lands and the activity they now display in the teaching field are deeds for which the entire Bahá’í world may well feel grateful.”

Haifa, May 19, 1934. "As to the problem which has arisen in connection with the News Letter published and circulated by the Boston Assembly, the Guardian has already written about it to your N. S. A., expressing the view that under no circumstances should any local Assembly be given the right to criticize and much less oppose, the policy duly adopted and approved by the N. S. A. It is his hope that henceforth the problem of the reltionship between the N. S. A. and the local Assemblies in matters of this nature will, in the light of his instructions be carefully understood by individuals and Assemblies alike.

Haifa, June 11, 1934. "... The Guardian wishes me to again affirm his view that the authority of the N. S. A. is undivided and unchallenge-able in all matters pertaining to the administration of the Faith throughout the United States and Canada, and that, therefore, the obedience of individual Bahá’ís, delegates, groups and Assemblies to that authority is imperative, and should be wholehearted and unqualified. He is convinced that the unreserved acceptance and complete application of this vital provision of the Administration is essential to the maintenance of the highest degree of unity amongst the believers, and is indispensable to the effective working of the administrative machinery of the Faith in every country.”

(In the Guardian’s hand) “I wish to reaffirm in clear and categorical language, the principle already enunciated upholding the supreme authority of the National Assembly in all matters that affect the interests of the Faith in that land. There can be no conflict of authority, no duality under any form or circumstances in any sphere of Baha’í jurisdiction whether local, national or international. The National Assembly, however, although the sole interpreter of its Declaration of Trust and By-Laws, is directly and morally responsible if it allows any body or in-itution within its jurisdiction to abuse its privileges or to decline in the exercise of its rights and privileges.
It is the trusted guardian and the mainspring of the manifold activities and interests of every national com-unity in the Bahá’í world. It constitutes the sole link that binds these communities to the International House of Justice, the supreme administrative body in the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh."

Haifa, May 18, 1934. (Cablegram) "Urge believers strictly adhere (to) National Assembly's instructions regarding anonymous letters." (signed) Shoghi.

Decisions of the N. S. A.

The question has been raised by a local Assembly as to whether it shall deal with the matter of members of the local community who have joined national non-Bahá'í organizations, some of which appear to be of a radical character. The National Assembly has recorded the following view: that each local Assembly is in duty bound to point out to the Bahá'í community the Guardian's instructions conveyed in his letter concerning the Fellowship of Faiths (published in Baha'i News of August, 1933), placing upon the individual conscience of each believer to determine whether membership in any non-Bahá'í organization is justifiable and permissible in the light of the standard upheld by the Guardian.

Those instructions were as follows: "Regarding association with the World Fellowship of Faiths and kindred societies, Shoghi Effendi wishes to reaffirm and elucidate the general principle that Bahá'í elected representatives as well as individuals should refrain from any act or word that would imply a departure from the principles, whether spiritual, social or administrative, established by Bahá'u'lláh. Formal affiliation with and acceptance of membership in organizations whose programs or policies are not wholly reconcilable with the Teachings of course of out the question. We should welcome and seize every opportunity that presents itself, however modest it may be, to give a wider publicity to the Cause, to demonstrate its all-inclusiveness and liberal attitude, its independence and purity, without committing ourselves, whether by word or deed to programs or policies that are not in strict conformity with the tenets of the Faith."

Concerning the activities of traveling teachers, the National Assembly has voted to give new emphasis to the administrative principle under which a traveling teacher is not only subject to the jurisdiction of the local Assembly in each city, but is expected to be concerned only with teaching activities and not to intervene in local problems unless specifically requested by the local Assembly to assist in some local situation where the believer may render good service, under the Assembly's direction.

With respect to the question of the participation of Bahá'í young people in Nineteen Day Feasts, the following principle has been adopted: that the children of believers can attend the Nineteen Day Feasts and other intimate gatherings and Bahá'í meetings, but when they reach the age of sixteen years, the local Assembly should request from such young people a declaration of their interest in the Cause and their intention to become voting members when they reach the age of twenty-one; and that other young people, not children of Bahá'ís, can also attend Nineteen Day Feasts and other Bahá'í meetings after reaching the age of sixteen years by making a similar declaration to the local Assembly.

The functions of the Reviewing and Editorial Committees have been combined in one committee, which is to carry out the following general procedure:

1. Determine whether a manuscript conforms to the Bahá'í teachings.
2. Determine whether the manuscript conforms to adequate standards of literary style and taste.
3. Determine whether the manuscript meets a real need in the Cause.

When the National Spiritual Assembly has passed upon the committee's report, manuscripts fully approved will then be published by the Bahá'í Publishing Committee as finances permit, but the notation "Approved by the Bahá'í Reviewing Committee" is hereafter to be limited to such works as are not only approved by the Reviewing Committee but also published under Bahá'í auspices. Works which after approval are published outside the Cause may not carry that notation, although they may be handled by the Publishing Committee as far as their sale to believers is concerned, provided the National Assembly is satisfied with the dignity and appearance of the printed book or pamphlet.

National Committees which have occasion to employ a printed letter-head are requested to consult the National Assembly in order to use the proper form.

The question has been raised whether, at the local annual elections held on April 21, the presiding officers should be the chairman and secretary of the outgoing Assembly, or whether the local community should at that meeting elect presiding officers in the same manner as the delegates at the national Annual Meeting. This question was referred to the Guardian, who has replied stating that this is one of the matters under the jurisdiction of the National Assembly. The Assembly has voted that until further notice, the annual meeting called on April 21 for the election of the local Spiritual Assembly is to be conducted by the officers of the outgoing Assembly and not by officers elected by those present at this meeting.

It has also been voted to record the decision that in the election of the National and local Assemblies, when the result of the ballot is that eight members are elected but two or more believers are tied for the ninth membership, the second ballot taken to eliminate the tie vote must be limited to voting for one of the two or more names who happen to have received a tie vote for the ninth place.

It has been voted that the believers are to be reminded that the Guardian's original instructions concerning letters written to him by local Assemblies and National Committees were that such letters were to be sent him through the National Spiritual Assembly. The National Assembly is convinced that full respect paid to this principle will redound to the spirit of unity and confidence throughout the Cause in America. Direct correspondence with the Guardian on the part of local Assemblies, and on the part of Committees appointed by the N. S. S. introduces an element of duality into our Bahá'í activities which, in the recent letter quoted above, the Guardian expressly forbids.

Local Spiritual Assemblies which have no permanent headquarters are requested to take a Post Office box which can be used as a permanent address for Bahá'í correspondence, the box to be made accessible to the duly elected secretary from year to year.

Local Assemblies are informed that if they wish to develop local mailing lists for the teaching bulletin entitled "The New World Order" they can obtain copies of future issues from the National Assembly at cost—fifty copies for 75c, sold in lots of fifty only.

Conclusion

Shoghi Effendi's communication on "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh" has clarified the fundamental teachings, and likewise his recent letters to the National Assembly, quoted above, reaffirm the unity permeating the administrative order. It is our supreme privilege to live as citizens of the new world created by the power of the divine Will. In conscious acceptance of and devotion to the spiritual and social principles of the Faith we walk upon a path which represents our highest individual well-being as well as the greatest benefit to mankind. The National Spiritual Assembly will endeavor to do its part in upholding the Guardian's instructions, carrying out his expressed aims and coordinating the manifold activities of the Cause in America. The effective power, however, must derive from a body of believers who have sound knowledge, pure intention and unalterable conviction.

The present moment of hesitation, evidenced by the depleted condition of the National Fund, must and will be succeeded by an era of renewed enthusiasm and purer devotion. Through the Guardian comes guidance and inspiration more than abundant for every Bahá’í if we but enter into the spirit of his words. There is no final and finished faith, but rather a capacity to grow.

Yours faithfully,

The National Spiritual Assembly.

STATUT0 OF THE NATIONAL BAHÁ’Í FUND SINCE THE CONVENTION

At the time of the annual Convention the treasurer presented to the assembled delegates a clear picture of the financial needs of the Cause in this country. His analysis reflected in a most gratifying manner that the believers throughout the United States and Canada were facing the storm and stress of difficult times with undaunted courage and faith, for they had contributed during the year almost $150,000.

This was, without doubt, a marvelous demonstration of faith and sacrifice. The current year's budget is for about half that amount. It is therefore the hope of the National Spiritual Assembly that the believers everywhere in this jurisdiction will seriously take upon themselves the plan of steady and continuous regular contributions, each one, rich or poor, contributing his share every month, be the amount large or small, but considered from the standpoint of the lofty spiritual privilege that the giving is for the sake of God's Cause.

And while we consider the matter let us carefully weigh the import to us of the quotations compiled by one of the friends of Utterances of Bahá’u’lláhid and of the Master and the Guardian that follow:

The purpose of the Bahá’í Faith is to develop faith in God in the hearts and lives of mankind. The following words of Bahá’u’lláhid point out the way: “Faith in God and knowledge of Him cannot be fully attained except by practising all that He has commanded and all that is revealed in the Book from the Pen of Glory.” (Tablet of Tajálíyát.)

Up until the present time mankind as a whole has placed its faith in money, influence, power and human beings, but left untried God and His Commandments.

“O people of Bahá! says Bahá’u’lláhid, “each one of the revealed Commands is a strong fortress for the protection of the world. Verily, This Oppressed One wishes only your security and elevation.” (Bahá’í Scriptures, 117.)

Since the Cause of Bahá’u’lláhid has the most important place in life, so we must as followers place it first in our lives, not only in dedicating our time and efforts but giving it our monetary support.

In order to live according to the commands of God, (New Order) we must necessarily depart from the ways of man (Old Order) and place our contributions on a par with the rank of the Cause which would place them first and not last. Then too, they must be regular in order to meet the expenses of our Cause, which are regular and constant. “Honor the Lord with Thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase.” (Prov. 3:9.)

In the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá we find the following: “O friends of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá—the Lord, as a sign of His infinite bounties, hath graciously favored His servants by providing for a fixed money offering, to be dutifully presented unto Him, though He, the True One and His servants have been at all times independent of all created things, and God, verily is the All-Possessing, Exalted above the need of any gift from His creatures. This fixed money offering, however, causeth the people to become firm and steadfast and draweth divine increase upon them.”

In order to establish the New Day of Faith, we must put into practice the new way of living as given by our Guardian in Bahá’í News Letter of September, 1926, wherein he says: “We must be like the fountain or spring that is continually emptying itself of all that it has and is continually being refilled from an invisible source. To be continually giving out for the good of our fellows undeterred by the fear of poverty and reliant on the unfailing bounty of the source of all wealth and all good. This is the secret of right living.”

“O ye friends of God,” says ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, “rest assured that in place of this contribution your commerce, your agriculture and industries shall be blessed many times. Whosoever gives with one good act, God will give him tenfold. There is no doubt that the living Lord shall assist the generous soul.”

Bahá’u’lláhid wishes mankind to place its sole reliance upon the mystic Source (Holy Spirit) so that it may turn away from the realm of the seen or limited plane to the realm of the Unseen, and attain its freedom through faith in the Power of the Covenant.

At the present time the contributions that are being received fall far short of current needs. This is, without doubt, the result of a misapprehension regarding the completion of the dome ornamentation, many undoubtedly considering that the completion of the upper part of the dome by Mr. Earley would permit a certain relaxation on their part. But unfortunately even though Mr. Earley proceeded in good faith to carry on and execute the orders of the Temple Trustees, we failed to do our part because of a lack of funds.

For a period of three months prior to the Convention the flow of contributions reached such a low ebb as to scarcely meet even the cost of maintaining regular demands on the treasury, let alone the overdue payments on the Temple contracts. This situation forced your National Spiritual Assembly to make a loan of ten thousand dollars. This, of course, does not actually relieve us for we must now pay interest on the moneys borrowed and also repay the loan. At the present time there is overdue on the Temple Contract $8,750.01. The current actives of the Cause call for $8,580 each month, so that at the present time the National Treasurer stands in need of at least $10,000.

The National Spiritual Assembly calls upon all Spiritual Assemblies and groups, as well as individual believers, to seriously undertake the task of lifting from your National representatives and the Cause in our country the stigma of failure in meeting our obligations. If we arise unitedly we can succeed gloriously.

“The Bahá’í Faith recognizes the unity of God and of His Prophets, upholds the principle of an unfettered search after truth, condemns all forms of superstition and prejudice, teaches that the fundamental purpose of religion is to promote concord and harmony, that it must go hand-in-hand with science, and that it constitutes the sole and ultimate basis of a peaceful, an ordered and progressive society. It inculcates the principle of equal opportunity, rights and privileges for both sexes, advocates compulsory education, abolishes extremes of poverty and wealth, exalts work performed in the spirit of service to the rank of worship, recommends the adoption of an auxiliary international language, and provides the necessary agencies for the establishment and safeguarding of a permanent and universal peace."--Shoghi Effendi.

"The period since 'Abdu'l-Bahá's passing has been characterized by the formation and consolidation of the Local and National Assemblies, the hock on which the edifice of the Universal House of Justice is to be erected. There are, according to the latest (1933) reports from Tbrin, over five hundred Local Assemblies already constituted in Persia. Organized Bahá'í communities are to be found in every continent of the globe. National Assemblies have already been formed and are functioning in the United States and Canada, in India and Burma, in Great Britain, in Germany, Iraq and Egypt. Such Assemblies are in the process of formation in Persia, Caucasus, Turkind, and Australia. Local Assemblies and groups have already been established in France, Switzerland and Italy, in the Scandinavian countries, in Austria and the Balkans, in Turkey, Syria, Albania, Abyssinia, China, Japan, Brazil and South Africa. Christians of various denominations, Muslims of both the Sunni and Shiah sects of Islam, Jews, Hindus, Sikhs, Zoroastrians and Buddhists, have eagerly embraced their truth, have recognized the divine origin and fundamental unity underlying the teachings of all the Founders of past religions, and have unreservedly identified themselves with both the spirit and form of its evolving institutions. All these centers function as the component parts of a single organism, of an entity the spiritual and administrative center of which lies enshrined in the twin cities of Akka and Haifa."—Shoghi Effendi.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENT

The National Spiritual Assembly has recently adopted the following list of discounts which the Publishing Committee can give on Bahá'í literature:

1. To recognized Local Spiritual Assemblies, 33 1/3% on all orders, irrespective of the amount of the order, except on those few books or pamphlets the cost of which is so nearly the same as the selling price that they must be sold net.

2. To groups and to individual Bahá'ís, 10% on all orders amounting to a minimum of $10.00, but with no discount allowed on books sold net.

3. To groups and individual believers, 20% on all orders amounting to a minimum of $20.00. No discount allowed on books sold net.

None of the above discounts are to be passed on to individual believers or non-believers who purchase them retail from the Assembly, group or individual believer obtaining them from the Publishing Committee. The sole purpose of the discounts allowed to Assemblies and groups is to develop their local Bahá'í Fund; the purpose of the discounts to individual believers ordering in quantity is to assist those teachers who purchase literature to give away.

Free literature. The Publishing Committee has no authority to give free literature to any Assembly, group or individual teacher. Free literature is given only on order from those National Committees, like Teaching and Race Amity, to which the National Assembly has allotted a special "free literature" budget.

New Literature

Dá'í—The Call to Prayer, by Ruth J. Moffett, a study of the important spiritual subject of prayer, showing its universal practice in all faiths, with representative prayers selected from different religious writings. Paper cover, 125 pages. Per copy, $0.60.

Index to Bahá'í News—December, 1924 to November, 1933 (No. 1 to No. 79). A necessary key to the contents of Bahá'í News during the first nine years of its existence. Paper cover, 58 mimeographed pages. Price each—net—$0.50. Note: The National Assembly is distributing one copy free to each local Assembly for its official records. A small edition is available for sale to individual believers.

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS

1. Teaching Committee

"The world's equilibrium hath been upset through the vibrating influence of this most great, this new World Order. Mankind's ordered life hath been revolutionized through the agency of this unique, this wondrous system—the like of which mortal eyes have never witnessed."—Bahá'u'lláh.

So widespread is the interest in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh today that it seems fitting for the Teaching Committee to review briefly the developments in the Cause during the past year that have brought us up to this unique station, so that we may be better prepared to meet the new responsibilities.

It became apparent to everyone after the Convention in June, 1933, that the major contribution the Bahá'ís of America could render to the amelioration of the problems of the country, was the completion of the ornamentation of the Dome of that structure which symbolizes the ideals of the New Day. Thus, all the spiritual and material resources of the friends were centered on achieving this goal. The unified and harmonized spirit attained by the believers in this encompassing sacrificial effort established a firm foundation through which the dynamic forces of the Bahá'í Faith could diffuse themselves into the world. Furthermore, this experience demonstrated that the lasting foundation of teaching work is perfect integration of all Bahá'í activities.

With the completion of the Dome ornamentation and the release of the spiritual forces which the Guardian stated would attend this epoch-making event, the necessity for intensive public teaching service became evident. The National Teaching Committee, therefore, addressed some fifty individuals, urging them to undertake new teaching work; where possible to make extended teaching circuits, visiting centers where the Cause is developing, and to aid isolated believers in their efforts. The response was not only encouraging but truly inspiring, as the results show fully how the promises of the Guardian will be fulfilled.

The Teaching Committee next wrote individually to all the Assemblies asking them to lend every effort to the constructive development of the teaching work contemplated in the program established by the National Spiritual Assembly and outlined fully in Bahá'í News of July, 1932.

At the same time the Committee wrote to all isolated believers, calling their attention to the unique position they occupied in the Cause as outposts of the new World Order, and asking them to redouble their efforts to establish thriving Bahá'í centers. The service of the Teaching Committee was offered in arranging assistance from near-by Local Spiritual Assemblies.

The entire country realized how propitious was this moment for public work and arose as a body to spread the universal principles of the Faith, bringing forth almost miraculous results.
Viewing the developments of the teaching work from another standpoint, attention is called to the supreme wisdom of the Guardian in insisting upon the early completion of the Dome ornamentation. Previously, the Teachings have been presented in an apologetic manner because of the apparent lack of outward achievement. Now it is a matter of distinction to be connected with that dynamic Faith that has accomplished, during the world's greatest depression, the adornment of the most beautiful spiritual structure, and that has at the same time established "a humble though perfect pattern" of the future World Order.

Thus, concentration on the ornamentation of the Dome of the Temple has brought the Faith to a position of prestige and high honor and created increasing interest in its universal principles. The friends, through their joint sacrifices, have been more firmly united and have accomplished more perfect functioning of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. Supplementing this, the spiritual forces released into the world, together with the increasing difficulties on every side, are bringing untold thousands to the Fount of Eternal Life.

In a report of this type it is impossible to record the sacrificial efforts of the many loyal and enthusiastic servants of the Faith in promoting the Teachings during the past year. There has been greater vigor in fulfilling this supreme obligation of Bahá'í life than has been witnessed in this country before. To attempt to report in detail the services of even those who have kept the Teaching Committee informed of their activities likewise cannot be done for lack of space. We have, therefore, confined ourselves to the recording of a few of the most interesting experiences during the year, which may be helpful in expanding the work and which give evidence of the dynamic spiritual forces now released.

The following is an interesting method employed by Dr. Stanwood Cobb in introducing the Cause in a new city on a very successful sixteen-day teaching trip covering Atlanta, Georgia; Louisville, Kentucky; Nashville, Knoxville, Tenn., and Chapel Hill, N. C.

In one of the cities there were no Bahá'ís who could make contacts for Dr. Cobb. Utilizing a letter of introduction to a professor of the leading university, he secured the names and addresses of the liberals of that city. Later these were his guests at a luncheon in his hotel. After a pleasant discussion of general affairs of the day, Dr. Cobb gave a detailed exposition of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh which was followed by a lively and sympathetic discussion. Dr. Cobb wrote: "This was one of the most inspiring events of teaching nature I have ever taken part in. It is an absolute demonstration that the world is ready and waiting for this Message. Men of this type would not come to public meetings. They are too busy. A better spirit and inspiration is engendered in a special group than to see them one by one."

Mr. Louis G. Gregory, in response to a new trend in our teaching work which the Guardian is encouraging, is settling in one of the larger cities of the south and concentrating on that city until a properly functioning Bahá'í Assembly is established. The reports of the way doors are opening and follow-up work being carried on demonstrate the unique possibilities of this method of service. Mr. Gregory has spoken on invitation at various churches, universities, clubs and organizations. Seeds once sown are never lost.

One of the professors, reading in the newspaper that a Bahá'í speaker was in town, invited Mr. Gregory to address his classes, saying he had heard Jinab-i-Fadl speak in California and was anxious not only to learn more of the principles of the Faith himself but to have his pupils do so likewise.

Another interesting incident was at the annual convention of the Tennessee State Teachers' Association where one of the principal speakers insisted on Mr. Gregory being given his place on the program so the school principals might learn of "this wonderful message." Many questions were asked and Bahá'í literature was distributed.

Madame Margarita Orlova reports many stirring experiences in the teaching work done on the Pacific Coast, particularly in and around Phoenix, Arizona. Addresses were given before all types of gatherings—in churches, universities, Junior Colleges, Agricultural Associations, including eleven talks on the Bahá'í Faith in the Mormon Church in Mesa, Arizona.

Two study classes were conducted for the visitors at the resorts in this area, one at the Arizona Biltmore, the other at Jokake Inn. People from all parts of America were attracted and on returning to their homes will become voting members of Assemblies in those cities. Demonstrating how the efforts of every one will, if selflessly offered, bear fruit, the teaching achievement in these exclusive resorts was brought about through the services of a colored Bahá'í, seamstress at one of the hotels, who made contacts for Madame Orlova with those for whom she worked.

The growing interest in the Faith among religious leaders is of great significance. Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf and Mrs. Florence Morton, who have done much successful work in the New England States, report a study group in Gardener, Maine, which has attracted the attention of six ministers. There being no teacher available, the minister of one of the churches who met 'Abdu'l-Bahá when He was in America, has taken charge of the group.

We cannot close this section of our report without mentioning the great services of such capable pioneer teachers in the Cause as Shahnaz Waite, May Maxwell, George Latimer, Ali-Kuli Khan, Horace Holley, Dr. Leonore Morris, Leroy Ioas, and Charles Mason Remey; the untiring work of the Knobloch sisters—Fanny in the Central States and Alma, at the request of the Guardian, in the Southern States; the new study groups established by Ruth Moffett in Kansas City, Topeka, South Bend, etc.; the work of Orcella Rexpoed in Fort Worth, Oklahoma City, Houston, etc.; likewise the constructive teaching and follow-up work carried on by Mrs. Mayme Seto and Dorothy Baker, as well as the quiet deeds of those like Rouhaniatrem, Gale Marsolas, Kathryn Baldwin, and Ella Cooper who are doing such intimate work in confirming new souls in the Cause.

Very gratifying indeed has been the systematic manner in which the various Assemblies have organized their teaching work. Where this most important obligation has been committed to an efficient committee great success has been achieved. While reports have not been received from all Assemblies, it appears the Chicago Assembly has better organized its work than any other city. The Teaching Committee there has actively in hand the development of and assistance to fireside groups, the arrangement of attractive public meetings, the furnishing of teachers to near-by Assemblies, encouraging drama as a means of conveying the Message, establishing Bahá'í reading libraries in various parts of the city, and the conduct of effective public speaking classes. Of great importance is the Contact Department of the Teaching Committee whose duty it is to contact, either in person or through correspondence, all clubs, peace organizations, educational institutions, etc., to make openings for Bahá'í speakers. Where openings are arranged the addresses are followed up by sending literature to every member of the organization, if a directory can be secured, and inviting them to the regular Bahá'í meetings, study classes, etc.

Illustrating a novel method of introducing the Cause in a new center, the Washington Assembly recently arranged for a round-table discussion at one of the leading hotels of Richmond, Virginia, on the subject: "Peace, Unity, and Stability for a Chaotic World." Neatly printed invitations, containing the subject, time, place, and names of speakers who, in this instance, were Dr. Stanwood Cobb and Mr. Charles Mason Remey, were sent to the liberally minded people of the city, asking them to join at tea in the consideration of this subject.

One of the most effective means for expanding the work of the Cause is that of Assemblies assisting isolated believers in their efforts. In order to prepare for this important work, the Teaching Committee has carried on correspondence with all the isolated believers, numbering more than two hundred, associating them into Bahá'í groups wherever possible, and endeavoring to bring about closer collaboration between Local Spiritual Assemblies and groups and isolated believers. The inspiring reports from many of these solitary friends of the opening of new doors in their immediate environment reveal the penetrating influence of the new spiritual forces at work in even the remote places of the earth.

This extension work on the part of Bahá'í communities, whether in their own localities or in new fields, increases the necessity for and importance of study classes, not only for the Baha'is but also for the newly attracted souls. In keeping with the instructions of the Guardian, the majority of the classes conducted by Local Spiritual Assemblies during the past year, were on the history of the Faith and Bahá'í Administration. One Assembly has adopted the policy of training the friends for public work by having them conduct the spiritual part of the Nineteen Day Feasts. Some Assemblies have arranged Teacher training courses to assist those who plan to engage in teaching work outside their own communities.

In reviewing the teaching work of the past year, the National Teaching Committee has the following recommendations to offer:

First: The psychology of Bahá'í teaching is very important. Let us refrain from an apologetic attitude. Humanity is eagerly seeking the Light of Divine Guidance, and the crumbling institutions of the world necessitate the rise of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. Ours is not the attitude of seeking favor, but rather that of bestowing the greatest gift in history. Furthermore, the restrictions in the way of granting voting rights to the student make membership in this World Order a coveted achievement. To be a follower of Bahá'u'lláh is a mark of distinction and honor. Let us who are the custodians of this rich heritage maintain its dignity and glory in our lives and teaching service.

Second: It is impossible to overemphasize the supreme obligation of every individual to increase his or her teaching services. Inasmuch as we have no paid teachers, the expansion of the Faith rests upon the individual Bahá'ís. Teaching the Cause is the glory of Bahá'í life and must represent the sum total of its acts of devotion. Through his secretary the Guardian wrote an American believer recently: "In the Aqdas Bahá'u'lláh considers teaching as a spiritual obligation imposed upon every devoted believer and servant of His Faith. Should the friends become fully conscious of this duty and arise to do their share, this Cause will soon permeate every home throughout the world and the Kingdom of God will be established."

Third: The salon type of meeting is the most effective means by which the individual may fulfill his or her teaching obligation, particularly among those of his or her own circle. A surfeit success indicates that the most successful of all teaching work has been the heart to heart discussions possible only in intimate fireside gatherings. Let us recall, in considering the importance of these fireside groups, the basis of the teaching work of the Nineteen Letters of the Living. In the "Dawn-Breakers" it states: "To each He (the Báb) assigned his own province as the field of his labors."

Every Bahá'í should hold at least one such meeting every nineteen days, not only to attract new people to the Cause, but also for intensive teaching and follow-up work.

Fourth: Local Spiritual Assemblies have not generally arisen to fulfill their part of the teaching program, namely, that of establishing the Faith in a new center. Cooperation with the isolated believers makes an ideal foundation for such work. We should bear in mind that there are isolated believers in two hundred cities in America and if Assemblies will concentrate on these centers the contact and follow-up work will be simplified.

Fifth: In arranging public meetings of any type, it is wise to use a selective process. Big meetings made up of individuals of widely different interests produce little or no result. Meetings made up of people deeply interested in a specific matter permit of constructive presentation of the Teachings on that subject with questions and appropriate follow-up. We are not so much interested in publicizing the Faith as we are in teaching the Cause.

Sixth: Institutions of learning, particularly those having departments in sociology and comparative religion, are showing increasing interest in the Bahá'í peace program, the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, and the Oneness of Religion. Every effort should be made to secure openings in such institutions through appropriate capable contact.

Seventh: If groups can travel together to teach, the results achieved are greater than from individual traveling. In instances where three or four have conducted a teaching campaign, the different presentations made a very good impression.

Eighth: With the increasing attraction to the Faith, it is essential that appropriate study classes be arranged by every Assembly for the instruction of Bahá'í students, particularly on the Administration. Whenever voting rights have been granted new people before they have understood the responsibility of such a right, confusion has resulted and often the individuals have left the Cause entirely. It is recommended that the Spiritual Assemblies direct a study course on the Administrative program of the Faith extending over a period of two to three months. This will serve the three-fold purpose of acquainting the individual with the implications of Bahá'í Administration which voting right obligates him to uphold; permit the Spiritual Assembly through contact over a given period of time to gain an actual knowledge of the views of the individual to assure itself of the qualifications of this person to become a Bahá'í, and lastly, permit the applicant to develop normally into Assembly life.

Ninth: With the increasing world problems, the most effective teaching weapon is the unceasingly coordinated and functioning Bahá'í Community. The eyes of the world are being focussed more and more on the Cause, and if they find our community life less than implied in the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh they will turn away dismayed and discouraged. Humanity has had too much of emotional appeal, of philosophic idealism, and intellectual speculation.
It is looking for a way of living. Therefore, if any Assembly has not achieved in its midst the community life implied in the World Order of Bahá'í, it would be better that no public teaching work be undertaken, but that such an Assembly realize that its teaching responsibility is to deepen and broaden among its present members the consciousness of the Faith and its proper functioning.

The Guardian is urging the establishment of the Faith in various countries of the world, commenting that "now is the time of settlement of the world community—it is not so much travel as permanent settlement that is the requirement of today." He has encouraged those noble pioneers who have left home, families and friends and are spreading the Glad Tidings in other lands, to concentrate their efforts in given centers until the Faith is permanently established there. Thirty of the forty countries where the Bahá'í religion is now established have received the Message through American Bahá'ís. The Cause of God in America has been immortalized by our constant prayers for their blessings and development appropriately distributed between voting Bahá'ís, and the authorities set up by their vote: in such wise that no abuses could flourish or disrupt the whole. Never in any society has there been a solution quite comparable to this one. Bahá'í Administration is unique, since it rests upon a Divine Foundation.

A description of the course of study barely indicates the true significance of the Summer School. Its activities are as inclusive as life—the life of a Bahá'í group met in fellowship and love. To convey a picture of its full outline—the values gained in personal consultation, the gaiety of Bahá'ís at play under the Big Tree and on annual holiday to Griffith Grove, the friendly intercourse with the community at Geyersville—is quite impossible. Each morning the meetings were prefaced by a short devotional period under the Tree arranged by Mrs. Seto and these times of quiet meditation prepared the hearts for the undertakings of the day. To rise with the mention of Bahá'í Faith upon the tongue is to change a common day into a prayer, the prayer of work offered in conscious service.

Four roundtable discussions were arranged for the afternoons. For these the friends met in the Redwood Grove. There were as well three public meetings; two in Geyersville, attended by local residents for miles around, and the other in the outdoor theater at Griffith Grove in Santa Rosa.

A few statistics may give an idea of the size of the school and the interest of the believers in its development:

- Total registration . . . . 200
- Feast registration . . . . 175
- Average daily attendance . . . . 65
- Children's registration . . . . 35

2. Pacific Coast Bahá'í Summer School

The most remarkable of the excellent schools held at Geyersville, California, was the seventh, held July 23rd to August 5th, 1933. Under the inspiration of the epistle which has just been received from the Guardian entitled the "Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh"; as well as the dynamic spirit released by the study of the Dawn-Breakers, the Bahá'ís realized that they were indeed living in two worlds; one the physical world, and the other, the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The underlying spirit of unity was epitomized this year, as it has in previous years, in the Unity Feast, opening the school. This is the homecoming of the friends, the joyful greetings of those long-separated, the welcome of our beloved hosts, John and Louise Bosch, and that cementing act of breaking bread over the same table. There were in attendance one hundred and seventy-five Bahá'ís representing Assemblies of the entire Pacific Coast area, as well as guests from Australia and New York.

The program of the school, outlined three courses, carried through each morning for twelve days. A modern method was employed by the instructors, who were all Bahá'ís; so that the period included presentation of the subject, with twenty minutes reserved for group discussion. It was a technique new to all. With the help of the round tables, illustrating group discussion, the Bahá'ís gained a new method and achieved results impossible in former years. Group discussion is true consultation, and a real effort to ascertain truth.

The detail of the three courses may be studied in the programs of the Summer School. In brief, they dealt with the following subjects:

1. The Influence of Religion on Society, taught by Mrs. Hellen Bishop, Mrs. A. Y. Seto, Prof. N. F. Ward, Leroy Ioas, and Miss Marion Holley.
2. The History of the Bahá'í Faith, taught by H. R. Hurlbut, Mrs. Helen Bishop, Mrs. Louise Caswell, and Prof. O. G. Collins.

The first course was designed as one which might adequately serve the needs of young believers, as they approach their contemporaries. The attempt was for objectivity with proofs based upon the social sciences, and for a survey of those essentials of belief, without an understanding of which no proof can be complete and no religion worthy of the name.

The second course of study dealt with the history of the Bahá'í Faith, as ascertained from all available sources, including "Nabil's Narrative," "The Traveler's Narrative" and Prof. Browne's commentaries, Gobineau's, "Les Religions et les Philosophies dans L'Asie Centrale," Phelps' "Abbas Effendi," Cheyne's "The Reconciliation of Races and Religions" the various accounts of pilgrims and the actual writings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. There is such a comprehensive outline been presented at this Summer School.

The third course on the Principles of Bahá'í Administration created great interest. By citing specific instances of conduct under Bahá'í laws of social relations, the intricacies and possibilities of Administration expanded until its response to universal application was appreciated. In the most amazing manner, and yet in true simplicity, the complexities of present and past administrative schemes are set aside, and the responsibilities of order and development appropriately distributed between voting Bahá'ís, and the authorities set up by their vote: in such wise that no abuses could flourish or disrupt the whole. Never in any society there has been a solution quite comparable to this one. Bahá'í Administration is unique, since it rests upon a Divine Foundation.

LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

To the Local Spiritual Assemblies of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

The National Spiritual Assembly desires at this time to make a preliminary report on its decisions taken with reference to the various resolutions voted at the recent Convention. This report is made to the believers through the local Spiritual Assemblies in view of the Guardian's instruction, published in Baha'i News, February, 1934: "Shoghi Effendi firmly believes that consultation must be maintained between the N. S. A. and the entire body of believers, and that such consultation, while the Convention is not in session, can best be maintained through the agency of the local Assemblies, one of whose essential functions is to act as intermediaries between the local communities and their national representatives. The main purpose of the Nineteen Day Feasts is to enable individual believers to offer any suggestion to the local Assembly which in its turn will pass it to the N. S. A. The local Assembly is, therefore, the proper medium through which local Bahá'í communities can communicate with the body of the national representatives. The Convention should be regarded as a temporary gathering, having certain specific functions to perform, during a limited period of time. Its status is thus limited in time to the Convention sessions, the function of consultation at all other times being vested in the entire body of the believers through the local Spiritual Assemblies."

A supplementary report will be made on one or two resolutions which required further time for special study—for example, the resolution requesting the National Spiritual Assembly to provide for the preparation of some satisfactory method of parliamentary procedure as a basis for the conduct of Annual Conventions, Nineteen Day Feasts and the meetings of local Spiritual Assemblies. 1. Resolution requesting the National Assembly to urge all Bahá'í young people in Local Bahá'í communities to get in touch with the National Youth Committee. It is pointed out that the Youth Committee was appointed for the special purpose of unifying and developing the activities of local youth groups, and an excellent beginning was made last year. This resolution has been referred to the National Youth Committee with the request that it provide the best means for closer communication with local youth committees and groups.

2. Resolution recommending that the National Assembly publish reports of National Committees prior to the Convention hereafter and distribute them to those elected as delegates. This and other resolutions dealing with future Conventions are to be acted on at the time that plans for the 1935 Convention are being made.

3. Resolution recommending that the National Assembly advise the local Assemblies as to the duties of Bahá'í citizenship. This matter is felt to be one of extreme importance. There is no question but that the growth of the Cause rests upon conscientious attendance at all Nineteen Day Feasts, due observance of the spiritual significance of the voting right, etc. Since the subject of Bahá'í citizenship, or membership in the Bahá'í world community, is one of continuous development, as the administrative order unfolds under the Guardian's guidance, the National Assembly has decided to add a special department to Baha'i News, consisting of excerpts from Shoghi Effendi's general communications. This department will remind all the believers of many significant instructions received during the past eleven years, and perhaps afford a basis for consultation at Nineteen Day Feasts.

4. Resolution requesting a form of parliamentary procedure. As already stated, this resolution is receiving special study and a report will be made as soon as possible.

5. Resolution defining the relations of delegates and the National Spiritual Assembly. This, also, will be the subject of later report.

6. Resolution suggesting that an index be prepared of Baha'i literature. The new Index Committee has already been appointed to carry out this important suggestion.

7. Resolution recommending that National Committees be appointed with a view to having it possible for the members of each committee to meet frequently for mutual consultation. This recommendation was carried out as much as possible in making the committee appointments for the current year.

8. Resolution requesting the National Assembly to take prompt and definite action toward a measure which will expedite the collection of funds to be made available for the costs of Temple construction and other activities. It is pointed out that, fundamentally, the National Spiritual Assembly does not "collect" funds. On the contrary, it merely receives funds voluntarily donated by the believers. The emphasis should be placed on the spirit of sacrifice throughout the entire body of the believers, not upon any assumed power or right of the National Assembly to exert pressure upon the community. A careful review of Baha'i News over a long period of years, however, and especially a study of the general letters issued by the National Assembly to local Assemblies since the first "Plan of Unified Action" was adopted, will reveal the extent to which the National Assembly has endeavored to keep the local communities informed of the needs of the National Fund, and to stimulate inter-
The ideal, the National Assembly can any local Assembly undertake addition-et in service to the Cause by providing the means by which its institutions can be developed. This matter of voluntary contributions to the National Fund depends in large measure upon the cooperation and initiative of the local Assemblies.

9. Resolution recommending to the National Assembly the advisability of sending a cablegram to the Guardian at next year's Convention immediately after the Convention has organized. The purpose of this resolution is to assure the sending of a Convention message to Shoghi Effendi soon enough to bring a reply before the Convention terminates. It is pointed out that such actions on the part of a Convention are for the Convention itself to perform. The National Assembly can only serve as the agency for transmitting a recommendation from one Convention to another Convention. It is also pointed out that such actions have assigned responsibility and authority to decide such matters for itself.

10. Resolution calling upon the National Assembly either directly or through the Amity Committee to send a circular letter to all local Assemblies stressing the magnitude and importance of race amity work among the Bahá'ís, and that this letter preferably be substantiated by references from the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, the Center of the Covenant and the Guardian. Amendment: that the National Assembly also try if possible to draw up a program of action in addition to the letter, and that the program if possible suggest some steps and actions to be taken and followed up. This important recommendation has been referred to the National Race Amity Committee.

11. Resolution requesting the National Assembly to emphasize to every local community in the United States and Canada the necessity of having a Center (within their means) which would be called the Bahá'í Center of that city. The National Spiritual Assembly believes that every local Assembly fully realizes the desirability of having a Center apart from any one believer's personal domicile. Growth is limited as long as all gatherings must be held in any home, because without a public center the general public cannot be attracted. Moreover, it is far better for the community itself to meet apart from any possible restriction of personal influence. However, while a Center is unquestionably the ideal, the National Assembly cannot conscientiously recommend that any local Assembly undertake additional financial responsibility until the clerestory contract has been fully paid. In one of the Guardian's recent letters he stated that local activities must be subordinated to national needs.

12. Resolution that a competent committee be appointed for the purpose of putting into effect definite plans for the creation of a Bahá'í village in which our spiritual, social-economic and race amity teachings be applied; that the principle of first disregard of considerations of policy which might not allow the execution of such plans at present, but that these be developed to a point where they may be put into execution immediately upon due authorization to go ahead; the committee to serve as a clearing-house for the considered opinions of students of Bahá'í economics in general and on plans for the creation of a Bahá'í village in particular. In commenting on this resolution, the National Spiritual Assembly would remind the believers of the following instructions from the Guardian, quoted in Bahá'í News, May, 1933: "As regards the activities of the economics committee of the National Assembly; Shoghi Effendi fully sympathizes with the desire of some of the members to see the committee find ways and means to put into practice the economic teachings of the Cause, as explained in some of the recorded writings and sayings of Bahá'u'lláh and the Master. He believes that the time is not yet ripe for such activities. First we have to study the economic teachings in the light of modern problems more thoroughly so that we may advocate what the Founders of the Faith say and not what we conjecture from their writings. There is great difference between sounding a general principle and finding its application to actual prevailing conditions."

"Secondly, the Cause is not financially in a position to launch itself in such undertakings at present. Such plans need great financial backing to be worked out in a permanent form. In time, Shoghi Effendi hopes all these things will come to pass. For the present we have to consolidate our basic institutions and spread the teachings and spirit of the Faith among the public."

It is the understanding of the National Spiritual Assembly, based upon these words, that the conception of a "Bahá'í village" is not some special and isolated undertaking, like the building of the Temple, but the outcome and fruit of the development of the Bahá'í community into the fulness of organic unity. The "village" will draw nearer as each local and national Bahá'í community understands, and practises, the principles of the Administrative Order. Any concrete suggestions, however, which the believers wish to submit to the National Assembly will receive careful study. Meanwhile the believers are informed that the Publishing Committee is now issuing a compilation of the Bahá'í Economic Teachings which can be obtained at very small cost.

13. Resolution recommending that the National Spiritual Assembly study a report issued by the East and West Committee, Tihran, to determine if a Children's Fund can be established in this country. This interesting suggestion has been referred to the National Youth Committee for consideration and a report recommending what action the National Assembly might take.

14. Resolution requesting the National Assembly to include in its announcement of the Convention next year some provision for the holding of a National Teaching Conference prior to the opening of the Convention. In general, the National Assembly feels that all meetings held at Convention time should be included within the plan and schedule of the Convention itself, and that no meeting should be held before or after the Convention as something which is supplementary to the Annual Meeting. When the 1935 Convention is planned, the Assembly intends to provide in every possible way for conference on teaching and other vital activities.

16. Resolution recommending the appointment of a special committee on education in Bahá'í administration throughout the country. This matter is of extreme importance. The view of the National Assembly is that the N. S. A. itself, among its other functions, must do its utmost to promote education in the administrative principles, and in fact has for many years attempted to do so through (1) the publication of the Guardian's letters; (2) special articles in Bahá'í News; and (3) by means of general letters to local Assemblies. Each National Committee, moreover, in addition to its particular activities, surely has an obligation to assist whenever possible in contributing to knowledge of the Administrative Order. The three Summer Schools are rendering invaluable service by their study courses and discussion groups; and finally...

3. Archives Committee

In compliance with instructions received from the National Spiritual Assembly, the activities of the Archives Committee for the current year have been concerned mainly with making investigations in reference, first, to the method of construction of a room for the safe-keeping and preservation of the Archives in the Foundation structure of the Temple, and second, to a plan of cataloging and arranging the Tablets of the Master, Letters of Shoghi Effendi, sacred objects, and various printed and manuscript materials bearing upon the growth of the Cause in America, which together make up the National Archives.

In carrying on these investigations the committee has corresponded with the Bureau of Standards, the Library of Congress, the British Museum, the Huntington Library, the Chicago Museum, the Illinois Historical Society, the Field Museum in Chicago, the Bureau of Standards, the Library of Congress, and the Board of Standards. The committee has also corresponded with the Archivist of the United States, the Library of Congress, and the Board of Standards. The committee has also corresponded with various archivists and librarians at the Library of Congress, the British Museum, and the Library of Congress. It is unnecessary to state that any information obtained by the committee with reference to the plans of the Guardian in organizing the International Archives in Akka and Haifa will be a deciding influence in the plans to be recommended for the organization of the National Archives.

Some of the information which has been gathered, particularly that dealing with the control of factors which affect the preservation of manuscripts, has been forwarded in condensed form to the National Assembly. The committee will continue to investigate the problems named above and to submit reports as information becomes available. However, until a room is provided for the housing of the Archives, it will be very difficult for the committee, unavailable or inaccessible as the Archives are in their present location in a vault of the Chicago Safety Deposit Company, to formulate definite plans for the arrangement and filing of the materials in the Archives.

Among the recommendations which the committee has made to the National Assembly within recent months are the following:

1. That a combined Archives and reading room be constructed in the Temple Foundation as soon as feasible. Later on, when a separate library or reading room is provided and when the central Foundation Hall becomes available for Archives uses, the room proposed at present would be used chiefly for the storage of Archives, and should be constructed with this end in view—of insuring safety and preservation.

2. That as much as $100 be set aside annually in the next few years to cover the expense of cataloging, photostating, mounting in folders and filing the original Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The Tablets constitute the most precious possession of the Archives, and their present condition—folded, usually with the original translation, within the envelope in which the Tablet was received—is not most conducive to their preservation. It is proposed that separate files be made of original Tablets and translations and of photostatic copies of the Tablets with copies of original translations. The former would not be available for reference or handling, while the latter would be available.

3. That through the medium of the Baha’i News frequent requests be made for the believers to forward to the Archives original Tablets of the Master with original translations; original letters from the Guardian; manuscripts or other objects sacred because they were possessions of, or were directly associated with, the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá or the Greatest Holy Leaf; objects sacred to the memory of the Disciples of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in America and of international teachers of the Cause; photographs of local assemblies and groups, teaching conferences, summer school gatherings, and Bahá'í Youth organizations, as well as of individual Bahá'ís whose activities have been national in scope. It is suggested that corresponding secretaries of local assemblies can be of great assistance to the National Archives by taking the responsibility for the collection of Archives material locally. They may also aid in distinguishing between material which is primarily of local interest and that which is of national interest and importance. The Archives Committee will gladly supply believers who send in their Tablets with exact photostatic copies at small cost.

4. That the National Spiritual Assembly direct the Publishing Committee to forward to the National Archives at least two copies of all Bahá'í publications in its possession; also that other committees, such as the Publicity Committee and the Committee on Bahá'í History, be requested to save their files for the eventual deposit of those materials which are suitable in the National Archives.

5. That provision be made for the exhibition of representative types of material in the Archives in the Foundation Hall at the coming Convention.

Respectfully submitted,

The Archives Committee,

Edwin Mattoon, Chairman
Julia Sobel
Albert Windust
Gertrude Brikema
May Scheffler, Secy.

4. Reviewing Committee

The function of the Reviewing Committee is so generally misunderstood that it seems desirable to make certain facts clear before anything else.

A manuscript approved by the Reviewing Committee of the National Spiritual Assembly simply means that what is written in connection with the Bahá'í Faith in that manuscript is according to the authorized teachings. It does not mean that the manuscript will be published. It does not mean that the manuscript is a literary production. The Publishing Committee publishes only what it is authorized to publish by the National Spiritual Assembly. For instance, if someone writes an article on the Bahá'í Cause and sends it to the National Assembly for review, the National Assembly gives it to the Reviewing Committee. The approval of the Reviewing Committee is limited to whether what is said about the Cause is according to the teachings, or not. If the article is approved the author is then free to submit it to some general magazine or other source of publication. If it is a book it would be sent to some publishing house which would accept or reject it from quite another standpoint. If a good book were written on the Cause and the Publishing Committee had the funds, no doubt the National Assembly would be happy to consider its publication. In our present financially strained circumstances, however, funds are lacking in all departments of Bahá'í endeavor.

Certain types of manuscript are not reviewable. Music, poetry, plays, novels—all forms of art are not reviewable because the Bahá'í teachings cannot be applied as the standard of accuracy and truth. For instance, you can't have a "Bahá'í" poem. You cannot have a good poem or a bad poem. You cannot have "Bahá'í" music. You can only have good music or bad music. If you write a play in which certain Bahá'í principles or characters appear, and the play is produced, if it is a great play it will influence thousands of people, and if it is a bad play it will be a failure.

Therefore, only manuscripts which claim to describe some aspect of the Teachings, the Temple, the principles, the inner mysteries, the lives of the great Personalities, etc., should be reviewed in order to safeguard the author and the public from divers opinions or misconceptions of the teachings or the administration of the New World Order.

Two copies of the manuscript should be submitted. One to be retained in the files of the National Assembly after it has been approved, and the other to be returned to the author. Manuscripts should be typewritten and double-spaced, if possible.

The following manuscripts have been approved since April 24, 1933:

- Children's Lessons, Sections III and IV, submitted by the Committee for Teaching and Training Children.
- Bahá'í Answers, a compilation, by Olivia Kelsey.
- The Call to Prayer, by Ruth J. E. Moffett.
- Little Prayer Book, compiled by the Editorial Committee.
- The Bahá'í Faith, by Horace Holley. (A pamphlet.)
- The Persian Wife, by Mary Maxwell. (A play.)
- Fundamental Concepts in the Light of a Contemporary Religion—the Bahá'í Faith, by Glenn A. Shook. (An article.)

5. History of the Bahá'í Cause in America

Before the history of the Bahá'í Cause in America can be written it is necessary that the committee should have in hand statements from various sources giving information regarding this history. This committee, therefore, has sent out several calls to the Bahá'ís collectively to all and individually to some, asking that each of the Bahá'ís friends who have historical data and reminiscences regarding the beginning of the teachings and the development of the Cause in their various assemblies, write these out in the form of statements and send them to the committee. We have urged the friends to write with as much detail and information as possible. The plan being that each of these statements eventually be placed in the National Bahá'í Archives. It is hoped that much information will be contributed.

Up until the present time we have had a number of valuable contributions. The various members of the committee have been active among the friends in their several assemblies, and the work of amassing data is progressing. Nevertheless, the committee urges that this work be accelerated and suggests that an urgent appeal be made at the coming Convention, exhorting all of the friends particularly the older Bahá'ís who were associated with the Cause in its early days, to lose no time in writing out their statements and sending them to the chairman of the committee.

We all wish this service to progress as rapidly as possible, but until we have the complete cooperation of all those who have historical data to contribute we will be handicapped in our work.

The Bahá'í History Committee urges that each Assembly appoint one of their members to write a history of their Assembly and send this to the Bahá'í History Committee. At the present time several Assemblies have done this, but the committee will not have the complete history of the Cause in America until each Assembly has made such a contribution.

THE WORLD ORDER OF BAHÁ'U'LLAH

"That Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Bahá'í Faith."—Shoghi Effendi. (World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, pages 3 and 4.)

Throughout the present Bahá'í year, BAHÁ'I NEWS will maintain this special department consisting of quotations from the Guardian's writings on the subject of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The various Assemblies, local and national, constitute today the bedrock upon the strength of which the Universal House is in future to be firmly established and raised. Not until these functions vigorously and harmoniously can the hope for the termination of this period of transition be realized. (Bahá'í Administration, page 54.)

And now as I look into the future, I hope to see the friends at all times, in every land and of every shade of thought and character, voluntarily and joyously rallying around their local and in particular their national centers of activity, upholding and promoting their interests with complete unanimity and contentment, with perfect understanding, genuine enthusiasm and sustained vigor. This indeed is the one joy and yearning of my life, for it is the fountainhead from which all future blessings will flow, the broad foundations upon which the security of the Divine Edifice must ultimately rest. (Bahá'í Administration, page 58.)

We have but to turn our eyes without to realize the fierceness and magnitude of the forces of darkness that are struggling with the dawning light of the Abhá Revelation. Nations, though exhausted and disillusioned, have seemingly begun to cherish anew the spirit of revenge, of domination, and strife. Peoples, convulsed by economic upheavals, are slowly drifting into two great opposing camps with all their menace of social chaos, class hatreds, and worldwide ruin. (Bahá'í Administration, page 58.)

As the Bahá'í Faith permeates the masses of the peoples of East and West, and its truth is embraced by the majority of the peoples of a number of the Sovereign States of the world, will the Universal House of Justice attain the plentitude of its power, and exercise, as the supreme organ of the Bahá'í Commonwealth, all the rights, the duties and responsibilities incumbent upon the world's future super-state. (World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, page 7.)

In a world writhing with pain and declining into chaos this (American Bahá'í) community—the guardian of the liberating forces of Bahá'u'lláh—succeeded in the years following 'Abdu'l-Bahá's passing in raising high above the institutions established by its sister communities in East and West what may well constitute the chief pillar of that future House—a House which posterity will regard as the last refuge of a tottering civilization. (America and the Most Great Peace, page 21.)

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

1.—From Circular Letter issued by the Spiritual Assembly of Haifa, June, 1934

Our Beloved Guardian, following his customary practice of retiring from Haifa during the uncomfortably warm summer months, left for Europe on the 7th of June, accompanied by Mr. Husein Rabbani. Our Guardian's health is the pivot of strength upon which reclineth the stupendous weight and responsibility of the Cause. It is evident then that the most rejoicing news to all the friends throughout the world shall always be the glad tidings that our Beloved Guardian is in the best of health.

Recent news from Persia reveal the fact that further restrictions have been imposed upon the Bahá'ís there. Not long ago we learned that the Governor of Khurasan, North East of Persia, had ordered to stop all Bahá'í administrative functions and gatherings throughout that province. The meetings of Bahá'ís have likewise been forbidden in Khuzistan, South West of Persia.

Great as the progress of Persia has been during the last thirteen years under the gifted leadership of His Majesty the King Reza Shah Pahlavi, who is indeed responsible for the present Persian renaissance, yet it cannot be expected that the deep-seated jealousies and hatreds of a bigoted clergy, the exploitations and intrigues of some political brigands and the evil machinations of few foreign religious institutions that under the camouflage of a noble purpose sow moral disharmony and strife among the people; should be discarded and disbanded in such a comparatively short time.

But the believers should in no wise be discouraged in carrying out the glorious task which has been bequeathed to them to spiritually rejuvenate a sadly shaken world. We must always remember that whether it be the crumbling of society's pillars or the infliction of persecutions and restrictions upon the believers, they "all witness," in the words of our Beloved Guardian, "to the tumult which the birth of this mighty Organ of the Religion of Bahá'u'lláh has cast into the world—a tumult which will grow in scope and intensity as the implications of this constantly evolving Scheme are more fully understood and its ramifications more widely extended over the surface of the globe."

We have read in the Circular Letter of the East and West Committee that the Bahá'ís of Persia are deeply grateful for the gift of one hundred pounds Sterling sent by the Bahá'ís of America to the sufferers emigrated from Ishqábád and now in Mashhád, which will do much toward improving the conditions of these friends and assisting the Mashhád Assembly in providing for them.

The same Circular reports the following news of special concern to all the friends interested in educating Modern Persia:

Mrs. Clara Sharp of San Francisco, California, who came to Persia three 6 years ago to be with her daughter, Miss Adelaide Sharp, head of the Tarbiyat School for Girls, has among other numerous activities been carrying a considerable amount of teaching work and her course in debating and public speaking has aroused special interest. Recently one of her pupils addressed the student body of a local Mohammadan school on a modern invention; a mulla present arose and denounced the infiltration of new ideas which he said were false and were leading Persia's youth astray; the speaker replied with such vigor and logic that the students applauded him and the mulla was silenced. This incident probably could not have taken place 10 years ago; it illustrates the collapse of clerical jurisdiction in Persia, the new widespread emancipation of the youth. Certainly the instructors who are guiding this generation deserve special credit.

Recently, in Egypt, an article has been written and published by an Egyptian, criticising the Cause. That article was answered by Subhi Elias of Alexandria, whose brother is now engaged in spreading the Cause in Abyssinia, in the form of a personal letter which he sent to the author; whereupon the latter published very naively the said refutation in the May 21st, issue of an Egyptian daily, called Al-Balagh, thus publicly exposing his own ignorance in an article which clearly and logically revealed his fallacies and contradictions in his social views and principles.

2.—From Circular Letter Issued by the Unity of the East and West Committee, Tehran, April-May, 1934

This Ridván will go down in the history of Bahá’í Persia because during the feast days the first national Bahá’í Convention met in Tehran and elected the first National Assembly of Persia, with 84 delegates present from all over the country. Friends in the West will appreciate what achievement such a gathering represents in a country where travel is still a considerable adventure and where even a brief stay in the capital entails a long absence from home.

The delegates made their headquarters at the Haziratu’l-Quds, where the Central Assembly and the Service Committee had made the necessary arrangements for their reception; all kinds of furniture, beds, tables and the like had been requisitioned from Bahá’ís throughout town, and the fact that the delegates were in a sense the house guests of the Tehran friends added to the pleasure of the Convention. Many of the local friends entertained the delegates, both at the Haziratu’l-Quds and at their homes; the social aspects of the Convention were highly important because the Persian friends of different centres cannot communicate with one another with the frequency enjoyed in the West. A significant event of this Convention was the sending of representatives by the four women’s committees to report to the delegates and submit their program for the coming year.

Jenabi Fazel Mazandarani.
“Haji Ghulam Reza Amin Amin.”
“Mirza Valiullah Khan Varqa.”
“Dr. Yunis Khan Afrukhtih.”
“Mirza Shuaullah Khan Alai.”
“Mirza Ahmed Khan Yazdani.”
“Mirza Ali Akbar Khan Froutan.”
“Mirza Mahmud Khan Badiyi.”
“Mirza Enayatullah Ahmed Poor.”
EXPLANATION OF PASSAGES IN "THE DISPENSATION OF BAHÁ'U'LLÁH"

The following explanations have been made by the Guardian in reply to answers sent him by the National Assembly. These passages are quoted from a letter dated August 7, 1934:

"Concerning the passage in 'The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh' in which the Guardian quotes 'Abdu'l-Bahá's interpretation of the prophecy referring to the times when the sun would stand still in the heavens, he wishes me to explain that the days referred to in this prophecy have to be reckoned differently. In the Sacred Scriptures of various religions there are to be found frequent references to days, but these have to be considered as indicating different periods of time, as for instance in the Qur'an a day is reckoned as one thousand years. The first ten days in the above mentioned prophecy represent each a century, making thus a total of one thousand lunar years. As to the twenty days referring to the Bábí Dispensation, each of them represents only one lunar year, the total of twenty years marking the duration of the Revelation of the Báb. The thirty days in the last Dispensation should be reckoned numerically, but should be considered as symbolizing the incomparable greatness of the Bahá'í Revelation which, though not the final, is none the less thus far the fullest revelation of God to man. From a physical point of view, the thirty days represent the maximum time taken by the sun to pass through a sign of the zodiac. They thus represent a culminating point in the evolution of this star (i.e., the earth). So also from a spiritual standpoint these thirty days should be viewed as indicating the highest, though not the final, stage in the spiritual evolution of mankind."

"As to the list of the prophets with whom Bahá'u'lláh identified Himself in the passage found on pages 26 and 27 of 'The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh,' their names are as follows: Abraham, Moses, Joseph, John the Baptist, Jesus, Imam Husayn, on whom Bahá'u'lláh has conferred an exceptionally exalted station, (and) the Báb."

LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

To the Local Spiritual Assemblies of the United States and Canada.
Beloved Friends:

In this letter the Assembly will endeavor to make a few useful suggestions on the subject of teaching.

This subject has become uppermost in our minds on account of the great emphasis which the Guardian has been giving it in his recent general communications.

For example, in "The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh," Shoghi Effendi wrote: "Who, contemplating the helplessness, the tears and miseries of humanity in this day, can any longer question the necessity for a fresh revelation of the quickening power of God's redemptive love and guidance? Who, witnessing on one hand the stupendous advance achieved in the realm of human knowledge, of power, of skill and inventiveness, and viewing on the other the unprecedented character of the sufferings that afflict, and the dangers that beset, present-day society, can be so blind as to doubt that the hour has at last struck for the advent of a new Revelation, for a re-statement of the Divine Purpose, and for the consequent revival of those spiritual forces that have, at fixed intervals, rehabilitated the fortunes of human society?"

And in "America and the Most Great Peace": "Would it seem extravagant, in the light of so sublime an utterance, to expect that in the midst of so enviable a region of the earth and out of the agony and wreckage of an unprecedented crisis there should burst forth a spiritual renaissance which, as it propagates itself through the instrumentality of the American believers, will rehabilitate the fortunes of a decadent age?"

Such words reveal to us the measure of our opportunity, and remind us likewise of the degree of our sacred obligation. Every well-conceived and unified teaching effort put forth at this time is bound to bear fruit. The day of indifference and the condition of pride and superiority in the world about us has completely gone. Now it is for the Bahá'ís, bearing the Greatest Name in their hearts, to kindle that flame which can "burn away all things that are not of God."

As for effective teaching methods, these are as many as we require to meet the various circumstances of our local community. Among them may be enumerated:

1. The home meeting, at which a small number of inquirers may be invited to a series of discussions and readings. How many Bahá'í homes, never before consecrated to this supreme purpose, can be opened up for teaching this year?

2. The public teaching class, under the direct supervision of the local Spiritual Assembly, which carries on the work begun by the home or "fireside" meetings, and brings the students to the point of enrolling as members of the Bahá'í community. This more formal teaching class need not be continuous, but arranged for a series of consecutive weeks at different intervals throughout the year, depending upon the number of students who are made available by the combined efforts of the entire Bahá'í community.

3. The occasional public meeting of special character, such as those devoted to Race Amity, World Peace or some other Bahá'í principle of special public importance at this time.

4. The regular series of public ad-addresses such as are carried on more particularly by those Assemblies which have public meeting places. The vital point to be considered in this connection is that the public meetings have little value unless they produce serious inquirers who are prepared to enter a study class.

5. While the home meetings for the most part attract those people who can be reached through personal acquaintance, there is need always of presenting the Faith to local leaders of opinion and persons of some distinct capacity. The suggestion is therefore made that each Assembly proceed to appoint a committee for the special purpose of drawing up a mailing list of such people in the community. This list has great value and once started should be kept always complete and up to date. It may be used as follows:

A. For sending invitations to the occasional public meetings of special character, described under No. 3 above.

B. For sending the public teaching bulletins issued by the National Spiritual Assembly about once every two months, entitled "A New World Order." Copies may be obtained direct from the National Assembly at the rate of 50 copies for 75c.

C. For sending the Outline and Summary of the Baha'i Faith prepared by the National Assembly a few months ago. These can be purchased from the Publishing Committee in the usual way.

6. As for study and teaching material, the Teaching Outlines obtainable from the Publishing Committee are ideal, and the variety of subjects is sufficient to meet every requirement.

7. Inseparable from any well-conceived teaching program is the factor of publicity, and the Publicity Committee stands ready to cooperate by means of practical advice as well as finished material suitable for giving to the press.

8. The Library Committee also should be consulted, since it is very important to have authentic literature on hand in Public and University Libraries.

9. It is of course the Teaching Committee which stands most ready to give assistance to local Assemblies, groups, and isolated believers in their efforts to promote the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. The National Assembly at this time seeks merely to remind the friends of some of the many ways in which even the smallest community or group, when filled with the true spirit, can render service to the beloved Cause.

ADDRESS FOR NATIONAL ASSEMBLY CORRESPONDENCE

Beginning October 1, and until further notice, communications intended for the National Spiritual Assembly, should be addressed as follows:

National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada,
Evergreen Cabin,
West Englewood, N. J.
Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman,
1000 Chanler Building,
Washington, D. C.
Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer,
Evergreen Cabin,
West Englewood, N. J.
Horace Holley, Secretary,
119 Waverly Place,
New York, N. Y.

Can we any longer resist the mighty spirit outpoured to us in such communications as "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh?"

Yours faithfully,
THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.
September 10, 1934.

SYMBOL OF THE GREATEST NAME

The friends will be happy to learn that the use of this Symbol is now legally protected for proper Baha'i use under the trade mark registration recently made by the National Spiritual Assembly through the U. S. Patent Office. After careful consideration of the significance of this sacred Symbol, the Assembly has voted that its use should be confined to books and pamphlets containing the words of Bahá'u'lláh.

THE INSTITUTION OF THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

For a period of more than ten years, a large portion of our collective effort has been devoted to the task of developing the institutions described in the Master's Will and Testament and the subject matter of most of the general communications issued by the Guardian of the Faith.

At our present state of development there appears to be a need for a more definite and widespread understanding of the institution of a Spiritual Assembly as it affects its own members—as it calls for a new and unique loyalty on the part of its nine members to the Assembly itself.

The National Spiritual Assembly therefore takes the occasion to offer a few remarks on this phase of the subject, in the hope that they will clarify this important matter and assist the believers to appreciate the firm basis on which every local and National Assembly must rest if it is to fulfil its responsibility to the Cause.

It is necessary to bear in mind the fact that the Spiritual Assembly is not a body created by the believers, even though by their votes at elections they determine its membership. The institution itself was created by Bahá'u'lláh. Unlike the institutions set up by a democracy, whose functions and powers are strictly defined by the people, with a definite reservation of certain rights to the body of the citizens—including the right to annul the constitutions and adopt an entirely new political charter—a Spiritual Assembly rests upon sanctions higher than that of the voting community. Its functions and powers are unalterable. The responsibility of its members is not to the electorate but to the higher authority resident in the Cause.

This general principle has brought into being the necessity for a definite loyalty on the part of all Assembly members to the institution which collectively they compose. They are trustees of its duties, responsibilities, rights and powers, and not merely representatives of the community nor of any party or faction thereof. In meeting this obligation to the Assembly itself, the members can have utmost confidence that they are rendering the fullest and truest service to the body of the believers concerned.

It is important to note that upon the Baha'i Electorate there rests a special responsibility in relation to the election. Thus, in describing the functions of Convention delegates, Shoghi Effendi declared that they should cast their ballots for none save those whom prayer and meditation inspire them to believe are possessed of certain qualities: "unquestioned loyalty, selfless devotion, a well trained mind, recognized ability, mature experience." The efficiency and integrity of a Spiritual Assembly, therefore, depends upon the degree to which, in every Bahá'í election, the believers conscientiously meet this Guardian's standards.

The Declaration of Trust and By-Laws afford a procedure controlling to a certain extent the methods which should be carried out by members of a Spiritual Assembly in performing their duties at meetings. It is clear, 1 See "Baha'i Administration," page 79.
for example, that decisions are made by unanimous vote, but unanimity lacking, by vote of the majority. 'Abdu'l-Bahá revealed a Tablet, quoted by the Guardian² in one of his earliest general letters, emphatically commanding every member of an Assembly to abide by its decisions. The Teachings recognize no minority rights whatsoever within the body of an Assembly. Every decision made by a Spiritual Assembly is binding upon each and all its members alike, whatever their personal views, prior to the final vote, may have been.

Two observations should be made in connection with the process of consultation leading up to the decision. First, that during the consultation it is not merely the right but the sacred duty of each member to express his or her opinion fully and freely, for only through a true consensus of opinion can all aspects of a question be thoroughly explored. Secondly, that the termination of the period of consultation and the taking of the vote, is a matter which the majority can decide. The right to express one's view fully and freely does not imply the power to prevent any decision from being enforced.

It is one extreme attitude to the other, in violation of the sacred unity of the Cause. The opinion is sometimes expressed that Spiritual Assemblies are too prone to maintain an attitude of secrecy and aloofness, in violation of the sacred unity of the Cause. This opinion requires clear analysis, if Assemblies are to avoid going from one extreme attitude to the other, in each case failing to attain the true balance.

What is and must be preserved inviolate from mere gossip and rumor are the personal views expressed by the members on any matter before the vote is taken. If any member of an assembly leaves a meeting and expresses criticism of the attitude expressed by any other member in the period of full and free consultation, this is destructive of the spirit of mutual confidence and trust which must be maintained by every Assembly, and can but lead to disunity and a weakening of its capacity for service to the Cause. So long as a member who had expressed one opinion is willing to abide by the result of an unanimous or majority vote, there is no ground of criticism in that his opinion, prior to the vote, was different from that established by the vote.

A Spiritual Assembly is an institution and not merely nine believers who happen to hold office. The great obligations and duties laid upon that institution are superior to any rights assumed by some of its members. Within its sphere of jurisdiction, as the Guardian has said, a Spiritual Assembly has undivided authority. The difference between secrecy and trustworthiness is again exemplified when we consider the important subject of conferences held by a Spiritual Assembly with individual members of the community. If the believers find by experience that they cannot bring personal matters to an Assembly without having rumor and gossip immediately circulate throughout the community, such a condition is a serious charge for which that Assembly cannot escape responsibility. As the Cause develops, each Assembly will increasingly be called upon to deal with certain matters of a personal and confidential nature, and the time has surely come when a firm foundation of trustworthiness should be laid.

Matters of a general nature coming before a Spiritual Assembly should be reported to the community at each Nineteen Day Feast. It should be readily possible for an Assembly to determine what matters are confidential, and of the nature of a trust, and what matters concern the Cause and are of interest and importance to the entire Bahá'í community. When a matter is recorded as confidential each member should scrupulously preserve it as such. When a matter is recorded otherwise, it should be reported in the form recorded in the minutes and by whatever officer is designated to make the report. Frank discussion of these points, and full agreement as to the conditions under which Assembly business is to be reported outside the meeting, are obvious requisites to the proper functioning of the institution.

Shoghi Effendi has written that the administrative order of the Faith is still in a condition of infancy. This may be fully recognized and admitted, but the condition of infancy is not intended to be perpetual. Great blessings will, we are assured, be released when the Bahá'í institutions develop to the point of internal unity and of harmonious relations to the community. The privilege of contributing to the steady evolution of those institutions which are the "pattern and nucleus" of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh is granted to every believer, but more especially to those to whom have been given positions of responsibility and trust. If members of Spiritual Assemblies will attain trustworthiness, and exhibit an individual and collective attitude showing forth both knowledge of the Teachings and scrupulous obedience to them, the long-awaited and long prayed-for renaissance of public teaching, and vital growth in the Cause, will surely follow, as day follows night.

The fact that a Spiritual Assembly is an institution independent of the will of the electoral body, bears any sanction the spirit of aloofness and separation from the community. On the contrary, it means that the Assembly is left entirely free to seek divine guidance for all its deliberations.

²"If after discussion, a decision be carried unanimously, well and good; but if, the Lord forbid, differences of opinion should arise, a majority of voices must prevail. It is again not permitted that any one of the honored members object to or censure, whether in or out of the meeting, any decision arrived at previously, though that decision be not right, for such criticism would prevent any decision from being enforced." See "Bahá'í Administration," pages 21, 22, 23.
and decisions, and has been given a truly Providential opportunity to serve the community as a whole. An Assembly, it must be repeated again and again, is not the creature or servant of any limited group or faction. Quite irrespective of how the various members of the community might have cast their ballots for members of the Assembly, the Assembly once elected has an impartial relationship of service to the welfare of the Cause in its city or nation. No institution in human history has ever rested upon a foundation so impregnable to the assaults of ambition, pride, self-interest, envy and malice, whether from without or within.

A Spiritual Assembly, raised above personal emotion and touched with a vision of divine justice, becomes an indestructible link in the chain of peace, economic stability and progress which the Supreme Manifestation has for the protection of mankind. Much has been offered to, much will be required from, all who are elected to membership in such an institution.

CURRENT ACTIVITIES

The Spiritual Assembly of Milwaukee announces a series of public lectures on The New World Order, at Milwaukee Auditorium, September 9 to 18. The program begins with an address on The New Civilization by Mme. Gita Orlova of the New York Bahá’í community, and continues with lectures twice daily on subjects of vital general importance. Other speakers are: Dr. E. Leanore Morris of Racine; Mrs. Shahnaz Waite of Los Angeles; Dr. Ali Kuli Khan of Washington; Mrs. Ruth Moffett of Chicago and Mrs. Lorol Schopfucher of the Bahá’í community of Eliot, Maine.

Study classes will follow the series of public lectures.

This program, broadly conceived and carefully developed, represents a bold effort to plant the teachings in the very heart of a large city. It will undoubtedly prove of immense service to the Cause, and its methods and results will be closely followed by the National Assembly.

The Twenty-third Annual “Souvenir of ’Abdu’l-Bahá” at West Englewood, N. J., was held on Saturday, June 30, under the direction of a National Committee representing the five neighboring Bahá’í Assemblies. Addresses were delivered by Saffa Kinney and Hooper Harris, and brief informal remarks were given by a number of believers. This Bahá’í meeting marks a most important episode in the history of the Cause in America, the Unity Feast given by ’Abdu’l-Bahá in 1912; which He declared to be the real birth of the Cause in this country.

The Vancouver Assembly reports that during May Mrs. Lorol Schopfucher spoke to the community and also showed the pictures which she had taken in Haifa and other places visited during her travels. In June the community received a visit from Mrs. Louise Caswell, who spent two weeks teaching. Prof. and Mrs. Ward spoke at a public meeting on June 29. The visit of Paul Voelz was also very much enjoyed.

The New Haven Assembly reports that five members have been added to the local community since the Ridvan Feast.

From the Los Angeles Assembly we receive copies of The Los Angeles Bahá’í News, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, dated July, August and September, 1934. This local News Letter sets a very high standard of excellence in its thoroughness and its admirable arrangement. In the larger cities, where the friends are widely separated, such local News Letters are a great means of developing the necessary capacity for cooperation. They tend to keep all the friends mutually informed of the various activities, and where facts are available the power of mere idle rumor is minimized. On September 5 the Los Angeles Bahá’í’s gathered to dedicate a new meeting place at 2523 7th Street.

The National Race Amity Committee carried out an important public program at Green Acre and Portsmouth on August 4 and 5, the speakers and chairmen being Mary Maxwell, Ali Kuli Khan, Carl Cartwright, Frank P. Dyar, Dr. Max Yergan, Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf, Louis G. Gregory, Hilary James, Mrs. Harold Bowditch, Harlan F. Ober, Mrs. Annie K. Lewis.

The Spiritual Assembly of Montreal has issued a folder reprinting an article entitled “The Epidemic of the Persian Jews,” appearing originally in the Jewish paper, Canadian Adier, Montreal, and afterward published in The Bahá’í World, Vol. IV. This article is followed by a commentary by Edward Dewing, and excerpts from the address given by ’Abdu’l-Bahá at Temple Emmanuel, San Francisco. This folder appears to be the first piece of literature prepared under American Bahá’í auspices to appeal directly to members of the Jewish Faith.

From the Spiritual Assembly of Cleveland the following items of interest have been received. Prior to the Convention, a public meeting was held which Ali Kuli Khan addressed. Louis G. Gregory visited Cleveland on his way to the Convention and conducted a number of meetings at which new people of capacity were attracted.

An Inter-Racial Amity Evening was held by the Spiritual Assembly of Denver on May 12. The program, carried out at West Hotel, included a Prayer by Theresa Lillywhite, Address of Welcome by the chairman, Edgar R. Meyer, a talk on the Youth Movement in Italy by the Italian Consult, Count di San Marzano, on World Bridges, by Frits van Lisch, Secretary, Glenarm Y. M. C. A., on Current Japanese Views by Dr. Tadayuki Hirose, Where Are We Going? by Milton Schayer, Races of Old Mexico, by S. M. Calderon, Mexican Consult, and The Dominant Note of the Twentieth Century, by Edgar R. Meyer.

The Chicago Assembly has set aside four evenings during the year to receive applications for membership in the local community, an excellent arrangement for the larger Assemblies, where time is required in order to familiarize the new believers with their fellow-Bahá’ís. A number of Fireside groups were discontinued until autumn, but during the summer months such Groups met regularly at the home of Mrs. Fannie Lesch, Dr. and Mrs. Paton, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Mathis and Mr. and Mrs. K. Smith, with the assistance of the following teachers: Howard Ives, Alfred E. Lunt, Mrs. Shahnaz Waite, Elahi Kalantar, Miss Mason, Mrs. Mabel Ives, Agnes Alexander, Ali Kuli Khan, Louis G. Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moffett. A new afternoon meeting has been started at the home of Mrs. Nettie Tobin, and a class has also been arranged in the home of Mrs. Agnes Kahlke, conducted by Mrs. Shahnaz Waite. On June 17, Mrs. Waite, assisted by Mrs. Ruth Moffett and Mrs. Nina Mathis, presented before the National Colored Student Club a program in verse and song on the subject of The Message of the New Day. On July 31 Mrs. Shahnaz Waite spoke on The Temple Beautiful at the Illinois Host House at the Century of Progress Exposition.

In reporting another new believer, the Portland Assembly expresses appreciation of the services rendered by... visiting believers, including Mrs. May Maxwell and Agnes Alexander.

The New York Assembly in the last issue of its local News Letter reported that during the Bahá'í year ending April 21, 1934, the community contributed a total of $14,934.75 to the National Fund and in addition expended on local activities the sum of $5,886.00. The Sunday afternoon program carried out in May was planned to reflect the four parts of the Guardian's letter on "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh." Mrs. Mary Hanford Ford opened this session with an address on the Báb, Hooper Harris spoke on Bahá'u'lláh, Saffa Kinney on 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and Mrs. Elsa Russell Blakely on The Administrative Order. The Forum program for the same period was devoted to the subject of Peace on Earth, Races and Religions, Education Looks Forward, Ethics in Industry, and Man's International Tribunal. On four consecutive Wednesday evenings the community gave special study to "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh." Fireside Meetings have been conducted in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Saffa Kinney, Winifred Richards, Miss R. Sunshine, Ethel Bellows, Mrs. Thurston Vaughn, Mr. and Mrs. Zeitlin.

San Francisco Bahá'í News, the first of the new type of local news letters to be established in recent years, records a number of interesting items in its May issue. Three believers were welcomed into the community at the Feast of Jalal. Visits have been received from Julia Culver, Mrs. Lorol Schopflocher and Mme. Gita Orlova. The public meetings that month consisted of addresses on The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh by Mrs. Schopflocher, The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh—Further Considerations, by Leroy Joas, World Peace in the Eyes of Youth, by Charlotte M. Linfoot, and Practical Steps Toward Peace, by Ali Yazdi.

ILLINOIS-WISCONSIN TEACHING CONFERENCE

The Illinois-Wisconsin Inter-Assembly Teaching Conference, Robert Theiss, Chairman, Mrs. Nina Matthiensen, 4612 Malden Street, Chicago, Secretary, announces an Inter-Assembly Teaching Conference to be held in the Foundation Hall of the Bahá'í House of Worship on October 6 and 7.

Three sessions will be held each day, ten to twelve-thirty, one-thirty to five P. M. and seven to ten P. M.

The subjects for discussion are: Personal Contacts in Teaching, Obligation of all Bahá'ís to Teach, Public Meetings, Public Contacts, Publicity, Children's Gardens, Racial Aims. The discussion will be preceded by the presentation of a compilation on the Obligation of all Bahá'ís to Teach. The Conference will be open to Bahá'ís and their friends, and it is hoped that all communities in the Central States will be well represented. Those wishing assistance in securing accommodations may write to the Chairman of the Hospitality Committee, Mrs. Alma Russell, 2622 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, III.

LOCAL BY-LAWS

At the meeting held on August 11 and 12, the National Spiritual Assembly voted to publish in Bahá'í News the statement that local Assemblies are advised to engage expert legal assistance in adapting the local By-Laws to the Religious Statutes of their particular State; and also that meanwhile the National Assembly feels it advisable and necessary for all local Assemblies without exception to abide by the set of By-Laws approved by the Guardian. (These are published in the new edition of "Bahá'í Administration" and also in a separate pamphlet obtainable from the Publishing Committee at 10c a copy.)

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Security for a Failing World, by Stanwood Cobb: Last year the Publishing Committee issued a circular letter requesting advance orders for this important new book, stating that when sufficient orders had been received at the special introductory price of $1.50 per copy, the book could be published.

The orders received being insufficient to enable the Committee to meet the printing cost, Dr. Cobb has now arranged to publish the book through Avalon Press. The regular price of the book will be $2.00, but the advance orders now on hand will be filled at the agreed price of $1.50.

Under the same arrangement, the discount of 33 1/3 per cent usually allowed Assemblies cannot be granted on the advance orders, but after these have been filled the Publishing Committee will secure copies and fill all future orders from Assemblies in the usual way. The Guardian's high opinion of this book has already been reported through Bahá'í News.

Youth Bulletin, issued by the Bahá'í Youth Committee. Copies of this bulletin can now be obtained at 10c each. net. This bulletin launches the activities of the Bahá'í young people in America in response to the instructions and advice given by the Guardian last year, as made known through Bahá'í News. While intended particularly for all Bahá'í youth between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five years, the bulletin should also be studied by local Assemblies who wish to fulfill their responsibility in assisting the young people in their community, and will also be of great interest to all adult believers desiring to be informed of all branches of Bahá'í activity.

The Dawn-Breakers, Special Autographed Edition. It will be remembered that when The Dawn-Breakers was published, the Committee issued, with the Guardian's approval, a limited special edition of 150 copies at $35.00 per copy. Each copy in this edition bears the Guardian's signature, and is printed on very expensive paper and bound in leather. At present, only 25 copies of this edition are available, and in all likelihood the autographed edition will never be repeated.

My Pilgrimage to the Land of Desire, by Marie A. Watson. This pamphlet, written by a devoted pilgrim who visited Haifa during the last years of the Master's mission on earth, was published under a special fund which enables the Committee to devote the entire proceeds to the Temple Fund. Per copy, 50c.

NATIONAL AND LOCAL ARCHIVES

A Statement by the Archives Committee

Over a period of years the National Archives Committee has been receiving material for preservation in the Archives. Through the efforts of the servants of the Cause who have been carrying on this work, a veritable treasure house consisting of original Tablets and other manuscripts, sacred reliks, and printed matter pertaining to the history of the Cause in America has been built up. While far the greater part of the material forwarded to the Committee has been suitable for preservation in the National Archives, some of the material received should, without doubt, have been retained for local Bahá'í archives or for individual preservation.

With the approval of the N. S. A., the Committee recommends that local Spiritual Assemblies lay plans for the founding of local archives, if they have not already done so, and that the following standards or distinctions between materials which should be contained in local and National Archives be observed by the friends in the future.
Local Archives

a. Such records as the local Assembly may wish to make available, bearing upon the local activities, all records of importance in connection with the growth of the Cause locally.

b. Accurate individual records of all members of the local Bahá'í community.

c. Relics, photographs, etc., associated with the experiences of individual Bahá'ís, unless gifts of the Master or the Guardian.

National Archives

a. The "Real Bahá'í Archives," i.e., the writings of the Founders of the Cause. These would include any original writings of the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh that may come into the possession of the National Archives; also, photo-static copies and authoritative illuminated copies of their original writings.

b. Such National Spiritual Assemblies as may serve as a basis for the subject of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

c. Records, objects, and photographs of particular national interest, as those dealing with the Temple, the work of national and international teachers, and the Bahá'í World.

d. Individual records and relics of any form only when touched by (directly associated with) the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh, the Master, the Guardian, or the N. S. A.

The cooperation of local corresponding secretaries is requested in the collecting and forwarding of material which should be preserved in the National Archives. The attention and active interest of the friends should be encouraged in both local and National Archives through consultation in Spiritual Assemblies and at Nineteen-Day Feasts.

Cost of Photostatic Copies of Tablets

The Archives Committee is glad to be able to inform Assemblies and individual believers who have deposited original Tablets from the Master and letters from the Guardian in the Archives that exact photostats or photographic copies of these Tablets and letters, 5 x 8 inches in size, and on permanent record stock, may be ordered through the Committee at a cost of 10c per copy of a single page. Photostats of Tablets addressed to Assemblies would form a foundation for the local Bahá'í Archives.

THE WORLD ORDER OF BAHÁ'U'LLÁH

"That Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Bahá'í Faith."—Shoghi Effendi. (World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, pages 3 and 4).

Throughout the present Bahá'í year, Bahá'í News will maintain this special department consisting of quotations from the Guardian's writings on the subject of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

Regarding the very delicate and complex question of ascertaining the qualifications of a true believer, I cannot in this connection emphasize too strongly the supreme necessity for the exercise of the utmost discretion, caution and tact, whether it be in deciding for ourselves as to who may be regarded as a true believer or in disclosing to the outside world such considerations as may serve as a basis for such a decision. I would only venture to state very briefly and as adequately as present circumstances permit the principal factors that must be taken into consideration before deciding whether a person may be regarded a true believer or not. Full recognition of the station of the Forerunner, the Author, and the True Exemplar of the Bahá'í Cause, as set forth in 'Abdül-Bahá's Testament; unreserved acceptance of, and submission to, whatsoever has been revealed by their Pen; loyal and steadfast adherence to every clause of our Beloved's sacred Will; and close association with the spirit as well as the form of the present day Bahá'í administration throughout the world—these I conceive to be the fundamental and primary considerations that must be fairly, discreetly and thoughtfully ascertained before reaching such a vital decision. (Bahá'í Administration, pages 80, 81.)

We need but glance at the Words of Bahá'u'lláh and the Epistles of 'Abdül-Bahá to realize the great privilege of teaching the Cause, its vital necessity, its supreme urgency, and its wide-reaching effects. These are the very words of 'Abdül-Bahá:

"In these days, the Holy Ones of the Realm of Glory, dwelling in the all-highest Paradise, yearn to return unto this world, and be of some service to the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh and prove their servitude to the Threshold of the Abhá Beauty."

What a wondrous vision these words unfold to our eyes! How great our privilege to labor in this Day in the Divine Vineyard! Is it not incumbent upon us to arise and teach His Cause with such an ardor no worldly adversity can quell, nor any measure of success can satiate?

And now, that this all-important Work may suffer no neglect, but rather function vigorously and continuously in every part of the Bahá'í world; and the unity of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh may remain secure and inviolate, it is of the utmost importance that in accordance with the explicit text of the Kitáb-ul-Aqdas, the Most Holy Book, in every locality, be it city or hamlet, where the number of adults (21 years and above) declared believers exceeds nine, a local "Spiritual Assembly" be forthwith established. To it all local matters pertaining to the Cause must be directly and immediately referred for full consultation and decision. The importance, may the absolute necessity of these local Assemblies be manifest when we realize that in the days to come they will evolve into the local House of Justice, and at present provide the firm foundation on which the structure of the Master's Will is to be reared in future. (Bahá'í Administration, page 32.)

IN MEMORIAM

The friends are requested to remember in prayer those believers who have ascended to the Kingdom.

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS

6. Publicity Committee

The ultimate goal of Bahá'í publicity is to place before the reading public the pure teachings of Bahá'u'lláh with dignity and scrupulous accuracy. To realize that in the writings of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the letters of Shoghi Effendi we have material for publicity which is the most important thought that can be given to the world at this time. We must visualize the Bahá'í publicity as being an arm of the teaching work. The time has come when the vast reading audience will be taught through the medium of the press as well as by word of mouth. Therefore the quality of the material is of paramount importance.

There must be many of our co-workers in the Local Spiritual Assemblies who share with us a new realization of the importance of the function of publicity in the promotion of the Bahá'í Faith. This distinctly modern development of Bahá'í teaching work is not far beyond its pioneer stage, still we cannot but feel that the forces liberated by the completion of Dome unit and the inexorable onward movement of world events have had their effect in the increase in the tempo of our national publicity output. To advance in step with our growing opportunities we shall need increasingly a carefully evolved technique and we shall have to rely increasingly upon the tact, skill and actual teaching ardor of the local committees who are handling the work at first hand. The sense of a working contact this year with local publicity chairmen has been the source of our chief joy in our work. To work together has been our aim, sharing the same problems and rejoicing in the same successes. Due to the patience and steadfastness of the local workers publicity this year has met with unparalleled expansion which we feel is a prelude to the greater future and thrilling possibilities in store for us.

As we have pointed out before, in press work we have, more than in any other field direct linking of the Bahá'í Cause with the public mind. (This is not our usual selective audience.) What has been our approach to this unique meeting place of our Faith and the rank and file of the general public? The National Publicity Committee has extended two arms in its activities—one to their co-workers in the local centers and the other to the newspapers.

Letters and Bulletins

Our purpose has been the further organizing of publicity work in Local Spiritual Assemblies and the development through correspondence of an increased skill in the handling and selection of material. Toward this end we have issued in every number of the Bahá'í News since January letters and bulletins with observations or practical suggestions pertaining to the work. In addition we have sent from month to month mimeographed letters dealing with special and timely applications and have carried on personal correspondence with fifty Assemblies and Groups.

Publicity File

An effort had been made to compile a file of the available speakers in the Bahá'í Cause in the United States and Canada. The cards in this file will have a short history of the speakers including material which will be usable as advance publicity and will be invaluable in showing the speakers available in your region. This file will be placed in every Assembly for reference.

Special Bulletin on News Writing

We have recently issued a bulletin on "The Fundamental Principles of News Writing" in which the following points compiled from reliable textbooks on journalism, are covered. Newspaper interest; the meaning of newspaper terms; taking notes during an address and how to approach the city editor. The bulletin contains the summing up of the past years suggestions which have grown out of correspondence between the national and local publicity committees. The bulletin is intended to become the basis from which the next step in Bahá'í publicity is to be taken. It is hoped that it will be placed in a permanent file for reference. We have sent out five national releases.

Accomplishments in the Local Assemblies

We wish we had sufficient space to tell in detail the accomplishments of the local publicity committees since last fall. The following types of publicity have been effective in various parts of the country.

1. The placing of national news releases (some if not all) in 46 cities where there are Bahá'í Communities.

2. The use of paid publicity. This has included an entire column in regarding to the principles and history of the Cause. An unlimited opportunity is before us in this field.

3. An outstanding piece of work has been done in a western Assembly where a column appears weekly giving the pure teachings and selections from current writings to emphasize the words of the Cause in relation to current events. An effort is being made to have this material available to every Assembly.

4. The sending of news releases to a circle of small newspapers near the city where the Bahá'í Community is located. These are usually small town papers which are likely to have available space.

5. Reporting talks by Bahá'í speakers. (In some cases this space has been paid for).

6. Announcements of meetings.

7. Letters to editors or magazines. For example, through a letter of appreciation to a newspaper 'Abdu'l-Bahá's statements on the press have recently appeared.

8. Articles written for magazines (and several fine ones published.)

9. Meetings to which outside interest has been added such as the suggested memorial for Edison and Lincoln in February. In some cases this opened doors to the press which have formerly been closed. Other project meetings included guest speakers, concerts and youth meetings.

We have clippings (on exhibit at the Convention) from 60 cities in whose papers publicity has appeared through the efforts of the local Bahá'í workers.

Approach to Newspapers

On March second the National Publicity Committee sent a letter to one hundred leading newspapers in the United States and Canada enclosing a pamphlet entitled, “The Bahá'í House of Worship”. This release was for editorial files and to counteract erroneous publicity.

During the first week in May a brief statement with photograph of the Bahá'í House of Worship showing the completed Dome unit was sent to one hundred editors. This release also contained the splendid summary of the Bahá'í Faith which the National Spiritual Assembly has just published.

At the request of the National Teaching Committee advance publicity was sent to the cities where a travelling speaker was to present the Cause. In one case this was the first material ever to be accepted in the city.

Such is the present stage of Bahá'í publicity in the year of the completion of the Temple Dome. Our need, as we review it, is for a greater uniformity of success. We wish we might say that every center in the country was making full use of the several ways that publicity may be obtained. We commend those Assemblies who have done their utmost and urge all others seriously to consider the advantages and actual coming necessity of a highly developed press service. This as we have said in a recent letter is not merely the sphere of the publicity chairman—the whole Community should be on the alert for Bahá'í news and ways of creating it. Consultation in regard to publicity should be on the agenda of every Community meeting.

Your town or city, its size, its location, has its own special problems and advantages to our work. You as a functioning unit can find the way to meet them. May we all be assisted in the year to come to penetrate into that unconquered country, “the world of humanity”.

COMMUNICATIONS FROM
SHOGHI EFFENDI

"He feels that during the last few months considerable progress has been achieved in safeguarding and in extending the area of the lands surrounding and dedicated to the Shrines on Mount Carmel. It is his hope that through the generous and self-sacrificing efforts of the believers still further steps will be taken towards the complete safeguard of the entire area surrounding these sacred spots." (September 9, 1934, to National Spiritual Assembly.)

"Anything whatsoever affecting the interests of the Cause and in which the National Assembly as a body is involved should, if regarded as unsatisfactory by local Assemblies and individual believers, be immediately referred to the National Assembly itself. Neither the general body of the believers, nor any local Assembly, nor even the delegates to the Annual Convention, should be regarded as having any authority to entertain appeals against the decision of the National Assembly. Should the matter be referred to the Guardian it will be his duty to consider it with the utmost care and to decide whether the issues involved justify him to consider it in person, or to leave it entirely to the discretion of the National Assembly.

"This administrative principle which the Guardian is now restating and emphasizing is so clear, so comprehensive and simple that no misunderstanding as to its application, he feels, can possibly arise. There are no exceptions whatever to this rule, and the Guardian would deprecate any attempt to elaborate or dwell any further upon this fundamental and clearly-enunciated principle.

"The problems with which the Faith is now grappling, whether national or international, are so pressing and momentous that no one among its loyal adherents can afford to dissipate his precious energies on details arising from the application of administrative principles, or even on the perfecting of the machinery of the administration itself. Purely secondary matters can be postponed until the primary tasks are performed.

"The situation in Persia which is going from bad to worse, the necessary measures which should be taken to ensure the uninterrupted completion of the clerestory section of the Temple, the adoption of such measures as will stimulate the teaching campaign in America, the exercise of the utmost vigilance lest the authorities in Soviet Russia inflict any injury upon Bahá’í lives and institutions, the extension of any support that may be required to safeguard the interests of the Cause at its most vital and international center to ward off the malicious attacks of enemies from both within and without—these are the outstanding issues which demand the sustained and concentrated attention of every devoted believer . . .

"Regarding the photograph sent to your Assembly by the National Assembly of Iraq, Shoghi Effendi wishes me to confirm his previous request regarding the circulation of his own photograph. (That is, photographs of the Guardian are not to be circulated.—Editor.)

"With reference to the statement on the Annual Convention which the Guardian had requested you to send to the National Assembly of Persia, he wishes you to send as soon as you possibly can the final draft after having made the following alteration. The Guardian feels that in view of the definite and vital functions of the Annual Convention it would be more proper not to regard its sessions as joint meetings with the National Assembly. The gatherings of the Convention should, the Guardian believes, be given a more distinctive character. As to the rule requiring the National Assembly to present any and all facts that may be required in order to clarify matters discussed at the Convention, he wishes to express his complete approval.

"Shoghi Effendi would be very pleased to receive English translations of the Bahá’í News Letters issued by the National Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Germany and Austria. He wishes you in this connection to convey to Mr. Schopflocher his deepest thanks and appreciation of his invaluable assistance in translating such important communications from so promising an Assembly in the Bahá’í world . . . (September 16, 1934, to National Spiritual Assembly).

(The Guardian’s postscript to the above letter.) "I feel urged, in view of the compelling evidence of your exemplary devotion to the interests of our beloved Faith, to renew the expression of my profound and unqualified admiration for the spirit animating you in its service. You have faced a critical situation with marvelous fidelity, high courage and unswerving loyalty. Nothing short of this spirit can enable you to weather the storms and overcome the obstacles that must confront you in the future. His Guidance, you may rest assured, will never fail you in the days to come." (Signed) Shoghi.

"He wishes you particularly to impress the believers with the necessity of maintaining the flow of their contributions to the Temple, and also to stress the importance of the institution of the National Bahá’í Fund which, in these early days of the administrative development of the Faith, is the indispensable medium for the growth and expansion of the Movement. Contributions to this fund constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause.”

(September 25, 1934, to Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman, National Spiritual Assembly.)

(In the Guardian’s hand.) “The international expenses of the Faith are continually increasing, and the emphasis that has been placed of late on the necessity of intensifying and extending the national institutions of the Cause in Persia, America and elsewhere together with the severe restrictions that are being increasingly imposed by the authorities in Tehran have depleted the resources required for the promotion of the vital interests of the community at its world center. For this reason I have felt impelled to suspend temporarily the contributions which I have been making for the Temple. I will pray that the efforts of the friends the world over and particularly the mighty exertions of the American Baha’i community for the prosecution of the mighty Baha’i community for the prosecution of the mighty exertions of the American Baha’i community for the prosecution of the Temple work may soon be abundantly rewarded.”

(Signed) Shoghi. (September 30, 1934, to Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer, National Spiritual Assembly.)

On October 1, 1934 the National Spiritual Assembly cabled the Guardian as follows: “Continuance Temple construction assured. Love.” On October 4 the following reply was received: “Delighted. Profound gratitude.” (Signed) Shoghi.

PASSING OF DR. MOODY

On October 24 the National Assembly received this cabledgram from the American Consul at Tehran: “Moody died Tuesday (i.e., October 23). Inform relatives.”

On that same day the Assembly sent this message to Shoghi Effendi: “Profound grief death revered Dr. Susan Moody. Please advise whatever special actions Assembly should take.”

This cabled message was received October 31: “Passing dearly beloved Susan Moody deprives Bahá’í world (of the) far-famed pioneer who, through her indomitable spirit, ceaseless services, earned unique distinction. (She) forged first link in (the) chain uniting (the) spiritual destinies (of the) cradle of our Faith (i.e., Persia) and (the) community (of its) stalwart defenders in (the) great American Republic. (I am) instructing Persia rear monument perpetuating memory of her noble mission. (I am) glad to learn of whatever expense incurred as token of my admiration for community (i.e., America) to which she originally belonged and on which her sacred life shed imperishable luster. Advise hold bethinking Memorial gathering (in) Temple Foundation Hall.”

(Signed) Shoghi.

The following message was also sent by the National Assembly to the Persian National Assembly on October 24: “American believers lament death beloved Susan Moody. Convey loving sympathy her co-workers.”

An announcement of the Memorial Meeting will be sent to all local Assemblies as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

LETTER FROM THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Beloved Friends:

As we gather our energies in order to strive for a full measure of success in Temple construction and other national Bahá’í activities, it is highly important to understand clearly the new attitudes and principles of action which Shoghi Effendi has established in the communications describing the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

Let us begin with these words found on page 12 of “America and the Most Great Peace”:—“The remaining ten years (1923-1933), distinguished throughout by further internal development, as well as by a notable expansion of the international activities of a growing community, witnessed the completion of the superstructure of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar—the Administration’s mighty bulkwork, the symbol of its strength and the sign of its future glory.”

This description of the Temple as the “bulkwork” of the Administrative Order carries a profound significance. It can only mean that it is imperative for us to carry the construction forward to the first resting place—the external decoration of the entire dome unit, including the clerestory section—so that we may create a means of protecting the Faith from the dire onslaughts it is destined to suffer in these coming years.

With that quotation let us consider another excerpt, from page 64 of “The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.”

“The rise and establishment of this Administrative Order—the shield that shelters and enshrines so precious a gem—constitutes the hallmark of this second and formative age of the Bahá’í era. It will come to be regarded, as it recedes farther and farther from our eyes, as the chief agency empowered to usher in the concluding phase, the consummation of this glorious Dispensation.”

Here the Guardian makes it clear that the fundamental aim of the Cause at this stage is to establish the Order which will (page 52 of the same communication) “assert its claim and demonstrate its capacity to be regarded not only as the nucleus but the very pattern of the New World Order destined to embrace in the fulness of time the whole of mankind.” What the Guardian feels it necessary for Bahá’ís to realize and appreciate is that this Faith is a reality in no wise merely repeating and duplicating the Revelations of the past. “It should be noted (page 53) in this connection that this Administrative Order is fundamentally different from anything that any Prophet has previously established, as well as from anything such as Bahá’u’lláh has Himself revealed, its institutions, appointed the person to interpret His Word and conferred the necessary authority on the body designed to supplement and apply His legislative ordinances. . . . Nowhere in the sacred scriptures of any of the world’s religious systems, nor even in the writings of the Inaugurator of the Báb Dispensation, do we find any provisions establishing a covenant or providing for an administrative order that can compare in scope and authority with those that lie at the very basis of the Bahá’í Dispensation.”

Thus it is clear that any believer who might seek to understand his relation to the Bahá’í Faith by reproducing the attitudes and principles controlling the early and most faithful Christians, would fail to base his faith and practice upon the new foundation. What we have given us today is not only the spiritual Revelation for the renewal of the inner life but also the social Revelation for the attainment of citizenship in the world community.

A vivid light is thrown upon the significance of the Administrative Order by this reference which the Guardian made on page 21 of the “America and the Most Great Peace”:—“In a world writhing with pain amid declining into chaos this community—the vanguard of the liberating forces of Bahá’u’lláh—succeeded in the years following ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá’s passing in raising high above the institutions established by its sister communities in East and West what may well constitute the chief pillar of that future House of Justice—a House which posterity will regard as the last refuge of a tottering civilization.”

or other religious organization in the past! It is this element of responsibility for the preservation and welfare of humanity itself that makes membership in the Bahá'í Faith so much more than the passive acceptance of any articles of creed or than any subjective happiness that might arise from the practise of personal mysticism. “Alone of all the Revelations gone before it,” the Guardian declared on page 54 of “The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh,” “this Faith has, through the explicit directions, the repeated warnings, the authenticated safeguards incorporated and elaborated in its teachings, succeeded in raising a structure which the bewildered followers of bankrupt and broken creeds might well approach and critically examine, and seek, ere it is too late, the invulnerable security of its world-embracing shelter.”

In the light of these explanations, every devoted believer might well inquire, how can the individual Bahá'í, conscious of his own weaknesses and limitations, reach out to receive some portion of that Bounty which the Supreme Manifestation has brought to the world?

An indication of the true answer is given in the Will and Testament, in those passages which establish the Guardianship and inaugurate, under his direction, the House of Justice established by Bahá'u'lláh. “They (members of the House of Justice), and not the body of those who either directly or indirectly elect them, have thus been made the recipients of the divine guidance which is at once the life-blood and ultimate safeguard of this Revelation.” (Dispensation, page 61).

Just as the power of the Holy Spirit inspired those who endeavored faithfully to carry out the Master's instructions in His day, and was withdrawn from those who sought to worship Bahá'u'lláh without recognition of the Center of the Covenant, so now the confirming spirit is with those who center their lives upon the Guardian's general instructions, and find it possible to unite a spiritual attitude with the outer task of developing the World Order already, though so weak and immature, living in the Bahá'í administrative institutions.

What is vitally needed at this time is for us all to receive the new and more potent impetus that pours forth from the Guardian to bless all workers fully active and conscious of their mission. It is no longer sufficient for any Bahá'í to say that he “accepts” the authority of his local Assembly. This passive attitude must be transformed into a devoted and sincere effort to assist in carrying out every activity and plan which the local Assembly adopts. The word “authority” perhaps blunts us to the deeper reality, that the Spiritual Assembly is the instrument through which the divine blessings flow to every member of the community from the higher source. There is a world of difference between mere willingness not to disobey and a heart-felt and passionate yearning to help with all our force the Spiritual Assembly in all its capacity to serve the Cause. The Holy Spirit permeates the universe, but it blesses with its mysterious forces only those who are inwardly and outwardly part of the oneness which Bahá'u'lláh has created in this Day. To transmute passive acceptance into active and dynamic loyalty of action is the supreme issue confronting every member of the American Bahá'í community.

Similarly, the local Assembly and its community, to be fully and completely Bahá'í, must not simply “accept the authority of the National Spiritual Assembly” and refrain from infringing that authority—the local community must make the general plans and activities of the National Assembly its first and most vital concern. Only in so doing does it stand in the station of receiving the spiritual reinforcement reaching humanity through the Guardian. A local Bahá'í community is not an independent body chartered to maintain activities entirely distinct from those in other local communities, but every local community is part of one larger body administered by the National Spiritual Assembly, which in turn possesses no independence but on the contrary is engaged in carrying out the Guardian's instructions and advice.

Let us recall Shoghi Effendi's words concerning the relation of local to National Spiritual Assembly reported on page 13 of BAHÁ'Í NEWS, June, 1934: “However, in view of the principle that local activities should always be subordinated to the national interests, needs and requirements of the Faith . . . etc. And “Just as all local institutions, whether administrative or otherwise, must under all circumstances be considered as subsidiary to national organizations, so also local circular letters should be viewed as secondary in importance compared to the national organ of Bahá'í activities. This principle, however, should not be interpreted as being detrimental to the local interests of the Bahá'í community, but as an essential, nay indispensable means whereby the administrative system of the Cause can work with efficiency and order.” And, “Just as the local Bahá'í fund must under all circumstances be subordinated to the national fund . . . . Such a coordination between local and national efforts is indispensable, not only due to its economic advantages, but essentially due to the fact that upon the application of the principle underlying this process must inevitably depend the effective working of the entire administrative machinery of the Faith. There is order, coordination and system in the Cause, and not a jungle of conflicting interests and of continually clashing wills . . . . Local activities should also be subordinated to those of a national character and importance. This is intended not to minimize the rôle of the local Assembly in the administrative order, but to establish and insure a sane relationship between that body and the national organism of the Cause.”

Since the Guardian has given emphasis to this matter, we may be certain that it represents an important step to be taken in our collective attitude toward the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Therefore the friends are urged to study carefully the Guardian's list of the objectives and aims which the National Assembly is to adopt at this time, because without a truly united and active national community the Assembly can have no power to carry out such important and difficult tasks.

It is in the development of the National Fund that the local communities can render the most direct assistance at this time. For as we complete the dome unit we create the "mighty bulwark" of the administrative order, and as we develop and safeguard the administrative order we contribute to the World Order upon which the life of humanity itself depends.

There is no intention in this statement to minimize the importance of local Bahá'í activities. The teaching programs now being carried out by many Spiritual Assemblies are truly notable and are producing an increase in the active membership of the Faith. The major purpose of the National Spiritual Assembly, in fact, consists in reinforcing in every possible way the capacity of the local Assemblies to serve the Cause. But the fact remains that the twigs cannot prosper if the branch upon which they depend is deprived of any portion of its allotted strength. Through the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, in its spiritual mystery and its outward and visible glory, our combined efforts have in the past few years multiplied a hundred fold the power of every teacher to convey the divine Message. The Temple has created a magnet attracting the confirmation of the Holy Spirit upon the services of every loyal believer, without distinction of geographical nearness or remoteness from the physical edifice.

Now we are called upon to complete that portion of the task which represents the perfect crown of the Temple — the external decoration of the dome unit. This task can only be completed if we become one organic national Bahá'í community, imbued with one aim and inspired by one spirit. Therefore let us consider afresh the relations of the local community to the central national body, that the many small lakes may become one great sea, every drop of which moves under the one same impulse. Such a degree of unity will overcome our separate weaknesses and limitations, and the effect will be one of irresistible, forward-moving power. Many and urgent are the demands upon the National Assembly to contribute to the protection of the Faith in other countries, and these demands will increase during the years to come. By meeting the Guardian's standard of achievement now, our united capacity for service to Bahá'u'lláh will forge a mighty instrument for the Guardian's use in establishing World Order.

"The National Assembly is the trusted guardian and the mainspring of the manifold activities and interests of every national community in the Bahá'í world. It constitutes the sole link that binds the communities to the International House of Justice, the supreme administrative body in the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh." (Shoghi Effendi, June 11, 1934, in letter to the N. S. A.)

IN MEMORIAM

The friends are requested to remember with prayer these believers who have ascended to the Kingdom:
Otto Weiss, Closter, N. J.
Mrs. Harriet Schwartz Lehman, Columbus, Ohio.
Dr. Susan I. Moody, Tihrán, Persia.

ILLINOIS-WISCONSIN INTER-ASSEMBLY TEACHING CONFERENCE

Eight states—Illinois, Missouri, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, California and New York (as well as Washington, D. C. and Montreal, Canada)—were represented at the regional teaching conference held in the Foundation Hall of The Bahá'í House of Worship at Wilmette on October 6 and 7. The keynote of all the discussions was the individual obligation of all Bahá'ís to teach. The conference was opened each morning by a devotional service and the discussions at each session were preceded by the reading from a compilation taken from the writing of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi on "The Obligation of all Bahá'ís to Teach." Two members of the N. S. A. attended the conference—Mrs. French and Mr. Carl Scheffer. Madame Barry-Orlova who is now speaking in the Central West was also present. Lima, Ohio, sent over a delegation of twenty-one.

TEACHING THE CAUSE IN NORTHERN EUROPE

Interesting news of the teaching work in Northern Europe has been received from Mrs. Nellie S. French who has just returned from a summer vacation when she paid a brief visit to Oslo, Norway, Stockholm, Leingrad, Copenhagen and London, passing some weeks with the friends in the latter city. In all of these places some work was done, but especially in Stockholm and Copenhagen the results were most gratifying. In Stockholm a long interview which appeared in Sweden's foremost newspaper paved the way for the Bahá'í Session of the International Esperanto Congress and the splendid follow-up work of our dear Martha Root reports of which are now flowing in.

Mrs. French believes that that interview in Stockholm was the first public mention of the Bahá'í Faith to appear in Sweden and has great hope for the progress of the Faith in that country owing to the sympathetic attitude of the Press and the readiness of the people.

In Copenhagen Miss Johanna Sorensen, informed of the success of the Swedish experience by Martha brought a reporter to the steamer to meet Mrs. French, and although his so-called "interview" was already prepared by him before the steamer actually arrived, its faults are rather those of omission than commission, and he at least directed the reading public to Miss Sorensen for further information and to the bookshop where Bahá'í literature in Danish may be purchased.

A warm welcome was accorded Mrs. French in London where upon presentation of her credentials from the National Spiritual Assembly she was invited to speak several times at the public meetings and at the Nineteen Day Feasts, and where she was privileged to take part in the deliberations of the National Spiritual Assembly of Great Britain.

Mrs. French bears the Bahá'í greetings from the friends in all those centers to the friends in America.

LETTER FROM THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE

Dear Co-Workers:

The Library Division of the Publishing Committee takes this opportunity to thank all the local Assemblies and the individual Bahá'í friends for their most helpful cooperation in arranging for the placing of Bahá'í literature in so many Public Libraries.
The result of last year's work has been mostly encouraging. Through the help of the friends, we have come into touch with 88 Libraries, of which 72 are Public Libraries and 16 are University Libraries. A total of 389 books have been placed in them.

For the benefit of those who may not be familiar with the title of the books which the Library Committee is in a position to supply, they are:

Bahá’í World, Vols. II and III.
The Book of Certitude (Kitáb-i-Iqán).
Bahá’í Revelation, by Thornton Chase.
Bahá’í: The Spirit of the Age, by Horace Holley.

We wish to place before you our plans for the coming year. We would like a follow-up contact made with all these Libraries, and therefore the Assemblies are requested to arrange for someone to offer them a copy of The Bahá’í World, Vol. IV, so that they may have a consecutive record of Bahá’í international progress. If any Library wishes additional literature, and will place it upon the shelves, the Committee will provide Some Answered Questions, by 'Abdu’l-Bahá. While the Committee appreciates the privilege of increasing the public knowledge of this invaluable book, it does not wish to give it indiscriminately, as the supply is limited.

The Library Committee appeals to all the friends to patronize the Libraries, take out the Bahá’í books and lend them to others, so as to maintain and increase the interest of the Librarians in the literature. This is the only way the books will be kept on the open shelves where they are most available to seekers.

As Shoghi Effendi wishes us to concentrate our individual and collective efforts upon promoting the Cause, this is one way in which we can strive toward that end.

We trust that we may receive an early response from all the Bahá’í communities.

Faithfully yours,
Library Committee.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Publishing Committee reports new literature and publishing activities as follows:

Mysticism and the Bahá’í Revelation, by Ruhi Afnan. This work is unusually interesting and important, in that it clarifies the Teachings related to spiritual development by contrasting them with the false doctrines prevalent in many circles throughout the West. All but a few pages of this work were originally published in World Unity, and the page plates were donated to the Publishing Committee. Green paper cover. Price per copy ... $0.50

How Every Believer Can Test the Measure of His Faith

"He wishes you particularly to impress the believers with the necessity of maintaining the flow of their contributions to the Temple, and also to stress the importance of the institution of the National Bahá’í Fund which, in these early days of the administrative development of the Faith, is the indispensable medium for the growth and expansion of the Movement. Contributions to this fund constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause."—Shoghi Effendi, in letter to Chairman of the N. S. A., September 25, 1934.

The World Religion. Shoghi Effendi's own outline of the aims, teachings, and history of the Faith. Printed as a small pamphlet and especially intended for use as free literature. Price per 100 copies (not sold in smaller quantity), net ... $1.00

The Bahá’í World, Vol. IV. Special offer, valid to December 31, 1934, at the reduced price of $1.00 per copy, net. The Guardian attributes great importance to these biennial volumes. Vol. IV covers the period 1930-1932, but was not published until June of 1933. Local Assemblies are requested to report this announcement to the community.

The Promise of All Ages. (Anonymous.) This new work has been recently published in England, and the copies ordered by the Publishing Committee are expected early in November. From the Guardian's words about this book to the National Spiritual Assembly, and the report made by the Reviewing and Editorial Committee after reading it in manuscript, "The Promise of All Ages" can be announced as an invaluable contribution to Bahá’í literature. It accomplishes for the sincere person of definite religious background what Dr. Essemont's book accomplished for those whose outlook is more scientific and rational. This work, in addition, is written in a style of exquisite beauty, its spirit is reverent and devotional, and at the same time the intelligent grasp of the principle of the new World Order is most impressive. It is an ideal book to present to any religiously minded seeker, and those who have read it declare that it is illuminating and inspiring to Bahá'ís. Bound in cloth. Price per copy ... $1.50

The Bahá’í. The magazine published under the direction of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma, and edited by Prof. Pritam Singh of Lahore, India. Beginning with Vol. IV, No. 1, this Bahá’í Magazine appeared in a new and more convenient form. It reports the interesting news of the Cause throughout the Orient, but is a magazine and not merely a news letter. The Publishing Committee, at the request of the American N. S. A., will take subscriptions, and the friends are urged to include this periodical in their purchase of Bahá’í literature. Annual subscription, net .................. $2.00

(Note: This announcement applies only to believers of the United States and Canada. Believers in other countries may subscribe through their National Assembly or direct. The address is: Pritam Singh, 39 Temple Road, Lahore, India.)

Orders for Bahá’í literature should be sent to: Bahá’í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Station, New York, N. Y., or to Mrs. Emma F. Smith, 940 Leavenworth Street, San Francisco, Calif.

BAHÁ’I YOUTH

A Letter to the Young Believers of America

Dear Co-Workers:

The National Youth Committee wishes to take this occasion to inform the body of Bahá’í young people of its desire to serve them and assist them in every possible way in the furtherance of their teaching work during the coming year.

The responsibilities of Bahá’í young people today are manifold, but there are two considerations which are paramount and which must be made a part of our philosophy of living. First we must, by intensive study of the principles and administration of the Cause, prepare ourselves for service in our respective Bahá'í communities. Secondly, we must find means for sharing our knowledge with other young people who are as yet uninformed of the Great Message of Bahá'u'lláh.

In this connection the Committee feels that all young Bahá'ís should make intensive use of the recent outlines which have been compiled for the study of the Teachings such as the "Guide to the Dawn Breakers," the "Bahá'í Study Course of 36 Lessons," and other references which were given in the Bulletin issued by the last year's Youth Committee. In addition, the committee has prepared an outline of study for young people between the ages of 15 and 21, which specifically introduces the student to the fundamentals of the Cause, and states the attitude of the Bahá'ís toward war. Copies of this outline may be secured by addressing the secretary of the committee. The National Spiritual Assembly has now given young people of these ages the opportunity for a definite status in the Cause (see Bahá'í News, No. 85, p. 3) and the outline has been prepared to assist them in gaining the knowledge necessary for fulfilling this responsibility.

In the furtherance of the teaching activities of young Bahá'ís, the committee hopes to issue from time to time to the local Youth Committees topics and references on subjects of present day interest which may be used in the furtherance of discussion groups. The topics will be chosen with a view to the direct application of the Bahá'í Teachings to the solution of the problems discussed.

The committee also wishes to serve as a clearing house for the exchange of ideas and teaching methods between the local Youth Committees. In the near future the National Committee would like to receive a report from the chairman or secretary of each local committee outlining the program which is to be followed during the coming year and also any methods or teaching experiences which have proved successful locally and which might be used by other young people's groups.

If there are any other ways in which the National Committee can serve the local committees or individual young Bahá'ís it is anxious to do so and will welcome all suggestions for the furtherance of its work.

DECISIONS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

After consultation on various matters reported by local Assemblies and by National Committees, the National Assembly has recorded the following views:

Need of Local Bahá'í Address

It is recommended that all local Assemblies if possible arrange to have a Bahá'í address listed in the local telephone directory. This request is left to the discretion of each local Assembly, as conditions differ greatly among the various cities.

Send Tablets to Archives

A strong appeal is made to every individual Bahá'í who possesses an original Tablet revealed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, to send that Tablet, together with a copy of the translation, to the Archives Committee, through Mrs. May Scheffler, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street, Evanston, Illinois.

For very little cost, the Archives Committee will furnish a photocopy of any Tablet so received. The Committee has been authorized by the National Assembly to accept for the Archives any photostat copy of an original Tablet which the owner prefers to retain, although the purpose of the Archives is of course the preservation of original Tablets and other authentic Bahá'í records.

Only those Tablets sent to the Archives can be published in any future volumes of Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, through which publication they are made available to all believers and form part of the authentic literature of the Faith. Each local Assembly is urged to impress upon its community the importance of realizing that the interests of the Faith should have priority over any personal feeling with respect to the Master's utterances.

Reports from Local Assemblies

In view of the confusion which has arisen in some centers, the National Association wishes to make it clear that general reports from local Assemblies are to be sent directly to the N. S. A., but reports confined to teaching activities are to be sent to the Teaching Committee. Inter-Assembly Committees and conferences have no executive capacity and therefore do not receive reports nor transact business.

How to Obtain a Bahá'í Teacher

When a local Assembly wishes to secure the services of any teacher from another city—that is, any teacher from outside its own immediate jurisdiction—it is requested by the National Assembly to consult the National Teaching Committee. That Committee, in turn, is requested to recommend only such teachers as conform to the following qualifications: thorough knowledge of the Teachings, complete loyalty to the Administrative Order as outlined in the Guardian's general letters including the World Order communications, rigorous obedience to the principle that teachers are not to intervene in any local problem and true sincerity and severance.

Circulation of Local News Letters

The question has been asked whether, in view of the Guardian's words on the subject quoted in the last Annual Report of the National Assembly in Bahá'í News of June, local Assemblies which issue news letters should circulate them among other local Assemblies. The view of the National Assembly is that the national Bahá'í News is the medium through which local news should be conveyed to the various local communities, and therefore each local news letter should be distributed only to its own community, but copies sent to the National Assembly, the Guardian, and to other National Assemblies for their information. The Guardian's latest instruction on this matter appears to indicate a development to a new point beyond that reached in 1923, when (see page 33 of "Bahá'í Administration") Shoghi Effendi included inter-Assembly correspondence as part of the functions of the local Spiritual Assembly.

THE WORLD ORDER OF Baha'u'llah

"That Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Baha'i Faith."—Shoghi Effendi. (World Order of Baha'u'llah,
Throughout the present Bahá’í year, Bahá’í News will maintain this special department consisting of quotations from the Guardian’s writings on the subject of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

Regarding the establishment of “National Assemblies”, it is of vital importance that in every country, where the conditions are favorable and the number of friends has grown and reached a considerable size, such as America, Great Britain and Germany, that a “National Spiritual Assembly” be immediately established, representative of the friends throughout that country.

Its immediate purpose is to stimulate, unify and coordinate by frequent personal consultations, the manifold activities of the friends as well as the local Assemblies; and by keeping in close and constant touch with the Holy Land, initiate measures, and direct in general the affairs of the Cause in that country.

It serves also another purpose, no less essential than the first, as in the course of time it shall evolve into the National House of Justice (referred to in ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Will as the “secondary House of Justice”) which according to the explicit text of the Testament will have, in conjunction with the other National Assemblies throughout the Bahá’í world, to elect directly the members of the International House of Justice, that Supreme Council that will guide, organize and unify the affairs of the Movement throughout the world.

It is expressly recorded in ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Writings that these National Assemblies must be indirectly elected by the friends; that is, the friends in every country must elect a certain number of delegates, who in their turn will elect from among all the friends in that country the members of the National Spiritual Assembly... These second ary electors will then, either through correspondence, or preferably by gathering together, and first deliberating upon the affairs of the Cause throughout their country (as the delegates to the Convention), elect from among all the friends in that country nine who will be the members of the National Spiritual Assembly.

This National Spiritual Assembly which, pending the establishment of the Universal House of Justice, will have to be re-elected once a year, obviously assumes grave responsibilities, for it has to exercise full authority over all the local Assemblies in its province, guard vigilantly the Cause of God, and control and supervise the affair of the Movement in general.

Vital issues, affecting the interests of the Cause in that country such as the matter of translation and publication, the Mashriqu’l-Adhikar, the Teaching work, and other similar matters that stand distinct from strictly local affairs, must be under the full jurisdiction of the National Assembly.

It will have to refer each of these questions, even as the local Assemblies, to a special Committee, to be elected by the members of the National Spiritual Assembly from among all the friends in that country, which will bear to it the same relation as the local committees bear to their respective local Assemblies.

With it, too, rests the decision whether a certain point at issue is strictly local in its nature, and should be reserved for the consideration and decision of the local Assembly, or whether it should fall under its own province and be regarded as a matter which ought to receive its special attention. The National Spiritual Assembly will also decide upon such matters which in its opinion should be referred to the Holy Land for consultation and decision.

With these Assemblies, local as well as national, harmoniously, vigorously and efficiently functioning throughout the Bahá’í world, the only means for the establishment of the Supreme House of Justice will have been secured. (Bahá’í Administration, pages 34-36.)

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS 1933-1934

7. The Bahá’í Magazine—Editorial

From Shoghi Effendi’s letters we quote the following:

“We should strive in all our utterances to combine the discretion and noble reticence of the wise with the frankness and passionate loyalty of the ardent advocate of an inspiring Faith. While refusing to utter one word that would needlessly alienate or estrange any individual, government, or people, we should fearlessly and unhesitatingly uphold and assert in their entirety such truths the knowledge of which we believe is vitally and urgently needed for the good and betterment of mankind.”

“Articles on broad humanitarian lines, well-conceived, adequately treated, and powerfully presented, should have their proper place in every issue together with such accounts of the history and the teachings of the Cause as will portray to the Bahá’í and non-Bahá’í alike, the unique beauty as well as the compelling power of the Bahá’í spirit.”

These and other instructions of our Guardian have been our guide in formulating the editorial policy of the Bahá’í Magazine. And as the Magazine Committee is a Committee appointed by the N. S. A., we have striven, as far as we know how, to be obedient to its instructions.

Once again we feel it is important to state that a lengthy report is hardly necessary from this Committee, since the most adequate evidence of progress we can offer is the magazine itself as it has been published from month to month.

The subscribers not only in this country but throughout the world have been very encouraging in their attitude and in their unstinted praise of what they considered a furtherance of the Most Great Cause through this publication known universally as the “monthly traveling teacher.”

One of the most cherished hopes of the editors themselves has been this: that we might make a superhuman endeavor to fulfill very definitely the prophecy of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá that the magazine “would bring about the unity of the East and the West.” We have planned to have the whole world represented in the pages of the magazine. Judging from reports, we should say that the friends even in the most remote corners of the world have felt themselves a definite part of the Bahá’í organization through receiving and reading the magazine monthly. And yet we feel that we have only touched the mere surface, both from the viewpoint of subscribers and contributors, and that the future will see enormous progress along this line.

There is no greater joy and satisfaction in this work than to witness its world-wide influence.

Another important point in the advancement of the work has been the number of articles contributed by non-Bahá’ís who have been sufficiently sympathetic with the Bahá’í Cause to wish to cooperate with us in this way.
Notable among these have been articles by Wang Tse-ping a Chinese scholar (translation by Dr. Tsao); Dr. Shio Sakanishi, a Japanese writer; J. Milnor Dorey of the New York Times; interviews with Norman Thomas and Dr. Wellington Koo; the splendid translations from the French by Mme. Pergaud. The Baha'i Magazine has been much pleased with all of these and similar articles as they have indicated how the Baha'i Cause is regarded by non-Baha'is; and, secondly, they have helped toward a wider circulation of the magazine among non-Baha'is.

Letters have been received from all parts of this country and also from other countries in which subscribers state that they cannot do without the magazine; that they anticipate its coming monthly; that their appreciation of its improvement along literary lines is marked; that it has helped in their teaching work, for very often the magazine contains just what they want in the way of quotations from the Holy Utterances, or an editorial or article on some timely subject. The type and set-up of the magazine has also been favorably commented upon. These letters are on file.

Notable among these communications are the oft repeated letters from Persia saying not only that they appreciate and read the magazine, but that copies sent are circulated further among the friends and that every month some part or parts of the magazine are translated into Persian and spread widely throughout that country. There certainly has been an increasing volume of informing material about Persia, and this material has brought us very close to the dear friends in that land. Persia and other countries seem not far away. The indissoluble bonds are being woven more definitely than any of us realize.

We might record here just one or two instances which greatly encouraged and stimulated us in our work:

The Poona (India) Baha'i Spiritual Assembly, through Rustom Khosrovi, Secy, has increased its subscriptions to forty, and ordered also bound volumes. A happy surprise to us is that they are doing a remarkable service for the magazine (without any request on our part) in sending out a circular letter to the friends all over India asking each and every one to work for the magazine in securing subscriptions and in having it placed in the public and university libraries. They quote from the letter of our Guardian to their National President, as follows: "...I urge you to remind the friends to fulfill their sacred obligations in connection with their annual renewal of their subscription to the leading periodicals of the Baha'i world and particularly the Star of the West (now the Baha'i Magazine)." And from their recent letter dated March 30, 1934:

"The editors of the 'Statesman', India's leading journal in English, and of the 'Kaiser-i-Hind', Bombay's leading Anglo-Vernacular Weekly periodical, to both of whom our magazine has been regularly sending the issues of the Baha'i Magazine have, in answer to our letters, written in terms of appreciation of your magazine."

The Chinene are becoming more and more interested in the magazine and through Dr. Tsao, our contributing editor for China, the magazine is receiving greater publicity and the Baha'i Teachings are being much more widely discussed.

Libraries: It is encouraging to note that the Library of Congress receives with gratitude the magazines and bound volumes, and other libraries have requested a continuance of their subscriptions. Wanamaker's Department Store in Philadelphia have recently consented to take some copies and are paying for them. Among other new places where the magazines are received for sale are—a large book store in Vancouver; Brentano's, Woodward and Lothrop's and Woolf's Magazine Store in Washington, D. C. Through the libraries, department stores and book stores numbers of people are being reached with the Great Message.

Perhaps you would like to share with us the unique experience of reading the following type of letter:

"Spending considerable time in the Phoenix (Arizona) Public Library, I noticed long ago your magazine but never touched it, thinking this is something Christian or metaphysical, full of hypocrisy and bible texts. I do not know how it happened, but one time I looked inside of one of your magazines and was surprised not to find any of those tiresome, hypocritical and useless talks and instruction of canned religion so carefully preserved during two thousand years and ready to serve to sinners, especially needy ones. Moreover, I found that your beliefs are my beliefs, and really I was reading in your magazine my own ideas.

"It seems to me you are free from superstitions, standardization of mind and thought, that you do not follow old ways, and are trying to find a new way, original and of your own. This is so rare in this country that I got interested in your Faith, but I would like to see your people, how they look and how they act in everyday life. Please advise me if there are any of them in Phoenix or any other place in Arizona where they have their meetings."

Letters from Martha Root usually contain some encouraging note about the magazine. In her last letter, she wrote: "Articles are translated from the Bahai Magazine into other languages—the English is only one part of it—you do not see the Rumanian, the Bulgarian and others—articles and excerpts from articles have been published."

One more point: It is surprising to note how much the pages devoted to Current Thought and Progress are valued. This material, so broad in scope and so fitting to the times, will win the respect and influence of Non-Baha'is for the magazine. One of the friends writes: "These two pages serve to give variety and attractiveness to the magazine. The things chosen are wonderfully selected and they are very readable and informing." Another comment of interest on these two pages is "Current Thought and Progress is a form of expression which seems to reflect your own attitudes. We like to read these pages."

The editors earnestly request the widest cooperation in selecting and contributing material for these pages.

In conclusion we state that in spite of the great sacrifices made by the friends in behalf of the Temple, they likewise arose to assist the Baha'i Magazine. May we whole heartedly thank all who have contributed to the progress and growth of the magazine either by supporting it with subscriptions or by aid in the way of literary contributions.

8. The Baha'i Magazine—
Management

We are happy to report that there is a definite improvement in operating conditions of this office during the past year. This improved condition is reflected in an increase of receipts for this year over last year in the amount of $371.75. This increase is accounted for largely in a larger number of renewals and in bound volumes. The increase in receipts, due to bound volumes, is $275 over the amount received during last year.

A contribution from the General Fund of the National Spiritual As-
9. Race Amity

This Committee extends its loving greetings to the 26th Annual Convention, its praises to the True One for the work and successes of the year and expresses anew its unyielding faith in the final triumph of the great principle for which it was created and stands. From the majestic Source of Revelation have appeared these exalted words:

"Close your eyes to racial differences and welcome all with the light of oneness."

That such an ideal is consummated upon the plane of reality is well attested in the luminous intrepretation of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Center of the Divine Covenant, who declares:

"No differences remain between the white and the colored. Both are accepted at the Threshold of God and both are equally loved in the sight of 'Abdu'l-Bahá."

If happily such noble idealism be at times obscured by shadows of earth, our spirits are refreshed and exhilarated by a voice from Haifa, which under the mighty confirmations of Bahá'u'lláh is like unto the Trump of Gabriel. Resolution becomes fired with new zeal and ancient fortresses erected by supersition and fear yield to the steady and constant attack of the armies of God. Every cycle of the year registers gain in the spread of truth.

The passing of Mrs. Agnes S. Parsons, chairman of this committee, whom the Master lovingly called "my daughter", whom He selected for the work, was a sad blow indeed to the cause which she so devotedly served during the years. She was faithful to the end, passing in the maturity of her powers and in such a way as we hope may indicate her acceptance among the martyrs. May we not also hope that from the higher worlds her gentle spirit still encourages those who strive to make a better world of this?

The first notable achievement of the year was the annual Green Acre Conference for Amity, an event firmly set in the minds and hearts of those who labor in that community. Although held under conditions more adverse than those which marked any previous effort, the rallying forces of the cause, aided of course by the unseen Power, enabled it to attain more than the usual success. Through the usual channels its report has already been largely spread before the friends.

The only other amity conference reported was held in New York, its details being arranged largely through the activities of Mrs. Ludmila Bechtold who has made herself a Bahá'í specialist in race relations. The first speaker was Mr. Max Yergin, American missionary under the Y. M. C. A. to South Africa. He made a graphic and eloquent portrayal of the greater race problem of that part of the world, showing how law, religion and custom combine to oppress the native. Despite these obstacles a conference was arranged and carried through successfully, although the workers became targets for the adverse fire of the press over a period of six months. They were denounced as violating every tradition of the national life, while the church in solemn council demanded that they recant such heretical views. They firmly refused, some going so far as to say that in doing this humane service they had found the regeneration of their souls. This to them was the joy of sacrifice. The other speaker was Mr. Horace Holley who with special impressiveness presented the program of Bahá'u'lláh.

Publicity of the year included articles by Mrs. Stuart W. French in the Passadena Star-News, a daily, making mention of amity activities and extensive quotations from the Creative Word. Southern and mid-western papers also reported racial activities.

An article from the pen of Mr. Horace Holley, in the Unity Magazine, edited by Dr. John Haynes Holmes, makes an admirable presentation of the Bahá'í Faith as a whole and contains this contribution to thoughts on race relations:

"Every local Bahá'í community exists by the voluntary association of individuals who consciously overcome the fundamental sanctions evolved throughout the centuries to justify the separations and antagonisms of human society. In America, this association means that white believers accept the spiritual equality of their Negro fellows. In Europe it means the reconciliation of Protestant and Catholic, upon the basis of a new and larger faith. In the Orient Christian, Jewish and Mohammedan believers must stand apart from the rigid exclusiveness with which each was born."

An article by Mrs. Mabelle Davis of Detroit, a devoted servant of the work, analyses the problems which amity workers must encounter and suggests the reading of constructive literature, added to action.

An article from Mrs. S. E. J. Oglesby and circulated by the Spiritual Assembly of Boston, is largely made up of quotations from the inspiring utterances of our Guardian and is a stimulus to greater activity.
The Urbana, Illinois friends, whose location at the strategic center where one of the world's greatest universities enfolds its treasures of science, has rendered during the year a notable contribution to the improvement of race relations. This work has been specialized to the youth of that center who have shared the happiness of their meetings and outdoor entertainments with the colored students. These contacts have culminated in a meeting which conveyed the great message and laid the foundation for future work. A blessed confirmation has attended these efforts indicated by attraction to the Cause.

It was the purpose of the Amity Committee of Chicago not only to hold Amity meetings, but also to attend meetings of other groups working for the unity of races. With this thought in mind, members of the committee and other Baha'is of this community attended many of these gatherings in homes, at which different races were represented, such as meetings at the Metropolitan Community Church, the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association. A Baha'i speaker was asked to participate and gave the Baha'i message. This very effectively placed the name Baha'i before the public through the press in four different publications, one of them the noted Chicago Defender.

Four public meetings were held with attendance ranging from 120 to 160 people. Baha'is and non-Baha'is cooperated in their statements of ideals and principles. A social hour was an added attraction. Testimony that the spirit of such gatherings under Baha'i association exceeded that of others was freely given. Other meetings were arranged in colored churches where the Baha'i teachings were freely and impressively given.

"In the sight of God color makes no difference. He looks upon hearts."

The interracial discussion group of Washington, D. C., an actively fostered and carried on by Bahá'ís in that name, continues its valuable service and shines as a bright star of hope amid the dark background of dissection and hatred which mars existence in the Nation's capital. This activity is well known to be Bahá'í and is deepening the interest of people in the Cause. It is our hope that this sturdy band of Pioneers will ere long find it possible to widen their circle as they seek and demonstrate the great confirmation that comes to those who raise the Banner of the Greatest Name.

During the winter two fine, large and representative interracial meetings were held in the Bahá'í Center of New York. Both illustrated the pleasing impression and attraction which the Cause is stamping upon the large colored population of the metropolis. Such enthusiastic responses and outpouring of talent have been rarely seen. The speakers at the first of these meetings were Mrs. Loulie Mathews and Mr. Louis Gregory. At the second Mr. Walter Covington of Harlem presided and brightly conveyed the spirit of the Bahá'í Faith, which the sociability of an afternoon tea arranged by Mrs. Mathews served to accentuate.

The amazing progress of the colored people during a short period of time; their increasing group consciousness and solidarity, approved for the requirement of knowledge and commercial development; their literature, art, scientific knowledge, collective enterprise; their keen sense of humor, cheerfulness under difficulties, stoical endurance of the economic depression; their ability when given a chance to measure up to the standards of other Americans; their native and cultivated graces which lend a fascination to their social life; their faith in God and adherence to religion despite the largely prevalent agnosticism of the day; their conciliatory spirit; these and other qualities indicate powers which under divine guidance may yet, we trust, make a very considerable contribution to the world's net aggregate of service and universal progress. The advancement of an oppressed group is the result of two forces: What it can do in internal growth and what it can accomplish in cooperation with others. Both these powers depend upon the Supreme Power for their evolution and full expression. Workers and idealists look forward to the time when out of the experience of pain all humanity will be ready for the divine teaching and nothing of superficial barriers will remain.

From a letter of the Guardian dated March 17, 1934:

"The question of prejudice is a very important one. We should not expect a new believer to be free from every prejudice. It would be asking too much from him. For even a believer cannot claim to have such a station. The main thing on which much stress must be laid when accepting a new member into the community is sincerity and a willingness to discard as much as possible all forms of prejudice and bigotry. More than that we cannot."
The Use of Ringstones and Burial Stones

"In regard to the use of ringstones and burial stones, the Guardian leaves this matter at present entirely to the discretion of the believers, and has no objection if your Assembly provides facilities for their purchase by the friends. When the 'Kita'bi-i-Aqdas' is published the necessary instructions will be given regarding this matter.

Legal Constitution of National and Local Assemblies

"In this connection he wishes me to inform you that at his repeated directions the National Assemblies of Egypt, 'Iraq and Persia are adopting the exact text of your Assembly's Declaration of Trust and By-Laws, as well as the local By-Laws, and are taking the necessary steps for incorporating their Assemblies as duly recognized bodies empowered to administer the national and local affairs of the Faith in their respective countries. The Indian N. S. A., as well as the Bombay Spiritual Assembly, have already set the example in this respect, both in the matter of incorporation, and in the adoption of the text of the constitutions of the American Bahá'í Assemblies.

Magazine Union

"Concerning the union of the two Magazines ('The Bahá'í Magazine and the World Unity Magazine) the Guardian hopes that the N. S. A. will proceed quickly in this matter. He fully approves the action which you contemplate, and any details in this connection he leaves entirely to your discretion.

Explanations of Passage in "Bahá'í Administration"

"In regard to the question submitted to your Assembly by the Bahá'í group at Maui, Hawaii, concerning the passage on page 88 of the book 'Bahá'í Administration,' the Guardian wishes me to inform you that the festivals of the Declaration of the Bab and the birthday of 'Abdu'l-Bahá referred to in that passage as having been celebrated on the twenty-second of November, 1925, by the Bahá'ís of the Orient, are based on the lunar calendar. For this reason the date of the celebration is not fixed, but shifts every year. Eventually, as the Master has explicitly stated, a uniform system will have to be established by the International House of Justice.*

Memorial of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's American Visit

"Concerning the West Englewood Memorial, Shoghi Effendi's idea has always been that this memorial should be in the form of a monument and not of a building.

National Assembly's Statement Approved

approval of your statement in the November issue of the Baha'i News to the effect of creating within the Assemblies and individual believers a more positive and active attitude towards the Administration. The need for positive action seems, indeed, to be one of the most urgent needs of the Cause at present.

Appreciation of Sacrifices for Temple Construction

"In closing may I convey to you and to the American community of the believers as well the Guardian's abiding appreciation and gratitude for the striking manner in which the American friends, under the leadership of your Assembly, have each and all arisen to meet the emergency which the lack of sufficient funds had created in connection with the work of the Temple. This constitutes, indeed, an added victory in the series of triumphs which the American believers have, ever since the ascension of the Master, been winning in the field of service to the Faith. Their collective, united and sustained labors in this connection are surely bound to hasten the realization of the Master's promises concerning the ultimate triumph of the Cause throughout the American continent. May this sublime vision disclosed by 'Abdu'l-Baha intensify their zeal and stimulate their ardor in bringing their sacred and mighty task to a speedy consummation.

Dr. Moody's Passing

"The Guardian wishes me also to extend his heart-felt condolences and loving sympathy to you and to all the bereaved members of the community of the American friends for the new loss they have sustained in the passing away of their indefatigable and pioneer fellow-believer Dr. Susan Moody. The work she had so successfully initiated in Persia, particularly in connection with the founding and development of the Tarbiat School in Tihran is an abiding monument to her memory, and constitutes a fresh and indissoluble link which will unite forever the believers in East and West in their triumphs as well as sufferings in the path of service to our beloved Faith."

To the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly.
Dated Haifa, Palestine, December 1, 1934.

"THE FIRST STAGE IN THE FORMATIVE PERIOD OF HIS FAITH"

Dearly beloved co-workers:

It would be impossible for me to refrain from adding these words in person as a token of my increasing admiration for the recent, the marvelous accomplishments of the American believers. Despite the perils and uncertainties with which their country is now beset, and in the face of the financial reverses they have suffered and the unfortunate controversies that have perplexed and agitated them, they have forged ahead and are fast approaching the termination of the first stage in the ornamentation of their consecrate Edifice. Undaunted by the magnitude of this colossal enterprise, undismayed by the smallness of their numbers, the scantiness of their resources and the scorn of their enemies, they have carried triumphantly the banner of Baha'u'llah and brought to a successful issue the first stage in the formative period of His Faith. At this stage of their development they can neither halt nor hesitate. Whatever the future may have in store for them, they will, I feel more than ever confident, allow nothing whatsoever to dim their vision or to deflect them from their high purpose.

DIVINE CONFIRMATION

A Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved friends:

The Cause of God is destined to encounter and overcome obstacles that by the standard of human capacity would be insurmountable. Human movements and organizations follow programs conforming to their own measures of possibility, but the Baha'i Faith is constantly confronted by what is truly impossible. Until tasks that by ordinary standards are impossible have been brought to fulfilment, the believers cannot reflect the powers of the higher world nor be chosen instruments for the expression of the divine Will. Therefore the destiny of the true believers compels them to move forward from test to test, from trial to trial, from sacrifice to sacrifice, that progressively their courage, their resolution, their insight and their collective unity may be established more firmly as the social foundation of the new age.

