LETTER FROM SHOGHI EFFENDI

The following instruction was written in a letter addressed to Mr. Smider, Urbana, on September 5, 1936, and is published with the Guardian's approval.

"Regarding your question as to the advisability of holding Baha'i meetings at a time coinciding with church meetings; the Guardian would advise the friends to avoid such a coincidence, as otherwise many church people may feel offended, and this may lead to unnecessary and even harmful misunderstandings and developments which may injure the Cause and affect its prestige in the eyes of the public. The friends should, under all circumstances, be careful not to arouse unnecessarily any feelings of religious antagonism."

MESSAGE TO LOCAL ASSEMBLIES

Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher, at the request of the National Spiritual Assembly, has furnished the following draft of the statement he reported to the Convention embodying his notes of the Guardian's message to the local Spiritual Assemblies.

"Since a few local Assemblies have incorporated, now is the time for others to offer, if they feel the urge to do so, property or real estate, no matter how small or humble it may be, in order to establish local endowments. At the present time the National endowments amount to two and a half millions, and for this reason local Assemblies should follow. It is preferred that these donations should not be labelled. It would be excellent to start with possibly some building, no matter how modest or humble, to have as meeting place (if the friends locally buy it and build it in the sense of designing it for Baha'i use) and establish local Archives, this will facilitate development and efficiency for a local Assembly when it owns its own property. In enlarging the subject, the Guardian said the friends must learn how to manage these so they will be able to help even the National property and in time Shoghi Effendi may establish Palestine branches for properties in Haifa for local Assemblies. The friends should learn how to manage. If an Assembly is poor and cannot keep it (the property) up they should present their petitions to the Authorities in order to be free from taxes. Shoghi Effendi wants to educate the friends to be a help rather than a liability."

THE AMERICAN BAHAI COMMUNITY BEGINS ITS TWOFOLD TASK

Beloved Friends:

In preceding issues of BAHAI NEWS you have received the Guardian's summons to undertake the Plan of teaching and Temple construction allotted to the seven years ending May, 1944. The schedule embodied in the current Annual Budget has been announced. The decision to place the first of the two necessary Temple contracts has been reported. On the side of teaching, the National Assembly has approved and authorized comprehensive recommendations made by the National Teaching Committee for placing pioneer teachers and traveling teachers in many new areas. An early conference with the chairman of the Inter-America Committee will lead to decisions concerning increased effort in other parts of the American continents. The American Baha'i community has begun its glorious mission.

Now the appeal is renewed that each and every American Baha'i awake to the vital importance of this Plan and become spiritually and otherwise active for its support and promotion. The inspirations and reinforcements will come as we step forward into the arena of action and responsibility. If we be sluggish and indifferent now, our acceptance of membership in the Baha'i community is no evidence of true faith.

How often the Master spoke of the humble ones of past ages who served the Cause of God, and of the people of power and capacity who, denying, came to naught! What assurance He gave that every faithful one can render mighty service!

Fortunate are those who can attend the Nineteen Day Feasts and other meetings held by the organized communities, since there the flame of devotion should kindle the brightest. Nevertheless, the smallest local group and likewise the isolated believers can be no less intimately allied to the moving spirit of the age if they but realize the joy of sharing in the sacred task.

For we have but made the beginning, and laid only the groundwork of the Plan. Its success in reality calls for the daily prayer, the daily consecration, the daily effort of all who bear the name of Baha'i. We are "perilously near" the time of cataclysm, as Shoghi Effendi informed us a few weeks ago. But far from accepting the attitude of fatalism, we should long for such ardent heroism as will overcome the general feeling among non-believers that the world is decadent by a more penetrating realization that the new age has already dawned.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.
MISS LIDIA ZAMENHOF IS GUEST OF AMERICAN BAHÁ'IS

On October 30 Miss Lidia Zamenhof, daughter of the distinguished founder of Esperanto, arrived in America as the guest of the National Spiritual Assembly. Miss Zamenhof's services to the Faith are well known. At many of the international gatherings of Esperantists she has expounded the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, and her facility in the use of Esperanto has been devoted to the translation of a number of Bahá'í books into that language.

It is hoped that Miss Zamenhof may remain in America for the period of a year, and during that time visit a number of cities. The Esperantists rejoice in the fact that the Bahá'ís have made her visit possible. The Universal Auxiliary Language Committee of the N. S. A. and a special Committee appointed by the Esperantists, are cooperating with Miss Zamenhof in arranging her program.

Her first stay will be in New York. A public reception was held for her at the New York Bahá'í Center by the Assemblies of the New York Metropolitan District on Saturday, October 2.

The general plan is that in each city the Bahá'ís will hold a public reception for Miss Zamenhof as soon as possible after her arrival. She will conduct paid classes for teaching Esperanto under the auspices of the Esperantist groups. Before she leaves the city, the local Assembly is requested to arrange a public meeting with Miss Zamenhof as speaker, to which all Esperantists and those interested in the subject of an international auxiliary language should be especially invited. Other Bahá'í meetings featuring Miss Zamenhof can be arranged locally in consultation with her.

In honor of her visit, the National Assembly has printed a pamphlet containing Esperanto translations of a portion of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Tablet on the Seven Candles of Unity, and the text of Shoghi Effendi's The World of Faith. The edition has been placed in the hands of the Committee on Universal Auxiliary Language for free distribution through the Assemblies of the cities she visits. These Assemblies will be informed by the Committee as soon as Miss Zamenhof's program is arranged.

The American Bahá'ís deeply appreciate this opportunity to meet their distinguished and scholarly fellow-believer from Europe, and do everything possible to make her visit a joy to her and a great service to the Cause.

THE SPIRITUAL PRINCIPLE UNDERLYING THE BUDGET OF THE SEVEN-YEAR PLAN

Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher has been requested to contribute a statement based upon his remarks on the subject of the Fund at the last Convention, and the following statement is published with the request that the friends give it their careful attention.

Now is the time for the friends to understand the great spiritual principle underlying the special budget of the seven-year plan.

We have been accustomed to accept cycles of prosperity and depression which happen at regular intervals. If we consider the causes of depression, we find that they are caused by injustice, greed, and selfishness, the very cankers which are totally eradicated in the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh and which will produce a community entirely guided by justice, love and understanding, and most of all sacrifice. These are the guiding principles and the very foundation of a world community in contrast to our present-day conditions when war is not only possible but inevitable. Only when the funds in the form of taxes, contributions, tithes, or whatever they may be called, can be employed for the felicity of mankind, only then can we understand the wisdom in the Institution of the Bahá'í Funds.

In this respect we must consider the completion of the Temple ornamentation at Wilmette, this great symbol of our Faith, "the great silent Teacher" from which its dependencies will be born and which will bear witness to a humanity torn by strife and hatreds, that salvation, health and happiness is close at hand when depressions have given place to continuous happiness.

It is necessary to impress the friends with the importance of early and continuous contributions in order to insure the best and most economical execution of this, our most sacred obligation. To delay in this our great privilege and responsibility would mean to retard and prevent the commencement of similar constructions in other lands, especially in the country of the cradle of our Faith. Therefore as a token of our gratitude, and to the memory of 25,000 martyrs, will our dedication serve to hasten through our combined and undivided support the unfoldment of a world civilization. This Symbol, our "great silent Teacher" alone can convince an unguided humanity and instil a new hope and assurance of the Kingdom of God on earth. We are all aware of the effect this great Symbol will produce when completed, but the remarkable promises made by our gracious Master will only be fulfilled in its entirety when this Temple is completed.

How could the friends meet in 1944 to celebrate the close of the first Bahá'í century in an unfinished edifice, an unfulfilled spiritual obligation. From the point of view of the Guardian this is inconceivable.

We have experienced depressions but as vividly expressed by Shoghi Effendi we must not be deceived by momentary prosperity. This is the time to look for safe investments and what could be more secure than the Institution of the Greatest Name? This is an offering to God, a living proof of our Faith, demanded and accepted by Him, and no one either in Heaven or on earth can take it from us. This is an investment that we can trust, it will be with us on earth and become our crown in all the worlds to come. Let us start at once, the interests are its bounties and the dividends its blessings. Let us benefit by these bounties and blessings at this moment.

The Teaching Campaign is producing its fruits and must not be relaxed, may rather redoubled: $30,000 per year is required to establish the Cause in every state in the Union, every province in Canada and every republic in the Americas.

$30,000 for the maintenance of the Administrative Order in all its ramifications, including the upkeep of its Institutions. the Temple, its Summer Schools and its far-flung God-given Institutions.

$60,000 additional per year is needed to fulfill our sacred Temple obligation, a never re-occurring privilege started by our gracious Master during the pioneer age, and which will go down in history as an achievement and a lasting sign of this new and greatest civilization which will extend over a period of 500,000 years.

It follows that there must be a continuous flow of $4.00 per year for each believer during the next seven years, over and above the expense of Local requirements; Local Treasurers should work tirelessly towards this end to insure the continuous flow to the National Fund which amounts to a trifle over $3.00 per month on an average for each believer. However, great relief will come as a result of the teaching campaign which will produce a large number of enthusiastic supporters.

We appeal to the Local Assemblies through their Treasurers to bend all their energies toward this end. They must adopt modern methods to win the confidence of the friends, to keep them informed and well-posted regarding the status of the Local Fund, as to receipts, expenditures and disbursements. The friends should always be mindful that our beloved Guardian repeatedly assures us that all Funds, Local and National, are under his personal supervision. The National Assembly will keep the friends well informed at all times. There should never be a depression in Baha’i ranks, providing we submit to the principle of faith, love and justice as well as by the seal of sacrifice rendered in the true Baha’i spirit and the joy it implies.

"Is there any remover of difficulties save God?"

MEETINGS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

In continuance of its effort to contribute to the teaching work, the National Spiritual Assembly is carrying out the following schedule of meetings during the current Baha’i year. Public meetings and Baha’i conferences will be held in connection with those marked:

- Evanston, Ill. May 2 and 3, 1937.
- West Englewood, N. J. June 18, 19 and 20, 1937.
- West Englewood, N. J. December 10, 11 and 12, 1937.
- Evanston, Ill. April 26 and 27, 1938.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

In order to cooperate with local Assemblies in maintaining a complete file of Baha’i literature, the Publishing Committee suggests that each Assembly which is in a position to carry and display at least one copy of each title make up a list of titles not now on hand and order these from the Committee. The Publishing Committee will be glad to extend credit for such special orders for a reasonable length of time.

The plan is that the copies of books and pamphlets kept in the complete file are to be used for display, in order to obtain orders, and therefore these copies should not be sold. In ordering books for this purpose, state that they are for the reference library. It is when books can be inspected that interest is aroused.

Local Librarians are reminded that a 25% discount is given on orders of $10.00 or more, but books listed as net can not be included for discount.

The Memorial Services of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on Mount Carmel. The Committee has on hand a large number of these pamphlets and offers them at the nominal price of 12 copies for 10c while the supply lasts. It is suggested that Assemblies might very well order enough for each believer, in connection with the Anniversary of the Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to be observed on November 28.

Prayers and Meditations of Baha’u’llah, translated by Shoghi Effendi. This new and vitally important work is in process of publication, and the publication date will be announced. Copies will be available this winter.

The World Order of Baha’u’llah, by Shoghi Effendi. The publication of the Guardian’s successive World Or-order letters in book form will be undertaken as soon as possible. Meanwhile, the individual letters can be obtained in pamphlet form.

A Traveller’s Narrative, translated by Edward C. Bronson from the manuscript given to him by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The believers are reminded of this significant work on the episode of the Bahá’í, which should be in every individual Bahá’í library.

The Bahá’í House of Worship, by Genevieve L. Coy. This is such an interesting introductory pamphlet on the Cause that Assemblies are urged to keep on hand a good supply at all times.

Bahá’í Catalog. A new, pocket-size catalog will be ready in a few weeks. Will Assemblies kindly report the quantity they will need.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

The series of chapters by Alice Simmons Cox on The New Creation begun in the July issue are attracting wide attention as a scholarly and profound study of the teachings in relation to current thought.

Other recent contributors have been: Benjamin Schreidelman, Marion Holley, Ella C. Quant, Mary S. Hammond, Harry E. Ford, Dale S. Cole, Helen Campbell, Prof. Paul Peroff, David Hoffman, G. Townsheal, Orcella Rafter, Genevieve L. Coy, Prof. Ernest Pye, Ruby Lorraine Radford, H. M. Manji, Kenneth Christian, Maye Harvey Gift, Frances A. Kelsey, Horace Holley, Inez Greeven, Helen Inderlied and Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick.

Contributions are welcomed from believers and also from non-Bahá’ís who are moved by the spirit of the age and have knowledge and experience which adds to our power of understanding. The friends in other countries are particularly invited to send articles, to give the magazine a broad international character.

During the next few months will be published a series by Prof. Shook on Philosophy and Revelation, and a symposium entitled The World Outlook.

The magazine has also its distinct place in the general teaching effort. Local Assemblies, Regional Teaching Committees and individual believers who are active can make use of copies to bring the Cause to the attention of persons and liberal organizations not easily reached through public meetings.

With the steady rise of the Temple, the consolidation of the administrative order and on the other hand the increasing general troubles, World Order must be made an adequate and valuable organ of the Cause. To do so, the assistance and sustaining interest of the friends is vitally important.

The friends are informed that the title “World Order” has recently been protected by registration in the U. S. Patent Office.

BAHÁ’I YOUTH BULLETIN

The National Youth Committee is pleased to announce that beginning with the next issue, the Bahá’í Youth Bulletin will be published in New York City.

The October issue will contain reports of Summer School Sessions and a survey of Youth activities throughout the United States and Canada. In addition to this news, there will be a most interesting Editorial, and copy of the Guardian’s latest letter to the National Youth Committee.

Although limited in space to sixteen pages, the Bahá’í Youth Bulletin is filled with interesting reading not only for Bahá’ís, but for all those who are interested in the progress that Youth is making in this great work of helping to build the foundation for the New World Order.

The Bulletin is still ten cents per copy, forty cents per year, to subscribers in the United States. To foreign addresses, the price is fifteen cents per copy, fifty cents per year. Subscriptions may be sent to the new Business Manager, Mae Graves, 1767 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, New York.

Manuscripts may be sent to the Secretary of the National Youth Committee, Miss Zeah Holden, 48 Terrace Avenue, Allany, New York.

We expect to sell every one of the 1,000 copies of our October issue, so you’d better get busy with that subscription, if you haven’t already done so!

Leaving Tokyo I came to Kyoto. Mr. and Mrs. Tokojirm Torii met me. He is the great blind brother who received those two beautiful Tablets from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Mr. Torii is lovely like St. John and so is his wife. He has such great capacity and he has done solid, glorious foundation work. I felt his helpful influence in each city in Japan that I visited. He knows how to take responsibility; he is scholarly, a good speaker, a fluent Esperantist, and he is always smiling and pleasant.

Mr. Kikutarö Futaba (who was a university student in Tokyo in 1915 when I visited Japan first) came to Kyoto from his native city Toyohashi, to visit me for two days. He said to Mr. Torii (and these two friends have not had the joy of meeting each other for ten years) “Come and spend your summer vacation with me in Toyohashi, and I will help you in any way possible in your translation of ‘Hidden Words.’” This dear Fujitasan was the boy who said to Agnes and me in 1915: “Please excuse me that I always come the first one to the meeting and remain until the last one, but I’m so interested in the Bahá’í Teachings.”

There is a religious daily newspaper in Kyoto called Chugai Nippo... the only daily, purely religious newspaper in the world... with a circulation of fifty thousand. It is a newspaper of the Buddhists and its subscribers are Buddhists in Japan, China, in the States and Canada. The Bulletin is still ten cents per copy, forty cents per year, to subscribers in the United States. To foreign addresses, the price is fifteen cents per copy, forty cents per year. MARTHA ROOT’S TEACHING ACTIVITIES IN JAPAN

a strong group established in Kobe. He brought a reporter from "Kobe Shim bun" who interviewed us about the Bahá’í Teachings and the newspaper photographer took our pictures. The article appeared June 24.

A beautiful Bahá’í young woman came three times to see me in Kobe as she is a friend of Miss Alexander, and was taught by Miss Alexander and her husband Mrs. Finch. I met several friends in Japan who asked for Mrs. Finch and wished to send her loving greetings.

I went over to Osaka one afternoon to call upon a friend of Mr. Torii, Mr. K. Nakamura one of the editors of "Osaka Mainichi". He has visited some of the newspaper editors of our country and is very scholarly and keen humanitarian. I gave him "Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era" in Japanese and we spoke of the Bahá’í Faith. The article they used in the English edition, June 24, did not say much about Bahá’í, but it did carry the statement "she is a Bahá’í". I do not know what the Japanese edition had. He invited in to our coffee party in the reception room of the newspaper another editor who took the interview in Japanese. It was also taken in Braille (The Japanese edition may have used an earlier article, for when I arrived in Yokohama one of their journalists was at the ship.)

This paper, the "Osaka Mainichi" in its morning and evening editions has a combined circulation of more than three and a half million copies daily and its sister paper (under the same ownership) published in Tokyo, the "Tokyo Nichi Nichi" has a circulation of two million four hundred thousand. Their Braille edition has a circulation of three thousand.

I invited eighteen Esperantists of Kobe and Osaka to my hotel in Kobe, to a lecture in Esperanto about the Bahá’í Teachings. Two French Esperantists from the "Lamotte Picquet" were also guests and I gave them a letter of introduction to Shoghi Effendi, for their ship will be stationed for a time at Haifa in the autumn. It is an immense help to any Bahá’í teacher working abroad to be a proficient Esperantist. I hope our Bahá’ís will study this auxiliary language when Lidija Zamenhof comes to the United States, then they will become excellent Esperantists, for Lidija is one of the very best Esperanto teachers and scholars in the whole world.

The day before I sailed Mr. and Mrs. Torii came to Kobe and stayed until my ship left. We were going to have a Bahá’í Conference, but Mr. Inouye's wife was very ill with appendicitis and he could not come, but we had a little gathering at the hotel, Bahá’ís and new souls. But lo, next forenoon at the ship all the Bahá’ís were together. Mr. Inouye came for half an hour, and down in my state-room we all had a prayer together and a few earnest words.

The Bahá’í Faith will illumine Japan. Agnes Alexander, the great apostle to Japan, is doing work as outstanding as the apostles of old. Her visit to our country will bring Japan and the United States closer. I hope you will see her and hear about Japan, and that you will read about Japan and that Bahá’u’lláh will wait into your hearts the "Guidance" to do some deed to bring "the Golden Age" of the Bahá’í Faith in Japan into a solid reality, and do it now.

As I sailed from Japan (after sending out from the ship one last article to those Japanese newspapers) I thought of the great Buddha in Japan and the Bahá’ís in establishing the New World Order in Japan. Shoghi Effendi has sent them such brave and tender instructions. Every country knows our Guardian never lets them go, he is helping every country. 'Abdu’l-Bahá sent nineteen Tablets to Japan and today we see they are beginning to bear rare and wonderful fruits.

ANNUAL REPORT

The current year may justly be described as outstanding in the history of the Faith in this land. We have been conscious of a new and vital spirit within the community, and outward signs of its activity have not been lacking. Looking backward, over even so short a period, we may discern three stages in the general development. First an awakening among all the believers, second, a realization of community consciousness, fostered by, and co-incident with, the establishment of the Administrative Order, and thirdly the beginning of a wider and more effective teaching work.

The year began with an event of outstanding importance; the receipt of Shoghi Effendi’s general letter entitled "The Unfoldment of World Civilization," a copy of which was sent to every believer. To this, more than to any other outward cause, may be attributed the expansion of consciousness which has been apparent in the English Bahá’í community. Our attention was directed in a compelling manner to the wide and universal aspects of Bahá’u’lláh’s Revelation: we were given an indication of the course of history in the next few years, and were forced to realize the crucial necessity of building, firmly and steadily, the fabric of the New World Order in Great Britain. In this letter the Guardian called attention to two processes at work within society—one of disintegration affecting every phase of human life, and one of construction associated directly with the rise of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Subsequent world shattering events have named but two, the abdication of Edward VIII with the consequent attacks upon the church, and the outbreak of war in Spain between the upholders of two social doctrines to whose alignment of forces the Guardian had already referred in a previous letter—bear striking testimony to the Guardian’s unerring perception, and in association with a host of other ills—strikes and lock-outs, civil disturbances, universal rearmament—confirm his dictum that humanity is now entering the outer fringe of the darkest period of its history. "The signs of impending convulsions and chaos can now be discerned, inasmuch as the prevailing order appeareth to be lamentably defective."

This clear analysis of the present world picture, followed in the second half of his letter by an intimation of the entrancing vision of ‘The Most Great Peace,’ aroused in the hearts of the friends a desire to play their part in the establishment of that great day. In this noble aim the National Spiritual Assembly provided initiative and leadership, and served as the channel for a flow of encouragement and guidance which constantly came from the Guardian. The activity, consolidation and strengthening of the National Spiritual Assembly has been one of the significant items of the year. Through the measures which it has initiated, the contact it has maintained with the community, the supervision it has exercised over the local Assemblies and isolated believers, and through much practical in the Bahá’í technique of consultation, it has won the confidence of the friends and acquired a valuable experience to be handed on to subsequent national bodies.

Early in the year a Teaching Bulletin was issued by the National in August 1936, at Matlock, Bath. Its hopes, and a fresh spirit of fellowship and dedication was engendered and diffused throughout the country. The classes were of a high standard. It would be hard to overestimate the significance of this achievement in the development of the Faith in England, for it demanded and received the enthusiasm and full support of all the believers, it undoubtedly attracted Divine confirmation and stands as our first important national undertaking. The Guardian signified his pleasure at its success and sent the following message:—"The institution of the Summer School constitutes a vital and inseparable part of any teaching campaign, and as such ought to be given the full importance it deserves in the teaching plans and activities of the believers. It should be organized in such a way as to attract the attention of the non-believers to the Cause and thus become an effective medium for teaching." Plans are already complete for the second Summer School in August 1937.

In July 1936 the World Fellowship of Faiths held its second International Congress in London, the subject being "World Fellowship Through Religion." Representatives of all the leading Faiths were present and a session was allotted to each one. The Bahá'í paper, approved by Shoghi Effendi, was composed and read by Mr. Townshend. In introducing the Bahá'í session, the chairman, Sir Herbert Samuel, said in effect that if he were asked to say which of all the Faiths represented was the nearest to the aim of the Congress, he would reply the Bahá'í, for World fellowship and unity is the raison d'être of the Bahá'í Community. Mrs. Helen Bishop, Madame Orlova and Mr. St. Barbe Baker spoke for the Faith, and Mr. Hirst, of Leeds, made a plea for recognition of the Bahá'í principles.

Two important decisions of the National Spiritual Assembly made during the year are as follows:—One, reported in Bahá'í Journal number one and clarified in the following number, reads: "Individual believers must not communicate with persons of eminence in governmental or political circles, except through the National Spiritual Assembly." The second ruling delimited the area of jurisdiction of the London Spiritual Assembly to within a radius of twelve and a half miles of Charing Cross.

In January 1937, a convention of Bahá'í students was held in Paris. Six people attended from England and one of them read a paper.

A cable was sent to the American National Spiritual Assembly during the period of the floods in the Mississippi valley, expressing the sympathy of the British friends with America in this national disaster.

The following Committees of the National Spiritual Assembly have been working during the year:—Teaching; Reviewing; Contacts; Library; Summer School. The Reviewing Committee has approved a book on the Faith and some articles. The Contacts Committee is in close touch with the N.S.A. and sends literature to many people. The Library Committee has been appointed only recently but has succeeded in placing books in various public libraries. Mrs. George was appointed to maintain contact with the isolated believers, a service which is greatly appreciated by them.

Teaching

In April 1936 the following message was received from the Guardian:—"There is undoubtedly no higher call than that of bringing the Message to a world tormented and torn on every side by the forces of destructive materialism. It is for us to realize the full measure of the responsibility that has been laid upon our shoulders in this matter, and having attained full consciousness of our responsibility to unite in the discharge." Although teaching has never ceased and has been notable in certain instances such as Summer School and the work in Devonshire, it is realized that this year in England has been a period of internal consolidation, of gathering our energies, of investigating the most opportune fields and the most effective methods, of gaining experience and of preparing for efficient teaching work. The N.S.A. believes that one great factor not yet integrated into the scheme of national teaching, is the potentiality of every believer, no matter what his capacities or talents may be, to teach the Cause, and it strongly recommends that this matter should receive the deep and prayerful consideration of every follower of Bahá'u'lláh.

(To be concluded)
All-praise to the unity of God, and all-honor to Him, the sovereign Lord, the incomparable and all-glorious Ruler of the universe, Who, out of utter nothingness, hath created the reality of all things, Who, from naught, hath brought into being the most refined and subtle elements of His creation, and Who, rescuing His creatures from the abasements of remoteness and the perils of ultimate extinction, hath received them into the Kingdom of incorruptible glory. Nothing short of His all-encompassing grace, His all-pervading mercy, could have possibly achieved it. How could it, otherwise, have been possible for sheer nothingness to have acquired by itself the worthiness and capacity to emerge from its state of non-existence into the realm of being?—Baha'u'llah.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SPIRITUAL POWER

The world has become a jungle dominated by the fierce monsters of collective social policy. Nothing in history compares to the force accumulated by certain nations on the material plane, nor to the aggressiveness of their avowed plans. All that militarism and national authority and financial resources can supply are at the disposal of these apocalyptic beasts.

Whether willingly or unwillingly, whether consciously or unconsciously, millions of human beings constitute the atoms of these monstrous powers, and by compulsory if not voluntary obedience supply the necessary factor of psychological life which projects the beasts from the realm of imagination into the arena of human experience.

Their savage roars compose the substance of the daily news; their attack and recoil is the visible history of these transitory years.

Aside from the indifferent or fearful attitude of other nations, aside from the aspiration of individuals made helpless by such collective turmoil, there is no other reality upon earth save the interposition of God's Power and Authority through Baha'u'llah. His Power reigns supreme, unaffected by human will raised in ignorance or opposition, but the visible evidences of His Power depend upon the conscious response of souls to the new Law of unity.

The Bahá'ís may be certain that in the world there are mighty hosts awaiting the hour of recognition when their greater powers will be added to our own. But meanwhile all Bahá'ís have their unique mission to fulfil. Ours is the privilege of disclosing in human life the true patterns of World Order which Baha'u'llah created in the world of the soul and spirit, ours to reflect the radiance of an inner joy, ours the task of spreading the Word and raising up the House of Worship which embodies the principle of The Most Great Peace.

May we not, one and all, rise to the heights of understanding, throw off any clinging veils of hesitation and doubt, and with the whole force of our beings become inspired, not merely with willingness, but with fiery determination to throw ourselves into the performance of the Seven-Year Plan. These apocalyptic beasts that ravage the world have no real power. Their apparent force is naught but the negation of faith in God. But that negation feeds upon our lack of faith, and the superior power of God requires consecrated souls through which to manifest the Victory.

The National Spiritual Assembly longs for evidences of that true faith which is synonymous with action in this world.
NATIONAL ASSEMBLY HOLDS CONFERENCE AND PUBLIC MEETING

It was the privilege of the members of the National Spiritual Assembly to meet in conference with the Baha'is of Portland, Oregon and a number of other cities on Sunday, October 17, 1937. In addition to Portland, the cities represented were: Vancouver, Boise, Colorado Springs, Monroe, Everett, Seattle, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles, not reckoning the cities from which the members of the National Assembly came to this conference.

The subject of the Seven-Year Plan was the topic of consultation, and its importance was stressed by a number of the friends. At five P. M. the Portland Assembly served a buffet supper attended by about fifty additional guests, persons especially invited because of their interest in the Cause.

A public meeting was held in the ballroom of Multnomah Hotel, Monday evening, October 18, on the subject of "The Need for World Unity." This meeting attracted an audience of about four hundred which filled the room. Mrs. Dorothy Baker spoke on "Cycles of Civilization" and Montfort Mills spoke on "The Goal of a New World Order." Horace Holley served as chairman of the meeting.

The business meetings of the N. S. A., held on October 16, 17 and 18, were the first held by the National Assembly in the Pacific Northwest.

BAHA'I MARRIAGE SERVICE IN HOUSE OF WORSHIP

The question having arisen whether non-believers might use the Temple for a marriage service, the National Spiritual Assembly has recorded the following view: that the Temple can be used for a Baha'i marriage service by believers, and for a Baha'i marriage service by a believer and a non-believer, but that non-Baha'i marriage services should not be permitted, nor should the Temple be used for a Baha'i service by non-Baha'is.

MISS ZAMENHOF'S VISIT

Miss Lidia Zamenhof, whose visit as guest of the National Spiritual Assembly was reported in the last issue of Baha'i News, spoke on the subject of "Language and World Unity" at a meeting arranged by the Public Conference Committee of the New York Spiritual Assembly on November 21. These special meetings bring together Baha'is and non-Baha'i speakers on subjects of general public interest. The other speakers were Hon. Dave Heenen Morris, Ambassador to Belgium from 1933 to 1937, and Mrs. Morris. Mr. and Mrs. Morris have long been active in the cause of an international auxiliary language. Mountfort Mills presided at the meeting.

The Committee on Universal Auxiliary Language of the N. S. A. have been making plans for Miss Zamenhof to visit other cities after her Esperanto classes have finished in New York. Miss Zamenhof will go to Philadelphia about January first, and after some weeks there will probably proceed to Detroit.

As Miss Zamenhof wishes to hold Esperanto classes, and arrangements for them are made by Esperantists and not by the local Assemblies, her itinerary is worked out by joint consultation between a national Bahai and a national Esperanto committee.

Local Assemblies desiring information about the plans may write to the Chairman of the Committee on Universal Auxiliary Language, Mrs. Della Quinlan, 70 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE TEMPLE MODEL

Distribution has recently been made of the ten Temple models produced by Mr. John J. Earley on order from the Temple Trustees. These replicas are about thirty inches high, and can be displayed very effectively on a table.

One model has been presented to Shoghi Effendi; one sent for permanent display in Temple Foundation Hall; two models are retained by the National Assembly for special exhibitions which may be arranged by National Committees or local Assemblies; one model has been purchased by both the New York and Chicago Assemblies; two models are being held on orders received from other local Assemblies; and one model is being offered with the compliments of the Temple Trustees to the Concrete Institute. This leaves only one final model which can be purchased by a local Assembly for $95 plus cost of shipment. If, however, the number of orders justifies it, additional models to a total of ten can be cast from the original molds.

This model is accurately scaled and carries a beautiful reproduction of the intricate scheme of external decoration, somewhat simplified as required by adjustment to the small scale. The National Spiritual Assembly trusts that these excellent replicas of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar will contribute powerfully to public teaching during coming years. It should be possible to arrange for temporary displays in museums, libraries, universities and expositions, as well as in store windows under conditions preserving the dignity of the Faith.

TEACHING CLASSES HELD AT THE TEMPLE

The Temple Program Committee wishes to report that the class for believers on the subject of “Teaching and Teaching Methods,” conducted by the Temple Guide Committee on Thursday evenings, will during the winter months be held Sundays at 1:30 P.M.

The special attention of Bahá’í communities in the Temple area is called to this announcement.

A BAHÁ’Í SUMMER SCHOOL IN THE SOUTH

For more than a year, the National Spiritual Assembly has given consideration to the possibility of establishing a Summer (or Winter) School somewhere in the South, for serving the believers in that great region. Sooner or later a fourth Bahá’í School will certainly be required, and its program and general arrangements will no doubt be similar to those developed by the three Summer Schools already in existence, and likewise be conducted by a National Committee. At present, however, the National Assembly feels that the collective responsibilities of the American believers under the Seven-Year Plan makes it impossible to take any definite steps in the direction of a new Summer School at present. The believers throughout the Southern States are urged to concentrate their efforts on direct teaching, as all growth in our numbers in that area will hasten the time when such a School can be firmly established. Suggestions, however, will be welcome, as the National Assembly will require all possible information in order to base any future action upon thorough understanding of all relevant facts and possibilities.

ILLUSTRATED TEMPLE LECTURES ATTRACT WIDE ATTENTION

The Bahá’í Temple is one of the most powerful teachers of the Faith in America today. As the ornamentation of this unique religious edifice proceeds, it will become even more important as a teaching medium. In fact, teachers have found, as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has promised that lectures on the Temple, particularly if illustrated, offer an extremely effective manner of presenting the Faith and its dynamic principles.

In order to make it possible for as many Assemblies and Individuals as possible to give illustrated lectures on the Temple, showing the progress of the construction work from the erection of the superstructure, the Teaching Committee has made available stereopticon slides of various views of the building work. This series includes slides of religious edifices of the past, which very often can be used in creating an ideal setting for the slides of the Bahá’í Temple. These slides can be secured from the Secretary of the Teaching Committee, Miss Charlotte Linfoot, 376 60th Street, Oakland, Calif., at a cost of 35 cents each. Orders should be made by numbers, rather than designation of the slides desired. Listed below are the slides now available. As the work on the ornamentation goes forward, additional slides will be made available, illustrating its further progress.

Havening created the world and all that is thereto and move within, He, through the direct operation of His unconstrained and sovereign Will, chose to confer upon man the unique distinction and capacity to know Him and to love Him—a capacity that must needs be regarded as the generating impulse and the primary purpose underlying the whole of creation. Upon the immensity of each and every created thing He hath shed the light of one of His names, and made it a recipient of the glory of one of His attributes. Upon the reality of man, however, He hath focussed the radiance of all His names and attributes, and made it a mirror of His own Self. Alone of all created things man hath been singled out for so great a favor, so enduring a bounty. —Bahá'u'lláh.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE

Catalog: The Publishing Committee has issued a new catalog, revised to October 1, 1937, in convenient pocket-size. Librarians should request a supply for local use.

Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era: The invaluable introductory work by J. E. Esslemont has recently been corrected and revised, and the new edition presents the subject of the Administrative Order in accordance with our present knowledge. The friends are reminded of the great usefulness of this book for teaching work. Paper-bound edition, $0.50.

The Bahá'í World, VI: This volume presents the international developments in the Faith from 1934 to 1936, and careful study of it is necessary for fulfilment of our spiritual world citizenship in the Faith. $3.00.

Life Eternal: This compilation on immortality and the spiritual life is most attractively printed and bound for use as a gift. $2.50.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

The current (November) issue contains an Editorial on 'The Magnificent Opening of the New Era: The Laboratory of Life' by Louise D. Boyle; The fifth chapter in the New Creation, by Alice Simmons Cox; The Cultural Unity of the East, by V. B. Metta; 'Abdu'l-Bahá's teaching on The Types of Character; The New Frontier of Civilization, by Ralph Tyler Flewelling; Revelation, by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick; The Seed of Civilization, Book Review, by Helen Inderlief; and Signs of the Times, by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick.

The friends active in teaching are requested to appreciate the usefulness of the magazine as an important means of contact with inquirers. Among the special offers are, trial subscription at $1.00 for seven consecutive months, and seven copies of any one issue for $1.00. The magazine is edited to appeal to the public as well as directly to Bahá'ís. A periodical has a timely interest and a variety of contents which can awaken interest in ways not met by books and pamphlets. Fireside groups should have their attention called to the magazine, which can assist in deepening the knowledge and interest of those just beginning to attend Bahá'í meetings.
These energies with which the Day-Star of Divine bounty and Source of heavenly guidance hath endowed the reality of man lie, however, latent within him, even as the flame is hidden within the candle and the rays of light are potentially present in the lamp. The radiance of these energies may be obscured by worldly desires even as the light of the sun can be concealed beneath the dust and dross which cover the mirror. Neither the candle nor the lamp can be lighted through their own unaided efforts, nor can it ever be possible for the mirror to free itself from its dross. It is clear and evident that until a fire is kindled the lamp will never be ignited, and unless the dross is blotted out from the face of the mirror it can never represent the image of the sun nor reflect its light and glory.—Baha’u’llah.

RADIO COMMITTEE

The Radio Committee extends heartiest thanks to the friends who are sending in talks for general radio use. We cannot over-estimate the good uses of radio; every word goes out to unseen thousands who make up the Bahai world of tomorrow. More talks could be used. Fifteen-minute talks are preferred, and these should be five typed pages, double spaced. Those who cannot go out and teach may make a nation-wide contribution in this way. We hope to hear from many more. Address all talks to Mrs. Dorothy Baker, 615 W. Elm St., Lima, Ohio.

A few talks are listed below for immediate use. Further lists will appear from time to time.

1. A suggested series on World Order:
   - Political Unity for a World of Peace, by Marion Holley. (World Order, Dec., 1936.)
   - Poverty and Crime, by Helen Inderlied.
   - A World Language, by Agnes Alexander.
   - Unity in Religion, by Dorothy Baker. (World Order, Feb., 1937.)

2. Copies of the New York series on World Order may still be obtained.

3. A Progressive Revelation series will be reviewed and ready Nov. 1.

The series will include:
- Israel Speaks, by Dorothy Baker.
- Jesus, the Christ, by Allen Gorrell and Edmund Niessler.
- Ancient Oriental Prophecy, by Frank Warner.
- The Prophet of Arabia, by Charleen Warner.

- The Day of the Báb, by Dorothy Baker.
- Baha’u’lláh, the Glory of God. (Promulgation of Universal Peace, p. 22.)

It is suggested that this series be given without interruption.

4. The following are talks on spiritual topics, adapted to devotional hours, or for use with other series, or to be used alone:
   - How to Overcome Our Difficulties, by Ruth Moffett.
   - The Royal Road to Happiness in This New Day, by Ruth Moffett.
   - The Soul, Mind and Spirit of Man, by Elsa Blakeley.
   - Peace or Prejudice, by Alice Parker.
   - The Eternal Worlds, by Bahiyyih Lindstrom.
   - *A Narrative by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, by Elizabeth Cheney. (Story taken from Mysterious Forces of Civilization.)
   - The Uses of Prayer, by Dorothy Baker.
   - The Habit of Prayer, by Dorothy Baker.
   - Bible Prophecies, by Dorothy Baker.
   - Some general talks, well adapted to single presentations:
     - World Peace, by Ruhi Afrán.
     - The Divine Physician, by Mamie Seto.
     - Unity of Thought, by Harry Jay.
     - The Spirit of the Age, by Nina Matthison.
     - *'Abdu'l-Bahá and World Peace, by Nina Matthison.
     - The New World Order, by Lucy Heist.

7. True Survival (or Things in Reverse), by Helen Inderlied.

The talks so far listed are ready to be sent out in typed form. A minor charge of ten cents per talk will be made, to help defray the expenses. Orders may be placed through Mrs. Baker.

From time to time valuable suggestions come in which are helpful to all. Mr. Eugene Hilgert of Lima suggests that the friends adopt the talks of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to radio use, and recommends the following ones as well timed for fifteen-minute presentations, and covering a most interesting range of subjects:

- Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 18, 26 and 28 (combined) 30, 40, 48 and 51, 67, 75, 80, 93, 109, 117, 130, 136.
- Promulgation of Universal Peace, p. 2, 22, 36, 76, 90, 93, 118, 122, 125.

A few of these have been tried on the weekly programs in Lima with good results. It is suggested that the reading of these talks be preceded by a simple statement concerning their Author.

A suggestion has come in regarding the use of small stations. Large cities are often prohibitive in price and in censorship of material, whereas outlying stations which have more difficulty in filling their time, are disposed to welcome educational and devotional programs, provided that the material does not have the air of proselytizing. Visit your neighboring stations!

DOROTHY BAKER, RUTH BROWN, ELSIE AUSTIN.

LOCAL RADIO ACTIVITIES

The Spiritual Assembly of Vancouver has announced a series of Radio Talks and Fireside Discussions, Thursday evenings, 8:30 to 8:45, beginning October 7, over Station CKMO (1410 k.c.). The object as stated is to present the modern world and its problems viewed in the light of those all-inclusive principles of World Order which are the aim and purpose of the Baha'i Faith.” The general title of the series is “The World at Home.” Eleven weekly titles are listed, such as “The Present World Crisis,” “War vs. International Cooperation,” “Order, a Law of Nature,” etc.

A most interesting aspect of this activity is the announcement that “following these talks, groups of interested people, gathered in private homes throughout the city, will discuss the subjects in an informal, though serious atmosphere in an effort to understand more of these challenging problems and the unifying forces at work to establish the World Order propounded by Baha'u'llah.”

A new element has thus been introduced into Fireside study groups, the result of which will be awaited with profound interest by the Assemblies of other cities.

The New York Assembly announces a series of three broadcasts over Station WQXR by Mountfort Mills on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, November 10, 11 and 12, from 3:45 to 4:00 P. M. The subjects are: “The World Crisis: Its Cause,” “The World Crisis: Its Cure,” and “The New World Order.” After each broadcast the invitation is made to attend a lecture by Mr. Mills at the Baha'i Center on Sunday, November 14.

This series will be followed by three more radio talks over the same station in January.

LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL

The Louheilen Summer School Committee announce the following dates for next summer:

June 26-30 (incl.), Youth session.
July 3-7, Second Youth session.
July 10-19, Laboratory Course (for those of any age who wish to make an intensive study of the Baha’i Teachings and who wish practice in speaking and in making new contacts).
August 20-28, General session.

If there is a sufficient demand a third youth session will be held in August or early September.

This announcement is made now for the benefit of those who have to arrange their vacations early. The subjects and leaders of courses will be announced later.

INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

“While Mrs. F. B. Stewart was in Buenos Aires she interested Sra. de Garcia Rosell in the Baha’i teachings and gave her her names and address in Peru. As Sra. Rosell publishes a magazine, Universal, in Lima, it was easy to find her. She was just the person to gather together a select group of liberal thinking people and bring them to us, for a preparatory teaching. The first group met on July 10. My mother (Mrs. Stebbins), prepared a paper on ‘The Uneness of Mankind,’ while I wrote on ‘The Temple’ at Wilmette. Sra. Rosell’s son was able to translate our papers. The audience was composed of distinguished men and women: there were present engineers, business men, naval and military officers. After our papers had been read and translated the meeting was thrown open for discussion. The two things which interested them most were the idea of independent investigation of truth, and having no clergy. Our statements met with no opposition or criticism, and in so Catholic a country, this was remarkable, and showed the wisdom and care that Sra. Rosell had used in the selection of our audience. Our next meeting, a little later, was attended by the same twenty with a few additional people. My mother read a paper on ‘Security for a Failing World’ and I one on ‘Science and Religion.’ In spite of my foreign accent and lack of knowledge of the language I read it in Spanish and this was, I believe, more effective. We were unexpectedly called away from Lima and were obliged to leave the formation of a study group in Sra. Rosell’s hands. In the Fall I am planning to spend a month in Lima to perfect my Spanish and teach Sra. Rosell more about the writings of Baha’u’llah and ‘Abdu’l-Baha, as there is no doubt she will make a fine teacher and be of great help to us in spreading the Cause.”—(From report written by Isabel Stebbins Dodge.)

In Mexico City Miss Beatrice Irwin completed her work for the present. Her contribution has been most remarkable and without the aid of the Spanish language she managed to approach some of the most distinguished and important people of Mexico. A summary of her activities follows:

April 30 Miss Irwin gave an address on World Citizenship before the Masonic Lodges. There were five hundred people present. July 1, Miss Irwin lectured before the Institute of ‘Impersonal Life.’ This lecture was listened to by over one thousand people. A world broadcast was given on The Baha’i House of worship. August 4 an exhibit of Baha’i Literature was arranged at the Nat. University Summer School. Also in the chief book shop of the city for three weeks with splendid publicity. Again the American book store allowed the same exhibit to remain in the large window for three weeks. A class of ten students was organized and carried forward by Miss Irwin.

Mrs. Stewart’s short visit to Mexico City during the Musical Conference bore immense fruit for she left a well-organized class under the direction of Mr. Pedro Espinosa. This class will continue through the Winter, letters and questions will be directed to Mrs. Stewart and she will answer in Spanish, the class will read and study in this way and so remarkable is the interest aroused that we will surely have results.

It is necessary for the Inter-America Committee to have a good deal more Spanish Literature and this is now the next objective of the Committee’s work.

L. A. Mathews, Chairman.

YOUTH COMMITTEE

To Baha’i youth throughout the world

Dearest Baha’i friends:

Conceivably every energetic Baha’i youth of the world can steadfastly endure more of our tremendous and sacred task of spreading the Teachings among our fellow-youth. Pulled by the joy of it and impelled by the love of it, whole-heartedly persevering, why should we be concerned about the enormity of our “well-nigh staggering” responsibility when we know we are indeed superhuman enough to bear it... once we assume it!

The National Youth Committee is calling all Baha’i youth to unanimously arise as an international body to promote the Third Annual International Baha’i Youth Symposiums to be held Sunday, February 27, 1938. Symposium plans should be made now and every possible means should be used to publicize this event.

Every Baha’i youth group, “however humble, however inexperienced” is urged to hold a public Symposium on February 27 at which representative youth will discuss general, personal, and social aspects of the Teachings. All features of the same plan will be universally adopted, but the subjects may vary according to community interests.

Adhering to the same general steps of last year’s procedure, we have adopted the following plans:

1. General theme, “Humanity’s Coming of Age.”
2. Suggested Symposium topics:
   a. General—The Dauntbreakers.
   b. Personal application of the Teachings—
Let us discipline and exercise ourselves for this event. What should our scope be, both as individuals and members of our group? What can each of us and all of us do? Let us make our plans now, complete them at our mid-winter conferences, and may we reach our state of maximum effectiveness for February 27!

Faithfully yours,

National Youth Committee.

“THE EMANATIONS OF SPIRITUAL POWER”

So vast and significant an enterprise as the construction of the first Mashriqu’l-Adhikar of the World should be supported, not by the munificence of a few but by the joint contributions of the entire mass of the convinced followers of the Faith. It cannot be denied that the emanations of spiritual power and inspiration destined to radiate from the central Edifice of the Mashriqu’l-Adhikar will to a very large extent depend upon the range and variety of the contributing believers, as well as upon the nature and degree of self-denial and disinterested offerings that will be given. Moreover, we should, I feel, regard it as an axiom and guiding principle of Bahá’í administration that in the conduct of every specific Bahá’í activity, as different from undertakings of a humanitarian, philanthropic, or charitable character, which may in future be conducted under Bahá’í auspices, only those who have already identified themselves with the Faith and are regarded as its avowed and unreserved supporters should be invited to join and collaborate. For apart from the consideration of embarrassing complications which the association of non-believers in the financing of institutions of a strictly Bahá’í character may conceivably engender in the administration of the Bahá’í community of the future, it should be remembered that these specific Bahá’í institutions, which should be viewed in the light of Bahá’u’lláh’s gifts bestowed upon the world, can best function and most powerfully exert their influence in the world only if reared and maintained solely by the support of those who are fully conscious of, and are unreservedly submissive to, the claims inherent in the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh. In cases, however, when a friend or sympathizer of the Faith eagerly insists on a monetary contribution for the promotion of the Faith, such gifts should be accepted and duly acknowledged by the elected representatives of the believers with the express understanding that they would be utilized by them only to reinforce that section of the Bahá’í Fund exclusively devoted to philanthropic or charitable purposes. For, as the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh extends in scope and in influence, and the resources of the Bahá’í communities correspondingly multiply, it will become increasingly desirable to differentiate between such departments of the Bahá’í treasury as minister to the needs of the world at large, and those that are specifically designed to promote the best interests of the Faith itself. From this apparent divorce between Bahá’í and humanitarian activities it must not, however, be inferred that the animating purpose of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh stands at variance with the aims and objects of the humanitarian and philanthropic institutions of the day. Nay, it should be realized by every judicious promoter of the Faith that at such an early stage in the evolution and crystallization of the Cause such discriminating and precautionary measures are inevitable and even necessary if the nascent institutions of the Faith are to emerge triumphant and unimpaired from the present welter of confused and often conflicting interests with which they are surrounded.—Shoghi Effendi, Bahá’í Administration, pp. 171-172.

And since there can be no tie of direct intercourse to bind the one true God with His creation, and no resemblance whatever can exist between the transcendent and the Eternal, the contingent and the Absolute, He hath ordained that in every age and dispensation a pure and stainless Soul be made manifest in the kingdoms of earth and heaven.—Bahá’u’lláh.

THE GRAVE OF THORNTON CHASE

On the afternoon of September 30, 1937, Bahá’ís from Los Angeles and Glendale met at the grave of Thornton Chase, “the first Bahá’í in America,” in Inglewood Cemetery, suburban to Los Angeles, California.

The Bahá’ís came together there to fulfill the command of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the Center of the Covenant of God, to commemorate yearly, on the day of his departure, the passing of Mr. Chase. Those who knew Mr. Chase, of whom a number were present, have found their love for him and their respect for his privileged position as the first American Bahá’í only deepened by the passing years, while others present knew and honored him by reputation.

The exact wording of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Tablet in regard to the friends visiting the grave is, in part, as follows:

“In short every year on the anniversary of the ascension of that blessed soul the friends must visit his tomb on the behalf of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, in utmost lowliness and humility, should with all respect lay on his grave wreaths of flowers and spend all the day in quiet prayer, while turning the face toward the Kingdom of Signs and mentioning and praising the attributes of that illustrious person.” (Translated by Shoghi Effendi.)

In compliance with the injunction of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the friends brought beautiful flowers, which they not only put in the receptacles at the head and foot of the tomb, but also strewed over the marble tombstone, upon the surface of which the Greatest Name is engraved, together with a quotation especially written for the purpose by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, which is to the following effect: “This is the illuminated resting place of the holy soul Thornton Chase, who is shining in the horizon of eternal life ever like a star.”

The sunny September afternoon was warm and pleasant; and an airplane flew over head, as the Bahá’ís began to read from the remarks of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá regarding Mr. Chase and recited the prayer which He gave for Mr. Chase while standing beside the grave. All of the friends were offered an opportunity to read selections, some from Tablets about Mr. Chase and others from Mr. Chase’s own account of his visit to the Shrine of Bahá’u’lláh at ‘Akká, Palestine, and to the Tomb of the Bab at Haifa, and his own meeting with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, on that same visit to the Holy Land. How and where (June 5, 1894, at Chicago, Illinois) Mr. Chase first heard of the Bahá’í Faith was told. Mrs. von Kirtley, formerly Mrs. Frank Beckett, produced a list of all that she could remember as having visited the grave with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, September 19, 1912. (They were about nineteen in number, and included Mr. Beckett and herself.) Prayer was read for all the departed in the entire cemetery, and then the friends left for their homes spiritually strengthened and refreshed, a reflection of the condition of Mr. Chase, in joy in the realm of El-Abhá.

Had not ‘Abdu’l-Bahá said in this connection: “... for his spirit will be exhilarated through the loyalty of the friends, and in the world of God will it be happy. The friends of God must be kind to one another, whether it be in life or after death.” For Mr. Chase had died a firm Bahá’í; ‘Abdu’l-Bahá having written to him: “... a soul who is firm will be a Son of the Kingdom of God and will be confirmed with the power of the Holy Spirit. Therefore I have named thee Thabet (firmness) and I supplicate and beseech the True One that, like an unshakable mountain, thou mayest remain firm in the Cause of God and that the whirlwind of tests imprint no effect upon thee. Nay, rather mayest thou become the cause of the firmness of others ...”

Los Angeles is a visiting point for tourists from all over the United States. Bahá’ís pass through the city, sometimes having but a day, or a half a day to spend before they depart. Were they made aware of the importance which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá attached to this grave, which this account endeavors to show, at least to a small extent, they possibly would like the bounty of visiting and praying there. Any member of the Los Angeles Bahá’í Community would feel it a privilege to go along and show them the way, or provide someone else, if unable to go personally.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá arrived in San Francisco, October 3, 1912, and it was there that He received the news that Thornton Chase had passed away in Los Angeles, just three days before.

SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHA’IS OF LOS ANGELES: By, WILLARD P. HATCH.

PILGRIMS’ NOTES

The National Spiritual Assembly will not in the future ask for the authentication of any pilgrim’s notes nor cooperate in their distribution but refer exclusively to the Guardian’s general communications to this body and the American believers for its source of information and guide of action.—Bahá’í Procedure, Section Four, Sheet 13.

ANNUAL REPORT

(Concluded)

Early in the year Mr. and Mrs. Bishop came to England and in addition to working in London made a tour of various parts of the country, speaking to audiences gathered by resident Bahá’ís. They returned to Geneva in September. After examination of Mrs. Bishop’s report the National Spiritual Assembly wrote to Shoghi Effendi requesting her services for another year, a petition which the Guardian granted. Mrs. Bishop was asked to go to Torquay, where in association with Mr. Tobey and Mrs. McKinley active work was begun. From December until April a constant and intense campaign was conducted, Mrs. Bishop speaking in churches, intellectual institutions and private homes. The result of this work was that three people declared themselves and were enrolled, while a large number were introduced to the Faith and the Teachings were widely spread in that district. Follow up work will be continued by the five believers now there, who are preparing themselves for intensive work with a view to enlarging the group into an Assembly.

In the work of the Spiritual Assemblies there is apparent at this end of the year, a different and more impressive method than could be seen at the beginning. In both London and Manchester the old type of teaching in wide generalizations has been succeeded by intensive and vital discussion groups.

In London, the removal of the centre to 46 Bloomsbury Street, made it necessary to conduct a more intimate type of meeting, similar to a fireside group. This has proved highly effective and large attendances are the rule. Fireside meetings have been conducted at various homes, and in Crouch End a group has been formed under the jurisdiction of the London Spiritual Assembly. This group recently rented the Hornsea Town Hall and conducted a well attended and successful public meeting. Plans are being made for a series of public lectures in Caxton Hall during May. London has enrolled seven new believers during the year.

In Manchester a new and vigorous spirit is at work. The Spiritual Assembly has taken a hall in the center of the city and is making full use of it. The Nineteen Day Feast has become firmly established in the community, and with an increased understanding of the Administrative Order, a new teaching programme is being undertaken. Two new believers have been enrolled.

The Baha'i Theatre Group may be mentioned under the heading of Teaching, for this group, organized and directed by Madame Orlova, has proved an effective means of attracting young people to the Faith and of giving them first hand experience of Baha'i consultation. At Naw-Ruz the group presented scenes from 'As You Like It' and is now working on a pageant of the 'Seven Valleys.'

In March 1937, Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher brought a message from the Guardian to the effect that he wishes us to stress two things:—humanity has come of age, and the appearance of Baha'u'llah. These are the two factors to resolve the modern "riddle of existence."

A small pamphlet was composed by the National Spiritual Assembly and five thousand copies printed, available at a penny each.

From the very beginning of the year the National Spiritual Assembly felt the need for literature printed in England, but owing to lack of resources the need remained unfilled. Shortly, however, circumstances arose with which all the friends are acquainted, which led to the decision to form a Publishing Company, for the purpose of publishing Baha'i books through an established printing house. In this project the National Spiritual Assembly was fully supported and encouraged by the Guardian, who sent £50 towards the Fund needed. The National Spiritual Assembly pledged and gave its full support, both moral and financial and sought the help of the friends. The response was immediate and generous, but only from a limited number. The N.S.A. is confident, however, that when the project itself, and the wide range of its probable results, are more fully understood, every believer will sacrifice for its success. With the permission of the Guardian, a circular letter was printed and sent throughout the Baha'i World, seeking the help of the world-wide Baha'i community. It is surely a symptom of the Almighty assistance of Baha'u'llah, that within the short space of one year, we should have successfully accomplished a national undertaking and embarked on another which bids fair to become international in scope. For Shoghi Effendi has likened the establishment of the Publishing Company to the building of the Temple in America and indicates that its success may "mark the inauguration of a new era of expansion of the Cause throughout the British Isles and the rest of the far-flung British Empire." At its last meeting the N.S.A. was advised that there was £153 in the Publishing Fund, which is sufficient to establish the Company legally with a limited capital liability of £100. Proper legal advice has been obtained and the N.S.A. has recorded its decision to register the Company as "The Baha'i Publishing Company Limited." Investigations are being made as to the most favourable method of associating the N.S.A. with the Company. It may be truly said that upon the progress of this plan, depends that expansion of the Teaching work which is now our chief duty to promote.

On March 29th the following cable was received from Haifa:—"Announce Assemblies celebration marriage beloved Guardian. Imperishable honour bestowed upon handmaid of Baha'u'llah Ruhiyyih Khanum Miss Mary Maxwell. Ziaiyih, Mother of Guardian." To this joyful news the National Spiritual Assembly, the Spiritual Assemblies of London and Manchester, and the Bournemouth Group, cabled their expressions of delight. The union of East and West, so dear to the Master's heart, has been cemented in his own Family.

During the year the National Spiritual Assembly has met twelve times; ten times in London, once in Manchester and once at Summer School. It was found necessary to purchase a typewriter for the secretarial work.

One of the greatest problems with which the N.S.A. has had to contend, has been the National Fund. Although this year, receipts are slightly in excess of expenses, it will be seen from the Treasurer's report how very limited are the funds at the disposal of the N.S.A. It is felt that the friends do not yet realize the importance of regular contribution to the Fund, or that it is a Baha'i Law, and not a principle... a command of Baha'u'llah.

This report would not be complete without some reference to the encouragement and guidance which has been received from the Guardian during the year. His constant message has been to persevere and teach the Cause. "Persevere and never feel disheartened." "Rest assured and persevere." "Now is the beginning of your work. And as in the beginning of every task, you are bound to meet all sorts of difficulties. The more you strive to overcome these, the greater will be your reward, and the nearer you will get to that glorious success which, as repeatedly promised by Baha'u'llah, must needs crown the efforts of all those who, whole-heartedly and with pure detachment, strive to work for the spread and establishment of His Cause." And lately these inspiring words to an individual believer, published with his permission. "The goal is clear, the path safe and certain, and the assurances of Baha'u'llah as to the eventual success of our efforts quite emphatic."

In comparison with the greatness and eventual destiny of the Faith of Baha'u'llah, the year may well seem to be of little significance. But in comparison with previous years, and remembering the difficulties which have been overcome both within and without the Faith, and remembering too the smallness of our numbers, we can realize with gratitude the meaning of the Guardian’s words referring to “this auspicious stage in the evolution of the Faith” in England. The uniting of all the friends in an organic unity, the strengthening of the position and authority of the National Spiritual Assembly, the firm establishment of the Administrative Order, as attested by the Guardian, the publication of the Baha’i Journal, the inception of Summer School, the teaching campaign in Devonshire, the consolidation of the Faith in London and Manchester within the Administrative structure and the subsequent beginning of new teaching work in those centers, the initial success of the plan for the Publishing Company, the enthusiasm and active work of the London Youth Group—these are among the outstanding features of the ninety-third year of the Baha’i era in Great Britain.

“All-praise and glory be to God Who, through the power of His might, hath delivered His creation from the nakedness of non-existence, and clothed it with the mantle of life . . . O, how blessed the day when, aided by the grace and might of the one true God, man will have freed himself from the bondage of the world and all that is therein, and will have attained unto true and abiding rest beneath the shadow of the Tree of Knowledge.”

Faithfully,

In His Service,
National Spiritual Assembly.

by DAVID HOFMAN,
Secretary.

These Essences of Detachment, these resplendent Realities are the channels of God’s all-pervasive grace. Led by the light of unfailing guidance, and invested with supreme sovereignty, they are commissioned to use the inspiration of their words, the effusions of their infallible grace and the sanctifying breeze of their revelation for the cleansing of every longing heart and receptive spirit from the dross and dust of earthly cares and limitations. Then, and only then, will the Trust of God, latent in the reality of man, emerge as resplendent as the rising Orb of Divine Revelation from behind the veil of concealment, and implant the ensign of its revealed glory upon the summit of men’s hearts—Baha’w’llah.
'ABDU'L-BAHA'S PRAYER FOR THE SUCCESS OF THE DIVINE PLAN

O Thou Incomparable God! O Thou Lord of the Kingdom! These souls are Thy heavenly army. Assist them and, with the cohorts of the Supreme Concourse, make them victorious; so that each one of them may become like unto a regiment and conquer these countries through the love of God and the illumination of divine teachings.

O God! Be Thou their supporter and their helper, and in the wilderness, the mountain, the valley, the forests, the prairies and the seas, be Thou their confidant—so that they may cry out through the power of the Kingdom and the breath of the Holy Spirit!

Verily, Thou art the powerful, the mighty and the omnipotent, and Thou art the wise, the hearing and the seeing.

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

The Guardian feels most gratified over the splendid progress realized by the Temple Fund, though he still would urge your N. S. A. to impress upon the friends the paramount necessity of maintaining at any cost the steady flow of their offerings. This obviously calls for considerable sacrifice, but such a sacrifice is of the very essence of the Cause and is the only force that can enable it to carry out its ideas into the realm of constructive and living action.—October 30, 1937.

I am delighted with the progress of the Plan and I pray that the contributions to the National Treasury may be such as to lend unprecedented impetus to its development. (The Guardian's postscript to the above.)

"All Should Arise"

To this letter . . . I wish to add a few observations connected with the wider and more challenging issues with which the American believers as a body are now being confronted. As I lift up my gaze beyond the strain and stresses which a struggling Faith must necessarily experience, and view the wider scene which the indomitable will of the American Baha'i community is steadily unfolding, I can not but marvel at the range which the driving force of their ceaseless labors has acquired and the heights which the sublimity of their faith has attained. The outposts of a Faith, already persecuted in both Europe and Asia, are in the American continent steadily advancing, the visible symbols of its undoubted sovereignty are receiving fresh luster every day and its manifold institutions are driving their roots deeper and deeper into its soil. Blest and honored as none among its sister communities has been in recent years, preserved through the inscrutable dispensations of Divine Providence for a destiny which no mind can as yet imagine, such a community cannot for a moment afford to be content with or rest on the laurels it has so deservedly won. It must go on, continually go on, exploring fresh fields, scaling nobler heights, laying firmer foundations, shedding added splendor and achieving added renown in the service and for the glory of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh. The seven year plan which it has sponsored and with which its destiny is so closely interwoven, must at all costs be prosecuted with increasing force and added consecration. All should arise and participate. Upon the measure of such a participation will no doubt depend the welfare and progress of those distant communities which are now battling for their emancipation. To such a priceless privilege the inheritors of the shining grace of Bahá'u'lláh cannot surely be indifferent. The American believers must gird up the loins of endeavor and step into the arena of service with such heroism as shall astound the entire Baha'i world. Let them be assured that my prayers will continue to be offered on their behalf.

—Shoghi Effendi

Postscript to letter dated November 25, 1937.

THE BAHÁ'Í VIEW OF PACIFISM

The following statement was written by the Guardian, through his secretary, to Mrs. Helen Bishop on November 21, 1935, and is now published with Shoghi Effendi's approval.

"With reference to the absolute pacifists, or conscientious objectors to war; their attitude, judged from the Baha'i standpoint, is quite anti-social and due to its exaltation of the individual conscience leads inevitably to disorder and chaos in society. Extreme pacifists are thus very close to the anarchists, in the sense that both of these groups lay an undue emphasis on the rights and merits of the individual. The Baha’i conception of social life is essentially based on the subordination of the individual will to that of society. It neither suppresses the individual nor does it exalt him to the point of making him an anti-social creature, a menace to society. As in everything, it follows the ‘golden mean.’ The only way that society can function is for the minority to follow the will of the majority. “The other main objection to the conscientious objectors is that their method of establishing peace is too negative. Non-cooperation is too passive a philosophy to become an effective way for social reconstruction. Their refusal to bear arms can never establish peace. There should first be a spiritual revitalization which nothing, except the Cause of God, can effectively bring to every man’s heart.”

The schedule of meetings published in a recent issue of Baha’i News has been revised as follows: December, 1937, meeting held at Chevy Chase, Md., instead of West Englewood; January, 1938, meeting to be held at Lima, Ohio, instead of New Orleans; place of March meeting to be determined.

The principal purpose of the change in the December meeting was to provide opportunity to visit the Earley Studio and observe the progress of work under the contract for external decoration of the Temple gallery section. About two hours were spent at the Studio, and the members were happy to note that the work is proceeding more rapidly than had been anticipated.

A considerable number of completed units are already on hand, for shipment to the Temple grounds next spring. The most delicate part of the work, the carving of the models, is also well under way. The plain surface of the gallery does not require this hand carving, and these units will be cast at the Temple site.

The members of the National Spiritual Assembly also inspected the system of cost accounting employed for this contract, a system adopted by the City of Nashville for a large contract carried out by Mr. Earley some years ago, and are satisfied that it is most efficient.

These passing months, when it is essential to complete the Annual Budget, are a time of sacrifice, but later in the year, when the gallery ornamentation is all in place, its impressive beauty will make the believers forget the difficulty of the task and fill us with a sense of joyous gratitude that we have been privileged to play some part in so universal and permanent an exposition of the Faith.

Later generations, thronging this House of Worship, will envy us the honor and blessing of raising the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar during a period of outer turmoil when sacrifice truly counts. For every seed we plant and cultivate now, the harvest will be increased a thousandfold!

“PRAYING FURTHER SUCCESS!”

“Delighted teaching progress. Praying further success” were the words of the Guardian to the National Assembly in response to the information given him that plans had been consummated to introduce the Faith into each State in the United States and each Province of Canada where there are no Baha’is, and to extend the teaching service in such states and provinces as do not have Spiritual Assemblies.

The Teaching Committee wishes it was possible to bring to the consciousness of each and every Baha’i in America, a full realization of the vital manner in which the American Baha’i Community is responding to the Guardian’s urgent appeal. A new wave of sustained and persevering service has been launched which will in due course bring us to the goal the Guardian has set for us. The victories being achieved are most heartening; and the doors of guidance opening ever new fields, most inspiring. There is no doubt, as we redouble our efforts, in this stupendous undertaking, the promises of the Master will be richly fulfilled and great spiritual confirmation reach each and every Baha’i.

It is possible to outline only briefly, a few of the varied activities being engaged in by the Assemblies and individuals through the country, and expanding to foreign shores.

Nebraska is the first State in which the Faith was introduced in response to the Guardian’s call for Pioneers a year ago. At that time, teaching work was done in Omaha and Lincoln. The seeds sown then, have been watered by continuous follow-up teaching, until at present there are ten voting Baha’is in Omaha, who plan to organize a Spiritual Assembly on April 21, 1938. They are holding regular meetings and study classes. In Lincoln with two voting Baha’is, a study class is being held regularly.

Oklahoma is the first State into which Baha’is migrated in response to the Guardian’s call. While some teaching work had been done in Oklahoma City, it did not produce voting Baha’is. Through the pioneering services of the Entzminger family, who moved from Geyersville, California to Oklahoma City about a year ago, there are now eight voting Baha’is, holding two study classes each week and conducting a children’s class weekly. The first Nineteen Day Feast, marking the beginning of the Administrative activities of this Group, was held September 27, 1937. As a result of the continued teaching work the members of the Group hope to be able to form a Spiritual Assembly on April 21, 1938.

North Dakota is another State into which Baha’is moved. Mrs. Margarite Breugger moved from Chicago to Fargo. There are now two voting Baha’is in Fargo. North Dakota was likewise the State to which Mrs. Mabel Ives and Mrs. Gale Woolson traveled last year to introduce the Faith. They assisted with the work in Fargo, and did public teaching work in Carrington and Glenfield. At present, Mrs. Woolson and Miss Margarite Reimer are doing follow-up work in these cities. The work will be further stimulated through the recent arrival of Mrs. Edwina Powell, who has been doing excellent work in Fargo, and through the joint efforts of herself and Mrs. Breugger, have expanded the work into Bismark.

Montana is another state into which the Faith has been introduced by the “settlement” method of teaching. Mrs. Lorrol O. Jackson, of Seattle, settled in Helena this fall; and is now actively engaged in establishing the Faith. Some of the best publicity secured this year, was had in Helena; where detailed articles concerning the Faith were published. The Principles were outlined, a picture of the Temple printed, and words of encouragement given. One article was headed, "Baha'i Faith to be introduced to this State." Great assistance was rendered in this city by friends, who gave letters of introduction to Mrs. Jackson, and urged their friends to attend the Baha'i classes.

Hand Omnipotence removed archbreaker Baha’u’llah’s Covenant. His hopes shattered, his plottings frustrated, society his fellow-conspirators extinguished. God’s triumphant Faith forgives on, its unity unimpaired, its purity unsullied, its stability unshaken. Such death calls for neither exultation nor recrimination but evokes overwhelming pity so tragic downfall unparalleled in religious history.

South Carolina is the present field of activity of Mrs. Emogene Hoagg and Mrs. Amelia Bodmer. These two pioneers are making Charleston their headquarters, working in a circuit from that point. They will stay in South Carolina until there is an active Baha'i Group there.

South Dakota was the point of pioneer service last year on the part of Mrs. Maimie Seto and Miss Margarette Reimer. Study groups were established in Lead, Wall and Deadwood. Miss Margarette Reimer and Mrs. Gale Woolson will do active follow-up work in these cities during the present fall and winter.

West Virginia is another State into which pioneer Baha'is have moved. Miss Marion Holley has just arrived in Huntington to make her home, settle, and establish the Faith.

Mrs. Mabel Ives reports from Monton, New Brunswick, where she is teaching at present, a tremendous interest. She has spoken over the Radio, the newspapers have carried fine articles concerning the Faith; and there appears marked interest.

From Toronto comes the good word of the interest in the Faith in that city, through the sustained teaching work of the Toronto Group, now aided by Mrs. Grace Ober. Mrs. Ober has been in Toronto since early in October and will remain there until the end of the year.

Our pioneer teacher, Louis Gregory, has just left on a teaching trip through the South where he will renew contacts formerly made, and carry on follow-up teaching work in centers where he previously taught. His destination is Alabama, where he hopes to settle near Tuskegee and establish a Baha'i group.

Mrs. Louise Caswell of Portland has moved to Tennessee to assist in the teaching work in that State. Mrs. Caswell first went to Nashville to carry on the follow-up teaching work in that city, resulting from the public meetings held by the National Assembly last winter. This work has now spread to Knoxville and even to Chattanooga, Tennessee. Mrs. Caswell is dividing her time between these three cities to actively carry on the important follow-up teaching services.

Of great interest to the Baha'is will be the recent experience of Mrs. Loulie Matthews in endeavoring to place books in the Public Library of Manila. The cruiser on which Mrs. Matthews was traveling stopped in Manila only a few hours, giving her only a very short time in which to contact those concerned, and if possible have our literature available to the public. At the Library she learned it would be impossible to have the books placed in the Library without the approval of an important committee under the direction of prejudiced orthodox religious leaders. After many inquiries, Mrs. Matthews was finally directed to a gentleman who might place the books on a single shelf containing literature on comparative religions. The representative at first refused, without the approval of the general committee in charge, but finally agreed to place them among the books on comparative religions. After her return to America, Mrs. Matthews received a most inspiring letter from a native Filipino from which the following extracts are given:

"I have been reading the pamphlets you left on the free shelf for references. Really, the Baha'i movement is wonderful and is a new thing to me. Many had not heard of this Baha'i Religion ever before, until I told them about it. Some are interested and are eager to know the teachings... I wish I might contemplate devoting all my surplus time and energy to reading the books of this religion, perhaps you will help me. I am interested in seeing all Baha'i books translated into the Philippine dialects. I believe the Baha'i Religion will spread—it will spread—pop like popcorn, all over the Philippines, and it will replace the old religions."

Dear friends, the reports coming from all parts of the country show how greatly Baha'i faith is spreading and confirming the teaching work today. No blessing can be greater, and no spiritual quickening more powerful than that which comes to the individual who makes himself the channel for the diffusion of the Holy Spirit today. The confirmations truly seem uninterrupted. Let us one and all arise, assured of the spiritual victory—and achieve for America the spiritual destiny invested in it by the Master.

National Teaching Committee.

UNOCCUPIED STATES AND PROVINCES

The areas in the United States and Canada which had no Baha'i community, group nor even enrolled individual believer on May 1, 1937, have been reported by the National Teaching Committee as follows: Arkansas, Nevada, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Utah, West Virginia, Alabama, Delaware, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Pioneers and traveling teachers have since gone to some of these areas, and it is hoped that before the end of the current Baha'i year the unoccupied territory will be considerably decreased.

ASSEMBLIES PLANNING LEGAL INCORPORATION

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to remind all local Assemblies desiring to incorporate to submit copies of their proposed Certificate of Incorporation and their local By-laws together with a copy of the State Statute under which they intend to incorporate in order to facilitate approval of such action. The advice of a local attorney is recommended for the legal procedure of drafting the Certificate or Articles of Incorporation.

TRANSLITERATION OF BAHAI TERMS

The friends are requested to follow the Guardian's instruction concerning the use of Baha'i terms in accordance with the scheme of transliteration he prepared for publication in The Baha'i World. As given in Baha'i Administration, Shoghi Effendi's words on this subject, as long ago as 1923, were... "the faithful spelling of which by all the Western friends will avoid confusion in future, and insure in this matter a uniformity which is greatly needed at present in all Bahá’í literature. . . . I feel confident that all the friends will from now on follow this system and adhere scrupulously and at all times to this code in all their writings."

The preparation of Bahá’í articles, committee reports, etc., should therefore employ the system of translocation which the Guardian has supplied.

Jamshedy, Bahá’í Hall, Bund Road Extension, Karachi, India; Marguerite Welby, 6 Greveil Road, Richmond, Surrey, England; M. Hakim, Paris, France; Miss Dugdale, Herald of the South, Adelaide, South Australia.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

The last report about the contents of the National Press Books was published in _Bahá’í News_ in March, 1937. The new ones for 1937-38 contain the material from about April 15th on. A copy of last year’s Press book has been sent to Shoghi Effendi through the National Assembly, and the committee feels certain that its contents will be concrete evidence of the splendid work done by publicity committees and pioneer workers throughout the country. We would take this opportunity to say that some clippings arrived too late to be mentioned in the last report, such as the outstanding work done by the comparatively new assembly of Jacksonville, Florida; the almost full page article on the Temple and illustrations published in the Washington, D. C., _Post_ on March 7th; together with the tremendous amount of publicity received in connection with the anniversary event of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s arrival in this country. From this the friends will see how important it is that clippings are sent in regularly, at least once a month, and we especially ask traveling teachers to do this.

The Press Books this year are growing by leaps and bounds. Already we have clippings from 53 of the 71 Assemblies. Clippings representing pioneer work and places where there are no Assemblies have come to us from Glendale, Arizona; many cities in California; Fernandina, Florida; Maywood and Kankakee, Illinois; Elkhart, Indiana; Helena, Montana; Deadwood, Wall, Lead and Rapid City, South Dakota; Fargo, North Dakota; Scranton, Pennsylvania; Knoxville and Nashville, Tennessee; Corpus Christi, Texas; Richmond, Virginia; Huntington, West Virginia; Green Bay, Hudson and Three Lakes, Wisconsin.

Of the pioneer work listed above we would make special mention of the work done by Maywood, Illinois. From August, 1937 to November 18th inclusive, the picture of the Temple has been published five times. Lengthy articles about each of their lectures; a picture of Miss Zamenhof and articles about Esperanto and classes to be conducted. The small Temple models have been on display in numerous stores and one of the new models is to be on exhibition shortly in the display window of one of the newspaper offices. In Helena, Montana, Mrs. Lorrol Jackson has succeeded in having a picture of the Temple published and many excellent write-ups. The work done by the Dakotas has been especially fine. Publicity from Scranton, Pennsylvania, is particularly thrilling inasmuch as the talks were reported and so much of the direct teachings were given. Mrs. Kathryn Frankland in Corpus Christi, Texas, has done another remarkable piece of work. Pictures of the Temple were published twice and full one and two column articles about it and the Teachings.

Geyserville Summer School again obtained fine publicity as did Lohulen. It is such remarkably fine work when whole talks are printed in the papers. In Los Angeles a new publication called “Wilshire Friday Night” is giving the teachings much space. From Washington, D. C., came a full column article published in the _Eaton Plan Dealer_, in a “From the Reader” column on the eradication of prejudice, which is excellent. Augusta, Georgia, has done splendid work since April. Honolulu and Hawaii, in addition to other fine articles, through a press interview with the incomparable Bahá’í Journalist, Martha Root, obtained a two column article on Universal Peace and the principles. The national releases on the publication of "Portals to Freedom" and review of "World Order" articles are also among their clippings.

Two unusual features on the Chicago pages are the account of the visit to the Temple by the heroine of the story which was running in the Chicago American. She said she was shown through the Temple by a "grand old man" and then she proceeds to give accurate information about the Temple and teachings. Then an article by Bruno Lessing on "Palestine's Seaports," published in the Herald Examiner is so interesting that we quote what he says in the last paragraph about our Faith: "Did you ever hear of the Baha'i? There is a bus service between Haifa and Mount Carmel which passes a large and beautiful garden, the home of the Baha'i. This is a Persian sect that started a new religion only fifty-three years ago. Its founder, Mirza Ali-Muhammed, declared himself to be the "Gateway through which mankind may renew its connection with Allah." His program was: 'One must lead an honest life without injury to any other human being, one must love one's fellowmen and strive to achieve goodness and humility and universal peace and happiness.' They told me that the sect was growing. Who can foretell how it will stand 2,000 years from now? Its founder was executed by the Persian government for being a big nuisance. Yet who would fail to agree with his creed?"

More and more the Temple is becoming a landmark to autocrats and travelers on land as well as on Lake Michigan. More and more is unsought publicity being given our Faith, bringing to mind 'Abdu'l-Baha's words in a tablet to Shahnaz Waite in 1914—"Consider the Power of the Cause of God that the outsiders like unto the friends are enraged in the promotion of the Cause of God and are glorying in this distinction, although they do not claim to be Baha'i.'"

Urbana we note is most successful in reporting talks. In the North Shore papers, among the many fine clippings is one about the dedication of the Temple grounds with an accompanying picture as well as other beautiful views of the Temple. The international section contains articles from Hungary, Italy, New Zealand, Ceylon, Shanghai and Mexico. We urge these international workers to send two copies of all publicity obtained. Teaneck has its usual quantity as well as quality of news items. New York's World Observer published a long article in connection with Baha'i World Volume VI, and an article about the Temple. Lima has turned in an outstanding amount of clippings. In a paid advertisement about 4x6 they have given various phases of the teachings with large headlines. Monroe, Washington, has also been most successful in getting the teachings published. We regret that space will not permit our mentioning the work of each publicity committee.

We are happy to note that clippings are coming in which show that the publicity chairmen are writing their own releases on the Holy Days as the National Assembly wish them to do. Those of you who think you can't do it will be surprised how easy it is, once you get started, for when we make the effort assistance is surely given. Not having to send out releases on these Holy Days gives this committee opportunity and funds to branch out in other directions.

To the traveling teachers, we wish to make the announcement that a series of articles on the Temple, the Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi have been prepared for your use and can be obtained from this committee in any quantity desired. This series will be supplemented from time to time.

Plans are being made to work up releases for contacting foreign language papers and any ideas the friends may have to pass on to us will be most appreciated.

Your attention is called to the article on the Temple, published in the October-November issue of Highways Traveler, the magazine of the Greyhound Bus Lines, together with pictures of the Temple as it now stands, a closeup of the dome and the interior of the dome. The article was printed exactly as we sent it in. These can be obtained in the bus depots throughout the country. The caption given the article by the editor is most striking "When Baha'i's Build a Temple" and in the index he states, "We have never seen the Taj Mahal but evidently those who believe in the Baha'i Faith are just about to duplicate this lovely structure with one near Chicago."

The committee would suggest that when writing articles for your papers that you endeavor to use as your first sentence something that the headline writer might pick up as a caption, in this way avoiding the possibility of some of the objectionable headlines which have been given to articles in the past.

Pictures and mats of Lida Zamenhof can be obtained from this committee.

Remember, please, to send 2 copies of all clippings to this committee. Send them the first of each month.

Publishing Committee
Prayers and Meditations By Bahá'u'lláh, translated by Shoghi Effendi. An advance notice is given of early publication of this supreme work of devotion for all Baha'is. The new volume will be issued in a style similar to the Gleanings, and in number of pages exceeds that book. The price has been set at $2.00 per copy. Since orders will be filled in the order they are received, those wishing copies at the earliest possible date should request their Assemblies to place advance orders.

The Báb's Address To the Letters of the Living. These sublime words, first published in The Dawn-Breakers, pp. 92-94, have been reproduced in pamphlet form from a hand-lettered copy of the English text translated by the Guardian. About 1700 copies have been sold since this pamphlet appeared a few weeks ago. 12 pages, per copy, 5c each.