More than once in these transitional years would the National Spiritual Assembly have faltered and retreated from overwhelming responsibility had it not relied entirely upon the power of Baha'u'llah to accomplish what no human community by itself could dare even to consider. Throughout the period from 1892 to 1921 that power maintained itself upon earth in 'Abdu'l-Baha. From 1921 throughout the cycle that power will continue to maintain itself upon earth in the Guardianship and in the institutions given sacred potency in the text of the Revelation and definite form and significance in the Master's Testament. In this Formative Era since the Master's ascension the believers have received a unique privilege, a sacred responsibility, in the task of perfecting, under Shoghi Effendi's guidance and leadership, the Baha'i institutions which represent the conscious cooperation and response of mankind in the Divine plan.

We have accepted the Teachings which ordain an end to war, to strife, to separation, to ignorance and prejudice. These Teachings set each believer upon the path which when followed faithfully to the end transmute selfishness into selflessness and endow him with capacity to express the new law of the oneness of mankind. But that path is no longer the path of solitary experience and individual attainment alone. The path of spiritual progress conducts us to the Baha'i community where the foundation of the Most Great Peace is being firmly laid in the collective unity of the friends of God. If we choose another path we live outside the illumined area of divine confirmation, we draw no more from the well of universal love. The step of supreme sacrifice is to abandon the old right of private conscience for the sake of the new reality of oneness and consultation.

The tasks and problems which the National Spiritual Assembly is compelled to assume, for and on behalf of the entire Bahá'í community, are inevitable and therefore to be met with radiant acquiescence, for in their performance alone can the entire community realize the true character of its mission, as in the organic unity sought by the Guardian, and become imbued with that capacity for spiritual construction which Bahá'u'lláh made the Providential mission of America in this age.

Apart from that radiant acquiescence, that profound faith in the power of divine confirmation to inspire each local community, the National Spiritual Assembly could never have the heart to pledge funds for Temple construction nor undertake other duties and responsibilities demanded for the progress of the Cause. Only God can ask for utter sacrifice, since only God can give the spiritual bounty the attainment of which requires human beings to rise from the natural to the heavenly world.

Therefore without fear or hesitation the Assembly constantly reminds all the friends of both the spiritual and material needs of the Cause. These needs are not arbitrary, human policies; they are the very windings and ascents of the path that leads from the world's failure to the refuge of the Most Great Peace. In meeting present and future needs we prove ourselves collectively worthy of conscious collaboration in the basic principles of the World Religion.

The essential facts have all been set forth again and again. There is no occasion now to repeat them. Each local Spiritual Assembly is well aware of the needs of the National Fund.

What the members of the National Spiritual Assembly would now emphasize is rather this vital principle, that a collective task in the Cause demands a collective and organic solution. In requiring what is humanly difficult or even impossible, Bahá'u'lláh has given us the means and methods for successfully solving every problem encountered by His Cause. The beginning of the all-potent resources of His Faith is the institution of the Nineteen Day Feast. As the local Assemblies and communities appreciate this divine ordinance and participate unconditionally in whole-hearted response to it, so they will be forging the capacity and firmly establishing the instruments through which our human weakness can receive reinforcement from the very Source of victory.

An explanation of the Nineteen Day Feast published in July, 1933, and approved by the Guardian, is now repeated:

"This institution, established by Bahá'u'lláh, has been described by Bahá'u'lláh as the foundation of the new World Order. The National Spiritual Assembly understands that it is incumbent upon every believer, unless ill or absent from the city, to attend each of these Feasts.

"In a general letter issued to local Spiritual Assemblies several years ago, it was pointed out that the Guardian instructs that the Nineteen Day Feast be held according to the following program: the first part, entirely spiritual in character, is devoted to readings from Bahá'i Sacred Writings; the second part consists of general consultation on the affairs of the Cause, at which time the local Spiritual Assembly reports its activities to the community, asks for suggestions and consultation, and also delivers messages received from the Guardian and the National Assembly. The third part is the material feast and social meeting of all the friends. Only voting believers are invited to attend the Nineteen Day Feasts, but young people of less than twenty-one years of age, who are declared believers, especially when members of a Bahá'í family, can also be present.

"These meetings may be regarded as the very heart of our Bahá'í community life. When properly conducted, and attended by a Bahá'í community which fully appreciates their importance, the Nineteen Day Feasts serve to renew and deepen our spirit of faith, increase our capacity for united action, remove misunderstandings and keep us fully informed of all important Bahá'í activities, local, national and international in scope."

This is the divine foundation. Against it all the assaults of the world will strike in vain. One by one every believer could be overcome, diverted or his activities made ineffective, but when united the believers can realize Reality itself upon this troubled earth. The most essential need confronting the entire American Bahá'í community at this time is to bring the Temple clerestory contract to an early and successful conclusion.
ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS

10. Babá's Youth

An important phase in the development of the American teaching program was inaugurated with the appointment of the Bahá'í Youth Committee for 1933-34. In naming this new National Committee, the N. S. A. did so "realizing the important position youth can fill in rounding out our Administration activities, and in the profound hope this appointment may open a new point of teaching contact with the capable and universally minded youth of the world."

In a statement issued in the November BAHÁ'Í NEWS the functions of the Committee were defined as, first, "the deepening and broadening of the knowledge of the Faith ... of our younger members ...; second, establishing sympathetic contact with non-Bahá'í youth ...; and third, intensifying this field of teaching service by outlining methods of establishing Introductory Forums, Discussion Groups, Study Groups, etc."

The N. S. A. also called the attention of the American friends to the instruction of the Guardian, received August 10, 1933, that the Youth Committee should not confine its activities to the national sphere, but "should strive to create ... an international body of active young Bahá'ís men and women who, conscious of their manifold and sacred responsibilities, will unanimously arise to spread the Holy Word."

The first action of the Committee was to call upon the local Spiritual Assemblies to appoint local youth committees, "consisting of confirmed Bahá'ís, not over 25 years of age." At the same time a letter was addressed in the BAHÁ'Í NEWS for November "To the Young Bahá'ís Throughout the U. S. and Canada," informing them of this new program with its superb and solemn opportunities.

Meantime, contact had been established with some fifteen international Bahá'í youth groups and seventeen local groups, in connection with the preparation of a survey of youth activities for the Bahá'í World Volume V. Through two of its members who were on the Editorial Board, the Youth Committee cooperated in writing this survey, and also in securing three articles for the volume from young Bahá'í authors.

In December a Platform of Work for the winter was outlined and approved by the N. S. A. Practically all of its objectives have since been fulfilled.

The international aspect was officially inaugurated with a letter addressed to international Bahá'í youth groups, published in the January BAHÁ'Í NEWS, inviting our friends throughout the world to join us in carrying forward the Guardian's hopes.

The first real opportunity for collective action came with the request of the National Teaching Committee that we aid in "a vigorous national public effort ... to carry the Cause forward to the extent contemplated by the splendor of the Temple." The Youth Committee heartily accepted. On January 13, it sent to each local youth group in every Bahá'í community a letter embodying the general plan, with specific suggestions for the organization and conduct of both direct and indirect discussion groups, enumerating as well other methods for publicizing the Cause. The campaign was set for a period of six weeks, during which time we hoped for an emphasis of the public aspect, "in order to widen our contacts, to bring the Cause into public notice."

Further teaching suggestions were offered in the BAHÁ'Í NEWS for February, consisting of practical techniques to be observed in speaking. "Make a broad outline, have a clear and definite idea of the salient points to be developed, turn to Bahá'u'lláh, then speak spontaneously with full confidence in His power."

On February 26, the N. S. A. brought to the Committee's notice a matter which is still pending, and which must certainly demand the wisest and most careful attention of the incoming Youth Committee. "The local Spiritual Assemblies have been requested to report the names and addresses of all Bahá'í young people between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one years, the purpose of this request being to have on file a list of those who might be subjected to direct or indirect military duty in the event of another war."

In order that the list may carry only names of those who "meet a fair standard of Bahá'í qualifications," the Youth Committee was asked to work out some form of class by which children of Bahá'ís and other young people attracted to the Cause can be given sufficient information to allow local Assemblies to pass upon their status."

At the present writing, the Committee is submitting to the N. S. A. an outline for the conduct of such a class, with further suggestions for local Spiritual Assemblies.

One other objective of the year's work is still to be completed. This is the preparation of a bulletin to be sent to all local and international youth groups, carrying editorial, an extensive teaching section, and current events. It is hoped the bulletin will appear in May.

The Committee has also undertaken responsibility for the program of the Bahá'í Youth Conference at Green Acre, July 27-29, while its members are assisting individually with the Central States and Geyserville Summer Schools. It is worthy of note that the young Bahá'ís of the Central States School are planning a Youth Conference to precede the regular session, June 25-27.

In pursuance of the policy to encourage literary activity among young Bahá'ís, the Committee has actively cooperated with Mr. Bertram Dewing, Editor of the Youth Section of the Herald of the South. Recently an invitation has been received to assist Mr. Charles Kenn, a Bahá'í who is editing Hawaii's Youth. The Committee hopes to develop the scope of this service: to encourage young writers and to supply material to the Bahá'í magazines throughout the world.

Unquestionably the appointment of a Bahá'í Youth Committee has emphasized a phase of teaching hitherto neglected. It is creating a ferment in the minds and hearts of young Bahá'ís throughout America. Already they are stepping out of immaturity, undertaking their rightful responsibilities, experimenting with the complex science of presenting the Cause, and winning certainty and ambition in the struggle.

To be sure, several groups suffered a setback with the inauguration of this work when, pruned by the age limit, they were forced to retrench and reform upon a basis more conducive to the general unity of the community. Their losses were temporary and were more than offset by innumerable and thrilling proofs that young Bahá'ís are aroused to the supreme adventure of this age, are fully qualified to render mature and splendid service. The complete assimilation of the Montreal youth group into the body of the Cause in that city is an outstanding example.

AN ADMINISTRATIVE PRINCIPLE

"Anything whatsoever affecting the interests of the Cause and in which the National Assembly as a body is involved should, if regarded as unsatisfactory by local Assemblies and individual believers, be immediately referred to the National Assembly itself. Neither the general body of the believers, nor any local Assembly, nor even the delegates to the Annual Convention, should be regarded as having any authority to entertain appeals against the decision of the National Assembly. Should the matter be referred to the Guardian it will be his duty to consider it with the utmost care and to decide whether the issues involved justify him to consider it in person, or to leave it entirely to the discretion of the National Assembly.

"This administrative principle which the Guardian is now restating and emphasizing is so clear, so comprehensive and simple that no misunderstanding as to its application, he feels, can possibly arise. There are no exceptions whatever to this rule, and the Guardian would deprecate any attempt to elaborate or dwell any further upon this fundamental and clearly-enunciated principle." — Shoghi Effendi, in letter to N. S. A., September 16, 1934.

The purpose of this committee is to supervise the presentation of the Baha’i Message at the Baha’i House of Worship. The members meet once a month and the very first thing of importance to be done is the arranging of the Sunday afternoon programs. Speakers and chairmen for the following month are appointed. We endeavor as much as possible in arranging the programs to always have an equal number of men and women speakers and have made it a practice when we have a man speaker to have a woman act as chairman and vice versa.

The speakers whom we are fortunate enough to have here permanently and who are always happy to serve are as follows:

Mrs. Charles Bishop
Mrs. Mary Hanford Ford
Miss Marion Holley
Dr. E. Lenore Morris
Mrs. Howard Ives
Miss Beatrice Irwin
Dr. Ali Kuli Khan
Miss Fanny Knobloch
Mrs. Shahnaz Waite

The attendance at the Sunday afternoon meetings during the past year has generally been quite large, depending somewhat upon weather conditions. During the World’s Fair, the Foundation Hall was always comfortably filled. There were exceptionally good crowds during the winter although the Hall was not always full.

We have noticed an increasing number of visitors who are attending meetings frequently. People are attracted to the Bahá’í Faith through the addresses made at the Bahá’í House of Worship, and then they join one of the many neighborhood classes which are being held in the surrounding areas, where they go into a more serious study of the teachings.

Special meetings to which the public is invited, such as the great Feast of Nawruz and Ridvan, also are under the jurisdiction of this committee by whom the programs are arranged. The serving of the material part of the Feast is usually handled by the different Assemblies hereabout.

Another thing of great importance, although not handled directly by this committee, but which is under their supervision, was the taking care of the immense crowds of people who visited the Bahá’í House of Worship during the past year, especially the months in which the World’s Fair was open in Chicago. Mrs. True, the chairman of the Daily Hospitality Committee, was in charge of all the guides used to conduct visitors through the building and it was necessary to have a great many of them to take care of the people who thronged here. Many of the people evinced keen interest and we were happy to see visitors from all parts of the world, even some from Haifa, who had known and had met ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and who said they would call upon Shoghi Effendi when they returned.

 Classes are now being formed in Chicago, Evanston and Wilmette for people who wish to serve as guides at the Bahá’í House of Worship. Questions which it is thought likely the public will ask and answers to them will be discussed at these classes and a thorough study will be made of the new letter from our Guardian, Shoghi Effendi "The Dispensation of Bahá’i-
A committee was appointed to investigate the advisability of having a Sunday school at the same time the afternoon program is in session at the Baha’i House of Worship, in order to take care of children whose parents might wish to listen to the lecture. As yet, no definite decision or plans have been made in regard to this.

Each Saturday an announcement of the speaker at the Baha’i House of Worship and the subject for the following Sunday, has appeared in one of the leading Chicago newspapers, as well as notices in three North Shore papers.

The Folder “A Temple of Light” which was used for free distribution at the Baha’i House of Worship, was revised by a sub-committee of this committee and submitted to the National Spiritual Assembly for their correction and to be printed, which they did.

A letter was drawn up by one of the members of this committee and approved by the committee, which is sent out to all people who are asked to speak at the Baha’i House of Worship, stating just what the policies of this committee are in regard to the type of public lectures in this building, the time to start and close the meeting, etc. The following is a paragraph from this letter:

“As the evening program is in session at the Baha’i House of Worship, a call for twenty-five minutes is made by the chairman, and the last speaker for the evening is then introduced. The speaker is requested to keep his talk within the twenty-five minutes and to have a question period which shall not exceed another twenty-five minutes and which is to be conducted in an orderly manner.”

The following is a paragraph from a letter:

“Your audience is composed principally of strangers present to learn of the Baha’i Message. We ask you to use the names of our Founders in a free and unrestrained manner. Every talk, no matter what the subject, is to include a clear, concise statement of the Baha’i Message. It is preferable that some such statement be brought near the climax of your talk, as the greater part of the audience usually arrives after the opening reading and when the lecture is well along.”

We hope that our services have been satisfactory.

Respectfully submitted,

 Respectful Committee of the Baha’i House of Worship.

12. Teaching Committee—

(Supplementary)

On the 9th of January the “Franconia” began a world cruise around the Southern Hemisphere. Mrs. Loulie A. Mathews was making this trip as far as Penang. She discovered that a good deal of publicity attended this kind of a trip and was most anxious to get some of this publicity for the Cause. It was, however, a favor that could not be asked for, and one may imagine her joy when she found that she was one of four women out of nearly three hundred passengers, destined to be photographed and interviewed at the important cities that we passed, thus in Auckland, Sydney, Singapore and Penang. The word “Baha’i” appeared beneath her name and she was often accorded a second interview in which the Baha’i Principles were enlarged upon. In Wellington, unfortunately the reporters had not caught the spelling and substituted inter racial, international movement in place of the word Baha’I but even there the Principles were outlined.

Due to the fact that a full length photograph appeared in the morning editions when she landed, and as Mrs. Mathews always wore the same dress ashore, she was easily recognized, and could not walk a block on the principal street of the town without being stopped and asked questions about the Cause. She had the same experience in the shops, so that everywhere she went she was able to collect strangers for the Baha’i meetings. The friends had arranged to have Mrs. Mathews speak at several clubs, they showered her with loving hospitality, and by a spiritual enthusiasm that made her work much more valuable than it would have otherwise been. On the last night in Auckland, Mrs. Mathews asked permission to hold a public Baha’i meeting on the deck of the “Franconia.” Not only was this permission given, but refreshments were served by the purser to the seventy-eight strangers that came. Mrs. Mathews was able to read from the writings of Baha’u’llah and the people evinced a profound interest. The friends again brought such a spiritualizing atmosphere that it helped greatly.

In Sidney, Mrs. Mathews received the same overflowing hospitality, and found meetings arranged. Although there are but four Baha’is in Wellington, they held a public meeting at one of the best clubs and about twenty-eight people were present.

By this time, the publicity that Mrs. Mathews had received and the large public meeting which had been held on the deck, had excited great interest and enabled her to form a teaching class on the ship, giving three lessons a week. Mrs. Mathews had people from many different countries and often the questions kept the class for an extra hour or two after the lesson. She distributed the literature and placed four volumes in the circulating library and saw them listed in the permanent catalogue.

The friends will be immensely encouraged by the success of the whole trip, which far exceeded her hopes, and great credit must be given to the believers who by their energy and by their spirituality made these meetings possible. Everywhere the teachings were received with intelligent attention and we may all rejoice at the reception given the Baha’i Faith throughout these widely separated countries.

THE WORLD ORDER OF BAHÃ‘U’LLAH

“That Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Baha’i Faith.”—Shoghi Effendi. (World Order of Baha’u’llah, pages 3 and 4).

Throughout the present Baha’i year, Baha’i News will maintain this special department consisting of quotations from the Guardian’s writings on the subject of the World Order of Baha’u’llah.

“Dear friends: Clear and emphatic as are the instructions which our departed Master has reiterated in countless Tablets bequeathed by Him to His followers throughout the world, a few, owing to the restricted influence of the Cause in the West, have been purposefully withheld from the body of His occidental disciples, who, despite their numerical inferiority, are now exercising such a preponderating influence in the direction and administration of its affairs. I feel it, therefore, incumbent upon me to stress, now that the time is ripe, the importance of an instruction which, at the present stage of the evolution of our Faith, should be increasingly emphasized, irrespective of its application to the East or to the West. And this principle is no other than that which involves the non-participation by the adherents of the Faith of Baha’u’llah, whether in their individual capacities or collectively as local or national Assemblies, in any form of activity that might be interpreted, either directly or indirectly, as an interference in the political affairs of any particular government. Whether it be in the publications which they initiate and supervise; or in their official and public deliberations; or in the posts they occupy and the services they render; or in the communications they address to their fellow-disciples; or in their dealings with men of eminence and authority; or in their affiliations with kindred societies and organizations, it is, I am firmly convinced, their first and sacred obligation to abstain from any word or deed that might be construed as a violation of this vital principle. Theirs is the duty to demonstrate, on one hand, their unqualified loyalty and obedience to whatever is the considered judgment of their respective governments.

"Let them refrain from associating themselves, whether by word or by deed, with the political pursuits of their respective nations, with the policies of their governments and the schemes and programs of parties and factions. In such controversies they should assign no blame, take no side, further no design, and identify themselves with no system prejudicial to the best interests of that world-wide Fellowship which it is their aim to guard and foster. Let them beware lest they allow themselves to become the tools of unscrupulous politicians, or to be entrapped by the treacherous devices of the plotters and the perfidious among their countrymen. Let them so shape their lives and regulate their conduct that no charge of secrecy, of fraud, of bribery or of intimidation may, however ill-founded, be brought against them. Let them rise above all particularism and partisanship, above the vain disputes, the petty calculations, the transient passions that agitate the face, and engage the attention, of a people and the services of their fellow-disciples; or in the "Hidden Words."—SHOGHI EFFENDI. BAHÁ’Í ACTIVITIES IN ABBYSSINIA

The following reference to the advance of teaching activities in Abyssinia is made in a letter from the Guardian, written through his secretary, dated November 20, 1934.

"Mr. Sabri Elias, our beloved pioneer teacher in Abyssinia, has just written the Guardian informing him of his intention to have the 'Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era,' which has already been translated, published in the Abyssinian language . . .

"You will certainly be pleased and interested to know that a number of Bahá’í families from Alexandria and Isma’Illyih (Egypt) have recently, and of their own accord, made arrangements to leave for Addis-Ahabsa to assist dear Mr. Elias in his teaching work. This is, indeed, a very striking and touching instance in which the believers are cooperating for the spread of the Message and for the establishment and extension of the Cause in far-off lands. The Guardian is hopeful that through the self-sacrificing efforts of the Egyptian friends the Faith will make steady headway throughout Abyssinia."

COMMUNICATIONS FROM NATIONAL COMMITTEES

Publicity

We are deeply grateful to those Assemblies who have so faithfully carried on and gone forward with their publicity during the past year and fall.

We assume that your programs for the winter are by this time organized and in action. We are particularly interested in the announcements public meetings and would appreciate a list of these that we may consult together as to publicity possibilities. These meetings are your best opportunity at present for sustained teaching through the press.

Before Convention we suggested to you the idea of creating a project which while teaching the Cause would supply the necessary news interest to make it acceptable to the editors. We cannot stress this point too strongly—the response of your Assembly to the calls being for the purpose of acquaintance discussion in a general way of the aims of the Faith and letting the editors know that we relied on their assistance and help. Then followed news items about the Cause which were personally handed to the editor. Then the chairman took the Bahá’í World around to each editor explaining the interesting features. We gave 'The Goal of the New World Order' to each editor as a personal gift—later we took certain portions of that pamphlet and used them as articles. We gave the Bahá’í Magazine to the editors of the religious page, the 'Hidden Words.'

"We generally find that if the religious editor has not space for our article the city editor may have—then there is the editor of the Sunday Magazine sections. In a few words, results are obtained by making personal friends of the newspaper staff and using everything possible to reach

Generous space has been obtained by the above methods. The Vancouver clippings include statements from the recent "Summary of the Bahá’í Faith," quoted words of the Guardian relating to the New World Order, references to Bahá’í history, reviews of the Bahá’í Scriptures and the Dawnbreakers, Bahá’í economic solution—in short, they present to the public a true picture of our Faith as it is today. For a quality known as "Bahá’í"—dignity, timeliness, scope, we certainly uphold this type of publicity as a standard for us all to follow.

Now, what about your publicity experience? If you have not already done so, we urge you to share with us your successful methods.

Doris McKay, Secretary.

Braille

The National Committee for the Transcription of Braille reports that a fine service has been rendered by Mrs. Samuel J. Rodman of Batavia, New York, and Miss Ella Quant of Schenectady. Mrs. Rodman has just completed "The Goal of a New World Order" and Miss Quant has tooled "The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh." Both of these Braille transcriptions were sent to the Library of Congress Braille department where they were bound, and by Miss Adelia Hoyt, the Director of the Department, forwarded to Mr. Harald Thilander at Stockholm, Sweden, editor and owner of several Braille publications, who is deeply attracted to the Cause. Mr. Thilander has expressed his desire to quote from these works in his various magazines and we are assured of his deep gratitude and appreciation. It will be remembered that Mr. Thilander requested these writings so that he might make use of them.

The Guardian has requested a copy of the Iqán (Book of Certitude) in Braille and the work has been assigned to Mrs. Samuel Rodman, of Batavia, N. Y. When completed the book will be bound and forwarded at once to the Guardian. In the letter of the secretary he says that the Iqán has now been translated and published in Russian, English, French, German, Chinese, Albanian, Urdu and Braille and that steps have been taken for its rendering and publication into four additional languages, i.e., Arabic, Danish, Armenian and Swedish.

Library

The Library Committee has received an interesting suggestion which it wishes to present to all local Assemblies in order to stimulate further circulation of Bahá’í Literature through Public Libraries.

The suggestion is that local Assemblies consider the desirability of having individual believers inform all their acquaintances who have some knowledge of the Faith that the local Public Library has a selection of Bahá’í Literature. This information could be conveyed orally or by postcard.

Since the Bahá’í themselves either have their own books or can obtain them at local Bahá’í headquarters, it seems evident that the Public Library will only be consulted by non-Bahá’ís, and therefore the more outside friends and students of the Teaching who can be directed to Public Libraries, the greater the interest of Librarians will be. Perhaps in some cities the believers who have classes could advise a considerable number of people in the course of a year to call for books at the Public Library.

The Library Committee also recommends that local Assemblies arrange to donate to the local Public Library as soon as possible a copy of Dr. Cobb’s new book entitled "Security for a Failing World." The title alone should attract great attention, and the approach to the Cause developed in this work has extensive teaching possibilities at this time. A copy should be in every Library, but the Library Committee has no appropriation enabling it to distribute them on a national scale. Local action, however, can accomplish the same result.

Publishing

The believers are reminded of the following works which have particular interest at the present time:

A Traveler’s Narrative: The Episode of the Bab, translated by the late Prof. Edward G. Browne of Cambridge University from a Persian manuscript given him by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. This is one of the important Bahá’í historical works ............... $2.50

The Bahá’í Peace Program, containing ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Tablet to the Committee on Durable Peace which presents the most detailed statement of the Bahá’í social principles, and the Tablet revealed to the late Dr. Forel of Switzerland, which presents the spiritual science of man’s relation to the universe and the relation of the universe to God. Bound in leather . . . $1.50. Paper covers . . . $0.50.

Mysticism and the Bahá’í Revelation: A Contrast, by Ruhi Afnán, a scholarly discussion of the "path to God" as expounded by Christian and Muslim mystics, with an exposition of the spiritual teaching of Bahá’u’lláh. The contrast is between doctrines which would make man independent of the Manifestation and the Bahá’í doctrine of the Manifestation as source of Reality. Paper covers . . . . $0.50

The Promise of All Ages, by “Christophih,” (described in BAHÁ’I NEWS No. 88) the ideal presentation of the Cause for people of religious and devotional spirit. Bound in cloth. $1.50

Security for a Failing World, by Stanwood Cobb, an analysis of the current social problem in its clear menace of a civilization unable to save itself from war and strife, with the Bahá’í solution of a new world order. This work will attract and convince many who have turned away from traditional religion. Bound in cloth ........................................ $2.00

Teaching

"The Temple has already awakened wide and intense interest in the Teachings and Principles of the Cause. The friends should therefore avail themselves of this opportunity for launching a well-organized teaching campaign,"—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary.

With the progress of Temple construction, the public attitude toward the Bahá’í Faith has changed from indifference to passive interest, from passive interest to active response. The influence of our House of Worship gathers force as confidence in the old social order steadily diminishes. Now it is surely for the believers to realize their responsibility, and in every community to adopt vigorous measures to assert the spirit of the new day.

The Teaching Committee quotes the following passage from a letter recently written by the Guardian, through his secretary:

"It is his firm conviction that now that the construction work on the Temple is progressing so rapidly and so well, it is the duty and responsibility of every Assembly to bring to the attention of the friends the necessity of intensifying and of coordinating their teaching activities. The Temple has already awakened wide and intense interest in the Teachings and Principles of the Cause. The friends should therefore avail themselves of this opportunity for launching a well-organized teaching campaign. Their efforts in this connection are bound to bear fruit."
"But the essential is to persevere, and to toil patiently and confidently. For Baha’u’llah’s blessings will surely crown our efforts with success only if we remain faithful to His command to teach, and teach unceasingly. Ours is, indeed, the privilege and the responsibility to perform this sacred and mighty task."

Under this positive assurance, which is likewise a call to far more vigorous effort, every local Assembly is urged to plan immediately for an intensive and continuous teaching campaign, every aspect of which should culminate in the formation of study classes intended to bring more people into the community as declared believers. The time has gone by when we can be satisfied with that kind of “Baha’i teaching” which does not produce active and loyal enrolled Bahai’s.

The Teaching Committee desires to call attention to the various matters which will have to be considered in adopting definite plans:

1. Make a complete program to cover a definite period, and complete the program well in advance of the opening meeting.

2. Select topics and subjects related to the World Order of Baha’u’llah, rather than such abstract and general subjects as most Assemblies have used in the past. Our teaching methods today have their perfect model in the general letters written by the Guardian, and the public responds most actively to spiritual ideals which connect directly with social problems.

3. With printed, send the program to a carefully selected list of local people who are known to be liberal and progressive, with an invitation to attend. Every member of the community should also have copies to hand on to his or her personal acquaintances.

4. In the selection of public speakers, the Assembly should uphold a high standard but make a sincere endeavor to employ all available Bahai capacity.

5. Teachers who are better qualified for conducting intimate groups than public meetings should be encouraged to hold Fireside Meetings as additional sources of candidates for the final study class.

6. Newspaper publicity should be planned carefully in advance. The National Publicity Committee will provide valuable material and advice, on request.

7. A public hall can be obtained for this special series of meetings in most towns and cities at a cost which will not interfere with the Assembly’s responsibility to the National Fund.

8. The objective of all this effort is the formation of a study class, directly under the local Spiritual Assembly, whose members are to be brought to the full acceptance of the Faith and enrollment as Bahai’s. Let each Assembly consider carefully its responsibility in arranging to have such classes conducted under the best available leadership and imbued with loyalty to the Baha’i world order as well as with knowledge of the fundamental Baha’i teachings.

9. From the very first, endeavor to arouse devotion and enthusiasm throughout the entire Bahai community. The great degree of unity which has already been established by sacrifice to the Temple can be consummated only by consecration to the task of confirming new souls.

10. When this intensive effort is finished, study every detail with a view to improvement next time. The goal to be achieved is collective capacity to carry on periodic public programs, steadily augmenting in power from year to year. The Temple construction has perfected the administrative order; let teaching effort inspire that order with the flame of a regenerated spiritual life. As new believers enter the Cause, find work for them to do.

Some Assemblies have already conducted active teaching programs with remarkable confirmation and success. For instance—Milwaukee opened its program with a series of nine lectures. The interest was so marked, a second series was arranged, and finally, a third series became necessary. A study class of 250 members is being conducted, out of which over 60 have already become voting members of the Milwaukee community.

The Chicago Assembly is conducting a public program at present. The opening meeting in the Temple was so well attended, it was impossible for some to gain entrance. Subsequent meetings have found the Temple filled to capacity. The Montreal Assembly has arranged a teaching campaign entirely in French, to attract some of the large French population. Montreal has the second largest French population of any city in the world, Paris being first.

The responses to public work in Lima and Cleveland have been most reassuring.

The most successful program, however, reported thus far, has been that of Milwaukee. This was due to a large extent to the carefully worked out plan of procedure. For such help as it may be to other Assemblies we are briefly outlining the steps taken by them:

Four weeks before the campaign opened, the entire program was arranged; plans fully developed for publicity, halls, literature sale, etc.

Two weeks in advance publicity in newspapers was commenced.

One week in advance, 5000 copies of the program were sent to a selected list.

Large signs were placed outside the hall, announcing the lectures and subjects.

To increase interest, addresses for Bahai speakers were arranged before clubs, organizations, radio, etc.

All the Bahai’s joined actively in the work, inviting their friends to the meetings, and publicizing the campaign in every way possible.

Most important, the program of study classes was adopted in advance—the classes were started during the public lectures, and continuously announced at the public meetings.

The Teaching Committee will hold itself in readiness to assist in the successful conduct of these teaching campaigns in every way possible. Assemblies can secure prompt cooperation by addressing the nearest Regional Member of the Teaching Committee. Particular help may be given in arranging for Bahai speakers, if any Assembly feels it requires outside assistance.

Local Assemblies to Study and Comment on Recommendations to the N. S. A.

In transmitting to the National Spiritual Assembly reports and recommendations emanating from the local community, a local Spiritual Assembly should not be merely a passive medium used by believers to bring matters to the attention of the N. S. A. but should make its own independent study of such reports and recommendations and forward them with a statement of its own attitude and comment. Such a procedure will not only save the National Assembly much valuable time, but will also enable local Assemblies to develop necessary experience and capacity.

The Nature of Babai’s Administration

Believers, and especially local Assemblies, are urged to bring to the fixed principles of Bahá'í Administration a larger spirit of understanding and insight. The administrative principles are not ends in themselves but are instruments for the creation of unity based upon justice. They are procedures—that is, ideal methods for handling problems and situations—and not judgments. The administrative principles are not to be altered or waived for the sake of any personality, but on the other hand their correct application means that final decisions are arrived at only when the procedure has been correctly followed. The National Assembly feels that by now all believers realize that the Bahá'í administrative principles have been created for our mutual protection, and that without them we would be thrown into grievous confusion.

Correction of Erroneous Statement About the Temple Architecture

From time to time American believers repeat the statement attributed to Mr. Magonigal, the Architect, that the Bahá'í Temple design "represents the first new note in architecture since the Thirteenth Century." As Mr. Magonigal has denied having made this statement, the friends are requested not to attribute it to him. The Bahá'í House of Worship has no need, in fact, of depending upon any human beliefs for its vital significance in the eyes of the world.

Interpretation of the By-Law on Residential Qualification of Voting Believers

First, that when a member or officer of a local Spiritual Assembly cannot function for an indefinite period, and there is no certainty of return to service, the Assembly should recognize the vacancy and arrange a meeting of the community to elect a new member; and second, that the requirements of residence as one of the qualifications of a voting believer should be based upon definite proof of capacity to associate with the Bahá'í community.

The first interpretation deals with the problem which arises when a member or officer of a local Spiritual Assembly is absent and therefore unable to serve. The second interpretation means that a voting Bahá'í is not considered a resident of the local community merely through ownership of property or through paying rent, but solely by reason of actual ability to attend meetings in person.

Local Assemblies are requested to apply these interpretations when passing upon such cases.

MRS. GREENLEAF TEACHING IN FLORIDA

After a week of teaching activity in Worcester, Mrs. Greenleaf during December traveled to Miami, Florida, where she plans to remain for four months. Shoghi Effendi recently advised Mrs. Greenleaf to concentrate her teaching in Florida this winter.

Believers throughout the country who have acquaintances spending the winter in Florida might well advise them to attend Mrs. Greenleaf's meetings.

Her address is General Delivery, Miami, Florida. Bahá'í Assemblies and groups throughout Florida will find in Mrs. Greenleaf a staunch and most sympathetic co-worker, well qualified to hold public meetings.

MR. LOUIS GREGORY AT NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

Mr. Gregory is at present carrying on teaching activities in the important city of Nashville, and may be addressed in care of Fisk University in that city. The New York Assembly expresses grateful appreciation of the weeks of energetic and devoted teaching work which Mr. Gregory carried on in that city before proceeding to his winter headquarters.

It is hoped that as result of his present plans, Mr. Gregory can establish a strong and permanent Bahá'í group in Nashville, as well as bring the Faith to the attention of leading educators of the colored race.

NEW PURCHASES OF LANDS ON MT. CARMEL

The National Treasurer received a communication from the Guardian, written through his secretary on September 9, 1934, which emphasizes the importance of Shoghi Effendi's plans for the Bahá'í area on Mt. Carmel.

"The Guardian is still engaged in making further transfers and purchasing new lands in the name of the American National Assembly, and he hopes to send to the National Secretary all the documents as soon as they are available. He feels that during the last few months a considerable progress has been achieved in safeguarding and in extending the area of the lands surrounding and dedicated to the Shrines on Mount Carmel. It is his hope that through the generous and self-sacrificing efforts of the believers still further steps will be taken towards the complete safeguard of the entire area surrounding these sacred spots."

In this connection it is reported that a number of American believers who held title to land on Mount Carmel have transferred them to the Palestine Branch of the American N. S. A., as their valuable contribution to the Guardian's vitally important task. Directions how to effect the transfer have been published in Bahá'í News, but the National Assembly will be happy to send full information to any believer who has not yet taken this step.

MRS. CLAUDIA STUART COLE'S BAHÁ'Í BOOK OFFERED FOR SALE

The National Assembly has been informed that a copy of Thornton Chase's "Bahá'í Revelation" owned by the late Mrs. Claudia Stuart Cole is offered for sale, the amount received to be given to the National Fund.

PUBLIC REFERENCES TO THE CAUSE IN NEWSPAPERS AND CURRENT BOOKS

Six or seven favorable references to the Cause are made in a recently published book entitled "The Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: Reminiscences," by Mary Price Walstrum, published by Dorrance and Co.

The author's attention was directed to the Bahá'í Faith by Miss Jean Anthony of the New York Bahá'í community.

The Hearst newspapers have published a syndicated article in the series known as "What's the Answer—Library in Miniature," consisting of detailed answers to ten questions about the Temple. The article was apparently prepared by a staff writer from material sent to all newspapers by the Publicity Committee last spring.

The Christian Community, a semi-monthly magazine representing the Community Churches, reproduced an illustration of the House of Worship on the front cover of its issue dated October 7, 1934. The editor in a special note expresses grateful thanks to the Chicago Bahá'í Assembly for the loan of the illustration.

The South Bend Tribune of October 4, 1934, published a photograph of Miss Fannie Knoblock, with an interesting interview given by this international Bahá'í teacher.

From Mrs. Nita Matthiesen of the Chicago Bahá'í community has been received a copy of the Chicago Calendar (a weekly magazine giving current news items), which contains a beautiful colored frontispiece illustrating the Temple and a very favorable descriptive article.

Architectural Concrete, a new technical publication, contains in its first issue an article by Mr. John J. Earley, illustrated with a view of the Temple dome.

East Bay Reporter a community newspaper published in Oakland, Calif., carried in its issue of October 18, 1934, an article on the Temple by Allen B. McDaniel.

The Chicago Defender on December 15, 1934, contained a two-column article on the Cause by the Editor, Robert S. Abbott, member of the Chicago Bahá'í community.

The New York Amsterdam News of November 24, 1934, published a column entitled "The Bab's Faith of Brotherhood" by J. A. Rogers which is syndicated among Negro papers.

MILWAUKEE PUBLIC MEETINGS

A Notable Bahá'í Achievement

Reference has been made in the Teaching Committee's communication, published above, to the remarkable results achieved by the Spiritual Assembly of Milwaukee during recent months. Further information is made available by the following excerpts taken from the Milwaukee Bahá'í News of November 4, 1934:

"During the past few months the Spiritual Assembly has conducted a series of lectures daily at the Milwaukee Auditorium. The following teachers have appeared on the program daily at 3 and 8 P. M. from September 9, to October 18, inclusive: Madame Gita Orlova, of New York, Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett of Chicago, Dr. Lenore Morris of Racine, Mrs. Mary Hanford Ford of New York, Dr. Clement Woolson of St. Paul, Dr. Ali Kuli-Kahn of Washington, D. C., Lorel Schopflocher of Elliot, Maine, and Mr. Albert Windust of Chicago. All of these meetings were enjoyed by a capacity attendance. At the termination of the public lecture series, 275 registered for class work, and at the present time, out of this number 60 have requested to be admitted as new believers, and the Spiritual Assembly has formulated plans for their acceptance.

"Madame Orlova has spoken before the following clubs: Junior Association of Commerce, the Exchange Club, the Co-operative Club, Tuesday Nite Club, Rotary Club, City Club, and was entertained by George Des Forges Book Shop, as well as speaking before congregation Emanuel B'Ne Jeshurun. She spoke over Radio Station WTMJ, at the beginning of this series.

"Mrs. Ford of New York spoke before the Protestant Home for the Aged at the termination of her part of the program which lasted three weeks.

"Study Groups—Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings a study class in the Administration of the Bahá'í Cause is conducted by Madame Gita Orlova and Dr. Leontore Morris. Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís are invited to participate in this study class.

"Fireside Groups—A class will be conducted at 1454 N. Prospect Avenue under the supervision of Madame Gita Orlova.

"Children's Garden—On Sunday, October 14th, we resumed our class for children at 10:30 A. M. This class is conducted by Mrs. Dessel Suhm, Mrs. George J. Jacobs, Jean Clark, Mr. T. Nabby, and Mrs. Anderson who assists in Bible work. The class is conducted every Sunday morning. Everyone is invited to come and bring their children.

"Publicity—During our intensive campaign we have appeared in press notices 57 different times in the leading newspapers of our city. The newspapers have been very kind in printing nearly verbatim the articles that were prepared for them."

NEWS FROM AMERICAN COMMUNITIES

Detroit

The Spiritual Assembly of Detroit reports that two new believers have been enrolled. Teachers who have addressed local groups this year include: Miss Fanny Knoblock, Louis G. Gregory, and Miss Agnes Alexander. A series of public lectures by Mrs. Dorothy Baker at a leading hotel was arranged for the first week in November, with plans for a study class to follow.

New Haven

The Spiritual Assembly of New Haven reports steady growth in number and in strength of effort. Louis G. Gregory held two meetings in November at the home of Mrs. Charles P. Hillhouse, Secretary of the Assembly. A recent Nineteen Day Feast was held at the home of Mrs. Jeanne Bolles at Washington, Conn., at which Saffa Kinney and Helen Campbell of the New York community were guests.

Thirty believers were present. Seven new believers have been enrolled.

Pasadena

The November report from the Spiritual Assembly of Pasadena mentions: a new public teaching class to be held Tuesday morning at Hotel Vista del Arroyo; advertisement of the weekly newspaper column in Pasadena Star containing selections from Bahá'í writings under the title, "Loom of Reality." During the absence of Mrs. Nellie S. French in Europe last summer this column was maintained by Marion Holley. A new believer has recently been enrolled.

Vancouver

The Spiritual Assembly of Vancouver has reported its pleasure in the visit from Mrs. May Maxwell last summer, who made contacts which the Assembly will endeavor to maintain. Mrs. Louise Caswell held a weekly meeting for Vancouver believers in September and October, and also gave the Message to various local groups during her stay.

Colorado Springs

Ocrella Rexford visited Colorado Springs last July, according to the local Assembly's report, and delivered a lecture at the Y. W. C. A. on "The New World Order" preceded by a recitation on the Color Organ by Dr. Gregory. Leroy Ioas addressed the community at a special meeting held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Mathews in August. Six local believers are studying with the Esperanto Group. Mrs. Louie Mathews conducted a series of lectures on International Relations open to the public, during July and August, which were very successful.

Honolulu

The Spiritual Assembly of Honolulu issued a local news bulletin on September 26, 1934, from which the following items are taken: Three new believers were enrolled last year. The public headquarters was given up to help the Temple Fund, and the Bahá'ís have enjoyed the use of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Husted. Two radio talks have been given, one by Miss Agnes Alexander and one by Mrs. Florence Johnston. The Assembly is now planning a series of paid five-minute radio talks. The Honolulu Convention delegate, Agnes Alexander, visited a number of Bahá'í centers during her trip to the Convention, and in July attended the Bahá'í Summer School at Geyserville. On October 12, 1934, a study class conducted in the Japanese language was established. Weekly meetings will be held in the home of Mrs. Baldwin. The class teacher is Miss From.

Lima, Ohio

“The Lima Bahá’í community has enjoyed a heavenly two weeks with Shahnaz Waite in our midst. On Monday, Sept. 24, a Spiritual Assembly meeting was held and her suggestions were most helpful. Especially did we enjoy the spiritual significance of the Feast Days as described by her, namely that of presenting readings pertaining to the attribute of God for which that month is named and making it part of ourselves during that month, thus characterizing ourselves with the divine attributes.

“Tuesday evening the entire Community met and she gave the lesson on the ‘Covenant of God’ which gave the believers a very clear conception of the Cause and the Station of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Wednesday was reserved for the Young People and Thursday she presented a lesson on ‘The Greatest Name.’

“Friday the first open meeting was held and the topic was ‘Discover Your Bible.’ Sunday night another open meeting was enjoyed, the subject being ‘The Voice of Truth—How Are We to Know It.’ Monday evening the Community enjoyed ‘The Divine Reality of Man’ and on Tuesday night there was a question box for the newer inquirers. Wednesday night the Young People heard a delightful talk on the Station of Christ and on Thursday evening the Bahá’í Community gathered for their Nineteen Day Feast with Mrs. Waite. On the farewell meeting on Friday she gave an open meeting a beautiful talk on “The Holy Spirit and The Trinity.”

“Fire-side groups in Lima have become the order of the day. Mr. and Mrs. Allen Gorrell have opened their home to bi-weekly amity meetings which are attended by six different races and nationalities. A variety of speakers is invited and Bahá’í hymns sung. A beautiful spirit of good-fellowship prevails.

“Mr. and Mrs. Amos Hostettler are conducting a weekly class in direct Bahá’í study for a group of Rosecrucian students, numbering about sixteen. Interesting forums follow each Bahá’í talk.

“A Friday evening class for teachers is now being held at the Baker home. ‘The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh’ is being carefully studied. Four or five members each are assigned a page or two for each meeting. It is read aloud and discussed, this method of study proving most illuminating. Bahá’í Administration is also being studied.

“Mr. and Mrs. Frank Warner who recently returned from Haifa have brought with them a wave of love and unity and a fresh impetus for service. Mr. Warner has been invited to speak on World Peace in many of the clubs and churches and never fails to create a new spirit. The Lima believers feel that the decided increase in the attendance at our general Sunday evening meetings may be attributed in large measure to his uniriting efforts.

“Four new believers were welcomed into the Lima Bahá’í Community at our last Nineteen Day Feast, and have already entered into our activities with joyous eagerness.”

Philadelphia

Recently three public Bahá’í meetings were held in Philadelphia, November 4, 11 and December 8, 1934.

On Nov. 4th Mr. Horace Holley spoke to a group of about 55 people (many of whom were recently interested), in a St. James Hotel lecture room. His topic was “Living Faith and Dying Creed.” He gave a very scientific and illuminating talk.

On Nov. 11th a second public meeting was held in the same room with Mr. McDaniel as the speaker. He spoke on “The New World Order,” his talk being based on the recent letters of Shoghi Effendi.

On Dec. 8th Mr. McDaniel again spoke in this city to a group of about 130 people giving an illustrated lecture on: “The Temple of Light,” presenting over 50 slides showing the different stages of the construction of the Temple. This was a very educational lecture and many remarked on Mr. McDaniel’s ability to convey to the layman the many points of interest in connection with the fabrication and construction of the Temple. Included among the listeners were architects, engineers, sculptors and lawyers. It was gratifying to note that the attendance was greater at each successive meeting. These meetings were advertised in two of the leading newspapers and also we circulated our mailing list. For Mr. McDaniel’s Meeting on Dec. 8th there was a notice printed in the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Lecture List which is mailed by them to 13,000 individuals (with no charge for this publicity). Cards of invitation were either taken or sent to a number of engineers and architects, as well as to clubs such as the engineer’s club, architectural and Art Clubs, etc.

Both directly and indirectly we feel this meeting will be a profitable one because of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s statement to the effect that the Temple will be the greatest teacher and those seeing the pictures of this edifice and hearing Mr. McDaniel’s illuminating and connected remarks in conjunction with each slide as it was shown, could not help but be deeply impressed and will not forget the beauty and significance of this building.

Inter-Assembly Meeting of New York Metropolitan Area

On Saturday, December 8, 1934, believers from West Englewood, Montclair, Newark, Yonkers and New York City attended an Inter-Assembly meeting arranged by the Newark Assembly, this being one of a series of Inter-Assembly meetings held by these five Assemblies in rotation for two years.

From 4:30 to 6 P.M. the friends consulted on a number of specified topics, including What Is the Appeal to Youth?

Following a dinner the meeting reconvened for a public session, with addresses by Saffa Kinney and Horace Holley.

A CORRECTION

To Miss Clara Weir of the Los Angeles community we are indebted for the correction of an error in BAHÁ’Í NEWS, No. 84 in the article listing American Bahá’ís who have served in other lands. That list included the name of Mrs. Anna Lynch, who in fact is neither American by birth or residence. Mrs. Lynch, is Russian and has for some years been a valued worker at the International Bahá’í Bureau at Geneva.
INSTRUCTIONS AND EXPLANATIONS FROM SHOGHI EFFENDI

The following passages are from a letter dated Haifa, January 27, 1935, and were written in reply to questions raised by the National Spiritual Assembly in connection with correspondence from local Assemblies.

"With reference to your question whether the figures of the Bab and Bahá'u'lláh should be made to appear as characters in dramatic works written by the believers, Shoghi Effendi's opinion is that such an attempt to dramatize the Manifestations would be highly disrespectful, and hence should be avoided by the friends, even in the case of the Master. Besides it would be practically impossible to carry out such a plan faithfully, and in a dignified and befitting manner.

"In regard to your question concerning the nature and character of Bahá'í marriage. As you have rightly stated, such a marriage is conditioned upon the full approval of all four parents. Also your statement to the effect that the principle of the oneness of mankind prevents any true Bahá'í from regarding race itself as a bar to union is in complete accord with the Teachings of the Faith on this point. For both Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá never disapproved of the idea of inter-racial marriage, nor discouraged it. The Bahá'í Teachings, indeed, by their very nature transcend all limitations imposed by race, and as such can and should never be identified with any particular school of racial philosophy."

PREPARATION OF NEW BELIEVERS FOR MEMBERSHIP IN THE BAHÁ'Í COMMUNITY

In the August, 1932 issue of Bahá'í News the National Spiritual Assembly published an important statement entitled, "Qualifications of Membership in a Bahá'í Community." The purpose of that statement, prepared in response to many requests for information made by local Assemblies, was to emphasize the importance of the vital function vested in the local Spiritual Assembly, of enrolling applicants as voting members of the community.

Reference to that statement will make it clear that at that time the need was to deepen the sense of responsibility felt by all Assemblies in applying the Guardian's definite qualifications of Bahá'í membership. What the National Spiritual Assembly sought to accomplish was to remind local Assemblies that they could not leave this matter to any one or more of their members, or to any teacher, no matter how well informed and loyal the teacher might be. It was therefore stated that "The members of an Assembly assume no higher responsibility than in determining the character of their community by controlling its new growth. . . . One requirement, however, the National Assembly does lay down at this time: that Local Assemblies shall read to applicants the qualifications of voting membership as defined in the By-Laws, and record in their minutes the full and complete acceptance by each applicant."

During recent months the National Spiritual Assembly has been receiving requests for further information on one particular phase of this general question: how best to prepare new believers for enrollment as voting Bahá'ís. The suggestion has been made, in fact, that it would be well if the National Assembly could make a ruling that a certain period of time must elapse before any newly enrolled believer may exercise the voting right. It has been felt, with considerable justice, that even though a new believer may be entirely qualified as far as loyalty and knowledge of the teachings is concerned, nevertheless the wise use of the voting right calls for another essential qualification, namely, acquaintance with the local community and complete assimilation into its spirit and activities.

While recognizing the importance of this view, the National Spiritual Assembly must point out that it has no sanction or authority whatsoever to establish different classifications of voting membership. There is only one class or character of membership in the Bahá'í community—full and complete membership, with no distinction between the voting rights of a new and an old and more experienced Bahá'í. As soon as a believer is enrolled, he receives this voting right without the slightest qualification or exception.

To prepare applicants for the right use of their membership, consequently, the enrollment must be deferred until acquaintance with the community has been gained. This question, it is clear, arises more particularly in the case of the few large Bahá'í communities than in the case of the smaller ones where personal acquaintance is readily gained merely by attendance at study classes and public meetings.

For the larger communities—and in time every Bahá'í community will have a large membership in comparison with its present voting list—the National Spiritual Assembly now wishes very sincerely and earnestly to offer a few constructive suggestions which it is hoped each local Assembly will take to heart for the sake of the highest interests of the beloved Faith.

1. As years of experience have shown, intellectual acceptance of the formal standards of Bahá'í faith alone is not sufficient to constitute a true believer. A true believer will, in addition, endeavor whole-heartedly to abide by the results of Bahá'í consultation as maintained by the institutions of the Cause. A true believer, furthermore, will seek to contribute to the unity of the entire community, and find his own development in the growth of the Cause, and not attempt to make the community revolve around his own personality, nor himself revolve around the human personality of any one believer. This capacity for spiritual association is not an additional qualification for membership—it is the real test of the believer's profoundest spiritual faith. All teachers responsible for preparing applicants for membership will do well to emphasize this vital point, for the aim of Bahá'u'lláh's Revelation is to establish oneness of spirit and unity of action throughout the world.

2. An applicant who is enrolled as a voting member of a local Bahá'í community is thereby given association not merely in that community alone, but by his enrollment becomes a Bahá'í world citizen—a member of the Bahá'í Commonwealth maintained by the central institutions of the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice. If he travels, the enrolled believer is given credentials which will be recognized and honored by National and local Spiritual Assemblies without distinction, whether in the East or the West. How important, therefore, in the preparation of applicants for membership, that they be made conscious of this supreme privilege, this most vital responsibility assumed by all who voluntarily seek the shade of the Divine Tree, who would contribute to the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh! This consideration is likewise a reminder to all of the present believers, especially those who are members of local Assemblies, how essential it is to avoid merely local and personal issues and situations which might conceal from an applicant the true universality of the Faith of God.

3. The same consideration likewise gives due emphasis to the fact that no local Spiritual Assembly is to be regarded as an independent, self-sufficient Bahá'í institution, but rather as one important link in the series of institutions which constitute the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. Local Assemblies are dependent upon the National Spiritual Assembly, as the National institutions are dependent upon the Guardian and the Universal House of Justice. It is because of this organic dependence that the national By-Laws make enrollment conditional upon final approval by the National Spiritual Assembly.

4. In order to assure the entrance of each new believer into the Bahá'í community upon the soundest basis possible, it is recommended that local Assemblies, wherever conditions permit, provide a final step for the preparation of applicants already interested by home study classes or some teacher's individual instruction. This final step consists in the holding of a special study class under the Assembly's own direct supervision and control, where the applicants can be trained in the Administrative principles and their knowledge of the basic teachings carefully reviewed. By this method, the new believers will experience the wise and impersonal functioning of the institution, and profit also by contact with other teachers. Later on, when local communities are larger and their collective undertakings more proficient, perhaps all applicants, before enrollment, will be able to receive this final, supervised instruction. At present, conditions vary so much among the communities that this suggestion must be developed in accordance with local circumstances. It would be well, however, for individual members of each local Assembly to feel a more positive responsibility in following all local teaching activities, visiting each class or group as frequently as possible, in order to have direct knowledge of this vital aspect of Assembly responsibility. By consultation it would then be possible for the Assembly to assist each group or class conducted by individual teachers in planning their subjects so as to lead up to the central study class held by the Assembly itself. Success depends upon the unity of the Assembly and the willing cooperation of all teachers, old and young, in striving to enlarge the Bahá'í community year by year.

5. It has been realized by discerning Bahá'ís that one essential aspect of Bahá'í community life, the social aspect, has so far remained practically undeveloped. As local communities become larger and more experienced, their Assemblies will be able to arrange social meetings and gatherings to satisfy the innate human need of friendly association, thus supplementing the Nineteen Day Feasts and the Anniversaries which at present are the only recognized Bahá'í gatherings. The larger local Assemblies might even now arrange occasional feasts, in addition to those in the Bahá'í calendar, to provide opportunities for informal association of believers and also to enable applicants to become acquainted with the local community. So far, such informal gatherings have been arranged mostly by individual believers in their own homes, which tends to make the social aspect of the community too onesided and personal, in distinction to the universality of the formal Bahá'í meetings. The National Assembly regrets deeply that Bahá'ís are still compelled to develop a social life either outside or on a basis of restricted intimacy within the Cause. But through social gatherings arranged by the local Spiritual Assembly, the social life of Bahá'ís will reinforce and strengthen their spiritual and ethical lives, and moreover such gatherings will not only bring the applicants and the older believers together but also demonstrate the vital fact that Bahá'u'lláh's Faith, in the Guardian's own words, inculcates a standard which "incline it to neither East nor West, neither Jew nor Gentile, neither rich nor poor, neither white nor colored."

6. Last but by no means least in importance is the fact that when new applicants are enrolled, not merely are they to be adjusted to the Bahá'í community, but the older believers are also to adjust to the new friends. This consideration, in fact, must receive increasing attention as indications multiply that the era of more rapid growth has begun. Courteous, true Bahá'í love and the spirit of cooperation are due every new Bahá'í, without the slightest tincture of aloofness, separation or, on the other hand, undue favoritism, from those who have longer shared the privilege of adherence to the Faith.

The National Spiritual Assembly offers these remarks as suggestions deserving of thoughtful attention. In no sense are they put forth as rulings or commands, because formal legislation can not be carried into the realm of the heart and the conscience. In essence, this statement is an appeal, an urgent call for new and higher spiritual attitudes on the part of all members of the American Bahá'í Community.

IMPORTANT EVENTS AFFECTING THE FAITH IN PERSIA

A brief summary of the events which have recently challenged the unconquerable spirit of the Persian Bahá'ís is presented here for the information of the American believers.

In reporting these matters, it is pointed out that the friends should patiently and prayerfully wait until these sad happenings take their due course. All possible assistance has been extended; at present no action is available to the Bahá'í communities of other lands. The history of the Faith is surely an illustration of the truth that such opposition invariably serves to strengthen the believers in their faith, by stimulating the powers latent in their hearts and by quickening in them a new and deeper consciousness of their duties and responsibilities towards the Cause. Moreover, it is clear that the very progress and advance of Bahá'u'lláh's Faith, by arousing denial and opposition, creates for itself such obstacles as only its divine spirit can overcome.

Many are the passages in the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh wherein He foreshadows the persecutions awaiting His Cause, but side by side with such passages is the assurance that out of these sufferings and trials the Faith will emerge purified and victorious.

The Tarbiat Schools and Bahá'í Kindergarten have been closed by order of the Ministry of Education. The National Spiritual Assembly thereupon instructed the believers not to send their children to other schools pending final decision on the closure. A petition addressed to the Shah was undelivered.

The administrative body of the Schools made a detailed answer to the communication received from the Ministry of Education.

Soon after, the Bahá'í School for Girls at Kazwin was likewise ordered closed, and Bahá'í meetings and gatherings were completely banned. The Bahá'ís were forbidden to bury their dead in Bahá'í cemeteries or to bury them elsewhere with Bahá'í services. At Keshan the School named Unity of Mankind was also closed. Bahá'í meetings were there forbidden, either in the Hazirat-ul-Qods or in the homes of believers.

The Hazirat-ul-Qods at Hamadan was likewise closed and meetings of Bahá'ís forbidden.

In the city of Iraq (Persia) the police closed the Hazirat-ul-Qods, destroying the Bahá'í inscriptions on its walls, and confiscated the records of the Spiritual Assembly.

From Kermanshah came reports that the police had closed the Hazrat-ul-Qods and stopped Bahá'í meetings. Muslim preachers slandered the Cause from their pulpits and incited the populace to rise against the believers. From every part of Persia similar events were reported.

Finally, in Tehran itself, the Central Police Department of the country addressed a circular letter to all police bureaus ordering that Bahá'í activities be restrained, their gatherings, teaching meetings and organizations suppressed, that any person calling himself a Bahá'í be arrested, and any government employee calling himself a Bahá'í be dismissed from service and also put under arrest.

Following this general order, all Bahá'í meeting in Tehran, whether in private homes or the Hazrat-ul-Qods were forbidden. A number of believers were summoned to police stations and warned not to make themselves known henceforth as Bahá'ís. The response to these threats, however, was so steadfast and unequivocal, expressing so firmly the determination of the believers to endure any suffering for the sake of their faith, that this order has apparently been abandoned.

Some of the Bahá'í children who have gone to other schools have been subjected to insult and humiliation by Muslim teachers and pupils.

Correspondence between Persian Bahá'ís and believers in other lands has become impossible.

Such episodes in the progress of the Faith can only deepen and intensify the ardor of the believers in other lands, whose hearts are one with their fellow-Bahá'ís in the country where first rose the Sun of Truth in this age. The mind goes back to the age of the Bab, recalling these noble words in "A Traveller's Narrative":—

"The flame rose higher and the contagion became swifter: the affairst waxed grave and the report thereof reached other climes. At first it was confined to Persia: later it spread to the rest of the world. Quaking and affliction resulted in constancy and stability, and grievous pains and punishment caused acceptance and attraction. The very events produced an impression: impression led to investigation: and investigation resulted in increase. Through the ill-considered policy of the Minister this edifice became fortified and strengthened, and these foundations firm and solid. Previously the matter used to be regarded as commonplace: subsequently it acquired a grave importance in men's eyes. Many persons from all parts of the world set out for Persia, and began to seek with their whole hearts. For it hath been proved by experience in the world that in the case of such matters of conscience laceration causeth healing; censure increaseth dillidence; prohibition induceth eagerness; and intimidation createth avidity. The root is hidden in the very heart, while the branch is apparent and evident. When one branch is cut off other branches grow."

DECISIONS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

1. Annual Voting Lists of Local Assemblies

"Moved, seconded and voted that hereafter the annual voting list furnished by local Assemblies should be accompanied by a separate list of all believers transferred to and from each Assembly."

2. Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá

"Moved, seconded and voted to record the fact that local Assemblies are directed to instruct new believers in the meaning of this new compilation (i.e., the Will and Testament in the new edition announced in this issue of Baha'i News) and furthermore, that local Assemblies are to be responsible for providing new believers with copies."

SECOND REPORT ON 1934 CONVENTION RESOLUTIONS

In Bahá'í News No. 86, dated August, 1934, the National Assembly reported in detail on the recommendations made by the Annual Convention in the form of Resolutions duly voted. That statement is now amplified by report of the following actions.

1. The Race Amity Committee has prepared a remarkable statement on Amity which has been approved. It is published elsewhere in this issue.

2. The recommendation on establishment of a Children's Bank was reported to a Committee which after consideration advises that such an activity be not undertaken at this time.
This report has been approved.

3. Several Resolutions bearing upon the need of definite procedures for the conduct of the affairs of a Spiritual Assembly, the consultation meeting of the Nineteen Day Feast, etc., were referred jointly to a special Committee whose final report is nearing completion. Whatever action is taken by the N. S. A. will be reported as soon as possible.

BAHA'I SUMMER SCHOOLS
Preliminary Announcement 1935

Program

The National Spiritual Assembly urges the believers to realize the vital importance of the Three Bahá'í Summer Schools. These institutions are to evolve into educational centers which eventually will have profound public influence. At present they represent a most essential activity deserving the attendance and support of every believer who can arrange to enroll for the courses given at the School in his region.

THE DIVINE CALL TO RACE AMITY

The Annual Convention of 1934 unanimously voted a resolution requesting the National Spiritual Assembly, either directly or through this committee, to issue a general appeal to all the friends on the authority of the teachings, for greater and more effective action to improve race relations. This matter has been referred to this committee, a task which it is on our part gratifying to assume.

Let us express, first of all, our faith and serene confidence in the program and order of the Most High, Bahá'u'lláh, as the one complete, perfect and universal remedy for the ills of the world. The luminous Orb of His Covenant dispels shadows of earth. Remote from this Haven are dark waters and tempestuous seas in which even the wise men of the nations are tossed with visions more or less obscure.

We recall with high praise the firm and courageous stand taken by the National Spiritual Assembly, the Annual Convention, Green Acre and various local centers, wherein the authority of the divine teachings has been visibly, largely and heartily upheld in programs and meetings, orders of business, spiritual and social communication of the various workers and friends, a standard which may well be emulated by all others. The work of harmonizing the races gathers strength and volume with the passing years. Timidity and extreme caution give way to assurance and confidence when once the work is well begun. Courage, vision, wisdom and love are among the Architect's drawing of Memorial designed by Myron H. Potter, Cleveland, Ohio, selected by the National Spiritual Assembly for construction at cost of approximately $1,000 under the direction of the Isfahan Spiritual Assembly. This Memorial, the tribute paid to the first Baha'i martyr of America by her fellow believers of the United States and Canada, will in future be visited by throngs of Baha'is from the East and West.
MEMORIAL TO KEITH RANSOM-KELHLER AT ISFAHAN

Ingredients of race amity. It is noteworthy that not a single effort has failed. This fact alone, considering our limited numbers as against the momentum of mankind, suggests that Reservoir of Power which moves the spheres.

The specific and definite purpose of Divine Appearance and Revelation is the unity of mankind. What the Manifestation, Baha'u'llah, reveals on this subject runs through all the sacred writings. His majestic proclamation of divinity to the kings; His positive instructions to ignore racial differences; His mantle of freedom to the oppressed and judgment of loss to the oppressor; His mighty overthrow of tyranny and despotism; His personal example of contacts with various races; His demonstrations of power to fuse traditionally warring groups; His "gathering of the elect from the four winds"; His overpowering call for action; His Light from the highest plane; His solace for those who seek refuge from the wilderness of decay and change; His great rewards to those who do His Will; His creation of a new cycle: These and numberless other signs of outpouring set up an unshakable foundation upon which amity workers can build.

Those who were blessed in meeting 'Abdu'l-Baha may well recall how He combined the courtliness, grace and strength of the lion with the loveliness, purity and gentleness of the dove when directing this service to America. His invigorating terms are found in many lessons and Tablets. Wherever He journeyed He sought to serve and teach the colored along with the white and both in public and private demonstrated His views in ways unmistakable. He brought the races into loving fellowship and showered His healing love upon all. Provincialism, prejudice and insularity of thought melted before His sublime wisdom and magnetic smile. On the streets and in the seats of the mighty, among the lowly and obscure and with those socially prominent He adhered to the great principles of Baha'u'llah. Moreover He promised the Confirmations of the Spirit to those who uphold and apply the great principle of unity through love. Many and potent are His signs bearing upon this vital theme. In every city visited He attracted large audiences which hung upon His every word. People did not shrink from Him because His viewpoint enlarged theirs. Rather they seemed all the more happy to meet One who restored their souls. Ever more and more established becomes His vision of reality.

Turning to our Guardian, we find that he shows the same deep and practical interest in race amity as the Great Ones who preceded him. Who can read his persuasive and dynamic appeal found on pp. 119-121 of the volume, "Baha'i Administration," without having his soul stirred to the depths? This is a model worthy of the closest study and concentration. Pilgrims tell his interest. Others share his letters. But as we read his stirring, winged words, unmistakably intended for the body of the Cause, we are as it were in his presence and feel powerfully moved to action. The authority that here speaks is unquestionable; the standard set lacks nothing of perfection; the motivating power is the mystery of divine love. We are asked to sacrifice only the veils that separate, the superstitions that darken, the prejudices that foment strife—nothing that is real! Our humble efforts are sustained by what comes from the world of spirituality, auroras of the Light Divine.

Next to consider is what is gleaned from the great scientists of the age whose genius lighted by the Hand of God has discovered the reality of humanity. Out of a wealth of material the following is selected from the book, "Against the Current", by Prof. A. E. Steiner of Grinnell University:

"I should like to point out in which direction the most valuable lessons of my experience lie. I believe they are:

A. That racial characteristics are largely determined by environment.

B. That race prejudice is an artificial product of the mind induced by various influences.

C. That on the highest spheres of activity all races are alike.

D. That every human being, no matter what his color, race, faith or class, has a right to earn the respect of his neighbor and his community by what he himself is.

E. That the brotherhood of man will be an established fact as soon as each determines to live like a brother in his relations to his fellows.

G. That he who would enter into a fellowship with the nation or race with which he lives must free himself from all isolating practices and beliefs.

H. That entrance into such a large human relationship has to be 'bought with a price', and that it is a price well worth paying; for there is no loftier human experience than becoming one with all mankind.

How glorious the vision the above quotation unfolds! The author seems to belong to the class of divine philosophers mentioned in the sacred text.

Realizing therefore how firm is the base upon which we build; how vast the strength which supports our endeavors; how heartening the examples of the Holy Ones who are creating the New Age; how unrealities crumble day by day; how eagerly countless souls are looking for Light: May we not be stirred to greater efforts to fulfill the divine requirements in ways that count? Specifically what can we do to feed the famine of mankind?

In the spirit of prayer and consultation and having at heart all other vital activities of the Cause, the following suggestions are made in behalf of this most humanitarian and needed branch of service:

1. According to Bahá'í Administration, page 41, the work of this committee is limited to holding amity conferences or directing them, stimulating interest in amity service and receiving and preparing reports for the National Spiritual Assembly. Every Spiritual Assembly should appoint its own local amity committee. Aside from amity conferences this committee has jurisdiction over the local work. But any aid we can render them at their request will be joyfully given by members of this committee.

2. Race amity conferences should be improved for "intensive teaching" as well as bringing the races together. Free literature should always be available and for this use will be sent on request. Smaller meetings should follow as a means of increasing the number of believers. One or more sessions of such conferences may perhaps well be used as a problems' meeting, wherein the answers may be made to questions in the light of the heavenly teachings. Refreshments and dinners may have an important bearing.

3. The Publishing Committee is requested to reprint race amity literature of which there is a present dearth. It is our hope that new writers will be stimulated to action. Diversity of presentation is an added power of attraction.

4. An amity conference to be followed by a course in race relations may with great value become a part of the program of each Summer School, also be adopted by the large centers especially for the training of youth. Great universities of our land, North and South, now have courses in race relations and the idea has spread to other progressive organizations. In keeping with the wishes of our Guardian that teachers be well informed, scientific books which supplement and are in harmony with the spirit of the cause should also be read. Mention of outside books carries with it no endorsement either of their authors or of the full content of such works. But books of a sociological, educational and scientific nature often contain matter which is of value in this work. It is in this spirit therefore that we mention the following brief:

Bibliography

The divine teachings are authoritative, and should be studied first and last. It is fascinating and helpful to see to what extent they are reflected by contemporaneous men of genius.

5. We know our unworthiness to serve so great an undertaking, but respond as far as we can to the higher bodies which command our efforts. It is our prayer that such labors may attract Unseen Favors which may direct progress to the ultimate goal. The Divine Will which is motion and life commands the creatures to move. Although God Himself has spoken, His Wisdom requires that the creatures give their word of testimony.

6. May we not broaden our social life by improving it to teach, both in theory and practice, better race relations? A firm and courageous stand in this regard has been known in the past to attract the aid of people of commanding influence and power. Study of the achievements of each group and admiration thereof may be good preparation for this work. Human welfare workers have great influence in spreading the Bahá'í Faith.

7. The use of outside speakers at amity conferences should be exercised only with great caution and wisdom, as statements made by them will be attributed, not unreasonably on the part of the public, to the Bahá'í Faith when made under its auspices.

Those who are spiritually inclined, who are prominent in humanitarian service, are friendly to all races as well as to the Bahá'í religion, are conversant with its universal principles and are willing to speak within them, may at times be so used with the double advantage of bringing influence to the meeting as well as spiritual attraction and guidance to the speaker. As the primary purpose of all such teaching efforts is the knowledge of the Cause, it is obviously wise to avoid any expressions that may through partisanship, politics or limited and destructive thoughts veil inquirers.

8. The aspiration of the colored people as well as other minority groups in this our American life, can justly and wisely soar no higher than the wish to be treated as well as other Americans are treated. The laying down of concrete and detailed rules for this attainment would, we fear, retard rather than advance the cause we advocate. But a safe general rule to follow is the Golden Rule taught by all the Prophets of God in every dispensation and today restated, vitalized and applied by Baha'u'llah:

"If thou lokest toward justice, choose for others what thou choosest for thyself."

This is of transcendent value whether applied to individual or racial contacts. If for the sake of conveying our thoughts and the wisdom of service, we are compelled to use the parlance of different races, then to choose for other races what we choose for our own will be the quickest way to end racial differences. The accident or incident of birth which fixes our identity is not of our own making. The Creator, we are assured, intended it for ornament, but not for divisions. The divine intention expressed in human action will bring salutary and happy results.

9. Among things to be avoided are elements of discord which raise issues and fancies, prejudices and pride which create those divisions which always go against the spirit of race amity should join their efforts to remove by wise and tactful action. Thus inspiring a similar attitude on the part of all the members of the race and nation.

Among constructive things to do are:

A. Correctly appraise and value the virtues and services of other races, thus inspiring a similar attitude on the part of those so regarded.

B. Use every means upon the basis of education, business, sociology and religion to overcome the superstitions, fancies, prejudices and pride which create those divisions which always go with artificial standards.

C. To rest assured that faith and sincerity and effort must inevitably bring success.

'Abdu'l-Baha says:

"You must rest assured, knowing that the Confirmations of the Kingdom are of a certainty yours; that the favors of Baha'u'llah are with you. If all the inhabitants of the earth should gather they would fail to withstand you; for they are on the wane, while you are waxing stronger. They are retregressing; you are progressing."

10. A few Bahá'ís especially interested in race amity should join their community organizations, such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban League, Colored Y. M. C. A. or Y. W. C. A. and attend meetings sponsored by them. Here they will meet people of the other group, learn and appreciate their art, literature, music and other accomplishments, also their problems. Thus through personal contacts they may establish friendly relations with individuals and so learn their psychology. Opportunities will come to cooperate and help in all such affairs. Bahá'ís can thus meet and invite leaders of other groups within the wisdom before stated, to speak at public meetings held at the Bahá'í center, especially in large cities. In small communities these leaders of opinion, educators or artists, even lesser people from the world's viewpoint who are spiritually inclined, can be invited to the homes of Bahá'ís where a reception, tea or conference can be arranged. The value of meetings like these may be three-fold.

A. People with capacity contact the Bahá'í group, get its spirit, hear its message.

B. The audience, new people as well as the Bahá'ís, will have their outlook and sympathies broadened by exchanging viewpoints with such persons, a step toward overcoming prejudices.

C. At such meetings as these all attending Bahá'ís can personally contact new friends and above all, follow up all such collective and individual contacts, teaching the divine principles by both words and deeds. The aim is to attract, teach and confirm new souls no matter what their racial identity may be.

When an outside speaker is invited to occupy the Bahá'í platform, it is always wise to have a Bahá'í chairman and also a Bahá'í speaker to follow the outsider. Questions raised should be tactfully and wisely answered, a service easily rendered under guidance and in the light of the Bahá'í teachings.

In large communities it is sometimes well to attend dinners where various races mingle given by other organizations. Many new friendships can be established by sitting, eating and chatting with people. And so the divine principles can be applied by word and deed. Kindness shown to the few colored people in small communities has a special value of spiritual attraction. Historical and contemporary reviews of the achievements of other races tend to broaden culture, remove prejudices and improve understanding.

11. A prayerful and a joyful attitude of service is the summary of our suggestions. A spiritual state, we are told, is a happy one. Although the pressure of life is very great, let us also remember that a perfect being has a sense of humor.

'Abdu'l-Baha says:

"What is needed is divine joyfulness. The star of happiness is in every heart. We must remove the clouds so that it may twinkle brilliantly!"

Respectfully submitted,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY PLANS NEW BAHÁ'Í MAGAZINE

To Be Public Teaching Medium for the United States and Canada

In the last issue of BAHÁ'Í NEWS the Guardian's letter dated December 1, 1934, expressed his approval of the plan adopted by the National Spiritual Assembly concerning the union of THE BAHÁ'Í MAGAZINE and WORLD UNITY.

"Concerning the union of the two Magazines... the Guardian hopes that the N. S. A. will proceed quickly in this matter. He fully approves the action which you contemplate, and any details in this connection he leaves entirely to your discretion."

This plan essentially consists of the abandonment of both the existing publications and the founding of an entirely new monthly magazine to be entitled WORLD ORDER.

This new magazine, the first issue of which will appear April 1, 1935, is to be edited and operated under the full and exclusive jurisdiction of the National Spiritual Assembly. It will be edited jointly by Stanwood Cobb and Horace Holley, and the business management will be conducted by the BAHÁ'Í Publishing Committee, thus bringing the publication and sale of all BAHÁ'Í literature in America under one unified management appointed and supervised by the National Spiritual Assembly.

WORLD ORDER (the title chosen from the term given such significance by Shoghi Effendi) will endeavor to create a public teaching medium adequate both in appearance and contents to represent the Faith of BAHÁ'ULLÁH upon the American continent. Its aim will be to expound the Message upon which human regeneration and universal peace depends, and thus assist in raising our teaching nearer to the lofty standard so perfectly symbolized by the BAHÁ'Í House of Worship.

In conformity with its impressive title, the magazine will seek to clarify for the general public the vital elements which enter into the WORLD ORDER of BAHÁ'ULLÁH—the oneness of religion, true race amity, the harmony of religion and science, the union of East and West, the attainment of world community based upon world federation as explained by the Guardian.

Its aim and purpose being completely concentrated upon serving the Cause of BAHÁ'ULLÁH, the editors call for articles from BAHÁ'Ís on any and all subjects capable of conveying the BAHÁ'Í principles and spirit to the people of this age. Articles by non-BAHÁ'Ís will be included only to the extent that the believers themselves are not yet prepared by thorough study to produce material of sufficiently high standard on certain themes like COMPARATIVE RELIGION, the relation of SCIENCE and RELIGION, etc. In all cases the editors will give BAHÁ'Í contributions the preference, but they have been directed to maintain a high standard, that the magazine may give the best possible impression to its readers.

An important part in its success will be the seriousness with which BAHÁ'Í writers prepare themselves to meet this opportunity of bringing their work to a larger circle of thoughtful non-believers than ever before. The problem is essentially one of finding the most effective teaching method through the written rather than the spoken word. How would you express the Faith if you were chosen to write an article for scientists, or for students of religion, or for psychologists, or sociologists, or school teachers? While faith is the all-important element, some degree of knowledge and insight is obviously necessary.

Another important factor in its success will be the degree of intelligent cooperation developed by the local Assemblies not merely in securing subscriptions from members of their community but also in bringing it to the attention of local people they wish to attract to the Cause. Each Assembly is urged to use a certain number of sample copies a month as a regular part of their teaching plan. Subscribers to THE BAHÁ'Í MAGAZINE will receive WORLD ORDER throughout the unfilled part of their subscriptions. The price per issue will be only 20¢, annual subscriptions $2.00 each.

Address of World Order Business Office, BAHÁ'Í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Station, New York City. Address of Editorial Office, 119 Waverly Place, New York City.

A sample copy of the first issue will be sent to each local Spiritual Assembly.

Youth

On behalf of the BAHÁ'Í Youth Committee it is reported that its BAHÁ'Í Youth Bulletin No. 2 has been approved and is being mimeographed for early distribution. Copies will be available soon after March first at 10c each, through the Publishing Committee in the usual way.

Part of the edition has been assigned... to the Youth Committee for free circulation.

This Bulletin contains an admirable Study Outline intended for use by young people, and this is called to the special attention of local Spiritual Assemblies and local Youth Committees. In addition a Bibliography of current books on Peace and news items reported from Youth groups here and abroad make this number both interesting and important.

Library

The Library Committee expresses appreciation of the cooperation given by local Assemblies in donating to Public Libraries a copy of "Security for a Failing World" by Stanwood Cobb.

Now the Committee recommends that similar action be taken to place copies of "The Promise of All Ages" by Christophil in local Libraries.

These two new Bahá'í works have a strong appeal to different types of people, and hence will serve to illustrate the universality of the Faith. The Library Committee should be notified of the Libraries where either or both books are placed.

Index

The important work of the Index Committee requires the cooperation of believers who are trained both in the literature of the Cause and in library work. The Committee wishes to compile a list of American Bahá'ís who can assist in the preparation of the catalog card references to the Bahá'í books which will serve as the basis of a future Index so much needed by students of the Teachings.

The following books are to be indexed: Iqán (new edition), Hidden Words, Some Answered Questions, Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Divine Philosophy, Epistle to the Son of the Wolf, Promulgation of Universal Peace, Tablets of Bahá'u'lláh. The Dawn-Breakers, Bahá'í Administration, the Guardian's World Order Letters and his Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh.

Local Assemblies are requested to suggest the names of trained workers to the Index Committee through Mrs. Esther G. Harding, 704 West Nevada Street, Urbana, Illinois.

Teaching

All isolated believers who have not yet signed the registration cards sent out by the Teaching Committee with a letter dated January 2, 1935, are requested to do so and send the card to Miss Charlotte Linfoot, Secretary, 376 60th Street, Oakland, Calif., as soon as possible.

Eventually only such isolated believers, as are enrolled by these registration cards can be carried in the lists of Bahá'ís recognized by the National Spiritual Assembly.

IN MEMORIAM

The friends are requested to remember in prayer the following believer who has entered the Kingdom.

Mrs. Frances A. Moore, Lima, Ohio.

PUBLIC REFERENCE TO THE CAUSE IN NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES

The Pittsburgh Courrier, a Negro paper, in its January 5 issue carried a two column article entitled "Universal Brotherhood is Object of the Bahá'ís; Prejudice Outlawed." The writer, L. F. Coles, outlines the Bahá'í principles and expresses appreciation of the kindness and Bahá'í information given him by Mrs. Ludmila Bechtold, James F. Morton, Jr., and Louis G. Gregory.

Through the courtesy of Mary Maxwell information has been received that a full page illustration of the Bahá'í Temple is included in the "Architectural Year Book of Foreign Architecture" for 1934, published in Canada for Canadian architects.

The monthly magazine entitled American Astrology contains a letter written by Francis Arthur Kelsey of the New York Bahá'í community which quotes excerpts from words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá on the subject of reincarnation.

NEW EDITION OF WELL KNOWN BAHÁ'Í WORK IN FRENCH

The National Spiritual Assembly is indebted to the kindness of Mme. Laura Dreyfus-Barney of Paris for a complimentary copy of "Essai sur le Bahá'ísm: Son Histoire, Sa Portée Sociale," by the late Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney, recently issued in a new edition with an appendix containing excerpts from "Le But d'un Nouvel Ordre Mondial" and "L'Economie Mondiale de Bahá'u'lláh."

THE CHICAGO DEFENDER

In view of the fact that Dr. Abbott, Editor of The Chicago Defender, is publishing articles on the Cause so frequently, some of the believers may wish to enter a subscription. The cost is $3.00 per year, and the address, 3435 Indiana Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

PARIS

A circular letter from the Spiritual Assembly dated January 1, 1935, brings interesting reports.

The Fifth Annual Meeting of the Union of Bahá'í Students in Europe was held December 30 and 31 in Mme. Scott's new studio, 12 rue Victor Considérant.

Discussion was held on the following subjects:

The Bahá'í Faith and the existing world political situation.

The Bahá'í Faith in modern Persia.

Discipline, the foundation of liberty, patriotism and world cooperation.

In these meetings the young believers penetrated deeply into the spirit of the Faith; their thought was mature, their expression logical and clear.

Our bi-monthly meetings have been maintained regularly, and in addition we have instituted a Saturday meeting for lectures and study which are already beginning to bear fruit.

Serious consideration is given to the matter of publications in the French language, and we have just re-issued "L'Essai sur le Bahá'ísm: Son Histoire, Sa Portée Mondiale," which Shoghi Effendi has approved. These are sold at 16 francs per hundred, postage additional.

GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

A significant step has been taken by the National Spiritual Assembly under the Guardian's advice. It is now the "National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Germany and Austria."

Its Bahá'í News, published in German, has become an important organ of the Faith, and the following information has been gathered from recent issues.

"While it is its primary task to create a greater understanding and a fuller appreciation of Bahá'í administration, the Bahá'í News will also disseminate knowledge of the progress of the Cause and of the work done in other countries."

Twelfth Annual Convention

"The Twelfth Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Germany and Austria took place at Stuttgart on Saturday, April 21 and Sunday, April 22, the first two days of Ridvan. The Spiritual Assembly of Stuttgart had made the necessary arrangements for the Convention and had created opportunities for friendly association of believers and guests, who had gathered from various parts of Germany, from Switzerland, and from Persia. (Unfortunately, events prevented our Austrian friends from participating in the Convention.)

Report of the N. S. A.

During the year, at the request of Mrs. Alice Schwarz, sole editor of The Sun of Truth for many years, the editing of the German Baha'i Magazine was placed under the direction of Dr. Adelbert Muehlschlegel, Dr. Eugen Schmidt and Mrs. Schwarz.

"To assist the communities in their work during the winter, an exposition of the Baha'i beliefs was sent them together with compilations from the writings of Baha'u'llah and 'Abdu'l-Baha on various subjects, as well as a list of speakers with their special topics which the friends may employ as teachers.

"It was decided to replace—as far as possible—the term 'Baha'i Doctrine' by the more appropriate term 'Baha'i Faith' which is already used by the friends abroad. It was also decided during the session of April 8, 1934, to change the designation 'Spiritual National Council of the German Baha'is' to 'National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Germany and Austria.'"

The annual election: Mrs. Alice Schwarz, Chairman; Dr. Adelbert Muehlschlegel, Vice-chairman; Dr. Eugen Schmidt, Secretary; Paul Gollmer, Treasurer; Mrs. Martha Brauns, Max Greeven, Dr. Herman Grossmann, Miss Edith Horn, Miss Anne Poellinger, Dr. Herman Grossmann of Germany and the American N. S. A. had sent us Esperanto booklets and La Nova Tago to give to the guests. Miss Alma Zetterlund, Baha'i and Esperantist of Stockholm, presided. She spoke of the need of the renewal of religion and outlined the Baha'i principles. I spoke next, explaining what is a Baha'i, the beauty of the inner Teachings for spiritual evolution, and the Administration. . . . Lidja Zamenhof spoke last and as one inspired. Her talk was much applauded and was praised in the press.

"Then, on August 11, in the closing session of the Congress, I again had opportunity to give a brief resume of the success of the Baha'i session. This has never happened in any previous Esperanto Congress. . . . "The Twenty-seventh Annual Esperanto Congress will be held at Rome in August, 1935, and they plan a kind of tour through Italy. I pray very much that some Baha'is in all countries will train themselves to speak Esperanto courageously, correctly, fluently, and that they will take their places on the international committees. There is opportunity to bring the Baha'i Cause to many thousands of Esperantists."

MARTHA L. ROOT IN STOCKHOLM

From a most interesting letter written by Miss Root to the National Spiritual Assembly, the following items are reported:

"The Twenty-sixth Annual Universal Esperanto Congress held in Stockholm, August 4 to 11, has been another triumph for the Cause. I was able to get four Baha'i articles into the Swedish press. Our Baha'i Esperanto literature was on sale. . . . At the opening of the work of the Congress I had the opportunity to give the greeting of Shoghi Effendi and the good wishes of the Baha'is of the world to this Congress where nearly a thousand people were present. I was the second speaker.

"The Baha'i Esperanto session at 10 A.M., August 10th, was very beautiful and the power of the Holy Spirit was in our midst. It was held in a Council Chamber of the great Parliament building. Twenty nations were represented. On the long table we had an exhibition of English and Esperanto to Baha'i books, with the Esslemont book in many languages. We had a rich, soft-toned silk cover on the table, and the books were placed upon it. Dr. and Mrs. Grossmann of Germany and the American N. S. A. had sent us Esperanto booklets and La Nova Tago to give to the guests. Miss Alma Zetterlund, Baha'i and Esperantist of Stockholm, presided. She spoke of the need of the renewal of religion and outlined the Baha'i principles. I spoke next, explaining what is a Baha'i, the beauty of the inner Teachings for spiritual evolution, and the Administration. . . . Lidja Zamenhof spoke last and as one inspired. Her talk was much applauded and was praised in the press.

"Then, on August 11, in the closing session of the Congress, I again had opportunity to give a brief resume of the success of the Baha'i session. This has never happened in any previous Esperanto Congress. . . . "The Twenty-seventh Annual Esperanto Congress will be held at Rome in August, 1935, and they plan a kind of tour through Italy. I pray very much that some Baha'is in all countries will train themselves to speak Esperanto courageously, correctly, fluently, and that they will take their places on the international committees. There is opportunity to bring the Baha'i Cause to many thousands of Esperantists."

MARION JACK IN SOFIA

A Spiritual Assembly has been constituted in Sofia, the first Assembly in the Balkan States of Europe. This is surely a most important achievement, in view of the prevailing social disturbance throughout that continent. Miss Jack writes that the card list of interested people has about 150 names. 'It is thrilling to meet so many receptive people as we have here in Bulgaria. How we could do with half a dozen teachers!'"
LOUISE GREGORY IN BELGRADE, JUGOSLAVIA

In two letters this devoted servant of Bahá’u’lláh has shared the news of her teaching activities since the Convention.

“I am writing a few lines just to tell you that I am very hopeful now about the work at Belgrade since recently meeting two very receptive souls who seem ready to become believers. One is a spiritually minded educator, the other a musician. The professor says that he will translate ‘The Goal of a New World Order’ into Serbian as a service to the Cause. . . . I have good news from Varna (where Mrs. Gregory formerly carried on her Bahá’í activity) that the students are continuing to meet and one of them teaches the Cause during vacations in his home town of Burgas. . . . There is much more that I can do here than at Varna, and up to recently this large country has scarcely had the Message, though Martha Root has for some years when passing through given a few talks. This last year she stayed more than once for over a month, and besides lecturing and meeting individuals she arranged for the translation and publication of Esslemont’s ‘Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era.’ Besides this we have a tiny pamphlet in Serbian which is a great help. The translator of the ‘New Era’ (Mme. Draga Iljié), has become a devoted believer. Unfortunately she is in the hospital and must have a serious operation. I should be so glad if the friends will pray for her. The work here depends so much on this dear and gifted spiritual sister.

“Things are progressing slowly but surely! Two people have declared themselves believers, both well educated and ardent to pass on to others what they know about the Cause. . . . Besides these, a number of poor Russian University students are getting interested in the Teachings by attending a free class I give them in the English language.

“If some capable and devoted workers could come over and help us our Guardian would be very happy. Both Marion Jack and I would be too delighted to give all necessary information to any Bahá’í teacher who finds it possible to come and stay some time in this country or in Bulgaria. The living costs are very low. Teachers who work well with student and youth groups would be particularly helpful.”

NEWS ITEMS FROM ASSEMBLIES NATIONAL COMMITTEES

News items intended for publication in Bahá’í News should preferably be prepared as separate articles and not included in letters, local bulletins or general reports.

With sixty local Spiritual Assemblies, and in addition an increasing number of National Committees, the task of preparing news items from the extensive material received by the National Spiritual Assembly is becoming difficult.

In preparing these items, effort should be made to keep them brief and also to include only such matters as are of sufficient interest and importance to be preserved in the national Bahá’í newspaper.

The work of selecting and preparing these local and Committee items, in fact, is in itself an excellent training for the publicity work which is becoming an important function of Bahá’í activity.

In days to come, Bahá’í News will appear as a weekly and eventually as a daily paper, but in these pioneer stages of our development the friends must attempt to visualize the relative importance of each event in terms of the present small and inadequate monthly news letter.

SPECIAL NOTICE

The National Assembly’s file of Bahá’í News lacks one copy—No. 39. If any local Assembly or individual believer can provide this missing number it will be greatly appreciated. Kindly address the National Secretary.

NEWS FROM AMERICAN COMMUNITIES

Spokane

On November 28, 1934, Orcella Rexford presented the Bahá’í Faith to an audience of about eight hundred gathered at the Masonic Temple. This great service to the Cause resulted in the formation of a teaching class of some two hundred interested people conducted by Louise Caswell.

The class has continued three times a week. The Spiritual Assembly is happy indeed to express its gratitude for the devoted services contributed by Orcella Rexford and Mrs. Caswell, and anticipates a large increase in the community as result.

One interesting incident reported was that a bronze medallion of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was brought to a meeting by a non-believer, who could not tell its origin or history.

Binghamton

On September 7 the Young People’s group conducted a pageant by Kenneth Christian depicting the early history of the Báb and His followers. The performance was impressive and inspiring.

Speakers from other cities who have addressed meetings at Binghamton this year are: Mary Hanford Ford, who on November 9 spoke on ‘The Prophets’ at Hotel Arlington; Charles Mason Remey, who spoke on ‘The Oneness of Mankind’ and also on ‘Architecture and Religion;’ and Dr. R. F. Piper of Syracuse University, whose subject was his recent visit to Haifa.

Meetings are held Friday evenings and Wednesday afternoons, the latter having given special study to the Guardian’s ‘World Order’ letters and to sections of ‘Some Answered Questions.’

The Assembly expresses appreciation of the assistance rendered by the National Publicity Committee.

Chicago

From reports of the Spiritual Assembly and of the Teaching Committee the following summary of activities and accomplishments has been prepared.

Wednesday noon lectures in October were delivered by Mabel Ives, and Dr. Ali Kuli Khan. Shahmar Waite’s series of lessons is used by the class meeting Wednesday afternoons, which enjoys them very much.

Three public lectures were delivered at Masonic Temple by Mme. Gita Orlova in October, who also spoke three times that month at the Bahá’í Center.

Fourteen group meetings and classes are held in Chicago and suburbs. Good contacts for Bahá’í speakers have been made with clubs and organizations, and in several cases club members have made special visits to the Temple in a group. A Temple model has been on display in a store window, where it has led to a large number of inquiries.

Including addresses given at the Temple, Mme. Orlova spoke at nine meetings arranged by the Chicago Assembly in October.
In November the Wednesday noon lectures were given by Howard Ives, Mabel Ives, Ruth Moffett and Dr. Zia Bagdadí. The series of Friday evening meetings were addressed by Shahnaz Waite and Philip Marangello. Numerous engagements were made for Mme. Orlova to speak before clubs and societies, and in addition Sarah Wal­rath addressed the Maywood Civic and Charity Club at the Temple, Albert Windust spoke at the Maude E. Smith Social and Charity Club, Mabel Ives addressed the members of the Wood­stock Woman's Club, Shahnaz Waite filled an engagement made with the Young Woman's Auxiliary of the Cicero Woman's Club, and Edna East­man spoke before the North Town Woman's Club.

On November 14 the Spiritual As­sembly reported the enrollment of seven new believers, and on February 6 it reported that twenty-four more new believers had been enrolled. This is impressive evidence of spiritual ca­pacity.

An interesting incident of Mme. Orlova's public teaching activities in Chicago is that her address on "Crashing Worlds" was published in the Oc­tober 26 issue of "The Executives' Club News."

Honolulu

A large increase has been made dur­ing recent months in the number of people attending the public meetings and study classes. The Spiritual As­sembly has been effectively assisted by Loulie A. Mathews, who has spent about two years in the city prior to her departure on a special teaching journey to South America.

San Francisco

From "San Francisco Bahá’í News" the following items are here reported for the information of the entire Bahá’í community.

Two new members were announced in the September bulletin. A picnic was held on Labor Day at the Shriner's Redwood Grove in the Santa Cruz Mountains, in development of the com­munity social life.

Home meetings have been held in the following homes: Marshall, Shaw, Smith and Burland. The programs are so planned that different ap­proaches are made possible, one meet­ing being an Esperanto class, one a study class for inquirers, another a class in Bahá’í administration.

Among speakers at the Sunday public meeting this year have been: Rus­sell B. Fitz Patrick, Leroy Ioas, Walter W. Kawecki, Mary Burland, Anthony Y. Seto, Mme. Gita Orlova, N. Forsyth Ward, H. Huribut, P. S. Jones, Katherine Frankland, Charlotte M. Linfoot, Mamie Seto.

A meeting to celebrate the anni­versary of the Master's arrival at San Francisco was held on October 3.

On November 11 an Inter-Assembly teaching conference was held at the Y. W. C. A. building, the agenda hav­ing two items: The nine teaching sug­gestions contained in the last Annual Report of the National Teaching Com­mittee; and discussion of these four subjects—Inter-Assembly Conferences every three months, true Bahá’í con­sultation, study of Bahá’í News, mis­cellaneous suggestions.

A list of places throughout Cali­fornia has been published where one or more believers reside, and all mem­bers of the San Francisco community who travel are requested to call on these isolated friends and if possible conduct a meeting. This excellent plan might well be followed by other As­semblies.

Los Angeles

Fifteen new enrollments have been reported by the Spiritual Assembly since October.

"Los Angeles Bahá’í News" is a very complete and well-arranged local bulletin. It quotes from recent letters from the Guardian, letters from the N. S. A., from special articles in the national BAHA'I News, and supplies the community with all announcements of meetings, guests from other cities, etc.

A recent issue reproduced an old record dated November 19, 1909 which established the first Bahá’í Assembly in that city: "The undersigned are hereby associated as members of the Los Angeles Bahá’í Assembly" for the purpose of promoting unity and har­mony; of spreading the teachings of the Bahá’í Revelation," etc. The first Executive Board of five members con­sisted of Chas. F. Haney, Thornton Chase, Rosa V. Winterburn, Henrietta C. Wagner and Nellie L. Phillips.

On September 10 the Assembly ac­cepted with gratitude Mrs. Shaﬀer's gift of an enlarged portrait of 'Abdu'l­Bahá.

Public meetings have been held Fri­day evenings, with addresses by the following teachers: Sara Witt, Dr. E. C. Getinger, Elmor Duckett, Willard Hatch, L. A. Whitmore, Margaret Campbell, Marion Holley, Beulah Lewis, Nellie S. French, Oni A. Finks, Vira Jewell Paxton and Shahnaz Waite.

A study class in "The Dawn-Break­ers" has been held Monday afternoons by Isobel Seifert, a children's class on Sundays by Miss Koch, a class on "The Inner Significations," by Mrs. E. Nickolson, an Esperanto class by Josephine Nelson.

A weekly course in Bahá’í adminis­tration has been carried out in twelve lessons, based upon a very complete outline which is recommended to the National Teaching or Outline Com­mittee. Other classes have been held by P. W. Howard, Miss Holroyd and Loa Shaﬀer. A Race Amity Con­ference was held on November 15.

From other sources it is learned that Mrs. Orol Platt, of the Los Angeles Bahá’í community, has for seventeen years been a most generous contributor to the Tarbiat Schools. The rug­weaving department was in fact named "Orol Loom Department" in her honor.

Clara Weir has continued her ac­tivity for World Friendship, repeating her "Pageant of Nations" under the auspices of a Masonic Lodge. 110 pub­lic school pupils took part, with an orchestra of forty pieces. The Pageant was rendered before an audience of about 3000 people. Miss Weir now plans another Pageant promoting the ideal of World Order.

CALL FOR GREEN ACRE WORKERS

Believers who desire to work at Green Acre next summer in exchange for board and lodging are requested to communicate with Miss Helen Campbell, 204 West 55th Street, New York City. Early action is advisable.

Sunday. Consultation with incoming National Spiritual Assembly.

Sunday afternoon. The business session will recess for the usual Public meeting. Program will be reported later.

THE ANNUAL BAHA’I CONVENTION

A Statement by the National Spiritual Assembly

(Approved by the Guardian)

Despite the repeated explanations given by the Guardian on this subject, there seems to exist each year, prior to and also during the Convention period, some misunderstanding as to the nature of the Annual Meeting.

In order to establish a definite standard of Convention procedure, the following statement has been approved and adopted, and in accordance with the vote taken by the National Assembly, a copy of the statement is placed in the hands of the presiding officer of the Convention to control the Convention procedure, after being read to the delegates by the officer of the National Spiritual Assembly by whom the Convention is convened.*

*The delegates present at this Annual Bahá’í Convention are called upon to render a unique, a vital service to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Their collective functions and responsibilities are not a matter of arbitrary opinion, but have been clearly described by the Guardian of the Cause. If civil governments have found it necessary to adopt the doctrine that ‘ignorance of the law is no excuse,’ how much more essential it is for Bahá’ís, individually and collectively, to base their responsible actions upon thorough comprehension of the fundamental principles which underlie that Administrative Order which in its maturity is destined to become the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

Considerable confusion would have been avoided at Conventions held during the past three years had the delegates, and all members of the National Spiritual Assembly itself, given sufficient consideration to the fact that Bahá’í News of February 1930, contained an explanation of the Annual Convention which had been prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly, submitted to Shoghi Effendi, and definitely approved by him. It is because this statement of four years ago has gone unnoticed that successive Con-and administrative principles. If, therefore, a Convention departs from the principles laid down for Conventions by the Guardian, and exceeds the limitations of function conferred upon it, in that case, and in that case alone, the National Spiritual Assembly can and must intervene. It is the National Spiritual Assembly, and not the Convention, which is authorized to decide when and why such intervention is required.

"8. The National Spiritual Assembly feels that it owes a real duty to the delegates, and to the entire body of believers, in presenting any and all facts that may be required in order to clarify matters discussed at the Convention. There can be no true Baha’i consultation at this important meeting if any incomplete or erroneous view should prevail.

"9. The National Assembly in adopting and issuing this statement, does so in the sincere effort to assure the constitutional freedom of the Convention to fulfill its high mission. The path of true freedom lies in knowing and obeying the general principles given to all Baha’is for the proper conduct of their collective affairs. "While the entire world plunges forward to destruction, it is the responsibility of the National Spiritual Assembly to uphold that Order on which peace and security solely depends."

Note — The following Reports have been prepared in brief and condensed form, for publication in advance of the Convention. The detailed facts and conditions can be presented by the representative of each Committee during the Convention sessions.

I. — Archives

The attention of the American believers is called to a statement contained in a letter written by the Guardian in 1929 to a member of the Committee on Editing Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Baha. This statement reads: "The work of collecting and publishing Tablets rests with the National Archives Committee, and over a period of more than twenty years the members of this Committee have persevered in their efforts to fulfill this responsibility. The task is still far from completion, however, and as a distinct aid toward its completion the Committee urges the adoption of this recommendation:—That the National Spiritual Assembly request each local community and group to appoint a Local Archives Committee, whose first duty shall be to cooperate with the National Archives Committee in the collections of Tablets and other records desirable for preservation in the National Archives.

In a supplementary report of this Committee published in the Baha’i News, No. 87, it was urged that each American Baha’i community found local archives for the preservation of the minutes and correspondence of the local Spiritual Assembly: records, photographs, newspaper clippings, et cetera, pertaining to the history of the Cause locally; and accurate individual records of all members of the local Baha’i community. A form for such an individual record has been prepared by the Committee and, through the Chicago Spiritual Assembly, has been presented to the National Spiritual Assembly for its approval. The above statements suggest additional important duties for local archives committees.

During the current year numerous Tablets have been received for preservation. Several communities and individuals have also forwarded letters from Shoghi Effendi. Among the Tablets received is a group of twenty-five originals with translations from the Master to Miss Sarah Farmer. Other materials received include a small collection of sacred relics which belonged to Dr. Susan I. Moody, and a collection of notes, correspondence, newspaper and magazine clippings and photographs which belonged to Keith Ransom-Kehler, which form an excellent record of her teaching activities. In behalf of the "Hosts of the Kingdom" of the future the Committee wishes to thank those who have so selflessly parted with their treasures in order that their preservation may be made more certain, and to express a peculiar appreciation for the services of those who have so graciously aided in collecting and forwarding material for the Archives.

2. — Bahá’í World

(FOR VOL. VI, 1934-1936)

The editorial staff for the Bahá’í World Vol. VI consists of six members including the chairman and secretary for the United States and Canada, with the foreign members from Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, France, Persia, India and Burma, Palestine, Egypt, Australia and New Zealand, ‘Iraq and the International member, Miss Root. These individuals aided by their respective National Spiritual Assemblies constitute what may be termed an International Network whose duty it is to watch and faithfully record the progress of the work of the Faith in all lands and to collect any and all data which may contribute to the enrichment and interest of the Bahá’í World.

The progress which may be noted from year to year as each new volume appears is an evidence of the unfolding of the Cause and the more able and exact method of compilation. Up to the present time the International Survey prepared in this country by Mr. Holley, the chairman, has been complete and accurate a resumé of international affairs as it was possible to make. Now however, the Guardian has signified his desire to have from each of the countries where National Spiritual Assemblies exist, a national survey which will appear irrespective of the general survey. These national reports are to be prepared by the members of the editorial staff with the approval of their National Assemblies and by the Guardian's explicit direction they are to be sent to the office of the secretary of the Committee in Pasadena and there prepared for submission to the Guardian. This arrangement has been undertaken in order that the Guardian may be spared all unnecessary labor in connection with the book.

Owing to the fact that Vol. V. was late in appearing the actual collection of material for Vol. VI has been somewhat delayed, but during the remaining months of this year those who are responsible for the material for Vol. VI are urged to prosecute their labors with the utmost zeal and to leave no stone unturned to produce a really thorough and complete record of the affairs of the Cause in every avenue.

Urgent letters have been sent to all the members of the staff, to the National Spiritual Assemblies and to each and every one of those teachers in distant fields whose experiences in presenting the Teachings must have resulted in interesting and valuable contacts.

All material for Vol. VI should be in the hands of the secretary of the committee not later than the end of December of this year.

If any of the friends at any time have any valuable information which may be of service to the committee will they please communicate at once with the chairman or the secretary.

3.—Braille Transcriptions

"O Thou tender Lord!—Cast Thy glance of favor toward us! Give light to the eyes, give hearing to the ears and understanding and love to the heart." (Prayer of 'Abdu’l-Bahá from Prayer Book).

The Committee on Braille Transcriptions consists of two eager, enthusiastic and helpful members and a chairman who for lack of time has had to depend on these two valuable assistants for the actual work of transcribing, for the tooling of a printed book into Braille is a long and laborious task which must be done with the greatest care and which really amounts to making a manuscript. As the Braille pages are thick sometimes a small printed book will take two or three volumes in Braille writing.

The committee on hearing of the desire of Mr. Harald Thilander in Sweden to have some of the Bahá’í writings in Braille, fell to work at once and completed the "Goal of a New World Order" and the "Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh" for him. These books were reviewed and bound by the Braille department of the Library of Congress and by the Director of that department forwarded to Mr. Thilander. Thus was a promise made by the chairman of the committee to Mr. Thilander last summer when in Stockholm fulfilled, and the letter of appreciation received in consequence is so sincerely grateful that the committee feels amply repaid for their efforts.

Some time ago a letter was received from the Guardian by the chairman in which he requested that a Braille copy of the "Book of Iqán" be sent to him. Steps were immediately taken to perform this beautiful service and at the present time the work is moving forward with what rapidity possible to insure a correct and beautiful manuscript. When completed this work will be proof read and suitably bound and sent at once to the Guardian.

The committee has under way also the transcription of the "Divine Philosophy" which we hope will be completed within a few weeks.

Although the results of our labors would at first glance seem somewhat limited, the many hands through which the books must pass in being proof read and bound brings to the eyes and fingers of many the Creative Word, and the committee feels that in establishing this relationship with Mr. Thilander who is himself blind, but who is the most important editor and owner of publications for the blind in Sweden, a great field of service has been discovered. An article describing Mr. Thilander and his wonderful work appeared in a recent number of the Bahá’í Magazine.

In submitting this report the committee desires to express its gratitude for the privilege accorded its members to serve the Cause in this way and only regrets that more of the friends, who may find active teaching work beyond their ability for one or another reason, have not arisen to assist.

4.—Central States Summer Schools

The fourth session of the Central States Summer School, June 25-July 8 inclusive, followed a different plan this year in that the youth group had a separate session by themselves preceding the general session. This idea really started with the young people themselves in the summer of 1933. Their joyous enthusiasm extended to June, and for four days, June 25-28 inclusive, they proved to the Bahá’í world that in the hands of tomorrow's adults lies a real gift to our beloved Cause.

The resident attendance of Bahá’í and non-Bahá’í youth students was forty, but approximately sixty actually contacted the teachings. The principles of Bahá’u’lláh were presented by Mr. Harlan Ober, and a lively forum period followed. Mr. Bishop Brown conducted a class in effective leadership; Mrs. Mary Hanford Ford gave an inspiring group of talks on the spiritual teachings; and our young people themselves added greatly to the program in the presentation of the history of religion by James McCormick and of stories from the Dawn-Breakers by Mary Maxwell. Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Mr. Stanley Mason acted as counsellors and advisors for the young people.

The committee feels that the importance of this definite beginning of a distinct youth conference cannot be overestimated. We pray that through the power of the Spirit its growth may be unbounded and its influence in establishing the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh unlimited.

Many young people remained through the general session which covered nine days, June 30-July 8. June 30 was registration day with a program of welcome, inspiration and fellowship in the evening, and on the remaining eight days a regular program was carried out. For the entire session 94 were registered and there was a total of 156 different souls in attendance.

Four courses were given besides the daily devotional period. These were; Bahá’í Administration, Bishop Brown; Marlan Ober; Dawn-Breakers, Mary Maxwell; Bahá’í Teachings in Daily Living, Mrs. Mary Hanford Ford; Bahá’í Teachings and the Bible, Mrs. Shahnaz Waite.

Each afternoon a public lecture was given. The evening programs were varied and required less concentration. Often there were stories of Akka, Haifa and the Master. Sometimes there was group singing. Two evenings directed by the young people were given over to Temple inspiration. All the courses were directly concerned with some aspect of the teachings and each course made its own especial appeal. Mrs. Waite gave us out of the abundance of her long years of study of the Bahá‘í Teachings and the Bible. Her lessons developed the great new Bahá‘í truths and shed light on the Bible. The daily living of a spiritual life seemed possible, necessary indeed, after listening to Mrs. Ford’s brilliant talks on Spiritual Freedom, Prayer, Servitude, Faith, Spiritual Healing and other subjects. She spoke from the fullness of her own experience. The early history of the Cause as told in the Dawn-Breakers took on new reality when presented by Mary Maxwell. No one listened unmoved to her inspired rehearsal of those early thrilling and sacred events and no one failed to feel an increased urge to live nobly for a Cause for which so many had died.

The interest in Bahá‘í Administration was marked. The well organized presentation of the subject by Mr. Brown and Mr. Ober appealed to all and the opportunity for questions and discussion seemed to satisfy a widely felt need and to indicate a growing consciousness that each individual is a member of and each local community a unit in Bahá‘í’úlláh’s World Order.

The committee feels that the interest in the summer school is increasing as its aims and opportunities become more widely known. It was suggested by some that two sessions, one in July and one in August, would be well attended. We are eager to expand and develop as fast as demand and funds warrant. We seek advice and suggestions.

5.—Contacts Committee

The work of the Contacts Committee has been carried on primarily to arouse an interest in the Bahá‘í Faith in prominent people of capacity. To that end letters have been written and literature sent, and the question asked whether the recipient would like to receive the bi-monthly Bulletin published by the National Spiritual Assembly. The replies indicate the number of people who responded, expressing a desire to have the Bulletin mailed to them. Through the efforts of the Committee, 66 new names have been added to the Bulletin mailing list this year.

The individuals approached are in almost all instances, nationally known figures in the educational, sociological, literary and lecture fields. Many of the responses have been intensely interesting, and have shown how general is the search for a solution of the difficulties confronting humanity today. When it is pointed out that men such as Horace Bridges, Graham Taylor, Howard Vincent O’Brien, and others of a similar stamp eagerly responded, it is clearly apparent that “the world is waiting.” Archie Bell, internationally known newspaper and magazine correspondent said, along with a request to have the Bulletin sent him: “I talked with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá several times in Tiberias in 1914.” Innumerable items like the above could be cited, did space permit. Suffice it to say that the work thus far done has merely scratched the surface. There is yet a great untouched area in this field. True, the ratio of actual responses is not great, but how are we to know that the seed dropped now may not take root when the soil has had a little more preparation?

A word of explanation as to how some of the names of those approached were culled might be interesting. Not having an extensive acquaintance among the important people of the land, a few of the members of the Committee resorted to the aid of “Who’s Who in America.” The biographies of the people listed in this book were studied and the names of those chosen whose education, occupation and achievements seemed to indicate that they might be responsive to the Bahá‘í Message. Personal letters were then written and literature sent, and further free copies of the Bulletin offered.

The total cost of this work has been $72.02. Of this sum the National Spiritual Assembly expended. . $49.52
One member expended from own funds $7.80
One member expended from own funds $14.70

Briefly 618 persons have been individually approached and supplied with literature, at a cost of $116/10 each.

We hope that this work can be carried on and that the results of succeeding years will far surpass our humble efforts.

Chairman.

6.—Editing Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

The editing committee for Volume IV of the Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá made their last report in September, 1934. That report covered the work of sorting, classifying, separating and the making of three copies of each of the 397 Tablets not already contained in the three previously printed volumes.

We wish now to supplement this report with the following:

One hundred and thirty-two more Tablets, also separated from much other material belonging to the Archives, classified and copied—three copies of each.

These are now filed alphabetically and returned to the Archives. We have found it necessary to go over the Tablets many times for different details which has made it slow and particular work, there have been unavoidable interruptions which have slowed it up considerably, and a great deal of additional work has been done in connection, difficult to describe.

We find many original Tablets which have no translations, and likewise some translations with no original Tablets.

Corinne True, Chairman
Gertrude Struven, Secretary

7.—Bahá‘í Magazine

(Editorial Committee)

It does not seem necessary to make a long report this year concerning the work of the editors of the Bahá‘í Magazine.

First and foremost, however brief...
the report, we wish to express deep gratitude for the bounty of being allowed to serve in this capacity.

Secondly, we feel grateful to the writers who have helped to make the magazine significant. Many letters have been received indicating great appreciation of the constant improvement in the style and literary quality of the magazine, as well as the character and interest of the articles published.

Every effort has been made by the editors to secure articles of a superior kind and of a nature to give diversity and broad scope to the magazine. A considerable number of articles by writers and scholars, not Bahá'ís, have been contributed and published. Numbers of people outside of the Cause have manifested great interest in the contents of the magazine as indicated by requests for a continuation of subscriptions by public libraries, as well as other libraries,—thus showing that the Bahá'í Teachings as set forth in this publication have been appreciated and found of sufficient interest to warrant reading the magazine. The Bahá'í Name and teachings have been widely spread through this magazine so that the Name—Bahá'í—has become more familiar to the reading public.

As usual the magazine has found a wide use as a teaching medium according to reports received, and has been more successfully used each year to interest new people.

We have been particularly grateful for the very valuable record of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's activities in this country as described in the anonymous series of articles published under the title Portals to Freedom. This we feel is not only a very inspiring human document but also a record which will be of inestimable value in the history of the Cause as time goes by.

Most valuable the past year, as in previous years, have been the generous efforts of Miss Martha Root in the matter of contributions to the magazine featuring important contents in many parts of the world; also, the valuable cooperation which she has given in the way of spreading the influence of the Bahá'í Magazine through the distribution of its issues in foreign countries among leading people, resulting, in many cases, in the translation into other languages and reprint of special articles from the magazine in newspapers and publications in other countries.

Many other writers whom we will not take the space here to mention, we wish to thank for their generous and much appreciated contributions.

The poetry submitted the past year has been of marked improvement over the past, showing a higher quality than at any previous time. The poems published during the year have added to the aesthetic and inspirational quality of the magazine.

As for the rest, the actual issues of the magazine—the twelve copies issued during the year—are their own record of the work accomplished.

We wish also to thank the friends who have cooperated through their generous orders for extra copies of various issues which they distributed in their teaching campaign for the Cause. This type of cooperation was very, very encouraging.

In conclusion may we state that our period of editorship has been characterized by a great happiness in this special form of service, and by a most gratifying experience of effective cooperation in the joint work in which the builders of each number took part, each individual in the Editorial Committee merged to form a successful whole.

We feel assured that the friends who have lent their generous efforts in the way of contributions to the Bahá'í Magazine (a great many of whom were trained into such ability during this period of ten years) will continue so to serve the new magazine, World Order, giving to this magazine the maturing fruits of their experience in the highly necessary and valuable work of presenting the Cause to the world through the printed page.

8.—Bahá'í Magazine
(Business Office)

This, our last report of the Bahá'í Magazine under the present management, does not cover the full year for the books were closed March 9 instead of the 30th, so there should be a larger number of renewals as March is renewal month; nevertheless we can report an increase in renewals over last year which, considering the state of the finances of the world, we feel is encouraging. The decrease in new subscriptions and bound volumes is also largely accounted for by world conditions as well as the fact that the believers have made such great sacrifices for the Temple. Our decrease in total receipts over last year is $355.55.

We are glad to state we have not had to ask for temporary advance payments from the National Spiritual Assembly. The support from the National Spiritual Assembly was the same as last year—$291.00 per month. We turned over our books to the new management with a bank balance of $541.40 on March 9.

It is our hope and belief that all those on our list of subscribers who have not yet renewed their subscriptions and many, many others will hasten to subscribe to the reorganized Bahá'í Magazine "World Order." Unexpired subscriptions will of course be filled with copies of "World Order" throughout the period covered by each subscription.

With every good wish for the success of the magazine in its new home,
MARGARET B. MCDANIEL,
Business Manager.

9.—Free Literature

The purpose of this Committee is the arrangement of a series of teaching pamphlets on different Bahá'í principles that will have a new and universal appeal to newly attracted people, and be a guide to a further study of the Cause. The teacher generally finds a seeker interested in some particular problem such as peace, education or the solution of the economic ills of the world and these teaching pamphlets are intended to attract the attention of the seeker to the specific subject in which he is concerned. Then other of the series can be presented to him showing the universal scope of the Cause.

The following manuscripts have been received by the Committee:

1. The Bahá'í House of Worship, by Dr. Genevieve L. Coy.
2. The Most Great Peace, by Marion Holley.
3. Homoculture—The Educational System of the Bahá'í World State, by Professor Stanwood Cobb.
5. Prophecy—Its Place in Religion and in History, by Howard R. Hulbert.
7. Thoughts for Creative Living—A Compilation by Mary Collison.
Manuscripts on The Oneness of Mankind by Doris McKay and The Power of Religion by Bishop Brown are under preparation.

The Committee suggests that when these articles are finally approved for publication that they will be published in a uniform size that will be the same as the new attractive catalogue of Bahá'í Literature. The committee recommends printing in large quantities so that the pamphlets can be sold in quantity lots at a reasonable price to aid in wide distribution. It is also recommended that the last page of these pamphlets include a short reference list of Bahá’í books and an address where further information may be obtained. It might be advisable to have a space for local Assemblies to stamp their address.

The Committee wishes to call attention to the fact that it is not a committee for the distribution of literature and has none on hand for such purposes. Such requests are referred to Publishing Committee in the usual way.

In closing, the Committee wishes to express its appreciation to the National Teaching Committee and to individual friends for their helpful suggestions in outlining this series. Likewise, our thanks is extended to the authors of the different manuscripts for their prompt response to requests for material and the skill with which they have handled the subject matter in concise form and the splendid presentations they have made of these vital Bahá’í principles.

George Latimer, Chairman
Louise Caswell

10.—Green Acre Summer School

The Green Acre Summer School for the 1934 season began its organized courses on Monday, July 9th, and courses continued in session five mornings a week for seven weeks. It was necessary to make a few changes in the personnel of the teaching staff, as advertised in the Program of Courses and in the Bahá’í News. These changes were as follows: the classes for the second week were taught by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf, Bahá’íeh Lindstrom and Genevieve Coy, instead of all being given by Mrs. Lindstrom; Mr. Saffa Kinney was unable to be at Green Acre to give a course of evening lectures during the week of July 16th; the Bahá’í Faith. The third week consisted of five lectures given by Miss Mary Maxwell on Nabi’s Narrative: the Dawn Breakers. In this series, Miss Maxwell narrated the story of all the important happenings in the life of the Bib and His followers, and thus gave a most dramatic and inspiring review of this remarkable book. It seems certain that no person who had not previously read the Dawn Breakers could have heard these lectures without making a resolve to immediately begin to read the whole Narrative.

During the fourth week Dr. Ali Kuli Khan gave a series of lectures on some of the Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh, which are most difficult for the Occidental Bahá’ís to understand. He explained much of the Persian symbolism used, corrected some mis-translations, and added greatly to our spiritual appreciation of these majestic Tablets. The following Tablets were discussed by Dr. Khan during this week: The Tablet of the Virgin; the Tablet of the Holy Mariner; the Tablet of Wisdom; The Discourse on the Temple; The Seven Valleys; The Four Valleys.

The topic of the fifth week’s course was “How can the individual meet the spiritual conflicts of the modern world?” with Dr. Genevieve Coy as leader of discussion. The purpose of this course was to aid Bahá’ís in meeting some of the spiritual conflicts within their own lives, and also to provide means of greater understanding of the spiritual problems one meets in teaching the Bahá’í Faith.

The sixth course, taught by Mr. David Hofman, was entitled “Proposed Solutions of the Economic Problem compared with the Bahá’í Economic Program.” In clear and simple language which could be understood by the listener with no background of study of Economics, Mr. Hofman presented the basic ideas involved in Technocracy, Communism, Capitalism, etc. The course was concluded by a discussion of the economic provisions of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, and showed in what ways the Bahá’í Program provides strength at points in which the other solutions were weak.

During the seventh week of the Summer School Mr. Horace Holley presented important points concerning

“The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.” In a twenty minute introductory talk each day, Mr. Holley discussed ways in which the individual Bahá’í may most usefully relate his life to the World Order. This talk was followed by readings from the World Order Letters of Shoghi Effendi. The morning’s session was concluded by a round table discussion of points related to the Introductory talk and the readings. This course drew a large audience, who were very appreciative of Mr. Holley’s stimulating presentation of both the material and spiritual aspects of our participation in the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

The average attendance for each week of the Summer School, together with the number of different individuals present each week, is shown in the following table:

11.—History

Three week-end Conferences were from the Assemblies collectively and from the Friends individually, data necessary for the compilation of this history.

It is hoped that mention of this work will be made in the coming Annual Bahá’í Convention in the hope of stimulating the Friends toward sending in to the committee this needed Bahá’í Historical Data. The work of compilation cannot go very far until all the data is in hand.

12. _Index_

At the last national convention, Mr. J. V. Matteson made a stirring appeal—one overflowing with the true spirit of the faith when he suggested an index committee be appointed. It is a keen disappointment not to be able to carry out the great community work which was then suggested but when we, as a committee, studied our problem we found the actual work of indexing or cataloguing was one for trained workers in this field if the result of these labors was to be such as to please the Guardian by its high quality and accuracy as well as stand favorable comparison with the work of the libraries of our country.

Three members of our committee are untrained in library science and we learned that indexing is very detailed work but in the teachings of our Faith. We have also attempted to discover what work has been done or could almost compare technical cataloguing with what laymen term carelessness. Perhaps one could almost compare technical cataloguing with what laymen term careful indexing.)

Cataloguing Bahá'í literature needs those trained not only in a technical way but in the teachings of our Faith. This is illustrated by the mistakes on the cards prepared by experts of the Library of Congress and sent out to the libraries in our country. It is also illustrated by the need of a technical terminology which can only be developed by experts who are well versed in the Cause.

This committee has therefore endeavored to compile a list of trained cataloguers and indexers among the Bahá'ís. We have also attempted to discover what work has been done or is being done at this time in cataloguing and indexing. We find that there are many workers and that at the present time there is an index or catalogue of the Bahá'í News Letters compiled by Mrs. Holley and by Mrs. Stebbins and Isabelle Stebbins, The Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá (Vol. 1-3 incl.) compiled by Lucy Heist as well as one by O. D. Wolcott, The Bahá'í Administration and National By Laws (Vol. of 1928) compiled both by A. G. Tichnor and Lucy Heist. The Bahá'í World (Vol. 1-4 incl.) compiled by Mrs. Stebbins, and the Kitáb-i-Iqán (Shoghi Effendi's translation) compiled by Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Clark. "The Goal of New World Order" was condensed by Lucy Heist.

The committee, after consultation with the National Spiritual Assembly, suggest for cataloguing a list of books which by authorship and translation may be considered authentic viz: Bahá'í Administration (new edition). The letters of Shoghi Effendi, the Kitáb-i-Iqán (Shoghi Effendi's translations), Hidden Words (Shoghi Effendi's translation), Some Answered Questions, The Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Divine Philosophy, Epistle to the Sons of the Wolf, Promotion of Universal Peace (Vol. 1 and 2), The Tablets of Bahá'ú'lláh. By comparing the two lists you see how much has been accomplished.

The committee is grateful to the National Spiritual Assembly for its loving co-operation also to all those assemblies and individuals who have written the information desired.

'Abdu'l-Bahá said "I ask God to strengthen His firm beloved in a great service and sufficient endeavor.

The following list is the result of the committee's efforts:

13. _Legal_

The Legal Committee submits the following report of its activities for the current Bahá'í year:

1. _Indentures._

The Indenture conveying the valuable West Englewood property upon which the National Bahá'í headquarters are situated as well as the parcel of land in the grove where 'Abdu'l-Bahá held his memorable Unity Feast in 1912, from Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm to Trustees for the National Spiritual Assembly, has been completed and executed.

The Indenture conveying to Trustees for the National Spiritual Assembly the former home of the late Maria P. Wilson in Malden, Mass., which the Master blessed by living there for some time, in 1912, has been completed and forwarded to Shoghi Effendi for his signature, which will complete the transfer from the Guardian, the original devisee in Miss Wilson's will.

The Indenture of the Bosch property at Geyersville, California, upon which the Pacific Coast Bahá'í Summer School has been held for the last eight years, is in the final stages of completion and this generous gift of John and Louise Bosch to Trustees for the National Spiritual Assembly has been executed.

2. _Incorporations of Local Spiritual Assemblies._

The Montreal, Washington and Milwaukee Assemblies have drawn up incorporation papers according to the form recommended by the National Spiritual Assembly and will be passed upon as soon as some legal points affected by certain provisions of the various State codes have been cleared up by our attorney. The Montreal Incorporation has been approved.

In view of the fact that the laws of the different states affecting religious corporations vary widely, the local assemblies are again reminded of the decision that they are to submit to the National Assembly for final approval their plans for local incorporation before the legal action is consummated.

3. _By-Law Changes and Interpretations._

The friends are again reminded of the following amendments to the By-Laws adopted April 1415, 1934, and to make notation of such changes in their copy of By-Laws:

Art. VIII, Sec. 7, add the words "by ballot" between "electing" and "a presiding officer."

Art. VII, Sec. 12. Delete present section 12 and change number of section 13 to section 12.

Interpretation by N. S. A. Of Art. VII, Sec. 12 on residential qualification of voting believers: First, that when a member or officer of a local Spiritual Assembly cannot function for an indefinite period, and there is no certainty of return to service, the Assembly should recognize the vacancy and arrange a meeting of the community to elect a new member; and Second, that the requirements of residence as one of the qualifications of a voting believer should be based upon definite proof of capacity to associate with the Bahá'í community. This means that a voting Bahá'í is not considered a resident of the local community merely through ownership of property or through paying rent, but solely by reason of actual ability to attend meetings in person.

4. _Bequests._

A new form of bequest is being prepared so that if the friends wish, they may leave a legacy in proper form to the Cause. This past year bequests have been left to the Cause by Mrs. Agnes S. Parsons, Mrs. Mary Harriman Rudd, Madame Frida Stjernqvist and Doctor Susan Moody. According to Bahá'í law it is incumbent upon every Bahá'í to make a Will.
5. The Greatest Name.
The symbol of the Greatest Name is now legally protected for proper use under trade mark registration recently made by the National Assembly through the U. S. Patent Office. Action has also been taken to obtain similar protection in Canada. The National Assembly has limited this use to books and pamphlets containing the words of Bahá'u'lláh. The word "Bahá'í" was legally protected several years ago.

6. Temple Property.
A suit brought by the State's Attorney of Cook County to assess taxes on the Temple property last October has apparently been dismissed after attention was called to the fact that the property was exempted from assessments for taxation by the Board of Review in September, 1924.

Plans are being made to obtain a new statute from the Illinois legislature that will conform to the Bahá'í administrative organization which will retain the religious feature absent in its non-profit sharing code and which will incorporate the Spiritual Assembly of nine rather than the community.

8. Palestine Branch of N. S. A.
Deeds transferring several parcels of land in Haifa to the Palestine Branch of the National Spiritual Assembly have been received from the Guardian. Several American believers are taking steps to transfer their Mt. Carmel land to the Palestine Branch. According to Ottoman law which still persists in Palestine a foreigner cannot dispose of his land after passing in accordance with his wishes as embodied in a Will. The property will pass to a special class of heirs.

14. Library
The plans for continuing the activities for Public Library contacts were not developed until September, 1934. Then a letter was formulated stating these plans and was published in the November 1934 News Letter.

It requested each Local Assembly to make a follow up contact with their respective Public Library to whom they had previously presented Bahá'í Literature, and offer them Bahá'í World Vol. IV, so that they might have a consecutive record of Bahá'í international progress. If any library wished additional literature, the Library Division would provide Some Answered Questions. An appeal was made to all to patronize the Public Library, which was to maintain and increase the interest of the librarians in the literature. Another statement was published in the January 1935 issue of the News Letter, requesting every believer to inform all their acquaintances and as many other people as possible, that the local Public Library had a selection of Bahá'í Literature. It also requested each Local Assembly to donate to their respective Public Library, if possible, the two outstanding new books, Security for a Failing World, by Dr. Stanwood Cobb, and The Promise of All Ages, by Christophel.

The cooperation of the Local Assemblies and the friends in carrying out these plans has been greatly appreciated and the results have been most successful for the short period of time.

During the 4 months from November until March, 26 libraries have been contacted. This includes 3 university libraries, 1 Theosophical Library, 1 Y. M. C. A., and 1 Y. W. C. A. libraries.

The Library Division has donated 121 books; this includes 11 Bahá'í World Vol. IV and Some Answered Questions, the two follow up donations.

Up to date 5 Local Assemblies have presented to their public libraries, 6 copies of Security for a Failing World, and 4 of The Promise of All Ages.

The Library Division has had two generous donations given them this year. A gift of $25 worth of literature from Mrs. Marion Little, and 37 copies of Bahá'í World Vol IV from the National Spiritual Assembly, which had been presented to them by the Poona Assembly for distribution in America.

The Library Division wishes to take this opportunity to request all Local Assemblies, who have not already sent in a list of the Bahá'í Literature catalogued in their respective public libraries to kindly do so, and to offer to present them the additional books the Library Division has at its disposal to donate. One of the important objectives of this work is to keep the library files and records as completely up to date as possible.

Martha Woodsum.

15. Publicity
The work of the National Publicity Committee since June has been, for the most part, a continuation of that begun last year. It includes the file of clippings and magazine references to the Cause, distribution of summaries of the Bahá'í Faith and our Bulletin No. 1 on News Writing, publicity comments and instructions in the News Letter, occasional news releases.

A noticeable trend of the year is the shifting of the output of publicity articles from the national to the local publicity committees. The reasons for this are as follows: 1. Need for economy of the national funds. 2. The local center is the true hotspot for news that is timely. 3. For years the national publicity has held as its chief aim the training of the local centers to expert news work. This year has therefore been a test of the initiative of the local publicity committees.

We submit the following new developments in the work of the committee:

1. We have begun a compilation of material relating to radio broadcasting. For this we have invited all the Bahá'ís to share with us their radio experience.

2. Mats are available for line drawings of the House of Worship, picture of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, memorial for Keith Ransom-Kehler designed by Mr. Myron Potter.

4. We have a news file of publicity information about approximately sixty Bahá'í teachers.

16. Publishing
The Publishing Committee, the one business organization of the Cause, necessarily presents a practical business report. But we must stress the spiritual side of our work, for what is more important for the growth of the Cause, than to have its literature made available to all the people of the world; a people waiting hungrily for inspiration to carry on amidst these chaotic, present day conditions and who will find in the words of Bahá'u'lláh, hope for the new era.

The law of balance has been kept, inasmuch as we have met obligations when due and have made payments to the N.S.A. materially decreasing our indebtedness, incurred by heavy expenditures for publishing The Dawn-Breakers and the Bahá'í World. Since December 1930, we have paid to the N.S.A. in cash and books, $11,720.29. The books are supplied for the various Committees on their budgets and are charged at cost always.
The sale of books has kept up consistently this year. The response to our special offer of Baha’i World IV for $1.00 for three months ending December 31, 1934 was most gratifying. We assure the Assemblies and friends individually who made these purchases that by this generous cooperation, they have contributed most effectively to the teaching activities of the Cause.

For the ten months ending February 28, 1935, the Publishing Committee has distributed: 8241 books
38960 pamphlets
1452 outlines

Let us more than double that number next year.

In addition to this distribution, books have been sent at various times to the leading newspapers for review purposes and some very good notices have been received, not enough of course but that is a phase of our work which must be developed.

The Dawn-Breakers: Sales to date,
Standard edition, 1302 copies Limited edition 127 “ leaving to be sold, 698 copies

the proceeds will pay balance due the N.S.A. for cash advanced for manufacturing and give a good surplus which will go direct to the National Fund.

The progress of the Western Division is most satisfactory and the Publishing Committee feels that Western States Assemblies and friends are deeply indebted to Mrs. Smith’s wonderful services given so generously and done with a maximum of efficiency. The saving of time and postage is one important factor; surely releasing both energy and cash for other work in the Cause.

At the risk of many times repeating ourselves, we will re-iterate a few suggestions to promote helpful cooperation between the Assemblies and the Committee:

1—We have issued a new catalog this Spring. Please keep it on file for ready reference. Postcards will be mailed at intervals giving new titles as published and these should be filed with catalog.

2—Watch for Publishing Committee announcements in Baha’i News of new publications, etc. File with catalog for reference.

3—Note that Voice Records, Photographs, Temple postcards, etc., are not carried by the Publishing Committee but are on sale at the Temple, Harry E. Walrath, Librarian, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Illinois.

4—Discount of 33 1/3% from list prices is allowed to local Assemblies. Books should be sold always at list price, the profit enabling the Assemblies to have a reserve fund for overhead expenses, donations to National Fund, etc. Discount of 10% is allowed to Groups and individuals on books purchased in quantity amounting to $10.00 or over.

5—The Publishing Committee has no authority to distribute free literature for Amity, Contact, Library or Teaching Committees except when ordered by the Secretary of those Committees. Therefore the friends who need literature for any special Baha’i work should write to the Secretary of whichever Committee is doing that particular work.

6—Do not return books without consulting the Publishing Committee. It often saves expense and wear and tear on books to have them delivered to a nearby Center when for some unexpected reason, they cannot be used by the purchaser. A damaged or imperfect book should of course be returned for replacement.

7—We urge the local Assemblies to keep at least one copy of each title of Baha’i Literature on file in their library for reference and to show prospective purchasers.

8—We are glad to extend credit to Assemblies for book purchases but with the understanding that bills must be paid within 30 days. The Committee is not authorized to extend credit to individuals.

9—Again we say there is no more important work than the distribution of Baha’i Literature and we ask everyone to bring the books to the attention of all who are seeking “The Glad Tidings” of Baha’u’llah.

17. — Race Amity

The complexity of the racial situation in America makes the work of building race amity one of delicacy and difficulty that challenges constant effort and the best resources of minds and hearts. The status of the colored race the country over, with marked varieties of degree, is that of an under-privileged and minority group, whose attainment of rights, which theoretically belong to all Americans and whose progress economically, socially, morally and spiritually, is very largely dependent upon the attitude of their neighbors of the majority group.

That the general awakening of the world has favorably affected this problem; that spiritual powers have play, that substantial progress has been made, nothing short of morbid pessimism can deny. The resources of government, education, philanthropy, business and religion have unfolded plans in the effort to bind the breaches among peoples. Yet with rare exceptions even the most active and sincere, unless aided by the Divine Revelation of Today, are veiled by shadows of the past and present. And even among the favored few, tests are many and severe, making a constant demand for faith, fidelity, intelligence, broad-mindedness, courage, love, patience, prayerfulness and Guidance.

The past year has been one of unusual difficulties, despite which progress has been made and constructive ideas brought into action. We are thankful for all gain.

Upon the loss side of the ledger and grievous to bear was the passing of our noble brother, Mr. Hooper Harris. A profound student of the teachings, an authority on Bible prophecies, a clear and forceful speaker, a mind broadened by teaching experiences in the Orient as well as the Occident, a heart enriched by hard knocks, struggles, poverty and the sacrifices of years, at the very end of his career he for the first time became a member of this committee in whose work he always showed interest and which he often helped. During his all too brief connection and just before answering the great call, he sent a letter to his co-workers, extracts from which may well serve to illustrate his clear vision and sincerity of purpose:

"I feel that for many reasons the most vital question in America today is how can we establish harmonious and mutually cooperative relations between the black and white races? How can they be brought together in unity and love, so that each race will willingly, joyfully, work for the welfare of both. Such free and open discussion as you suggest at Green Acre may be the first step in bringing this about."

The annual conference at Green Acre was of unusually high order and our noble brother, Mr. Hooper Harris, for the first time became a member of this committee in whose work he always showed interest and which he often helped.

The following manuscripts have this year been approved from the above quoted points of determination:

Homoculture—The Educational System of the Bahá’í World State—by Stanwood Cobb. (A pamphlet).

The Most Great Peace, by Marion Holley. (A pamphlet).

Compilation On Racial Amity, by Maye Harvey Gift and Alice Cox.

The Reviewing and Editorial Committee also dealt with and approved a number of manuscripts sent in either not intended for publication by the Publishing Committee or not adapted to such publication. The Committee considered such manuscripts merely from the point of view of accuracy in relation to the Teachings, and among these were:

Thoughts For Creative Living, by Mary Collison. (A compilation).

Mahmood’s Diary—edited by Christine Lofstedd.

Two Shall Appear, by Olivia Kelsey. (A Play).

Study Guide to Dawn-Breakers in Continuity, by Emma F. Smith.

Toward World Unification, by Willard P. Hatch. (An article).

Will There Ever Be a Universal Religion? by Willard P. Hatch.
19.—Study Outline

The study outline committee has during the past winter compiled a study course of twenty lessons on Bahá'í Administration, intended for use by voting members of Bahá'í communities.

The committee hopes this course will be available to the friends through the Publishing Committee at an early date.

Mary Collison, Chairman

20. — Temple Program

The National Program Committee of the Bahá'í House of Worship wishes to inform the friends of the work done during the past year in connection with the conducting of public meetings in Foundation Hall of the Bahá'í House of Worship.

It was brought to the attention of this committee by the National Spiritual Assembly that in preparing the programs, it should be borne in mind that Foundation Hall represented a national Bahá'í meeting place possessing a more sacred and significant character than any of the halls or rooms at present rented by local assemblies for public teaching programs. Also that all meetings should be conducted consistent with the dignity of the Bahá'í House of Worship.

Public meetings are held every Sunday at 3:30 P. M. The average attendance at these meetings is approximately 175, mostly strangers. The local speakers have been:

Dr. Zia Bagdadi, Mrs. Howard Ives, Mr. Howard Ives, Mr. Philip Marangella, Mr. Carl Scheffler, Mrs. Corinne True, Mrs. Sarah Walrath, Mr. Albert Windust.

Our visiting speakers were:

Miss Fanny Knobloch, Dr. E. Lenore Morris, Madame Barry Orlova, Dr. Ali Kuli Khan, Mrs. Shahnaz Waite.

A new procedure is being tried out for the Sunday lectures which is that speakers be assigned subjects following in sequence, so as to give strangers coming to the Temple Sunday after Sunday a broader and fuller scope of the Bahá'í Teachings.

A series of special week-day evening meetings was held during December and January with Madame Orlova as the guest speaker.

Special meetings observing the "Holy Days" of the Bahá'í Year were held; Chicago, Evanston and Wilmette Assemblies alternating in collaboration with the Temple Program Committee in arranging the spiritual program and in preparing the material feast when the occasion demanded it.

At the request of Shoghi Effendi, a memorial service was held at the Bahá'í House of Worship in commemoration of the passing of Dr. Susan L. Moody, one of the pioneers of the Bahá'í Faith. The Chicago Spiritual Assembly was asked to assist the Temple Program Committee in preparing the program for this memorial, as much as Chicago was originally the home of Dr. Moody.

This committee requested that the pamphlet "The World Religion," by Shoghi Effendi be printed for free distribution at the Bahá'í House of Worship, in addition to the pamphlet "The Temple of Light" which is now being used. The National Spiritual Assembly authorized the Publishing Committee to send us 2,000 copies of the "World Religion," which were received, and stated that we might have 10,000 copies printed at a later date when the National Fund has a surplus over current liabilities. The present supply of our literature is just about exhausted and the curtailment of funds has made this committee reluctant to distribute it as freely as we should like. May we take this opportunity to inform the friends that there is a crying need for free literature at the Temple as a very important teaching service, and may we suggest that you bear this in mind when making your contribution to the National Fund, which is the source of our supply of free literature.

Visitors coming daily to see the Temple, totaling approximately 12,000 in 1934, were conducted through the building, questions answered, etc., by guides, arranged for by this committee working in conjunction with Mrs. True: chairman of the guides.

Many special tours of the Temple by clubs were made during the past year. Arrangements were made for speakers to be present who conducted these tours through the building and gave a talk on the Bahá'í Faith. Many questions were asked and answered. These clubs represented people from many walks of life, and from many parts of Chicago and surrounding area.

The total number of persons was approximately 1,130 from the following clubs:

Lourdes' Women's Club, Wilmette Woman's Club, Irving Park Woman's Club, Niles Center Woman's Club, Oak Park Woman's Club, Prairie Club, Chicago Geographical Society, Second Presbyterian Church of Evanston, Norwood Park Club, Quarter Century Industrial Art Club, Kenmore Woman's Club, Eleanor Club, Wilmette Congregational Church, Evanston Methodist Church, Woman's Club of the Evanston Congregational Church.