Economics As Social Creation, by Horace Holley. The latest addition to the series of Teaching Literature pamphlets. 32 pages, sold in lots of 100 only. $1.75 per 100, net.

New Uniform Discount
After considering the fact that the Baha'i literature is being sold at prices considerably lower than the usual rate for books of similar quality and size, and consequently the discounts previously allowed have made it impossible for the Committee to develop an adequate financial reserve required by the growth of the Cause, the National Spiritual Assembly has instructed the Publishing Committee to allow in future only one discount—10% on orders of $10.00 and more—and to give this discount to all purchasers without discrimination, whether Assemblies, groups or individuals.

Youth Committee
To Baha'i youth throughout the world.

Dear Friends:

In a recent general letter, the Guardian discussed the "society-building" power of the Baha'i Faith. There is great significance for us in that phrase; for, as members of the world Baha'i community, we are striving, under the Guardian's leadership, to aid in the erection of World Order.

It naturally follows that every act of ours, which advances the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and consolidates the unity among men and women of all races and nations, is an act hastening the realization of the World Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh. Could we lend our efforts to any nobler and more universal service?

Two years ago the National Youth Committee proposed the holding of simultaneous Youth Symposiums as a demonstration of the loyalty and solidarity of Bahá'í youth throughout the world. Last year another series of Symposiums was held with even greater success. Now such an annual undertaking is viewed as one of the public teaching efforts of the younger members of the Bahá'í Community.

In many ways the annual Youth Symposiums are unique. They demonstrate a real bond of unity that is world-embracing. They are positive and constructive in a world seething with separatism and hatred. They are a public declaration of faith in Bahá'u'lláh.

And now the date, February 27, for the third World Youth Day nears. Let us prayerfully and carefully make our plans for this third world-wide effort of Bahá'í youth. Through many such acts as these may the time be hastened when the majority of the people will have recognized in the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh the source and structure of true civilization.

N. S. A. MEETINGS AT WASHINGTON

It was the privilege of the members of the National Spiritual Assembly to meet jointly with the Washington Assembly on Sunday evening, December 12, after which they attended the Nineteen Day Feast observed by the Washington community. Sharing the radiant spirit of the friends, these meetings were most refreshing and helpful.

On Saturday noon the members attended a luncheon at the home of C. Mason Remey, at which a number of interested non-believers were present.
Aspects of the teachings were expounded, and it was felt that many of the new friends were attracted.

AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND

The following items have been taken from successive issues of "Baha'i Quarterly," the organ of the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia and New Zealand.

Formation of New Assembly

It was a source of joy to the N. S. A. to receive notification from the Bahá'ís of Perth, Western Australia, of their desire to form a Spiritual Assembly. This was done prior to the N. S. A. meetings in Adelaide. The opportunity was taken while members were assembled to assist the teaching work already being done by local Bahá'ís. Mrs. Axford and Miss Blundell of Auckland, New Zealand, Mrs. Routh of Sydney and Mr. Guy Inman spoke at public and semi-public meetings during their stay in Adelaide. Mrs. Axford and Miss Blundell had the pleasure of contacting a few of the Bahá'ís of Melbourne as they passed through that city and also the joy and privilege of associating again with the Sydney Bahá'ís. Mrs. Axford was sent on a teaching mission to the newly formed Assembly at Perth. A very hearty welcome was accorded her and meetings were arranged as frequently as possible during her two weeks stay. Most of the meetings were held at the home of the secretary, Mrs. Miller. Mr. Johnson, the chairman, and their other members of the Assembly all opened their homes for meetings, and in this way the message was given to a large number of people to whom it was no more than a name. A special study of Bahá'í Administration was undertaken in the short time available and interesting individual contacts made. Reports received since the visit are very encouraging. The zeal and enthusiasm, the sincerity and deep sense of the privilege of active participation for the beloved Cause is very marked in this small but united group and will surely bear abundant fruit.

Visit of Mr. Schopflocher

In November of last year the Bahá'ís of Auckland, Sydney and Adelaide had the great pleasure of a visit from Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher, a member of the N. S. A. of U. S. A. and Canada. Some of the Auckland members met him on arrival and arranged for an informal meeting the same evening as he was leaving Auckland the same day. A very happy and profitable time was spent with him, taking the form chiefly of questions and answers. In Sydney and Adelaide Mr. Schopflocher was able to address public meetings as well as meetings with the Spiritual Assembly. In an address to the latter in Sydney Mr.
Schöpflocher expressed his deep joy at finding, throughout Australia and New Zealand, the real spirit of unity and true Bahá'í love and friendship. He stressed the need of fostering the community spirit through properly organized socials as the test of Bahá'ís was their capacity to associate together in love and harmony. This phase of Bahá'í life, he said, could not be over-emphasized. Other points stressed were:

1. The benefits gained by observing the Fast.
2. The need of the N. S. A. to gain the confidence of believers and the duty of local assemblies and all believers to support and obey its rulings.
3. The enormous value of summer schools, the primary object of which is that of a school—Teaching.
4. The importance of registration.
5. The need of understanding in dealing with problems as to voting membership.
6. The importance of the Nineteen Day Feast.

Mr. Schöpflocher paid a visit to Mr. Bolton's newly-erected house at Yeerinbool, which Mr. Bolton wishes to be used as a Summer School when arrangements can be made for this much-desired project. The friends appreciate greatly the valuable work Mr. Schöpflocher was able to accomplish in so short a time, and hope for a longer visit in the near future.

Secretary's Annual Report

It is a great pleasure to report that all the committees and officers have given the utmost co-operation to the N.S.A. and that all the business has been conducted in a most efficient manner. The N.S.A. cannot function efficiently without the co-operation of all the officers, not only of the N.S.A. itself, but of the officers of the local Spiritual Assemblies as well. The secretaries and treasurers and other officers of the various local assemblies have been simply splendid, whatever the N.S.A. required them to do was done efficiently and the N.S.A. is tremendously grateful to them for their part in enabling it to function smoothly.

In administering the affairs of the Cause and in exercising the powers vested in it the N.S.A. has made great progress in the past twelve months. The N.S.A. is fast becoming the administrative body it is meant to be. The N.S.A. is profoundly grateful to the believers for their expressions of loyalty and their co-operation. . . .

The clerical work is most arduous, owing to the fact that, except once a year, when the N.S.A. meets, all consultations must be conducted by correspondence. It is because this work is so tremendous that the N.S.A. has requested local assemblies to make all their communications in triplicate. If letters to the N.S.A. are not sent in triplicate, the Secretary has the extra work of making copies so that a copy may be sent to the N.S.A. members wherever they may reside. The N.S.A., therefore, is very grateful to the secretaries of the local assemblies for acceding to their request.

The N.S.A. has endeavored by every means in its power to discharge its responsibilities and to exercise the powers vested in it in order that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Abdül-Bahá said, “It is incumbent upon every one not to take any step without consulting the Spiritual Assembly, and they must assuredly obey with heart and soul its bidding and be submissive unto it, that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Otherwise every person will act independently and after his own judgment, will follow his own desire, and do harm to the Cause.”

The N.S.A. has striven to keep a vigilant eye on the affairs of the Cause. Shoghi Effendi said, “The need for the centralization of authority in the National Spiritual Assembly, and the concentration of power in the various local assemblies, is made manifest when we reflect that the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh is still in its age of tender growth and in a stage of transition. It is our primary task to keep the most vigilant eye on the manner and character of its growth.” This the N.S.A. has tried to do.

Hilda Brooks, Secretary, N.S.A.

Annual Election

The result of the voting was handed by the scrutineers to the chairman who declared the following elected to the N.S.A. for the coming year:

- Miss H. Brooks
- Mrs. E. M. Axford
- Miss E. A. Blundell
- Mrs. S. Jackman
- Mr. R. Brown
- Mr. S. W. Bolton
- Mr. T. Dowson
- Miss M. B. Stevenson
- Mr. O. A. Whitaker

LETTER FROM THE GUARDIAN

Concerning the problem of increasing the number of delegates at the Annual Bahá'í Convention; the Guardian wishes me to reaffirm the message he cabled to the N. S. A. a few days ago stressing the necessity of revising the basis of the national elections at this and subsequent conventions. He is convinced that the expansion of the American Bahá'í Community, involving the increase in the number of its Assemblies and other administrative institutions, necessitates a similar increase in the size of the electoral body responsible for the election of the N. S. A. It is obviously unfair and mathematically impossible to apportion ninety-five delegates among the seventy or more Assemblies already instituted. The principle of proportional representation governing the election of Convention delegates therefore can no longer operate, and unless a definite increase in the number of representatives is made the election of the N. S. A. itself would cease to rest on a secure foundation.

The advantage which such an increase presents is to broaden the basis of the N. S. A. by making it a truly representative body, and thus heighten the confidence of the believers in its authority. The National Assembly, being the highest administrative body within a country, is in absolute need of the full trust of the believers, who have the right as well as the obligation to see that the body under whose jurisdiction they serve should be a truly representative body.

In view of these considerations the Guardian feels that the time has come to revise the basis of the present representation at the Convention, by raising the number of the delegates from 95 to 171, which number represents nine times nineteen.

The question of the added expense and strain which this increase in the number of delegates entails can be solved by having those delegates who cannot afford to pay the expenses of the trip send their votes by mail. Aside from that, no financial consideration is of any importance when compared to so vital an issue as that of Convention representation which admittedly affects the very welfare and future growth of the Cause.

The Guardian wishes me to convey to your Assembly his deep appreciation of their gift of the Temple model which, he hopes, will reach him in good condition, and which he plans to fit in a place that would be accessible to both the Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'í visitors.—November 25, 1937.

“NOW IS THE TIME”

Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

In the Tablet revealed on April 8, 1916, inaugurating the mighty Plan by which the Faith is to be spread from America throughout the world, 'Abdu'l-Bahá declared: “Therefore, now is the time that you may divest yourselves from the garment of attachment to this phenomenal realm, be wholly severed from the physical world, become angels of heaven and travel and teach through all these regions.”

The Cause of Bahá'u'lláh has survived in America and increased in power and capacity during all these years solely because many Bahá'ís have, to some degree at least, attained the station of inward obedience to the Master’s assurance. For in effect He promised that the time has come when it would at last be possible to achieve the inward, spiritual condition requisite to service in the Faith of God.

The whole trend of human events since that date has been a violent, forceful and involuntary pressure upon the human soul to abandon reliance upon the material reality and seek the realm of spirit. War and revolution, hunger, disease and death have constituted the instruments through which the Truth has demonstrated its resistless might to them who could not or would not heed its gentle plea. The same Will which voiced the supreme pean of love in that passage beginning: "Release yourselves, O nightingales of God," has likewise ordained dire suffering and the overthrow of civilization if the majority of men remain deaf and blind. The true believer and the unbeliever live physically side by side in this material world, but while the believer stands in the garden of blessed assurance, the unbeliever bows as before a raging storm.

These are the considerations which the National Spiritual Assembly feels should be uppermost in the minds of the friends at this hour. How to animate the body of the Cause with unswerving conviction, steadfast assurance and the blessedness of severance from the movements of the ego—this is the first, the supreme issue the American Bahá'í community is called upon to meet and solve.

The seven Year Plan is not self-operating. No scheme can be devised in the name of religion which can promote universal ideals by selfish, fearful and self-centered hearts. Every task given the Bahá'ís is for our own purification and spiritual reinforcement. Its blessed results for the world mean that the task has found workers imbued with motives raised high above the level of the worldly.

Any individual believer, and any community of believers, remaining aloof and indifferent to the Plan intended to unify and concentrate our souls and our resources is not walking upon the path that leads to inner success. The nature of fire is to burn. The nature of faith is to strive—strive endlessly and without discouragement—at the simultaneous spiritual and objective task. Where there is no striving there is no faith. No man can await the moment when he becomes perfect enough to serve the Cause of God. The intention of service is the only perfection human beings can ever attain. Has not the Master assured us over and over that knowledge comes as the result of loving the Teachings, that eloquence comes as the result of loving to convey the Truth, that courage comes as the result of upholding the Faith in an unbelieving world? No one is denied the superhuman results of faith, whether by poverty, lack of education or lack of social influence, but any one who is deprived has deprived himself.

What the National Spiritual Assembly longs to witness is a deepening of the inner life of the individual believers throughout the land. A number of communities give no evidence of the power of unity which is the fusion of the state of faith within the individual believer. Does any believer really wish to deprive himself of the blessing derived from participation in the most important task ever given to the American Bahá'ís? We may be ill, but the Cause is health; we may be poor, but the Cause is wealth; we may be downcast, but the Cause is joy; we may be dispirited, but the Cause is the source of life.

Can we not, therefore, in the spirit of real humility, turn back to the fundamental issues of the life of faith on earth and begin more consciously to demonstrate the reality of our acceptance of His Call? If we have attended meetings in an attitude of indifference or complaint, can we not feel a responsibility to bring enthusiasm and radiance? If our service has principally been one of objection and criticism, can we not bring loyalty and cooperation?

A Bahá'í community, large or small, is intended to be a garden, planted by the divine Gardener, revealing its blooms and releasing its fragrance to those lost in the arid desert of the world. These blooms and that fragrance reveal the presence of faith and consecration. Without them, a Bahá'í community is but a new name for the unredeemed waste of the desert itself. By the linking up of all the Bahá'í communities of East and West, the new World Order is to be attained. In that World Order lies the healing of all human ills.

These swiftly passing years write indelibly the story of our lives in the Day of God. Either that story will be one of faith or of unfaith. It will be one of service or one of impotence and stagnation. No one else can dictate to us the record of our inner life, for outer circumstance never restricts the motives of the soul. "Announce unto yourselves the joyful tidings: 'He Who is the Best-Beloved is come! He hath crowned Himself with the glory of God's Revelation, and hath unlocked to the face of men the doors of His ancient Paradise.'"

"IT MUST GO ON; CONTINUALLY GO ON"

The spirit increasingly animating the American believers is summed up in the quotation above from the Guardian's recent letter to the National Spiritual Assembly. More and more the Friends are realizing the need for intensification of their efforts in the short time left us to accomplish the goal set before us. While the momentum of our teaching services is gaining, is carrying the Faith ever wider and wider, yet we all must agree, the efforts most of us are putting forth, are not yet in keeping with the high standard desired by the Guardian. Let us keep ever before us, these dynamic calls of the Guardian, so that each and everyone of us, to the extent possible, may arise, that the outposts of our Beloved Faith, already persecuted in Europe and Asia, may in America steadily advance, adding new luster to the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The Teaching Committee wishes it were possible to bring to each and every Bahá'Í in America, a full consciousness of the almost unbelievable manner in which the Confirmations of the Holy Spirit are reaching those actively serving in this pioneer work. Reports from one end of the country to the other carry account after account of the manner in which doors are opening, and the teaching work confirmed. In not one instance of the efforts to introduce the Faith into virgin territory, there has been failure; and in most instances the results are truly astonishing. Where are those souls who leaving their home ties will go forward as pioneers of the New Day of God, and through sacrifice become the media for the quickening power of the Word of God for struggling humanity today? Greater numbers of inspired souls must arise if we are to carry knowledge of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh to every state in the United States, every province of Canada, and every Republic of Central and South America before May 23, 1944.

The outposts of the Faith have been extended, since the reports published in the January Baha'i News, into Wyoming, North Carolina, and Nevada; while in States having Spiritual Assemblies, the Faith has been introduced into new cities, in Scranton, Pennsylvania, and Celina, Ohio. Miss Ruth McDowell, of Chicago, spent approximately one month in Laramie and Cheyenne, Wyoming. Despite severe weather, and numerous obstacles which had to be met and overcome, a series of public meetings were held in Laramie and Cheyenne, displays of Bahá'í literature held, and a detailed broadcast concerning the Faith made from the largest station in the Inter-Mountain Territory, from Greeley, Colorado. As a result of these sacrificial services of Mrs. Moffett, assisted so capably by the Lily-whites of Laramie there is now an active study class in Laramie and an inquirers' group in Cheyenne.

Mrs. Edna Johnson and Mrs. Oni Finks of Los Angeles, are now in Las Vegas, Nevada, actively teaching the Faith. Mrs. Finks visited Las Vegas early in December, doing "follow up" work with the interested ones left there by Mrs. Terah Smith last spring. The reports indicate active interest in the Faith, and it is hoped an enthusiastic study class will be established.

Just now Mrs. Terah Smith, with Miss Marguerite Reimer and in Raleigh, North Carolina, working diligently to establish the Faith. Insufficient time has elapsed since their arrival to know the results of this teaching effort, but it will be shared with the Friends in subsequent statements in the Baha'i News.

The Spiritual Assembly of Lima, Ohio, carrying out the plan of the National Assembly that each Spiritual Assembly introduce the Faith in a new city this year, has conducted a series of public meetings in Celina, Ohio. A study class has been formed and is being actively followed up by the Friends in Lima.

The Binghamton, New York Assembly, has undertaken the establishment of the Faith in Scranton, Pennsylvania. A lecturer in popular psychology friendly to the Faith, has turned her classes over to the Baha'i Teachers. Assisting the Binghamton friends, was Mr. Harlan Ober; and now Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ives. Mrs. Ives has conducted a series of public lectures, and it is interesting to note that the attendance increased as the lectures proceeded. Lectures have been given before other organizations and group meetings organized by interested ones.

Miss Marguerite Reimer, and Mrs. Gale Woolson, as reported in the January Baha'i News, spent six weeks in North and South Dakota doing "follow-up" work, and teaching in new cities. This trip covered 4,500 miles by automobile; over 33 lectures given; the Faith introduced into four new cities; the study class in Lead, South Dakota, strengthened with five new members; and a class left in Huron, South Dakota. Of outstanding interest is the fact that many lectures were given in schools and colleges. At Spearfish, South Dakota, for instance, a lecture was given before the student body of the Black Hills Teachers College; attended by 175 students, 25 members of the faculty, and 2 clergymen. Free literature was distributed to those present; while a photograph of the Temple, exhibited on the Bulletin Board for a week, was placed in the collection of famous art and architectural pictures of the School. One of the clergymen present entitled his sermon the following Sunday, "Christ and Baha'u'llah," reading to his congregation from the pamphlet "Principles of the Baha'i Faith." The other clergymen present invited our two youthful teachers to speak to the Episcopal League and then to the entire congregation at the evening service. When questions were asked after the services, and some seemed antagonistic, this minister assisted by saying, "I am satisfied with Christianity, but not with Christians. If this is right, we want to know about it."

The Dakotas seem to be responding to the influence of the spirit released through the teachers who have visited those States. Mrs. Margarite Breugger is now teaching in Fargo, Bismarck, Valley City, and Northwood, North Dakota. The following quotation from one of her recent reports, will prove of intense interest to all the Friends:

"I think the greatest confirmation I have had thus far happened in Bismarck. After I had finished speaking at one of our meetings, one of the ladies came to me and almost insisted that I met Governor Longer. She said she would gladly arrange it. Needless to say it was the most extraordinary reception I ever experienced in presenting the Message. The Governor not only listened intently, but gave the impression that he was glimpsing a new world; a world he could not comprehend, perhaps, yet felt was real. The following evening he called me on the phone, asking if he might call, as he wanted to hear more about the New World Order. He came and we talked solidly for two hours."

Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Ober have been most active in spreading the Message. Mrs. Ober's services in Toronto were outstanding, even to the extent of attracting new souls to the Faith, so it may be possible for the Toronto friends to organize into a Spiritual Assembly in April of this year. Mrs. Ober is now in Louisville, Kentucky, where she will be present for some time, to renew the teaching work in that important city. Mr. Ober visited Binghamton, Syracuse, Ithaca, New York; Scranton, Pa.; Toronto, Canada, and a number of cities in northern Michigan.

Louis Gregory is now at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, where many doors are opening for the spread and establishment of the Faith. A few extracts from recent reports will convey the manner in which the work is going forward. "The President of Tuskegee has twice invited me to his home, the second time for a dinner conference which lasted two hours. At the close he warmly shook hands and said it was a very helpful message." "The chief assistant to the Chaplain, a Baptist clergyman, has done wonders to help, even leaving me in charge of his pulpit while away, with freedom to give the Message." "During the meetings, the Y.M.C.A. Secretary, who had the Esslemont Book and accepts the message, prayed a most eloquent prayer of thankfulness for 'the New Star of Bethlehem that has arisen.'" "Passing by a home one day I was called by a lady student who had heard a Baha'i lecture in one of the classes. 'Come in and meet my husband, Prof. Otis, who is head of the Agricultural Department.' This led to an impromptu meeting; and also led to a lecture today before the Agricultural Department. Now we have started two regular weekly meetings and are hoping for another. There appears to be a considerable number more than superficially interested." "I feel that the Most High, Baha'u'llah, who has showered so many signs of His Blessings on this famous community, is now willing to give them a further blessing of Divine Knowledge and spiritual outpouring."

One of the most outstanding exam-
Tales of the divine confirmations is the manner in which the Faith has found deep roots in Moncton, New Brunswick. Twelve have signified their acceptance of the Faith by sending in the usual registration cards. A regular class of 25 is being held, while children’s class is held each week. Following the intensive teaching work of Mabel Ives and Rosemary Sala, Mrs. Dorothy Baker is spending the month of February in Moncton, to assist the friends in their deepening processes in the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. The following extracts from letter from the first new Bahá’í of Moncton, Mr. W. F. Byrne, will indicate how deeply the spirit has touched these new souls—

"I am the first declared Bahá’í in this district, and am very proud of it. . . . This Faith is the biggest and grandest thing that has ever entered my life, something which I had been in search of for twenty long years; and I, indeed, feel it an honor to be associated with this great work. Words cannot describe how I feel about it, but perhaps when I tell you I intend to dedicate my life to this noble Cause, you will more readily understand than any words I might use."

Day of the Covenant Observed by New York Bahá’í Community, November 28, 1937

RADIO COMMITTEE

Too often in our travels we hear the words, “I have never heard of your Faith.” Could a nation-wide radio effort lift the veil of obscurity still hovering over some of the areas of this continent? Figures lead us to believe that it could. In the United States and Canada there are 741 radio stations. It is estimated that there are about 24,414,300 radio families in all.

The Radio Committee suggests a plan, approved by the National Spiritual Assembly, for carrying on, under the supervision of the Regional Committees, a canvass of radio stations with a view to initiating regular and sustained radio efforts everywhere. Regional secretaries are invited to write to the committee (care Mrs. Dorothy Baker, 615 W. Elm St., Lima, Ohio), for lists of stations and operators in their areas, and for talks ready for distribution. A thorough canvass of stations may reveal many stations, which, like Monson, Mass., and Lima, are happy to accept, free of charge, educational and devotional material for unfiled time on the air.

In addition to the thirty talks listed in December Baha'i News and the 1937 New York series, the following talks are offered: “The Principles of the Bahá’í Faith,” “The Law of the New Day,” “Once Again God.” Four hundred and fifty talks have been sent out to twenty cities, and some splendid reports have come in from individuals and groups.
"CERTAIN VITAL REQUIREMENTS"

"The Seven Year Plan, with which the immediate fortunes of the American Bahá’í community are so closely intertwined, demands, at this critical stage in its development, serious and prayerful consideration of certain vital requirements, without which such a stupendous task can never be brought to a successful completion. The evolution of the Plan imposes a three-fold obligation, which all individual believers, all local Assemblies, as well as the National Assembly itself, must respectively recognize and conscientiously fulfill. Each and every believer, undaunted by the uncertainties, the perils and the financial stringency afflicting the nation, must arise and ensure, to the full measure of his or her capacity, that continuous and abundant flow of funds into the national Treasury, on which the successful prosecution of the Plan must chiefly depend. Upon the local Assemblies, whose special function and high privilege is to facilitate the admission of new believers into the community, and thereby stimulate the infusion of fresh blood into its organic institutions, a duty no less binding in institution devolves. To them I wish particularly to appeal, at this present hour, when the call of God is being raised throughout the length and breadth of both continents in the New World, to desist from insisting too rigidly on the minor observances and beliefs, which might prove a stumbling block in the way of any sincere applicant, whose eager desire is to enlist under the banner of Bahá’u’lláh. While conscientiously adhering to the fundamental qualifications already laid down, the members of each and every Assembly should endeavor, by their patience, their love, their tact and wisdom to nurse, subsequent to his admission, the new-comer into Bahá’í maturity, and win him over gradually to the unreserved acceptance of whatever has been ordained in the teachings. As to the National Assembly, whose inescapable responsibility is to guard the integrity, coordinate the activities, and stimulate the life, of the entire community, its chief concern at the present moment should be to anxiously deliberate on how best to enable both individual believers and local Assemblies to fulfill their respective tasks. Through their repeated appeals, through their readiness to dispel all misunderstandings and remove all obstacles, through the example of their lives, and their unrelaxing vigilance, their high sense of justice, their humility, consecration and courage, they must demonstrate to those whom they represent their capacity to play their part in the progress of the Plan in which they, no less than the rest of the community, are involved. May the all-conquering Spirit of Bahá’u’lláh be so infused into each component part of this harmoniously functioning System as to enable it to contribute its proper share to the consummation of the Plan."—Your true brother, Shoghi. (January 30, 1938)

From the same letter, in the portion written by the Guardian through his secretary, the following excerpts are published for the information of the believers:

"The Temple model prepared by Mr. Earley which you had shipped to Haifa has been received in good condition, and will be placed shortly in the International Bahá’í Archives on Mt. Carmel for the benefit of all the visitors."

In reply to a question concerning the authority to approve a bust of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá: "He feels that for the present neither he nor the National and local Assemblies should take any action by laying down any regulation in this matter. Individuals should be left free to exercise their discretion and act as they deem best."

"All those believers who are talented in music and desire to make some contributions along this line should be encouraged and advised to send their musical contributions to the Editorial Committee of The Bahá’í World for reproduction in that book."

"In conclusion the Guardian wishes me to express his satisfaction at the progress which the Seven Year Plan is making as a result of the cooperation, energy, selflessness and perseverance displayed by the entire body of the American believers. He is continually praying that their efforts for the consummation of this two-fold task may be blessed and crowned with complete success."

ASSEMBLY ROLL

Springfield, Illinois, the new address of the Secretary, Mrs. Anna K. Jurgens, is 1136 North 4th Street.

ELECTION OF NEW ASSEMBLIES

The National Spiritual Assembly has authorized the election of a local Spiritual Assembly on April 21 by the Bahá’í groups resident in the following cities: Sacramento, Calif., Grand...

The love and best wishes of the American Bahá’í community will surely flow out to these believers on the occasion of the election on April 21.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

IN MEMORIAM

Death proffereth unto everyone confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy, and is the bearer of gladness. It confereth the gift of everlasting life—Bahá’u’lláh.

Mrs. Laura L. Drum, Washington, D. C.
Mrs. Elizabeth Stein, Lima.
J. B. Gordon Hall, Fernandina.
James Coe (former member of Racine Bahá’í community).

A BAHÁ’Í GUEST FROM TİHRAN

Mrs. Bahiyyih Hakim, whose father is a member of the National Assembly of Iran, and whose husband, Dr. Lotfíllah Hakim, is a member of the Spiritual Assembly of Tihran, arrived at New York on March 15 from Paris. Mrs. Hakim will spend some weeks in America, and in addition to New York will probably proceed to Chicago and see the Temple. It is most gratifying to receive this visit from a fellow-Bahá’í of Iran.

AMENDMENT TO BY-LAWS

The American believers are informed of the following amendment to the By-Laws of the N. S. A., duly adopted at the meeting held February 19 and 20, 1938:

"Resolved, that in accordance with the instructions given by Shoghi Effendi in his letter to this body dated November 25, 1937, to the effect that the number of delegates at the Annual Convention number 171 instead of 95, Article VIII of the By-laws be amended by striking out the word ‘Ninety-five’ in the second sentence of said Article, and substitute therefor the words ‘one hundred seventy-one.’"

PRESS BOOK REPORT

March 14th: Since the last Press Book report, written November 24th, many clippings have been added to the Press Books.

Phoenix, Arizona have, in addition to their many clippings, sent in an article written by Willard Hatch which was published by Par, a monthly magazine. They have also branched out into Coolidge, Arizona, this year where they did some splendid publicity work, and an article on the Youth Symposium was received from them published in El Imperial, a Spanish paper.

Mrs. French in Pasadena, is still having wonderful results with her column the ‘Loon of Reality.’ A thousand copies of her recent contribution ‘Our Intellectual and Spiritual Heritage’ was reprinted by the Lambda Sigma Pi Society and widely distributed.

Santa Paula, California, has sent in very newsy clippings. Los Angeles and San Francisco have kept up their usual activity in the publicity field. Miami, Florida, still sends in their fine educational articles which are published in a Forum column. Maywood, Illinois, is still doing outstanding work. The Evanston News-Index recently published a picture of the Temple taken by their own staff photographer, with the caption ‘Towering Bahá’í’ "Wilmette Life," among its regular write-ups published a picture of the new model of the Temple. Gertrude Struven reports that in 52 weeks, 55 notices have appeared in the Wilmette Life, Winnetka Talk and Glencoe News which includes regular notices of weekly Sunday lectures, and in addition other articles and an editorial praising the Bahá’ís’ honorable character; and a letter about the Temple from a school child visitor. Many photographs were also used, some as cover designs.

The international section contains an amazing amount of clippings sent in by Martha Root from India, where long articles on the Faith were printed in the Rangoon Times; the Ceylon Daily News and others. On February 4th, a radio talk captioned ‘American Journalist’s Experiences in Shanghai’ given by Martha was published in The Hyderabad Bulletin.

From Baltimore, Maryland, the clippings are outstanding because they give so much of the teachings. Muskegon, Michigan, is another city using the Forum Column successfully. Doris Holliday, of the comparatively new Omaha, Nebraska, group has done some splendid work in a series of articles in The Omaha Guide some of which she has written herself.

Mr. C. H. Pettit of Bucyrus, Ohio, very tactfully answered an article in a forum column, headed "What is to Become of Us?" and suggested that the Esslemont book be read. He later placed a notice in a News Flash column to the effect that after reading the Esslemont book, to read "Some Answered Questions." The evening of its publication the book, Answered Questions, was taken out of the public library.

Elsie Miller in Dayton is having unusually splendid success this year with the Forum columns. Lima publicity is also most outstanding this year. A paid advertisement has been run announcing the subject and speaker and in addition a quotation from the Teachings.

In the Pittsburgh Courier, an attack on the Cause by Dr. DuBois was answered most effectively by the National Assembly, thus giving the Faith some very favorable publicity. From Moncton, New Brunswick, we have a deluge of clippings covering the period of Mabel Ives' work from October 18th to December 14th and Dorothy Baker's work in February. There is every indication that the group will continue this fine work. From Scranton, Pa., comes numerous outstanding clippings as more evidence of Mabel Ives' splendid work. An attack on the Cause, labeling it as Communist, was answered by Mrs. and Mrs. Ives in a masterful manner.

Louise Caswell's work in Tennessee shows persistent effort. Kathryn Frankland has interested the editors of the Daily Voice in Corpus Christi, Texas, in publishing the "Goal of the New World Order" by Shoghi Effendi, in a series. Practically all releases sent out by Baha'i News Service have been published verbatim by this paper. Lorrol Jackson in Helena, Montana, continues to send in well-written clippings of all her activities. Clippings received from Ruth Moffett's activities come from Fremont, Ohio; Grand Rapids, Michigan; Kankakee, Maywood and Oak Park, Illinois; Springfield and Kansas City, Missouri; Topeka, Kansas; Laramie and Cheyenne, Wyoming as well as from cities where there are Assemblies.

Chelan, Washington, was successful in getting the entire release of December 25th published in their paper. Madison, Wisconsin, while still a group, have been successful this year in publicity work. Racine, Wisconsin, has pages showing results of continuous and persistent effort.

The visit of Lidia Zamenhof to this country has brought the Cause some nice publicity. An article headed "High Priestess of the Esperantists" was syndicated by Seven Arts Feature Syndicate and sent out to about 100 Jewish papers. One paragraph of the article was devoted to the Baha'i Faith.

RADIO COMMITTEE
We have recently received from Mrs. Wendell Bacon of Monson, Mass., an encouraging report of radio work, delivered Jan. 24-29, in Springfield, Mass. Six talks given in daily series attracted wide attention, and inquiries are still coming in to the Monson and Springfield friends from Chester, West Springfield, Westfield, Three Rivers and Palmer. Newspapers have been unusually cooperative. The talks were based largely on direct quotations from the utterances of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and Shoghi Effendi, and cover the following subjects:

The Divine Physician, Bahá'u'lláh. The Search After Truth. Universal Peace. The Agreement of Science and Religion. The Equality of Men and Women. Principles of the Bahá'í Faith. The talk given recently in Vancouver and reported in the last issue of the News Letter are listed below:

Attention is called to the current articles by Mr. Mountfort Mills in World Order Magazine, February, March and April issues, covering the subject "World Crisis." These articles were used successfully as radio talks in November in New York, but will not be mimeographed for general use, due to their immediate availability in the magazine.

Mrs. Florence Morton reports plans for the summer broadcasting from Eliot, near Green Acre, and from the largest Portland station; and expresses great faith in the medium of radio for general teaching and publicising our Cause.

Requests have come from New Orleans, Denver, Kansas City, Edgewater, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Beverly Hills, Cleveland, Miami, Honolulu, Milwaukee, Chicago, Augusta, Urbana, Nashville, Boston, Asheville, Birmingham, Moncton, Jacksonville, Baltimore, and Philadelphia. Final reports would be welcomed on work done in these and other centers.

Regional secretaries are arising rapidly to carry out a canvass throughout the country with an eye to systematic campaigns in teaching.

A radio talk, "What Future For Youth" has been chosen for circulation this month. Miss Marion Holley here outlines a vigorous viewpoint on world affairs.

DOROTHY BAKER, Chairman

MEXICO
Mrs. Frances Stewart, Secretary of the Inter-America Committee, sends the following account of her experiences in taking the Bahá'í Message to Mexico last summer.

When on July 15 last, our ship approached the harbor of Vera Cruz, and we saw the scars left by canons that had bombarded the city in former years, our prayer was that we might be privileged to bring to the people of Mexico the great Bahá'í Message of Unity and Love. This prayer was granted, for Bahá'u'lláh had prepared a group to receive this Message in a most wonderful manner.

In Mexico City, while speaking to a Woman's Club on the subject of: "Peace in a New World Order" and quoting from the Writings quite freely, I noticed the deep interest of a lady not far from me. After the meeting she hurried to beg me to go with her that evening to the home of a friend where a group met weekly for study and discussion. I felt impelled to break a former engagement and gladly went with Miss Aurora Gutierrez to meet nine Mexican people, who later became the first believers in Mexico. My friend explained that for several years this group of seekers had met regularly to discuss spiritual questions and to study the increasing turmoil in the world. After a beautiful prayer given by Mr. Pedro Espinosa, the group leader, in which he asked for spiritual vision and understanding, they asked me to repeat the message I had given at the club in the afternoon. I then asked if I might tell them of the Bahá'í Message.

Way into the morning hours they listened and asked questions about the Cause and said that I must come often and they would bring to the circle all of their group. After three such meetings with an ever larger group, the leader told me that they had for some time been convinced that somewhere in the world a New Manifestation had appeared to give the Truth for the New Era. So convinced had they been that they had sent their leader, Mr. Espinosa, to the United States where he traveled to New York City to California in search of evidence of this New Manifestation. He did not find it but returned to Mexico convinced: "That from a foreign country a Teacher would bring them the Good News of a New Manifestation." They had continued their regular studies and when they heard the Bahá'í Message, they were convinced it was the Truth they had long sought. At this meeting Mr. Espin-
Martha Root in India and Burma

From Baha'i News Letter Published by the N. S. A. of India and Burma

Miss Martha Root arrived in India from Ceylon on October 15th. The believers of Bombay accorded her a right royal reception. The National Spiritual Assembly had also fixed their half-yearly meeting to be held in Bombay in order to meet the beloved sister. Miss Root stayed in Bombay for 5 days and these 5 days were gala days for the believers of the place. While the Bombay friends held meetings and arranged for lectures, which were fully reported by the press the N. S. A. in consultation with Miss Root, chalked out a programme for her.

After attending the public meeting on the Birthday of the Bab, which was presided over by an ex-Mayor of the Town, Miss Root left for Surat.

Surat—During her two days' stay here Miss Root met lawyers, judges and other notables of the town at the home of Mr. Vakil and delivered a public lecture in the Ara Samaj Hall. This was attended by 250 to 300 people—students, lawyers and other notables. The press published elaborate articles and thus a good publicity was achieved for the Divine Faith.

Poona—Owing to her brief stay here no public lecture was arranged; but she met press representatives and the believers of the place. She visited the Baha'i School and the Baha'i Cemeteries. To the friends she delivered a talk on teaching. Miss Root will visit Poona again when she returns from her tour in South India.

Burma

Rangoon—Leaving Poona on October 26 she stayed one day at Bombay and then left for Burma where she arrived on November 2. The believers of Rangoon had chalked out a busy and elaborate programme for her. She spoke at the Y. M. C. A. (Town Branch), Araya Samaj (Central), Theosophical Society, Brahmo Samaj, Malabar Club and Rotary Club. Press publicity had preceded her arrival and when she arrived all the leading dailies of Rangoon published glowing articles about her and about the Cause she had come to teach. Rangoon Times, widely circulated English daily, published an interview with her about Baha'i work in Shanghai. Rangoon Times has been devoting weekly two to three column space to Baha'i articles for the last 11 months. Rangoon Gazette, another English daily, had an equally fine interview of more than a column and in addition there was an editorial about the history of the Baha'i Faith. Her lectures attracted large number of hearers and were presided over by religiously inclined public men. In fact, Miss Martha Root created a stir in the religious circles of that great city of 500 thousand souls comprised of almost all civilized nations of the world.

Miss Root had two meetings with the Baha'is of Rangoon in the Hazrat-ul-Qods (Baha'i Hall). The meetings with the children was very interesting. She started a children's class and gave first lesson to youngsters. This class, the Rangoon Spiritual Assembly is determined to continue in remembrance of the visit of our beloved sister.

 Mandalay—Miss Root arrived in this ancient city of Upper Burma on November 10. She was received at the station by the believers led by our revered Baha'i teacher Syyid Mustafa Roumie. She delivered a public lecture in Mandalay Municipal Library. The attendance was the largest of any public Baha'i lecture given up to this time in Mandalay. The Headmaster of the Normal School U. Thet Swe, B.A., B.L. was the Chairman. Some of the hearers came later on to see Miss Root and asked questions. Baha'is who live in towns near Mandalay came all the way to see their beloved guest.

 Toungoo—On reaching Mandalay Miss Root detained at this town of about 23,000 inhabitants. No Baha'i teacher has ever before visited this place. It was through the efforts of Dr. M. A. Latiff, that the town was opened. He had gone to the place and had arranged for a lecture in the Jubilee Library, Dr. Bahl, Civil Surgeon of the district presided. He also gave a dinner in his home after the lecture and four interested people came to meet the Baha'i teacher. Miss Root took the train that same night and nine people who had attended the lecture were on the station to see her off. It is a great thing for our Faith that Toungoo is opened and we have our dear brother Dr. M. A. Latiff to thank for it.

Daidanaw (Kungyangoon) — Accompanied by Syyid Abdul Hussain Sherazi and Mr. Siyyid Ghulam Murtaza Ali Miss Root reached this Baha'i village of 800 believers on November 20. The believers of the place had made... elaborate preparations for reception of their beloved guest. A special roadway was cut through the grass from the main road to the Assembly Hall, which was tastefully decorated. The Assembly Compound was full of believers when Miss Root's car arrived. Mrs. Kahn garlanded her amidst the acclamations of Ya Bahá-El-Abhá. She met these friends and they chanted holy songs and prayers. Miss Root writes: "What a royal welcome we received! Never shall I forget their chanting and the reverence and love in their kind faces."

At 4 p.m. Miss Root drove to Kyangkwin, an important town of people situated about 3 miles from the Bahá’í Village. The lecture was held in the National School under the Chairmanship of Dr. Gurbakhsh Singh. It was translated into Burmese by U. Sein, the headmaster of the School. There were about 150 people present including the Township judge, the staffs of the National and Board Girls' High Schools. The lecture was well received. Dr. and Mrs. Gurbakhsh Singh called on Miss Root that evening and had a long talk with her.