It was indeed, a privilege to serve on this committee.

21.—Bahá'í Youth

As we approach the end of the second year of Youth Committee existence, we find ourselves with certain definite accomplishments, certain aims, and problems of philosophy and technique.

Since the Committee's inception in 1933, communication has been established with nineteen international groups representing fifteen nations, and with fifty-three local groups. These do not, however, adequately represent the youth groups of the world.

The activity this year has been along established channels. Bulletin No. 1, mailed to 150 addresses, was followed by Bulletin No. 2, with a mailing list of 350. This increase represents a body of 200 young people, between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one, for whom the second Bulletin was designed. A third Bulletin is now in preparation, to be issued before the Summer School sessions. The Committee recommends these publications to every local Assembly, for each carries material invaluable in the formation and planning of youth groups.

The Committee has also prepared two open letters to young Bahá'ís, one was published in the November News, and a series of concise outline on modern subjects with references, suitable for groups in search of a changing program. These will appear monthly in the Bahá'í News. It is interesting that every issue of the News Letter this year (No. 84-90) has carried some reference to or article by the Youth Committee.

Other matters include a study of the suggestion for a Children's Bank, and plans for the Green Acre Youth Conference and the Convention meeting.

We turn now to projects for the future. The N. S. A.'s decision that youth of sixteen to twenty-one may declare their interest in the Cause and attend Nineteen-Day Feasts makes the education of this age-group a paramount concern.

A second matter is that of world peace. By proper presentation of the Baha’i attitude, many young people who are devoting themselves to this issue could be attracted to the Cause. The consolidation of all young Baha’is is also demanded, in order that they shall not be caught in the maelstrom of popular fury in the event of war.

Thirdly, a plan for the adequate handling of correspondence with national and international Baha’i youth groups and individuals is imperative, and the Committee has worked out several possibilities.

Fourthly, no effective use has yet been made of the youth section of the Herald of the South. Here is a medium open to our younger writers, which is especially significant until the establishment of an American magazine. Local Assemblies by subscription can help to make this magazine accessible to their youth groups.

A fifth suggestion is the setting aside of the responsibility laid upon American the International youth rally.

At present, several problems of policy confront us, foremost of which is the responsibility laid upon American youth to create “an international body of active young Baha’i men and women. . . .” This the greatest challenge to our creativity. Then there is the need for fuller integration of American youth groups, both with the National Committee and with each other. Only by an intimate relationship can an effective service be rendered by the Committee.

Lastly, we must all join to clarify, ever more completely, methods for drawing our ideals into common use. Ours is the challenge of self-defeat. For as we gain maturity, as we enable our actions and approach the standard of earnest service to Baha’u’llah, we shall become less youth, more citizens of the Baha’i Order.

22.—Green Acre Trustees

The Green Acre Summer School of 1934 was carried on under the direct supervision of the Committee consisting of Dr. Genevieve Coy, Chairman; Professor Gleen L. Shook, Mrs. Coristine, in accordance with the policy established some years previously by the National Spiritual Assembly to develop Green Acre as a teaching and training center for the believers of the Cause. It was believed that this season established a high-water mark of interest, enthusiasm and attendance.

Special teaching and racial amity conferences were held during August and the meetings were well attended. Outside speakers aroused much enthusiasm and valuable contacts were made with the churches at Portsmouth, N. H.

Miss Helen Campbell operated the Inn and cottages during the season and had the assistance of an expert dietician in the preparation and serving of the meals. During the early part of the season, the number of people living at the Inn were relatively small but as the season progressed the number increased and during weekend it became necessary to turn people away. It is hoped that arrangements can be satisfactorily made for the season of 1935 so that rooms may be provided either at the Tea House or Fellowship House to take care of these over-flow conditions.

We are pleased to report that Miss Campbell was about able to break even financially at the end of the season. It should be noted that at the beginning of the season it was necessary to purchase additional dishes and kitchen equipment in order to operate the kitchen and dining room on an efficient and satisfactory basis.

The caretaker, Mr. Bert Hagadorn, has been continued during the year on the same basis as previously; namely full time service but at a lower rate than in previous years. During the fall, winter and spring, Mr. Hagadorn, under Mrs. Flynn’s direct supervision, has made a large number of repairs and improvements to the various buildings and utilities. Such repairs are required each year in order to keep the buildings in proper physical condition and to take care of depreciation and obsolescence.

At a meeting in September the Trustees appointed Mrs. Emma D. Flynn as supervisor of the Green Acre properties with the function of supervising the caretaker’s work and making all necessary local expenditures.

Arrangements have been made with Miss Campbell to serve as manager of the Inn and cottages for the season 1935 and to have the assistance of Miss Thomen as dietician. The rates for room and board to believers will be maintained at a slightly higher scale than last year which makes it possible for all to receive the benefits of Green Acre at exceptionally reasonable rates.

Upon the recommendation of Mrs. Flynn arrangements are to be made for having available a rentable cottage on the property near the old barn which was formerly used as a theater. This cottage will be constructed from the two small camps on the property adjacent to the Pines.

It is hoped that the 1935 season at Green Acre will attract a very large number of believers to partake of the spiritual bounty that will be offered by the very attractive program that has been arranged. This program is outlined in the March 1935 issue of Baha’i News.

ALENN MCDANIEL, Chairman

23.—Temple Trustees

The believers throughout America will recall the statement made at the 26th Annual Convention held in the Temple Foundation Hall the early part of June, 1934, concerning the action taken by your Temple Trustees on January 27, entering into a contract with Mr. John J. Earley, of Washington, D. C., for the preparation and erection of the ornamentation of the clerestory section of the Temple. Many will recall that it was explained at this Annual Convention after investigation with Mr. Earley that the clerestory or drum should be considered a part of the dome ornamentation. In the original estimate made by the Earley Studio, the curved part of the dome was figured independent of the 19-ft. drum, and it was originally planned to construct this ornamentation in two separate steps. Subsequently, during the ornamentation of the dome in the summer of 1933, it was found desirable from a construction and economic considerations to carry the ribs down to the floor of the second gallery or base of the clerestory or drum. In consultation with the Guardian concerning the desirability of proceeding with the clerestory ornamentation, the action of January 27, 1934, was taken upon receipt of the following cablegram:

"Heartily welcome proposal additional self-sacrifices entailed clerestory ornamentation. Will add further laurels to crown already won American believers and extend fulfillment long cherished expectations."

The preparation of the clerestory ornamentation involving the making of the necessary structural layout and plans, the preparation of the clay models and the subsequent pluster of Paris models and molds was begun early in March, 1934.

The work of the clerestory ornamentation proceeded on an efficient and economical basis at the Rosslyn, Virginia, plant during the spring and summer of 1934. On May 22, the first carload of 97 casts of the various elements of the ornamentation, including panels, brackets, modillions and arches were shipped from the Virginia plant to the Temple. During the latter part of June the second carload containing 21 casts, including 14 arches and 7 brackets, was shipped to the Temple. During this same month the erection or placement of the ornamentation was begun at the Temple.

During the month of July the work at the Rosslyn, Virginia, plant was delayed for a period of about 3 weeks due to the strike of the plasterers' union in that city. Fortunately for our work the strike was settled without any increase in wages or costs of the craftsmen employed by Mr. Earley.

During the summer, fall and early winter months, the work proceeded at the Rosslyn, Virginia, plant and at the Temple, without any further delays or interruptions until the severe low temperature conditions required the cessation of the work at the Temple about the middle of December, 1934. During the second week of December, the molds for one section of the cornice or cresting were set in place and the concrete poured. The work was protected and heated but the wind conditions were so severe that it was found impracticable to keep the temperature of the concrete above freezing. After consultation with The Research Service, the supervising engineers, the contractor decided to abandon the work at the Temple until about April 1, 1935, when it is assumed that the climatic conditions would be favorable enough to proceed safely with the casting.

Under date of Sept. 11, our supervising engineers, The Research Service, informed us that the National Spiritual Assembly was issuing an urgent appeal to the believers throughout the country, through their local Spiritual Assemblies, for wholehearted cooperation in meeting this emergency. As a result of this appeal, it was possible to make a payment of $10,000 to the contractor under date of Oct. 1, 1934, and a subsequent payment of $2,000 under date of Oct. 8, 1934. These payments were gratefully received by the contractor and enabled him to continue with the work both at the Rosslyn, Virginia, plant and at the Temple.

During the past year, due to the critical financial situation and the very slow inflow of contributions to the general fund, the Trustees have been unable to fulfill the terms of the contract with the Earley Studio. Two emergencies have arisen—the one in September and another in December, 1934. As explained above, the first emergency was met by the generous response of the believers making it possible to make a payment of $12,000 early in October on an amount due of about $20,000. The second emergency occurred in December when a balance of $14,000 was due as of Nov. 30, 1934. At the December meeting of the National Assembly, a unanimous action was taken providing for a loan of $10,000 from the Northern Trust Company, Chicago, Illinois. A loan of $10,000 made by the National Spiritual Assembly made it possible for the Trustees to make a payment of $10,000 to the contractor as of Jan. 4, 1935.

During the first three months of 1935, the continuation of the casting of the sections of the clerestory ornamentation has proceeded at the Rosslyn, Virginia, plant and with a minimum of personnel in order to effect every possible economy. At the time of the writing of this report, March 9, 1935, the casting has been practically completed (only eight panels remaining to be cast), and arrangements are being made by the contractor to ship the large number of casts at the plant to the Temple so that erection may be begun early in April. At that time, the casting of the cresting or cornice will be commenced on the Temple structure and it is assumed that the entire clerestory ornamentation will be completed about the middle of June, 1935—weather conditions permitting.

The status of the payments under the contract with the contractor, the Earley Studio of Washington, D. C., show that as of February 28, 1935, a balance of $5,661.89 is due. The Trustees, through the agency of their supervising engineers, The Research Service, have arranged with the contractor for a modification of the contract so that payments for actual expenditures are to be made during the months of January, February and March, 1935, when work was suspended at the Temple and will continue on this basis during operations at the Temple in April, May and June and with the assumption that payment in full for the work will be made soon after the completion of the total construction work contemplated under the contract.

Through the courtesy of our supervising engineers, The Research Service, no payments for engineering services have been made for services rendered during the clerestory ornamentation project. It is understood that under contract with The Research Service total and final payment will be made upon the completion of the work. It should be recalled that The Research Service voluntarily offered to reduce its fee to four per cent of actual construction costs in order that under this business arrangement only actual expenses should be met. The believers will recall that under the original contract for the construction of the superstructure of the Temple, The Research Service made a refund of $2,000 at the completion of the work.

Communications that have been received from our beloved Guardian during the past year indicate his expressed joy at the faith, courage and sacrifices manifested by the American believers in the continuance of the Temple ornamentation so that sufficient of this work may be done to give a completed effect to the Temple. The work has continued to attract the attention not only of the people of the neighboring communities but of the entire country and much favorable publicity has appeared in the public press and periodicals during the past year.

Your Trustees believe that action will be taken at the 27th Annual Convention and subsequently by the believers through their local Spiritual Assemblies to meet the financial requirements for the completion of the dome ornamentation. As the cost of the dome ornamentation has been running closely in accord with the original estimate of $36,400, including the engineering fee, there remains to be paid both on the contract and on the loan of $10,000, as of February 28, 1935, about $15,000. Your Trustees are confident that the believers will arise to meet this spiritual need and in the spirit of the recent words of Shoghi Effendi:

"In closing may I convey to you and to the American community of the believers as well the Guardian's abiding appreciation and gratitude for the striking manner in which the American friends, under the leadership of your Assembly, have each and all arisen to meet the emergency which the lack of sufficient funds had created in connection with the work of the Temple. This constitutes, indeed, an added victory in the series of triumphs which the American believers have, ever since the ascension of the Master, been winning in the field of service to the Faith. Their collective, united and sustained labors in this connection are surely bound to hasten the realization of the Master's promises concerning the ultimate triumph of the Cause throughout the American continent. May this sublime vision disclosed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá intensify their zeal and stimulate their ardor in bringing their sacred and mighty task to a speedy consummation."

Allen McDaniels, Chairman.

FIRST ANNUAL CONVENTION AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND

(From "Herald of the South")

The first Convention of the Bahá'ís of Australia and New Zealand took place in Sydney, Australia, commencing May 15, 1934. This much-longed-for event occasioned great happiness and rejoicing among the believers in Australia and New Zealand, who for many months had worked so earnestly for it.

The Convention was opened by Mr. Robert Brown, of Adelaide, South Australia. Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Dunn, the blessed pioneers, who sacrificed all to bring the glad tidings to these shores, then spoke, although their hearts were almost too full for speech. Not only words, but deeds, are their adornment, for the Convention is the consummation of their long and self-sacrificing endeavors for the Cause in this land.

The delegates to the Convention were:—Adelaide, Mr. Robert Brown, Mrs. Silver Jackman, Miss Hilda Brooks; Sydney, Mr. A. O. Whittaker, Mr. Hyde Dunn, Mrs. Olive Routh, Auckland (New Zealand), Mrs. E. Axford, Miss Ethel Blundell, Miss Margaret Stevenson.

The following cable was received from Shoghi Effendi, the Guardian of the Cause:—"Inexpressibly gladdened, celebration first historic Convention. Assure delegates abounding gratitude, fervent prayers, deepest love—Shoghi."

Wonderful harmony prevailed at all the meetings and gatherings; the meeting face to face of the friends of the Assemblies and the Melbourne Group, which are situated so far apart, was an unforgettable and thrilling experience. This personal contact has greatly strengthened the bonds which unite the believers in the service of Bahá'u'lláh. Ordinarily the friends would not meet, as the distances are so great, and in this respect it is interesting to note that one Bahá'í travelled from Yanine, South Australia, a distance of over 400 miles, before entraining at Adelaide for Sydney. The distance from Adelaide to Sydney is 1,073 miles, and from New Zealand to Sydney it is a four days sea journey. The part played by the New Zealand delegates in braving the rigors of the Tasman Sea voyage cannot be overestimated.

The Convention was modelled on those held in America and lasted four days. Two meetings were held daily, and many matters of fundamental importance were discussed. Opinions were expressed, and a deeper knowledge of vital administrative principles was gained.

The election of the first National Assembly of Australia and New Zealand took place on May 16th. Many of the friends attended and sat in silent prayer and meditation during the election.

The first meeting of the newly-elected National Assembly was held on May 19th. The members and officers are as follows:—Adelaide—Mr. Robert Brown, Chairman; Miss Hilda Brooks, Secretary; Mr. Percy Almond, Treasurer; Mrs. Silver Jackman, Sydney—Mr. A. O. Whittaker, Vice-Chairman; Mr. Hyde Dunn, Mrs. C. Moffit, Auckland, New Zealand—Miss Margaret Stevenson, Miss Ethel Blundell.

In a letter to Mrs. Hyde Dunn, the Guardian's Secretary wrote: "The formation of every new National Assembly must indeed be viewed as a step forward in the evolution of the Administration of the Faith, and not until a sufficient number of such National Assemblies has been duly constituted can there be any hope for the future expansion of the Cause."

The Guardian wrote: "I am overjoyed to learn of the historic decision of the Bahá'ís of Australia and New Zealand. It marks the turning point in the history of the Cause in that far-away continent."

Through the Grace of God another link has been added to the chain of National Assemblies through which the Administrative Order of the Faith is expanding.

Hilda M. Brooks.

Groups

The National Spiritual Assembly has been happy and grateful to learn from the Teaching Committee that in all probability a number of new Spiritual Assemblies can be elected on April 1.

While the situation cannot be reported with finality, the local groups which are now apparently ready for the election are: Verdugo City, Calif., Jacksonville, Fla., Augusta, Ga., Maui, T. H., Rochester, N. Y., Dayton, Ohio, and Nashville, Tenn. A later report received from Dale S. Cole, Regional Field Representative of the Teaching Committee, would indicate that Flint, Mich., can be added to this list.

The evolution of a Bahá'í group into a Bahá'í community, based upon the institution of the local Spiritual Assembly, is a matter of transcendent importance. Only through this Bahá'í institution can a group of believers, no matter how devoted and capable they may be as individuals, begin to express the organic qualities of unity and justice which underlie the new civilization.

Through the enthusiasm and capacity of Orcella Rexford, a new group has recently been established at Boise, Idaho, following a public meeting at which the message was given to 400 people. This study class began with an attendance of 200, and the group is now studying under a group leader selected by Miss Rexford. George O. Latimer visited the group in January and reports that it has excellent possibilities.

Detroit

A series of seven public lectures were given by Dorothy Baker of Lima, Ohio, in the Green Room of the Book Cadillac Hotel, beginning Friday, November 3rd, under the direct auspices of the Detroit Spiritual Assembly and the local teaching committee.

"About 1,000 invitations were printed and several hundred sent to a selected mailing list. In addition the secretaries of various organizations were visited and asked to cooperate. Experience showed that work with existing organizations should begin well in advance of the series so that announcements may be put in club bulletins and on bulletin boards."
"A different local person acted as Chairman each evening. The meeting was opened with a short prayer and then the speaker was introduced. A few short announcements were made at the end before the closing prayer. People having questions were asked to remain and meet Mrs. Baker. No opportunity was given for open forum questions. The meetings were sincere and dignified.

"As a result of the course three new study classes were formed. These were grouped with consideration as to locality of residence and congeniality of the persons involved. The series was in the nature of an experiment and proved to be good training in how to conduct such activities. It was found that the response is best from the higher types. It is also believed that a selected, live mailing list is a more effective way of building up attendance than newspaper space—unless a lot of it can be used which is expensive."

This report was made by Dale S. Cole, Field Representative of the National Teaching Committee.

New York

The Spiritual Assembly began its teaching activities this year by publishing 5000 copies of the summary of the Faith written by the Guardian, in a pamphlet entitled "The World Religion" (afterward issued by the Publishing Committee) for widespread distribution throughout the city.

During December the Outline prepared by the N.S.A. for general reference was sent to 81 important religious, educational and peace organizations having headquarters in the city.

The teaching program maintained regularly has included: a public meeting on Sunday afternoon; a Forum conducted by the Bahá'í Committee for Youth on Tuesday evening, an Esperanto class on Tuesday evening led by Della Quinlan, who is Secretary of the New York Esperantist Association; a Wednesday evening general study class consisting of a series devoted to special subjects each conducted by a different teacher; a class for newly interested friends led by Mary Hanford Ford and Juliet Thompson on Thursday afternoon; and a "Tea Conference" for the public on Saturday afternoon.

Addresses have been delivered in recent months at the Sunday meeting by Curtis Kelsey, Elsa Russell Blakeley, Philip Sprague, Saffa Kinney, Juliet Thompson, Genevieve Coy, Loulie A. Mathews, Mary Hanford Ford, James Morton, Jr.

An Inter-Racial Amity Conference was held on November 18, Ludmila Bechtold, Chairman, Hon. Hubert H. Delaney and Louis G. Gregory, speakers.

 Fireside meetings have been held by Mr. and Mrs. Kinney, Juliet Thompson, Winifred Richards, and a meeting for reading the Words of Bahá'u'lláh by Horace Holley.

A large group of young people has been brought together by Sally O'Neill and given intensive instruction by Elsa Russell Blakeley, with the result that three have been enrolled as believers and many more will follow.

Mrs. Bishop Lewis has conducted a special study class and of these two believers have been enrolled.

Three talks have been given by Saffa Kinney at CCC Camp Upton and at Washington, Conn. During December a friend of the Cause, Clarence Howell, brought a group of theological students and young ministers from Union Theological Seminary for a special meeting conducted by Horace Holley. A half-hour talk was followed by a half-hour of questions and answers.

The month of February was devoted to intensive teaching and lecturing by Mme. Gita Orlova, who carried out a series of twelve public meetings at the Center, with two teaching classes a week at the Center and an important study group in a private home. The New York friends are happy to report that these public meetings have consistently filled the hall and are resulting in the formation of a class of interested students.

Teaneck

(West Englewood)

A Semi-Annual Report made to the N.S.A. presents a wide variety of well-arranged activities, those of most widespread general interest being as follows:

"The arrangement of the public programs for our Sunday and Wednesday meetings has shown the results of great effort and exertion on the part of members of this committee, in providing speakers from various Bahá'í communities on the occasion of their visit to West Englewood. During this year we have had the pleasure of greeting many friends from distant cities, including Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Ober, Louis G. Gregory, Dr. Walter Guy, Alfred E. Lunt, Marion Little, Beatrice Irwin and James Morton, Jr. These have all afforded us the very excellent opportunity of presenting the public with a comprehensive picture of the aims and purposes of the Faith, from experiences in various parts of the world."

"The committee in charge of the Bahá'í school work has probably been one of the most active in assigning students to the various classes, which have been sub-divided into four sections, from kindergarten to youth class. The membership in attendance is about twenty."

"The establishment of the Haworth branch Center is a result of which we are proud. This is a small suburban town about five miles from the Teaneck Center, where a committee of four believers who reside there have instituted regular public meetings every week, engaging speakers from nearby Assemblies and visitors to Teaneck. It has also provided an excellent training ground for new Bahá'í speakers. The meeting place, which is entirely neutral, is a small cabin, efficiently fitted for the work, made available through the committee in cooperation with the Spiritual Assembly.... The committee reports that the meetings are attended regularly by local residents."
THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

A Summary of the Proceedings

A devotional service in the Auditorium of the House of Worship gave spiritual preparation for the Convention sessions.

The Convention was opened by Carl Scheffler, presiding officer of the National Spiritual Assembly in the absence of Allen B. McDaniel, chairman.

A prayer was read by Miss Fanny Knoblock.

Roll call. Sixty delegates responded to the roll call of ninety-five delegates representing sixty local Bahá’í communities read by the secretary of the National Assembly.

Election of Convention Officers. Ballots were cast successively for the office of Convention chairman and the office of Convention secretary. Alfred E. Lunt was elected chairman, Horace Holley secretary.

The Convention chairman made brief remarks on the importance of the Annual Meeting.

A letter from Allen McDaniel was read conveying his regret to the delegates and his regret that illness prevented his attendance.

Annual Report of National Spiritual Assembly. On behalf of the Assembly, its secretary read the annual report, the text of which is published in this issue of BAHÁ’Í NEWS.

Voted: To appoint a committee to draft a message from the Convention to the Guardian, the message to include an expression of grateful appreciation for his translation of excerpts from Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh. The committee appointed was: Mrs. Jeanne Bolles, Charles Mason Remey, Leroy Joas.

Voted: To accept the Annual report with thanks.

Telegrams of greeting were presented at various intervals during the Convention from the following: Binghamton community, Santa Monica group (which reported a donation of $502.00 to the Temple), Los Angeles delegates (Elmor Duckett, Oni Finks, Louise Waite, Loa Shaffer, W. P. Hatch), Philadelphia community, Monroe Assembly and community.

An invitation was sent from the Chicago Spiritual Assembly to attend a reception as guests of the community and local Assembly at the Bahá’í Center, 116 South Michigan Avenue, Monday evening, April 29.

Treasurer’s Report. Delegates were supplied with a copy of a financial statement of the National Bahá’í Fund for the period of eleven months ended March 31, 1935, consisting of an Income and Expense Statement and an Analysis of Expenses together with Income and Expense Statements of the Temple and Green Acre Trustees for the same period. An income of $55,170.08 was shown.

These figures and the financial matters of the year were explained orally by the Treasurer, Roy C. Wilhelm. Of the entire income for the eleven months mentioned above, the sum of $40,800.00 was devoted to Temple construction and maintenance.

Voted: That the National Assembly be requested in its financial reports to separate the items of funds received from non-Bahá’ís, from those of funds received from believers.

Voted: To recommend that the National Spiritual Assembly provide local Assemblies with uniform receipt books for issuing receipts to individual donors.

Message to the Guardian. The draft of cablegram to be sent by the Convention to Shoghi Effendi as reported by the committee was approved, and the following message was sent: “Delegates representing Bahá’ís (of) United States (and) Canada fervently desire (to) rededicate (their) lives (to) World Order (of) Bahá’u’lláh. Supplicate Divine confirmation through guidance (of) beloved Guardian. Boundless gratitude for Gleanings (from) Writings (of) Bahá’u’lláh just received, and opportunity (to) participate (in the) protection (of the) property (surrounding the) Holy Shrines at World Center. Praying alleviation (of the) Persian Bahá’ís. Ridvan greeting.”

Voted: To recommend that a sign be placed in the Temple Auditorium with words of Bahá’u’lláh or the Bab concerning silence in the Mashí’í-Adkhár.

Land on Mt. Carmel. At the chairman’s request, Mountfort Mills explained the Guardian’s plan to develop the Bahá’í area on Mt. Carmel, which consists approximately of a strip of land 1200 feet in width from the highway along the base to the top of Mt. Carmel.

Friday Afternoon

Race Amity. Under the leadership of Louis G. Gregory, representing the Race Amity Committee, general consultation was given to this subject. Benjamin Taylor reported on the recent Amity Conference held at Cincinnati, Mrs. Mariam Haney spoke of the development of Amity activities in Washington, and Mrs. Sara Walrath explained the policy adopted by the Chicago Assembly this year to have only Bahá’í speakers on the programs of public Amity meetings.

The Amity ideal was feelingly upheld by Dr. Zia Bagdadi of Chicago, Mrs. Dorothy Baker of Lima, and Mrs. Maud Gaudreaux of Yonkers. After interesting reports and remarks by Charles Mason Remey, Charles Reimer, Dr. E. Leonore Morris and Mrs. Georgie Wiles, Mr. Gregory summed up the discussion, which had clarified the question of the special responsibility laid upon American...
Baha'is to solve the problem of race prejudice, and shared with all delegates the fruit of long experience in a number of Baha'i communities as well as in the National Amity Committee itself concerning the best methods of upholding the Amity ideal.

Voted: The recommendation that the National Assembly make a survey this year to determine how many racial, religious and national elements are represented in the American Baha'i community.

Temple Trustees. Carl Scheffler led the discussion of this topic, recalling the beginnings of the Temple activity, tracing the successive rises and relapses of interest in the Temple corresponding to the degree of unity and devotion existing throughout the national Baha'i community, and referring particularly to the difficult financial problems of the past year.

Among the views and suggestions presented were—Mrs. Lulu Alexander gave the "five steps" in all Baha'i achievement explained by the Guardian: Prayer and meditation, decision, determination, confidence, action; Charles Reimer felt that local Treasurers should more fully explain the national Baha'i needs to their communities; Mme. Gita Orlova spoke of the special inspiration in the prayer on page 110 of the Baha'i Prayers; Dr. Zia Bagdadi told how his father had contributed to the first Mashriqu'l-Adhar, at Isfah; Mrs. Sandzo stressed the importance of united contributions; and Mr. Scheffler concluded the period by pointing out that it is a spiritual duty to consider a privilege as a problem, appealing to the delegates to return home and impress upon their communities the true ideal of the National Fund.

Friday Evening

This session was open to all believers, both delegates and visiting friends. The subject of teaching continued throughout the evening.

Leonore Morris, representing the Teaching Committee, served as leader of the discussion. After pointing out that each Divine Religion recreates itself through the evening.

The subject of teaching continued through Parent Teachers Association groups.

The formation of new groups and Assemblies in the South was reported by Miss Georgie Wales, with particular reference to the teaching work of Louis G. Gregory at Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Orcella Rexford presented the Cause in terms of the living of a glorious life, and shared her experiences in attracting large study classes at Spokane, Boise, Phoenix and San Diego.

Mountfort Mills reported on methods used in developing interesting Fireside study groups at New York.

Saturday Morning

After introductory remarks by Alfred E. Lunt, Convention chairman, and the decision of the delegates that the sessions were to conform to Daylight Saving time, the subject of teaching was resumed.

Mme. Gita Orlova of New York described her method of presenting the World Order of Baha'u'llah to the public, based upon the view that the Administrative Order is the normal condition of order in the House of Baha'u'llah.

Miss Fanny Knoblock eloquently reminded the believers of the spiritual obligation incumbent upon each Baha'i to teach every day.

Mrs. Dorothy Baker then spoke on the power of silence as a great quality of spiritual personality, bringing as it does the capacity of invoking the best in others.

Mrs. Ruth Moffett described the spiritual attitude of the true teacher, with special reference to a passage she quoted from the Master's Tablet on "Apostles of Baha'u'llah."

During the general consultation following these brief addresses, Ernest Harrison read an article recently published in a Montreal paper on the world's need of a Divine King. Mrs. Pauline Hannen summed up many of the preceding thoughts by emphasizing the boundless possibilities that will arise when all believers join actively in using the different instruments of service which have been developed in the Cause.

Mrs. Nellie S. French then presented an article published in Pasadena on the Revelation, followed by Dr. Clement Woolson who emphasized the need of understanding the "Inner Significances."

Cablegram from the Guardian

At this point the Convention received the following cablegram from Shoghi Effendi: "Advise delegates visitors hold special devotional gathering Temple auditorium suplicate assistance invisible Host Abha Kingdom emancipation long suffering brethren in Baha'u'llah's native land. May America's incessant striving redoubled exertion compensate enforced inactivity so large a section organized body His followers."

Following discussion of the method by which best to meet this appeal, it was voted to make the devotional service of the Ridvan Feast to be held Saturday evening in the Auditorium a meeting of supplication, the arrangements to be made by a committee of three including Albert Windust, chairman of the Ridvan Feast Committee, the committee to be appointed by the Convention chairman.

The following committee was then appointed: Albert Windust, Mrs. Walrath, Dr. Zia Bagdadi.

Resuming the subject of teaching, Mrs. Jellett reported on a Baha'i women's organization which has been formed at Seattle.

Archives. The discussion of this subject was led by the chairman of the Archives Committee, Edwin W. Mattoon. He exhibited a number of original Tablets, especially that revealed by 'Abdu'l-Baha to the House of Justice, Chicago, in 1901. The friends were reminded that photostatic copies of Tablets can be obtained through the Archives Committee at 8c each. There are a few more than 1,000 original signed Tablets in the Archives, about 500 with the original translation and some 200 with no translation. The only Tablet revealed to people in South America was also shown.

Suggestions were made for the maintenance of local Archives by the local Assemblies.

The material desired for the National Archives includes: Tablets from the Master, letters from Shoghi Effendi, and relics associated with members of the Holy Household.

Charles Mason Remey spoke of his long experience in this work and urged that local Assemblies give full cooperation in assisting the committee to complete its store of Bahá'í records.

Albert Windust described the beginning of the Archives Committee work in collecting the Master's Tablets, and pointed out that the proper permanent place for the Archives is in the Temple Foundation. He mentioned the fact that 'Abdu'l-Bahá revealed for the Chicago Assembly a prayer for the closing as well as the opening of its meetings.

Benjamin Taylor reported that he has original letters from Thornton Chase.

Saturday Afternoon

Preceding the annual election, Alfred E. Lunt, Convention chairman, spoke of the importance of this function given the delegates, and made spiritual preparation by reading a Tablet revealed to the late Mrs. Kate Ives interpreting her dream of three birds.

The chairman appointed as tellers Philip Marangello, Mrs. Ruth Moffett, Charles Mason Remey. To the tellers were handed by the secretary of the N. S. A. thirty-three sealed ballots mailed in by absent delegates.

Words of Shoghi Effendi on the subject of the annual election were also read by the chairman.

After all delegates present at the Convention had handed in their ballots, the tellers retired.

Publicity. In the absence of Mrs. Ruth Randall Brown, committee chairman, Mrs. Nina Matthisen read a statement prepared by Mrs. Brown. This was followed by general discussion.

Mrs. Nellie S. French reported on the Bahá'í column which for some two years she has prepared for publication in Pasadena Star-News consisting of excerpts under the heading "The Loom of Reality."

Vote: That the Convention request Mrs. French, through the N. S. A., to make available to local Assemblies her method of developing local publicity.

Albert Windust reported on the publicity obtained in Chicago through exhibit of the Temple model in store windows.

Dr. Lewis then spoke of the methods which had been used in Milwaukee to secure news about the special teaching program carried out this year: first, paid advertising in advance of the meetings, then billboard displays and distribution of printed programs through organizations, all of which created the necessary public interest to justify the papers in reporting the program.

Dr. A. Laurence Morris described graphically his methods of developing publicity for the Racine Assembly, emphasizing the need for continuous direct contact with local editors and reporters.

Bahá'í Administration. In the absence of Allen B. McDaniel, Horace Holley led the discussion on this subject. Among the points clarified or emphasized were: that the concept of "spirituality" in previous religions was restricted to the realm of personal relations and subjective experience, while in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh it has been enlarged to include the functions of social institutions; that as the Guardian once wrote, the basis of Bahá'í unity is no longer the individual but the Assembly; that the N. S. A. some time ago adopted a ruling under which its secretary can answer letters which bring up questions which can be settled either by reference to the recognized principles of Bahá'í administration, quotations from the Guardian's letters or by citing decisions already made by the N. S. A.

At this point the committee appointed to make arrangements for the meeting of supplication reported that it had prepared a service of readings and that the meeting would be held in the Temple Auditorium at 7:30 P. M.

Voted: After discussion this resolution was adopted—The Convention delegates here assembled record their firm resolve to urge all believers immediately to shoulder the responsibilities and sacrifices necessary to fulfill the collective obligations, first, to contribute the balance required for purchase of the Demit property in Haifa, and then to provide means for the completion of the clerestory contract in connection with Temple construction.

On learning that the tellers could not report at this session the result of the annual election, it was voted to receive the tellers' report at 9:30 A. M., Sunday, April 28.

Saturday Evening

A meeting of supplication was held in the Temple Auditorium, after which the delegates and visitors met in Foundation Hall for the celebration of the Feast of Ridván.

Sunday Morning

After the devotional period in the Auditorium, the business session was opened with prayer read by Miss Sylvia Payne.

Bahá'í Administration. continued. How local Assemblies should proceed in effecting legal incorporation was explained by George O. Latimer. Consultation followed on the subject of developing the social activities of a local community. Miss Rideout reported on a feast given in Boston, and Charles Mason Remey spoke on a play which has been enacted by young people of Washington.

An interesting inter-racial gathering held in Yonkers was described by Mrs. Maude Gaudreaux. Miss Rideout gave an account of the pageant conducted at Green Acre last summer under the direction of Mrs. Bowditch. Mrs. Nellie S. French followed with a report of an entertainment held in Los Angeles.

Dr. Zia Bagdadi then explained an important distinction which 'Abdu'l-Bahá made between true entertainment and recreation, and the forms of entertainment to be considered mere distraction and waste of time for believers. This was amplified by Alfred E. Lunt and Charles Mason Remey in an account of the Master’s attitude as revealed at Green Acre in 1912.

A plea for the development of cultural centers in local Bahá’í communities was expressed by William De Forge. Dr. E. Lenore Morris brought out the fact that recreation is good or otherwise according to the spirit in which it is conducted, as for example, dancing can be a beautiful art when properly appreciated. An example of cultural activity was cited by Roy C. Wilhelm in the case of the programs rendered by William De Forge’s orchestra at West Englewood.

Voted: That the N. S. A. appoint a committee to develop a cultural program satisfying the Bahá’í standard laid down in the Master’s teaching that recreation which is healthful and productive of moral uplift is very important in the Cause; this program when approved to be published in Bahá’í News.

Annual Election

The tellers reported the following result of the election of the National Spiritual Assembly:

Number of delegates eligible to vote .................................. 95
Ballots received from absent delegates ................................. 33
Ballots cast at the Convention ......................................... 60
Ballots rejected as imperfect (because in each case the voter had written one name twice) .......... 2
Number of ballots constituting the election .......................... 91

The nine members elected were as follows:

Roy C. Wilhelm, 71 votes.
Horace Holley, 64 votes.
George O. Latimer, 62 votes.
Allen B. McDaniel, 61 votes.
Carl Scheffler, 61 votes.
Leroy Ioas, 53 votes.
Nellie S. French, 45 votes.
Alfred E. Lunt, 44 votes.
Mountfort Mills, 44 votes.

The tellers’ report was accepted, and the tally sheet and ballots were handed in for the records of the N. S. A.

Bahá’í Youth. In the absence of Paul Haney, Youth Committee chairman, Miss Sylvia Payne opened the discussion with the reading of a statement by the committee secretary, Miss Marion Holley.

Lorne Matteson reported on the youth activities of the Chicago community. Wilfred Barton presented the problem of Bahá’í youth as consisting in the integration of their activities and the increase of their capacity to serve the Faith. A. K. Kalantar suggested that the national Youth Committee be appointed with a membership in Chicago, as geographical center of many Assemblies, and that local Youth Committees arrange weekly meetings for non-believers. He described an entertainment which had been given at the High School in West Englewood by the believers for the relief of the fund for destitute citizens of the town, an action which the Guardian had later commended.

Speaking as an art teacher in daily touch with youth, Carl Scheffler gave his impression of the developments going on among the younger generation. Modern youth is serious, and seeks reality. It wants a contact with the larger forces of life. The older generation should teach by their example, and endeavor to find out what young people themselves want and require.

Albert Windust expressed the view that there is need of defining the term “youth” and the boundaries of the age limits in connection with the organization of youth activities in the Cause.

Philip Marangello emphasized our collective need of youth’s enthusiasm. Dr. E. Lenore Morris emphasized the capacity of youth to organize and face realities. Mrs. Jeanne Bowles pointed out that Bahá’í communities renew themselves through the constant influx of young and ardent believers.

Summer Schools. George O. Latimer led the consultation on this subject, the importance of which the Guardian has frequently pointed out. Details of the work as conducted at Green Acre, Geyserville and Louhelen Ranch were described by Dale S. Cole, Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Philip Marangello.

Voted: The recommendation that the N. S. A. in future call the Convention so as to begin on a Thursday, with all annual reports and special subjects for consultation finished before the time of the annual election on Saturday, leaving the rest of Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning for consultation with the incoming Assembly, Sunday evening to be free for all delegates.

Sunday Afternoon

No Convention session was held Sunday afternoon, on account of the public meeting. It was estimated that between six and seven hundred people attended the public meeting. The program consisted of addresses by Mme. Gita Orlova, Paul Haney and Mountfort Mills.

Sunday Evening

This session was devoted to a completion of unfinished items on the agenda, and consultation with the newly elected N. S. A.

A healing prayer was read for a number of believers who were ill.

The chairman extended the welcome of the Convention to Miss Edna True, just returned from Haifa.

Miss True stated that the Guardian had said to her that it is no longer necessary for him to send messages by returning pilgrims, but because she was returning in time to attend the Convention, he requested her to deliver these two messages to the believers.

First, on teaching. When the Temple emergency is met, every effort must be made to conduct activities, not only in America but in South America and other countries. The Guardian wants teachers who can actually reside abroad long enough to establish the Cause firmly.

Second, on the Summer Schools. The believers must study the history and teachings of Islam, obtaining authentic translations of works by Islamic writers.

Through Miss True Shoghi Effendi sent to the National Assembly a picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá—the reproduction by a new process of a photograph showing the Master in profile, with the statement that this picture can be used as the N. S. A. may decide.

Mrs. Jeanne Bolles spoke of the blessing which the Master had given Green Acre, calling it the “Green Akka” of the West.

With reference to the advice that Summer Schools include Islam on their programs, Leroy Ioas reported that valuable information can be found in Draper’s Intellectual Development of Europe. Other works cited were The Glorious Koran, a translation, by Pickthall, and Christ in Islam, byRobson. Dr. Bagdadi pointed out how the Guardian has successively brought the believers to the study of Baha’u’llah, then of the Bab, and now to the study of Islam.

World Order Magazine. At the request of the Convention chairman, Mrs. Mariam Haney read a letter written by Shoghi Effendi stating that the outcome of the magazine union would be very good, and that the change in no way signified that the Bahá’í Magazine had not been a success. Mrs. Haney explained that she wished to read this letter in order to remove any question about the
All-praise be to the one true God—exalted be His glory—inasmuch as He hath, through the Pen of the Most High, unlocked the doors of men's hearts. Every verse which this Pen hath revealed is a bright and shining portal that discloses the glories of a sainly and pious life, of pure and stainless deeds. The summons and the message which We gave were never intended to reach or to benefit one land or one people only. Mankind in its entirety must firmly adhere to whatsoever hath been revealed and vouchsafed unto it. Then and only then will it attain unto true liberty. The whole earth is illuminated with the resplendent glory of God's Revelation. In the year sixty He Who heralded the light of Divine Guidance—may all creation be a sacrifice unto Him—arose to announce a fresh revelation of the Divine Spirit, and was followed, twenty years later, by Him through Whose coming the world was made the recipient of this promised glory, this wondrous favor. Behold how the generality of mankind hath been, endowed with the capacity to hearken unto God's most exalted Word—the Word upon which must depend the gathering together and spiritual resurrection of all men...—Baha'u'llah.

LETTERS FROM SHOGHI EFFENDI

The following important explanations and instructions have been received from the Guardian in reply to questions asked him by the National Spiritual Assembly during recent months.

Title of the Anniversary Observed on November 26

"The Guardian suggests that the Committee in charge of the publication of The Bahá'í World should change the designation of the Bahá'í Anniversary celebration on the 26th of November, known as 'Fête Day of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to 'The Day of the Covenant,' as the latter is a much more appropriate title."—(Haifa, April 28, 1935.)

Translation of Symbol of the Greatest Name

"He also wishes me to inform you that the symbol of the Greatest Name represents an invocation which can be translated either as 'O Glory of Glories' or 'O Glory of the All-Glorious.' The word glory used in this connection is a translation of the Arabic term Bahá,' the name of Bahá'u'lláh." (Haifa, April 28, 1935.)

The Voting Right

"I feel I must reaffirm the vital importance and necessity of the right of voting—a sacred responsibility of which no adult recognized believer should be deprived, unless he is associated with a community that has not as yet been in a position to establish a local Assembly. This distinguishing right which the believer possesses, however, does not carry with it nor does it imply an obligation to cast his vote, if he feels that the circumstances under which he lives do not justify or allow him to exercise that right intelligently and with understanding. This is a matter which should be left to the individual to decide himself according to his own conscience and discretion." (Haifa, April 28, 1935.)

Chanting in the Temple

"As regards the chanting of Tablets in the Temple, Shoghi Effendi wishes in this connection to urge the friends to avoid all forms of rigidity and uniformity in matters of worship. There is no objection to the recital or chanting of prayers in the Oriental language, but there is also no obligation whatsoever of adopting such a form of prayer at any devotional service in the auditorium of the Temple. It should neither be required nor prohibited. The important thing that should always be borne in mind is that with the exception of certain specific obligatory prayers, Bahá'u'lláh has given us no strict or special rulings in matters of worship, whether in the Temple or elsewhere. Prayer is essentially a communion between man and God, and as such transcends all ritualistic forms and formulae." (Haifa, June 15, 1935.)

Membership in Non-Bahá'í Religious Associations

"Concerning membership in non-Bahá'í religious associations, the Guardian wishes to re-emphasize the general principle already laid down in his communications to your Assembly and also to the individual believers that no Bahá'í who wishes to be a whole-hearted and sincere upholder of the Faith should accept membership in any non-Bahá'í ecclesiastical organization. For such an act would necessarily imply only a partial acceptance of the Teachings and laws of the Faith, and an incomplete recognition of its independent status, and would thus be tantamount to an act of disloyalty to the verities it enshrines. For it is only too obvious that in most of its fundamental assumptions the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh is completely at variance with outworn creeds, ceremonies and institutions. To be a Bahá'í and at the same time accept membership in another religious body is simply an act of contradiction that no sincere and logically minded person can possibly accept. To follow Bahá'u'lláh does not mean accepting some of His teachings and rejecting the rest. Allegiance to His Cause must be uncompromising and whole-hearted. During the days of the Master the Cause was still in a stage that made such an open and sharp dissociation between it and other religious organizations, and particularly the Muslim Faith, not only inadvisable but practically impossible to establish. But since His passing events throughout the Bahá’í world, and particularly in Egypt where the Muslim religious courts have formally testified to the independent character of the Faith, have developed to a point that have made such an assertion of the independence of the Cause not only highly desirable but absolutely essential.” (Haifa, June 15, 1935.)

On Teaching

"There is one more point to which the Guardian wishes to draw again your Assembly’s attention. It is the question of teaching, and its paramount importance in these days of rapid administrative development of the Cause in America. He has already, through Miss Edna True, conveyed this same message to your Assembly, and is gratified to witness the wide and deep response it has awakened among the friends. He hopes and prays that whatever means the N. S. A. in collaboration with the National Teaching Committee may adopt for the furtherance of this most vital objective may meet with complete success." (Haifa, June 15, 1935.)

A BAHÁ’Í HISTORICAL RECORD

Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

In development of a suggestion advanced by the Archives Committee, the National Assembly will during the coming month distribute to local Assemblies, to local groups and to isolated believers a printed form entitled “Bahá’í Historical Record.”

This form provides space for the answers to a number of questions by every believer, and when the forms are filled out and returned the result will be an accurate record of each American Bahá’í’s connection with the Cause.

In the case of the local Spiritual Assemblies, enough copies will be sent to make possible two duplicate records of all members of the community— one set of records to be returned to the N. S. A. and the other, duplicate set retained for the local Archives. In the case of groups and isolated believers, one copy will be sent for each believer, and this when filled out can be returned as soon as possible to the National Office.

In the opinion of the Assembly, the time has come for such a thorough and complete Bahá’í census, particularly since the form as prepared will constitute a permanent historical record attesting the necessary facts concerning every duly recognized believer. The full-hearted cooperation of each Assembly, each group and in fact of every American Bahá’í is requested in order that this extensive undertaking may be carried to completion during the present Bahá’í year.

The local Assemblies will find in this project a new and significant relationship with all members of the local community, particularly with those who have not been active in attendance at the meetings. The responsibility for seeing that all enrolled members fill out and sign the two duplicate forms may well be taken as an opportunity for renewing their interest and stimulating their spirit of service.

In future, that the records may be kept up to date, the local Assembly on enrolling each new believer can at the time have the believer make out his or her Bahá’í historical form in duplicate and from time to time send one form to the National Office.

In this connection the suggestion is made that local Assemblies might begin to develop their own local Archives preserving for the future all such records as bear upon the Cause in their community and are not suitable for the National Archives. An outline will be found in the report of the Archives Committee published in Bahá’í News for September, 1934.

The ultimate purpose of all such undertakings is to impress upon us all the importance of our connection with the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, our membership in His rapidly developing World Order. The hope of the National Spiritual Assembly is that the spirit of teaching, the intense yearning to assist in promoting the Cause, will be augmented during this occasion, when we join in one definite activity linking the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada in the effort to begin a new and complete census with distinct historical interest.

The supreme cause of teaching has been strongly reinforced by the Bahá’í Summer Schools, which during the past few years have succeeded in raising the standard of Bahá’í education to a high level. From reports recently received it appears that the friends in all parts of the country are making every effort to attend the School in their region. The result will surely be to increase our collective capacity to study and teach during the coming year.

Before definite plans for teaching are adopted and published, it will be helpful if we go back in our minds and recognize the unique spiritual power which distinguished so many teachers in the early days of the Cause in America, before the literature of the Cause was available in printed form, and before it was possible to develop in any way the educational institutions now rising in the Cause. Those believers possessed the power to attract and confirm—whether or not they possessed the power to give detailed instruction. Their hearts were fired with the sacredness of their mission, and this flame cannot be replaced by even the most highly developed teaching facilities and teaching technique. There will always be a distinction between confirmation and instruction. Instruction is essential, but without confirmation it is void of life. Therefore, as the appeal for increased teaching begins to resound, and we improve our conduct of classes and public meetings, let us not overlook the fact that the humblest and most illiterate soul may have the greatest capacity to attract and confirm.

The beginning of all things is the knowledge of God, and the end of all things is strict observance of whatsoever hath been sent down from the empyrean of the Divine Will that pervadeth all that is in the heavens and all that is on the earth—Bahá’u’lláh.

THE SITUATION IN PERSIA

From Letter from the Guardian to Allen B. McDaniel, May 21, 1935

With reference to the situation in Persia, conditions have slightly improved, and the manifold restrictions imposed upon the friends have relatively decreased. The schools, however, are still closed, and the believers have refused to send their children to non-Bahá’í schools. Even the non-believers are extremely reluctant to send their children to non-Bahá’í educational institutions, in view of the bad training in conduct and character that they are apt to receive.

Apart from this question of the schools, however, the general situation is decidedly improving. The authorities look to the believers with much less suspicion than before, and they even tolerate things which a few months before they would consider as deserving the severest punishment. Communications between Haifa and Persia, though not yet quite normal, are much less interfered with. Telegrams are no longer confiscated. There seems to be a relaxation in the Persian government’s policy concerning... the Cause. And such a relaxation, the Guardian feels, is due in part to the whole-hearted obedience of the believers to the orders of the Government. The Persian Bahá'ís have, indeed, demonstrated, by their deeds, that they are loyal and law-abiding citizens, that no matter how severe the restrictions imposed upon them they are willing to obey their government in all matters which do not constitute a direct challenge to their vital religious beliefs. The believers have even gone to the extent of obeying and adhering scrupulously to the indirect orders and wishes of the government.

ELECTION OF NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ'ÍS OF IRAN

From Tihrān has been received this important announcement, dated May 12, 1935.

"It is with the greatest pleasure that we announce to you the good news of the formation of the new National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'í of Iran (Persia) for the year 92. We are very glad that, by divine bounty, not only have the elections been made through correspondence with us and keep us in touch with developments, but also established its Palestine Branch this year and other Assemblies are following their example. The prestige of the Faith, as a result of these accomplishments, has been considerably enhanced.

Your true brother,

SHOGHI

(From letter to the National Treasurer, dated May 26, 1935.)

"No Bahá'í meetings or public gatherings are held in the Hazrat-ul-Quds. The Police Departments in various towns and provinces in Persia have ceased to some extent to bear pressure on the friends; in other words the restrictions on the friends have decreased to some extent in most of the towns. Small meetings of friends are held in private houses both in Teheran and in the provinces. Some cablegrams have lately been received from our beloved Guardian. The friends in Iran (Persia) are facing the recent happenings and restrictions with much steadfastness and are prepared to carry out the orders and wishes of our beloved Guardian with much courage."

COLLECTING TABLETS REVEALED TO THE "DISCIPLES OF 'ABDUL-BAHÁ"

On page 84 of The Bahá'í World, Vol. III, are photographs of nineteen Western Bahá'ís whom Shoghi Effendi designated the "Disciples of 'Abdu'l-Bahá." The names are: Dr. J. E. Esslemont, Mr. G. Augur. Mr. Howard MacNutt, Miss Sarah Farmer, Mr. Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney, Miss Lillian Kappes, Mr. Robert Turner, Dr. Arthur Brauns, Mr. W. H. Randall, Mrs. Laura M. Getzinger, Mr. Joseph H. Küecheh-i-Mehdieh, No. 3, Turn for guidance at this time consist of the Tablets made available from time to time by publication through the recognized Bahá'í channels. Thus, while the Guardian has translated certain passages from Kitab-i-Aqdas (published in Star of the West some ten years ago), that work of Bahá'u'lláh, with its ordinances concerning worship and other Bahá'í institutions, can not be used by any believer at present as an authority, since the complete text awaits translation and publication, and moreover is to be promulgated by the Universal House of Justice when that body comes into existence.

BAHÁ'ÍS OF EGYPT HOLD ELEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

From Bahá'í News Letter issued by the N. S. A. of Egypt, the following report is quoted:

Seventeen delegates joyfully attended the eleventh Annual Convention on the 8th and 9th of Ridván while the two other delegates could not attend, being abroad. The session was opened at the appointed time by chanting prayers after which a Chairman and Secretary were elected.

Distinguished by the spirit of fragrance and love which prevailed upon the convention, delegates felt more happy to have had in their midst our dear friend Yousef Khan of Kerman, Persia, who was delegated by our beloved Guardian to attend the Convention and to convey His loving greetings and hopes.

Conducting their work in a wider scope and dealing with the various affairs pertaining to the Cause the convention issued important decisions that will, from their practical attitude, back the national activities, consolidate the Bahá'í administration and increase the spirit of real and close cooperation between Bahá'ís and their administrative bodies in Egypt. Among the most important questions dealt with were:

- Necessity of conducting National meetings regularly.
- Fostering national activities and strengthening the bonds of unity.
- Necessity of completing registration of Bahá'ís.
- Devising all means to have Haziratul-Quds be built this year.
- Perfect unity between Bahá'í Administrative Bodies and believers whose foremost obligations are to cooperate with and support them so that their foundation shall become more consolidated, their prestige and influence more increased and the scope of their activities be enlarged.

Second Session

On the 9th of Ridván the meeting hall was crowded with a large number of Cairo friends, visitors from Port Said, Ismailia, Janta and Alexandria and delegates, a very joyful gathering indeed! As per program prayers were chanted, hymns recited and lectures were given amid joy and happiness during which refreshments were served.

ACTIVITIES IN GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

(From "Bahá'í News" of Germany)

Our German Bahá'í work received a valuable contribution through the travels of Mr. and Mrs. Fozdar from Bombay (India), hir. and hirs. Bishop from Geneva, and Mrs. Silvia Matteson from Chicago (U. S. A.), who came to Germany upon the special request of the Guardian in order to visit the friends in the different communities, and to talk to them. The Fozdars, coming from Geneva, arrived on the 12th of September in Stuttgart where they held a fine spiritual evening with the community there; they then proceeded to London, visiting on their way the groups and communities: in Heidelberg, Berlin, Hamburg, and Bremen.

At every place they admonished the friends urgently to always bear in mind their responsibility as bearers of the Bahá'í Faith towards a world torn in religious strife and to rise with all their strength to assist in the spiritual construction of the new era. At the end of September Silvia Matteson, on her trip to London, called on the friends in Stuttgart, Heidelberg, Berlin and Hamburg. Her report about the Temple in Wilmette, in which she herself served as a guide to groups of visitors, and her narratives of the heroic lives of the great Bahá'í martyrs, culminated in a demand of joyful sacrifice, and never-relying enthusiasm in the service for the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

At the end of September Mr. and Mrs. Bishop commenced their German trip which lasted over a month and touched every place which had a Bahá'í community or group. The Guardian had given the special mission to Mrs. Bishop to familiarize the friends with the ideas of the Bahá'í administration. After a visit to the Bahá'í community in Stuttgart, she addressed the Dresden friends on the 27th and 28th at a well frequented meeting. She devoted three evenings to the friends in Leipzig. At a common meeting of the Quakers and Bahá'ís in Berlin she delivered an address on the subject "Faith," and a simple reception in a Bahá'í home united the Berlin friends with their guests. Her next stops were Rostock and Warnemünde. At both places several meetings took place, inspiring and strengthening the participants. Proceeding to Hamburg, she devoted an evening to Schwerin circle and the friends in Luebeck. During her stay in Hamburg the community there had several intimate and more public meetings. Mr. and hirs. Bishop made their return trip via Bremen, Frankfort, Heppenheim, Weinheim, Heidelberg, Heimbrom, and Karlsruhe, exerting their efforts everywhere. The end of the trip saw our guests from Geneva again in Stuttgart, Esslingen, and Gevelingen. On the 1st of November they returned to their work at the Bahá'í Bureau in Geneva. All the time they had worked with indefatigable enthusiasm at all the places, teaching and inspiring. Thus they have made a most important contribution towards the awakening of a new spiritual impulse and an increased devotion to the service in our Faith. Several newspapers brought reports and articles on the occasion of the visit of our friends as the Hamburger Fremdenblatt in its evening edition of September 19, and the Hamburger Tageblatt of the same date, and—concerning the Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette—the Hamburger Fremdenblatt of October 10 and a Berlin newspaper.

AUGUST SESSION OF CENTRAL STATES SUMMER SCHOOL

The Central States Summer School Committee announces the following program of courses to be given at the August Session, August 19-24:

- Foundations of the Super-state—Carl Schieffer
- Origin and Powers of Man—Dr. E. Lenore Morris

A public lecture on the Cause will be given each afternoon. It is hoped that a large number of believers will take this opportunity of making a serious study of these two vitally important subjects. Make reservation through Mr. L. W. Eggleston, Louhelen Ranch, R. F. D. No. 1, Davison, Mich.

AUDIT OF BOOKS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

With grateful appreciation of the services rendered in auditing the financial records, the National Assembly publishes the following report:

"At the request of Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm, treasurer, Mr. A. F. Mathiesen and myself we have audited the books of account and records of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada from March 31, 1930 to April 30, 1934.

Each individual receipt was traced from Receipt No. 987 to No. 5146 inclusive, to its respective posting in the Cash Book. The amounts of the items were found to be correct and in agreement with the bank deposits. The bank deposits were checked with the monthly bank statements and found correct.

"I hereby certify that the receipts as posted are correct to the best of my knowledge and belief, and that the yearly statements as prepared and submitted by Mr. Mathiesen, represent in my opinion the true financial condition of the organization at the close of each respective fiscal year for the four year period."

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ'ÍS OF POONÁ. 1934-1935

"The essence of religion is to testify unto which the Lord hath revealed, and follow that which He hath ordained in His mighty Book."—BAHÁ'U'LLÁH

Again, through God's grace can we record a year of internal growth and consolidation—a growth in faith and deeds. The Poona friends can take just pride in being the first among the Bahá'í communities of this land to arise as a whole for putting into practice our sacred laws. Today, a marriage has been solemnized here in the Bahá'í form and registered in accordance with the country's law, and this event, we believe, is without-a-precedent in the history of our Cause in this land. Heretofore it was the custom of the general body of the friends on all occasions where religious ceremonies were to be observed to follow those prescribed by their past Faiths. For instance, among those believers who hailed from the Zoroastrian fold, even the ceremony initiating their children into the Zoroastrian religion was prevalent. All such outworn practices our Guardian urged us to discard, and our community decided to render "instant, exact and complete obedience" by breaking entirely with the past and enforcing, within the limits of the law, the ordinances of the New Day. The path was not smooth. Enemies offered opposition and ridicule. Friends watched from a reverent distance with folded arms. "Premature," "unwise," "rash," were some of the kind terms applied to our action. But we prevailed, for the Lord of Hosts was with us. And when the history of these early attempts of the pioneers of God's Cause to consolidate His Faith in these regions is written, the share the Poona friends have contributed towards this end will not, we dare to feel, go unrecorded. Special tribute must be paid to that member of our Assembly who has refrained from marrying for well-nigh a year after his engagement, because his bethrothed's relatives insist on adhering to a form of marriage disapproved by our Guardian. Perhaps, there was a Divine wisdom in this our outward failure in our first essay to enforce this phase of our law, for it thereby obtained a wide publicity among friends and foes alike, impressing upon the former the need for adopting our Laws, and upon the latter the independence of our Dispensation, and our apparent defeat has been crowned with success for we find our sister communities today roused into practising our sacred Laws.

In the matter of the observance of Bahá'í holidays again has our community fully observed our Guardian's behests. The nine sacred days on which we must refrain from work, have been observed as holidays by the whole body of the Poona friends, who have gathered on these days, and have thanked the Lord for His favor in guiding them to His Kingdom.

This obedience to the sacred commands has been blessed with a unity among the members of our community which nothing has been able to shatter. This unity has been fostered and deepened by "free, frank and full consultation" on all matters pertaining to the Cause.

Our support to our National center, moral as well as material, has been unhesitating. On the financial side, we have offered almost the whole of our regular local monthly collections to the national fund; in the moral sphere, we have not left one communication of theirs unfilled.

Our Assembly has been registered this year with the Government in compliance with our National Assembly's request.

We were enabled to contribute a sum toward the safeguarding the area surrounding the holy Shrines on Mount Carmel. One of the believers' gracious messages transmitted to us by cable on that occasion was: "Poona's sustained magnificent spirit self-sacrifice profoundly appreciated. Love, Shoghi."

In addition to fifty-two administrative meetings held during the year, and the semi-weekly gatherings of the general body of the friends, we have recently commenced holding Nineteen-Day meetings.

Our Assembly has donated all epistles received by them from the Guardian till date to the Archives Committee of the American National Assembly.

With the permission of our N.S.A. we donated 500 full-size reproductions of the impressive photograph of the American friends gathered at the 26th annual Convention to Mr. Mahfuzul-Haq Ilmi, Editor of the "Bahá'í Magazine" (of India), for insertion in the pages of our said Periodical. Contrary to our expectations, however, we regret to say, it has not yet appeared.

Our sale of the "Bahá'í Magazine" of America was continued during the past year and we were able to maintain our former record. Our own center subscribed to six copies which, along with one gratefully received from our dear brother, Mr. Amirul Islam of Chittagong, have been distributed every month to public libraries or Newspaper Editors.

We have subscribed to 29 copies of the "Bahá'í Magazine" of India, and distributed 21 therefrom to various libraries and individuals. In addition, we have circulated to a selected list 66 copies each of the December, 1934 and January, 1935 issues of this Journal, as its Persian section contained extracts from the "Kitáb-i-Faqih" of this Bahá'í teacher. Another radio program of Oslo, Norway, in its issue dated April 29, 1934, contains an illustration of the House of Worship.

Svenska Journalen, published in Stockholm, included in its issue dated February 10, 1935, an interview with Miss Root which carries a photograph of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, a photograph of the Temple showing delegates present at Convention, and a picture of Miss Root holding the symbol of the Greatest Name.

Another newspaper article about Miss Root was published in the Aftenposten of Oslo on May 11. This interview carried an illustration of the teacher holding aloft the Greatest Name.

Mrs. Loulie A. Mathews achieved notable success during her recent teaching work in South America. One clipping carries a photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Mathews, with caption, "Fostering International Goodwill—Kindling Flame of Universal Peace.

Another clipping from The Standard of Buenos Aires, appeared during April but the exact date is not given. Headed "The Goal of a New World Order," this article consists of a two-column interview with Mrs. Mathews which outlines very fully the Teachings of the Cause.

In connection with this journey Mrs. Mathews has furnished the following information: "Two groups have been established for study of the Bahá'í Cause in Chile. The first was in Santiago, the capital. A course of talks will be given by Mr. James H. Cranston to the Societe de Femina. The officers have agreed to make this the subject of study and discussion for the coming season. Literature in both Spanish and English was given them.

"The other group has been organized in a society known as New Thought. Like society made up of Germans living in Puerto Varas, Chile, under the direction of Mme. Meta F. de Burmuilh. This group has asked to be put in touch with the German Bahá'í Centers and the latter may be able to help direct this large group so that an Assembly may be formed next year. I am having the "Goal of a New World Order" translated into German because this letter from Shoghi Effendi most fully meets their present need.

"I spoke on the Bahá'í principles and aims at the Y. W. C. A. in Santiago. The heads of the Y. M. C. A., the leaders of the medical center and the heads of the boys club as well as many important people of the city were present. The talk was received with great enthusiasm and I was able to distribute a large amount of literature.

"From Chik we went to the Argentine. . . . They are eager for war in Europe because they have beef, wheat and grain to supply the world. . . . Nevertheless the spirit of the Cause found its way and I affect some very influential people. . . . We should have five or six Assemblies here in two years and a National Assembly in five."

Miss Agnes B. Alexander, who has returned to Japan, sends a long and beautiful article by her published in the Japan Times and Mail of May 23, 1935, entitled "Bahá'í Faith's Ninety-First Anniversary Today."

A public lecture by Allen B. McDaniels, the House of Worship at Buffalo on March 31 was featured in a number of Buffalo papers, including the Courier-Express of March 28, the Times of the same date, and the Evening News of April 1.

The Montclair Times of April 12 reported extensively a public address by Mr. Mountfort Mills, delivered under the auspices of the local spiritual Assembly.

It would be of great interest to trace the results of the special article sent by the Publicity Committee to local Assemblies in April on the subject of the Memorial to Keith Ransom-Kehler at Isfahan, with which was supplied a mat of the design made by Mr. Myron Potter. So far the only clipping received by the N. S. A. was supplied by the Racine Assembly. The illustration of the Memorial, with an excellent statement, appeared in the Racine Journal-Times of April 25.

An address by Mr. N. Mehdii Firooze, delivered at the International Institute, Buffalo, under the auspices of the Spiritual Assembly during June, was well reported by one of the local papers, but the clipping as received carried no date.

The Twenty-fourth Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá celebrated at West Englewood on Saturday, June 29, was the subject of an interesting column in the Bergen Evening Record of July 1.

The Binghamton Assembly has kindly sent a clipping of an item published locally describing the Inter-Assembly meeting held at Windmere Cabin, Hector, N. Y., on Sunday, June 30.

From Whittier, Calif., has come a clipping dated July 3, which features an address by Mr. David Hofman before the 20-30 Club of that city.

In The Flint Journal of July 3 was published a detailed article on the Central States Summer School at Louhelen Ranch.
LOCAL ASSEMBLY ROLL 1935-1936

The local Assemblies which have up to July 27, 1935, supplied the National Spiritual Assembly with the information necessary for recognition of the election held on April 21, 1935:

EXCERPTS FROM HAIIFA NEWS LETTER

"We are happy to report to our friends throughout the world encouraging news of the progress of Bahá'u'lláh's Faith in Abyssinia—the only independent Kingdom in Africa. This country has recently occupied a prominent space on the front pages of the public press of the world. Its fate seems uncertain and thus it is the more interesting to the Bahá'ís and the more significant that at this time of agitation and unrest, the Bahá'í Faith should have started to permeate in that historical land.

"We are happy to report that The Kitáb-i-Iqán, 'a book of unsurpassed pre-eminence among the writings of the Author of the Bahá'í Revelation' has been recently translated into the Arabic language by a committee of learned men appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Egypt. It is now published and in circulation. The translation is very faithful to the original and the style and expression is of purest Arabic.

"Undoubtedly the spread of this book in Arabic will have inestimable influence in the mind of the Arabic speaking world and on those who are acquainted with this language in other countries. It will be the cause of attracting to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh those souls which are pure and honest and ready to accept His Message."

"It is hoped that the believers throughout the world will send for [ continuation of text ] this book and thus help it spread and at the same time encourage the Baha’i Publication Committee of the National Spiritual Assembly of Egypt in its most praiseworthy activities.

"The following translations of The Kitab-i-Iqan have also been published: Russian, French, English, German, Chinese, Albanian and Urdu. It will also be soon translated and published in the following languages: Armenian, Swedish and Danish.

"The friends may also be glad to know that Dr. Esslemont’s famous book, ‘Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era’ has recently been translated and published through the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of India and Burma into the widely used Urdu language of India. Undoubtedly the spread of this book in that vast country will be the cause of the awakening of many souls to the teachings of the Bahá’í Faith. The services rendered by the National Spiritual Assemblies of Egypt and India and by other Spiritual Assemblies throughout the world in translating and publishing Bahá’í literature is indeed invaluable. We pray that divine assistance and confirmation may always be with them on any path of service that they may tread.

"We take great pleasure in reproducing below the gist of the letter addressed to the Spiritual Assembly of Kermanshah, Iran, by Mr. ’Abbas Hormozy, a stalwart believer in the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

"While Mr. Hormozy was fulfilling his duty as a Government employee in the Department connected with road building and inspecting, in the district of Kurdistan, he received a note informing him that owing to ‘administrative circumstances,’ his services were not required any more. Whereupon he called immediately upon his superior and upon further inquiry found that his dismissal was due to the fact of his being a Bahá’í. While there the inspector of police was called in.

"But Mr. Hormozy protests vehemently and courageously saying that he was not charged with any theft or crime to be arrested by the police, and in answer to the questions put to him, replies that he is proud to be a Bahá’í, and the secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of Kurdistan. Then, taking out from his pocket some Bahá’í literature including a letter from our Beloved Guardian, he reads it aloud to the great wonder and surprise of those present.

"Finally his house is thoroughly searched in the presence of police officials, and thirty-three Bahá’í books, twelve photographs together with the Minute books and other papers of the Spiritual Assembly are all confiscated. In the discussion that immediately follows, Mr. Hormozy expounds the greatness and glory of the Bahá’í Faith unhesitatingly and very forcefully. Among other things, addressing the Government representative, he says: ‘How is it that you did not put an end to this Cause when Báb, single-handed, declared Himself in Shiraz? Indeed Nasir-id-Din Sháh, with all his pomp and power, could not stand in the way of this Faith and now that the Bahá’í Faith has encircled the globe after twenty thousand souls have testified to its glory by shedding their blood in the path of martyrdom, is it now that you are waking up to stifle its growth? However, these deeds of persecution lead only to the happiness of the Bahá’ís, and put you to shame before civilized nations. . . . But it will not be long ere these self-same deeds of oppression will lead to the official recognition of the sacred Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in Iran.’

"The conversation reaches such a point that the Government official says: ‘If we remain here five minutes more, Hormozy will make Bahá’ís of all of us!’ and rising he says good-bye and leaves.

"Some days later, Mr. Hormozy is summoned by the same police official and after answering many questions concerning the Bahá’í Faith, he is asked as secretary of the Spiritual Assembly to sign a statement to the effect that no Bahá’í meetings or gatherings would be held any more in Kurdistan. In obedience to his Government, he signs it but only after he has insisted and succeeded in incorporating in that statement the words: ‘the sacred Bahá’í Religion’ when referring to the Cause.

"It is these qualities of self-sacrifice, of indomitable courage and steadfastness, of unshakable love and loyalty, manifest in Mr. Hormozy, that are the distinguishing marks of every true believer and that buttress the institutions of Bahá’u’lláh’s Faith with such strength and solidity that no human power can successfully oppose its triumphant glory."
CABLEGRAM FROM

SHOGHI EFFENDI

The following message was received by the N. S. A. on August 3, 1935, in reply to a cablegram announcing the completion of the Temple clerestory section.

"Gratefully rejoice closing glorious chapter marking termination first stage Formative Period of our Faith. Appeal entire community concentrate henceforth its attention and resources on activities in the teaching field, ensuring thereby the means essential for completion remaining units. Praying continually success." — (signed) SHOGHI.

TEMPLE CLERESTORY SECTION COMPLETED—END OF "FIRST STAGE OF FORMATIVE PERIOD OF FAITH"

The cablegram from Shoghi Effendi published on this page describes for all Bahá’ís the spiritual meaning of the achievement involved in the completion of the clerestory section of the Temple. A vast step forward has been taken toward that glorious consummation he has termed "The Golden Age" of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh, a step made possible by the concentration of effort and the sacrifice of resources by the Bahá’í community.

Believers cannot be too grateful for the privilege of participating in this mighty task and significant enterprise, the building of the "Temple of the Lord" in this Day. Nor should we be unmindful of what it means to have traversed the "first stage of the Formative Period of the Faith."

The National Spiritual Assembly has therefore called a National Meeting at the House of Worship on Saturday, October 26, for commemoration of the completion of the dome unit, with sessions devoted to consultation with representatives of local Spiritual Assemblies.

For a long period of years the Bahá’í community has been devoting its greatest efforts upon two tasks—the establishment of the Administrative Order and the construction of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar, "the bulwark of Bahá’í administration" as the Guardian described the Temple in a cablegram some two years ago. The all-important function of teaching has during that period necessarily been made secondary. The wisdom of Shoghi Effendi is apparent in that lie has led the believers along a path of development which should now make it possible to teach with a fullness of knowledge and a unity of action incomparably greater than the Bahá’í community possessed a decade ago.

In the supplication to be offered up by those who meet on October 26, and in the consultation periods of that gathering, the essential matter is surely to turn the mirror of the heart toward the Manifestation, that we may all receive inspiration and capacity to teach and thereby multiply the numbers and resources of the Bahá’í community in North America.

NEWS OF THE CAUSE

Newspaper clippings received by the National Assembly during recent weeks include, Temple illustration and article in St. Louis Globe-Democrat of July 29, The Chicago Defender of August 3, and The Japan Times and Mail of July 8. In addition, Miss Martha Root has sent copies of three newspapers published in Iceland containing articles about the Cause and her international teaching services. The Daily Orange, the paper issued by the students of Syracuse University, carried in its May 21 number a detailed report of a Bahá’í talk given by Mrs. Bahiyih Lindstrom before Prof. Piper’s class in Living Religion. On May 9, a newspaper of New Milford, Conn., published a very good article on the Bahá’í Convention supplied by Mrs. Jeanne Bolles, delegate from New Haven.

An interesting annual report of Bahá’í activities in New Haven was prepared by Mrs. Clara B. Hillhouse, secretary of the local Assembly last year. Its contents are arranged under the following headings: Correspondence, Public Libraries, Meetings, Speakers, Reports, Study Classes, Gatherings, Memorials, New Believers, Literature (the works which have received special attention during the year), and Convention Delegate. The preparation of such annual reports is greatly to be encouraged, for they not only enable a community to observe its progress from year to year but also provide valuable information to keep for the local Bahá’í history.

Three new believers were enrolled by the Toledo Assembly on April 7, two new members were reported by the Kenosha Assembly on April 4, and five new believers were enrolled by the New York Assembly between January and March 1, in addition to thirteen added previously during that Bahá’í year. Three new believers were reported by the Peoria Assembly on July 19, and two more have been added by transfer from other communities. The Geyserville Assembly on February 10 gave a dinner to five newly enrolled believers. The Cincinnati Assembly enrolled three new believers on July 24. Other enrollments recently an-announced are: Los Angeles, four believers; Lima, Ohio, one; Eliot, Maine, one; Urbana, one; Park Ridge, Illinois, two; Chicago, two.

Under the supervision of the Philadelphia Assembly, three members of the Revel family have been holding study classes at Atlantic City. Fourteen people seem interested, and it is hoped that they will constitute a group and conduct regular study meetings.

The Washington Assembly arranged a series of five public meetings at Dodge Hotel between January 11 and April 19, the program presenting the following subjects: "The Progression of Religion Through the Ages," "Fulfilment of Religious Expectations and Prophecy," "The New World Order," "The Renaissance of Religion," and "Whence Comes the Light." The speakers as announced were: Mrs. Roger Boyle, Stanwood Cobb, Miss Doris Lohse, Mrs. E. L. Mattern, Allen B. McDaniel, Dr. Alfredo War- saw, Paul Haney, Charles Mason Re- mey, Miss Florence King.

Teaching activities reported by Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Moffett for the period May 1, 1934 to April 1, 1935 included meetings in eight cities of Illinois and Wisconsin, 187 public addresses by Mrs. Moffett and 34 by Mr. Moffett.

The report of the Cincinnati Assembly for the year ending April 21 states that this period was one of marked expansion in established activities and new undertakings. "The harmony with which all meetings and activities were conducted showed a deepening in the understanding of the principle of unity and its application." Miss Virginia Taylor conducted a study class which employed the teaching outline with thirty-six lessons. Study groups were also held by Miss Hilda Stauss and Miss Elsie Austin. Lothar W. Schurgast began an Esperanto Class at the Public Library on October 3. Books and magazines have been placed in libraries. Gratifying success was achieved in securing newspaper publicity. Public addresses were delivered by Lothar W. Schurgast and Benjamin R. Taylor. "The crowning achievement of the year has been the successful conducting of the first Race Amity Conference in Cincinnati. Seventeen speakers were secured for a Conference of four sessions held April 11, 12 and 13, 1935. The attractiveness of the programs was increased by a number of musical selections. When approached, the speakers' responses were hearty and enthusiastic and this warmth of enthusiasm and interest continued through each talk. Not only was there a great unity among the Baha'is in this great work which Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá accomplished and now being stressed by Shoghi Effendi, but there was a splendid spirit of cooperation expressed by every one approached for any service he might render, including speakers, musicians, clubs, organizations and newspapers. Particularly are we indebted to the Y. W. C. A. for the use of their auditorium."

From reports received from the Miami Assembly: "Every Tuesday night an Esperanto Class conducted by Miss Josephine Kruka. After the Esperanto Class a class on Administration conducted by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf. Sunday afternoon public meeting with talks by Mrs. Greenleaf. . . We count ourselves fortunate in having had Mrs. Greenleaf for our teacher this season. . . Miss Kruka's work is also appreciated, and will surely prove to be a great medium for spreading the Cause in our community. We have also been fortunate in having had so many inspiring visitors, such as Miss Knobloch, the Misses Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Bowman and Mr. Seals."

The Los Angeles Assembly has developed its local Baha'i News into a news letter of exceptional interest. The friends in that city are truly fortunate in receiving such a complete report each month, including local meetings, plans of the local Assembly, the current Baha'i calendar, activities of the friends, and ways in which the believers can cooperate in national Baha'i plans.

From a report sent by the Program Committee of the Boston Assembly: "The Boston Baha'i community has added the devotion and enthusiasm of fourteen new members during the past three years. Last autumn a room was selected in which to hold meetings in the Kensington Building, Boylston Street. The lecture season was opened by Prof. Glenn A. Shock, who generously responded to an invitation to speak each Sunday evening during the month of October. He spoke on The New World Order, beginning with scholarly and discriminating comparisons between the lack of administrative guidance during the early Christian Dispensation and the wealth of Bahá'u'lláh's written provisions for the establishment of the Baha'i Dispensation."

"Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf came next to inspire everyone with her radiance, faith and knowledge. "During the season twelve speakers came from other communities, some of whom were traveling teachers, and ten from our own Center spoke, some of them more than once, each adding valuable contributions to our ever-enlarging consciousness of the stupendous power conferred upon the entire human race through the advent of Bahá'u'lláh. During each week four study classes have been held. One held by Alfred E. Lunt on Wednesday evenings particularly designed to benefit new believers and inquirers. Others were held at the homes of Mrs. Harold Bowditch, Mrs. Mobrey Oglesby, and Mrs. George Nelson together with Miss Louise Drake Wright."

"Mrs. Bechtold of Brooklyn came to attend an Amity Convention and spoke eloquently of the joy and inspiration that close association with all races and peoples bring into life. "Toward the end of the season a special regional effort was made to reach the general public through advertising the lectures and sending many printed programs to eminent and thoughtful persons in this vicinity. The first of these lectures was given by Horace Holley, at Wesleyan Hall. . . The following week Allen B., McDaniel gave a delightfully illustrated lecture on 'Temple Building.'"

Copies of the Braille edition of the Tablet of Iqan have been placed in the following institutions: Carnegie Library, Pittsburgh, Chicago Public Library, Cincinnati Public Library, Philadelphia Free Library, National Library for the Blind, Washington Library of Congress, Braille Department, Washington, New York Public Library, Perkins Institute, Watertown, Mass., and a copy was also sent to Shoghi Effendi. This edition was made by Mrs. Nellie S. French at the Guardian's request.

A few details of Mrs. Sylvia Mattox's teaching work in Europe last winter are now available. She presented a copy of The Baha'i World to an Engineering College in Wales, where Aziz Yazdi, a student from Port Said, felt it would help spread the Message among the students. Another copy was given to the new Baha'i group at Orpington, near London. Photographs of the Temple with a descriptive article were sent to many newspapers in England. In Germany, Mrs. Mattox supplied information to three newspapers for an article about the Temple, and at Hamburg she arranged for three articles announcing the arrival of Dr. and Mme. Fozdar, Baha'is from Bombay. She encountered a deep interest in the subject of the new World Order on the part of thoughtful people in Germany.

Miss Julia Goldman has recently spent a few weeks in England, visiting Baha'i centers at London, Broadstone, Bournemouth and Bradford. Proceeding to Paris, she was among those who met Mrs. True's party on their return from Haifa. In Sweden Miss Goldman was the guest of a prominent peace worker, meeting Miss Martha Root and Miss Sorenson at Copenhagen on the way. At Stockholm a number of interesting contacts were made, resulting in the formation of a group of inquirers. One incident was an interview with the famous archaeologist and explorer, Sven Hedin, who promised to see the Temple on his next visit to Chicago. Her next journey was to Geneva, where Miss Goldman found opportunity to interview a number of delegates at the meetings of the Institute of Intellectual Cooperation. While in Stockholm, two interviews with Miss Goldman were published in the local press.

The following item has been received from Paris:

"During the week of May 12, Mrs. Corrine True and Dr. Catharine True arrived in Paris, en route to America from Haifa. Miss Julia Goldman arrived from London. The following week Mrs. Emogene Hoag and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop attended a meeting of the friends, arranged by Mme. Dreyfus-Barney in her home. She, too, had just returned from Haifa, and from the Near East. In Istanbul Mme. Dreyfus-Barney attended the International Women's Conference.

"At the meeting on Sunday, May 19th, Count Wachmeister, a Swedish composer who is a friend of the Cause, told of having read in a Swedish journal that His Majesty, the King of Denmark, had accepted literature on the Baha'i Faith. The books were presented by Mrs. Ericson, a Swedish woman, American-born."

PASSING OF PIONEER BAHAI IN NEW ZEALAND

"It is with profound sorrow we record the ascension on December 20, 1934, of Mrs. Sarah Blundell of Auckland, New Zealand.

"Mrs. Blundell was one of the little band of pioneer Baha'is who responded to the call of Baha'u'llah through the instrumentality of Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Dunn in 1924. Since that time Mrs. Blundell has been a devoted servant of the Cause. Her radiant personality, her sincerity of purpose, and her wonderful gift of gracious speech made her not only beloved by all who came in contact with her, but a prominent figure in the history of the Baha'i Cause in New Zealand.

"Her name will be honored and revered throughout the annals of the Cause in this land, for the story of her beautiful character, her generosity and work for any cause promoting Baha'i ideals will be handed down by Baha'is and non-Baha'is alike as a precious memory and example to posterity."

(From Spiritual Assembly of Auckland.)

O phoenix of that immortal flame kindled in the sacred Tree! Baha'u'llah (may my life, my soul, my spirit be offered up as a sacrifice unto His loyal servants) hath, during His last days on earth, given the most emphatic promise that, through the outpourings of the grace of God and the aid and assistance vouchsafed from His Kingdom on high, souls will arise and holy beings appear who, as stars, would adorn the firmament of divine Guidance; illumine the dayspring of loving kindness and bounty; manifest the signs of the unity of God; shine with the light of sanctity and purity; receive their full measure of divine inspiration; raise high the sacred torch of faith; stand firm as the rock and immovable as the mountain; and grow to become luminaries in the heavens of His Revelation, mighty channels of God's bountiful care, heralds calling forth the name of the One True God, and establishers of the world's supreme foundation. -ABDU'L-BAHA.

APPEAL FOR TRAINED WORKERS

The development of administrative work has grown to the point where certain of the National Committees are in need of trained workers in a position to devote spare time to clerical work. Capacity in stenography and typewriting is essential, and the National Assembly will welcome offers of assistance from volunteers.

BAHAI GREETING TO ESPERANTO CONVENTION

The following greeting was presented by the National Spiritual Assembly to the Twenty-eighth Annual Congress of the Esperanto Association of North America, held at New York on July 1, 2 and 3, 1935.

The following greeting was presented by the National Spiritual Assembly to the Twenty-eighth Annual Congress of the Esperanto Association of North America, held at New York on July 1, 2 and 3, 1935.
Greetings to the Esperanto Association of North America from the Baha'is of the United States and Canada!

Among the basic precepts of Baha'u'llah is the injunction that, "Their Majesties, the Kings—may God assist them—or the counsellors of the earth, must consult together and appoint one of the existing languages, or a new language, and instruct the children therein in all the schools of the world: and the same must be done with respect to writing also. In such case the earth will be considered as one. Blessed is he who heareth the voice and fulfilleth that which is commanded on the part of God, the Lord of the Great Throne!"

Later, His son, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, expounding the teachings of His Father, said in the course of an address to the Esperanto Society of Edinburgh on the 7th of January, 1913, "I repeat, the most important thing in the world is the realization of an auxiliary international language. One- ness of language will transform mankind into one world, remove religious misunderstandings and unite East and West in the spirit of brotherhood and love. This auxiliary international language will gather the nations under one standard, as if the five continents of the world had become one; for then mutual interchange of thought will be possible for all."

Thus, in complete unity with the lofty aim of your Association the followers of Baha'u'llah are happy to avail themselves of the opportunity which your Congress offers to congratulate you upon the world achievements which your Society has already accomplished and to offer their heartfelt good wishes for continued success in your great purpose.

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada.

By: Mountfort Mills, Chairman.

IN MEMORIAM

The friends are requested to remember in prayer these departed believers: Mr. George Russell Monroe, Vancouver. Mrs. C. E. Cuddeback, San Francisco. Mrs. Helen M. Babo, Chicago.

INFORMATION WANTED FOR BAHAI HISTORY

Baha'is who have accurate and first-hand information, or written records, about the Baha'i significance of the property owned by the late Mrs. Agnes Parsons at Dublin, N. H.—where the Master made a visit in 1912—or about Mrs. Parsons' own Baha'i activities, are requested to place this information at the disposal of Miss Leona Barnitz of the Baha'i community of Washington, D. C. Miss Barnitz, at Mrs. Parson's request, is compiling a history of these matters.

O ye beloved of God! O ye children of His Kingdom! Vertily, verily the new heaven and the new earth are come. The holy City, New Jerusalem, hath come down from on high in the form of a maid of heaven, veiled, beauteous, and unique, and prepared for reunion with her lovers on earth. The angelic company of the celestial Concourse have joined in a call that hath rung throughout the universe, all loudly and mightily acclaiming: "Hail, O City of God! Abide Thou, and make Thy habitation with the pure, virtuous and holy servants of Thine; for they are Thy people, and Thou art their Lord!"

He hath wiped away their tears, kindled their light, rejoiced their hearts and enraptured their souls. Death shall no more overtake them; sorrow, crying and tribulation affict
A PROCEDURE FOR THE CONDUCT OF THE LOCAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Adopted by
The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada

INTRODUCTION

"A perusal of some of the words of Bahá’u’lláh and 'Abdu’l-Bahá on the duties and functions of the Spiritual Assemblies in every land (later to be designated as the local Houses of Justice), emphatically reveals the sacredness of their nature, the wide scope of their activity, and the grave responsibility which rests upon them."

—SHOGHI EFFENDI, March 5, 1922

"The Lord hath ordained that in every city a House of Justice be established, wherein shall gather counselors to the number of Bahá. . . . It behooveth them to be the trusted ones of the Merciful among men and to regard themselves as the guardians appointed of God for all that dwell on earth. It is incumbent upon them to take counsel together and to have regard for the interests of the servants of God, for His sake, even as they regard their own interests, and to choose that which is meet and seemly. Thus hath the Lord your God commanded you. Beware lest ye put away that which is clearly revealed in His Tablet. Fear God, O ye that perceive."

—BAHÁ’U’LLÁH

"It is incumbent upon every one not to take any step without consulting the Spiritual Assembly, and they must assuredly obey with heart and soul its bidding and be submissive unto it, that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Otherwise every person will act independently and after his own judgment, will follow his own desire, and do harm to the Cause.

"The prime requisites for them that take counsel together are purity of motive, radiance of spirit, detachment from all else save God, attraction to His Divine Fragrance, humility and lowliness amongst His loved ones, patience and long-suffering in difficulties and servitude to His exalted Threshold. Should they be graciously aided to acquire these attributes, victory from the unseen Kingdom of Bahá shall be vouchsafed to them. In this day, Assemblies of consultation are of the greatest importance and a vital necessity. Obedience unto them is essential and obligatory. The members thereof must take counsel together in such wise that no occasion for ill-feeling or discord may arise. This can be attained when every member expresseth with absolute freedom his own opinion and setteth forth his argument. Should any one oppose, he must on no account feel hurt for not until matters are fully discussed can the right way be revealed. The shining spark of truth cometh forth only after the clash of differing opinions. If, after discussion, a decision be carried unanimously, well and good; but if, the Lord forbid, difference of opinion should arise, a majority of voices must prevail. . . ." The first condition is absolute love and harmony amongst the members of the Assembly. They must be wholly free from estrangement and must manifest in themselves the Unity of God, for they are the waves of one sea, the drops of one river, the stars of one heaven, the rays of one sun, the trees of one orchard, the flowers of one garden. Should harmony of thought and absolute unity be non-existent, that gathering shall be dispersed and that Assembly be brought to naught. The second condition:—They must when coming together turn their faces to the Kingdom on High and ask aid from the Realm of Glory. They must then proceed with the utmost devotion, courtesy, dignity, care and moderation to express their views. They must in every matter search out the truth and not insist upon their own opinion, for stubbornness and persistence in one's views will lead ultimately to discord and wrangling and the truth will remain hidden. The honored members must with all freedom express their own thoughts, and it is in no wise permissible for one to he-little the thought of another, nay, he must with moderation set forth the truth, and should differences of opinion arise a majority of voices must prevail, and all must obey and submit to the majority. It is again not permitted that any one of the honored members object to or censure, whether in or out of the meeting, any decision arrived at previously, though that decision be not right, for such criticism would prevent any decision from being enforced. In short, whatsoever thing is arranged in harmony and with love and purity of motive, its result is light, and should the least trace of estrangement prevail the result shall be darkness upon darkness. . . . If this be so-regarded, that Assembly shall be of God, but otherwise it shall lead to coolness and alienation that proceed from the Evil One. Discussions must all be confined to spiritual matters that pertain to the training of souls, the instruction of children, the relief of the poor, the help of the feeble throughout all classes in the world, kindness to all peoples, the diffusion of the fragrances of God and the exaltation of His Holy Word. Should they endeavor to fulfill these conditions the Grace of the Holy Spirit shall be vouchsafed unto them, and that Assembly shall become the center of the Divine blessings, the hosts of Divine confirmation shall come to their aid and they shall day by day receive a new effusion of Spirit."—'ABDU’L-BAHÁ

"The importance, nay the absolute necessity of these local Assemblies is manifest when we realize that in the days to come they will evolve into the local House of Justice, and at present provide the firm foundation on which the structure of the Master’s Will is to be reared in future.

"In order to avoid division and disruption, that the Cause may not fall a prey to conflicting interpretations, and lose thereby its purity and pristine vigor, that its affairs may be conducted with efficiency and promptness, it is necessary that every one (i. e., every member of the Bahá’í community) should conscientiously take an active part in the election of these Assemblies, abide by their decision, enforce their decree, and cooperate with them whole-heartedly in their task of stimulating the growth of the Movement throughout all regions. The members of these Assemblies, on their part, must disregard utterly their own likes and dislikes, their personal interests and inclinations, and concentrate their minds upon those measures that will conduce to the welfare and happiness of the Baha’i community and promote the common weal.”—Shoghi Effendi, March 12, 1923.

“Let us recall His explicit and often-repeated assurance that every Assembly elected in that rarified atmosphere of selflessness and detachment is, in truth, appointed of God, that its verdict is truly inspired, that its ability to address itself to the welfare of the Baha’i community shall be guided and controlled by the provisions of those By-Laws. Each local Spiritual Assembly, and all members of the local Baha’i community, shall be guided and controlled by the provisions of those By-Laws.

I. FUNCTIONS OF THE LOCAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The various functions of the local Spiritual Assembly, and its nature as a constitutional body, are duly set forth in Article VII of the By-Laws of the National Spiritual Assembly, and are more definitely defined in the By-Laws of a local Spiritual Assembly approved by the National Spiritual Assembly and recommended by the Guardian. Each local Spiritual Assembly, and all members of the local Baha’i community, shall be guided and controlled by the provisions of those By-Laws.

II. MEETINGS OF THE LOCAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

In addition to its observance of the general functions vested in the institution of a Spiritual Assembly, each Spiritual Assembly has need of a procedure for the conduct of its meetings. The following items represent the outline of the parliamentary rules of procedure which the National Spiritual Assembly has adopted and recommends to each and every local Spiritual Assembly throughout the United States and Canada.

Calling of Meetings

A meeting of the Spiritual Assembly is valid only when it has been duly called, that is, when each and every member has been informed of the time and place. The general practice is for the Assembly to decide upon some regular time and place for its meetings throughout the Baha’i year, and this decision when recorded in the Minutes is sufficient notice to the members. When the regular schedule cannot be followed, or the need arises for a special meeting, the secretary, on request by the chairman or any three members of the Spiritual Assembly, should send due notice to all the members.

Order of Business

Roll call by the Secretary (or Recording Secretary).

Prayer.

Reading and approval of Minutes of previous meeting.

Report of Secretary (or Corresponding Secretary), including presentation of letters received by the Assembly since its last meeting, and of any and all recommendations duly adopted by the community at the last Nineteen Day Feast.

Report of Treasurer.

Report of Committees.

Unfinished business.

New business, including conferences with members of the community and with applicants for enrollment as members of the community.

Closing Prayer.

Conduct of Business

A Spiritual Assembly, in maintaining its threefold function of a body given (within the limits of its jurisdiction) an executive, a legislative and a judicial capacity, is charged with responsibility for initiating action and making decisions. Its meetings, therefore, revolve around various definite matters which require deliberation and collective decision, and it is incumbent upon the members, one and all, to address themselves to the subject under discussion and not engage in general speeches of an irrelevant character.

Every subject or problem before an Assembly is most efficiently handled when the following process is observed: first, ascertained and agreement upon the facts; second, agreement upon the spiritual or administrative Teachings which the question involves; third, full and frank discussion of the matter, leading up to the offering of a resolution; and fourth, voting upon the resolution.

A resolution, or motion, is not subject to discussion or vote until duly made and seconded. It is preferable to have each resolution clear and complete in itself, but when an amendment is duly made and seconded, the chairman shall call for a vote on the amendment first and then on the original motion. An amendment must be relevant to, and not contravene, the subject matter of the motion.

The chairman, or other presiding officer, has the same power and responsibility for discussion and voting upon motions as other members of the Assembly.

Discussion of any matter before the Assembly may be terminated by a motion duly made, seconded and voted calling upon the chairman to put the matter to a vote or to proceed to the next matter on the agenda. The purpose of this procedure is to prevent any member or members from prolonging the discussion beyond the point at which full opportunity has been given all members to express their views.

When the Assembly has taken action upon any matter, the action is binding upon all members, whether present or absent from the meeting at which the action was taken. Individual views and opinions must be subordinated to the will of the Assembly when a decision has been made. A Spiritual Assembly is an administrative unit, as it is a spiritual unit, and therefore no distinction between “majority” and “minority” groups or factions can be recognized. Each member must give undivided loyalty to the institution to which he or she has been elected.

Any action taken by the Assembly can be reconsidered at a later meeting, on motion duly made, seconded and carried. This reconsideration, according to the result of the consultation, may lead to a revision or the annulment of the prior action. If a majority is unwilling to reconsider the prior action, further discussion of the matter by any member is improper.

The Assembly has a responsibility in filling a vacancy caused by the inability of any member to attend the meetings. “It is only too obvious that unless a member can attend regularly the meetings of his local Assembly, it would be impossible for him to discharge the duties incumbent upon him, and to fulfill his responsibilities as a representative of the community. Membership in a local Spiritual Assembly carries with it, indeed, the obligation and capacity to remain in close touch with local Baha’i activities, and ability to attend regularly the sessions of the Assembly.”—Shoghi Effendi, January 27, 1935.

The Spiritual Assembly, as a permanent body, is responsible for maintaining all its records, including Minutes of meetings, correspondence and financial records, throughout its existence as a Baha’i institution. Each officer, therefore, on completing his or her term of office, shall turn over to the Assembly all records pertaining to the business of the Assembly.

III. CONSULTATION WITH THE COMMUNITY

A. The institution of the Nineteen Day Feast provides the recognized and regular occasion for general consultation on the part of the community, and for consultation between the Spiritual Assembly and the members of the community. The conduct of the period of consultation at Nineteen Day Feasts is a vital function of each Spiritual Assembly.

From Words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, "The Nineteen Day Feast was inaugurated by the Bible and ratified by Bahá’u’lláh, in His Holy Book, the Aqdas, as an institution which enables the object to be achieved, that through this fellowship hearts may become perfectly united, and reciprocity and mutual helpfulness be established. Because the members of the world of humanity are unable to exist without being banded together, cooperation and helpfulness is the basis of human society. Without the realization of these two great principles no great movement is pressed forward." (London, England, December 29, 1912. Quoted in Bahá’í News No. 33.)

The Nineteen Day Feast has been described by the Guardian as the foundation of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh. It is to be conducted according to the following program: the first part, entirely spiritual in character, is devoted to readings from Bahá’í Sacred Writings; the second part consists of general consultation on the affairs of the Cause. The third part is the material feast and social meeting of all the believers, and should maintain the spiritual nature of the Feast.

Báhá’ís should regard this Feast as the very heart of their spiritual activity, their participation in the mystery of the Holy Utterance, their steadfast unity one with another in a universality raised high above the limitations of race, class, nationality, sect, and personality, and their privilege of contributing to the power of the Cause in the realm of collective action.

The Spiritual Assembly is responsible for the holding of the Nineteen Day Feast. If the Bahá’í calendar for some adequate reason cannot be observed, the Assembly may arrange to hold a Feast at the nearest possible date.

Only members of the Bahá’í community, and visiting Bahá’ís from other communities, may attend these meetings, but young people of less than twenty-one years of age, who have studied the Teachings and declared their intention of joining the community on reaching the age of twenty-one, may also attend.

Regular attendance at the Nineteen Day Feast is incumbent upon every Bahá’í, illness or absence from the city being the only justification for absence. Believers are expected to arrange their personal affairs so as to enable them to observe the Bahá’í calendar.

Order of Business for the Consultation Period

The chairman or other appointed representative of the Spiritual Assembly presides during the period of consultation.

The Spiritual Assembly reports to the community whatever communications have been received from the Guardian and the National Spiritual Assembly, and provides opportunity for general discussion.

The Assembly likewise reports its own activities and plans, including committee appointments that may have been made since the last Feast, the financial report, arrangements made for public meetings, and in general share with the community all matters that concern the Faith. These reports are to be followed by general consultation.

A matter of vital importance at this meeting is the consideration of national and international Bahá’í affairs, to strengthen the capacity of the community to cooperate in promotion of the larger Bahá’í interests and to deepen the understanding of all believers concerning the relation of the local community to the Bahá’í World Community.

Individual Bahá’ís are to find in the Nineteen Day Feast the channel through which to make suggestions and recommendations to the National Spiritual Assembly. These recommendations are offered first to the local community, and when adopted by the community come before the local Assembly, which then may in its discretion forward the recommendation to the National Spiritual Assembly accompanied by its own considered view.

Provision is to be made for reports from committees, with discussion of each report. Finally, the meeting is to be open for suggestions and recommendations from individual believers on any matter affecting the Cause.

The local Bahá’í community may adopt by majority vote any resolution which it wishes collectively to record as its advice and recommendation to the Spiritual Assembly.

Upon each member of the community lies the obligation to make his or her utmost contribution to the consultation, the ideal being a gathering of Bahá’ís inspired with one spirit and concentrating upon the one aim to further the interests of the Faith. The Secretary of the Assembly records each resolution adopted by the community, as well as the various suggestions advanced during the meeting, in order to report these to the Spiritual Assembly for its consideration. Whatever action the Assembly takes is to be reported at a later Nineteen Day Feast.

Matters of a personal nature should be brought to the Spiritual Assembly and not to the community at the Nineteen Day Feast. Concerning the attitude with which believers should come to these Feasts, the Master has said, “You must free yourselves from everything that is in your hearts, before you enter.” (Bahá’í News Letter of the N. S. A. of Germany and Austria, December, 1931.)

B. The Annual Meeting on April 21, called for the election of the Spiritual Assembly, provides the occasion for the presentation of annual reports by the Assembly and by all its Committees.

The chairman of the outgoing Assembly presides at this meeting.

The Order of Business includes: Reading of the call of the meeting, reading of appropriate Bahá’í passages bearing upon the subject of the election, appointment of tellers, distribution of ballots, prayers for the spiritual guidance of the voters, the election, presentation of annual reports, tellers’ report of the election, approval of the tellers’ report.

C. The Annual Meeting for the election of Convention delegate (or delegates) is likewise presided over by the Assembly chairman, and except for the annual reports the Order of Business is similar to that observed at the meeting held each April 21. It is preferable for the Spiritual Assembly to arrange a special meeting for the election of delegates, and not hold this election during the consultation period of a Nineteen Day Feast.

D. In addition to these occasions for general consultation, the Spiritual Assembly is to give consultation to individual believers whenever requested.

During such consultation with individual believers, the Assembly should observe the following principles: the impartiality of each of its members with respect to all matters under discussion; the freedom of the individual Bahá'í to express his views, feelings and recommendations on any matter affecting the interests of the Cause, the confidential character of this consultation, and the principle that the Spiritual Assembly does not adopt any resolution, or make any final decision, until the party or parties have withdrawn from the meeting.

Appeals from decisions of a local Spiritual Assembly are provided for in the By-Laws and the procedure fully described in a statement published in Bahá'í News, February, 1933.

When confronted with evidences of unhappiness, whether directed against the Assembly or against members of the community, the Spiritual Assembly should realize that its relationship to the believers is not merely that of a formal constitutional body but also that of a spiritual institution called upon to manifest the attributes of courtesy, patience and loving insight. Many conditions are not to be remedied by the exercise of power and authority but rather by a sympathetic understanding of the sources of the difficulty in the hearts of the friends. As 'Abdu'l-Bahá has explained, some of the people are children and must be trained, some are ignorant and must be educated, some are sick and must be healed. Where, however, the problem is not of this order but represents flagrant disobedience and disloyalty to the Cause itself, in that case the Assembly should consult with the National Spiritual Assembly concerning the necessity for disciplinary action.

Members of the Bahá'í community, for their part, should do their utmost by prayer and meditation to remain always in a positive and joyous spiritual condition, bearing in mind the Tablets which call upon Bahá'ís to serve the world of humanity and not waste their precious energies in negative complaints.

IV. BAHA'I ANNIVERSARIES, FESTIVALS AND DAYS OF FASTING

The Spiritual Assembly, among its various duties and responsibilities, will provide for the general observance by the local community of the following Holy Days:

Feast of Ridván (Declaration of Bahá'u'lláh) April 21-May 2, 1863.
Declaration of the Báb, May 23, 1844.
Ascension of Bahá'u'lláh, May 29, 1892.
Martyrdom of the Báb, July 9, 1850.
Birth of the Báb, October 20, 1819.
Birth of Bahá'u'lláh, November 12, 1817.
Day of the Covenant, November 26.
Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, November 28, 1921.
Period of the Fast, nineteen days beginning March 2.
Feast of Naw-Ruz (Bahá'í New Year), March 21.
change in the magazine. Horace Holley explained that the new plan had been recommended by a special editorial committee appointed by the N. S. A. and answered questions about details of the work. Roy C. Wilhelm urged general support of the magazine, and Miss Orella Rexford declared that teachers should see that public Libraries and study groups receive copies.

Publishing. Miss Bertha Herklots represented the Publishing Committee, in the absence of Mrs. Clara R. Wood. From the committee's annual report (published in the April number of BAHÁ’Í NEWS) Miss Herklots gave special emphasis to the definite methods by which local Assemblies can cooperate for the advancement of this important branch of the work.

Mrs. Nellie S. French reported on the new Braille edition of the Íqán, which will soon be in circulation among the larger public Libraries, as the Braille edition of BAHÁ’U’LLÁH and the New Era has for some time been in circulation.

The question of lantern slides was then raised, with particular reference to a set of slides which had been prepared by the late Louis Bourgeois and to the possibility of having slides prepared from illustrations in The Dawn-Breakers and in The Bahá’í World. The N. S. A. was requested to look into this matter.

A poem, "O Prophet Heart," composed by Philip Marangello, was read by the author, who reported that it has been set to music and copies will soon be available.

Alfred E. Lunt, Convention chairman, stating that the hour of adjournment was at hand, made final appeal that the believers respond wholeheartedly to the Guardian's cabled message to the Convention.

Voted: That the delegates record their thanks to the Convention officers for the most glorious Convention yet held.

In conclusion of this brief and wholly factual record of proceedings, it must be made clear to all Bahá'ís that the Twenty-Seventh Annual Convention was a stirring and joyous occasion, a true spiritual experience for all who had the privilege to attend. The collective consciousness was turned wholly to consideration of general Bahá'í matters, with the result that the mystery of consultation was made manifest. On the foundation of this unity, which the delegates have carried back to their respective communities, may the entire American Bahá'í community erect a structure of mighty achievement this coming year.

ANNUAL REPORT

National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada

To the Delegates,
Twenty-Seventh Annual Convention, Beloved Bahá'í friends:

The spiritual character and controlling principle of the Bahá'í year now brought to a close were established for us by Shoghi Effendi in these words dated September 16, 1934:

"The situation in Persia which is growing from bad to worse, the necessary measures which should be taken to insure the uninterrupted completion of the clerestory section of the Temple, the adoption of such measures as will stimulate the teaching campaign in America, the exercise of the utmost vigilance lest the authorities in Soviet Russia inflict any injury upon Bahá'í lives and institutions, the extension of any support that may be required to safeguard the interests of the Cause at its most vital and international center to ward off the malicious attacks of enemies from both within and without—these are the outstanding issues which demand the sustained and concentrated attention of every believer."

This statement of outstanding issues, more definitely and more vigorously than in any previous communication from the Guardian, has served to summon each and every loyal Bahá'í to arise above undue concern with local and even national matters and assume his duties and responsibilities as citizen in that World Order of BAHÁ’U’LLÁH to establish which the Divine Will has revealed itself to mankind. Now in the realm of action the Bahá'ís have the supreme privilege of receiving guidance and inspiration from one central point, even as since the Announcement of the Bahá'ís the believers have had one central point in the realm of the soul.

In its fulness of meaning, in its call for positive action, the statement can not be limited to any single period of time. Rather may we perceive in it the beginning of an era of greater maturity, larger responsibility, as the followers of BAHÁ’U’LLÁH unite in resistance to the forces of the world.

In preparation for this responsibility, the Guardian has conducted us through two preliminary phases of development since the Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The first phase was that of learning the principles of the administrative order. The second phase was that of learning the principles of the World Order of BAHÁ’U’LLÁH, a phase marked by the successive "World Order" letters which began in February, 1929. The third phase, now beginning, is the application of this knowledge to important problems—problems which relate the Cause to society as a whole, and not merely those minor problems of our own Bahá'í relationships which have engaged our attention and almost exhausted our powers in previous years.

The thoughtful believer will not fail to pursue this analysis until he can perceive the underlying factors in the progress of the Faith as a whole. What has happened during this Bahá'í year, in brief, is that an entirely new emphasis has been given all Bahá'í thought and action, identically the same emphasis which life lays upon the individual on that day when childhood and youth, with their pre-occupations with self, first begin to realize the tasks which usher in the time of maturity. What we have learned since 1921, and what we have established as our attitude toward the Cause and toward life, are now undergoing supreme test until it has been proved that individually and collectively we are worthy to uphold the true and highest interests of a Divine Faith.

Nor will it be overlooked, as we adopt this larger perspective, that the Guardian issued his first communication on the World Order of BAHÁ’U’LLÁH about six months before the world's economic order underwent so fatal a collapse in the autumn of 1929. The germ of the new order became apparent to Bahá’ís before the world received its first warning that the old order could not longer endure. These Providential matters are surely our first and deepest concern, since only as we grasp them can we adjust ourselves to that irresistible motion of progress which is the sign of the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.

One word more on this most thrilling and vital of Bahá’í topics. In the communication received just before the Annual Convention of 1934, published as "The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh," Shoghi Effendi brought together in one perfect unity all those aspects of the Revelation which, in our human limitations, had been considering as separate realities; the Station of Manifestations, the mysterious Mission of the Center of the Covenant, the full significance of His Will and Testament, and the nature of that Order which the Testament bequeaths to the friends. In a communication so comprehensive, so organic, so unified in its wholeness and so perfected in its parts, we may now realize that Shoghi Effendi marked definitely for us an ending of our education in details of Bahá’í service, and a beginning of our responsibility in demonstrating our faith and our unity to our fellow-men.

Indeed, the successive steps which Shoghi Effendi has taken to train, to instruct and to discipline the Bahá’í community are all paralleled by a swift continuation of that process of disintegration in human society which has become the more apparent as efforts to attain peace and stability have successively failed. Fourteen years ago the Bahá’í community was still as a child in the household of civilization, apparently bearing no responsibility for the fate of that household, and therefore concerned only with the joys and sorrows of the child’s own growth, the dreams of its own future. Today, with the household in dire confusion and distress, the youth born of the new age is called upon to prove his birthright and demonstrate his capacity to achieve eternal peace, his elders having failed.

By comparison with that standard of action, every local or personal issue assumes only a relative importance. Such issues can no longer entirely surround and engulf us at the expense of the world vision which the Guardian has given us this year. Larger than the individual is the local community; larger than the local community is the national community; larger still than any national community is the World Order which now claims not merely our passive acceptance and belief but a devotion and consecration which a collapsing society will test with fire.

Major Events

Without the perspective of time it is impossible to determine precisely which events of a Bahá’í year have major importance. One may, nevertheless, without finally, refer to certain events as representing occurrences or trends meriting special attention.

1. As has been reported to the friends, the Guardian has clarified the problem of how to present the Will and Testament to new believers. In accordance with his instructions, a new edition of the Testament has been prepared and published which, until further instructions are given, includes the text to be explained to and accepted by those who apply for enrollment as Bahá’ís. The supplementary excerpts which precede and follow the selections from the Testament are in themselves the most perfect of explanations. The edition consisting of the complete text is now almost exhausted, but the National Spiritual Assembly has recorded its responsibility in continuing to supply at least one complete text to each newly elected Spiritual Assembly.

2. The contract for the completion of the clerestory section of the Temple dome unit, one of the outstanding issues mentioned by Shoghi Effendi, has throughout this year proceeded as rapidly as weather permitted. Despite the economic difficulty which has prevailed, the believers have made notable sacrifices in order to meet the collective obligation, the fulfillment of which will mean that the Dome unit is at last entirely finished.

In the case of future Temple construction, the Guardian has advised that contracts be entered into by the Trustees only when the necessary amount of cash is actually on hand. The Dome unit, however, was undertaken and has been carried on in a spirit of trust that the Guardian’s wishes and instructions would be voluntarily met.

In September and in December, the difference between income and obligation compelled the National Spiritual Assembly to issue an appeal directed to every American believer lest the work in its final stages be temporarily abandoned. All along it has been felt that the problem was not economic but spiritual; not a matter of dollars and cents but one of resolution and of unified response. For, in its ultimate significance, the building of the Temple is not an end in itself. It is a vital step in the training of the Bahá’í community in the divine art of unity. As such a tremendous task is achieved, the power comes to carry out other collective missions in service to the beloved Cause. National achievement is nothing else than a stepping stone to international services.

The important details of this subject will be presented in the Treasurer’s report. At this time it is important to emphasize the fact that this obligation is not yet fully discharged.

3. The passing of the venerable, the beloved and revered Dr. Susan I. Moody in the field of her life work at Tihran furnishes the Bahá’í world one more example of heroism and consecration a later generation of believers may well take to heart. How fruitful her life was! What noble institutions she developed, what a monument she reared in the lives of Persian youth! Even the enemies of the Cause could not withhold their admiration and their recognition of her sincerity! Even officialdom refrained from destructive measures until her stalwart Bahá’í presence had been removed from the scene! How brief will be that restless triumph, seizing its opportunity so blindly from the folded hands of death, ignorant of that Kingdom to which the faithful believer goes, that Kingdom whence comes the Will that governs the world!

4. In no year of which we have record have there been so many enrollments of new believers as during the year now closed. Both in number of the new members added to existing communities, and in number of groups prepared for election of a Spiritual Assembly for the first time, this present period has been one of remarkable growth. From Milwaukee came the news that more than sixty believers had been enrolled in one meeting; from Chicago, from New York and from many other communities reports of new enrollments surpass the announcements made in previous years. Our teaching of the Cause, reinforced by the mysterious power of the Mashriq-I-Adhkar, made more effective by our knowledge of the nature of the Bahá’í community, has received a vast stimulus, inaugurating a movement forward surely destined to acquire greater emphasis in every successive year. The details of this great achievement will be reported by the Teaching Committee, so that representatives from all local communities may return home inspired to work for renewed effort, and instructed to convey useful plans which have brought success in other cities.
Gratitude, however, must be expressed to all those teachers who during the year have answered the call to service and traveled to so many cities upholding the banner of the Faith. This circulation of thought and devotion from city to city, in the person of the teachers who are able to travel, is a great stimulus to the Bahá’í communities themselves as well as to the non-believers thereby attracted. But above all the firm unity of the local communities affords and will always afford the only enduring foundation for the new era of vitality and spiritual zeal. The greatest teacher in the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh is not a person but a community not only united together on the plane of personality but imbued with conviction that its essential purpose is to open the doors to the new souls.

Communications from the Guardian

The first communication from the Guardian was the cablegram sent in reply to the message cabled him by the Twenty-Sixth Annual Convention. That cablegram, received after the Convention had closed, was reported in a general letter dated June 4, 1934 and also in the Convention Number of Bahá’í News: “American believers’ inspired leadership steadily unfolding to Bahá’ís world over potentialities majestic edifice heralding formative period Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Their unerring vision conceived its matchless design. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s own hands laid its cornerstone. Their dynamic faith reared its structure. Their sustained self-sacrifice crowned it with immortal glory. May flame their unconquerable enthusiasm continue glowing in their hearts till its naked frame is enveloped in its shining mantle.”

Is not this message directed also to this Convention, since the task is yet unfinished?

In Bahá’í News of July, 1934, were published excerpts from letters dated May 10, May 19, June 11, 1934, and cablegram received on May 18. The following subjects were treated:

1. As soon as the clerestory section of the Temple is completed, no new contract to be made for the next unit until the entire sum required for the contract has already been collected.
2. The scope of local news letters.
3. News of the successful negotiations with the Palestine authorities concerning the exemption from taxation of the area surrounding the Shrines, tantamount to a recognition of the sacredness of the Shrines and the significance of the international center of the Faith.
4. Appreciation of the American Bahá’ís’ cooperation in preventing that area from falling into the hands of non-Bahá’ís.
5. The relation of local Assemblies to the National Spiritual Assembly.
6. Affirmation of the supreme and undivided authority of the N. S. A. and its moral responsibility if it allows any body or institution within its jurisdiction to abuse its privileges or to decline in the exercise of its rights and privileges.
7. Approval of instruction to disregard anonymous communications.

September Bahá’í News carried the Guardian’s explanation of passages in “The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.” Excerpts from letters dated September 9, 16, 25 and 30, were published in November on the following subjects:

1. The hope that through self-sufficiency further steps will be taken to safeguard the entire area surrounding the Shrines.
2. Explanation of the general principle that no administrative body under the jurisdiction of the N. S. A. has authority to receive complaints against the Assembly, but that matters which are unsatisfactory are to be referred to the Guardian.
3. The list of “outstanding issues” already mentioned in this Report.
4. Renewed instruction that photographs of the Guardian are not to be circulated.
5. Approval of statement concerning the Convention with correction of view that its sessions are joint meetings with the N. S. A.
6. Request for English translations of Bahá’í News Letters issued by the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria.
7. Emphasis upon the necessity of maintaining the flow of contributions to the Temple, and the importance of the National Fund as the indispensable medium for the growth and expansion of the Cause. Contributions to this fund constitute a way by which each believer can test the measure and character of his faith.
8. The Guardian’s inability to continue for the present his own contribution to the Temple Fund, in view of the severe restrictions imposed upon the Cause in Persia and the increase in the international expenses. In connection with this subject it is necessary to point out that the Guardian has for years been contributing as much to the Cause in America as all the American believers, through the National Fund at least, are together contributing to the development of the Bahá’í World Center. Difficult though it still is, apparently, to maintain the national budget, including Temple construction, must we not become, as the American Bahá’í community, more deeply conscious of our collective responsibility to the Guardian’s International Fund? Must we not begin to realize that a monthly contribution worthy of our combined resources should constitute the first and not the last obligation upon our national Bahá’í budget? Without the Guardian’s capacity to function materially as well as spiritually, are we not fatally limiting the development of the Cause at its very Center? Just as no local community can flourish if the National Fund be deprived of power to serve, so no national community in this unified Cause can flourish if the International Fund at the disposal of the Guardian is deprived of power. The matter is mentioned here only for deep and prayerful consideration, that a new resolve may be born and develop impetus until this omission shall for the future be overcome.

Expression of the Guardian’s gratitude that continuance of Temple construction was assured.

The January, 1935 number of Bahá’í News contained excerpts from the Guardian’s letters on the following subjects:

1. Explanation of further questions raised concerning the meaning of passages in “The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.”
2. The use of Bahá’í ringstones and burial stones left to the discretion of the believers pending the publication of the Kitáb-i-Áqdas.
3. The National Assemblies of Egypt, Iraq and Persia are adopting the text of the American Declaration of Trust and By-Laws, at the Guardian’s request, the N. S. A. of India and Burma having already taken this step.
4. Approval of plan to unite the two magazines.
5. Explanation of a passage on page 88 of “Bahá’í Administration” referring to the date when Oriental Bahá’ís celebrated the Declaration of the Bab in 1925.
6. Explanation that when a Memorial is constructed in the pine grove at West Englewood to commemorate ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit to America, the memorial should take the form of a monument and not of a building. This explanation reminds us of the Guardian’s previous instruction, that on account of the importance of the Unity Feast which the Master held on that spot, the sole Memorial commemorating His American visit is to be con-strutted there. The Guardian's views in this matter would seem to answer a question raised locally from time to time in various cities, namely, whether the local Spiritual Assembly should not take steps to acquire permanently some house which had been blessed by the Master's Holy Presence.

At this point in the Report might be inserted reference to the fact that during March, 1935, Roy C. Wilhelm executed an Indenture of Trust under which the Evergreen Cabin property, and the two lots in the pine grove where the Unity Feast was celebrated in 1912, were transferred to the Cause through nine trustees in a manner similar to that under which the Temple and Green Acre properties are now administered. The place so signally blessed by the Master thus comes permanently under Bahá’í ownership and control by this generous gift.

7. Approval of letter published in November Bahá’í News by the N. S. A. on the general subject of the relation of believers to their local, national and international Bahá’í institutions.

8. The Guardian’s abiding appreciation and gratitude for the manner in which the American believers rose to meet the emergency caused by lack of funds for Temple construction.

9. His heart-felt condolences and loving sympathy for the loss sustained in the passing away of Dr. Moody.

10. These significant words in a letter dated December 1: "Despite the perils and uncertainties with which their country is now beset, and in the face of financial reverses they have suffered and the unfortunate controversies that have perplexed and agitated them, they have forged ahead and are fast approaching the termination of the first stage in the ornamentation of their consecrate Edifice. Un daunted by the magnitude of this colossal enterprise, undismayed by the smallness of their numbers, the scantiness of their resources and the scorn of their enemies, they have carried triumphantly the banner of Bahá’u’lláh and brought to a successful issue the first stage in the formative period of His Faith."

Special attention is called to the fact that the Guardian, in this passage, considers the dome and clerestory sections one unit—a matter of very great importance in the light of the misunderstanding which has prevailed here and there that the dome alone was the "unit" which the Guardian wished completed and that consequently the clerestory section was a task arbitrarily added by the National Assembly.

Observe also that Shoghi Effendi gives new and more striking emphasis to the completion of the clerestory section of the dome unit by stating that its successful issue terminates the first stage in the formative era of the Faith.

These subjects explained by the Guardian in his letter dated January 27 were reported in Bahá’í News of March, 1935.

1. The figures of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh and 'Abdu’l-Bahá are not to appear as characters in dramatic works written by believers.

2. Explanation of the Bahá’í teaching on marriage, especially in relation to inter-racial marriage.

Other passages from the Guardian’s letters quoted in March were:

1. An important reference to the teachings on economics taken from a letter dated December 20, 1931.

2. The importance of Bahá’í Summer Schools, from a letter to Central States Summer School Committee, dated November 6, 1934.

Since the April, 1935 issue of the News Letter was devoted to Annual Committee Reports, except for a few news items carried over in type from the previous number in which space was lacking, a number of excerpts in recent letters have not yet been published, and these will be given in full at this time:

1. In comment on the ruling that members of local Spiritual Assemblies must be able to attend meetings: "He believes that your Assembly was well-advised in adopting such a ruling. For it is only too obvious that unless a member regularly attends the meetings of his local Assembly, it would be impossible for him to discharge the duties incumbent upon him, and to fulfill his responsibilities as a representative of the community. Membership in a local Spiritual Assembly carries with it, indeed, the obligation and capacity to remain in close touch with local Bahá’í activities, and ability to attend regularly the sessions of the Assembly." (Haifa, January 27, 1935).

2. In a letter written to the Spiritual Assembly of New York in acknowledgement of a letter reporting the local Assembly’s decision to uphold fully and without exception the general instruction concerning Oriental believers who lack proper credentials: “In this connection, the Guardian wishes to draw once more your attention to the all-importance of his instructions to the Western believers regarding association with Orientals. The friends in the West must be wide awake, and be extremely cautious when dealing with Easterners, particularly with those who, in the name of the Cause desire to satisfy their own desires and ambitions. The first step which they should take in protecting themselves against such mischief-makers is to insist that they should obtain proper credentials from the Assembly of the locality in which they live. This measure, he feels, is absolutely essential and there can be no exception whatever to it." (Haifa, January 4, 1935).

3. The cablegram received March 30, 1935, and reported to the friends in a general letter sent to local Assemblies on April 3: "Contract for purchase and transfer to Palestine Branch American Assembly (of the) Damut property situated (at the) center (of) area dedicated to Shrines on Mt. Carmel (has been) signed. Four year litigation involving Bahá’í world’s petitions (to) Palestine High Commissioner abandoned. Owners require 4,000 pounds. Half (this) sum (is) available. Will American believers unitedly contribute 1,000 pounds before end of May and remaining 1,000 pounds within nine months. Am compelled appeal entire body American community subordinate national interests of Faith to its urgent paramount requirements at its World Center."

At the time this Report is in preparation, no further information and no result of that appeal is available. It will be for the Treasurer to convey the result in his Financial Report. The impressive fact to be noted is the Providential manner in which, at every stage in the development of Bahá’u’lláh’s Faith, events are provided and tasks are allotted to the believers which prepare them for the new step. The building of the Temple was the divine plan for creating a national Bahá’í community out of the local communities and factional groups existing years ago, and now we are given compelling needs at the World Center in order to create a world Bahá’í community out of the national communities which have recently been established. Our collective response to all such successive emergency constitutes our training and discipline for service in a divine World Order. The Cause progresses by heroic endeavor and sacrifice and for the believers there can be no stay on the upward march.

4. There is one other recent communication from the Guardian, but reference to it will be deferred to the conclusion of this Report.

Secondary Administrative Developments

From time to time problems and situations are reported by local Spiritual Assemblies which call for some general ruling. The rulings of this character made by the National Assembly during the past year will now be reviewed.

Before doing so, however, it seems important to call attention to the fact that the National Spiritual Assembly after the 1934 Convention adopted a new and better method of keeping all its members informed throughout the interval between the meetings.

Once a week each member receives a summary of all communications which have arrived at the National Office, and each item in the summary is numbered for identification. Up to April 19, 1935 there had been 1,124 items, but this figure does not represent the total amount of correspondence because an effort is made to use the same key number throughout all the correspondence pertaining to the same matter. Hitherto the members were only informed of special matters, the general correspondence being itemized only once a month in the form of an agenda for each meeting. This new method has been found to be exceedingly helpful.

1. That each local Assembly, in dealing with the matter of members of the community who have joined non-Bahá’í organizations which might be political or even radical in character, is in duty bound to point out to the community the Guardian’s instructions as published in Bahá’í News of August, 1933.

2. Fresh emphasis was recorded for the principle under which a traveling teacher is not only subject to the jurisdiction of the local Assembly in each city, but is expected to be concerned only with teaching activities and not intervene in local problems unless specifically requested by the Assembly to assist in some situation.

3. That the children of believers can attend the Nineteen Day Feasts and other Bahá’í meetings, but when they reach the age of sixteen years the local Assembly should request a declaration of their interest in the Cause and their intention to become voting members when they reach the age of twenty-one; and that other young people, not children of believers, can attend Nineteen Day Feasts and other Bahá’í meetings after reaching the age of sixteen years by making a similar declaration to the local Assembly.

4. The functions of the Reviewing and Editorial Committee were defined, as reported in Bahá’í News of July, 1934.

5. That excerpts from letters written by the Guardian to individual believers will not hereafter be published.

6. National Committees which have occasion to use a printed letterhead were requested to consult the National Assembly in order to use the proper form.

7. That until further notice the annual meeting called on April 21 for the election of the local Spiritual Assembly is to be conducted by the officers of the outgoing Assembly and not by officers elected by those present at this meeting.

8. In the election of the National and local Assemblies, when the result of the ballot is that eight members are elected but two or more believers are tied for the ninth membership, the second ballot taken to eliminate the tie vote must be limited to voting for one of the two or more names who received a tie vote for the ninth place.

9. The friends were reminded that the Guardian’s original instructions concerning letters written to him by local Assemblies and National Committees were that such letters were to be sent him through the National Spiritual Assembly.

10. Local Assemblies which have no permanent headquarters were requested to take a Post Office box which can be used as a permanent address for Bahá’í correspondence.

11. Local Assemblies were advised to engage expert legal assistance in adapting the local By-Laws to the Religious Statutes of their particular State; and meanwhile that it is advisable and necessary for all local Assemblies without exception to abide by the set of By-Laws approved by the Guardian.

12. Recommended that all local Assemblies, if possible arrange to have a Bahá’í address listed in the local telephone directory.

13. General reports from local Assemblies are to be sent directly to the N.S.A. but reports confined to teaching activities are to be sent to the Teaching Committee. Inter-Assembly Committees and conferences have no executive capacity and therefore do not receive reports nor transact business.

14. When a local Assembly wishes to secure the services of any teacher from another city it is requested to consult the National Teaching Committee. That Committee, in turn, is requested to recommend only such teachers as conform to the following qualifications: thorough knowledge of the Teachings; complete loyalty to the Administrative Order as outlined in the Guardian’s general letters including the World Order communications; rigorous obedience to the principle that teachers are not to intervene in any local problem, and true sincerity and severance.

15. That local news letters should be distributed only to members of the local community, but copies sent to the Guardian, the National Assembly and to other National Assemblies for their information.

16. That local Assemblies, in transmitting to the N.S.A. reports and recommendations from the community, should be not merely a passive medium used by believers to bring matters to the attention of the N.S.A. but should make their own independent study of such recommendations and forward them with a statement of their own attitude and comment.

17. Interpretations of the By-Law on residential qualification of voting believers: first, that when a member or officer of a local Spiritual Assembly cannot function for an indefinite period, and there is no certainty of return to service, the Assembly should recognize the vacancy and arrange a meeting of the community to elect a new member; and second, that the requirements of residence as one of the qualifications of a voting believer should be based upon definite proof of capacity to associate with the Bahá’í community.

18. That hereafter the annual voting list furnished by each local Assembly should be accompanied by a separate list of all believers transferred to and from the Assembly.

19. That local Assemblies are to instruct new believers in the meaning of the new compilation of excerpts from the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and furthermore, that local Assemblies are to be responsible for providing new believers with copies.

The above rulings have been published in Bahá’í News during the year, but those following have not yet been published.

20. That local Assemblies are requested to send to the N.S.A. a copy of all important notices covering policies, rules or regulations as well as important announcements having to do with elections and organization under Bahá’í administration, which they may issue to their communities from time to time.

21. That the Committees in charge of the three Summer School programs are after this season to send their programs and arrangements to the National Assembly, which body will publish them in some uniform style.

22. That the collective activities of Baha’is, with which the name Baha’i is associated, ought not to be extended to activities of non-Baha’is, which cannot be controlled by the believers through their institutions and under the recognized principles of Baha’i administration; and further that the public solicitation of funds under Baha’i auspices, irrespective of the worthiness of the object, may give a wrong impression of the nature of the Cause. When believers wish to show a special respect to any non-believer or non-Baha’i organization, they should do so as individuals without involving the name of the Cause.

23. In view of the apparent tendency of certain teachers to designate themselves as “International” Baha’i teachers or lecturers, it has been voted to publish in Baha’i News a brief statement discouraging the use of the descriptive term “International” in connection with Baha’i service, on account of the fact that the word “International” with reference to the Cause is properly confined to certain specific institutions such as the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice, and to the activities carried on in and through these bodies.

General Statements

In addition to specific rulings required for definite situations, the National Assembly endeavors also to throw some light on more general trends and developments noted from time to time in its correspondence and other contacts with the national community.

During the year, statements have been published on the following subjects:

1. Status of the National Baha’i Fund.
2. Suggestions on the subject of teaching.
3. The institution of the Spiritual Assembly.
4. The new attitudes and principles of action which the Guardian has established in the World Order communications.
5. The nature of the Nineteen Day Feast.
6. Preparation of new believers for membership in the Baha’i community.
7. Important events affecting the Faith in Persia.
10. Several reports on recommendations made by the last Convention.

General Letters

At the beginning of the year the National Spiritual Assembly planned as far as possible to publish its general letters in Baha’i News so that they could be shared by the entire community. In addition, letters were sent to local Assemblies on the following dates: June 4, September 5, September 18, (two letters), October 9, November 1, November 16, December 1, February 4, February 14, March 21 and April 23–a total of twelve communications.

A Summary of Events

Without attempting to evaluate their relative importance, it will be well to record some of the incidents and events which have happened since the last Convention. The complete history of the Cause during the year can only be followed by considering the detailed reports of National Committees, and in addition the records of the sixty local Assemblies and the unorganized groups.

1. Through generous action of certain believers, an obligation inherited by the Green Acre Trustees from the Green Acre Fellowship in the amount of $10,000 payable on a bond issue has been cancelled by owners of bonds. A loan of $2,000 to the National Assembly several years ago to assist in financing the printing of The Downbreakers has likewise been cancelled by the lender. The unpaid note of $7,500 held by the bank for loan made in March, 1934 to the N. S. A. for the Temple Trustees has been met by a special gift.

2. The literature has been enriched by several new works, including The Promise of All Ages, Security for a Failing World, Mysticism and the Baha’i Revelation, the Economics Compilation, The Will and Testament, The Practise of the Presence of God, Baha’i News Index, and the leaflet, World Religion.

3. A beautiful design was made by Myron Potter for the Memorial to Keith at Isfahan, and working drawings sent to the Assembly in that city, but due to the restrictions imposed upon Baha’i activities in Persia we do not know what the Isfahan Assembly has been able to do.

4. The house at Malden, Mass., where the Master visited, has been transferred by the Guardians to trustees for the benefit of the N. S. A.

5. Final details are being worked out with John and Louise Bosch for the transfer of property at Geyersville used for the Summer School, to Baha’i trustees.

6. The three Summer Schools have progressed steadily, and by now are recognized in their true light, as the beginning of the divine Education given humanity by Baha’u’llah.

7. The Symbol of the Greatest Name has been legally protected in the United States and steps are being taken to acquire similar protection in Canada.

8. References to the Cause by non-Baha’is in newspapers, books and magazines have considerably increased.

9. The Race Amity Committee, in its article on “The Divine Call to Race Amity” published in Baha’i News for March, 1935, has made available to all the American believers a new and valuable source of information and spiritual impetus for successful service in that field.

10. The public bulletin entitled “A New World Order” has been sent to a special list of people of capacity at intervals of every other month, adding its weight to all other teaching efforts.

11. Many, but not all of the annual Committee Reports prepared last year have been published in successive issues of Baha’i News, affording a background of information about the progress of activities along national lines.

12. Two new Spiritual Assemblies were established on April 21, 1934, Lima, Ohio, and South Bend, Indiana, while a Spiritual Assembly was re-established at Geneva, New York.

13. A list of Baha’i young people between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one is maintained at the National Office, and the friends are requested to assist in keeping this list complete.

14. The National Spiritual Assembly has recorded its thanks and appreciation for the valuable services rendered by A. F. Mathiesen in acting as accountant and preparing the monthly and annual Financial Reports.

15. A special committee has been giving much time and thought to the preparation of a form of Baha’i parliamentary procedure for use by local Assemblies in conducting their own meetings and also the Nineteen Day Feasts, for use by the Convention, and also a procedure for the N. S. A. itself. Action has not been taken on this matter at the date of the writing of this Report, but the matter is mentioned because the request for such procedures was one of the important recommendations of the 1934 Convention. It is hoped that the final drafts can all be published, so that every believer can become familiar with the methods for the conduct of Baha’i deliberation.

16. The Baha’i Magazine has been issued in a new form, the title and general character of which reflect the Guardian's own teaching method as developed in his general letter entitled "The Goal of a New World Order."

17. The National Assembly is endeavoring to work out a settlement with the executor of the estate of Mrs. Agnes Parsons, who wrote her intention of donating property at Dublin, N. H. to the Cause, but did not provide for this intention in her will along the lines of her personal letter. It seems advisable for believers who wish to leave bequests to the Cause to make certain that the necessary legal steps have been taken.

18. A Memorial Meeting to commemorate the passing of Dr. Moody was held in Foundation Hall, Baha'i House of Worship, on Sunday, November 25.

19. A statement on the Cause is now included annually in the International Year Book published by Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

20. A new series of inexpensive pamphlets is now under way, for general use in presenting the Cause to the public. The text was prepared under the direction of the Free Literature Committee, and as each article is approved by the Reviewing Committee it will be published in World Order and then reprinted by the Publishing Committee from the magazine types, which makes a large saving in cost. The first pamphlet, on Baha'i Education, by Stanwood Cobb, is now on the press. The second will appear next month, on The Most Great Peace, by Marion Holley. The series will eventually include some six or more titles, and will surely prove very valuable to local Assemblies and individual teachers.

21. The suffering of the Persian Baha'is have been before the National Assembly unceasingly for two years. During this period, under the Guardian's direction, every possible effort has been made to exert influence for their relief. The situation has now passed into what appears to be a crucial stage, and we must pray to Baha'u'llah that no grievous a blow at His Cause shall Providentially be prevented from carrying out the full destructiveness of its intention. The matter has been reported as fully as the Assembly has been permitted to make it known among the friends. It is hoped that this Convention, among other actions, may unite in heart-felt prayer on behalf of our fellow Baha'is in that country.

22. Let us be grateful for the remarkable services being rendered by the American believers who travel in other lands—Martha Root, Louise Gregory, Mountfort Mills, Louise Drake Wright, Dr. and Mandieh Carpenter, Loulie Mathews, Leonora Holzapffe, Marjorie Morten, Julia Goldman, Charles and Helen Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Grieveen, Mark Tobey, Nellie S. French, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Romer, Amelia, Collins, Sylvia Matthews, Imogene Hoagg. On Sunday, April 14 the press carried the news that Mr. Romer had passed on at London—a great loss to the Cause.

A New Annual Conference

After careful consideration of some of the needs of the Cause, the National Spiritual Assembly has recently recorded its view that hereafter each successive N. S. A. should arrange a three-day joint session for the special purpose of conferences with representatives of all local Assemblies who can be present.

The purpose of this plan is to go more deeply into the opportunities and problems faced by all local Assemblies in this formative period, and at the same time enable the National Assembly to acquire a more intimate picture of conditions than is possible by correspondence. The thought is that such a conference could be held during the fall or early winter, at some central point like the Foundation Hall of the Temple, or Chicago, and each Assembly invited to send a representative or at least some suggestions for the agenda. The meetings would doubtless be helpful to all, and grapple with real problems and opportunities which arise on all sides. It is confidently hoped that the plan when carried out will have important results for the Cause.

24. — Teaching

The Teaching of the Baha'i Faith in America during the past year achieved great results in increased numbers accepting the Faith, more Baha'is becoming actively engaged in this, the most important branch of Baha'i work, and in technical of presentation of the Teachings. The financial sacrifices necessary to continue ornamentation work on the Clerestory Section of the Temple has made it impossible to give monetary aid to traveling teachers;—thus bringing the teaching work to a truly sacrificial basis; which Baha'u'llah has indicated is the sure source of the guidance and confirmation of the Holy Spirit.

The band of those so assiduously carrying on the Teaching work outside of established Assemblies, who have kept the Teaching Committee informed of their work are: Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Mrs. Ruth Brandt, Mrs. Louise Caswell, Mr. Dale Cole, Mr. Roland Estall, Mrs. Ida Finch, Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf, Mr. Louis Gregory, Dr. Walter B. Guy, Mr. Leroy Ios, Dr. Ali Kuli Khan, Miss Alma Knoblock, Miss Fanny Knoblock, Mrs. Laura
First: While the greatest opportunity to attract people to the Faith seems to be the individual contacts developed by Fireside meetings, there is a disappointingly small number of the Baha’is holding such Fireside gatherings in their homes. We are falling far short of the standard set by ‘Abdu’l-Baha of each making one new Believer each year.

Second: Public teaching campaigns are dependent for their greatest response on the individual contacts, again indicating the supreme need for increased individual teaching work.

Third: Only one-third of the Assemblies have extended their teaching work into new centers, as contemplated in the Teaching program of the National Spiritual Assembly for the past three years.

Fourth: There are over two hundred Isolated Believers in America, and if assisted by Local Assemblies can become one of our strongest public teaching media. Note that only 16 Assemblies are assisting Isolated Believers.

Fifth: The fact that there are not more new as well as younger Baha’is actively serving in the Teaching Field, indicates our Assembly Life is not developing that apostolic spirit necessary to carry this Faith to the ends of the world; and secondly, that our study classes are apparently neglecting one phase of teaching work so essential; preparation of teachers. Spiritual Assemblies and the Summer Schools should expand their courses of study to include this most vital aspect of our work.

Perhaps the greatest success achieved in the teaching work is the accomplished by Baha’i Groups. Of the 29 groups, nine have increased their numbers sufficiently to organize Spiritual Assemblies April 21st, 1935: bringing the number of Assemblies in America up to 69.*

Too much cannot be said in praise of the efforts of the isolated Believers, who alone, without the comfort and assistance of fellow believers, are continuously striving to spread the Message, publicize the Teachings, and establish the Faith.

The Teaching work in America, without a doubt, is becoming established on a more firm foundation from day to day. The educational work carried on over a long period of time in directing attention to the need of a program of social reconstruction with complete spiritual valuation, is producing results in building up a public psychology of interest in the World Order of Baha’u’llahi. The completion of the Dome of the Temple, with its exquisite beauty, and the continued work on the Clerestory section, is attracting attention to the Faith, as no other means at the disposal of the Baha’is could. This silent teacher is the most effective protagonist of the Faith in America. Thus our teaching work must not only be expanded further, but must be improved, so we may be prepared to fulfill our divine destiny.

The Teaching Committee wishes to outline broadly the status of the Teaching work, so far as it has been able to organize it, as a basis for more vigorous prosecution in the future:

175 Isolated Believers have been registered, and put in direct contact with the organized activities of the Faith, through personal correspondence with the Teaching Committee. There are 52 Isolated Believers in addition not yet registered, with whom the Teaching Committee are in correspondence.

The 29 groups are being assisted continuously through correspondence, supplying of teachers, answering of questions, preparation for organization, etc.

Traveling Teachers keep in close touch with the Teaching Committee so their efforts may be coordinated for the greater good.

Separate card index records have been brought up to date, covering every city in America, in which the Message has been given during the past two years, showing the teacher, groups addressed and friendly contacts.

The Teaching Committee is now equipped to serve the Friends, old and new, by supplying reference data from the authenticated writings, on any spiritual subject.

Teaching by correspondence is developing out of the many inquiries being received from non-Baha’is, who have learned of the Faith, through visits to the Temple, attending lectures, reading in the public press of the Faith, etc.

In carrying out this work, a voluminous amount of correspondence and detail is involved. During the past year over 4000 letters have been written by the members of the Committee. In addition to this is the time spent in meetings, visiting groups, consultation, etc.

25.—Training and Teaching of Children

The major objective of the Committee on the Training and Teaching of Children during the past year was to promote the use of the study course for children which was completed last year. The sale of the course was transferred to the Publishing Committee to be handled in the same manner as other Baha'i publications and its use has been encouraged through the Baha'i News and general correspondence. The number of orders from individuals and Assemblies, as well as from foreign lands, has been gratifying, but it is felt that even yet the material has not been as generally used as it should be. It is capable of considerable expansion and may be used over and over again, each time with more detail and greater application.

A number of new junior classes have been started by Assemblies during the year and the instruction of children has been given considerable consideration at inter-assembly teaching conferences.

Although additional material is under preparation, the Committee has felt it would not be justified in expending funds for its publication until the obligations under the Temple building contracts have been fulfilled. It is hoped, however, that conditions will permit some new literature next year.

Among the materials being prepared is a collection of poems for various age groups on themes in keeping with the Baha'i Faith. Since copyright restrictions must be observed, this work proceeds slowly but the first set of poems will be available soon.

The Committee is also making a selection of stories from "The Dawn Breakers" suitable for various ages. Bible stories which Baha'i children should know are being listed, and a collection of children's stories from Baha'i literature generally is being compiled.

Considerable thought is being given to suggestions for the appropriate observance of special Baha'i anniversaries, such as Nawruz, the Ridvan, the birthday anniversary of Baha'u'llah, and so on.

The instruction and training of the preschool child presents a special problem to which the Committee is directing its attention. There is a great demand for pictorial material for this group but the cost of producing it has been prohibitive thus far.

One particularly interesting development this year has been the exchange of letters among several groups of Baha'i children. The Committee is eager to encourage this activity and is glad to supply the required information to all teachers interested to undertake it in their groups. This exchange of correspondence among Baha'i children will do much to motivate the teaching of oneness in the Baha'i Faith and will bring to the children some valuable suggestions as to their studies and class projects.

In view of the serious problems in our systems of education today in preparing children to meet the responsibilities of a new social order which has scarcely begun to form, Baha'i parents and teachers may well feel that they have a great opportunity in paving the way. There are many occasions in their regular school routine when Baha'i children may discuss before their teachers and class mates the underlying principles of the Baha'i Faith and the plan for world peace, and it should be the primary responsibility of every Baha'i parent to see that the child has as much knowledge of the Teachings as he is capable of absorbing. Great truths often fall from the lips of children and the school room and the playground play their parts in shaping the future.

At best the Committee on the Training and Teaching of Children can scarcely hope to do more than provide material to supplement the teaching being done by the parents and teachers of Baha'i children, but it stands ready to serve in individual problems wherever possible and invites suggestions from all the friends at all times.

AMERICAN BAHAI COMMUNITY MEETS SHOGHI EFFENDI'S APPEAL FOR PURCHASE OF MT. CARMEL LAND

The cablegram from the Guardian reporting his contract to purchase the Dumit property within the area dedicated to the Holy Shrines, shared with the local Assemblies in the general letter dated April 3, has inspired the entire American Baha'i community with resolve to meet Shoghi Effendi's financial obligation in this important transaction.

Soon after the Convention, the National Treasurer sent to Haifa the sum of 1,000 pounds (approximately $5,000), the amount needed by the Guardian before the end of May.

This contribution was acknowledged by the following cablegram, received on May 4: "Assure contributors deepfelt appreciation (of their) ceaseless sacrifices (for) so meritorious a Cause." (signed) Shoghi.

In order to complete our collective obligation, a similar sum must be sent to the Guardian within nine months, which period, counting from April 1, will be December 31, 1935.

Local Assemblies and individual believers contributing to this or to any other particular object might consider the fact that it is impossible for them to estimate in advance what relation each such contribution bears to the total sum needed in any particular case, since only the National Assembly is in a position to know exactly when the total amount required has been received. Thus, if all contributions are made specifically to one or another definite object, the result may be that more than is necessary may be sent for one purpose, and less than is necessary may be donated for other purposes. The National Baha'i Fund should not be regarded as a number of small funds, each to be met separately, but as one pool from which all Baha'i needs are to be supplied as they arise.

While the Guardian has stated that contributors may direct their donations to a particular purpose, he has also stated that it is preferable to make donations to the National Baha'i Fund without any restriction, thus allowing the National Assembly to provide for the budget as a whole.

The following reference to the purchase of the Dumit property was made by the Guardian in a letter addressed to the National Treasurer on March 25: "The signature of the contract with the Dumits terminates a protracted and highly annoying and often irritating struggle with the forces of fanaticism, ignorance and prejudice. The settlement of this dispute, which has involved the Baha'i National Assemblies who have petitioned to the High Commissioner for Palestine, constitutes a notable victory, and adds considerably to the material assets of the Faith, at its world center. The area situated between the Shrine and the German colony is now completely and permanently safeguarded."

NEWLY ESTABLISHED SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLIES

Preliminary Announcement

Subject to final action by the National Spiritual Assembly in the case of two communities whose reports were received after the last meeting, the friends are informed that ten Spiritual Assemblies were newly established on April 21. This important increase in the number of American local Assemblies brings the total to 70.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh.

As reported elsewhere in this issue, the Guardian has sent to the National Spiritual Assembly the manuscript of his translations of excerpts from Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh, with a letter instructing that it be published under the title "Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh."

The Publishing Committee will carry out this important mission as rapidly as possible, and it is hoped that a definite announcement of publishing date and price can be made next month.

A preliminary survey of the manuscript indicates that it will make a 300-page book of the page size and style of "The Tablet of Iqán." This fact enables the friends to realize what an extraordinary blessing the Guardian has given to all Bahá’ís in this work. Many of the passages are from Tablets never before translated; others are new translations from Tablets already available but in unsatisfactory translation. The believers need no assurance that the publication of the "Gleanings" will prove a continuous source of spiritual knowledge and inspiration.

The first pamphlet in the series being prepared under the direction of the Committee for Free Literature, and a most interesting and helpful addition to the Bahá’í literature adapted for general distribution. Special attention has been given to the matter of convenient size and low cost. A blank space is left on back cover for imprint of local Bahá’í address if desired. 24 pages; sold in quantity only. Net—100 copies for $1.50.

Western Division.

Mrs. F. F. Smith, Western Division of Publishing Committee, 940 Leavenworth Street, San Francisco, Calif., expresses appreciation for the cooperation of the friends in making it possible for her to double the total of sales made this year in comparison with the previous year.

World Order Magazine.

On March 15 the Publishing Committee issued a general letter to Assemblies and groups calling attention to the subscription rates, and emphasizing the importance of definite effort to secure subscriptions from believers and also non-believers.

The rates are as follows: Annual subscription, $2.00; for Public Libraries, $1.75. Introductory subscription, seven months for $1.00. Gift subscriptions—five or more on one order, $1.50 each. Single copies, 20c. Ten copies of any one issue sent to one or more addresses, $1.50. Discount on annual subscriptions allowed Assembly Librarians, 50c per subscription. The same discount is allowed any believer who secures subscriptions from people outside the Bahá’í community.

Two numbers of the new magazine have already been issued—April and May, 1935. The Publishing Committee hopes that local Assemblies will all give special thought to the subject of supporting the magazine and of making it a part of their plans for promoting the Faith among the public and for keeping the newly attracted friends in touch with the Cause.

Believers outside the United States should add 25c to the annual subscription rate for the extra postage required in mailing the magazine.

Address orders for all Bahá’í Literature to Bahá’í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Annex, New York, N. Y., or to Western Division, Mrs. F. F. Smith, 940 Leavenworth Street, San Francisco, Calif.

ARTICLES FOR WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

The editorial staff, in conformity with the announcement made by the National Spiritual Assembly in Bahá’í News for March, wishes to urge the believers to send in articles on subjects of Bahá’í interest. The magazine will publish articles on the two essential aspects of the Faith—individual spiritual development and the attainment of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh. This fundamental policy affords an infinitely wide range and diversity of topics. The average length of article will be four magazine pages.

Bahá’í authors should precede all writers of the day in clarity of perception, breadth of vision, definiteness of purpose, power of conviction and nobility of theme. The editors express the profound hope that believers in all parts of the world will respond to this opportunity of maintaining a teaching medium of high cultural quality and capacity to attract non-believers in all walks of life to the Ocean of Reality.

Correspondence should be addressed: Editorial Office, World Order, 119 Waverly Place, New York, N. Y.
LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

From a letter dated January 27, 1935, the following excerpt is quoted as Shoghi Effendi’s view of the ruling concerning the residential qualifications of members of local Assemblies adopted by the N. S. A. and published in BAHAI' News of January.

“He believes that your Assembly was well advised in adopting such a ruling. For it is only too obvious that unless a member can attend regularly the meetings of his local Assembly, it would be impossible for him to discharge the duties incumbent upon him, and to fulfill his responsibilities, as a representative of the community. Membership in a local Spiritual Assembly carries with it, indeed, an obligation and capacity to remain in close touch with local Bahá’í activities, and ability to attend regularly the sessions of the Assembly.”

The following excerpt is from a letter the Guardian wrote the New York Assembly on January 4, in reply to a letter reporting that the Assembly had refused to recognize a Persian who presented himself without proper credentials.

“In this connection, the Guardian wishes to draw once more your attention to the all-importance of his instructions to the Western believers regarding association with Orientals. The friends in the West must be wide awake, and be extremely cautious when dealing with Easterners, particularly with those who in the name of the Cause desire to satisfy their own desires and ambitions. The first step which they should take in protecting themselves against such mischief-makers is to insist that they should obtain proper credentials from the Assembly of the locality in which they live. This measure, he feels, is absolutely essential and there can be no exception whatever to it.”

FORMATION OF NEW SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLIES

A Ruling

For the future, the election of new Spiritual Assemblies by members of local groups which contain nine or more recognized believers is to be conducted in the light of the following procedure adopted by the National Spiritual Assembly:

“It was moved, seconded and voted to adopt and record the following ruling in order to prevent confusion on the part of new Bahá’í communities, that hereafter applications from Bahá’í groups for election of a Spiritual Assembly must be made directly to the National Assembly not later than February, first of any year, in order to allow time for this body to discharge its responsibility in preparing the group.”

ANONYMOUS CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE NATIONAL FUND

In view of the Guardian’s instruction that contributions are not to be accepted from non-Bahá’ís for the Temple and other organic work of the Cause, but be used for humanitarian purposes, a difficulty is created for the N. S. A. whenever the Treasurer receives a contribution from an unknown source. Unless it knows the actual donor, the Assembly is compelled to regard anonymous contributions as coming from a non-Bahá’í. Such contributions have recently been applied to the Publishing Committee for making gift subscriptions of World Order to Public Libraries and institutions of general welfare.

A REQUEST TO LOCAL ASSEMBLIES

A Ruling

The National Spiritual Assembly requests each local Assembly hereafter to send it a copy of all important notices covering policies, rules or regulations as well as important announcements having to do with elections and organization under Bahá’í administration, which the local Assembly may issue to the Bahá’í community from time to time.

TO DISCRIMINATE IN THE USE OF THE TERM "BAHÁ’Í"

The following ruling has been adopted by the N. S. A.: That the collective activities of Bahá’ís, with which the name Bahá’í is associated, ought not to be extended to activities of non-Bahá’ís which cannot be controlled by the believers through their institutions and under the recognized principles of Bahá’í administration; and further that the public solicitation of funds under Bahá’í auspices, irrespective of the worthiness of the object, may give a wrong impression of the nature of the Cause. When believers wish to show a special respect to any non-believer or non-Bahá’í organization, they should do so as individuals without involving the name of the cause.

HOW TO APPLY THE TERM "INTERNATIONAL" TO BAHÁ’Í ACTIVITIES

In view of the apparent tendency of certain teachers to designate themselves as “international” Bahá’í teachers or lecturers, the N. S. A. has voted to publish in BAHÁ’Í News this brief statement discouraging the use of the descriptive term "international" in connection with Baha'i service, on account of the fact that the word "international" with reference to the Cause is properly confined to certain specific institutions such as the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice, and to the activities carried on in and through these bodies.

THE STANDARD SET FOR BAHAI TEACHERS

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to give special emphasis to a definite standard which the Teaching Committee, as the result of its extensive experience, recommends to all believers who carry on teaching work among local communities and groups.

Such teachers are requested to prepare themselves for thorough presentation of the following topics, in addition to their general knowledge of the fundamental Sacred Literature of the Faith: Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Declaration of Trust and By-Laws of the N. S. A., By-Laws of a local Spiritual Assembly, The Baha'i Fund, Threefold character of the Nineteen Day Feast, The non-political character of the Baha'i Faith. The spirit of Baha'í elections. Functions of a local Spiritual Assembly, Administrative principles, Implications of Baha'i citizenship.

GREEN ACRE PROGRAM

July 8-12. The Conduct of Bahai' Life. Leader, Dorothy Baker.

Oakland

The Friday evening public meetings in recent months have been conducted by Mamie Seto, Leroy Ioas, Carmen O'Neill, Paul S. Jones, Charlotte Lin- foot, J. V. Matteson, H. R. Hurlibut, Mrs. Paul S. Jones, Joyce J. Lin- foot, Ruth Williams, Prof. N. Forsyth Ward. These meetings are held at the Women's City Club.

Fireside meetings have been held by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Linfoot, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Matteson, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ioas and Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Jones.

A letter from the Guardian brought this message: "It is his firm conviction that now that the construction work on the Temple is progressing so rapidly and so well it is the duty and responsibility of every Assembly to bring to the attention of the friends the necessity of involving in and supporting their teaching activities . . . For Bahá'u'lláh's blessings will surely crown our efforts with success only if we remain faithful to His command to teach and to teach unceasingly."

Urbana

"Our group is made up largely of those connected with the University; and also our aim is to appeal to students at the University, therefore our calendar of activities coincides rather closely with the academic year.

"Our program of public meetings beginning in September included some very spiritual and otherwise gifted teachers. Our Assembly is in general committed to the policy of having an outside speaker come each month during the year and spend from one to several days working in the community. It is apparent that such a plan not only attracts new people to the Cause, but also serves to educate and inspire the present believers and gradually builds the group into a unified Baha'i community.

"Among the first of the teachers for the academic year was Mirza Ali Kuli Khan and his work we cannot praise too highly. He is truly an inspired teacher and with his philosophical turn of mind gives to the teachings a depth and richness which makes his presentations unusually attractive and readily comprehended by both believers and nonbelievers.

"Second in order of their arrival were Xlr. Windust and H. R. Hurlibut. Their work was very successful. The meetings held with Mr. Windust were particularly impressive. We like Mr. Windust for his practical suggestions.

"We were unusually fortunate to have Madame Orlova with us for several days. Her artistic temperament and the romantic situations in her life alone make her an attractive individual, and when these qualities are connected with the teaching of the Baha'i Cause the result is that vast numbers of people are attracted to the meetings. While here Madame Orlova attracted greater numbers to meetings than any other previous Baha'i speaker. She proved to be a remarkable teacher and we are planning to have her return when again convenient.

"The last teacher to date was Mrs. Howard Ives. This was her first visit to Urbana and we are planning that she may come again soon. Some of her qualities which impressed us were the extreme clearness in presenting the teachings and her ability to avoid offending the feelings of non-believers.

"A most important and very active branch of our teaching work is that of our young people's group. This group has been unusually active this year, holding as a rule two meetings each week and apparently making considerable progress in spreading the teachings among university and high school students. A number of this group attended the Baha'i summer school held at the Louhelen Ranch last July."

LETTER FROM CENTRAL STATES SUMMER SCHOOL

There are several points which the Central States Baha'i Summer School Committee will appreciate having called to the attention of the members of your Community.

1. In response to a request of the N. S. A. through the National Teaching Committee, a Teaching Conference will be held at Louhelen Ranch on June 29, 1935, at 2 P. M., followed by an evening session if desirable. In a cablegram from the Guardian received after the convention he stressed the need for re-doubled teaching effort in all communities this year. This conference will be in the nature of consultation as how best to carry out his wishes in this regard. Agenda to be furnished by the N. T. C. Chairman — Regional Representative of the N. T. C. It is hoped that all who can will attend and have concrete and practical suggestions.

2. The Central States Committee asks again that reservations for Louhelen Ranch be sent in without delay. Your cooperation in this will be of great assistance to the committee.
The generations that have gone before you—whether are they fed? And those round whom in life circled the fairest and the loveliest of the land, where now are they? Profit by their example, O people, and be riot of them that are gone astray.

Others are long will lay hands on what ye possess, and enter into your habitations. Incline your ears to My words, and be not numbered among the foolish.

For every one of you his paramount duty is to choose for himself that on which no other may infringe and none usurp from him. Such a thing—aid to this the Almighty is My witness—is the love of God, could ye but perceive it.

Build ye for yourselves such houses as the rain and floods can never destroy, which shall protect you from the changes and chances of this life. This is the instruction of Him Whom the world hath wronged and forsaken.——Baha'u'llah.

"THE LIFE-BLOOD OF THESE NASCENT INSTITUTIONS"

The Guardian of the Faith, in a recent letter to the National Spiritual Assembly, sets forth the fundamental importance of the National Baha'i Fund in words which will be deeply impressed upon the hearts of the friends.

"As the activities of the American Baha'i community expand... the institution of the National Fund, the bedrock on which all other institutions must necessarily rest... constitutes at the present time the life-blood of these nascent institutions which you are laboring to erect. Its importance cannot, surely, be overestimated. Untold blessings shall no doubt crown every effort directed to that end. I am eagerly and prayerfully awaiting the news of an unprecedented expansion in so vital an organ of the administrative Order of the Faith."

July 29, 1935.

Dear and valued co-workers:

As the activities of the American Baha'i community expand, and its worldwide prestige correspondingly increases, the institution of the National Fund, the bedrock on which all other institutions must necessarily rest and be established, acquires added importance, and should be increasingly supported by the entire body of the believers, both in their individual capacities, and through their collective efforts, whether organized as groups or as local Assemblies. "The Guardian would advise your Assembly to continue impressing upon the believers the necessity of their contributing regularly to the National Fund, irrespective of whether there is an emergency to be met or not. Nothing short of a continuous flow of contributions to that Fund can, indeed, insure the financial stability upon which so much of the progress of the institutions of the Faith must now inevitably depend." (July 29, 1935.)

This message is conveyed to the American Baha'i community in order that the believers, one and all, may realize their full measure of responsibility as promoters of the World Order of Baha'u'llah.

May we ever bear in mind the essential fact that the main purpose of this Revelation is to establish definite institutions, rooted in the conscious faith of the believers, which are to be the channels through which the Divine blessings flow to mankind. As these institutions—centered about the International, National and local Houses of Justice—develop their respective functions, the fulfilment of spiritual love in terms of true education, true social justice and true peace will characterize this sacred Day of God. "That Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Baha'i Faith." (The World Order of Baha'u'llah, pages 3 and 4.)

It is by their institutions that communities of human beings are transformed from a mere rabble to an ordered society wherein the highest qualities of soul, mind and spirit are cherished and protected, but the existing institutions based upon strife must be replaced by those based upon the conception of the oneness of mankind.

In this vast process of world transformation, as the Guardian now emphasizes, the Baha'i Fund stands as the bedrock upon which progress depends. The National Spiritual Assembly expresses the heart-felt hope that the local Assemblies, the groups and also the believers individually, will make a great effort to so order their affairs and strengthen their determination that the National Fund can henceforth fulfil its special function and, like the "life-blood" in any healthy organism, convey power to every organ and limb of the Baha'i body.

THE AQDAS

In correction of the statement published by the National Spiritual As-
In view of the importance of such a statement he feels it his duty to explain that the Laws revealed by Bahá’u’lláh in the Aqdas are, whenever practicable and not in direct conflict with the Civil Laws of the land, absolutely binding on every believer or Bahá’í institution whether in the East or in the West. Certain laws, such as fasting, obligatory prayers, the consent of the parents before marriage, avoidance of alcoholic drinks, monogamy, should be regarded by all believers as universally and vitally applicable at the present time. Others have been formulated in anticipation of a state of society destined to emerge from the chaotic conditions that prevail today. When the Aqdas is published this matter will be further explained and elucidated. What has not been formulated in the Aqdas, in addition to matters of detail and of secondary importance arising out of the application of the laws already formulated by Bahá’u’lláh, will have to be enacted by the Universal House of Justice. This body can supplement but never invalidate or modify in the least degree what has already been formulated by Bahá’u’lláh. Nor has the Guardian any right whatsoever to lessen the binding effect much less to abrogate the provisions of so fundamental and sacred a Book.

Already in Egypt, Persia, India and Iraq, Assemblies, both local and national, are availing themselves of the opportunity which the autonomy granted to Eastern religious communities in matters of personal status has offered them for the recognition by the civil authorities of such Laws of the Aqdas which they conscientiously feel they must uphold and enforce. They have even, under certain circumstances, preferred to suspend their activities and dissolve their institutions rather than follow the dictates of those officials who have tried to induce them to violate what has been expressly ordained by the Author of their Faith.

“The Guardian will, when the Aqdas is published, elaborate this fundamental principle of our Faith. This brief reference, he feels, is adequate for any reference you wish to make regarding this matter in the News Letter.”

August 11, 1935.

“Dear and valued co-workers:

“The separation of alcoholic drinks, monogamy, and the administrative fields of the Aqdas which they preceded it and upholds the spiritual truths which lie at their very core and are common to them all, its institutions, whether administrative, religious or humanitarian, must if their distinctive character is to be maintained and recognized, be increasingly divorced from the outworn creeds, the meaningless ceremonials and man-made institutions with which these religions are at present identified. Our adversaries in the East have initiated the struggle. Our future opponents in the West will, in their turn, arise and carry it a stage further. Ours is the duty, in anticipation of this inevitable contest, to uphold unequivocally and with undivided loyalty the integrity of our Faith and denounce the distinguishing features of its divinely appointed institutions.”

June 15, 1935.

“Regarding the statement made by the Guardian in his letter to Mr. Willard Hatch concerning the fact that believers can serve both as teachers and administrators. Shoghi Effendi would approve your Assembly making this fact known to all the friends. For although it is essential for the believers to maintain always a clear distinction between teaching and administrative duties and functions, yet they should be careful not to be led to think that these two types of Bahá’í activity are mutually exclusive in their nature, and as such cannot be exercised by one and the same person. As a matter of fact, the friends should be encouraged to serve in both the teaching and the administrative fields of Bahá’í service. But as there are always some who are more specially gifted along one of these two lines of activity it would seem more desirable that they should concentrate their efforts in acquiring the full training for that type of work for which they are best suited by nature. Such a specialization has the advantage of saving time, and of leading to greater efficiency, particularly at this early stage of our development. The great danger, however, lies in that by so doing the friends may tend to develop a sort of class consciousness which is fundamentally contrary to both the spirit and actual teachings of Bahá’í. It is precisely in order to overcome such a danger that the Guardian thinks it advisable that the friends should be encouraged to serve from time to time in both the teaching and the administrative spheres of Bahá’í work, but only whenever they feel fit to do so.”—July 29, 1935.

“Concerning the nature of the Nineteen Day Feast. In the Aqdas, Bahá’u’lláh clearly revealed the spiritual and social character of this institution. Its administrative significance, however, has been stressed by the Guardian in direct response to the growing needs of the Bahá’í community in this formative period of the Bahá’í era for better training in the principles and practice of Bahá’í administration.”—July 30, 1935.

IN MEMORIAM

The friends are requested to remember with prayer these believers who have entered the Kingdom.

Ruhi Effendi Afnán will be the speaker at the Sunday afternoon public meeting in Foundation Hall on October 27.

RUHI EFFENDI AFNAN MAKES SECOND VISIT TO AMERICA

The National Spiritual Assembly is privileged to announce that Ruhi Effendi Afnán, great-grandson of Bahá’u’lláh, has come to America and with the Guardian’s approval can remain until November in order to take part in the National Meeting at the Temple on October 26 and 27, and visit local Bahá’í communities to assist in teaching on his way to and from Chicago.

The following itinerary has been arranged:

- September 8 to 22, Upper New York State.
- September 25 to October 4, Sen.-England.
- October 6 to 13, New York City Metropolitan area.
- October 14 to 30, Washington, D. C. area.
- October 21 to November 6, From Washington to Chicago, stopping at Pittsburg en route.

November 7 until his departure from America. From Chicago to New York, stopping at Detroit and Cleveland.

Due to important work which requires his presence at Haifa in November, Ruhi Effendi Afnán regrets his inability to extend his visit to include a journey to Assemblies in the West.

From reports already received, the friends are making every effort to take advantage of this unique opportunity to have the Message presented publicly by so distinguished a believer, and the centers already visited are enthusiastic and grateful for the results achieved.
REPORT OF TEMPLE VISITORS

The House of Worship has become a spiritual magnet attracting people from all parts of the country. From figures presented by the Temple Program Committee it appears that during the four months period, April to July, 1935, the Temple Guides registered visits from 816 groups and a total of 4,087 individuals. Some 35,650 visitors are reported for the past 30 months.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

The list of Committees of the N. S. A. published in August Bahá’í News, is to be extended and revised as follows:

Regional Teaching Representatives. Mrs. Louise Caswell has been appointed for the area of Oregon and Washington. Dr. E. Leonore Morris and Dale S. Cole have each been assigned the area assigned to the other in the August list of appointments. Dr. Morris, therefore, now has the area of Michigan and Indiana, and Dale S. Cole the area of Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

Publicity Committee. Mrs. Nina Matthisen has been appointed in place of A. F. Matthisen as member of this committee.

Annual Souvenir of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. (1936). William de Forge, Chairman, Curtis Kelsey, Dr. Wilbur, Miss O. B. Crum, Mrs. Grace Krug, Mrs. Carrie Kinney, Miss Bertha Herklotz.

DECISIONS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

All local groups are requested to elect a Correspondent once a year, and preferably on April 21. The function of the Correspondent is to receive Bahá’í News and other general communications intended for all members of the group, and also to serve as link between the group and the Teaching Committee, Publishing Committee, etc.

It has been voted to record the attitude of the N. S. A. that local Assemblies would not justify in sanctioning annual memorial meetings to commemorate individual believers.

It has been voted to call attention once more to the fact that local Assemblies and individual believers should be careful in dealing with persons who claim to be Bahá is but have no proper credentials. This applies particularly to persons who come from other cities.

STATEMENT BY ARCHIVES COMMITTEE

The real Bahá’í Archives of the future will consist primarily of the interpretation of the Word of Bahá’u’lláh contained in the Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to the believers of the United States and Canada, and of the applications of this Word to the developing World Order as explained in the letters of Shoghi Effendi and of subsequent Guardians of the Cause.

Our Guardian has made it a special duty of this generation to collect and preserve in the Archives the tables of the Master. Therefore, the National Archives Committee invites and earnestly requests the cooperation of all Local Spiritual Assemblies in the fulfillment of this duty, as far as possible, during the remainder of the current Bahá’í year.

The following suggestions are offered for consultation and action, if possible, by each Assembly: First, that the significance of the Bahá’í Archives, the importance of preserving ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Tablets while they are still available, and the future location of the Archives in the Foundation Structure of the Temple, be explained and emphasized at the next two Nineteen-Day Feasts. Second, that the following questions or their substance be asked of the friends who attend these Feasts, and that, if a general monthly letter is mailed to the members of the community, these questions be included with the request that those unable to attend Feasts mail their answers to the corresponding secretary. The questions suggested are these:

(1) Have any of the friends present ever received Tablets from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá?

(2) Of these, who have forwarded their Tablets to the National Archives?

(3) What friends still have Tablets in their possession?

(4) Do any have in their keeping Tablets which were addressed to relatives or other believers?

(5) Do those friends still in the possession of Tablets plan to place them in the Archives in the near future?

A third suggestion is that a date or dates be set and announced when the members of the community who have Tablets, letters from the Guardian or sacred relics which they wish to present to the Archives may bring these to the Feast, where they may be taken charge of by the Local Spiritual Assembly and forwarded by registered mail to the Secretary of the Archives Committee.

This committee would appreciate having a report from each community by the close of December, if possible, indicating the number of affirmative responses to each of the above questions.

It is most natural that the friends should hesitate and postpone parting with their most precious possessions. Please remind them, however, that the Archives Committee will gladly supply them with exact photostatic copies of their Tablets.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES COMMITTEE

By: Mrs. Carl Scheffler, Secretary.

1821 Lincoln Street. Evanston, Ill.
Man is the supreme Talisman. Lack of a proper education hath, however, deprived him of that which he doth inherently possess. Through a word proceeding out of the mouth of God he was called into being; by one word more he was guided to recognize the Source of his education: by yet another word his station and destiny were safeguarded. The Great Being saith: Regard man as a mine rich in gems of inestimable value. Education can, alone, cause it to reveal its treasures and enable mankind to benefit therefrom. If any man were to meditate on that which the Scriptures, sent down from the heaven of God's holy Will, have revealed, he would readily recognize that their purpose is that all men shall be regarded as one soul, so that the seal bearing the words "The Kingdom shall be God's" may be stamped on every heart, and the light of Divine bounty, of grace, and mercy may envelope all mankind. —BAHÀ'U'LLÀH.

LETTERS FROM SHOGHI EFFENDI

"Modern Mystics"

"I wish also to express my thanks and appreciation for other enclosures and especially for the book 'Modern Mystics' by Sir Francis Younghusband, a copy of which you have been most kind in sending him. The author's account of the early days of the Movement is very thrilling, indeed, and quite authoritative, being based on Nabil's Narrative. It is hoped that this work will have great influence in spreading the Message in many circles, and in this way will give wide and effective publicity to the Cause." (Note: Reference was made to "Modern Mystics" in a recent issue of BAHÀ'Í NEWS).

"In this connection the Guardian wishes me to draw your attention to a recently published book on 'Persia' written by an English lady by the name of Merrit-Hawks, in which she makes a few, though very favorable and significant statements regarding the importance and position of the Cause in that country. The author, who has traveled extensively throughout the land, and has associated with many classes of the population, has been much impressed all through the journey by the comparatively high intellectual, moral and spiritual level which the Bahá'ís occupy among their fellow-countrymen."

The Guardian's Letters to Individual Believers

"With reference to the N. S. A.'s suggestion regarding the publication in BAHÀ'Í NEWS of passages from the Guardian's letters to individual believers, he wishes me to express his approval of the plan conceived by your Assembly in this matter." (Note: This plan is that when the National Spiritual Assembly receives a copy of a letter from the Guardian to an individual believer containing statements of general bearing and importance, the Assembly will refer these statements back to the Guardian, and when approved by him will publish them in BAHÀ'Í NEWS. This plan was brought to the Guardian's attention in the light of his instruction, published a year or two ago, that his letters to individuals were not to be extensively published).

Stories About 'Abdu'l-Bahá

"He would also urge you to attach no importance to the stories told about 'Abdu'l-Bahá; or to those attributed to Him by the friends. These should be regarded in the same light as the notes and impressions of visiting pilgrims. They need not be suppressed, but they should not also be given prominence or official recognition."

"A Special Responsibility"

"Dear and valued co-workers: Now that the decoration of the dome unit of our beloved Temple has been brought to a successful termination, an unprecedented effort, on the part of both individuals and Assemblies, is required in order to promote, nay to revitalize the teaching work in all its aspects and throughout the length and breadth of the American continent. A special responsibility is thus laid on the elected representatives of the American believers, whose immediate task is to devise such means as will enable every local community and group to play its part and further by every means in its power the campaign of teaching which is to signalize the opening of a new chapter in the history of the Faith in that land. " (signed) Skoghi.

THE NEW HOUR HAS STRUCK

Three major instructions have been received by the American believers since the Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá: to develop the Administrative Order, to construct the Mashriqú'l-Adhkar, and now, to engage in a "nation-wide, systematic, sustained effort in teaching field."

These three instructions mark the fundamental points in our collective historical experience as a national community of Bahá'ís in the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. Their sequence is significant. The friends have developed the institutions of local and National Assembly and of the Convention, thereby constituting the new organism; they have by devotion and sacrifice raised the Temple superstructure and completed the external decoration of its dome unit, thereby giving that organism strength and vigor through the accomplishment of a mighty task: now the American Bahá'í community is summoned to the supreme spiritual effort, that the organism may be penetrated by the Spirit and not remain..."
merely a social body deprived of soul.

When the Guardian informs us that "the new hour has struck in history of our beloved Cause," the teaching effort he calls for is surely far more than a mere enlargement or extension of the activities we have termed "teaching." What we require, if we would meet this surpassing opportunity, is first of all a great deepening of our consciousness, a higher sense of consecration, and a unity that is instinctive and not begrudging or occasional or otherwise incomplete. The "forces" which "progressive revelation of this mighty symbol of our Faith is fast releasing are so overpowering that incapacity to give them a pure, clear channel may well be a catastrophe for all who fail to respond to the limit of their power. These are the forces which outwardly are transforming the life of humanity and the greatest institutions of civilization. "In appearance it is fire and vengeance; in reality it is light and mercy." As we unitedly and sincerely try to respond, the Omnipotence moving the world will guide us safely through the "fire and vengeance" to the "light and mercy" manifested on the plane of faith. The possibilities revealed for the Baha'i community are immeasurable, as their momentum is irresistible by all on earth.

The National Spiritual Assembly, realizing the new weight of responsibility placed by the Guardian upon every Baha'i institution and every individual believer, wishes to contribute, if we would meet this surpassing opportunity, the inmost heart of the friends, to ponder the message, to obey with heart and soul this stirring appeal, whose full meaning for the future none can estimate. But all of us can understand that the doors of service are flung wide in every city; the people are quickened with capacity to receive the Word; and every sincere intention to teach will be reinforced by heavenly power.

Feeling this larger personal opportunity, may we join in all plans adopted by our Spiritual Assembly with ardor and wisdom, retaining all teaching methods that have proved sound and effective but willing to replace any method which no longer corresponds to the reality of this present hour.

The Assemblies and friends who wish to remind themselves of the general advance in teaching methods and policies made during recent years can refer to a number of statements published in Baha'i News, and by so doing keep abreast of the progress made in the recent past, upon which we must now build. Among the direct references to teaching the following are cited for reference: July, September, October and November, 1932, January, 1933 and September, 1934, though these by no means cover the entire ground.

From the Gleanings this passage is quoted: "Arise, O wayfarer, in the path of the Love of God, and aid thou His Cause. Say: Barter not away this Youth, O people, for the vanities of this world or the delights of heaven, by the righteousness of the one true God! One hair of Him excelleth all that is in the heavens and all that is on the earth. Beware, O men, lest ye be tempted to part with Him in exchange for the gold and silver ye possess. Let His love be a storehouse of treasure for your souls, on the Day when naught else but Him shall profit you. The Day when every pillar shall tremble, when the very skins of men shall creep, when all eyes shall stare up with terror. Say: O people! Fear ye God, and turn not away disdainfully from His Revelation. Fall prostrate on your faces before God, and Celebrate His praise in the daytime and in the night season. Let thy soul glow with the flame of this undying Fire that burneth in the midstmost heart of the world, in such wise that the waters of the universe shall be powerless to cool down its ardent. Make, then, mention of thy Lord, that haply the heedless among our servants may be admonished through thy words, and the hearts of the righteous be gladdened." (page 38).

EXPENSES OF THE NATIONAL FUND

In order that we may obtain a better understanding of the present fixed costs of maintaining the established National activities of the Cause in this country and Canada, the treasurer's office has prepared a summary of the expense budget.

The actual running expenses of all of our activities now average approximately $1,923.34 per month. The expenses of maintaining the National offices, including everything, such as stationery, postage, supplies, traveling expenses of National Assembly members, special printing, telegrams and cables, office rental, public teaching bulletins, all mimeograph service, etc., etc., is being done at a very nominal figure, i.e., $472.18 per month.

The World Order Magazine is going to average about $305.00 per month.

International Fund, that is the American believers' contribution to the International headquarters at Haifa amounts to $190.00 per month and the News Letter costs $110.00 per month.

The average cost per month of maintaining the Temple, including the wages of the caretakers, oil for fuel, current for power and light and all other incidental expenses, approximate $617.16 per month.

Green Acre maintenance and expenses comes to $223.09 per month.

It will be noted that this budget of...

If, in our Nineteen Day Feasts, this matter could be discussed, with the idea that hereafter in each Community in the United States and Canada we would seek a one hundred per cent cooperation in the Baha'i body of our city, we feel sure that the blessing reting would make our pleas on the is that every believer, rich or poor, should take part in the monthly conunited action will nevertheless have the desired effect. Certainly no real be-the followers of Baha'u'llah can fail.

In the next News Letter there will appear detailed figures of the av-

TEMPLE CONFERENCE

The American Baha'i community took an important forward step on the occasion of the Conference held at the House of Worship on October 26 and

27. The sessions welded together the friends and the members of the National Spiritual Assembly in the maintenance of the established activities is definitely depriving himself of a very sacred privilege.

When reports are received from the local Assemblies, a committee appointed, in addition to those reported in a previous issue:

Program Committee, Central States Summer School—L. W. Eggleston, Chairman, Mrs. Bertha Hyde Kirk-patrick, Secretary. Mrs. Dorothy Baker.

Program Committee, Western States Summer School—John D. Bosch, Chairman, Leroy Ioas, Secretary, Mrs. Ella G. Cooper, Mrs. Amelia Collins, Prof. N. Forsythe Ward, Irwin Som-erhalder, Siegfried Schopflesker, Charlotte Linfoot, George O. Latimer.

Youth Committee—the following new members have been added: Far-ruk Ioas, Margaret Kunz, Florence Mattoon.

Universal Language—to the membership previously announced, Josephine Krupa has been added.

TEACHING SERVICES OF RUHI EFFENDI AFNAN

Baha'i resident in the many cities visited by Ruhi Effendi Afnan need no descriptive article to acquaint them with the fact that his teaching services have been truly effective and inspiring.

His contribution to the unity and enthusiasm of the believers themselves, his grasp of the Message, and his capacity to respond to public opportunities not hitherto available to representatives of the Cause, combined to make his visit, necessarily brief though it had to be, a landmark in American Baha'i history.

When reports are received from the different Regional Teaching Representatives and local Assemblies by the National Teaching Committee, a comprehensive record of Ruhi Afnan's services can be published. A word of heart-felt gratitude is now expressed on behalf of all believers who had the privilege of his teaching.

A NEW TEMPLE ILLUSTRATION

The illustration sent to the friends with the letter from the National Assembly dated September 24, 1935, has been reproduced for sale to the friends who have long wished a picture showing the Temple in its present stage of completion.

Copies may be obtained from Harry
graphs Committee, at 5c each, or three for 10c. Mr. Walrath's address is 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago.

As it is not convenient to sell single copies by mail, it is suggested that the local Assemblies obtain a supply for the individual friends.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

Dear Baha'i Friends:

The Library Committee wishes to take this opportunity to express its deep appreciation to all the local As-semblies and individualBahais whose continued cooperation has enabled this Committee steadily to enlarge the scope of its work.

We now wish to bring to your attention the new plans for the present year.

Every central Library in most of the major cities in the country is well supplied with a representative collection of Baha'i literature. The circulation of the books is continuously growing. The literature is also in many University Libraries, and it is this feature of distribution that we wish to emphasize particularly at this time.

In the University departments of Philosophy or Religion, the study of "Living Religions" and "Comparative Religions" attracts a large number of students. It is the wish of the National Spiritual Assembly as well as of the Library Committee that every College and University in the United States and Canada have Baha’i literature in its Library. This is one of the most direct ways of getting the Teachings before the thinking youth of the country.

Kindly interview the Universities in your locality, obtain a list of the Baha’i works they now have, and their willingness to receive the gift of additional books, "The Promise of All Ages" and "Secrecy for a Failing World." These are books which should be in every Library, since their titles attract immediate attention.

As our resources for the distribution of free literature is limited, we wish to request each local Assembly to make one more Library donation, the new volume recently published, "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha’u’llah." We trust that your donation of this unique addition to Baha’i literature in English will eventually have important results.

As a matter of interest, the Committee reports that its records show that at present Baha’i literature is obtainable in 143 Public and 31 University Libraries.

Will each local Assembly consider these plans and notify the Committee of its intention to assist in this branch of the teaching work.

Martha Woodsum, Chairman Library Division, Baha’i Publishing Committee.

YOUTH COMMITTEE

To the Baha’i Youth of the United States and Canada.

Dear fellow youth:

The Guardian has placed upon the National Youth Committee a great and unique responsibility. It is his wish that the Baha’i youth of the United States and Canada bring into the closest possible cooperation all the Baha’i youth of the world. He further wishes that we may enter as fully as possible into the study of the World Order and the work of public teaching.

This is a great responsibility, a challenge to all that is fine in us. The affairs of youth are close to the Guardian's heart. So let us, in this third year of the National Youth Committee, enter more fully than ever into the work of constructing the New World Order.

The National Youth Committee wishes to be a medium of guidance and expression for all the Baha’i Youth of the world. This cannot be done without cooperation—that keynote to successful living in this new age. Write your group problems to the National Youth Committee, that they may help you. Offer plans and suggestions to them. Only by wholeheartedly working together can we bring into being what Shoghi Effendi desires—an international Baha’i Youth Movement that will challenge the young people of the world with the dynamic and constructive principles of the Faith of Baha’u’llah.

This autumn marks the launching of an intensive teaching campaign on the part of all the communities in the United States and Canada. Let us enter into this campaign determined to attract many youth to the Cause! The recent decision of the N. S. A. to allow young people between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one to declare their faith and attend Feast meetings opens a wide and new field of teaching effort for the Baha’i youth of America. Let us begin this year, in America, the Youth Movement which the Guardian anticipates.

This message of the Guardian, written in August, 1933, to the first Committee, shows the constant interdependence of Baha’i activity and the relation of Youth activities to the whole Baha’i community—"he would strongly urge you to cooperate, heart and soul, with all the various Assemblies, groups, and committees throughout the Baha’i world, to ask for their assistance and help for the successful discharge of your duties and obligations, and in this way to try to build up an active and ready mind among the Baha’i youth throughout the world."

The obligation is clear and definite. The National Youth Committee sees its work as in a specialized teaching field, to attract youth under twenty-one to the Faith of Baha’u’llah and to encourage by all possible means the entrance of Baha’i Youth into the active life of the local and National communities.

To accomplish these things, the National Committee would like "to cooperate, heart and soul, with all the various Assemblies, groups, and committees." If each community which has no youth group as yet would immediately consider the problem, the Committee will give all possible aid in the formation of such a group. If each youth group already formed would call on the National Committee for help and advice, and keep it regularly informed of its progress, the goal of our Guardian would be sooner achieved.

In the face of the present great teaching opportunities, and in full consideration of the great and majestic task before the Baha’i Youth of the world, the National Youth Committee issues this call for cooperation and renewed dedication.

Sincerely In His Service,
Kenneth Christian, Chairman, National Youth Committee.

INDEX COMMITTEE

The Baha’i Index Committee desires to know if anyone among the Baha’is has an Index to any of the following volumes:

Gleanings from the Writings of Baha’u’llah.*

Tablets of Baha’u’llah.

Kitab-i-Iqan.

Three Tablets of Baha’u’llah.

Epistle to the Son of the Wolf.

Some Answered Questions.

The World Order letters of the Guardian.

The Dispensation of Baha’u’llah, Shoghi Effendi.

Any believer having an Index which he is willing to lend to the Index Committee is requested to communicate with the Committee Secretary.

The Index Committee is also very desirous of receiving letters from Bahá’ís who have had experience in indexing or cataloging.

Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick,
Secretary, 209 North Ingalls Street, Ann Arbor, Mich.

*These books already have an Index, but some of the friends may have worked out additional subject references which will be useful.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

During the past month the National Publicity Committee has received clippings from the following cities: Albany, N. Y.; Rochester, N. Y.; Racine, Wis.; Miami, Florida; Bergen, Norway; Lima, Ohio; Columbus, Ohio; and Chicago, Illinois.
In several cases the publicity resulted from a release sent to the newspapers of the cities by the National Publicity Committee at the time of the completion of the Clerestory section of the Baha'i House of Worship. This release included two beautiful pictures of the dome and a short paragraph. If your papers used this material and you have not sent clippings to the National Publicity Committee we would appreciate three clippings of each release.

Some very thoughtful work has been done by the publicity chairman at Local Assemblies and the National Publicity Committee believes their work will be an inspiration to others.

In Chicago, last spring, the Local publicity chairman sent a typewritten letter to the Women's Clubs of Chicago and vicinity offering to have speakers appear on their programs this fall and winter. The letter emphasized the fact that there is no charge for Baha'i speakers. A tour of the Baha'i House of Worship was also suggested with the service of a guide. This letter resulted in a frontispiece of the Baha'i House of Worship with a fine description of the building appearing in the mid-summer number of "Women," the official magazine for the Chicago and Cook County women's organizations.

In another large city one of the friends wrote to a "Religious Question Box," which is a column appearing in one of the newspapers, asking "If there was in the Bible any basis for the many Christian sects and what prospects there were for a world religion?" This reply was received from the newspaper, "There is no authority in the teachings of Christ for so many Christian sects and denominations. Regarding the prospects of a world religion, write to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the U. S. and Canada, Evergreen Cabin, W. Englewood, N. J."

As we enter upon the intensive teaching campaign following the instructions of the Guardian we must always keep in mind the assistance which thoughtful publicity can bring. From several of the larger cities clippings are received each week concerning publicity given visiting speakers and local meetings.

It should be remembered that the Baha'i population in any city is relatively small and your publicity must contain something in which the editor feels that the general public will be interested.

Baha'i publicity should never be spectacular. It should be dignified, absolutely accurate and place before the reading public the fundamental teachings which Baha'is are endeavoring to place before the listening public.

The National Publicity Committee has received the following suggestion: "We suggest that each Local Spiritual Assembly appoint a radio committee (ideal work for Baha'is who are shut-ins or tied to their homes for one reason or another); this committee to appoint certain people who will be given definite radio programs which they will tune in on each day, such as philosophic programs, etc., so that when an opportunity presents itself to send in a favorite saying, something from the teachings can be sent in under the supervision of the local committee. There is a wide field for activity of this kind. We have a program locally that sings the songs of all churches and religions every morning. One of these days, I shall send them some Baha'i songs."

We suggest that a magazine reader be appointed in each Community whose responsibility will be to read the weekly and monthly magazines searching for references to the Cause. Such references should be sent to the National Publicity Committee.

The annual scrap book will be kept this year and the pages for your Community are waiting to be filled. The National Publicity Committee would appreciate the name and address of each Local Publicity Chairman. Send all communications to Ruth Randall Brown, Chairman, Box 9, Ingomar, Pa.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

Recent issues of the Magazine have contained compilations of Words of Baha'u'llah selected from the new volume, announced last month, entitled "Gleanings From Writings of Baha'u'llah." These compilations have been deeply appreciated.

A series of articles under the title of "A World Religion" was begun in the September number. Under this heading, successive articles, each by a different author, will be published as follows: The Source of Religion, The Continuity of Religion, The Oneness of the Prophets, Cycles of Civilization, The Spiritual Nature of Man, The Oneness of Mankind, The Historic Crisis, The Fulfillment of Religion, and A World Community.

In addition, the Magazine has been privileged to publish a number of important articles by believers, and some informative and helpful articles by non-believers. The Editors have written a large number of letters to Baha'is in America and also in Europe and the East, a pealing for contributions on Baha'i subjects which will deepen and enlarge the scope of this monthly teaching organ. The response received has been thoroughly appreciated, but a general appeal is now issued to individual believers, to Assemblies and to Committees for more continuous cooperation.

The three Summer Schools maintained programs full of possibilities for a series of articles or for one or two articles bearing upon the fundamental subjects discussed. Mrs. Mayme Seto has prepared her program at Central States Summer School as a series to be published in coming months, and other teachers are urged to follow this example.

The Editors likewise urge all believers who give public addresses on Baha'i subjects to appreciate the larger audience they can reach through the medium of a magazine article. Moreover, it is helpful to a speaker to try at least occasionally to write out a talk before it is delivered, because the practice of writing makes for clarity, order and appeal to reason as well as to feeling.

The Business Manager of the magazine reminds the friends of the value of this publication in spreading the Cause and also in affording each Baha'i an opportunity to extend his own knowledge and capacity by sharing the results of other believers' careful and conscientious study.

World Order can be obtained as follows: Introductory subscription (seven months), $1.00; Annual subscription, $2.00; Library subscription, $1.75; Gift subscriptions, five or more annual subscriptions on one order, $1.50 each; Extra copies—ten copies of any issue sent to one or more addresses, $1.50.

Editorial correspondence should be addressed to World Order, 119 Waverly Place, New York, N. Y.

subscriptions and business correspondence should be sent to World Order, 135 East 50th Street, New York, N. Y.

ARCHIVES COMMITTEE

The local Assemblies and individual believers are requested to give thought to the extreme importance of preserving the Master's Tablets in the Archives. By sending the original Tablet, accompanied by translation, to the Archives Committee, not only is the precious physical document kept safe from destruction or loss, but its contents are made available to all other Baha'is.

At present there are approximately 1200 Tablets in the Archives, and it was from those on hand at the time that the three volumes of Tablets were compiled many years ago. In the future, additional volumes will be published, thus giving the world more of that illumination which 'Abdu'l-Bahá cast upon the problems and conditions brought to Him by the friends.

On August 20, 1929, the Guardian laid an obligation upon this generation in the following words: "The work of collecting and publishing the Tablets is one of the most important tasks that this generation has to undertake, for upon it depends our true understanding of the Cause and its principles. The more we put it off, the more apt we are to lose some of the original writings." Referring to the publication of Tablets, the same letter stated: "Only Tablets with the Master's signature and in the original tongue should be recognized. Any translation or copies of them fail having real authority. This shows the importance of collecting the original Tablets that bear the Master's signature."

The Word of the Manifestation, and the utterance of His Interpreter, descend to this darkened earth from a higher realm utterly beyond human control. Nevertheless, human beings are responsible for the degree to which they assure its preservation and spread among the people. How many prior Revelations left no authoritative guidance because the Word was lost or corrupted by those who called themselves the friends of God!

Since the Archives Committee can provide photostatic copies of every Tablet at very low cost, there really appears to be no just reason why any individual believer should any longer privately cherish Tablets which spiritually belong to this universal Revelation. All material for the Archives should be sent to the Committee Secretary.

MRS. MAY SCHEFFLER, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street, Evanston, Ill.

LETTER FROM CLARA AND ADELAIDE SHARP

Through the courtesy of Mrs. Orol Platt, we are able to share with the friends these descriptions of the passing of Dr. Moody and the closing of the Tarbiat School.

"Our beloved Dr. Moody ascended to the Abhá Kingdom, October 23, 1934, at 6:30 P.M. She had been ill twelve days due to a heart stroke... Some of the children of the school led the hearse while the teachers followed with her Baha'i sisters and then came her Baha'i brothers. The Baha'i cemetery is not a cemetery in comparison to the Muslim's but is a garden. Ours here is called the Everlasting Rose Garden. So Dr. Moody was taken to the Everlasting Rose Garden, where a most impressive ceremony was held. Jinab Fadil read the burial prayers.

"Much can be said to commemorate Dr. Moody's passing, for twenty-five years of service means so much to our Baha'i friends. Dr. Moody wrote a short biography but she did not mention her work among the women. Perhaps she was too modest and left that to others...

"The closing of the school was a great shock although we had expected that it might happen. The Báb's Martyrdom in this country is kept by the Arabic calendar and came this year on December 6... Saturday afternoon a policeman came with an order from the Board of Education to close the schools. They said Tarbiat had been closed for no reason Thursday and the license for Tarbiat School existed no longer. The order came after school had been dismissed and there was no time to tell all the children, so Adelaide and her assistant went to school the next morning at 6:30 A.M., before the policeman could get there, and as the children came to enter the school they had to be turned back. This was very hard as many of the little ones did not understand and called to Adelaide to tell the policeman to let them in, and many cried... The Baha'i children have not gone to other schools... The Muhammedan children of course went to other schools but they are not satisfied and happy. Tarbiat School was far ahead of the other Persian schools, in their text books, character training and everything else. All the schools say this. The educated Muhammedans are with the Baha'is. One important Muhammedan said he knew it was a Baha'i School when he sent his children there and said that was no reason for closing the school... We had many of the best families in town sending their children and they are feeling very badly about it. There were nearly 1500 pupils in both schools and about 50 teachers... This has advertised the school and called attention to the Cause and what they are working for more than anything else that could have happened... Shoghi Effendi has written for us to be patient and not make any disturbance but persevere and keep trying to gain religious liberty, that the school will again open and things will be better than ever."

REPORT FROM N. S. A. OF IRAN (PERSIA)

The Members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada:

Some time ago, just after the opening session of the newly elected National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Iran we sent you a telegram concerning the election of the Assembly and immediately after that we dispatched to you a circular containing matters of interest and importance about the conditions of the Baha'is here. We are not yet sure that you have received any of the two as we have not been advised of their receipts.

We again try to send you the following news about the conditions of the Cause here in Tehran and other cities of the country, hoping that you will receive this one in due time.

Tehran. The Baha'is are not yet allowed to meet in a large crowd in the Halls of Haziratu'l-Quds. It was only on the occasion of the Eve of Baha'u'llah's Ascension that about four hundred persons were united together in Haziratu'l-Quds to commemorate that night in chanting prayers till about morning. Anyhow, the friends are not absolutely forbidden to have some sort of gathering. The Assembly has arranged that they should meet in about nine places in town. They meet every Thursday evening in these different houses of the friends and in every session they follow a special pre-arranged program.

Up till now there has been no objection on behalf of the Police Department to this system of gatherings and there is hope that the system can go on without any interruption.

The N. S. Assembly and all the committees working under its supervision meet in Haziratu'l-Quds. The Friday moral teachings, especially for children are regularly working and the friends are getting more and more conscious of its value and its importance.

Other Cities: 1. Bandar Shah. The Baha'is of Aragh have been ill treating the friends and always seeks all the means to cause them trouble and discomfort. They have arrested and even imprisoned some of the believers.

2. Aragh. The Baha'is of Aragh are passing the narrow escapes of every kind of hardship and difficulty. They are under worse circumstances than other cities. The police office as well as the Census Department treated the friends in the worst possible manners. Mr. Zargarzadi, the secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of that city has been arrested. They have been so hard and cruel to him that for a long time nobody knew anything about him. Even his children were forbidden to see him. It seems that they intend to exile him from that spot. The cause of all these troubles lies in the fact that he did not consent to sign the official census papers unless on the column where religion has to be mentioned the word "Bahá’í" was inscribed. The officers insisted that he should sign the paper, without having the word "Bahá’í; he refused and went under so many troubles.

Jenabi Fadil Mazandarani went there especially to meet the friends and keep them warm at their work and prevent any sense of dismay which naturally in these cases may prevail throughout the friends everywhere. Dr. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá visited Colonel Rokneddin Khan, the chief of the Police Office in Tihran and talked the matter over with him. The latter, quite rude and nervous, has said: "The Bahá’ís refuse to sign the census papers sent to them from the government and they take pictures holding 'The Greatest Name' in their front. These are some sorts of Manifestation or strikes which should be prevented by Government officers everywhere.

Even now the Bahá’ís are ill-treated and no change in the behavior of the officers in charge has ever appeared.

Kasvin: The Police Department of this city has been too very hard on the friends. One of the believers, Nosrat Rahmani, has gathered together a crowd of the Bahá’í friends in his house to commemorate the eve of Bahá’u’lláh’s ascension. Next morning, he has been forbidden to hold any kind of meetings in his house any more. Two other friends, Rouhani and Hazasi were taken to the police station and were questioned about the newly printed calendar which they received from Tihran. They answered to every question quite frankly, openly and truly. When they said the truth about the matter, they were forced to go around the city and take back all the copies that they had sold to the friends. The Chief of the Police has been very harsh to them. He even cursed and injured them and did not consider any form of respect towards them. As a result of that, the three young Bahá’ís, Messers. F. Moghebel, A. Anvar and H. Behrooze who were responsible for the publishing of that calendar were arrested in Tihran. They were in prison for forty-eight hours after which they signed a paper declaring: "We will never pretend anything."

Rasht: According to the explicit order of the Minister of Post and Telegraph, two members of the Spiritual Assembly of Rasht: Mr. Hossein Atai, the chief accountant of Post Office and the secretary of the Spiritual Assembly, and Mr. Abdul Hassan Moazam Zade, the cashier of the same office, are strongly forbidden to attend the sessions of the Assembly. This being told them through a confidential letter.

Azarbayejan: The Police Department of Azarbayejan does not sanction the application papers of any Bahá’í addressed to the administrative offices. This happened in the case of Ayadollahi Seyssani, when he asked the above department to sanction his application letter to one of the offices. The Police Department insisted that he should sign the official residential letter. This happened in the case of a Bahá’í. The latter, quite rude and nervous, has said: "The Bahá’ís refuse to sign the census papers sent to them from the government and they take pictures holding 'The Greatest Name' in their front. These are some sorts of Manifestation or strikes which should be prevented by Government officers everywhere."

Bahá’ís have often been told that the enemies of the Cause are more cruel than ever and are plotting against us. The latter, quick to do something for us. Banoo Soheili, Ardekani and Azade Soheili, the following letter of the Bahá’ís were sent to them from the government:

Mr. and Mrs. John Bosch, whose property at Geyserville, Calif., has been placed at the disposition of the Western States Summer School since its inception—making possible this important Bahá’í educational institution—have now consummated this generous contribution by transferring title of the property to nine Trustees under an Indenture of Trust similar to that by which the Temple is held for the Cause.

By this historic gift, the Western States Summer School is assured of permanence and given opportunity for future development. As the Master said, the full significance of such actions will not be realized until later, but all American believers can now appreciate some of the possibilities of the gift, and feel gratitude to the donors whose devotion to the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh has been so munificently attested.

BAHÁ’Í DAY AT CALIFORNIA PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

After consultation with the Teaching Committee, the Spiritual Assembly of Los Angeles sponsored a Bahá’í Day at the Exposition in San Diego on October 27. Publicity was arranged by the Exposition in some 250 newspapers in advance of the date, radio announcements were made at the Exposition, a headquarters was provided for the distribution and sale of literature and for displaying illustrations of the Temple, and a program of public lectures was arranged for one of the large auditoriums.

It is reported that an audience of about 1,500 attended the meeting, the
THE BAHAI' WORLD
Volume V

The publishing date on this work has been set as approximately December 14.

In order to assure immediate shipment, the Publishing Committee urges all local Assemblies to place advance orders by December 10.

The Bahai' world, the biennial international record of Bahai' activities, has become an important instrument for developing the world view upon the affairs of the Bahai' community. To the believers it affords intimate knowledge of achievements outside their own national Bahai' community, while to non-believers it is proof and evidence that the Faith of Bahai'u'llah has spread throughout the world, forming one community out of peoples who had been diverse and hostile in race, nation, class and creed.

Among the contents of Volume V are: The Passing of Bahiyyih Khanum; The Most Exalted Leaf; Excerpts from Baha'i Sacred Writings; The World Order of Bahai'u'llah; Geneology of the Bab; Geneology of Bahai'u'llah; Excerpts from the Will and Testament of Baha'u'llah; National and Local By-Laws; Articles and Illustrations of the Temple; Survey of Current Activities; References to the Faith by non-Bahais; Bahai' Calendar and Festivals; Youth Activities; The Case of Bahai'u'llah's House at Baghdad; Baha'i Directory; Bahai' Bibliography; twenty-nine articles about the Cause, including The Administrative Order, by Shoghi Effendi; and Poems and Songs.

The illustrations, too numerous to mention, include most precious scenes of Baha'i historical value, Baha'i Assemblies and gatherings, and two exquisitely colored Frontispieces.

Orders are to be sent to the Publishing Committee, either the New York or San Francisco divisions, in the usual way. Price per copy, $2.50.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

During recent months a large number of local Spiritual Assemblies have reported the enrollment of new believers, and of already declared believers by transfer from some other Bahai' community.

These reports include: Chicago, 11; New York, 10; Washington, 5; Milwaukee, 4; New Haven, 4; Colorado Springs, 3; San Francisco, 3; Eliot, 3; Muskegon, 2; Park Ridge, 2; Portland, 2, and one each from Vancouver, Montreal, Berkeley, Phoenix and Toledo.

FIRST BAHAI INCORPORATION IN CANADA

The Spiritual Assembly of Montreal has been granted a Charter by the Province of Quebec constituting it a Corporation under Canadian law. This important action represents the successful outcome of long and patient work on the part of the Assembly and its legal counsel.

Since this incorporation means the recognition of the Faith by one more Government, and places Baha'i affairs in North America under Canadian as well as United States protection, the matter has evidient international importance for the Cause.

The gratitude of the believers is due to the friends of Montreal for their great achievement.
LETTER FROM SHOGHI EFFENDI

On Closing of Tarbiat Schools

"With regard to the closing of the Tarbiat Schools: the school authorities have, in enforcing the observance of Baha'i anniversaries, acted on the advice and direction of the Guardian. These Schools, being independent and official Baha'i institutions, could not very well ignore, much less violate the express provisions and laws of the Aqdas. Had they any connection with government institutions, or had their ownership and control been shared by non-Baha'i, the situation would have been different. This distinction between institutions that are under full or partial Baha'i control is of a fundamental importance. Institutions that are entirely managed by Baha'is are, for reasons that are only too obvious, under the obligation of enforcing all the laws and ordinances of the Faith, especially those whose observance constitutes a matter of conscience. There is no reason, no justification whatever, that they should act otherwise, and any restriction which the government may impose upon them in this connection would necessarily constitute a violation of the individual's right to freedom in matters of religious belief. The situation is different when an institution is run partly by Baha'is, or is completely owned by the government. In this case the believers, while anxious to observe all prescribed Baha'i Feasts and Anniversaries, should also take into consideration the rights and interests of their non-Baha'i partners and associates, and not to force these to stop working when they are under no moral or religious obligation to do so.

"On the first of Ridvan the believers had for a number of years observed officially the festival by closing their schools on that day. No objection had been raised by the authorities. The action was precipitated when the Assembly decided, as advised by the Guardian, to observe in the same manner the Anniversary of the Bab's Martyrdom, the observance of which is, in addition to eight other holidays, explicitly enjoined by 'Abdu'l-Baha in one of His Tablets.

"The point which should be always remembered is that the issue in question is essentially a matter of conscience, and as such is of a binding effect upon all believers. It has so been considered by the friends in Persia, not because of any specific instruction given to them by the Guardian, but solely in view of the fact that the celebration of the Anniversary of the Bab's martyrdom has been explicitly enjoined by the Master."—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, in letter to the N. S. A., dated Haifa, October 2, 1935.

"WHAT IS MOSTLY NEEDED"

To the Baha'is of the United States and Canada:

In approaching our task of carrying forward the teaching work in keeping with the high standard and unprecedented activity which the Guardian now indicates the spirit of the Faith requires, two striking conditions impinge upon our consciousness. First, we are overwhelmed with our incapacity, both spiritually and numerically; and, second, we realize that our only hope of achieving success lies in complete reliance upon the confirmations of the Holy Spirit.

The dynamic Teaching Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Baha not only supply the food for the development of spiritual strength for this work but also outline the path of service. Their appeal opens such recesses in our hearts as to bring the necessary confirmations of the Holy Spirit. These Tablets should become the dominating force of our daily study and contemplation that we may be severed from our localized problems and rise to those heights of Baha'i service which alone can achieve success. Not only should the Tablets be studied continuously, but every one of the friends should use the Tablets in their study and meet with their friends and use the Tablets also to make the Tablets known to their friends in the community.

The clarion call of these Tablets is: "Every one of the . . . souls must arise, blowing over all parts of America, the Breath of Life, conferring upon the people a new spirit, baptizing them with the Fire of the Love of God, the Water of Life, and the breaths of the Holy Spirit—so that the second birth may be realized."

As each one arises to fulfill his part in this divine drama, the guidance and confirmations of the Holy Spirit will open new paths of activity which our limited experience does not yet conceive. The important thing for each and every Baha'i to realize is that the plan of service is not so important as the service itself. Determination and perseverance will open doors to ways and means better suited to the individual than any generalized scheme which the Teaching Committee might propose.

Our experience has demonstrated, however, the value of certain methods which might form the initial basis of activity—for one, the fireside meeting. Every Baha'i can invite friends into his home for a social and cultural evening. With the spirit right, there will be created an interest in the Faith on the part of these new friends. Thus is afforded an excellent opportunity to carry on teaching work in a direct and intimate way otherwise impossible. It is important that the purpose and spirit of these fireside meetings be clearly understood. It is not contemplated that each Bahá’í will invite other Bahá’ís to his home to discuss the Faith. It is intended that each Bahá’í will invite non-Bahá’ís so that the field of Bahá’í contact will be widened. If every believer in America will hold such a fireside meeting once every nineteen days, the results will be astounding. During the past year the best results in the teaching field have been achieved through this type of meeting.

On the Spiritual Assemblies rests great responsibility for pressing forward this new wave of teaching enthusiasm. Their first duty is to see that every means is utilized, not only to permit the individual Bahá’ís of their communities to teach, but also to assist them in every way. Every Bahá’í in America must be an active teacher and the Spiritual Assemblies should continually encourage and stimulate every one to fulfill this task.

Spiritual Assemblies likewise will find new doors of teaching service open to them as they arise under the guidance of the new spiritual forces being released in America. The following suggestions may offer a basis of service:

1. For three years we have held before us the goal for each Assembly to introduce the Faith into a new community and to carry on the follow-up work until a new Spiritual Assembly is established. Many of the Assemblies have not accomplished this task and they should endeavor to do so immediately.

2. Greater use should be made of the teaching literature. Selected lists of leaders of service, educational and religious groups should be prepared and appropriate teaching literature sent them with a covering letter from the Spiritual Assembly. For instance, the pamphlet, "The Most Great Peace," should be sent to those working for peace; the pamphlet, "Holoculture," should be sent to leaders in the educational field. To all on these selected lists there should be sent current the public teaching bulletin issued by the National Spiritual Assembly entitled, "A New World Order." These can be secured at a nominal cost from the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Continuous use of this material will have both direct and indirect influence. Through it the Faith will become better and more favorably known. Thus it will be easier to teach and to secure more publicity.

3. A special committee should be formed to arrange for Bahá’í addresses at clubs, societies, churches, etc. All organizations are now interested in the social problems, particularly from a spiritual standpoint, and openings for Bahá’í speakers can be made very easily. By this means the Faith is carried to larger numbers than can be reached through invitation to Bahá’í meetings.

4. Public teaching campaigns should give direct and forceful presentation of the Bahá’í teachings. The Guardian has indicated that the world today is concerned more with the problems of socialization than with the interpretation of scripture or the fulfillment of prophecy. Therefore, in responding to the psychology of the public the Bahá’í lectures should cover the following sociological questions:

(a) What is religion? (b) Can an existing religion solve the present problems of the world? (c) The mission of the Prophets of the past. (d) The influence of religion on society. (e) The cyclic development of civilization. (f) The effect of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh on society today.

5. The use of the radio offers a most effective channel for teaching. Educational programs are seeking new approaches to the problems before the world and have gladly accepted Bahá’í addresses on the solution of these problems. The special committee appointed to make openings for Bahá’í speakers before clubs, etc., could also include in its duties the arranging of Bahá’í talks over the radio.

Above all, we must have ever before us the goal of the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. We must realize that the Bahá’í Faith is not a philosophy of life, nor is it a movement for social reform. It is the integration of the spiritual and material aspects of existence into a perfect whole—the perfect way of living. Therefore, we must order our lives in accord with the high ideals of Bahá’u’lláh so that they may be examples of the Faith itself and consequently the most effective teacher. Furthermore, this way of living applies to the community as well as to the individual. Our Assembly life must be so adjusted that the world may see in it the glory of a united humanity and find therein a haven from the forces of separation and alienation abounding in the world.

Let us arise to the standard and spirit of the new teaching campaign as set forth so comprehensively by the Guardian in the following letter just received through his secretary:

"In connection with the problems facing the friends in their teaching work these, the Guardian is well aware, are by no means easy to overcome, especially in view of the limited number and resources to the believers. But in the field of Bahá’í service, as the history of the Cause abundantly demonstrates, there is no obstacle that can be said to be insurmountable. Every difficulty will, in due time, be solved. But continued and collective effort is also needed. The Bahá’í teacher should not get discouraged at the consciousness of the limitations within or without him. He should persevere, and be confident, that no matter how numerous and perplexing the difficulties that confront him may appear, lie is continually assisted and guided through Divine confirmations.

He should consider himself as a mere instrument in the hands of God, and should, therefore, cease looking at his own merits. The first and most important qualification of a Bahá’í teacher is, indeed, unqualified loyalty and attachment to the Cause. Knowledge is, of course, essential; but compared to devotion, it is secondary in importance.

"What the Cause now requires is not so much a group of highly cultured and intellectual people who can adequately present its Teachings, but a number of devoted, sincere and loyal supporters who, in utter disregard of their own weaknesses and limitations, and with hearts aflame with the love of God, forsake their all for the sake of spreading and establishing His Faith. In other words, what is mostly needed nowadays is a Bahá’í pioneer, and not so much a Bahá’í philosopher or scholar. For the Cause is not a system of philosophy: it is essentially a way of life, a religious faith that seeks to unite all people on a common basis of mutual understanding and love; and in a common devotion to God."

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE.

PARTICIPATION IN 1936 CONVENTION

All local Assemblies elected in 1935 have been requested to fill out and return to the N. S. A. the application form which is mailed to local Assemblies each year. The form calls for the number of voting members in the community at this time, and for the list of their names and addresses. Names and addresses of Bahá’í youth of less than twenty-one years of age should be included. The voting list should be revised so as to exclude all believers who have been transferred to other Bahá’í communities during the past year, but include all who have been newly enrolled or received on transfer.

Will each Spiritual Assembly which has not yet done so please fill out and return the application form at once. If for any reason the form has not been received, it will be sufficient to report the number of voting believers in the community immediately, and supply the other information after a duplicate is obtained from the N. S. A.

For the benefit of new Assemblies it should be explained that the N. S. A. must soon assign the ninety-five delegates to the local communities in accordance with the principle of proportionate representation. Consequently, if any local Assembly fails to report, the National Assembly must either seriously delay issuing the Convention Call, or assign no delegate to that community.

LOCAL ASSEMBLY ROLL
To the list of recognized Assemblies published some months ago, the N. S. A. is pleased to add the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of St. Paul, Minnesota.

MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION OF THE TEMPLE*

Since the completion of the superstructure of the Temple in June, 1931, the Temple Trustees have given careful consideration to the maintenance and operation of the Temple with a view to the protection of the physical structure, especially during the season of severe storms in the winter and spring, and to the economical operation with regard to lighting, heating, cleaning, the care of the surrounding grounds, etc.

It has been necessary to give some attention to the maintenance of the physical structure and to make some minor reports during the past year as a result of the temporary condition of such portions of the foundation as the sloping ramp, which will support the tier of steps of the completed building.

The care and operation of the Temple has been under the personal supervision of Mr. Edward D. Struven for the past decade and about two and a half years ago Mr. Carl Hensch came to the Temple as assistant caretaker. Both of these devoted believers are especially equipped by training and experience to operate the mechanical plant and to perform the various duties required properly to maintain the entire property which includes not only the Temple structure, but the caretaker's house, the Bourgeois Studio and the nine acres of grounds.

During the completion of the superstructure, early in 1931, a careful study was made by The Research Service to ascertain the type and amount of utilities such as heating, lighting, ventilation and plumbing, that could be included within the amount of money available and would operate the building most efficiently and economically. It was thought best to provide only such equipment that would be permanent in nature and could be added to as future finances made possible. The extremely low-price conditions of the depression made it possible for the Trustees to secure considerably more equipment than would have been possible in normal times.

Your Trustees deemed it desirable to make a review of conditions of maintenance and operation of the Temple covering the past four years in order to determine as to whether further economies might be effected and operating conditions improved. To this end a special committee was appointed several months ago and this committee was authorized to consult with specialists to get their unbiased views relative to the various elements of lighting, heating, cleaning, repairs, etc. At a meeting of the Temple Trustees held at Evanston on October 27, 1935, the report of the committee was considered and two consultants of the committee made a lengthy oral statement. These two consultants were Mr. Benjamin B. Shapiro, engineer of maintenance of the properties of the park system of Chicago, and Mr. C. J. Ulrich, architect of Chicago. The report of these two experts briefly is as follows:

Repairs

Some minor repairs are necessary

* A statement by the Temple Trustees prepared at the request of the National Spiritual Assembly.

MT. CARMEL

at this time including the waterproofing of a section of the foundation ramp to the south and west, and the repair and replacement of sections of the promenade tile deck at the foot of the clerestory which have been slightly damaged by the placing of the ornamentation of the dome and clerestory just above this level.

Heating

The caretakers have operated the mechanical plant in an efficient manner and in order to properly protect and maintain the physical structure under the extreme weather conditions and ranges of temperature that prevail at this location, it has been necessary to maintain a temperature of 40° to 50° F. in the entire building during the winter and early spring months. The operation of the boilers, constituting the heating plant, has been economical. There are three boilers, one of which is fully automatic and generally in use when artificial heat is required, and one or two additional boilers are used only when required by severe weather or low temperature conditions.

Lighting

The contract made with the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois is the most favorable and advantageous arrangement that can be entered into to provide for present lighting requirements and future needs both for internal and external illumination. Under any other contract that could be arranged, the present lighting cost would be greater. A careful analysis was made and it was found that the Trustees could not effect a saving by installing their own pumps, etc.

Caretaking

It was pointed out that the care of the Temple is a 16-hour day job and cannot be done by one man. Under existing conditions it must be understood that the Temple is an unfinished building and cleaning is a difficult matter, as the floors and walls become covered with dust a few hours after they are cleaned. This condition will continue until the permanent interior finish is completed.

In addition to the caretaking, Mr. Struven has found it necessary to give considerable time to receiving and showing visitors through the Temple.

Grounds

The area along Linden Avenue is sodded and has been kept in attractive and well cared for condition. Arrangements have been made during the past few years to fill in the low areas along Sheridan Road, utilizing excavated material from the new water works plant at Wilmette and other construction work. It is recommended that, as funds become available, this material be levelled off and graded up to the building so as to give a more finished appearance.

As the continuation of external ornamentation may be deferred for some considerable time, it is recommended that the scaffolding and sheds used by the Earley Studio for the erection of the dome and clerestory ornamentation be removed and stored.

The Temple Trustees were very much pleased with this report, as it confirms the original recommendations of the engineers and shows that the funds that are being devoted to the maintenance and operation of the Temple are being efficiently used and properly administered.

IN MEMORIAM

Know thou that every hearing ear, if kept pure and undefiled, must, at all times and from every direction, hearken to the voice that uttereth these holy words: "Verily, we are God's, and to Him shall we return." The mysteries of man's physical death and of his return have not been divulged, and still remain unread. By the righteousness of God! Were they to be revealed, they would evoke such fear and sorrow that some would perish, while others would be so filled with gladness as to wish for death, and beseech, with unceasing longing, the one true God—exalted be His glory—to hasten their end.

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life.

As to those that have tasted the fruit of man's earthly existence, which is the recognition of the one true God, exalted be His glory, their life hereafter is sweet as we are unable to describe. The knowledge thereof is with God, alone, the Lord of all worlds.—Bahá'u'lláh.

"THE ROSE-GARDEN OF UNFADING SPLENDOR"

In this issue of Baha'i News the believers will find a statement prepared by the Teaching Committee, outlining essential elements in a plan intended to enable American Baha'is to move forward unitedly in response to Shoghi Effendi's words about teaching.

The members of the National Spiritual Assembly add their appeal, that one and all the American believers will strive to concentrate effort upon revitalizing and extending the direct promotion of the Message among the people in their environment, realizing how Baha'is are assisted by superhuman power, and how brief is the time allowed us in which to enlarge our numbers and consolidate our forces ere human events come to the climax foretold by Bahá'u'lláh.

"Release yourselves, O nightingales of God, from the thorns and brambles of wretchedness and misery, and wing your flight to the rose-garden of unfading splendor... Behold how the manifold grace of God, which is being showered from the clouds of Divine glory, hath, in this day, encompassed the world. For whereas in days past every lover besought and searched after His Beloved, it is the Beloved Himself Who now is calling His lovers and is inviting them to attain His presence." — Bahá'u'lláh. (Gleanings, pp. 319-320.)

Our highest capacity and our purest joy is surely attained only as we have the privilege of participating in Baha'i gatherings inspired by such words of the Manifestation, where each can rise above himself and feel that he has become part of a new Creation. "The Book of God is wide open, and His Word is summoning mankind unto Him. No more than a mere handful, however, hath been found willing to cleave to His Cause, or to become the instruments for its promotion. These few have been endowed with the Divine Elixir that can, alone, transmute into purest gold the dross of the world, and have been empowered to administer the infallible remedy for all the ills that afflict the children of men." — Baby publication in Baha’i News, reminding the delegates of the responsibility they themselves had assumed.

2. That the publicity method used in Pasadena be made available to local Assemblies throughout the United States and Canada, as information that may possibly lead to uniform action.

It is recorded that since the Convention, Mrs. French has supplied the Publicity Committee with copies of a circular letter describing her method, and that this letter has been distributed by the Publicity Committee.

3. That a Committee be appointed to develop and formulate plans for Baha’i social activities, and that the program suggested for publication in Baha’i News be entirely satisfactory to the Guardian and to the National Assembly; and that the deductions of the Committee be based upon definite instructions of the Master on that point.

A special Committee has been appointed to recommend such plans, and its report when presented and a proved will be published.

4. That the National Assembly be requested to look into the matter of lantern slides and see if any of the photographs in the various volumes of The Bahai World and The Dawn-Breakers are available.

This Resolution is still under discussion and the result will be reported as soon as possible.

5. That a sign be placed in the Tempoty Auditorium, in accordance with the quotation mentioned by Dr. Eagesladi, or some other suitable quotation, to impress upon those present the need of reverence and silence.

It has been voted to take no action on this recommendation.

6. That the National Assembly be made aware of the principle established by the Guardian that only Baha’is may contribute to the Temple Fund, so that the matter can be settled as the Guardian wishes it to be.

It is recorded that the National Assembly has consistently acted in accordance with the Guardian’s words on that subject, and calls attention to the following excerpt from Baha’i Administration: “As I have already intimated in the course of my conversations with visiting pilgrims, so vast and significant an enterprise as the construction of the first Mashriqu’l-Adhkár of the West should be supported, not by the munificence of a few but by the joint contributions of the entire mass of the convinced followers of the Faith. It cannot be denied that the emanations of spiritual power and inspiration destined to radiate from the central Edifice of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár will to a very large extent depend upon the range and variety of the contributing believers, as well as upon the nature and degree of self-abnegation which their unsolicited offerings will entail. Moreover, we should, I feel, regard it as an axiom and guiding principle of Baha’i administration that in the conduct of every specific Baha’i activity, as different from undertakings of a humanitarian, philanthropic or charitable character, which may in future be conducted under Baha’i auspices, only those who have already identified themselves with the Faith and are regarded as its avowed and unreserved supporters should be invited to join and collaborate. For apart from the consideration of embarrassing complications which the association of non-believers in the financing of institutions of a strictly Baha’i character may conceivably engender in the administration of the Baha’i community of the future, it should be remembered that these specific Baha’i institutions, which should be viewed in the light of Baha’u’llah’s gifts bestowed upon the world, can best function and most powerfully exert their influence in the world only if reared and maintained solely by the support of those who are fully conscious of, and are unreservedly submissive to, the claims inherent in the Revelation of Baha’u’llah. In cases, however, when a friend or sympathizer of the Faith eagerly insists on a monetary contribution for the promotion of the Faith, such gifts should be accepted and duly acknowledged by the elected representatives of the believers with the express understanding that they would be utilized by them only to reinforce that section of the Baha’i Fund exclusively devoted to philanthropic or charitable purposes.” (pages 171-172.)

7. That the Convention recommends to the National Assembly the plan for providing local Assemblies with uniform receipts on the same model used by the National Assembly itself.

It has been voted to publish the following view: That local Assemblies are urged to give careful consideration to the matter of proper financial records and any local Assembly wishing to do so may turn to the National Assembly for advice and assistance.

8. That in view of the excellent report of the Amity Committee, it would be very helpful to have a survey of the number of races, religions and nationalities represented in the Cause in America.

It is reported that this recommend-dation has been fulfilled in the questions included in the Bahá'í Historical Record Cards.

9. That Convention sessions begin on Thursday and continue through Sunday each year.

This suggestion is to be considered when plans for the 1936 Convention are adopted.

EXPENSES OF THE NATIONAL FUND

To follow the statement that appeared in BAHÁ'Í News of December the treasurer's office is presenting now the details under the various headings given then, showing how the moneys used in these activities are expended.

- Mimeograph Service 10.00
- Sundry 15.00

$572.18

The World Order—magazine of which average cost is $205.00 per month, is divided as follows:

- Editorial Expense $15.00
- Office Rent 25.00
- Sundry 30.00

The International Fund is in one check of $190.00, which is sent each month to the Guardian.

The amount being sent to the Guardian for the International Bahá'í Fund is altogether too little to be representative of the devotion of the American Bahá'í Community. With the believers of Iran (Persia) unable to transmit funds outside their country, the burden upon the International Fund is far heavier than in previous years.

The monthly average cost of the News Letter is $110.00 and this covers all expense of printing, postage, etc.

- The cost of Temple maintenance, which averages $617.16 per month, is apportioned as follows:
  - Caretakers' Salaries $216.66
  - Oil for heat
    - Temple 136.00
    - Studio 11.50
  - Light and power
    - Temple 90.00
    - Studio 3.50
  - Gas
    - Temple .75
    - 112 Linden Ave. 5.50
    - Studio 7.00
  - Coke 7.50
  - Repairs and Supplies 50.00
  - Water 17.50
  - Insurance 65.00
  - Telephone 2.50
  - Stuttio 1.25
  - Sundry 2.50

It is important that every believer should realize the extremely low cost of maintenance of the Temple. The two caretakers have between them a twenty-four hour a day job. In winter the temperature of the building must be maintained above freezing, approximately forty degrees and this of course requires the constant attendance of one or the other of the men. The rates for current for light and power, as well as for fuel oil, are the absolute minimum that can be had in these parts. The building is fully covered by insurance so that the believers may feel amply protected against loss under fire, storm, riot, airplane and other hazards.

Green Acre expense, which averages $229.00 per month, we consider higher than it should be considering the short period in which the believers can use the property, is nevertheless the absolute minimum that we have been able to attain in the maintenance of this property. At the present time a new committee are making a careful study of Green Acre and its possibilities with the idea of further reducing the cost and increasing the use of this splendid property. The details of the monthly average figure are as follows:

- Caretaker's salary $100.00
- Water 5.00
- Insurance 15.00
- Repairs 25.00
- Taxes 50.00
- Printing 2.00
- Sundry 2.00

$229.00

While discussing Green Acre, we want to emphasize the fact that this expense is incurred in order to maintain facilities for a Bahá'í Summer School open to all believers and their friends, a Center the importance of which was made clear by the Master in many Tablets, and more recently by the Guardian. If enough believers used these facilities, Green Acre would not be an expense but a valuable asset to the teaching work of the Cause. In future there is no doubt but that Green Acre will have many guests and visitors that its annual statement will show a profit.

These figures are presented to the believers with the idea that they should carefully study them. Every believer should be thoroughly acquainted with the work of the Treasurer's office, for we feel certain that this will inspire confidence in those who are supporting the Fund. The actively operating plant as reflected by the activity of the National Spiritual Assembly and the bodies of trustees who maintain the various Bahá'í properties is a really great one which is running smoothly and efficiently.

You will note that this budget has made no provision for teaching expense even though the teaching work is being carried forward. The first expansion of this budget should be to make definite provision for more teaching activity. At a recent meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly it was voted that all literature used for free distribution should be paid for by the National Fund. This the Publishing Committee have endeavored in the past to provide for us. However, it cannot continue to do so longer and still maintain its regular work of publishing the books as it has been doing in the past. It feels that if such expense can be taken from a budget for teaching, the Publishing Committee can without assistance from the National Assembly maintain itself through the printing and sale of the various Bahá'í books. That the Publishing Committee is self-sustaining and has for some years now been operating, producing the many beautiful Bahá'í publications that are made available to the Bahá'ís at a minimum of cost, should be noted by every believer.

If there are items that are still not clear, or any believer wishes to make a suggestion regarding the work of the Treasurer's office please write and we shall be most happy to respond and let us then at this first Nineteen Day Feast in 1936 resolve to begin anew a more active participation in the work of the Cause as represented by the National Treasurer's office through a 100 per cent cooperation in every Bahá'í community in the country.
THE RESIDENTIAL QUALIFICATION OF VOTING MEMBERSHIP IN A BAHÁ’Í COMMUNITY

In BAHÁ’Í News, January, 1935, the National Spiritual Assembly published a statement entitled “Interpretation of the By-Law on Residential Qualification of Voting Believers” in which was expressed the view that the requirement of residence as one of the qualifications of a voting believer should be based upon definite proof of capacity to associate with the BAHÁ’Í community.

It appears that this interpretation has led to some confusion in a number of local communities. The National Spiritual Assembly has therefore given further consideration and now offers the following supplementary statement in clarification of the January publication. This statement is the outcome of consultation with the Guardian and has been submitted to and approved by him. It is based upon what he considers “a fundamental principle” of BÁHÁ’Í Administration—that no adult believer may be deprived of “the sacred right of participation in Bahá’í elections” unless he reside in a community not itself qualified for such participation or has permanently withdrawn or been removed from further association with the activities of the Faith.

1. The enrollment of voting members in accordance with the By-Laws of the National Spiritual Assembly is a responsibility vested in the Local Spiritual Assembly, but is made subject to approval by the National Assembly. Otherwise, the matter of an individual’s voting right does not come before the latter unless on appeal from a decision made by a Local Assembly.

2. Previous statements published in BAHÁ’Í News have sought to clarify the action of Local Assemblies in determining the applicant’s qualifications for voting membership in a BÁHÁ’Í community with respect to his faith and his acceptance of the Cause in general. The question now under discussion deals exclusively with the matter of residence, and how Local Assemblies are to apply the residential qualifications as set forth in the By-Laws.

3. The requirement of residential qualifications is recorded in Article 11, Section (a) of the By-Laws. which reads as follows:

“1. To become a voting member of a BÁHÁ’Í community a person shall
   a. Be a resident of the locality defined by the area of jurisdiction of the Local Spiritual Assembly as provided by Article VII, Section 12, of this instrument.”

4. Under these provisions of the By-Laws, residential qualification for voting membership in a BÁHÁ’Í community thus becomes a question of fact. In order to assist Local Spiritual Assemblies in determining whether an applicant for such membership comes within those requirements in any particular case, the National Spiritual Assembly offers the following interpretation of certain specific situations which experience has shown are likely to arise.

A. Where a believer lives sufficiently near a BÁHÁ’Í community to take an active share in its activities and there is no organized Spiritual Assembly in his own community, he should be enrolled and continued upon the voting list of that community until a Spiritual Assembly is established in his own immediate neighborhood.

B. Where a believer, actually a resident of a particular community, is temporarily absent from his community but honestly regards his residence there as continuing and fully intends to return to and resume his activities in that community, he retains his voting rights in the community without interruption. He may not, however, during his absence, vote in any other BÁHÁ’Í community.

C. Where a believer spends practically half of the year within the jurisdiction of one BÁHÁ’Í community and the other half within the jurisdiction of another lie must choose which of the two localities lie considers to be his place of residence, and exercise his voting rights in that city alone. Naturally, lie should take part in all other BÁHÁ’Í activities in whichever place he may be.

D. Where a believer claims residence in a particular community for the purpose of exercising voting rights but is actually domiciled elsewhere and makes only occasional visits to the community, insufficient to bring him within the provision of paragraph A above, a question of fact arises which the Local Spiritual Assembly may find it difficult to decide. In such cases, the Local Assembly may take counsel with the National Assembly before making a final decision.

E. A Local Spiritual Assembly confronted by any other unusual situation involving the question of residence can at any time seek advice from the National Spiritual Assembly before making a final decision.

5. In connection with the foregoing interpretations, though not involving the specific question of residence exclusively, the following point has been brought to the attention of the National Spiritual Assembly by the Guardian.

a. A believer who has been absent for some time from the community of which lie is a resident, or a new believer not yet sufficiently well acquainted with the local community, is not obliged to vote in a BÁHÁ’Í election when conscientiously feeling incapable of voting intelligently.

It is hoped that these supplementary explanations will remove the misunderstandings which the January statement appears to have caused and may be of assistance to Local Spiritual Assemblies in dealing with this important question of residence.

DECISSIONS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

1. Voted to approve the recommendation made by the Publishing Committee, that when books are financed by a BÁHÁ’Í author, the idea that the Publishing Committee shall distribute the book, the author is to turn over to the Publishing Committee the cost of printing the work, so that the Committee can supervise the printing. This ruling does not mean that a BÁHÁ’Í author cannot publish approved BÁHÁ’Í literature through a recognized general publisher. Its aim is to prevent confusion between authors and the Publishing Committee, and enable the Committee to maintain proper standards of printing and binding, and assure accuracy in the text.

2. Voted to adopt the ruling that hereafter all radio broadcasts of a direct Baha’i character shall be approved by the local Assembly before delivery.

COMMITTEE LIST

To the list of National Committees already published, the following appointments have been added.

Baha’i Social and Recreational Activities: Mrs. Bahiyih Lindstrom, Chairman, Dr. E. Lenore Morris, Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Dr. Edris Rice-Wray, William de Forge, Mrs. Thurs ton Vaughn, Dr. Eliza Ransom.

Compilations for Baha’i Anniversaries: Miss Jean Anthony, Mrs. Marion Hays, Mr. Mark M. Bahai Green ‘Ateh Committee (general committee combining program and property functions): Mrs. Florence Morton, Chairman, Mrs. Emma D. Flynn, Mrs. Hebe Struven, Dr. Genevie, Coy, Howard Struven, Mrs. Amelia Bowman, Harold Bowman, Horace Holley.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

A Correction

The Library Committee report in December Baha’i News conveyed a wrong impression which is now corrected.

The following books are donated by the Library Committee to Public and University Libraries, from its budget of free literature—The Baha’i World, Vols. Two, Three and Four. Book of Assurance, Baha’u’llah (former edition of the Igan), Baha’i Revelation, by Thornton Chase, and Bahai: Spirit of the Age, by Horace Holley.

These titles, however, cannot be supplied free at present but the Library Committee hopes that local Assemblies will donate them to Libraries—Promise of All Ages, by Christhill, Security, for a Failing World, by Stanwood Cobb, and Outcries from the Writings of Baha’u’llah.

REPORT FROM PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

In the Sixth Taraz, Baha’u’llah says: "Newspapers are as a mirror which is endowed with hearing, sight, and speech. They are a wonderful phenomenon and a great matter."

If a Baha’i teacher could come into your city and have as an audience the readers of only one of the daily newspapers, what a vast assemblage that would be. We are immediately impressed with the necessity of ceaseless endeavor to teach through the press. We must, however, be careful that the material we submit teaches in several ways: Familiarizing the public with the names, arousing interest in a world-wide cause, causing questions to arise in the mind of the reader and if possible a desire to know more about the question.

We have on hand some of the last photographs taken of the Baha’i House of Worship suitable for use in newspapers. If your paper did not carry a photograph at the time of the completion of the clerestory perhaps you could have one used in connection with the coming Convention. We will send them upon request.

The following paragraph is quoted from a letter received recently from Martha Root. "As I travel these countries, I try to make friends, teach the few who are most interested, try to get them books to study, try to get them in contact with Bahais in the other parts of the world, try to get Bahais in other countries interested in them. Also I try to get publicity about the Bahais Cause into the newspapers, over the radios, and to the peace workers, the Esperantists, the modern religious organizations; sometimes I have the bounty to speak of the Teachings to rulers, statesmen, educators and the heads of the press."

This letter tells of publicity in Esthonian, German, Russian and in papers at Riga, Latvia. One morning paper, "Savardinas" with both morning and evening editions. Russian but not Bolshevik, is the largest circulated Russian newspaper in the world, outside of Russia. They used an excellent article giving the principles and the photograph of ‘Abdu’l-Baha. The journalist called again, she is interested in spiritual subjects and I lent her some Baha’i magazines. Five Riga newspapers used articles the next day.

Each Community can reach countless readers through the press and the eye is used today more often than the ear in the education of the great masses of people.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

RUTH RANDALL BROWN, Chairman

TEMPLE PROGRAM COMMITTEE

The following items of interest have been reported by this Committee:

The record of Temple visitors during September, October and November, 1935: Week days, September, 892; October, 104; November, 10. Sundays, September, 2,711; October, 2,051; November, 787. Total visitors during three months, 5,579; total number of groups, 713.

REPORT FROM YOUTH COMMITTEE

An administrative change of great importance has occurred in the National Youth Committee during the past two months. With the approval of the N.S.A. the membership of the Youth Committee has been increased by the addition of Parruk Ias, Margaret Kunz, and Florence Mattoon. The Committee will issue, beginning with this month, an international quarterly in the form of a mimeographed magazine which will contain study suggestions, news, and articles by young Baha’is.

The work of Baha’i youth will be conducted now on the basis of area representation. All the members of the National Youth Committee have been divided into three groups to serve these following areas—the Eastern and Southern (with Kenneth Christian as secretary), the Chicago and Mid-Western (with Florence Mattoon as secretary), and the Pacific coast (with Marion Holley as secretary).

The appointment of these sub secretaries will enable the Committee members of these respective areas to help the youth groups in their vicinity and deal directly with their problems. It also will be the duty of these sub-secretaries to foster regional youth conferences throughout the year. News of these conferences and other activities will be reported each month in Baha’i News.

This radical change in the nature of the National Youth Committee makes it possible for closer cooperation and more direct action in attaining those objectives set by our Guardian.

On December 27-28 a regional youth conference was held in New York with youth group representatives from Boston, New York, Syracuse, Binghamton, West Englewood, Amityville, Baltimore, and Philadelphia attending.

The conference convened on Saturday, December 27, and consisted of three strenuous sessions up to the time of the regular public Sunday afternoon meeting in the New York Bahá’í Center. This meeting was conducted by the youth delegates and consisted of three short talks on personal aspects of the Cause, music, prayers, and readings from the*Gleanings.*

The sessions of the conference were unusually fruitful. The new set-up of Youth Committee was explained. Many suggestions were advanced whereby the National Committee can be of greater help to local youth groups. A logical series of steps for approaching young people and presenting the Message were formulated.

They are: analysis of the individual (since all young people fall into one of three types—religious, indifferent, and non-religious), selection of a subject approach suitable to the type, the explanation of Bahá’í terminology, the selection of approach books suited to the type, the formulation of answers to certain questions all seekers ask, the selection of definite books to be studied when the individual is ready. It will be the duty of the Youth Committee to put these steps into form for use by youth groups.

A discussion was held concerning the summer youth conference at Green Acre. Other topics discussed were the holding of more regional conferences, the relation of Bahá’í youth to economically insecure youth, the standard of Bahá’í conduct, and the personal relation of the individual to Bahá’ulláh.

The spirit animating the discussions was one of unity, enthusiasm, and consecration. And, to bless the efforts being made by Bahá’í youth, our Guardian sent the following cable: “Assure Regional Youth Conference (of) loving prayers (for) success (of) activities (and) blessings (on) deliberations.”

SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF ADDIS ABABA, ETHIOPIA

“Brothers in the Bahá’í Spiritual Assemblies, in East and West: Peace be upon you all. With reference to the present condition of Ethiopia, I beg to draw your attention to the fact that we have, for the present, stopped our spiritual meeting.

“All letters addressed to us must be sent by registered post, so that if not delivered to us they will be returned to the sender; and I prefer to stop writing letters for the present.

“Bahá’ulláh and the New Era in Abyssinian language, with illustrations, has already been printed and copies have reached us. The cost is $.

NEWS FROM THE N. S. A. OF GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

Fifty-nine believers gathered at a general meeting, which took place in the evening of Saturday, April 27. The Chairman of the Convention addressed the audience, emphasizing the importance of the Administrative Order, which was introduced during the term of office of the outgoing N. S. A. and designed closely after the pattern of the American Declaration of Trust and By-Laws. The N. S. A. had hoped to be able to present its Declaration and By-Laws in print at the National Convention, but the printing had met with unavoidable delays. The Chairman, after pointing out the sacred task and responsibility of the Convention, concluded with a pledge of loyalty to the Guardian of the Bahá’í Faith.

Then followed the reports on the activities of the N. S. A. and its Committees, as well as of the Local Assemblies and Groups. The Secretary of the outgoing N. S. A., Dr. Eugen Schmidt, reports on the activities of the N. S. A., from April 22, 1934 to April 27, 1935, during which period twelve meetings have been held. The N. S. A. accepted as its main task the creation and consolidation of the Bahá’í Administration, focusing its efforts on the formulating of the “Declaration of Trust and By-Laws of the Bahá’ís in Germany and Austria.” Conforming to the wishes of the Guardian, registration cards were introduced and thus the community of the Bahá’í-believers more clearly defined. —At present there are seven Local Assemblies: Berlin, Esslingen, Hamburg, Karlsruhe, Stuttgart, Wannemunde, Vienna, and groups which meet regularly in Dresden, Frankfurt, Greppingen-Geislingen, Heidelberg, Leipzig, Restock. —On June 8, 1934, the designation of “National Spiritual Cooperative of the Bahá’ís of Germany and Austria” was changed into “National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Germany and Austria.” —

In addition to its administrative activities, the N. S. A. gave its attention to the problems of expansion and a deepening of understanding of the Faith in Germany and Austria. A share of these tasks was assigned to several committees: Mr. Max Greeten-Bremen was requested to furnish for Bahá’í World, Vol. VI—a Bahá’í year book, published by the American friends, a report on the Bahá’í activities in Germany during April 1, 1934 to April 21, 1935, whilst Dr. A. Muehl, will compile a bibliographical survey. —Through other resolutions, ruling were laid down for Bahá’í elections and the holding of the National Convention in conformity with the new By-Laws.

Dr. Schmidt gave also a report on our magazine,Sun of Truth, whose pages had to be decreased in number in order to reduce the cost. The desired increase in the number of pages and the consolidation of the magazine depends decidedly on a wide propagation of the paper through the friends, and the magazine has not yet found the necessary response by the friends. Contents and number of copies of the December issue had been increased in order to give the magazine a better introduction to the public. It is hoped that the friends will seize this excellent opportunity for an expansion of our Faith. It is the wish of the Guardian that in addition to translations from the writings of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and Bahá’ulláh the magazine publish also general articles on the Cause and the active collaboration of the friends is heartily invited.

Then followed the report of the Treasurer, Paul Gollner, on the financial state of the treasury and its income and disbursements from the Publishing Committee and the magazine*Sun of Truth.* The appeal of the N. S. A. for the creation of a Bahá’í Fund, which is the fervent wish of our Guardian, requires a still greater response from the believers and every one should make its greatest effort and financial sacrifice, so that the urgent activities which are planned may be carried out.

Dr. H. Grossman reported on behalf of the Committee “Bahá’í Esperanto-Eldefenejo and La Nova Tago.” The first work on Eldenejo was undertaken in 1925 when Friedrich Gerstner in cooperation with H. Grossman founded La Nova Tago. Besides this magazine were issued a number of publications, as the Esperanto edition of the Esslement Book and the Paris Talks, translated by Lidja Zamenhof, and others. The publications were of great assistance at Bahá’í meetings, which took place at the yearly Universal Esperanto Conventions, and a wonderful help for the spreading of the Bahá’í Faith abroad. For lack of time and shortage of private funds, the publication of La Nova Tago had to be interrupted in 1934.
Then, following a repeated request of the Guardian that the magazine should be published again, the N. S. A. appointed this committee and the first new issue of La Nova Tago appeared in March, 1935, whilst the publication of an Esperanto edition of the Kitâb-i-ṣâbâyâ had to be postponed on account of urgent publications in the German language.

For the Publishing and Reviewing Committee, Dr. Muehlschlegel reported that it is the task of this committee to review all publications on the Bahá’í Faith in Germany and Austria. Approved texts are recognized by the remark "Authorized by the N. S. A. of the Bahá’ís of Germany and Austria."

... Of 150 reviewed pages were printed in the Sun of Truth: "Divine Art of Living," "Nabil’s Narrative" (in extracts), "Epistle to the Son of the Wolf," etc. Ready for publication are the following books: "Wills and Testaments of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá," "Book of the Covenant," "The Message of Bahá’u’lláh" and others.

For the Teaching Committee reported Dr. H. Grossman. At first, the committee was charged with the creation and execution of the program of the Bahá’í Summer-Week at Esslingen; then, on June 10, 1934, its scope was enlarged, and it was made responsible for the supervision and uniform execution of all official Bahá’í meetings in our two countries—The Summer-Week, 1934, as held at the Bahá’í House in Esslingen from August 5 to 12. More foreign friends attended than ever before, and for the first time we had also a foreign speaker: Mrs. Helen Bishop—Geneva. For the promotion of teaching activities several circulars were sent out and a Bahá’í Teaching Meeting, to take place on Whit Sundays, 1935, was prepared. Also preparations for the Bahá’í Summer-Week, 1935, were begun. The members of the Teaching Committee held a number of addresses and meetings at various places.

Next was Mrs. Anna Grossmann-Neckargemünd, who reported for the Contacts and Bahá’í News Committee which was created in April, 1934. Its duties are to establish and maintain connections with Communities, Groups and isolated believers, and to assist foreign friends wishing to visit German Bahá’ís in their efforts.

The Legal Committee, Dr. Grossmann stated, was appointed on June 10, 1934, for the purpose of preparing the "Declaration of Trust and By-Laws" of the N. S. A. It collaborated in some legal matters and prepared a number of circulars for the N. S. A.

Dr. Muehlschlegel reported for the Archives Committee, which was created in October, 1934. The archives serve the following purposes: (1) collection of documents on the Bahá’í Movement (reports, pictures, newspaper articles, etc.), and on events important to the Bahá’í Movement, (2) storing of files of the N. S. A. and local Assemblies, (3) storing of Bahá’í texts (originals, copies and prints). Originals—e. g., Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá—are stored in a safe. (4) It is also planned to create a lending library later on...

For the Management of the Bahá’í Home at Esslingen Anna Koestlin reported on the great interest which the Guardian takes in the Bahá’í home, the extensions which have been made last year and those which are planned for the future.

The Committee North-German Bahá’í Meetings told of its preparations for a meeting at Berlin on Whit Sunday. These committee reports were followed by reports of the communities and groups, which indicated a great animation of activities. A collective report will appear in our next issue of the Bahá’í News.

At the next and last point of the agenda "Questions and Suggestions for Consultation of the Delegates" several friends asked for the floor. Amongst other points the question was raised whether in the activities of the immediate future preference should be given to literature or the Bahá’í Home, and it seemed to be the opinion of the gathering that both needed equal attention.

The meeting was closed at midnight with a prayer.

The election of the new National Spiritual Assembly took place the next morning, April 28, at the Bahá’í Office. Of the nineteen delegates fifteen had been recognized. The casting of the ballots was preceded by a prayer spoken by Mrs. Schwartz. Mr. Gollmer, Miss Koestlin and Mr. Weber acted as scrutineers. The members of the new N. S. A. are: Martha Brauns—Karlsruhe, Paul Gollmer—Stuttgart, Max Greeven—Bremen, Dr. Herman Grossmann—Neckargemünd, Edith Horn—Frankfurt-Main, Anna Koestlin—Esslingen, Dr. Adelbert Huelhs—Esslingen, Dr. Eugen Schmidt—Stuttgart, and A. I. c. e. Schwartz—Stuttgart. Thus the same members of last year’s N. S. A. are constituting the new N. S. A. Mrs. Brauns obtained the largest number of votes and became thus temporary chairman of the N. S. A. until its election of officers. The following telegram was sent to the Guardian: "Loving greetings in full harmony. National Convention." The meeting closed at 10:30.

At 11 about 300 people gathered in the large auditorium of the German House for a morning meeting to which the public had been invited through advertisements in the press. Mrs. Schwierz spoke on the Ridvan-World of the Bahá’í Faith and Dr. E. Schmidt on Living Religiously. Our Goldreich concluded the meeting with the reading of words by Bahá’u’lláh. The program was fittingly interspersed with musical recitals.

Over one hundred friends met for dinner as guests of the Bahá’í Community of Stuttgart in the hall of the city park. At 15 the dinner was followed by a Unity Feast, which formed the conclusion of the 13th National Convention of the Bahá’ís of Germany and Austria.

The Newly Elected N. S. A.
Chairman, Mrs. Alice Schwarz, Vice-chairman, Dr. A. Muehlschlegel.
1st Secretary, Dr. E. Schmidt.
2nd Secretary, Max Greeven.
Treasurer, Paul Gollmer.
Members: Martha Brauns, Dr. H. Grossmann, Edith Horn, Anna Koestlin.
Address of the Secretary: Dr. E. Schmidt, Stuttgart-W., Reinsburgstr. 198.
Address of the Treasurer: Paul Gollmer, Stuttgart, Neckarstrasse, 127.

NEWS FROM N. S. A. OF INDIA AND BURMA
Beginning July, 1935, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma began publication of a larger Bahá’í News Letter, four pages of which were printed in English. The following items are reproduced from this important Bahá’í periodical:

The Story of the Convention
The most important step towards consolidation of the Divine Faith as repeatedly stressed by our Beloved Guardian is to observe the Commandments of Bahá’u’lláh and to organize and co-ordinate the activities of the Friends of God. In obedience to these injunctions the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma called a convention of the delegates of the local Spiritual Assemblies so that they may discuss ways and means to give effect to the wishes of the Beloved Guardian.

The delegates and friends began pouring in Bombay from all parts of India as if drawn by some great centrifugal force. The friends of Bombay welcomed them with open arms and great joy and happiness pervaded the group of these ardent souls. They all rapturously beheld this imposing symbol of our Faith and every friend seemed determined to carry out the injunctions of the Beloved Guardian which he had so often enjoined upon his faithful friends. The Cablegram from the Beloved of our hearts added a new zest and the glad-tidings of the establishment of a Branch of the N. S. A. of India and Burma in Palestine gladdened the hearts of these sincere souls. In their rejoicings they did not lose sight of what the Guardian’s message meant. Mr. Hishmatullah drew attention to it when he said that the message meant a closer attention of the Guardian on the activities of the friends in India and Burma. This enhanced the determination of those present and they primed themselves for the work that they were to do in the year to come. The delegates met for three days and each recounted what his Assembly had done up till then and what they proposed to do hereafter. Their recommendations were recorded by Prof. Pritam Singh to be placed before the N. S. A. While the afternoon lectures in different parts of Bombay carried the Great Message to others; the evening lectures at the spacious Baha’i Hall proved a strong force to draw the friends closer. The Convention then proceeded with its second function: They elected their N. S. A. for the next year and thus closed the memorable session which it is hoped will prove a great landmark in the history of the Divine Cause in India and Burma. While bidding good-bye to each other the delegates seemed to have imbied the great spirit of sacrifice and renunciation and they left with firm determination to do what they could to teach the Great Message in their spheres of influence.

First All-Burma Convention

As a result of Mr. Hishmatullah’s visit to Burma and in consequence of a Resolution passed by the N. S. A. at their Karachi session, the Baha’is of Burma held their first convention on 9th, 10th and 11th, April, 1935, at Daidnaw, the Baha’i village of Burma. All Burma Local Assemblies were represented by their delegates and the opportunity was utilized for conveying the Message to the people of the neighboring villages. A series of public lectures were held and under the presidency of our veteran teacher Siyyid Mustafa Roumi, Miss Hla Hla, Miss Mya Mya, Mr. Siyyid Murteza Ali, Saya U. Ba Sein, Mr. Faqir Munmad Muqui and Mr. Siyyid Abdul Rashid delivered impressive and instructive speeches. The chorus of ‘Alah-o-Ahha’! Alla-o-Ahha! of 700 persons raised in unison produced an atmosphere which influenced even those who had come here with no sympathetic intentions. The session was a great success in as much as it produced the desired results—awakened a spirit of sacrifice among friends and an interest among those who had come to know what the Divine Cause meant for the World.

Baba’s Magazine

The old Kaukabi-i-Hind was renamed The Baha’i Magazine and with an addition of Persian pages began its publication last year from Lahore. Mr. Hornzdyar Khodabakhsh contributed some very instructive and interesting Persian articles and the N. S. A. takes this opportunity to offer him their sincere thanks. This year the office of the Magazine has been transferred to Delhi and Mr. Hornzdyar having left for Iran, the Persian section is placed in the able hands of Mr. Rashid Oliani, who is an erudite Irani scholar and a Baha’i of long standing. We are sure that the readers of the Magazine will find a marked improvement in both its quality and quantity. We offer our hearty thanks to Mr. Mah-fuz-ul-Haq Ilmi who has been, with an unparalleled determination, carrying on the editorial duties of the Magazine for the last 10 or 12 years under trying circumstances.

"OF ESSENTIAL IMPORTANCE IS YOUR UNITY AND AGREEMENT"

The following Resolution adopted by the Spiritual Assembly of Los Angeles has been approved by the National Spiritual Assembly for publication in Baha’i News. The quotation from words of ‘Abdu’l Baha is taken from an address given by the Master in that city during 1912, reported stenographically at the time.

"Therefore I pray, asking for confirmation and assistance that the aid and uplift of Bahai’Ullah may reach you; the host of the kindom of Ahba may reinforce you: that the powerful angels of God may assist you. Be assured of the victory: rest assured that you will be confirmed. That which is of essential importance is your unity and agreement. You must be in the utmost state of unity and agreement. You must love one another; you must be self-sacrificing for one another. If you observe any shortcomings on the part of any, as much as you can be forgiving and do not be harsh."

The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahais of Los Angeles has voted that the above quotation be called to the attention of the Los Angeles Baha’i Community. They request that all the friends of Baha’Ullah, whether in public talks or in private discussions, make the utmost effort to attain this attitude. If mistakes are made in efforts to serve the Cause no personal reference should be resorted to, but as opportunity arises, the principles of the Faith should be so clearly conveyed that erroneous statements will of themselves vanish. The Spiritual Assembly feels that the friends should always express the unity of the Faith of Baha’Ullah, seeking, between themselves, never publicly, to settle differences of opinion, if any, by referring to the written Word of God: should differences in understanding still continue, the Spiritual Assembly feels that the friends, "having the utmost fear of discord," should lay the matter before the Spiritual Assembly, as the first door in the Administrative Channel that leads, if necessary, to the Guardian for interpretation. The Spiritual Assembly feels that great blessings have recently descended upon the Bahais of Los Angeles because of united effort founded on loyalty to the Administrative order, and that such blessings will increasingly descend as such loyal unity is maintained and the above procedure is followed, thereby gaining the confirmation of Baha’Ullah.

ON MISUNDERSTANDINGS AND DIFFERENCES BETWEEN INDIVIDUAL BELIEVERS

A Statement of Procedure Approved and Adopted by the National Spiritual Assembly

In every Baha’i community, misunderstandings and differences between individual believers arise from time to time, and the Cause of Baha’Ullah provides spiritual principles and also administrative institutions for the preservation of the unity of the believers under all conditions. As the members of the community, one and all, conscientiously abide by the Teachings.
such disturbances will result in strengthening our collective capacity and deepening our spirit of faith, but whenever the Teachings are not fully applied, personal grief and perhaps even injustice may result.

The members of the Spiritual Assembly feel that it will be helpful to summarize briefly its understanding of the principles which control this important matter of personal differences between believers.

In the first place, the spiritual law of the Cause, which 'Abdu'l-Baha so frequently explained, is that whenever two Bahá'ís have any difference, they themselves are in duty bound to try and attain true harmony. The Master even said that if two believers are unwilling to be reconciled, both will eventually leave the Cause. He did not say that they would be removed from the Cause by administrative action; His words meant that such an offense against divine law would be punished by loss of faith leading eventually to an abandonment of the Cause by the offenders.

The Spiritual Assembly, in the second place, has a great responsibility in all matters of dispute between believers which are referred to it for settlement. The Assembly, when it receives a complaint from a member of the community about another believer, must spare no effort to learn the facts and, when possible, make a decision. It is clear that an Assembly cannot make a decision in cases which arise merely from personal antagonism or unfriendliness, but in such cases can only insist that the grief or unhappiness should not be allowed to become a cause of disunity within the community as a whole. The Assembly also must in these cases point out the Master's interpretation of the spiritual law and urge the two believers concerned in the dispute to realize the gravity of their mutual antagonism.

Some disputes, on the other hand, may arise from business or other relations between believers and involve charges of some definite unfairness or injustice committed by one believer against another. When such charges can be proved, it is surely the duty of the Assembly to remove the injustice and place the matter upon a proper Bahá'í basis.

No doubt all of us still need to be reminded of the fact that when a matter has been referred to a Spiritual Assembly for decision, the individual believers concerned must await the Assembly's decision and abide by it, unless and until that decision is altered on appeal to the National Spiritual Assembly. But whether the matter is being handled by the local or by the National Assembly, none of the believers involved in the trouble should agitate their case among the friends. Nothing so disrupts a Bahá'í community as personal agitation. The only solution of this problem is for every faithful believer, when approached by another believer with complaints and criticisms, to remind that believer of his or her duty to refer the difficulty to the Assembly, and not share that believer's personal agitation.

Nine times out of ten, the spirit of calm and serene faith on the part of other Bahá'ís whom the agitated believer approaches will allay the feeling of trouble, but when the personal agitation is shared by others, the original problem becomes multiplied into an issue which disturbs the whole community.

When a believer brings a problem to the Assembly, it is not sufficient to make charges and complaints against another believer,—every charge must be proved before the Assembly can act. No Spiritual Assembly could possibly allow itself to be a mere passive instrument for any one believer to use as a weapon against another. The Assembly has the same duty of justice and consideration toward the one against whom the charges are made as toward the one who makes the charges.

In looking into the problem which has been referred to it, the Assembly must call in for consultation all the individual Bahá'ís who may be involved. However deep the feeling one believer may have against another, and no matter what may be the reasons for that feeling, no faithful Bahá'í will refuse to meet with the Spiritual Assembly for such consultation, because it is consultation with the Assembly itself and not with the believer against whom the complaint is made. Should the one making the complaint refuse to consult with the Assembly, the Assembly in that case must dismiss the complaint, since one of the necessary steps leading to eventual justice and unity has been refused by a party to the dispute; unless of course the truth of the charges is self-evident. If the Bahá'í who makes the complaint is willing to come for consultation, but the other Bahá'í—that is, the one against whom the complaint is made—refuses the Assembly's invitation, this refusal would he serious, because on the one hand it would create a strong impression that the believer could not answer the charges made against him or her, and on the other hand it would mean unwillingness to recognize the authority of the Assembly to act in a matter affecting Bahá'ís and consequently affecting the Cause itself.

To carry the explanation one step farther: if all the believers concerned in a personal problem have met with the Assembly, and if the Assembly, after looking into the matter from all sides, makes a decision, the believers are clearly obligated to accept that decision and abide by it. An appeal, of course, can be made to the N. S. A. and eventually to the Guardian, but whatever the Bahá'í authority which is invoked, a matter referred to a Bahá'í institution for settlement is outside the realm of personal feeling and individual conscience. If we do not trust the Bahá'í institutions created by Bahá'u'lláh, we do not have real faith in Bahá'u'lláh Himself. Rloroever, even when an Assembly makes a decision in a case of personal dispute, the spiritual law laid upon all Bahá'ís is still operating, and the believers involved in the problem should pray for divine compassion and illumination in addition to whatever actions they take in relation to administrative procedure. We Bahá'ís live in the spiritual world which Bahá'u'lláh created in His Revelation, and we must do our utmost to learn and obey its mysterious laws which control our destiny.

"Every eye, in this Day, should seek what will best promote the Cause of God. He, Who is the Eternal Truth, beareth me witness! Nothing whatever can, in this Day, inflict a greater harm upon this Cause than dissension and strife, contention, estrangement and apathy, among the loved ones of God. Flee them, through the power of God and His sovereign aid, and strive to knit together the hearts of men, in His Name, the Unifier, the All-Knowing, the All-Wise."—Bahá'u'lláh.
THE ORDINANCE OF FASTING
A Letter from Shoghi Effendi

As regards fasting, it constitutes, together with the obligatory prayers, the two pillars that sustain the revealed Law of God. They act as stimulants to the soul, strengthen, revive and purify it, and thus insure its steady development.

The ordinance of fasting is, as is the case with these three prayers,* a spiritual and vital obligation enjoined by Bahá'u'lláh upon every believer who has attained the age of fifteen. In the Aqdas He thus writes: "We have commanded you to pray and fast from the beginning of maturity; this is ordained by God, your Lord and the Lord of your forefathers. He has exempted from this those who are weak from illness or age, as a bounty from His Presence, and He is the Forgiving, the Generous." And in another passage He says: "We have enjoined upon you fasting during a brief period, and at its close have designated for you Saw-Ruz as a feast. . . . The traveler, the ailing, those who are with child or giving suck, are not bound by the fast. . . . Abstain from food and drink, from sunrise to sunset, and beware lest desire deprive you of this grace that is appointed in the Book."

Also in the "Questions and Answers" that form an appendix to the Aqdas, Bahá'u'lláh reveals the following: "Verily, I say that God has appointed a great station for fasting and prayer. But during good health its benefit is evident, and when one is ill, it is not permissible to fulfill them." Concerning the age of maturity, He reveals in the appendix of that same book: "The age of maturity is in the fifth year; women and men are alike in this respect."

Regarding the vital character and importance of the Divine ordinances and laws, and the necessity of complete obedience to them by the believers, we thus read in the Gleanings, p. 175: "Know verily that the essence of justice and the source thereof are both embodied in the ordinance prescribed by Him Who is the Manifestation of the Self of God amongst men, if ye be of them that recognize this truth. He doth verily incarnate the highest, the infallible standard of justice unto all creation. Were His law to be such as to strike terror into the hearts of all that are in heaven and on earth, that law is naught but manifest justice. The fears and agitation which the revelation of this law provoke in men's hearts should indeed be likened to the cries of the suckling babe weaned from his mother's milk, if ye be of them that perceive . . . ."

The fasting period, which lasts nineteen days starting as a rule from the second of March every year and ending on the twentieth of the same month, involves complete abstinence from food and drink from sunrise till sunset. It is essentially a period of meditation and prayer, of spiritual recuperation, during which the believer must strive to make the necessary readjustments in his inner life, and to refresh and reinvigorate the spiritual forces latent in his soul. Its significance and purpose are, therefore, fundamentally spiritual in character. Fasting is symbolic, and a reminder of abstinence from selfish and carnal desires—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, Haifa, January 10, 1936.

THE GUARDIAN'S ASSURANCE TO THE DONORS TO THE MT. CARMEL FUND

The following references to the sums forwarded to Haifa by the National Treasurer for purchase of land on Mount Carmel convey the Guardian's assurance of the assistance rendered by all the American believers who contributed to the National Fund for that purpose.

"He very much appreciates, indeed, the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion which the American believers have so remarkably displayed through their contributions to the Mt. Carmel fund. Their splendid efforts during the last few years, and especially in connection with the purchase of the property of the Dumits last year, have now resulted in the safeguarding of an extensive area of land around the Shrines. It is surely a great privilege for the American friends to have had such a preponderating share in securing for the Cause assets that are most valuable, nay, quite indispensable, to the future development and present consolidation of its manifold institutions at its world center."

(In the Guardian's hand.) "Will you kindly assure the individual contributors to the sum which you have forwarded of my abiding and lively appreciation of their spontaneous and self-sacrificing assistance and efforts for the protection and promotion of the international interests of the Faith at its world center. I am fully aware of the self-abnegation which such contributions must have involved, and of the spirit of unstinted devotion which has invariably prompted them. I will pray that the Beloved may abundantly bless and reward them both in this world and in the next."

THE PROGRESS OF OUR TEACHING SERVICE

Since the striking of the "Sew Hour" of the progress of the Bahá'í Faith on this continent, the American believers have been growing steadily more conscious that unseen forces are creating universal interest in the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. The task of raising high the standard of the Faith in this vast land lies clearly before us; and pressingly so. As we become more truly "instruments in the Hands of God," we must prepare the spirit itself to direct our efforts and open the way.

In approaching our new responsibilities in the teaching field, it is important that we realize what a prolific ocean has been provided for our spiritual strength. The "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah" provide inexhaustible spiritual sustenance, from which alone we can gain the power to go forward. The Teaching Tablets of Abdul-Baha lay the foundation for the achievement of success and should be studied continuously for needed inspiration, guidance and enthusiasm for the sacrificial work at hand. The standard of our service is that of the soul-stirring activities of the Dawn-Breakers; those stalwart pioneers of the Faith in Persia. As the Guardian has recently pointed out, "pioneers" of the Faith, must arise in America to achieve complete success. "What is mostly needed nowadays is a Baha'i Pioneer."

Already reports of unprecedented and sustained services are being received from all over America, indicating that the American Baha'i Community is responding to the urgent appeal of the Guardian to "teach the Cause and convey the Message." A few instances are mentioned so they may give impetus to further effort on the part of all of us, and to illustrate some of the successful methods which have been used by Local Assemblies and individual believers.

A number of Assemblies are now actively engaged in introducing the Faith in one or more nearby cities, in accordance with our national program. For instance, Los Angeles, following up the tremendously successful "Baha'i Day," at the San Diego Exposition last October, is conducting an active study class in San Diego, with such recurring public lectures as may seem advisable.

The Philadelphia Assembly is sponsoring with success the establishment of the Faith in Atlantic City; Cincinnati sends groups to Covington and Louisville from time to time; Portland is working in Tacoma; Montreal is cooperating with the friends in St. Lambert; Travencr is working in several cities but concentrating particularly on Haworth; Phoenix is working in Glendale, Arizona; Binghamton is aiding the friends in Syracuse in their teaching efforts. Many other Assemblies have reported similar activities and plans.

"THIS IS TRULY PROVIDENTIAL"

Co-workers:

This new stage in the gradual unfoldment of the Formative Period of our Faith into which we have just entered—the phase of concentrated teaching activity—synchromizes with a period of deepening gloom, of universal impotence, of ever-increasing destruction and widespread disillusionment in the fortunes of a declining age. This is truly providential and its significance and the opportunities it offers us should be fully apprehended and utilized. Now that the administrative organs of the Baha'i Faith are vigorously and harmoniously functioning, and now that the Symbol (i.e., the House of Worship) of its invincible might is the living unprecedented impetus to its spread, an urgent and sustained appeal is required so that the moving spirit of its Founder may permeate and transform the lives of the countless multitudes that hunger for its teachings. That the beloved friends in America, who have carried triumphantly the banner of the Cause through the initial stages of its development, will in a still greater measure prove themselves capable of meeting the challenge of the present hour, I for one, can never doubt. Of the evidences of their inexhaustible vitality I am sufficiently and continually conscious. My fervent plea will not, I feel certain, remain unanswered. For them I shall continue to pray from all my heart.

Shoghi

Haifa, January 10, 1936.

There are at present twenty-two Baha'i Groups, several of which are already growing in strength and numbers. It is worthwhile to note that groups exist in States only where there are Assemblies, indicating the true unit for the diffusion of the Light of the New Day is the Spiritual Assembly. As all Assemblies fall in line with the national program of introducing the Cause in a new community, they will become channels for new growth and strength in the Cause as a whole.

A number of Assemblies having isolated believers in a fairly close proximity have reported that they are cooperating with these friends in initiating Fireside meetings and furnishing fresh interest by occasional visits to these new groups.

San Francisco and Los Angeles report a new teaching venture whereby a group of Bahais is prepared at a moment's notice to go as a group to the home of any friend who has gathered a group and desires three or four short talks or an informal discussion of various aspects of the Faith.

New York has organized three teaching groups of young people whose services are available to nearby cities for week-end meetings.

Contiguous Assemblies may be interested in the teaching circuit plan of four Assemblies and one Group in upper New York. This plan provides five special speaking dates once a month to talk directly on some phase of the Cause at a public meeting in each center on successive evenings. The important new contacts made and the possibilities of following them up have given great impetus to the teaching activities of all these cities.

Interesting reports have been received of excellent contacts with leading people and opportunities for indirect and direct teaching at religious, peace and social service conferences and conventions. Mr. David Hofman, recently of Los Angeles, took a very active part in the annual Institute of International Relations of the American Friends Service Committee at Whittier College, California, last summer. His ability to participate in every discussion attracted much notice and led to his appointment as chairman of a number of informal round tables. At the end of the first week, Mr. Hofman invited about a dozen people to his room to hear about the Baha'i Faith, and forty-five appeared.

Spiritual Assemblies might do well to keep closely informed of the conversion calendar of their cities and arrange for the attendance of two or three friends as delegates or auditors at such gatherings as are free from partisan objectives and are endeavoring to build up international, inter-religious or interracial understanding. New constructive contacts with capable people can thus be made.

Baha'i Teachers whose business permits them to move from city to city find large groups of people hungry for the Message and many willing hands are raised to aid these bearters of Light in their service. One teacher reports that the hostess of the hotel at which she was staying became so enthusiastic over the Cause that she assumed full responsibility for announcing a public lecture, securing the cooperation of an important women's club, and herself posting a notice in the hotel lobby and arranging for the lecture hall. Similar reports are received from all traveling Baha'is and very often they are able to leave behind an enthusiastic study group.

The radio is becoming a powerful instrument in attracting sympathetic souls to the Faith. Many invitations have been received to discuss phases of the Faith and particularly detailed talks descriptive of the Baha'i Temple. A number of traveling Baha'is have been interviewed on educational programs, being able to make direct reference to the Teachings. A number of San Francisco friends spoke on a series of local programs devoted to educational subjects. The Berkeley Assembly has purchased two minutes of radio time weekly on a local station which provides announcement of the meetings and brief quotations from the Writings. Several Assemblies are enjoying free radio announcements of lectures and speakers.

The reports given above are only a few of those received, chosen to illustrate the progress of our Teaching Service. Others will be reported later. Each Assembly and Teacher should send the Teaching Committee regular and comprehensive reports so they may be digested for the benefit of all the friends.

Most important, let us again all realize, is the necessity of putting forth every possible effort. God cannot use us unless we are acting. Thus actively engaged in the "work of the Kingdom," let us drink deeply of the ocean of spiritual sustenance available in such abundance in the "Gleanings"; seek inspiration and guidance in the Teaching Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and aspire to duplicate the episodes of the Dawn-Breakers.

TEACHING COMMITTEE.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE
1936 ANNUAL CONVENTION

The Twenty-eighth Annual Convention will be held at Foundation Hall, Baha'i House of Worship, Wilmette, on Thursday, April 30, Friday, May 1 and Saturday, May 2, 1936. A public meeting will be held on Sunday afternoon, and the incoming National Assembly will meet with members of National Committees, but no Convention sessions will be held on Sunday. The day will be left free for delegates and friends to enjoy informal social fellowship.

A Pre-Convention number of Baha'i News will be published early in April, containing Annual Committee reports, list of participating communities and detailed information concerning the Convention. The Spiritual Assembly of Wilmette has been requested to serve as Housing Committee, and those wishing the Committee to find rooms and accommodations should write the Assembly secretary, Mrs. Anne W. Bartholomew, 1627 Forest Avenue.

The Convention Call was mailed to local Assemblies on February 14. Each Assembly is requested to report its election of a delegate or delegates as soon as possible. A blank ballot is to be mailed to each delegate on April 1.

COOPERATION WITH THE Baha'i MAGAZINE OF GERMANY

The following words from the Guardian, through his secretary, dated Haifa, January 8, 1936 convey a request which the National Spiritual Assembly is happy to bring to the attention of the American friends. The members hope that a cordial response will be made to the desire of the N. S. A. of Germany and Austria that articles be sent to the editorial staff of Sonne der Wahrheit.

For its part, the National Assembly is offering to the Sonne der Wahrheit complete liberty to select whatever articles they wish from World Order Magazine. It will therefore not be necessary for any believer to send to Germany any duplicate copy of an article published in World Order.

Believers sending articles to the German magazine are to send them directly to Dr. Eugen Schmidt, Reinsburgstrasse 198, Stuttgart, Germany, and not to the American N. S. A.

A letter just received from Dr. Eugen Schmidt, member of the German N. S. A. and also assistant editor of the Sonne der Wahrheit requests the Guardian to ask the friends to occasionally contribute articles for publication in that review, and thus help in raising its standard and in making it a more useful and effective organ for the spread of the Cause throughout Germany and Austria.

"The Guardian has promised Dr. Schmidt that lie would ask your Assembly and also the British N. S. A. to encourage the believers, especially those who know German, to contribute articles for publication in the national magazine of the Cause in Germany which, together with the "World Order" are the only reviews of their kind in the western section of the Baha'i world . . .

"P. S. Any contribution in English, the Guardian believes, should be transmitted directly to Germany where the friends will be only too glad to translate and publish them in their magazine."

BAHA'I SUMMER SCHOOLS
Preliminary Announcement

At this stage in the development of the Cause, the institution of the Summer School has unique importance, as the Guardian has emphasized in many letters. It is not only a great privilege but the bounden duty of every believer who can do so, to attend one of the three Summer Schools. The more who attend, the higher will become the standard and proficiency of the public teaching programs carried on by all local Assemblies and groups.

Green Acre

July 3-12: A regional conference, conducted by the N. S. A. or representatives of the Teaching Committee. Also: Baha'i Youth School, to be conducted by representatives of the National Youth Committee.

August 17-30: Summer School, with the following four courses, Islam, World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, The Nature of the Manifestation, The Reality of Man. Two courses will be given daily, Monday to Friday, during the two weeks.

July 13-August 16: Round table discussions on important subjects. Detailed program will be announced later.

Geyerville

July 12-25: Summer School sessions. Subjects and leaders to be announced. All who plan to attend are requested to communicate with the Chairman of Housing Committee, Mrs. Ruth Westgate, Herald Hotel, San Francisco.

Louhelen Ranch

June 22-25: Youth Session. Subjects—The Bahá'i Life, Religion and Culture, Studies in the Qurán.

August 2-9: Summer School, sec-
One of the chief responsibilities of Bahá'ís in this transitional era is to grasp the principle upon which rests their loyalty to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in relation to their duty toward their civil government. This problem arises in its most difficult form in connection with our individual and collective attitude toward war.

Nothing could be more powerful than the Bahá'í teachings on the subject of Peace. Not only does Bahá'u'lláh confirm the teachings of all former Manifestations which uphold unity and fellowship between individual human beings, and the supremacy of love as the end and aim of mutual intercourse and association, but He likewise extends the divine law of Peace to governments and rulers, declaring to them that they are called upon to establish Peace and Justice upon earth, and uproot forever the dire calamity of international war.

Despite His Revelation, a most agonizing and excruciating conflict raged in Europe for four years, and since that war many other wars and revolutions have dyed the earth, while at present the heaven of human hope is black with the approach of a final world-shaking catastrophe.

What wonder that faithful Bahá'ís, abhorring and detesting war as insane repudiation of divine law, as destroyer of life and ruin of civilization, should now, in these fateful days, ponder how they may save their loved ones from the calamity of the battlefield, and how they may contribute their utmost to any and every effort aimed at the attainment of universal Peace?

Conscious of these heart-stirrings, and mindful of its responsibility toward all American believers, and particularly that radiant youth which would first of all be sacrificed in the event of a declaration of war by the government, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to express its view upon the matter, in the hope that the result of its study of the Teachings and of the Guardian's explanations will assist in bringing a unity of opinion and a clarification of thought among the friends.

Concerning the duty of Bahá'ís to their government, we have these words, written by Shoghi Effendi on January 1, 1929 (see “Bahá'í Administration,” page 152): “To all these (i.e., restrictive measures of the Soviet regime) the followers of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh have with feelings of burning agony and heroic fortitude unani mously and unrestrainedly submitted, ever mindful of the guiding principle of Bahá'í conduct that in connection with their administrative activities, no matter how previously interference with them might affect the course of the extension of the Movement, and the suspension of which does not constitute in itself a departure from the principle of loyalty to their Faith, the considered judgment and authoritative decrees issued by their responsible rulers must, if they be faithful to Bahá'u'lláh's and 'Abdu'l-Bahá's express injunctions, be thoroughly respected and loyally obeyed. In matters, however, that vitally affect the integrity and honor of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, and are tantamount to a recantation of their faith and repudiation of their innermost belief, they are convinced, and are unhesitatingly prepared to vindicate by their life-blood the sincerity of their conviction that no power on earth, neither the arts of the most insidious adversary nor the bloody weapons of the most tyrannical oppressor, can ever succeed in extorting from them a word or deed that might tend to still the voice of their conscience or tarnish the purity of their faith.

In view of the fact that early Christians were persecuted because they refused to render military service, the question might be raised whether the above statement means that the Guardian includes refusal to bear arms as one of those matters which vitally affect the integrity and honor of the Faith... and are tantamount to a recantation of their faith and repudiation of their innermost belief”—a question the more important in that the early Christians preferred persecution to military service.

The answer to this question is that the Guardian instructs us that the obligation to render military duty placed by governments upon their citizens is a form of loyalty to one's government which the Bahá'ís must accept, but that the believers can, through their National Assembly, seek exemption from active army duty provided their government recognizes the right of members of religious bodies making peace a matter of conscience to serve in some non-combatant service rather than as part of the armed force.

The National Spiritual Assembly has investigated carefully this aspect of the situation, and has found that, whereas the government of the United States did, in the last war, provide exemption from military duty on religious grounds, nevertheless this exemption was part of the Statutes bearing directly upon that war, and with the cessation of hostilities the exemption lapsed. In other words, there is today no basis on which any Bahá'í may be exempted from military duty in a possible future conflict. The National Assembly, consequently, cannot at present make any petition for exemption of Bahá'ís from war service, for such petitions must be filed with reference to some specific Act or Statute under which exemption can be granted.

The Assembly understands that, in the event of war, there will be some kind of provision for exemption enacted, but as far as Bahá'ís are concerned, no steps can be taken until this government declares itself in a state of war.

This explanation, it is hoped, will satisfy those who for some years have been urging that protection be secured for American Bahá'í youth.

On the other hand it must be pointed out that it is no part of our teachings to attract people to the Cause merely in order to take advantage of any exemption that may later on be officially obtained for duly enrolled Bahá'ís. The only justifiable reason for joining this Faith is because one realizes that it is a divine Cause and is ready and willing to accept whatever may befall a believer on the path of devotion. The persecutions which have been inflicted upon Bahá'ís so frequently make it clear that the path of devotion is one of sacrifice and not of ease or special privilege.

Another question encountered here and there among believers is what can Bahá'ís do to work for Peace? Outside the Cause we see many organizations with peace programs, and believers occasionally feel that it is their duty to join such movements and thereby work for a vital Bahá'í principle.

It is the view of the National Spiritual Assembly that activity in and for the Cause itself is the supreme service to world peace. The Bahá'í community of the world is the true example of Peace. The Baha'i principles are the only ones upon which Peace can be established. Therefore, by striving to enlarge the number of declared believers, and broadcasting the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, we are doing the utmost to rid humanity of the scourge of war. Of what use to spend time and money upon insinuations and false reports when we have the universal program of the Manifestation of God? The firm union of the Bahá'ís is in active devotion to the advancement of their own Faith — this is our service to Peace, as it is our service to all other human needs — economic justice, race amity, religious unity, etc. Let non-believers agitate for disarmament and circulate petitions for this and that pacifist aim — a Bahá'í truly alive in this Faith will surely prefer to base his activities upon the foundation laid by Bahá'u'lláh, walk the path which the Master trod all His days, and heed the appeals which the Guardian has given us to initiate a new era in the public teaching of the Message.

ON SLANDER AND BACKBITING
A Rule of Action Adopted by The National Spiritual Assembly

One of the most important of all divine commandments, specially stressed in the Bahá'í Teachings, is: "Breathe not the sins of others so long as thou art a sinner. Shouldst thou transgress this command, accused art thou and to this I testify." (Hidden Words, 27.) Bahá'u'lláh further warns that: "Backbiting quencheth the light of the heart and extinguisheth the life of the soul." (Gleanings, p. 265.) In His Will and Testament, 'Abdu'l-Bahá adds: "According to the direct command of God, we are forbidden to utter slander."

The Master further elucidates this vital subject in a Tablet wherein He states: "How blessed are these aims, especially the prevention of backbiting. I hope that you may become confirmed therein. Because the worst human quality and the most great sin is backbiting, more especially when it emanates from the tongues of the believers of God. If some means were divined (devised?) so that the doors of backbiting could be shut eternally and each one of the believers of God unsealed his tongue in the praise of the other, then the teachings of His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh would be spread, the hearts illumined, the spirits glorified and the human world would attain to everlasting felicity." (Tablet to Dr. M. S. C., Washington, D. C. Translated August 12, 1913.)

In order to distinguish between legitimate reports to a Bahá'í administrative body which may affect the welfare of a Bahá'í community or an individual member thereof and unwarranted rumors, negative and hearsay gossip, slander and backbiting, intentionally or thoughtlessly circulated, the National Spiritual Assembly has adopted the following rule of action for the guidance of the Bahá'í Assemblies and communities under its jurisdiction.

1. In no case should the friends speak to their fellow-believers in the community of any matter involving personal delinquencies, alleged or actual, of another member of the community, nor permit believers to speak to them of such matters. If a complaint is warranted, it should be brought directly to the local Assembly for consideration.

2. A local Assembly should assume jurisdiction only when the acts or words of a member of the Bahá'í community are such as to threaten the integrity of the Cause itself, or to undermine the good name and reputation of a believer.

3. This rule of action also applies for the protection of believers, from any discussion of their alleged personal shortcomings in Bahá'í communities other than that in which such believers reside.

4. All such personal matters are strictly barred from discussion at the Nineteen Day Feasts.

5. In applying the law of Bahá'u'lláh relative to the bringing of complaints and information to a local Assembly concerning the alleged or actual shortcomings of individual believers, the Assembly should not entertain or listen to any complaint based upon hearsay or rumor, but should, in all cases, insist that the complainant or witness speak only of such matters and present such evidence as he or she knows to be true, of his or her own knowledge.

6. In the event that a local Assembly is unable to stop or prevent the continued discussion or circulation of criticisms and unfounded rumors after it has taken jurisdiction of the matter, it is to report such cases immediately to the National Spiritual Assembly. The National Spiritual Assembly, after careful investigation, will take vigorous action to remove the misunderstandings and misrepresentations that have arisen and render full justice to the individual believer or believers concerned.

The new World Order is and must be held sacred and free from this grave defect in human relationships, which not only often inflicts unmerited injury and suffering upon the individual but, more important, destroys the solidarity of the Bahá'í community. Whispering and backbiting is equivalent to separation among the friends of God, and in the final analysis, is the will to harm and to alienate the hearts.

The National Spiritual Assembly feels assured and confident that all the friends will make every effort to realize in their individual and community lives a greater love and unity of purpose and be ever mindful of Bahá'u'lláh's injunction: "Attribute not to any soul that which thou wouldst not have attributed to thee, and say not that which thou dost not. This is My Command to thee, do thou observe it." (Hidden Words, 29.)

"O my servants! Deprive not yourselves of the unfading and resplendent Light that shineth within the Lamp of Divine Glory. Let the flame of the love of God burn brightly within your radiant hearts. Feed it with the oil of Divine guidance, and protect it within the shelter of your constancy. Guard it within the globe of trust and detachment from all else but God, so that the whisperings of the ungodly may not extinguish its light." (Gleanings, pp. 325-326.)

INTERNATIONAL CELEBRATION OF NAW-RUZ BY BAHA'I YOUTH

A plan is afoot for a series of regional conferences of young Bahá'ís, to be scheduled throughout the Bahá'í world on March 22, 1936, the Sunday after our New Year. This idea, just conceived by the National Youth Committee, has already met with wide enthusiasm and the following American cities are mentioned as possible conference centers: Flint, Lima, Chicago, Urbana, Montreal, Boston, New Haven, New York, Washington, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Phoenix, Denver, Seattle, Vancouver and Honolulu. In addition, invitations are being sent to young Bahá'ís in England, Australia, France, Germany, Syria, Iraq, India, Persia, Egypt, and other countries to join in this great demonstration of unity.

"Bahá'í Youth Look to the Future" is the subject of a suggested program for universal adoption, to include at CONCERNING MEMBERSHIP IN NON-BAHA'I RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

The instruction written by Shoghi Effendi concerning membership in non-Baha'i religious organizations, published in the July, 1935 number of Baha'i News, has brought forth some interesting and important communications from local Spiritual Assemblies and also from individual believers, to all of which the National Spiritual Assembly has given careful and sympathetic attention.

The National Assembly itself, on receiving that instruction, made it the subject of extensive consultation, feeling exceedingly responsible for its own understanding of the Guardian's words and anxious to contribute to the understanding of the friends.

In October, 1935, the Assembly sent in reply to some of these communications a general letter embodying its thoughts on the subject, and a copy of that letter was forwarded to Shoghi Effendi for his approval and comment.