Next day the friends again met in the Assembly Hall. After the usual prayers; Mr. M. I. Kahn read a beautiful address of welcome to which Miss Root replied in suitable words and the meeting closed in an atmosphere of spiritual joy and happiness. Mr. MurtazaAli describes the scene of Daida-Wilmette, Ill. This Committee will arrange accommodations in private homes in the vicinity of the Temple. The rates are about $2.00 for single and $1.00 to Nov. 21 and attended the farewell meeting at the Hazrit-ul-Qods (Bahá’í Hall).

On Tuesday, Nov. 23, Miss Root sailed for Calcutta. The friends came to the Wharf to give her a hearty send-off.

NOTE:—Miss Martha Root will tour South India during the latter part of December, 1937, and the whole of January and February, 1938.

ANNUAL COMMITTEE REPORTS
1937—1938
ARCHIVES AND HISTORY

As early as 1903 the first step was taken in America toward the collection and preservation of Bahá’í Archives. At that time permission was granted by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to gather copies of His Tablets to American believers in order that they might be published.

In more recent years many of the original Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá with their original translations, many of the letters of Shoghi Effendi addressed to National and Local Spiritual Assemblies and to individual believers, numerous sacred objects which were the possession of Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, or the Greatest Holy Leaf, and numerous manuscripts and records bearing upon the history of the Cause in America have been flowing continuously into the National Bahá’í Archives.

Following a recommendation of the National Spiritual Assembly in 1935, an increasing number of Local Spiritual Assemblies have been establishing local Bahá’í Archives for the preservation of various Assembly records, and for assistance in the collection and forwarding of materials suitable for the National Archives.

For the information of the friends, a partial list is given below of materials received for the National Archives during the current Bahá’í year, or since March 21, 1937.

2 original, illuminated Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh, in His Own Hand-Writing, addressed to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. These are gifts of the Guardian, and were sent through Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher for presentation to the National Spiritual Assembly at the last Convention.

232 original Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, almost all of which are accompanied by original translations. One of these is the first Divine Plan Tablet to the Western States. The original and translation were written on post cards and mailed in Haifa on April 4, 1916. They bear the stamp of the military censor. Several groups of Tablets received this year were addressed to believers who have passed on, such as Mrs. Helen S. Goodall, Mrs. Isabella D. Brittingham, and Dr. G. A. Sander. Among Tablets received during the year are those addressed to the Portland, Seattle and Spokane, and to the San Francisco, Oakland, Urbana, and Cincinnati Spiritual Assemblies or communities.

108 original letters of the Guardian, a number of which were addressed to Local Spiritual Assemblies.

Some of the Sacred Relics which have come into the Archives since the first of the year include:

A Bahá’í seal and ring containing a ruby blessed by Bahá’u’lláh. (These were given originally to Thornton Chase in Acca.)

A rosary used by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. (Given to an American pilgrim in 1899.)

A taj and a turban belonging to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

A collection of original photographs taken in Acca and Haifa which are authenticated in the hand-writing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

A copy of the Greatest Name hand done by Mishkin-Qalam given to a believer by a member of the Holy Family.

A shawl made by the Greatest Holy Leaf.

The following publications and historical records are among materials of this nature received during the year:

Two copies of each of the publications issued by authority of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Historical Record Cards from about sixty per cent of the American believers.

Questionnaires on local Bahá’í history, which were filled out and returned by approximately one-half of all the Bahá’í Assemblies.

The committee has the following suggestions to make with regard to sending material to the National Archives.

(1) It is recommended that friends who have Tablets or other sacred objects (See Bahá’í News No. 103 for classification), which they wish to place in the National Archives should bring them or send them by a delegate to the Convention. The Secretary will be on hand to issue receipts and to see that objects presented are immediately placed in safe-keeping.

(2) It is the Guardian’s wish that original Tablets and original translations be preserved in the Archives. Friends who wish photostatic facsimiles of Tablets or of the Guardian’s letters may obtain them at a cost of 15c per page, or double this amount, if both negative and positive copies are desired. Assemblies wishing copies of the framed, Divine Plan Tablets may order them at a cost of 35c per positive copy.

(3) If objects are sent by mail, they should be registered. Address Mrs. May T. Scheffler, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln St., Evanston, Ill.

(4) Relics should be accompanied by as complete a description as possible of the circumstances under which the gift was originally made, to whom and when the object was given, and the hands through which it has subsequently passed.

(5) If photographs are sent, they should be labeled with the name or names of persons shown and should be dated.

In the name of the National Spiritual Assembly, the Archives and History Committee wishes to extend most heart-felt thanks to those believers and Assemblies who have parted with their most precious possessions in order that they might be safely kept for the observation and reference of future generations.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE, THE BAHÁ'Í WORLD, VOL. VII

Immediately following the appointment of the Staff of Editors for The Bahá'í World, Vol. VII, the chairman and executive secretary consulted at length upon the problems which had been encountered in the preparation of former volumes and it was decided to assign to the various members of the staff certain areas for which they should be responsible, thus bringing the whole staff into closer relationship and dividing up the work of correspondence. By this method we seem to be more nearly approaching a system which will be more efficient, more generalized and more complete; in fact the results have proven this to be the case, for the cooperation of the National Spiritual Assemblies of other countries, except those where communication has been cut off, has been definitely satisfactory.

We mention with special appreciation the reports from India, Iraq, Egypt and even Iran which have given us splendid resumes and have observed most painstakingly the marks of accent to which detail is essential that all closely adhere. And à propos of the accent marks, although we have many times called the attention of the friends to this important matter, we have still to accustom ourselves to taking up a pen and going over everything which is written where Bahá'í terminology is employed. To be sure there are many words for which we have had no written precedent in this country and thus the accents must be put in by those who go over the manuscripts in Haifa, but we do have rules for almost all of the words and names and with a little more attention to detail we could arrive at the usage which the Guardian desires us to adopt.

The most perplexing matter is that of punctuality, and once again we seek to explain the method which must be employed in order to comply with the instructions of the Guardian. All the 15th of October is the date when manuscripts are due. Much liberty has been taken in this matter and it has become very difficult to adhere to the Guardian's instructions because of this.

Third—It is by special instruction of the Guardian that all manuscripts are requested to be sent to the executive secretary. This is the channel which he has established and unless it is adhered to the secretary cannot know whether manuscripts are in which have been solicited or are due under the general plan of the work. It is extremely embarrassing to write for a second or third time for a manuscript and then to be told that it has been sent to Haifa direct. When this is done there is danger that it may not find its way into the general collection when it is received from New York and thus may not appear in the book through no fault of anyone but the writer himself who has ignored the instructions.

Perhaps the most baffling thing is the preparation of the address list especially from foreign countries. If the friends could realize the amount of correspondence which is carried on by the member of the staff of editors who is responsible for this important work they would be more particular in fulfilling the requirements. It seems not to be the custom in some countries to give the initials of believers, but it is one of the details which should claim closer attention for it is not enough to say, nor is it good form to write "Mrs. Smith" or "Mr. Jones" with their respective addresses but without the initials of the names.

If your secretary in making this report has seemed to be rather too meticulous you are urged to consider that anything done for the Guardian must be done the very best possible. This is a training which we all need and which, when recognized, will lead to the improvement which the Guardian hopes for in our work. But while pointing out the weak places, your secretary is not unappreciative of the very splendid cooperation which has been received and for which she and all the staff wish to express their deepest gratitude. But may there be still better results in the preparation of future books!

BRAILLE TRANSCRIPTIONS FOR THE BLIND

The work of transcribing in Braille the Revealed Words for the blind has proceeded, and the committee has satisfactory results to report, notwithstanding the limited number of Brailleists. We hope that an increase in our workers will enable us to extend the future program for this much needed service, and that many Braille circulating libraries will be illuminated by the Sacred Books.

The libraries already approached are interested and have accepted with appreciation the books we have been able to make.

Following is a list of the Bahá'í Books transcribed by this committee. The names of the libraries where they are placed we hope to furnish soon to anyone seeking information.

From our earnest and indefatigable worker, Miss Ella Quant, I have to report an achievement of great merit, the transcription of:

1. Bahá'u'lláh—A nineteenth century Prophet and His Message.
2. Bahá'í Peace Program.
4. La Bahá'í Revelacion (the No. 9 in Esperanto).
5. Bahá'í Teachings on Economics.
6. Hidden Words of Bahá'u'lláh.
7. Divine Philosophy—'Abdu'-Bahá.
8. Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh—(Mrs. Brittingham).
10. The Goal of a New World Order (Shoghi Effendi).
11. Bahá'u'lláh and His Message.
14. Seven Valleys and Words of Wisdom; Four Valleys.

Miss Mabel Menn, a Bahá'í friend and co-worker has contributed:

1. The Reality of Man—(Compilation).
2. The Reality of Man—(Excerpts from above).
3. The Hidden Words—Baha’u’llah.

Mrs. Constance Rodman reports the following transcriptions:

1. The Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Baha
   (Paris Talks).
2. The Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Baha
   (Paris Talks).
3. The Hidden Words—Baha’u’llah.
4. The Hidden Words—Baha’u’llah.
5. The Hidden Words—Baha’u’llah.
7. The Iqan—The Book of Certitude—Baha’u’llah.

Miss Hilda Stauss, although unable to add any transcription to our list, is doing splendid work in contacting the Braille Libraries and Clubs.

I would like to remind the friends that the metal plates given by Mrs. Nellie French of the “Iqan” and “Baha’u’llah and the New Era” are a permanent asset in the possession of the Publication Committee, and from these plates, new editions can always be reproduced. These Books are in all the large Braille Public Libraries in the United States. The members of Braille Clubs in those cities will find them available.

The suggestion has been made that the Assemblies at their meetings, give out this information and so further this line of teaching. The committee will be faithful in their efforts to produce the transcriptions and will welcome this assistance from the Assemblies.

From the International correspondents of the Bahá’í Braille Committee very gratifying promises of cooperation have been received. Beyond this spirit of hearty cooperation very little is to be expected at present, as the relationship is too young to be well organized.

From Mr. Thilandar of Stocksund, Sweden, we have only to report his sincere regrets that excess of work will prevent his accepting the invitation extended to him. His work is the editing and publishing of a magazine with other literary work conducted in Esperanto and Swedish for the blind of any country where these two languages are understood. Mr. Thilandar, however, says: “I am interested in the Bahá’í movement, because it is as I know it, a movement of love and brotherhood.”

We had hoped for his cooperation, as through his magazine and papers, the Bahá’í transcriptions would have been widely spread.

Madame Hesse of Paris has, with gratifying enthusiasm, become one of our co-workers in our Committee. She reports the completion of a French Braille transcription of the “Essai sur la Bahaism” Nouvelle Edition—by Hippolyte Dreyfus. This contains also, some part of one letter of the Guardian, and a portion by Horace Holley on World Economy. This transcription has been presented to the “Livre de l’Aveugle” for publication. Madame Hesse writes that “le livre de l’Aveugle will gladly circulate her Bahá’í transcriptions in French Braille.” Also, “L’Association Valutin Haney, knows the world over, for which she hopes to transcribe another Bahá’í Book.” This association has a large circulating library for the blind, and Madame Hesse thinks they will be glad to be presented with Hidden Words, or Seven Valleys.

From Mr. Vuk Echtner of Prague very cordial letters have come, expressive of his desire to cooperate in all ways possible for the benefit of the blind and to promote the Bahá’í Teachings in Czechoslovakia. Mr. Echtner is the publisher and editor of a small Esperanto magazine known “Auroro,” which is complementary to Mr. Thilandar’s magazine in Sweden. In “Auroro” at times appear Bahá’í articles needful for the blind and to spread the Bahá’í teachings. Mr. Echtner seeks some special manner to awaken the interest of the blind in the Bahá’í Cause. Messages from foreign lands do this more quickly than messages from their own country. He adds: “The dear Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, seriously considers the work for the blind. Therefore, it is almost a duty of his faithful ones to learn the writing for the blind. Our Braille copy of the Esslemont book in Esperanto is completed, but a very regrettable error has occurred. The copyist misread the name of Baha’u’llah and misspelled it—the colossal labor lost much of its value. I intend to recopy the book from time to time.

“A pacifist magazine begs of me an article on the Bahá’í faith. I am very anxious to cause this to appear with a photo of Masriqi’l-Adhikar and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.”

From Mr. Tokujiro Torii of Japan we have received a cordial response. In his own words, which I quote, he says: “It is a great privilege and honor for me to be appointed by the Guardian as an International correspondent of the Bahá’í Braille committee.”

In the letters and reports of Miss Agnes Alexander may be read interesting accounts of the work being done for the blind in Japan.

In 1917 Mr. Torii translated the Japanese writings of Baha’u’llah. These have been published in Braille in one volume which was spread among the blind of Japan. Mr. Torii, at the time he did this, was teaching in a small school for the blind. His only helper was his devoted wife who spelled the words to him; these he copied in Braille. This is the way the first Japanese Bahá’í Braille book was transcribed. Mr. Torii has transcribed into Braille:

The Hidden Words.
The Iqan—the Book of Certitude.
Some Answered Questions.

Besides these, they have now the Esslemont book in Japanese Braille. Now it is his desire this year to translate the Hidden Words into Japanese.

(From a report of Miss Alexander.) Following are some of the words of approval and encouragement received by the committee:

Shoghi Effendi, in a letter to a member of the committee has written: “Persevere, may redouble your efforts. I am planning to establish in the Mansion of Baha’u’llah at Bahji, a special section wholly and exclusively devoted to Bahá’í literature in Braille.”

(Signed) Shoghi Effendi.

To another he has written:

“I am deeply appreciative of your recent service and wish to urge you to persevere in this notable and promising field of Bahá’í activity. I will pray for you from the bottom of my heart. Persevere and do not feel discouraged however great the obstacles which may confront you in the days to come.”

Martha Root gives us courage by her words: “Every year I am more impressed how important it is to get books into Braille for the blind. It brings such a light to them, and they in turn, may translate and give the Bahá’í teachings throughout the world.”

Miss Adelia Hoyt, Service for the Blind, Library of Congress, Acting Director of Braille A. R. C., has said: “I think most of our libraries will be glad to have some of this literature.”

The field is extending and the work increasing. The Committee begs the prayers and sympathetic support of the friends.

CONTACTS

To date, during the current Bahá’í year, 753 letters and several thousand pamphlets have been sent out. The favorable replies, including those requesting to receive regularly the national teaching bulletin, number 53 and unfavorable replies number 17. The total amount of cash received from the National Treasurer was $35 and total amount expended $46.63. Each one who spent in excess wants to take care of the balance. These several thousand pamphlets have been distributed with covering letters, to eminent people and to names of people furnished by Baha'is, one list coming from the Sydney, Australia, Spiritual Assembly. Names were also taken from such books as "Young Men of America," "Women of America," "Who's Who in Education," etc.

Some replies show considerable interest and the following are extracts from the cream of the crop:

A Professor of Sociology writes that he first heard of the Baha'i Faith as a student in Toronto in 1907 and that he has explained its inception, organization, growth and purpose to the students in his classes. Another professor acknowledges with thanks the books sent to the college library, and says he has used them at a seminar group, the students voting to devote an evening to study of the subject, and one student having taken a book home over the week end, said her father had read it with great interest.

A columnist of Los Angeles writes: "I thank you sincerely. I have made the pamphlet 'Homoculture' the theme of the weekly article I have just written." An official of the Urban League sends the following note: "May I extend my deepest appreciation for your thoughtfulness in sending me the leaflet 'A New World Order.' I would be interested in additional information regarding the Baha'i Faith." A student of religion says: "Thank you so much for the literature which I assure you I shall read with much interest."

An employee of the Department of Commerce writes: "Permit me to assert my sincere interest in the Baha'i Faith and my concurrence with the principles of Baha'u'llah . . . I should indeed like to see a group of Baha'is organized in this locality but of course do not feel capable of attempting such an undertaking myself without first contacting authoritative leaders of the movement . . . I am not an entire stranger to the aims and teachings of the Faith, since I am already the possessor of several of their publications and have received a world of encouragement and spiritual uplift from them . . . I feel that were I allowed to play even a very small part in the furtherance of such a movement I would have accomplished a worthy deed."

An inmate of a penitentiary, having seen an article on the Baha'i Faith in an Omaha newspaper, wrote to ask for more information.

More of these Baha'i seeds will undoubtedly spring up into flourishing growth, as more believers go forth into new districts and work for the fulfillment of the Seven-Year Plan.

GREEN ACRES SUMMER SCHOOL

The Green Acre program of 1937 marked a definite transition in the historic activities and functions of the center established by the late Sarah J. Farmer in 1894. From a Green Acre which had upheld a public platform dedicated to the investigation of reality, with lectures representing a wide variety of philosophic and religious views, sympathetic to but uncontrolled by the Baha'i Faith, the forward march of sustaining interest produced a Green Acre firmly established as a summer school for the inculcation of the Baha'i teachings, with, however, admirable facilities for service in the field of public Baha'i teaching.

Green Acre today may therefore be viewed as a Baha'i Summer School, with a sufficiently extended season to permit a supplementary program of lectures and discussion groups of extreme interest to non-Baha'is.

The concentration of effort necessary over several years to clarify the nature of Green Acre has temporarily sacrificed certain of its more cultural possibilities, for example the activities of the Arts and Crafts Studio, but it is confidently expected that these possibilities will in the long run be more effectively realized on the firmer foundation of policy which has been laid.

The 1937 season opened with greatly increased physical facilities, thanks to generous gifts from interested Baha'is. A new Baha'i Hall, located near the river on the main plot of ground, provided a beautiful and convenient auditorium for lectures, conferences and study classes. The top floor of the inn was rebuilt prior to the opening of the season with many new rooms available at dormitory rates. Second floor accommodations had also been added to two of the adjoining cottages, with the result that Green Acre today can take care of about one hundred guests.

Another important gift was the transfer of the so-called Bull cottage and land to the Green Acre Trustees, a donation involving a large house on the main highway of Eliot and a strip of land running from the highway to the Ole Bull property on the river bank. This land joins the largest present area of Green Acre property and greatly increases its usefulness for future development.

The present report deals with the Summer School program, conducted from August 1 to September 3, the program maintained during July being reported by a separate Committee.

The 1937 Baha'i Summer School opened with Youth Week, the subject for the daily classes being "The Baha'i Administrative Order." The discussion was led by Horace Holley. The attendance this year was double that of any previous Youth Week at Green Acre. A notable result was a much closer association with the young people of Eliot, brought about by the Youth Committee through special social gatherings.

August 9, 10 and 11, Bishop Brown conducted morning and afternoon sessions on "The Rise and Fall of Civilizations," a scholarly presentation of fundamental social movements in the light of the Baha'i teachings.

A Conference on Teaching was held both morning and afternoon of August 12 and 13. Members of Regional Teaching Committees, and experienced pioneer teachers, carefully surveyed the problem of effective teaching methods in the spread of the Faith throughout the United States and Canada.

The week of August 16-20 had two different classes, one in the morning and one each afternoon. Kenneth Christian led a class on "Essentials of World Religion" and Ali Kuli-Khan lectured on "Islam." The material made available by these classes was a significant contribution to Baha'i thought.

From August 23 to 27 the morning sessions were devoted to the subject of "The Dispensation of Baha'u'llah" under the leadership of Mrs. Emogene Hoagg, while the afternoon meetings were conducted by Marguerite Reimer with the subject of Public Speaking, a new development of the Green Acre School much appreciated by those participating. The outline prepared by Mrs. Hoagg covered the fundamental subjects of the Faith.

Dr. Genevieve L. Coy conducted a course on "Human Qualities in the New Age" each morning from August 30 to September 3, a psychological approach to the vital problem of response to the implications of faith. The after-noon sessions during this final week brought another richly experimental course to Green Acre, the class in Writing planned and conducted by Mrs. Doris McKay. The basis of this course was the art of self-expression, with the technical features of literary composition made subservient to inner development.

Sunday devotional services and Fri-day evening discussion groups were conducted weekly, the speakers being: Carl Cartwright, Marion Holley, Kenneth Christian, Rosemary Sala, Ali Kuli-Khan, N. D., Elsie Austin, Archie G. Tichenor, Raphael Pumpelly, Chester Davison, Louis G. Gregory, Harlan Ober.

The outlook for Green Acre as a Bahá’í institution is exceedingly bright. Its historic tradition developed during forty-three years, its impressive facilities in land and buildings, its charm and beauty, and above all, the public trend in the direction of spiritual truth, a strongly-anchored inner life and a true World Plan, are factors making for a future that must be far greater than any portion of its past.

For overlooking Green Acre, a promise and an assurance, stands 'Ali ’Alí-Bahá. The second conference was conducted by Prof. Stanwood Cobb on the subject: “Universal World Culture Based on Universal Education.” July 9th, 30 present; (preceding Dr. Cobb’s lecture a commemoration for the Martyrdom of the Báb was held) Amelia Bowman, chairman. July 10th, 28 present, Mrs. Grace Ober, chairman; July 11th, 35 present; Dr. Cobb read from the Writings at intervals during a concert by the members of the Worcester Philharmonic Orchestra.

The third of the series was conducted by Prof. Glenn L. Shook on “Development of Church and State in Our Civilization.” July 17th, 12 present, Amelia Bowman, chairman; July 18th, 15 present, Hishmat Alai, chairman; July 19th, 35 present, Dr. Shook read from the Writings and musical numbers were given on the Harpsichord by Miss Betty Shook and Mrs. Lionel Lovejoy accompanied by the members of the Worcester Philharmonic Orchestra. Prof. Shook opened the meeting with a short talk on the Harpsichord.

The fourth of the series was conducted by Mr. Horace Holley on “The Coming of World Order.” July 23rd, 39 present, Miss Agnes O’Neill, chairman; July 24th, 42 present, Fred Schopfucher, chairman. July 25, 35 present. Mr. Holley read, musical numbers on the Harpsichord with orchestral accompaniment.

On July 30th Hishmat Alai spoke—30 present—Miss Marguerite Reimer, chairman. July 31st Mr. Fred Schopfucher shared with the friends his notes taken on his recent visit in Haifa, 66 present, Horace Holley, chairman.

Publicity was secured before and after each of these series of talks; however no radio time was available free of charge this year for Bahá’í speakers, because the commercial programs used all available time. The orchestra which was furnished by Mrs. Florence Morton during July, added greatly to the interest of the week-end conferences, and to the success of the July program.

After the lectures during July visitors were invited to the Ole Bull Cottage for further discussion of the subject and a cool drink of punch. These little fireside groups with a teacher for each three or four members proved a great success; the little personal contact and informal discussion opened the way for questions from the visitors. These groups varied in numbers from 4 to 30.

The additional programs were: a lecture with colored slides of the Holy Land given by Mrs. Nancy Bowditch on July 6th. Music was furnished by members of the Worcester Philharmonic Orchestra. This program was given on a very hot night; the audience 33; Horace Holley, chairman. Mrs. Bowditch gives a very delightful lecture with her slides which are beautifully colored.

There were three evening parties during July aside from the week-end fireside groups; at one the 14 members of the Public Health Ass’n. were entertained, at another local community of Elton to meet new member of community—Hazel Bowman, discussion centered on ways in which community could be of assistance to Green Acre, about 30 present; a surprise party given for the manager of the Inn and others having birthdays in July, this was just a jolly get-together with a program of entertainment for the 40 or more guests, birthday cakes, gifts, etc. Three teas were given during this month, two for non-Bahá’í guests at the Inn, and one tea for the Current Events Dept. of the So. Berwick Women’s Club at which Dr. Stanwood Cobb and Mrs. Lorol Schopfucher spoke. Two supper parties and a dinner party at which ten young married couples from towns in vicinity were entertained. Mr. Manny Reimer and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bowman spoke on “Future World Commonwealth.”

JULY ACTIVITIES

At Green Acre—1937

In accordance with the plan of the National Spiritual Assembly the Regional Committee for New England planned the program of activities for July at Green Acre, which consisted of a series of International Conferences held each Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening.

The first of the conferences was conducted by Mountfort Mills on the subject: “World Crises and World Needs” July 3rd, 53 present, Amelia Bowman, chairman; since this was the first meeting held in the new Hall, Mr. Mills expressed the appreciation of the National Spiritual Assembly for this splendid gift and dedicated it to the Bahá’í Faith.

July 4th, Mrs. Florence Morton, chairman, 66 present. Mr. Mills discussed the Future World Federation. July 5th the meeting was in the nature of a concert by the members of the Worcester Philharmonic Orchestra interspersed by readings from the Writings read by Mr. Mills. There were 33 present at this meeting.

The second conference was conducted by Prof. Stanwood Cobb on the subject: “Universal World Culture Based on Universal Education.” July 9th, 30 present; (preceding Dr. Cobb’s lecture a commemoration for the Martyrdom of the Báb was held) Amelia Bowman, chairman. July 10th, 28 present, Mrs. Grace Ober, chairman; July 11th, 35 present; Dr. Cobb read from the Writings at intervals during a concert by the members of the Worcester Philharmonic Orchestra.
The work this year at the Ole Bull was more concentrated and intensive than last year, the key people from surrounding towns who showed greatest response to lectures last year, entertained. Also many young married couples were attracted to meetings this year. Having the lovely new Hall for the meetings left the cottage freer for the small intimate groups and was a great boon to the work in every way. We have newly interested persons reading now in Manchester, Northwood, Dover, Somersworth, Salmon Falls and Portsmouth, N. H., and Eliot, York, Portland, Kennebunk, So. Berwick, Berwick, and Sanford, Me., Attleboro, New Bedford and Boston, Mass., Billings, Montana, Naples, Fla., and Elmina, N. Y. The names and addresses of these people will be sent to the Regional Committees.

Mrs. Schopflocher was unting in her efforts to aid the teaching work and carried on the follow up work at her Studio at Nine Gables. We are still carrying on this work and have our last meeting Oct. 8th to hear Madame Orlova speak. Expect thirty or more as there are women coming from all the surrounding towns as well as from Manchester, N. H., and North Berwick, Maine. We appreciate very deeply the splendid assistance and cooperation of Mrs. Schopflocher in allowing the use of their summer home and assisting constantly in the work.

From the accounts kept of numbers during the summer, we have the total attendance during July at the Hall 562, which we are told has not been done in July in Green Acre for years. The total for the Ole Bull Cottage for July and August attendance is 509 as nearly as we can figure it, this is not counting little informal calls of which there were too many to try to keep account of.

The teachers assisting in the Green Acre teaching work besides Mrs. Schopflocher and Mrs. Marguerite Bruegger, were: Miss Marion Holley, Mrs. Mabel Ives, Mrs. Harlan Ober, Mr. Reimer, Miss Marguerite Reimer, Mrs. Alice Bacon (who spent a week with me assisting as member of the Regional Teaching Committee), Mr. Hishmat Alai, Mr. Kenneth Christian, Prof. Stanwood Cobb, and Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf.

The work at Ole Bull has opened the way for follow-up work in this vicinity during the entire winter months and up to next season when we hope we shall have twice the attendance at all the lectures. I appreciate more than I can say, the marvelous opportunity for service to the Cause we have had during the season at the Ole Bull.

The foregoing is a corrected outline of the activities of Youth Week. It is impossible to put on paper any indication of the splendid content of the study course and of the fine ideas brought out in discussion at the forums; and it is not possible to describe the exceptional spirit prevailing all the week in all the activities.

Several Baha'is and non-Baha'i youth in attendance have told me since that Youth Week meant a great deal to them. Such an effect upon individuals is one excellent criterion of judgment.

We feel that a good balance was achieved between play and study. In fact, the members of the National Youth Committee in attendance met before the work was up and drew up a list of suggestions for next year's committee.

The high point as far as actual teaching goes was the supper-dance held at the Inn on Saturday night with almost one hundred young people from the surrounding towns as our guests. And they thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Marion Holley spoke briefly on "The New Frontier." From the point of social mixing the dance that followed was a great success.

On every hand we were accorded the finest cooperation.

The members of the National Youth Committee feel that we have laid the foundation for great youth activity in the future.

INDEX

This past year the work of the Index Committee has been mainly that of cataloguing the results already obtained from the individual indexing.

By this means a card index of the authentic writings of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and Shoghi Effendi can be obtained. From this card index a printed index in pamphlet form can easily be made whenever it is deemed advisable.

Besides cataloguing results there has been some indexing carried on too. Mrs. Stebbins continues her index of the Bahá'í News and Letters and there is a short index of Bahá'í Procedures in a form similar to the pages in the present volume and hence can be inserted in it.

In reviewing the work of the Index Committee deep gratitude is felt for the hearty response of many individuals and committees to the call for assistance in indexing. There were many manuscripts offered. Some were very detailed and no doubt can be used later when a more complete index is made.

The manuscripts used in this card index have been shorter ones. Many of these have been made by persons trained for such work. Surely Shoghi Effendi expects us to secure as able productions as possible from our Bahá'í fellow workers.

Thanks are also due the friends who so generously offered their services in typing and mimeographing. A list of their names will be given to the incoming Index committee for there will be need for considerable typing before a complete index of all the volumes about the Faith is completed.

It is a source of constant joy to learn of the eagerness of the Baha'i friends to assist this Great Cause in even the more technical lines of service. "Blessed be he who serves with love."

INTERNATIONAL AUXILIARY
LANGUAGE

The Committee reports greatly increased activity during the past season, due to the visit to America of Miss Lidia Zamenhof and the classes in Es­ eranto which she has taught.

She has visited three cities, New York, Philadelphia and Detroit and in each one has made many contacts for the Cause. Everywhere she has ap­ ppeared she has been received with interest, as she is a speaker of ability and power.

Articles on her visit to America and her work appeared in the following newspapers and one magazine: the New York News, New York Sun, National Jewish Daily, Philadelphia Record, Detroit News, Detroit Free Press and the Chicago Sentinel. One of these newspapers in each city carried a large cut with their article. The account in the Sentinel, a monthly magazine devoted to Jewish interests, was exceptionally good and mentioned the Cause sympathetically. Another bit of publicity of a related kind, was the folders announcing her classes gotten out by the Detroit Esperantists. This folder carried the announcement that her visit had been made possible through the cooperation of the National Spiritual Assembly. The Detroit society also arranged for her to speak over the radio, twice in Philadelphia, the Drexel Institute; in Detroit, the Women Lawyers Association, the Zonta Club and True Kindred.

The Chairman of the Committee having occasion to write Shoghi Effendi to request his prayers for the solution of difficulties which had arisen, wrote also of the very hearty welcome and cooperation given Miss Zamenhof by the New York Spiritual Assembly. In the replies received are expressed his appreciation and his expectation of the results her work will accomplish. We quote from these letters:

November 10th—"He is most pleased to know of the hearty welcome extended to Miss Lidja Zamenhof by the friends in New York. He has every reason to hope that the outcome of Miss Zamenhof's work will be to awaken a deep and sustained interest in the Cause in many important circles.
He will ardently pray that the highest success may crown her efforts for the wider dissemination of the Teachings throughout the States."

February 12th—"He again wishes me to express his profound sense of appreciation to the friends in New York for the continued and valuable assistance you have extended to her throughout her travels. He cherishes the hope that as a result of your united efforts the Cause will make increasing and steady headway in Esperanto circles throughout the States." To this was added in the Guardian's hand —"May the efforts you are exerting yield the richest fruit, and enable you to attract increasingly the best, the worthiest and most devoted souls to the Cause of God."

LEGAL Incorporation of Local Assemblies

The principal work of the Legal Committee for the current Baha'i year has been the examination and approval of the incorporation papers of a number of Baha'i Assemblies. There has been considerable delay in this work owing to the fact that the Committee has not been supplied with all the data necessary to pass upon the sufficiency of the papers due to the difference in the laws of the various States governing religious corporations. It was therefore necessary during the year to issue the following instruction:—"All local Assemblies desiring to incorporate should submit copies of their prospected Certificate of Incorporation and their Local By-laws together with a copy of the State Statute under which they intend to incorporate in order to facilitate approval of such action. The advise of a local attorney is recommended for the legal procedure of drafting the Certificate or Articles of Incorporation."

In some States the law governing the incorporation of religious bodies is not satisfactory to Baha'i organization which vests the authority in the As­ ssembly, or nine Trustees, and it is then necessary to use the sections of the law controlling "Corporations Not For Profit."

The committee wishes also to call attention to the importance of prepaing a proper set of minutes of the As­ ssembly meeting which approves the incorporation of that body. An approved set of By-laws for the administration of a local Assembly may be found in the latest edition of The Baha'i World. It is not necessary to file these By-laws with the Articles of Incorporation when they are submited to the State office which handles such matters. Photostatic copies of the recorded articles should be forwarded to the National Spiritual Assembly for use in future Baha'i pub­ cations as the Guardian has made such a request.

The following Assemblies have completed their papers and have had them approved during the past year: Los Angeles, Kenosha, Binghamton, Racine, Milwaukee, Cleveland and Seattle.
Other Assemblies are in the course of completing their papers including Minneapolis, Boston, San Francisco and Portland. The Kansas City Assembly has submitted a set of By-laws for approval but does not intend to incorporate at this time.

Owing to the increase of the electoral body of the National Spiritual Assembly it has been necessary to make the following amendment to the
By-laws of that body:—"Resolved, that in accordance with the instruction given by the Guardian to this body dated November 25, 1937, to the effect that the number of delegates at the Annual Convention hereafter number 171 instead of 95, Art. VIII of the By-Laws be amended by striking out the word 'ninety-five' in the second sentence of said Article, and substituting therefor the words 'one hundred seventy-one.'"

Temple Property

An agreement between the Trustees and the owners of the property adjoining the triangular piece of property across Sheridan Road over the equitable division of the vacated stub-end of Sheridan Road has not yet been concluded, but is in the process of negotiation.

Palestine Branch of N. S. A.

Two title deeds of land on Mt. Carmel situated between the Shrine of the Bab and the Tomb of the Greatest Holy Leaf transferring this property to the Palestine Branch of the N. S. A. were received from the Guardian during the year, and placed in the records of the National Treasurer's office. It is desirable for the American friends who still own property in Haifa to complete their plans for the transfer of this property to the Palestine Branch in order to protect the title against the Ottoman law which prevents a foreigner from disposing of his property after death according to his Will.

Baha'i Temple Unity

It is interesting to note that the charter of the Baha'i Temple Unity has been retained since the time when it transferred all the property it held to the Trustees of the National Spiritual Assembly a number of years ago. The wisdom of this action became apparent this year as a legacy in the estate of the late Ada C. Devine was established for the Baha'i Temple Unity and Mr. Carl Scheffler was able to accept service of the citation from the Court where a final accounting of the estate had been issued by the executor, in Tompkins County, New York. It is only gifts and legacies which have been bequeathed in old wills in favor of the Cause through the Baha'i Temple Unity will not be lost. In conclusion the committee wishes again to remind the friends that a modern form of bequest was prepared and published in the August, 1936 Baha'i News No. 102, page 2* for the benefit of all those who wish to leave a legacy to the Cause. Baha'u'llah has declared that "It is incumbent upon every person to write (his) Will," and this action is recommended to every believer.

The Committee's expenses for the year amounted to $88.53. This was for stationery, stamps, and miscellaneous items, and for packing, postage, and shipping the books.

We now have Baha'i books in at least one public library in all but the following states and provinces: Arkansas, Delaware, District of Columbia, Iowa, Louisiana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, Alberta, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island.

We also have Baha'i books in at least one college or university library in all but the following states and provinces: Arkansas, Delaware, District of Columbia, Idaho, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming; Alberta, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan.

Will Baha'ai living in these places, also travelling teachers, keep this in mind and tackle the librarians at the most opportune time?

MARTHA WOODBURY, Chairman

PUBLICITY

This report of the Baha'i News Service Committee dates from March 10th of 1937 to March 10th of 1938.

The replacing of the name of Baha'i Publicity Committee with that of Baha'i News Service we feel was an important step forward as it gave our work prestige in the eyes of the newspaper world.

More and more, publicity committees and traveling teachers have made use of the service which this committee is prepared to give, through suggestions, photographs and mats. The committee has endeavored to be prompt at all times in replying to such requests and acknowledging press clippings.

Twenty-seven releases have been issued this past year, compared to three of the year before. This increase in releases has been made possible through the use of a mimeograph machine placed at the disposal of Baha'i News Service. The following releases were issued this year to date:-

Advance release in March, of the celebration of the 25th Anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Baha's arrival in America: April 11th, a release announcing the national-wide celebration of 'Abdu'l-Baha's arrival on that date; April, a release reviewing advance of civilization since 'Abdu'l-Baha's visit; April 14th, release issued by National Assembly on the marriage of Shoghi Effendi; April 25th, the Convention release; May 1st, after-convention release; Strikes; announcing publication of Portals of Freedom; Advance release on Summer Schools; Release on opening of Youth Session at Louhelen; July session of Louhelen; July 9th, Martyrdom of the Bab; The Baha'i Faith is not a Cult, released to publicity committees and teachers for their files, to be used if necessary; Release on review of article on "Language and World Unity" published in May and June issues of "World Order"; Review of article on "Soul, Mind and Spirit" published in "World Order"; A series of 5 releases which include, two on the Temple, What is the Baha’i Faith?, When and Where did the Baha’i Faith originate and who was its Forerunner? Who was the One promised by the Bab? ‘Abdu’l-Baha, the Servant of God; October 20th, a release on the 118th Anniversary of the birth of the Bab; October 13th, Placing of Temple contract for work on gallery section; Release on Lidia Zamenhof; December 25th release; February 12th, One event of Mankind; (this release was sent out by the United Press office of Chicago to some 475 papers. We were told it was also used by a Chicago radio station, and over a Honolulu station by Mrs. Matthews.) March 15th, Resumption of actual work on gallery section of Temple.

In addition to these releases, calls have been received for aid from traveling speakers. A series of 10 releases covering the entire "Goal of a New World Order" was requested by Mrs. Kathryn Frankland and is now being published in the "Daily Voice" at Corpus Christi, Texas.

The Baha’i News Service recently compiled a few of the outstanding publicity chippings into a planographed sheet. This sheet has been sent out to publicity committees, regional committees and some of the traveling teachers, to assist them in securing publicity. As a further project Bahá’í News Service is sending this sheet, to newspapers throughout the country, together with a letter inviting them to call upon us for the series of articles on the Temple and the Faith. In making the editors more familiar with the name "Bahá’í Faith" this serves as an advance agent for teachers going into these areas.

A questionnaire Bulletin was recently issued to publicity committees, asking for an annual report. From the reports received we have gleaned the following:

In most instances it has been reported that publicity was easier to obtain than last year, and the Press Books are a proof of this; that the Faith is being given greater recognition, as it becomes better known, proving the value of persistent effort. Problems were presented such as, difficulty in trying to convince editors that we have the solution for World Order. Some reports have said that the releases sent out by Bahá’í News Service are too long. To this we must answer as we have in the past, that each community has their own particular problem to handle in this connection, and if releases are too long for their use, they should be re-written by the local committee and local color always added. One teacher reported using the releases in her teaching work. Some newspaper editors state they receive complaints for giving too much space to the Bahá’ís. This is discouraging in a way—but brings to mind the words of Bahá’u’lláh, that no one tries to extinguish a lamp that is not burning.

Our file of photographs, cuts and mats has been continuously added to and we are now prepared to furnish mats and glossy prints of ‘Abdu’l-Baha, views of the Temple and mats or glossy prints of many of the speakers. We will always try to get the ones needed which are not on file and we ask teachers to send in at least three glossy prints of themselves. We also have two cuts of the Temple for use on programs, which can be borrowed.

We wish to take this opportunity to express our deepest appreciation for the splendid cooperation which we have received from publicity committees and speakers alike. Also, for the assistance given us in our work by Mary Haggard of Wilmette, Gertrude Eisenberg and William Pulley of Chicago.

PUBLISHING

In submitting the report for the first year of the Seven Year Plan, the Committee wishes to express its grateful appreciation for the privilege of sharing in the work of the Plan. The making and distributing of the books and pamphlets is of paramount importance; without them the teaching work could not go on.

It is only by serious study of the Words, that a true understanding of the Faith may be obtained and the books are the primal source for all Bahá’í teaching and for living in accord with Bahá’í principles.

The Committee has had invaluable help from the Editing Committee, Marie B. Moore, Helen Campbell and Teresita Ryan, for which they are most appreciative. Their devoted efforts in revising, editing, indexing and proof-reading have been of inestimable value.