Now that Shoghi Effendi's approval has been received, the National Assembly feels it desirable to publish, for the information of all the American believers, the substance of the October letter.

While so fundamental an instruction is hound to raise different questions corresponding to the different conditions existing throughout the Baha'i community, the most important consideration is our collective need to grasp the essential principle underlying the new instruction, and our capacity to perceive that the position which the Guardian wishes us to take in regard to church membership is a necessary and inevitable result of the steady development of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

This essential principle is made clear when we turn to Shoghi Effendi's further reference to the subject as published in Baha'i News for October, 1935 — words written by the Guardian's own hand.

In the light of these words, it seems fully evident that the way to approach this instruction is in realizing the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh as an ever-growing organism destined to become something new and greater than any of the revealed religions of the past. Whereas former Faiths inspired hearts and illumined souls, they eventuated in formal religions with an ecclesiastical organization, creeds, rituals and churches, while the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, likewise renewing man's spiritual life, will gradually produce the institutions of an ordered society, fulfilling not merely the function of the churches of the past but also the function of the civil state. By this manifestation of the Divine Will in a higher degree than in former ages, humanity will emerge from that immature civilization in which church and state are separate and competitive institutions, and partake of a true civilization in which spiritual and social principles are at last reconciled as two aspects of one and the same Truth.

No Baha'i can read the successive World Order letters written us by Shoghi Effendi without perceiving that the Guardian, for many years, has been preparing us to understand and appreciate this fundamental purpose and mission of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh. Even when the Master ascended, we were for the most part still considering the Bahá'i Faith as though it were only the "return of Christ" and failing to perceive the entirely new and larger elements latent in the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Thus, in the very first of the World Order letters, written February 27th, 1929, Shoghi Effendi said: "Who, I may ask, when viewing the international character of the Cause, its far-flung ramifications, the increasing complexity of its affairs, the diversity of its adherents, and the state of confusion that assails on every side the infant Faith of God, can for a moment question the necessity of some sort of administrative machinery that will insure, amid the storm and stress of a struggling civilization, the unity of the Faith, the preservation of its identity, and the protection of its interests?"

Although for five years the Guardian had been setting forth the principles of Baha'i Administration in frequent letters in 1927 he apparently felt it necessary to overcome some doubts here and there as to the validity of the institutions the Master bequeathed to the Baha'is in His Will and Testament. The series of World Order letters, however, goes far beyond the point of defending and explaining their validity as an essential element in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh - the Guardian vastly extended the horizon of our understanding by making it clear that the Administrative Order, in its full development, is to be the social structure of the future civilization.

Thus, in that same letter quoted above, he wrote: "Not only will the present-day Spiritual Assemblies he styled differently in future, but will be enabled also to add to their present functions those powers, duties, and prerogatives necessitated by the recognition of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, not merely as one of the recognized religious systems of the world, but as the State Religion of an independent and Sovereign Power. And as the Baha'i Faith permeates the masses of the peoples of East and West, and its truth is embraced by the majority of the peoples of a number of the Sovereign States of the world, will the Universal House of Justice attain the plentitude of its power, and exercise, as the supreme organ of the Baha'i Commonwealth, all the rights, the duties, and responsibilities incumbent upon the world's future super-state."

This passage stands as the keynote in the noble structure which Shoghi Effendi has raised in his function as interpreter of the Teachings of Baha'u'llah. The Master developed the Cause to the point where it gained in stature and influence. "Communications Baha'u'llah." (BAHAI NEWS, pages 3 and 4).

For us these words mean that a Baha'i is not merely a member of a revealed Religion, he is also a citizen in a World Order even though that Order today is but an infant and still obscured by the shadows thrown by the institutions, habits, and traditions of the past. But since the aim and end have been made known, our devotion and loyalty must surely express itself, not in clinging to views and thoughts emanating from the past, but in pressing forward in response to the needs of the new creation.

That true devotion, which consists in conscious knowledge of the "primary mission," and unified action to assist in bringing about its complete triumph, recognizes that a Baha'i today must have singleness of mind as of aim, without the division arising when we stand with one foot in the Cause and one foot in the world, attempting to reconcile diverse elements which the Manifestation of God Himself has declared to be irreconcilable.

The principle underlying the Guardian's instruction about membership in non-Baha'i religious bodies has already been emphasized by Shoghi Effendi in another connection— the instruction about the non-political character of the Faith which he incorporated in his letter entitled "The Golden Age of the Cause of Baha'u'llah." For example: "I feel it, therefore, incumbent upon me to stress, now that the time is ripe, the importance of an instruction which, at the present stage of the evolution of our Faith, should be increasingly emphasized, irrespective of its application to the East or to the West. And this principle is no other than that which involves the non-participation by the adherents of the Faith of Baha'u'llah, whether in their individual capacities or collectively as local or national Assemblies, in any form of activity that might be interpreted, either directly or indirectly, as an interference in the political affairs of any particular government."

Again, when the question was raised as to membership in certain non-Baha'i organizations not directly religious or political in character, the Guardian replied: "Regarding association with the World Fellowship of Faiths and kindred Societies, Shoghi Effendi wishes to reaffirm and elucidate the general principle that Baha'i elected representatives as well as individuals should refrain from any act or word that would imply a departure from the principles, whether spiritual, social or administrative, established by Baha'u'llah. Formal affiliation with and acceptance of membership in organizations whose programs or policies are not wholly reconcilable with the Teachings is of course out of the question." (BAHAI NEWS, August, 1933).

Thus, not once but repeatedly the Guardian has upheld the vital principle underlying every type of relationship between Baha'is and other organizations, namely, that the Cause of Baha'u'llah is an ever-growing organism, and as we begin to realize its universality, our responsibility is definitely established to cherish and defend that universality from all compromise, all admixture of worldly elements, whether emanating from our own habits rooted in the past or from the deliberate attacks imposed by enemies from without.

It will be noted that in the instruction published in July, 1935, Baha'i News, the Guardian made it clear that the principle involved is not new and unexpected, but rather an application of an established principle to a new condition. "Concerning membership in non-Baha'i religious associations, the Guardian wishes to emphasize the general principle already laid down in his communications to your Assembly and also to the individual believers that no Baha'i who wishes to be a whole-hearted and sincere upholder of the distinguishing principles of the Cause can accept full membership in any non-Baha'i ecclesiastical organization. . . . For it is only too obvious that in most of its fundamental assumptions the Cause of Baha'u'llah is completely at variance with outworn creeds, ceremonies and institutions. . . . During the days of the Master the Cause was still in a stage that made such an open and sharp association between its adherents and other religious organizations, and particularly the Muslim Faith, not only inadvisable but practically impossible to establish. But since His passing events throughout the Bahai world, and particularly in Egypt where the Muslim religious courts have formally testified to the independent character of the Faith, have developed to a point that have made such an assertion of the independence of the Cause not only highly desirable but absolutely essential."

To turn now to the Guardian's words published in October Baha'i NEWS: "The separation that has set in between the institutions of the Baha'i Faith and the Islamic ecclesiastical organizations that oppose it . . . imposes upon every loyal upholder of the Cause the obligation of refraining from any word or action that might prejudice the position which our enemies have . . . of their own accord proclaimed and established. This historic development, the beginnings of which could neither be recognized nor even anticipated in the years immediately preceding. Any association, may be said to have signaled the Formative Period of our Faith and to have paved the way for the consolidation of its administrative order. . . . Though our Cause unreservedly recognizes the Divine origin of all the religions that preceded it and upholds the spiritual truths which lie at their very core and are common to them all, its institutions, whether administrative, religious or humanitarian, must if their distinctive character is to be maintained and recognized, be increasingly divorced from the outworn creeds, the meaningless ceremonials and man-made institutions with which these religions; are at present identified. Our adversaries in the East have initiated the struggle. Our future opponents in the West will, in their turn, arise and carry it a stage further. Ours is the duty, in anticipation of this inevitable contest, to uphold unequivocally and with undivided loyalty the integrity of our Faith and demonstrate the distinguishing features of its divinely appointed institutions."

Nothing could be clearer or more emphatic. These words, asserting again the essential universality of the Cause, likewise repeat and renew the warning that the organized religions, even in America, will become bitterly hostile to the Faith of Baha'u'llah, denounce and oppose it, and seek its destruction in vain effort to maintain their own "outworn creeds" and material power. Informed of this inevitable development, can a Baha'i any longer desire to retain a connection which, however liberal and pleasing it now seems, is a connection with a potential foe of the Cause of God? The Guardian's instruction signifies that the time has come when all American believers must become fully conscious of the implications of such connections, and carry out their loyalty to its logical conclusion.

Shoghi Effendi’s latest words are not merely an approval of the foregoing statements, but a most helpful elucidation of some of the problems which arise when the friends turn to their local Assemblies for specific advice under various special circumstances.

“The Guardian has carefully read the copy of the statement you had recently prepared concerning non-membership in non-Bahá’í religious organizations, and is pleased to realize that your comments and explanations are in full conformity with his views on the subject. He hopes that your letter will serve to clarify this issue in the minds of all the believers, and to further convince them of its vital character and importance in the present stage of the evolution of the Cause. “... In this case*, as also in that of suffering believers, the Assemblies, whether local or national, should act tactfully, patiently and in a friendly and kindly spirit. Knowing how painful and dangerous it is for such believers to repudiate their former allegiances and friendships, they should try to gradually persuade them of the wisdom and necessity of such an action, and instead of thrusting upon them a new principle, to make them accept it inwardly, and out of pure conviction and desire. Too severe and immediate action in such cases is not only fruitless but actually harmful. It alienates people instead of winning them to the Cause.

“The other point concerns the advisability of contributing to a church. In this case also the friends must realize that contributions to a church, especially when not regular, do not necessarily entail affiliation. The believers can make such offerings, occasionally, and provided they are certain that while doing so they are not connected as members of any church.

There should be no confusion between the terms affiliation and association. While affiliation with ecclesiastical organizations is not permissible, association with them should not only be tolerated but even encouraged. There is no better way to demonstrate the universality of the Cause than this. Bahá’u’lláh, indeed, urges His followers to consort with all religions and nations with utmost friendliness and love. This constitutes the very spirit of His message to mankind.” (December 11, 1935.)

The National Spiritual Assembly trusts that the subject will receive the attention of local Assemblies and communities, and that in the light of the foregoing explanations the friends will find unity and agreement in applying the instruction to whatever situations may arise. In teaching new believers let us lay a proper foundation so that their obedience will be voluntary and assured from the beginning of their enrollment as Bahá’ís. In our attitude toward the older believers who are affected by the instruction let us act with the patience and kindliness the Guardian has urged.

THE BAHÁ’Í FUNERAL SERVICE

A Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Kegartling the Baha’i funeral service: it is extremely simple, as it consists only of a congregational prayer to be read before burial. This prayer will be made available to the friends when the Agda is translated and published. In the meantime your N. S. A. should take great care lest any uniform procedure or ritual in this matter be adopted or imposed upon the friends. The danger in this, as in some other cases regarding Bahá’í worship, is that a definite system of rigid rituals and practices be developed among the believers. The utmost simplicity and flexibility should be observed, and a selection from the Bahá’í Sacred Writing would serve the purpose at the present time, provided this selection is not rigidly and uniformly adopted on all such occasions. —SHOGHI EFFENDI, through his secretary, Haifa, January 10, 1936.

LOCAL ASSEMBLY ROLL

St. Augustine, Florida, has been added to the Assemblies whose election on April 21, 1935 has been recognized.

Fruitport, Mich., has been removed from the Assembly Roll for the reason that the number of believers has become less than nine, some of the friends having moved to other cities.

A PROCEDURE FOR THE CONDUCT OF THE ANNUAL BAHÁ'Í CONVENTION

INTRODUCTION

The Guardian's references to the Annual Convention have been compiled and published in two issues of BAHÁ'Í News—November, 1933 and February, 1934.

I. THE ANNUAL BAHÁ'Í CONVENTION

A summary of the constitutional basis of the Convention has been made by the National Spiritual Assembly and approved by the Guardian. It was published in BAHÁ'Í News for April, 1935. Special reference is made to the seven numbered paragraphs in that summary.

II. CONVENTION CALL

The National Spiritual Assembly determines the date, duration and place of the Annual Convention and provides for such other meetings in connection with the Convention as it may feel are desirable.

III. CONVENTION PROCEDURE

The Twenty-sixth Annual Convention, held in 1934, voted a recommendation calling upon the National Spiritual Assembly to supply a parliamentary procedure for the conduct of the Annual Convention, and the present material has been prepared to meet the need indicated by that recommendation.

Order of Business

Prayer and devotional readings, provided by the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly.

Opening of Convention by Presiding Officer of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Roll call of delegates by the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Election by secret ballot of Convention Chairman and Secretary. The Convention Officers are to be elected by the assembled delegates from among the entire number of delegates who are present at the Convention.

Annual Report of National Spiritual Assembly.

Convention message to the Guardian of the Faith.

Annual Committee Reports: these are to be considered as part of the Report of the National Spiritual Assembly. They are whenever possible published in BAHÁ'Í NEWS in advance of the Convention date, for the information of the delegates.

Subjects for Consultation. Any delegate may, before the Convention convenes, recommend to the National Assembly such topics as he deems of sufficient importance to be included in the Convention agenda; and the National Spiritual Assembly, from the list of topics received from delegates, and also suggested by its own knowledge and experience, is to prepare an agenda or order of business as its recommendation to the Convention.

This agenda may include, as part of the National Assembly's Annual Report, the presentation of special subjects by well qualified members, committee representatives or non-Bahá'í experts whose exposition is necessary or desirable for the information of the delegates.

On motion duly made, seconded and voted, any such subject may be omitted, and also on motion duly made, seconded and voted, any other subject may be proposed for special consultation.

Annual election. The election of members of the National Spiritual Assembly is to take place approximately midway during the Convention sessions, so as to enable the delegates to consult with both the outgoing and incoming Assemblies, in accordance with the Guardian's expressed desire.

Conduct of Business

Every deliberative body, to fulfill its functions, must conduct its deliberations in accordance with some established rules of order. The parliamentary procedure here set forth for the Convention is based upon the procedure already adopted for meetings of local Assemblies and communities. It accordingly extends to sessions of the Annual Convention the same procedure under which the delegates, in their other Bahá'í activities, are accustomed to conduct discussion and consultation.

The purpose of consultation at the Annual Convention is threefold: to arrive at full and complete knowledge of the current conditions, problems and possibilities of the Faith in America; to give to the incoming National Assembly the benefit of the collective wisdom, guidance and constructive suggestions of the assembled delegates; and to contribute to the unity, in spirit and in action, of the entire American Bahá’í community.

The freedom of each and every delegate to take part in discussion and to initiate motions is untrammeled save as the undue activity of one delegate might hamper the rights of the other delegates. Any necessary limitation to be placed upon individual discussion shall be determined by the Chairman in the absence of any specific motion duly voted by the delegates themselves. It shall be the duty of the Chairman to encourage general consultation and make possible the active participation of the greatest possible number of delegates.

The Chairman has the same power and responsibility for discussion and voting upon motions as other delegates. Members of the outgoing and incoming National Assembly who are not delegates may participate in the consultation but not vote.

A resolution, or motion, is not subject to discussion or vote until duly made and seconded. It is preferable to have each resolution clear and complete in itself, but when an amendment is duly made and seconded, the Chairman shall call for a vote on the amendment first and then on the motion. An amendment must be relevant to, and not contravenge, the subject matter of the motion.

The Chairman shall call for votes by oral expression of ayes and nays, but where the result of the vote is doubtful by a show of hands or a rising vote. A majority vote determines.

Discussion of any matter may be terminated by motion duly made, seconded and voted, calling upon the Chairman to bring the matter to an immediate vote or proceed to other business.

The transactions of the Convention shall be recorded by the Secretary, and when certified by the Convention officers shall be given to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Annual Election

The electors in the Annual Election shall consist of those delegates included in the Roll Call prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly.

Ballots and tellers' report forms shall be provided by the National Assembly.

The election shall be conducted by the Convention, but delegates unable to attend the Convention shall have the right to vote by mail.

The Chairman shall appoint three tellers, chosen from among the assem-bled delegates.

The electoral method shall be as follows:

1. The Convention Secretary shall call the roll of delegates, whereupon each delegate, in turn, shall place his or her ballot in a ballot box; and as the names are called ballots received by mail shall be placed in the ballot box by the Secretary of the National Assembly.

2. The ballot box shall then be handed to the tellers, who shall retire from the convention Hall to determine the result of the election.

3. The result of the election is to be reported by the tellers, and the tellers' report is to be approved by the Convention.

4. The ballots, together with the tellers' report, certified by all the tellers, are to be given the National Spiritual Assembly for preservation.

IV. THE CONVENTION RECORD

The permanent record of each successive Annual Convention shall consist of the following:—(1) Convention Call as issued by the National Spiritual Assembly, including list of Participating Bahá’í Communities; (2) list of accredited delegates; (3) Annual Reports of the National Spiritual Assembly and of its Committees; (4) Messages sent to and received from the Guardian; (5) Resolutions and other transactions of the assembled delegates; (6) The result of the Annual Election.

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffersh unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It confoweth the gift of everlasting life.—Bahá’u’lláh.

Mrs. Kate Burke, Chicago.

Mrs. Carolyn Harbin, Miami Beach, Florida.

Mr. Maurice Cohen, New Haven, Connecticut.

Mrs. E. B. Bullock, San Francisco, California.

ENROLLMENT OF NEW BELIEVERS

Reports from local Assemblies in recent months refer to the enrollment of new believers as follows: New York, thirteen; Honolulu, seven; Flint, seven; Lima, seven; Chicago, three; Los Angeles, three; Kansas City, three; Milwaukee, three; Kenosha, three; San Francisco, two; Boston, two; Worcester, two; Muskegon, two; Portland, one; Baltimore, one; Urbana, one.

DETECTIONS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

1. The transfer of believers involved in unfinished matters proceeding under the local Assembly's jurisdiction is to be postponed pending a report of the circumstances to the National Assembly and its approval of the transfer.

The purpose of the above ruling is to make it possible for a local Spiritual Assembly to retain jurisdiction of a case until the matter is concluded. For example, if an Assembly is endeavoring to settle some difference between two believers, and knows all the circumstances of the case, but before a decision is made one of the believers moves to another city, where the Assembly is naturally uninformed of the problem, the believer who moves is not to be given a letter of transfer by his former Assembly until the National Assembly has opportunity to learn the circumstances and approve the time when the transfer can be made—when, in other words, the Assembly in the city where the believer has taken up his or her new residence is to exercise jurisdiction over the affairs of that believer.

2. The National Spiritual Assembly recommends that local Assemblies, as far as possible, fill out Bahá’í Historical Record Cards for believers who have died.

3. Local Spiritual Assemblies are requested to announce the following recommendation, and do their utmost to see that it is carried into effect:—that individual believers (and Assemblies themselves) who have in their possession original Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, with the necessary original translations, original letters of Shoghi Effendi, or other sacred records and objects, take steps to have them preserved in the Bahá’í Archives. The Guardian has said that the collection and publication of Tablets is one of the most important duties of this generation.

A definite date might be set, for example, a Nineteen Day Feast, when the friends could bring their Tablets for the local Assembly to transmit to the Archives Committee. Those who send them direct should address them to Mrs. May Scheffler, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street, Evanston, Ill. It would be very appropriate if believers who attend the Convention should make a special point of bringing their Tablets with them for the Archives Committee. The Archives Committee can provide photostat copies at a very slight cost.
4. Local Assemblies are advised to appoint an Archives Committee, the function of which would be to assist in having Tablets sent to the National Archives and also to develop a local Bahá'í Archives, which might contain photostat copies of Tablets from the Master and of letters from the Guardian received locally, and such other material as should be preserved for the history of the Bahá'í community.

GREEN ACRE PROGRAM
Change of Dates
The Green Acre program as first announced reported that the Inn would be open on July 3. It is now reported that the Inn will be open only from August 1 to 31, with the Youth Week from August 1 to 7, the Summer School from August 10 to 21, the concluding week to have a Regional Teaching Conference and other activities to be announced later.

The complete program of Green Acre and also of the Schools at Geyserville and Louhenen Ranch will be reported as soon as possible.

TEMPLE MEETINGS
The public meetings in Foundation Hall during January and February have been reported by the Temple Program Committee as follows:

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS
The following new discounts on Bahá'í literature ordered from the Publishing Committee are effective May 1, 1936:

- 10% to Spiritual Assemblies on orders of less than $10.00.
- 25% to Spiritual Assemblies on orders of $10.00 and more.
- 25% to individuals on orders of $25.00 or more, when the literature is intended for teaching purposes—that is, to be given away.

Please note that these discounts apply only on orders placed with the Publishing Committee, and do not apply on literature sold locally by the Assemblies. On local sales no discount should be given, because the purpose of the Publishing Committee's discount is to enable local Assemblies to build up their Bahá'í Fund.

It should be explained further that Bahá'í literature is priced so low that the former discount prevented the Committee from developing its resources sufficiently to finance all the important new works as they become available.

The Committee would like to obtain two copies of "The Divine Art of Living" and will accept second hand copies if new copies are not available. If you have a copy which can be spared, please write to Bahá'í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Annex, New York, N. Y.

The following titles are emphasized at this time:
- Bahá'í Peace Program, bound in fabrikoid, $1.50. Bound in paper, $0.50.
- Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Vols. I, II, and III, $2.00 per vol.
- A Traveler's Narrative, $2.50.
- The Bahá'í Movement, sold only in lots of ten, ten for $1.00.

BAHÁ'Í YOUTH: ENROLL NOW!
Now that the "new hour has struck" in the history of the Bahá'í Cause, it is more than ever urgent to devise fresh ways and achieve a more vital spirit in the teaching work. Bahá'í youth must join in this great program, must add their own forces to hasten the approaching victory.

No young Bahá'ís under twenty-one years of age, who is convinced of the destiny of this Faith, should remain outside the community life, for such non-participation of even one youth will weaken the Cause in that locality. Without further hesitation, therefore, let each young Bahá'í state to his Assembly his intention of becoming a voting believer. Such action will bring the privilege of attendance at Feasts. It will ensure for Bahá'í youth a full share and splendid contribution to the "nation-wide, systematic, sustained effort in teaching field" which is the next step towards our goal of a New World Order.

How many young Bahá'ís under twenty-one will be enrolled with their local Assemblies by Naw-Rúz? Would not a list of their names make an unequaled New Year's gift for Shoghi Effendi?

YOUTH COMMITTEE.

NEWS OF THE CAUSE
The Kenosha Assembly had a very successful lecture series during the first three weeks of January conducted by Dr. E. Lenore Morris.

The Los Angeles Assembly has taken a new headquarters in the Beaux Arts Building which are considered the best Bahá'í center yet maintained in that city.

During February the Baltimore Assembly arranged for an illustrated lecture by Allen B. McDaniell on "The Temple of Light" at Morgan College, and for the same lecture at the Central Branch of the Enoch Pratt Free Library.

The Portland Assembly calls attention to the article on the Temple written by Fred Young and published in the annual issue of The Mineralogist, a magazine which goes to all leading educational institutions in America and to many foreign countries.

Roy C. Wilhelm has recently given two radio talks over WBNX, New York.

An interesting series of lectures was given at Spokane in February by Sylvia Matteson and Louise Caswell. The meetings were held in the Sun Life Assurance Auditorium.

Orcella Rexford is spending a few months in Mexico, and the friends can look forward to an interesting report of her teaching experiences. Her address for correspondence continues to be Fairmount Hotel, San Francisco.

Through the influence of Dr. William F. Slater, the magazine Women, of Chicago, some months ago published an illustration of the Temple, and is now running an article outlining the history and teachings of the Cause.

The Bahá'í group at Dayton, Ohio is grateful to Dr. and Mrs. Ali Kuli Khan, to Mrs. Maryzeh Carpenter, to Miss Hamideh Khan and to Louis G. Gregory for their cooperation in teaching activities at Dayton during February.

The Detroit Assembly for some months has been sending seventy copies of World Order Magazine to people of capacity and influence in the city, as an excellent means of bringing the Cause to the attention of persons who cannot be attracted by public meetings.

Local Bahá'í News Letters are received regularly from the San Francisco, New York and Los Angeles Assemblies. The Vancouver Assembly began to issue a local Bahá'í News in July, 1935, in very impressive form. For the larger Bahá'í communities, a monthly summary of activities and program of meetings is a valuable and necessary contribution to the unity of the friends. In time, such organs will develop into newspapers appearing at frequent intervals, and afford a firm basis for cooperative action.

The Cincinnati Assembly has reported on the teaching work done in that city by Dr. E. Lenore Morris, Ruhi Effendi Afân, Mabel Ives, and Dr. and Mme. Khan, and mentioned anticipated visits from Louis G. Gregory and Mr. Agnew. The Assembly has conducted several series of lectures this year with the cooperation of the visiting believers.

A new Baha'i Center was opened by the Cleveland Assembly early in February, the speaker being Mountfort Mills. The new center is at 665 Hippodrome Building.

The Chicago Assembly has carried on an interesting race amity activity consisting of meetings at which representatives of various local clubs are placed on the program with a Baha'i speaker.

Beatrice Irwin gave a talk over the radio in Cleveland during November on the subject of "Haifa—The Wonder Spot of Palestine."

A notice of the projected Memorial to the late Keith Ransom-Kellogg at Isfahan appeared in the Vassar Quarterly of July, 1935, a copy of which has been sent in through the courtesy of Mrs. Randolph Bolles.

Sixteen different Fireside meetings are listed in a circular issued by the Chicago Assembly.

Over WEMP the Milwaukee Assembly has been conducting a series of radio talks.

Teaching activities of Dr. Ali Kuli Khan at Minneapolis and St. Paul last fall included an address on "The Baha'i Principles of Peace" delivered at a meeting of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

A children's Baha'i class at Yonkers taught by Mrs. Raymond Richards has been followed by another children's class taught by Maud Gaudreaux, both of which have been very successful.

The Lehigh Review, published by the students of Lehigh University, had in its December, 1935 issue a two-page article entitled "Baha'i," by David Wendell Fentress, accompanied by an illustration of the Temple.

From Lima, Ohio, comes the report that the teaching activities this last autumn began with a three-day visit from Mme. Gita Orlova who spoke at large public meetings. About one hundred friends attended an Inter-Assembly meeting from Toledo, Dayton, Urbana, Columbus and Cincinnati. A monthly public meeting has been conducted through the winter at Argonne Hotel.

The activities of the Miami Assembly have included a Friday evening study class, a Tuesday evening Esperanto class, and public meetings when teachers are available. A new Baha'i Center has been taken at 307 Congress Building.

A CORRECTION

The article entitled "Memorials of the Faithful" published in The Baha'i Magazine of February, 1934, was not a translation from text written by 'Abdu'l-Baha but was an article written by Mrs. Marzieh Carpenter.

CHICAGO AND MID-WESTERN YOUTH ACTIVITIES

September 5th, Marion Holley sent a questionnaire concerning youth group activities to all of the Baha'i communities in America. One of the sixty-one assemblies, forty-nine answered the survey showing that there were twenty-eight organized youth groups. Twelve of these organized groups are in the middle-west. (This number includes Flint, Michigan, because almost all of the Assembly members are under twenty-five.) In the middle west, there are a number of isolated youth who have no opportunity to share in local youth group activities. We are trying to provide contact with other young Baha'is for these isolated Baha'is through a series of Round Robin letters and inter-Assembly conferences.

From the replies to this questionnaire, we find that there is no particular rule followed in the organization of the local youth groups. Some of the youth groups elect their own chairman and other officers (with the approval of the L. S. A.). In other Baha'i communities the officers of the youth group are appointed by the L. S. A. In the survey it was found that many young Baha'is have not availed themselves as they should, of the right and privilege to attend Baha'i Feasts. The meetings held for and by young Baha'is in the central area include Sunday schools, fireside groups where non-Baha'is are free to express their own viewpoints (Baha'is lead the discussion and always take the Baha'i viewpoint, of course), meetings planned especially for interested non-believers, and study groups for Baha'i youth. In most places these groups meet once a week, but the occurrence of the meetings varies from twice a month to twice a week. Some of the groups set aside a certain night a week or month when they have social get-togethers.

Most of the youth groups in the middle-west use the Study Outline. Some are studying the "Gleanings" and others are reading the "Promulgation of Universal Peace." Other groups have an adult speaker at each meeting who leads the discussion after his talk.

One of the main difficulties seems to be in making contacts with other young people. Some of the organizations with which contacts have been made are church groups, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., World Fellowship Groups, International Clubs, Esperanto Clubs, and an Urban League. In most of the cities where there are youth groups we find that the young people do take an active interest in the activities of the local Assembly. In Chicago the youth group has taken charge of some of the feasts and some of the Friday evening public meetings. Many young people are serving on committees, such as the Teaching, Amity, Sunday School, Publicity, and Archives committees. In Peoria, the Youth Group undertook the interesting project of making a map of Persia showing important places and happenings in Baha'i history.

The young people of the middle west have attended several inter-Assembly conferences. In the early part of September, the youth of Chicago and the North Shore acted as hosts to the young Baha'is of Flint, Michigan; Detroit, Michigan; Urbana, Illinois; Peoria, Illinois; Toledo, Ohio, and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Another conference was held later in the month at Peoria with the purpose of beginning a youth group in that city. By far the largest and most far-reaching inter-youth group contact is that gained at the Youth Conference at Louhelen Ranch, Davison, Michigan. Plans for the 1936 Youth Conference are already being made under the chairmanship of Wilfrid Barton of Winnetka, Illinois. In a letter to the Youth Council of the Central States Summer School, Shoghi Effendi said, "The work in which you are engaged is dear and near to my heart and constitutes one of the most vital aspects of the manifold activities of our beloved Faith. The highest standards of purity, of integrity, of detachment and sacrifice must be maintained by the members of your group in order to enable you to play a decisive part in the spread and consolidation of the Faith. A tremendous responsibility has been laid upon you, and nothing short of a pure, a virtuous, an active and truly exemplary life can enable you to fulfill your high destiny. I will pray that you may be guided and strengthened to render the most ef-effective service to the Cause and by your example lend a fresh impetus to the onward march of its new-born institutions."

AN ASSEMBLY OF YOUNG PEOPLE

The Local Spiritual Assembly in Flint, Michigan, is perhaps unique in America for it was organized by and at first composed of young people. In September, 1935, Clarence La Rocque, secretary, wrote to the Bahá’í Youth Committee this account: "We have not felt a need for a special youth committee as our Flint Bahá’í Assembly is made up entirely of young people, except for one member who has just been elected to the Assembly to fill a vacancy. ... Being a small community, we have set no age limits, because the three young people who exceed the age of twenty-five years, by two or three years, are quite naturally a part of the youth group. There are nine Bahá’ís who are between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-five." A second letter was received in November: "Recently we added six new believers to our community, which brings the total resident believers to eighteen. God is good, and Baha’ullah lives, today and always!"

In Flint the exhilaration which is felt in those words has been translated into thrilling motion. A dozen plans of teaching are used; there are after- noon and evening study classes; each week at least one open discussion is scheduled "where anyone is welcome to give his viewpoint in exchange for ours"; on Saturday night the community joins in recreation; nationally known teachers are invited to assist, and for them "we arrange public meetings, group meetings, and private consultations, ahead of time so that there is a definite program to fill in every hour of their stay." This wide scope of activity bespeaks a vitality and singleness of purpose which will teach the Cause around the world!

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS

1935-1936

ANNUAL SOUVENIR OF 'ABDU’L-BAHÁ

First: The committee wishes to express its appreciation to the five Bahá’í Communities (New York, Yonkers, Newark, Montclair and Teaneck) for their active participation in the 24th Annual Meeting to commemorate the "Unity Feast" established by 'Abdu’l-Bahá, June 29, 1912.

Some interesting facts in connection with this important occasion will be of interest to all of the friends. One year after the establishment of this "Unity Feast," 'Abdu’l-Bahá, in a letter to Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm, gave this annual meeting its permanent name in the following extract: "Thy letter dated July 3, 1913, was received. Its contents indicated the firmness and steadfastness of the believers of God and told of holding a divine meeting in your radiant, charming country place. Praise be to God! That that day was spent in the utmost joy and happiness. That Annual Memorial Meeting will be the Souvenir of 'Abdu’l-Bahá, especially when it is passed with infinite delight and gladness." Henceforward, each meeting since has passed with infinite delight and gladness and this picturesque and delightful gathering continues to attract large numbers of the believers and interested friends (usually between three and five hundred people) to witness and enjoy this noble example of what true unity will accomplish.

During 1933 the Spiritual Assembly of Teaneck established through the confirmation of several friends, who were present during the original feast, the approximate spot where He stood in giving that memorable address on Unity. These several friends were Roy C. Wilhelm and his mother, Mrs. Florian Krug and Mrs. E. Magee. Then during the feast of this year all the friends who were present at the original feast were asked to sign a prepared statement. This statement with several other objects such as a newspaper, photograph, etc., were sealed in a copper box and this box was imbedded in concrete at the spot where 'Abdu’l-Bahá stood and a suitable dedication ceremony held.

Until this year this Annual Meeting was handled mainly by the friends at West Englewood. The next year, 1934, the New York Spiritual Assembly brought to the attention of the National Spiritual Assembly the original status of this feast and its importance. From this suggestion the National Spiritual Assembly appointed the National Committee for the Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu’l-Bahá. During this same year Shoghi Effendi brought to the attention of the National Spiritual Assembly the importance of this gathering and they passed the information on to the committee as follows: "The members of your committee will be interested to learn that in one of his recent letters, Shoghi Effendi has referred to the feast given by the Master at West Englewood as being of such significance that eventually a memorial is to be constructed on that spot, but that memorials are not to be constructed in connection with any other meeting held by 'Abdu’l-Bahá in America. In other words, the memorial of the Master’s visit to America will in the future be located on the spot where He held the Unity Feast in June, 1912."

The commemoration in the past was conducted by the friends gathering on the grounds for a picnic lunch. This prepared them to spend the day so that they could enjoy the afternoon and evening programs. The program is arranged with music, the reading of the address given by 'Abdu’l-Bahá, which is followed by several short talks from prominent speakers upon various phases of World Order. The evening program follows the same line; except that one general address is given to follow up and correlate the discussion of the afternoon. The Teaneck Spiritual Assembly furnishes its amplifying equipment for the occasion so that the program which is held out doors may be heard.

In 1934 the committee changed the usual practice of holding individual picnic lunches. A booth was arranged where the friends could secure a hot lunch and light refreshments at a nominal cost. This first effort pleased the friends and received their hearty approval, though it fell short of the actual demands and need for greater efficiency. This year the committee had several large folding tables made, each 16 feet long, which were decoratively set among the pine trees. The booth was arranged in cafeteria style. Each friend received a check at the entrance, which was punched as items of food were chosen, and payment was made at the exit. This method overcame the confusion of last year. Nearly 600 purchases were made at the booth and the committee reported that they could have served about 100 more dinners. After payment of all expenses, approximately $75.00 was turned over to the National Bahá’í Fund. The Committee feels that this part of the memorial meeting is very important for creating the spirit of fellowship and unity among the friends.

ADDRESS Subject: "The Promise of All Ages," by Mr. James Morton, Jr., Curator of Paterson Museum.

CHAIRMAN Miss Mary Maxwell.

To further create the atmosphere and spirit of the Master's visit, a number of the friends who were present during 'Abdu'l-Bahá's visit acted as hosts and hostesses for the friends. This effort was very pleasing.

The Teaneck Spiritual Assembly arranged an attractive display of Bahá'í literature and quite a number of books were sold during the day.

As the "Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá" is to bring out the significance and importance of His visit to America, all helpful suggestions from the friends to make the occasion more attractive will be very welcome.

TEMPLE PROGRAM

The purpose of this committee is to have charge of all public meetings that are held in the Bahá'í House of Worship, except such meetings as are under the direct supervision of the National Spiritual Assembly itself, at the time of the Convention, etc. Its chief duty is to provide speakers at the public meetings. Under its direction a guide service for casual visitors to the building is organized during the summer months. The believers volunteer and regularly devote certain days of each week to this service. During the past year this work was under the general supervision of Mrs. Corinne True.

The public meetings in the House of Worship are being held in Foundation Hall every Sunday afternoon at 3:30 P. M. The local speakers during the past year have been:

- Dr. Zia Bagdadi
- Mrs. Mabel Ives
- Mr. Howard Ives
- Miss Fanny Knobloch
- Mme. Barry Orlova
- Mr. Philip Marangella
- Mr. Carl Scheffler
- Mrs. Corinne True
- Mrs. Sarah Walrath
- Mr. Albert Windust

The visiting speakers were:

- Ruhí Afnan Effendi
- Mrs. Dorothy Baker
- Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan
- Dr. E. Lenore Morris

Before the break of this rather severe winter the attendance at the afternoon sessions was very good. Since then, however, there has been a very decided dropping off, due in part to the extreme weather conditions, and also to the fact that the committee was forced, because of lack of funds, to discontinue advertising the meetings. The National Spiritual Assembly have only recently again authorized this expenditure. The hope now is that with the coming of brighter days of Spring this advertising will again bring great numbers to hear the Message.

On October 26th and 27th, under the direction of the National Spiritual Assembly, a general conference of believers was held, particularly members of Spiritual Assemblies from the Central States. It was our special privilege to have Ruhí Afnan Effendi with us at that time. He spoke to the assemblers believers on the 26th and to the public on the afternoon of the 27th at the regular Sunday meeting. He addressed the largest audience that was ever assembled at the Bahá'í House of Worship. The reports of the ushers were that hundreds had to be turned away because of lack of seating capacity.

The major Feasts of our Faith are celebrated in the House of Worship, the communities of this vicinity all contributing. As a general rule the preparation of both the spiritual and material Feasts is undertaken by one or a group of local Assemblies.

During this past year an attempt was made to found a Sunday School in the House of Worship for children whose parents were attending the regular afternoon meeting. Lack of attendance, however, due no doubt to the extreme weather conditions, forced discontinuance. This Sunday School was under the direction of Mrs. Howard Ives, assisted by Miss Eve Nicklin, Mrs. Inez B. Ford and Mrs. Philip Marangella.

As promised by 'Abdu'l-Bahá the Bahá'í House of Worship is proving to be an increasingly important center of attraction. During the past year 43 clubs and organizations, totalling 2,126 people, visited there. Visits of such organizations are generally pre-arranged and speakers are provided by the Committee. After the address the public is divided into groups and they are conducted through the building by a group of believers who are acting as guides. The success of this work is due largely to the Chicago Spiritual Assembly’s Teaching Committee who have a special sub-committee particularly devoted to arranging contacts with organizations in their vicinity. Mrs. Nina Matthiesen is the chairman of this committee. Not including those before mentioned, approximately 12,579 people visited the House of Worship since last March.

The believers acting as guides find the service of meeting these people and conducting them though the building, to be most interesting. They come from everywhere, from all parts of the globe and from all walks of life. The general feeling is that such visitors are very much impressed by the beauty of the structure and the Message, when given to them in the course of their trip through the building, usually finds them open-minded and receptive. No one can estimate the importance of this kind of seed-planting under these most favorable conditions.

Perhaps the most outstanding element in this is the demonstration, devotion and unity presented by the small group of Bahá'ís in the erection of this Mashriq-ul-Adhikir.

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

A new group of Bahá'í Esperantists was formed this Fall in Augusta, Ga., a class of nine members, who are making very good progress with the language. The New York City class has been unusually successful this year, both as to numbers and progress of the pupils.

The Secretary of this Committee addressed the New York Esperanto Society at their Zamenhof Barço in December, giving a few items in the very interesting experience that Mrs. Erickson had in Sweden this summer; and reading a letter from Miss Josephine Kruka outlining her work with the young people in Washington, thus informing the Esperantists of the use that the Bahá’ís are making of the language.

The Committee has addressed Miss Martha Root, Miss Lydia Zamenhof and the International Bahá’í Bureau, asking for suggestions as to how the American Bahá’í Esperantists can be of use in the European field. They have also informed the Central Office of the Universal Esperanto Asocio, in Geneva, that their committee is in existence and can be referred to for any service desired.

The work of the Index Committee has been carried on this year largely along the lines outlined by the committee last year. The plan is to make rather simple indexes of the Sacred Writings of Bahá’u’lláh and “Abdu’l-Bahá and the World Order Letters of Shoghi Effendi and then combine them into one general index which may be made available in print. Technically speaking this is a catalogue rather than index as we find an index as defined technically is too detailed to be practicable just now. This will not include compilations.

The index of “Some Answered Questions” has been completed by Miss Gretchen Westervelt. Also “Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh” and “Promulgation of Universal Peace” have indexes printed with them. Work is being done on “Kitab-i-Íqán,” “The Wisdom of Abdu’l-Bahá,” The “World Order” Letters of Shoghi Effendi. BAHÁ’Í NEWS is being indexed to date by Mrs. Stebbins. We have in hand indexes of “Hidden Words” and “Tablets of Abdu’l-Bahi” which had been done previously and kindly lent to the committee. The “Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh” are also assigned for indexing.

No work has as yet been done on “Divine Philosophy,” “Three Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh,” “Epistle to the Son of a Wolf,” “The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh,” “Mysterious Forces of Civilization.”

We find that we have among Bahá’ís a few trained cataloguers and these have offered their services in this work. We express our gratitude to

ARCHIVES

So far as is known this universal cycle of Bahá’u’lláh is the first dispensation in human history in which copies of the Holy Utterances can be referred for their authenticity to the original, signed Writings of the Manifestation Himself. Many of the original manuscripts of these writings, both of the Bab and the Bahá’u’lláh are now contained in the International Bahá’í Archives.

The Interpreter of these Sacred Writings, “Abdu’l-Bahá, has written many, many Tablets, literally hundreds and thousands of which were addressed to American believers, explaining and exemplifying these Holy Utterances. Of these Tablets the Master has said, “... each leaflet from “Abdu’l-Bahá will be a widespread book,” while the Guardian has indicated that the work of collecting and publishing the Tablets is one of the most important duties of the present generation. He emphasizes the fact that, “... only Tablets with the Master’s signature and in the original tongue should be recognized.”

In the further elucidation and application of the written Word, and in the cultivation of the young garden of the Administrative Order of the Faith, so lovingly planted on the American continent by “Abdu’l-Bahá, the Guardian has written numerous letters to National and Local Spiritual Assemblies, and very many messages to individual believers. Almost all of these letters are still in the hands of the believers and the communities to whom they were addressed. Relatively few have, as yet, been forwarded for preservation to the National Bahá’í Archives. Since the work of collecting and publishing the Master’s Tablets was begun years ago, many of these precious documents in the form of the original, signed manuscripts or Tablets, totalling approximately 1,250 at present, have been graciously donated by their recipients to the National Archives. It is probable, however, that less than half of the Tablets addressed to American believers have been placed in the Archives.

Does it not follow from the above evident facts that the American Bahá’ís should unitedly exert an effort to preserve for posterity all the writings directed to the friends of this land by the Master and the Guardian, each of whom is the sole interpreter for His day of the Sacred Utterances! The committee is happy to report that among the Bahá’í Assemblies and groups to which Tablets were addressed by “Abdu’l-Bahá, the following communities have placed these original Tablets in the Archives; Baltimore, Brooklyn, Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Fruitdale, Fruitport, Green Acre, Jersey City, Kenosha, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York, Philadelphia, Santa Barbara, Santa Paula, Seattle, Urbana and Washington, D. C. The originals of the fourteen Teaching Tablets (of the Divine Plan), of Tablets directed to the Bahá’í Temple Unity, and of a number of other general Tablets are also on file in the Archives.

Among the Tablets in the American Archives addressed to communities in other lands are a number to friends in Manchester, England, in Stuttgart, Germany and in Poona, India. An order for facsimile or photostatic copies of thirty-three original Tablets of “Abdu’l-Bahá, and twenty-one original letters of Shoghi Effendi was recently filled for the Spiritual Assembly of Poona.

It is suggested that local Spiritual Assemblies of the United States and Canada order facsimiles of Tablets and letters of the Guardian directed to their respective communities, and that these be used as a foundation for the building up of local Bahá’í Archives.

FREE LITERATURE

The Committee is pleased to report that during this past year five manuscripts have been reviewed and accepted by the National Spiritual Assembly for publication in the series of free literature pamphlets. The following pamphlets are now available from the Bahá’í Publishing Committee:

1. Homoculture—Principles of Bahá’í Education
   By Stanwood Cobb

2. The Most Great Peace
   By Marion Holley

3. The Oneness of Mankind
   By Hussein Rabbani

4. The Path to God
   By Dorothy Baker

These pamphlets are printed at the lowest possible cost as a help to elling teachers and local assemblies for distribution at public meetings and for mailing to special lists. They are sold at $1.50 for 100 copies net, a cost so low that every believer should have a supply on hand to give to the sincere seeker.

The fifth in this series, The Bahá’í House of Worship—An Institution of the New World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, by Genevieve L. Coy, appears in the Bahá’í World, Volume V. and will be reprinted by Convention time. This pamphlet will contain illustrations of the Temple and should be used extensively.

The committee wishes to call attention to the shorter leaflet, "The World Religion"—A Summary of its Aims, Teachings and History, by Shoghi Effendi. This leaflet is sold in lots of 100 for $1.00 and is the finest concise statement on the Bahá’í Faith.

Other manuscripts on the Influence of Religion and the Social-Economic Teachings are in preparation. The Committee will welcome any further suggestions for subject matter, that has a universal appeal, to be added to this series.

The Guardian has again emphasized the fact that as we have entered "the phase of concentrated teaching activity . . . an effort unexampled in its scope and sustained vitality is urgently required so that the moving spirit of its Founder may permeate and transform the lives of the countless multitudes that hunger for its teachings." It is our hope that these new teaching pamphlets will be widely used to help appease that hunger.

BRAILLE TRANSCRIPTION FOR THE BLIND

The work of transcribing the Bahá’í literature into Braille books for the blind is steadily going on even in the face of the much discussed "Talking Book" which upon investigation proves not to promise to supplant the Braille writing as the reproducing machine is too expensive for general use and also all books of reference would have to be written and made more permanent than the "Talking Book" permits.

The most notable achievement this year has been the hand-tooling of the "Book of Iqán," a work consisting of 427 Braille pages made for the Guardian by Mrs. Constance Rodman of Batavia, New York. Besides this work Mrs. Rodman has transcribed the pamphlets on "Bahá’í Economics"—88 pages—and excerpts from the "World Economy of Bahá’u’lláh," by Mr. Holley. These last two were sent to a blind Bahá’í friend in Cleveland, Ohio.

From our other faithful Bahá’í Braillist, Miss Ella Quant of Schenectady, we have to report the transcription of "Divine Philosophy," "Ridden Words" and "Words of Wisdom," "Prayers" and "Bahá’í Teachings on Economics." All of the books have been sent to the Director of the Braille Department of the Library of Congress for binding and except in certain particular cases the Department has placed our books in various Braille circulating Libraries throughout the United States. We have endeavored to ascertain a list of the cities where these books have been sent but so far have not been successful. When this is known we hope to send a list to the Bahá’í News Letter so that the friends in each city may seek to establish further relation with the Braille readers.

Some of the transcriptions of this Bahá’í Committee have been sent to Vienna to one of the friends there and we have supplied Mr. Thilander of Stock- sund, Sweden, with several copies also. The friends should bear in mind that the "Book of Iqán" and "Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era" are in all the large Braille Libraries in the United States and that the members of the Braille Clubs in these cities would be apt to have read them. We suggest therefore that some effort he made to contact these readers.

The encouragement which the Guardian has offered to this Committee and the appreciation which he has expressed to the members for the Braille books which have been sent him at his request has been the source of deep gratitude and satisfaction. To a member of this committee Shoghi Effendi writes:

"I am deeply appreciative of your recent service and wish to urge you to persevere in this notable and promising field of Bahá’í activity. I will pray for your success from the bottom of my heart. Persevere and do not feel discouraged however great the obstacles that may confront you in the days to come." In the section of the letter written by the secretary of the Guardian he says: "He, (Shoghi Effendi) wishes me particularly to express the hope that through your efforts for the transcription of Bahá’í literature into Braille for the blind you may be given a good opportunity to open new fields of teaching for the Cause. He wishes you continued success in your labors in this connection and is praying to Bahá’u’lláh to sustain and guide you in your endeavors for the promulgation of His message among the blind."

Your committee desires to express the hope that ere long many more Braille transcribers may arise to assist in this very important branch of the teaching work. For all those who are unable to engage in active outside teaching work there is no greater means of serving than transcribing the Holy Utterances into Braille for the blind.

CENTRAL STATES SUMMER SCHOOL

In accordance with the counsel of the Guardian that we extend the scope of the summer school, the committee arranged for three sessions for the season of 1935 rather than the two of previous summers. A four-day youth session was held the last of June under the leadership of Mrs. Dorothy Baker with the following daily morning program:

Devotions: Mrs. Baker.
The Bahá’í Life: Mrs. Baker.
Forum on "World Order" Letters of Shoghi Effendi, conducted by the young people.

The afternoons were free for sports, recreation or informal group discussions. Many found their greatest inspiration in the unannounced discussions that grew up spontaneously in a group of four or five. The evening programs were arranged by the young people and were inspiring and helpful.

Before they left the young people appointed a committee from among the Chicago young people to consult in regard to next summer’s session and make recommendations or suggestions to the committee. Their suggestions have been found most helpful to this committee and we have been able to follow them quite largely.

Dr. E. Lenore Morris assisted Mrs. Baker as general counselor and advisor.

Fifty-seven young people attended besides about thirty visitors.

A nine-day general session (June 29-July 7) followed the youth session at which 55 were registered. An unusually high spiritual and scholarly standard was maintained in each of the following courses and they dovetailed into each other as though they had been worked out in consultation:

Devotions (based on Seven Valleys).
The Conduct of Bahá’í Affairs, Horace Holley.

In both this session and the youth session Madame Orlova was a great aid and inspiration in the afternoon and evening talks which she gave. These were designed for the general public and those who knew little of the Cause.

At both this session and the youth session Dale S. Cole of the Teaching Committee conducted a teaching conference. These were most helpful in developing a better understanding of the needs and methods in spreading the Cause.

The third session, held August 19-25, had a smaller attendance but was exceedingly worth while. About twenty were registered, but many came daily from the nearby city of Flint so that some forty or fifty people were reached during this session, making a total of some 275 during the three sessions. The daily program was:

- Devotions, conducted by different believers.
- Foundations of the New World Order, Carl Scheffler.
- The Origins and Powers of Man, Dr. E. Lenore Morris.
- Public afternoon talks and varied evening programs were carried out as in the other two sessions. The presence of Mrs. True gave especial inspiration for she shared with us her recent experiences at Haifa and messages from Shoghi Effendi. One evening was devoted to a Temple program at which she and Mr. Scheffler spoke. This resulted in a free-will offering for the Temple fund. A contribution had been sent in from the other general session also.

More publicity was given to the school this summer than before. A fine feature article in the Flint Journal is worthy of special mention. The school has made a very definite connection with the city of Flint and two or three carloads of people came out every day to the school. A vigorous and growing Bahá’í community is developing in Flint because of the school. To the young people of this group the school is much indebted for their activity and help.

Besides these sessions the school is open throughout the season to casual inquirers or to those who wish to spend a quiet vacation, or to Bahá’í groups for a day’s outing. It is the hope that more and more this will be a center from which there is a constant flow of the spirit and teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. Plans are well under way for the three sessions for the summer of 1936.

STUDY OUTLINES

The study course in Bahá’í Administration reported nearing completion last year was held up at the request of the Secretary of the National Assembly to await the impending publication of important administrative material. The outline was completed in the fall and has recently been issued by the Publishing Committee.

At present there are two outlines under way: one on Creative Writing and one on Public Speaking. Both are designed to be of practical value to Bahá’ís in teaching work. These outlines are being compiled by Mrs. Doris McKay, who will also conduct correspondence courses in connection with them after they have been published. We hope they will be completed in time for use next fall.

CONTACTS

Attached hereto is a statistical report, unfortunately incomplete, of the work done by the National Contacts Committee during the year 1935-36. Though incomplete, it conipares favorably with the results obtained last year, at a cost to the National Fund about one-half as great as that required to cover the expenditures of the Committee a year ago. This is gratifying indeed, and is attributable to the generosity of committee members in personally assuming the expenses involved in carrying on the work of the Committee. The method of procedure and aims of the Committee were fully explained in the report submitted a year ago, that will not be repeated here.

From Canada comes the report that letters and literature have been sent to the premiers, lieutenant-governors, ministers of education in each province, as well as editors of newspapers, magazines, etc., principals of the leading colleges of each province, a few radio lecturers and lecturers reported in the newspapers. Surely such a group comprises those types of individuals, leaders of government, thought and education, which is so important to acquaint with the message of Bahá’u’lláh in these troubled days.

Those members of the Committee working in the United States have directed their activities along the same channels, and the responses have been stimulating indeed. A few quotations from replies might be interesting. A Chinese correspondent states: "I am happy indeed to realize that in such a troubled world we have spirits in different countries who are working towards a great end for the welfare of all humanity." An American clergyman on the Pacific Coast writes: "Year by year the thought of the world comes nearer to an appreciation of the Bahá’í Revelation. I personally feel the profoundest joy and gratitude that such a world-wide spiritual message has been given, and I truly bless all Bahá’ists for I believe their message will come fully into its own as the message for an age ripe and ready to receive." A professor in an eastern educational institution writes: "I shall add them (Bahá’i booklets) to our institution of world affairs library." A Connecticut gentleman expresses himself thus: "I cannot see how any follower of Jesus Christ can dissent from the views of Shoghi Effendi in his "The Goal of a New World Order..." I have read some sixty pages of 'Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era' and can but marvel that such universal principles appropriate to modern conditions should come out of Persia." . . . From a professor at Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois: "I have of course, been long acquainted with this (Bahá’í movement) but I am always glad to have additional information regarding it." Out of this contact developed an opportunity for Ruhi Effendi Afnan to address this professor's class at the University. Two directors of radio broadcasts in the Central States responded, out of one of which radio publicity for the Cause may develop. The Librarian of a Mid-Western university writes: "We are interested in every phase of activity which affects religious, social or political conditions. We are pleased to have this addition to our collection on the various religions now extant in this country."

Statements such as the foregoing definitely point out the trend of modern thought, and the dawning realization that only through the power of the word of God can peace be restored to a strife-torn world.
PUBLISHING

The work of the Publishing Committee in the manufacturing and distributing of Baha'i Literature has progressed satisfactorily during the year and although we should have liked to see a very substantial increase in the sale of books, we do not feel that we should be discouraged over the results.

For the year ending March 1, 1936, we have sold and distributed:

- 9,152 books
- 40,221 pamphlets
- 765 outlines

In addition to the above, the year's sales of "The Dawn-Breakers" brings the totals to March 1st to 1,335 copies.

Standard edition, 133 copies
Limited edition, 13 copies

This means that there are only seventeen copies now available of the Limited Edition and we do hope that the friends will take advantage of this opportunity of owning a book, which in the years to come will be beyond price.

The Western Division continues to function most satisfactorily and the sales of books show an increase over the previous year. This is due to the valued help and cooperation of Mrs. Emma Smith and we feel privileged to have such an efficient co-worker in the West.

The two important contributions to the literature this year are "Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh" published in October, 1935, and "The Bahá'í World" Volume V, which was published in February, 1936 after many unavoidable delays.

Of the "Gleanings" the Guardian through his secretary wrote, "He feels deeply grateful to you and to your co-workers in the Publishing Committee for the splendid efforts you have so successfully exerted for the production of this volume, the circulation of which he hopes will highly reinforce and enrich the teaching labors of the American friends. May its rapid sale also help to increase the fund of the Publishing Committee and thus enable it to proceed with the printing of other Bahá'í works."

The Guardian has always emphasized the fact that the Publishing Committee should be self-supporting but we have not really come up to this standard. We must ask for assistance from the National Spiritual Assembly when bringing out the expensive books such as "The Dawn-Breakers" and "The Bahá'í World".

We have not wanted to increase the selling price of the books and yet when a volume of over 700 pages, printed as is "The Bahá'í World" Volume V, with its many illustrations, handsomely printed frontispieces, map, genealogies, etc., is sold for $2.50 and less, the one-third discount, we have been allowing the local Assemblies, it is quite obvious that it is being sold below cost.

This question of discounts has been carefully studied. We have felt that with the limited editions we print, which means a high manufacturing cost, we cannot continue to allow the one-third to the local Assemblies. The National Spiritual Assembly therefore passed a ruling at their meeting in February, 1936 as follows:

Discounts to be allowed, authorized by the National Spiritual Assembly, these discounts to supersede all previous discounts and to take effect on May 1, 1936:

10% to Assemblies on orders of less than $10.00.
25% to Assemblies on orders of $10.00 or more.

25% to individuals on orders of $25.00 or more when the literature is intended for teaching purposes.

The Publishing Committee has been manufacturing literature under the following headings:

1.—Regular Bahá'í Literature, consisting of the words of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdúl-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi.
2.—Books written on the Cause by believers.
3.—Pamphlets, outlines, etc., especially for teaching purposes.

The item for teaching literature has been a heavy expense and we made the suggestion recently to the National Spiritual Assembly that we should only be responsible for the publishing and financing of standard Bahá'í works. The National Spiritual Assembly by a recent ruling confirmed this and decreed that in future it will finance all books, pamphlets, outlines, etc., published specially for teaching purposes.

A recent ruling of the National Spiritual Assembly in regard to the personal financing of books by the author authorizes the Publishing Committee to ask the author to donate the amount for publishing and then the Publishing Committee will manufacture and distribute books in the usual way.

New Publications

Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh, bound in fabricoid and cloth. Since publication date, October, 1935, we have sold and distributed over 1,400 copies of this title.

Bahá'í World, Volume V. Since publication date, February, 1936, we have sold and distributed over 900 copies of this volume.

Pamphlets for teaching purposes:
Homoculture, by Stanwood Cobb.
The Most Great Peace, by Marion Holley.
Oneness of Mankind, by Hussein Rabbani.

The above were all reprinted from articles in World Order Magazine.

Outlines: Twenty Lessons in the Baha'i Administration, mimeographed. Prepared by the Outline Committee.

Reprints
Reality of Man, with Words of Wisdom of Bahá'u'lláh added to this edition, compiled by Horace Holley.

Small Prayer Book. A new edition with the prayers of the Bab added. These had been omitted from the previous edition.

The Bahá'í Faith, reprint of article in Chicago magazine "Unity," by Horace Holley.
The Coal of a New World Order. Reprinted in October, 1935. This makes a total printing to date of over 18,000 copies.

Purchases

The Coming of the Glory, by Florence E. Pinchon. Copies purchased from the N. S. A. of Great Britain.

Two sets of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era in Braille which were ordered made by Mrs. French, were purchased from American Brotherhood for Free Reading for the Blind. Announced in Bahá'í News for sale at $5.00 per set and they were suggested as a good gift for one of the Assemblies or for one of the friends individually to make to an Institution for the Blind. These copies are still available.

Mrs. French has had Kitáb-i-Iqán made in Braille and distributed eight sets to libraries for the Blind Division. The plates for this title stored with plates for New Era in Braille at our New York printers.

Titles in Process of Publication

Seven Valleys and Four Valleys.
This will be published within the next few months.

Bahá'í Administration, without the World Order letters, which are to be made in a separate volume later. This volume of Bahá'í Administration will be sold for $1.50. Will be ready in April.

The Bahá'í House of Worship. Reprint of article by Genevieve L. Coy in Bahá'í World, V, will be ready for the Convention.

Editing Committee: Dut to the fact that manuscripts are often in need of careful editing before being sent to the printer, and this not being a function of the Reviewing Committee, Mrs. Grace Bastedo was appointed a committee of one to do this work.

World Order Magazine

With the issue of April 1935, the Bahá'í Magazine was brought under the management of the Publishing Committee and published under the new name of World Order. A list of 1,620 subscribers was turned over to the Committee; 684 names from the Bahá'í Magazine and 936 names from World Unity; the latter consisting principally of colleges, libraries and Peace Societies throughout the world.

From the Bahá'í Magazine we also received all stock of the magazines, bound volumes, office equipment, etc., and a check for $302.15. Full details of the stock of magazines and bound volumes will be published later. From World Unity we received a stock of books to be sold for the benefit of World Order:

117 World Community.
112 Foundations of World Unity.
489 Seven Great Bibles.
657 Nationalism and Internationalism.

The present subscription list of 1,761 names is not enough but renewals have been encouraging and the monthly orders for magazines in quantity from local Assemblies and booksellers give promise of substantial growth.

We have urged all Assemblies to cooperate by obtaining subscriptions from both Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís, for the magazine is a wonderful teaching medium and the name "World Order" should carry an appeal to all people. We allow Assemblies a commission of 50c on each annual subscription, will send order blanks and sample copies in bulk on request.

The Detroit Assembly has responded splendidly, sending in a list of seventy names for a six month's trial subscription to outstanding people in their community. We feel that results will justify this effort.

Milwaukee asked if we would use an advanced dating on magazine to conform with other magazines for sale on newstands. It was thought best to wait, however, until we have a larger circulation and feel that there is a real demand for the magazine on the newstands.

Toledo asked if we could not change the color of cover monthly as the newsdealer who is selling a few copies monthly, made this suggestion. We could not accede to this request but we are pleased with the interest shown and know that in time, we will have a large circulation on the newstands.

The National Spiritual Assembly has authorized us to send the magazine to Bahá'í teachers travelling abroad, as they know it will be of value in their teaching work.

We do hope that all the Bahá'í friends will respond to this appeal to make World Order a world wide magazine. The moral effect of bringing this dynamic name to the attention of the thinking people of the world will be of inestimable value. It will result in conveying the Bahá'í message to people who could not be otherwise reached, and many new believers will be enrolled.

THE BAHÁ'Í WORLD

(Vol. VI for Period 1934-1936)

Notwithstanding the fact that Vol. V of the Bahá'í World has only recently been placed in circulation, the collection of material for Vol. VI, which covers the period from April 21st, 1934 to April 21st, 1936, has been completed and duly forwarded to the Guardian in January in compliance with his specific request.

The fact that the volume was late in appearing evidently gave rise to the idea among the friends that there was no urgent need to proceed with the preparations for Volume VI. This is an impression which must be overcome at the very outset of this report, for any delay in so important a project as the continuance and regularity of the Bahá'í World would be a source of great disappointment to Shoghi Effendi and would, furthermore, provide occasion for remark and criticism to those who are watching to discover some weakness in our Bahá'í methods.

If at any time the Guardian himself should deem it advisable to discontinue this important international record, or if he should see fit to lengthen the period between the issues, that must be regarded as a manifestation of the divine fitness of things, but until that occurs all the Bahá'í Communities throughout the world are bound to preserve their records with the most scrupulous care and to present them upon request to whatever editorial committee may be charged with the responsibility of assembling and preparing them for publication.

Before proceeding further with the comments and suggestions which this committee would like to make in view of future books we would like to quote the words of the Guardian appearing in Bahá'í Administration, page 140, relative to the Bahá'í World. He says:

"This unique record of world-wide Bahá'í activity attempts to present the general public, as well as the student and scholar, those historical facts and fundamental principles that constitute the distinguishing features of the Message of Bahá'u'lláh to this age. I have, ever since its inception, taken a keen and sustained interest in its development, have personally participated in the collection of its material, the arrangement of its contents, and the close scrutiny of whatever data it contains.

"I confidently and emphatically recommend it to every thoughtful and eager follower of the Faith, whether in the East or in the West, whose desire is to place in the hands of the critical and intelligent inquirer, of whatever class, creed or color, a work that can truly witness to the high purpose, the moving history, the enduring achievements, the resistless march and infinite prospects of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh. Eminently readable and attractive in its features, reliable and authoritative in the material it contains, up-to-date, comprehensive and accurate in the mass of information it gives, concise and persuasive in its treatment of the fundamental aspects of the Cause, thoroughly representative in the illustrations and photographs it reveals:—it stands unexcelled and unapproached by any publication of its kind in the varied literature of our beloved Cause. It will, without the slightest doubt, if generously and vigorously supported, arouse unprecedented interest among all classes of civilized society.

"I earnestly request you, dearly beloved friends, to exert the utmost effort for the prompt and widespread..."
circulation of a book that so faithfully and vividly portrays, in all its essential features, its far-reaching ramifications and most arresting aspects, the all-embracing Faith of Bahá'u'lláh."

The foregoing statement of the Guardian is sufficiently urgent and clear to acquaint us with the vast importance which he attaches to the Book. We must bear in mind that these Books are the sole international activity maintained in the Cause and are therefore a spiritual and educational preparation for the International House of Justice. Furthermore, the position of the Guardian, assuming almost hourly, we may say, greater and greater importance in the eyes of the religious, literary, scientific and cultural world is so outstanding that our most zealous efforts, our most meticulous care, our most scrupulous accuracy are not sufficient to express adequately his position or respond to his needs. Can we imagine any greater obligation or joy than to present to his needs. Can we imagine any duty whatsoever which may be assigned to us in our service to him?

May we refer the friends again to a message from Shoghi Effendi which appears on page XII of the Introduction to Vol. II of the Bahá'í World where he says: "I would also remind you of the absolute necessity of adhering faithfully throughout the pages of the Book to the correct system of transliteration, which, if consistently adopted and followed, will facilitate the pronunciation of Oriental terms with which the friends of the West are to be closely and increasingly associated in the future. The Year Book should prove a model and help to them all."

The committee recognizes that as yet our typewriters do not carry the signs exactly adapted to the transliteration of Oriental terms, but we recommend that in every instance, whenever the accents are known, they should be added with a pen. When this is not done by the contributor it must be done by the committee but while any person charged with the distinguished honor and responsibility of compiling the material for these Books is only too happy to observe these instructions of the Guardian, the object is defeated unless we all, as a Community, become accustomed at once to the signs with which, as he says, "we are to become increasingly associated." Only a very few of the manuscript thus far received in the preparation of the material for the last three volumes have carried the correct signs. This is such a simple matter; yet it is one which we urge the friends to observe.

Again we would explain that in every case where printed matter is sent in for use in the Book two copies are necessary and should always be included, as pages printed on both sides of sheet cannot be used.

With the expiration of this Bahá'í year the record automatically begins for the next volume, which will be Vol. VII. It will therefore be necessary for the National Spiritual Assemblies to appoint the members who are to constitute the committee for that volume. We have striven throughout the past six years to define the policy and suggest the method of preparation for all written material, but many of the contributions which have been received have not yet come up to the standard of excellence which is due the Guardian, and which the friends, when they perceive that their articles and reports go directly to him, will wish to observe. The chairman and secretary of this committee neither re-write nor edit any material which is received unless, on the one hand, the writing or typing is not fit for presentation to the Guardian, or the Guardian, when he returns the copy for printing, specifically requests it.

In so far as concerns the collection of material the committee earnestly recommends that every member of the world-wide Bahá'í Community constitute himself a vigilant assistant for collecting interesting and useful additions to this International Bahá'í Record. The Guardian, beside requiring the very best that lies within the possibilities of the friends themselves, welcomes articles and comments from prominent and important personages who are sympathetic to the Faith, whether in English or other languages.

We cannot stress sufficiently the need for observance of the time limit when material is to be received, nor the very high standard which should be maintained, and in closing we seize this opportunity to express again our deep appreciation and abiding gratitude to those who have so generously and painstakingly collaborated in the preparation of Vol. VI which, if funds are available, should be ready for distribution in the early fall of this year, and we would especially desire to acknowledge the excellence of the reports rendered by Germany, India, Iraq and Egypt and their punctual compliance with the requests of the secretaries.

TEACHING AND TRAINING CHILDREN

The Committee on the Teaching and Training of Children is pleased to report that during the past year several new children's classes have been established. The teachers are making considerable use of the lesson outline prepared two years ago but still wider use is encouraged, not only because the material provides an orderly introduction to the Bahá'í Teachings but also because increased sales will help to make possible the publication of further courses.

The chief service of the committee this year has been to advise teachers and to cooperate with Assemblies in initiating children's classes. An opportunity for an interesting piece of experimental work last summer developed from the invitation of the Western States Summer School Committee to cooperate in arranging courses of Bahá'í instruction for the children who attended the Summer School with their parents. Twenty-eight children below the age of fourteen were enrolled in two classes, fourteen coming from non-Bahá'í homes. The helpful suggestions of the teachers growing out of these classes will aid in shaping the courses for the coming session of the Summer School.

Work has progressed on new teaching aids, though less rapidly than was anticipated a year ago. It is expected, however, that at least one new course will be ready for distribution immediately following the summer vacation. One outline under way consists of stories and other teaching material from "Nabil's Narrative" and another is a suggested list of Old and New Testament stories which Bahá'í children should know. Consideration is being given also to a course on character education based on the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

The need of the latter is becoming increasingly more important in view of the concern of both educators and social workers over the serious problems of youth. A prominent leader in child welfare recently stated that the growing generation is coping with problems greater than those of any generation since the Renaissance. Adults do not know how to give guidance, he said, because they do not know the pattern of life which youth will have to follow. Surely this is a stirring challenge to Baha’is not only to acquaint adults with the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh wherein the path is clearly defined, but also to instill in the minds and hearts of children and young people such knowledge and moral vigor as will enable them to rear the new civilization which is the objective of our Faith. The Committee feels it cannot too strongly emphasize the opportunity which is now ours to build for the future through the boys and girls of today.

No suggested outline or course of lessons can possibly meet the needs of every community because the capacties and resources of both children and teachers vary. All Baha’i instruction must be a gradual unfolding of spirituai understanding and a good knowledge of the Teachings is as essential to teachers of children as to teachers of develop the characters that are perfection of the spiritual patterns contained in the Holy Utterances of Bahá’u’lláh.

LIBRARY

During the last fiscal year, the Library Division has donated 201 books to 42 libraries: 27 Public, 8 University and 7 Independent Libraries.

The recorded number of books have been as follows: Bahá’í World, Vol.
11-26, Vol. III-24, Vol. IV-18,
Vol. V-2, Book of Assurance—23, Bahá’í: Spirit of the Age—27, Bahá’í Revelation—25, Some Answered
Questions—16, One of Mankind—10, Le Vrai Bahá’í—25, Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in Chinese—4,
Foundations of World Unity—1.

The Committee’s main object this last year has been to place Bahá’í Lit-terature into more University Libraries, and to request Local Assemblies and individuals to make a personal Library donation of the 3 outstanding new books, Promise of All Ages, Security for a Failing World, and Gleanings

from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh.

The donation of these books have been as follows: 12 copies of Promise of All Ages, 16 copies of *Security
for a Failing World* and 8 Gleanings.

The list of University and Independent Libraries to which the Library Division has donated literature, is as follows: Piney Woods Country Life School, Miss., University of Minnesota, Syracuse University, N. Y., Western State Teachers College, Kalamooz, Mich., St. Mary’s School,
Kenosha, Wis., Piedmont College,
Demarest, Ga., Texas Technological College, Lubbock, Texas, University of Toledo, Ohio, University of California, University of Southern California, (donated by the Local Assembly of Los Angeles), Minnesota Historical Society, Philosophers Society, Englewood, N. J., American Theo-
sophical Library, Washington, D. C., Near East Industries, New York City, and Rabbi Schwarz Temple Library, Chicago. Bahá’í Books in Braille to the Clowensalk Library, Mt. Healthy,
Ohio, and the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, (donated by the Local Assembly of Cincinnati). Literature was also placed in the libraries of two prison, the Illinois State Prison at Joliet and the U. S. Northeastern Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., at the request of the librarian for books in Chinese.

There are frequently many personal gifts made to libraries which do not come to the attention of the Library Division and we request whenever this is done that a report of it be sent to the Committee, so that the files may be kept up to date.

Many University Professors in the department of Philosophy and Religiion have written that they include the Baha’í Religion in their courses in Comparative and Living Religions, and that the students show great interest in the Teachings.

They ask for continued cooperation in this University work.

The Committee is indeed grateful for the valuable assistance that the Local Assemblies and individuals have contributed in the furtherance of this work, and takes this opportunity to express its deep appreciation.

The National Spiritual Assembly has instructed the Library Division to make a distribution of 50 copies of Bahá’í World, Vol. V. This is to be partially done through the cooperation of the Local Assemblies. As the allotment is limited, we request that this volume be placed in the most representative Public and University Libraries, and that we are particularly desirous to have it placed in those libraries within the immediate vicinity of the Temple.
An early response will be greatly appreciated.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

Editorial Department

The editorial policy controlling World Order was established by the National Spiritual Assembly in its anouncement published in the March, 1935 issue of Baha’i News. It seems well to quote from that announcement in order to inaugurate this brief report submitted by the editors covering the first volume of the magazine.

"World Order (the title chosen from the term given such significance by Shoghi Effendi) will endeavor to create a public teaching medium adequate both in appearance and contents to represent the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh upon the American continent. Its aim will be to expound the Message upon which human regeneration and universal peace depends, and thus assist in raising our teaching nearer to the lofty standards so perfectly exemplified by the Bahá’í House of Worship.

In conformity with its impressive title, the magazine will seek to clarify for the general public the vital elements which enter into the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh—the oneness of religion, true race amity, the harmony of religion and science, the union of East and West, the attainment of world community based upon world unity, the relation of Science and Religion, etc. In all cases the editors will give Bahá’í contributions the preference, but they have been directed to maintain a high standard, that the magazine may give the best possible impression to its readers."

Charged with the responsibility of translating this general policy into concrete form, the editors began by looking upon Shoghi Effendi’s "The Goal of a New World Order" as the perfect example of Bahá’ís teaching adapted to this period of development. Inconceivably, this view is confirmed by word received from the Guardian by the National Spiritual Assembly a few years ago, in which the hope was expressed that a copy of "The Goal of a New World Order" could be presented to every man and woman in the world.

It seemed clear to the editors that the Guardian's conception of the new world order has created the true meeting place between the Cause and the world—the true point of reconciliation between aspiring human thought and the descent of the Divine Plan. This conception of the function of the magazine—to build upon the firm foundation laid by the Guardian—has been the guidance and inspiration of the editors throughout the year.

The contents of volume one reflect that view, limited, naturally, by the amount of available material received from Bahá'í authors.

We would emphasize the following features of Volume One:—first, the passages carefully selected from "Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh"—the very essence of the Holy Spirit. Second, two articles consisting of related passages chosen from the Bahá'í Lights' "World Order" letters; third, the articles prepared for the Committee on Free Literature, published first in the magazine and then reprinted in pamphlet form at a considerable saving; fourth, the symposium entitled "A World Faith," the ninth and final article of which will appear in the May issue. This symposium has made it possible for the contributors to cooperate in an interesting Bahá'í book, and the book itself, it is hoped, will be published within the next few months from the magazine types, thus contributing to the public teaching literature. Fifth, the series by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick summarizing a current Study of American civilization knowledge of which is most helpful to every Bahá'í teacher. Sixth, Mamie L. Seto's series on the divine art of living, based upon her study course, as given at Centra! States Summer School last summer. Seventh, Dr. Bagdadi's series entitled the "Story of Islam." Many of the individual articles, like Prof. Piper's "Spiritual Perspectives" and Oscar Newfang's "World Federation" merit special emphasis.

It has been gratifying to note the extent to which magazine articles and editorials have been reprinted in newspapers and magazines, not only in this country, but in Scotland, Japan and India. We have, for example, clippings from John O'Groat Journal, Scotland, of May 17, June 28, September 27 and December 27, 1935; from The Modern Review of Calcutta, dated June, July, August, October, November and December, 1935 and January, 1936; from The Japan Times and Mail, Tokyo, of October 19, 1935 and February 17, 1936, The Chicago Defender of January 11, 1936, and from newspapers in Augusta, Georgia and Miami, Fla. As the general work of publicity develops in the Cause, the local Assemblies will find it possible more and more to bring the magazine articles to the attention of the press.

An important element of a magazine is its make-up and appearance. The editors have done as much as possible this year without a budget for art work. Beginning with the April number, the first issue of Volume Two, the color scheme will be changed to orange and blue, and the inside pages embellished with designs in black and white. To Mr. Carl Scheffler we are indebted for the front cover design and to Mrs. Nancy Bowditch and Mr. Scheffler for new designs for use this coming year. Designs have also been obtained from a friendly non-Bahá'í artist at low cost. Mrs. Doris McKay has given us the advantage of excellent advice in the matter of design and make-up, and has besides supplied some interesting sketches for decorations.

Consideration has been given to more than two hundred and thirty different contributions in prose and verse.

For coming issues we have on hand an interesting and valuable series of essays by Mrs. Rosa V. Winterburn on spiritual subjects, another series by Prof. Glenn L. Shook on civilization, and a third on modern Islam by Prof. McClure. Another symposium will appear during the year, consisting of seven contributions under the title of "Seven Candles of Unity." We also have Mrs. Loulie Mathews' travel articles and some most interesting articles by Orcella Rexford.

As the difficulties of the world increase, the value of a public teaching medium for the Cause will intensify. The editors hope that the friends will redouble their efforts to furnish articles and suggestions, and that the Assemblies will augment the use of the magazine as a helpful contact with non-Bahá'ís.

WESTERN STATES SUMMER SCHOOL

The Western States Summer School, held at Bosch Place, Geyersville, July 14th to 27th, 1935, was one of the best sessions ever held.

It was opened by the usual Unity Feast, under the "Big Tree," at noon, July 14th, attended by some 225 people. A true spirit of unity and devotion marked the opening of the School at the Feast, and continued throughout all the sessions. The attendance at the School meetings for the adults averaged 90. There were representatives present from Canada, England, Transylvania, Tahiti, China, Honolulu, Jamaica, and an American Indian.

Most of the people were housed in the buildings on the Bosch Place, while a goodly number camped on the grounds, and others secured lodgings in the city.

In the conduct of the school, a definite objective of the Committee has been to improve the presentation of subjects, and the development at the same time of Bahá'í Teachers. Thus during the courses there were 19 different Bahá'ís who took part in the lectures. Each one was required to prepare himself well in advance, and have the subject outlined and condensed, so as to take up not over 30 or 35 minutes at the most. Two years ago a College Professor we had give a few lectures, remarked to me, that he did not see why we secured the assistance of College Professors, as our presentations were better than they could hope to do.

All classes are conducted on the creative discussion plan. The speaker introduces the subject with his detailed presentation in not over 35 minutes; then a period of 10 to 15 minutes is allowed for questioning and discussion.

The third class of the day, was even more of a creative discussion meeting, dealing with the Fundamental Bahá'í Principles. In this class the leader used not over 20 minutes to present the subject, allowing 25 to 30 minutes for questioning and discussion. Outstanding interest was the course on the Influence of Islam and the Teachings of Muhammad, the first on Islam to be given in an American Bahá'í Summer School.

There were four round table discussion meetings, held in one of the beautiful Redwood Groves, which developed enthusiasm and clearer understanding among all present, of the important subjects under consideration.

Children's classes were held daily. One class was for those under 7 years of age, the other for those younger. All young people over 13 were permitted to attend the Adult Classes or the classes for those young people between 7 and 13. There were in attendance in all 53 young people, of which over 20 were non-Bahá'ís. Attached is detailed report of the Children's and Youth Program Committee, outlining the method of conduct, supervision of both study and play, and details of the courses of study.
Three public teaching meetings were held; one with the local Grange at Geyserville, which is usually attended by all the officers of the Grange, the members of the Chamber of Commerce, city dignitaries, etc.; the second, a general public meeting in the city of Geyserville; and the third, an afternoon public meeting at the Griffith Grove, near Santa Rosa, in the beautiful outdoor amphitheatre there. These meetings were all very well attended, and great interest aroused in the Faith.

The citizens of Geyserville are becoming more kindly to the Baha'i's all the time. Originally they were quite opposed to us; because of our Faith, Geyserville being an orthodox city. They even went so far as to warn certain of their people to beware of the Baha'i's and their "pernicious teachings." This was four or five years ago. It is of interest to note in passing, that the two particular Geyserville's, warned to be careful of the Bahai's, have both become Baha'i's. The newspaper giving full page announcement of the Summer School and an announcement by the Chamber of Commerce extending a hearty welcome to the Summer School, shows the spirit of fellowship that has been developed. This has been possible only through strict adherence to Bahai spirit of fellowship that has been developed.

They had been reached. We now know of 30 organized youth groups and 49 other localities with Baha'i youth, fairly evenly distributed throughout the country. In November the N. S. A. approved a recommendation that the Committee divide the national territory into three regions of responsibility, each with a sub-secretary. The purposes were to stimulate local activity, keep the Committee in close touch with local work and thought, foster inter-Assembly youth conferences, arrange for the interchange of youth teachers, cooperate with Summer School committees, and uphold the standard of Baha'i conduct. The extension of this method is whole-heartedly recommended for next year.

In response to the impetus gained by the Cause since the completion of the dome ornamentation and the Guardian's declaration of "a new hour," Baha'i youth have moved into a vigorous teaching phase. Regional conferences have been held with marked success; Evanston, Winnemak and Chicago now meet jointly once a month, and it has been found in northern and southern California and in New York that inter-group cooperation bears exceptional fruit. This trend has culminated in an interna-niveness of the Bahá’í way of living, and is confident that a new motion has been released among Bahá’í youth by the Gleanings, a volume which the Guardian hopes "will enable them to gain a fuller consciousness of their functions and responsibilities, and to arise and set the example before the rest of the believers, not only in the field of teaching, but in all the other fields of Bahá’í activity as well." PUBLICITY

"What is most essential at present is to give the Movement the widest publicity possible, so as to well prepare the ground for future teaching expansion. Nothing short of your perseverance and of the remarkable crusading spirit animating you, and so many of our American brothers and sisters, can insure the eventual and complete attainment of this object."—Shoghi Effendi.

Although this quotation was written to Agnes Alexander in Japan this past year it seems to be a vital note which should be sounded in every center in the United States and Canada.

During the year the National Publicity Committee has sent out three releases. The first release was sent last August, at the time of the completion of the clerestory section of the dome of the Bahá’í House of Worship, to the newspapers in the cities where there are Bahá’í Communities. This release was accompanied by two pictures of the completed dome. Before the publications of "The Bahá’í World," Volume V, a second release was sent out as a basis for publicity to be used by each Community. In January, examples of publicity that the newspapers have used this past year and a standard of newspaper copy were mailed to the Assemblies.

The Publicity File, started last year, has been continued and many additions made. In several instances this file has supplied advance publicity information about traveling teachers in the Cause.

The annual Scrap Book shows a growth in the following ways: The papers have accepted more publicity bearing directly upon the Cause. The variety of material used shows initiative on the part of the Communities. The amount of space obtained shows a better attitude on the part of the press, brought about we feel sure by the persistent efforts of the local publicity Chairmen. It should be noted also that the publicity submitted has contained material which was considered real news by the editors and therefore acceptable.

The radio has been used and radio broadcasts of varying length have been given all over the country. In some cities the Sunday meetings were announced over local stations. Small magazines have carried articles and pictures of the Bahá’í House of Worship and the rotogravure sections of the Sunday papers have printed pictures of the clerestory section of the dome.

The committee is grateful for the cooperation of the local publicity committees and the friends who have sent in their Publicity File questionnaires. The many letters which have been received have brought inspiration and encouragement throughout the year.

GREEN ACRE SUMMER SCHOOL

During the first week of the Green Acre Summer School, July 8-12, Prof. Glenn Shook and Mr. Louis Gregory each gave two lectures, and Dr. Stanford Cobb gave one lecture in the regular morning class period, from 11:00 to 12:30. The topics considered in their discussion were "Immortality," "Prayer" and "Prophecy."

During the second week of the session, Dr. Cobb gave a very helpful course in which he reviewed his own book, "Security for a Failing World," as well as "The Promise of All Ages," by Christophil, and then showed how these books can be used in teaching the Bahá’í Faith.

The third course was given by Prof. Shook on "Mysticism and the Bahá’í Teaching." Prof. Shook had prepared a very valuable outline to accompany this course, in which he used Ruhi Effendi’s "Mysticism and the Bahá’í Revelation" as the basic reading. Topics covered included the following: the conflict between mind and heart, the nature of mysticism, and the fundamental difference between mysticism and prophetic religion.

The leader who had been scheduled for the fourth course was unable to come to Green Acre and the morning meetings that week were given to prayer and meditation, with various friends as leaders.

During the fifth week, four different leaders took charge of the work. Mr. Emeric Sala led two discussions on the topics "A new Aspect of Religion" and "A Theocratic Democracy." The speakers and topics for the three remaining days were as follows:—Mrs. Rosemary Sala, "A Two-fold Consciousness"; Mr. Saffa Kinney, "Spirituality"; Miss Louise Wright, "The Reality of Man."

The course for the sixth week was led by Miss Genevieve Coy, and the topic for discussion was "Racial Likenesses and Differences: the Scientific Evidence and the Bahá’í Teaching." The purpose of this course was to provide Bahá’í teachers with scientific material with which to meet the arguments of non-Bahá’ís who maintain that the oneness of mankind is impossible because of racial differences.

The seventh course on "The Origin, Powers and Conditions of Man" was led by Mr. Alfred Lunt, and used sections of "Some Answered Questions" as the basic text. Mr. Lunt discussed very helpfully such topics as: the true place of man in the universe; the human spirit as a divine trust, and gateway of eternal life.

The final course of the summer school was given by Mr. Horace Holley, on the topic "The Most Great Peace." The purpose of this course was to concentrate thought upon the Bahá’í conception of and program of World Peace, in clear distinction to the conceptions and programs emanating from traditional religious and political sources." Mr. Holley began the course with a valuable historical summary of past efforts toward world peace, and concluded with a discussion of the "Most Great Peace of Bahá'u'lláh as regeneration of mankind, and as Transformation of Society."

The largest average attendance at the courses was during the last two weeks—44 and 43, respectively. The number of different people attending during these two weeks was 80 for the seventh course and 73 for the last course.

Three week-end conferences were held during the summer:—Teaching Conference, July 5-7; Amity Conference, August 17-18; Youth Conference, August 24-25.

One of the most valuable aspects of life at Green Acre is the informal discussion which goes on wherever the friends meet in small groups. Such discussions were frequent during the summer of 1935, and those who shared in them found them unusually inspiring. Interested non-Bahá’ís often joined in these small groups, and thus had an opportunity to learn more of the Bahá’í teachings. We were especially happy in having a number of such guests at the Inn, some of whom have already joined Bahá’í communities.

Green Acre was especially fortunate in having Ruhi Effendi as a visitor for ten days at the end of the summer. He was a valuable member of the last course of the season, and many of the students found in his two dynamic evening lectures the highest point of the summer’s work.

REVIEWING

The National Spiritual Assembly has defined the functions of the above committee as follows:

1. To determine whether the manuscript conforms to Bahá’í teaching.
2. To determine whether the manuscript conforms to adequate standards of literary style and taste.
3. To determine whether the manuscript meets a real need in the Cause which would justify its publication by the Publishing Committee under our present very limited financial resources.

The National Assembly has also decided that the notation that the work is approved by the Bahá’í Reviewing Committee of the N. S. A. is to be limited to such works as have not only been approved by this committee and confirmed by the National Assembly, but which are also published by the Publishing Committee.

In other words, a manuscript might be accurate as far as the Teachings are concerned, but badly written and expressed and therefore not recommended for publication by the Publishing Committee. The author might, however, sell it to a magazine or publishing house. In this case there would be no notation "Approved by the Reviewing Committee of the N. S. A.", but the author himself would have the confirmation of approval from the point of view of accuracy of the teachings from the National Assembly.

Again a manuscript might be accurate and adequate in form and style but not needed at the moment. The author, however, would be at perfect liberty to have this published through some other channel, without however the Bahá’í imprint.

The Reviewing Committee wishes to remind the friends that it cannot be expected to edit and revise manuscripts.

The Reviewing Committee does not review music, poetry or any other form of aesthetic expression. The obvious reason for this is that the Bahá’í Teachings are the perfect standard of spiritual reality but cannot be consulted to determine matters of purely aesthetic value.

The following manuscripts were approved:

RACIAL AMITY COLLECTION
—Mae Harvey Gift and Alice Simmons Cox.

THE ONENESS OF HUMANITY
—by Doris and Willard McKay (article).

THE SPLENDID AGE—by David Hofman (book).

TWO ARTICLES (for magazines)
—by Raphael PumpeIly.

TWENTY LESSONS ON Bahá’í ADMINISTRATION—Mary Collison and Marguerite FiroozI (Study Outline Committee).

BABIANSM and THE BAHA’I FAITH—Horace Holley—two short articles to replace the present ones in the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

BAHÁ’I ANSWERS—by Olivia Kel- sey (enlarged from last year’s version).

THE PATH TO GOD—by Dorothy Baker—or Free Literature pamphlet.

I WILL COME AGAIN—by Ella C. Quant (pamphlet).

EDUCATION FOR WORLD OR- DER—Horace Holley, (article for magazine Women).

"THE TEACHERS OF THE CAUSE"

Excerpts from Teaching Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá

"Everyone of the . . . souls must arise, blowing over all parts of America the Breath of Life, conferring upon the people a new spirit, baptising them with the Fire of the Love of God, the Water of Life, and the Breaths of the Holy Spirit, so that the second birth may become realized."

"One must close his eyes wholly to these thoughts, long for eternal life, the sublimity of the world of humanity, the celestial developments, the Holy Spirit, the promotion of the Word of God, the guidance of the inhabitants of the globe, the promulgation of Universal Peace and the proclamation of the Oneness of the world of humanity! This is the work!"

"The first condition is firmness in the Covenant of God."

"The second condition: Fellowship and love amongst the believers. The divine friends must be attracted to and enamored of each other and ever be ready and willing to sacrifice their own lives for each other."

"Then with a firm resolution, a pure heart, a rejoiced spirit, and an eloquent tongue, engage your time in the promulgation of the Divine principles."

"We must not look at our own ability and capacity; nay, rather must we behold the favors and bounties of God in these days, Who has made the drop to find the expression of the sea and the atom the importance of the sun."

"Rest ye assured in the confirmations of the Merciful and the assistance of the Most High."

"The cohorts of the Supreme Concourse are attacking with invincible power."

"The teachers of the Cause must be heavenly, lordly and radiant. They must be embodied spirit; personified intellect, and arise in service with the utmost firmness, steadfastness and self-sacrifice."

"They must completely divest themselves from the old garments and be invested with a new garment."

"They must be baptised with the Water of Life, the Fire of the Love of God and the Breaths of the Holy Spirit."

"They must concentrate their thoughts on the outpourings of the Kingdom of God. . . . Beg for the confirmations of the Holy Spirit."

"Whosoever arises in this day to diffuse the Divine Fragrances, the cohorts of the Kingdom of God shall confirm him and the bestowals and the favors of the Blessed Perfection shall encircle him."

"Ere long ye shall observe that each one of you like unto a brilliant and shining star will diffuse the light of guidance from that Horizon and that ye have become the cause of eternal life to the inhabitants of America."

THE GUARDIAN'S MESSAGE TO THE CONVENTION

"Convey (to) American believers abiding gratitude efforts unitedly exerted in teaching field. Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systematically extended. Appeal (to) assembled delegates ponder historic appeal voiced by 'Abdu'l-Bahá (in) Tablets (of the) Divine Plan. Urge earnest deliberation with incoming National Assembly (to) insure its complete fulfilment. First century (of) Bahá'í era drawing to a close. Humanity entering outer fringes most perilous stage its existence. Opportunities (of) present hour unimaginably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order."

(Signed) Shoghi.

Cablegram received May 1, 1936.

OPPORTUNITIES OF PRESENT HOUR

The Guardian's cablegram to the Convention, emphasizing as it does the supreme need of teaching on the one hand and the "most perilous stage" in the existence of humanity on the other hand, is surely intended to quicken the spirit of every American Bahá'í. A crisis confronts us in our Bahá'í life, as crisis confronts the life of the world.
The National Spiritual Assembly is employing every possible resource of consultation in order to arrive at a teaching plan which can be firmly based and "systematically extended." It is clear that fulfilment of the Master’s aim as set forth in His Teaching Tablets to America calls for an evolutionary plan, one which will grow by its own impetus, and also a plan involving the active cooperation of every believer. This task cannot be done by a few, but must be a general movement, the flowing of an irresistible stream of faith through the channels provided in the new World Order.

First of all let us as local communities and also as individual believers study those Tablets which have been termed "The Divine Plan." They can be found on pages 505-544 of "Baha’i Scriptures" and will in the near future be made more widely available in pamphlet form. Pending the development of the definite teaching plan for the coming year, which will be announced by July first, let us steep ourselves in ‘Abdu’l-Baha’s creative words and try to arise to the heights His heart has supplied—heights which tower over our personal limitations, as they tower above the customs and habits of a collapsing civilization.

It might be pointed out that the foundation upon which the Master's Tablets stand unshakeably is the Tablet revealed by Bahá’u’lláh to the "Rulers of America and the Presidents of the Republics therein"—that Tablet which discloses the destiny of the two continents of the West. "Assist with the hands of justice the broken-hearted, and crush the great oppressors with the scourges of the commands of your Lord, the Powerful, the Wise!"

Let us recall also the Guardian's letter announcing by July first, let us steep ourselves in the spirit in the efforts being made by the American government to call a great conference of American nations which will surely make a long step forward toward unity and away from the dissensions and dangers of Europe.

The inner and outer powers alike point the way. It is for us, conscious of the ultimate goal, to take the spiritual leadership in meeting the Guardian's stirring prayer, "Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of this) glorious century (i.e., 1944) embrace (the) light of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order."

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

THE UNFOLDMENT OF WORLD CIVILIZATION

The Guardian’s general letter of March 11 has been issued in pamphlet form under the above title, and a copy sent to every American believer. Another edition is now available bound in strong paper covers, for sale by the Publishing Committee at 15c per copy. In this communication Shoghi Effendi continues his "World Order" letters to include a powerful analysis of the failure of the old order and the victory of the new.

THE BAHÁ’I SUMMER SCHOOLS

Many and significant are the references in Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Baha and in letters of Shoghi Effendi to the importance of the Summer School which as an institution has gradually developed from the Green Acre Conferences founded by Sarah J. Farmer more than forty years ago. The golden thread of the Revelation winds throughout their entire history, from the very source of Miss Farmer’s inspiration, the Chicago World’s Fair, where Bahá’u’lláh was first mentioned to the American public.

Most interesting are these words written by the Guardian through his secretary in 1932: "Definite courses should be given along the different phases of the Bahá’í Faith and in a manner that will stimulate the students to proceed in their studies privately once they return home, for the period of a few days is not sufficient to learn everything. They have to be taught the habit of studying the Cause constantly, for the more we read the Words the more will the truth they contain be revealed to us."

Green Acre

The School sessions of Green Acre will this year be confined to the month of August. In addition to a session for Youth, the School will have two study courses a day, Monday to Friday, during the two middle weeks of August, and conference activities and other plans for the last week will be announced later. The National Spiritual Assembly will meet at Green Acre on August first and second.

First general session, Monday to Thursday, August 3-6. Study course for Bahá’í youth. Subject: The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh, conducted by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf.

Friday and Saturday, August 7 and 8. Youth Conference. Sunday, August 9, Youth Symposium.

Monday to Friday, August 10-14. The Bahá’í Life, conducted by Mrs. Dorothy Baker. Islam, conducted by Hishmat Alai.

Monday to Friday, August 17-21. Nature of the Manifestation, conducted by Mrs. Mamie L. Seto. World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, conducted by Mrs. Mary Collison.

A three-day intensive Teaching Conference, conducted by R. G. Collison and Bishop Brown, will be held August 27, 28, 29.

The Executive Committee announces that Green Acre Inn will be open during July, as well as during the School sessions in August. Rates, including meals: For Youth Session a special rate is offered young people between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five years of $9.00 to $12.50 per week, room and board. Regular rate at the Inn $12.50 to $22.50, room and board. Make reservations through Mrs. Leslie Russell, Manager, Green Acre Inn, Eliot, Maine, two weeks in advance if possible. Those attending the Youth Session should make reservation not later than July 25.

Geyersville

The following general program has been prepared, and more details will be made available later.

Every other day during this two-week period there will be a "Bahá’í Teacher Training Course" conducted on the basis of round table discussion.

Louhelen Ranch

First general session, June 28-July 5. Registration, June 27.

Second general session, August 2-9. Registration, August 1.

BAHA'I WORLD AS A TEACHING MEDIUM

The Baha'i World, Volume V, offers a unique opportunity to intensify local Assembly teaching work, for its comprehensive record of the growth of the Baha'i Faith throughout the world together with its profusion of photographs commands the immediate interest of whomever it reaches. Assemblies should see that every library in their communities is supplied with a circulating copy.

A recent analysis of the calls for Baha'i books in libraries of two cities reveals that there have been approximately thirty-five per cent more calls for The Baha'i World than any other single Baha'i publication. One Assemble created much interest and increased circulation of Baha'i books by arranging with the Librarian for a week's exhibition of all Baha'i books in the library catalogue, featuring especially The Baha'i World. Volume V, by means of attractive placards.

Copies of The Baha'i World should be placed in reading rooms, metaphysical studios, philosophic libraries, Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. libraries, etc. Also because of its importance as reference material it should be placed in the libraries of large newspapers and radio stations, universities, colleges, art schools, mechanics institutes, etc. Assemblies could well purchase a number of copies to send to liberal educators, social scientists, peace and welfare workers, as the articles concerning the Faith as well as the record of growth and achievement in The Baha'i World cannot do other than impress these leaders with the importance of the Cause and create a wider and deeper understanding of the Teachings and the World Order enshrined therein.

Teaching Committee.

ANNUAL REPORT

National Spiritual Assembly, 1935-1936

Delegates of the Twenty-Eighth Annual Convention.

Dear Baha'i friends:

The year that has come to a close, while marked by vigorous and varied activity, has been a period of spiritual incubation, of a turning inward to the life of the soul, such as has not occurred, perhaps, since the American Baha'is entered the valley of desolation at the loss of our Master, our inspiration, our guide, 'Abdu'l-Baha.

Two conditions may be noted as chiefly responsible for this concentration of effort upon the establishment of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital inner life —the Guardian's gift of "Gleanings from the Writings of Baha'u'llah", that inexhaustible draft of the Divine Elixir, and the increased perturbations of a more conscious and vital life.

What the Guardian, with clear and unimpeached view, could then so deeply discern, the nations themselves, for all the veils of spiritual darkness interfering with and distorting their vision, now begin to appreciate. It is the note of conscious desperation sounding in society which this year has surrounded us with an altered environment, one far more responsive to the ministration of the Divine Physician, yet one which likewise makes supreme challenge to the community of Baha'is.

What wonder then that Shoghi Effendi has made teaching the very essence of our individual and collective Bahá’í life; what wonder that he has made the translation of Bahá’u’lláh’s Tablets so important a part of his myriad services; what wonder that the believers themselves, without relaxing their effort in the performance of definite tasks, have felt intensely the need for renewing and confirming their relationship to the Manifestation of God upon which all capacity and all effort depends!

Therefore, as we summarize the history of this Bahá’í year terminated by the Twenty-Eighth Annual Convention, let us not fail to bear in mind the fact that not by outward progress and achievement alone, but also by the establishment of purer motives, deeper humility and new powers of understanding, does the Bahá’í community fulfil its privilege as the “nucleus and pattern” of the world order of Bahá’u’lláh.

"Termination of First Stage of Formative Period of Our Faith"

Examining the year as a whole, the following events and trends seem to possess most decisive importance.

First, the publication of “Gleanings From the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh”; second, the completion of the external decoration of the clerestory section of the dome unit; third, the formation of ten new Spiritual Assemblies, which took place near the end of last year but could not be recognized and reported to the friends until after the 1935 Convention; fourth, the intensification of teaching activities and the increased clarity and power with which the believers have promulgated the Message; fifth, the visit paid us by Ruhi Effendi Afmán; and sixth, the National Meeting at the Bahá’í House of Worship on October 26 and 27 which commemorated the completion of another stage in Temple construction and inaugurated the beginning of general conferences between the National Spiritual Assembly and the representatives of local Assemblies.

On August 3, in response to a cablegram announcing the completion of the clerestory section, the Guardian used these significant words: “Gratefully rejoice closing glorious chapter marking termination first stage of Formative Period of our Faith. Appeal entire community henceforth concentrate its attention (and) resources (upon) activities (in the) teaching field, ensuring thereby (the) means essential for completion remaining units. Praying continually success.”

Thus were we made conscious of the operation of the mysterious law of cycles, under which each successive period is given its lesson to learn, its task to perform, creating thereby, like the succession of classes in a school, an enlargement of capacity for the harder tasks and the more important lessons to come. The opportunity offered does not return; only to the degree that we have been faithful in acquiring the qualities characteristic of the prior period, when the administrative structure was developed and the thoughts and actions concentrated upon Temple construction, can we rise to the full height of spiritual development and service vouchsafed to us in this era of teaching. The body of the Cause in America has been created. It is for us now to pray and strive that this body be filled with the light of true faith.

The character of the present era was in fact disclosed clearly to us in the cablegram sent to the National Spiritual Assembly for the conference at the Temple in October: “The forces which progressive revelation of this mighty symbol of our Faith is fast releasing in (the) heart of a sorely tried continent no one of this generation can correctly appraise. The new hour has struck in (the) history of our beloved Cause, calling for nation-wide, systematic, sustained effort in teaching field, enabling thereby these forces to be directed into such channels as shall redound to the glory of our Faith and (the) honor of its institutions.”

Such words are as the turning of a fresh page. May we inscribe upon it the record of inner and outer achievement brought into the realm of possibility and therefore responsibility by the irresistible onward march of God’s Cause!

The ten new communities of believers who have established Spiritual Assemblies, adding their force to the development of the new world order, have surely received the prayers and good wishes of the friends as they assume their place in the Cause and take up the responsibilities which rest upon all who enter the realm of sacrifice and unity. In the letter of greeting sent them by the National Spiritual Assembly last May, they were reminded of these words written by Shoghi Effendi in 1923: “Though your number . . . be small and limited, yet by virtue of that Celestial Power bequeathed to every one of you by our departed Master, you are assured that ere long your small company shall expand and wield such power and influence as no earthly power can ever hope for or attain. Who can doubt that He is ever watching from His Station on high over His scattered fold and is guiding and strengthening His faithful lovers who toil and labor for the fulfillment of His word and the realization of His purpose for mankind?”

For a summary of the teaching activities animating the friends this year and marking their first early response to the Guardian’s appeal, we can await with deep interest the report of the Teaching Committee and its comment upon the progress of this all-important aspect of our Bahá’í life. Only one remark need be made here: that the root of all spiritual teaching lies hidden in the soil of the quickened soul, nourished by study and devotion voluntarily attained by the individual himself, and that the success of any general teaching plan depends entirely upon the extent to which we ourselves, as individual believers, have made intense prior effort to become firmly rooted in the spiritual Kingdom. Bahá’í teaching is the fruit of faith and the measure of unity. The Cause is perfect and the world of humanity is starved for lack of the bread of understanding and the wine of love. Therefore may we not for one moment regard our existence in the Cause as a kind of static membership which, once attained, we hold passively for life, but rather as a dynamic opportunity that must be fulfilled by continuous advance from stage to stage without limit and without end.

As we were told in “The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh”: “That the Cause associated with the name of Bahá’u’lláh feeds itself upon those hidden springs of celestial strength which no force of human personality, whatever its glamour, can replace; that its reliance is solely upon that mystic Source with which no worldly advantage, be it wealth, fame or learning, can compare; that it propagates itself by ways mysterious and utterly at variance with the standards accepted by the generality of mankind, will...become increasingly apparent as it forges ahead towards fresh conquests in its struggle for the spiritual regeneration of mankind." On the other hand, this truth does not exclude unified effort nor well-conceived general plans; it does not confine teaching to the realm of personal mysticism; rather does it reveal the necessity of imbuing our plans, whatever they are from year to year, with spiritual reality and not relying upon formal and collective measures alone.

It was most fortunate and opportune that the American visit of Ruhi Efendii Affendi at a time when we were beginning to realize that the Guardian's words on teaching involved our rise to a higher level and not merely a duplication of former attitudes and methods. While that visit, unhappily, could not extend west of Chicago, nevertheless for many communities it brought inspiration and active, fruitful assistance. His knowledge, his passionate desire to promote the teachings, his heroic endurance in carrying out the continuous schedule of meetings—all this contributed greatly to the advancement made by the Cause in America this year. An invitation was urgently extended by the National Assembly to return in the summer of 1936, but his duties at Haifa made it impossible for him to accept.

The conference held in Temple Foundation Hall last October, which gave to so many believers an opportunity to consult on the important subjects provided by the agenda, will, it is hoped, be followed in the future by similar general Bahá'í conferences held not only in Foundation Hall but also in other parts of the country. The recommendation has been recorded in the Minutes of the National Assembly for the consideration of the incoming Assembly, that it prepare a schedule of its meetings throughout the year in advance, which schedule is to provide if possible for similar conferences with the friends on the Pacific Coast, on the Atlantic Coast, and perhaps also for those in the South. Included in the recommendation is the thought that these regional conferences should contain one or more large public meetings, like the Bahá'í Congress held at each Annual Convention, so that the consultation of the friends and the collective responsibility for teaching may be more closely linked together by the National Spiritual Assembly.

It is interesting to note that this general plan revives and extends a policy put forward by the Assembly some ten years ago, when effort was made to hold a public meeting at the conclusion of each Assembly meeting—an effort which the pressure of work compelled the Assembly to forego after a few months. We trust that the time has now come when the idea can be developed with added energy and made a distinct aspect of Bahá'í activity.

Letters from the Guardian

In Bahá'í News for June, 1935 the Guardian's cabled message to the last Convention (received after the Convention adjourned) was reported to all believers. We note again the strong emphasis laid upon teaching: "Appeal assembled delegates and incoming National Assembly earnestly deliberate measures required (to) stimulate all local communities (and) groups (to) lend immediate, unprecedented impetus (to) teaching activities throughout United States (and) Canada. Sustained concentration (on) this paramount issue can alone reveal potentialities (of) beloved Temple and enable superb self-sacrifice associated with it (to) yield its fairest fruit."

The following issue published excerpts from a letter dated April 28 and a letter dated June 15, 1935, on the following subjects: Title of the Anniversary observed on November 26, henceforth to be known as "The Day of the Covenant"; translation of the Symbol of the Greatest Name either as "O Glory of Glories" or as "O Glory of the All-Glorious"; the "vital importance and necessity of the voting right—a sacred responsibility of which no adult recognized believer should be deprived, unless he is associated with a community that has not as yet been in a position to establish a local Assembly. . . . This distinguishing right . . . however, does not carry with it nor does it imply an obligation to cast his vote, if he feels that the circumstances under which he lives do not justify or allow him to exercise that right intelligently and with understanding"; an instruction on chanting in the Temple; on membership in non-Bahá'í religious bodies; and on the paramount importance of teaching. Another letter published in July referred to the slight alleviation of conditions in Iran (Persia), due in part to the wholehearted obedience of the believers to the orders of the government.

The cablegram of August 3 on the subject of the completion of the clerestory section of the Temple has already been quoted. During this year the Assembly has received from the Guardian many title deeds to pieces of land acquired either by purchase or by gift from their Bahá'í owners, which land is now held by the Palestine Branch of the American N. S. A.

In October Bahá'í News appeared excerpts from the Guardian's letters dated June 15, July 29 and August 11 which conveyed instruction on the importance of the National Fund, the reason why believers should not be identified with non-Baha'i religious bodies, the laws of the Agdás, encouragement to serve in both the administrative and teaching fields of Bahá'í activity.

His cabled message to the October conference has already been quoted, the full text appearing in the December issue of Bahá'í News. With it were published excerpts from a letter dated October 2, 1935. These passages referred to the book entitled "Modern Mystics" by Sir Francis Younghusband; approved the suggestion that in Bahá'í News be published from time to time such letters of the Guardian to individual believers as are referred to him for approval by the N. S. A.; stated that no importance should be attached to the stories told about 'Abdu'l-Bahá or to those attributed to Him by the friends; and in the postscript written by Shoghi Effendi the revitalizing of the teaching work was strongly emphasized.

On November 24, in a letter to the National Treasurer, the Guardian assured the contributors to the Mount Carmel Fund of his "abiding and lively appreciation of their spontaneous and self-sacrificing assistance and efforts for the protection and promotion of the international interests of the Faith at its world center." The first part of the letter stressed the great privilege the American Bahá'í have had in taking a preponderating share in "securing for the Cause assets that are most valuable, nay, quite indispensable, to the future development and present consolidation of its manifold institutions" at Haifa. This communication was reported to the friends in Bahá'í News of March, 1936.

In the same number appeared that moving explanation of the ordinance of fasting which came to the N. S. A. in a letter dated January 10, 1936, and the request that the friends be encouraged to contribute articles to the Sonne der Wahrheit, the magazine of the N. S. A. of Germany and Austria, in a letter dated January 8. The postscript of the communication dated January 10 should, in part at least, be quoted once more because of its penetrating power: "This new stage in the gradual unfoldment of the Formative Period of our Faith into which we have just entered—the phase of concentrated teaching activity—synchronizes with a period of deepening gloom, of universal impotence, of ever-increasing destitution and of widespread disillusionment in the fortunes of a declining age. This is truly providential and its significance and the opportunities it offers us should be fully apprehended and utilized." One portion of that same letter answered a question submitted to Shoghi Effendi concerning the form of the Bahá’í funeral service.

After sending to Haifa the balance of the fund required to purchase the Dumit property, the Treasurer received a letter dated January 7, 1936, from which this general reference is quoted: "The self-sacrifice which the American believers have so whole-heartedly consented to undergo in this connection are truly stupendous, and bear striking testimony to their readiness to support, at any time and in the very midst of the financial exigencies of the Cause in America, the international institutions of the Faith, and particularly the international Fund. May Bahá’u’lláh richly reward you all, both in this world and in the next."

Other communications have made comments on and given approval to certain statements submitted to the Guardian by the N. S. A., and these words have been published as part of those statements, for example, on "Bahá’ís and War." "The Residential Qualification of Voting Membership in the Bahá’í Religious Organizations." The following letters have been received during the interval between the meeting of the N. S. A. in March and its meeting on April 29, too late for publication in the April, Pre-Convention Number, of BAHÁ’I News.

On March 4, the Guardian, through his secretary, wrote the Treasurer: "Will you also kindly convey to the N. S. A. his genuine appreciation of their monthly contributions to the International Fund in Haifa. In the days when the expenses of the Cause in America are getting increasingly larger, it is truly splendid to witness the continued and unfailing support which the American believers are extending to that Fund."

On March 17, in a letter to the National Assembly: "The Guardian is sending you under separate cover one of the finest photographs of 'Abdu'l-Bahá with the request that you instruct the Publishing Committee to make reproductions of it, and send him twenty copies as soon as they can. He wishes also to have the reproductions of this photograph published in the next issue of the Biennial. This will be the only single picture of the Master that will appear in this volume (VI).

The Guardian also wishes you to present the original of this photograph for presentation to the National Archives, and also to show it to the friends and delegates at the next National Convention."

Finally, all American Bahá’ís have received another general communication from Shoghi Effendi of the character of his "World Order" letters. Action was taken at once to have it published in pamphlet form, that copies might be sent to all communities, groups and isolated believers. At the date of this writing it cannot be stated definitely when the printed copies will be available, but the approximate time will doubtless be within the first week in May. A proof has been brought to the Convention. Special reference will be made to this letter at the conclusion of the present Report.

Statements, Procedures and Rulings Adopted by the National Assembly

Before dealing with this subject in detail, let us attempt to approach it from an aspect that appears to be a technical and uninteresting aspect of the Cause in a spirit of sympathetic understanding.

Upon Bahá’ís rest a vital problem and responsibility to make religion a civilization rather than a church, a creed or a form of personal mysticism. The new quality breathed into the world has been to attain justice, Bahá’u’lláh provided laws and principles, a continuing Interpreter, and institutions to administer the affairs of His Cause. In order to apply the known and recognized principles to actual situations arising in all communities, the National Assembly from time to time prepares a statement, a procedure or a ruling. Each of these is but a means to an end, a method of dealing with specific issues in order to prevent contention and to promote justice. Exactly as the sciences and arts have their applications based upon time-tested methods; exactly as even the smallest civil community has its ordinances and regulations, so the Bahá’í body must function in accordance with definite and published procedures to which all believers are expected to conform. When a type of problem arises over and over again in the local communities, an established procedure simply means that experience has indicated a uniform way of meeting it, with the result that the powers of the friends can concentrate upon finding the right solution in each case and not be dissipated in effort to create, again and again, a temporary framework of method conforming to the Bahá’í administrative order and the Bahá’í ideal of justice. An exemplar, ever-changing manner of dealing with issues not only tends to take the time and strength of a Spiritual Assembly but can even overshadow the original issue with differences of opinion on how the issue should best be handled. The only way in which we can be free to concern ourselves with activities of the highest importance is to meet secondary matters with reference to some definite procedure or ruling.

Therefore, the more attention the friends give to each procedure and ruling at the time it is published, the more our collective powers and resources can be employed for the highest ends. Fundamental to all Bahá’í activity, individual or general, is the unity of the believers; and this unity is not merely one of agreement as to the Source of Reality but also as to the art and science of our daily intercourse and association. Only with the delicate net woven both of love and knowledge can the bird of Justice be captured and brought to this needy earth.

The general statements prepared by the National Assembly have been on the following subjects: Bahá’ís and War, Membership in Non-Bahá’í Religious Organizations. The procedures have been: The Conduct of a Local Assembly Voluntary, The Residences in a Bahá’í Community, Differences Between Individual Believers, On Gossip and Backbiting, The Conduct of the Annual Bahá’í Convention, with which might be associated the statement prepared by the Los Angeles Assembly, "Of Essential Importance Is Your Unity and Agreement."

Among the rulings may be cited: that groups intending to elect a Spiritual Assembly should report to the N. S. A. by February 1, to allow time for the Teaching Committee to render assistance and determine whether the group is prepared for that important step; the rescinding of the ruling made last year, that the notation "Approved by the Reviewing Committee" is not to appear in works published through channels outside the Cause; that believers are not to be removed from the voting list for non-attendance, but the local Assembly should endeavor to stimulate their interest; that annual memorial meetings by a Bahá’í community for an individual believer are not approved; that the Temple property, including the studio and beach, is to be devoted exclusively to devotional, administrative and teaching activities, but this policy does not refer to any activities to be ultimately carried on in the future in the five accessory buildings of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár; that when a book is financed by a Bahá’í author with the idea that the Publishing Committee is to distribute the book, the author is to turn the cost over to the Publishing Committee, so that the Committee itself can supervise the printing; that all radio broadcasts of a directly Bahá’í character are to be approved by the local Assembly; young people, between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one, whether or not children of Bahá’ís, may record with their local Assembly their intention of becoming members of the community on reaching the voting age and thereby receive the privilege of attending Nineteen Day Feasts and other Bahá’í meetings but without the privilege of voting. They may read selections in the spiritual program but not serve as chairmen of the spiritual program. If matters affecting Bahá’í youth are under discussion they may report their views on the subject. They may be appointed as members of local Youth Committees by the Spiritual Assembly. Children of Bahá’í parents do not receive this privilege automatically but must make the same declaration of intention as other young people. Bahá’í parents are not to coerce their children to make this declaration, but are expected to point out to their children the importance of voluntarily associating themselves with the Bahá’í Faith. When letters are received from members of a Bahá’í community making suggestions and raising questions about local conditions, they are to be directed to go to their local Assembly and not to apply to the N. S. A. unless dissatisfied with the action of the local Assembly; that the transfer of believers involved in unfinished matters proceeding under the local Assembly is to be postponed pending a report of the circumstances to the National Assembly and its approval of the transfer; that each local Assembly hereafter send the National Assembly a copy of all important notices covering policies, rules or regulations as well as important announcements having to do with elections and organization under Bahá’í administration, which the local Assembly may issue to the Bahá’í community from time to time; that local groups are requested to elect a Correspondent once a year, and preferably on April 21, the function of the Correspondent being to receive copies of Bahá’í News for local distribution, and to serve as link between the group and the N. S. A., Teaching Committee, Publishing Committee, etc. The two rulings published in Bahá’í News of June, 1935, were adopted by the National Assembly in office last year.

It is clear that the increasing number of procedures and rulings makes it impossible for individual believers to remember them all, but many of the friends have begun to develop their own Bahá’í records and files for reference, and such a function might well be assigned by local Assemblies to an officer or special committee each year.

The Decisive Events of the Year

Only time can determine the relative importance of matters affecting the Cause, but the following specific happenings all have more than merely temporary value.

1. The publication of "Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh."

2. The consolidation of Bahá’í control of land surrounding the Shrines on Mount Carmel.

3. The completion of the entire dome unit of the House of Worship.

4. The transfer to Trustees under an Indenture of the house at Malden, Mass., given to the Guardian under the Will and Testament of the late Maria Wilson—the house at which the Master rested for some time during His American visit.

5. The donation to the Cause by Mr. and Mrs. John Bosch of the property at Geysserville, Calif. for use as a Bahá’í Summer School. As this property is also held under an Indenture of Trust, it makes five separate legal bodies to be administered in addition to the function of the National Spiritual Assembly itself: the Temple Trustees, Temple Trustees, Green Acre Trustees, Wilhelm Trustees, Trustees for the Wilson property at Malden, and Trustees under the Indenture effected by Mr. and Mrs. Bosch.

6. The second visit made to America by Ruhi Effendi Afnán.

7. The symbol of the Greatest Name has been legally protected for the Cause by trade mark registration both in the United States and Canada. The word "Bahá’í" was similarly protected in the United States some years ago, and Canadian protection of it has likewise been obtained.

8. The Encyclopedia Brittanica has removed the article on "Babism" which for years has conveyed a limited and in many ways inaccurate impression of the Cause and replaced it with a new article approved by the Reviewing Committee, and furthermore has provided space for a brief article under the heading "Bahá’í." These changes will appear in the next printing of the present edition, and we have the assurance that in the next edition the subject of the Bahá’í Faith will be more adequately treated than was possible in the restricted space available in the existing edition. To Miss Edna True we are indebted for the interest shown by the Editor in arranging for the two new articles.

9. The increased number of American believers serving the Cause in foreign lands, and the notable services they have been privileged to render. Early in the Bahá’í year, Mrs. True and Mrs. Hoagg returned from Europe and Mr. R. A. Mathews and Mrs. Loulie Mathews from their journey through South America. The American believers now teaching abroad are: Miss Martha L. Root, Miss Lenora Holzapple, Miss Agnes Alexander, Miss Marion Jack, Mrs. Louise Gregory, Mrs. Clara Sharp, Miss Adelaide Sharp, Miss Julia Goldman, Mr. Charles Bishop and Mrs. Helen Bishop, Mrs. Anna Kunz, Miss Bertha Matthesien, Miss Orecella Relford, Mrs. Ruhangis Bolles, Miss Jean Bolles and Mr. Randolph Bolles, Jr., Mrs. May Maxwell, Miss Mary Maxwell, Mrs. Inez Greven, Mrs. India Haggerty, Miss Isabella Stelts, Mrs. Isabelle Stebbins Dodge, Mr. Dudley Blakely, Mrs. Elsa Russell Blakely, Mrs. Lorol Schopflocker, Mme. Gita Orlova. Thus the American Bahá’í community, through such devoted adherents, continues to perform its high mission in the Bahá’í world.

Early in the Bahá’í year, it was the privilege of the N. S. A. to meet the boat on which Mr. and Mrs. Howard Carpenter returned from their visit to Persia.

10. The more vigorous and comprehensive plans carried out by Bahá’í youth, under which groups throughout America and in many other countries held the first of a series of regional conferences, extended their services into the field of public teaching, and, by the National Youth Committee, inaugurated a new and improved Youth bulletin.
11. The publication of The Bahá'í World, Vol. V, an immense undertaking, both with respect to the gathering of its contents and the cost involved in its printing, with common urate value as an impressive evidence of the international scope of the Bahá'í community.

12. The deepening in our collective realization of the importance of the three Summer Schools as instruments destined to exalt the standards of our public teaching in all local communities, and concentrate both facilities and experience for the establishment of future Bahá'í Universities.

13. The publication of the first three new teaching pamphlets in the series planned by the Free Literature Committee, which when completed will provide brief "In A Nutshell" volumes instead of the one volume issued originally in 1928. Under the new plan, the letters are to be divided into two series one with the present title of "Bahá'í Administration"; the other with the title "The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh" and containing those letters on that subject received in more recent years. This general idea, it may be remarked, was approved by the Guardian in 1934, but the plan has been deferred until the supply of the books on hand was exhausted. The next edition of "Bahá'í Administration" will contain several early letters reported by this year by the Archives Committee. The "World Order" volume will contain the two "World Order" letters, "The Goal of a New World Order," "The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh," "America and the Most Great Peace," "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh," and the new letter already mentioned, on "The Unfoldment of World Civilization." This latter book, as all believers recognize, traces not merely for the present Bahá'í community but also for humanity itself the golden thread of Divine destiny woven through the fabric of human life in this crucial period.

16. The inclusion of an illustrated article on the Temple and the Teachings in the "American Guide" series of volumes under preparation by writers in a Federal Department, which will be duplicated in the volumes covering the State of Illinois.

17. The first effort to compile information concerning each individual believer in the United States and Canada by means of the "Historical Record" cards distributed a few months after the last Convention. This task is by no means fully completed at the present time. Some of the largest local communities, where the work is naturally more detailed and extensive than in the smaller communities, have not yet returned their cards. It is hoped that the cards still unreturned can be returned within the next few months. A word of explanation about the questions listed on the card: the 1935 Convention expressed the thought that it would be interesting to know the different racial backgrounds entering into the American Bahá'í community, and this view was embodied in the questions, together with further questions bringing out the various national and religious origins among the friends.

18. The possibility that Spiritual Assemblies will be established this year in the new cities of Dayton, Ohio, Springfield Mass., and Rockford, Ill. Other events, doubtless equally important, will be announced in the annual Committee reports published in the Pre-Convention issue of Bahá'í News.

BAHÁ'Í NEWS, it should be remarked, has been the vehicle for so many general statements and reports that there has not been space for publishing a number of interesting news items this year. The thought might be advanced that possibly in future a distinction can be made between material intended primarily for local Spiritual Assemblies and material directed to all Bahá'ís. The material intended for the Assemblies could be issued in the form of a monthly mimeographed bulletin, while the more general information could have priority in Bahá'í News. Such a method would tend to develop Bahá'í News along the lines indicated in the letter written by the Guardian on April 10, 1925.

General Observations

A few general observations may be permitted, in order to learn as much as possible from our collective experience during the time since the last Convention.

First of all, let us note that the Guardian's communications have in several instances been directed to the individual believer, emphasizing values in the Bahá'í life which only voluntary effort can create. For example, his appeal for concentrated effort on teaching goes to the very heart of individual faith and devotion, and cannot be fulfilled by administrative effort alone. His call for an abandonment of membership in non-Bahá'í religious bodies is another appeal to the individual believer's responsibility. His letter on prayer and fasting, above all, strikes the note of personal spirituality which must distinguish our own heart's relationship to the Divine.

Without this personal responsibility and continuous individual effort to advance in spiritual consciousness administrative action would be fruitless and unavailing, a mere exercise of defined authority and power without result. Only in a common consecration to Bahá'u'lláh can the inner as well as outer ties between communities and Assemblies become fulfilled in the unity for which the Manifestation suffered all the days of His life on earth.

Regarding the National Fund, we have the Guardian's expressed view that the demands upon it can be fully met, but that an administration of it must be directed to all Bahá'ís. He does not advocate a retreat into smaller efforts and diminishing powers, but raises the golden banner heralding a determined and unflagging advance along the entire line. He has declared that there can be no surplus estimate of the Bahá'í community, and every active believer, will receive from on high when devotion becomes motion of the spirit to share a God-given truth.

How can we increase our own effectiveness and our ability to achieve the purpose of the blessed Cause? One way is to enlarge our conception and purify our view of the universal meaning of Bahá'í consultation, the principle underlying all our activities and sustaining our collective life. Consultation has been ordained not to enable any individual or group to bring pressure to bear upon others for the sake of attaining some preconceived aim. Consultation surely means that personal and group suggestions are advanced for the sake of contributing to the general community or Assembly discussion, and in a spirit of openmindedness and co-operation. It means that the Guardian's expressed view and the principles underlying our Bahá'í life will continue their mutual contact.
and maintain effort to solve it until the problem has actually been removed. It is the breaking of relations and the refusal of consultation that makes problems unsolvable by the world outside the Cause. Finally, the important point should be made that individual believers must cherish supremely their spiritual relationship with their Bahá'í community as a whole, and not unconsciously seek to develop stronger affiliation with those who happen to be personally congenial. All such intimate groups within the community tend to become partisan or otherwise less than universal, thereby cutting their members off from the life of the community as a whole. In the same way, those who remain absent from Nineteen Day meetings and other general Bahá'í gatherings lose the flow of life through the Bahá'í body, and after a time must necessarily become unduly individualistic or reflect the influence of the non-Bahá'í environment. The creation of unity brings sacrifice and suffering to every believer without exception. We can pay this price with gratitude and cheerfulness rather than reluctance if we realize that every experience of unhappiness or confusion we encounter in the Cause represents nothing else than opportunity for further growth in the Kingdom. To withdraw from a situation because it challenges our ego is a turning away from the healing waters that well from the Source of life and love.

"The Unfoldment of World Civilization"

In conclusion, a few quotations from the Guardian's latest letter, addressed to all the friends. Its title, "The Unfoldment of World Civilization," suggests its marvelous scope as an analysis of the death of the old order and the birth of the new.

"The contrast between the accumulating evidences of steady consolidation which accompany the rise of the Administrative Order of the Faith of God, and the forces of disintegration which batter at the fabric of a travelling society, is as clear as it is arresting. Both within and without the Bahá'í world the signs and tokens which, in a mysterious manner, are heralding the birth of that World Order, the establishment of which must signalize the Golden Age of the Cause of God, are growing and multiplying day by day."

"This New World Order, whose promise is enshrined in the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, whose fundamental principles have been enunciated in the writings of the Center of His Covenant, involves no less than the complete unification of the entire human race. . . . No machinery falling short of the standard inculcated by the Bahá'í Revelation, and at variance with the sublime pattern ordained in His teachings, which the collective efforts of mankind may yet devise can ever hope to achieve anything above or beyond that 'Lesser Peace' to which the Author of our Faith has Himself alluded in His writings. . . . The Most Great Peace on the other hand, as conceived by Bahá'u'lláh—a peace that must inevitably follow as the practical consequence of the spiritualization of the world and the fusion of all its races, creeds, classes and nations—can rest on no other basis, and can be preserved through no other agency, except the divinely appointed ordinances that are implicit in the World Order that stands associated with His holy name."

"The Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, whose supreme mission is none other but the achievement of this organic and spiritual unity of the whole body of nations, should, if we be faithful to its implications, be regarded as signalizing through its advent the coming of age of the entire human race. It should be viewed not merely as yet another spiritual revival in the ever-changing fortunes of mankind, not only as a further stage in a chain of progressive Revelations, nor even as the culmination of one of a series of recurrent prophetic cycles, but rather as marking the last and highest stage in the stupendous evolution of man's collective life on this planet. The emergence of a world community, the consciousness of world citizenship, the founding of a world civilization and culture—all of which must synchronize with the initial stages in the unfoldment of the Golden Age of the Bahá'í era—should, by their very nature, be regarded, as far as this planetary life is concerned, as the furthermost limits in the organization of human society, though man, as an individual, will, nay must indeed as a result of such a consummation, continue indefinitely to progress and develop."

"For the revelation of so great a favor a period of intense turmoil and widespread suffering would seem to be indispensable. Resplendent as has been the Age that has witnessed the inception of the Mission with which Bahá'u'lláh has been entrusted, the interval which must elapse ere that Age yields its choicest fruit must, it is becomingly increasingly apparent, be overshadowed by such moral and social gloom as can alone prepare an unrepentent humanity for the prize she is destined to inherit. . . . Deep as is the gloom that already encircles the world, the afflictive ordeals which that world is to suffer are still more prolonged, nor can their blackness be as yet imagined. We stand on the threshold of an age whose convulsions proclaim alike the death-pangs of the old order and the birth-pangs of the new."

Such is the tremendous vista revealed to us by the Guardian's power to open the door upon the movements of destiny! Nothing that is merely human nature can possibly sustain the shock of the collapse as the pillars of the false temple are thrown from their foundations by an Almighty power. Only the Cause of God can endure—the Cause that moves forward by the sincerity of its believers and their whole-souled unity in a Divine Faith.

Yours faithfully,

The National Spiritual Assembly,

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS

1935-1936

(Concluded)

RACE AMITY

Early in September of 1936 the National Amity Committee sent a questionnaire throughout the country asking that the following questions be answered:

First: Is race adjustment easy or difficult in your community?

Second: If unfavorable, is this reaction due to individuals or from the whole group?

Third: What is the general feeling of the community towards social relationship to alien races?

Fourth: What is the chief service rendered by your Local Amity Committee?

Fifth: Is your Amity Committee working in harmony with the Spiritual Assembly? Is it active and responsible?

Sixth: Will you inform the Na-
During eight days at Dayton fine contacts were made in teaching meetings, one of which was in the Unitarian Church. Nearly all meetings attracted both races. Five or six addresses were also made at Wilberforce University, the oldest Negro College in America. Special arrangements were made for Chapel, and with various professors to take over their classes. There was an enthusiastic reception and cordial invitation to return. The opposition of former years here seemed to melt away. Mrs. Ada M. Young, widow of Col. Charles Young, U. S. A., is the Bahá'í worker there.

At Cincinnati, four meetings were held, one at a hotel and another, at which an address of forty minutes was given to 600 Junior High School Students, in the largest public school, colored. Three hours were spent with a famous colored editor who was greatly attracted, Hon. Wendell Phillips Dabney from Chicago. All the Teaching and Unity meetings attracted earnest enquirers.

At Cleveland, some welfare workers were intensely active. They have put the Cause on the map, so to speak. They have a new meeting place and are full of the Divine Fire. In one of the days alone, five different meetings were addressed.

Glenville High School (majority students Jewish), Central High School, Cheerio Club (for the blind), Committee of Women's International League of Peace and Freedom, with their guests, a very fine group, and Night School at Central High School. This was indeed a very strenuous day. Other days included addresses at: Outhwaite School for Boys. Longwood School for Girls. Thomas Edison High School (two addresses). Address at Baha'i Center. Address at Y. M. C. A. Address to Social Workers at Y. M. C. A. Address to Mothers' Club at Settlement House.

Personal conferences with Friends, dinners, etc.

Here at South Bend, the campaign is in progress with a series of meetings at the Baha'i Center. Monday there was an address to the weekly meeting of the Clergymen of St. Joseph's County, the Baha'i lecturer being invited to take the place of the Mayor of South Bend, who had been expected, but was called away ten minutes before the meeting. This meeting of the clergy is inter-racial, inter-denominational and inter-religious. At least one of the members is a Jewish Rabbi. The clergy gave approval to the message given broadly, yet frankly. A venerable clergyman, 79 years old, who has attended some Baha'i meetings, was the means of obtaining this fine audience.

A call has just come from Urbana, Illinois, for a series of meetings, beginning April 19.

The Milwaukee Assembly held an All Nations Conference at 2405 Maryland Avenue. The N. A. C. P. as well as the Urban League and Y. W. C. A. assisted enthusiastically. Mr. R. Tarbell, Administrator of the Vocational School, gave a fine address on "Modern Times." His talk was followed by one Max Ruskin, City Attorney, on "Social Democracy."

A talk on "Social and Race Unity" by Mrs. C. Turney, who has served seven years daily at the Urban League, was especially interesting as she had a wealth of experience to draw from. In this successful meeting, an answer was received from all the denominational and inter-religious. At least one of the members is a Jewish Rabbi. The clergy gave approval to the message given broadly, yet frankly. A venerable clergyman, 79 years old, who has attended some Baha'i meetings, was the means of obtaining this fine audience.

TEACHING

"The new hour has struck in history of our beloved Cause, calling for nation-wide systematic, sustained effort in teaching field, enabling thereby these forces to be directed into such channels as shall redound to glory of our Faith and honor of its institutions."

—Shoghi Effendi

With this clarion call to higher services in the teaching field, the Guardian set in motion a new wave of concerted action by the American Baha’i Community. How miraculously the Will of God functions through the sincere servants, may be realized by surveying the development of community activity within the Faith, with the trends of conduct and the increasing problems of humanity without the Faith.

After the ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Baha, when the Faith was filled with great enthusiasm, but the form under which its dynamic principles were to function, undeveloped, the Guardian stressed the necessity of perfecting the Administrative Order, the Form through which the Holy Spirit might descend unsullied and unstained during the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.

The next phase of community activity was the call to unified action in completing the superstructure of the Temple, and ornamenting the entire Dome—that “flaming beacon of hope to a distracted world.”

Now with the Form of the Faith firmly established, with the symbol of its glory standing unique as a beacon to wandering humanity, we are called to arise as a unit in carrying to the human race, the healing and quickening power of the Holy Spirit descending into the world through the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh alone.

In the outer world the problems of society have increased, their institutions have not met the test, and crumbling before the onslaughts of the forces of individualism and separation, have left humanity wandering in the wilderness of speculation, selfish ambition, and practices and habits. corrupt and evil. During this time the Universal Institutions of the Faith have grown stronger and functioned more vigorously, a beacon of hope has been held aloft for the hopeless ones, and now with “healing in their wings” the American Baha’is are arising in their vigorous dissemination of the Cause of God.

The sacrifice, the devotion, the sustained service which brought success to our efforts in the administrative field, then in the construction of the Temple, must now be transferred and increased many fold, in the teaching of the Faith.

It is impossible in any report, still less in a short review to direct attention to the immediate acts of the Friends in responding to the Call of the Guardian. All that can be done is to summarize some of the trends of service developed throughout the country; and thus gain an understanding of the attitudes and spirit essential to successful conduct of the new Teaching Campaign.

Of primary importance, is a full realization of the receptive attitude of the public towards the Faith, its institutions and its program for World Order. Everyone—regardless of their position in life—now knows a new order is necessary—and they become enthusiastic in their support of a spiritual movement, that carries within it, the solvent of all life’s problems;—and preserves that solvent, not in passive meditation or affirmation, but in dynamic action through its administrative order.

Baha’i Teachers are all recognizing more than ever the depth of ‘Abdu’l-Baha’s explanation that subconsciously every individual knows of the descent of the Holy Spirit through a new Prophet—and their main task therefore is to direct the public’s attention to a spiritual activity they already subconsciously know has occurred. The task of teaching then takes on a phase of assisting the student in the translation of subjective knowledge and influence to objective life.

Likewise growing out of the greater interest of the public in the Faith, and the directness of the spiritual influence, is a trend of teaching most important; i.e., the imparting of a realization that there is responsibility in connection with becoming a Baha’i.

An individual is taught to understand, that his acceptance of Bahá’u’lláh, is the beginning of his spiritual growth, not the consummation thereof. Therefore, a life of development and expansion is before the individual, until under the benign influence of the holy spirit his soul is quickened into spirit.

The effect has been that those now entering the Faith quickly become active supporters and workers, rather than being interested in the philosophy of the Faith alone.

Throughout America, there is ample evidence that each Baha’i realizes as never before the individual responsibility of teaching the Faith. Never has there been such sustained, perseverant work on the part of everyone. Not only has the sacrificial service been continuous but better, it has been progressive, not ending until the student has become a Baha’i.

Individual service finds its greatest outlet in the Fireside Gatherings, where each Baha’i may invite his or her Friends to learn of the Cause of God. The study intimately its divine mysteries. Thus the field is enlarging beyond all present realization. Again the survey of the Teaching Committee indicates that more people have become Baha’is during the past year through the Fireside meeting, than through any other type of teaching. It is to be regretted that more Baha’is have not undertaken this method of aiding in the new teaching effort.

In a recent letter to the Chairman of the Teaching Committee the Guardian indicated “what is most needed now-a-days is a Baha’i pioneer.” It is interesting to note how seemingly unconsciously the American community has been responding to this urge, even before the Guardian put the Call into words—as Bahá’ís from established Assemblies have moved into thirty-three cities—thus establishing light-houses of the Faith in that many new centers.

This pioneer spirit is showing itself likewise in many new young active Baha’is entering the teaching field with unusual success and confirmation. However, capable teachers in sufficient numbers have not arisen to carry forward the teachings in accordance with public demand.

The Guardian likewise has indicated another field for “pioneers.” There are 10 States in the United States, and three Provinces in Canada, where there are no Baha’is. There are 24 of the 48 States in the United States, and 7 of the 9 provinces of Canada where there are neither Group nor Assembly. As a part of this present teaching effort, the Guardian wishes the Faith firmly established in every State of the United States and every Province in Canada.

Public teaching campaigns have increased. Many new methods being used with success. Deserving special mention and consideration, is the fact that in each instance these public campaigns have been accompanied by study classes. Very successful was the circuit plan used by the Assemblies and groups of Upper New York, where one teacher after another made the circuit of all these Assemblies and Groups. Baha’i Day at the International Exposition in San Diego was exceptionally successful, in that some 2,000 people learned of the Faith on that day, and now a follow-up study class is being conducted.

It is of the utmost importance to know that the basis of success in teaching today, both in private, and particularly in public, is to teach directly and forcibly, the basic Baha’i Program for the salvation of mankind, through the Holy Spirit of Baha’u’llah, functioning through the Administrative Order.

Towering above all other considerations in successful teaching is the supreme need of each and every Baha’i ordering his life, individually and collectively, in accord with the injunctions of Baha’u’llah. Trials and tribulations have caused people to leave vague philosophies—they want and need a new way of living. How can we invite the public into a new world order, if we ourselves have not achieved a synchronized life—carrying into action the implications of Baha’i living. Do not destroy the hopes and aspirations of the seekers—by acting contrary to the injunctions contained in the Teachings you offer as the Gift of God.

Another field of teaching service which has been attempted as yet only slightly, is the use of Baha’i literature. The Year Book can be given to any leader of thought and student of world affairs. Sending of specialized literature to selected groups; subscribing to the World Order Magazine for lion-Baha’is, and sending to increasing numbers the public teaching bulletin issued by the National Assembly, have all produced good results.

Above all, it is evident, that only the most intense devotion can succeed in the teaching field. It is not the knowledge one imparts, how attractively meetings are arranged, nor how pleasant attendance at classes is made, that makes a new Baha’. It is only the Holy Spirit that can quicken a soul; and the Holy Spirit can use us as a medium only as we become purified through sacrifice, sustained service, and intense devotion. "Nothing save the utmost devotion will produce results" writes ‘Abdu’l-Baha.

Statistics mean nothing in indicating the spirit of service, the seeds sown, the lives being remade, and the souls quickened. The fruits of the efforts of the Friends will be harvested for years to come. However, the cumulative results are of interest and are given from the latest records of the Teaching Committee.

The Teaching work in America has attained a truly sacrificial status, auguring well for the success of our efforts. Notwithstanding the same problems of life experienced by the remainder of society, the Baha’is have risen above the things of the world, and forgetting all save the Grace of God—are carrying forward the Gifts of the Spiritual Kingdom. These Pioneers are thus by their lives and deeds enriching the annals of the Faith—and bringing sooner to humanity the blessings of Universal Peace, the Goal of the World Order of Baha’u’llah.

AMERICA'S SPIRITUAL MISSION

National Spiritual Assembly Announces Teaching Policy for 1936-1937

After consideration of the many elements entering into the problem of establishing a teaching policy and plan capable of making a foundation on which the American Baha'i community can proceed to fulfill the Guardian's vision as conveyed in his cablegram to the Convention, the National Spiritual Assembly has outlined a teaching policy which is now reported to the believers throughout the United States and Canada.

It will be noted that the matter of teaching and the matter of a financial budget are so interdependent that the budget is also presented as a necessary part of the teaching effort.

The development of this vital topic of teaching has come in the following order. First, the Guardian's cablegram to the Convention, as published last month:—

"Convey (to) American believers abiding gratitude efforts unitedly exerted (in) teaching field. Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systematically extended. Appeal (to) assembled delegates ponder historic appeal voiced by 'Abdu'l-Baha (in) Tablets (of) Divine Plan. Urge earnest deliberation with incoming National Assembly (to) insure its complete fulfillment. First century (of) Baha'i era drawing to a close. Humanity entering outer fringes most perilous stage (its) existence. Opportunities (of) present hour unimaginably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Baha'u'llah and establish structural basis of His World Order."

(Signed) SHOGHI.
Cablegram received May 1, 1936.

Second, the following message received in a cablegram from Shoghi Effendi on May 19:—

"Convention plea addressed to American believers cannot achieve its purpose unless dauntless pioneers promptly arise and, forsaking (their) homeland, permanently reside (in) countries where light of Faith (has) not yet penetrated. Cabling three hundred pounds as nucleus (of) Special Fund to be established (for the) furtherance (of) this exalted, highly meritorious purpose." (Signed) SHOGHI.

Third, the consultation of the N. S. A. which resulted in the recording of the following statement:—

"The National Spiritual Assembly adopts the following teaching policy for the coming year:—

I. The publication of the Teaching Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Baha in pamphlet form under the title of "America's Spiritual Mission" in order that every American Baha'i may have this vital source of our inspiration for teaching.

II. The appointment of a National Teaching Committee with these functions:
A. The preparation of general teaching material and of general policies and plans.
B. The supervision of regional activities, by receiving monthly reports from Regional Committees and preparing monthly reports for the N. S. A.
C. The direction of teaching activities in all areas of the United States and Canada not allocated to Regional Teaching Committees.
D. Enrollment of isolated believers.

"III. The appointment of Regional Teaching Committees to exercise the following functions:
A. The coordination of Inter-Community Conferences.
B. Cooperation with local Assemblies in organizing teaching circuits.
C. The routing of traveling teachers.
D. Rendering assistance to groups and preparing groups for the election of a Spiritual Assembly.
E. Encouraging and stimulating teaching activities of isolated believers.
F. The extension of teaching work to areas within the regions which have no Assemblies or groups. The Regional Committee is to exercise initiative in the areas outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies.

"IV. In order to prevent confusion between the functions of the National and Regional Committees, it is recorded that each Regional Committee is to be responsible for all decisions involving action, and need not consult the National Teaching Committee with reference to activities within the region. It is also recorded that the Regional Committees have no administrative authority over local Assemblies but are to assist the local Assemblies in every possible way and also make possible a coordination of Inter-Assembly activity. The contact of the Regional Committees with the National Teaching Committee is to be through monthly reports outlining the development of the work, reporting any problems that should be brought to the attention of the N. S. A., and recommending whatever new teaching material or new teaching methods the Regional Committee may feel advisable. The National Teaching Committee is to report to the N. S. A. the progress of the regional work, report also any problems which the N. S. A. should endeavor to solve by administrative authority, and in addition, submit recommendations in the way of teaching material, methods, plans and policies for approval by the N. S. A. and subsequent publication in Bahá'í News or other convenient form as a stimulus and guidance to those actively engaged in the teaching field.

"V. The responsibility of the National Assembly itself for teaching work is expressed in the schedule of meetings already adopted. In addition to these Regional Conferences and Public Meetings, the N. S. A. will throughout the year do its utmost to bring the Cause to the attention of persons of capacity and influence who at present cannot be reached by the local Assemblies.

"VI. The appointment of an Inter-America Teaching Committee to make careful research, and to advise and assist the N. S. A. in all activities related to the promotion of the Faith in Mexico, Central America, South America and the Islands of the Caribbean area."

In connection with the decision to appoint both a National and Regional Teaching Committees, the National Spiritual Assembly feels it advisable to call the attention of the friends to the development of teaching facilities over the period of the last few years. After centering the teaching work in one central committee for some time, regional representatives were appointed in order to extend the teaching work farther in the direction of the local Assemblies, groups and isolated believers. The present method of Regional Committees now makes them fully independent as far as action is concerned, but the National Committee is retained as a necessary aid to the N. S. A. in the preparation of general teaching material and methods, and in the coordination of monthly reports from the Regional Committees.

Another important consideration is that the five regions indicated in the Master's Teaching Tablets are far too large to represent active regional areas with the facilities at the disposal of the American Bahá'í community at this time. Therefore a greater number of areas have been selected, in order to provide for the utmost concentration of our energies and resources. As the Guardian said in his cablegram to the Convention, "Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systematically extended."

That cablegram, in fact, appears to have confirmed the objectives set forth in the statement issued by the National Teaching Committee in Bahá'í News last January, under the title of "What Is Mostly Needed."

The prayerful hope of the National Spiritual Assembly is that the American believers will unite themselves for teaching work this year with even greater enthusiasm and sacrifice than we united for the construction of the House of Worship. Only in that spirit of consecration can we play our part in fulfilling the ultimate destiny of the Faith: "Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century (i. e., the first century of the Bahá'í era) embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order."

Fourth, the preparation of a Bahá'í map of North America, showing the location of the important Bahá'í centers, the regional divisions, and other matters making it useful in planning the present teaching activities.

Fifth, the National Bahá'í Budget for 1936-1937, as follows:

International Bahá'í Fund $2,300
Administration 6,500
House of Worship, maintenance* 8,500
Green Acre (less income received from 1936 season) 2,500
Bahá'í News 1,400
Publishing Committee 2,000
Malden House 200
General Committee budgets 1,600

$25,000

Obligations carried over 3,000
Keith Ransom-Kehler Memorial 1,000
For reserve 1,000

Special Teaching Fund 30,000

$60,000

RECENT ANNUAL BUDGETS

In order to show the comparison between the financial budget adopted for 1936-1937 with the totals contributed during recent years, the following figures are presented.

1931—Total cash contributions, $58,997.44.
1932—Total cash contributions, $54,917.43.
1933—Total cash contributions, $84,545.02.
(1934 income was reported for the period of thirteen months.)
1935—Total cash contributions, $55,170.08.
(1935 income was reported for the period of eleven months.)
1936—Total cash contributions, $54,263.90.

It will be noted that the six year average is $76,263.36—more than $145,000 in excess of the total which the National Spiritual Assembly has fixed as the goal for the coming year.

"FRESH CONQUESTS AND UNPRECEDENTED TRIUMPHS"

Since the foregoing teaching policy was adopted, a letter dated May 30, has been received from Shoghi Effendi containing the following passage in his own hand:

"I fervently hope and pray that the year into which we have just entered may be signalized by fresh conquests and unprecedented triumphs in the teaching field within the United States and beyond its confines. A systematic carefully conceived, and well-established plan should be devised, rigorously pursued and continuously extended. Initiated by the National representatives of the American believers, the vanguard and standard-bearers of the radiant army of Bahá'u'lláh, this plan should receive the whole-hearted, the sustained and ever-increasing support, both moral and financial, of the entire body of His followers in that continent. Its supreme immediate objective should be the permanent establishment of at least one center in every state of the American Republic and in every Republic of the American continent not yet enlisted under the banner of His Faith. Its ramifications should gradually be extended to the European continent, and its scope should be made to include those countries, such as the Baltic states, Poland, Greece, Spain and Portugal, where no avowed believer has established any definite residence. The field is immense, the task gigantic, the privilege immeasurably precious. Time is short, and the obligation sacred, paramount and urgent. The American community must muster all its force, concentrate its resources, summon to its aid all the faith, the determination and energies of which it is capable, and set out, single-minded and undaunted, to attain still greater heights in its mighty exertions for the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh." (Signed) SHOGHI.

THE NATIONAL BAHÁ'Í FUND

A Compilation

And as the progress and extension of spiritual activities is dependent and conditioned upon material means, it is of absolute necessity that immediately after the establishment of local as well as national Spiritual Assemblies, a Bahá'í Fund be established, to be placed under the exclusive control of the Spiritual Assembly. All donations and contributions should be offered the Treasurer of the Assembly, for the express purpose of promoting the interests of the Cause, throughout that locality or country. It is the sacred obligation of every conscientious and faithful servant of Bahá'u'lláh who desires to see His Cause advance, to contribute freely and generously for the increase of that Fund. The members of the Spiritual Assembly will at their own discretion expend it to promote the Teaching Campaign, to help the needy, to establish educational Bahá'í institutions, to extend in every way possible their sphere of service. I cherish the hope that all the friends, realizing the necessity of this measure, will bestir themselves and contribute, however modestly at first, towards the speedy establishment and the increase of that Fund."—Bahá'í Administration, pp. 36-37.

We must be like the fountain or spring that is continually emptying itself of all that it has and is continually being refilled from an invisible source. To be continually giving out for the good of our fellows undeterred by the fear of poverty and reliant on the un-failing bounty of the Source of all wealth and all good—this is the secret of right living.—Bahá'í News, September, 1926.

With regard to the Bahá'í Fund, recently established amongst the friends, I trust that the matter now stands clear to everyone throughout the country. As I have previously intimated, although individual friends and local Assemblies are absolutely free to specify the object and purpose of their donations to the National Spiritual Assembly, yet, in my opinion, I regard it of the utmost vital importance that individuals, as well as local Assemblies, throughout the land should, in view of the paramount importance of National Teaching and as an evidence of their absolute confidence in their national representatives, endeavor, however small at first, to contribute freely towards the upkeep and the increase of the National Bahá'í Fund, so that the members of the National Assembly may at their full discretion expend it for whatever they deem urgent and necessary.—Bahá'í Administration, p. 47.

In connection with the institution of the National Fund and the budgetary system set forth in the minutes of the National Spiritual Assembly, I feel urged to remind you of the necessity of ever bearing in mind the cardinal principle that all contributions to the Fund are to be purely and strictly voluntary in character. It should be made clear and evident to every one that any form of compulsion, however slight and indirect, strikes at the very root of the principle underlying the formation of the Fund ever since its inception. While appeals of a general character, carefully worded and moving and dignified in tone are welcome under all circumstances, it should be left entirely to the discretion of every conscientious believer to decide upon the amount, and purpose of his or her contribution for the propagation of the Cause.—Bahá'í Administration, p. 92.

He wishes you particularly to impress the believers with the necessity of maintaining the flow of their contributions to the Temple, and also to stress the importance of the institution of the National Bahá'í Fund which, in these early days of the administrative development of the Faith, is the indispensable medium for the growth and expansion of the Movement. Contributions to this fund constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause. —Bahá'í News, November, 1934.

As to material sacrifices towards the welfare of the Cause, he wishes you to understand that the general interests of the Cause take precedence over the interests of the particular individuals. For instance, contributions to the welfare of individuals are secondary to contributions to the National and local Funds and that of the Temple.—Bahá'í News, February, 1932.

As the activities of the American Bahá'í community expand, and its worldwide prestige correspondingly increases, the institution of the National Fund, the bedrock on which all other institutions must necessarily rest and be established, acquires added importance, and should be increasingly supported by the entire body of the believers, both in their individual capacities, and through their collective efforts, whether organized as groups or as local Assemblies. The supply of funds, in support of the National Treasury, constitutes, at the present time, the life-blood of these nascent institutions you are laboring to erect. Its importance cannot, surely, be overestimated. Untold blessings shall no doubt crown every effort directed to that end.—Bahá'í News, October, 1935.

LETTER FROM YOUTH COMMITTEE

Dear fellow youth—

The National Youth Committee, through the medium of this announcement, wishes to call your attention to several important phases of the Bahá'í Youth program.

(1) Shoghi Effendi's recent letter to the American believers and his telegram to the Convention place a great responsibility upon us to advance on the line of the Divine Plan for teaching. The Guardian is calling for pioneers in this "new hour." Are there not many in our ranks who will answer his call? Does not youth mean that we share a greater part of the responsibility placed upon the American believers? Let us seize the "unspeakably precious" opportunities and advance the banner of the New World Order to all parts of the United States and Canada.

(2) The one step begun this last year to consolidate our ranks must be continued, and that is the registration of youth under twenty-one who declare their acceptance of the Bahá’í Faith. Perhaps the youth chairman in each city could present this problem for consultation at the next 19-day feast. It is a part of our work which we have barely begun, and it is not fully understood.

(3) The two months vacation period of the year is about to begin. Shall we allow this to be a period of let-up in our service to Bahá’u’lláh? Are not the bounties and confirmations of God descending continually? Therefore, should we not carry our program of teaching the Bahá’í Faith to the conditions of summer living. The Religion of God does not function ten months of the year, but twelve. Let us face this fact now and teach continually during the summer by means of the three Summer Schools, by picnics, by camps, by week-ends at camps. If we unitedly attack this problem, we shall even discover new methods of attracting people to the Cause of God.

(4) You will find in this issue the names of the new Youth Committee just appointed by the N. S. A. The regional system has worked very successfully this last year, the first year of its inception. The sub-secretaries wish, even more this year, to be active clearing houses for problems, news, and ideas from the youth groups and individuals in their respective areas.

The opportunity for most heroic living is ours. Let us not waste a single day! Let us vindicate our belief in and dedication to the Faith of God for this new age! Let us pioneer for Bahá’u’lláh!

Sincerely in the Guardian’s Service,
Youth Committee.
By: Kenneth Christian, Chairman.

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffer eth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life—Bahá’u’lláh.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Beginning June 1, 1936, the price of “Security for a Failing World,” by Stanwood Coburn, has been reduced from $2.00 to $1.50 per copy. It is hoped that the lower price will make it possible for many more believers to secure a copy of this book for their own Bahá’í library, and give many more copies away as part of their teaching work.

New Literature

Seven Valleys and Four Valleys, Bahá’u’lláh. The new translation by Ali-Kuli Khan, N. D. is now available in a book of very convenient size. There are two bindings—paper, at $0.50 per copy, and fabricoid, at $0.75.

Seven Valleys” has been out of print for many years, while “Four Valleys” has never before been published in English.

The Path to God, by Dorothy Baker. The latest addition to the series of important “teaching literature” booklets.

The price is uniform with the titles already issued—$1.50 per hundred copies. net.

Bahá’í Study Course, prepared by the Study Outlines Committee some years ago. This is a reprint, as the supply became exhausted some months ago. The friends will recall that this is the outline which is sold with three books, all references being to those books—Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era, Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and Foundations of World Unity.

The price of the Study Course and all three books, complete, $1.50 net.

Any of the friends able to furnish a copy of “Star of the West,” Vol. 17, No. 6, is requested to notify the Publishing Committee.

Note: Thanks to a special donation of books, the Committee is able to offer the following useful and informative books at 50c net, while they last: A World Community, by J. H. Randall; Seven Great Bibles, by Alfred W. Martin; Nationalism and Internationalism, by Herbert Adams Gibbons. These books were originally published at $2.00 each.

Send orders for Bahá’í literature to: Bahá’í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Annex, New York, N. Y., or to Western Division, Mrs. Emma E. Smith, 940 Leavenworth Street, San Francisco, Calif.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY LEGAL COMMITTEE

The Legal Committee of the National Spiritual Assembly, in passing upon the sufficiency of the incorporation papers of a local Spiritual Assembly, desires to impress upon all local Assemblies contemplating local incorporation that a copy of the State statute under which the incorporation is being set up, should be, in all cases, forwarded to the National Spiritual Assembly with the proposed incorporation papers.

Consideration and approval of any local incorporation papers cannot be completed without such copies of the State law. The lack of these has greatly retarded action upon papers already submitted for the Assembly’s approval.

THE MEASURE OF OUR FAITH

Shoghi Effendi, in his cablegram of July 30 published in this issue, sounds a clarion call to the American believers to arise and fulfill the Divine Plan. He is “impatiently, prayerfully waiting” for each and every believer, “however humble, however inexperienced”, to supplement the “National Assembly’s energetic leadership and careful planning” by “vigorous action.”

Our opportunity has come. Each and all, we have a part to play in the fateful drama of the coming months and years, as the “sands of a chaotic, despairing civilization are steadily running out.” We must now demonstrate the measure of our faith.

We have accepted the Divine Teachings and enlisted for service in the Cause of God. The fulfillment of this station requires of us “implicit obedience, whole-hearted allegiance, uncompromising adherence to that which we believe is the revealed and express will of God... If we are to falter or hesitate, if our love for Him should fail to direct us and keep us in His path, if we desert Divine and emphatic principles, what hope can we any more cherish for healing the ills and sicknesses of this world?”

The Cause of God can not fail. Our inaction, weakness and disunity may delay the spread of His Message until more energetic and faithful Baha’is can be raised up. The most glorious opportunity is ours, and if we fail, others will be raised up to do the work. We may individually falter and fall by the wayside, but His Cause will go marching on.

A wonderful Mission has been given the American believers by the Master in His Divine Plan. The Guardian now calls us to carry out this Mission to the full. Your National Spiritual Assembly has, in the June issue of Baha’i News, provided the necessary instruments for collective action. Now the Guardian in this latest cablegram heralds the critical hour.

Every believer has the golden opportunity to teach by “living the life” no matter how restricted and burdened his life may seem to be. Some will travel into the regions of America not yet quickened by the Word of God. Some will forsake their homeland and carry the Light to more distant lands. All have the privilege and responsibility to contribute their talents and pray for confirmation from on high.

To achieve the goal, which is nothing less than laying the foundation of the new World Order, resources must be provided. The Budget set forth in June Baha’i News includes necessary operating expenses and a special Teaching Fund of $30,000. During the spring of 1932, for completing the Temple dome, the American Baha’is contributed that amount in a few months. Dare we meet anything less than the highest standard of sacrifice and devotion this year, when the safety of the world, and the cherished possessions of rich and poor alike, are clearly threatened by overwhelming disaster?

Shoghi Effendi has clearly stated how every believer can test the measure of his faith, “Contributions to this fund (i.e., the National Baha’i Fund) constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause.”—NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

TIME IS SHORT

Cablegram from Shoghi Effendi

(I) entreat (the) American believers (to) ponder afresh (the) urgency (to) rededicate themselves (to the) task (of the) complete fulfilment (of the) Divine Plan. (The) National Assembly’s energetic leadership (and) careful planning (are) ineffectual unless supplemented by vigorous action by every believer, however humble, however inexperienced. Time is short. (The) sands (of a) chaotic, despairing civilization (are) steadily running out. Founded on (the) unity (and) understanding so splendidly achieved, functioning within (the) framework (of the) administrative Order (so) laboriously erected, inspired (by the) vision (of the) Temple edifice (so) nobly reared, galvanized into action (by the) realization (of the) rapidly-deteriorating world situation, (the) American Baha’i Community should rise as never before (to the) height (of the) opportunity now confronting it. Audacity, resolution (and) self-abnegation (are) imperatively demanded. Impatiently and prayerfully waiting.

Received July 30, 1936.

SHOGHI.

BAHA’ULLAH’S TABLET PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

The friends are informed that the National Spiritual Assembly has caused to be delivered to President Roosevelt a beautifully engraved copy of Baha’ullah’s Tablet to the Presidents and Rulers of the American Republics, together with two Prayers revealed by ‘Abdu’l-Baha for America.

May we have confidence that the Light will penetrate into the mind and heart of the nations upon which the Manifestation has laid such a high trust as is revealed in that Tablet.

In reporting this important teaching action, the members of the N. S. A. would remind the friends that communications concerning the Faith should be addressed to Federal and State officials only through the National Assembly itself. The presentation of the Tablet and Prayers in this case, moreover, is reported to the Bahá'ís but is not to be spread among the general public nor made a matter of public discussion or record.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

Report from local Spiritual Assemblies during the last few months record the following increases in membership, by new enrollment or by transfer.

FORM OF BEQUEST

The following form has been prepared by the Legal Committee for the use of believers who plan to include a bequest or legacy in their Will. It is recommended that believers consult an attorney in using this form, to be assured that it shall be adapted to meet the needs and requirements of the laws of the State in which they reside.

I hereby give and devise the sum of $________ to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada, that is to say, to the several persons who at the time of my death, and from time to time thereafter, shall constitute the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada according to the government and regulations of said Religious Body as existing at the time of my death and from time to time thereafter amended, to be used in accordance with the functions vested in said Assembly for the furtherance of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

1. To the National Spiritual Assembly

On disputes between believers

“The Guardian wishes to emphasize the importance of avoiding reference to civil courts of cases of dispute between believers, even in non-Bahá'í issues. It is the Assembly's function to endeavor to settle amicably such disputes, both in order to safeguard the fair name and prestige of the Cause, and to acquire the necessary experience for the extension of its functions in the future.”—May 30, 1936.

Formation of new Assemblies

"Regarding the formation of local Assemblies, the Guardian does not advise any departure from the principle that every civil community should have its own independent Assembly.‖—July 5, 1936. (In answer to the question whether, in the case of a new Assembly, the membership of the community could reside in two or more adjoining civil communities.)

The utmost effort

"I cannot refrain from adding a few words to renew and reaffirm my fervent plea to you, and through you to every individual member of the American Bahá'í community, to exert the utmost effort in order to further the cause of teaching throughout the American continent. Every possible assistance, whether moral, financial, or administrative, should be continuously, generously, and systematically extended to this most urgent, this sacred and meritorious Cause. My heart yearns to learn of any speedy and effective action which the valiant members of that community may determine, whether collectively or severally, to undertake. The invisible hosts of the Abhá Kingdom are arrayed and ready to rush forth and ensure the triumph of every stout-hearted and persevering herald of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.‖—July 5, 1936.

2. To Individual Bahá'ís

(Published with the Guardian's consent)

To Leroy Ioas, November 14, 1935.

In connection with the problems facing the friends in their teaching work; these, the Guardian is well aware, are by no means easy to overcome, specially in view of the limited number and resources of the believers. But in the field of Bahá'í service, as the history of the Cause abundantly demonstrates, there is no obstacle that can be said to be insurmountable. Every difficulty will, in due time, be solved. But continued and collective effort is also needed. The Bahá'í teacher should not get discouraged at the consciousness of the limitations within or without him. He should rather persevere, and be confident, that no matter how numerous and perplexing the difficulties that confront him may appear, he is continually assisted and guided through Divine confirmations. He should consider himself as a mere instrument in the hands of God, and should, therefore, cease looking at his own merits. The first and most important qualification of a Bahá'í teacher is, indeed, unqualified loyalty and attachment to the Cause. Knowledge is, of course, essential; but compared to devotion it is secondary in importance.

What the Cause now requires is not so much a group of highly cultured and intellectual people who can adequately present its Teachings, but a number of devoted, sincere and loyal supporters who, in utter disregard of their own weaknesses and limitations, and with hearts afire with the love of God, forsake their all for the sake of spreading and establishing His Faith. In other words, what is mostly needed nowadays is a Bahá'í pioneer and not so much a Bahá'í philosopher or scholar. For the Cause is not a system of philosophy; it is essentially a way of life, a religious faith that seeks to unite all people on a common basis of mutual understanding and love, and in a common devotion to God.

Bahá'í scholars and writers will, no doubt, gradually appear, and will as promised by Bahá'u'lláh lend a unique support to the Faith. But in the meantime, we should not tarry, or slacken in our efforts.

Concerning your question relative to the duration of the Bahá'í Dispensation. There is no contradiction being to the weighty responsibility of renewed teaching effort. Some have already undertaken work in states where there are no Bahá’ís.

Following up Bahá’í contacts and openings made by Miss Gertrude Frazier in Reno, Nevada, Mrs. Kathryn Frankland of Berkeley, California, is now going to that city for six months to permanently establish the Faith there and thus bring the Light of Guidance to the state of Nevada.

Miss Frazier is now in Omaha, Nebraska, for a two-months’ period during which time she will introduce the Faith there, bringing the Message into another state where there are few believers.

Among the first to respond to the Guardian’s call for pioneers in the spring, were Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Lillywhite and their daughter, Theresa, of the Denver Bahá’í Community, who have undertaken to establish the Cause in the city of Laramie, Wyoming. Two addresses at the University of Wyoming on the new life and trends in art provided opportunity for Mr. Lillywhite to speak of Bahá’ulláh as the Source of all new life, and as a result of requests for more information, Bahá’í books have been placed in the libraries of the University and the Institute of the Latter Day Saints.

Mrs. Lillywhite has been giving a series of addresses on the Cause at the Women’s Club, one meeting of which was held in her own studio. Fireside meetings are held every nineteen days, and, in the true pioneer spirit, these friends write: “We are not going to give up until a pure functioning Bahá’í Community is established in Wyoming.”

The following are a few reports of efforts being made to add new cities to the list of those in states where the Cause is already established:

Through the cooperative efforts of Dr. Walter B. Guy and Dr. Zia Bagdadi in opening De Land, Florida, to the Teachings, there are promising prospects for a lively study group in the near future.

As a result of the assistance of the Bahá’ís of Philadelphia Mrs. Eva Batey, an isolated believer in Atlantic City, has been carrying on a weekly study class for inquirers for several months. A group of the Philadelphia friends visit the class at frequent intervals to lend enthusiasm and encouragement.

Cooperation has been offered to Dr. Stanwood Cobh by a prominent and interested woman in Richmond, Virginia, to introduce the Cause in that cultural center of the South. Plans are being made for a series of addresses during the fall months.

As the result of an address by Dr. Cobh at a gathering of neighbors at the home of an isolated believer in Clarendon, Virginia, a regular study class has been established there.

Mrs. Louise Caswell of Portland, Oregon, has been devoting several months to the work in Boise, Idaho, where the Message was given by Orcella Rexford. There is now in that city a Bahá’í Group and several earnest students.

In addition to carrying on her responsibilities as secretary of the Regional Teaching Committee in the Pacific Northwest area, Mrs. Caswell is planning to introduce the Faith in one of the other states where the Faith is not yet established.

How many others are soon to arrive and carry the banner to new fields?

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

THE CURRENT FINANCIAL BUDGET

The source of impetus in all Bahá’í activity is the conscious loyalty of the individual believers. From this ardent devotion must come that capacity for collective effort which it is the obligation and privilege of the local and National Spiritual Assembly to guide. The Faith of Bahá’ulláh is a living organism, like a tree upon which every leaf has its life function to fulfill, not a mechanism to be kept in motion by constant pressure from administrative bodies.

It is a vital part of this conscious loyalty to acquire knowledge of all plans in which the entire community is expected to cooperate. The basis for the enlarged teaching plan this year is not so much the new form of committees, but the inspiration which the friends themselves receive from the Teachings.

Every Bahá’í responding to that vital and consecrated task should make effort to identify himself with the national, regional and local plans adopted in order to unify individual devotion and reinforce the action of every single believer.

Underlying the whole National plan which the Guardian has approved is the Financial Budget adopted by the N. S. A. and reported in the June issue of Bahá’í News. The items of that Budget represent a careful and detailed analysis of all recurrent expenses, plus the item of $30,000 believed to be essential for the promotion of the teaching work.

That Budget should receive conscientious attention and the whole-hearted support of Assemblies, communities, groups and isolated Bahá’ís. Its items are of two kinds—such fixed expenses as insurance, taxes, administrative expense and Temple maintenance, and other items providing for the support of Committees, and for the Special Teaching Fund. Examination of all items indicates how the Faith has developed into a powerful administrative order capable of maintaining such institutions as the Temple, Green Acre, the Bosch property, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s house at Malden, Mass., and in addition the facilities required to discharge the duties of the N. S. A. and its Committees. The amount desired over and above these recurrent items—especially the Teaching Fund—represents nothing else than a direct appeal to the devotion of the American Bahá’ís.

In addition to knowledge of the fundamental financial plan, which seems typical of future Budgets for some years to come, the believers will naturally follow with keen interest the degree of response made by the entire community.

Up to October first, the response has been adequate only to maintain the recurrent items of expense. The N. S. A. has been able to vote no surplus into the Teaching Fund. Moreover, the sum of $2,000 is still outstanding on the cost of completing the Temple clerestory section from last year. In order to meet that cost, the N. S. A. was compelled to incur a loan, and while the loan has been reduced, the sum of $2,000 is still due.

The total receipts from September first to twenty-sixth were $2,339.28, a fair average of monthly contributions since the Convention. On the basis of a Budget of $60,000, the contributions must average $5,000 per month, which means a monthly contribution of $50 from a Bahá'í community with twenty-five members, $200 a month from a community having one hundred believers, etc.

The degree of conscious knowledge which a believer attains of the financial plan is, in the Guardian's own words, a fair test of his devotion to the Teachings and to the Faith as a whole. We behold the world turning to dust and ashes before our very eyes. Naught will endure save love and sacrifice rendered to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. To tarry at this late hour is to relinquish the Path and abide in sullen gloom.

TURNING THE PAGES OF THE PUBLICITY SCRAPBOOK

The pages of the National Publicity Clipping Book for 1936-1937 have just been brought up to date and the committee wishes to share with the friends, and especially the publicity committees, some of the outstanding news releases which it already contains this year.

On the Chicago pages appear two pictures of the Temple recently published. The one published in the Chicago Daily News, July 12th, is the latest picture of the Temple wherein just the Dome emerges from a framework of trees in full foliage. The caption chosen by the editor is "Like a Jeweled Crown, Rising to the Sky." July 29th, the Chicago Tribune contained one with this caption, "Purple Martians Gather By Thousands and Fight Southward" and under the picture: "Scene at sundown near the Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette showing birds sitting on wires. For several years the martins have chosen this spot, thousands of them assembled in the dome of the building also." The front page of the Tribune carried a two column article headed "Martins Pick Bahá'í Temple for Roundup." A later article stated that they were "Driven from their perch on the telephone wires and the clerestory of the Bahá'í Temple by strong north winds. Even the birds are trying to attract the attention of the world to Bahá'u'lláh's Temple! Doesn't this make us ask ourselves—are we doing our part?"

The North Shore Radio Record in Evanston on May 31st, carried a broadcast relief of the Temple with an article headed "Bahá'í Temple Rated Finest in the World."

Now we come to three full pages for Honolulu, containing write-ups of four lectures by Mrs. E. R. Mathews, under the general heading, "The Pathway of Man," while the next pages contain "The Goal of the New World Order" by Shoghi Effendi, published in serial form. This should be an inspiration to all publicity committees.

Japan's page has almost a two column review of the latest "Bahá'í World" by Agnes Alexander.

In Miami, Florida, Margaret Atwater has most effectively made use of a forum column in reply to an article appearing in the Miami Daily News, on Bible Prophecy and also a short article at the time of the passing of Lord Allenby, recalling the part he played in the Knighting of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The Press-Scimitar of Memphis, Tenn., August 18th issue, heralds the pioneer work of Mrs. Marion Little. The article is headed "Brings Bahá'í Faith to the South" and follows with a quotation from the writings of Bahá'u'lláh and then continues with a brief history of the Cause and its principles. The unique feature in connection with this article is that in the first column to the left of it is a picture of President Roosevelt, with hands outstretched as though pointing to the column on the Bahá'í Faith. Above this picture is the caption "The Way to Peace."

New York's pages contain many articles on the Cause published in the Flatbush Observer and New York World Telegram; an article in the July issue of The Crisis on "The World Issue of Race" by Horace Holley, as well as articles announcing the arrival of Martha Root in this country.

Washington, D. C. sent in an appre-ciation of the latest "Bahá'í World" published in "The Christian Leader" June 6th, in which the writer states among other things: "This Bahá'í Book is one of the most elaborate and complete that any religious group has issued. . . ."

In Wilmette, the weekly news published in Magazine form called "Wilmette Life" has besides its generous publications of news items on all activities in the Bahá'í House of Worship, published a front page picture of our glorious Temple with this beautiful description below it: "Like a jewel, in its setting of generous foliage and bright summer sky is this world famous dome of the Bahá'í Temple on the lake shore in Wilmette. This Universal House of Worship is the mecca for thousands of religious pilgrims and interested tourists every year. The dome compares in size with the largest structures of its type in the world. It gives place to none in beauty."

Added to these outstanding features, pages which show real activity on the part of believers as well as committees in the publicity field are those of Boise, Idaho; Geneva, Binghamton and Rochester, New York; Long Beach, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and San Francisco, California, where the summer school sessions and the arrival of Martha Root stands out. Teaneck, N. J., has a full page of lengthy articles describing the Annual Souvenir Feast held at Evergreen Place; Norwich, Connecticut has some fine publicity through the efforts of an isolated believer; Racine, Wisconsin and Urbana, Illinois have also made a beautiful start for the new Bahá'í year.

For a brief review of the press book since April, 1936, will inspire those of you who haven't sent in any clippings since April, to work even harder toward your goal. If the committee can help you in any way do not hesitate to call upon us.

Two clippings of all publicity is needed this year. Please send them to Mrs. Nina Matthiesen, Chairman, 4612 Malden Street, Chicago, Illinois.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Future World Commonwealth—excerpts from the general letters written by Shoghi Effendi. 16 pages, bound in paper. This booklet brings together the Guardian's own words on the coming World Order. It is printed on extra quality paper and attractively bound, to be suitable for presentation to non-Bahá'ís. Price—10c per copy, fifteen copies for $1.00. Net.

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the harbinger of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life. Baha'u'llah.

Mrs. Gertrude Anderson, Chicago.
Mr. Jacob Schmit, St. Paul.

THE INTERNATIONAL YOUTH BULLETIN

The National Youth Committee is making an effort this year to develop the bulletin Baha'i Youth into an "international" youth bulletin with all that implies. We feel that it is the organ for fostering a common opinion among the Baha'i youth of the world.

A recent letter to the committee reads: "Let us make Baha'i Youth a conference ground where we can meet each other in print." That expresses very well the goal we have set.

But to develop the bulletin we need articles and news items. The news items from each group should be sent to the area sub-secretary. In the East to Zeah Holden, 48 Terrace Avenue, Albany, New York; in the Chicago area to Florence Mattoon, 1098 Pratt Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; in the Pacific coast area to Dorothy Wever, 675 West Arden Avenue, Glendale, California.

Articles for the bulletin should be sent direct to Kenneth Christian, 17 Jane Street, Malone, New York. They should be brief and deal with the Baha'i way of life or some other definite aspect of the teachings or the common problems that youth face today. Poems also may be submitted. The committee hopes that the Baha'i youth of the United States and Canada will respond at once with contributions for the youth bulletin.

LETTER FROM NATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF IRAN

We have the great pleasure of informing our dear Baha'i brothers and sisters throughout the Baha'i world that the 3d annual Baha'i Convention of Iran was held in the "Haziratu'l-Quds" (Baha'i center) in Teharan from the 6th to 12th of the Rizwan feast to form the 3d National Assembly of the Baha'is of Iran.

The delegates representing the friends in this country were present and discussed various important questions of general interest to the Cause and submitted their decisions and recommendations to the newly formed National Assembly.

We give hereafter the names of the members of the newly appointed Assembly:

1.—Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan.
2.—Mr. Vahidullah Vargha.
3.—Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan.
4.—Mr. Shua'ullah Alahi.
5.—Mr. Amin-i-Amin.
6.—Dr. Youness Afroukhhteh.
7.—Mr. Mahmoud Badi.
8.—Mr. Ahmad Poor.
9.—Mr. Ahmad Yazdani.

The members of the governing body of the Assembly are:

1.—Mr. Vahidullah Vargha: President.
2.—Dr. Youness Afroukhhteh: Vice-President.
3.—Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan: Secretary.
4.—Mr. Shua'ullah Alahi: Treasurer.

The postal and telegraphic address of the Assembly remain unchanged as last year, viz.:
Postal address:
Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan.
Khialan-i-Pahlevi, Kourosh-i-Mehdieh, 2002, Teheran, Iran.

Cable address: Teheran, Rouhani.

Thanks to divine confirmation, discussions were conducted with a spirit of complete harmony and sincere cooperation throughout the whole period of the sittings of the Convention and the delegates were much satisfied of the success of the discussions.

It is indeed a source of great pleasure for us to see that, under the wise leadership and guidance of our beloved Guardian, the friends have attained such a degree of sincerity, spirituality and sense of cooperation which is far beyond the limits of worldly relations. We, the members of this Assembly, earnestly hope that, with the help of Bahá’u’lláh, we may be able to carry out our sacred and important duties in the course of the present year to the entire satisfaction of our beloved Guardian.

We shall be very pleased to receive your letters and to hear the news of your activities. We hope that we may be able to correspond with your Assembly and to convey to the friends in Iran friendly messages and news from you.

For The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Iran.

Yours faithfully,
A. Foroutan,
Secretary.

THE BAHÁ’Í LIFE

Study Course Conducted by Dorothy Baker at Green Acre, August, 1936

Note: As a contribution to the teaching effort, Study Outlines will from time to time be published in Bahá’í News. The N. S. A. will welcome all suitable Outlines which can be supplied, whether or not they have been used in a Summer School or Assembly study class.

Lesson One
The Law of the Kingdom and the Bread of Life.

References:
Gleanings: 86-87, 95-97, 123, 175, 156, 141, 286, 264-369, 335-338.

Articles for "Herald of the South"

"Miss Hilda Brooks, Secretary of the N. S. A. of the Bahá’ís of Australia and New Zealand, has requested the Guardian to urge the friends to contribute articles for publication in the 'Herald of the South' magazine. "At his direction I am writing this to you that you may kindly lay this matter before the American N. S. A. for consideration and action. He would suggest that in the 'News Letter' you bring this question to the attention of the friends, urging them on his behalf to cooperate with the Australian and New Zealand believers in their efforts for raising the standard of their national magazine." — Letter from the Guardian, through his secretary, April 19, 1936.

Note: Bahá’í Magazine, Herald of the South, is published quarterly at Adelaide, South Australia. The subscription rate is five shillings per year. Address: Box 447D, Adelaide, South Australia.

Abbás Effendi; His Life and Teachings—Phelps, p. 232.
Man the Unknown—Carrel, p. 188-197.

Questions:
What is the supreme objective of supposition?
What are the qualities that make prayer real?

Lesson Four
Human Relations (The home, the social pattern, the spiritual foundation of community life.)

References:
The Marriage Tablet (Prayer Book).

CLASSIFICATION OF MATERIALS FOR PRESERVATION IN NATIONAL AND LOCAL BAHAI ARCHIVES

Note: This classification has been made in order to clarify the nature of the material to be preserved in the Archives, with a suitable distinction between that which should be sent to the National Archives and that which should enter into the Archives established by a local Spiritual Assembly.

I. Tablets and relics of Bahá'u'lláh and the Báb, whether original Tablets or reproductions. This material is essentially National in character.

II. Tablets and relics of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The Tablets should be original, signed Tablets, or authentic reproductions such as photostat copies. Tablets should be accompanied by original translation if possible. All original Tablets should be preserved in the National Archives. Photostats of Tablets revealed to the Spiritual Assembly, or to individual believers, might well be placed in the local Archives. As regards the nature of relics, the Guardian has given the following explanation: "The general principle should be that any object used by Him in person should be preserved for posterity, whether in the local or National Archives. It is the duty and responsibility of the Baha'i Assemblies to ascertain carefully whether such objects are genuine or not, and to exercise the utmost care and caution in the matter."

III. Letters of Shoghi Effendi. These are of three different classes—those written to the N. S. A. and the entire American Baha'i Community; those written to local Assemblies; and those written to individual believers. The National Assembly is preserving the national letters of the Guardian, particularly as they occasionally contain matters confidential to that body. The N. S. A. plans to photostat all the Guardian's letters, at which time all originals can be gone over with a view to their preservation in the National Archives. Original letters to local Assemblies are for the most part not confidential and can be preserved in the National Archives, with photostats in the local Archives. Letters to individual believers can be sent to the National Archives and photostats obtained for the recipient and for the local Archives.

IV. National events and activities. Such events as 'Abdu'l-Bahá's American journey, the founding of the Temple, early historical records of Star of the West, Baha'i Publishing Committee, Green Acre, Geyserville and Louhelen Ranch and other activities of more than local importance constitute an impressive aspect of Baha'i history, and all original documents and records should be turned over to the N. S. A., if not already done, for its examination and subsequent deposit in the National Archives.

V. Local records and activities. Records and documents pertaining to such activities are of two classes: the Minutes and correspondence of the Spiritual Assembly, which are preserved by the Assembly itself, and non-administrative material of historical interest and importance, such as programs, newspaper clippings, Historical Record Cards, etc. It is recommended that each Spiritual Assembly also provide a bound book in which its Archives Committee can keep a record of enrollments of new believers and also deaths or removals from the community.

VI. Bahá’í publications. A complete file of all publications, such as books, pamphlets, magazines, news letters, etc., of official Bahá’í character is being developed in the National Archives, and the cooperation of the friends is requested to make this complete. Out of print Bahá’í books and pamphlets will be appreciated.

VII. Individual records and papers. Families in possession of the papers belonging to such prominent believers as those named in “America and the Most Great Peace” will appreciate that such records are part of the history of the Cause and might well be turned over to the Archives and History Committee. Other personal records might similarly be turned over to the local Archives Committee.

BAHA'I YOUTH BULLETIN

The October issue of Baha'i Youth will terminate the first year of a notable and exhilarating international enterprise. To those who are not acquainted with our bulletin we present the following quotations from our pages of information and, we trust, inspiration:

"As in the last century the Dawn-Breakers recreated Persia, so must the Baha'is of today recreate the world!

May Baha'i Youth unite us and keep us always strong in the knowledge of a common destiny and action."

"Baha'u'llah spoke to the world—when He raised His voice there were no Baha'is—He addressed Himself to the soul of man. Do we suppose that only those who have had the privilege of hearing of Him and accepting Him, are His workers in this day?"

"For the subjugation of small physical appetites, the infinite power of Baha'u'llah is present and we may draw upon it.

"In unity with our fellows throughout the world we have joined in a new determination to serve the Cause of Baha'u'llah."
"The Bahá‘í Faith is the only agent which uncompromisingly cuts through the surface (of age-old passion) to reveal the unity of purpose which animates all group activity, spiritual and material, in the evolutionary process of civilization."

"We cannot teach and serve the Faith of Bahá‘u’lláh sincerely and adequately until as individuals we are clearly impelled by the spiritual standards of conduct which become allegiance to the Bahá‘í Faith. . . . In this period of Formation the youth of the Bahá‘í world community must break from the worthless standards of the times and unfold the standards of God. . . . We can at once begin the establishment of these new standards if as individuals and as groups we adopt the spiritual attitude of nobility which will differentiate us from others."

And from our beloved Guardian through his secretary:

"Not until all the friends come to realize that every one is able, in his own measure, to deliver the Message, can they hope to reach the goal that has been set before them by a loving and wise Master."

". . . Bahá‘í youth throughout the world must not only strive to spread knowledge of the Teachings, but also and above all to live them as completely as circumstances permit. They should attract people to the Cause not so much through the exposition of its principles and teachings but through the power of their individual lives. The Bahá‘í youth must indeed exemplify through their lives, both as individuals and as conscious and active members of the Bahá‘í community, the purity, the effectiveness and sublime character of their Faith. They can teach best when they live up to the standard inculcated by Bahá‘u’lláh."

Also from the Guardian to a member of the youth committee:

"The response of various youth groups in both the East and the West to your Committee’s call has been very gratifying. It should be now your Committee’s chief aim to maintain alive this spirit of solidarity and fellowship that you have succeeded in awakening among various Bahá‘í youth groups throughout the world. Your Youth Bulletin, he hopes, will give you the full means to accomplish this aim."

Bahá‘í Youth wants to succeed. Bahá‘í Youth wants to consolidate the Bahá‘í youth in all countries. Bahá‘í Youth wants to maintain alive the spirit of solidarity and fellowship awakened among Bahá‘í youth groups throughout the world.

Bahá‘í Youth wants subscriptions. We urge all Assemblies to cooperate by obtaining subscriptions. (The New York youth have already subscribed almost 100%)!"

Bahá‘í Youth is published quarterly. You may have your copy by sending ten cents, or a year’s subscription by sending forty cents, to Miss Zeah Holden, 48 Terrace Avenue, Albany, N. Y.

With our subscriptions duly augmented we can approach our second year with a sense of confidence and effectiveness.
WORDS OF 'ABDU'L-Baha

O living flame of heavenly love!
Thine heart has been so fired with the love of God that from ten thousand leagues afar its warmth and radia­ tance may be felt and seen. The fire lit by mortal hand imparts light and warmth to but a little space, whereas that sacred flame which the hand of God hath kindled, though burning in the East, will set aflame the West, and give warmth to both the North and the South; nay it shall rise from this world to glow with the hottest flame in the realms on high, flooding with light the Kingdom of eternal glory.
Happy art thou to have obtained so heavenly a gift; blessed art thou to be favored with His divine bestowals.
The glory of God rest upon thee and upon them that hold fast unto His Will and holy Covenant.

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

1. To the National Spiritual Assembly

Authenticity of the Bible

"As to the question raised by the Racine Assembly in connection with Baha'u'llah's statement in the Gleanings concerning the sacrifice of Ishmael; although His statement does not agree with that made in the Bible, Genesis 22:9, the friends should unhesitatingly, and for reasons that are only too obvious, give precedence to that made in the Bible, Genesis 22:9, as it is more authentic than the Bible, including both the New and the Old Testaments. The Bible is not wholly authentic, and in this respect not to be compared with the Qur'an, and should be wholly subordinated to the authentic sayings of Baha'u'llah."

Statement concerning teaching

"The Guardian has read with keenest interest the new statement adopted by the N. S. A. concerning teaching, and wishes me to assure you, and through you all your distinguished fellow-members, of his most genuine appreciation of the steps that your Assembly is taking for the expansion of the teaching work throughout America.
He is praying for your success from the innermost depths of his heart."

Preservation of Relics

"Regarding the preservation of relics associated with 'Abdu'l-Baha, the general principle should be that any object used by Him in person should be preserved for posterity, whether in the local or the national archives. It is the duty and responsibility of the Bahá'í Assemblies to ascertain carefully whether such objects are genuine or not, and to exercise the utmost care and caution in this matter."

N. S. A. meeting at Nashville

"In connection with the meeting of the N. S. A. at Nashville, the Guardian feels strongly that such a meeting should be held, as it would greatly encourage the believers in that center.
The holding of public meetings in that city should be avoided only in case it would lead to grave harm and have very serious results. Slight local criticisms and unpopularity should not act as deterrent.
The issue should be met squarely and bravely, and an effort should be made to attract at first the most cultured element among the colored, and through them establish contact with the white and the masses. Such individuals and groups, whether white or colored, who are relatively free from racial prejudice, should be approached separately if necessary, and an endeavor should be made to bring them together eventually, not only on formal occasions and for specific pur­ puses, but in intimate social gatherings, in private homes as well as in formally recognized Bahá'í centers.

"The summer schools provide a splendid setting and environment to which the best element among the colored race should be specially attracted.
Through such association prejudice can be gradually eradicated, and 'Abdu'll-Baha's ardent wish fully realized.
"The Guardian finds it impossible to overestimate the importance and urey of this sacred duty that confronts both the local and the national As­ semblies."—July 28, 1936.

2. To Individual Baha'is

(Published with the Guardian's consent)

To Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Moffet,
December 7, 1935.

"As to the passage No. 13 of the Arabic Hidden Words: that which Baha'u'llah declares we can find abiding within us is the 'power of the Di­ isin Spirit, the reflection of the light of His Revelation. This reflection of the Divine Spirit, however, can in no way be compared to the Revelation which God discloses to His Prophets and Messengers. This similarity in the terminology should not confuse this distinction which is most fundamental.

"In connection with your teaching work: what the Guardian wishes you to particularly emphasize in all your talks is the supreme necessity for all individuals and nations in this day to adopt in its entirety the social program given by Bahá'u'lláh for the reconstruction of the religious, economic and political life of mankind. He wishes you to explain and analyze the elements that help in raising this Divine World Order in the light of the present-day events and conditions in the world. Special stress, he feels, should be laid on the impending necessity of establishing a super-national, and sovereign world state, as the one described by Bahá'u'lláh. With the world becoming increasingly subject to tumults and convulsions never experienced before, the realization of such a necessity is entering into the consciousness of not only the wise and learned, but of the common people as well. The believers should, therefore, seize this opportunity to make a supreme effort to present, in convincing and eloquent language, those social and humanitarian teachings of the Faith which we believe to constitute the sole panacea for the innumerable ills afflicting our present-day world."

To Mr. Robert Lee Moffett, January 25, 1936.

"There are practically no technical teachings on economics in the Cause, such as banking, the price system, and others. This is not a new economic system, nor its founders considered as having been technical economists. The contribution of the Faith to this subject is essentially indirect, as it consists of the application of spiritual principles to our present-day economic system. Bahá'u'lláh has given us a few basic principles which should guide future Bahá'í economists in establishing such institutions which will adjust the economic relationships of the world... "

Social inequality is the inevitable outcome of the natural inequality of man. Human beings are different in ability and should, therefore, be different in their social and economic standing. Extremes of wealth and poverty should, however, be abolished...

"The Master has definitely stated that wages should be unequal, simply because that men are unequal in their ability and hence should receive wages that would correspond to their varying capacities and resources."

MEETINGS OF THE N. S. A.

The policy has been adopted this year that as far as possible the meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly shall be held in different parts of the country, and provide occasions for Regional Conferences with the friends, as well as public meetings for promoting the Faith.

The following schedule of meetings will be followed throughout the remainder of the present Bahá'í year.

November 12, 13, 14 and 15, 1936, at San Francisco. Public meetings will be held the evenings of November 12 and 13; a Regional Conference morning and afternoon of Sunday, November 15, with Saturday evening devoted to an informal feast and social meeting with believers. A cordial invitation is extended to all Bahá'í communities, groups and isolated friends in the West to attend the feast and Conference. The address of the Conference has not yet been decided, but the information will be sent all Western Assemblies as soon as a special committee has selected a suitable meeting place in San Francisco.

January 9, 10 and 11, 1937, at Nashville, Tenn. Details concerning the Regional Conference and other sessions will be published in a later issue.

February 27 and 28, and March 1, 1937, at West Englewood and New York. A schedule of Conference and public sessions will be reported later.

April 3, 4 and 5, 1937, at West Englewood. This meeting will be entirely devoted to business of the N. S. A.

The final meeting will be immediately preceding the Annual Convention.

REGIONAL TEACHING CONFERENCE FOR ILLINOIS, IOWA, MINNESOTA AND WISCONSIN

The Regional Teaching Committee of these States has prepared a Regional Conference the sessions of which were held in Temple Foundation Hall on October 3 and 4.

The Apologies provided a most unusual opportunity for helpful and effective consultation. Three of the five sessions dealt with these subjects: The Divine Plan and the Individual; The Divine Plan and the Bahá'í Community; The Divine Plan: Its Challenge to This Region.

The Regional Teaching Committee acted as host at the Reception held the evening of October 3, while the final session was the Sunday afternoon public meeting, with Mrs. Dorothy Baker the speaker.

"THE AMERICAN BAHÁ'Í COMMUNITY SHOULD RISE AS NEVER BEFORE"

If we are to carry out the spiritual mission given to America by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in the Teaching Tablets of the Divine Plan to which the Guardian is directing our attention anew, nothing less is required than the reeducation of the life of every Bahá'í to the teaching of the Faith. As we study these Tablets, we are impressed by the parallel between our present responsibility and the early history of the American commonwealth; for, just as the material welfare of America was the consummation of the self-sacrifice of the early pioneers who were seeking a place to worship God freely and without restriction, ours is now the mission of offering to the world the opportunity to worship the One True God freely and fully under the guidance of Bahá'u'lláh.

On numerous occasions 'Abdu'l-Bahá directed attention to the fact that every moment has a specific purpose which, if caught in the lives and actions of the people, leads to victory. The call of the Guardian implies that we have now reached a moment in the history of this continent when we must translate to the objective world the influence which the Holy Spirit has been exerting upon the hearts and minds of receptive souls. Hence the supreme need of our rising to new heights in spreading the Message of the Kingdom. When "galvanized into action" we are assured of the fulfillment of the Divine Plan.

Let us always bear in mind that the success of our teaching work can be achieved only by each and every individual "however humble, however inexperienced," doing his utmost. No committee or committees can be substituted for this supreme privilege and necessity, and the extent of our victory will be measured by the extent to which each one fulfills this divine responsibility.

Reports received from various parts of America indicate that the friends are responding to the call in an enthusiastic and wholesome manner, adjusting their lives and plans for living to the weighty responsibility of renewed teaching effort. Some have already undertaken work in states where there are no Bahá’ís.

Following up Bahá’í contacts and openings made by Miss Gertrude Frazier in Reno, Nevada, Mrs. Kathryn Frankland of Berkeley, California, is now going to that city for six months to permanently establish the Faith there and thus bring the Light of Guidance to the state of Nevada.

Miss Frazier is now in Omaha, Nebraska, for a two-months’ period during which time she will introduce the Faith there, bringing the Message into another state where there are few believers.

Among the first to respond to the Guardian’s call for pioneers in the spring were Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Lillywhite and their daughter, Theresa, of the Denver Bahá’í Community, who have undertaken to establish the Cause in the city of Laramie, Wyoming. Two addresses at the University of Wyoming on the new life and trends in art provided opportunity for Mr. Lillywhite to speak of Bahá’u’lláh as the Source of all new life, and as a result of requests for more information, Bahá’í books have been placed in the libraries of the University and the Institute of the Latter Day Saints.

Mrs. Lillywhite has been giving a series of addresses on the Cause at the Women’s Club, one meeting of which was held in her own studio. Fireside meetings are held every nineteen days, and, in the true pioneer spirit, these friends write: “We are not going to give up until a pure functioning Bahá’í Community is established in Wyoming.”

The following are a few reports of efforts being made to add new cities to the list of those in states where the Cause is already established:

Through the cooperative efforts of Dr. Walter B. Guy and Dr. Zia Bagdadi in opening De Land, Florida, to the Teachings, there are promising prospects for a lively study group in the near future.

As a result of the assistance of the Bahá’ís of Philadelphia Mrs. Eva Batey, an isolated believer in Atlantic City, has been carrying on a weekly study class for inquirers for several months. A group of the Philadelphia friends visit the class at frequent intervals to lend enthusiasm and encouragement.

Cooperation has been offered to Dr. Stanwood Cobb by a prominent and interested woman in Richmond, Virginia, to introduce the Cause in that cultural center of the South. Plans are being made for a series of addresses during the fall months.

As the result of an address by Dr. Cobb at a gathering of neighbors at the home of an isolated believer in Clarendon, Virginia, a regular study class has been established there.

Mrs. Louise Caswell of Portland, Oregon, has been devoting several months to the work in Boise, Idaho, where the Message was given by Orella Rexford. There is now in that city a Bahá’í Group and several earnest students.

In addition to carrying on her responsibilities as secretary of the Regional Teaching Committee in the Pacific Northwest area, Mrs. Caswell is planning to introduce the Faith in one of the other states where the Faith is not yet established.

How many others are soon to arise and carry the banner to new fields?

THE CURRENT FINANCIAL BUDGET

The source of impetus in all Bahá’í activity is the conscious loyalty of the individual believers. From this ardent devotion must come that capacity for collective effort which it is the obligation and privilege of the local and National Spiritual Assembly to guide. The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh is a living organism, like a tree upon which every leaf has its life function to fulfill, not a mechanism to be kept in motion by constant pressure from administrative bodies.

It is a vital part of this conscious loyalty to acquire knowledge of all plans in which the entire community is expected to cooperate. The basis for the enlarged teaching plan this year is not so much the new form of committees, but the inspiration which the friends themselves receive from the teachings revealed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to North America.

Every Bahá’í responding to that vital and consecrated task should make effort to identify himself with the national, regional and local plans adopted in order to unify individual devotion and reinforce the action of every single believer.

Underlying the whole National plan which the Guardian has approved is the Financial Budget adopted by the N. S. A. and reported in the June issue of Bahá’í News. The items of that Budget represent a careful and detailed analysis of all recurrent expenses, plus the item of $30,000 believed to be essential for the promotion of the teaching work.

That Budget should receive conscientious attention and the wholehearted support of Assemblies, communities, groups and isolated Bahá’ís. Its items are of two kinds—such fixed expenses as insurance, taxes, administrative expense and Temple maintenance, and other items providing for the support of Committees, and for the Special Teaching Fund. Examination of all items indicates how the Faith has developed into a powerful administrative order capable of maintaining such institutions as the Temple, Green Acre, the Bosch property, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s house at Malden, Mass., and in addition the facilities required to discharge the duties of the N. S. A. and its Committees. The amount desired over and above these recurrent items—especially the Teaching Fund—represents nothing else than a direct appeal to the devotion of the American Bahá’ís.

In addition to knowledge of the fundamental financial plan, which seems typical of future Budgets for some years to come, the believers will naturally follow with keen interest the degree of response made by the entire community.

Up to October first, the response has been adequate only to maintain the recurrent items of expense. The N. S. A. has been able to vote no surplus into the Teaching Fund. Moreover, the sum of $2,000 is still outstanding on the cost of completing the Temple clerestory section from last year. In order to meet that cost, the N. S. A. was compelled to incur a loan, and while the loan has been reduced, the sum of $2,000 is still due.

The total receipts from September first to twenty-sixth were $2,339.28, a fair average of monthly contributions since the Convention. On the basis of a Budget of $60,000, the contributions must average $5,000 per month, which means a monthly contribution of $50 from a Bahá’í community with twenty-five members, $200 a month from a community having one hundred believers, etc.

The degree of conscious knowledge which a believer attains of the financial plan is, in the Guardian’s own words, a fair test of his devotion to the Teachings and to the Faith as a whole. We behold the world turning to dust and ashes before our very eyes. Naught will endure save love and sacrifice rendered to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. To tarry at this late hour is to relinquish the Path and abide in sullen gloom.

TURNING THE PAGES OF THE PUBLICITY SCRAPBOOK

The pages of the National Publicity Clipping Book for 1936-1937 have just been brought up to date and the committee wishes to share with the friends, and especially the publicity committees, some of the outstanding news releases which it already contains this year.

On the Chicago pages appear two pictures of the Temple recently published. The one published in the Chicago Daily News, July 12th, is the latest picture of the Temple wherein just the Dome emerges from a framework of trees in full foliage. The caption chosen by the editor is “Like a Jeweled Crown, Rising to the Sky.” July 29th, the Chicago Tribune contained one with this caption, “Purple Martins Gather By Thousands for Fight Southward” and under the picture: Scene at sundown near the Bahá’í Temple in Wilmette showing birds sitting on wires. For several years the martins have chosen this spot, thousands of them assembled in the dome of the building also.” The front page of the Tribune carried a two column article headed “Martins Pick Bahá’í Temple for Roundup.” A later article stated that they were “Driven from their perch on the telephone wires and the clerestory of the Bahá’í Temple by strong north winds.” Even the birds are trying to attract the attention of the world to Bahá’u’lláh’s Temple!

In Miami, Florida, Margaret Atwater has most effectively made use of a forum column in reply to an article appearing in the Miami Daily News, on Bible Prophecy and also a short article at the time of the passing of Lord Allenby, recalling the part he played in the Knighting of ’Abdu’l-Bahá.

The Press-Scimitar of Memphis, Tenn., August 18th issue, heralds the pioneer work of Mrs. Marion Little. The article is headed “Brings Bahá’í Faith to the South” and follows with a quotation from the writings of Bahá’u’lláh and then continues with a brief history of the Cause and its principles. The unique feature in connection with this article is that in the first column to the left of it is a picture of President Roosevelt, with hands outstretched as though pointing to the column on the Bahá’í Faith. Above this picture is the caption “The Way to Peace.”

New York’s pages contain many articles on the Cause published in the Flatbush Observer and New York World Telegram; an article in the July issue of The Crisis on “The World Issue of Race” by Horace Holley, as well as articles announcing the arrival of Martha Root in this country.

Washington, D. C. sent in an appreciation of the latest “Bahá’í World” published in “The Christian Leader” June 6th, in which the writer states among other things... “This Bahá’í Book is one of the most elaborate and complete that any religious group has issued.”

In Wilmette, the weekly news published in Magazine form called “Wilmette Life” has besides its generous publications of news items on all activities in the Bahá’í House of Worship, published a front page picture of our glorious Temple with this beautiful description below it: “Like a jewel, in its setting of generous foliage and bright summer sky is this world famous dome of the Bahá’í Temple on the lake shore in Wilmette. This Universal House of Worship is the mecca for thousands of religious pilgrims and interested tourists every year. The dome compares in size with the largest structures of its type in the world. It gives place to none in beauty.”

Added to these outstanding features, pages which show real activity on the part of believers as well as committees in the publicity field are those of Boise, Idaho; Geneva, Binghamton and Rochester, New York; Long Beach, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and San Francisco, California, where the summer school sessions and the arrival of Martha Root stands out. Teaneck, N. J., has a full page of lengthy articles describing the Annual Souvenir Feast held at Evergreen Place; Norwich, Connecticut has some fine publicity through the efforts of an isolated believer; Racine, Wisconsin and Urbana, Illinois have also made a beautiful start for the new Bahá’í year.

We hope this word picture of the press book since April, 1936, will inspire those of you who haven’t sent in any clippings since April, to work even harder toward your goal. If the committee can help you in any way do not hesitate to call upon us.

Two clippings of all publicity is needed this year. Please send them to Mrs. Nina Matthiesen, Chairman, 4612 Malden Street, Chicago, Illinois.

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life.—Bahá'u'lláh.

Mrs. Gertrude Anderson, Chicago.
Mr. Jacob Schmit, St. Paul.

THE INTERNATIONAL YOUTH BULLETIN

The National Youth Committee is making an effort this year to develop the bulletin Bahá'í Youth into an "international" youth bulletin with all that implies. We feel that it is the organ for fostering a common opinion among the Bahá'í youth of the world. A recent letter to the committee reads: "Let us make Bahá'í Youth a conference ground where we can meet each other in print." That expresses very well the goal we have set.

But to develop the bulletin we need articles and news items. The news items from each group should be sent to the area sub-secretary. In the East to Zahab Holden, 48 Terrace Avenue, Albany, New York; in the Chicago area to Florence Mattoon, 1098 Pratt Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; in the Pacific coast area to Dorothy Weaver, 675 West Arden Avenue, Glendale, California.

Articles for the bulletin should be sent direct to Kenneth Christian, 17 Jane Street, Malone, New York. They should be brief and deal with the Bahá'í way of life or some other definite aspect of the teachings or the common problems that youth face today. Poems also may be submitted. The committee hopes that the Bahá'í youth of the United States and Canada will respond at once with contributions for the youth bulletin.

LETTER FROM NATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF IRAN

We have the great pleasure of informing our dear Bahá'í brothers and sisters throughout the Bahá'í world that the 3d annual Bahá'í Convention of Iran was held in the "Haziratu'l-Quds" (Bahá'í center) in Teheran from the 6th to 12th of the Rizwan feasts to form the 3d National Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Iran.

The delegates representing the friends in this country were present and discussed various important questions of general interest to the Cause and submitted their decisions and recommendations to the newly formed National Assembly.

We give hereafter the names of the members of the newly appointed Assembly:

1.—Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan.
2.—Mr. Vali'ullah Varghá.
3.—Jenabi Fazel Mazandarani.
4.—Mr. Shua'ullah Alá'i.
5.—Jenabi Amin-i-Amin.
6.—Dr. Youness Afruikhhte.
7.—Mr. Mahmod Badii.
8.—Mr. Ahmad Poor.
9.—Mr. Ahmad Yazdáni.

The members of the governing body of the Assembly are:

1.—Mr. Vali'ullah Varghá: President.
2.—Dr. Youness Afruikhhte: Vice-President.
3.—Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan: Secretary.
4.—Mr. Shua'ullah Alá'i: Treasurer.

The postal and telegraphic address of the Assembly remain unchanged as last year, viz.:

Postal address:
Mr. Ali Akbar Foroutan,
Khiaban-i-Pahlevi, Koucheh-i-Mehdieh, 2002, Teheran, Iran.

Cable address: Teheran, Rouhani.

Thanks to divine confirmation, discussions were conducted with a spirit of complete harmony and sincere cooperation throughout the whole period of the sittings of the Convention and the delegates were much satisfied with the success of the discussions.

It is indeed a source of great pleasure for us to see that, under the wise leadership and guidance of our beloved Guardian, the friends have attained such a degree of sincerity, spirituality and sense of cooperation which is far beyond the limits of worldly relations. We, the members of this Assembly, earnestly hope that, with the help of Bahá'u'lláh, we may be able to carry out our sacred and important duties in the course of the present year to the entire satisfaction of our beloved Guardian.

We shall be very pleased to receive your letters and to hear the news of your activities. We hope that we may be able to correspond with you Assembly and to convey to the friends in Iran friendly messages and news from you.

For The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Iran.

Yours faithfully,

A. Foroutan
Secretary.

CLASSIFICATION OF MATERIALS FOR PRESERVATION IN NATIONAL AND LOCAL BAHÁ'Í ARCHIVES

Note: This classification has been made in order to clarify the nature of the material to be preserved in the Archives, with a suitable distinction between that which should be sent to the National Archives and that which should enter into the Archives established by a local Spiritual Assembly.

I. Tablets and relics of Bahá'u'lláh and the Báb, whether original Tablets or reproductions. This material is essentially National in character.

II. Tablets and relics of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The Tablets should be original, signed Tablets, or authentic reproductions such as photostat copies. Tablets should be accompanied by original translation if possible. All original Tablets should be preserved in the National Archives. Photostats of Tablets revealed to the Spiritual Assembly, or to individual believers, might well be placed in the local Archives. As regards the nature of relics, the Guardian has given the following explanation: "The general principle should be that any object used by Him in person should be preserved for posterity, whether in the local or National Archives. It is the duty and responsibility of the Bahá'í Assemblies to ascertain carefully whether such objects are genuine or not, and to exercise the utmost care and caution in the matter."

III. Letters of Shoghi Effendi. These are of three different classes—those written to the N. S. A. and the entire American Bahá'í Community; those written to local Assemblies; and those written to individual believers. The National Assembly is preserving the national letters of the Guardian, particularly as they occasionally contain matters confidential to that body. The N. S. A. plans to photostat all the Guardian's letters, at which time all originals can be gone over with a view to their preservation in the National Archives. Original letters to local Assemblies are for the most part not confidential and can be preserved in the National Archives, with photostats in the local Archives. Letters to individual believers can be sent to the National Archives and photostats obtained for the recipient and for the local Archives.

IV. National events and activities. Such events as 'Abdu'l-Bahá's American journey, the founding of the Temple, early historical records of Star of the West, Baha'i Publishing Committee, Green Acre, Geyserville and Louhelen Ranch and other activities of more than local importance constitute an impression aspect of Bahá'í history, and all original documents and rec-Orders should be turned over to the N. S. A., if not already done, for its examination and subsequent deposit in the National Archives.

V. Local records and activities. Records and documents pertaining to such activities are of two classes: the Minutes and correspondence of the Spiritual Assembly, which are preserved by the Assembly itself, and non-administrative material of historical interest and importance, such as programs, newspaper clippings, Historical Record Cards, etc. It is recommended that each Spiritual Assembly also provide a bound book in which its Archives Committee can keep a record of enrollments of new believers and also deaths or removals from the community.

VI. Bahá'í publications. A complete file of all publications, such as books, pamphlets, magazines, news letters, etc., of official Bahá'í character is being developed in the National Archives, and the cooperation of the friends is requested to make this complete. Out of print Bahá'í books and pamphlets will be appreciated.

VII. Individual records and papers. Families in possession of the papers belonging to such prominent workers as those named in "America and the Most Great Peace" will appreciate that such records are part of the history of the Cause and might well be turned over to the Archives and History Committee. Other personal records might similarly be turned over to the local Archives Committee.
BACK NUMBERS OF 'BAHA'I NEWS'
The constant growth of the Bahá’í community, and the more studious attitude developed in recent years, has raised a very difficult problem in connection with requests for back numbers.

The N. S. A. feels it necessary to report that at present there is not available one single file of copies from No. 1, dated December, 1924, to the current issues, but there are several sets which lack only a few copies. These sets are offered for sale at $25.00 each, and Assemblies or individual believers desiring them are urged to obtain one as soon as possible.

The files from No. 45 to date are more complete, and individual back numbers will be supplied at 10c each as long as they last.

The October issue of Bahá’í Youth will terminate the first year of a notable and exhilarating international enterprise. To those who are not acquainted with our bulletin we present the following quotations from our pages of information and, we trust, inspiration:

"As in the last century the Dawn-Breakers recreated Persia, so must the Bahá’ís of today recreate the world! ... May Bahá’í Youth unite us and keep us always strong in the knowledge of a common destiny and action."

"Bahá’u’lláh spoke to the world—when He raised His voice there were no Bahá’ís—He addressed Himself to the soul of man. Do we suppose that only those who have had the privilege of hearing of Him and accepting Him, are His workers in this day?"

"For the subjugation of small physical appetites, the infinite power of Bahá’u’lláh is present and we may draw upon it."

"In unity with our fellows throughout the world we have joined in a new determination to serve the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh."

BAHA'I YOUTH BULLETIN
The October issue of Bahá’í Youth will terminate the first year of a notable and exhilarating international enterprise. To those who are not acquainted with our bulletin we present the following quotations from our pages of information and, we trust, inspiration:

"As in the last century the Dawn-Breakers recreated Persia, so must the Bahá’ís of today recreate the world! ... May Bahá’í Youth unite us and keep us always strong in the knowledge of a common destiny and action."

"Bahá’u’lláh spoke to the world—when He raised His voice there were no Bahá’ís—He addressed Himself to the soul of man. Do we suppose that only those who have had the privilege of hearing of Him and accepting Him, are His workers in this day?"

"For the subjugation of small physical appetites, the infinite power of Bahá’u’lláh is present and we may draw upon it."

"In unity with our fellows throughout the world we have joined in a new determination to serve the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh."
"The Baha'i Faith is the only agent which uncompromisingly cuts through the surface (of age-old passion) to reveal the unity of purpose which animates all group activity, spiritual and material, in the evolutionary process of civilization."

"We cannot teach and serve the Faith of Baha'u'llah sincerely and adequately until as individuals we are clearly impelled by the spiritual standards of conduct which become allegiance to the Baha'i Faith.... In this period of Formation the youth of the Baha'i world community must break from the worthless standards of the times and unfold the standards of God. We can at once begin the establishment of these new standards if as individuals and as groups we adopt the spiritual attitude of nobility which will differentiate us from others."

And from our beloved Guardian through his secretary:

"Not until all the friends come to realize that every one is able, in his own measure, to deliver the Message, can they hope to reach the goal that has been set before them by a loving and wise Master."

"... Baha'i youth throughout the world must not only strive to spread knowledge of the Teachings, but also and above all to live them as completely as circumstances permit. They should attract people to the Cause not so much through the exposition of its principles and teachings but through the power of their individual lives. The Baha'i youth must indeed exemplify through their lives, both as individuals and as conscious and active members of the Baha'i community, the purity, the effectiveness and sublime character of their Faith. They can teach best when they live up to the standard inculcated by Baha'u'llah."

Also from the Guardian to a member of the youth committee:

"The response of various youth groups in both the East and the West to your Committee's call has been very gratifying. It should be now your Committee's chief aim to maintain alive this spirit of solidarity and fellowship that you have succeeded in awakening among various Baha'i youth groups throughout the world. Your Youth Bulletin, he hopes, will give you the full means to accomplish this aim."

"Baha'i Youth wants to succeed. Baha'i Youth wants to consolidate the Baha'i youth in all countries. Baha'i Youth wants to maintain alive the spirit of solidarity and fellowship awakened among Baha'i youth groups throughout the world."

Baha'i Youth wants subscriptions. We urge all Assemblies to cooperate by obtaining subscriptions. (The New York youth have already subscribed almost 100%!) Baha'i Youth is published quarterly. You may have your copy by sending ten cents, or a year's subscription by sending forty cents, to Miss Zeah Holden, 48 Terrace Avenue, Albany, N. Y.

With our subscriptions duly augmented we can approach our second year with a sense of confidence and effectiveness.

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

1. To the National Spiritual Assembly

The Importance of the Archives

"The importance of the institution of Baha'i Archives is not due only to the many teaching facilities it provides, but is especially to be found in the vast amount of historical data and information it offers both to the present-day administrators of the Cause, and to the Baha'i historians of the future. The institution of Baha'i Archives is indeed a most valuable storehouse of information regarding all the aspects of the Faith, administrative as well as doctrinal. Future generations of believers will be surely in a better position than we are to truly and adequately appreciate the many advantages and facilities which the institution of the Archives offers to individual believers and also to the community at large.

"Now that the Cause is rapidly passing through so many different phases of its evolution, it is the time for the friends to exert their utmost in order to preserve as much as they can of the sacred relics and various other precious objects that are associated with the lives of the Founders of the Faith, and particularly the Tablets They have revealed.

"Every believer should realize that he has a definite responsibility to shoulder in this matter, and to help, to whatever extent he can, in rendering successful the valuable work which national and local Baha'i Archives committees are so devotedly accomplishing for the Faith in America."—September 25, 1936.

Promulgation of the Divine Plan

"Dear and prized co-workers:

"I cannot allow this communication to be sent without adding a few words in person and stress afresh the significance of the undertaking in which the entire Baha'i community has embarked. The promulgation of the Divine Plan, unveiled by our departed Master in the darkest days of one of the severest ordeals which humanity has ever experienced, is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to fulfill their unimaginably glorious Destiny. As the proclamation of the Message reverberates throughout the land, as its resistless march gathers momentum, as the field of its operation widens, and the numbers of its upholders and champions multiply, its potentialities will correspondingly unfold, exerting a most beneficent influence not only on every community throughout the Baha'i world, but on the immediate fortunes of a travelling society. The repercussions of this campaign are already apparent in Europe, India, Egypt, Iraq and even among the sorely tried communities in Persia and Russia. The Faith of God is gaining in stature, effectiveness and power. Not until, however, the great enterprise which you are now conducting runs its full course and attains its final objective, at its appointed time, can its world-encompassing benefits be fully apprehended or revealed. The perseverance of the American believers will, no doubt, ensure the ultimate realization of these benefits."—November 14, 1936.

2. To Individual Baha'is

(Published with the Guardian's Consent)

To Mr. Bernard Gottlieb, April 17, 1936.

"He quite agrees that the dangers facing the modern youth are becoming increasingly grave, and call for immediate solution. But, as experience clearly shows, the remedy to this truly sad and perplexing situation is not to be found in traditional and ecclesiastical religion. The dogmatism of the church has been discarded once for all. What can control youth and save it from the pitfalls of the crass materialism of the age is the power of a genuine, constructive and living Faith such as the one revealed to the world by Baha'u'llah. Religion, as in the past, is still the world's sole hope, but not that form of religion which our ecclesiastical leaders strive vainly to preach. Divorced from true religion, morals lose their effectiveness and cease to guide and control man's individual and social life. But when true religion is combined with true ethics, then moral progress becomes a possibility and not a mere ideal.

"The need of our modern youth is for such a type of ethics founded on pure religious faith. Not until these two are rightly combined and brought into full action can there be any hope for the future of the race."

THE SPIRIT OF TEACHING

If we regard Baha'i teaching only in terms of lectures and other formal public activities, the inherent capacity of the Baha'i community to serve the Faith can never be fulfilled. It will not be possible solely by methods conforming to past religious practices to establish the Faith over the vast area of the world in the allotted time. In order to meet the Guardian's supreme appeal, the believers must consider teaching from a more intimate, a more universal point of view.

Why should any small group of Baha'is remain inactive until some "teacher" arrives from another city to conduct meetings? Why should any isolated believer feel helpless merely from lack of experience in public speaking? Is a divine Faith impotent to find true expression simply because a believer happens not to possess certain qualities most conspicuous to non-believers?

The source of all qualities is faith. He who has faith can serve even if he be deprived of health, wealth and the talents which the public most readily recognizes. For faith is a condition of universal love stirring within the soul. The true believer can at all times be conscious of a supreme blessing, a positive joy which conveys its essence to others by powers no school can teach. The man or woman of sincere faith stands forth as a lighted candle in spiritual night. From within emanates a reflection of the Holy Spirit which will reveal itself to others without formal eloquence or external ritual.

It is from this deep, joyous, constant possession of certitude and blessing that we must all pray to be able to serve the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh. Because the law of unity is variety and not uniformity, that inward devotion will fulfill itself in myriad ways, in some through eloquence, in others through steadfast ethical qualities, in still others through a calm elation shedding its perfume upon other souls. The spirit of teaching, far from being dogmatic insistence, consists solely in our love for God which we cannot help but share.

At this level of inner experience, all believers are teachers. The most remote Bahá'í, apparently deprived of human advantages, can all unconsciously so reflect the Light as to inspire an entire community. Deprived of this universal essence, the most humanly favored of individuals will fail to serve the Faith. Let us remember that surpassing Tablet in which 'Abdu'l-Bahá guided the souls: "The essential purpose of Faith and Belief is to enable the inner being of man with the outpourings of grace from on high.... Wherefore it is incumbent upon all Bahá'ís to ponder this very delicate and vital matter in their hearts, that, unlike other religions, they may not content themselves with the noise, the clamor, the hollowness of religious doctrine. Nay, rather they should exemplify in every aspect of their lives those attributes and virtues that are born of God...."

If we can but learn humbly to perceive the teaching activity of the American Bahá'í community as a deeper awareness of this truth, the formal and definite plans now under way will be reinforced a thousandfold. Nothing but the power of the Holy Spirit can conquer the nations and continents. That power surrounds each and every soul sincerely turned to Bahá'u'lláh. Let us base our efforts upon radiant joy that we have been admitted into the Kingdom. Let us not be overawed by an external power, nor succumb to a merely human restlessness. Holding fast to the firm cord of divine Guidance, let us march forward, one and all, with the hosts of Destiny itself.

"Whosoever is in the privacy of his chamber, the verses revealed by God, the scattering angels of the Almighty shall scatter abroad the fragrance of the words uttered by his mouth, and shall cause the heart of every righteous man to throb. Though he may, at first, remain unaware of its effect, yet the virtues of the grace vouchsafed unto him must needs sooner or later exercise its influence upon his soul." (Gleanings, p. 295).

REGIONAL CONFERENCE AND PUBLIC MEETINGS IN SAN FRANCISCO

The members of the National Spiritual Assembly are most gratified over the results of the conferences and meetings held at San Francisco on November 12. It has been attended by a beautiful hospitality and deeply conscious of the unity and vigor of the believers who attended the meetings from the Pacific Coast communities, the members feel that the spirit of teaching was truly exemplified during those five days.

The program carried out included two public meetings in the Palace Hotel, a Feast provided by the Assemblies of the Bay region, a day of consultation with the believers, dinner with the Spiritual Assembly of San Francisco, a visit to the Summer School at Geyserville, where the members dined with Mr. and Mrs. Bosch, besides the sessions of the N. S. A. devoted to current matters.

Despite the fact that the city was engaged in celebrating the opening of the great bridge, the two thousand invitations which had been issued for the public meetings, and very extensive publicity carried on in the press for more than a week produced two large and interested audiences for the public meetings. It was estimated that about four hundred persons attended the meeting on November 12, and about seven hundred on November 15.

Mrs. Stuart W. French presided at the public meeting on November 12. An address on "Bahá'u'lláh's Message to a Chaotic Age" was delivered by Mr. Alfred E. Lunt, followed by one on "The Implications of a World Faith" by Mr. Horace Holley.

On Sunday evening, November 15, before an audience filling the Gold Room of the Palace Hotel, Mr. Leroy Ioss served as chairman, the speakers being Mr. George O. Latimer, with the subject "Order for a Troubled World," and Mr. Mountfort Mills, who spoke on "The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh."

Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm presided at the Bahá'í Feast held in the auditorium of the Sorosis Club Saturday evening, November 14, and Mr. Mills conducted the regional consultation Sunday morning and afternoon.

The spirit of unity and devotion characterizing these meetings was truly exemplified in the announcements which the N. S. A. was privileged to make, first, that donations of more than five thousand dollars have been received for the Teaching Fund; second, that a contribution of five thousand dollars has been received to meet the cost of publishing The Bahá'í World, Vol. VI, third, that a special contribution had been made to make final payment on the Temple loan, and fourth, that a believer has offered to construct a new Bahá'í Hall at Green Acre, and finally, that a believer has also offered to construct a new dormitory at the Geyserville School.

It is surely significant that the final Temple construction bill now having been paid, the teaching work can now go forward with full energy. Since 1925, the American Bahá'í community, with the Guardian's constant help and with valued help also from believers in other lands, has completed three Temple construction contracts—the body of the edifice, the external decoration of the dome, and the decoration of the clerestory section.

"THE AMERICAN BELIEVERS MUST PRESS ON"

Report from National Teaching Committee

"By the righteousness of God! Should a man, all alone, arise in the name of Bahá and put on the armour of His love, him will the Almighty cause to be victorious, though the forces of heaven and earth be arrayed against him...."

Stirred by this and numerous other assurances of divine assistance in the "Gleanings," and in the Teaching Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the American Bahá'ís are now responding with con-enthusiasm and made many friends for the Cause through whom good follow­where she was received with much ition of a detailed account of all that has been accomplished during the past plications are descending in floods upon all who set forth with perseverance and confidence to spread the Light of Truth near and far.
Space does not permit the publication of a detailed account of all that has been accomplished during the past few weeks, but the following statements are offered to indicate in what manner the believers are discharging their new responsibilities and translating their faith into the action called for in the recent messages of the Guardian.
In New Fields
Miss Gertrude Frazier’s pioneer work in Omaha reported in the last BAHAI NEWS continues to produce inspiring results. Mrs. Mabel Ives of Chicago is now assisting her with the study class that has been established. The students are diligently preparing themselves for Bahá’í membership and are cooperating in all the efforts being made to awaken the city to the Teachings. One book store has asked to carry Bahá’í books for sale and these are being displayed in a special section with the photograph of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.
Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Lillywhite who were among the first to answer the call for pioneers, have reported unexpected changes in their material affairs which will enable them to follow through their teaching objective which is the establishment of the Cause in Wyoming.
Mrs. Marion Little, pioneering in the states of Louisiana and Missouri, made a trip as far north as Memphis, Tennessee, speaking to high school and community audiences where she was received with much enthusiasm and made many friends for the Cause through whom good follow-up work will be possible.
Mrs. Margaret Kruce of Seattle who will go to Alaska in the spring to re-
The Cleveland Assembly reports pioneer work undertaken in Painesville, Sandusky, Norwalk, and Oberlin, Ohio. Dayton is holding bi-weekly meetings in Xenia, Ohio, and has made valuable contacts with the university there.

Members of the Lima Assembly have initiated work in Defiance, Celina and West Unity, Ohio. New cities recently opened in Michigan are: Hillsdale, Pentwater, and Mishawaka. Library books have been placed by the Baha'is in the public libraries of all these cities.

Mr. Philip Sprague reports that Port Chester, Wantagh and Hempstead, New York, have recently formed study groups.

In order to acquaint the prominent citizens of Colorado Springs with the Baha'i Faith, Mrs. Louise Mathews recently gave a series of four carefully planned lectures on the "Great Religions," paving the way for a later series on the Cause itself. A lecture on the Cause at Colorado University was another important piece of work done by Mrs. Mathews this fall.

Inter-Community Teaching Conferences

Five regions thus far have held Inter-Community Teaching Conferences under the plan approved by the National Spiritual Assembly. The first one, for the Baha'i Communities of Michigan, was held during the summer school at Lohelen. Every Baha'i Group and every Assembly in the state was represented and definite plans were made to capitalize the enthusiasm which was generated for increased teaching service.

The second conference, held at Greenacre in August, had as its central theme: individual teaching service. Many concrete suggestions for both individual and group work opened the way for an active winter campaign in the eastern states.

The conference of Arizona and Southern California Baha'is held in Los Angeles in September was devoted to a discussion of successful teaching methods. The evening session which was open to the public attracted a very large number of new people.

The Baha'is of British Columbia, Washington and Oregon held their Inter-Community Conference in Seattle early in October. As a result of the consultation, each Community was assigned a specific area within which to undertake new teaching work. Several new cities have already been opened, and a number of new teachers have been called upon to serve.

The largest area to be included in an Inter-Community Teaching Conference was that composed of the states of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin, meeting in Foundation Hall for a two-day session. The inspiration and exchange of teaching ideas and experiences stimulated much new enthusiasm which will be directed toward greater Assembly activity during the fall and winter months.

Teaching Circuits

One of the purposes of the Inter-Community Teaching Conferences held thus far has been the formation of teaching circuits among Assemblies located fairly near each other. A number of Assemblies have reported more or less progress in circuit programs. Several have proved them to be a most effective and efficient method for extension work in near-by cities where the Cause has not yet been established.

The program for the Upper New York circuit which includes eleven cities is completed through April with Mr. Mason Remey, Mrs. Marzieh Carpenter, Miss Julia Goldman, Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Mr. Mountfort Mills, Mr. Horace Holley and Mr. Louis G. Gregory as speakers. A local "circuit news" prepared by the Geneva Assembly, keeps the circuits in the circuit informed of plans and suggestions for follow-up.

A circuit of nine cities in the vicinity of New York and another in New Jersey of fifteen cities will be inaugurated this fall. Assemblies in Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois, are also lining up programs and speakers for circuit work.

Assembly Activities

Baha'i Communities which are too widely scattered to participate in circuit programs are not remaining inactive. Many have reported plans for more intensive local teaching campaigns with extensive advertising of all kinds. Glendale, California, has arranged for a public center and is arranging an attractive winter program.

Portland, Oregon, has sent out several hundred invitations to important people announcing a forum on social and religious subjects.

San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley Assemblies have planned special series of public meetings to follow up the interest aroused in the San Francisco Bay area as a result of the two large public meetings held in connection with the recent session of the National Spiritual Assembly in San Francisco.

The teaching work in Toronto, Canada, received new impetus this fall through a visit of Mrs. Lorol Schopflocher. Excellent publicity was given her address in the Toronto newspapers which are circulated throughout the province and as a result the way has been opened for articles on the Cause.

Individual Service

As Baha'i Communities increase their local public teaching work and release for service in new fields many on whom they have depended for much of their teaching activity, the responsibilities of all the believers are greatly increased. Souls who are attracted must be confirmed and every Baha'i has the capacity to teach and guide some one. Therefore, the fireside gatherings and small study groups are becoming more and more important and offer to those who cannot travel or do public teaching work a rich opportunity to prepare the quickened souls for Baha'i membership.

Teaching by community and individual example is a valuable concomitant in the great public campaign which the American believers have undertaken. The Guardian has repeatedly stated that the qualities of love, unity and enthusiasm among the believers constitute a powerful example of the high standards of our Faith and are essential prerequisites to successful teaching. This was strikingly illustrated in a letter recently received from an individual who wrote that he had "read and heard of so many good deeds of the Baha'yi religion and its followers" that he had decided to become one and asked for instructions as to the necessary steps.

Surely today, no less than in the days of the Letters of the Living, should the friends of God heed these words of the Bab: "You are the bearers of the Name of God in this day. You have been chosen as the reservoirs of His mystery. It behooves each one of you to manifest the attributes of God, and to exemplify by your deeds and words the signs of His righteousness, His power and glory."

TEACHING CONTACTS IN NEW AREAS

The international teaching campaign which has been inaugurated by the American Baha'is under the recent instructions of the Guardian calls for the establishment of the Cause in every State of the United States, every Province in Canada, and every Republic in Central and South America within the next eight years. Examination of the map which accompanied the June issue of Baha'i News reveals the magnitude of the task before us in the United States alone, for there where the Cause has made more rapid progress than in the other countries of the western hemisphere there are still ten States without a single believer and twenty-five without Local Spiritual Assemblies. The cooperation of every believer in the United States and Canada is essential to the achievement of the objective set for us by the Guardian. We are therefore appealing to the entire Baha'i Community to report either to the secretary of the Regional Teaching Committee or of the National Teaching Committee, depending on jurisdiction, the following:

1. Names and addresses of friends or acquaintances in all states and provinces, and particularly where there are now no Baha'is, so that literature may be sent or some contacts made for work there.

2. Names of cities where you have done some Baha'i work or where you know someone else has made some contacts, with the names and addresses of interested individuals and whatever pertinent details are necessary to adequate follow-up.

It is very important to have this information centralized both for the use of those who are going out into new states to teach and to insure adequate follow-up of all teaching opportunities.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

New memberships in local Baha'i communities have been reported as follows:

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

The Library Committee wishes to bring to the attention of the local Spiritual Assemblies the main objectives of its program for this year.

The plan is to concentrate upon placing Baha'i books in as many College and University Libraries as possible.

It is the expressed wish of Shoghi Effendi that University students be informed of the Teachings, therefore this work forms an important aspect of the general teaching effort.

The National Spiritual Assembly has given the Library Committee a definite book budget by which the Committee will be enabled to supply six important books to about seventy-five Libraries this year.

The Committee wishes to ask the cooperation of every local Assembly and suggest that each Assembly appoint a special committee to call on the Librarian of any College or University within its area. The Assemblies are requested to send the Library Committee a list of all Baha'i works already in the Libraries visited by the special committee, not only for the permanent records of the Library Committee but also to avoid duplication.

Another suggestion is that at public meetings, the chairman mention the fact that Baha'i literature can be obtained in the Public Library. This statement could also be added to the newspaper advertisements of Baha'i meetings.

In concentrating upon College and University Libraries this year, the Committee does not mean that the important work of placing literature in Public Libraries is to be neglected, especially where the important books are not now available. Many Public Libraries, however, have received good donations of books in previous years, while less attention has been paid to Colleges and Universities.
The Committee hopes to have an early response from each local Assembly.

Martha Woodsum, Chairman
Grace Bastede, Secretary

INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

The work of this Committee is full of extraordinary possibilities, but the preliminary planning must be carefully done in order to meet the special problems arising from such a vast teaching area.

With the limited funds so far available, the first task is to publish necessary pamphlets and literature in Spanish and Portuguese, and also to make available literature in German, Italian and other languages used by extensive groups in South America. As rapidly as possible, a number of book depots will be arranged at strategic points in South America, so that as the demand for the literature increases the books and pamphlets can be supplied from a nearby point.

The Committee is also developing a special mailing list of editors, liberal organizations and influential persons which can be used from time to time, thus preparing the way for the traveling teachers.

To review the work already done. First of all we have the pioneering journey carried out by Miss Martha L. Root many years ago. Then Miss Holzappple established herself at Bahia, and has translated and published "The Goal of a New World Order," a small prayer book, "Baha'u'llah and the New Era" (Spanish and Portuguese), and has translated Kitab-I-Iqan but this is not yet printed. Mrs. Dodge, another American Bahá'í, is now resident in Chile. Mr. and Mrs. Mathews traveled to South America in 1935 and Mr. and Mrs. Blakely taught in several cities during 1936. As the result of all these efforts, a good beginning has been made, but the effort must be intensified a thousandfold.

Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart accompanied the delegates who attended the women's peace meeting at Buenos Aires preceding the meeting now being held by the American Nations. Mrs. Stewart speaks Spanish and was in fact born in South America of missionary parents. Her report of her Bahá'í teaching is awaited with great interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathews plan to make another journey beginning January, 1937, which will take them to South America and afterward to other countries.

As funds are available, the Inter-America Committee hope to assist in making it possible for other teachers to work in this field. A believer able to undertake this pioneering work should appraise the Chairman of the Inter-America Committee and also write the American Consul in the city where he or she plans to reside, inquiring what work is available in that center and mentioning the believer's experience and qualifications.

The information desired by the Inter-America Committee includes the following points: knowledge of Spanish or other language used in South America; bow long the teacher can remain; and whether he or she can be self-supporting after reaching the new post of service.

The official language of South America is Spanish but Portuguese is spoken throughout Brazil, Spanish in the Argentine, Northern Chile and Peru, German in Southern Chile and Patagonia. The official religion is Roman Catholic, but in every city there are Theosophists who are friendly and will share their platform with Bahá'ís. The branches of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. are not allowed to extend privileges to strangers unless the visitor presents a letter from the American headquarters. This is located at 420 Lexington Avenue, New York.

Women traveling alone should endeavor to join a party or organization, since Spanish customs are rigidly preserved. Hotels often make their prices prohibitive for a woman without escort. Correspondence intended for the Inter-America Committee should be addressed until further notice to Mrs. E. R. Mathews, c/o Bahá'í Center, 119 West 57th St., New York, N. Y.

INDEX COMMITTEE

The Index Committee would like short general subject indexes of all the writings of the Báb, Baha'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi. If any believer has worked on these, or is now working, or would like to work, will he or she please communicate, as soon as possible, with the Chairman of the Index Committee, Mrs. H. A. Harding, 704 West Nevada Street, Urbana, Ill. The plan is eventually to publish a general index, in one alphabetical sequence, of all these basic works of our Faith.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE

Baha'u'llah and the New Era, by J. E. Esslemont. The Publishing Committee would like to explain why copies of this work have been unobtainable for the past few months. The N. S. A. has taken up with Shoghi Effendi the matter of making a few corrections in the text before authorizing a new printing. The Guardian has passed upon these suggestions, and as soon as possible the book as revised will be sent to press. The publishing date cannot be announced at this time, but the Committee will inform the friends through Baha'i News.

Baha'i Study Course. This course has been sold with three books for reference—Baha'u'lláh and the New Era, Foundations of World Unity, and Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Until the Esslemont book is again available, the Study Course and the other two books will be sold at the special price of $1.15 net.

Life Eternal, compiled from Writings of Baha'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá by Mary Runcy Movius. This work, very attractively printed and bound by the Roycroft Shops, is promised for December 15. The contents are arranged under the following chapter heads: Kingdom of the Spirit, Divine Instruction, Prayers for the Departed, Divine Promises, and Resurrection of the Spirit. 178 pages. It is intended especially for those non-believers conscious of spiritual needs not fulfilled by their own religious affiliation. Per copy, $2.50.

A World Faith, Studies in the Teachings of Baha'u'lláh. The nine articles contributed to World Order Magazine under this title last year have been issued in book form, with a prefatory statement taken from words of Shoghi Effendi. Bound in blue paper, 85 pages, $0.25.

A believer wishing to complete a Bahá'í Library has requested the Committee to obtain one copy of each of the following titles, which are now out of print. Any of the friends willing to sell one or more are requested to communicate with the Publishing Committee.

The books and booklets wanted are:

The New Revelation, Fitzgerald; Peace of the World, Remey; Whence? Why? Whither?, Dodge; Letter from St. Jean D'Arc; Tablets from 'Abdu'l-Bahá to E. E. Wrestling Brewster; Utterances to Young Men, 1901; Akka Lights, Hanning; Divine Revelation Basis of Civilization, Haddad; Letter Written in Behalf of Friends of Isphahan to American Believers; Martinist's Report, Sassi; Table Talks Concerning Reincarnation, etc.

Send orders to Bahá'í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Annex, New York, N. Y. or to Western Division, Mrs. Emma F. Smith, 940 Leavenworth Street, San Francisco, Calif.
WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

The attention of the friends is called to the fact that the November issue of World Order contains reproductions of the two-page engrossed copy of the Tablet revealed by Bahá'u'lláh to the "Rulers of America" which the National Spiritual Assembly recently caused to be presented to President Roosevelt, together with engrossed copies of two Prayers revealed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The original presentation copy was engrossed in color and beautifully bound.

In the November issue also was presented the text of the Bahá’í paper prepared and read by Dr. G. Townshend before the session of the World Fellowship of Faiths held in London last July.

From a far-off region of the world has come this letter, signed by the General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Launceston, Tasmania: "I am particularly desirous of letting you know that a group of men in this Y. M. C. A. have become tremendously interested in the articles of 'World Order' and we have found the matter of great value in our educational and spiritual activities."

The Editors desire once more to impress upon the friends their desire to receive contributions in the form of articles, poems or suggestions. Believers who possess artistic talent are cordially invited to assist in improving the appearance of the magazine through decorative designs in keeping with the nature of the Faith.

In the October number began a new series, entitled "Seven Candles of Unity," the first article being in the nature of an introduction—Dr. Townshend’s article on 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

PORTALS TO FREEDOM

The friends will recall the notice of this new book by Howard Colby Ives which was published in Bahá’í News for August, 1936.

The Publishing Committee has received advance orders in the amount of nearly $500, to which is now added the sum of $100, sent by Shoghi Effendi with the following words to Mr. Ives: "He hopes that the response of the friends, both in the East and the West, will be such as to enable you to start immediately with the printing. He is confident that when published the book will be of valuable assistance to the extension of the teaching work. You should, therefore, persevere in your efforts, and strive by every means in your power, to enlist the support of the believers for the publication of this volume, which, he trusts, will be fully utilized as a teaching medium throughout the United States and beyond its confines."

Advance orders in the amount of $300 are needed for binding and delivering 500 copies of the book, and, a final sum of $300 later on will complete the full contract with the non-Bahá’í publisher. The pre-publication price of $1.85 will be allowed on all orders received by the Publishing Committee for a brief period. Orders should be placed through local Assemblies and forwarded with remittance to Bahá’í Publishing Committee as soon as possible.

BAHÁ’Í MAGAZINES IN OTHER LANDS

The attention of the friends is called to the Bahá’í Magazines published under the direction of National Spiritual Assemblies in Europe, India, and Australia and New Zealand.

Sonne der Wahrheit (Sun of Truth) is the title of the magazine issued by the German Bahá’ís. The Editors are Dr. Adelbert Muhlschlegel, Dr. Eugen Schmidt and Frau Alice Schwarz-Solvo. The address is Stuttgart-W, Reinsburg-strasse 198, Germany. It is published in the German language.

Bahá’í Magazine, Herald of the South, is published quarterly by the N. S. A. of Australia and New Zealand, the address being Box 447D, Adelaide, South Australia. The subscription rate is five shillings per year, one shilling sixpence per copy.

New Era, edited by S. Hishmatullah, Bahá’í Hall, Karachi, India. This attractive publication has been received recently for the first time, and appears to be a new publication. No price is indicated, but information will be supplied as soon as furnished by the N. S. A. of India and Burma. The address of Bahá’í Hall is Dipchand Ojha Road, Garden Quarters, Karachi, India.

PUBLICITY IN INDIA

Through the kindness of the N. S. A. of India and Burma, we have received a copy of the "Illustrated Weekly of India" for May 31, 1936 in which we are reproduced the entire text of the article on "The Oneness of Mankind" contributed by Mr. Hussein Rabbani to World Order of February, 1936.

THE CAUSE IN ENGLAND

First Bahá’í Summer School

The first Bahá’í Summer School in this country was successful beyond all expectations. Nothing short of Divine Guidance could have achieved the results that were obtained. Forty-three people attended and went away with a deeper understanding of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and a rich experience of harmony and fellowship. It was keenly felt that a new page had been turned in the history of the Faith in these Isles. The spirit of unity and concord engendered by the Summer School will go a long way to serve the eventual triumph of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

The School opened on Saturday, August 8, with a very illuminating talk by Mrs. Bishop on "Bahá’í Summer School—the University of the Future." During the remaining nine days the following lectures were given: "The Dawn of the Bahá’í Dispensation", by Mr. H. M. Balyuzi; "The Life of the Spirit and the Life of Today", by Mme. Gita Orlova; "The Bahá’í Administrative Order", by Mrs. Bishop; "The Integration of the Individual with the Universal", by Mr. Mark Tobey; "World Commonwealth", by Mr. David Hofman; "Economic Aspects of World Order", by Mr. Alfred Sugar; "The Word of God", by Mr. E. T. Hall. A final session was devoted to a discussion of the work of Summer School.

On one evening Mme. Orlova gave a short address on the Cause to all the guests at Cromford Court and that was followed by an impromptu entertainment arranged by members of the Summer School. Many Bahá’í pamphlets were distributed. Mr. Richard St. Barbe Baker spoke, at a Sunday evening service, on his work in Africa; he referred to 'Abdu’l-Bahá and the esteem in which He was held in Palestine. Besides these formal meetings there were many informal gatherings and discussions which proved of immense benefit to everyone.

It is hoped to collect the talks given, in the form of a booklet.

World Congress of Faiths

The Congress was held in London during July and representatives of all the major religions of the world were present. The Bahá’í paper, approved by Shoghi Effendi, was presented by Rev. G. Townshend.* Mrs. Charles Bishop and Madame Orlova made short addresses afterwards, and Mr.

* This paper was published in World Order for November.
Hirst of Leeds, a sympathizer with the Faith made a thoughtful and effective plea for consideration of the Principles of Bahá'í. The subject of the Congress was "World Fellowship Through Religion", and the Chairman, introducing the Bahá'í paper said that if he were asked which of all the various Faiths represented came nearest to the aims and ideals of the Congress, he would say the Bahá'í Faith.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF EGYPT

The twelfth Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Egypt for the year 93 (1936-37) was held at Haziratul Quds (Bahá'í Headquarters) of Cairo, on April 29, 1936, the ninth day of the Feast of Ridván.

The delegates as well as a very large number of Bahá'ís from all parts of Egypt were present.

The delegates have assembled and elected, from among the believers throughout the country, the members of the National Spiritual Assembly for the current year.

The Assembly elected at the recent Convention has organized as follows:

Muhammad Said, Chairman and Treasurer.
Muhammad Taqi, Vice-Chairman.
Muhammad Mustafa, Secretary.

The members are:
Dr. Muhammad Saleh.
Abdul Fattah Sabri.
Ahmad Husni.
Mehmad El Nushuqui.
Ali Saad Edin.
Iskandar Hanna.

General address, Secretary-Treasurer, P. O. B. 13, Daher P. O., Cairo, Egypt.

Cables, Bahá'í Bureau Cairo.

PERSECUTIONS IN EGYPT

In June last the people of Belkas, aroused by certain enemies of the Cause, persecuted our dear brother Saad Eff. Salim Nosseir following a visit paid by the friends of Tanta and the interest showed by some few persons in the Cause.

Sustained by the local paper, which launched bitter attacks against the Bahá'í Cause, claiming that Bahá'ís are anti-Muhammadan in faith, persecution was redoubled in its intensity to such an extent that those persons who showed interest were confined within their homes, unable to go out of doors.

Appeals were made to local and high authorities to have that friend, being an official, transferred to another district. Inquiring about his conduct and behavior the Mamour of the District, upon receiving the answer of the persecutors stated that that Bahá'í is of a good behavior, refused to order his transfer. Two friends were delegated by Cairo S. A. to meet that friend and consult with him about measures to be taken in this matter. An article was prepared by our National Publishing Committee which was published by that paper.

At last that firm and sincere friend was transferred to Foua from which he writes that the Cause is progressing and that he is very happy by those persecutions which drew him nearer to his Beloved. He was protected by Bahá'í while those who first showed their interest and then recanted under the severe persecutions fell into the depths of humiliation.

The publishing committee of Alexandria published the Tablet of the Hague in one of the local papers on the occasion of the question of peace.

NEWS FROM NORWAY (Sent by Miss Johanna Schubart)

Never has the truth of these words* appeared as significant to me as they have lately, and as I cannot in person consort with Bahá'ís as much as I would love to and am in need of, I am going to try regularly—if not often—to write in order to send my greetings and to inform you of the Bahá'í activities in Norway.

Perhaps the friends remember Miss Martha Root's report of her work in Norway, appearing in the Haifa News Letter about a year ago. During last winter calls were made and the Norwegian Esslemont was given to a number of people, but only very few are really interested in the Cause and due to different obstacles we have not yet formed any group with regular time for meetings.

This summer Oslo has been favored with visits of several Bahá'í friends for which we are very grateful to our Guardian and to the friends. In the month of May Mrs. Louise Gregory was here for two weeks. In July Miss Martha Root came on route for U. S. A. and stayed three days, and in August Mrs. Rubangis Bolles spent three days with us. People who already had heard of the Cause and others were invited, and each time we had lovely little meetings at the Hospitze where these dear friends stayed. On July 15—Miss Root was just here—we had a welcome although brief visit of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart W. French. They were on a cruise and the boat stopped at Oslo for the afternoon. Martha Root had arranged for an interview which appeared next day in one of our best papers, and Mr. and Mrs. French had tea on board the ship for those who came to greet them. They had made short visits to Norway twice before, this time they had taken the most northern tour and came by Iceland and Svalbard (Spitzbergen). Mrs. French distributed Bahá'í literature in Iceland and Svalbard as well as in a few of the most northern towns of Norway. For Oslo she had valuable books for the libraries.

In the month of August I had the great joy of being present at the Bahá'í Summer School in Esslingen, Germany, and I hope that the spirit of love, fellowship and devotion, manifested by the friends in that lovely place will inspire and help me in the work here.

When I came home I was greatly surprised by finding that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop were visiting Oslo, having arrived two days before, Sept. 4. We have the joy of still having them with us, next week however they are leaving for Sweden. Mrs. Bishop has given lectures, both public and in clubs, one of them was at the Nobel Institute Hall. In the absence of a Bahá'í Assembly the Theosophical lodge met the requirements, and the general secretary for Norway acted as interpreter for this Bahá'í lecture on "Religion and Peace". Mr. and Mrs. Bishop have also had many smaller gatherings at their hotel. Where Mrs. Bishop spoke people listened intently and did not want to leave but lingered and talked. This is the first time that Bahá'í lectures have been publicly given in Oslo, and we are encouraged to see that the audiences were good. For me personally it has been the greatest joy, blessing and inspiration to be with Mr. and Mrs. Bishop.

We are now really hoping to form a group with regular time for study, but I want to add that although the Norwegians are liberal in their thoughts and views, they are not quick in changing their religious ideas. Most of the people belong to the State Church, Norway being of the first countries where the Lutheran Church was established. So I beg you not to expect too much of us here, and I ask the Bahá'ís to please remember Norway in their prayers.

PRAYER FOR THOSE TAKING THE FAST

"Thou seest, O God of Mercy, Thou Whose Power pervadeth all created things, these servants of Thine, Thy thralls, who, according to the good-pleasure of Thy Will, observe in the daytime the fast prescribed by Thee, who arise, at the earliest dawn of day, to make mention of Thy Name, and to celebrate Thy Praise, in the hope of obtaining their share of the goodly things that are treasured up within the treasuries of Thy grace and bounty. I beseech Thee, O Thou that holdest in Thine hands the reins of the entire creation, in Whose grasp is the whole kingdom of Thy Names and of Thine Attributes, not to deprive, in Thy Day, Thy servants from the showers pouring from the clouds of Thy mercy, nor to hinder them from taking their portion of the ocean of Thy good-pleasure. . . ." Bahá'u'lláh. (Gleanings, pp. 299-302. Only an excerpt is quoted here).

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

1. To the National Spiritual Assembly

Chief Obligation of National Fund

"Regarding his special contribution to the Teaching Fund; he feels that this is a matter to be left entirely to the discretion of the N. S. A. He believes that the continuous expenditure of a considerable sum to provide for traveling expenses of teachers who are in need constitutes in these days the chief obligation of the National Fund. An effort should be made to facilitate, as much as possible, the extension of the teaching work by helping those who are financially unable to reach their destination, and once there to encourage them to settle and earn the means of their livelihood."—No-} vember 14, 1936.

2. To Individual Bahá'ís

(Published with the Guardian's Consent)

To Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf, May 31, 1935:

"Without the study and application of the Administration the teaching of the Cause becomes not only meaningless, but loses in effectiveness and scope."

To Mr. Wilfrid Barton, during 1936:

"Regarding the solution of the racial problem; the believers should of course realize that the principle of the oneness of mankind which is the cornerstone of the message of Bahá'u'lláh is wholly incompatible with all forms of racial prejudice. Loyalty to this principle of the Faith is the paramount duty of every believer and should be therefore whole-hearted and unqualified. For a Bahá'í, racial prejudice, in all its forms, is simply a negation of faith, an attitude wholly incompatible with the very spirit and actual teachings of the Cause."

"But while the friends should faithfully and courageously uphold this Bahá'í principle of the essential unity of all human races, yet in the methods they adopt for its application and further realization on the social plane they should act with tact, wisdom and moderation. These two attitudes are by no means exclusive. Bahá'ís do not believe that the spread of the Cause and its principles and teachings can be effected by means of radical and violent methods. While they are loyal to all those teachings, yet they believe in the necessity of resorting to peaceful and friendly means for the realization of their aims."

"As regards the meaning of the pas-bear in mind is that these have no positive existence of any kind."

To Mrs. Russell, July 28, 1936:

"The number nine, which in itself is the number of perfection, is considered by the Baha'is as sacred, because it is symbolic of the perfection of the Baha'i Revelation which constitutes the ninth in the line of existing religions, the most and fullest Revelation which mankind has ever known.

The eighth is the religion of the Baha'is and the remaining seven are: Hinduism, Buddhism, Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and the religion of the Sabeans. These religions are not the only true religions that have appeared in the world but are the only ones still existing. There have always been divine Prophets and Messengers, to many of whom the Qur'an refers. But the only ones existing are those mentioned above.

"As regards your question concerning the membership of the Universal House of Justice, there is a Tablet from 'Abdu'l-Baha in which He definitely states that the membership of the Universal House is confined to men and that the wisdom of it will be fully revealed in the future. In the local, as well as the National Houses of Justice, however, women have the full right of membership. It is, therefore, only to the International House that they cannot be elected. The Baha'is should accept this statement of the Master in a spirit of deep faith, confident that there is a divine guidance and wisdom behind it, which will be gradually unfolded to the eyes of the world."

PUBLIC MEETINGS IN NASHVILLE

The National Spiritual Assembly met at Nashville, Tenn., for four days beginning January 9, and in addition to its own sessions carried out a teaching schedule arranged by Mrs. Georgie Wiles and Mrs. Marion Little.

Saturday evening, January 9, the members were invited to meet twenty or more inquirers at a private home, and a most interesting discussion of the Faith was carried on.

Sunday afternoon a public meeting was held at Fisk University, with addresses by Allen B. McDaniel and Carl Scheiffer, Mountfort Mills, chairman. The Baha'is were presented to the audience by Dr. Jones, University President.

Monday afternoon a radio talk was given over WSM by Horace Holley. Monday evening a public meeting was held in the ballroom of Hotel Heritage. After the Baha'is were presented to the audience by a prominent woman of Nashville, who recalled having heard 'Abdu'l-Baha speak in Chicago, addresses were delivered by Horace Holley and Mountfort Mills. George O. Latimer presided.

A second meeting was held at Hotel Heritage Tuesday evening, with addresses by Alfred E. Lunt and George O. Latimer, Mountfort Mills presiding.

After all three public meetings, the believers present were asked many questions by members of the audience. The newspaper publicity was very extensive and favorable in tone. These meetings, the first held by the N.S.A. in a Southern State, were planned as preliminary to more intensive teaching efforts in the future. One object was to acquire first-hand experience of the special teaching problem existing in the South. The results are to be carefully reviewed by the N. S. A. at its next meeting, with a view to adopting plans and policies making possible a great extension of the Faith in that important area.

Following the meeting at Fisk University, the believers attended a reception held by President and Mrs. Jones, after which they gathered with local and visiting Baha'is at the home of Mrs. Smith for supper and Baha'i consultation.

Three members of the N. S. A. met with the Baha'is of Cincinnati Wednesday evening, January 13, for dinner and a program of talks arranged by the local Assembly.

"ULTIMATE REALIZATION"

Report from National Teaching Committee

"Not until the great enterprise which you are now conducting runs its full course and attains its final objective, at its appointed time, can its world-encompassing benefits be fully apprehended or revealed. The perseverance of the American believers will, no doubt, insure the ultimate realization of these benefits."—Shoghi Effendi.

Since the inception of our present teaching campaign, the American Baha'is have arisen with great enthusiasm and determination to achieve the goal set for us by the Guardian. Thus teaching has gone forwards with increasing intensity by Assemblies, Groups, isolated believers, and individuals, who have so nobly introduced the Faith into new areas. Only now, however, are we as a national community able to release the full force of our teaching energies—as only now have we removed the material restrictions to dynamic teaching services, by finally meeting all our outstanding financial obligations of the recent Temple construction work, and developing a general teaching fund.

The most serious consideration and study should be given anew by every Baha'i in America to our great responsibility, in the light of the favorable conditions now existing within the Faith, and the path laid before us by Shoghi Effendi himself, for the accomplishment of our task:

"Torchbearers of Baha'i civilization... scatter more widely throughout the length and breadth of the American continents."

The immediate goal set by the Guardian is the introduction of the Faith into every State in the United States, and every Province in Canada.

Dear Friends, we must achieve victory in this campaign, and achieve the first stages quickly. Everyone must ponder deeply the "Call" to "Pioneer" service and set about to play his or her part in this great spiritual drama. We cannot and will not allow any obstacle to stand in our way! Therefore, any one of the Friends who can "migrate" to one of the States of the United States, or Provinces of Canada, where no Baha'is exist, should communicate with the National Teaching Committee, so arrangements can be quickly made for the important step of "setting" these virgin areas.

Let those who cannot themselves move their residence to virgin soil, bear in mind the teachings of Baha'u'llah—"Whoso is unable, it is his duty to appoint him who will, in his stead, proclaim this Revelation." Clearly the manner of fulfilling this Divine exhortation today, is to actively support the National Fund, so this new Pioneer work may suffer no restrictions from a financial standpoint — and we all, through this united effort, achieve our spiritual destiny as a national community.

"Pioneer" Services

The Teaching Committee has great happiness in announcing that the first migration of a Baha'i family to a new State has taken place. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Entzminger, and their two children, of Geyserville, California, have taken residence in Oklahoma City, in order to establish the Faith in Oklaho-
The Geyserville Assembly has set a high standard for the other Assemblies in America, by unitedly supporting this move, and defraying the transportation expenses of the Entzmingerings, from Geyserville to Oklahoma City. They have considered this as a part of their Assembly service in this unique Teaching campaign. There has been some teaching work done in Oklahoma City, but no Bahá'ís have been confirmed. Now the Light of Guidance will be permanently shedding its rays through these “Pioneer” settlers, and the Faith will be firmly established.

In previous reports, record has been given of the pioneer work done in Nebraska, the first new State to be opened to the Faith since the Guardian’s call. We are happy to give report of the developments in the work in this State, carried on with such efficiency and success by Gertrude Matteson and Mabel Ives. There is now in Omaha, a flourishing group of seven Believers who are holding public meetings and study classes weekly, and amongst the students, such response and enthusiasm, it is very likely the State of Nebraska will this year have its first Local Spiritual Assembly in Omaha.

Teaching work has been done by these same teachers in Lincoln, where a number of public lectures, radio broadcasts and book exhibits inaugurated a study class, out of which two believers have already enrolled in the American Bahá’í Community.

Thus, two of the twelve States with no Bahá’ís have now resident Believers, and the Faith will, we are sure, rapidly expand in these States.

How wonderful it would be if we could have resident teachers in each of the remaining ten States, before the present Bahá’í year comes to a close!

The Teaching Committee has arranged for a survey of the larger cities in these remaining States, so we may know the most logical locations for Bahá’í settlers, particularly from the standpoint of receptivity to the Faith. This will be carried forward by one of our Bahá’í workers visiting each of these larger cities, interviewing officers of various clubs, newspapers, radio stations, public libraries, etc. If any of the Bahá’ís have contacts of any nature in any of the areas in America, where we now have no believers, it will be a great service to the Faith, if these contacts could be sent to the Teaching Committee.

"Other new Cities opened"

Lubbock, Texas, which has been awakened to the Teachings through the services of Mr. Roy Wilhem, for a long time through correspondence, and recently by a personal visit, is another to be added to the roll of cities reflecting the light of this New Day. Two of the students who have had to rely almost entirely upon their own efforts, have become enthusiastic believers and are working more diligently than ever to form a study group.

Council Bluffs and Des Moines, Iowa, were also the recipients of the teaching services of Gertrude Matteson and Mabel Ives, with the result that Des Moines already has one believer, and the way has been opened for further work during the winter.

Mrs. Gertrude Struven of Wilmette is carrying on pioneer work in the cities of Moline, and Grand Rapids, Iowa. Miss Marion Holley, with the aid of Miss Beatrice Irwin and others of the Los Angeles Community, is not only conducting a study group in San Bernardino, California, but has initiated teaching activity in Yucca and is cooperating with Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Wells, Isolated Believers at Big Bear, California, in interesting their friends in this Faith.

Mr. Raphael Lillywhite, of Laramie, Wyoming, on a recent business trip to Taos, New Mexico, opened still another city to the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh.

The Regional Teaching Committee for Kansas and Missouri, cooperating with the Assemblies in those States, has planned to follow up contacts in several cities with a view to starting groups wherever the results seem promising. Mrs. Ruth Moffet is assisting with this work.

Los Angeles Assembly has arranged for public lectures in Riverside, California, in order to increase the list of people already interested to the end that a study class may be organized.

"Inter-Community Conferences"

Testimony that Inter-Community Conferences are vital factors in stimulating teaching activity both in Bahá’í Communities and among isolated believers, is implied in the fact that several areas and Regions have had second and third such conferences. The New England States have held three this Fall; at Hartford, Boston and New Haven.

The Bahá’í Communities of Florida held two such gatherings in December: the New York-New Jersey-Pennsylvania Region held one on December 12th; while Phoenix, Arizona, was the host to a second Arizona-Southern California Conference January 10th.

"Circuits"

Nearly all of the Inter-Community Conferences held thus far have resulted in lively teaching circuits, several of which include cities other than Bahá’í Communities.

The New England Circuit, consisting of Worcester, Boston, and New Haven, has thus far presented Mr. Charles Mason Remey, Miss Martha Root, Mr. Mountfort Mills; Miss Root, having included in her program a large gathering of Federated Women’s Clubs in Kittery, Maine, in November.

The New Jersey circuit includes Jersey City, Montclair, and Newark.

The Ohio-Indiana circuit which includes Pittsburgh, has completed its panel of speakers for the remainder of the Bahá’í year with Mrs. Marzieh Carpenter, Mr. Carl Scheffler, Mr. Mountfort Mills, Miss Pearl Estabrook, and Mr. Louis Gregory.

An eleven day itinerary for Prof. Stanwood Cobb will take him to Urbana and Peoria, as well as the cities in the Chicago area.

"Increasing Assembly Activity"

While extending their activities into neighboring cities and cooperating with other Assemblies in circuit plans, an ever-increasing number of local Assemblies are reporting more informal study groups and fireside meetings. New York City, which has initiated six new fireside groups, has worked out an interesting circuit of eight discussions, to be followed by all of these groups. One teacher specializes on one of the subjects, and makes the rounds of the various groups, speaking to each group on the same subject. Such a plan provides a leader for each meeting and makes it possible for each to specialize on one subject. It also makes a fine cooperative teaching project for those who feel they can serve as hosts, but cannot lead the discussions which are the raison d’être for fireside groups.

"Baha’i Groups"

Toronto, Canada has recently achieved an important step toward the establishment of the Faith in that city, the believers having organized a Baha’i Group which conducts both study classes and public meetings. Mr. George Spendlove, formerly of Washington, D. C., will live in Toronto for some months, and is cooperating most actively with this Group in its effort to attain the status of a Baha’i Community.

The Capitol District Group at Albany, New York, has conducted several large public meetings during the fall, Mrs. Marzieh Carpenter and Miss Julia Goldman being two of the speakers.

The Glendale, Arizona members of the Phoenix Baha’i Community have been working diligently toward the goal of a local Spiritual Assembly in their city. An interesting report tells of the manner in which the friends are cooperating with a local peace group so that it now uses Baha’i literature for reference purposes, and has used the “Prayer for all Nations” at some of its meetings.

Miss Charlotte Dakin of Claremont, California, a new member of the American Baha’i Community, has been invited to give an address on the Baha’i Faith at Scripps College of that city as a part of a course on “The Religious Mind”.

Mrs. Lucy B. Swindler, an isolated believer, living at Magnolia, Illinois, holds frequent meetings at her home, with assistance from members of the Urbana Community.

The friends in Southern California are happy to have Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf with them during the winter, where she will aid them in their teaching plans.

The foregoing are but some of the evidences of the stirring of new life within the body of the Believers. While most encouraging, yet in view of our supreme task, we realize our efforts up to date, are just but a beginning of the wave of spiritual vigor the American Baha’i Community will show ere this campaign reaches its height. It is as ‘Abdu’l-Baha has stated in “America’s Spiritual Mission”: “Up to this time you have displayed great magnanimity, but after this, ye must add a thousand times to your effort. The spirit of your exertion must become widened. The more it is broadened and extended, the greater will be your confirmation.” . . . “At present your confirmation is not known and understood. Ere long ye shall observe that each one of you, like unto a brilliant and shining star, will diffuse the light of guidance from that horizon and that he has become the cause of eternal life to the inhabitants of America.”

THE NON-POLITICAL CHARACTHER OF THE BAHAI FAITH

Since the question of voting in civil elections has again been raised by a few local Assemblies, the N. S. A. publishes once more the final instruction received from the Guardian on that subject. It was printed in Bahai News No. 80, January, 1934, together with other excerpts from the Guardian’s letters.

“The friends may vote, if they can do it, without identifying themselves with one party or another. To enter the arena of party politics is surely detrimental to the best interests of the Faith and will harm the Cause. It remains for the individuals to use their right to vote as to keep aloof from party politics, and always bear in mind that they are voting on the merits of the individual, rather than because he belongs to one party or another. The matter must be made perfectly clear to the individuals, who will be left free to exercise their discretion and judgment. But if a certain person does enter into party politics and labors for the ascension of one party over another, and continues to do it against the expressed appeals and warnings of the Assembly, then the Assembly has the right to refuse him the right to vote in Baha’i elections.”

RULINGS OF THE N. S. A.

That teachers visiting new areas should always have a proper letter of credentials showing that the teacher has authority to hold Baha’i meetings.

That the National Assembly makes a distinction between public and non-public teaching activities, attempting no jurisdiction over non-public teaching activities outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies, but in the case of public teaching activities, the National Spiritual Assembly lays down the controlling regulation that in any area outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies, teachers are not to hold public Baha’i meetings involving the name of the Cause without the recognition and approval of the Regional Committee, or of the National Teaching Committee, depending upon the area of jurisdiction, and that all such public meetings are to be held under the sponsorship of the proper Teaching Committee.

That local Assemblies, or individual teachers, when using any descriptive reference to the Cause, or direct description of the Cause in public announcements, are to confine themselves to terms used by ‘Abdu’l-Baha or the Guardian. In the view of the N. S. A. the Cause should be referred to only as the Baha’i Faith or as the World Order of Baha’u’llah.

Applications for funds received by the N. S. A. for traveling expenses of teachers will be referred to the National or Regional Teaching Committee (or Inter-America Committee), depending on the jurisdiction in each case, for investigation and recommendation.

Local Assemblies are requested to report to the National Teaching Committee the names and addresses of voting believers who live outside the civil community so that such believers may be recorded on future teaching maps, and their names supplied to Regional Teaching Committees. The purpose of this request is to increase the number of centers where special teaching work can be carried on with the cooperation of the individual, or individuals, already in residence.

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life.—Baha’u’llah

Mr. William Z. Ralp, Portland, Oregon.
Miss A. R. Phipps, Oriskany, N. Y.
Mrs. Cunningham, Montreal, Quebec.
Mrs. A. B. Spear, Los Angeles, Calif.
Mrs. Phoebe R. Nelson, Chicago,
ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS

All Committees appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly are requested to submit their Annual Reports by March 15. These Reports after approval will be published in a Pre-Convention issue of Baha’i News.

If a Report must exceed 500 words in length, a 500-word summary should be submitted for publication, with the complete Report made available at the same time for the information of the N. S. A.

The N. S. A. welcomes constructive suggestions in addition to the usual detailed record of activity.

LOCAL ASSEMBLIES

These corrections are to be made in the Assembly list already published:

Topeka, Kansas, Assembly dissolved and the declared believers retain the status of a Baha’i group.

Rochester, New York, new Secretary elected, Miss Christine McKay, 228 Castlebar Road.

Phoenix, Arizona, new address, P. O. Box 4053.

Flint, Michigan, new address is 4506 Penngrove Road.

Winnetka, Illinois, a new Secretary has been elected: Mrs. Raymond B. Gillespie, 486 Oakdale Avenue, Glencoe, Ill.

Cabin John, Maryland, new address. Mrs. Pauline A. Hannen, Secretary, Route 3, Bethesda, Md.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BAHAI CREDENTIALS

The N. S. A. regrets to report that one of the American believers has been grossly deceived by a person who represented himself as having a reference from a Baha’i in another city.

As was pointed out several years ago, such cases will increase in future, as the Baha’i community grows in strength and resources, unless the believers uphold the rule that all travelers claiming to be Baha’i’s must have proper credentials, in writing, from their local Assembly. Traveling Baha’is not members of a local community, but recorded as isolated believers, can obtain a letter from the N. S. A.

Another principle given us for our protection is that application for financial assistance made in the name of the Cause by individuals personally unknown can be referred to the Spiritual Assembly for consultation before the assistance is given.

MISS MARTHA L. ROOT

On December 23, the N. S. A. sent to Assemblies as far West as Chicago a teaching schedule prepared by Miss Root for the period January 19—April 1, 1937. It is now necessary to report, with the deepest regret, that this schedule may be somewhat altered in order to give our devoted sister more time for complete recovery.

On July 27, 1936, the N. S. A. received this cablegram from Shoghi Beloved indefatigable Martha sailing New York (on board the) Bergensfjord. Feel certain (that) believers, will accord befitting welcome (to this) well beloved, star servant of Bahá'u'lláh."

On her arrival, with the exception of interviews in New York and important public teaching at Green Acre, Miss Root remained in seclusion in order to rest from her many years of constant teaching activities in so many countries of East and West. In the autumn, however, she proceeded to carry out teaching plans arranged for her by the Regional Teaching Committee of the New England States and by the local Assemblies of New York, West Englewood, Philadelphia and Washington.

Her plan is to carry out the Guardian's wish that she travel to Japan after traversing the United States.

As soon as Miss Root can re-arrange her schedule, the friends will be informed.

AMERICAN TEACHERS IN OTHER LANDS

"They that have forsaken their country for the purpose of teaching Our Cause—these shall the Faithful Spirit strengthen through its power. A company of Our chosen angels shall go forth with them, as bidden by Him Who is the Almighty, the All-Wise. How great the blessedness that awaits him that hath attained the honor of serving the Almighty! By My life! No act, however great, can compare with it, except such deeds as have been ordained by God, the All-Powerful, the Most Mighty. Such a service is, indeed, the price of all goodly deeds, and the ornament of every goodly act. Thus hath it been ordained by Him Who is the Sovereign Revealer, the Ancient of Days."—Bahá'u'lláh.

American Bahá'ís serving in Mexico, Central America, South America and the Isles of the Caribbean are related to the N. S. A. directly through the services of the Inter-America Committee. Those American teachers, however, who serve in Europe, Asia and Africa, come under the administrative direction of the National and local Assemblies of the respective countries and cities. The American National Spiritual Assembly has no Committee to keep in close touch with these workers, and therefore hopes to receive letters and reports from them as frequently as possible, in order to share the news with their fellow-believers here.

They are likewise requested to arrange either with their own local Assemblies to forward their copy of Bahá'í News, or request the N. S. A. to do so. In this case, all changes of address must be reported without delay.

Mrs. Jeanne Ruhangiz Bolles and Miss Jeanne Bolles, and Mme. Gita Orlova have kindly sent detailed reports of their work in various countries of Europe, summaries of which will be published in the next Bahá'í News. These and all other workers in foreign lands have the loving prayers of the Bahá'í community of the United States and Canada.

BAHÁ'I SUMMER SCHOOLS

The following preliminary announcements will make it possible for believers to begin planning their attendance at Summer Schools.

Green Acre. The season will begin July 3, with a general program conducted during July intended to interest non-believers. The Bahá'í Summer School courses begin with a Youth Week, August 1 to 7. From August 9 to September 3 there will be five study courses, a Teaching Conference, and courses on Public Speaking and Writing.

Greensville. The Western States Summer School will be conducted from July 3 to 18, inclusive. The program will be reported later. Additional accommodations are to be available this year through the construction of a new dormitory as a most generous gift to the School. Reservations in the dormitory and other buildings should be made through Miss Ruth Westgate, Chairman of Housing Committee, Huntington Hotel Apartments, San Francisco, Calif.

INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

It was reported in the last issue of Baha'i News that Mrs. Dodge is resident in Chile. This is now corrected, as this American Bahá’í is resident in Peru.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Mathews sailed for South America in January. Mrs. Mathews will meet with Miss Holzapple at Bahia, and with Mrs. Stewart at Rio de Janeiro, for consultation on the promotion of the teaching work.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Gregory sailed in January to Haiti, for teaching work under the auspices of the Inter-America Committee.

Miss Beatrice Irwin will leave Los Angeles shortly for a teaching trip to Mexico, also under the auspices of this Committee.

During her recent stay in Mexico, Miss Orcella Ruxford gave the message before the Women’s section of the Federated Protestant Churches of Mexico.

These brief announcements will be amplified by detailed reports as soon as further information is received. The friends, however, can rejoice to learn of so much constructive activity in other American States.

Communications intended for Mrs. Mathews as chairman of the Inter-America Committee can be sent in care of New York Bahá’í Center, 119 West 57th Street, until further notice.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era. The revisions mentioned in the last issue of Baha’í News have been completed, and the new edition sent to press. It will have an Index, added by request of Shoghi Effendi. The Committee hopes to have copies ready for distribution by March. Paper covers, $0.50. Fabrikoid, $0.75.

A World Faith. Studies in the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. In a letter dated January 11, addressed to the Publishing Committee with an order for copies, the Guardian wrote, through his secretary: “He wishes them for teaching purposes, as he thinks they are quite suitable for presentation to inquirers.” Paper covers, $0.25.

Portals to Freedom, by Howard Colby Ives. The Committee understands that the pre-publication price of $1.85 can be allowed only until March 5. The friends are urged to take advantage of this lower price and place their orders now, through the local Assembly. Cash must be sent with all advance orders.

Life Eternal, compiled by Mary Rumsy Moving. Copies of this book have been available for some weeks. It is beautifully printed and bound, making an unusual gift to non-Bahá’í friends, as well as an extensive and helpful compilation for one’s Bahá’í library. $2.50.

World Order Magazine. Believers who know how difficult it is to complete their bound volumes of Star of the West and The Bahá’í Magazine will appreciate the importance of securing their bound volumes of World Order each year. Vol. I is now obtainable, and Vol. II will be ready after March first. For subscribers who supply the twelve issues, the cost for binding is $1.25, postage additional. For the bound volume complete, $2.50.

The aim of the magazine is to make more available, to inquirers and the general public as well to Bahá’ís, the most interesting and forceful material that can be obtained on the Faith as the sole basis of the future world commonwealth.

The following list of recommended teaching literature has been adopted by the N. S. A. in consultation with the National Teaching Committee: A World Religion, by Shoghi Effendi; The Goal of a New World Order, by Shoghi Effendi; What is the Bahá’í Faith? by J. E. Esslemont; The Bahá’í House of Worship, by Genevieve L. Coy; The Oneness of Mankind, by Hussein Rabbani; The Bahá’í Faith, by Horace Holley; The Faith to God, by Dorothy Baker; Homesculture, by Stanwood Cobb; The Most Great Peace, by Marion Holley: Principles of the Bahá’í Faith, compilation.

Send orders to Bahá’í Publishing Committee, P. O. Box 348, Grand Central Annex, New York, N. Y., or to Western Division, Mrs. Emma F. Smith, 940 Leavenworth Street, San Francisco, Calif.

THE BAHÁ’Í WORLD

Material for Vol. VII

The Editorial Committee is engaged in securing the necessary material for Vol. VII, which will cover the period April, 1936—April, 1938. Letters have been sent to Assemblies throughout the world, that the material may be fully representative.

The procedure is that the Editorial Committee gathers the material and sends it to Shoghi Effendi, who makes final selection and arranges the articles and illustrations in the order in which they are to appear.

Material intended for Vol. VII should be sent to Mrs. Nellie S. French, Secretary, 390 Grove Street, Pasadena, by December, 1937.

LETTER FROM YOUTH COMMITTEE

To the Bahá’í Youth of America:

Again the call goes forth to all Bahá’í youth for a united international effort! On March 7, 1937, a second series of Youth Symposia are to be held simultaneously by Bahá’í youth groups throughout the world. The initial effort last Nawruz set the pace. Let us now achieve greater heights of service in this year of even greater opportunity!

The youth symposiums of March 7th are to be two-fold: (1) a preliminary conference where Bahá’í youth meet for consultation on their common problems and for prayers on behalf of this great effort; and (2) a public Youth Symposium where Bahá’í youth present the Teachings.

The general title and theme for the Symposia is Religion—a Source of Civilisation. To aid in the presentation of this theme, The National Youth Committee has selected eight topics on various phases of the Teachings; speech outlines on these topics have been prepared for publication in the January issue of Bahá’í Youth. These have been prepared to set a high stan-standard of excellence in the presentation of the Faith. Each local group can choose those of the topics best suited to their audience and youth speakers. (The topics are: Paths to Unity, America and the Most Great Peace, The Meaning of World Order, Science and Religion, Baha'i Youth and the World Today, True Religion, Humanity's Coming of Age.)

The National Youth Committee has also outlined the following as part of this united effort:

(1) By the first of February all youth groups should have reported to their regional secretaries their conference plans so that these may be used for publicity both here and abroad.

(2) Suggested publicity will be sent out to all groups two weeks ahead of time.

(3) A special March issue of Baha'i Youth, edited especially for teaching and distribution at this time, may be ordered in quantities from Miss Dorothy Wever, 535 S. Pasadena Ave., Pasadena, California.

(4) A letter of greeting to the Guardian will be prepared in advance for reading at each conference, and for signatures of all Baha'i youth who are voting members or registered with the local Assemblies. All letters to the Guardian and all copies of publicity should be forwarded to Zah Holden to be made up into a scrap book for the Guardian, to be forwarded to him through the N.S.A.

(5) It is hoped that local efforts will be made, whenever possible, to have some of the Symposium speeches broadcast over local radio stations. This highly desirable teaching effort is wholly dependent upon local initiative.

It is hoped that without delay each local youth group will consult together and with its local Assembly in preparation for this international activity. The Guardian is "impatiently waiting" for us to arise in our full strength and with perfect reliance upon the great spiritual forces released in this age. May this and thousand-fold activities like it be channels for the expression of the power of Baha'u'llah!

Sincerely in His Service
Kenneth Christian
Chairman, National Youth Committee

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

In the February issue begins a series on "The World Order of Baha'u'llah" by Mary Collison, based upon her study course at Green Acre in 1936. The friends will find this series of distinct helpfulness in attaining a clearer view of the administrative principles. This material can also be used in presenting the subject to study classes.

Other contributors in February: Donald Fay Robinson, Alfred E. Lunt, Diantha Crisp, Dorothy Baker, Marguerite Reimer, Rosa V. Winterburn, Rose Noller, Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick, Martha L. Root, a selection from Writings of 'Abdu'l-Baha, and Editorial.

The March issue will begin a series on "A Study of Church Organization" by Glenn L. Shook which gives vivid contrasts between Baha'i administration and the administration of previous Faiths. This material was presented under the Green Acre program in 1936.

TEMPLE MODEL VALUABLE PUBLICITY

Capitalizing on the interest aroused in connection with the public Baha'i meetings held in its sister city, San Francisco, during the meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly there in November, the Oakland Baha'i Community timed a change in its public meetings from Friday evening to Sunday morning. Announcements of the month's program were mailed to all who had received invitations to the San Francisco meetings, thus localizing the interest and serving as follow up.

Further public interest was aroused through the exhibition of the Baha'i Temple model in the window of a downtown business establishment for three weeks which included the Christmas holidays. The space was donated by the owner of the business who also kept the model lighted at night without charge. During the first week placards announced an illustrated lecture on the Temple and following that lecture new placards announced the time and place of the regular meetings.

The lecture on the Temple was given by Mr. A. C. Ioas of the Oakland Community, associated with the... work of the Cause since its early days in America, a fact which was featured in the publicity.

Mr. Ioas used a number of the Temple construction slides furnished by Mr. Allan McDaniel, adding several others depicting important historical facts, and ending with a picture of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Finding that this joint appeal to the eye and ear is capable of arousing real interest, the Oakland Community is now making plans for Mr. Ioas to repeat the lecture and slides in a number of the small surrounding communities as well as to student groups in the Oakland high schools.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF GERMANY AND AUSTRIA

This interesting summary is taken from the BAHÁ'Í News issued by the N. S. A. of the Bahá'í's of Germany and Austria.

"The 14th Annual Convention was opened on Saturday, April 25th, 1936, at 5:30 P.M. at the Bahá'í Office, Alexanderstrasse 3, through the Assembly of the Delegates. The roll call was followed by the election of the chairman and the adoption of the agenda which was prepared by the outgoing N. S. A. At 7:00 P.M. in the City Park, under the chairmanship of Dr. Muehlschlegel, the N. S. A. and its committees delivered their general reports. Then communities and groups reported. Present were about 60 believers—Sunday morning was set aside for an assembly of the delegates which convened at 8:30 at the Bahá'í Office for the election of the N. S. A. and afterwards went into consultation. The names of the members of the incoming N. S. A. are the following: Marthe Brauns—Karlsruhe, Paul Gollner—Stuttgart, Max Greeven—Bremen, Dr. Hermann Grossmann—Neckargemünd, Anna Koestlin—Esslingen, Dr. Adelebert Muehlschlegel—Stuttgart, Dr. Eugen Schmidt—Stuttgart, Alice Schwarz—Stuttgart, Friedrich Schweizer—Stuttgart. At 11:00, in the German House, a public morning service was held, attended by some 250 people. Anna Grossmann spoke on "Highlights of the Faith", Dr. Eugen Schmidt on "Progressive Divine Revelation". Words by Baha'u'llah were read and the program was interspersed with musical recitals. At 1:00 P.M. some hundred friends united for dinner in the City Park. There, at 3:00, was opened a special session dealing with questions concerning the Administration. 80 believers from various Bahá'í centres were present and it is to be regretted that, Berlin excepted, neither the North German nor the Austrian centres were represented, but it will be seen to it that by a repetition of the discourses at the North German Meeting at Whitsuntide, the friends from Berlin, Hamburg, Warnemünde, Rostock will have another and better opportunity to deal with the most important topics of this Special Session. Dr. Muehlschlegel treated the subjects "The National Spiritual Assembly and "The Question of Membership of Bahá'ís in Religious Non-Bahá'í Organizations", Anna Grossmann "The Purpose and Significance of the Unity Feast", Dr. E. Schmidt "Public Bahá'í Meetings", Dr. H. Grossmann "Interassembly Bahá'í Co-operation" and "The Institution of the Bahá'í Fund". The Convention was concluded with a social meeting—A letter was sent to the Guardian whose inspiring answer is quoted below:

"Dearly beloved Friends: The Convention of the German Friends constitutes another milestone on the remarkable progress which the German Bahá'í Community has made during the very last years. My heart is filled with gratitude for the many proofs of firmness of belief, co-operation, consolidated unity, further development of the administration, and the spiritual fire, which are demonstrated so convincingly by your members. 'Abdu'l-Bahá, whose special faith, love and care for the adherents of Bahá'u'lláh in your most promising country most of you have recognized and whom you will undoubtedly remember, is indeed proud of your achievements and very satisfied with the spirit which governs you so powerfully in His service. His spirit will continue to be with you in your work; it will assist and guide you in your efforts. Persist and have (confidence) faith!—Love, Shoghi!""

IRAQ AUTHORITIES REMOVE BAN ON LITERATURE

The good news has been received that the authorities of Iraq have raised the ban on the circulation of the Kurdish translation of "Baha'u'llah and the New Era" by Esslemont, and have delivered the confiscated copies to the N. S. A. of the Bahá'ís of Iraq. It was more than a year ago that the authorities acted to forbid their distribution, and the believers rejoice at this important spiritual victory.

The release of the Kurdish translation brings the number of printed translations of the Esslemont book to thirty-three, the most recent being the Bengali version, printed at Chittagong, Bengal. This was reported in a letter written to Mr. Roy Wilhelm by the Guardian, through his secretary, dated December 14, 1936.