We have sold and distributed for teaching, Committee work etc., for the year ending March 1, 1938:
94,229 pamphlets
3,177 outlines

and in addition to above:
1 copy of The Dawn-Breakers,
Limited edition
31 copies of The Dawn-Breakers, Standard edition

brining total sales to date
Standard edition 1,423 copies Limited edition 140 copies

Only ten copies now available of the Limited edition.

New publications

The outstanding event of the year is the publication of Prayers and Meditations by Bahá’u’lláh, translated by the Guardian. After much careful editing and consultation with the Guardian, this important work was ready for distribution late in February. We are very grateful for the generous gift of a friend for financing the production of this sublime book.

The Bahá’í World, Volume VI, was published May, 1937. This volume covers the period, April, 1934 to April, 1936.

Business Procedure, a compilation of secondary administrative material compiled by the National Spiritual Assembly, published April, 1937.

Economics as Social Creation, by Horace Holley, teaching pamphlet, reprint from article in World Order magazine, published November, 1937.

The Bab’s Address to the Letters of the Living, hand lettered copy reproduced in small pamphlet form by photographic process, published November, 1937. Reprints December, 1937 and January, 1938. Donation from a friend made possible the less than cost price, at which it is sold.

Outlines

Study Outline on the Essential Principles of Creative Writing, prepared by the Outline Committee, published April, 1937. Reprinted August, 1937.

In process

The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh: This important work comprising the seven World Order letters received to date from Shoghi Effendi, is now in process of making. Will probably be ready in time for the Convention.

Reprints, Purchases and Binding orders

April, 1937—Portals to Freedom by

May, 1937—Bahá’í Lesson Outlines for Children. Epistle to the Son of the Wolf.

Feb., 1938—Principles of the Bahá’í Faith, teaching pamphlet.

In October, 1937, a new catalog was issued in convenient pocket size. The edition is about exhausted, and a new printing with additions to date will be ready for the Convention.

In January, 1938, the National Spiritual Assembly notified the Publishing Committee of a new ruling in regard to discounts. The higher discounts given in the past have not allowed enough margin to cover manufacturing costs, overhead, etc., therefore in future only 10% discount will be allowed on orders of $10.00 or more (but this total must not include net items) to Assemblies, Groups and Individuals. Postage, however, will be paid by the Committee on all orders.

Braille Transcriptions

Mrs. Stuart French had plates made of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era, and Kitáb-i-Iqán, and donated many sets to institutions for the Blind. The plates were shipped to the Publishing Committee, New York. Having had inquiries for these Braille transcriptions, the Committee asked for estimates from Eastern firms who do this work, but prices were much too high. Price quoted from the firm who made the original plates in Los Angeles was also too high for practical handling. It was decided that this matter should be referred to the Braille Committee, as it seemed to be a purely philanthropic undertaking and the Braille Committee should submit the question to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Special offer good for ninety days from March 1, 1938, of The Bahá’í World, Volumes 1 to 6, has been made. Six volumes for $7.50 net, postage prepaid. The selling price of several of the volumes has been below cost, therefore this offer is a most generous one. These volumes have great value as a progressive history of the Bahá’í Faith.

World Order

The most important happening in the year regarding the magazine, is the registration of the name “World Order” at the Patent Office, Washington, D. C. This means that the name belongs exclusively to the Bahá’ís, and it is a name destined to become most important in the future of the world. We must build the circulation of the magazine to broaden its influence.

We sent a letter to all Assemblies and Groups in January, 1938, and are really gratified at the awakened interest. The Introductory subscriptions, seven months for one dollar, are popular and a large percentage renew as regular subscribers. The special offer of seven copies of any one issue for one dollar, has also met with response, and we hope that the friends will continue to use this means of introducing the magazine to both Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís.

Subscriptions for University and Public Libraries have grown, due to the generosity of many Assemblies and individual friends. Many libraries have also subscribed direct.

Several plans have been tried out to enroll newsdealers as selling agents, but with little success so far. However, a few are selling copies regularly and a prominent bookstore in New England, has recently sent in a monthly order. The Assemblies in many instances order in quantity, placing orders in advance for a certain number monthly.

The Publishing Committee has received a donation of World Unity magazine. Fifteen complete sets are available, covering a period of seven and one-half years, price $15.00 per set net. The National Spiritual Assembly is donating a set to each of the summer schools.

We are constantly striving that the publishing work may increase in power and usefulness and we need the cooperation of all the friends.

RADIO

The National Radio Committee wishes to extend thanks to the friends for their hearty response to this year's effort.

Taking inventory of possible unused capacities throughout America, the Radio Committee in September sent seventy-five invitations to individuals to submit radio talks, and issued a like invitation in NEWS LETTER. It has not been the policy of the committee to write the talks, but rather to encourage and use the talents of the believers at large. Fifty-six talks have been accepted and most of these are obtainable in mimeographed form. They have been listed in BAHÁ’Í News as they have appeared. They include three World Order series written and used by New York, Vancouver, and Monson, a series on Progressive Revelation written and used by Lima, and a variety of single talks on World Order and spiritual subjects. Approximately five hundred copies have been sent out by the committee between December first and March first, leaving a fair supply on hand. A complete set will be given to each Summer School. The national cost of issuing these talks has been slight because of the cooperation of the friends in mimeographing, and of the believers in accepting the obligation of a minor charge for each talk. After an initial expense of sixty dollars, the department became self-supporting.

Under consideration at the present time is a “Bahá’í School of the Air,” part of which will be devoted to lecture and part to questions and answers. The School of the Air when completed will be offered to the committee for all centers able to carry regular weekly programs throughout a season.

Information has been obtained covering location, power and name of operator of every radio station in America, and several regional secretaries are already using this information to canvass for radio opportunity in their areas. It is hoped that by this means the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh will command wide-spread and increasing attention throughout the United States and Canada.
STUDY OUTLINES

Our work of the past year has culminated in the approval of the Reviewing Committee of two outlines. One, a very splendid piece of work, was submitted by Mrs. Emogene Hoagg. It is the outline she used for her course at Green Acre in the summer of 1937, entitled The Three Worlds, and will prove a rich guide to study for the advanced Baha'i student. The other outline is the work of this committee. Its scope is restricted to the material in the Guardian’s letter, The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh. We have ventured, in this outline, an innovation in the form of tests. These tests are of the modern type familiar to all young people; we believe older people will find them stimulating even though unfamiliar.

At present our efforts are concentrated on a series of six or eight lessons whose purpose is to direct the study of the person who has been attracted to the Cause by a traveling teacher. When the teacher goes on, this outline will guide the student in his effort to answer the question, Am I a Bahá’í?

The committee would appreciate suggestions from both Local and National Assemblies as to types of outlines that are needed. Such suggestions would be very helpful in planning the future work of the outline committee.

GRETCHEN WESTERVET,
Chairman

TEACHING LITERATURE

During the past year this committee has reported four new articles for publication in the series of teaching pamphlets. One of them “Economics As Social Creation” by Horace Holley has been recently published. Two other articles, “The Manifestation” by Albert P. Entzminger and “The Laboratory of Life” by Louise Boyle have been approved by the National Spiritual Assembly and will soon appear in print. The fourth manuscript entitled “The Approach Through Religion” by G. Townshend, recently submitted, shows how religion down through the ages has been the chief source for the peace and unity of the world. This article had been recommended to the National Spiritual Assembly as a splendid introduction to the Bahá’í Faith.

Last year we reported the sales by the Publishing Committee of the various small leaflets and teaching pamphlets as approximately 52,000 in number. This year the following list of sales has been supplied to February 28:

In addition to the amount of pamphlets sold, 18,400 more have been furnished the Teaching, Publicity, Contacts and Temple Program Committees through budgets arranged by the National Assembly, making a total of nearly 78,000 leaflets and pamphlets distributed for the teaching work this year. This is an increase of several thousand over last year and the coming year should find at least a 100,000 in demand.

With the publication of the new pamphlets that have been approved, the following subjects will have been covered: Education, Peace, Unity of Mankind, Economics, Science, Religion, the Spiritual Path, the Manifestations and the Bahá’í Temple—nine in all, besides the introductory leaflets. This wide range, we feel, should be sufficient at this time to meet the requirements of a seeking public. We recommend that every believer who has dedicated himself or herself to the prosecution of the Seven Year Plan will keep a supply of these pamphlets on hand at all times so that the seeker can be given one that will tend to further increase his interest in the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. All the Bahá’í communities should have them on display at all meetings. In this manner we can help to prosecute the great teaching task still before us. The Guardian has stated: “There is undoubtedly no higher call than that of bringing the Message to a world torn and torn on every side by the forces of destructive materialism. It is for us to realize the full measure of the responsibility that has been laid upon our shoulders in this matter, and having attained full consciousness of our responsibility to unity and arise to contribute all that we can towards its discharge.”

TEMPLE PROGRAM

‘Abdu’l-Bahá said: “Temples are symbols of that uniting force, in order that when the people gather there, in a given edifice of God, they may recall the fact that the Law has been revealed for them and that the Law is to unite them. That just as this edifice was founded for the unification of mankind, the Law preceding and creating this Temple was issued therefor.”

It was to inform the public of this Law of Bahá’u’lláh that the following local people spoke at the Bahá’í House of Worship during the past year:

Mr. Monroe Iona
Mrs. Nina Matthisen
Mrs. Ruth Moffett
Mrs. Mahdah Paton
Dr. R. D. Petet
Mr. Carl Scheffler
Mrs. Corrine True
Mrs. Margarite Ullrich
Mrs. Sarah Walsch
Mr. Albert Windust

The following speakers from out-of-town were enthusiastically welcomed and were an inspiration to the audience:

Mrs. Dorothy Baker
Prof. Stanford Cobb
Miss Pearl Easterbrook
Miss Marion Holley
Mr. Horace Holley
Mrs. Mabel Ives
Mrs. Margaret Lindstrom
Mr. Allen McDaniel
Mrs. Harlan Ober
Mr. Siegfried Schopfischer
Mrs. Mamie Seto
Mr. Roy Wilhjem

The youth were in charge of the public meeting at the Bahá’í House of Worship on Annual Bahá’í Youth Day, February 27th, and their efforts met with great success. The speakers were Wilfrid Barton, Florence Mattoo, Linda Taylor and Clarence Sigall. Mr. Albert Windust acted as chairman for these splendid young speakers, setting the stage for them, so to speak, and in conclusion summing up the four addresses into a perfect whole. It was an inspiring occasion and the Bahá’ís may feel justly proud of the sincere and earnest young people who are preparing themselves for service in the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh.

A very special program was arranged under the supervision of the Spiritual Assembly of Chicago at the Bahá’í House of Worship for April 11—the 25th Anniversary of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s arrival in America. We were privileged to have Mr. Allen McDaniel of Washington as our Bahá’í speaker, and there were guest speakers from clubs and churches where 'Abdu’l-Bahá spoke when He was in Chicago. The Temple was filled to over-flowing and it was felt that great benefit was derived from this meeting.

Programs for the Holy Days celebrated in the Bahá’í House of Worship, while under the jurisdiction of the Temple Program Committee, were arranged by the various communities surrounding the Temple, Chicago, Evanston, Park Ridge, Wilmette and Winnetka, and refreshments were provided by these same communities when necessary. Recently Maywood has been added to the list of communities serving in this capacity.

The guide service this year has been under the capable supervision of Mr. Hilbert Dahl and his assistants, Miss Gertrude Buikema and Mrs. Anne Bartholomew. Several new ideas were inaugurated in the guide work which proved very effective. During the year, there were 3,589 groups totaling 14,510 people conducted through the House of Worship by Guides. This number included about 2,300 people in 60 groups scheduled by appointment through the guides, the caretaker, Contacts Committee and other service committees. The latter groups represented churches, schools, universities and other educational institutions, Women’s Clubs, boys’ clubs, fraternal organizations, business and industrial groups, WPA-Chicago Board of Education, Free Tours and other groups.

At the suggestion of Mr. Dahl and under his direction, all, however, under the supervision of the Temple Program Committee, was the forming of a Teachers’ Training Class at the Bahá’í House of Worship, for Bahá’ís in the vicinity of the Temple. This project was enthusiastically and successfully carried forward and has been very helpful to the participants.

It was felt that a library at the Bahá’í House of Worship would be of great benefit to the guides, as perhaps some question might be asked that it was not possible to answer in detail. The guides felt, if such a contingency arose and they could turn to the books in the library and refer the inquirer to the “written word,” the impression made would be deeper and more lasting. Accordingly donations of books were solicited from nearby Spiritual Assemblies, and the generous response from communities and individuals has resulted in a fine collection of books for reference purposes. Having the books on hand has helped the guides and has also given them the opportunity to invite visitors who are interested to sit and read awhile.

At the Free Literature table, under the guidance of Mrs. Nina Matthiesen who has faithfully served in this capacity for many years, free literature furnished by the National Spiritual Assembly has been distributed, and many questions have been answered.

Active and growth classes for children are conducted at the Bahá’í House of Worship on Sunday morning from 11:00 to 12:00, under the supervision of Mrs. Clair Gillespie and Mrs. Mary Haggard.

It has been the aim and hope of this Committee to make the meetings at the Bahá’í House of Worship a source of information and inspiration to the public and to the Bahá’ís. We hope we have succeeded.

TEMPLE GUIDES

Your Guide Committee respectfully submit this report of activities during the year ending February 28, 1938, including progress made and suggestions for future goals to be achieved. During the year, there were 3,589 groups totaling 14,510 people conducted through the House of Worship by Guides. This number included about 2,300 people in 60 groups scheduled by appointment through the Guides, the caretaker, Contacts Committee and other service committees. The latter groups represented churches, schools, universities and other educational institutions, Women’s Clubs, boys’ clubs, fraternal organizations, business and industrial groups, WPA-Chicago Board of Education, Free Tours and other groups.

The activity during the year has been harmonized and inspired by a message from our beloved Guardian with reference to Guide work, to wit: “The Guardian attaches the highest importance to it (the Guide work), inasmuch as it affords a splendid opportunity for presenting the Message on a very large scale. The responsibilities which this function calls for are as vital and far-reaching as the privileges and benefits it confers on the individual believer. The Bahá’í Guide has indeed a very sacred obligation to discharge. Not only has he to perfect his knowledge of the Cause, but should develop all those qualities of tact, wisdom, and of ability to present the Message which every Bahá’í teacher requires. It is the duty of those who are in charge of organizing the guide work at the Temple to make every effort to widen its scope, raise the standard of its personnel, and thus increase its effectiveness.

“The Guardian very deeply values the steps that have already been taken in that direction . . . .” H. RABBANI

Thus inspired, and with the consultation and approval of the Temple Program Committee, guide activity during the year included the following:

1—Conduct of normal guiding with renewed sacrifice and vigor.
2—Increase of Guide Secretaries from one to three—one in each of three regional districts—to facilitate the machinery of activity.
3—Establishment of a Guide Committee consisting of nine members: the chairman, the regional secretaries and five other guides—an effort being made in the scheduling of guides to have a committee member on duty each day. The purpose of the committee is to act as a clearing house of consultation between the Program Committee and the individual guide and as a medium for harmonizing guide activity in accord with policies of the Program Committee.
4—Institution of a reading library at the House of Worship of books contributed by Assemblies and individuals. At present there are some twenty-five volumes.
5—Establishment of Teacher Training Classes at the House of Worship. Meeting weekly, the Class started on July 1, 1937, for a one month program. Averaging twenty to forty in attendance, interest was so intense as to continue the activity to the present, with frequent demand for expansion of the activity to additional classes for specialized study. A moving characteristic of the class has been its unity, sincerity and universal spirit.
6—An effort to establish a study class for non-Bahá’ís indicated lack of proper publicity due, largely, to lack of time.
7—Regulations for Guides were brought into accord with needs and harmonized with the policy of the Program Committee.
8—Incorporation of Temple usher service under the jurisdiction of the Guide Committee.

HILBERT DAHL, Chairman GERTRUDE BUKEEMA ANNE BARTHOLOMEW
Our current committee year, beginning July 1, 1937, found a listing obtained from various sources of seventeen isolated believers in widely scattered areas in Florida. None were to be found in Alabama. There was also a list of fifteen who had been studying the Bahá’í teachings at various places and periods during the past two years with the aid of some of the isolated believers and traveling Bahá’ís, but who have not yet registered as declared believers. Of these latter, ten are in West Palm Beach where some work was done last year by Oredella Rexford, but so far nothing has been done to follow it up since we know of no one resident there who can take a lead in unifying and teaching in that locality. However, progress is being made. At Bristol, Florida, in the northwestern part of the state, Mr. Edward H. Young, formerly of Washington, D. C., has settled and has found many eager for the Teachings. Three so far have recently enrolled and a number of others are studying. Miss Alma Knoblock is also spending some time in Bristol assisting Mr. Young in forming study classes, especially among the young people, and reports much interest throughout the whole county.

A number of Bahá’ís from other localities have reported to me their work during short visits in Florida this season. Among them I have listed Mr. F. G. Hale of Clearwater, Mrs. K. M. Breymann at De Land, and Miss Bessie M. Garrison in Gainesville, all of whom have reported their intentions of settling permanently in the State. The study group in Orlando, while not yet having the required nine believers to form an Assembly reports (in March, 1938) that they have arranged to share a hall with the Theosophical Society in that place on alternate weeks and advertise public meetings. They will be assisted by Dr. and Mrs. Walter B. Guy of St. Augustine, who plan to establish a full teaching circuit as quickly as possible for points between Jacksonville and Orlando.

Most encouraging reports have come from Mr. Louis G. Gregory who has been working at Tuskegee, Alabama, since early in December. The way has opened for Mr. Gregory to continue to teach and remain at Tuskegee as long as he feels it advantageous and he has announced a series of lectures and study classes which are being well attended and given much favorable comment. The meeting place is donated by the Institute and good cooperation is being given by teachers and prominent citizens of Tuskegee. Mr. Gregory reports having several students ready to declare themselves.

Alabama was one of the states listed at the beginning of last year as having no known believers. At present Mr. Walter H. Blakely is residing and working in Birmingham, having gone there during the winter for the purpose of settling in order to give the Teachings. He now reports that he has made connections which will enable him to remain permanently and that he is placing books in the Public Library in Birmingham and preparing for study classes.

A number of books have been distributed during the past few months in our area—mainly the “New Era,” “Answered Questions,” “Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá” and “Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh,” and also many pamphlets partly through the help of traveling Bahá’ís during personal visits to places where study groups or isolated believers are known. We wish also to acknowledge and thank Miss Victoria Bedkian for her loving work in corresponding with and encouraging the isolated believers and students.

Louisiana and Mississippi

In submitting the report of the work done in this territory, I can best describe it as being only pioneer work. My first efforts therefore were to make the teachings known to as many people as possible; making them familiar with the word Bahá’, and the names of the Faith, the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The principles of the Faith as well as the word Bahá’í were absolutely unknown to the majority of the people.

Work was concentrated in New Orleans. New Orleans is a city of traditions, tradition in thought, customs, and laws; this tradition is Latin and therefore Roman Catholic.

1. Method of approach had to be based on a spiritual point of Unity. Stressed the historical truth in progressive revelation, as the foundation of the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh.

2. Spoke to many different types and groups of people. Some listened without prejudice or antagonism, many listened with both, but all were attentive and listened just the same. Many listened with deep interest, but only a few have responded with the sense of the answer to their doubts or as the case might be their search for truth. These few have met with me each week, and I am happy that a few new people have been added to the original number.

3. I gave one Radio Talk over station W.S.M.B.N.O., subject: “The Vistas of Today.” A few inquiries have resulted from this talk. I hope to get a popular hour on a local station next week, and will give a series of three talks.

4. Gave one talk in Gulfport, Miss.

5. Gave a Book Review at a prominent Book Club. The book was “I Yaweh” by Robert Munsen Grey. And is an interesting subject, relating to Bahá’í teaching of progressive revelation. It is the “autobiography” of Jehovah. Through this I had many openings to speak of the Cause.

6. A great deal of literature has been distributed, in New Orleans as well as sent to remote districts in this territory. This phase of the teaching work has been most encouraging and the response most edifying. One outstanding example was a letter received from someone in Mississippi, who lives on a cotton plantation far from any big center. She writes: “I had been searching for a long time for the Truth, I feel now that I have found it in learning about the Bahá’í Faith. I have felt an inner sense of peace and security which passeth all understanding, and the world seems a very different place to me.” These are the highlights which came to light the path of the “lone worker” in the field and brings inestimable joy.

7. Given several talks to a group in Covington, La., who are already familiar with the teachings. It is an interesting group composed of Theosophists, Rosacrucians, Oxford Group, Unity, New Thought and Christian Science, many interesting and stimulating friendly discussions invariably take place in the quest of illuminating differences.

8. There is much yet to be done in this territory. I have only just touched the surface of the University groups. One or two of the professors who have heard of the Cause, showed decided interest perhaps prompted by the historical and educational value in the teachings rather than religious. I feel that this must be followed up by stressing the full understanding of the spiritual importance of a new revelation as well as the intellectual understanding.
to spread the Cause in that city. Miss Ebbert has become a confirmed believer. They were preceded by Mrs. Furbush, who made quite a few contacts for the Cause. Mr. Louis Gregory also visited Atlanta, giving talks in schools and churches. Mrs. Tehrah Smith is in Atlanta assisting the teaching work. She is planning to give a series of public meetings.

There are two people who have declared their belief but have not joined the community in Augusta, Ga. The third, Miss Gene Cappus, has joined the Buffalo Assembly after receiving the Message in Augusta. Two weekly public meetings at the Bahá’í Center. The two newspapers publish regularly the weekly programs and, in most instances, the special articles of national interest. Permission has been granted for time on the radio. Dr. Morris and Miss Alma Knobloch spent some time teaching in and near Augusta.

Teachers visiting this region have been Mrs. Caswell, Mrs. Little, Dr. Morris, Miss Alma Knobloch, Mr. Agnew, Mrs. Hoag and Kruka, Mrs. Wiles, Mrs. Smith, Miss Finke, Mrs. Ober, Miss Marion Holley, Mrs. Schopflocher and Mrs. Seto.

Washington, Oregon, Idaho, British Columbia

The committee wishes it could show more definite results than this report will show, but here at least is a report of efforts made since last summer.

Everett—a city of 30,567 (30 miles north of Seattle, 15 miles west of Monroe). The committee decided to concentrate on this city first, since an afternoon weekly study class conducted by Monroe and Seattle friends had been making progress. This afternoon class has now just about completed a course of 36 lessons under the guidance of Mrs. Laura Luther. Beginning the 7th of October a series of weekly evening meetings were presented in a rented studio, covering the aims and principles of the Faith. Mrs. Dorothy Baker gave a talk in this studio when she was in the Northwest, and later Mrs. Lorrol Schopflocher spoke to an audience of 95 in the Everett Masonic Hall.* Much free literature has been distributed or mailed to Everett people and occasional notice of meetings has been secured. At the present time Mrs. Gale Marsolais of Monroe has rented a house in Everett for the sole purpose of opening her home for the weekly evening meeting and keeping up on contacts made over the last year, also making all possible new contacts. One person has become a Believer (Mrs. S. D. Smith) and has made such progress that before very long she will be able to take over the study classes and release Mrs. Luther for another project.

Wennatchee (a city of 11,726)—Mrs. Gale Marsolais and Mrs. Levina Sprau went to Wennatchee the week of January 9th and were successful in making several good contacts. Eight people expressed a desire to investigate the Teachings and would like to follow a study course when presented in Wennatchee. Mrs. Sprau, with the assistance of Mrs. Luther, is going to carry on this teaching project, traveling over there for two weeks at a time to make contacts and gather together a class for study and discussion. The regional teaching committee has secured books for the Wennatchee Public Library, a regional lending library to assist the teacher and free literature to have supplied him with books for the public library, a regional lending library for a teacher there to spur things up.

Armstrong—Mr. Austin Collin of Vancouver is conducting a class of ten young people in this town and we are eagerly awaiting news of progress. He has been supplied with books and literature.

The secretary has written all isolated believers in this region offering any assistance possible, books for a lending library, study courses, free literature, etc.; has asked for suggestions, names of contacts, but only a few have responded. The committee, besides lacking representation in Oregon and Idaho, has been handicapped in available teachers.

$150.00 has been sent this regional teaching committee, of which $55.00 has been spent to date for rent, traveling expense, postage, etc.; Doris Poe, Secretary; Levina Sprau, Rowland Estall, Stanley Kemp, Louise Caswell.

Ontario

In their last year's report the Committee had pointed out as their immediate objective the creation of a vigorously functioning Bahá'í community in Toronto which would be able to take over local teaching and administrative work so as to set the energies of the Regional Teaching Committee free for the initiating and organizing of teaching campaigns in the province. This objective has been fully reached.

There are now nine active believers residing within the city limits of Toronto and there is in the hands of the writer a declaration of faith of a tenth prospective Bahá'í for the consideration of the Committee at their next meeting. The National Spiritual Assembly have granted their permission for the election of a spiritual assembly in Toronto on April 21. The Group is already functioning vigorously and promises to develop into a dynamic assembly. Amongst the new believers is one who was a clergyman—the first Canadian minister to embrace the Faith without any reservation.

These results have been made possible only through the whole-hearted and self-forgetful cooperation of such teachers as Grace Ober who taught ten weeks in Toronto; Harlan Ober who assisted Grace Ober during her last two weeks in Toronto and who also gave an excellent indirect radio address; May Maxwell who spent ten days in Toronto; and Dorothy Baker, whom we had with us for two days. The Committee wish to express their profound gratitude to these friends and to Lorol Schopfcher who helped to get the Group under way in September, 1936; also to those who through their financial contributions via the National Fund have made this campaign possible. The members of the Committee wish to thank also those distant friends who through their prayers and through the inspiration which they supplied, have helped to sustain and confirm the efforts extended.

Public talks are given at the Bahá'í Hall in Toronto every Sunday and Study Classes are held there every Tuesday night. Newspaper publicity has been obtained locally on various occasions and also once in London, Ont.

Over a period of six months or so, copies of the bi-monthly teaching bulletin of the National Spiritual Assembly, entitled "A New World Order," and other literature have been sent to editors of Canadian national magazines (Maclean's and Liberty) and to a selected list of some fifty progressive, public-spirited clergymen with a view of expanding their ideas and through them, consciously or subconsciously, the minds of their congregations and the reading public. The results have been checked by a careful and steady observation of the religious section and of the editorials of the local press. As the headquarters of most Canadian religious and other organizations are located in Toronto, the repercussions of this move should have been felt throughout the Dominion. However, realizing that in Canada the Bahá'í Faith is as yet not in a position to capitalize upon rapidly multiplying opportunities, this activity has been suspended until more vigorously functioning groups will have been set up throughout the Dominion.

In the meantime the Committee will have ample opportunity to enlarge their scope of activities by following the suggestions of the National Radio Committee.

Our committee instead of sponsoring a pioneer effort rather urged our Assemblies to undertake pioneer work in localities sufficiently close to permit consistent follow-up work.

The Cleveland Friends have established a study class at North Oldstedt, Ohio, South Bend and Indianapolis have been active in placing library books and Indianapolis has planted seeds in six surrounding towns and is preparing members for public teaching work. The Bexley friends are sponsoring two study groups in Circleville. Lima believers conducted a series of public lectures in Celina which were followed up by making weekly trips calling on those who showed interest. A fireside group has now been developed in the neighboring town of Coldwater. Contacts have been made in many towns surrounding Lima and three weekly radio broadcasts help diffuse the Divine Fragrances in this area. Assistance has also been given isolated believers in Fremont where public reaction has been very favorable. Lima and Cincinnati have had successful Youth Forums and Cincinnati has made contacts in Covington, Kentucky.

We are grateful for the privilege of serving and pray that the continued bounties of Bahá'u'lláh will bring to fruition the widely scattered seed of His Word.

Kansas, Missouri

We are very happy to be able to report that due to the work of visiting teachers and the enrolled older believers, the membership of the Topeka Group has increased, several new believers having been enrolled, and is ready for reorganization of an Assembly on April 21. This will make another state which has an Assembly, and, with Kansas City, Missouri, gives us an Assembly in each state of our Region.

We endeavored to arrange to open one other larger city to the Faith during the past year, but it could not have been done without a teacher from outside our Region, and seemingly the teacher was not available at the time we thought the work should be done.

A considerable increase in the activity in teaching is noticed in the Kansas City Assembly and in the Topeka Group. Several study classes are being held each week, and more visiting between the believers of Topeka and Kansas City has been done during the past year. We may soon be able to do more work outside the two cities, but there have been so few of us that we have not been able to do a great deal of outside work. The Kansas City Assembly, however, is conducting a study class in Kansas City, Kansas, which is the only new city opened to the Faith in this Region during the year.

Considerable correspondence has been carried on with isolated believers and much literature has been sent to contacts. 125 to 150 of each issue of World Order leaflets were sent out, at times with other literature enclosed. The response has not been what we hoped, and in none of the new cities where literature has been sent have our contacts developed to the point of starting a study class, although we have a few reading "The New Era." No pioneers have gone from this territory to live during the year and no groups of believers have been formed in new places.

We have been favored with the following visiting teachers during the year:

In Kansas City: Orcella Rexford, two lectures; Marion Holley, one evening lecture; Mrs. Moffett, three weeks; Loulie A. Mathews, three days; Dorothy Baker, one evening; Lorol Schofflocher, three evenings; Mamie L. Seto, one afternoon and one evening.

In Topeka: Orcella Rexford, one public lecture, and helped in teaching study classes; Mrs. Moffett, 12 days; Dorothy Baker, one evening; Lorol Schofflocher, one evening.

Since we have no gifted public speakers within our Region, we feel it helps us a great deal in our teaching work to have the visiting teacher stop occasionally, for a public lecture, as it lets those who attend know that we do have some good speakers in the Cause, and it sometimes puts across a point we sometimes have trouble in making clear.

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania

The Regional Teaching Committee has devoted much time and effort this year to promoting the first step of our new Teaching Program. Our efforts have met with considerable success although the full fruits of them will not be apparent until the coming year. Effort has been made to establish new centers and to proceed as fast as possible with the work, as teachers and money were available.

Scranton

The Regional Teaching Committee, after consultation at a meeting, authorized its member, Mrs. Helen Underly, to proceed with the opening of this city. With the assistance from Binghamton they got a group together and after a few lectures Mrs. Mabel Ives was sent there to carry on the work.

There are about eight people who probably will be ready to declare themselves within a very short time and with the one believer we had there it is our hope that a Spiritual Assembly will be established in this city.

Philadelphia and Environs

At the special request of the Philadelphia Assembly the Regional Committee sent Marion Holley to follow up the work initiated by Orcella Rexford. This is now being carried forward by the Philadelphia Assembly and they expect to add some new believers in the immediate future.

In addition to that the Regional member, Miss Revell, has been contacting groups in Manoa, Morrisville, Lansdowne, Norristown, Chester, West Chester, and Bethlehem. A study group is in progress at Manoa. Pennsylvania is one of the largest states and it is most encouraging to see the progress of the work there as at the present time there are only two Assemblies in the entire state.

The New Jersey Regional member reported that they decided to consolidate the forces of the four assemblies in their region rather than to try to open new places and this work had been carried on; also that fireside groups had been started in some adjoining places and plans were under way to go into some new places, including Ridgefield, N. J., in the near future.

Atlantic City

The Regional member from Philadelphia, Miss Revell, and Mr. deForge, of Teaneck, have been working with the Atlantic City friends and six persons have declared their intention of becoming believers. With those already enrolled there this will constitute a new Assembly.

Syracuse

Miss Ida Noyes and Mrs. Edgecomb went to Syracuse, sent postcards to the members of Mrs. McCollum's psychology class. After the initial publicity work was done Philip Marangella was sent up there to do the teaching work which he has done with great success. There are now seven people seriously interested in the study course and three have already announced their intention of joining. This will also mean a new Assembly in the near future for Syracuse. We are planning to send a teacher back there to continue the work of confirming the study group.

Albany

A series of public lectures was given by Mrs. Mildred Mottahedah and the initial work has been done towards starting a group there. Miss Zeah Holden, who was active in promoting the activities there has been temporarily unable to continue, due to a serious illness in the family but this work will again be vigorously undertaken in the near future. After a few more lectures we plan to start a study group there.

Rochester and Buffalo

The Regional Teaching Committee is now making plans for special teaching efforts in Rochester and Buffalo.

Westchester County

Mr. Robert Fuller has been holding a fireside group meeting in his office in New Rochelle every Sunday evening for several months. Another group, drawn from New Rochelle, Larchmont, and Armonk have been meeting on Tuesday afternoons. This group has been actively studying and has had an average attendance of ten. They have been using a regular study outline, varying the program occasionally with talks by Bahá'ís. This work owes its success to the continuous effort of Mrs. Renee Welsh who has been assisted by Miss Martha Heber and Mrs. Marion Mills (also Mrs. Marie Hopper during the winter). From this group, two have already declared themselves and a third will do so within a very short time.

West Hempstead

Meetings have been held weekly at Mrs. Vaughn's home in West Hempstead; the average attendance was ten. At the same time a children's group met there. This group was taught by Mary Bower, one of the junior youth, of New York. About the middle of December the Vaughns moved to New York and the meetings were continued at the home of one of the interested friends who had been attending the Vaughn meetings. These are now being continued with the cooperation of Mrs. Vaughn. Our regional member, Mr. Sprague, and the New York young people have been most enthusiastic in their support. Bahá'í books have been placed in two colleges and several of the libraries. Many of the schools were contacted and Marion Holley spoke in the Hempstead High School to 1,200 students; also in the Williston Women's Club to 40 women. In addition to placing books in the library much literature was distributed to newspapers, clubs and churches. Mrs. Hoagg and Marion Holley did outstanding work in this group.

Southampton

Mrs. Emogene Hoagg spent some time in Southampton and gave a series of six Public Forum Discussions to which the entire Southampton Colony were invited. This group had one-eighth of a page of advertising in three of the local papers, with 3,500 circulation each, approximately. Then Mrs. Hoagg conducted a study group at the home of Mrs. John Anderson, The Andersons moved away a month ago and we are uncertain whether this group is still meeting but this work will be taken up again immediately.

New Haven

(This City was especially assigned to our Committee)

Digest of Report sent by the New Haven Community:—The work of this community was vitalized and accelerated by a visit from Miss Marion Holley, who spent a week in this City. Mr. Sprague started a study class, and a speaker was invited once a month to speak on the subject studied at that time. This was a public lecture and was attended by the New Haven and visiting teachers participated in these meetings. Three new members joined the community, as a result of this work; and a fourth will be added to the list from the Youth Group at the Feast of Naw-Ruz.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

Editorial Department

The annual report of the Editorial Committee is concerned with the gathering, selection and publication of the material contained in Volume Three, which includes the twelve monthly issues beginning April, 1937, and concluding March, 1938.

During that period, one hundred and forty-five manuscripts were received, read separately by each editor and then considered at a monthly conference. Volume Three represents the work of sixty-eight different authors.

The serial articles published this year were: concluding chapters of "The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh," by Mary Collison, and of "A Study of Church Organization," by G. A. Shook; "The New Creation," by Alice Simmons Cox; and "Philosophy and Revelation," by G. A. Shook; A symposium entitled "The World Outlook" was projected for Volume Three in February, 1937, but contributions have been so delayed that it has been possible so far to publish only three articles; and "The World Crisis," by Mountfort Mills.

Through the kind cooperation of Norman F. MacGregor, a new and more effective front cover design and inside typographical scheme has been adopted for the volume beginning April, 1938.

The editors are by no means satisfied, despite continuous effort to increase the number of contributors, that the entire Bahá'í community is yet represented. For the first time in known history a worldwide community has been established, responding to one Source of truth and inspiration and developing vital aspects of the future social and spiritual philosophy in the realm of action. Such a community, combining unity of aim with variety of background of experience, should be capable of producing a magazine whose contents will challenge the attention and command the respect of a great proportion of those who reject prevalent doctrines on the one hand and are unwilling on the other to drift passively with the stream. The earth is replete with public mediums serving as instruments for partisan plans. We renew our fervent plea that the Bahá'ís, not only in America but in all other countries, will more deeply realize their collective opportunity to join forces in the extension of World Order Magazine as one element in the teaching work of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

In conclusion, the editors express special appreciation of the increasingly important part being played by the Summer Schools in developing deeper thought and clearer expression in the literary field. Were all the lectures and study courses made available by the Summer School teachers for subsequent publication in the magazine, this source alone would represent an invaluable contribution to the work.
For each monthly issue goes to about six hundred university and public libraries in America and abroad, and in addition a special gift makes it possible to donate each bound volume to the sixteen most important libraries of the entire world.

YOUTH

The Third Annual World Bahá'í Youth Symposia, published their four-months in advance by 200 monthly news letters to Bahá'í youth throughout the world and to all National Assemblies for publication in the news bulletins and magazines, were held Sunday, February 27. The number of groups and the number of countries participating are not yet known, but it is believed that there was a decided increase over last year's 24 Symposiums in 5 countries. Reports so far show a much higher standard of effort and enthusiasm, and printed programs, newspaper clippings, and radio news all indicate a most extensive and glowing celebration of Bahá'í Youth Day. A permanent record of these world-wide Symposiums will again be compiled by the National Youth Committee and forwarded to Shoghi Effendi in the form of a scrapbook containing a general message signed by young Bahá'ís at each Symposium, photographs, publicity, and detailed accounts of every session.

Previous to the Symposiums, interregional conferences were held for the different areas in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco.

A survey of 90 letters sent out to all Bahá'í Assemblies and Groups in the United States and Canada early in March, 1937, showed that out of sixty-eight answers, 44 communities have youth groups, 28 of which have youth committees; 7 communities have 1 or 2 Bahá'í youth, 1 has 8 interested youth (non-believers), 1 has 3 non-believers, and the rest report "no youth." According to reports, 621 youth in this country, 334 Bahá'ís and 287 non-Bahá'ís, are studying the Bahá'í teachings at the present time.

To deepen the understanding and help organize the knowledge of enrolled Bahá'í youth and these beginning a serious study of the Teachings, and to prepare youth more thoroughly for life in the Bahá'í community and for youth work and effective teaching, youth groups in this country held a series of five concentrated Study Days as part of the basic program of Bahá'í youth activity during the year. These were held once a month with as long a time as possible, two sessions in many instances, devoted to study. The teacher best qualified was obtained through consultation with local Spiritual Assemblies to take charge of each Study Day. Outlines for study were prepared by the National Youth Committee.

Four more members were added to the Youth Committee this year, and a second international secretary was appointed to take care of our increasing correspondence from abroad. What Bahá'í youth in foreign countries are doing and thinking will be more widely circulated in Bahá'í Youth. To develop international correspondence through the youth bulletin, a page or two has occasionally been devoted to the printing of names and addresses of youth who wish to correspond internationally.

New contacts and newly enrolled Youth, particularly when isolated, are receiving special attention through regular communication and the dissemination of news by a newly appointed correspondent for this branch of youth work.

The first meeting of the National Youth Committee was held this year at the Youth Session at Louhelen Summer School; eight members attended. Eighty-two young people and numerous counselors and teachers were registered for the Louhelen Youth Session. Sixty-five young people attended Green Acre's second annual Youth Week, almost double the number of last year. Geyserville youth again adapted their activities to the life of the regular sessions. Specialized courses of study were given in all three Summer Schools, and this with the fun and fellowship and priceless advantages to be gained means that more Bahá'ís and their friends are being attracted each year.

The publication of Bahá'í Youth has been moved to the East, and a new business manager is doing everything possible to induce all Bahá'í youth to lend a hand in making this international youth bulletin self-supporting.

The National Youth Committee is about to prepare a compilation on the spiritual Teachings as they apply to individual character in human relationships, to be entitled "The Bahá'í Life," this to be recommended as one of the subjects for next year's Study Days, seven of which will be proposed in the new program.

In answer to a cablegram sent on Bahá'í Youth Day, the Guardian called for a "nobler standard of Bahá'í virtue." Bahá'í youth hope to be the first to accent to the world this greater development in Bahá'í lives.

A year has almost elapsed since the Seven Year Plan has been launched with characteristic vigor and noble enthusiasm by the American Baha'i Community. For no less than six consecutive years this two-fold and stupendous enterprise, which has been set in operation, must, if the American believers are to prove themselves worthy of their high calling, be wisely conducted, continually reinforced and energetically prosecuted to its very end. Severe and unprecedented as it may be the internal tests and ordeals which the members of this Community may yet experience, however tragic and momentous the external happenings which might well disrupt the fabric of the society in which they live, they must not throughout these six remaining years, allow themselves to be deflected from the course they are now steadily pursuing.

Nay, rather, as the impelling forces which have set in motion this mighty undertaking acquire added momentum and its potentials are more fully manifested, they who are responsible for its success must as time goes on evince a more burning enthusiasm, demonstrate a higher sense of solidarity, reveal greater depths of consecration to their task, and display a more unyielding determination to achieve its purpose. Then, and only then, will the pleas, the hopes and wishes of "Abdu'l-Baha, eternally enshrined in the Tablets of the Divine Plan, be worthily acknowledged and fulfilled. "Let your exertions, henceforth, increase a thousandfold" is the earnest appeal voiced by Him in those Tablets. "Summon the people," He exhorts them, "in these countries, capitols, islands, assemblies and churches, to enter the Abha Kingdom. The scope of your exertions must needs be extended. The wider its range the more striking will be the evidences of Divine assistance." "The moment," He solemnly affirms, "this Divine Message is carried forward by the American believers from the shores of America and is propagated through the continents of Europe, of Asia, of Africa and of Australasia... this community will find itself securely established upon the throne of an everlasting dominion... Then will the whole earth resound with the praises of its majesty and greatness." The Seven Year Plan, to which every American believer is fully and irrevocably pledged, during the closing years of the First Century of the Baha'i Era, is in itself but an initial stage in the unfoldment of 'Abdu'l-Baha's vision of America's spiritual destiny—a destiny which only those who will have successfully accomplished this preliminary task can enable the rising generation who will labor after them to fulfill in the course of the succeeding century.—April 14, 1938.

ON THIS AUSPICIOUS OCCASION
The Guardian’s Cablegram to the Convention

On this auspicious occasion when number elected representatives American Bahá’í Community is well-nigh doubly reinforced moved convey on eve Thirtieth Convention to all delegates friends expression most loving welcome stop Gathered within House of Worship which enterprise persevering loyalty self-abnegation American believers reared and adorned summoning their aid vitalizing influence prayers meditations which Author their Faith Himself revealed let them delegates visitors alike draw nigh unto Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw nigh unto Bahá’u’lláh’s most precious hair arranged preserved by loving hands Greatest Holy Leaf to rest beneath dome of Temple nobly raised by dearly beloved believers in American continent.—April 27, 1938.

THE GUARDIAN’S SECOND CABLEGRAM TO THE CONVENTION

On April 27 the Convention cabled the following message to the Guardian: “Unspeakably grateful sacred Relic and most precious gift to American Archives lovingly preserved by Greatest Holy Leaf. Historic Convention rejoices in bestowal increased participation realizing singleness of purpose achieve goal set by Master’s Will and Guardian’s impassioned appeals. Supplicating renewed power selfless devotion arise complete Temple structure and fulfill Guardian’s expressed wish infuse new blood throughout America. Lovingly awaiting expression your unerring guidance.”

On April 30 this reply was received from Shoghi Effendi: “Heartily welcome evidences high resolve as direct consequence increased participation stop Immediate task challenging combined resources delegates and incoming Assembly anxious deliberation provide means push further frontiers Faith ensure speedy completion existing contract Temple ornamentation.”

“A LONG, AN UNINTERRUPTED VIEW”

In “The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh,” page 148, Shoghi Effendi has stated that without the institution of the Guardianship, “the integrity of the Faith would be imperiled, and the stability of the entire fabric would be gravely endangered. Its prestige would suffer, and the means required to enable it to take a long, an uninterrupted view over a series of generations would be completely lacking . . .” It is this “long, uninterrupted view” of the development of the Faith that characterizes the Guardian’s general letters in that volume, the first dated February 27, 1929, the last, March 11, 1936; and it is this clarity of vision and breadth of outlook to which Bahá’ís must turn for strength whenever, for any reason, their collective energy momentarily weakens and their aim is obscured. There have been several brief periods since the first of the successive Temple contracts was completed when the National Bahá’í Fund encountered difficulties and the teaching effort appeared to relax. After an interval, the flame of ardor and zeal became re-ignited, and the temporary recession left behind.

In reading and pondering these general letters today, in their more convenient and dignified form of the published book, it would seem as though Shoghi Effendi had anticipated all such periods of recession and abundantly prepared sources of ardent understanding to supply our every need. How majestic is the vision of the Faith he upholds! How inimitable the Power he informs us is conducting it to eventual victory! How harmonious the elements which, as he explains, constitute the framework and body of the Faith! How one and indivisible its sustaining Spirit, raised so high above our human tendency to reduce even Spirit to duality!

“The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh” possesses a vast inward movement, like the surging of a mighty sea. Its kingly truths rise above all human limitations like a continental mountain chain. Here, indeed, is the inspiration we all need in order to resume the great task set by Shoghi Effendi a year ago, and reaffirmed in words of fire by his letter of April 14, 1938. Well is it if we can take from this source the mental, moral and spiritual guidance so necessary for concentration upon that part of the supreme effort to be made throughout this present Bahá’í year!

The National Budget

The general plan adopted for the year ending April 30, 1938, is based upon the definite instructions cabled by Shoghi Effendi on July 4, 1937, in which were outlined the five successive steps necessary for the successful operation of the Temple enterprise. The first two steps were taken last year. “Third, redirect with added force nationwide appeal to entire community insure uninterrupted completion first unit and accumulation sufficient funds enable placing without delay final contract. Fourth, place final contract as soon as half required sum available in National Treasury. Fifth, re-emphasize supreme obligation triumphant consummation so vital a part of American believers' twofold task by May, 1944."

Although the Budget fixed for the first year of the Plan fell short, the National Assembly feels confident that the present contract for exterior decoration of the gallery section can be financed from funds now in hand and require no further special appeals. This feeling, however, realizes that under economic and industrial conditions so unsettled, there is always the possibility that the present estimate of cost may have to be revised.

Nevertheless, relying upon the successful outcome of this part of the task by January, 1939, the National Spiritual Assembly has included no further item for the gallery section in the current Budget.

The largest item in the Budget this year is the sum of $75,000 representing one-half the estimated cost of the contract for the exterior decoration of the first story. If we are to assure an uninterrupted progress in this work, it is clear that the sum of $75,000 should be available before February 1, 1939. To make a definite beginning on this vital part of the Budget, the Assembly has set up a new Temple Construction Fund and made an initial appropriation to it of $1,000.00.

For the year May 1, 1938-April 30, 1939, the following Budget has been adopted:

For teaching work in North and South America ........................................... $30,000.00
For next Temple contract (one-half the estimated cost of exterior decoration of first story) ........................................... 75,000.00
For contingency reserve .................................................................................. 15,000.00

Total Annual Budget .................................................................................. $150,000.00

The elements of this Budget are simple. It contains three classifications of expense, representing the three necessary forms under which all our Baha'i activities are conducted: Administrative, which sustains the National Assembly's functions, the Annual Convention and all National Committees, and likewise the five Trustee properties, as well as the funds sent to the Guardian; the special Teaching Budget required under the Divine Plan for spreading the Faith throughout North and South America; and the new Temple Construction Fund already explained. These three activities are entirely interdependent and none can exist without the other. Therefore, contributions made to the National Fund without restriction assure the balance of all its important responsibilities.

The work of Teaching, and definite plans and policies for the coming year, based upon all previous experience, is still under careful consideration, and before another month, when the new Committee appointments are announced, this equally essential aspect of the Seven Year Plan will be emphasized in suitable announcements to the friends.

The recent messages from the Guardian, published in this issue, reveal the importance of the task and make the unique appeal to the souls of the Baha'is. May we faithfully and unitedly respond to his sacred plea!

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

BAHA'I SUMMER SCHOOLS

There is no need now to stress the value and importance of attendance at a Summer School. They are the most effective instruments we have for preparation to become well qualified teachers, and the social activities provide a means of Baha'i association with friends from many other cities. For the isolated believer, or the member of a small group, attendance at one of the Schools means an opportunity for making contact with the pulsing life and spirit of the American Baha'i community.

COMMITTEE ON UNIVERSAL AUXILIARY LANGUAGE

From reports of the Committee on Universal Auxiliary Language are taken these interesting excerpts concerning recent activities of Miss Lidia Zamenhof.

The classes in Detroit are the best that she has had, so far. She wrote me the other day that 62 people are taking the course. She has spoken over the radio three times, twice in Polish over Station WJBJ on their Polish Hours Program and once over WWJ as guest of the Detroit News. The Esperantists arranged three invitations for her to speak, the Zonta Club where 40 persons were present, The Women's Lawyers' Association where 20 were present (this was a luncheon given to Miss Zamenhof), and another luncheon at a vegetarian restaurant where there were present 40 persons. I am not clear whether this was given by a Vegetarian Society or not. There were between 100 and 120 people at the propaganda meeting for the course.

The last report sent to you concerned the preliminary activities in Detroit and were very encouraging. She has had the largest classes there that she has had so far; and she has been able to address important audiences for the Baha'i Cause in short trips from that city. Mrs. Bertha Kirsch- rick arranged for her to speak before the Michigan League in Ann Arbor on March 20th; she spoke on Esperanto at the Burton High School in Roseville on March 31st. The talk before the Michigan League was on the Bahai Revelation. She made a short trip to Urbana, Ill., and spoke there April 3 and 4; twice on the Bahai Revelation and once before the Urbana Esperanto Society on their subject. She wrote me that the attendance ran between 40-50 and 30, on the different occasions. I suppose this was good considering the size of the Assembly there. At both the Bahai talks there were a large number of non-Baha'is and some Esperantists.

Supplement to Annual Report

In submitting the Annual Report of the International Auxiliary Language Committee for this year a serious oversight occurred. No mention was made of the founding of the first Bahai Esperanto Society in America. The Committee regret this omission and would appreciate it if some mention can be made in the News Letter of this addition to their report.

The society was organized last fall under the auspices of the Bahai Spiritual Assembly of Boston, was named Esperanto-Rondo Amika, (Esperanto Friendly Circle) and adopted a constitution which permitted the membership of non-Baha'is as well as Baha'is in the society. Thus putting into effect the command of Baha'u'llah is to "consort with all the people with joy and fragrance."

INVITATION FROM CLEVELAND ASSEMBLY

The Cleveland Bahai Community extends a cordial invitation to all visiting Baha'i and Esperantists attending the International Esperanto Convention in Cleveland, July 1st, 2nd and 3rd, to use the Bahai Temple at 665 Hippodrome Building, during their stay in the city. The room will be open for the convenience and fellowship of all.

"APPRECIATE YE THE VALUE OF THIS TIME"

"We must not sit inactive for one moment; we must sever ourselves from composure, rest, tranquillity, good property, life and attachment to material things. We must sacrifice everything to His Highness, the Possessor of existence, so that the powers of the Kingdom may show greater penetration and the brilliant effulgence in this New Cycle may illumine the worlds of minds and ideals." (Abdu'l-Baha in America's Spiritual Mission.)

"World crisis inexorably moving toward climax, challenging torch-bearers of Baha'i civilization (to) scale loftier heights (of) individual heroism, (to) scatter more widely throughout length and breadth (of the) American continents, (to) participate more strenuously (in) concerted effort organized by National, Regional, local agencies dedicated (to) prosecution (of) noble enterprise..." (Cablegram from Shoghi Effendi, October 29, 1937.)

Since the last report in Baha'i News, another new state has been opened to the Faith through pioneer service. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ewing of Lima, Ohio, and Dr. E. Lenore Morris and Dr. A. L. Morris of Chicago, have settled in Albuquerque, New Mexico. A Bahá'í group of seven has now been established in this city and regular meetings are being held.

The enrollment of seven believers in the city of Lead, South Dakota, has established the first Bahá'í Group in that state where pioneer teaching work was carried on for some time. In the summer and fall of 1938, Miss Margarette Reimer and Mrs. Gayle Woelson, who have recently joined the Faith, have given public lectures and conducted public meetings and in addition to creating interest among telephone operators and various administrative bodies in each region.

In reporting this schedule, the National Assembly wishes to explain that the meetings held at Urbana, Los Angeles and Knoxville will include public meetings and also regional conferences to be arranged by the Assembly itself, with the cooperation of the various administrative bodies in each region.

One of Mr. Gregory's students recently became the first Bahá'í in Montgomery, Alabama.

In Raleigh, North Carolina, Mrs. Terah Smith and Miss Margarette Reimer, with the assistance of Mrs. Sarah Martin Eason, an isolated believer in that city, were able to lecture on the Faith in Shaw University, the oldest colored university in the United States. Other public meetings have created much interest both in University circles and among other individuals. New contacts at Durham, North Carolina, are promising.

Since the last report, Mrs. Grace Ober has undertaken pioneer work in Louisville, Kentucky, and conducted a study class meeting twice weekly.

In addition to these new states, teaching work has been accelerated in several states having isolated believers. Miss Alma Knoblock is spending two months there to follow up previous contacts and to generally assist Mr. Young with his teaching work.

Mrs. Laura Robarts, Coolidge, Arizona, with the assistance of the Phoenix Bahá'ís, has arranged several public meetings in that city during the fall and winter. Excellent newspaper publicity has helped to stimulate interest in a study class.

Through the preparatory work of Orcella Rexford, Mr. Charles Mason Remey addressed a group of twenty interested people in Wilmington, Delaware, in February—the first public Bahá'í meeting to have been held in that city. Mr. Remey also addressed meetings arranged by isolated believers with the cooperation of the Regional Teaching Committee in Richmond and Arlington, Virginia.

In Santa Ana, California, where Mrs. Sara Witt of Los Angeles has been quietly working for some time, a well-attended public meeting was held in February with Mrs. Sylvia Matteson as speaker. As a result, several new people indicated their desire to study.

Miss Muriel Warnicker of Vancouver, British Columbia, recently went to Victoria for a few days for the express purpose of making Bahá'í contacts. The opening sentence of her report is typical of those that come from all pioneers: "It was positively miraculous the way in which I was led to people—key people who could give us entrée to other organizations." One contact opened the way to others and within three or four days fifty or sixty people heard of the Cause for the first time in that city.

A very interesting report from South Bend, Indiana, indicates how extension work may be carried on through the distribution of Bahá'í books, especially the World Order Magazine. One member has personally sent out 125 copies of the Magazine with covering letters. Subscriptions have been furnished the public libraries in five cities in three states and a considerable amount of teaching by correspondence is constantly going on by those who are not free to travel to other parts.

Vancouver Assembly reports that its series of eleven radio broadcasts, reported in detail in Baha'i News, has resulted in the establishment of a new study class of forty-five non-Bahá'ís. A twelve weeks' course has been planned to prepare the students for Bahá'í membership.

Springfield, Massachusetts, reports having had opportunity to give a series of six devotional radio broadcasts.
in January. A number of people wrote for copies of the talks, several of the requests coming from outside the city, thus making new contacts for extension work.

Through a high school member of its Youth Group, the Oakland Assembly recently sponsored three showings of the Temple slides before classes in art appreciation and history in the high school in Richmond, California, each class consisting of approximately one hundred fifty students. The following week pictures of the Temple and Baha'i books were displayed in the corridors for all students to see.

So unexpectedly successful have been all efforts to sow the seeds in new soil that there should no longer be any doubt or hesitancy on the part of any community or individual to carry the Teachings into surrounding as well as distant fields. Sincerity of purpose, a well-conceived plan, perseverance and prayer are among the chief requisites for all types of teaching work, and as each individual and each Assembly adds its strength and momentum to this service all will be the recipients of greater power and confirmation in all their teaching efforts.

"A person declares the glad tidings of the appearance of the realities and significances of the Kingdom is like unto a farmer who scatters pure seeds in the rich soil. The spring cloud will pour upon them the rain of bounty, and unquestionably the station of the farmer will be raised in the estimation of the lord of the village, and many harvests will be gathered."

"Therefore, ye friends of God! Appreciate ye the value of this time and be ye engaged in the sowing of the seeds, so that ye may find the heavenly blessing and the lordly bestowal." (‘Abdu’l-Baha in America’s Spiritual Mission.)

ANNUAL REPORT

National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada 1937-1938

Dear Bahá’í friends:

This, the Thirtieth Annual Convention of American Bahá’ís, establishes a considerable extension of the principle of consultation as applied to our national Bahá’í affairs. By the increase in the number of delegates, the Bahá’í community has utmost representation in the annual meeting. The Convention can, therefore, fully and faithfully reflect the spirit and action of the body of the believers and, as the Guardian stated, constitute a firm foundation for the organic Bahá’í institution it is called upon to elect.

It is for lack of this principle of consultation whose roots draw sustenance from Divinely revealed truth, that the civilizations and cultures of the non-Bahá’í world have during this past year suffered further disintegration. Mass feelings and needs, divorced from the spirit of oneness, seek in violence under misguided leadership a solution of problems which but augments their difficulties and destroys their basis. There is not one active Bahá’í teacher who will not testify to the fact that individual souls are more receptive to the Message of Bahá’u’lláh than ever before, driven from their former allegiances by the realization that societies, whether large or small, which are imbued with suspicion or prejudice, hatred or fear, offer no refuge to the conscious human being in this age. Far more than any eloquence, the deeply-laid, providentially protected unity of the Bahá’í body itself stands as the visible proof that religion has been renewed by God’s will.

The most dramatic, the most moving evidence of the degree to which the world has turned away from the Path of Truth can be found in the Bahá’í history of this current year. We believe of the West have long admired the heroism and steadfastness of our fellow-Bahá’ís in the Orient, whom successive waves of persecution both ecclesiastical and secular have failed to disturb in their sublime faith. For ourselves, however, we have assumed that such conditions could never arise, relying upon a greater prevalence of public enlightenment or tolerance and upon the historical tradition of the separation of church and state. When, therefore, word came that the sacred Faith of Bahá’u’lláh had been denounced and its institutions and meetings forbidden in the very heart of Europe, we could not but realize the instability and impermanence of all things dependent upon human will and aim, and the need for a great deepening of faith in our own inner lives and a reconsecration to the unity of our spiritual community. The increase in the number of delegates thus may be appreciated as no mere arithmetical change, but a strengthening of the very foundations of the administrative order in America.

This reference to the Guardian’s protective action during the current year brings us to another subject vitally connected with the main springs of our faith—his translation of “Prayers and Meditations By Bahá’u’lláh.” Here, indeed, in the devotional realm—in the outpouring of the Holy Spirit—exists that Divine Elixir which can alone transmute the base metal of human nature into pure gold. This bounty has been given us at the crucial hour of need. Only as we enter into the new heaven of His Spirit can we live and strive free from the subtle or brutal influences of a misguided world. Our purity of aim, our unity of spirit and activity, must realize the new heaven upon earth. All else is subsidiary to that victory in the realm of heart and spirit.

It is, moreover, no coincidence of material fact but another working of the higher Will which during the same Bahá’í year presents us with the Guardian’s “World Order” letters in book form. For this work is the expression of the Guardianship itself, a degree of consecration and inspiration to which none other can attain, and the view of truthest wisdom upon the present condition of the world and the future of Bahá’u’lláh’s Faith. The work is consequently a direct tie for us in our present development between the book of prayers and meditations and the Guardian’s letters dealing with the character and evolution of the Cause. For our understanding of and our loyalty to the latter must be taken to represent the extent to which the spirit of devotion has truly entered our lives. For the first time in recorded history, revealed religion has combined and united the regeneration of the inner life with a social program fulfilling human personality in all degrees. No longer can piety and devotion assert ways of action or attitudes of thought as justification of anti-social forms of life. The Bahá'í knows well that he will not evolve spiritually if he spends his whole time in isolated prayer without association with other believers. He knows well that the end of worship today is not solitude on the mountain. He knows that he is not free to invent his own cosmic or social philosophy to express a personal and subjective religion. The religious life in this age can be lived under guidance, and the fears or ambitions secretly cherished in the soul have their healing as we forget ourselves in the task of establishing the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The Twofold Task

The plans and achievements of the current Bahá'í year were born of the Guardian's message to the last Convention and the deep and abiding response that message evoked. "Dual gift Providentially conferred (upon) American Bahá'í community invests recipients with dual responsibility fulfilling historic mission. First, prosecute uninterruptedly teaching campaign inaugurated (at) last Convention in accordance (with) Divine Plan. Second, resume with inflexible determination exterior ornamentation (of) entire structure (of) Temple. Advise ponder message conveyed (to) delegates (through) esteemed co-worker, Fred Schopflocher. No triumph can more befittingly signalize termination (of) first century (of) Bahá'í era than accomplishment (of) this twofold task. Advise prolongation (of) Convention sessions (to) enable delegates consult National Assembly to formulate feasible Seven Year Plan (to) assure success Temple enterprise. No sacrifice too great for community so abundantly blessed, (so) repeatedly honored."

In the clear light of this call to action and sacrifice let us trace the steps by which the powers of the Holy Spirit have been set in motion and a foundation laid for the mighty victory to be realized by 1944.

1. A pledge of $100,000 was made at the Convention.

2. We were informed that the Guardian wished a special committee of technical experts to make a thorough study of the project, involving consideration of all available contractors and the costs and contractual elements of each successive stage in the work.

3. The incoming National Spiritual Assembly, as an insert to Baha'i News of June, 1937, the items of the annual Budget and an explanation of the first portion of the Seven Year plan.

4. The technical committee reported its findings at the meeting of the National Assembly held on August 28, 29, and 30, and after consultation with the committee and with Mr. John J. Earley a contract was placed for the ornamentation of the gallery section. Mr. Earley began the work at once, and the progress report dated August 6, 1938, conveyed the following information: "On March 25, the first car was shipped from the Earley Studio and arrived at Wilmette, Illinois, the last of the month. This car contained contractor's equipment, reinforcing steel and the wooden molds for the placing of the ornamentation that will be poured at the building. On March 28, the second car was shipped from Rosslyn, Virginia. This car contained 54,000 pounds of crushed stone and sand to be used in the pouring of the ornamentation at the building; 28 (finished) columns, 51 impost, 2 sections of cornice ornamentation and 2 sections of window band ornament. "The original clay models were completed by the sculptor during the early part of the month (March). The plaster models were being completed during the latter part of the month: the carving of the surfaces of the plaster cast of the pylons will be completed during the early part of April. Similarly the plaster casts for the spandrel ornamentation at the corners of the main arches will be completed during April: ... Work will continue uninterruptedly at the Temple, and will be in full swing by the end of the month and during the forthcoming Annual Convention. The engineering supervision of Temple construction has been carried on by Mr. McDaniel without cost to the Fund.

This is a truly gratifying and inspiring record of progress, for it means that before the end of 1938 or soon after all units of the gallery section will have been placed upon the Temple, and the unique effect already achieved by the dome and clerestory sections will be vastly enhanced.

The Guardian's joy on learning of the plans reported to the friends in June was expressed in the following cablegram: "Immeasurably gratified National Assembly's initial step presentation Seven Year Plan, redirect with added force nationwide appeal to entire community insure uninterrupted completion first unit and accumulation sufficient funds enable placing without delay final contract." His approval of the technical committee's recommendations was received on September 2: "Approve committee's decision. Place contract immediately."

As we consider this development of the Temple work, and recall the fact that the 1937 Convention resolved to rededicate itself "to the achievement of the holy task before the end of the first century of the Bahá'í era," we should be profoundly grateful for the conditions of complete unity and continuous guidance under which the tremendous undertaking has begun. Nothing could testify more strongly to the general progress of the Bahá'í community than the certitude prevailing now in contrast to the hesitation and uncertainty which accompanied the launching of the first "Plan of Unified Action" in 1926.

The arena of social confusion and fear in which this concentration of Bahá'í faith and energy has proceeded was once more interpreted for us by the Guardian in his cablegram dated August 4, 1937:"

"Much heartened (by) compelling evidences accelerated speed with which teaching campaign inaugurated throughout Americas (is) now progressing. ... In a world perilously near cataclysmic convulsions destined to experience, at a time when forces of repression are launching their assaults and conspiring (to) undermine foundations (of) most powerful strongholds (of) Faith (of) Bahá'u'lláh in land of its birth and in heart of both Asiatic (and) European continents, an inescapable, well-nigh staggering responsibility rests on America, its one chief remaining citadel. Who among its stalwart defenders will arise, untrammeled (and) unafraid, to implant its banner in those States, provinces (and) Countries where its standard is still unhinged? Entreat now the American community heed vital urgency (of) my impassioned plea (and) spur efforts bring speedy termination (of) first Stage in evolution (of) so importantly a phase of dual task they have so enthusiastically shouldered."

The progress of the teaching work carried on during the year cannot be reported as definitely as the developments in Temple construction. The activities of every committee, every Assembly, every group and of individual believers from day to day have their direct relation to the promotion of the Faith. Thus, for example, one should not overlook the work of the Committee on Braille Transcriptions which brings light to the eye of the soul, nor the achievements of the Summer Schools, nor the special opportunities resulting from the program maintained by Miss Zamenhof, Orella Rexford and others, many details of which come to us in the periodic reports of the Teaching Committee and in the annual reports just published in Baha'i News.

That each established Baha'i community should undergo continuous growth in numbers as well as in experience and capacity must be assumed. The spiritual reinforcement augments miraculously from year to year, and upon that rising tide even a small and fragile craft will dare to leave its moorings. There are, however, certain fixed standards which can be applied to the progress of teaching each year: first, the formation of new Spiritual Assemblies; second, the establishment of groups in new areas. At the date of this writing, nine local groups are authorized to form an Assembly on April 21, and one former Assembly may be re-established. This is truly a notable record. Such a result can not be achieved without the most vigorous action on the part of the National and Regional Teaching Committees, traveling teachers and, in the case of such centers as Oklahoma City, a most impressive response to the Guardian's call for pioneers. The essential characteristic of teaching work at present is its quality of acceleration. A decade passed from 1912 to 1922 when, separated from the Master by the War and then bereft by His ascension, the American Baha'i community struggled to maintain its place. Under the Guardian there followed a remarkably brief period of readjustment to the Administrative Order, and the progress of Temple construction has symbolized that new force of acceleration which will surely increase each day until the World Order is firmly established. Already our teaching area is the Americas and not the United States and Canada alone. Already we are acquiring experience in dealing with problems of language, nationality and cultural differences which contains the potentiality of the universal outlook of world citizenship. The sphere of our collective responsibility has been extended by Shoghi Effendi to fill that vast social area to which Bahá'u'lláh extended His gaze and upon which He laid His blessing when He revealed that Tablet addressed to the "Rulers of America, and Presidents of the Republics therein."

But the forward movement also has its tests requiring us to examine the character of our community life from time to time. The Assembly Roll this year omitted Santa Barbara, Akron, Rockford and Rochester, while adding the new Assembly of Jersey City.

The Guardian's message, sent through Mr. Schopflocher, calling upon local Assemblies to incorporate, acquire capacity for handling practical affairs, and place themselves in a position to receive endowments, has resulted in a great increase of legal incorporation. The necessary papers have been worked out by the Assemblies of Cleveland, Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, Seattle and Minneapolis, and those submitted by Binghamton and Boston are in process at the present time. Perhaps we have not yet fully realized the power and importance of a local Assembly in the maturity of its development. Together they will in future control far more property than the National body of Trustees. Each will have its House of Worship and accessory buildings; each will maintain facilities for education and the humanitarian functions of the Faith. Whether that maturity is near or remote in time, the outcome is inevitable, and consequently the basis for that further development must be laid as soon as possible.

American believers who have served under the Inter-America Committee in foreign lands have been Beatrice Irwin, Eve Nicklin and Mrs. Frances Stewart. Louis Gregory's activities in Haiti belong partly to this and partly to the record of last year. Miss Nicklin proved that a believer with professional training can establish himself financially in another country, but unfortunately found soon after she had established herself in Bahia that her residence as a foreigner had become untenable. As reported in April, 1938 Baha'i News, an active group has been formed in Mexico City, and the election of a Spiritual Assembly in that capital of a neighboring people was authorized by the Guardian. Here, indeed, is an event of the utmost significance. A Spiritual Assembly in Mexico City can never be realized as the strong pillar of a bridge that will eventually link together in the Bahá'i Order all the nations and peoples of the New World.

American believers residing in other lands are: Leonore Holzapple, in Bahia, Mrs. Clara Sharp and Adelaide Sharp in Thiran, Marion Jack in Sofia, Mrs. Isabel Stebbins Dodge in Peru, Bertha Matthiesen in Europe, and Martha Root, now in India. During the year, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell returned from Haifa, Agnes Alexander returned from Japan, Mrs. Louise Gregory from Belgrade, Mrs. Ruth Langhiz Bolles and Mrs. Millyl from Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop, Mrs. Annie Romer and Mrs. Gina Orlova from England and the continent of Europe. Miss Margaret Lent, after serving at the International Bahá'i Center in Geneva, Switzerland, has again established herself in the United States. Let us pay homage to these devoted Bahá'i workers for their significant services to the Faith. Mark Tobey, member of the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles, is now in the United States for a visit of some months.

Direct or indirect fruits of their activities are: the institution of Summer Schools in Iran and England, the formation of a Baha'i group in Budapest, and extensive publicity as well as the quickening of the spirit of faith in many European countries, South Africa and the Orient.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Mathews returned after an extensive journey, during which Mrs. Mathews established distribution or reference centers for Bahá'i literature in Rio de Janeiro, Cape Town, Johannesburg, the Seychelles Islands, the Islands of Java and Bali, Manila and the Island of Zanzibar, the Philippines.

Although Siegfried Schopflocher's teaching work in the Orient was carried on last year, a picture of the results, in the form of newspaper and magazine clippings, was not available when last year's annual report was prepared. These clippings and programs reveal a most impressive public presentation of the teachings before many audiences. It is hoped that copies will be made available for the scrapbooks maintained by the Publicity Committee.

Between August 18 and October 4, 1937, Mrs. Nellie S. French served the Cause in Honolulu, New Zealand and Australia, finding many opportunities for interviews and publicity and responding to the call of the Bahá'í communities for public meetings. An interview was given over the radio at Melbourne.

The powers of the spirit seem to accompany Martha Root wherever she goes. Sailing from San Francisco, May 20, she visited the Honolulu believers and after effective teaching work in Japan, she arrived at Shanghai immediately prior to the military invasion and attack upon that city. Sent to Manila with other American citizens for safety, Martha there experienced the great earthquake. Undaunted, she proceeded to India and Burma, and for many months has carried out a most extensive program arranged by the Bahá'í Assemblies. We understand that the Guardian wishes her to continue serving in India until the fall of 1938.

Another teaching work achieved by an American believer in the foreign field resulted from Mrs. Joel Stebbins' visit to Peru during the summer of 1937, where, with her daughter, important contacts were made.

Miss Lidia Zamenhof, daughter of the founder of Esperanto, has been in the United States, since September, 1937, arriving on invitation extended by the National Spiritual Assembly and warmly endorsed by the Guardian. Her distinguished services have been shared with the Esperantists. Miss Zamenhof has held Esperanto classes so far in New York, Philadelphia and Detroit, under the auspices of the local Esperanto groups but with the cordial cooperation of the Bahá'í Assemblies. She has made a number of direct Bahá'í addresses and in her Esperanto contacts has turned many to consideration of the Bahá'í Faith. The plans made with her by our Committee on Universal Language call for meetings in Lima, Ohio and a class in Esperanto at Green Acre in July. These Esperanto classes are not only for beginners but also they are to prepare Esperanto students to become proficient teachers. This honored guest emphasizes the truth that a believer who becomes technically expert in any branch of knowledge or activity based on idealism, thereby opens a door by which the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh may enter the consciousness of some large special groups. Perhaps we have not sufficiently realized the degree to which Bahá'ís are expected to acquire knowledge and attain capacity in fields outside as well as within the Cause. The Esperantists, inspired by their founder, Dr. Zamenhof, are idealists who have already asserted their acceptance of one of the laws revealed by Bahá'u'lláh. Those present at the Convention will surely wish to meet and greet this honored fellow-believer and co-worker, Lidia Zamenhof, translator of Bahá'í books into Esperanto and Bahá'í speaker at a number of International Esperanto Congresses in recent years.

The American Bahá'í community has realized how much of the Seven Year Plan has come into the realm of possibility through the donation of $100,000 to the Fund. The Fund has also this year received another munificent gift of $25,000. Our Bahá'í properties have likewise been considerably extended through the generous gifts of a number of American believers.

Roy Wilhelm's original gift of property at West Englewood, blessed by the Unity Feast held by the Master in 1912, has been extended by additional property donated by him at the end of the last Bahá'í year, and by two lots transferred to the Trustees by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Goodfellow. The Bahá'í Summer School at Geyersville, the monument to the ardent love of Mr. and Mrs. John Bosch, has been greatly enriched by the new and beautiful dormitory presented by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Collins. The Green Acre property has been extended and consolidated by the acquisition of the so-called Ball cottage and land given by Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Schopflocher. Its facilities have furthermore been considerably developed by Mrs. Florence Morton's donation of the new Bahá'í Hall and the accommodations added to the Inn and two of the adjoining cottages. The publication cost of the Guardian's translation of "Prayers and Meditations by Bahá'u'lláh" was also met by a generous and loving gift offered by an American Bahá'í.

In the model produced by John J. Earle, we have our first glimpse of the Bahá'í House of Worship as it will appear with completed external decoration and scaled to the proportions of the present structure which represents an alteration made by Mr. Bourgeois, at the direction of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, in his original design. Twenty reproductions of the model have been obtained. Of these, one was presented to the Guardian, one is for exhibit in Temple Foundation Hall, several have been transferred to the Teaching Committee for temporary traveling exhibit by local Assemblies and groups, and models have been purchased for permanent exhibit by the Spiritual Assemblies of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Montreal and Buffalo. The model sent to Montreal was a gift from Ruhiyih Khanum to the local Bahá'í community. Other Assemblies are urged to consider the desirability of possessing a Temple model, which so clearly depicts the form and appearance of the House of Worship and thus creates visible evidence of the universal significance of the Faith.

On August 30, 1937, the members of the National Assembly gathered at the grave of Alfred E. Lunt in Beverly, Massachusetts, by request of the Guardian, whose cable message received August 16 declared: "Future generations will appraise his manifold outstanding contributions to rise and establishment of Faith in the American continent." Gratitude for distinctive and important services to the Cause impels special mention of the passing of Mr. Thomas Collins, whose name will ever be associated with the American Pilgrim House at Haifa and with the Hall and dormitory at the Geyersville Summer School, though he was not enrolled officially as a Bahá’í.

Communications from the Guardian

Our knowledge of the Bahá’í teachings, and our capacity to act under guidance, have been enriched and stimulated by a number of letters and cablegrams from Shoghi Effendi, some of which have already been cited in this report. Reviewing now their publication in Bahá’í News, Nos. 108 to 115, we have—

Shoghi Effendi’s cablegram to the 1937 Convention.

His interpretation of Bahá’u’lláh’s law on daily obligatory prayer.

His explanation of the command concerning daily work.

An observation and direction with reference to teaching in the Southern States.

Plea for complete rededication to the ideals of the teaching campaign during the observance of the Twentieth Anniversary of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s visit to America.

The cablegram received April 5, 1937, accepting the donation made by the National Assembly for all local Assemblies “for immediate strengthening new tie binding American Bahá’ís to institution of the Guardianship.” Shoghi Effendi in his acceptance declared: “Nobest contribution individual believers can make at this juncture is to promote the potentialities with which the community of the Greatest Name has been so generously and mysteriously endowed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.”

An explanation of the Bahá’í attitude toward Esperanto.

The cablegram of July 4: “Immeasurably gratified National Assembly’s initial step presentation Seven-Year Plan” and setting forth five successive steps upon which its successful operation depends.

The cablegram of August 4 pointing out the “inescapable, well-nigh staggering responsibility” resting upon America and appealing for individuals to arise, “untrammeled and unafraid, to implant its banners in those States, Provinces and Countries where its standard is still unhoisted,” concluding with a moving appeal that we heed afresh the vital urgency of his impasioned plea.

On September 2 was received the cablegram approving the recommendations of the Technical Committee and directing that the Temple contract be placed immediately.

The October, 1937 issue of Bahá’í News reported the Guardian’s statement that Bahá’í mission should not coincide with the time of church services; and the message which the Guardian sent through Siegfried Schopflicher for local Assemblies on the subject of incorporation and endowments.

The cablegram directing that hereafter 171 delegates be elected to the Convention, received November 21, was published in Bahá’í News of January. In the same issue was made known to the friends the Guardian’s cablegram of December 20: “Hand Omnipotence’s范畴 had should not coincide with the time of church services; and the message which the Guardian sent through Siegfried Schopflicher for local Assemblies on the subject of incorporation and endowments.

The cablegram directing that hereafter 171 delegates be elected to the Convention, received November 21, was published in Bahá’í News of January. In the same issue was made known to the friends the Guardian’s cablegram of December 20: “Hand Omnipotence’s movement archbreaker Bahá’u’lláh’s Covenant. His hopes shattered, his plottings frustrated, society his fellow-conspirators extinguished. God’s triumphant Faith forges on, its unity unimpaired, its purity unsullied, its stability unshaken. Such death calls for neither exultation nor recrimination but evokes overwhelming pity so tragic downfall unparalleled in religious history.”

That event turned the hearts of the believers to those texts in the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá which recounted the actions and pretenses and established their disobedience to the Manifestation of God, especially the violation enacted by Muhammed-Ali, son of Bahá’u’lláh.

Whenever the Guardian’s letters to the National Assembly contain passages of general instruction and interest, they are reported to the entire community, and such references are found in Bahá’í News of January, February and April, 1938. The explanation of the Bahá’í attitude on pacifism, on the matter of reproductions of the Master’s likeness, on Bahá’í music and on his view of the progress of the Plan may be found therein.

Shoghi Effendi’s letter of November 25, 1937, which developed the theme of the increased number of delegates, was published in February, 1938. The challenging issues with which the American believers as a body are now being confronted were outlined in his own words as postscript to that letter, and no doubt the believers have given these words their most careful attention.

We were informed in the body of that same letter that the details of the administrative order have been sufficiently developed, and that both individual believers and the National Assembly must “henceforth direct their attention to the greater and vital issues which an already established Administration is now called upon to face and handle.”

Finally, up to the date of the preparation of this report, we have the Guardian’s words of January 30 on “certain vital requirements,” of the Plan, with the prayer, “May the all-conquering Spirit of Bahá’u’lláh be so infused into each component part of this harmoniously functioning System as to enable it to contribute its proper share to the consummation of the Plan.”

In conclusion, the National Spiritual Assembly feels it incumbent to ask for consideration of the fundamental fact that the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh is not a static creed but a dynamic and world-renewing Power. At each stage of its evolution a higher and more conscious inner understanding, consecration and sacrifice is required of every believer. Attitudes, feelings and methods that might have seemed proper and sufficient in an earlier stage may be harmful and destructive when that stage has been ended and a new phase of the Faith begun to unfold. A SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY IN MEXICO CITY

The first definite achievement in the field of Inter-America teaching is the formation of a Spiritual Assembly by the new Bahá’í community of Mexico City.

A heart-felt welcome is extended to the members of this Assembly by their co-workers throughout the United States and Canada. For their success in firmly establishing the Faith, first in Mexico City itself and later in other cities of the nation, with the cooperation of the Inter-America Committee, the American believers will surely pray ardently.

That event turned the hearts of the believers to those texts in the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá which recounted the actions and pretenses and established their disobedience to the Manifestation of God, especially the violation enacted by Muhammed-Ali, son of Bahá’u’lláh.

Attitudes, feelings and methods that might have seemed proper and sufficient in an earlier stage may be harmful and destructive when that stage has been ended and a new phase of the Faith begun to unfold. The degree of discipline inevitably increases from childhood to maturity as responsibility replaces the care and protection extended to the helpless child. All around us, discipline has become entirely a matter of force and external power, frequently brutal and brutalizing in its effects upon human beings. In the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, love and worship precede discipline, making it possible for each devoted soul to respond voluntarily to the organic laws and precepts; and this capacity for self-imposed discipline transforms the aged-old concept of social power from material force to spiritual authority, spiritually accepted and willingly obeyed. Moreover, while the springs of action within disbelieving persons release the urges of nature or reflect prevailing human values, the follower of Bahá'u'lláh can draw upon an illimitable Source of dynamic energy in his will to serve. Both on the side of discipline and on the side of self-expression, the believer is expected to rise above what is called the human condition and show forth the realities of the true man. But these mysteries are not so much attributes of knowledge as attributes of will. When the Faith enters every new stage of development, it is our will which must become re-directed and re-inspired. Argument and discussion can not invoke the mysterious potency released only as we purify the elements of intention and will. If we will anything less than unity, disunity must inevitably result.