THE CAUSE IN IRAN

First Bahá'í Summer School

We are glad to say that a Bahá'í Summer School was formed for the first time in Tihrán at the garden of 'Hadiqeh' in the mountains which is bought by the friends and which is destined for the construction of the first Mashriqu'I-Ahkar in Tihrán. The Summer School was founded and managed by Mrs. Clara H. Sharp and her daughter, Miss Adelaide Sharp, members of this Committee. It carried on its work from July 24th to August 5th, 1936. A small group of young girls who speak English attended the school. Morning hours were devoted to the study of the Bahá'í teachings in English. What gave their teachers the greatest pleasure was the spirit of cooperation and endeavor which prevailed among all the girls. Each morning one of the girls gave a talk in English on one of the following subjects: World Peace, Justice, Search for Truth, Qurratu'l-Áin, a Universal Language. Mrs. Sharp gave a talk on one of Bahá'u'lláh's explanations of Victory. The afternoons were spent in recreations and going for tea to other nearby gardens where Bahá'ís lived. Before this school was opened we could not guess the spirit of unity and of close association among these girls. They voted that the Summer School in English should continue its existence permanently as many said they never had such a pleasant time in their life. Next year we hope to have a larger group.

Youth Activity

The Bahá'í Youth Group have sent us a report about their activities. The duties of this group can be summarized as follows:

1. To encourage the Bahá'í Youth and to bring about the means for their association with each other on a spiritual basis;
2. To exhort Bahá'í youth in living the life and carrying out the ordinances and principles of the Cause by purifying their souls and rejecting old habits and manners which may be against the Bahá'í principles;
3. To bring about, to the possible extent, the means for physical training of the youth;

4.—To give to the Bahá’í youth mental and intellectual training and to foster their education as much as possible;

5.—To extend help and assistance to needy Bahá’í youth and to give needful guidance to students;

6.—To enter in correspondence with Bahá’í groups throughout the world;

7.—To make efforts towards the promotion of activities for teaching the Cause and 8.—To put the Bahá’í youth in touch with their social duties and to increase their knowledge of Bahá’í principles.

The Bahá’í Youth Committee in Teherán has lately arranged, among other duties, to give from time to time representations depicting the lives of early believers of the Cause in Iran. Such representations have been arranged so far to commemorate the life of Qurratu’l-Ayn (the famous Bahá’í poetess and martyr), Jenáb-i-VarQA (the martyr), Jenáb-i-Zain-ul-Muqarrabín, Haji Ameen and Haji Mirza Haydar Ali, the famous Bahá’í teacher.

The Youth Committee propose to give similar plays for the Western believers. On May 15th, a representation was given at the house of Mr. Azizullah Azizi, a believer, in commemoration of the life of our departed friend of the West, the late Monsieur H. Dreyfus. A detailed account of the life of this famous pioneer of the Cause in the West was given to the audience which numbered over one hundred people.

The chief idea of giving such representations is to put friends here in touch with the wonderful and most valuable services rendered by such noble souls to the Cause and to encourage the present generations to follow the example of courage, faithfulness and the spirit of sacrifice left by our early believers.

Persecution

“Early in the month of Noor 93 the Secretary of this Assembly was summoned by the Political Department of the Police and asked about his position and occupation. The Secretary replied to the question and said that he had no other job. He was further asked as to his previous employment and the languages he knew and the matter was then dropped.

“A few days later the Secretary was again called to the Department and warned that the Bahá’ís should refrain from all sorts of teaching and propaganda and boisterous demonstrations and to suspend all the meetings and public gatherings threatening him that the members of the Assembly will be prosecuted should they insist in carrying on their present attitude.

“In the meantime the Assembly learned that instructions were issued by the Police on two occasions that the police officials should stop all the Bahá’í meetings and gatherings both in the capital and in the provinces and do all in their power to prevent the Bahá’ís from accomplishing their objects.

“The Assembly has, with a view to abiding by the rules and regulations and respecting the wishes expressed by the authorities, taken the following decisions which have been put into force:

(a) “The archives of the Assembly have to be removed from the Bahá’í Center ‘Hazíratul-Quds’ to another place.

(b) “The meetings of the Assembly are to be held in the houses of private individuals and not at a single place.

(c) “The number of members of different committees of the Assembly has to be reduced and these committees have to hold their sittings in the houses of private individuals.

(d) “Public meetings and gatherings which used to be held in Bahá’í centers or ‘Hazíratul-Quds’ or in the houses of friends should be stopped.

“The decisions referred to above were duly notified to various Assemblies in the provinces.

“Now according to information received, some of the authorities in the provinces have gone to the extreme in textually carrying out the instructions received from the capital by preventing even small meetings composed of a very few friends. In Teheran, however, gatherings of 19 people are allowed and the Assembly and various committees are therefore allowed to hold their meetings.

“The National Assembly have on various occasions pointed out to the friends that, while obeying the orders received from the Government, the believers should preserve the unity of the Bahá’í commonwealth and to keep in touch with each other by means of the Nineteen Days’ Feasts. We are glad to say that these Feasts are progressing, though they are at present of a limited number.

“Several other Bahá’í officers employed in the military service have been dismissed again from their job following their bold and formal declaration of their faith and have been forced, by imprisoning them, to pay back to the authorities the educational expenses incurred by them. These expenses have been defrayed by the Assembly in certain cases where the officers concerned were not able to meet the expenditure. Most of these officers had served for years in the army and rendered noteworthy services with utmost loyalty and honesty, a fact which has in some cases been testified by their superiors in writing.

“On such occasions the friends are standing these trials and hard experiences with utmost patience and steadfastness. In some cases in the orders of dismissal of these officers they stipulate clearly the fact that the officers were dismissed from their job for the sake of being Bahá’ís. We quote below one of these orders for your information:

“To Ist. Lieutenant Ahmad Niknian.

By virtue of the order No. 4017 of Farvardin 19th, 1315 (April 8th, 1936) issued by the General Staff of the North-Western army and the order No. 303 issued by the office of the Officer Commanding the Independent ‘Haffar’ regiment, you are hereby dismissed from military service since Farvardin 20th, 1315 (April 9th, 1936) for your having Bahá’í religion.

“It is necessary that you should at once change your military uniform.

Setvan I. Vali Zadeh,
Acting O. C. the Ist. Section of Independent Haffar Regiment.

“‘No. 133. Dated Farvardin 22nd 1315 (April 11th, 1936).’

“The Bahá’ís in Iran are, under the wise guardianship of our beloved Shoghi Effendi, cooperating, as far as the means at their disposal allow them, with the friends in other countries in the world in establishing a new civilization and in guiding people to real peace and unity. They request their beloved brothers and sisters in the West to pray for them to succeed in carrying out most faithfully the wishes of the beloved Guardian and obtaining his satisfaction.”

—A. Faruton, Secretary.
RIDVAN TABLET

"The Divine Springtime is come, O Most Exalted Pen, for the Festival of the All-Merciful is fast approaching.
Bestir thyself, and magnify, before the entire creation, the name of God, and celebrate His praise, in such wise that all created things may be regenerated and made new. Speak, and hold not thy peace. The day star of blissfulness shineth above the horizon of Our name, the Blissful, inasmuch as the kingdom of the name of God hath been adorned with the ornament of the name of thy Lord, the Creator of the heavens. Arise before the nations of the earth, and arm thyself with the power of this Most Great Name, and be not of those who tarry." (Gleanings, pp. 27-28. Only the first portion of this Tablet is quoted here).

"TRUTHS WHICH LIE AT THE BASIS OF OUR FAITH"

Note: A section of Bahá'í News will hereafter be devoted to excerpts from the Guardian's interpretation of the Fundamental Teachings.

Dearly-beloved friends! I feel it im-cumbent upon me, by virtue of the obligations and responsibilities which as Guardian of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh I am called upon to discharge, to lay special stress, at a time when the light of publicity is being increasingly focussed upon us, upon certain truths which lie at the basis of our Faith and the integrity of which is our first duty to safeguard. These verities, if valiently upheld and properly assimilated, will, I am convinced, powerfully reinforce the vigor of our spiritual life and greatly assist in counteracting the machinations of an implacable and vigilant enemy.

To strive to obtain a more adequate understanding of the significance of Bahá'u'lláh's stupendous Revelation must, it is my unalterable conviction, remain the first obligation and the object of the constant endeavor of each one of its loyal adherents. An exact and thorough comprehension of so vast a system, so sublime a revelation, so sacred a trust, is for obvious rea-sions beyond the reach and ken of our finite minds. We can, however, and it is our bounden duty to, seek to derive fresh inspiration and added sustenance as we labor for the propagation of His Faith through a clearer apprehension of the truths it enshrines and the principles on which it is based. . . .

The Faith of Bahá'u'lláh should indeed be regarded, if we wish to be faithful to the tremendous implications of its message, as the culmination of a cycle, the final stage in a series of successive, of preliminary and progressive revelations. These, beginning with Adam and ending with the Báb, have paved the way and anticipated with an ever-increasing emphasis the advent of that Day of Days in which He Who is the Promise of All Ages should be made manifest.

In confirmation of the exalted rank of the true believer, referred to by Bahá'u'lláh, He reveals the following:
"The station which He who hath truly recognized this Revelation will attain is the same as the one ordained for such prophets of the house of Israel as are not regarded as Manifestations endowed with constancy."

In connection with the Manifestations destined to follow the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá makes this definite and weighty declaration: "Concerning the Manifestations that will come down in the future 'in the shad-oes of the clouds,' know verily that in so far as their relation to the source of their inspiration is concerned they are under the shadow of the Ancient Beauty. In their relation, however, to the age in which they appear, each and every one of them 'doeth whatsoever He willeth.'"

"O my friend!" He thus addresses in one of His Tablets a man of recognized authority and standing, "The unfailing Fire which the Lord of the Kingdom hath kindled in the midst of the holy Tree is burning fiercely in the midmost heart of the world. The conflagration it will provoke will envelop the whole earth. Its blazing flames will illuminates its peoples and kindreds. All the signs have been revealed; every prophetic allusion hath been manifested. Whatever hath been enshrined in all the scriptures of the past hath been made evident. To doubt or hesitate is no more possible... Time is pressing. The Divine Charger is impatient, and can tarry no longer. Ours is the duty to rush forward and, ere it is too late, win the victory.” And finally, this is most stirring passage which He, in one of His moments of exultation, was moved to address to one of His most trusted and eminent followers in the earliest days of His ministry: “What more shall I say? What else can my pen recount? So loud is the call that reverberates from the Abhá Kingdom that mortal ears are well-nigh deafened with its vibrations. The whole creation, methinks, is being disrupted and is bursting asunder through the shattering influence of the Divine summons issued from the throne of glory. More than this I cannot write.”—From “The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.”

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ’S AMERICAN VISIT

The year 1937 is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the visit made by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to North America. It will be the high privilege of the American Bahá’í community to observe this Anniversary in a befitting manner.

The following plan has been adopted by the N. S. A. and has already been reported to the local Spiritual Assemblies with a request for their cooperation.

1. Each local Assembly is requested to arrange a second Anniversary meeting this year, on some date corresponding to the date of His arrival or departure from the city in 1912. All the details of this strictly local meeting are left to the local Assembly.

2. The National Publicity Committee is preparing a feature article, copies of which will be sent each Assembly for release to the local press.

3. In all cities which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá visited, the Spiritual Assembly is requested to arrange a second Anniversary meeting this year, on some date specifically approved and adopted the Resolution of the Reviewing Committee’s recommendation. The following rulings have been adopted by the Temple Trustees, and are here published with the approval of the National Spiritual Assembly:

- Any model or reproduction of the Temple must be submitted to the Temple Trustees, and the Trustees will then determine whether the model or reproduction is acceptable, and also will determine the conditions under which it can be sold. Local Assemblies, or other Bahá’í bodies, or individual be-

RULINGS OF THE N. S. A.

The National Spiritual Assembly calls the attention of the local Assemblies and believers to the Article in the By-Laws which defines the area of jurisdiction of the local Spiritual Assembly, which definition provides that believers living in adjacent and outlying districts can be enrolled as voting members of a local Assembly, extending the establishment of a local Assembly in their own city. This By-Law clearly makes it impossible for a believer living in a city which has a local Spiritual Assembly to hold membership in any other Bahá’í community. In accordance with this constitutional provision, the National Spiritual Assembly requests local Assemblies to adopt their voting list at their early convenience. This general instruction does not in any way mean that believers are not free to attend a Bahá’í meeting in any city, but merely controls their voting rights.

When a Bahá’í author wishes to obtain orders from Assemblies and believers for a book published by a non-Bahá’í firm, the author is to make arrangements satisfactory to the Publishing Committee; and the Publishing Committee, not the author, is to report the matter to the National Spiritual Assembly.

The Publishing Committee will cooperate with a Bahá’í author only when the Reviewing Committee has specifically recommended the book and not merely approved it, and when the National Spiritual Assembly has specifically approved and adopted the Reviewing Committee’s recommendation.

The following rulings have been adopted by the Temple Trustees, and are here published with the approval of the National Spiritual Assembly:

- Any model or reproduction of the Temple must be submitted to the Temple Trustees, and the Trustees will then determine whether the model or reproduction is acceptable, and also will determine the conditions under which it can be sold. Local Assemblies, or other Bahá’í bodies, or individual be-

PUBLIC MEETING IN NEW YORK

The concluding Public Meeting in the series conducted by the National Spiritual Assembly this year was held at the New York Bahá’í Center, 119 West 57th Street, New York, on Sunday afternoon, February 28. The public was arranged by the National Press and Publicity Committee; the author, as Carl Schef­fler, with a musical program provided by Saffa Kinney. In the absence of Mr. Lunt, on account of illness, his subject was assigned to Horace Holley.

The preliminary arrangements, including printed programs and publicity, were placed in the hands of the five local Assemblies of the New York Metropolitan District. After consultation, these Assemblies decided to make their contribution to the success of the public program in the form of a Bahá’í Radio Program to precede the public meeting. The committee jointly appointed by the neighboring Assemblies arranged for a series of six daily broadcasts over WHN, New York, from February 22 to 27, 2.15 to 2.30 P.M. Mountnorl Mills delivered the broadcasts.

With each broadcast, announcement was made of the public meeting, and free copies of the Bahá’í Radio Program were offered.

The result of this new and interesting teaching effort was to attract so many to the meeting that a large number could not be admitted to the hall. Requests for the Radio Program were received from points as distant as New Hampshire and Virginia, many expressing a deep interest in the Bahá’í teachings. An unexpected additional result has been that many inquirers are calling daily at the Bahá’í Center for literature and information.

The public meeting was preceded by a brief consultation with believers from a number of communities in the North-Eastern area.

The Publishing Committee will cooperate with a Bahá’í author only when the Reviewing Committee has specifically recommended the book and not merely approved it, and when the National Spiritual Assembly has specifically approved and adopted the Reviewing Committee’s recommendation.

- Any model or reproduction of the Temple must be submitted to the Temple Trustees, and the Trustees will then determine whether the model or reproduction is acceptable, and also will determine the conditions under which it can be sold. Local Assemblies, or other Bahá’í bodies, or individual believers, are not to purchase or exhibit any Temple model except through the Temple Trustees.

It should be explained that it is the Temple Trustees, and not the National Spiritual Assembly, which holds title to the architect’s design of the Temple, and to the Temple edifice itself. This legal authority is, of course, exercised for the entire Baha’i community, and it is for the sake of the interests of the Baha’i community as a whole that the above rulings have been adopted.

ADDRESS OF NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

In a recent issue of Baha’i News the address of the Secretary of the National Teaching Committee was inadvertently published incorrectly, with the result that some confusion has arisen.

The correct address is: Miss Charlotte Linfoot, Secretary, 376—60th Street, Oakland, Calif.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

During the past few weeks, local Assemblies have reported gains in membership as follows:—

LOCAL ASSEMBLIES

Further corrections in the Assembly list published some months ago:—

South Bend, Indiana, address until further notice, Mr. Howard Longaker, Recording Secretary, 2414 South Michigan Street.

St. Augustine, Florida, new Secretary elected, Mr. Allerton Spicexegger, Dixie Highway West.

Geyserville, California, new Secretary elected, Mrs. John Bosch.

Mrs. Rose Henderson, Toronto.
Mrs. Mac Stone, Topeka, Kansas.
Mrs. Mary Hanford Ford, Toledo, Ohio.
Mr. Worsley G. Hambrugh, San Diego, Calif.
Mr. Claude Warren, Binghamton, N. Y.
Mr. Charles Edsall, Montclair, N. J.
Mrs. Addie L. Cole, Los Angeles, May, 1936 (not previously reported).

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

To the Regional Teaching Committee for California-Nevada-Arizona, Miss Marian Holley has been added.

DETROIT ASSEMBLY

A LEGAL CORPORATION

The Spiritual Assembly of Detroit filed its incorporation papers on February 18, 1937, and now has the status of a legal body under the Statutes of the State of Michigan.

The Assembly has sent two post- stat copies of these papers to the National Spiritual Assembly, one of which has been forwarded to the Guardian.

Detroit has also adopted By-Laws approved by the N. S. A. through its Legal Committee.

Baha’i YOUTH

The International Bulletin published by the National Youth Committee issued its first number of Vol. III on March first.

Baha’i Youth is published quarterly, at ten cents a copy, forty cents per year. Manuscripts and subscriptions should be sent to Miss Zeth Holden, Secretary of the National Youth Committee.

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It conjoyneth the gift of everlasting life—Baha’u’llah.

Mr. Paul K. Dealy, Fairhope, Alabama.
Mr. T. C. Gunning-Davis, Chicago, Ill.
Mr. Charles Parker, Hales Corners, Wisc.

To her beloved friends in America, Miss Root addresses these words, “Allah’s! Abba! Love to you all! Am so sorry I could not come to your cities. I thank you for your warm and welcome invitations. As this servant could not travel to all our cities because of illness, she sends to you this message as an S. O. S. from the depth of her heart, knowing that on the inner plane we can meet.”

DEATH OF BAHAI PIONEER IN POONA

The following excerpts are taken from a circular letter issued by the Spiritual Assembly of Poona dated January 24, 1937.

“We regret to announce the death of Mr. Khosrove Beman Sabit of Poona, a Baha’i pioneer, who passed from this life on the first of Shabat 93 (December 31, 1936) in the age of over a hundred years. . . . His faith was marked by an intense zeal and devotion which led him constantly to seek new channels of service to the Cause, in the support of whose institutions he was a stalwart champion. . . . In one of the Tablets he was privileged to receive from ‘Abdu’l-Baha, the Master writes: ‘O Khosrove! . . . Crowned heads will pay you tribute—that is, they will eulogize you. Yes, they will envy you your state, saying, ‘Would that we were submissive servants at the Divine Threshold like unto him, forgetful of all else save God.’ . . . We are privileged to add to this obituary notice the following cable dated Haifa, January 17, addressed by our beloved Guardian to Mr. Sabit’s two sons: ‘Just heard passage of dearly beloved distinguished father. Profoundly grieve irreparable loss. Ardently praying. Extend relatives deepest sympathy. Memory his historic services imperishable. Love.—Shoghi.’”

YOUTH ACTIVITIES IN INDIA AND BURMA

Acting on a resolution passed by the National Spiritual Assembly at their annual meeting some of the local Spiritual Assemblies have already reported re-organization of local Youth Committees while news from other centers are awaited. It is hoped that the Baha’i Youth of India and Burma shall soon organize themselves into a strong National Youth Committee and begin serving the Divine Faith with energy and enthusiasm which are in an inheritance of the youthful age.

The Bombay Youth Group launched into their new life with giving an “At Home” to the students of the Islamia College, Andheri, near Bombay. They have also started a study-class for studying the sacred literature and training Youth in the art of teaching the Cause.

Karachi and Poona had already strong Youth Groups. Karachi Group reports of having held a meeting on March 22, in accordance with the request of the International Bahá’í Youth Committee, and submitted by Air-Mail to the Beloved Guardian the International Resolution of the Bahá’í Youth. They received a very encouraging Letter from the Beloved Guardian in answer to this Communication. We hope we shall be in a position to give some very good news in our next issue from the Youth of India and Burma.

SACRED SCRIPTURES OF ALL RELIGIONS EXHIBITED

The Public Conference Committee of the New York Spiritual Assembly arranged a special public meeting on Sunday afternoon, December 20th, 1936, with Dr. Emmet Fox, noted New York lecturer, as the guest speaker, Mr. Mountfort Mills as the Bahá’í speaker and Mr. Horace Holley as chairman.

To commemorate the Christmas season, the subject chosen for this occasion was “The Power and Glory of God’s Revelation Through the Ages,” and to further emphasize this subject, it was planned to have a Book Exhibit of “The Sacred Scriptures of the Divine Revelators of Religion”.

Through the generous cooperation of the Union Theological Seminary, The Oxford University Press and Mr. R. Y. Mottahedeh the Book Exhibit Committee was able to assemble a most unique and beautiful collection of Holy Books.

Perhaps it was the first time in history that the Sacred Scriptures of the basic Religions of the World, including the Bahá’í Religion, have been assembled together under the Principle of the Oneness of all revealed Religion.

The Book Exhibit was arranged in chronological and geographical order as follows: the Hindu, Zoroastrian, Chinese and Buddhist Scriptures, then the Jewish, Christian, Muhammadan and Bahá’í Scriptures, dating from 2000 to 5000 B.C. to the 19th Century A.D.

The collection of loaned Books was valued at about $2000, including old original Manuscripts and modern facsimiles.

Among the rare old Manuscripts, were two hand-illuminated Qur’áns of the 8th-9th and the 14th Centuries in the Kufic and Arabic Scripts, a Buddhist and a Western India Manuscript of the 12th and 16th Centuries with 20 illuminated miniatures, the text written in Sanskrit. These four Books were of exceptional beauty.

Some of the interesting Books of the Christian Scriptures were: the original translation of the Gospel into Greek by Erasmus done in the 16th Century, a copy of the noted Tildén’s Gospel of St. Matthew translated in 1525 about which there is an interesting history, a copy of an exact facsimile of the King James Bible in 1611, and a modern Bible specially bound in one of the beautiful exhibition bindings for which the Oxford University Press is noted. Other Holy Books were copies of the Rig Védas, the Zend Avesta of Zoroaster, the Books of Lao Tze and Confucius, the Hebrew Torah and an original copy of the Sikh Religion, an offshoot of Hinduism, this entire Book is recited orally every day by a relay of priests. All these Books were in the original scripts with English translations.

The Bahá’í Exhibit included The Bayan of The Báb, French Translation, The Iqán, Cleanings, Epistle to the Sun of the Wolf, Some Answered Questions, The Promulgation of Universal Peace, Bahá’í Scriptures opened to the page on which is that stirring Tablet by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá “Do you know in what Day you are living”, the de luxe edition of the Dawn-Breakers opened to the facsimile of The Báb’s Letters to the Living, and the World Order Magazine opened to Bahá’u’lláh’s Tablet to America. Grouped separately were Bahá’í Worlds, World Order Magazines, and copies of Bahá’í Literature in 35 foreign languages.

The Exhibit was enhanced by having a beautiful old embroidered tapestry for a background. At the sides were hung two large ornamented Temple Panels and several specially framed pictures of interest such as views of the Temple and “The Star” of The Báb.

PUBLICITY

Once again the Press Clipping Book has been brought up to date, a much greater task this time because, we are happy to say, of the tremendous amount of publicity clippings received since the last article printed in the October issue of Baha'i News.

First, we wish to express our sincere appreciation to all the publicity chairmen for their splendid cooperation in cutting the clippings from the papers and pasting name of paper and date line over first column, so that they are ready to put in the Clipping Books without further trimming. This is a great help.

Having completed this less important work, we then turned to the most important part of this task, securing the necessary permission to use the clippings.

Turning the pages, we first have the glorious Message headlined in the "Knickerbocker Press" of Albany, New York, with a three column article topped with photographs of Mrs. Barbara B. McLaughlin, Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Miss Sarah Howard. The head-title "Proponents of Baha'i Faith Who Preach Oneness of Mankind" and "Principles of World Faith Outlined to Albany Group." The feature here which catches the eye is the unique manner in which the article is begun:

The Baha'i Faith has come to Albany.

The movement born in the cradle of religion, the Near East, and designed as an all-embracing world faith brought together last night a group to hear Mrs. Dorothy Baker of Lima, Ohio, who spoke at Harmanus Bleecker Library. Christians, Jews and members of all other faiths were welcomed at the meeting, where the oneness of mankind and the unqualified search for truth to effect unity in all phases of life was the central theme. Then followed a history of the Faith and further report of Mrs. Baker's talk. The "Times-Union" also gave a fine write-up.

Baltimore has a "Shopper's Guide" that is publishing long articles on the Faith and has recently begun publishing "The Goal of the New World Order" as a series. Many cities now have these "Shopper's Guides" which are good mediums of Baha'i Publicity, especially of meetings held in the shopping districts.

Toronto, Ontario, through the recently organized publicity committee, obtained two-column articles in the "Toronto Daily Star" and the "Toronto Daily Globe"—reporting talks given by Lorol Schofield.

Columbus, Ohio, has some fine publicity on lectures by Dr. Khan, Prof. Cobb and Ruth Moffett. One short article from "The Columbus Dispatch" is headed, "Baha'i Again. Who are the Baha'is? Once or twice a year an announcement that they are holding a meeting somewhere in the city comes to this office, and puzzled desk men always ask that question." Then followed a brief explanation of the Faith. Some times we are apt to forget that the world at large does not know what the Baha'i Faith is. The names which have become music to our ears are strange to theirs, therefore an explanatory article should be sent to the papers occasionally, or a pamphlet sent each time notices of meetings are sent.

Buffalo, N. Y., has a page of meeting notices and several full column lecture reviews.

Chicago has its weekly notice of meetings. Much publicity has been obtained through the tours at the Temple, especially those conducted by the Board of Education, who say the Temple is one of the most popular tours. In August the Czechoslovak "Denni Hlasatel" published an article on Martha Root's return to this country and telling of her interview with President Benes. The race-amity meetings have been well publicized.

Through the efforts of the Chairman of the committee, Mrs. Fred Mortensen, write-ups about the meetings have appeared in all the Chicago and suburban papers. The "Chicago Defender" has been most generous, printing in their entirety all articles and notices submitted. Fireside Group meetings, Regional Conference and Youth Group activities are among the clippings.

An Oslo, Norway paper is next with a picture of Mrs. French and an article on the Faith. Also one reporting a lecture by Mrs. Charles Bishop in the September issue of the same paper. Two other foreign language papers, the "Torsaima" and "To kokum" of Japan, "Dullivan" of Minn., and the "Opal" of Colorado, Michigan also published the same half-page article on the Faith. The "Theosophia" published in India, in its September issue, printed a six and one half page address on "The Baha'i Religion" which was delivered before the Diamond Jubilee of The Theosophical Society in the conference on Zaros-trianism, by Shirin K. Fozdar. To our knowledge this is the finest presentation of the Baha'i Faith ever to appear in a Magazine.

Winnetka, Illinois, secured publicity in the "Glenoake News" with such interesting captions as "Open House of Baha'i Discussions" "Baha'i Forum" as well as Anniversary and Lectures notices.

Green Bay, Wisconsin, has a page which shows the results of Pioneer Work done under the auspices of the Milwaukee Assembly, with Ruth Moffett giving a series of lectures in June and one in October, all of which were well publicized in the "Press-Gazette." Japan and the articles placed in the papers by Miss Alexander from "World Order" are always inspiring.

In Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids and Muskegon, Michigan are represented on the next page. In Kalamazoo, Elizabeth Dickerman, an isolated believer, obtained publicity on Baha'u'llah's birthday and The Day of the Covenant. Dr. Dickerman has recently moved to Vermont, Michigan, so we hope in the near future to have clipping from Vermont. In Grand Rapids, Ruth Moffett has again done some pioneer work and her series of lectures were given publicity by the "Grand Rapids Herald." The "Muskegon Chronicle" has given the Baha'i meetings good write-ups.

Kansas City has placed the notices of their meetings in the "Kansas City Star" in the unique method of quotations from the writings as the following: The Baha'i Revelation is destined to unite all religions. All are one. You are invited to meet with us on Tuesday at 8 p.m."

Lima, Ohio, shows much activity in the Publicity field with their headlines of lectures, study classes, conference notices, Dinners, Bible discussions, World Turmoil, Famous Savant lectures and the notices of the various Baha'i Anniversaries.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin, through the medium of 3 papers has obtained fine announcements of their activities. The forum column of the "Milwaukee Leader" has been most effectively used in answering an article "What Shall We Do To Be Saved."

Moline, Illinois—here we have some more pioneer work done by Kenneth and Dorothy Smith, in a picture of the Temple and a long article about the Temple and Faith. An old clipping from the "Chicago Tribune" was instrumental in interesting this Editor.

New York's "World-Telegram" published the account of Martha Root's return to this country, together with a picture of the Temple, as well as a two column write-up headed "Baha'i Now Visualize Happy World Order" by Dr. W. W. A. Nichols, religious editor of the "World-Telegram," giving a concise and complete statement of Baha'u'llah's plan for the establishment of a World Commonwealth. From the "New York Times" book review page of January 3rd, we have an advertisement by the Roycrofters who have published "The Life of the Soul" compiled from the writings of Baha'u'llah and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, by Mary Rumsey Movius. According to the December Baha'i News, this book was to be ready by December 15th. This should be a fine opportunity to get book reviews on it in our papers.

Pasadena, California—Mrs. French has announced "The Loom of Reality." A column called "The Philosopher's Stone" from the "Altadena Press" edited by Rena Sheffield, an interested friend, with the sub-title "From the Bahá'ís" gives us five Hidden Words of Baha'u'lláh.

Norwich, Connecticut—a member of the New Haven Community, Mrs. Walter Duffy, has through her untiring efforts done some remarkable publicity work in the Norwich papers, considering that she is the only believer there and has to draw upon New Haven activities for the most part, for her material. One thing Mrs. Duffy has done well worth copying, is to present a Bahá'í book to the library from time to time and then send the information to the papers with a description of the book.

Philadelphia's page shows us what fine publicity is to be obtained when Martha Root is lecturing in a city. A New Jersey paper, "The New Era," in which the Philadelphia friends have been placing Bahá'í news, has quotations from 'Abdu'l-Bahá boxed in a corner of their front page.

South Bend, Indiana has done remarkable work in getting the pure teachings into their papers, as well as the notices of their meetings.

Seattle, Washington, amongst their many other items of interest received a two column write-up in "The Seattle Star" about the Esperanto Class conducted by Mrs. Lorrol Jackson, in the Bahá'í rooms. In the "Nachrichten" the American German Press for the Northwest published in Portland, Oregon, we find another outstanding piece of work, printed in English. This is a three column spread which includes a recent picture of the Temple and is headed:

What's the Answer?—A Library in Miniature—Unique Temple
1. Who is building the Bahá'í Temple at Wilmette, Ill.?
2. How long has it been under construction, and when will it be finished?
3. What is the purpose of the Temple, and to whom will it be open?
4. Who designed the edifice?
5. What is its shape and general plan?
6. Are there any similar Bahá'í Temples elsewhere, or will others be built in the future?

Then follow the answers to the six questions ending with the statement: "For further information please write 4111 Arcade Blg., Seattle, Wash. Miss Doris Foy, Secretary." This is the finest kind of publicity.

Summer School pages present the most remarkable Bahá'í publicity yet obtained in this work. Louhelien has splendid items from many Michigan papers, in fact, much more than the press book shows, as we are told that it was not all collected. We would suggest that each Summer School appoint a publicity committee for advance publicity work and to see that two copies of all clippings are sent in for the Press Books. Green Acre has more publicity than ever before, the same articles and notices having been published in many papers in the East.

Geyersville—we do not need to rehearse or try to tell about the marvelous column after column of publicity given the Summer School work, as each publicity chairman received copies of the publicity in the "Geyersville Press," which we are sure was shared with their communities. Not only did the Geyersville Press give the Summer School wonderful recognition, but papers of Berkeley, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Hollywood, San Francisco, Santa Barbara and Santa Paula carried articles about the Summer School at Geyersville, as well as notices about their local activities.

Syracuse, N. Y., gives us the splendid results of publicity work done by an isolated believer, Minnie R. Setz.

Teaneck, N. J., most certainly knows how to get publicity by drawing in people of prominence, Amity Conferences, Announcements of Weekly Schedules and Meetings and Bahá'í Parties.

Nashville, Tennessee—we rejoice in reporting that at the last meeting of the N.S.A. which was held in conjunction with a Regional Conference, that the newspaper reporters honored the N.S.A. members. A picture of the Temple and N.S.A. members was published with six different articles, on the Temple and reporting talks on the Teachings.

Publicity just received from Mrs. Francis Gay of St. Augustine, Florida, "our first" she states; as a result of her attendance at the Conference held in Nashville. A request for literature came as one known result of the publicity item.

Toledo, Ohio, in the "Toledo Blade" and "Toledo Eagle" remarkable publicity has been given the Teachings.

South Bend, Indiana—Mrs. Inderlied has good publicity on all the Temple activities in the "Wilmette Life" through the untiring efforts of Gertrude Struven.

Other communities sending in publicity obtained about their activities are Geneva and Rochester, N. Y., who have obtained splendid write-ups for their circuit speakers; Ann Arbor, Michigan; Boise, Idaho, where Mrs. Caswell has done great work; Boston, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Phoenix, Oregon City, Racine, and Vancouver, B. C.

Since beginning this report we have received "The Mineralogist," January, 1936 issue, which contains a most interesting article by F. S. Young of Portland, Oregon, together with a late picture of the Temple and a close-up of the Dome cleverly arranged on one page. The article is headed "The Five Billion Carat Gem Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette, Illinois," from the March issue of "The Mineralogist." It is a short quotation from Baha'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá on four different pages.

Saint Paul, Minnesota, has just sent a clipping in headed "Temple Model Here" with a picture of a Temple Model owned by Mrs. Gayle Woolson, taken in her home with Mrs. Woolson standing beside it.

Binghamton, N. Y., always receives fine press items on their lectures. A new and interesting method of indirect teaching is through a lecture on "Wayside Shrines" given by Mrs. Inderlied and reported in the papers. Needless to say the Bahá'í Shrines on Mt. Carmel were included in this lecture.

San Francisco just sent in two immense envelopes of clippings. Among these are the reports of the N.S.A. meetings held there in November. One item which caught our eye and which it would be well for us all to remember is to send a copy of the revised edition of "Baha'u'llah the New Era" to our papers with an article stating that it is from a new edition of 5,000 copies of previous editions having been sold and that it is a standard textbook about the Bahá'í Faith. Also, it is now published in 22 languages.

The "Illinois Bell Telephone News" for February, a monthly Magazine for their employees, has for its cover design a striking picture of the Temple, with a brief explanation on the next page.

Even more impressive is the fact that the United States Steel Corporation has reproduced the House of Worship on the front cover of its "U. S. Steel News" for March. This house organ has a very extensive distribution, and goes to many countries outside the United States.

Out of seventy-one Assemblies, forty-nine have sent in Clippings since April, which leaves twenty-two we have not received any from. We hope before April 15th that some will be sent in from the other twenty-two. Let us know what your problems are, perhaps we can suggest something to help. Read over your "Publicity Bulletins" sent out by this and former committees. Remember: Newspapers like action. Give a dinner, a musical, reading the words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá about music between the selections; arrange a book display in your public library or some book store; use Forum columns; interest the foreign language papers of your city by presenting them with an Esslemont book published in their own language together with a well written article which they can translate for their papers; and the many other unique methods of obtaining dignified publicity, mentioned in the foregoing report.

Please remember, also, to send two or more clippings to this committee. We say two or more, because extra ones are often requested by publicity chairman as they help them in securing publicity in their papers.

THE PUBLICATION OF BAHÁ'Í SACRED WRITINGS THROUGH NON-BAHÁ'Í PUBLISHERS

From time to time, the National Spiritual Assembly has published statements intended to clarify the various questions raised in connection with the functions of the Reviewing and Publishing Committees. Such statements were published in BAHÁ'Í News of February, 1932, March, 1932, and July, 1934.

In none of those statements was the matter of the publication of compilations of Bahá'í Sacred Writings fully and definitely considered.

It must be assumed that the fundamental literature of the Faith—the Writings of the Báb, Bábá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi—is and will always remain the sacred trust of the Bahá'í community, and therefore, as far as is humanly possible, to be published through the established Bahá'í channels. The fundamental literature, however, has in the past appeared in two different forms: the original text, such as in the publication of the Igân, Hidden Words, Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Bahá'í Administration, etc., and in the form of compilations like The Reality of Man.

While it is inconceivable that any circumstances could ever now arise making it proper or necessary for any believer or administrative body to arrange for the publication of an original text, like the Igân, through a non-Bahá'í publisher, an opportunity might arise from time to time for the publication of a compilation outside the Cause, with facilities for bringing the book to the attention of the general public in ways not yet possessed by the Bahá'í community.

With reference to this particular question, the publication of compilations through non-Bahá'í channels, the National Spiritual Assembly feels it advisable to issue the following statement, with the request that it be conscientiously upheld and observed.

1. A compilation is subject to review by the Reviewing Committee in the same manner as are other Bahá'í works. Every compilation must include the latest available translation of each excerpt, and the source of each excerpt must be supplied. If the plan of the book makes it inconvenient to add the source at the end of each excerpt in the printed work, the source must be noted in the manuscript supplied to the Reviewing Committee.

2. The compiler should not conclude any arrangement with a non-Bahá'í publisher until the compilation has been officially approved. If the compiler intends to print or publish the compilation outside the Cause, the proposed arrangement is to be submitted to the National Spiritual Assembly through its Publishing Committee for approval.

3. In giving its approval for such printing or publication, the National Spiritual Assembly, in consultation with its Reviewing and Publishing Committee, will consider not merely the question of accuracy in the text, but also the general question of policy involved in allowing Bahá'í literature to be published outside the established Bahá'í facilities.

4. In giving its approval, the National Spiritual Assembly will in each case hereafter request the compiler to assign to the Bahá'í Publishing Committee any copyright taken out on publication of the book or pamphlet. Otherwise, the control of Bahá'í literature would pass outside the Cause.

The purpose of this statement is to assure proper protection of the interests of the Bahá'í Faith, while providing sufficient freedom of action to individual believers under all circumstances.

MME. OROLOVA IN DENMARK, SWEDEN AND GERMANY

Detailed reports, with interesting comment and analysis of the spiritual conditions encountered in her teaching work, have been received from Mme. Gita Orlova. These cover activities in Copenhagen from September 22 to October 27, and in Stockholm from October 28 to November 3, and in Germany from August 24 to September 21, 1936.

At Copenhagen, Mme. Orlova discussed the Faith with a number of prominent scholars, musicians and diplomats. A number of press clippings attest the success of this activity. Among the public meetings held there, Mme. Orlova spoke at the American Woman’s Club and in the same hall where previously she had given a lecture recital on a cultural subject. This meeting was followed by questions and answers on the Cause.

From November 6 to November 17, Mme. Orlova returned to Copenhagen, where a number of meetings were held in the studio of Mrs. Ingred Nybo. A study group was formed at these meetings.

Mme. Orlova found it possible in Copenhagen to bring the Faith to the attention of persons of influence and to associate the Bahá’í conception of World Order with the fundamental trend of the age.

At Stockholm, Mme. Orlova had the same facility to meet the responsible type of person, and through such influence an interview was arranged with the four largest newspapers of the city. Much attention was attracted by this dignified presentation of the Teachings. A public meeting held at the Lyceum Club led to many questions and interested discussion. One of the leading artists of the city arranged to start a study group. Mme. Orlova impressed upon her audiences the fact that the leaders of society have the greatest responsibility for striving to establish the new World Order. The following centers were visited by Mme. Orlova in Germany: Esslingen, Stuttgart, Geislingen, Zuffenhausen, Karlsruhe, Heppenheim, Heidelberg, Frankfurst, Leipzig, Dresden, Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Rostock-Warnemunde. Most of her meetings in Germany were in the homes of believers, although several public meetings could be arranged. It is impossible to read this report without realizing the importance of clarifying, in every section of the Bahá’í world community, the Guardian’s fundamental instructions on which the future progress of the Faith depends. Besides finding continuous opportunity to discuss these matters with believers, Mme. Orlova met certain people, like Paul Peroff, a scientist, whose interest in the Cause can become very important.

MRS. JEANNE AND MISS JEANNE BOLLES IN EUROPE AND THE NEAR EAST, 1935-1937

The reports received from these two devoted teachers are very detailed and extensive. Only a brief summary can be made for the information of the friends, but it is hoped that more complete statements can be recorded in some volume of The Bahá’í World relating the important activities of all those American teachers who have so valiantly served in other lands.

The scope of their journey is indicated by the mere list of cities visited, in which Bahá’í activities were carried on: London, Orpington, Brussels, Luxembourg, St. Moritz, Sils Maria, Munich, Garmish Prartenkirchen, Mittenwald, Innsbruck, Venice, Rome, Florence, Capri, Cairo, Beirut, Aleppo, Istanbul, Sofia, Belgrade, Budapest, Vienna, Munich, Castolovice, Prague, Dresden, Leipzig, Falkenberg, Halberstadt, Mungersdorf, Berlin, Hamburg, Warnemunde, Rostock, Graal, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Esslingen, Zurich. This journey included a pilgrimage to Haifa.

From September, 1936 to February, 1937, the Bahá’ís were active in Cambridge, England, Holland, Germany, Hungary. A recent letter states that a journalist in Buda Pest has become so interested that he is preparing an illustrated feature article on the Cause.

The intimate details of this teaching work, the many personal contacts it made possible, the amount of literature distributed in many languages, and the unflagging fervor of the Bahá’í teachers who uphold the new World Order in the face of such difficulties as Europe now represents, is indeed an inspiration.

WRITINGS OF SHOGHI EFFENDI

Baha’í Administration
The letters written by Shoghi Effendi to the American Baha’i community, from January, 1922, to July, 1932, in his capacity as Guardian of the Faith, to encourage, guide and instruct the believers in carrying out the provisions of the will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá concerning the organic development of the Baha’i community. This volume constitutes the authoritative interpretation of that Will and of Bahá’u’lláh’s teachings on the subject of the principles determining the character of the Faith as an evolving religious society. These letters define the institutions of local, national and international Bahá’í administrative bodies forming the nucleus of the new world order of Bahá’u’lláh. The volume also contains excerpts from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Will, and an Appendix consisting of the Declaration of Trust and By-Laws of the National Spiritual Assembly, and By-Laws for local Spiritual Assemblies. 222 pp. Bound in cloth $1.50
The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh
By Shoghi Effendi

A letter (dated February 27, 1929) from the Guardian of the Bahá’í Faith explaining the continuity of the Cause after the passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and relating Bahá’í institutions to the ideal of world order and peace. 16 pp. Paper covers. Sold only in quantity.

The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh
By Shoghi Effendi

By Shoghi Effendi, the best-known book of this Oriental scholar, philosopher and disciple of Bahá’u’lláh translated into English. It presents the reality of the Bahá’í Revelations as the true theology, with a biographical outline of the history of the Bahá’í Faith. 288 pp. Bound in cloth $2.99

The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh: Further Considerations
By Shoghi Effendi

This letter (dated March 21, 1930) develops the subject with remarks on the distinguishing features of Bahá’í world order, and on the essential differences between the Bahá’í Faith and ecclesiastical organizations. 16 pp. Paper covers. Sold only in quantity.

The Goal of a New World Order
By Shoghi Effendi

In this communication (dated November 29, 1924) the Guardian analyzes the existing international, political, economic and social problems, points to the signs of impending chaos, and emphasizes the guiding principles of world order established by Bahá’u’lláh. The goal of world federation is upheld, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s prophecy of the failure of the present civilization is called to the attention of Bahá’ís. 32 pp. Paper covers. Sold only in quantity.

The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh
By Shoghi Effendi

The Guardian’s letter (dated March 21, 1932) referring to the spiritual importance of America in the new world order, the progressive character of divine Revelation, the station of the Báb, the release of spiritual forces for human regeneration, and the non-political character of the Bahá’í Faith. 24 pp. Paper covers. Sold only in quantity.

America and the Most Great Peace
By Shoghi Effendi

A letter addressed to American Bahá’ís, dated April 21, 1933. This communication summarizes the forty years of American Bahá’í History (1893–1933), and develops in greater detail than in the preceding letter, the responsibility laid upon America in the divine plan for the establishment of universal peace. 28 pp. Paper covers. Sold only in quantity.

The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh
By Shoghi Effendi

A letter addressed to the Bahá’ís of the West, dated February 7, 1934. In this letter the Guardian of the Bahá’í Faith clarifies, with numerous quotations from Bahá’í sacred writings, the spiritual station and mission of Bahá’u’lláh, the Báb, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and the nature of the World Order which Bahá’u’lláh established. In the statement prepared by Bahá’u’lláh authorized in ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Will and Testament to be the sole interpreter of Bahá’í writings, students of the Cause possess the first complete and authentic outline and summary of the Bahá’í Faith in its development from the Announcement of the Báb in 1844 to the Administrative Order defined by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for the era following His departure from this world in 1921. 66 pp. Bound in cloth $1.75 Bound in paper .55

The Unfoldment of World Civilization
By the Guardian of the Faith

An analysis of the death of the old order and the birth of the new. 86 pp. Paper covers $1.15

The Future World Commonwealth
Excerpts from the writings of Shoghi Effendi explaining the future of the new world order. 16 pp. Paper covers $1.00

“TRUTHS WHICH LIE AT THE BASIS OF OUR FAITH”

Note: A section of Baha’i News will hereafter be devoted to excerpts from the Guardian’s interpretation of the fundamental Teachings.

Let no one meditating, in the light of the afore-quoted passages, on the nature of the Revelation of Baha’u’llah, make it. a character or misconstrue the intent of its Author. The divinity attributed to so great a Being and the complete incarnation of the names and attributes of God in so exalted a Person should, under no circumstances, be misconceived or misinterpreted.
The human temple that has been made the vehicle of so overpowering a Revelation must, if we be faithful to the tenets of our Faith, ever remain entirely distinguished from that “innermost Spirit of Spirits” and “eternal Essence of Essences”—that invisible yet rational God Who, however much we extol the divinity of His Manifestations on earth, can in no wise incarnate His infinite, His unknowable, His incorruptible and all-embracing Reality in the concrete and limited frame of a mortal being. Indeed, the God Who could so incarnate His own reality would, in the light of the teachings of Baha’u’llah, cease immediately to be
God. So crude and fantastic a theory of Divine incarnation is as removed from, and incompatible with, the essentials of Baha’i belief as are the no less inadmissible pantheistic and anthropo-morphic conceptions of God—both of which the utterances of Baha’u’llah emphatically repudiate and the fallacy of which they expose . . .

That Baha’u’llah should, notwithstanding the overwhelming intensity of His Revelation, be regarded as essentially one of these Manifestations of God, never to be identified with that invisible Reality, the Essence of Divinity itself, is one of the major beliefs of our Faith—a belief which should never be obscured and the integrity of which no one of its followers should allow to be compromised.

Nor does the Baha’i Revelation, claiming as it does to be the culmination of a prophetic cycle and the fulfillment of the promise of all ages, attempt, under any circumstances, to validate those first and everlasting principles that animate and underlie
the Religions that have preceded it.

The God-given authority, vested in each one of them, it admits and establishes as its finest and ultimate basis.
It regards them in no other light except as different stages in the eternal history and constant evolution of one religion, Divine and indivisible, of which it itself forms but an integral part. It neither seeks to obscure their Divine origin, nor to dwarf the admitted magnitude of their colossal achievements. It can countenance no attempt that seeks to distort their features or to stultify the truths which they instal.
Its teachings do not deviate a hair-breadth from the verities they enshrine, nor does the weight of its message detruct one jot or one tittle from the influence they exert or the loyalty they inspire. Far from aiming at the overthrow of the spiritual foundation of the world’s religious systems, its avowed, its unalterable purpose is to widen their basis, to restate their fundamentals, to reconcile their aims, to reinvigorate their life, to demonstrate their oneness, to restore the pristine purity of their teachings, to coordinate their functions and to assist in their realization of their highest aspirations. These divinely-revealed religions, as a close observer has graphically expressed it, “are doomed not to die, but to be reborn.”

Does not the child succumb in the youth and the youth in the man;
yet none child nor youth perishes?”

LIMA ASSEMBLY GIVES RADIO SERIES
The Lima Assembly received an invitation to give a series of five radio talks for the daily devotional hour of the new Lima station, February 8 to 12, inclusive. Four of the friends were chosen to participate, and a soloist added much by singing hymns. Baha'i hymns and well known old hymns were used at the beginning of each program and the Baha'i benediction closed each service. A Baha'i prayer and a passage of Bible reading opened the service, and lent a truly devotional aspect to the program. The series included the following talks:
1. Objectives of the Baha'i Faith.
2. Prayer.
3. Unity in the World of Religion.
4. The Spiritual Life of Man.
5. The New World Order.
The talks are all direct, though designed to be informal and of general interest.

The Public Library arranged a special exhibit of Baha'i literature during the radio program, and calls for the books were greatly stimulated. A new acceleration in the progress of the Cause is definitely noticeable in Lima, the Assembly reports.

EASTERN YOUTH CONVENE IN NEW YORK
On Saturday, December 26, 1936, at the Baha'i Center in New York, the Baha'i Youth of eastern United States and Canada met for their second annual mid-winter conference. Representatives attended from Albany, Baltimore, Binghamton, Boston, Philadelphia, Teaneck, Washington, Montreal, and New York.
The general program for the conference was: Saturday, a luncheon, conference meeting at the Center, dinner, informal party at Philip Sprague's apartment; Sunday, luncheon, and a youth symposium at the Public Meeting at the Center.
The conference meeting Saturday afternoon was presided over by the chairman of the National Youth Committee. The Guardian sent the following cable which was read: "Praying ardently for Conference. Abiding gratitude, love."—Shoghi. A letter of greeting was also read from the Montreal Youth Group.
The 1937 plans for youth activities were presented by the chairman and discussed, principal emphasis being placed upon the International Series of Youth Symposia planned for March 7. The individual responsibility of youth was discussed. The importance of prayers and meditation was brought out. A clear understanding of individual responsibility will result in closer cooperation with national committees, with local and national Assemblies, and in constant financial support to Baha'i funds and publications.
The remainder of the conference period was devoted to a discussion of Group Consciousness, Teachings, and the Place of Youth Activities in the Baha'i Community. Perhaps the trend of thought can be best expressed by a few extracts from the long report prepared for the N.S.A. and the Guardian. "Baha'u'llah has given us the cohesive principle of Love to be used!" "Learn to recognize prayer as a positive force." "In working with a group, the individual is able to lose some of his ego, one of the first steps toward group consciousness." "Youth activities are not separate from other community activities." "The duty of the Youth Group in each community is to see that the group activities do in no way separate them from the rest of the community, but tend to make the youth group an integral part of every Baha'i community's life."
At the delightful party at Mr. Sprague's apartment movies of the Youth Week at Green Acre last summer were shown. Pictures of the assembled youth were taken.

Mr. Quigley, chairman of the New York Youth Group, was chairman of the public meeting at the Center Sunday afternoon. Betty Shook of Boston spoke on "Philosophy Or Religion?" Emeric Sala of Montreal spoke on the subject "What of Tomorrow?"
The National Youth Committee owes its thanks for all the conference arrangements to a committee of the New York Youth Group headed by Dorothea Morrell.

MRS. LOROL SCHOPFLOCHER IN EUROPE
Since her departure for Europe in the autumn of 1936, Mrs. Schopflocher has carried on teaching work in Sweden, Norway, Denmark, England, France and Geneva, Switzerland.

Original newspaper clippings, with translations into English, have been received which show that fifteen articles about the Cause were published in Norway, eleven in Sweden, and one in Denmark. Some of these articles, in the form of interviews, filled several newspaper columns. These carried the direct message of the Faith, as indicated by such headlines as "Baha'i — A Remarkable World Movement."

Besides this great service, Mrs. Schopflocher arranged with an English publisher to issue her book of travel and presentation of the Faith, obtained this summer in The Bahai World from Countess Marie Levinhaubt and Count Claes-Eric, of Stockholm, and from Mr. Paul Peirce, scientist, of Berlin, held large public meetings in London, met with the Baha'is in a number of cities, attended the Baha'i Youth Conference in Paris on December 31, and has sent the editors of World Order a very interesting article by Mr. Peroff which he prepared for The Bahai World.

GREEN ACRE SUMMER SCHOOL 1937
The Green Acre Summer School program covers the period July 30 to September 3, but Green Acre will be open from July 3, and a separate program is being arranged for the period July 3 to July 30.
The following School program is corrected to date, though one or two of the courses may later on exchange their dates. At present, however, the Committee is prepared to announce that all the study courses will be given.
1. Youth Week, August 1 to 7. The Green Acre Youth Committee has pre-pied its own Study Course, details of which will be announced.
2. Rise and Fall of Civilizations, morning and afternoon sessions,
August 9, 10, 11. Leader, Bishop Brown.
3. Teaching Conference, morning and afternoon sessions, August 12, 13, 14.
4. The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh, morning sessions, August 16 to 20.
Leader, Mrs. H. Emogene Hoagg.
5. Islands, afternoon sessions, August 16 to 20. Leader, Marzieh Carpenter.
6. Essentials of World Religion,
morning sessions, August 23 to 27.
Leader, Kenneth Christian.
7. Public Speaking, afternoon sessions, August 23 to 27. Leader, Helen Campbell.
8. Human Qualities in the New Age, morning sessions, August 30 to September 3. Leader, Genevieve L. Coy.
9. Course on Writing, afternoon sessions, August 30 to September 3.
Leader, Doris McKay.

Morning sessions, 10:30 to 12:00 noon. Afternoon sessions, 1:30 to 3:00.
Meetings: Devotional meeting, Sunday A.M., Public Bahá’í lecture, Sunday evening. Bahá’í discussion, Friday afternoon.

Rates and Reservations: The minimum rate at Inn and cottages, $15.00 per week, for top floor of Inn and of cottages. Second floor of Inn, $18.50 and up. First floor, $25.00 and up.
The large rooms in cottages with fireplaces, $25.00. During Youth Week, a rate of $12.50 will be given to the young people. The cottage formerly belonging to Mrs. McKinney has been purchased by the Green Acre Trustees and will be rented by the Maintenance Committee. Bahá’ís who desire to lease land at Green Acre in order to erect their own cottage can arrange leases for tracts between the pines and the highway at $1.00 per front foot per year, with minimum of fifty feet. For those who wish to camp out, the river lot adjoining the town park is available. Some clearing has been done and there is a spring for water.

For reservations, write to Harold
M. Bowman, Salmon Falls, N. H.
After July 3, write to Manager, Green Acre Inn, Eliot, Maine.

Note: Cottages adjoining the Inn are being enlarged, and a new Bahá’í Hall is being presented to Green Acre for use as an auditorium and meeting place for study classes. Detailed reports will be made before the season begins.

THE GUARDIAN’S MESSAGE

Cablegram Received March 30

"Deeply moved your message. Institu­tion (of) Guardianship, head corner­stone (of the) Administrative Order (of the) Cause (of) Bahá’u’lláh, already ennobled through its organic connection with (the) Persons of Twin Founders (of the) Bahá’í Faith, is now further reinforced through direct association with West and particularly with (the) American believers, whose spiritual destiny is to usher in (the) World Order (of) Bahá’u’lláh.
For my part (I) desire (to) congratulate community (of)
American believers on acquisition (of) tie vitally binding them to so weighty an organ of their Faith."
Mr. Kinney spoke of the purpose and significance of the Bahá’í world movement for the unification of mankind.

The first principal speaker of the afternoon part was: Elsa Russell Blakely, who spoke of the continuity of the prophets. Horace Holley of New York, the other principal speaker of the afternoon said: “Among the tremendous changes going on in the world today, the most fundamental is that taking place in the realm of religion. Bahá’u’lláh has not merely revived the highest ideals of the great religions which relate human beings to their Divine Creator, but has enlarged the realm of Spiritual truth to apply directly to civilization.”

Other speakers giving short addresses were:

Dr. Walter B. Guy, St. Augustine, Fla.

Mrs. Florian Krug, Chester, N. Y.

James P. Morton, Paterson, N. J.

Roy Wilhelm, West Englewood, N. J.

Supper was served under the pines, east of the Bahá’í Evergreen Cabin.

The evening part of the meeting was begun by:

Mrs. Lulu Lux, chairman, Ridgefield Park, N. J.

ARCHIVES AND HISTORY

The Founder of our Faith has enunciated the principle that religion and science must be in harmony. To the degree that we as individuals and as national and local communities approach this ideal, to that degree will we be anxious to make a careful record of our progress and to preserve in the minutest detail a clear picture of the outstanding events in Bahá’í history.

Most important of all, since this is the only Faith which possesses the original record of the Revelations of the Divine Word, will we make an arduous effort to preserve this Word and its interpretation, in authentic, original manuscripts, as handed down to us by the Center of the Covenant and by the Guardian.

In his Letter, “America and the Most Great Peace”, the Guardian emphasizes again and again, either directly or indirectly, his desire that a careful and detailed record of the growth of the Cause in America be preserved. In one instance he indicates that it does not seem to be “... within the competence of anyone of the present generation to trace the exact and full history of the rise and gradual consolidation of this invincible arm, this mighty organ, of a continually advancing Cause. It would be premature at this early stage of its evolution to attempt an exhaustive analysis, or to arrive at a just estimate, of the impelling forces that have urged it forward...” His statement continues, that future historians will prepare “...a masterly exposition of the origins of those forces which, through a remarkable swing of the pendulum, have caused the administrative center of the Faith to gravitate, away from its learning that two copies of an English translation of Mahmod's Diary were received recently for the Archives. This Diary gives a day-by-day description of the Master's journey from the time of His departure from Egypt until He left New York. A draft of a questionnaire, calling for detailed information with reference to local Bahá’í history, has been prepared and presented to the National Spiritual Assembly. The Committee is now engaged in correspondence with a number of friends in different parts of the Country in an effort to obtain needed assistance in compiling certain phases of the history. Needless to say, any history which may be written at present will not be of the detailed and interpretive nature to which the Guardian refers in quotations cited above.

Speaking for the National Spiritual Assembly, it is again this year with the deepest thanks and gratitude that we address those friends who have so bountifully presented their priceless Tablets and Sacred Relics to the National Archives since the last Convention.

BRAILLE TRANSCRIPTION FOR THE BLIND

The Braille Committee is happy to report an increasing demand for Braille-Bahá’í literature. In some instances where Bahá’í books are already placed, librarians have written appreciatively of Braille transcriptions.

The outstanding achievement for this year is the Braille handtooled copy by Miss Ella Quant of the Esperanto translation of the “No. 9” (“La Bahaa Revelacio”) in response to a request from Mr. Vuk Echtert for a blind Bahá’í student in Jugoslavia, who, unable to read English, can only in Braille-Esperanto study the Bahá’í teachings. Miss Quant has also transcribed “The Hidden Words” and “Words of Wisdom” (Bahá’u’lláh) and “Observations of a Traveler” (Chas. Mason Remey).

A second member of your Committee, Miss Hilda Stauss, in a very short time, in order to transcribe the Revealed Words for the Blind, has learned the Braille system and is now completing “Excerpts from the Gleanings.”

A friend and co-worker in California, Miss Mabel Menn, has transcribed “The Hidden Words”—also a collection of Bahá’í Prayers. These books have been sent to two devoted Bahá’ís in Austria, together with “The Hidden Words” and “Words of Wisdom” done by Miss Quant. These friends in Austria are blind, afflicted and persecuted, for them the Sacred Books are inaccessible.

Endorsing the transcribing of the Esperanto translation of Dr. Esslemont’s book, “Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era” the Guardian’s secretary writes: “As regards the Braille Esperanto edition of “Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era” Shoghi Effendi would certainly advise you to undertake this work which will considerably enrich the literature of the Cause in Braille.

“You will rejoice to learn that thanks to the combined efforts of Miss Agnes Alexander and Mr. Torri, a good friend and sympathizer of the Faith in Japan, the Braille Japanese edition of this same book of Dr. Esslemont’s has just been completed.”

In a footnote to this letter in his own handwriting, Shoghi Effendi says —“Persiste, ne redouble tes efforts. Je suis en train de planifier la mise en BAHAI de Bahá’í literature à Bahji.”

The works completed by this servant within the year are: “The Hidden Words” and the “Wisdom of Abdu’l-Bahá”, sent to the Guardian at Bahji. Also “The Hidden Words” and a collection of Bahá’í Prayers for blind Bahá’í friends of Mrs. Bishop in England.

The reports of Mrs. Nellie French concerning the metal plate editions of the “Iqán” and “Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era” form inspiring reading. These two editions constitute a wonderful gift of generosity and devotion. The friends will remember that these plates are a permanent asset, from which more editions can always be reproduced. May an opening for the making of other plates of the creative words soon be revealed. In the meantime the handwork will continue.

The need for more workers is earnestly urged. The joy in transcribing the Revealed Word is the reward for such service.

An important sign of the growth of the Braille-Bahá’í movement is the establishing of an International Correspondence. When organized and operative it is hoped there will be much of interest to report, for undoubtedly such a correspondence must be productive of fine results in promoting Braille Bahá'í activity throughout the world and enlarging this field of endeavor for the Great Cause.

CONTACTS

A statistical summary of the Contacts work accompanies this report, and while it is no doubt interesting, a mere statement of the number of letters written, the number of favorable and unfavorable replies, etc., can never truly convey the real spirit that animates endeavor of this kind. Something a little more personal than figures is needed.

The members of the Committee this year were instructed to bend their efforts toward engaging in correspondence with receptive individuals with the aim of confirming new believers. With this objective in view, the Committee members have put forth their efforts, and while we unfortunately cannot report having accomplished our end in any specific instance, we do feel that ground has been prepared which in time may yield a harvest.

Since the friends might be interested in some of the responses that have been called forth by letters and literature that have been sent out, we should like to quote from a few. After all, the reactions of these people, from allover the world, can truly convey the real spirit that animates the endeavor for the Great Cause.

The Librarian of a Mid-western University, thanking first for a supply of literature sent for the library, writes: "We shall have the material you sent made available for anyone who is interested in the philosophical and religious movements of the present."

An Eastern Editor wrote to one of the Committee members as follows: "...I have been familiar with this movement for many years. My old friend and professor in the University of Toronto, the late James M. Mavor, called my attention to the works of Abbas Effendi. It must be nearly thirty years ago when little concerning him or his ideals was at that time known. My own religion has been that of a very simple Christianity in which the doctrines of love and peace were so strongly emphasized that I have felt little need of sustenance from any other quarter, though I have rejoiced in every manifestation and movement of religion anywhere that has in any way embodied, or emphasized these great ideals. I have not thought of the Bahá'í movement in terms of separate religion, but as a great religious experience, with much the same roots and emphasizing the same deep facts and principles as the teaching of Jesus."

A Southern college professor wrote: "Thank you for the literature you sent. My acceptance of the above leaflet (A New World Order) may be a form of sponging on your movement, for I cannot definitely think of joining it at present, but I can learn more myself and can teach more to my class in college on various religions."

A writer living in one of our far eastern states made the following very interesting comment: "I have for some years had a profound respect for the Bahá'í Faith. So had my friend, the Sheikh Shefieh el Milevi, Governor of the Monastery at Tripoli."

Without a doubt the friends will be happy to know that the distinguished arctic explorer, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, expressed an interest in the Faith and asked to have the bimonthly Teaching Bulletin, A New World Order, sent to him regularly.

With intelligent interest expressed from such widely divergent sources we cannot but feel that humanity is becoming conscious of the need that exists in the world and of the source from which it may be supplied.

GREEN ACRE SUMMER SCHOOL

In planning the Green Acre Program for the summer of 1936, the Committee decided that it would be wise to try the experiment of concentrating the major courses in two weeks. As a result, two courses were given each morning, for five days each week. A discussion group was held each evening, and was led by the two leaders of the morning courses. As a result, the morning courses tended to become lectures, and the evening discussion was not always closely related to the subject-matter of the morning. This Committee has therefore recommended that in the 1937 Summer School one course be given in the morning and one in the afternoon, so that more time may be given each, and discussion may thus follow immediately on the course-leader's presentation.

JULY PROGRAM AT GREEN ACRE

The Green Acre program for July has not been entirely completed, but certain features have already been decided.

Public meetings will be held over the week-ends, as follows:—July 3 and 4, "World Crises and World Needs," Mountfort Mills; July 10 and 11, "A Universal World Education," Stanwood Cobb; July 17 and 18, "Church Organization in World Religions," Glenn A. Shook; and July 24 and 25, "A New World Order," Horace Holley.

Readings from "Gleanings," illustrated lectures by Nancy Bowditch and other activities will be reported later.

The program of courses was as follows:

August 10-14. The Bahá'í Life—Leader, Dorothy Baker. Introduction to the Study of Islam—Leader, Hishtmat Ala'i

Mrs. Baker's course consisted of a series of stimulating and helpful talks, which included a discussion of such topics as: the power of thought in active life; Bahá'í prayer; the Bahá'í ideals of human relationships; the part faith plays in the Bahá'í life.

Mr. Ala'i presented a scholarly series of talks on Islam, which gave us much-needed knowledge about this great religious faith. He discussed the life and teachings of Muhammad, the Qur'an, the Caliphate and Imamate, and the causes producing the present disintegration of Islam.

Mrs. Collison used the published outline on Bahá'í Administration, and led a lively discussion on some of the less well-known points of administrative procedure. One of the most valuable parts of this was a presentation of specific instances which might come before a Spiritual Assembly, in connection with the principles which should direct the treatment of each situation.

Mrs. Seto gave five dynamic lectures on the Nature of the Manifestation. She discussed the relation of the Manifestation to the Unknown Essence, the power and influence of the Manifestation, His relation to man, and the proofs of the divinity of the Spiritual Educator. Mrs. Seto’s talks were especially valuable because of the number of unusual illustrations she used.

The average daily attendance for these four courses ranged from 37 to 53.

In the week preceding the opening of the Summer School proper, Mr. Glenn Shook gave a five days’ course on Mysterism and the Bahá’í Revelation. Those who attended found this course very helpful in clarifying some more abstruse points of the Bahá’í teachings. Each talk was followed by a lively period of question and discussion.

During the week of August 24-28, Mrs. Doris McKay gave a series of lessons on Public Speaking. Members of the class practiced giving short Bahá’í talks, and they found this practice and Mrs. McKay’s talks most valuable.

The committee arranged the programs of the Sunday morning devotional meetings and selected the speakers for the Sunday evening public meeting, during the month of August. The speakers included Martha Root, Mountfort Mills, Horace Holley, Mamie Seto, Louis Gregory and Dorothy Baker. All of these meetings were well attended.

An unusual number of friends from the Middle West attended the 1936 Summer School. We were especially happy to learn to know these Bahá’ís and to hear what Bahá’í communities in other parts of the country are doing.

The work of the Index Committee this year has been a continuation of the indexing of last year. The authentic indexing of last year. The authentic indexing has been a continuation of the development of true Bahá’í Faith which also need to be indexed. This is the new task.

The index manuscripts sent in have shown careful and painstaking labor on the part of the indexers. We are all most grateful to them.

It was the aim of this committee to complete the sacred index this year. There remains many volumes about the Bahá’í Faith which also need to be indexed. This is the new task.

I. Incorporation of Local Assemblies.

It was found necessary for the Legal Committee this year to impress upon all local Assemblies contemplating local incorporation the necessity of forwarding to the National Spiritual Assembly a copy of the State statute under which the incorporation is being set up with the proposed incorporation papers and by-laws. Consideration and approval of any local incorporation papers cannot be completed without such copies of the State law, as it is essential that local incorporations conform as closely as possible to that of the National Spiritual Assembly.

The incorporation of the Detroit Assembly has been completed and approved this year. The by-laws of the Washington Assembly, which filed its incorporation certificate some years ago, were approved as conforming as closely as possible to Bahá’í administrative principles under the civil statutes of the District of Columbia.

The incorporation papers of the Milwaukee, San Francisco and Cleveland Assemblies are being considered by the Committee which is awaiting copies of the State statutes before rendering its final decision.

II. Form of Bequest.

A new form of bequest was prepared this year and published in the August Bahá’í News No. 102, page 2 for the use of believers who plan to include a legacy to the National Spiritual Assembly in their Will. It is recommended that believers consult an attorney in using this form, to be assured that it shall be adapted to meet the needs and requirements of the laws of the State in which they reside. The friends are reminded that Bahá’u’lláh has declared that “It is incumbent upon every person to write (his) Will.”

III. Rights of Way.

The use of certain rights of way on the Green Acre and the Malden properties have made it necessary to place the determination of the Bahá’í rights in the hands of competent attorneys and the conclusion of these matters is expected at an early date.

IV. Temple Property.

In view of the fact that the former Marshall property which adjoins the triangular piece of Temple property across Sheridan Road has recently been sold, it has been decided to ask the Village of Wilmette to vacate the stub-end of Sheridan Road and our attorney has been authorized to work out an agreement of equitable division of this vacated piece of property with the present owners of the Marshall tract. Our attorney has been further instructed to take all immediate and necessary steps to protect this parcel of Temple land from adverse possession and use.

V. Palestine Branch of N.S.A.

Deeds transferring a number of parcels of land in Haifa to the Palestine Branch of the National Spiritual Assembly have been received from the Guardian this past year. If any of the American believers still own property in Palestine they are reminded of the Ottoman law which prevents a foreigner from disposing of his property after death in accordance with his wishes as embodied in a Will. Such property passes to a special class of heirs. The friends are therefore urged to complete their plans for transferring their property to the Palestine Branch as soon as possible. The property now owned by the Palestine Branch of the N.S.A. is approximately 58,800 square pies. The Guardian has recently written the following: “It is significant that most of these title deeds that are now in the possession of your Assembly bear the signature of the son of Mohammed-Ali, the Arch-breaker of the Covenant, who in his capacity as head of the land Registry in Haifa, bears through his signature, testimony to the validity of these transactions.”

LIBRARY

From March, 1936 through November, 1936 books then authorized for donation by the Library Committee were sent to 42 colleges and universities and to 23 public libraries, amounting to 144 books.

In December, when the National Spiritual Assembly approved the following set (Baha’i World, 5, Foundations of World Unity, Some Answered Questions, Gleanings from the Writings of Baha’u’llah and the New Era by Esslemont), the Committee was given a book budget of 75 sets. Of these, 8 sets have been sent to colleges and universities, and 20 sets to public libraries. These, together with other single book donations, amounted to 132 books.

The total number of books sent during the past year is 276; that is 98 to 23 colleges; 178 to 46 public libraries (6 of these books to the Oslo, Norway Public Library). The books are listed below:

Of the $50 requested for expenses for the year, only $1.28 has been used. Our letterheads and stamped envelopes were obtained from the Publishing Committee.

The Committee in the last News Letter of the current year would like to express its gratitude to those who have been active in placing the books in libraries near them. In this new year, it is hoped that the Baha’is in the eastern and southern sections of the country will meet the fine record turned in by the West and the Middle West.

LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL

Programs were carried out at three different sessions last summer. First came the youth over 89 strong in a four-day session, June 22-25 inclusive, with the following daily morning program: Devotions, conducted by youth; Comparison of Religious Administrative Orders, Professor Glen Shook; The Baha’i Life, Dorothy Baker; Security for a Failing World, Professor Stanwood Cobb.

The Chicago youth made up the committee of youth who had charge of sports in the afternoon and varied entertainment in the evening. This committee also put up the question of conduct while at the school to the whole group. After thoughtful discussion the group asked to be allowed to try the honor system of self-government. Accordingly a few simple rules in regard to retirement, quiet and leaving the grounds were drawn up by the committee (youth) and agreed to by the group. With two or three exceptions which caused no serious trouble these rules were well observed.

The prevailing spirit was most earnest. In the afternoon a voluntary and self-conducted forum was held by a few at which such problems as the place of a young Baha’i in the community, his attitude toward war, toward other ecclesiastical organizations, etc., were discussed. Other small groups gathered for serious discussion. Early in the evening a limited number enjoyed a class in public speaking conducted by Garreta Busey. There was evident a greater desire than ever to regulate their lives in accordance with Baha’i Teachings. And as they separated for home, many expressed a firm intent to serve the great Cause of Baha’u’llah. One boy was sure it was the happiest vacation he had ever had.

Immediately following the youth session was an eight-day general session (June 28-July 5) with the following program: Devotions; Foundations of the New World Order, Forum conducted by Dorothy Baker; The Baha’i Teachings and Mysticism, Professor Glenn Shook; The Quran and Islamic Culture, Professor Stanwood Cobb.

While most of the afternoon was free there was each afternoon and evening a program or lecture designed to attract and instruct the non-Baha’i world.

The second general session (August 2-9) carried out this program: Devotions; Life and Spiritual Laws, Mamie Seto; The Quran and Islamic Culture, Marzieh Carpenter; The Baha’i Administrative Order, Willard McKay (forum method).

Greater publicity than before in nearby weekly papers was obtained through the efforts of Clarissa Bean of Flint and results of this publicity were evident in the increased number of inquirers who stopped at the Ranch. Special invitations were sent to individuals to spend a day at the school with gratifying results. Some of these spoke of the unusual spirit which seemed to pervade the atmosphere. Everyone there contributed to this spirit and we cannot say too much of the loving service and cooperation of those who conduct classes at the school. They not only give the course but they unceasingly give themselves—in discussion, private interviews, public talks and in countless other ways. We feel that their services at the school should be even more widely used. How fine it would be if every community and every group could have at least one representative at some summer school.

Might it not be a legitimate use of community funds to send to a summer school someone who could not otherwise come? It is the wish of the Guardian that the Summer Schools reach more and more people both Baha’is and non-Baha’is. The committee is working and planning throughout the year to make the program valuable and the grounds and buildings comfortable and attractive. What are you and your community doing to help and make use of these developing institutions of Baha’i education?

PUBLICITY

Baha’u’llah says: “Newspapers are as a mirror which is endowed with hearing, sight, and speech. They are a wonderful phenomenon and a great matter.”

The Publicity Committee begin this report with a feeling of sincere gratitude for the privilege of serving the Cause of Baha’u’llah in this capacity, hoping that in a small measure we have succeeded—with the help of work done by previous committees, and the splendid cooperation of local publicity committees—in bringing to the attention... of many newspaper readers, the news and Teachings of our Faith.

In October a Publicity Bulletin was issued covering important features of the work. We would remind present publicity chairmen that all bulletins and file copies of releases be passed on to the next committee chairman, to avoid needless repetition and expense.

Three News Releases have been issued to date the most important work of the committee being in the process of preparation, which is, releases for the 25th Anniversary of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to this country; a series of short articles on the Faith, which will be especially valuable to teachers doing pioneer work; a monthly release of a review of some article in the "World Order" magazine. Mailing of a National News Bulletin to papers. Much work has been done by meeting the needs of individual communities. A newspaper set-up for publishing the "Goal of the New World Order," a series, was sent out to many who wished it. Gradually we are contacting more and more isolated believers and groups, giving them suggestions how they may interest their papers. A lively correspondence has been kept up with publicity chairmen and acknowledgement made of all articles received for the Press Books.

To review accurately the results of the work is something impossible to do, but we know that all seeds planted will eventually bear fruit. For us to say which has been the most important work done is another impossibility as we have no measuring rod for that, but we do say that all through the country there has been more of the Baha'i activities and teachings published than ever before. Magazine publicity in on the increase. The Summer Schools received unprecedented prominence in the newspapers and the N. S. A. meetings held in San Francisco and Nashville, Tennessee, brought additional publicity this year. Reports published in Baha'i News about the contents of the Press Books make further mention unnecessary. A Press Book will be on display at the Convention and we hope the friends will take time to carefully examine it. Out of the 71 organized Baha'i Communities, 57 have sent in newspaper clippings since April of 1936. Clippings have also been received from between 35 and 45 cities where there are groups, isolated believers and where pioneer work has been done.

The value of photographs is increasingly evident in the amount of publicity obtained through this medium, especially photographs of action. The committee is endeavoring to gather together "glossies" and mats of speakers as well as historical pictures of interest. Many speakers are timid about using their photographs, to these friends we say that if your photograph is the channel which brings publicity for the Cause, do not hesitate to use it. At this writing we are prepared to furnish photographs of Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Dr. Stanwood Cobb, Mrs. Stuart French, the 1936-7 N. S. A. members in a group, Lydia Zamenhof, mats of Madame Orlova and Miss Martha Root, and of course "glossies" as well as mats of the Temple. We will shortly have mats of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's pictures. This is only a very small beginning, but it is sure to grow steadily. A survey is now being made to find out the quantity of mats and glossies needed in each community.

The committee hopes that there will be many new ideas presented on publicity work at the Convention this year.

PUBLISHING

There are many ways of giving to a spiritually hungry world the message of the Baha'i Faith; direct teachings, talks at local Centers, talks over the radio, fireside groups, etc. But the one basic factor in all these efforts is the Baha'i literature; the authentic words of the Founders and of the Guardian of the Faith. The Publishing Committee, acting as the manufacturing and selling agency of the National Spiritual Assembly, and publishing only the books and pamphlets as approved by the National Spiritual Assembly, serves in this way to promote the Cause. We are deeply appreciative of the cooperation given by the Assemblies and by individuals in this splendid work of distributing the books and pamphlets.

We have sold and distributed for the year ending March 1, 1937:

13,267 books
93,568 pamphlets
1,436 outlines
and in addition to above
6 copies The Dawn-Breakers. Limited edition
57 copies The Dawn-Breakers. Standard edition bringing total sales to date—

Standard 1,392 copies Limited 130 copies
also have sold and distributed 429 copies of the books donated by World Unity to World Order. (Seven Great Eibes, Nationalism and Internationalism and A World Community).

From above totals must be deducted the relatively small inventory on hand at Western Division, San Francisco, California.

These figures are encouraging but let us do more and more. We should take advantage of every opportunity to bring Baha'i books to the attention of all the world; to sow the seeds for making the united Baha'i world.

New Publications

April, 1936, Baha'i House of Worship; reprint of article in Baha'i World V by Genevieve L. Coy. Second printing, February, 1937.

June, 1936, The Path to God, by Dorothy Baker. Pamphlet for teaching.

November, 1935, A World Faith: reprint of ten articles contributed to World Order. In ordering a quantity of this pamphlet recently the Guardian wrote through his secretary "He wishes these booklets for teaching purposes as he thinks they are quite suitable for presentation to inquirers."

August, 1936, America's Spiritual Mission: reprint of Teaching Tablets revealed to American Bahá'ís by 'Abdu'l-Bahá during 1916-1917.

September, 1936, The Future World Commonwealth, compilation from letters written by Shoghi Effendi.

Baha'ulláh and the New Era, revised edition, work now in process.

The Baha'i World, VI. Work now in process. It has been decided to make selling price $3.00 net as increase in size and consequent increase in manufacturing costs, necessitates an increase in price. Volume V. was distributed at a heavy loss.

With the March issue of Baha’i News, a new idea for catalog is being tried out. The catalog corrected to March 1, 1937 is being printed as an insert with the News. Extra copies will be available for the Assemblies. We hope in this way to keep the catalog up to date as an insert may be repeated in six months as changes or additions warrant and will be a more economical method of issuing the catalog.

We trust that the Assemblies will make good use of the catalog, distributing it whenever possible, and above all, referring to it when ordering books. Order only books included in the latest catalog. In this new catalog we have not included reference to discounts allowed as so often catalogs are given to individuals not entitled to discounts. The present discounts allowed are as follows:

10% to Assemblies on orders of less than $10.00.
25% to Assemblies on orders of $10.00 or over.
25% to individuals on orders of $25.00 or over.

Net items must not be included.

We urge the local Assemblies to keep a representative stock on hand always, and where space permits to order a large supply of books so that individual orders may be filled with a minimum of time and effort. The Publishing Committee is glad to allow credit on these quantity orders; books to be paid for as sold. This is not on consignment as books must not be returned.

The International Baha’i Bureau in Geneva, Switzerland has recently put in a large stock of literature that they may be able to supply the friends in Europe.

We must remind the friends that one of the Spiritual Assemblies arranged a very attractive exhibit of Baha’i literature at one of the large public meetings and it proved most interesting to non-believers. Two Assemblies have arranged for the local Public Library to hold an exhibit.

Arrangements are being made now for an exhibit at the World’s Fair, to be held in New York in 1939, when we hope to have a large display of books.

The World Order of Baha’u’llah: The publication of the recent general letter of the Guardian in one volume has been approved by Shoghi Effendi and this work will probably be started shortly after the Convention.

Divine Philosophy: The Publishing Committee was informed by the National Spiritual Assembly that in a letter written by Shoghi Effendi recently to one of the friends in Paris, and reported to the National Spiritual Assembly by the Paris Assembly, he says that he does not wish this title translated again or reprinted as this book has in large part been taken from notes recorded at the time but which do not constitute an authentic text of the Master’s words. The Publishing Committee have therefore omitted this title from current catalog.

World Order

The subscription list of World Order should increase more rapidly. We need cooperation in building up this list. Through the generosity of subscribers, we distribute the magazine monthly to over 600 University and College libraries, Public libraries, Y.M.C.A.’s and Y.W.C.A.’s in the most distant parts of the world. We know from the response that the magazine is read and interest in the Cause is awakened. The magazine is a splendid teaching medium, especially for reaching non-believers.

Back numbers of the Star of the West and The Baha’i Magazine are now all assembled, properly sorted and stored in one place. We will be able to supply bound volumes with possibly a few exceptions from No. 4 to 25. We hope that the friends will take advantage of the opportunity to add these volumes, so necessary as historical records to their library of Baha’i literature.

STUDY OUTLINES

Our active attention has been centered on an outline for the study of the Dispensation of Baha’u’llah adapted to individual, group, or class study. It is divided into a series of lessons which cover the main theses of the book. Study references will include other Baha’i books. We hope to turn this over to the Reviewing Committee by summer.

Future work calls for the revision of two outlines now out-of-print: Material and Divine Civilization and The Baha’i Teachings Concerning Christ. These will probably be our next undertaking.

There have been some requests and offers of assistance on study outlines to cover (1) all the World Order letters and (2) Gleanings from the Writings of Baha’u’llah. We should like to know how generally these are desired before working on them.

Since the members of the committee are widely scattered, part of our energy has gone to evolving methods of organization and consultation that will make for effective work.

The Study Outline Committee acknowledged with gratitude the suggestions and materials that have come from Horace Holley, Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett, and Ethel Neall-Furbush.

REGIONAL TEACHING

New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey

The Committee thought it wise to allocate different territories to each of the regional members, and it was decided that Mr. Kelsey would handle New Jersey, Mrs. Collison the Western part of New York State, Miss Revell, Pennsylvania, and Dr. Coy and Mr. Sprague, New York and vicinity.

In Western New York a group of circuits was organized similar to the plan used last year and many Assemblies, such as Buffalo, Rochester, Geneva, Binghamton and Syracuse, participated in this circuit work having teachers every month. These circuit meetings were followed up closely, and inquirers were asked to join Fireside Groups. The attendance has been good, the publicity excellent, and the Assemblies feel that much good work has been done. Also all isolated believers were contacted in this vicinity, and asked to participate in opening new teaching fields.

In Philadelphia the work has grown tremendously this year, and members of the community have visited isolated believers and many new fireside groups have been opened. The work in Atlantic City has grown tremendously this year, and we understand that it will not be long before an Assembly is formed here.

In New Jersey nine new fireside meetings have been developed in the State with a good deal of success. The Teaching Committee developed an outline covering nine lectures, this outline to give a complete picture of what the Bahá’í Faith stands for. Nineteen new believers joined the community through this type of teaching work, also Round Table Discussion were developed, and all isolated believers contacted.

In New York there have been this year four or five Regional Teaching Conferences in which all the nearby Assemblies and Groups participated. Miss Martha Root spoke at one of these meetings. There have been two Youth Conferences during the last year, two groups of Fireside Circuits have been developed both covering a definite outline which gives a complete picture of the Bahá’í Teachings.

New groups have been opened in Portchester, West Hempstead and Amityville. All isolated believers were contacted, and efforts were made to open up new fireside groups through Bahá’í contacts of this type. Although the work has not been outstanding, we think a great deal of very profitable ground work has been covered, work that will reap good results this coming year.

Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky,

The teaching work in this region has been organized and carried on diligently since July. Progress has been reported by the Regional Committee in a series of four bulletins, with one more to be issued. The greatest accomplishment is not in actual, tangible results but in a general quickening of interest and the sincere effort on the part of all to carry out the tremendous teaching plan.

The Cause has been introduced into a number of new towns and cities among them: Grand Rapids, Cheboygan, Bay City, Kalamazoo, Marysville, Niles, and Buchanan, Michigan; Noblesville, Bloomington, and Mishawaka, Indiana; Celina, Freemont, Circleville, Defiance and Oberlin, Ohio. No progress has been made in Kentucky.

Practically all of the established communities have weekly study classes. There are also groups at Ann Arbor, Port Huron, Michigan; and at Fremont and Bexley, Ohio. All of the circuit teachers and many local ones have assisted.

No pioneer teachers have gone from this territory to live elsewhere and no groups of believers have been formed in new places.

It is believed that the best method of opening new cities is for a nearby established community to hold initial meetings there and then follow up constantly. Most communities find small group work most effective.

Mrs. Blakely, of Bloomfield Hills, and Mrs. Kirkpatrick of Olivet, Mich., are the only two isolated believers actively engaged in teaching in the region.

Among the circuit teachers covering the region have been: Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan and family, Frank Warner, Mountfort Mills, Dorothy Baker, Prof. Ward, Dr. Cobb, Carl Scheffer, Mrs. Moffett, and Mrs. Carpenter. Miss Easterbrook is to come in March and April.

One monthly teaching circuit was conducted during the year with regularity and effectiveness. It was financed by contributions from participating communities. This circuit was managed by the Lima Spiritual Assembly as a committee. It included Toledo, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Lima, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis and South Bend. Detroit was also included on some schedules.

The radio was used in Cincinnati and Lima, also in northern Michigan but results have not been reported.

One inter-Assembly meeting was held at Louhelen Ranch for the Michigan communities and one organization meeting for Ohio and Indiana at Lima. Ohio and Indiana communities voted not to expend time, energy or resources in conferences among themselves but to go out into the field and work.

It is believed that the Lima, Ohio community has carried out the best and most effective program in the region.

Books have been placed in a number of Libraries, Indianapolis and South Bend leading in this activity.

The Temple Model was displayed for three months at the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland by Dr. Kahl, and it aroused much interest, leading people to the Cleveland Center.

Details of all activities are contained in the Regional Bulletins mentioned previously, these serving as periodic reports. A summary, statistical report is being compiled. This report, a bound copy of the Regional Bulletins, and maps will be available for inspection at the Convention.

Toronto

This Committee was created only on January 25, 1937. If it reports on the teaching activities which have been carried on in the Province of Ontario during the entire past Bahá’í year, it must be understood that these activities have been initiated and executed mainly by the old Regional Teaching Committee for Eastern Canada, and by the Toronto Group.

The outstanding accomplishments during the past year are: the formation of a Bahá’í Group in Toronto, consisting of eight recognized believers, six of whom are active Bahá’ís; regular observance of the Unity Feasts by these six Bahá’ís, the holding of public meetings every Sunday afternoon in a Bahá’í Hall, centrally located and comfortably furnished, offering a seating capacity of 50 persons, the rent being paid entirely by the Toronto Group; the establishment of a Bahá’í Loan Library in Toronto; credit arrangements with the Bahá’í Publishing Committee which will enable the Toronto Group to put in a complete stock of all Bahá’í literature for sale; and the holding of weekly study-classes.

Following an invitation of the Regional Teaching Committee, Local Schopflocher of Montreal gave a public address in Toronto in September. The Hall of the Theosophical Society was used for this purpose. Follow-up work led to a Bahá’í talk by St. George Spendlove on "Unity of Truth" which he delivered in February on the platform and under the auspices of the Theosophical Society in Toronto. Subsequently, the Theosophical Society in Kitchener, Ont., invited Mr. Spendlove to speak there. A subscription to the World Order magazine and several Bahá’í books were dedicated to the Library of the Theosophical Society in Toronto. The Committee was able to secure good newspaper publicity for Mrs. Schopflocher’s address.

Public addresses at the Bahá’í Hall and study classes were held by St. George Spendlove, William Suter, and Gerrard Sluter, and, on March 14th, by Mrs. and Mr. Harlan Ober who were visiting us for a day.

For the rest, the Committee is concentrating its efforts on Toronto for the time being, so that others may soon be able to undertake teaching and administrative work and thus relieve the members of the Regional Committee from local work.

In summarizing the work of the Central States branch of the Regional Teaching Committee, much must be omitted because of lack of space, but we will endeavor to include the most important results of the year's activities.

The Guardian has repeatedly stressed the urgent need for carrying on teaching work in cities lying close to established Baha'i Centers, and we are happy to be able to report that Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul have established such teaching activities in four different localities. In addition to this, through the efforts of the Regional Teaching Committee, ten new territories have been opened for the dissemination of the Baha'i Teachings. Nine study classes have been organized, which are being visited regularly by teachers, and one pioneer teacher has taken up her residence in a city where the Cause has theretofore been quite unknown.

Of the isolated believers residing in this region, only one is holding meetings, and we hope that this branch of the work will be greatly stimulated in the coming year.

During the year four traveling teachers have visited this region and the inspiration of their work has been of inestimable value to the groups contacted by them as well as to the members of the Committee. We hope that the number of traveling teachers may be greatly increased in the future.

The teaching circuits which have been established in several neighborhood localities are proving helpful in many ways more than one. They are instrumental, primarily, in spreading the Message, and secondly they afford practice opportunity to speakers lacking experience in making public addresses.

Needless to say, the radio is one of the most important publicizing mediums that exists today, and constant effort is being put forth to increase the number of broadcasts on the Baha'i Faith. Anyone who has had experience with broadcasting stations knows how very difficult this is, but we are happy to announce progress along this line.

During the year but one Inter-Assembly Conference was held. This gathering took place in the Foundation Hall of the Temple in October 1936, and those in attendance derived much benefit and inspiration from the stimulating discussions and interchange of ideas. These Inter-Assembly Conferences and Inter-Community meetings play an important part in the teaching work by keeping the friends informed of the activities outside of their own small spheres, thus bringing about a greater unanimity of action than would otherwise be possible.

We feel that in the main there has been an increase in teaching activities, particularly among the newly organized Baha'i Groups, and we hope that during the coming year the teaching work will be carried forward with such vigor that the heart of the Guardian will be rejoiced thereby.

This Committee reports the great loss it sustained by the death of Elmer Duckett, one of its members.

The regional teaching work began in this section with an Inter-Community conference held in Los Angeles, California, with five Communities, three groups and a few isolated believers participating.

Later in the year a similar conference was held in Phoenix, Arizona, and the surrounding territory was invited to attend.

The greatest results from these meetings was the enthusiasm aroused in the teaching field and the new endeavors started.

Many group consultations have been held in Riverside, Covina, La Jolla, San Diego, Long Beach, San Bernardino, Pine Knot, Chula Vista, Santa Paula, Santa Barbara, and Los Angeles has assisted greatly in sending teachers to some of these cities also to Glendale, Pasadena and Van Nuys.

Phoenix, Arizona, has sponsored a group in Glendale, Arizona, and is endeavoring to open up other towns in its vicinity.

The new cities opened to the teaching this year, through the assistance of the regional work are, San Bernardino, Redlands, Covina and Pine Knot—Big Bear district.

Regular classes, with a symposium of teachers, have been formed to include Riverside, Redlands, San Bernardino and Pine Knot. This is not exactly the planned circuit teaching but similar in results. A course of lessons is designated and two or three teachers take part in each lesson—not the same teachers every time.

The following teachers have assisted in this work:

Marion Holley, Emmalu Wever, Virginia Orbison, Beatrice Irwin, Marzieh Carpenter, Margaret Campbell, Oni A. Finks and P. W. Howard.

This group method of opening up new territory has proven very good—that is, where several teachers and as many friends as can, go to an isolated believer's home or the home of some acquaintance of one of the group, and from this contact form classes. Later it is hoped that more public meetings may be planned and a circuit arranged.

Many friends have been visitors in this section but not for long enough time to do much teaching. Among those who either gave a lecture or talked to Assemblies are the following:

Lucy Ioas, Alfred Lunt, Elizabeth Greenleaf, Corinne True, Dr. Catherine True, Laura Dreyfus-Barney, Charlotte Linneker, Mrs. and Mrs. C. H. Bugbee, Clarence Iverson and Mother, Loyd Schoeney, and Florence Khan.

Corinne True has been in La Jolla for the winter and with the help of her daughters and Miss Lillian Penn have been conducting classes in both La Jolla and San Diego. A public meeting in San Diego, followed by a tea at the home of Mrs. True, is the latest activity and much interest was aroused.

Ruth Westgate has been handling the Northern portion of this territory and her report has gone in to the National Teaching Committee direct, owing to the short time she has been on the Committee and the direct connection she has with the National Teaching Committee.

Mary Burland of San Francisco is now located in Santa Barbara and is ready to help the friends there and later will go to other places as the committee wishes.

The outstanding accomplishment, the committee believes, is the interest in new territory and the adding of two new names to the membership of the Faith of Baha'u'llah.

Several Assemblies have opened up new territory the past year: Portland, Oregon has been working in Oregon City; Seattle has opened Tacoma; Vancouver has been working in Victoria; Monroe has been working in Everett, Sultan and Marysville where a large public meeting was held with Rowland Estall of Vancouver, B. C. as speaker. Mrs. Lorrol Luther has been assisting the Monroe Bahá'ís in these centers. Louise Caswell spent six weeks in Boise, Idaho in February and January, 1937, as well as March, April and May 1936.

The Cause was introduced publicly in Oregon City and Marysville, Wash. for the first time. In addition several new contacts have been made in small towns in British Columbia. Austin Collin spent three weeks in Victoria last fall and made several good contacts. Now he is travelling in Frazier Valley.

Regular study classes are being held in the following places: Spokane, one class in administration, one in Esperanto, teacher, Lorrol Jackson; Seattle, one class in administration, one series of lectures by various members of the community, one Sunday school class, teacher, Helen Wilkes, Esperanto, teacher, Frederick Laws; Boise, Bahá'í study class, one Esperanto class, no teacher; Portland held a forum in the fall which has furnished students for a study class to be formed soon; Vancouver held a series of classes resulting in the addition of 10 Bahá'ís in one year. Seattle reports 5 new members and two transfers.

The Northwest region enjoyed visits from the following Bahá'ís this year: Mariam Haney; Charlotte Linfoot, Fred Schopflocher, Clara Weir, Florence Liliendahl. These paid us short visits of not more than three days. Sylvia Matteson spent several months in the Northwest territory. She helped in radio and publicity very materially.

Two Inter-Assembly meetings were held, one in Monroe, the other in Seattle. They were successful in arousing a determination to awaken the Northwest to the New Teachings.

Interest in the Faith becomes more general and I firmly believe a study class could be formed in any city where a Bahá'í goes with this intention. What we need is more pioneers in the West, Mrs. Lorrol Luther and Louise Caswell are the only ones in this territory who are free to travel about. Mr. Rowland, George Latimer, Doris Foye and Austin Collin have taken short teaching trips but we need teachers to go to cities and towns to reside. Louise Caswell plans to spend three months in Victoria, B. C. this spring. Seattle sends a monthly bulletin to all Bahá'ís in Seattle.

In regard to study outlines, I enclose the one being used by Vancouver, B. C. It only requires two outlines and one book and this is a point in its favor for beginners.

Louise Caswell has given a lecture with temple slides to many interested groups. The slides, beginning with ancient American and Egyptian temples, show a wide variety of temples and the lecture concludes with Bahá'í Temple slides.

During the summer months our teaching activities revolved about Green Acre Summer School. An enthusiastic and well-attended teaching conference in August inspired the friends to greatly increased effort and brought forth many helpful suggestions as to best teaching methods and procedures. This conference was followed by six others during the year, each attended by members of Bahá'í Communities and isolated believers, and each resulting in new enthusiasm and opportunity to exchange helpful experience and advice.

As a result of increased teaching effort on the part of all individuals many new study groups have been formed both in existent Bahá'í Communities and in several new towns. Many fine young people of great capacity have been attracted and new members have been added to the rolls of all Assemblies.

The teaching circuit plan has also been tried out with great success, three speakers having covered the communities included in the circuit. Attendance at all the circuit meetings has been excellent and a particularly encouraging result of the plan is the number of civic and service clubs, women's organizations and other groups that have welcomed the speakers to their platforms. Two churches have invited our speakers and valuable contacts have been made for future openings.

Among the outstanding events was the visit to the Region of Miss Martha Root whose address on "Principles of Peace," to 250 members of the Federated Women's Clubs of Eastern Maine brought the Faith to the attention of many leading women for the first time. Follow-up work has been carried on with a number of them who asked for further information and literature.

Another interesting and valuable feature of our teaching work this year has been the social get-togethers of the friends and attracted ones. Informal suppers in connection with the regional teaching conferences have provided opportunity for the friends to know each other better and to discuss their Bahá'í experiences informally. Worcester Community has made these fellowship dinners a monthly event during the fall and winter and they have not only added much to the happiness of the Bahá'ís but have demonstrated the warmth of Bahá'í fellowship to many seekers.

The State of Maine surpasses the other New England States in newly awakened interest; from many towns and cities people are writing for literature and information, and attending the meetings in large numbers.

The New England region is glad to have had a share in making it possible for Elizabeth Greenleaf to carry on teaching work in Arizona and Southern California this year.

As a culmination of the year's work, several communities and many isolated believers will unite for the celebration of Nawruz with the Hartford friends who will serve as hosts.

Although our accomplishments are not outstanding, nevertheless our teaching work has been greatly accelerated during the present Bahá'í year and our success inspires us to go forward with greater assurance and perseverance in the task which lies before us.

The best work that our committee has done in the past year is in assisting the Montreal Assembly to arrange Sunday afternoon musicals. These have been advertised and we have tried to invite as many out of town speakers as possible. Meetings of this kind have drawn the best attendance.

We have had Mr. Spendlove from Toronto speak on this program and Mr. Kenneth Christian from Malone.

During the month of October we arranged several meetings for Mrs. Lorrol Schofflocher here in Montreal and another in Toronto. We have not been included in any of the travelling circuits and so far have not been able to organize any of our own because of the distances involved.

Our outstanding work along teaching lines has been in the fire-side groups, such as teas, musicals and parties, to which the Bahá'ís have invited their friends.

We have corresponded with the few isolated believers in this section of the country and have aided one with teaching material.

The Regional Committee has met with a fair amount of success in getting publicity in the local newspapers. We have not had opportunity to make use of the radio.

Early in the fall we sent books and material to Toronto for teaching work where a Baha'i Group is now functioning under a Regional Committee for the Province of Ontario.

As means of travel in Canada during the winter months is limited and we do not seem to have any teachers free to travel, we have not been able to open up any new fields. We feel that our work has not been particularly fruitful this year but we are striving toward that end.

Several of the local Spiritual Assemblies with the cooperation of traveling teachers have opened up several new cities to the Faith during the past Baha'i year and in several of these cities there are flourishing study classes. Correspondence has been carried on with isolated believers and teachers going into new places, furnishing names and addresses of nearby interested people and contacts with the hope that additional study groups might be formed.

One of the greatest aids to our teaching work this year was the meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly in Nashville. Excellent publicity was given by the newspapers and several thousand invitations to the public meetings carried quotations from the Baha'i Writings into many new homes and institutions. Three public meetings were arranged, one of which was open to white and colored races without restriction—something which only the confirmations of the Spirit could accomplish in the heart of the south. As a result of these meetings a great many leaders have been attracted to the Teachings and a new study group has been formed.

A number of teachers have gone out in the pioneer spirit to live and teach in cities where the Cause has not previously been known. Palm Beach, through the teaching service of Orcella Rexford and cooperation of the Miami Assembly, has a flourishing study class. Mrs. Ethel Neall-Furbush is teaching in Atlanta, Georgia; the Misses Sarah and Lydia Martin are working in Raleigh, North Carolina; Miss Elizabeth Brooks and Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler in St. Petersburg, while Dr. Zia Bagdadi has opened several new towns and stimulated the teaching work of a number of Baha'i communities.

Our region has been fortunate in having had a number of visiting teachers during the fall and winter, some of them remaining several weeks to assist Assemblies with their teaching plans and to follow up and aid with new fields. To all those whom space does not permit us to name we are deeply grateful.

All of our Baha'i communities have added several new members to their rolls during the year. There has been new interest in study classes and several new teachers have arisen to serve both in the home communities and farther afield. Baha'i books have been placed in a number of leading libraries and everywhere we find a more sympathetic and receptive response than at any time in the past.

Immediately after the Convention last year, Mrs. H. Emogene Hooag performed a very valuable service by coming to Kansas City and assisting the Community in their study for a period of two months, dwelling especially upon the Administration.

Mrs. Hooag returned to this Region in October, spending two months with the Topeka Community. At her suggestion and the suggestion of Mr. Holley, we requested Mr. Wilfrid C. Barton of Chicago to come and help with some of the fireside groups and in the Colleges and Universities in Topeka, Lawrence and Kansas City. Addresses on the Cause were given before students in the University of Kansas City, Washburn College in Topeka, the University of Kansas in Lawrence, and the Kansas Vocational School in Topeka; two radio talks were given, one over WIBW in Topeka and one over KCMO in Kansas City.

The Regional Committee arranged for Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett to come in January. She spent twenty-four days in this Region, lecturing in Kansas City, Independence, Springfield and Nixa, Missouri, and Topeka, Kansas; also spent one day in St. Louis interviewing contacts preliminary to arranging a lecture series at a later date. Mrs. Moffett has been instrumental in increasing the attendance at our Kansas City public meetings; in Topeka there is a renewed interest and an effort to study more deeply, and fireside meetings are being held; in Springfield a study group has been started; in Independence contacts have been made which will be followed up by the Kansas City Assembly; several radio talks were given in Kansas City and Springfield, and one in Topeka, through which contacts have been made in other cities over the Region.

We have no isolated believers in this Region sufficiently interested to help with the teaching work, not even to the point of helping with arrangements for a teacher in the city. This being rather new territory, we have no one ready to go to new cities to live or to teach. We feel it is necessary to build up the Communities in Kansas City and Topeka before any of us may go to other cities to live, and the teaching work outside Topeka and Kansas City has been done by teachers from outside our Region. We have found it very difficult to arrange teaching work in other cities when no one in the city is interested.

We regret the necessity of the dissolution of the Topeka Assembly, but we are hopeful that through the teaching work that has been done this year and that which will be done in the future, an Assembly may again soon be elected.

No inter-community conferences were held during the year, it seemingly being impossible to arrange, although several of the Kansas City members visited in Topeka, and the Topeka members of the Regional Committee made two visits to Kansas City. The cities of Independence, Springfield and Nixa in Missouri, and Lawrence, Kansas, were opened to the Cause for the first time. We have more people interested in studying in Topeka and in Kansas City, especially in Kansas City, now than at the beginning of the year. We feel that no real outstanding work has been done, but progress has been made.

TEACHING LITERATURE

The Committee has not reported for review any new Teaching pamphlets this past year, feeling that the ones on hand filled the necessary requirements for the present teaching work. Since our last report the splendid article on “The Bahá’í House of Worship” by Genevieve L. Coy has been printed in pamphlet form and is now in its second edition. This pamphlet with its attractive pictures and general subject matter should receive wide distribution.

In view of the present dissatisfaction in the industrial world, with the problems of agriculture still unsolved, a short presentation of the fundamental Bahá’í teachings on the Social Economic teachings of Bahá’ulláh, would be eagerly read by many thousands seeking a solution. We also feel that a treatment of the subject the Influence of Religion on society would be a welcome addition to the series of Teaching pamphlets. The committee has been unable so far to obtain a suitable presentation of this latter subject owing to some unforeseen difficulties which have prevented several writers from completing the subject. We recommend, however, that both these subjects be worked up for pamphlet publication before the series is closed.

It might be of general interest to the friends to know all the Teaching Pamphlets that are now available and the approximate number that has been sold by the Publishing Committee this past year. The list follows:

Homoculture ...................... 3,000
The Path to God ................... 6,100
The Most Great Peace ........... 1,800
Oneness of Mankind ............... 3,700
Bahá’í House of Worship .......... 6,300
Principles of the Bahá’í Faith .. 11,875

The World Religion ............. 11,425
What is the Bahá’í Faith? ...... 8,000

Total ....................... 52,000

To this amount of pamphlets sold can be added 23,890 more that have been furnished the Temple Program, Contacts and Teaching Committees and the National Spiritual Assembly, making a grand total of over 76,000 pamphlets distributed for teaching work this year. This is a large number but we hope that the amount will be at least doubled this coming year.

It is hard to estimate the value of this form of teaching service, but these teaching pamphlets serve as an opening wedge to arouse greater interest in the Faith when coupled with a kindly word. One of the illumined writers on the Cause recently wrote to a member of this committee “I think one of two or three pamphlets which arrived at my home in Dublin one day and started my interest in this Revelation was from your pen.” This word is quoted to show that even a brief pamphlet may be the illuminating spark that may enkindle a brilliant soul. We hope every believer will carry some teaching literature with them every day. Respectfully submitted,

George Latimer, Chairman
Louise Caswell
Alice Robertson

TEHMPLE PROGRAM

During the past Bahá’í year the attendance at public meetings held in the Bahá’í House of Worship has noticeably increased. The public programs presented on Sunday afternoons are attracting increasing numbers of non-Bahá’ís.

The Temple is proving to be a greater medium of teaching than ever before, as the number of individual visitors and clubs, organizations, and churches touring the Temple has greatly increased during the past year. The record kept by the guides shows that a total of 16,609 people visited the Temple from March 1, 1936 to March 1, 1937, an increase of 31% over the same period the previous year. The record also shows a total of 4125 groups of visitors, the smallest having 9 members in it and the two largest 550 and 600. This number indicates an increase of about 90% over last year. Many of these groups went through the building on Sunday and then remained for the public lecture. A group is always addressed by one of the Bahá’í guides or by an especially appointed speaker.

It has been noted by the guides that the public in general is evincing greater interest in the spiritual significance of the Temple. Naturally while the structure was new, people were more interested in the building itself, but we find that those who have visited the Temple once, if they live close enough to do so, come again in order to find out more about the spiritual realities that underlie the structure. Often times it is found that they who come again and again bring their friends and frequently show themselves to be advocates of the purposes and principles of the Bahá’í Faith.

The Sunday meetings this year were addressed by the following speakers:

Monroe Ios
Howard Ives
Mabel Ives
Panny Knobloch
Philip Marangella
Lenore Morris
Robert Pettet
Carl Scheffler
Corinne True
Margaret Ullrich
Sarah Walrath
Mary Magdalene Wilkin
Albert Windust

Four visitors who spoke at the Temple—Dorothy Baker, Stanwood Cobb, Pearl Easterbrook and Nellie S. French—added greatly to the public programs, as did the symposium presented by the Bahá’í Youth Committee at which Linda Taylor, Pari Zia Walrath, Clarence LaRocque and Joel Marangella spoke.

The Bahá’í Holy Days celebrated in the Temple were only fairly well attended, the distance from Chicago and environs, and weather conditions preventing many from attending. However, the significance and power of the Gathering in the Temple is becoming increasingly evident. Programs for these meetings were arranged by the various communities surrounding the Bahá’í House of Worship and by the Temple Program Committee, and on the days when customary refreshments were also provided.

The expense of advertising in the Chicago papers of the public meetings held in the Bahá’í House of Worship and the meetings held in the Bahá’í Center in Chicago, is jointly shared by this committee and the Spiritual Assembly of Chicago.

Literature for free distribution at the Bahá’í House of Worship has been supplied to the Committee by the National Spiritual Assembly.

The Universal Auxiliary Language Committee during the past year has unfortunately accomplished very little with regard to introducing the Cause to Esperantists and other groups interested in the subject of an international auxiliary language. But it has laid the foundation for some work during the coming year which, it is hoped, will bear fruit. Everything has been done through correspondence, all members of the committee showing a beautiful Bahá’í spirit in their cooperation.

Individual members of the committee have presented the Cause to Esperantists in such cities as New York and suburbs, Brooklyn, Washington, D.C., Miami, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, either through teaching Esperanto classes or arranging occasional home meetings. There are no available statistics as to the number of persons so contacted.

The committee has made an Esperanto translation of an excerpt from the Master’s Tablet on the Seven Candles of Unity, which will probably be used for distribution to Esperantists.

Through an invitation of the National Spiritual Assembly, Miss Lidia Zamholf, a daughter of the founder of Esperanto and an ardent Bahá’í, has been invited to visit America, and she will probably arrive in the early fall. The committee feels that through her activities, the Cause will be most impressively presented to the Esperantists and others interested in the idea of an international auxiliary language.

Sometime in the near future a questionnaire will be sent to the various communities and groups with a view to preparing a directory of Bahá’í Esperantists.

The Western States Bahá’í Summer School entered into a new phase of service with the beginning of the second nine-year cycle of its existence.

Eleven years ago, when it was first realized that some special means were necessary to provide teachers for the Faith, and it was suggested that a summer school be established for the specific purpose of teaching and training Bahá’í teachers, little did the pioneers of this work dream of the success of the thought, and the rapidity with which the school would develop.

The school opened for its first session in 1926, with an attendance of approximately 40. It was thought the school would be successful, even if the attendance would have numbered only 9 or 10. The first years were those of pioneering work, in evolving courses of study, which would broaden and deepen the understanding of the friends in the implications of the Bahá’í Faith, and at the same time prepare them for public teaching service.

Each year the attendance was larger, the school grew in importance as a part of the Bahá’í life of the Pacific Coast, and the spirit of fellowship developed there, affected the unity of the friends in all Assemblies in the Western States.

1936, the year of the tenth annual session and the beginning of the second nine-year cycle of the Summer School, was distinguished, because of the opening of the beautiful Bahá’í Auditorium, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Collins, of Pacific Palisades, California.

The first nine years, those of the evolvement of the school through the difficult days of pioneering, were consummated by the gift of the school property by John and Louise Bosch to the Trustees for use as the site of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada. Thus the school became, in spirit and form, a true institution of the Faith of Bahá’í in America.

Opening the new cycle of institutional life, the school moved forward in spiritual importance with the opening of the Bahá’í Auditorium, in which all its sessions were to be held, and permitting of full Bahá’í school activity on its own property.

The dedication of the Auditorium was simple, direct, and spiritually impressive. Opening with the words of Shoghi Effendi, received by cablegram: “Heartily join celebration opening Auditorium generously founded by well beloved distinguished friends Mr. and Mrs. Collins. Assure them profound abiding gratitude. Love assembled friends”, a short history of the development of the summer school was given by Leroy Ioas. This was followed by a beautiful presentation of the services of the School by Louise Bosch, and then the turning over of the property to the Trustees by the cousin of Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Robert Norton of San Francisco. Mr. Latimer on behalf of the Bosch Trustees, received the property for the National Assembly.

The meeting fittingly closed with the reading of a cablegram received from Mrs. Collins, who was in Bad Nauheim with Mr. Collins at the time: “Utmost gratitude for the Name that has taught us there is no separation.” —“Milly”.

The Summer School opened in accordance with its usual custom, with a Unity Feast under the Big Tree. There were present and served over two hundred seventy friends. This Feast sets the spiritual atmosphere of the school and releases the forces of unity and fellowship amongst those present. Suitable readings from the Holy Utterances are enjoyed, with words of greeting and inspiration from the various friends of far and near.

After the Feast under the Big Tree, all the friends repaired to the Bahá’í Auditorium, for the dedication services, which have been briefly outlined above. The courses of study for the friends included the following:

- The Spirit, Teachings and Influence of Islam
- The Bahá’í Life
- The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh
- The Nature of the Manifestation
- Seminar on Teaching the Bahá’í Faith

Each course comprised six classes, the classes being conducted by those appointed in advance. In all twenty one people had classes. This is an important feature of the Western States Summer School; i.e., that the classes are conducted by a number of people, especially chosen, because of their knowledge of the subject matter in hand. The friends here do not follow the plan of other Summer Schools in America, where one person gives a course of lectures. Each of the classes is conducted on the seminar plan, with the presentation by the speaker, lasting not over 30 minutes, leaving 15 to 20 minutes for discussion and questions. Advance preparation is required on the part of those who conduct classes, and they must be prepared with reference in the Literature, covering the points made. Thus the individual is trained for important Bahá’í Teaching Work.

The Seminar on Teaching the Bahá’í Faith was very successful considering it was the first attempt to establish a direct seminar on the technique of Baha'i Teaching. It laid the platform for further development of this important aspect of Summer School work, at the next session of the School.

Four public meetings were held: three in the Bahai Auditorium, and one in Santa Rosa, at the Griffith Grove. All of these meetings were well attended, and all the visitors learned more of the specific teachings of Faith. One item of great interest was the response made by one of the Bahais speakers, to an attack against the Faith, on the part of the local minister, in the one Church in Geyserville. This response, in part, was published in the Geyserville Paper, and the quotation from the Gleanings giving Baha'u'llah's statement of the spiritual mission of Christ, was used.

The Baha'i Youth were encouraged to take an even more active part in the conduct and life of the school, than previously. It should be understood that at Geyserville, the Baha'i Youth are an integral part of the school life, and do not have a completely separate series of meetings or sessions. We feel this is important, as a true Baha'i Community is made up of all Baha'is, of all ages, perfectly integrated as to activity, so the full spirit of Baha'i life might show forth. The Youth themselves conducted a Round Table each day for discussion of various Baha'i subjects. In addition to this, they attended the regular classes of the school. A great many youth were on the various Committees of the School, lending their enthusiasm to the development of the activities.

Separate classes were conducted for the children, who showed great enthusiasm in the study of the spiritual teachings. One of the public meetings was conducted by the Youth with the aid of these children. Perhaps one of the most stirring talks of the public meetings was that of nine-year old Claire Entzminger of Santa Rosa, on the "Life and Teachings of Baha'u'llah."

The school received more widespread publicity than ever before. In all, we received approximately 500 column inches of publicity, with publication in the Press of the entire program, and detailed quotations from the Holy Writings themselves. Copies were made available for distribution to the Assemblies of America by the Publicity Committee.

YOUTH

In this fourth year of National Youth Committee endeavor in rearing a new civilization of active young Baha'i men and women, throughout all the localities in America where youth have been reached, an ever-increasing effort has been witnessed in individuals as well as groups to acquaint young people with the pattern of life which youth will have to follow as indicated in the Teachings of Baha'u'llah. Even in the most remote sections where, as one youth reports, one "finds young people very satisfied in their churches," constant effort is being made to teach by living the Baha'i life knowing that this quiet work will yet bear fruit.

Our greatest united teaching effort was displayed in a second series of youth symposiums held internationally on Sunday, March 7, 1937, with twenty groups in this country, an increase of four over last year, and four abroad participating. This was a decrease in international groups, undoubtedly caused by the delay in publishing the January issue of BAHAI YOUTH which contained speech outlines on symposium topics to be presented on this date. Responses from many of last year's participants were, therefore, we feel, withheld. In several communities symposium speeches were broadcast over local radio stations, and from all reports up to the present, Baha'i Youth Day was a notable international success. In preparation of this Youth Day Celebration regional conferences were held in New York City for the Eastern area, in Urbana-Champaign for the Central area, and, it is believed, in other localities from which reports have not yet been received.

For greater efficiency in service an international secretary has been appointed, and in conjunction with this Committee expansion, nine associate members or correspondents have been appointed from other countries, one from England, India, Germany, Egypt, Iraq, France, Syria, Australia, and Persia.

Newly inaugurated monthly letters are being sent to Committee members to keep activities balanced and encourage a steady flow of communication. It is to be regretted that many Baha'i youth have not sent in news reports or joined in the exchange of ideas. Sectional responsibility has therefore been further extended by the appointment of Committee members to be definitely responsible for certain groups in their area and to work with them in getting reports or assisting in the formation of new groups.

New youth between the ages of 15 and 21 who have recently registered with their Assembly, thus gaining the privilege of attending Feasts and of serving on local youth committees, have been reported as follows: Urbana eight, Montreal two, Pasadena two, Toledo one, Evanston two, Chicago four, Columbus three, Glendale two, and Binghamton two.

Youth sessions were conducted at two Summer Schools last year, at Green Acre with a Youth Week program, and at Louhelen Ranch with a four day session, while Geyserville youth continued to adapt their activities to the life of the regular sessions and "assumed an ever-increasing role and made a growing contribution to the program." Each session was the most successful and best attended in the history of the Summer Schools.

The BAHAI YOUTH bulletin has been published quarterly, subscriptions have been increased, and the splendid response with manuscripts, news, and special bulletin material has indeed made BAHAI YOUTH a "conference ground where Baha'i youth meet each other in print." Teaching and study helps have been published, and the publication of a series of summaries of each of the Guardian's great "World Order" letters is to begin in the next issue for the purpose of stimulating study of them and deepening our understanding and knowledge. One youth article was published in the HERALD OF THE BAHAI'S, and others have since been submitted. Symposium speeches of exceptional merit will appear in BAHAI YOUTH and possibly other publications.

A third survey of Baha'i youth activities has been sent out to all the Assemblies and Groups of the U.S. and Canada. This when complete will indicate the present status of the Cause among youth and the actual development since 1935 in this country.

The steady emphasis of study, full participation in community life, active teaching and speaking, the development of youth teaching teams, and the integrating of the work of American youth groups both with the National Committee and with each other by a vigorous constructive communication from local groups has been continued throughout the year.

The Editors are pleased to report on the progress of the magazine during the year 1936–1937.

Two hundred and twenty-five different manuscripts have been received and considered. Each Editor reads the manuscripts, and then a conference is held at least monthly for exchange of views and mutual decision.

Volume Two has published the following featured material: Chapters from “Some Answered Questions”; extensive excerpts from “The Unfolding of World Civilization”; the two concluding articles in the Symposium on “A World Faith”; five notable articles by Mamie L. Seto; the first six articles of the Symposium on “Seven Candles of Unity”; two articles on the Holy Muhammadan Empire in Transition, by Paul Simpson McElroy; the series of remarkable interviews conducted by Martha L. Root; a series of three deeply interesting articles by Rosa V. Winterburn; Mary Collison’s series on the World Order of Baha’u’llah, prepared as a Green Acre study course; Glenn A. Shook’s scholarly study of Church Organization; Rev. George Townsend’s paper read at the Bahá’í session of the Fellowship of Faiths, London; Dorothy Baker’s “The Path to God”, prepared for the Committee on Teaching Literature; an article by the Governor of a Chinese Province; Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick’s department, “Signs of the Times”, and many other articles and poems.

Toward the end of the year were received, the manuscript of a book written by Hussein Rabbani on the Philosophy of Sorel, a thesis prepared in preparation for the title of Ph. D., a series of six articles by Alice Simmons Cox entitled “The New Creation”, a comprehensive survey of modern thought reflecting the Light of the New Day; and an article entitled “The Land of Four Faiths” sent from Haifa by Ruhiyyih Khanum.

A new Symposium is already under way for publication beginning October, 1937, on “The World Outlook”.

It is hoped that the new typographical arrangement used in the April, 1937 issue will be considered more attractive than the previous one. In the important matter of art work, the Editors request the advice and assistance of all believers possessing artistic training and experience. Norman MacGregor has drawn a new design for the front cover and inside title pages, which came too late for consideration this year but is being held for later use.

The friends are reminded that World Order bases its editorial policy on the Guardian’s “The Goal of a New World Order”, which seems most vividly to present the Message in terms of the non-Bahá’í as well as the confirmed believer.

In conclusion: Bahá’u’lláh in the “Gleanings” has revealed the Source of the creative power behind all human thought and feeling. The Cause is destined to reflect this power in its utmost radiance. The Magazine is both a teaching medium and a training school in which the friends may acquire greater responsiveness to the Source of the creative power.
LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN
(To the National Spiritual Assembly)

Daily Obligatory Prayers

The daily obligatory prayers are three in number. The shortest one consists of a single verse which has to be recited once in every twenty-four hours and at midday. The medium (prayer) which begins with the words: "The Lord is witness that there is none other God but He," has to be recited three times a day, in the morning, at noon and in the evening. The third prayer which is the most elaborate of the three has to be recited once in every twenty-four hours, and at any time one feels inclined to do so.

The believer is entirely free to choose any one of those three prayers, but is under the obligation of reciting either one of them, and in accordance with any specific directions with which they may be accompanied.

These daily obligatory prayers, together with a few other specific ones, such as the Healing Prayer, the Tablet of Ahmad, have been invested by Bahá'u'lláh with a special potency and significance, and should therefore be accepted as such and be recited by the believers with unquestioned faith and confidence, that through them they may enter into a much closer communion with God, and identify themselves more fully with His laws and precepts.—January 10, 1936.

Bahá'u'lláh's Command Concerning Daily Work

With reference to Bahá'u'lláh's command concerning the engagement of the believers in some sort of profession; the Teachings are most emphatic on this matter, particularly the statement in the 'Aqdas to this effect which makes it quite clear that idle people who lack the desire to work can have no place in the new World Order. As a corollary of this principle, Bahá'u'lláh further states that mendicity should not only be discouraged but entirely wiped out from the face of society. It is the duty of those who are in charge of the organization of society to give every individual the opportunity of acquiring the necessary talent in some kind of profession, and also the means of utilizing such a talent, both for its own sake and for the sake of earning the means of his livelihood. Every individual, no matter how handicapped and limited he may be, is under the obligation of engaging in some work or profession, for work, specially when performed in the spirit of service, is according to Bahá'u'lláh a form of worship. It has not only a utilitarian purpose, but has a value in itself, because it draws us nearer to God, and enables us to better grasp His purpose for us in this world. It is obvious, therefore, that the inheritance of wealth cannot make anyone immune from daily work.

As to the question of retirement from work for individuals who have reached a certain age, this is a matter on which the International House of Justice will have to legislate as there are no provisions in the 'Aqdas concerning it.—March 22, 1937.

Teaching in the Southern States

Regarding the problem of teaching in districts of mixed colored and white populations, the Guardian fully approves of the policy adopted by the N.S.A. to the effect that the teaching work should be carried simultaneously with the two races in the south without the slightest discrimination. For the Teachings are obviously not intended for only one race or one class. Your Assembly's suggestion that Bahá'í public meetings should henceforth be conducted separately for whites and colored and that study classes resulting from such meetings should likewise be conducted separately for whites and colored and that both races are truly confirmed believers is splendid as it will undoubtedly help in removing the misunderstandings and obstacles that have thus far stood in the way of the expansion of the Faith in the Southern States. To alienate either the white or the colored race would be indeed unfair and unjustifiable. The solution proposed by your Assembly thus marks a step in advance over the methods which the friends have hitherto enforced in their teaching work in the Southern States. The Guardian therefore trusts that it will be brought fully to the attention of the friends, and that they will each and all arise to apply it in their future teaching activities.

In this connection, however, he wishes me to stress the fact that the two races should ultimately be brought together, and be urged to associate with the utmost unity and fellowship, and be given full and equal opportunity to participate in the conduct of the teachings as well as administrative activities of the Faith. Nothing short of such an ultimate fusion of the two races can insure the faithful application of that cornerstone principle of the Cause regarding the oneness of mankind.—March 22, 1937.

"A Complete Rededication"

Dearly-beloved co-workers: Pressure of work in connection with my recent translation of the prayers and meditations of Bahá'u'lláh has been responsible for the unfortunate delay in acknowledging the receipt of your communications, of which testy most strikingly to the vigor, the efficiency and the exemplary loyalty with which you are conducting and co-ordinating the manifold teaching and administrative activities of our beloved Faith. The progress of the teaching campaign is most remarkable and reassuring: the uninterrupted prosecution of this holy enterprise and its extension to the South American continent and the islands of the Pacific will no doubt attract unimaginable blessings and must entail far-reaching consequences. In the course of this year, when the American believers are commemorating the 25th anniversary of `Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to America, a mighty impetus should be lent to this campaign which you have so splendidly initiated. A complete rededication to its ideals, its purposes and requirements on the part of all individuals and Assemblies, can alone befit such a nation-wide celebration. I pray that you may fulfill your high destiny.—March 22, 1937.

"Moved to the Very Depth of His Heart"

At the Guardian's direction I am enclosing herewith the receipt, duly signed by him, of the contribution sent by the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada through their N.S.A. with the request that you kindly ask your fellow members in that body to transmit to the entire American Bahá'í Community the expression of his profoundest thanks and genuine appreciation for this spontaneous manifestation of their unshakable devotion and loyalty to the Cause. He is moved to the very depth of his heart by this fresh evidence of their unalterable attachment to, and their whole-hearted readiness to support, by every means in their power, the vital international institutions of the Faith, and particularly the institution of the Guardianship of which they are indeed the most outstanding defenders and champions throughout the West.

He wishes them, each and all, every blessing and success, and a most abundant reward in return for what they have accomplished and are still, so zealously and effectively accomplishing, for the extension and consolidation of the Administrative Order in their country and beyond its confines. —April 24, 1937.

TWENTY-NINTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

After a devotional service in the Temple Auditorium, the Convention opened Thursday A. M., April 29, 1937. Mountfort Mills called the Convention to order and emphasized the importance of the proceedings in view of the condition of the world today.

Fifty-nine delegates responded to the Roll Call at this session.

Mountfort Mills was elected Convention Chairman, and Horace Holley Convention Secretary.

On motion, the Chairman appointed Dorothy Baker and George O. Latimer to draft a message to the Guardian. The message, as approved and immediately cabled to Shoghi Effendi, read as follows: "American Convention gratefully celebrates dual gift, Master's historic visit and consummation unique union (of) East (and) West. Pledges undying loyalty, renewed vigor extend World Order throughout Americas and all lands. Profound dedicated felicitations."

The annual report of the National Spiritual Assembly was presented by Horace Holley, and the general report of the Bahá'í Trusteeships was presented by George O. Latimer. The financial report was presented by Carl Scheffler, in the absence of the treasurer, Roy C. Wilhelm. Copies of a summary of the annual financial report were distributed among the delegates.

It was voted to make reply to each of the greetings sent to the Convention by Assemblies and believers. Motions of this character are recommendations for action by the National Assembly, and the Assembly has provided for suitable replies and acknowledgments.

The report on Teaching was presented by Leroy C. Ioas, with supplementary reports on special features of teaching by Louise Caswell, Mamie L. Seto, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Wiles and Robert Theiss, with general discussion.

THE GUARDIAN'S MESSAGE TO CONVENTION

Dual gift Providentially conferred (upon) American Bahá'í community invests recipients with dual responsibility fulfill historic mission. First, prosecute uninterrupted teaching campaign inaugurated at last Convention in accordance with Divine Plan. Second, resume with inflexible determination exterior ornamentation (of) entire structure (of) Temple. Advise ponder message conveyed by delegates (through) esteemed co-workers, Fred Schopflocher. No triumph can more befittingly signalize termination of first century (of) Bahá'í era than accomplishment (of) this twofold task. Advise prolongation (of) Convention sessions (to) enable delegates consult National Assembly to formulate feasible Seven-Year Plan (to) assure success Temple enterprise. No sacrifice too great for community so abundantly blessed, (so) repeatedly honored. (signed) Shoghi Effendi. Haifa, May 1, 1937.

The evening session was dedicated to the Institution of the Guardianship, with readings from the Will and Testament and from The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh given by Nellie S. French, Allen B. McDaniel, William DeForge and Charles Reimer.

This special topic was followed by the presentation of two illuminated Tablets to the American Bahá'í Community, sent by Shoghi Effendi through Siegfried Schopflocher. Mr. Schopflocher also gave the Convention a message from the Guardian, stressing the importance of incorporation by local Spiritual Assemblies when sufficiently evolved, a step which will lead to the gradual accumulation of endowments for the extension of Bahá'í activities, and the local Assemblies must acquire experience and become very proficient.

The Teaching reports continued Friday morning, with discussion of sub-topics by Lucy Heist, Curtis Kelsey, Mabel Ives, Mrs. Bruegger, Georgie Wiles, Louise Caswell, Ludmilla Bechtold, C. Mason Reaney, Mrs. H. Imogene Hoag and Ali-Kuli Khan. Many delegates participated in these discussions, which concerned important subjects, such as opening new areas, re-Rededicate Ourselves to the ... Holy Task

Resolution Adopted by the Annual Convention

The delegates present at this Twenty-Ninth Annual Bahá’í Convention, mindful of the Guardian’s successive appeals for the fulfillment of America’s spiritual mission, and his repeated warnings concerning the perilous condition of the world, pray for purity, humility and sacrifice to rededicate ourselves to the achievement of the holy task before the end of the first century of the Bahá’í era.

United under the Guardian’s sacred leadership we turn to Baha’ullah and implore the assistance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit for ourselves and our fellow-believers throughout the American continent.

The Guardian’s Message

At this point was received the Guardian’s cablegram to the Convention, copies of which were made and distributed to all delegates and friends. This message was as follows: “Bahá’í Convention. Dual gift Providentially conferred American Bahá’í community invests recipients with dual responsibility fulfill historic mission. First prosecute uninterrupted teaching campaign inaugurated last Convention in accordance Divine Plan. Second resume with inflexible determination exterior ornamentation entire structure Temple. Advise ponder message conveyed delegates esteemed co-worker Fred Schoptlocher. No triumph can more befittingly signalize the termination first century Bahá’í era than accomplishment twofold task. Advise prolongation Convention session enable delegates consult National Assembly to formulate feasible seven-year plan insure success Temple enterprise. No sacrifice too great for community so abundantly blessed repeated honored.”—(signed) Shoghi, during noon session Convention photograph taken.

The afternoon session voted thanks and appreciation to the Guardian for sending the two illuminated Tablets. The Chairman requested Siegfried Schoptlocher to talk on the subject of Temple ornamentation. Among the important points made by Mr. Schoptlocher were: that the Persian believers will not receive permission from the Guardian to commence their House of Worship until the Temple in America is completed—that is, the external decoration; it will please Shoghi Effendi greatly to be assured that the work will be completed before the end of the first century of the Bahá’í Era; the teaching work must not stop; Temple construction will test the sincerity of the new believers brought in by the present teaching campaign; a committee of experts, Bahá’í and non-Bahá’í, should be appointed to submit costs and make recommendations to the National Assembly; a fixed price contract is preferrable to a cost-plus arrangement; a believer will be happy to donate $100,000 when the Guardian’s instructions are carried out: the Master’s promises about the spiritual power to be released by the completion of the Temple will not be fulfilled until the external decoration is done.

The postscript of a letter just received from Shoghi Effendi by the National Assembly was read. Philip Savilles distributed copies of The United States Steel News having the Temple illustrated on the front cover.
BAHA'I NEWS

Allen B. McDaniel reviewed the construction costs already met: architect’s services, engineering fees, model and foundation, $178,000, dome unit including ribs, $177,000, drum or clerestory, $43,000. Estimated cost of remaining external decoration, $350,000, not counting landscaping the grounds.

It was voted to ask the National Assembly to meet with Mr. Schopflocher Saturday evening, and that the Convention be extended Sunday morning for considering ways and means to make effective the goal established by the Guardian.

Discussion was then resumed on the subject of teaching and training children, which was brought to a conclusion with the suggestion that information be made available to the local Assemblies, so that classes can be conducted in all centers.

Nina Matthisen conducted the discussion on Publicity, followed by discussion and suggestions advanced by Edna Eastman and Mabel Ives. Then Florence Mattoon, Annamarie Kunz, Marguerite Reimer and Margaret Kunz presented the subject of Bahá’í Youth.

Ridván Feast

The celebration of Ridván, which coincided with the twenty-fifth Anniversary of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s meeting on the Temple grounds, when He blessed the work and symbolized the success of the task by turning over the earth with a golden trowel, was a heart-stirring experience for a gathering which filled the Foundation Hall. The inner joy and assurance which had characterized the entire Convention seemed to overflow into a new and inner joy and assurance which had characterized the entire Convention always seemed to overflow into a new and positive to obtain definite figures on cost for relatively long periods in advance, unless the contractor who supplies the estimate protects himself in such a way as to bring extra cost to the work. The construction work involves these stages: gallery story, estimated at $125,000; main story, $150,000; for doors and metal grille work over the windows, $35,000; and for the surrounding stairs, $40,000. To complete the landscaping of the grounds, at least $100,000 additional would be required, according to present estimates, but it is the external decoration which is called for by the Guardian’s message.

To complete the Budget, $30,000 must be added annually for administrative and operating expense, and at least a similar amount for teaching.

As the costs of construction must be in hand before contracts can be placed, it will be necessary to reckon the Temple construction cost within the Budget of the first four or five years, as otherwise the actual work could not be finished by May 23, 1944.

The most serious consideration was given to these facts by the Convention. Many suggestions were advanced which were recorded, and these were before the National Assembly for study and action.

It was reported that $1,300 had been received by the National Fund during the Convention session.

It was voted to extend to A. F. Matthisen a vote of thanks for his outstanding work as Accountant for the National Assembly. Healing prayers were read for Alfred E. Lunt.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted: “The delegates present at this Twenty-Ninth Annual Bahá’í Convention, mindful of the Guardian’s successive appeals for the fulfillment of America’s spiritual mission, and his repeated warnings concerning the perilous condition of the world, pray for purity, humility and sacrifice to rededicate ourselves to the achievement of the holy task before the end of the first century of the Bahá’í Era.

United under the Guardian’s sacred leadership we turn to Bahá’u’lláh and implore the assistance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit for ourselves and our fellow-believers throughout the American continent.”

The Convention closed with reading of a prayer, after further excerpts had been presented from the Guardian’s latest communication to the National Assembly.

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS
1936-1937—Continued

TEACHING

"Convey (to) American believers, abiding gratitude efforts unitedly exerted (in) teaching field. Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systematically extended, . . . Opportunities present hour unimaginably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of) the Faith of Baha’u’llah and establish structural basis of His World Order."—SHOGHI EFFENDI, FROM CABLEGRAM TO 1936 CONVENTION.

The American Baha’i Community has arisen to new heights of individual heroism and collective service in responding to this most urgent appeal of the Guardian. Not only have many new friends entered the field of public teaching work, but all of the Baha’is have intensified their efforts—and with mature deliberation have set in motion adjustments in their lives to enable them to play their parts in achieving the goal before us.

The “pioneer” spirit called for by the Guardian in this most important of all our services, has expressed itself throughout the country in the following ways:

First: Increased public presentation of the Faith, its spiritual and social teachings.

Second: Heroic display of individual effort, finding its fullest expression in the movement of Baha’is into new areas.

Third: Collective activities through Assemblies concentrating their major efforts in the teaching field.

While there were twelve States in the United States, where there existed no Baha’is at the time of the Guardian’s message to the Convention last year, at this time, there are only seven States where the Light of the Faith is not now established. Within the States where Assemblies and Groups have existed, the Faith has expanded into forty-two new cities. In three of these cities there are now active study groups preparing for Baha’i membership.

Only the united efforts of all the friends, with the systematic extension of their plans, have been able to bring about these results. Great stimulation was given to the teaching work by the Regional Conferences held by the National Spiritual Assembly in conjuncti on with its meetings in various sections of the country, together with Public Congresses given on those occasions. The administrative aspect of the work showed increased efficiency in assisting the friends, through the establishment of Regional Teaching Committees. The Local Assemblies have extended their aid and assistance in the teaching work outside jurisdictions through the Inter-Assembly Teaching Conferences held, Circuit Teaching Campaigns, and cooperation with isolated believers.

The States opened to the Faith during the past year are: Nebraska, with two Baha’i Groups in Omaha and Lincoln, through the pioneer services of Miss Gertrude Matteson and Mrs. Mabel Ives; Wyoming, by Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Lively and daughter moving to Laramie, Oklahoma, with a study group in Oklahoma City, by Mr. and Mrs. A. Entzminger and children moving to that city; North Dakota, with a study group at Fargo, by Mrs. Margarita Breugger moving to that city; North Carolina, by Miss Lydia and Sarah Martin moving to Raleigh.

The Circuit plan of teaching, outlined in earlier reports, has been a very effective method of public presentation of the Faith. It has been tried with unusual success in four regions, embracing a total of 38 cities. Many of the Assemblies report increased attendance at study classes as a result.

Teacher Training classes are of prime importance, and where only one Assembly reports an active Teacher Training class, yet other reports indicate plans for this important element of this stupendous teaching campaign.

The Fireside Teaching method continues to be the most effective of all methods for attracting and teaching inquirers. Assemblies should very earnestly stimulate and encourage this activity among the members of their communities as the very foundation of their teaching programs. It is the ideal method for isolated believers, less than ten percent of whom have reported doing any regular teaching work.

The public generally have shown greater response to the Teachings of the Baha'i Faith, realizing as they do that the doors of their aspirations are closing on them. This has resulted in increased publicity in the press, giving favorable information of our activities; greater use of radio and attendant results. Requests for Baha'i lectures are being received with increasing regularity.

While the foregoing shows that our teaching work has gone forward with great enthusiasm this year, it is most apparent we have only laid the foundation and can scarcely claim to have begun the gigantic task before us. Twenty-one of forty-eight States in the United States, and six of the nine Provinces of Canada have no Baha'i Groups or Assemblies; while seven States of the United States; two Provinces of Canada, and the countries of Alaska, Labrador, and Newfoundland are without a single believer.

Pioneers in the greatest spiritual drama of all time are urgently needed! Let those seeking the gifts of the Holy Spirit arise in this hour of our greatest opportunity and carry the glory of our Blessed Faith to loftier and loftier heights.

TEACHING AND TRAINING CHILDREN

The Committee on the Teaching and Training of Children has developed no new teaching material during the past year, but instead acted in an advisory capacity to the Assemblies and individuals engaging in this important branch of teaching service, the while studying methods and material already in use in various parts of the country as a possible basis for future outlines and suggestions.

It has been found that no two communities have the same or even similar age groups and types of children's classes; hence it has been necessary to individualize the service which has been given. As more and more classes are organized, however, the cumulative experiences will produce more adequate material for greater numbers.

The most frequent request is for material for pre-school and kindergarten children—both story and pictorial. The expense of producing the latter is prohibitive for the smaller number of classes yet organized and the former can be collected best by the individual teacher who knows the interests, capacities and needs of her group. Baha'i children have greater spiritual capacity and understanding than their non-Baha'i companions, hence they often grasp the Teachings more readily than is realized. The creative power of the pure Words quickens the intellect and educative processes and makes unnecessary as great a degree of simplification as we sometimes imagine. A class period spent in learning the meaning of a new and strange word or phrase in one of the Hidden Words or some other Holy Utterance contributes infinitely more to the mental and spiritual development of a child than a story or incident which simply holds the interest and attention, and it can be done in a manner which appeals to the child and leaves him with a sense of achievement.

Several classes this year have been studying the characters in the "Dawn-Breakers" with considerable success. The Committee is very eager to secure from all teachers using this text an outline of the methods and sections used.

Several classes are following a character education theme in which the children are encouraged to develop those qualities which distinguish the believers in Baha'u'llah.

Other classes have followed a course in "Progressive Revelation," studying the life and influence of each Manifestation in turn. Such a program is particularly appropriate for classes with non-Baha'i members.

A number of other groups have made a study of the significance and meaning of the special Bahai anniversaries and memorial days, inviting their parents and friends to participate in special programs prepared for these days as a result of the studies.

The children's department of the Western States Summer School last year again served as an experimental school with a two weeks' course on the "Divine Manifestations," concluding with a charming public meeting conducted entirely by the children with their own chairman and musicians and consisting of the recitation of Bahai quotations and brief talks on the Faith.

Just as our national teaching program stresses the importance of aside meetings to interest one's friends and neighbors, so the Committee on Teaching and Training Children stresses the importance of neighborhood children's classes. The possibilities are limited only by the imagination and enthusiasm of the teacher, and through the interest aroused in the children an approach is more easily made to the parents.

The Committee sincerely appreciates the splendid services of the teachers of children's classes and thanks them for the cooperation so generously given.

ANNUAL REPORT

National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada
1936-1937

Dear Baha'i friends:

Like the clear ringing of a bell, Shoghi Effendi's cablegram addressed to the last Convention, a call to the deepest spirit of faith, summoned the American Baha'i community to fulfill that noble mission established for us by the Master in the darkest days of the European War in Tablets which were charged with His vitalizing purpose, the unification of the world of man.

"Convey (to) American believers abiding gratitude efforts unitedly exerted (in) teaching field. Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systematically extended. Appeal (to) assembled delegates ponder historic appeal voiced by 'Abdu'l-Baha (in) Tablets (of the) Divine Plan. Urge earnest deliberation with incoming National Assembly (to) insure its completest fulfillment. First century (of) Baha'i era drawing to a close. Humanity entering outer fringes most perilous stage its existence. Opportunities (of) present hour unimaginably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order.