It is by a deepening realization of the responsibility laid upon the American Bahá'í community that we can make the transition to the new stage of reality indicated by the Guardian this year. The resolution to adopt and fulfill the Seven-Year Plan, amidst the general darkening of the world's horizons, must survive every conceivable test before the resolution can become firmly established. The task surpasses the capacity of human emotion and thought, as faithfulness to the achievement of the task saves us from the limitations of human nature as they have existed in the past. Solely by concentration upon these two aspects of the Plan in our daily lives and meetings can we hope to become worthy of its ultimate success.

Faithfully yours,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY,
By: HORACE HOLLEY,
Secretary.

ANNUAL REPORT 1937-1938
Trustees for the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada

A year ago the Trustees reported for the first time a detailed summary of the origin, development and management of the various corporate trusteeships that have been created to control and supervise the different properties that have been acquired either by gift or purchase by the National Spiritual Assembly over a period of years, and which are located in the States of Illinois, Maine, New Jersey, California and Massachusetts. It was pointed out in that report that it had been necessary to form these separate trusts in order to protect the National Fund from any contingencies that might possibly involve one of these properties. The officers and members of these corporate bodies are the same as those of the National Spiritual Assembly and are elected each year by the same vote that elects the National Assembly. In this manner the Bahá'í community of the United States and Canada is assured that all of the affairs of the Bahá'í Faith are under the direction of their duly qualified representatives.

Owing to the ever-increasing responsibilities in connection with these estates it has been necessary to appoint special Maintenance Committees to assist in their management. These committees have rendered most valuable services this past year and merit the gratitude of the friends. As the Cause grows, and more use is made of these properties, it may be necessary to place them under the supervision of a general manager.

This year the National Assembly appointed a Committee on Financial Records of all Bahá'í Properties in North America. This committee is preparing a set of records that will contain photostats of all the Indentures of Trust, survey maps and photographs of the properties, inventories, annual tax and insurance records, payrolls and terms of employment, leases and development plans as well as a list of the lands held by the Palestine Branch with the names of their donors. A new financial set-up is being made that will provide for a capital account and an accounting of the annual maintenance operations, and improvements, which have to be provided from the National Bahá'í Fund. This record will be made in duplicate and one copy will be forwarded to the Guardian, the other will be available for reference at all meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly. It will assure a more effective supervision of all these sacred trusts which are valued in America alone at more than a million dollars.

The annual report of the National Treasurer will give the exact figures of income and expense involved in the management of these trusteeships as related to the National Bahá'í Fund. This record will give the salient points connected with the supervision of the five properties for the current Bahá'í year and the approximate fixed charges of each trust—the Temple, Green Acre, Wilhelm, Bosch and Malden, to March 1, 1938.

Temple Trustees

The trustees received a new responsibility when the memorable and inspiring cabled Message from Shoghi Effendi was received during the 1937 Convention, investings the American Bahá'í community with a dual task to continue the teaching campaign and "resume with inflexible determination exterior ornamentation entire structure of the Temple. Advise ponder message conveyed delegates (through) esteemed co-worker, Fred Schopflocher. No triumph can more befittingly signalize termination first century Bahá'í era than accomplishment (of) this twofold task."

Mr. Schopflocher further reported that the Guardian hoped that the exterior ornamentation would be completed before the end of the first Bahá'í century, 1944, and that a committee of experts, Bahá'í and non-Bahá'í, should be appointed to submit costs and make recommendations to the National Assembly about the contract for the next step in the construction. A committee was appointed of three Bahá'ís and three technical experts, consisting of L. W. Eggleston, chairman, E. Roger Boyle, Frank R. McMillan, Stuart W. French, Frank A. Baker and C. Herrick Hammond.

This committee considered the most efficient, economical and satisfactory methods to be employed in the completion of the entire exterior ornamentation of the Temple, the nature and terms of the contract and to whom it should be given, and after a careful survey of the problem made a unanimous recommendation that the contract be placed with Mr. John J. Earley, who had so successfully completed the Dome and Clerestory ornamentation. After consideration of the type of contract, whether on a cost-plus basis or a fixed amount, it was found that the latter would run nearly $30,000.00 higher, and the cost-plus basis was recommended. The technical committee further recommended that the Research Service, Inc., be employed to supervise the construction work, on behalf of the Trustees.

With these recommendations before it the National Assembly met with both the Technical Committee and Mr. Earley during its August meeting at Green Acre and voted to accept the recommendations and to enter into a contract with Mr. Earley for the completion of the gallery section of the Temple at an estimated cost of $140,000.00, which includes all materials, labor, insurance, social security taxes and freight charges at actual cost, and which should also cover a contingency reserve for unforeseen conditions and raises in wages and the 15 per cent fee of the Earley Studio. Mr. Earley stated that he would like to purchase all the necessary steel and quartz and cement necessary to complete the contract as soon as possible. He also gave an estimate of $350,000.00 for the completion of the entire outer ornamentation. The National Assembly then cabled the following message to Shoghi Effendi: "Under recommendation Technical Committee contract next Temple unit given Earley. Estimated cost his work $125,000, total estimated cost $145,000 including contingency reserve." The following reply was received on September 2nd, "Approve Committee's decision. Place contract immediately."

When this information was received by the Trustees they voted to appoint a committee of Mountfort Mills and Allen McDaniel to prepare the terms of the contract in accordance with the standardized type of agreement used by the American Institute of Architects and to authorize any five Trustees to sign it on behalf of the Trustees. Mr. Earley was further authorized to make an immediate purchase of the materials needed for the performance of the work at an estimated cost of $20,000. This was done on the advice of the National Spiritual Assembly that the sum of $76,000 was available and that an additional $50,000 would be available in January, 1938. The contract was signed on October 5, 1937.

It was further voted to appoint Mr. Allen McDaniel the representative of the Trustees in supervising the execution of the ornament entered into with Mr. Earley and that the treasurer be directed to pay the expense incurred by Mr. McDaniel in connection with the supervision of the work at the Earley Studio as well as at the Temple, including the preparation of detailed monthly reports and travelling expenses. It was likewise voted to pay any expense incurred by the Technical Committee in connection with its survey.

The Trustees are happy to report that this committee is available for consultation and will be present on construction with any technical problem that might arise during the construction work and that they made no charge for their professional advice. A full report of the work of this Committee will be given by its chairman, Mr. Eggleston, during the 1938 Convention.

The purchases of materials was started in September, and during the early part of October, Mr. Earley had trained assistants make the measurements at the Temple necessary for the working drawings from which the models and moulds are prepared. The works at the Earley Studio and all clay models and casts were completed the first part of April. On March 25, the first car containing contractor's equipment, reinforcing steel and wooden moulds for the placing of the ornamentation that is to be poured at the Temple, was shipped. On March 28, a second car was shipped containing 54,000 pounds of crushed stone and sand, 28 columns, 51 imposters, 2 sections of cornice ornamentation and 2 sections of window band ornament. The friends attending the 1938 Convention will have the renewed inspiration of again seeing the Temple under construction.

A detailed monthly report of all operations has been furnished the Trustees by Mr. McDaniel which includes every item of expense from the reinforced steel down to a whitewash brush. This progress report divides the work into three sections; A. Cost of Models and Moulds, B. Cost of precast Ornament, C. Cost of materials and labor at the Temple. The estimated cost of the work to March 31, 1938, according to figures supplied by Mr. Earley was $45,162.28, while the total expenditures to the same date have amounted to $43,354.34, showing that up to the present time the work has advanced according to outlined schedule and the actual cost is running reasonably within the estimates. The system of accounting is the same as that installed in the Earley Studio by the auditor of the City of Nashville when Mr. Earley completed a contract with that city some years ago. The entire gallery section should be completed within a two year period from the signing of the contract. The Trustees visited the Earley Studio on December 11th and found the work proceeding ahead of the outlined schedule. They also viewed the splendid Temple Model made by Mr. Earley and which can be purchased by local Assemblies for $95.00. One of these models was sent to Shoghi Effendi, one will be on display at the Temple and one was sent to the Concrete Institute; others will be available for Teaching campaigns.

Two most generous gifts, one of $100,000 and another of $25,000 gave a great impetus to the start of the Temple construction fund the early part of the Baha'i year. The friends throughout the land have arisen to the great task before us inspired by the Guardian's cablegram of July 4, 1937: "Immeasurably gratified National Assembly's initial step presentation Seven-Year Plan. Successful operation Temple enterprise necessitates carrying on faithfully, energetically following foregoing steps. First, expedite preliminary investigations. Second, utilize Fred's historic munificent donation by immediate signature contract for next unit. Third, redirect with added force nationwide appeal to entire community insure uninterrupted completion first unit and accumulation sufficient funds enable placing without delay final contract. Fourth, place final contract as soon as half required sum available in National Treasury. Fifth, re-emphasize supreme obligation triumphant consummation so vital a part of American believers' twofold task by May, 1944. Advise communicate above message all believers stimulate universal response Assembly's future endeavors." The Trustees feel confident they will not have to make any further loans to complete payments for contracted work on the Temple as the believers will be ever mindful that "No sacrifice (is) too great for community so abundantly blessed, repeatedly honored."

Considerable attention has been given to the problem of the Temple grounds this past year. A preliminary survey of the landscaping plans is under way so that the nature and amount of fill necessary for the ultimate ground plan can be determined. The Trustees have informed the United States Engineer's Office that they are in a position to build the necessary bulkheads and arrange for the fill when dredging operations in Wilmette harbor are started.

The Trustees have spent much time trying to arrive at an equitable settlement of the division of the stub-end property of the old Sheridan Road upon information from the Wilmette Village authorities that it has been abandoned, and that they will cooperate with the Trustees in making a settlement with the Goldblatt family which have acquired the adjacent Marshall property. This matter should be terminated in the near future, as three Trustees, Mr. Wilhelm, Mr. Holley and Mr. Scheffler met with the owners last Fall and reported that a settlement has been proposed.

Upon the advice and instruction of the Guardian, an agreement has been entered into with Mrs. Pemberton for the purchase of the interior designs of Temple at the cost of Forty Dollars a month, payable to her during the term of her natural life. Payments started in January, 1938, under this agreement. The drawings will be forwarded to Shoghi Effendi after a set of prints have been made.

The following necessary repairs and improvements were made this past year: a new steel rolling door was installed in the foundation wall at a cost of $251.00; plastering $150.00; screen and storm doors, $101.77; grading and seeding the ground, $558.96; and roofing, refacing the walls of the Temple Studio and caretaker's cottage, $738.68—a total of $1,800.41. Travelling expenses of the Technical Committee amounting to $297.64 and legal expense of $88.35 have been paid. Insurance was renewed on the Temple Studio, Liability and Workmen’s Compensation and the Boilers in the Temple, this latter at a saving of $74.25 for three years. The annual maintenance costs will be found in the Treasurer’s report. Beginning March 1st, Mr. Hennan’s salary was increased to $125.00 a month. Allen McDaniel and Carl Scheffler acted as the Maintenance Committee.

Green Acre Trustees

Prior to the opening of Green Acre for the Summer School sessions for 1937, the rebuilding of the third floor of the Inn was completed, second floor accommodations had been added in two of the cottages adjoining the Inn, and the new Baha’i Hall, overlooking the Piscataqua River—the generous gift to the Cause by Mrs. Florence Morton—was finished and ready to provide a beautiful and necessary auditorium for lectures, classes, conferences and feasts. In addition to her greatly appreciated gift of the Baha’i Hall, Mrs. Morton contributed $1,500.00 for the third floor improvements in the Inn.

Another important gift to Green Acre was the purchase of the so-called Ball cottage with its three acres, running from the main highway to the Ole Bull property, by Mr. and Mrs. Schopflocher. In addition they donated $250.00 for the repair of the roof and paid the current taxes on this property, which is a valuable addition to Green Acre because of its year-round rental opportunity, when necessary repairs and improvements are made in the amount of $3,000.00.

Repairs in the amount of $100.00 were expended on the Lucas Cottage and $115.00 on the Ball Cottage. Additional repairs will be necessary to the Ball Cottage to make it rentable during the winter months. Besides the third floor improvements at the Inn, it will be necessary to repair and paint the roof over the kitchen and dining-room at a cost of $260.00. The Trustees voted to expend the balance of the Yandell Art Fund of $375.00 for installing a toilet and making improvements in the Arts and Crafts Studio. Mrs. Nancy Bowditch has been appointed to conduct classes in drawing, painting and designing this coming season. The taxes of $662.72 and $9.75 on McKinney Cottage for 1937 have been paid. In this connection, the Trustees felt that the Baha’i Hall, Fellowship House and the Arts and Crafts Studio are subject to tax exemption as they are used exclusively for religious purposes and a committee of Mr. Harold Bowman, Mrs. Emma Flynn and Mr. Horace Holley met with the Village Selectmen and presented a request for exemption in the valuation of $5,600.00, the limit allowed by the laws of the State of Maine. Favorable action on this request is hoped for this year. It will be necessary to make certain repairs on Fellowship House roof and also on the interior supports in Rogers Cottage.

The matter of insurance became another serious problem to the Trustees this past year, as notice of an increase of rate on Fellowship House from $1.75 to $3.75 per hundred was published by the New England Insurance Exchange. Mr. Latimer, who has been authorized by the Trustees to handle all insurance items, met with the Agents last August at Green Acre and had them file an application for revision. Finally in March of this year, word was received that the old rate had been restored and this amounted in a savings of $200.00 to the Trustees. Owing to the improvements to the Inn and Cottages, additional insurance has been placed on these buildings and the amount reduced on Fellowship House. Total insurance paid this year amounted to $665.98 on the buildings, liability and workmen’s compensation.

Mrs. Ormsby managed the Inn for the Trustees in 1937. The Inn was thoroughly fumigated at a cost of $175.00 and new beds and equipment installed on the third floor and in the cottages at a cost of $534.80. A station wagon, costing $353.00 was purchased for the use of the Inn and its guests. Mrs. Marguerite Bruegger served as a Baha’i hostess during the season. Food, pay-roll, supplies and miscellaneous expense for light, water, coal, ice, laundry, amounted to $4,412.27, while the income from guests, cottage rents and miscellaneous amounted to $3,979.51, leaving a deficit for the season of $432.76.

Mrs. Flora Valentine has been engaged to manage the Inn and cottages for July and August, 1938, at a salary of $100.00 a month. The manager is to send in a weekly financial report this coming season to the Trustees and supply a copy for the Maintenance Committee. The Trustees adopted a policy that Green Acre is to be recognized as a Baha’i summer school, the aim of which is to train and inspire believers to become Baha’i teachers, and plans made to attract non-believers to conform in all respects to the highest interests of the Faith. It is hoped a deeper spiritual appeal will promote greater unified effort and enthusiasm, to the end that it may become financially self-supporting.

The following committee was appointed jointly by the National Assembly to combine the functions of program and maintenance: Flora Morton, chairman, Alice Bacon, Harold Bowman, Amelia Bowman, Roushan Wilkinson, Harlan Ober and Glenn Shook. Emma Flynn was appointed supervisor of properties and directed the caretaker's duties. Mr. Edwin La Pointe served as caretaker for the year at a part time monthly salary at $76.80. It is the hope of the Trustees that the attendance at Green Acre this coming season will increase to such an extent that there will be no operating deficit and a great spiritual contribution be made to the furtherance of the Seven-Year Plan.

Wilhelm Trustees

The Trustees are happy to report that another welcomed gift has been made to this property which witnesses each year the most memorable event connected with the visit of the Master to America in 1912—the Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Mr. Walter Goodfellow and Jessie Goodfellow, his wife, presented to the Wilhelm Trustees two lots adjoining the present property. This indenture was executed December 31, 1937 and recorded on January 4, 1938, in the office of the clerk of Bergen County, in Book 2097, page 482 of Deeds. These lots make a valuable addition to the present property, and our deep and abiding appreciation is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Goodfellow.

Last year Mr. Samuel Shure, attorney for Mr. Wilhelm, advised the Trustees that the Teaneck Township assessor stated that the lots located in the pine grove were not tax exempt because they are separated from the property used for religious purposes. Mr. Wilhelm paid the taxes on these lots for 1937. The town has agreed to give exemption on lots No. 8 and No. 9 for 1938 and successive years.

The Cabin has been leased for meetings to the Teaneck Spiritual Assembly at a monthly rental of $30.00, and this Assembly pays for its portion of the liability insurance, light and heat. This past year Mr. Wilhelm installed a separate oil tank to supply oil to the Cabin for determining exactly the costs to the Teaneck Assembly. The only costs to the Trustees have been $18.40 for legal expenses and about $10.00 for insurance, Mr. Wilhelm having borne all other costs.

Bosch Trustees

Since our last report the beautiful dormitory at Geyserville was completed and its dedication took place on July 4th, the opening day of the Summer School. It was an occasion of great joy to have Mrs. Thomas Collins present at these services. She and her husband, who was deprived of seeing the culmination of his devotion to this institution, have complemented the wonderful gift of John and Louise Bosch, with their endowments of the Bahá’í Hall and the dormitory. The two-story dormitory, with thirteen rooms on the main floor and beds for fourteen on the second floor, will accommodate about fifty people. This beautiful building will stand as a memorial to Mr. Thomas Collins.

Mr. Joe Borzoni was employed as caretaker last May at a salary of $50.00 per month, for part time services. An arrangement has been made that whatever work he does for the friends who have cottages on the property in his spare time shall be deducted from the wages paid by the Trustees and assumed by the other parties. These services are not available during the period of the summer school.

The summer school and maintenance of the property have been conducted up to the present time without any subsidy from the National Fund, the only costs being the caretaker’s salary which amounted to $521.66 and workmen’s compensation of $34.05. Mr. and Mrs. Bosch and Mrs. Collins have taken care of the taxes, water, light, and other insurance items. Other friends have contributed sums to carry on the summer school work. Last year there was a deficit of $20.00, which included a nominal weekly charge for the rooms to cover laundry, etc. This deficit was made up by the friends.

The Trustees appointed the following Maintenance Committee to supervise the management on their behalf: George Latimer, chairman, Leroy Forsyth Ward and Harry R. Munson. This committee will render an annual report to the Trustees.

Malden Trustees

The friends are aware that this house was turned over to the National Spiritual Assembly by Shoghi Effendi because of its memorable association with the Master’s visit to America in 1912. On June 4, 1937, the following word was received from the Guardian: “Concerning the house at Malden, Mass., the Guardian leaves all the questions related to its restoration and renting to the discretion of your N. S. A., but wishes only to emphasize the absolute necessity of keeping this house as the property of the Cause. Under no circumstances should it be sold or given to non-Bahá’ís, though it may be rented to them, in view of the references 'Abdu'l-Bahá has made to it in His Tablet. Whatever arrangement the Assembly decides upon should be made after due consideration of this important fact.”

Owing to the age of the house many repairs are necessary. The following most urgent ones have been taken care of at a cost of $390.15, a new hot-air furnace, replacement of old window frames and sashes, new modern electric wiring throughout, plumbing and plastering of ceiling. Taxes amounted to $204.04 and water $18.96. Rent was received amounting to $171.00. Other repairs will be made when necessary.

The following Maintenance Committee was appointed by the Trustees: Victor Archambault, chairman, Florence Morton and Wendell Bacon. This committee has taken over the work formerly entrusted to the Boston Assembly.

Conclusion

This detailed report is rendered to the friends in order to show what is required to maintain these various properties which are the manifest signs of an ever-growing Faith and also to indicate the responsibility on the part of the Trustees in their care and management of these sacred trusts. To recapitulate: the operating costs for the past year, including caretakers’ salaries, taxes, light, heat, water, telephone, insurance, legal expenses, repairs and capital expenditures for improvements, are divided as follows:

<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Cost</th>
</tr>

<tbody>

<tr>
<td>Repairs to Studio and Caretaker’s Cottage and Ground</td>

<tr>

<td>$14,269.04</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The cost of Temple construction to April 1, 1938, including Technical Committee expense of $297.84 is $44,036.03.

It will be noted from the above figures that the monthly withdrawals from the National Bahá’í Fund have averaged $1,189.00 for the past year. Next year some heavy insurance renewal items for the Temple will be due but there should be a corresponding reduction in repairs in the other trusteeships. If the applications for tax exemption are approved there will be another reduction. However, with the increasing needs of an expanding community, the friends should realize that at least $14,000.00, annually, or $1,200.00 a month will be required from the National Bahá’í Fund, for the next few years.

These institutions are definitely a part of the Seven-Year Plan as the Summer Schools bear a most important relationship to the Teaching Activities. Therefore, they must be considered as an integral obligation of the National Bahá’í Fund. There is almost the needed amount in the Temple Fund to insure the payment of the balance that will be due on the completion of the Gallery Section of the Temple. The friends must now bear in mind the following stage, the completion of the main story, in their budget plans. The Trustees feel sure that the friends will not fail in their task. The Guardian has pointed the way in his most recent communication: “Each and every believer, undaunted by the uncertainties, the perils and the financial stringency afflicting the nation, must arise and ensure, to the full measure of his or her capacity, that continuous and abundant flow of funds into the national Treasury, on which the successful prosecution of the Plan must chiefly depend.”

Respectfully submitted,
Trustees for the benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly

By George O. Latimer,
"A MORE BURNING ENTHUSIASM ...
A HIGHER SENSE OF SOLIDARITY ..."

Teaching Plans for the Second Year of the Seven Year Plan

The most essential element in teaching is the deep, inward response to the Guardian's successive appeals, warnings and instructions. All minor considerations and hampering personal issues must be swept aside, and the souls turned with pure intention to Bahá'u'lláh. Baha'ís are assured that the spiritual powers are all-encompassing, and but await every opportunity to reinforce true efforts to serve the Faith.

Plans and policies depend upon the "burning enthusiasm" and "solidarity" of the friends. They are means and not ends, and no plan can serve as substitute for the consecration of those who seek to promote the Faith.

The following outline of plans adopted by the National Spiritual Assembly is nothing else than a sincere and considered effort to make available for teaching work all possible resources of individual initiative and unified consultation. It is but the framework in which individual believers, local Assemblies and National Committees can best combine their activities and concentrate their powers.

1. The two principal teaching methods in the national field are to be, first, settlement by pioneers in unoccupied areas, and second, the approval of definite projects involving the use of teachers for a specific time and under a specific budget. Pioneers intending to establish permanent residence in order to found a new Baha'i community will be assisted financially for a definite period, while they are finding means of self-support.

2. A National and a number of Regional Teaching Committees have been appointed. All requests for teaching literature, and all projects involving a budget, are to be submitted to the National Teaching Committee and transmitted by that Committee to the National Assembly for approval. Budgets for administrative expense will be given the Regional Committees, which are to arouse teaching activity among groups and isolated believers. Regional Committees are not to pass upon requests for budgets or teaching literature but refer these to the National Teaching Committee, with reports of teaching work in their region. Regional Committees are to make use of available teachers who can function without a budget for traveling expense.

3. The fundamental importance of teaching under the direction of local Assemblies is emphasized. Local Assemblies are urged to extend their efforts to adjoining areas. They can notify the Regional Committee of the area for which they will assume teaching responsibility throughout the year. It is of the utmost importance for every local Assembly to deepen and enlarge its sense of responsibility and its capacity for carrying out carefully considered plans.

4. Individual believers are urged to realize that teaching is inseparable from true faith. Capacity comes from sincere effort. Those who are free to travel, however, without depending upon administrative assistance, are not thereby to feel free of proper administrative direction and jurisdiction, but will be held responsible to the local Assembly, the Regional Committee or the National Teaching Committee, depending upon the jurisdiction immediately concerned. The effective teacher is immersed in spiritual matters and stands aloof from any internal problems of the Faith. The National Assembly welcomes and appreciates individual initiative, but initiative must not be expressed at the sacrifice of the fundamental principle of consultation and the obligation of all Baha'is to recognize spiritual and administrative principles. All Baha'is are teachers; there is no special group of "official" teachers; but too many have been content to wait for others to arouse and work.

Baha'i teaching is the sharing of loving reverence for the Manifestation and His New World Order; it is a quickening of the spirit and a form of education and training until the soul or group is fully confirmed. We should endeavor to turn the souls to Baha'u'llah and make them independent of all save Him. The National Assembly feels that pressure of personal influence and organized methods of the American promotion type should be scrupulously avoided.

Constant reference to the Divine Plan set forth in the pamphlet which reprints the Master's Tablets on teaching under the title of "America's Spiritual Mission," and no less constant reference to the Guardian's messages, will produce the mighty momentum needed for the task defined by Shoghi Effendi in the cablegram received May 1, 1936: "Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Baha'u'llah and establish structural basis of His World Order." National Spiritual Assembly.

"PRAYING INSTANTANEOUSLY"

The members of the National Assembly are deeply touched by recent letters from local Assemblies reporting action by the community after receiving the general statement of Temple plans issued early in May.

From San Francisco comes word that the community has voted to collect and transmit as soon as possible a special contribution of $1,000 for the new Construction Fund. Phoenix, Oklahoma City, New York, Topeka and Eliot write that the local community stands unitedly in support of the new plans. The Los Angeles community prayed for the National Assembly during its recent meeting.

Such electric flow of spiritual and material forces symbolizes the true, dynamic nature of the Faith, which is fulfilled in deeds and not in words.

The new Temple Construction Fund, started with a balance of $1,000, has been increased by the N. S. A. to $2,000 by an appropriation from the National Fund. Thus all the believers who contribute directly or indirectly to the National Fund are fully associated with the great enterprise.

Shoghi Effendi's cablegram of June 6 on the subject of this enterprise, already issued to local Assemblies, is reprinted here so that his words can be in the possession of every believer.

Each further step in these developments will be shared with the friends.

QUESTIONNAIRE ON LOCAL HISTORY

Up to the present time one-half of the Local Assemblies have responded to the Questionnaire on Local Bahá'í History and Records which was mailed to each Local Spiritual Assembly something over a year ago. This form contained numerous questions, answers to which would constitute a brief summary of the local history of the Cause in each Community, and which would contribute to it nationally.

Assemblies which have not filled out and forwarded this Questionnaire are urged to do so. Duplicate copies of the form can be supplied if necessary.

ARTICLES FOR WORLD ORDER

The editors of World Order feel a great responsibility in their effort to make the magazine fully and truly representative of the best available writing in the international Baha'i Community. They therefore request that this communication be shared with the believers, in the hope that the following explanation of editorial plans and needs will lead to an increase in the number of manuscripts received.

Our aim is to produce a balance of interest in each issue by the selection of articles and poems under the following classifications:

At least one direct Bahá'í article, carefully expounding some aspect of the Teachings, with appropriate quotations.
A "human document," conveying the sense of intimate inner experience.
Material imbued with the esthetic and cultural quality.
A practical application of spiritual truth to the problems of daily life.
Prose or verse conveying the joy and freedom of the spiritual life.
Articles based upon factual knowledge of sociological or scientific character and informative value.
Articles presenting constructive international themes, the relations of East and West, etc.

In addition, the editors plan to include a new department, devoted to correspondence from readers, in the hope that this will lead to interesting and valuable Baha'i comments on topics of current public interest.

It is gratifying to note that World Order is being more and more used as teaching material in making contacts with new friends.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

TEMPLE MODEL

The Temple models assigned to the Teaching Committee have begun to render very effective service. One is on display at Urbana; another has been exhibited at Cornell University in the lobby of the students' social center where it was seen by three thousand students. Allen B. McDaniel gave an illustrated Temple lecture in connection with this exhibit, and the faculty wish him to return. Excellent publicity was obtained in the Cornell student newspaper. Another Model has been exhibited under the auspices of the Binghamton Assembly, and Mr. McDaniel gave his Temple lecture at the Art Gallery, Arlington Hotel, Binghamton, on June 8. The Teaching Committee reports that plans are under way in Nashville and Knoxville for a Temple model exhibit at an early date.

DISTINGUISHED WORKER BELOVED GRACE OBER

On May 3, after the Convention, the following cablegram was received from Shoghi Effendi: "Profoundly grieve great loss sustained teaching field through passing distinguished worker beloved Grace Ober. Advise delegates pay worthy tribute her glowing spirit eminent services. Joining them fervent prayers."

The National Spiritual Assembly feels that the prayers and chants rendered in Foundation Hall after this tragic event and the grief of the friends, fulfilled the spirit of the Guardian's advice.

GEYSERVILLE SUMMER SCHOOL

The opening session of the eleventh annual Baha'i Summer School at Geyserville was held under the Douglas fir landmark on the Bosch place, Sunday, July 4th. Some 210 people were in attendance to enjoy the sumptuous Unity Feast and the joyous messages from persons from every part of the United States and parts of the world.

Mr. George Latimer of Portland acted as chairman of the day and introduced Mr. J. D. Bosch, of Geyserville, who welcomed the guests to the school and said in part, "The study of the principles and belief in Baha’u’llah, will regenerate mankind." Through the gift of 37 acres of their property Mr. and Mrs. Bosch set in motion the means, some ten years ago, for a school for Baha’i learning which has shown a steady growth. Imposing buildings known as Baha’i Hall, completed last year, and the Collins dormitory, occupied for the first time this year, have increased the facilities and conveniences for advancement of the public knowledge of the Baha’i Faith.

Mrs. T. H. Collins, of Pacific Palisades, Calif., whose gift with her recently deceased husband, was the new dormitory, thanked the assembled friends for their comfort and remembrance in their prayers during her recent bereavement.

There were many expressions of interest by telegram and persons in the welfare of this first Bahá’í summer school on the American continent, which carry the fame of Geyserville beyond its own boundaries because it leaves the lasting impressions of a friendly town in the hearts of these former students.

Messages of greeting impressed many attending at this opening session. Mrs. Nell Griffith Wilson of Kenwood, Calif., welcomed the guests for the Geyserville Assembly. Mr. Chas. Bishop of London, England, and formerly of Portland, Oregon, told of his joy in being present and said that his spirit would always be here although an ocean stood between. Mrs. T. C. Smith brought greetings from Binghamton, N. Y. Mr. Chas. Reimer, of Milwaukee, Wis., had a word of greeting and expressed his satisfaction in finally being able to arrive after attempting the trip for three years past. Other appropriate expressions were given by Mrs. E. G. Cooper of San Francisco, Miss Y. Isobe of Japan, who is in Los Angeles for a short time. Both of these students spoke in Esperanto, their most fluent method of expression, which was translated by Miss Lorrol Jackson of Spokane, Wash., Mr. Gerge Sterris, an artist from Italy and France, spoke in French, which Miss Virginia Orbison of Hollywood, interpreted for the gathering.

Mr. S. Schoflocher, of Montreal Canada, recounted vividly his happiness in returning to Geyserville after his trip around the world. His first experience with Geyserville was his meeting with John Bosch in Haifa, Palestine, when he (Schoflocher) was not yet a Bahá’í. Mrs. Louise Caswell of Portland told briefly of her teaching work in Nashville, Tenn., from which she had just returned.

The accompanying printed schedule of the courses given at the Western States Bahá’í Summer School were built around fundamental subjects by speakers chosen from wide fields of experience in the Bahá’í Faith:

Islam: Its teachings,

The Unfoldment of World Civilization.

Supplementing this program on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays was the teaching seminar in which the classes discussed six subjects by experienced public speakers,

TEMPLE CONSTRUCTION—7.

Carving an Original Model.

Miss C. Linfoot and Mrs. Buelah Lewis, N. F. Ward, Mrs. Mamie Seto and Mrs. Louise Caswell. The subjects of the six seminars were:

The Bahá’í Teacher—Prime requisites for teaching.

Technique, and relation to Bahá’í Community

The Public Address—Preparation, presentation and supporting elements.

The Class Work—Types and objects, teacher’s place, student participation.

Teaching Opportunities—In Bahá’í community, new fields, and national teaching program.

Introduction of the Faith in new States—Survey, contacts, publicity, lectures, classes, follow-up.

In addition to the formal classes the program provided four public meetings in the Bahá’í Hall at Geyserville, and one meeting in Santa Rosa at the Masonic Temple.

The attendance at the summer school was as follows: Devotionals, maximum 68, minimum 28; at the teaching seminar, maximum 74, minimum 47; at daily meetings maximum 82, minimum 47; public meetings approximate average of 61.

Provision for study of correlated non-Bahá’í and Bahá’í literature was made in the rear space of Bahá’í Hall as a library. By personal gifts and discount from Bahá’í books sold by Western division of Bahá’í Publishing Committee. The value of this assistance to teachers has amounted to nearly $100. This convenience of up-to-date literature for the teachers at the school has proved invaluable for the reference of teachers and students. It will remain a perpetual gift for the progress of the Faith.

Other important features of the summer school program included a complete course of study of the Bahá’í Faith for all of the children in attendance. The children’s program included short recreation periods and handicraft during the morning and supervised play in the afternoon. Some twelve children were in attendance daily during the two weeks.

The youth program on Bahá’í subjects was held Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. An additional responsibility of the youth group was the planning and execution of two public meetings at the Bahá’í Hall. These meetings proved to be of very high order and a credit to the youth in attendance.

LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL

Last summer your committee for the Louhelen Summer School located at Louhelen Ranch, Davison, Michigan, planned and carried out three sessions. First was the youth session, June 27-July 1, with the following program daily:

Devotions; The New World Order, Forum conducted by Willard McKay; History and Principles of the Faith, conducted by Amamarie and Margaret Kunz for new inquirers; Study of The Dispensation of Bahá’ulláh, conducted by Miss Garreta Bushey; The Bahá’í Teachings applied to Daily Life, talks by Emeric and Rosemary Sala, Marion Holley, Kenneth Christian. These courses were attended almost a hundred percent. Each afternoon was a forum conducted by different young people which was particularly vital. There was opportunity in the afternoons for swimming and other recreation.

In charge of the sports and evening programs was the Lima youth group and they had their plans well worked out in advance. An effort was made to have the evening entertainments more distinctively Bahá’í both in character and excellence of presentation, for our Guardian urges that our summer schools gradually develop into “true cultural and educational Bahá’í centers.” The pageant which the Urbana group put on Monday evening is especially worthy of mention. This was a presentation of “The Gate of Dawn,” the pageant arranged by Mrs. Bowditch and Kenneth Christian. Although the equipment and costumes were quite limited the presentation was dignified and impressive and created an atmosphere of reverence and inspiration. It made it evident that in the line of pageantry and drama is a great field for presenting the Cause. Tuesday evening the Chicago and North Shore groups gave a varied program of music and readings. Wednesday evening the Flint group showed us some of the wonders of chemistry and electricity and Thursday evening put on an original play which gave the Baha’i message. This was well worked out and impressive. All these programs had been planned at home.

Over ninety young people were in attendance at this session besides many more part time visitors and we feel that it was outstanding in earnestness and purposefulness. One thing that helped greatly in bringing high standards to this session was the presence of the National Youth Committee which chose this time and place for its annual meeting. The unexpected arrival of Mrs. Seto and Mr. Carl Scheffler Sunday afternoon gave opportunity for inspiring talks from them. A vital innovation was the quiet hour just before retiring when dormitory groups gathered with a counsellor for questions, reading and prayer. The honor system of self-government was successfully continued this year.

Immediately following the youth session was the July general session, July 3-11. This group was rather small, but there was something vital about the session. In general we have found before that small groups were especially blessed. Several wrote back after returning home that they had never had so great a desire to spread the Cause as after returning home from this session. While the enrollment was small there was an unusually large number of visitors.

The following unusually rich program occupied the morning daily from nine to twelve: Devotions; The World Order of Baha’u'llah; Allen McDaniel; Pillars of the New Civilization, Dr. Garreta Busey; The Science of the Love of God, Marion Holley. In the afternoons was round table discussion at which various teaching problems were discussed. How to use prophecy in teaching the Cause, How to present the Cause to the agnostic or atheistic type. How to present the Cause to the deeply religious type: these were some of the subjects discussed. The period proved most valuable.

The especial purpose in the evening meetings was to present the Cause to new people. On two evenings Mr. McDaniel gave illustrated lectures on religious architecture and the Baha’I House of Worship. One evening there was a symposium on the subject of immortality and on another the story of Mullá Husayn from The Dawn-Breakers was beautifully told by Miss Neya Bissell of Buffalo. The evening of July ninth was devoted to a memorial service in memory of the Báb.

In August (July 31-August 8) another group gathered, larger than the July group. At this time, too, a rich and inspiring program was presented: Devotions; The True Relation between Religion and Government, Dr. Glenn Shook; The World’s Debt to Isfáhán, Mr. N. M. Firoozí; The Divine Art of Living, Mrs. Dorothy Baker.

An especial favor for the August session was the presence of Miss Agnes Alexander who had recently visited Haifa and had much to tell us of the Guardian’s words and wishes. Before she left Haifa the Guardian had instructed her to visit summer schools. Many of the afternoon meetings were devoted to hearing her notes and others to discussing teaching methods. It is impossible to put into words what these summer schools, even in their still undeveloped state, mean to those who attend. Our Guardian has told us that these schools are the foundations of the universities of the future and that we should strive in every way for their growth and improvement each year. Moreover, in a letter dated November 8, 1937, he places responsibility for this growth upon each believer. “Every believer,” he says, “no matter what his gifts and position, has something to contribute to the growth of the school, and it is only by means of such collective support that Louhelen can gradually develop into a true cultural and educational Baha’i center.” Here are words for reflection for every believer.

The committee greatly appreciates the cooperation of the various communities and individuals which have made possible the work and growth of the school. Those who come to teach and those who come to learn and those who remain at home and send others and those who pray are all essential to the continued growth and improvement of the school.

NATIONAL TEACHING

“Prosecute uninterruptedly teaching campaign inaugurated at last Convention in accordance with Divine Plan.” (1937 Convention message from the Guardian.)

“In a world perilously near cataclysmic convulsions... well nigh staggering responsibility rests on America... Who among its stalwart defenders will arise, untrammelled (and) unafraid, to implant its banner in those states and provinces where its standard is still unhoisted. Entreat afresh American community heed vital urgency (of) my impassioned plea...” (Cablegram from Shoghi Effendi, August, 1937.)

“World crisis inexorably moving toward climax, challenging torchbearers of Baha’i civilization (to) scale loftier heights (of) individual heroism, (to) scatter more widely throughout length and breadth (of) the American continents, (to) participate more strenuously (in) concerted effort organized by National, Regional, local agencies dedicated (to) prosecution (of) noble enterprise.” (Cablegram from Shoghi Effendi, October 29, 1937.)

The believers, to an individual, have arisen to play their part in the divine drama now being enacted on the horizon of America's spiritual destiny.
The progress of the teaching work during the first year of the Seven-Year Divine Plan, if intensified as it gains momentum, will surely bring such spir­ tual motion in the life of the American continents that the Faith of Ba­ ah'u'llah will achieve renown as to "astound the Bahá'í world."

It is impossible to recount the unceasing sacrifices, the untiring efforts, the heroic deeds, and the depth of spir­ tual consciousness developed by the friends during the past year. Nor is it possible to gain more than a slight impression of this great collective action, carrying forward, as it did in all directions, the divine Banner of Ba­ ah'u'llah. In not one instance has the effort of even the humblest been without result. Certainly such a standard of service and such an outpouring of divine confirmations have never been witnessed in this country.

Pioneers have arisen and, forsaking their home ties, have moved into new areas and established the Faith. Many singly and alone have entered areas of spiritual darkness and brought the Light of Guidance. Others have di­ lectly carried on the work of developing these new centers of attraction, while one and all have continuously increased their efforts to expand the Faith and strengthen the institution of its New World Order.

At Convention time a year ago the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh had not yet been established in seven states of the United States and two provinces of Can­ da. At this time, there were still seven states and two Canadian provinces without any known Bahá'ís.

A year ago there were twenty-six states without Assemblies or Groups, while at this time this number has been reduced to eighteen, and in six of these eighteen states there are flourishing study groups. It is encouraging to note that active teaching work has been carried forward during the year in twenty of the twenty-six states which were without Assemblies or Groups in May, 1937.

At Convention time a year ago, seven of the Canadian provinces were without Assemblies. An Assembly now having been authorized in Toronto, Ontario, the number after April 21 is reduced to six. Another Province has a Bahá'í Group, and teaching work has been done in two others.

Twelve Bahá'ís have moved to new states as pioneer teachers, and extension pioneer teaching work has been actively carried on by thirty-eight others. The Regional Teaching Committees, too, have labored diligently to open up new cities, to assist isolated believers in their teaching efforts, and to cooperate with Bahá'í Groups in increasing their numbers. Add to this the unrecorded pioneer teaching work of all the Bahá'ís and we may gain a slight idea of the momentum that is being gained in the teaching branch of the Seven-Year Plan.

Thirty-four of the fifty-five Assembles sending in reports show a total increase of 177 new believers during the year. In addition, fifty-three new isolated believers were enrolled in twenty states. Also nine new Spiritual Assemblies have been authorized this year, bringing the number of cities where the Faith is established up to 342 as against 303 last year. Worthy of note as an indication of the developing strength of the Faith, is the fact that of this large number of new Bahá'ís, most of them are able and anxious to become active supporters of the Cause, rather than only believers impressed with the spiritual gifts of Bahá'u'lláh.

Of the fifty-five Assemblies reporting, twenty-six opened eighty-two new cities to the Faith, with active follow­ up work being done in forty-one of them. One of the most encouraging features of this work is that twenty­ five of these Assemblies used local teachers for introducing the Teachings into new localities.

Fifteen Assemblies report teacher training classes where definite training is being given prospective Bahá'í teachers.

A new type of teacher training for Bahá'í youth was developed this year in the service rendered by Miss Marguerite Reimer who accompanied older, more experienced teachers into new areas, making arrangements for the public meetings, taking care of publicity and handling all details in connection with the pioneer work.

All Assemblies are unanimous in their views that the most successful method of teaching is still the fireside method. Public lectures and radio talks are the means of attracting souls, and while producing greater results than previously, they do not provide the opportunities to confirm the student that are offered in the informal study courses of the fireside meetings.

As the world draws nearer the hour of its greatest travail, the hearts of all are seeking more and more a true basis of spiritual life and a sound solution to the world's ills. Thus the public is more receptive than ever before to the Bahá'í Faith. Evidence of this is borne out in the attitude of the press toward Bahá'í articles. Most reassuring is the liberality of the press in the new cities where the Faith has been established, some of the very best of newspaper articles appearing in these virgin areas.

It is regrettable that there is not sufficient opportunity to record the great sacrifices of the pioneer teachers, to outline the many problems and obstacles in their paths, how the doors of guidance have opened to them, and the confirmations of the Holy Spirit have reached them. Any one, contacting in the least degree the field of sacrificial service of all the friends, and particularly the teachers on the frontiers, can do no other than carry continuously in his heart a feeling of deep gratitude for their exemplary devotion and a continuous prayer for their success.
With this conscious and spiritual unity of all the friends, both in deed and spirit, surely the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh will move forward to ever new frontiers, achieving, ere the close of this century, the goal set before us by the Guardian.

LEOY IOAS, Chairman
REGIONAL TEACHING

New England

The teaching work in this region reflects the fine work done by our speakers and teachers in our Summer School at Green Acre, and we are frequently hearing of its far-reaching effects. And during the many travels of Mrs. Greenleaf throughout this country, she has interested a great many people who are constantly coming to Green Acre in the summer time to enjoy her famous hospitality and talks upon the Faith, carrying away with them many books and pamphlets to their far homes. We have again with reluctance loaned her to Florida this winter. With these two influences, New England has tentacles reaching into many of our states, far and wide.

Maine:

In the mountains of Maine an extensive teaching work is still being carried out among summer people and interesting vacation travellers from many states, as well as the surrounding towns people. Books and pamphlets have been widely distributed, and addresses given by National Assembly members to large groups from Men's Clubs and Women's Societies of the larger towns. Several requests have already been received from many residents of those centers for group meetings this summer. This is a most successful and unique venture.

Contacts were made in two new localities, North Berwick and Lewiston. Mrs. Ives went to Lewiston en route to Moncton, N. B., to speak to a group of 12 students of Bates College and a professor and wife. All were so interested that a set of books was sent to the Department of Religion at the college for the use of students who had been requested to write theses on the Bahá'í Faith.

Mme. Orlova gave a lecture to the North Berwick group. Questions followed which enabled her to speak on The New World Order for half an hour to about 30 new people. Next day an invitation was extended to 30 friends in different towns, and Mme. Orlova spoke upon "What the World Is Waiting For." To a group of 20 at Eliot she spoke on Prayer. It is encouraging to see so many inquirers from the towns surrounding Green Acre becoming more and more interested.

Mrs. Greenleaf followed up the Summer School at Eliot this autumn with Sunday afternoon meetings for the study of "Gleanings."

Mason Remey and Horace Holley also have helped with many of the groups and new contacts are always being increased. The young people in this region have been very active and six of them have joined the Eliot community as the result of a half-year's efforts, in and around Green Acre.

A set of six books has been placed in the Portland Library for the use of interested residents.

New Hampshire:

Several people have been interested in the Bahá'í Faith in Manchester and Dover, and groups are forming. Six books have been placed in the libraries of each city for their use.

In Ashuelot, the large group has been broken up on the eve of forming an Assembly, by the death of three believers and five others have moved away. These were all believers. This leaves three believers now with two interested to study with them. The Feasts have been regularly held here among the believers for several years.

Vermont:

A public meeting was arranged in Newport at The Women's Club, and Lorol Schopflecher gave an interesting and well-received talk, and "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era" was sent to the Library for the use of those who had expressed interest, which was announced at the meeting. This is new territory.

Massachusetts:

An interesting Inter-Community Teaching Conference was held last autumn in Boston, Eliot and Worcester participating. A most helpful series of talks and discussions was followed by refreshments, and Roy Wilhelm spoke on "Making Contacts." In the evening Mme. Orlova spoke to a large audience in the Victoria Hotel, on "The Bahá'í Faith." This Conference was so enthusiastically received that Boston decided to continue with public meetings twice monthly.

Northfield:—Marion Holley of Visalia, California, spoke to a group of 30 from surrounding towns, after a picnic lunch held on the grounds of The Youth Hostel. The two in charge of The Hostel were deeply interested and have asked for another meeting there. Marion also spoke to a large group gathered at Monson, who greatly enjoyed her intelligent presentation of The Faith, and they have all kept up their interest.

Agnes Alexander made a brief visit to Boston, Springfield and Worcester, telling us of her experiences at Haifa.

Upton:—A new group of seven deeply interested people was recently formed here, and a meeting well attended was held for questioning. They decided to begin the study of “Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era” with “Promulgation of Universal Peace” for reading and reference.

Amherst:—A new territory is being opened. An interested friend arranged with the librarian of a large, beautiful Memorial Library, a true community center for all town activities and educational work, for Mountfort Mills to speak on “The World Crisis and Solutions.” The audience was most representative of this famous old college town. One in the audience was so interested that he wrote a long detailed report of Mr. Mills’ talk and sent it to the Amherst and Springfield newspapers. He ended his report by saying that of all the series of lectures lasting through the college year, he considered Mr. Mills’ talk the most excellent.

I have omitted our large annual Inter-State picnic gathering which is always held in June in the large, beautiful Forest Park near Springfield. In the spacious Mansion we meet, children, young people and older, to lunch together which provides a happy reunion of many members of the various Bahá’í Communities, groups and isolated believers, with all possible of the newly interested people, some well attracted, and friends from surrounding towns. This series was designed to confirm those who do not study themselves, on Administration and the Guardianship, and resulted in three believers forming a group in Three Rivers.

We have made out a new teaching plan for this region:—we have turned our attention to the radio, to prepare to arrange a series of talks that shall extend over a large area of New England, hoping to find a great many through one series of broadcasts, given in five different centers, as near the same time as possible, in order to form groups more quickly than formerly and more extensively. Winter weather prevents effective work all winter long here, so we are working to get this plan well on the air and groups formed before another autumn.

While considering the work and outlining our talks, an opportunity came surprisingly soon. The Springfield newspaper announced that a new station WSPR, a small station, had opened in Springfield, offering 15 minutes each morning for a devotional period. By the kind and complete cooperation of the announcer, the station was opened to the Bahá’í Faith. Then two hectic weeks preparing the six talks followed, using mostly the direct quotations of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, under the subject, “The Divine Remedy Brought by The Divine Physician, Bahá’u’lláh.” Each talk was linked with the preceding one by the announcer in place of music, and at the end an invitation was given by WSPR to those interested to send for copies of the talks. Several responses were received. Personal calls keep up their interest, and even further journeys will be made to meet others who sent for talks.

Encouraged by this success, we are now preparing a series of talks for the educational periods which The National Radio Corporation has announced in the newspapers recently,—to be ready as soon as possible to give these broadcasts from five central points of New England, that we may the better take advantage of the time:—A series consisting of a most impressive framework of Bahá’í information to hold “The Pearl of Great Price” is the ideal toward which we are striving, so the Message is given, the public will receive it with reverence, understanding and interest. We believe with the aid of Bahá’u’lláh, this will be done.

We have tried to plan wherever possible close, sustained follow-up work for all these groups.

Pasco:—Arrangements were started last summer for group teaching in Pasco, which will be carried forward extensively this summer. This is also a new area.

A new kind of search has been carried out by us in this district:—We have tried to gather home groups from the surrounding towns through friends, their relatives, and their newly interested inquirers, in two of our homes this past year, which give fine promise for another year.

Connecticut:—

A new representative group including men of high position has been formed in Hartford at the home of an early believer, and Mountford Mills is the speaker and teacher. We are anticipating great results from this successful beginning.

The work in Hartford has suffered greatly as we have not been able to find a teacher to settle there and teach, as we had planned to do.

Another Inter-Community Teaching Conference is planned for March 26th in New Haven, with basket supper, and two sessions,—one in the afternoon, one in the evening, so we may have the help of the men. Worcester, Springfield, and isolated believers as well as the groups are participating. A very fine program is ready, and in the evening Mrs. Bolles is going to tell us of her experiences in German Teaching work, and in Haiti. The fellowship at supper is most enjoyable for all and renews old friendships. We have work and pleasure, happily combined.

Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan

During the year now drawing to a close, the Regional Teaching Committee of the states of Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan has been able to render assistance to a number of communities just opening to the Bahá’í Cause.

Warrenville, III., a village of about 250 inhabitants in the Fox River Valley, has seen several interested souls, through whom two well attended public meetings were arranged. The responsive friends are now attending study classes in nearby Batavia and Aurora.

Batavia, Ill., a town of 5000 inhabitants, has one declared Bahá’í. This friend has arranged public meetings and weekly study classes, which are attracting the key men and women of the community.

Aurora, Ill., another city in the Fox River Valley has two Bahá’ís. No public meetings have been held as yet, but weekly study classes are in progress and these are attracting a small but fine group of people. Yorkville, Ill., has two believers, this is a small village, also in Wheaton, Ill., there is one believer. No public meetings have been held in these two towns, but these friends meet with the Batavia and Aurora Bahá’ís, they also have meetings in their homes, and together they are doing splendid inter-group work which shows promise of developing real Bahá’í centers.

In Waukegan, Ill., a group of eight men and women have been attending a weekly study class during the winter months, and all have signified their desire for membership as full-fledged Bahá’ís as soon as they have reached the proper stage of development.

Maywood, Ill., Group and Grand Rapids, Michigan Group, as you know have been progressing beautifully until now they are ready for real Spiritual Assembly Life. The Committee has given assistance to both groups on various occasions.

The North Shore communities of Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee have been furnished with speakers for nearly all Sunday public meetings.

Madison, Wis., group has been busy and energetic all winter. Teachers have been sent monthly to assist and many people have been deeply attracted to the Cause.

Peoria, Ill., Milwaukee, Wis., have opened up new towns as the Assembly questionnaires do not doubt will convey to your committee, Chicago, Ill., although not having opened up new territory, continued work in Oak Park this year with most satisfactory results.

The Committee will not report on local Assembly activities as the questionnaires sent directly to each Assembly will completely cover work done in each instance.

The Committee is happy indeed to have been permitted to serve in this work of opening new territory and assisting those communities already established, and wishes to express its deep appreciation of the privilege.

At the first meeting of the Regional Teaching Committee, which met at the home of Mrs. Mildred Motahedeh, plans were formulated for carrying out the teaching program of the National Spiritual Assembly.

It was suggested that each member of the Regional Committee bring to the attention of the Local Spiritual Assemblies the result of our consultation and ask their cooperation in helping to carry out the plan. The plan was brought to the attention of the Spiritual Assemblies of Montclair, Newark, Jersey City and Teaneck, N. J.

All of the Assemblies decided that the best way they could help in the teaching work this year was to concentrate on plans they had already developed and also that if, during the year, anyone was free to do additional work it would be brought to the attention of the Regional Member of New Jersey.

One of the friends from the Jersey City Assembly, Mr. Bernard B. Gottlieb, took charge of a class held at Elizabeth, New Jersey, and the work here has been carried on with a number of people attending these classes about once every two or three weeks.

Mr. Gottlieb was also assigned to work with two friends in Paterson, N. J., Mr. James Morten and Mr. Malson and plans were arranged to carry on a series of classes at one of the hotels. This work was finally started during the first part of March and is coming along very nicely.

At Redbank, N. J., a class has been formed and Mr. Archie Tichenor took charge of this class and several friends there are becoming actively interested in the work.

At Atlantic City, N. J., two or three friends in cooperation with Mr. William De Forge have been holding a class meeting about once a month and this work is still active.

At Colonia, N. J., a class has been held at the home of Mrs. Pattison. Miss Esther Foster and Mrs. Louise Talbot have been cooperating with Mrs. Pattison and Mrs. Olivia Kelsey has given several public talks to this group and good newspaper publicity was given to these meetings. This group is active and is continuing their work.

A class was started at the home of Mrs. Hoar, at Montclair, N. J., and one or two meetings have been held there. Mr. Philip Sprague of New York spoke.
Tentative plans were formulated to begin a series of lectures at Ridge-wood, N. J., under the supervision of Mr. Charles Krug and the committee hopes to carry these plans out in the very near future.

The teachers from the Spiritual Assembly at Teaneck, carried on Fireside Groups in Bogota, N. J., Englewood, N. J., and Teaneck, N. J.

All of the friends in these different groups have cooperated enthusiastically in this work and while the committee is not able to report the possible formation of any new Assemblies this year, the friends as well as the committee, feel that the work will result in several new groups and possible formation of Assemblies during the coming year.

Baha'i literature for all of these meetings has been supplied by different groups and members cooperating in the teaching work.

INTER-AMERICAN TEACHING

The written instructions of our Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, have inaugurated a new chapter of Inter-America Committee work. A definite program has been outlined and it is hoped that all the believers will read carefully the following quotations from letters received during the past Winter from the Guardian and thus become informed of Shoghi Effendi's earnest desires and hope that the friends cooperate with the program and help to carry forward his exact instructions.

November 18, 1937

"The Guardian hopes that the National Spiritual Assembly has given careful consideration relative to the various aspects of the teaching plan, especially the question of Baha'i publications in Spanish which is, of course, of paramount importance. It is quite indispensable to have a sufficient quantity of literature in Spanish if the friends wish to effectively teach in South American states. The ways and means for meeting this problem the Guardian prefers to leave to the discretion of Inter-America Committee, working under the close supervision and guidance of the National Spiritual Assembly. He hopes that a satisfactory decision will be soon reached in this matter.

December 19, 1937

"The matter of Spanish Baha'i publications is, indeed, most vital, as the teaching work in South and Central America cannot possibly advance until there is a sufficient supply of books and pamphlets available for distribution among the Spanish speaking masses throughout that continent.

"It is also most important that those who undertake to teach in South America should have a sufficient knowledge of Spanish, so that they may be able to reach the masses, and not merely a few individuals.

"The National Spiritual Assembly in conjunction with the Inter-America Committee must endeavor to carry out these two points, preliminary to any extensive teaching campaign throughout Latin America. The ground should first be carefully prepared, so that the revenues which the friends are ready to expend for the furtherance of the teaching work in that continent may yield the best and maximum result."
Rosell, mother gave her talk stopping after every sentence or two to enable Dr. Rosell to translate. He had already written out a complete translation into Spanish of mother's paper, so he was able to interpret rapidly. It was a distinguished company of men and women, engineers, business men, naval and military officers, and their wives, and also a number of young men and girls. After mother had finished, I gave my talk on the Temple which Dr. Rosell translated almost ex-temporaneously, and we passed around pictures of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Temple. The meeting was then thrown open for questions. A naval captain, relative of the Garcia Rosells, inquired about the type of services to be held in the Temple. He was pleased to hear that there was no clergy in the Bahá’í Temple, as you have already told us, he said, we must know with our own understanding and not by the understanding of any in the world. There were questions concerning immortality and whether the Bahá’ís belived in reincarnation. One young man wanted to know the Bahá’í definition of religion. Dr. Portal, a physician who had lived twenty years in Cerro de Pasco, remarked to me that these principles were very good, very important. There seemed to be a considerable amount of interest aroused as people began to discuss our answers, more questions were asked and the engineers present were especially interested in the construction of the Temple. A young lieutenant and his wife were especially interested to find out more about these teachings, so I gave them a copy of Esselmont. We had brought only a half a dozen copies with us which were distributed in no time, but we said if they would come back the next Saturday, we would have more books and would tell them more. A young man studying to be a lawyer said that absolutely nothing was known about this in Peru. He suggested that I write an article about it for the newspaper. I told him that I had written one, sent it to the leading newspaper but had received no answer. He said there were many fanatical and conservative people here and suggested that if my article were translated into Spanish, some newspaper would publish it. I have complete confidence in Dr. Ovidio Garcia Rosell. We had been somewhat anxious about offending anyone in this very Catholic country, but no one criticized or attempted to argue with us on any point. This was largely due to Sra. Garcia Rosell’s wisdom in selecting the audience. She said there were few liberal people in Lima, but she would try to secure the most receptive ones, and we found them to be intelligent, charming and responsive. All thanked us for our efforts and many said they would be interested and grateful if we could give them more of our time. Sra. Garcia Rosell promised to advise them of the next meeting. We were delighted that our audience had been entirely Peruvians and if it were not for the Rosells we would have met only Americans and English in Lima. If a Bahá’í teacher could come here with a knowledge of Spanish, a great work could be done. We are hoping Mrs. Stewart can come soon. There is also a crying need for more Spanish translations of Bahá’í literature. We have only the Esselmont book so far but hope to get Shoghi Effendi’s, ‘World Religion’ translated and printed here this summer.

“Another meeting was held on Saturday, July 24th, at the Garcia Rosell home. Again the group was comprised of about twenty people, some the same as in the first audience and other new ones. Mother read a paper which was a book review of ‘Security for a Failing World,’ which Dr. Rosell translated sentence by sentence as she went along. Then I read a paper on ‘Science and Religion’ in Spanish. We gave away five more Esselmonts and proposed the formation of a study group to take up ‘Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era’ chapter by chapter. A professor of economics from San Marcos University said he would read Bahá’u’lláh’s teachings on the subject of economics with much interest. Sra. Rosell promised to carry on after we left.”

Bahía

Also an act of selfless devotion was given to the Bahá’í Faith, by Miss Eve Nicklin of New Castle, Penn., who set sail for Brazil intending to make it her home permanently and to assist Miss Leonora Holsapple in carrying out the work in Bahía. Immediately upon her arrival, she began studying Portuguese and teaching kindergarten, thus becoming self-supporting. Just as she was establishing herself and preparing to teach the Cause, which was the purpose in giving up both her home and her profession, the Brazilian government announced that all persons not resident two years in Brazil must leave. Thus was her career abruptly ended, and the return journey taken with the knowledge that her old affiliations were no more. Nevertheless, this intrepid soul immediately started a new life by serving and teaching in West Virginia at Way- side Farm in Parkersburg. Here she combined teaching in a pioneer state, with earning her living, and is ready to go to a foreign country whenever another opportunity offers.

Mexico

More news comes from Mexico through Miss Beatrice Irwin, our brilliant teacher:

“Through the medium of illustrated news articles, four Bahá’í Forums held at the International Club (April and May last), a three weeks’ window exhibit of Bahá’í literature at Miraachi’s, also an address and world broadcast on the Bahá’í Temple, given before 1,000, at Brotherhood Festival, Institute of Impenonal Life, Mexico City on July 1, 1937, it was possible not only to attract hundreds of souls to the Faith, but also to establish a more serious study of the Bahá’í teachings among a few progressed souls. In this connection some recent comments may be of interest. Dr. Gonzalé Z. Burns, Director of the ‘Institute for Impenonal Life’ writes: ‘We are very glad to know of the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh and the big principles they embody,’ Senora Paladino writes: ‘I like the “Cleaneings” best of those books I have studied. This is really a sublime Revelation, and claims my deepest respect,’ Senora Rodriguez of the International Club says: ‘Thank you for the receipt of recent literature.’ The Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Masonic Library says: ‘I am eager to improve my English, so that I might be able to translate Abd-bal-Bahá’s “Propulagation of Peace.”’

“These persons number among the five regular subscribers to World Order resident in Mexico City, and are doubtless promoting knowledge of Bahá’u’lláh’s Teaching within the wide sphere of the various activities.”

Mrs. Frances Stewart, Secretary of the Inter-America Committee, sent a most interesting account of her experiences in taking the Bahá’í Message to Mexico last summer, which was published in full in Bahá’í News for April, 1938.

The result of this visit has been the founding of the first Latin-American Assembly. The election of officers took place under the direction of our National Spiritual Assembly and on April 21st the following offices were voted upon: Signor Pedro Espinosa, Chairman; Signorcita Maria del Refugio Ochoa, Vice-chairman; Signor Andres Basurto, Secretary; Signorina Maria Luisa B de Jurado, Corresponding Secretary; and Signorina Zenaida Jurado, Treasurer.
A signal victory for the Seven Year plan is thus gained. Shoghi Effendi in his plea to the believers at the 1936 Convention spoke of the progress of the faith in both North and South America. During the remaining years of that Plan they are to advance in knowledge of the Baha’i Faith together. The unity of the Guardian’s expression must be made our own. Man-made boundaries have naught to do with the Divine Plan. The Oneness of mankind must become our pattern and he who advances along this path, fully cognizant of Shoghi Effendi’s wishes, will find sacrifice the gateway to spiritual achievement.

In the Tablet to the Americas, Baha’u’llah says: “O people, avail yourselves of the Day of God. Verily it is better for you to meet Him in this Day than in any upon which the sun rises, were you of those who know!”

“THAT RARIFIED ATMOSPHERE OF SELFLESSNESS AND DETACHMENT”

To the American Bahá’í Community.
Beloved friends:

Let us consider together dispassionately but devotedly an aspect of our Bahá’í life which over a period of years has by Shoghi Effendi been repeatedly emphasized.

“Again I earnestly appeal to every one of you, and renew my only request with all the ardor of my conviction,” he wrote more than ten years ago, “to make, before and during the coming Convention, yet another effort, this time more spontaneous and selfless than before, and endeavor to approach your task—the election of your delegates, as well as your national and local representatives—with that purity of spirit that can alone obtain our beloved’s most cherished desire. Let us recall His explicit and often-repeated assurance that every Assembly elected in that rarified atmosphere of selflessness and detachment is, in truth, appointed of God, that its verdict is truly inspired, and that one and all should submit to its decision unrestrainedly and with cheerfulness.”

Later the Guardian employed this significant phrase: “the elector is called upon to vote for none but those whom prayer and reflection have inspired him to uphold.”

These appeals, these instructions, reveal the spiritual character of the Bahá’í community in its sacred effort to form the nucleus and trace the pattern of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh. While our methods resemble those by which political bodies are elected and maintained, the spirit and intention is utterly different. Every individual believer is expected to arise to a higher realm in his or her passionate devotion to the Faith in these, its days of inanity and tender growth.

Whenever, therefore, the element of electioneering enters the life of the Bahá’í community, its effect is prostrating and harmful until by their loyalty and their courage the believers, with the aid of their administrative institutions, overcome such a negative condition through the positive force of unity and understanding. Aside from the consideration that electioneering involves denial of the elector’s right, aside also from the undeniable fact that it seeks influence unduly for or against individuals in the election, the most important and grievous aspect of the matter is that it involves the integrity of the Bahá’í institution itself. Nothing could be more serious in this Formative Period than efforts to transform the character of the organic Bahá’í institutions by surrounding them with a political atmosphere. The task they are called upon to perform cannot be accomplished without the sustaining and guiding power of the Holy Spirit.

The present hour in human history is too crucial, the future too dark, for the realization of our collective hopes by any but spiritual intentions.

Indeed, we have likewise these warning words of Shoghi Effendi to point out the sad result of failure to attain the Bahá’í goal: “Should such a representative and responsible body fail to realize this fundamental requisite for all successful achievement, the whole structure is sure to crumble, and the Great Plan of the Future, as unfolded by the Master’s Will and Testament, will be rudely disturbed and grievously delayed.”

At all times, the Bahá’í community stands between the two opposed possibilities of glorious success and lamentable failure. We are not passengers on a ship being passively borne to the goal, but responsible workers, and the pure intention and energetic loyalty of the whole community is required if either local or National Assemblies are to play their part.

That a real deepening of spiritual life is required at this time was revealed to us all by the Guardian’s cablegram to the Convention, in which he said: “... summoning (to) their aid vitalizing influence prayers meditations which Author their Faith Himself revealed, let them, delegates, visitors alike, draw nigh unto Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw nigh unto them.”

But the subject of electioneering methods is itself but one aspect of the larger problem involved in the attitude which makes for rumor and suspicion within a community consecrated to truth and responsible decision. If that attitude can be removed by spiritual means, the question of electioneering will never arise. The unique importance of prayer and meditation lies in its power to make the soul firm and steadfast, immune to negative suggestion in any form. No administrative action in the form of penalty and punishment can serve as substitute for that immunity within the body of the believers themselves.

Therefore the National Spiritual Assembly, “whose inescapable responsibility is to guard the integrity... of the entire community,” as Shoghi Effendi stated in his letter of January 30, 1938, wishes to emphasize the spiritual nature and origin of true integrity, and make appeal for a more conscious and widespread realization of what citizenship in the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh means. The power to act through Bahá’í institutions does not consist of the authority vested in those institutions, but of the general power of unity existing among the entire community of believers. That unity is the ultimate source of achievement in all the affairs of the Bahá’í Faith.

If there be any who have offended in the past, let them repent in prayer to Bahá’u’lláh. Let them learn to employ their God-given opportunities to build and not to destroy, to share truth and not to instigate rumors or to seek to conceal personal motives behind a mask of fine words.

The Guardian’s cablegram, quoted above, carries both assurance and warning to every American Bahá’í. His words are to be pondered and cherished in the depths of the heart; and this communication from the National Spiritual Assembly is intended solely as a reminder to all individuals and not made a fresh occasion for rumors concerning personalities.

Yours faithfully,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.
EFFORT IN CONTINUITY

In this issue of Baha'i News is presented the National Committees appointed for the year beginning July 1. The friends, and particularly the local Assemblies, are requested to acquaint themselves with the wide range of activities which the various Committees include, and take all possible steps toward useful contact and cooperation.

The year is all too brief in which to accomplish the truly vital and difficult tasks already set under the previous announcements reporting the Temple and Teaching plans.

Likewise is this issue begins a new and important department entitled "The Charter of the New World Order" consisting of excerpts from the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Baha and the Guardian's written and authoritative interpretation of the Will. Study and meditation upon these words will deepen our conception of the universal character of the Faith and purify our understanding of and service to a Revelation blending a spiritual and a social Teaching. The full capacity of the Baha'i community will attain the field of action when we succeed in reconciling within ourselves and among ourselves these two aspects of life in the New Age, conjured after so long a period of historical separation.

The Guardian's explanation of two important current questions raised by the National Spiritual Assembly, already reported to the local Assemblies in the Bulletin, is also reprinted here for the information of all believers.

Absence from local communities on account of attendance at the Summer Schools and other reasons has made the summer months a time of somewhat slackened effort, even though devoted to intensive planning for the year's work. If the community is fewer in numbers at this time, that does not mean relaxation of effort by those who remain. It is effort in continuity, conscious of the difficult tasks to be performed, that alone can produce the concentration of will able to accomplish otherwise impossible results. Let us also be on our guard lest our attention become directed to minor developments during the year, losing sight of the essential aims carefully explained in the first two issues of Baha'i News published since the Convention. Those two statements, dealing first with the Annual Budget and the Temple construction plan, and second with details of teaching, must be kept present in consciousness throughout the year. Memory is the foundation of spiritual progress and social achievement.

The Guardian, fully aware of the Divine powers always awaiting to assist the efforts of unity and pure attention, has plainly stated over a period of years his expectations with respect to the American Bahá'i community. He knows what can be accomplished when the requisite spiritual conditions have been prepared.

The most unassuming individual and the most unassuming local community may well surpass all and set a new and higher standard of action for all their co-workers. The National Spiritual Assembly will reinforce with all possible resources and power the efforts of the friends. Let us humbly seek to be as flowers of fragrance or fruit of attainment upon the Tree of Life.

Yours faithfully,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

1. To the National Spiritual Assembly.

"The Guardian has read very carefully the letters your Assembly has received from the Spiritual Assemblies of Urbana and Chicago reporting the criticisms that have been advanced by Rev. John Elder, a missionary from Iran. While he is certain that such attacks from Church missionaries are destined to increase in number and force in the future, he feels that for the present they do not constitute a challenge so grave and widespread as to justify any strong action by your Assembly. Later on, when the very progress of the Cause on the one hand, and the corresponding decline in ecclesiastical organizations on the other, will inevitably incite Christian ecclesiastical leaders to vehemently oppose and undermine the Faith, the believers will then have a real chance to defend and vindicate the Cause. Under present conditions it would be inadvisable for the American Community to give such issues too much prominence."

"It would, however, be very helpful for the friends to know that the question which the above-mentioned missionary has raised in connection with the marriage of Baha'u'llah and the provisions in the 'Aqdas' regarding the institution of marriage have been explained by 'Abdu'l-Baha in a Tablet which the Guardian hopes to have translated and published in conjunction with all the other statements in the Bulletin and the new department entitled 'The Charter of the New World Order.'" with the 'Agdas'. Moreover, as regards Bahá'u'lláh's marriage, it should be noted that His three marriages were all contracted before He revealed His Book of Laws, and even before His declaration in Baghdad, at a time when Bahá'i marriage laws had not yet been made known, and the Revelation not yet disclosed."

"As regards those Persian or Oriental non-believers who become genuinely interested in the Cause in America, they can be admitted to study classes, but every care should be taken by the Assemblies to fully test their sincerity and the genuineness of their desire to join the Community before they are given the necessary facilities that will enable them eventually to be regarded as voting members of the Faith."—May 25, 1938.

2. To Individual Believers (published with the Guardian's consent).

"You have asked whether our prayers go beyond Bahá'u'lláh; it all depends whether we pray to Him directly or through Him to God. We may do both, and also can pray directly to God, but our prayers would certainly be more effective and illuminating if they are addressed to Him through His Manifestation Bahá'u'lláh. "Under no circumstances, however, can we, while repeating the prayers, insert the name Bahá'u'lláh where the word 'God' is used. This would be tantamount to blasphemy."—October 14, 1937, to A. W. Bodmer.

"You have asked as to what point in man's evolution he becomes conscious of self. This consciousness of self in man is a gradual process, and does not start at a definite point. It grows in him in this world and continues to do so in the future spiritual world. "Man can certainly recall past experiences in his evolution, and even when his soul leaves this world it will still remember the past. "The Guardian wishes me to answer you that he sees no objection to the friends coming together for meditation and prayer. Such a communion helps in fostering fellowship among the believers and as such is highly commendable.

"With reference to psychic phenomena referred to in your letter; these, in most cases, are an indication of a deep psychological disturbance. The friends should avoid as much as possible giving undue consideration to such matters."—November 20, 1937, to Amelie Willard Bodmer.

"The believers ought to give the Message even to those who do not seem ready for it, because they can never judge the real extent to which the Word of God can influence the hearts or minds of the people, even those who appear to lack any power of receptivity to the teachings."—January 14, 1938, to Amelie Willard Bodmer.

"THE CHARTER OF THE NEW WORLD ORDER"

"The creative energies released by the Law of Bahá'u'lláh, permeating and evolving within the mind of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, have, by their very impact and close interaction, given birth to an Instrument which may be viewed as the Charter of the New World Order which is at once the glory and the promise of this most great Dispensation."—Shoghi Effendi.

In order to promote a more direct and intimate spiritual association with the provisions of the Master's Will and Testament on the part of the American Bahá'í Community, the National Spiritual Assembly will publish a series of excerpts from the Will, together with selections from the interpretive writings of the Guardian. The friends are urged to give deep thought to this new department in Bahá'í News.

THE GUARDIANSHIP

"Divorced from the institution of the Guardianship the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh would be mutilated and permanently deprived of that hereditary principle which, as 'Abdu'l-Bahá has written, has been invariably upheld by the Law of God. 'In all the Divine Dispensations,' He states, in a Tablet addressed to a follower of the Faith in Persia, 'the eldest son hath been given extraordinary distinctions. Even the station of prophethood hath been his birthright.' Without such an institution the integrity of the Faith would be imperilled, and the stability of the entire fabric would be gravely endangered. Its prestige would suffer, the means required to enable it to take a long, an uninterrupted view over a series of generations would be completely lacking, and the necessary guidance to define the sphere of the legislative action of its elected representatives would be totally withdrawn."—Shoghi Effendi.

"O my loving friends! After the passing away of this wronged one, it is incumbent upon the Aghsán (Branches), the Afán (Twigs) of the Sacred Lote-Tree, the Hands (pillars) of the Cause of God and the loved ones of the Abhá Beauty to turn unto Shoghi Effendi—the youthful branch branched from the 'Aqdas.'"—Shoghi Effendi.
from the two hallowed and sacred Lote-Trees and the fruit grown from the union of the two offshoots of the Tree of Holiness,—as he is the sign of God, the chosen branch, the guardian of the Cause of God, he unto whom all the Aghsan, the Afnián, the Hands of the Cause of God and His loved ones must turn. He is the expounder of the words of God and after him will succeed the first-born of his lineal descendants.

"The sacred and youthful branch, the guardian of the Cause of God, as well as the Universal House of Justice, to be universally elected and established, are both under the care and protection of the Abhá Beauty, under the shelter and unerring guidance of His Holiness, the Exalted One (may my life be offered up for them both). Whatevers they decide is of God. Whoso obeyeth him not, neither obeyeth them, hath not obeyed God; whoso rebelleth against him and against them hath rebelled against God; whoso opposeth him hath opposed God; whoso contendeth with them hath contended with God; whoso disputeth with him hath disputed with God; whoso denieth him hath denied God; whoso disbelieveth in him hath disbelieved in God; whoso deviateth, separateth himself and turned aside from him hath deviated, separated himself and turned aside from God."—'ABDU'L-BAHÁ.

"No Guardian of the Faith, I feel it my solemn duty to place on record, can ever claim to be the perfect exemplar of the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh or the stainless mirror that reflects His light. Though overshadowed by the unailing, the unerring protection of Bahá'u'lláh and of the Báb, and however much he may share with 'Abdu'll-Bahá the right and obligation to interpret the Bahá'í teachings, he remains essentially human, and cannot, if he wishes to remain faithful to his trust, arrogate to himself, under any pretense whatsoever, the rights, the privileges, and prerogatives which Bahá'u'lláh has chosen to confer upon His Son. In the light of this truth, to pray to the Guardian of the Faith, to address him as lord and master, to designate him as his holiness, to seek his benediction, to celebrate his birthday, or to commemorate any event associated with his life would be tantamount to a departure from those established truths that are enshrined within our beloved Faith.'

"'He is the Interpreter of the Word of God.' 'Abdu'l-Bahá, referring to the functions of the Guardian of the Faith, asserts, using in His Will the very term which He Himself had chosen when relating the argument of the Covenant-breakers who had challenged His right to interpret the utterances of Bahá'u'lláh. 'After him,' He adds, 'will succeed the first-born of His lineal descendants.' 'The mighty stronghold,' He further explains, 'shall remain impregnable and safe through obedience to Him who is the Guardian of the Cause of God.' 'It is incumbent upon the members of the House of Justice, upon all the Aghsan, the Afnián, the Hands of the Cause of God, to show their obedience, submissiveness and subordination unto the Guardian of the Cause of God.'”—SHOGHI EFFENDI.

"O ye the faithful loved ones of 'Abdu'l-Bahá! It is incumbent upon you to take the greatest care of Shoghi Effendi, the twig that hath branched from the fruit given forth by the two hallowed and Divine Lote-Trees, that no dust of despondency and sorrow may stain his radiant nature, that day by day he may wax greater in happiness, in joy and spirituality, and may grow to become even as a fruitful tree. . . The Glory of Glories rest upon you."—'ABDU'L-BAHÁ.

FOR CONSULTATION
The following questions are sug­gested by the National Assembly for consultation at Nineteen Day Feasts, in accordance with the announcement published in BAHÁ'Í NEWS a few months ago.
Does the Assembly make certain that the sick and distressed among the be­lievers are given comfort and solace?
Has the Assembly given due atten­tion to the vital importance of the Seven Year Plan and discussed it fre­quently with the community?
Are the Assembly Minutes and Financial Records carefully main­tained?

Baha'i Summer School in Australia
From Haifa News Letter
The first Bahá'í Summer School in Australia was held at "Bolton Place," Yerrinbool, N. S. W., at the kind in­vitation of Drs. Stanley and Mariette Bolton. It was with the greatest joy that the sessions were opened on Sun­day, January 9, 1938. The chairman, Dr. Stanley Bolton asked Mr. and Mrs.
Hyde Dunn, Australian pioneers, to open with prayers, after which he welcomed all friends assembled.

The following greetings were read and joyously received: “Convey Summer School attendants hearty congratulations loving fervent prayers success deliberations.—SHOGHIL.”

“Greetings and love to all assembled at first Bahá’í Summer School. May all your deliberations be under the guidance of the Kingdom of Abhá.—Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Dunn.”

Greetings were also conveyed to the School by Mrs. Maysie Almond of Adelaide, S. A., and Miss Greta Lampri of Hobart, Tasmania, and many others. These two souls had traveled hundreds of miles to be present at the first Summer School. These two ladies had corresponded for the past several years and had never met until this precious time. Both spoke of the joy in being able to be present with the other friends to study this great Cause of Bahá’ulláh. The meeting then closed with prayer.

On Sunday afternoon, January 9, all the friends, residents of the local community and visitors afar, gathered at the Yerrinbool Public Hall to attend a lecture given by Mrs. L. Gapp of Sydney, the subject being “Unity.” The chairman, Dr. Mariette Bolton, before introducing the speaker, complimented the local residents of Yerrinbool, for having completed their hall to correspond with opening of the Bahá’í Summer School. The hall was built by the local community of combined volunteer labor. She extended to them a Bahá’í welcome and announced that the lecture was given under the auspices of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Australia and New Zealand. Mrs. L. Gapp most ably spoke on “Unity,” and being a delegate to the Pan Pacific Conference at Vancouver, Canada, gave a word description of her impressions received while journeying through Canada and the United States. During her trip across the continent, she contacted numerous Bahá’í communities and was received with love and harmony. Mrs. Gapp informed the friends that she wished to declare her belief in the Manifestation and intended studying the Teachings so as to help the Cause of Bahá’ulláh. After the lecture, Bahá’í literature was distributed to all present, and then all assembled outside the hall for a photograph to be taken.

Commencing on Monday morning and continuing for two weeks, the program arranged by the Yerrinbool Bahá’í Summer School Committee was followed. Those who had been allotted subjects and unable to attend, most willingly compiled their lectures on paper and forwarded them to the School to be read. The sessions were opened each morning at 9:30 with prayers for fifteen minutes and then the subjects followed for two hours, each speaker taking an hour on the selected subject. At the commencement on Monday morning, four dear souls of the local community came to “Bol­ton Place” and expressed a desire to learn of the Teachings.

On Friday evening, January 14, the local community of Yerrinbool held a social evening in order to raise funds for their hall. To this function the Bahá’ís were invited and attended, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. Several of the local community mentioned that this time of the year is their busy season with their fruit, but that they would like to be able to attend some of our sessions but could not do so during the daytime. They then suggested that if we cared to hold a night session as well as our day session, they would attend and that they would grant us the use of their hall. This was carried out the following night when