Accompanying this message, both in time and in intention, came the text of the Guardian’s general letter dated March 11, 1936, printed shortly after the Convention as the booklet entitled “The Unfoldment of World Civilisation.” Reverently and gratefully can we draw nearer the universal vision of human destiny as that vision today expresses itself through the Guardianship, realizing more fully how the summons to the believers is an essential aspect of the current world movement, and the current world movement itself reflects, in all its phases and degrees, the Will manifested through Bahá'u'lláh. With the mighty task, therefore, are given us the tools of understanding and the irresistible force of faith by which alone the task can be performed.

Where else, in this day of bewilderment, can the people find such a vivid and compelling picture of true civilization as that passage on pages 43 and 44 of The Unfoldment, which begins: “The unity of the human race, as envisaged by Bahá'u'lláh, implies the establishment of a world commonwealth in which all nations, races, creeds and classes are closely and permanently united...”. Where else is the statesman to turn for policy, the religiousist for light to reveal the victory of religion amid the collapse of human creed? Here, as in all the Guardian’s letters since the one entitled “The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh,” we have given us the larger implications of membership in the Bahá’í Faith, those implications which constitute a teaching that applies to the greatest ones of earth as to the most humble and lowly. Before we can be teachers qualified to assist in establishing the “structural basis” of Bahá'u'lláh’s World Order in all the American Republics, we must be devoted students, ever in immediate and intimate touch with Shoghi Effendi’s evolving mind and aim.

At a time like this, when the American Bahá’í community gathers together through its representatives for consultation on the most important matters of the Cause, it is good for us to compare not only how far we all as individuals fall short of our God-given possibilities, but also to what degree our local Bahá’í community reflects the spirit of the new World Commonwealth and conveys that spirit to the general public in our city. Do those who learn about the Cause from us become conscious that the Bahá’ís, even though perhaps few in number and weak in resources, stand wholly apart from the forces of disintegration that confuse and confound Empires, creeds and social systems? Have we become evidences that the “noble pattern” of a new cycle has been created in the hearts and minds of Bahá’ís? Humbled consideration of such crucial questions may well lie at the heart of our consultation during these days of the annual meeting, not to produce vain regret or personal discontent, but to clear the path for greater courage, more magnanimity and a purer faith.

The world power and spiritual authority of the Cause cannot be publicly demonstrated until we ourselves have attained the right inner attitudes corresponding to the real nature and purpose of the Revelation. Let us attain the full conviction that we are citizens of the only world commonwealth in existence, even though in the world of material affairs our affairs seem weak, our activities relatively insignificant, our aims impossible of realization. It is that right inner attitude, humble as to self but challenging as to truth, in which the creative and building process described by the Guardian as the antithesis to the forces of disintegration can move steadily forward to its eventual triumph.

This past year has for the first time extended directly the collective responsibility of the American Bahá’ís into regions outside the United States and Canada, Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean area and South America have become provinces to incorporate as soon as possible into the international Bahá’í community—a teaching field to be developed with all available energy. The detailed review of the remarkable work undertaken in that tremendous new territory pertains to the function of the Inter-America Committee. These activities are emphasized here because they mark a beginning of our response to the whole mission laid upon America in the Divine Plan. Surely, the hour for a deeper and ripener maturity on the part of American believers has come!

Important Events

The first action of the National Spiritual Assembly elected last year was to hold consultation with members of the National and Regional Teaching Committees present at the Convention, and some experienced teachers. That consultation was most helpful in crystallizing the thoughts and views and achieving a comprehensive Teaching Plan. As reported later, the Plan included: the publication of the Tablets of the Divine Plan in booklet form under the title of “America’s Spiritual Mission”; the appointment of a larger number of Regional Teaching Committees, with added power and responsibility for action; the addition of a special Teaching Fund in the amount of $30,000 to the annual Budget; the appointment of a new Inter-America Teaching Committee; the adoption of a schedule of meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly which provided for more regional consultation and also for public meetings; and the preparation of a Bahá’í map of North America.

Four new Spiritual Assemblies were established on April 21, 1936: Rochester, New Hampshire, Springfield, Massachusetts, Dayton, Ohio, and Glendale, California, bringing the number of organized communities to seventy-two. During the year, the Assembly of Topeka, Kansas found it advisable to dissolve in order to give the declared believers opportunity for more thorough study and preparation.

A file of 529 Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, alphabetically arranged and ready for publication, has been turned over by the Committee on Editing Tablets after several years of arduous and devoted labor. The profound hope is expressed that these Tablets may soon be made available as Volume Four of Tablets revealed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

As has been reported through Baha’i News, a beautifully engrossed copy of Bahá'u'lláh’s Tablet to the American Republics, and of two Prayers revealed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, were conveyed to President Roosevelt under most unusual circumstances.

Miss Martha L. Root’s visit to America was announced by a cablegram received from Shoghi Effendi on July 27. Although Miss Root has been physically unable to carry out the extensive plans by which many communities would have received her during her journey across the country, nevertheless this very lamentable physical disability has touched the hearts more deeply with realization of those heroic qualities by which she was enabled to traverse the continents and meet and confirm so many influential leaders for many years. At present Miss Root intends to depart for China and Japan in a few weeks. She will go with the loving prayers and grateful admiration of all her co-workers in this country. In her career we may witness one believer’s whole-souled response to the Master’s Divine Plan, a pioneer in whose footsteps the collective community must now endeavor to follow.
This Bahá’í year has been blessed with a number of most substantial gifts to the Cause: the Bahá’í Hall at Geyserville, completed before the opening of the 1936 Summer School, now being followed by the construction of a beautiful dormitory; the Bahá’í Hall now under construction at Green Acre; the entire cost of publishing The Bahá’í World, Volume VI; and most helpful special cash donations to the National Fund. The gift of a large house and considerable land to Green Acre, property adjoining Green Acre, was made during the present year, although the legal transfer will be effected after this Convention.

A matter of distinct interest was the derogatory reference made to the Cause in the Atlantic Monthly last summer, in an article written by the editor of that magazine which has for several generations been regarded highly as an instrument of American culture. Correspondence was immediately undertaken by a representative of the National Spiritual Assembly, and literature was made available in order to remove this unfortunate ignorance on the part of so responsible a man. While there has been no public retraction, we may feel assured that the episode is not likely to be repeated. We believe, of course, long for that day when, as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá declared in 1912, the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh will be violently assaulted by numerous enemies, for, as the Master added, all such attacks redound to the advantage of the Faith.

"Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era", by the late John E. Esslemont, has long served as the most useful introductory work to place in the hands of interested inquirers. A number of circulations were brought to Shoghi Effendi’s attention this year, and the Guardian advised that the book be revised before republication, and an Index prepared. The new edition incorporates the point of view explained to us by the Guardian’s “World Order” letters, substitutes new translations for the author’s excerpts from Bahá’í Sacred Writings whenever possible, and provides a few corrections of fact. This important work is now more useful than ever as a summary of Bahá’í history and teachings for the public and the Bahá’í student himself.

A number of local Assemblies have either completed their legal incorporation or have sent the necessary documents to the National Spiritual Assembly for approval. These Assemblies are: San Francisco, Milwaukee, Detroit, Cleveland, Kenosha and Los Angeles. This is an important action, and a necessary one for each Bahá’í community after attaining a certain growth and stability.

The Guardian has approved the publication of his successive “World Order” letters in book form, under the title of “The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.” The manuscript has been turned over to the Publishing Committee, and the volume will be available in a few months. The general communications received from Shoghi Effendi are, therefore, to be available hereafter in two forms: the book “Bahá’í Administration”, containing the letters establishing the local and National Assemblies and the Convention, and dealing with the internal relationships of the Bahá’í community; and “The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh”, presenting the international institutions and explaining the relations of the Faith to the non-Bahá’í world.

Public meetings have been held by the National Spiritual Assembly this year in Temple Foundation Hall, San Francisco, Nashville and New York. The accompanying consultation and contact with believers in various sections of the country has been an invaluable experience, and the effort to assist in teaching has symbolized the vital importance of teaching more vigorously at this time.

The use of radio in teaching has greatly increased. It is surely impressive to note that the Spiritual Assembly of Lima was recently requested to carry out a five-day program of devotional character for the inauguration of a new station in that city. The result of the six daily talks arranged by the five Assemblies of the New York metropolitan district, as a preparation for the public meeting of the National Assembly was very significant. Apparent spiritual capacity not accessible through meetings or printed literature was aroused by this larger public medium, an indication of the greater things that will be accomplished in future years.

Indeed, as we realize that Bahá’í teaching is a universal function, not limited to a professional clergy or to church services—that Bahá’í teaching includes all the functions of education as well as of religion—in the former meaning of that word—it is impossible for us to overestimate the potential resources that will be employed as the American Bahá’í community consolidates its powers and gathers new strength and capacity. All the arts, all the sciences, all the institutions of human association are alike doors of opportunity and mediums of expression for the spirit of Bahá’u’lláh. The Cause in America has already laid so firm a foundation that the confirmation of only a relatively few persons of outstanding capacity can double and redouble our existing public influence. A newspaper editor or two, a scientist, a dramatist, a novelist, some great executives, some souls with humanitarian vision, a few persons with financial resources—such a group, not large in number but varied in talent and influence, could rapidly infuse our teaching with tremendous power; for the sacrifice and devotion of the believers for two generations have created the instruments which such souls could galvanize with new life. No doubt, that blessing will come to us when we have done our full part in service to the Faith.

Meanwhile, the mysterious moving of the spirit is exemplified in such significant achievements outside the community as the use of the House of Worship as front-cover illustration by the Bell Telephone Company of Illinois and the United States Steel Corporation.

Over a long period of years, the question of a book of Bahá’í Prayers has received careful attention. Committees and individual believers have contributed devotedly to the task, but short of a collection of prayers selected and translated by the Guardian himself, no compilation could satisfy the need. Despite the many other duties and obligations discharged by Shoghi Effendi, he has this year signified that he has made translations of prayers, and part of the manuscript has already been received. The title is to be “Prayers and Meditations by Bahá’u’lláh”, as we were informed in a letter dated March 2, 1937. The part already received consists of 182 typewritten pages; the complete volume will therefore represent a considerable body of text. Indeed, the work may parallel the “Gleanings From the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh” with which we were so blessed in 1935.

The Guardian has likewise sent his own translation of the three obligatory daily prayers, and these are now being printed in a booklet of convenient size. Shoghi Effendi's explanation concerning the daily prayers will appear in the next issue of Baha'i News.

These translations carry us into the heart of the Baha'i life, offering us individually the supreme privilege of drinking from the well-spring of all healing, all purity and all energy of inner renewal. The full rhythm of Baha'i life is becoming manifest, in the Nineteen Day Feasts, the Anniversaries, the month of fasting, and the daily prayers. It is a rhythm not supported by our social environment but in conflict with it, revealing a harmony of mind, soul and spirit, and a new type of community relationship, which requires the constant effort of faith and zeal to be maintained. The effort is the source of power and blessing in the Cause.

For some years, local Assemblies have arranged public displays of a Temple model, sometimes with a collection of Baha'i books and pictures. Recently the National Assembly has taken steps to provide nine Temple models, to be made from a carefully scaled and hand-carved original, and after sending one of these models to Haifa, and retaining one or two more for special display in national teaching activities, the remainder can be purchased or rented by local Assemblies for their own use. The Temple Trustees will approve any other model which seems accurate and acceptable, and thus it should soon be possible to obtain the use of models in different size and of varying cost.

Two of the American believers have made arrangements for the publication of books through non-Baha'i firms which have distinct interest and importance for the Cause. "Portals of Freedom" by Howard Colby Ives has already been issued, and "The Gospel of Mary Magdalene", a novel by Juliet Thompson, will appear in a few months. Mr. Ives has drawn vivid pictures of Abdul-Baha in His association with the author and others during 1912, while Miss Thompson has infused the dramatic movement of the early days of Christianity with the spirit of the Master's references to those days.

If we would follow the important episodes of this year in adequate detail, we must turn to the reports successively published in Baha'i News from the Teaching, Publicity and other Committees, and to the annual Committee reports issued in April, with others ready for similar publication after the Convention. In all the seventy-one Baha'i communities, in the smaller groups, and in the valiant work of traveling teachers and pioneer souls, the work of the Faith is being performed with a new measure of intensity, power and effectiveness. With incredible swiftness we are all being drawn into contact with the fundamental problems of a disordered world. Here the Baha'is are upholding the light of inter-racial unity, there they withstand attack from religiousists who still think that the liberal attitude is merely a kind of permission for spiritual separateness to continue, without guidance, without control by the Father of all mankind. As we encounter any universal issue, even if in the form of what might appear to be a trivial local or personal matter, let us disregard the fact that these small matters come to prepare us to deal correctly with the same issue on the largest possible scale later on. Indeed, the personal contacts of believers in any local community actually involve most of the fundamental problems of the Cause in its relation to the world. Until these contacts are truly universal, we are not prepared to carry out the real mission of the Faith.

The activities of Baha'i youth have continued their rapid development. The organization of a public Symposium held in such a large number of cities both here and abroad, and the publication of the youth quarterly, are notable achievements. They moreover provide instruments for attracting and confirming non-Baha'i youth, and thus constitute a unique aspect of our teaching work.

It was, in fact, from an officer of the National Youth Committee that the National Assembly received the suggestion concerning the observance of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Baha's American visit, a suggestion which, as reported to local Assemblies in the form of definite plans involving public meetings and special publicity, has aroused a most beautiful enthusiasm in all parts of America.

Communications from the Guardian

Since the cablegram sent by the Guardian to the last Convention, already mentioned, the following communications have been received during the current Baha'i year.

On April 10, 1936, the Guardian wrote that he was sending a silk cloth embroidered with the Greatest Name, executed by Baha'i Zoroastrian ladies of Bombay. It is to be shown to the friends at this Convention.

On May 7, this cablegram was received: "Deeply appreciate Assembly's determination. High responsibility rests upon its members. Tremendous effort required. Praying unprecedented success."

On April 19, the Guardian conveyed the request of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Australia and New Zealand that American believers contribute articles to "The Herald of the South."

Replying to a cablegram asking for advice on whether the reprint of the Tablets of the Divine Plan should contain any supplementary material, such as oral statements which were published in the original edition, the Guardian on May 19 cabled: "Heartily approve publication pamphlet. Advise publish as preamble appropriate passages from Gleanings and 'Abdu'l-Baha's 'Will regarding importance of teaching. Pamphlet's title left to Assembly's discretion. Convention plea addressed to American believers cannot achieve its purpose unless dauntless pioneers arise and, forsaking homeland, permanently reside (in) countries where light of Faith (has) not yet penetrated. Cabling three hundred pounds as nucleus (of) special fund to be established (for) furtherance (of) this exalted, highly meritorious purpose."

From a letter dated May 30, 1936, the following passages are quoted: "The Guardian hopes that as new centers are established in Central and South America, the Message of Baha'u'llah to the Presidents of the American Republics may be transmitted to them directly by believers already residing in their respective countries."

"The Guardian does not advise your Assembly to sell the Malden property, as the Master has definitely stated in the Tablet which you have quoted, to 'take care of that house, because the light of the love of God was lighted in it.' By renting the house, the N. S. A. can for the present avoid the expenses entailed by its repairs and upkeep.

"The set of administrative principles Baha'i communities already possess, together with the text of By-Laws, are sufficiently elaborate, at the present stage of the evolution of the Cause, and should not be over-developed by a mass of specific statements related to secondary and exceptional cases." Regarding persons whose condition (i.e., mental condition) has not been defined by the civil authorities after medical diagnosis, the Assembly on the spot must investigate every case that arises and, after consultation with experts, deliver its verdict. Such a verdict, however, should, in important cases, be preceded by consultation with the N. S. A. No doubt, the power of prayer is very great, yet consultation with experts is enjoined by Baha'u'llah. Should these experts believe that an abnormal case exists, the withholding of voting rights is justified.

This postscript, in the Guardian's hand:

"I fervently hope and pray that the year into which we have just entered may be signalized by fresh conquests and unprecedented triumphs in the teaching field within the United States and beyond its confines. A systematic, carefully conceived, and well-established plan should be devised, vigorously pursued and continuously extended. Initiated by the national representatives of the American believers, the vanguard and standard-bearers of the valiant army of Baha'u'llah, this plan should receive the whole-hearted, the sustained and ever-increasing support, both moral and financial, of the entire body of His followers in that continent. Its supreme immediate objective should be the permanent establishment of at least one center in every State of the American Republic and in every Republic of the American continent not yet enlisted under the banner of His Faith. Its ramifications should gradually be extended to the European continent, and its scope should be made to include those countries, such as the Baltic States, Poland, Greece, Spain and Portugal, where no avowed believer has established definite residence. The field is immense, the task gigantic, the privilege immeasurably precious. Time is short, and the obligation sacred, paramount and urgent. The American community must muster all its force, concentrate its resources, summon to its aid all the faith, the determination and energies of which it is capable, and set out, single-minded and undaunted, to attain still greater heights in its mighty exertions for the Cause of Baha'u'llah."

Here, in these words, lie the essence of all plans and policies for the American believers for years to come! Secondary matters must surely be considered only in the light of their contribution to the supreme goal, and not permitted to supersede the primary motive and the primary task.

In a letter dated July 5, Shoghi Effendi gave approval to a recommendation received from a local Assembly and reported to the Guardian by the National Assembly concerning the preparation of an exhibit of Baha'i books, pictures and other material which, once assembled, can be traveled from city to city and used by the various local Assemblies.

On July 27, this cablegram announced the coming of Miss Root:

"Beloved, indefatigable Martha sailing New York (on board the) Bermuda. Feel certain (the) believers will accord befitting welcome (to this) well beloved star servant of Baha'u'llah."

Three days later the following cablegram gave additional emphasis to the teaching work:

"Entreat American believers pander afresh urgency re dedicate themselves task complete fulfillment Divine Plan. National Assembly's energetic leadership, careful planning ineffectual unless supplemented by vigorous action by every believer, however humble, however inexperienced. Time is short. Sands (of) chaotic, despairing civilization steadily running out. Founded on unity, understanding so splendidly achieved, functioning within framework (of) administrative Order (so) laboriously erected, inspired (by the) vision (of the) Temple edifice (so) nobly reared, galvanized into action (by the) realization (of the) rapidly deteriorating world situation, (the) American Baha'i community should rise as never before (to the) height (of the) opportunity now confronting it. Audacity, resolution (and) self abnegation imperatively demanded impatiently and prayerfully waiting." Such a message is an emphatic and final reminder that in this teaching effort we may not delay so long and proceed so slowly as during the years of the Plan of Unified Action for completing the structure of the House of Worship.

Concerning the teaching plan reported to the friends in the June issue of Baha'i News, on July 28 the Guardian, through his secretary, wrote: "The Guardian has read with keenest interest the new statement adopted by the N. S. A. concerning teaching, and wishes me to assure you . . . of his most genuine appreciation of the steps that your Assembly is taking for the expansion of the teaching work throughout America. He is praying for your success from the bottom of his heart."

That same letter explained the principle to be observed in the preservation of Baha'i relics: "Regarding the preservation of relics associated with 'Abdu'l-Baha, the general principle should be that any object used by Him in person should be preserved for posterity, whether in the local or the national Archives. It is the duty and responsibility of the Baha'i Assemblies to ascertain carefully whether such objects are genuine or not, and to exercise the utmost care and discretion in the matter."

It also conveyed this advice in connection with the holding of public meetings in that city should be avoided only in case it would lead to grave and very serious results. Slight local criticisms and unpopularity should not act as deterrent. The issue (i.e., of race prejudice) should be met squarely and courageously, and an effort should be made to attract at first the most cultured element among the colored, and through them establish contact with the whites and the masses. Such individuals and groups, whether white or colored, who are relatively free from racial prejudice, should be approached, separately if necessary, and an endeavor should be made to bring them together eventually, not only on formal occasions and for specific purposes, but in intimate social gatherings, in private homes as well as in formally recognized Bahá'í centers.

"The summer schools provide a splendid setting and environment to which the best element among the colored race should be specially attracted. Through such association prejudice can be gradually eradicated, and 'Abdu'l-Baha's ardent wish fully realized."

Then this statement in the Guardian's hand: "I am eagerly awaiting the news of the progress of the activities initiated to promote the teaching work within, and beyond the confines of the American continent. The American believers, if they wish to carry out, in the spirit and the letter, the parting wishes of their beloved Master, must intensify their teaching work a thousandfold and extend its ramifications beyond the confines of their native land and as far as the most distant outposts of their far-flung Faith. The Tablets of the Divine Plan invest your Assembly with unique and grave responsibilities, and confer upon it privileges which your sister Assemblies might well envy and admire. The present opportunity is unutterably precious. It may not recur again. Undaunted by the perils and the uncertainties of the present hour, the American believers must press on and prosecute in its entirety the task which now confronts them. I pray for their success from the depths of my heart.

The importance of Bahá’í Archives was again stressed in a letter dated September 25, 1936: “The importance of the institution of Bahá’í Archives is not due only to the many teaching facilities it procures, but is essentially to be found in the vast amount of historical data and information it offers both to the present-day administration of the Cause, and to the Bahá’í historians of the future.”

On October 29 this cablegram was received: “Overjoyed, unspeakably grateful American believers signal to us the reiterated appeals. Inaugurated campaign fraught (with) consequences involving immediate destinies (of the) American community. Shadows enriching sore-tried human society noticeably deepening. World crisis (is) inexorably moving towards climax, challenging (the) torchbearers (of) Bahá’í civilization (to) scale loftier heights (of) individual heroism, (to) scatter more widely throughout the length (and) breadth (of) the American continents, (to) participate more strenuously (in) concerted effort organized by National, Regional (and) local agencies dedicated (to the) prosecution (of) noble enterprise, (to) pour forth more abundantly (their) resources in support (of the) Fund created for its furtherance, (and) resolve more determinedly (to) conquer whatever obstacles might retard its ultimate fruition. (The) Dawn-Breakers (in) previous age have on Persian soil signalled by their acts (the) birth (of the) Faith (of) Bahá’u’lláh. Might not American believers, their spiritual descendents, prove themselves in turn capable (of) ushering in on world scale the civilization of which that Faith is (the) direct source and sole begetter.”

The power which pours forth through the Guardian’s successive messages seems overwhelming. Within the space of a few months, his messages have traversed an area of significance which in the past would have reached through thousands of years. The intensity, the swiftness of these passing moments have no parallel in the recorded history of mankind.

On November 2, the Guardian advised the National Spiritual Assembly to extend to Miss Lidija Zamenhof a hearty welcome in connection with her plan to visit America, and to take full advantage of this splendid opportunity for extending the scope of the teaching work.

On November 5 the Assembly was informed that the Kurdish translation of “Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era” had been confiscated by the authorities in Iraq, and requested to exert influence in order to have them returned and their circulation permitted.

The Guardian’s letter of November 14 approved the extension of the Committee on Braille Translations to include members in other countries. This letter explained the Guardian’s contribution to the Teaching Fund as follows: “He feels that this is a matter to be left entirely to the discretion of the N. S. A. He believes that the continuous expenditure of a considerable sum to provide for traveling expenses of teachers who are in need constitutes these days the chief obligation of the National Fund. An effort should be made to facilitate, as much as possible, the extension of the teaching work by helping those who are financially unable, to reach their destination and once there to encourage them to settle and earn the means of their livelihood.”

Answering a question as to the form in which the successive “World Order” letters should appear when published as a book, this letter stated: “He prefers that you retain the separate titles of these letters, the full text of which should be published in the order in which they have been written. As to the sub-captions, he leaves this matter to the discretion of your Assembly.” Then followed details concerning the changes to be made in the revised edition of the Esslemont book.

The letter concluded with these words, in the Guardian’s hand: “I cannot allow this communication to be sent without adding a few words in person and stress anew the significance of the undertaking in which the entire Bahá’í community has embarked. The promulgation of the Divine Plan, unveiled by our departed Master in the darkest days of one of the severest ordeals which humanity has ever experienced, is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to fulfill their unimaginably glorious destiny. As the proclamation of the Message reverberates throughout the land, as its resistless march gathers momentum, as the field of its operation widens, and the numbers of its upholders and champions multiply, its potentialities will correspondingly unfold, exerting a most beneficent influence, not only on every community throughout the Bahá’í World, but on the immediate fortunes of a traveling society. The repercussions of this campaign are already apparent in India, Egypt, Iraq and even among the sorely tried communities in Persia and Russia. The Faith of God is gaining in stature, effectiveness and power. Not until, however, the great enterprise which you are now conducting runs its full course and attains its final objective, at its appointed time, can its world-encompassing benefits be fully apprehended or revealed. The perseverance of the American believers will, no doubt, ensure the ultimate realization of these benefits.”

In a letter dated November 18, the Assembly was requested to give Shoghi Effendi a power of attorney in connection with a house and land transferred to the Palestine Branch of the American National Assembly by Siyyid Husayn al-Husayn, a believer of Haifa, a property situated between the Bahá’s Shrine and the tomb of the Greatest Holy Leaf. The title deed was sent the next day, together with another deed for two pieces of land donated by the wife of the late Abbas-Quli, former custodian of the Shrines on Mt. Carmel. The Guardian stated that the total area of the property owned by the Palestine Branch was now approximately 58,800 square pic's, every 1,600 square pic's equaling 919 square metres.

The letter dated March 2, 1937, referred to the Guardian's translation of the three daily obligatory prayers, which were enclosed, and stated that the first installment of his translation of prayers and meditations of Bahá'u'lláh would soon be sent. The names of a Baha'i family who have settled permanently in Buenos Aires, moving there from Aleppo, Syria, were also given, that the American believers may extend cooperation in their teaching work.

The Guardian's love for the faithful believers was ardently expressed in two cablegrams received in recent weeks. On March 4 this message was received: "Assure dear Lunt ardent prayers, profound attachment. Extend every possible assistance." This came in reply to the Assembly's cablegram reporting the news of his serious illness and the hospital treatment that had been arranged. On April 14 came this message: "Distressed sudden passing dearly beloved Dr. Bagdadi. Less inflicted (upon) national interests (of) Faith irreparable. His exemplary faith, audacity, unquestioning loyalty (and) indefatigable exertions (are) unforgiven. Advise Bahá'í communities (of) Chicago (and) surrounding regions hold befitting gathering (in) Temple for which he so valiantly (and) devotedly laboured. Ardently praying for him and bereaved family."

Plans and Policies

The formation of teaching agencies embodying regional, national and inter-American activities, as outlined in Baha'i News for June, 1930, was not a plan but merely a tool or instrument intended to establish facilities for increased individual action and more efficient collective efforts. Aside from its usefulness such projects are but passive blueprints. What is always needed are the builders who can turn the blueprint into an actual edifice. That this preliminary method of uniting the American Baha'i community for its international teaching task has acquired dynamic life and vigor seems evident from the Guardian's expression of happiness already mentioned. The detailed facts will be presented to the delegates and friends by representatives of the Teaching Committee at a later session.

To summarize the rulings and statements made by the National Assembly this year, the following subjects are cited:

1. The Assembly feels that it is not able to pass upon the merits of charts and similar material which contain elements of fact not subject to confirmation in the Baha'i Writings.

2. A form has been provided for use when new Spiritual Assemblies are established by joint declaration of exactly nine believers.

3. A form of bequest has been reported in Baha'i News for use by believers desiring to provide for the Cause in their will.

4. The cooperation to be extended to Baha'i authors was reported in Baha'i News last fall.

5. The Historical Record Cards will not be made permanent and continuous form of information. The supply of cards has been exhausted, and those which have been received constitute a most interesting source of information concerning the membership of the American Bahá'í community at the present stage of its existence.

6. An improved form of monthly Financial Report, in which the status of the total annual budget is carried forward from month to month, has been adopted and supplied to the local Assemblies through the new monthly bulletin.

7. It has been felt desirable to reprint in Baha'i News those passages from Shoghi Effendi's general letters which set forth the fundamental teachings.

8. After consultation with the Teaching Committee, a number of steps were taken in order to clarify certain questions, as follows:—

A. Teachers visiting new areas should have a proper letter of credentials.

B. Such teachers should be provided with a list of questions to fill out and return to the National Teaching Committee, that valuable information may be secured and made available to other teachers visiting the same area.

C. The placing of books in Public Libraries by traveling teachers in a new area is an expense coming under the Teaching budget. The budget of the Library Committee is for use in placing books through the local Assemblies.

D. Budgets of cash and also of free literature have been given the National and Regional Teaching Committees. Such funds are not intended to finance teaching activities of local Assemblies.

E. As reported in Baha'i News, a distinction has been made between public and non-public teaching activities. In areas outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies, teachers holding public meetings are to have recognition and approval from the National or Regional Teaching Committee.

F. Local Assemblies and individual teachers, when announcing the Cause in public programs, should make use of the terms used by 'Abdu'l-Baha or the Guardian as the description or title of the Faith.

G. Requests for funds to meet traveling and other teaching expenses come to the National Assembly in the form of recommendations by the National or Regional Teaching Committee and not directly from individual teachers.

9. On receiving a question concerning the propriety of using parts of a prayer and not the complete prayer in compilations, it was recorded that excerpts can be taken from prayers provided the meaning is not changed, the fact that it is only an excerpt is made clear, and the reference to the source is given in each case. This applies particularly to Study Outlines.

10. The matter of the residential qualifications of believers has been interpreted, to remove the ambiguous situation existing where believers reside in one established community but hold their voting right in another, adjoining city.

11. The publishing of Bahá'í compilations through non-Bahá'í firms has been clarified and reported through Baha'i News.

12. The Temple Trustees wish to approve all models of the Temple before they are sold or publicly displayed, and to have the sale arranged through the Trustees.

As this secondary material on administrative matters is not readily available, scattered as it is through different issues of Baha'i News, and in the Minutes of the National Spiritual Assembly, a compilation has been made and published under the title of "Baha'i Procedure," which codifies the statements and rulings as well as procedures adopted over a period of years. With this material has been incorporated passages from the Guardian's letters setting forth the fundamental principles of Bahá’í administration and his explanation of the Bahá’í attitude on important current issues. The publication is in the form of loose leaf sheets, perforated to place in any ring binder of standard letterhead size.

A vast amount of detail would be spared to the meetings of the National Assembly, and doubtless also to local Assemblies, if the believers will acquaint themselves with this secondary administrative material. An enlightened public opinion within the Bahá’í community is our best safeguard against improper action or unsound attitude, and no amount of centralized authority can be a substitute for a community which has become thoroughly informed. We may well bear in mind also the Guardian’s view, already reported, that care should be taken not to develop the secondary material at the expense of the primary aim of the Faith. Our ideal should be to arrive at conscious knowledge and right attitude on how matters should be arranged within the Bahá’í community, for the basis of the community is conscience and not external law.

American Teachers Abroad

From time to time, as letters and reports are received, the friends are made acquainted with the activities of our co-workers who live or travel in other lands. Indeed, these activities have become so important and far-reaching that it has been felt advisable to include this subject in the Convention agenda. During the current Bahá’í year, the American believers abroa’d have been: Martha L. Root, Agnes Alexander, Clara and Adelaide Sharp; Marion Jack, Charles and Helen Bishop, Mark Tobey, Lorel Schop-flocher, Gita Orlovka, Siegried Schop-flocher, Frances Stewart, Elizabeth Pilkington, Leonora Holzapelle, Louis and Louise Gregory, Nellie S. French, Edward and Louise Mathews, Amelia
B. Collins, Lena Gutharlet, Mrs.
Jeanne and Miss Jeanne Bolles, Isabel Dodge, and Beatrice Irwin. Of such believers Bahá’u’lláh has said: “They that have forsaken their country for the purpose of teaching Our Cause—these shall the Faithful Spirit strength-then through its power.” We admire and appreciate their services. We long for greater capacity to promote their plans.

In Memoriam

Year by year the true American Bahá’í pioneers—those who founded the Faith on this continent—are removed from our ranks and raised to the higher station of service in the Kingdom unseen. The passing of such workers as Paul K. Dealy, Mary Hanford Ford and Dr. Zia Bagldlin within the past few months brings us a sense of personal loss and reminds us that those who remain bear a greater responsibility in attempting to confirm their like and restore their qualities of faith to the workers on earth. Our prayers accompany these spirits who have fulfilled their mission in the body and now go to their reward.

Bahá’í Trusteeships

As the believers know, the large
Bahá’í properties like the Temple,
Green Acre and Bosch Summer School are held under separate deeds by trusttees composed of members of the National Spiritual Assembly. This year, for the first time, a general survey has been made of the five Bahá’í Trustees-ships, and this survey is to be presented as a report to the Convention.

The report is a matter of distinct interest and importance, because the work of these Trusteeships has come to constitute a large part of the responsibility of the National Assembly, and a considerable asset not merely as Bahá’í property but as instruments of teaching. It is as believers learn how to combine true efficiency in practical affairs with their spiritual activities that we attain the balance of character, action and devotion distinguishing the religious life of this new age.

The Guardian’s Marriage

We come now to that event which has brought such depth of joy to all Bahá’ís throughout the world and forms the great climax of this Bahá’í year—the Guardian’s marriage.

On March 27 this cablegram was received: “Announce Assemblies cel-bration marriage beloved Guardian.
Inestimable honor conferred upon handmaid of Bahá’u’lláh Ruhiyih Khanum Miss Mary Maxwell. Union of East and West proclaimed by Bahá’í Faith cemented.” (Signed) Ziaiyih,
Mother of the Guardian.

The following acknowledgements were cabled immediately by the National Assembly.

To Ziaiyih Khanum: “Assemblies will rejoice your heart-stirring announcement. Beseech divine blessings.”

To Shoghi Effendi: “Joyously acclaim historic event so auspiciously uniting in eternal bond the destiny of East and West.”

On March 30, this message came from the Guardian: “Deeply moved your message. Institution (of) Guarndianship, head cornerstone (of) the Administrative Order (of) the Cause
(of) Bahá’u’lláh, already ennobled through its organic connection with
(the) Twin Founders (of the) Bahá’í Faith, is now further reinforced through direct association with West and particularly with (the) American believers, whose spiritual destiny is to usher in (the) World Order (of) Bahá’u’lláh. For my part (I) desire
(to) congratulate community (of) American believers on acquisition (of) tie vitally binding them to so weighty an organ of their Faith.”

On April 3, the National Spiritual Assembly sent this further message on behalf of all American Bahá’ís: “Hearts overflowing with gratitude, we are sending $1349, being $19 each from seventy-one American Assemblies for immediate strengthening new tie binding American Bahá’ís to institution of Guardianship. We trust this modest contribution will be accepted as token (of) ever-increasing devotion and unity (of) American believers in service to World Order (of) Bahá’u’lláh.”

On April 5 was received the Guardian’s response: “Accept. Deeply touched by American believers’ sponsitious expressions of ever-increasing devotion to crowning institution (of) World Order (of) Bahá’u’lláh.
Nobest contribution individual believers can make at this juncture to consecrate newly-acquired tie is to promote with added fervor unique plan conceived for them by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.”

Any comment would be unbecoming, for this historic event will forever be embraced for Bahá’ís in the Guardian’s own words.

In conclusion, one of the prayers newly translated by Shoghi Effendi is offered up in appeal that the Holy Spirit may penetrate the soul of every Bahá’í and confirm our steadfast unity on the field of action.

“Glorified art Thou, O Lord our God! We beseech Thee by Him Who is Thy Most Great Name, Who hath been sorely afflicted by such of Thy creatures as have repudiated Thy truth, and Who hath been hemmed in by sorrows which no tongue can describe, to grant that we may remember Thee and celebrate Thy praise, in these days when all have turned away from Thy beauty, have disputed with Thee, and turned away disdainfully from Him
Who is the Revealer of Thy Cause.
None is there, O our Lord, to help
Thee except Thine own Self, and no power to succor Thee save Thine own power.”

“We entreat Thee to enable us to cleave steadfastly to Thy love and Thy renowne. This is, verily, within our power, and Thou art the One that knoweth all that is in us. Thou, in truth, art knowing, apprised of all. De-price us not, O our Lord, of the splendors of the light of Thy face, whose brightness hath illuminated the whole earth. No God is there beside Thee, the Most Powerful, the All-Glorious, the Ever-Forgiving.'

Yours faithfully,
National Spiritual Assembly

MAARTHA L. ROOT SAILS FOR TEACHING IN FAR EAST

A telegram received from Miss Martha Root during the Convention period was read to the delegates, reporting her departure from San Francisco on S. S. Tatsutamari, sailing May 20, 1937.

The prayers and loving thoughts of the American Bahá'í community are directed to this devoted International Bahá'í teacher as she undertakes one more great mission for the sake of the Faith she has served with such notable success.

A SUGGESTION TO ISOLATED BELIEVERS

Both the National Assembly and the Teaching Committee are doing all in their power to assist and encourage the isolated Bahá'ís, so that they may feel themselves a part of the American Bahá'í community and do their part in promoting the Faith.

Attendance at the Bahá'í Summer Schools offers these isolated friends one of the best opportunities to mingle with other believers, study the Teachings under most favorable conditions, and make contact with the dynamic spirit of the Cause.

The suggestion is therefore laid before the isolated Bahá'ís, and the members of small local groups that each do its utmost to attend the nearest Summer School this year.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF ANNUAL SOUVENIR OF 'ABDUL'BAHA

The Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá will be held this year at West Englewood on Saturday, June 26th, program to begin at 2 P. M.

During the afternoon the National Spiritual Assembly will hold dedicatory services in commemoration of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the Unity Feast given by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 1912, in the grove. Mountfort Mills will preside.

The tentative program includes: an hour of music, beginning at two o'clock, by the Bergen County Music Project of the Works Progress Administration.

The reader of the address made by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 1912 will be Mrs. E. B. Kinney; speakers will be: Ray Wilhelm, Mountford Mills, Edward B. Kinney, Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan and Mrs. Grace Ober.

It is planned to serve a box-lunch at a nominal cost after the meeting, around five o'clock. There will be no evening meeting as in former years. It is expected that this procedure will give the many friends, who usually gather at the Souvenir, a better opportunity to visit with each other.

All the Bahá'ís and their friends are invited to this Annual Souvenir, and this being the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary it is hoped that special efforts will be made by all who possibly can to attend and bring as many friends as they wish.

LETTER FROM YOUTH COMMITTEE

To the Bahá'í Youth of the United States and Canada.

Dear fellow youth:

The National Youth Committee asks your kind assistance in regard to four projects:

1. After seeing some of the splendid snapshots and photographs taken at the Youth Day symposiums, the Committee conceived the idea to prepare a folder of youth pictures to be circulated throughout the youth communities. Undoubtedly you too have been wondering for a long time what Marion Holley and some of the other youth really look like. If you think this way of meeting each other will strengthen our unity and help us to work better as an organism, please send in individual youth pictures and youth group pictures, whenever possible, with your name and address, and we shall try to send the folder to you in the order in which your photographs were received.

2. Please send in articles for Bahá'í Youth, especially on subjects relating to those of the March 7 symposiums.

3. We enlist your help in obtaining the name and address of all Bahá'í youth who are students in colleges. (Pictures, manuscripts, and list of college students to be sent to Zeha Holden, 48 Terrace Ave., Albany, N. Y.)

4. The members of the Eastern area are specially urged to interest all Bahá'í youth and their friends in attending the Green Acre Summer School—Youth Week, Aug. 1-8. If you would like to have the moving picture of last year's Youth Week at Green Acre shown in your community, write at once to Dorotha Morrell, 203 Peninmore Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Thank you sincerely for your cooperation.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

A number of important additions to the Bahá'í literatures are brought to the attention of the friends.

Mrs. Flora P. Stone, Urbana.
Dr. Zia M. Bagdadi, Augusta.
Miss Harriet Williams, Boston.

CORRECTIONS

Correction is made of several errors which inadvertently have appeared in recent issues of Baha'i News.

"Public Meetings in Nashville." The members of the National Assembly met with the local Assembly and visiting believers at the home of Mrs. A. N. Johnson.

Contacts Committee, annual report. The name of Miss Ethel Revell was omitted in the list of members.

Committee on Braille Transcriptions, annual report. The chairman is Mrs. Constance Redman.

Index Committee, annual report. The chairman is Mrs. H. A. Harding.

LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL
Special Notice

Will the young people who come to the youth session bring your copy of the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh?

An effort is being made to have more music at all the sessions at Louhelen this summer. If you play a musical instrument, will you please bring it.

Those attending the general sessions will find a copy of Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh valuable to have with them.

May we ask adults to generously refrain from writing for reservations for themselves at the youth session. Unfortunately there are not sufficient accommodations for other than the young people for this four day session.

Please see March issue of Baha'i News for complete program and dates for all sessions.

ANNUAL REPORT
Trusted for the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada
1936-1937

When the Declaration of Trust was adopted in 1927, creating a corporate body, known as a Voluntary Trust, of the National Spiritual Assembly, it was felt that this form of organization would relieve the Assembly of some of the more material and practical duties that had consumed so much of its time, especially in handling the Temple and Green Acre properties. Since that time, however, the duties and problems have increased greatly from year to year. With the construction of the Temple and its maintenance, the magnificent gifts of the valuable properties at West Englewood, Gypsyville, and the historic house at Malden, the National Assembly has now become the administrative body of a group of estates that extends from Maine to California with a present value of more than a million dollars. Moreover, the responsibility of directing the spiritual affairs of an ever-increasing community have augmented correspondingly.

We may justly rejoice at the manifest evidences of the growth and consolidation of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in the western world, when we contrast this present condition of the Cause in America with the eventual first Bahá'í Convention in 1909, when the Chicago Spiritual Assembly turned over to the Bahá'í Temple Unity, our first corporation, two lots in the Village of Wilmette, costing $2000.00 and a cash fund of $3665.44 for the purchase of more land for the Temple site. This present achievement has been the result of an ever-increasing unity of purpose, inspired by the encouragement of our beloved Master, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the unerring guidance of Shoghi Effendi and the ever-failing prayers and loyal financial assistance of our Oriental brothers and sisters.

In order to protect the National Fund from any contingency that might financially involve one of our properties and to meet the legal requirements of ownership under the diverse laws of the States in which we hold real estate, it has been necessary for the National Assembly to form separate bodies of Trustees for their management. Thus at the present time there are seven corporate trusts,—The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada, the Temple Trustees, the Green Acre Trustees, the Wilhelm Trustees, the Bosch Trustees, the Malin all parts. Exert your energy in accomplishing what ye have undertaken, so that this glorious Temple may be built, that the beloved of God may assemble therein and that they may pray and offer glory to God for guiding them to His Kingdom."

The history of the early progress,—the steady acquisition of the land in Wilmette, the dedication of the Temple grounds on May 1, 1912 by 'Abdul-Bahá, the selection of the Temple design, the sinking of the nine caissons and the erection of the Foundation Hall,—is well known to the friends. All this work was accomplished under the direction of the Bahá'í Temple Unity, the old corporation, which was in turn instructed by the believers each year at the annual Bahá'í Convention. It is of historical interest to recall that the final payment on the main tract of Temple property was made on October 2, 1912 while the Master was still in America.

After the incorporation of the National Spiritual Assembly in 1927, the first major step was the establishment of the Temple Trusteeship. The Indenture creating this Trust was recorded in Cook County, Illinois, as document 10204534 on November 13, 1928. The first meeting of the Trustees was held on January 12, 1929. With the recording of this Indenture the title to the Temple property passed from the Bahá'í Temple Unity to the Temple Trustees.

One of the first things done by the Trustees was to start a Temple building fund by placing $67,000.00 in U. S. Certificates of Indebtedness at 4½ per cent. No bank failure could impair the payments of this obligation. The Trustees then took a further precautionary step by passing a resolution that no invested funds or securities could be withdrawn from the Temple Fund without written authorization signed by at least five of the members. Shortly, $20,000.00 more was added to this fund and then came a glorious gift from two Bahá'ís of $100,000.00 and another gift of $190,000.00 from a friend who gave up a trip to Haifa because the Guardian had laid such stress on the completion of the Temple Fund. By Convention time, April, 1929, a period of three months from the commencement of the building fund, there was $210,000.00 on hand.

Owing to the increasing height of Lake Michigan, it became necessary, in 1930, to put in a bulkhead of interlocking sheet steel piling on the Lake Shore tract at a cost of $7844.35. March, 1930 saw the fulfillment of the condition laid down by Shoghi Effendi, that $400,000.00 should be in hand before the next stage of Temple construction could be started. The friends will recall that upon the recommendation of the Research Service, it was decided to erect the entire super-structure of the Temple, rather than build just the complete first story. The wisdom of this decision is known to the friends throughout the Bahá'í world.

The next step after the completion of the structure was the outer decoration of the building. Again expert advice made it possible to start from the top rather than the base of the Temple, and the present beauty of the Dome, as it glistered in view from miles around, is a shining evidence of what the entire Temple will look like when completed. You are familiar with the financial struggle to complete the final payments for the clere-story section to Mr. J. J. Earley, whose artificial stone process made possible the execution of the beautiful designs of the architect, Mr. Louis Bourgeois. At a period when the world was in the throes of a severe depression, the Bahá'ís carried on operations while many a religious edifice, backed by great wealth, had abandoned further construction. Once more the inspiring guidance of Shoghi Effendi and the faith of the friends carried us on. The Trustees had many an anxious moment over the problem of meeting the final payments and our Treasurer had to make a Bank loan of $10,000.00, without mortgaging any property, a direct obligation on the Trustees. This loan was paid in full but it was still necessary to borrow $5500.00 from two individuals in order to complete the contract with Mr. Earley.

The Trustees are happy to report that this final obligation has recently been discharged and also the final payment on the purchase contract of the Studio building has been made to Mrs. Pemberton. Considerable repair is needed on the Studio and the Maintenance Committee has been instructed to obtain competitive bids for the cost of minimum necessary repairs to be done this Spring. Certain needed repairs on the Temple have been taken care of during the year, in order to stop water leakage. The work of water-proofing the entire sloping surface of the ramp was completed at a cost of $1289.87. It was found that owing to the porous condition of the surface, due to a long period of weather exposure, the contractor had to use more material than originally contracted for. The metal gutters and flashings and broken tiles will be repaired at a contract cost of $378.00. The vertical surface of Foundation Hall and the slabs over the Linden Avenue entrance require attention and $500.00 has been authorized for this work and $100.00 more for the cost of painting the wooden steps and framework. New indirect lights have been installed in Foundation Hall at a cost of $122,10. The improvement of the grounds by grading and seeding has been authorized and should be completed by Convention time, thus removing the unattractive conditions that have prevailed since building operations ceased. Current insurance needs have been taken care of and considerable savings on premium costs have been effected.

With the sale of the Marshall property adjoining our triangle plot across Sheridan Road, our attorney has been authorized to enter into negotiations with the present owner to bring about a joint action for the application to the Village authorities for the vacation of the stub end road and for the equitable division of this strip of land. Pending this action our attorney has been instructed to take all immediate and necessary steps to protect the triangle plot of land from adverse possession or use.

The Trustees have voted to request Mr. Earley to submit an estimate of cost on a Temple model in a size suitable for display by local Assemblies. It was also further voted that any model or reproduction of the Temple must be submitted to the Trustees for them to determine whether the model is acceptable and also the conditions under which it can be sold. Local Assemblies and individuals are asked not to purchase or exhibit any Temple model except through the Temple Trustees.

The exact figures for this report of Temple maintenance, repairs and insurance can be found in the Treasurer's report. However it may be of interest to know the approximate annual fixed charges that have to be met. They are:

Green Acre Trustees

After attending the Congress of Religions at the Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893, Miss Sarah J. Farmer was inspired to found a center for the investigation of the reality of religions. The following year she selected the property in her home village of Eliot, Maine, for this purpose, and thus an institution was established as she described it "for the purpose of bringing together all who were looking earnestly toward the New Day which seemed to be breaking over the entire world. The motive was to find the Truth, the Reality underlying all religious forms, and to make points of contact in order to promote the unity necessary for the ushering in of the coming Day of God."

This beautiful site on the banks of the Piscataqua River was afterwards named Green Acre. The yearly summer conferences became widely known and were highly successful. In 1900 Miss Farmer made a pilgrimage to Akka, and from that time on, the Fellowship which she established to control Green Acre gradually became imbued with the Bahá’í ideals. Time does not permit recounting the growth and struggles that befell the lot of the Green Acre Fellowship, the court proceedings to save the property, the gifts of Mrs. Helen Ellis Cole and others in the early days and later the financial assistance of the Randalls and the Schopfchiners and many faithful friends to insure the ultimate destiny of Green Acre to become the reflection of the plain of Akka and the center of the Bahá’ís. Miss Farmer received many Tablets from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá regarding its future, and among these messages the following prophetic statement has been a guiding inspiration: "You must lay such a foundation so that the influence of the confederation of religions and sects may permeate to all parts of the world from Green Acre, and Green Acre for all future ages and cycles may become the standard-bearer of the oneness of the world of humanity."

After Miss Farmer’s death, the Green Acre Fellowship, which owned and directed the property, gradually brought the Bahá’í principles into all the activities of the center. At the annual meeting on August 10, 1925, the Fellowship voted to place Green Acre under the control of the National Spiritual Assembly, and upon the completion of this conveyance, the Guardian on September 20, 1926 cabled this message: "May newly confirmed union achieve its purpose by increasingly demonstrating universality of Bahá’í Cause."

In 1929 an Indenture of Trust was set up and title to the property was transferred to the Trustees. Green Acre consists of 131.3 acres of land in five different parcels. The Inn, Fellowship House, the Pines, Sunset Hill and the river tract. Besides the three-story Inn and the lovely Fellowship House there are a number of cottages, an Arts and Crafts Studio, Rogers Cottage (formerly a Tea and Gift Shop) and a camp site. Recently the McKee cottage was purchased for $200.00, making another house available for rental, and the Trustees voted to appropriate $100.00 for the installation of a water heater and bath in the Lucas cottage. A camp site for those who prefer to spend their vacation in that manner, has been arranged for on the river tract. The grounds will be cleared and platforms for tents installed with provision for water supply with a pitcher pump. The Maintenance Committee has been authorized to build a Fellowship House this season, providing suitable arrangements can be made. The land between the Pines and the highway is to be marked out in 50 ft.-front lots to be leased to Bahá’ís who wish to construct their own summer homes at Green Acre. Mr. and Mrs. Schopfchiner have made arrangements to give the large Ball cottage with its acreage, which adjoins the Inn property, to Green Acre. This welcome gift will provide a house that will produce a revenue to the Trustees as it can be rented the entire year. Eight Hundred Dollars has been authorized to be expended for alterations and improvements on the Inn Cottages Nos. 2 and 3.

Mr. Bert Hagadorn, who has served as an efficient caretaker of the Green Acre properties for many years, found it necessary to resign his position this year. To fill this position, Mr. Goodwin was hired for one year at a wage of $100.00 a month. Mr. Goodwin resigned in March and Edwin LaPointe engaged on a day basis of $3.20, and a minimum during the winter months. A new sign reading "Bahá’í Summer School for the Study of the New World Order" was erected at the entrance replacing the old sign "Green Acre Inn." Judge Deering was employed to examine the records of certain rights of way to different tracts of Green Acre land and to take the necessary steps to establish proper use of these rights of way by the friends. The boundaries of all parcels of land will be properly and permanently marked with cement posts.

Mrs. Ormsby has been engaged as manager of the Inn again for the season of 1937 under the same arrangement made with her last year. It is encouraging to report that, after receiving $500.00 from the National Assembly to start the season of 1936 and purchase the necessary supplies for the Inn, this sum was paid back and, in addition, a net profit from the Inn, and cottages and the Lucas cottage in the amount of $722.74 was turned over by the Trustees to the National Fund. The Inn will be opened on July 1st this year and offer accommodations to non-Bahá’ís as well as believers seeking a pleasant vacation, in order to make it a source of income to Green Acre. A Bahá’í hostess will be at the Inn for the season.

Since the burning of the "Eirenion", a Hall in the Inn has been used for school and meeting purposes. The friends will be most pleased to learn that when Green Acre receives this year a beautiful new Bahá’í Hall, complete with chairs, furnishings and lighting system will be standing on the top of the slope overlooking the Piscataqua just west of the Inn. This Hall, costing about $5,000.00 will have a seating capacity for 200 people and will be used entirely for Bahá’í devotional and teaching purposes and for the celebration of Bahá’í Feasts. This greatly needed addition to the institutions of Green Acre is made possible through the generosity of Mrs. Florence Morton. The trustees are most appreciative of this contribution from one who has been devoted to the service of Green Acre. The Hall in the Inn will be used for recreation.

Judge Deering has been requested to ascertain if the Indenture of Trust is legally sufficient according to Maine law for the Trustees to apply for tax exemption on the properties that are devoted to religious and educational purposes.

This Indenture was recorded at Alfred, Maine, on January 1, 1939, Book 813, page 366.

The operation and maintenance cost of Green Acre has been a difficult problem to solve owing to the short summer season and the many needed repairs. The Green Acre Maintenance Committee has rendered invaluable assistance to the Trustees in the management of the property. The Inn was operated at a good profit last season, but the fixed charges for taxes, insurance, repairs and caretaker make it necessary to receive assistance each year from the National Fund. The Guardian wishes Green Acre to become self-supporting and the Trustees are doing what they can toward this.
end. The present annual cost of maintenance, not including the Inn and summer school activities, follows:

This year over $100.00 in savings on insurance has been effected. The future destiny of Green Acre was assured when 'Abdu'l-Baha, 25 years ago, stood on Mount Salvat and said that a great University of the Higher Sciences would be erected on that site.

Wilhelm Trustees

On June 29, 1912, 'Abdu'l-Baha invited a number of friends to the home of Mr. Roy C. Wilhelm at West Englewood to partake with him in a feast of fellowship. After serving the guests with his own hands, the Master said: "You have come here with sincere intentions and the purpose of all present is the attainment of the virtues of God. . . . Since the desire of all is unity and agreement it is certain that this meeting will be productive of great results. . . . Such gatherings as this have no likeness or equal in the world of mankind where people are drawn together by physical motives or in furtherance of material interests, for this meeting is a prototype of that inner and complete spiritual association in the eternal world of being. . . . Hundreds of thousands of meetings shall be held to commemorate such an assembly as this and the very words I utter to you on this occasion shall be reiterated by them in the ages to come."

For the past 24 years an annual souvenir has been held on this spot in remembrance of this meeting. A few years after this event, Mr. Wilhelm, in his spare moments, erected a log cabin and named it Evergreen Cabin. It has been a center of Bahá'í activities for many years. Since 1931 it has been the headquarters of the National Spiritual Assembly. Directly below the Cabin lies the pine grove where the Master gave his memorable Feast. It is on this site, according to the Guardian's instructions, that the only Memorial commemorating 'Abdu'l-Baha visit to North America is to be erected. It will be in the form of a monument.

On March 9, 1935, Mr. Wilhelm executed an Indenture of Trust, transferring Evergreen Cabin, its furnishings and the two lots comprising the pine grove to the nine Wilhelm Trustees for the benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly. This indenture was duly recorded in the office of the clerk of Bergen County, New Jersey, in Book 1935, page 590 of Deeds.

As a further evidence of Mr. Wilhelm's generosity, a $20,000 fire insurance policy good for five years and all liabilities was turned over to the Trustees, fully paid, covering these properties, which made a saving of $584.48 to the National Fund. The terms of the indenture provide that Mr. Wilhelm and members of his family throughout their several lifetimes can continue to have the free use of the property. An additional gift of 102 feet of land, representing two lots between the cabin and the pine grove, a garage and two story house in which the office of the National Assembly is located, has just been made to the Cause by Mr. Wilhelm. The insurance on the house and garage amounting to $112.00 is also included.

The Cabin has been made available under lease to the Teaneck Assembly for their meetings. A separate electric meter has recently been installed for the light used by the Teaneck Assembly and provision is being made for a separate oil supply to the heating plant for their use.

Up to the present time there has been no cost to the Bahá'í Fund for light, heat, repairs or taxes. It is a remarkable fact that recently the City of West Englewood, voluntarily decided, without any application being made, to remove this property from the tax rolls. When approached for verification of this action, the city fathers stated that Mr. Wilhelm deserves tax exemption on this property more than some religious institutions, for what he is doing for the community of West Englewood.

The only cost to the Trustees is a Liability Insurance coverage which runs about $40.00 annually. The spiritual value of this property is beyond computation. Its physical value is enhancing steadily due to its close proximity to New York City.

Bosch Trustees

The increasing call in the western States for Bahá'í teachers prompted the National Assembly to appoint a committee to work out plans for a Summer School on the Pacific Coast. The site selected for this school was in Geyserville, California, due to the welcome offer of John and Louise Bosch to make their ranch home, with all its facilities, available for this purpose. The first school sessions were held there in 1927. Since that time the ever-increasing number of attendants at the school each year have been housed, without charge, through the warm hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Bosch. As long ago as 1910, Mr. Bosch wrote to 'Abdu'l-Baha of his desire to dedicate this property to the universal service and spirit of the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, that it might become a center—with a Mashriqu'l-Adhkár—for all hearts who are earnestly seeking enlightenment. The fulfillment of this hope, so fully shared in by Mrs. Bosch, started on August 1, 1927, when 130 friends gathered under the shade of the majestic "Big Tree" to celebrate the Feast of "Asma" on the opening of the first summer school in the West.

In the ninth year after the establishment of the school, Mr. and Mrs. Bosch conveyed title to the property by an Indenture of Trust to the Trustees for the benefit of the National Assembly. This trust deed, which is similar to the Wilhelm deed, provides for full use and occupancy by Mr. and Mrs. Bosch during their respective lifetimes. The Indenture was recorded on November 25, 1935 in Book 397, page 20, Records of Sonoma County, California.

The property, just 75 miles north of San Francisco on the famous Redwood Highway, comprises 37 acres, with a mature fruit orchard, a redwood grove, the lovely Bosch home, many accessory buildings, and a water system with two wells that have never gone dry. The maintenance, repairs, taxes and other expense to date have been taken care of by the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Bosch, thus saving a considerable sum for the National Fund.

Mr. Bosch has surveyed a part of this land on the hillside, overlooking the Russian River Valley, for building sites to be leased to Bahá'ís who wish to erect summer homes. Already two attractive cottages have been built on these sites and a number of others have been planned for the near future.

Last year an attractive Hall for the school sessions and public meetings, of rustic redwood, completely equipped with chairs and a kitchen to provide for Feasts, was erected and presented to the Cause by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Collins. This year these two devoted friends of the Faith have shown further evidence of their generosity by the gift of a much needed dormitory, 88 x 14 feet, of corresponding rustic material, which is now under construction and which will be equipped with beds and linen and ready for use for the school sessions this year. This dormitory, fully equipped, will cost approximately $20,000.00. The fire insurance on both these new, beautiful buildings and their equipment for a three-year period have likewise been provided for by these two friends.

Another gift of $500.00 was received this year from Mr. Schopflocher to provide for a suitable place for the school and recreational activities of the Baha'is children.

The only cost to the Trustees to date has been the liability insurance premium amounting to $39.05. All other maintenance costs have been paid by the Boschis. It may soon be necessary to appoint a caretaker to look after the upkeep of the buildings and grounds and thus relieve John and Louise Bosch from the care and responsibilities they have carried on their willing shoulders for so many years. On November 13, 1936, the Trustees motored from San Francisco to spend the day at Geyserville, a meeting of prayer was held in the new Hall. It was a real inspiration to inspect this splendid gift of a valuable property, with its buildings, from these self-sacrificing friends to the Cause of God.

Malden Trustees

In 1900 Miss Maria P. Wilson, one of the early pioneers of the Faith in America, visited 'Abdu'l-Baha at Akka in company with Miss Sarah Farmer. A few years later she made a second pilgrimage and on that occasion the Master said to her: "When I come to America I will visit you." In August, 1912, after visiting Green Acre, 'Abdu'l-Baha requested that a believer who might have a 'house on a hill' allow Him the use of it for a week or two. Many houses were offered for His disposal, but He chose the home of Miss Wilson at 68 High Street in Malden, Massachusetts. He remained there for some ten days before going to Montreal. Upon His return to Haifa, after His memorable visit to America, the Master wrote to Miss Wilson saying: "Thy house became my abode and my home. Many days were spent in that home with the utmost joy and fragrance. The mention of 'Ya Bahá El Abha' was raised from it and we spread the religion of God. In reality that home is My home, therefore the mention of God must always be raised from it.

Again on May 11, 1913, the Master, in another Tablet to Miss Wilson, wrote: "The days I spent in thy house and engaged My time in summing the people to the Kingdom of God were days of infinite joy and spirituality. They shall never be erased from the Tablet of Memory." When Miss Wilson passed to the heavenly world in 1930 she left a Will giving this house to Shoghi Effendi. The Guardian took title to this property and asked the National Assembly to look after it for him. In the Fall of 1935 the Guardian executed a deed of trust transferring it to the Trustees for the benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly. This indenture was recorded on September 27, 1935 in Book 5962, page 391, in the Middlesex Registry of Deeds, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, Southern District.

Prior to the establishment of the trust the Boston Assembly had been asked to look after this house for the National Assembly. The house was rented and the Boston Assembly has continued to care for it for the Trustees. The house is in need of certain repairs which will be given attention. There is a problem of an existing right of way located on adjoining property, formerly owned by Miss Wilson which she bequeathed to a relative. The Trustees have offered to give a release of this right of way to the adjoining owner for a financial consideration sufficient to provide a new driveway on the other side of the house located on the land belonging to the trust property and for the alterations in the house necessary to permit the delivery of coal and supplies. This matter has not yet been concluded by our attorney.

Fire insurance for three years was renewed last year at a cost of $28.75. Taxes for this year of $191.25, sidewalk assessment of $8.64 and water bills of $16.69 have been paid. The Boston Assembly reports $48.50 on hand, received from rent since May, 1936.

The Trustees referred to Shoghi Effendi the question whether the property should be retained and developed for Baha'i purposes as a memorial to 'Abdu'l-Baha or whether it should be sold, and received the following reply: "The Guardian does not advise your Assembly to sell the Malden property, as the Master has definitely stated in the Tablet which you have quoted to 'take care of that house, because the light of the love of God was ignited in it.' By renting the house the N. S. A. can for the present avoid the expenses entailed by its repairs and upkeep.

This brief summary of the origin, development and management of these sacred trusts will give some idea of the responsibility placed upon your Trustees in their administration. An added obligation incurred by the Trustees is that they, both jointly and severally, may be held personally liable for any damage judgment that might arise from injuries sustained by the public on these properties. It has been necessary, therefore, for protection of themselves and the Cause to carry both Public Liability and Workmen's Compensation insurance. Since the examination of the insurance in force from 1934 on all trust properties, during the past three years, the following savings have been effected through the underwriting revision and consolidation of certain risks:

that the National Bahá'í Fund must furnish approximately $1,000.00 a month to carry on these trust properties. These figures do not include the school activities or any of the National Assembly obligations, therefore when an average of twenty Assemblies, or 35% of the total number, do not contribute to the Fund each month, your Treasurer has grave cause for worry as the bills come to him. This is your problem. You are the joint owners of all these trustee ships and moreover you have the wealth of the Spiritual Kingdom. In the near future you will wish to start the next stage of Temple construction, the covering of the main gallery of the Temple in order to hasten the fulfillment of the prophetic utterance of 'Abdu'l-Bahá: "When that divine edifice is completed, a most wonderful and thrilling motion will appear in the world of existence." Toward this end Mr. Earley is planning to submit a proposal for resumption of the external decoration on a basis enabling the work to go forward slowly and at a moderate annual cost.

Your trustees are confident that you will achieve the destiny promised by Bahá'u'lláh,—that of ushering in the New World Order—by the establishment of the institutions upon which it must rest, with a deeper realization of the Guardian's counsel that your voluntary contributions are an indispensable medium for the growth and expansion of the Cause and "constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotions and attachment to the Cause."

Trustees for the benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly

“PROSECUTE UNINTERRUPTEDLY TEACHING CAMPAIGN . . . RESUME WITH INFLEXIBLE DETERMINATION EXTERIOR ORNAMENTATION ENTIRE STRUCTURE TEMPLE”

The Guardian’s Call to the American Bahá’í Community 1937-1944

Shoghi Effendi’s called Message to the 1937 Convention is nothing else than a call to the entire Bahá’í community of the United States and Canada to assure the triumph of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh upon earth. The powers of ignorance and hate approach their climax of devastation, long foretold in all the Sacred Scriptures. Upon the American believers rests the supreme obligation to lay the eternal foundation of unity, devotion, enlightenment and world order. From this hour to the end of the first Bahá’í century the sacred task must go forward uninterruptedly and with inflexible determination.

The Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh have become firmly established in the hearts of the American believers. The basic Institutions of the Faith have been forged and developed. The true qualities of faith, devotion and sacrifice are fully shown. The habits and customs which raise the Bahá’í community high above the dissensions of the non-believing and collapsing world are faithfully practiced in more than seventy local communities. Tasks that at first appeared impossible have been achieved. To the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh, to the perfect Life and creative Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, our beloved Guardian has added a complete explanation of our duties and responsibilities in the field of action and service. He has interpreted not only the significant meanings of the Will and Testament but also the hopeless condition of civilization apart from the Divine Plan. There is no longer any need for hesitation, doubt nor concern with secondary matters. Our supreme task coincides with the time of supreme human trouble. It remains only to learn the necessary details of the Seven-Year Plan and proceed immediately upon the first step of its full consummation.

“FORMULATE FEASIBLE SEVEN-YEAR PLAN INSURE SUCCESS TEMPLE ENTERPRISE”

The outgoing National Spiritual Assembly recommended that the incoming Assembly incorporate the sum of $19,000 for a new Temple Construction Fund in its Annual Budget. That amount is no longer adequate, in view of the Guardian’s Convention Message and the munificent contribution of $100,000 now assured.

The National Spiritual Assembly, therefore, after consultation with the Delegates and prayerful consideration of the greater opportunities revealed to the American Bahá’í community, has adopted the following Budget for the year beginning May 1, 1937 and concluding April 30, 1938, when the next Convention will be in session.—

1. For administrative expense, for National Committees, and for the maintenance and operation of all Bahá’í properties, including Temple, Green Acre, Summer School at Geyserville, Wilhelm property (National Office) at West Englewood, the Malden house sacred to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and for regular contributions to the International Fund at Haifa ...............................$30,000

2. For promotion of Teaching in North America, South America, Mexico and the West Indies, through the National, Regional and Inter-America Teaching Committees, under the guidance of the Divine Plan .................................$30,000

3. For cost of Temple exterior decoration, the share allotted to the first of the seven years $150,000 Total Annual Budget $220,000 Less donation already assured .................................$100,000 Balance to be contributed before April 30, 1938 $120,000

This measures the degree of our material sacrifice. As the continuance of Teaching throughout the seven years requires equal emphasis with Temple construction, the devotion of the friends, the readiness of pioneers to arise and settle in new regions, and the unified efforts of the Teaching Committees, Spiritual Assemblies, groups and isolated Bahá’ís to fulfil the Divine Plan represents an order of inner consecration which Bahá’u’lláh alone can estimate.

FUTURE TEMPLE CONTRACTS

The successive contracts required in order to complete the exterior ornamentation will be placed as rapidly as funds permit. The full estimated cost of future work is $350,000 for external decoration.

Expert advise and experience, both Bahá’í and non-Bahá’í, will be consulted at every stage of the building program, to assure the utmost economy and efficiency in the work. No construction will henceforth proceed until the full cost of the contract is already in hand. The Budget announced above therefore represents full and final costs and expenses to be incurred this year by the National Fund, under the preliminary estimates before the members of the National Spiritual Assembly at this time.

NATIONAL BAHÁ’I FUND

The believers are reminded of the Guardian’s words concerning the National Fund: “As the activities of the American Bahá’í community expand, and its worldwide prestige correspondingly increases, the institution of the National Fund, the bedrock on which all other institutions must necessarily rest and be established, acquires added importance, and should be increasingly supported by the entire body of the believers, both in their individual capacities, and through their collective efforts, whether organized as groups or as local Assemblies. The supply of funds, in support of the National Treasury, constitutes, at the present time, the life-blood of these nascent institutions you are laboring to erect. Its importance, cannot, surely, be overestimated. Untold blessings shall no doubt crown every effort directed to that end.”

The experience of the National Spiritual Assembly suggests the following explanations concerning certain aspects of that Fund.

1. While the National Fund has different classifications of expense, it is a unit as regards the receipt of funds. Contributions made out to the National Bahá’í Fund unlabelled in reality go to sustain every activity. If contributions are labelled for this or that particular purpose, the balance of the work might be destroyed. The Temple cannot be constructed if the administration of the Faith is crippled by the lack of funds. Our collective responsibilities stand or fall as a whole. To fulfill the Seven-Year Plan, the full amount of each annual Budget must be donated.

2. The proportion of local donations used for local expenses, and the proportion sent to the National Fund, is a delicate question which every Spiritual Assembly must carefully consider. Local activities are rapidly increasing, and this is an indication of increased spiritual power, but the American Bahá’í community is an indivisible unit in relation to the Guardian’s Seven-Year Plan, and not a few score separate local sovereignties. Success in the National undertaking will establish every local Bahá’í community on an impregnable foundation, while failure in that larger enterprise would surely weaken fatally the spiritual life of the many local communities and groups.

3. It is for the local Spiritual Assemblies to raise a high standard of collective response to the new Plan and gather together the united support of the entire community. Each Assembly stands as a Trustee in the enterprise, a strong pillar in the consecrated edifice. The National Spiritual Assembly, however, while turning to the local Assemblies for powerful reinforcement, believes that the Guardian’s call is directed to every individual Bahá’í in North America, young and old, newly confirmed or matured in the Cause, member of a Bahá’í community or isolated and alone. The spirit of confirmation in action knows no frontiers and no separation. All are committed to the sacred task, all will share in the ultimate triumph.

4. Resumption of Temple construction does not require the raising of the entire $350,000. The work will be done by successive contracts, and no contract will be placed until the amount called for by it is in the National Fund. But unless the $350,000 has been contributed before the fifth or sixth year of the Seven-Year Plan, the actual construction can not be completed by May 23, 1944. The sooner, therefore, that work begins, and the more rapidly each successive contract is placed, the more assurance will we give the Guardian that the American Bahá’í community has risen to the height of his most urgent desire.

NO SACRIFICE TOO GREAT FOR COMMUNITY SO ABUNDANTLY BLESSED, (SO) REPEATEDLY HONORED

The words quoted above are the Guardian’s final comment on the Seven-Year Plan. He alone knows the full power of that quickening Spirit which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá infused into the soul of America during His journey across the continent twenty-five years ago. He alone can estimate our collective capacity to establish the new World Order in all the countries of the Americas during the next seven years, while at the same time completing the exterior decoration of the House of Worship. Since, therefore, Shoghi Effendi has measured the sacred task, we may have abundant faith that the task will be fully performed, the mission completed, the victory assured.

As for the response already made to these plans by the Delegates at the Twenty-Ninth Annual Convention, as representatives of all local Bahá’í communities, the spirit of the Convention has been expressed in the following resolution:

“The delegates present at this Twenty-Ninth Annual Bahá’í Convention, mindful of the Guardian’s successive appeals for the fulfillment of America’s spiritual mission, and his repeated warnings concerning the perilous condition of the world, pray for purity, humility and sacrifice to rededicate ourselves to the achievement of the holy task before the end of the first century of the Bahá’í Era.

“United under the Guardian’s sacred leadership we turn to Bahá’u’lláh and implore the assistance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit for ourselves and our fellow-believers throughout the American continent.”

The National Spiritual Assembly will report each step of progress to all the Bahá’ís. All will be made to feel actually present and personally active in the heroic labor. May each believer pray for complete dedication, and day by day renew his or her appeal to Bahá’u’lláh for the privilege of contributing to the worldwide Triumph of God’s holy Faith!

“O my friend! The undying Fire which the Lord of the Kingdom hath kindled in the midst of the holy Tree is burning fiercely in the midst of heart of the world. The conflagration it will provoke will envelop the whole earth. Its blazing flames will illuminate its peoples and kindreds. All the signs have been revealed; every prophetic allusion hath been manifested. Whatever hath been enshrined in all the scriptures of the past hath been made evident. To doubt or hesitate is no more possible. . . . Time is pressing. The Divine Charger is impatient, and can tarry no longer. Ours is the duty to rush forward and, ere it is too late, win the victory.”—‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

Devotedly your co-workers,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

LETTER FROM THE GUARDIAN
To the National Spiritual Assembly

The Subject of Esperanto

Regarding the subject of Esperanto; it should be made clear to the believers that while the teaching of that language has been repeatedly encouraged by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, there is no reference either from Him or from Bahá'u'lláh that can make us believe that it will necessarily develop into the international auxiliary language of the future. Bahá'u'lláh has specified in His writings that such a language will either have to be chosen from one of the existing languages, or an entirely new one should be created to serve as a medium of exchange between the nations and peoples of the world. Pending this final choice, the Bahá'ís are advised to study Esperanto only in consideration of the fact that the learning of this language can considerably facilitate inter-communication between individuals, groups and Assemblies throughout the Bahá'í world in the present stage of the evolution of the Faith.

June 4, 1937.

THE MATURITY OF FAITH

During this year marking the Twentieth-Fifth Anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's journey through America, the older believers are reminded afresh of the countless daily incidents by which He revealed the reality of the spiritual life to Bahá'ís and inquirers alike. Many of the friends recall particularly His oft-repeated greeting: "Are you happy?" and feel that in this question the Master conveyed a most glorious truth.

Happiness in the sense of inner steadfastness, calm and unshakable peace is surely a direct evidence that faith has been attained. While the soul is yet susceptible to agitation, constant change and alteration of conditions, the degree of faith may be pure but betokens that early childhood when contagious disease is impossible to resist.

Now that the Guardian, in the words cited in this issue of BAHÁ'Í NEWS, calls the American believers to the station of heroism, we must redouble our personal and collective effort to attain maturity in our inner lives. If we can for ever leave behind those hidden, unresolved agitations that occasionally arise to confuse every ardent believer, learning how to confront ourselves more frankly, and becoming more critical of ourselves than of others, the capacity for heroic achievement will be reinforced throughout America. The spiritual life cannot forever consist of negative reactions from other individuals or external situations; we cannot afford to depend any longer upon others' praise and encouragement; but seek to attain within ourselves a fixed determination and resolve so powerful that under all circumstances it will remain independent of all save God.

The non-believing society around us is rent with division, and the atmos-
Baha'i News

The intensive teaching effort required under the Divine Plan was initiated last year by the appointment of larger Regional Teaching Committees under the detailed plan published in Baha'i News of June, 1936.

The valuable experience which has been acquired, and the grave emphasis repeatedly given the matter of teaching by the Guardian, now makes it possible to summarize the methods and objectives of our work for the coming year in the following statement. The members of Regional Teaching Committees, and the individual believers throughout the United States and Canada, are urged to acquaint themselves with its provisions, that the work may go forward with ever-increasing power and success.

1. The Regional Teaching Committees are not to be concerned with the particular region.

2. The initiative of individual believers to engage in active teaching service under the direction of their local Assembly or their Regional Teaching Committee is the dynamic force released by the Divine Plan. The entire American Baha'i community must be stirred to its depths by zeal for teaching if the goal is to be attained.

3. Individual activities and committee plans alike should conform to wisdom, so that the means may be adapted to the ends. The aim is the confirmation of souls, not the organization of public meetings which produce no real result. Each Assembly and Regional Committee is to encourage and at the same time guide the individual volunteers, while individuals who have courage, zeal and ardor are to consult and endeavor to work under careful plans based upon consideration of the situation as a whole and the ultimate best interests of the Faith.

4. The utmost honor and praise will go to those who can arise as pioneers and settle in new regions in order to establish a permanent Baha'i community. The National Fund will assist as much as possible in the preliminary expense, but the pioneer must expect to become self-sustaining after a few months.

5. Intimate fireside groups, and wise, continuous personal association have proved to be the best means of confirming souls. The place of public meetings in a teaching plan is to attract interest for a permanent study class. The whole plan should be thought out in advance.

6. As funds permit, a budget will be given the National and Regional Teaching Committees, and further appropriations voted from time to time. The National Fund does not make appropriations for teaching work carried on by local Assemblies. A budget of Free Literature is also provided for all these Committees. The National and Regional Committees are to prepare plans and report their financial needs from time to time. A Regional Committee is authorized to spend up to $25.00 on any one project on its own initiative, but projects costing more than $25.00 should first be referred to and approved by the National Teaching Committee. The National Teaching Committee is authorized to spend up to $100.00 for any one project on its own authority; for projects costing more than $100.00, the approval of the N. S. A. should first be secured.

7. Traveling teachers who place literature in Libraries are to obtain the books from the Free Literature Budget of the National or Regional Teaching Committee, depending upon the jurisdiction in each case. The National Library Committee does not deal with traveling teachers but only with local Spiritual Assemblies in this matter of placing the literature in Libraries.

8. A distinction has been made between public and private teaching. The N. S. A. would like to have all public meetings outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies conducted by teachers who have received the recognition and approval of the National or Regional Teaching Committee. Such meetings are also to be under the jurisdiction of the Teaching Committee concerned with the particular region.

9. The following list of pamphlets has been approved and recommended for use as free literature: A World Religion, by Shoghi Effendi; The Goal of a New World Order, by Shoghi Effendi; The Unfoldment of World Civilization, by Shoghi Effendi; What Is the Baha'i Faith?, by J. E. Esslemont;

10. The form of letter of authorization to be given to traveling teachers by the National and Regional Teaching Committees is to read as follows: “This letter presents (name) . . . who is conducting Baha'i classes and public meetings in . . . (locality) under the direction of the National (or Regional) Teaching Committee of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.” (signed by Committee Secretary). In this connection it is pointed out that the letters of credentials given traveling believers by their local Assembly present the believer as a voting member of a Baha'i community, and do not take the place of the authorization given by a Teaching Committee of the N. S. A.

Functions of National Teaching Committee

A. The preparation of general teaching material and of general policies and plans.

B. The supervision of regional activities through the Regional Teaching Committees.
C. The direction of teaching activities in all areas of the United States and Canada not allocated to Regional Teaching Committees.

D. Enrollment of isolated believers.

E. Summarizing and compiling for the National Spiritual Assembly and Baha'i News monthly or periodic reports on teaching activities received from Local Spiritual Assemblies.

F. Routing of teachers between regions.

G. Preparation and supervision of national teaching budget, expenditures and plans to be approved by the National Spiritual Assembly before becoming effective.

Functions of Regional Teaching Committees:

A. The extension of teaching work to areas within the regions which have no Assemblies or groups. The Regional Committee is to exercise initiative in the areas outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies.

B. Encouraging and stimulating teaching activities of isolated believers.

C. Rendering assistance to groups and preparing groups for the election of a Spiritual Assembly.

D. The routing of teachers outside of Assembly responsibility and within local region.

E. Cooperation with local Assemblies in organizing teaching circuits for isolated believers and groups in new areas.

F. The coordination of Inter-Community Conferences.

In order to clarify the functions of the National and Regional Committees, it is recorded that each Regional Committee is authorized to make decisions involving action and in doing so need not consult the National Teaching Committee. It is also recorded that the Regional Committees have no administrative authority. They are to assist the local Assemblies in every possible way and also make possible a coordination of Inter-Assembly activity. They have no jurisdiction over the teaching activities of Spiritual Assemblies.

Inasmuch as Local Assemblies are to assume all responsibility in connection with their local teaching work, the main duties of the Regional Committees will be to assist groups, isolated believers, and open new areas within their respective regions to the Faith.

In areas not assigned to Regional Committees the National Teaching Committee's main function is of similar nature. Therefore this work can best be carried on under a general national plan and in this regard Regional Committees will report to the National Teaching Committee. This does not in any way change the authority of the Regional Committees to make local decisions without consultation with the National Teaching Committee.

ANNUAL REPORT

Inter-America Committee

The initial year of the Inter-America Committee has widened many avenues leading to a consciousness of the Baha'i Faith. Inspired by our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, watched over with unflagging zeal by the National Spiritual Assembly, with the believers eager and willing to sacrifice home and country to teach and spread the Cause, our experience has demonstrated anew the power of achievement that lies within the Message of Baha'u'llah.

A little more than a year has passed since Mr. and Mrs. Dudley M. Blakeley sailed from New York to Haiti, Curacao, Venezuela, Trinidad and British Guiana. A few hours each way were spent in Trinidad and resulted in an excellent article appearing in the Trinidad Guardian. Only a short visit was made by the ship to Haiti but long enough to perceive the desperate need of this land. Books and pamphlets were distributed to officials of the Royal Netherlands Line. But, writes Mrs. Blakeley, our main objective was British Guiana and arriving there we found the land an open sesame to the Faith. Precisely at the hour of the New Year's Feast in New York and while prayers for our success were being said, the first newspaper reporters were interviewing us and from that moment all doors opened to receive the Divine Message. The first week was spent in making arrangements for radio talks, newspaper articles, lectures for clubs, groups, churches and individuals. By the second week the two broadcasts were under way, one on Science and Religion, the other on the World's Literature and Music and how they have promoted oneness in the human race. Public lectures were beginning at the East Indian Society, the Moravian Church, and to Masons and members of the Administration and educational professions. The third week saw the formation of a study group, over thirty men and women drawn from divers religions. We met in a room lent by the President of the East Indian Society, Mr. Gajraj. After our departure this group continued to meet every nineteen days and we have endeavored to keep in close contact with them. On our return trip to Caracas we called on Mr. Henriquez, a member of the Legislative Assembly, who had done much to assist Leonora Holsapple; we left with him additional literature in Spanish, Portuguese and English as he continually speaks to his people of the great principles announced to the world by the Prophet Baha'u'llah.

In January of 1937 Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gregory undertook a journey to the Island of Haiti. It is impossible to exaggerate the ignorance, superstition and lack of unity existing in this land. Undoubtedly these devoted souls organized meetings twice a week and held them whether any one came or not, a true Baha'i attitude. As always in strange lands one cannot see ahead, taking one step at a time and groping forward blindly one is often of the belief that no permanent result can follow and yet through the Holy Spirit results invariably do. Here Louise Gregory's knowledge of the French language was of inestimable value. Quoting from Louis's letters, he writes: "Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, a champion of Haitian freedom, received me with great courtesy as well as the director of the Haitian Hospital and a number of his assistants. Among those who are listening to the Message and studying the books are two men who have held the rank of statesmen, though now out of power, a happy circumstance that gives them the leisure to look more deeply into the Baha'i Faith. A distinguished physician, two members of the present Haitian Cabinet, several members of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, heads of schools, the American Consul and two sons of the late Bishop of Haiti are among those who have availed themselves of this opportunity to study the Baha'i Principles. The peasantry, who number about 95 per cent of the population, are difficult to approach because of their intense superstition, their ignorance, and their Creole dialect, however we made friends with them whenever possible." In another letter Louis writes: "A group of humble but very sincere souls have been organized to carry on the work and with constant supervision through correspondence bid fair to become the first Spiritual Assembly in Haiti. We have one..."

teacher of rare ability as well as three others who will be active in teaching and in circulating the literature. Some Answered Questions in French is being circulated. One of the teachers, a lady of wide influence, and one who has freed herself from the trammels of rituals, replied to Louise’s injunction to be wise and not give too much, “feeding babies upon milk” replied, “Never fear! I shall not even give them milk in the beginning, only sugar and water.”

Early in their visit to Haiti Louise wrote: “This is a Catholic country and I can well imagine that to those who have no other outlook, the Baha’i teachings, with their fire consuming veils of superstition and prejudice, may be a great test and the authorities may feel that they are protecting themselves in not being willing at such a time to have the public mind agitated with new ideas.” This proved to be a prophetic statement since as they became established and the authorities became aware of their mission, they were refused permission to hold public meetings.

Before turning from this region I might add that I passed through Trinidad in January, 1937, but at the time was too ill to go ashore. However, I wrote an article for the Guardian and Mr. Mathews and my nurse took it ashore and handed it to the reporter, with what result is unknown to us.

The activities of South America have been growing in volume and importance in many countries, and though almost entirely Catholic, many English and Americans go there because of the great mines.

In a journey taken by Mrs. Nellie S. French, member of the National Spiritual Assembly, she writes: “Arriving at Lima, Peru, I was met by Mrs. Dodge and though we were unable to see the editors of the newspapers, we made several calls, among them one to the National Library and had a most interesting conversation with the Librarian and placed a copy of Esslemont in Spanish in the library. Our next port of call was Valparaiso, Chili. The reporter who came to the ship got little of the Baha’i idea. However, Valparaiso proved to be interesting through an introduction given me by Miss Edna True to a prominent Chilean family. I mentioned my disappointment over the article published by the first reporter and our host said that if I could write an article in Spanish, he would see that it was printed. I must, he added, send my photograph with the article. By selecting certain paragraphs and combining them with the Principles, I managed to make a readable article which later appeared exactly as I had written it. Magallanes, on the straits of Magellan, the most southerly city of the world, was our next port, quite unexpectedly I found a German professor who came on board with a group of children, talking with him I found that he was an Esperantist, had been in Los Angeles and knew Dr. and Mrs. With he had heard about the Cause and I gave him a copy of Esslemont in Spanish. He received it with evident pleasure and gave me his address that I might send him other books. Upon our arrival in Sao Paulo, Brazil, I presented a letter to Mr. Derron, the manager of the Portland Cement Co. He proved himself most courteous and though because of illness I was unable to make the trip to Sao Paulo, Mr. Derron responded to my letters. I have written him several times and shall send The Baha’i World, as I have asked him to write an article for Vol. VII. He had visited the Temple, had purchased books and is certainly very hopeful.

“The call made at Bahia, Brazil, this quaint and interesting town situated so close to the equator, was the high spot of my journey. Miss Holsapple came on board to find me. I shall never forget the warmth of her greeting and the happiness which she expressed to have the pleasure of being with a believer again. We went to three offices of the daily papers there, and were cordially received and in two of the offices a brief interview was given, as the third editor was not in, I gave Leonora an article to translate into Portuguese. Thus we hoped to have at least a brief article in each one of the papers.

“We proceeded to Miss Holsapple’s house where I met and spoke to a group of nine women. Three of these seemed particularly attracted and nearly all had studied with Leonora. They are planning to form a study group. They hope to raise money for her school, which she started about a year ago. This is one of the outstanding Baha’i services. Though laboring under financial stress, with her health none too robust because of the intense tropical heat, Leonora has succeeded in spite of her regular work to save sufficient means to rent a lovely little villa where she has placed seventeen girls, between the ages of six to thirteen. These children were taken from the streets. They were receiving no education, were forlorn and in many cases being abused. The children are cared for by a Brazilian girl and her mother who have long been believers and give their services to this work. The little girls are so obedient and so serious in the performance of their tasks that it was wonderful to see. Miss Holsapple also furnishes a teacher who visits the school regularly and instructs the children. Upon questioning, I found that the Guardian had not been informed of this wonderful work and this is only another evidence of the modesty and humility of this wonderful servant of God.

“A very live interest was manifested on the ship wherever I was able to speak of the Cause, I found among the cruisers a Swedish gentleman known of the Baha’i Cause and had with him copies of the Seven Valleys as well as the Hidden Words, which I frequently found him reading. He remained over in New York and attended the meeting at the Center on the 28th of March.”

On my own way to Rio de Janeiro I spent the day with Leonora and followed the same program. I feel that the time will come when other teachers will join Leonora and then she may be free to go as far afield as Rio de Janeiro.

In November Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart of Utica, New York, had been chosen as a delegate to attend the People’s Conference in Buenos Aires. This was a splendid opportunity to combine with our Baha’i teaching campaign, as Mrs. Stewart was born in South America and naturally speaks Spanish as her native tongue. She was most enthusiastic to undertake a teaching trip and after she left, in consultation with the National Spiritual Assembly it was decided to ask her to remain after the Conference and meet me in Rio the middle of January. This she was delighted to do, and when I met her, she told me that the work she did after the Conference was for more important, and that it would have been impossible to work thus freely during the period of the sessions. She found, as I mentioned in my visit, that many Germans were attracted to the Cause, and so she went from a Spanish group to a German one and again talked to the Americans. She made a unique place for herself and started classes that she feels certain will result in an Assembly later on. Knowing as we all do the importance of placing this vast continent under the Teaching of Bahá’u’lláh, and hearing from our Guardian that this is the moment for the unfoldment of the Divine Plan, we are thrilled beyond measure at such a prospect and already see the curtain rising on The New Day. This devout believer traveled from Buenos Aires to Rio by way of Santo Paulo where she found an isolated believer, Mrs. Krug, who was overwhelmed with delight to meet again a Bahá’í. For me, this was a piece of great good fortune, completing the addresses for Bahá’í books in Brazil. I asked Mrs. Stewart to represent the Inter-America Committee at the Convention, which she did with outstanding results. In her own words she writes of her labors in Buenos Aires:

“October 30, 1936 will ever be a date of great importance in my memory. On this day I sailed from New York to attend the great People’s Peace Conference which convened in Buenos Aires, Argentina, during November. What a rich privilege to carry to our neighbors in the twenty Latin-American nations the deep desire of the people of the United States for peace and understanding. I carried also the great Message of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh, that great vision for the Unity of all nations, and of all humanity by the establishment of justice in all the institutions of a Divine Civilization. Many, many were the doors found open and waiting, many the eager listeners who were readily attracted by the Divine Word, by the profound understanding of the ills of our distracted world and the clear exposition of the remedies needed to establish security, harmony and Peace, as found in the Bahá’í writings. Some had heard of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s historic journey to Europe and the United States and expressed a sincere appreciation that they also were to be included in this great plan for a New World Order.

Many group meetings were held where deep discussion continued far into the morning hours and people from many, many nations heard the Message for the first time in that great city of over three million inhabitants. Literature was eagerly received whenever offered and much placed in libraries. The official Inter-American Conference held in December was also attended and many opportunities were found to give Bahá’í literature to leaders from many of the American Nations.

“The booming cannon of Spain could almost be heard in South America and in that sad tragedy there seemed to be included all the grave ills of a decadent age. Many hearts were saddened and perplexed and the questions of how humanity was to ever escape from these recurring calamities were on the lips of all thoughtful persons. Bahá’u’lláh’s love for all peoples, His divine understanding and vision was a glorious Revelation to these seeking souls.

“Shoghi Effendi’s oft-repeated admonition that the Bahá’ís of the United States assume responsibility to carry the Message to these waiting nations had stirred the American Bahá’ís to a spirit of service and truly, ‘The fields are white with the harvest and the laborers are few.’ The bond of unity between true seekers and believers was demonstrated and every week brings letters asking for more material, in Spanish; for the answers to many questions friends in Brazil were equally interested, though only twelve days were spent there.

“Contacts must be maintained with these new Seekers and it has been a great joy to share this hope, this assurance of God’s Divine Plan with our dear friends in South America.”

Meanwhile Mexico was being stirred into action through the dynamic personality of Miss Beatrice Irwin. She left Los Angeles in January and at the moment of the writing of this report is still in Mexico City. Quoting from her letters we read: February 21, “Already I have a lecture booked on the Bahá’í Peace Plan with the International Club. On that occasion I should like to show pictures of the Temple. I have talked to the President of Public Relations, he has promised to secure for me a hearing before social and economic groups and has given me a letter to the President of the University. . . . The letter that I brought with me from Dr. Hewett, School of American Research in Santa Fé, is proving a valuable passport . . . . I have not as yet made contact with the press as I am endeavoring to inform myself as to their political standing,” (and I may add as Chairman, this is an important and necessary measure when you are a Bahá’í traveler in foreign lands). Quoting from a following letter February 22, “Interviewed National University also made two visits with President of Madhu Academy, a leading girl’s school and she, the President, has asked me to address the school.” From a letter of March 8, “Contacts with brief mention of the Cause to the following city magnates: Mr. Pierce of Bank of Mexico, Mr. Stallfirth of German Bank, Mr. Canran, Director of City Planning and best of all to Mr. Polacheck, aide to Dr. Kybíl, Cechoslovakian Minister, with the result that I have received an invitation to take part in Masaryk Celebration on occasion of his 87th birthday. The association which Martha Root formed here, the fine campaign that she made throughout Cecho-Slovakia makes this an outstanding opportunity.” May 23, “Splendid publicity for the celebration of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit to America with His picture. Also the Central News which is the leading book shop here, having fine window space on the Ave Juarez, a street like Fifth Avenue, New York, is very cooperative. I am collecting material for a scrap-book to send to Shoghi Effendi and wish to conserve all its material while I am making it. I have good news, weekly Study Group formed to meet in my apartment. Greetings in this day of rejoicing, since it was not possible to arrange special activities for the day, this letter will be my commemoration; this humble standard bearer of His joy is thankful for much and hopeful for increase of spiritual Springtide in many directions from the seeds already planted.”

This article culled from a larger activity shows the spirit as well as the actual work that is going forward. They do not and cannot tell of every contact or teaching program but are indicative of the spirit that is urging forward an army of souls, standing ready and eager for service, each with special qualifications and all animated with one central idea to spread the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and bring mankind into the wider knowledge and the greater happiness that such knowledge will engender. That our Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, directs our energies and focalizes our actions upon certain constructive measures, prays daily for our efforts and points with glowing fervor to results has caused those feeble actions to increase, grow stronger and more effective. May the coming year prove not only a continuation, but a multiplication of our services to the Cause of God.

DR. Y. S. TSAO
Letter from Agnes Alexander
The sad news has reached me from Shanghai that our beloved Chinese brother, Dr. Y. S. Tsaó, died suddenly in his car on the way to his home, on February 8th, at 4:30 p.m. Our brother, Mr. M. H. A. Oskouli, writes me that Dr. Tsao had not been sick and also he asked me to write the Baha'i Magazine and ask if Dr. Tsao's picture could be published with a short article.

The work which Dr. Tsao has done for the Cause of God in China is an everlasting monument. It was lie who translated Esslemont's book into Chinese. He was working on the translation of "Some Answered Questions." About a month ago, his helper, Mr. Tang, died and so there was a setback and now Dr. Tsao has flown to the Kingdom of Bahá'u'lláh, as Mr. Oskouli writes me.

Dr. Tsao first heard of the Bahá'í Faith through Martha Root when he was the President of Tsing Hua College, the Boyer Intemity College. Martha bravely went out to the College without any previous introduction, but was received most kindly by Dr. Tsao and his wife, who is Swedish by birth, but American naturalized. Afterwards Dr. and Mrs. Tsao entertained us in their home and invited me to speak in the Auditorium of the College on the Bahá'í Faith to the whole student body, and a second time he called a meeting for any students who might be interested to meet and talk with us.

After eight years of service at Tsing Hua College, Peiping, Dr. and Mrs. Tsao moved to Shanghai, where they have lived since, and where they have formed the bond with the Persian Bahá'ís who also live in Shanghai. Dr. Tsao was educated at Yale University and also studied at Harvard.

May the Bahá'ís pray for this wonderful soul who has so suddenly left us, and also for his devoted wife who must now carry on alone.

In his love and service,
Agnes B. Alexander.

GREETING TO ESPERANTO JUBILEE CONGRESS

Mr. Joseph Leahy, Secretary,
Esperanto Association of North America,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Mr. Leahy:

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada send their greetings and good wishes to the Jubilee Congress of the Esperanto Association of North America.

It is our hope that the noble labor upon which the Congress is engaged, that of drawing the nations of the world closer together by means of a common auxiliary language, will soon receive the appreciation which such an endeavor deserves. The Bahá'í teachings emphatically declare that there can be no consummation of World Peace nor realization of international unity without the factor of an international auxiliary language. The Bahá'ís in more than forty countries are today promoting this important truth.

The National Spiritual Assembly are pleased to announce to the Esperantists that they have invited Miss Zamenhof to come to the United States this autumn as their guest. Every opportunity will be extended to the national and local societies to avail themselves of Miss Zamenhof's services as an Esperantist teacher and lecturer.

Very truly yours,
Horace Holley,
Secretary.

"TRUTHS WHICH LIE AT THE BASIS OF OUR FAITH"

Excerpts from the Guardian's Interpretation of the Fundamental Teachings

It should also be borne in mind that, great as is the power manifested by this Revelation and however vast the range of the Dispensation its Author has inaugurated, it emphatically repudiates the claim to be regarded as the final revelation of God's will and purpose for mankind. To hold such a conception of its character and functions would be tantamount to a betrayal of its cause and a denial of its truth. It must necessarily conflict with the fundamental principles which constitute the bedrock of Bahá'í belief, the principle that religious truth is not absolute but relative, that Divine Revelation is orderly, continuous and progressive and not spasmodic or final. Indeed, the categorical rejection by the followers of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh of the claim to finality which any religious system inaugurated by the Prophets of the past may advance is as clear and emphatic as their own refusal to claim that same finality for the Revelation with which they stand identified. "To believe that all revelation is ended, that the portals of Divine mercy are closed, that from the day-springs of eternal holiness no sun shall rise again, that the ocean of everlasting beauty is forever stilled, and that out of the tabernacle of ancient glory the Messengers of God have ceased to be made manifest" must constitute in the eyes of every follower of the Faith a grave, an inexcusable departure from one of its most cherished and fundamental principles.

In the light of these clear and conclusive statements it is our clear duty to make it indubitably evident to every seeker after truth that from "the beginning that hath no beginning" the Prophets of the one, the unknowable God, including Bahá'u'lláh Himself, have all, as the channels of God's grace, as the exponents of His unity, as the mirrors of His light and the revealers of His purpose, been commissioned to unfold to mankind an ever-increasing measure of His truth, of His inscrutable will and Divine guidance, and will continue to "the end that hath no end" to vouchsafe still fuller and mightier revelations of His limitless power and glory.—From "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh."

MR. AND MRS. W. S. MAXWELL ACKNOWLEDGE LETTERS AND CABLEGRAMS

Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell have been unable to make acknowledgment of the many letters and cablegrams they have received in connection with the marriage of their daughter. They have requested the National Spiritual Assembly to express their thanks, and explain that personal replies will be made as soon as possible.

NEWS FROM IRAN AND INDIA

(Reprinted from Circular Letter issued by the Spiritual Assembly of Haifa.)

Mirza 'Abdu'lláh Motlaq is one of the most active Bahá'í teachers in Persia. Recently, according to instructions from the National Spiritual Assembly, he visited Meshed, Sabzvar and Nishapur. He writes to our Beloved Guardian that he found the believers everywhere in utmost unity, upholding the sacred principles of the Faith with a joy and a zeal that were contagious to all who came in contact with them. Passionately devoted to our Beloved Guardian and rigorously following the directions of their Spiritual Assembly, the believers of Meshed are serving the Cause with great energy. Their activities are spread over several fields of service.

The believers had been forbidden by Government orders to hold meetings or assemblies of any kind. A week after the arrival of Mirza Motlaq in Meshed, the believers took this opportunity to convoke in groups in order to greet the visitor. At the same time there was a marked change in the attitude of the Most of his relations are fanatical Moslems. Three children of his own and one of his sisters together with some distant relatives are the only Bahá'ís in his family. His Moslem relatives protested vehemently against a Bahá'í burial and insisted that it should take place according to Mohammedan rites. They actually prepared a grave for him in a Moslem cemetery. But his daughter firmly and courageously maintained that as her father was a Bahá'í, it was his wish and her own that he should be buried in the Bahá'í cemetery and in accordance with the Bahá'í burial service. Repeatedly and energetically the said relatives tried to persuade her to change her mind. Indomitable as ever, she finally succeeded in her demand.

The most remarkable fact about this sad event was its dignity, its impressiveness and the note of triumph that it struck for a Faith that asserts itself to-day more than ever before in the face of official opposition in the country of its origin.

We gather from a detailed account written by the Spiritual Assembly of Tíhrán that on the morning of the funeral one of the most important avenues of Tíhrán was thronged with believers and non-believers. The presence of numerous officers and army representatives delegated by the War Ministry was very conspicuous. The casket was placed on a special car decorated with a crown of flowers. A vast concourse of mourners followed on foot for some distance. The Minister of War himself, upon arriving, left his motor-car and joined the procession, thus adding to the great wonder and amazement of the crowd of non-believers that had lined the street. Tíhrán had seldom witnessed such an imposing scene. Shortly after, all took specially ordered cars that were waiting and followed the hearse to the cemetery outside the city where the Bahá'í funeral service took place. Bahá'í tablets and prayers were chanted. A number of officers and other non-believers who had accompanied the procession all the way were also present.

While this event marks a great loss to the Bahá'ís, yet they cannot but feel thankful that this bereavement was the occasion of still another demonstration of spiritual triumph—the triumph of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh over the dark forces which for well-nigh four score years and ten have blindly and maliciously tried, but in vain, to stop the progress of these Teachings.

In a letter addressed recently to our beloved Guardian by Dr. S. H. Ali of Rangoon, Burma, there is an account of the visit of Mr. F. Schopflocher to India. The letter carries most happy news concerning this visit and points out the remarkable success of Mr. Schopflocher in reawakening the Bahá'í spirit and in spreading Bahá'u'lláh's Message throughout his journey in India. One remembers in this connection the words of Bahá'u'lláh: "God will, no doubt, inspire whosoever detacheth himself from all else but Him, and will cause the pure waters of wisdom and utterance to gush out and flow copiously from his heart. Verily, thy Lord, the All-Merciful, is powerful to do as He willeth, and ordaineth whatsoever He pleaseth." The arrival of Mr. Schopflocher in Rangoon was announced in the leading newspapers of this city. Several public meetings were held, including one in the Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association. The chairman of this particular meeting was His Excellency the Rajah Jay Pertaw Sing Bahadour of Nepal, a man who has traveled far and wide for the Cause of Universal Peace and international brotherhood. He was present at the World Congress of Religions in Chicago and witnessed the building of the Bahá'í House of Worship at Wilmette. He traveled recently to Ethiopia to be of service to the unhappy inhabitants of that land in their tragic conflict with Italy.

So profoundly impressed did the Rajah become by the splendour of the Bahá'í Faith as he intently listened to the words of Mr. F. Schopflocher that at the end of the next meeting—held in the Bahá'í Hall—he rose and to a house packed to overflowing he publicly voiced his conversion and allegiance to the Bahá'í Faith. The chairman of this meeting was a Buddhist priest, formerly a member of the All-India Legislative Council. He too was greatly affected by the Message.

Aside from these public gatherings, several private interviews were held with a number of influential men in Rangoon, with very encouraging results.

In brief the Bahá'í Call was raised in this city in a most glorious way, and there is no doubt that Mr. Schopflocher was divinely assisted and confirmed in this, "the most meritorious of all deeds"—of proclaiming His Message.

SEPTEMBER, 1937

Say: O ye lovers of the One true God! Strive, that ye may truly recognize and know Him, and observe befittingly His precepts. This is a Revelation, under which, if a man shed for its sake one drop of blood, myriads of oceans will be his recompense. Take heed, O friends, that ye forgoit not so inestimable a benefit, or disregard its transcendent station.—BAHA'U'LLAH.

"REDIRECT WITH ADDED FORCE NATION-WIDE APPEAL TO ENTIRE COMMUNITY"

Since the publication in BAHÁ'Í News for June of the Guardian's Call to undertake the Seven-Year Plan, Shoghi Effendi has cabled the following: "Immeasurably gratified National Assembly's initial step presentation seven-year plan...redirect with added force nationwide appeal to entire community ensure uninterrupted completion first unit (of new Temple construction) and accumulation sufficient funds enable placing without delay final contract."

This means, first of all, an immediate, full-hearted response to the budget outlined in the statement published in June. Upon each Assembly, each group and every individual Bahá'í rests a direct responsibility, the fulfillment of which represents the measure of our service to the universal Faith revealed in the Day of God. Whatever the distractions that may arise, there is in true faith a simplicity, a concentration of purpose which will enable us to center our efforts upon the essential goal.

These are the swiftly-passing days which, once gone, can never be recalled. This is the sacred task which the prophets and holy saints of old longed to share. May each of us become inwardly united in our inflexible resolve to play a noble part in the epochal undertaking, and from that deep level of intention will surely emanate a unity of collective forces that no earthly power can ever shake.

The Guardian himself has given us the added force with which the appeal can be redirected throughout the entire area of the American Bahá'í community. His cablegram of August fourth, quoted in full in this issue of BAHÁ'Í News, contains these overwhelming words: "In a world perilously near cataclysmic convulsions destined experience, at a time when forces of repression are launching their assaults and conspiring (to) undermine foundations (of) most powerful strongholds (of) Faith (of) Bahá'u'lláh in land of its birth and in heart of both Asiatic (and) European continents, an inescapable, well-nigh staggering responsibility rests on America, its one chief remaining citadel."

Thus he points out the implications for us here in America of the dissolution of the Bahá'í community in Germany by action of the government, of the difficulties confronting believers in so many other regions, of the swiftly increasing social disruptions prevailing everywhere on earth today. Even as this is written, our International Teacher, the revered Martha L. Root, is in Shanghai, surrounded by the flame and smoke of war.

To build the Temple...to teach...this is our daily and hourly task, privilege, duty and Bahá'í life. Now, if ever, the lesser things are to be thrust aside and forgotten, and only the profound truths of action and of sacrifice can animate the followers of Bahá'u'lláh throughout the American continent.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

Beseech ye the one true God to grant that ye may taste the savour of such devils as are performed in His path, and partake of the sweetness of such humility and submission as are shown for His sake.—BAHA'U'LLAH.

National Bahai Fund

The following statement is based on the remarks made by Mrs. Mamie L. Seto at the Convention, which the delegates wished reproduced for the information of the friends.

"As the matter of contributions to the National Fund is of such vital importance in furthering the progress of the Faith, we must likewise, as believers, give it the same important place in our lives.

"And we could give it the vital place it holds by making it one of the subjects of consultation at the Nineteen Day Feast."

First, by reading and dwelling upon the words written by our Guardian on this subject, as given in Baha'i Administration and the Baha'i News; second, by informing the Baha'i community of the regular monthly expenses of the Cause, which must be met by the contributions of the believers; and third, by educating the body of the believers in this matter of supporting their Faith by their money offerings, which is definitely a part of their religious life, so they will be ready and willing to meet in a generous and spontaneous manner the increased cost of promoting the Faith, which will naturally follow, as it expands and goes forward to its ordained destiny."

Baha'i Procedure

A Correction

The National Spiritual Assembly is grateful to Mrs. S. E. J. Oglesby for pointing out an error in the new publication entitled Baha'i Procedure.

On Sheet 5, Section Two, fifth line under caption, "Conduct of Business," the word "imitating" should be changed to "initiating." Will the believers kindly make this correction in their own copies.

Technical Committee Appointed

In the light of the above instruction, the National Spiritual Assembly appointed a Technical Committee with the following membership: L. E. Eggleston, Chairman, Stuart W. French, Frank R. MacMillan, E. Roger Boyle, C. Herrick Hammond and Frank A. Baker. This membership included Baha'is and non-Baha'is, business men, an architect, an engineer and builder, and the head of the research department of the Portland Cement industry. All but two members who have been traveling abroad met for a conference after individual study of the problem, and unanimously agreed that only Mr. Earley was competent to undertake the work.

The Committee then held a conference with Mr. Earley, and with him went into the matter of costs and the form of contract or agreement best adapted to this type of construction.

Finally, three members of the Committee met with the National Spiritual Assembly and presented their findings and advice.

The result is that Mr. Earley is to begin work on the gallery section immediately.

Estimate of Cost

The Committee's careful investigation has convinced them that the gallery unit can be completed within an estimate of $145,000, the time required being eighteen to twenty months.

It will be evident to every Baha'i after turning to a photograph of the House of Worship that the external decoration of the gallery unit will have a tremendous effect upon the appearance of the edifice. After this work is finished there remains only the first story and the surrounding steps, and with the cooperation and uncasing effort of every American believer the Guardian's Seven-Year Plan, as far as the Temple is concerned, can and must be fulfilled.

"Immeasurably Gratified"

Shoghi Effendi once more conveyed his instructions to the N. S. A. and reinforced his appeal to the American Baha'is' community through the following cablegram received July 4, 1937:—

WELL BELOVED LUNT

On August 16, 1937, was received this cabled message from the Guardi-ian:

"Shocked distressed premature passing esteemed well-beloved Lunt. Future generations will appraise his manifold outstanding contributions to rise and establishment Faith Baha'ullah surance prayers deepest brotherly sympathy their cruel irreparable loss."

(Signed) Shoghi.

On Monday, August 30, the members of the National Spiritual Assemblies in the twenty-four states of the United States and seven provinces of Canada which are still without the spiritual blessing of local Spiritual As-semblies on Baha'i Groups.

As we have found inspiration in the lives and deeds of the early Dawn-Breakers, will the standard of teaching which we shall raise during the next seven years also be a gauge by which future generations may measure their sacrifices and devotion in propo-gating the Faith?

The Guardian calls us to set in motion a new method of teaching—that of teaching by settlement. The immediate need is for pioneers in the virgin territory. Every believer not definitely bound to a certain location by technical business connections, should immediately consider the possibility of adjusting his own life and affairs so that he can move into some new terri-ory to live and teach. The National Spiritual Assembly through its Teaching Committees is prepared to assist not only spiritually and morally those who arise to this need, but will also cooperate in temporary financial assistance where that is necessary.

In undertaking this type of pioneer work, three points should be kept in mind:

First, response to this call does not mean merely a new location, a new governmental field of service for an individual, but in its cumulative effect, as the activities increase, it means the broad expansion of our Faith throughout the American continent.

Second, the individual does not go out alone, but he carries with him the moral and spiritual support of all the American Baha'is.

Third, the individual, as a result of his service, becomes the direct recipient of the confirmations of the Holy Spirit.

Prayer is the power which can raise us and our services to the invincible realm of true spiritual life, and in that realm and that realm alone will the soils of crushed humanity find release of the open pathway to new life.

Therefore, every Baha'i, whether in the field or at home, should daily use the resuscitating teaching prayers for the teachers and for the success of this great united effort. It is recordented that special prayers for teachers and the teaching work be read at each of the Nineteen Day Feasts.

The Regional Teaching Committees and the National Teaching Committee hold themselves in readiness to aid in every possible way those "stalwart de-defenders" who temporarily renouncing the joys and privileges of close Baha'i association will go forth to deliver the gift of Baha'i life to a new and virgin area.

APPROVE COMMITTEE'S DECISION

Cablegram from Shoghi Effendi

After cabling the Guardian the result of the conference with the Technical Committee, and also concerning newly-adopted teaching plans, Shoghi Effendi replied as follows:

"Approve Committee's decidion. Place contract immediately.
Delighted teaching progress.
Praying further success." (Received September 2, 1937).

NEED FOR HEROIC SERVICE

"Who among its stalwart defenders will arise unframed (and) unafraid. Entreat afresh American community heed vital urgency (of) my impassioned plea."

As we ponder these stirring entreaties in the Guardian's most recent cablegram, are there any among us whose souls are not moved to the very depths by the realization that the American Baha'is are being called to render a sacrifice and achieve a glory that in the days to come may perhaps be viewed in the same light as we today view the deeds of the early Dawn-Breakers?

How often have all of us wished that we might have played a part in the pioneer days of the Faith. Surely we must see that the need for heroic service has been renewed and that today we have not only the opportunity but the responsibility of displaying the same devotion and self-sacrifice in planting firmly the banner of Baha'u-'llah in the twenty-four states of the United States and seven provinces of Canada which are still without the spiritual blessing of local Spiritual As-semblies on Baha'i Groups.

As we have found inspiration in the

BAHAI NEWS 3
Great indeed is this Day! The allusions made to it in all the sacred Scriptures as the Day of God attest its greatness. The soul of every Prophet of God, of every Divine Messenger, hath thirsted for this wondrous Day. All the divers kindreds of the earth have, likewise, yearned to attain it. No sooner, however, had the Day Star of His Revelation manifested itself in the heaven of God's Will, than all, except those whom the Almighty was pleased to guide, were found dumbfounded and heedless.—BAHA'U'LLAH.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF 'ABDUL-BHA'U'S UNITY FEAST

The Annual Souvenir at West Englewood was held on Saturday, June 26, and carried out a program arranged by the National committee. The gathering of believers and friends of the Faith was most impressive in numbers and was animated by a deep spirit of devotion and gratitude.

The subject of "'Abdu'l-Baha's Spiritual Message to America" was developed by a number of speakers, including Mrs. Florian Krug, Saffa Kinney, Mrs. Grace Ober, Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan, Mrs. Maud Gaudreault, Roy C. Wilhelm, Mrs. E. B. Kinney.

A commemorative service was then conducted by Mountfort Mills in the grove where the Master gave the Unity Feast in 1912.

CONTACTS NEEDED IN NEW AREAS

In December Baha'i News the National Teaching Committee appealed to all the American Baha'is to send to this Committee or the Regional Teaching Committees concerned information and contacts which might be helpful in introducing the Faith in cities and states where it is not yet established. Several believers responded by sending in some very helpful lists of names and addresses of individuals whom they knew were, or might be interested in having literature or notices of meetings in those cities. One such list was the factor which determined to which of two cities in a certain state a pioneer teacher should be sent. Believing that many more friends can help in this important work of opening new cities and states, the National Teaching Committee wishes to repeat this appeal for:

1. Names and addresses of friends or acquaintances in all states and provinces of Canada where there are no local Spiritual Assemblies, so that literature may be sent or some contacts made for work there.
2. Names of cities where you have done some Baha'i work or where you know someone else has made some contacts, with the names and addresses of interested individuals and whatever pertinent details are necessary to adequate follow-up.

It is very important to have this information centralized both for the use of teachers going into new cities and states to teach and also to insure adequate follow-up of all teaching opportunities. To sow the seed is the first step in teaching, but cultivation brings the seed to flower, and cultivation is impossible if the location of the seed is unknown.

AGNES ALEXANDER TO VISIT AMERICAN COMMUNITIES
Miss Agnes Alexander has come to America after her latest stay in Japan.
She remained some days at Haifa en-route to this country.
In accordance with the Guardian's wish that she visit as many local communities as possible, the National Spiritual Assembly is happy to announce that Miss Alexander, in planning her journey across the country, will notify the Spiritual Assembly in each city she is able to visit.

Meetings arranged for her to address the friends will enable a large number of believers to meet this pioneer teacher and share her important information and extensive knowledge of the Teachings as well as her ardent faith.

In the Book of Isaiah it is written: "Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of His majesty." No man that mediateth upon this verse can fail to recognize the greatness of this Cause, or doubt the exalted character of this Day—the Day of God Himself. This same verse is followed by these words: "And the Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day. This is the Day which the Pen of the Most High hath glorified in all the Holy Scriptures. There is no verse in them that doth not declare the glory of His holy Name, and no Book that doth not testify unto the loveliness of this most exalted theme. Were We to make mention of all that hath been revealed in these heavenly Books and holy Scriptures concerning this Revelation, this Tablet would assume impossible dimensions. It is incumbent, in this Day, upon every man to place his whole trust in the manifold bounties of God, and arise to disseminate, with the utmost wisdom, the verities of His Cause. Then, and only then, will the whole earth be enveloped with the morning light of His Revelation.—Baha'u'llah.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
THE BAHAI WORLD

The Editorial Committee desires to bring to the attention of all believers, in other countries as well as in North America, that the material intended for Vol. VII should be sent to the Secretary, Nellie S. French, 390 Grove Street, Pasadena, Calif., by November 1, 1937.

As this work is representative of the worldwide Bahai community, the National and local Assemblies of other lands are made responsible for reports of activities and other data pertaining to their areas. The Editorial Committee does not produce the contents—its chief concern is to act as a collector of material from others.

Each National Assembly is requested to give particular attention to the matter of accuracy in such details as addresses, bibliographies, etc. There is no way for the Editorial Committee to check errors or omissions in the material received from abroad.

In addition to reports of current activities for the period April, 1936—April, 1938, the Committee would like the Assemblies in foreign lands to inspect the contents of Vol. VI very carefully, and report corrections wherever required. Favorable references to the Cause by influential non-believers, Bahai' photographs, and individual articles about the Cause are also desired.

As to the method of preparing material for publication, after it is received: since this matter is apparently not yet clear, the Committee would like to explain that all material is forwarded to the Guardian in the form received. The Guardian selects the contents, including the illustrations, and arranges them in the order they are to appear in the final book. Only when Shoghi Effendi directs the Committee to edit or revise some article or report does the Committee make any alterations.

SURVEY OF BAHAI YOUTH ACTIVITIES IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA

Early in March, 1937, ninety letters were sent out by the National Youth Committee to all Bahai' Assemblies and Groups in the United States and Canada to ascertain the present status of the Cause among youth and the actual development since 1935. Out of sixty-eight answers forty-four communities have youth groups, twenty-eight of which have youth committees. Seven communities have one or two Bahai' youth, one has eight interested youth (non-believers), one has three non-believers, and the rest report "no youth." The National Youth Committee strongly urges that youth committees be appointed at once by Local Spiritual Assemblies in the sixteen communities reporting youth groups but no committees.

According to reports, six hundred and twenty-one youth, three hundred and thirty-four Bahai is, and two hundred and eighty-seven non-Bahai are, studying the Bahai teachings at the present time.

During the coming year it will be the earnest endeavor of the regional secretaries and other Committee members to lend every possible assistance in suggesting:

1. Possible programs for meetings and classes.
2. Outlines of talks with references.
4. Possible contacts where there are no Bahai youth.
5. Correspondents for those who want to write to other Bahai youth.
6. Teaching methods for high school and college students, business and professional youth, and those interested in the general community.
7. Good speakers from other communities.
8. And providing, where necessary, experienced teachers to work up new groups.

New ideas and suggestions in regard to the furtherance of youth work and reports of successful teaching methods are most welcome. Please communicate with Miss Zeha Holden, 48 Terrace Avenue, Albany, N. Y., Secretary of the National Youth Committee.

YOUTH STUDY DAYS

"To obtain a more adequate understanding of the significance of Bahai's stupendous Revelation must, it is my unalterable conviction, remain the first obligation and the object of the constant endeavor of each one of its loyal adherents."—The Dispensation of Baha'u'llah, Shoghi Effendi.

The National Youth Committee proposes the holding of five concentrated Study Days as part of the basic program of Bahai' youth activity for the year 1937-38.

Purpose: To deepen the understanding and help organize the knowledge of those Bahai youth who are enrolled or who are beginning a serious study of the Teachings. To prepare ourselves thoroughly for life in the Bahai community and for youth work and effective teaching, we must have much more than a mere surface knowledge of the Bahai Faith. These concentrated days of study should enable us to deepen and widen the range of our knowledge.

Method: The National Youth Committee suggests that, through consultation with the local spiritual assembly, the teacher best qualified be obtained to take charge of each Study Day. We suggest that the Study Day take place any time within the month specified. We urge that as long a time as possible be given during the selected day for study. Nothing should interfere with this. This is not a public meeting or one for newly-attracted youth. Two halves of a day (e.g. Sunday morning and afternoon, or afternoon and evening) constitute the amount of time the Committee had in mind when formulating this plan. These Study Days have been arranged to occur during five different months—September, November, January, March, and May. These months were selected after careful consultation so as not to conflict with the Symposiums in February, the Christmas holidays, attendance at Summer Schools, etc.

The references have been purposely simplified. Only the main points for development have been given. This leaves range for adaptation according to the wisdom and discretion of the teacher in charge. Much of the study material issued by the Study Outlines Committee can be used to supplement this.

The National Youth Committee urges each Youth Group to send promptly to Miss Zeah Holden, Secretary, 48 Terrace Avenue, Albany, N. Y., a report of each Study Day, written or typed on standard size typing paper, under the following headings:

Study Day Report

I. Name of Youth Group:
II. Date of Study Day:
III. Place held:
IV. Number of youths present:
V. Teacher:
VI. General statement on method of procedure followed:
VII. Comments and suggestions for improvement:

I. For September: Bahá’í—a Spiritual Being.

Aim: To gain an understanding of the relation of the individual Bahá’í to the Manifestation.

References:
- Some Answered Questions, Part I, Part II.
- The New Era, chap. VIII
- Gleanings, see “Bahá’u’lláh,” “believers”, “Manifestations”, “Revelation (of Bahá’u’lláh),” in the Index.

Suggested points to be covered:
- What are Manifestations? Why are they needed? What is the law of the Manifestation?
- What new knowledge has Bahá’u’lláh given of the relationship of man to God through the Manifestation? (Particularly emphasis on Manifestation as Authority).
- What are the proofs of Bahá’u’lláh’s manifestation?
- How does belief in Bahá’u’lláh differentiate Bahá’ís from other people? (This a preliminary to a deeper understanding to be acquired as the series proceeds.)
- What is the station of the true believer?

II. For November: Bahá’í Theory of Knowledge.

Aim: To gain an understanding of the relationship of the individual Bahá’í to some fundamental questions of life.

References:
- Some Answered Questions, Part IV.
- Gleanings, see “God”, “Man.”

Suggested points to be covered:
- What is the Bahá’í conception of man, God, Holy Spirit, immortality?
- How does man differ from the animal?
- Can human nature be changed?
- What is the Bahá’í conception of evolution?
- What is Truth? How is the relativity of truth illustrated in progressive revelation?

III. For January: Bahá’í—the Activist.

Aim: To gain a deeper understanding of the Bahá’í life.

References:
- The New Era, chaps. V, VI, VII.
- Gleanings, look up various qualities of the Bahá’í life.
- P. U. P. look up attributes of the Bahá’í life.

Suggested points to be covered:
- What are the standards of conduct in the Bahá’í life?
- What is the significance of “the love of God” to a Bahá’í?
- Is prayer instinctive? What kinds of prayer are there? Why does a Bahá’í pray?
- What are tests?
- What is the standard of health for a Bahá’í?
- How does one work toward the achievement of a Bahá’í personality?
- What significance for us is there in the station of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as the Exemplar?

IV. For March: Bahá’í—the Realist.

Aim: To gain an understanding of the relationship of the individual Bahá’í to social order.

References:
- The New Era, chaps. IX, XI.
- Gleanings, see “duties of believers”, “laws of God.”
- Bahá’í Procedure.

Suggested points to be covered:
- What is the Bahá’í conception of civilization?
- What is the skeleton outline of the World Order?
- What should the attitude of individual Bahá’ís be toward such questions as war, etc.?
- What is the Bahá’í theory of government?
- What are the spiritual implications behind the ordinances of Bahá’u’lláh?
- What is the Bahá’í conception of Liberty?
- What are the ordinances of Bahá’u’lláh which are already applicable in our daily lives?

V. For May: Bahá’í History.

Aim: To gain a knowledge of the chief events of Bahá’í history and an understanding of the relationships of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and the Guardian.

References:
- The Dawn-Breakers.
- The Promise of All Ages, Christopher, esp. pg. 188-9.
- Cardinal Dates of the Bahá’í Movement.
- The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh.
- Shoghi Effendi.

Suggested points to be covered:
- What are the primary dates, and incidents connected with the lives of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá?
- What are some of the chief characters in The Dawn-Breakers?
- What are the bases for continuity in the Bahá’í Faith?
- What are the stations of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and the Guardian?

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

Bahá’í News Service is the name which we suggest all publicity committees use in the future as there is more dignity in it than in Bahá’í Publicity Committee, and also better psychology.

During March and April, Convention news and the Anniversary celebration of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit to this country was sent into 3,000 newspaper offices throughout the United States, through the Chicago office of the Associated Press. This means that even if the editors did not use it, they are becoming familiar with the name.
Baha'i, which will greatly aid pioneer workers.

We urge local committees to send us extra copies of outstanding publicity on their local speakers so we can compile Speakers’ Press Books. We also urge that they compile such books locally. These should aid greatly in getting further publicity, speaking and radio engagements.

To pioneer workers, if you haven't already thought of it, we would suggest that whenever there is a resident believer in the field, that their name should be mentioned whenever possible in publicity articles — this will help them to further the work after you are gone.

As stated in a Bulletin issued by this committee last October, repeatedly brought to our attention is the difficulty found by travelers interested in the Teachings, in locating the Baha’is, especially the isolated believers. We would again urge all Assemblies to have a listing in telephone directories, newspaper offices, public libraries and Chambers of Commerce. This is equally important in the case of isolated believers and groups. Suggested uniform listing BAHAI CENTER OF ............ This will also aid in securing newspaper publicity through Associated Press releases — for newspapers are more apt to print Baha’i news articles if they know there are Baha’is in a particular city and it will make it easy for them to contact the Baha' is for additional information they might wish.

Newspaper errors should be corrected immediately and while the correction may not be published it will be placed in the “morgue” for future reference — if published it will bring additional publicity to the Cause.

In regard to releases sent out by the national committee — we would again remind local committees that all releases sent out are basic material for use, and that you are to add local color, which is an absolute necessity, and any quotations from the Teachings which you feel you can get into the papers. The national committee send factual material and you, knowing your own local territory — must supply the rest. Always send a free literature pamphlet with every release sent out, no matter how many you send.

One of the most effective ways of getting the teachings before the public through the press is to report the talk of a speaker. This type of publicity must of necessity be written up and sent to the papers before the lecture takes place so it will come out in the papers the following day. Mrs. Mabel Ives was most successful in doing this in Waukegan, Illinois, during an entire three week period. Further suggestion in brief:

- Organize a local clipping bureau service amongst the believers.
- Have regular committee meetings.
- Study the new outline prepared by the Study Outline Committee on “Essentials Principles of Creative Writing.”
- Frame a picture of the Temple and present to suitable stores supplying them with Free Literature pamphlets and information about your local meetings.

Last year we had clippings from 62 Assemblies. Let’s make it 100% this year of 1937-38. Be sure and send at least two clippings, and more, when the publicity is outstanding.

Any isolated believers or groups wanting the publicity releases please let us know and we will place your name in the files. If the name of the publicity chairman has not been sent in for this year, please do so at once.

(Signed)

Mrs. Nina Matthiesen, Chairman
Baha'i News Service, 4612 Malden St.,
Chicago Illinois.
Mrs. Edna Eastman,
Mr. Clarence La Rocque.

BAHA'I GROUP FORMED IN BUDAPEST

Mrs. J. Ruh-Angiz and Miss Jeanne Negar Bolles, writing from Zurich on July 27, 1937, send the important news that by their efforts a Baha’i group has been established in the city of Budapest. It consists of six adult believers and two minors, seventeen and nineteen years old. Four more adult believers will declare themselves, they assured us, after further study of the Teachings during the summer months. These eleven, we hope, will constitute an Assembly in the autumn. The believers all accepted the Baha’i Faith according to the Administration and wrote this individually to Shoghi Effendi. The Nineteen Day Feasts were kept and are being continued by the believers. Renie Felbermann, speaking French, German and English fluently, is the Secretary of the group.

“We left a small library of German and English books with them. There is only the Esselmont book and ‘World Religion,’ by Shoghi Effendi in Hungarian, and the Esperanto translation of ‘World Religion,’ made by Miss Zamenhof. The ‘Hidden Words’ are now being translated by a believer into Hungarian.

The meetings (study class) which grew slowly from November (until 45 were present on July 13) are being continued in a very pleasant, central place in the city. According to an article in one of the daily papers, the group is composed of “intellectuals” and includes journalists, writers, architects, doctors, painters, sculptors, presidents of clubs and business men and women. There were no Baha’is in Budapest when we arrived.”

LOROL SCHOPFLOCHER’S BOOK PUBLISHED IN LONDON

“Sunburst,” the book written by Mrs. Lorol Schopflocher on her adventurous travels and her experiences serving the Cause in many parts of the world, has been published by the firm of Rider and Company, London, England.

In preparing this volume, the author had in mind particularly the need of establishing a link between sophisticated persons and the reality of religion in this day. It is illustrated by a number of unusual photographs, including signed portraits of Oriental rulers and Baha’i subjects, some of which were given Mrs. Schopflocher by Shoghi Effendi.

“Sunburst” is one more evidence of the penetrating spirit of faith in the new day, using the spirit of glamorous adventure to show the power of religion to those who have long discarded the old forms and limitations.

Copies can be obtained from the publisher at the price of fifteen shillings.

MR. AND MRS. MATHEWS FORM BOOK CENTERS

To have the tenets of the Bahá’í Faith spread to remote parts of the earth was the objective of the recent journey undertaken by Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Mathews. Though many obstacles presented themselves the Word of Baha’u’llah was left on the soil of distant islands and continents. The following are the main depots established for the Bahá’í Literature.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Mrs. H. Cooper, S. 36 rua Frei Constant, Dept. de Cabacabanas. Books now obtainable in that city are in English and Portuguese.

Cape Town, South Africa. The Theosophical Society, Markham Blvd., Librarian, Miss S. A. Parris. In the library books can be obtained in Dutch and English.

Johannesberg, S. A. At Johannesberg Public Library books obtainable in Dutch and English.

Bulawayo, S. A. Rev. M. I. Cohen, Pastor of Hebrew Congregation, P. O. Box 470. (A recent letter asked for more literature).

Seychelles Islands (off West Coast of Africa). Books can be obtained in Carnegie Library in French and English.

Island of Bali, Dutch Netherlands. Books are in the care of Mr. and Mrs. George Merchant in English, Dutch, and French.

Philippines, Island of Zangopango, St. Jean’s Penal Colony. Books in French.

MEETING
IN SOUTH AFRICA

Unexpected opportunities to speak and teach in South Africa under distinguished auspices made that country the outstanding experience of the trip, reports Mrs. Loulie Mathews.

The Bahá’í Tenets were received with great attention and many men, more than fifty in one talk in Bulawayo, listened attentively to the Principles. Leaving South Africa and arriving in India we found that a picture letter had been prepared for us, on the top were views of South Africa and underneath the names of every one who was present at the first talk given. A note was enclosed that reads as follows:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Mathews:

Every one who heard you speak was so delighted with your talks that they all want you to come back.

We thought it would be appropriate to send you both a momento of your visit to South Africa. Talking it over, Mr. Scott conceived the idea of making a picture letter. Harold Morris caught the vision and drew the pictures for you.

You brought to us a solution of our religious difficulties through the Bahá’í Cause and taught us a new and illuminated pathway to social and spiritual life. Every signature conveys a special appreciation of your work and your visit and goes to you with gratitude.

May you return to us and tell us more of the bright future depicted in the “New World Order.”

LOTTIE A. ASKELAND.

The first talk took place at “Kelvin Grove.”

ACTIVITIES IN INDIA
Reported by Haifa Assembly

Further important news comes from Poona, India. Sad as it is for it reports the passing away of a Zoroastrian believer in that city, yet by his death the Bahá’í Faith was brought to the attention of the public in an unusual way and its independence from other religious denominations emphasized beyond any doubt. According to the directions of the Spiritual Assembly, the bier of the said believer, carried on a motor car and followed by other cars, passed through the main streets of Poona on its way to the Bahá’í cemetery. As the deceased believer was known to have originally belonged to the Zoroastrian community and as it is the practice of the Zoroastrians not to bury their dead, but to leave the body in an appointed place called “Dakhmeh,” exposed to birds of prey and marauding animals, this public funeral service and the Bahá’í burial ceremony made a great impression on the Zoroastrians and brought the Bahá’í Faith to their attention in a vivid way.

We learn in this connection that the Bahá’í Spiritual Assembly had written a few months previously to the Zoroastrians in Poona calling their attention to the fact that should a Bahá’í of a Zoroastrian family die, his body should not be allowed to be taken secretly to the “Dakhmeh,” but it should be put in charge of the Bahá’í Community so that it would be interred according to Bahá’í rites.

The old and fanatical Zoroastrians still favor the “Dakhmeh” while the young and the enlightened among them prefer the burial system.

God has strange ways of making His Will known to His servants. Blessed are indeed those amongst them who glorify Him even unto death.

MARTHA ROOT’S TEACHING ACTIVITIES IN HONOLULU AND JAPAN

The following glimpses of Miss Root’s ardent Bahá’í services in the Orient are taken from her circular letter dated July 6, 1937, mailed from Shanghai.

I left San Francisco, May 20, 1937. Reaching Honolulu on May 25, I went ashore for a few hours, while the ship docked. Wonderful work is being done in that mid-Pacific paradise, and a day with the believers there is truly a day in “heaven.” Mrs. Samuel A. Baldwin and Miss Utic Muther met me with love and with fragrance-breathing leis, (garlands to wear around the neck), of white jasmines and carnations. What did we do? First, the editor of the Honolulu Advertiser, a former colleague of mine from Pittsburgh, Penna., sent his editorial writer to interview me about the Bahá’í Faith. Then I wished an interview with Professor Shao Chang Lee, Professor of Chinese History and Literature in the University of Hawaii. He knows much about the Teachings and was a friend and pupil of the late Dr. Y. S. Tsao, President of Tsing Hua University, Peiping, who translated “Babá’ulláh and the New Era” into Chinese. Professor Lee said that day: “I will read the new book ‘Gleanings’ and write my impressions of it reverently for the magazine ‘World Order.’” We told him of the Bahá’í Summer School at Geyersville and hope he was able to go for a weekend, as he intended to spend part of the summer at the University of California.

I had known somewhat the eternal work the friends of Honolulu had been responsible for on other parts of the globe, but it was something to be in the presence of a sweet saint like “Utie” and a tender “fledgling-saint” (Mrs. Baldwin). I felt like springing to my feet and saluting as one does in the presence of a Queen... my soul rose up in silent homage, and seeing Bahá’ís like these, my heart could understand the work of theirs on the mainland and abroad. It was such a blessed day we had together.

Great things come out of Hawaii. I truly believe that some day a Bahá’í Summer School will be established there, and who knows? It may be a model for Japan and China to copy!

The Hawaiian Islands have a unique role in the drama of a New World Order. Situated between the Orient and the Occident, with a population representing both the West and the East, the Bahá’í’s there can be a potent force for international understanding and peace in the Pacific.

The Bahá’ís of Honolulu gathered that day at two o’clock, in the home of Mrs. Baldwin for a lecture and informal discussion about the progress of the Bahá’í Faith. Also, two believers had just returned that week from a Bahá’í journey around the world. We all spoke together and they told me about the Bahá’í Assembly at Maui. Mrs. Marion Little was to arrive in ten days and spend the summer with Mrs. Baldwin working on the Island of Maui. Their home is called “Hakakala” (the House of the Sun),
JAPAN:

Coming from Honolulu to Yokohama, this servant gave a public lecture, "What is the Bahá’í Movement?" before the II and I Class passengers of this steamship "Tatsuro Maru" in the lounge of the I Class. The Captain himself introduced me. I spoke for one hour and questions and answers followed for an hour. There were ten religions and ten nations represented. A few missionaries said what they had not heard of the Bahá’í Faith until they heard this lecture. They arose and spoke in agreement. One said only the Christians ever have or ever will be saved. I asked her if she thought all the Zoroastrians, Buddhists, Confucianists, Hindus, Jews, Muhammandans are not saved. She replied no, they are not saved. The majority of the people in the audience were Easterners born and reared in these other religions (But there was really sweetness and understanding at that meeting). Each one said exactly what he thought. And some were much interested in the Bahá’í Teachings. One scholar was from the Philippines and some were Japanese. There were several young Japanese professors present, returning from post graduate studies in Europe. Who can ever tell how far-reaching are the words of truth? "Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era" was placed in the I Class and II Class libraries of this ship. Also, I had a small exhibition of Bahá’í books. The Captain asked me to write an interview about the lecture and the Bahá’í Faith and I also brought in a little bit about our journey and the saving of three avarieors in mid-ocean. He had it translated into Japanese and copies mimeographed to give out to the press of Japan when we came into port. Besides, six journalists came with these typed resumes to ask me more questions when I arrived in Yokohama.

I came to Tokyo, June 3. Mr. Seiji Noma, the "Magazine King of Japan," who is owner of nine of the best magazines in Japan and President of the Hokh Shimbun, daily newspaper with a circulation of a million and several of his magazines have a higher circulation even was not in Tokyo, but a reporter from Hokh Shimbun came to interview me, and Mr. Noma's secretary brought me a message from Mr. Noma. In the published interview one line was that Miss Root thanked Mr. Noma for his approval (recognition) and help to the Bahá’í Faith. She sent Mr. Noma "Gleanings" and some other new Bahá’í books, and he gave her thirty beautiful Japanese books and an English book "The Nine Magazines of Kofanasha" (published by Methuen and Company Ltd., 36 Essex Street, W. C., London. It costs ten shillings and sixpence) which is a biography of his own life. If you wish to read of the universal mind, the courage, originality and candor, the large ideas, the vitality and the worth of a great pioneer in the new magazine work for Japan, read this book. Bahá’ís can with profit study what Mr. Noma says about publicity. I do not say Mr. Noma is a Bahá’í, but when I was in Japan in December, 1930, he arranged for a big Bahá’í lecture for several hundred people in his "Hochi Shimshin" Hall. He is friendly to the Bahá’í Teachings.

"Yurisan" (Mrs. Furukawa) a Bahá’í young woman in Tokyo who has received three Tablets from 'Abdu’lláh, brought a woman writer, Miss Misao Yumoto of the "Kokumin Shimshin" daily newspaper in Tokyo to interview me. The article was published June 16. "The Japan Advertiser," Tokyo, had an article in the June 4 issue. The "Hochi Shimshin" article was published June 16. Fifteen journalists came to interview me during the three weeks' stay in Japan.

It was lovely and historic to meet the fine Bahá’ís in Tokyo. We met together three times in my hotel (and they called upon me individually for talks and I went to some of their homes). They read me the wonderful letters written to them by Miss Agnes Alexander from Haifa. We were all so happy to hear news of her and from Haifa direct. (I was so sorry Agnes was not there when I was in Japan, every day I missed her so! On my other three journeys Agnes was there). The Bahá’ís of all Japan are eager to do everything that Shoghi Effendi suggested that they do. Our Guardian thinks that the next two books to be translated into Japanese and published should be "Gleanings" and "Hidden Words."

Mr. Aiji Sawada, our blind brother, who is a very fine teacher in the School for the Blind in Tokyo, invited eighteen students to his home and I spoke to them of the Bahá’í Teachings. He also spoke and so did Yurisan. Every year of my life I am more impressed how important it is to get books into Braille for the blind; it brings such a light to them and they in turn may translate and give the Bahá’í Teachings in many different languages throughout the world. Helen Keller was in Japan at the same time I was there and I gave several editors what she had said in "Bahá’í World," Vol. V, page 349.

The American Consul General in Tokyo, a good friend for many years, gave a dinner for me and invited some of the Americans in Tokyo and Yokohama and after dinner invited me to speak to them about the Bahá’í Teachings. The sweet wife of the American Vice-Consul in Yokohama knows of the Teachings through Mrs. Ella Cooper and Miss Beulah Lewis and studies them.

Mr. Kanji Ogawa, a Tokyo Bahá’í, arranged for me to speak before the English Speaking Club of the Y. M. C. A. This, too, was followed by questions and answers. Books were placed in several libraries, and given to a number of editors, educators and to a few pastors.

For years I wished to meet Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, one of the bright, spiritual lights in Eastern Asia, a Christian who "lives the life," a brilliant understanding writer. He is a famous evangelist, a social reformer, and a crystal-clear writer of religious books and of best selling novels. I did have the bounty to meet him and interview him for our magazine. "World Order" and for "Bahá’í Work." He said he had heard of the Bahá’í Teachings when he was a student in Tokyo, but he had no Bahá’í books. I gave him "Gleanings," "Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era," and others. He said what he knew of the Bahá’í Teachings, and he would be glad to be given a message for the Bahá’ís. He has a new book just out, "Bros. of Brotherhood Economics" (Harper & Bros.). Read his book "Christ and Japan" (Friendship Press, New York), and it will help you to understand the soul of Japan, this country that 'Abdu’lláh Bahá’í said would turn abaze. I wish everyone who reads my letter would promise his or her own heart that he will do something, one deed at least, to help get these Bahá’í Teachings to Japan! You can send a torch to Japan — letters (and 'Abdu’lláh Bahá’í said that letters are half-meeting), books, prayers, even if you cannot go in person.

I visited the head of the Dolaki Church just as I had done seven years ago. The leader is ill, he could only speak with me for fifteen minutes, but he had called some of his disciples together and we spoke. (To be continued.)
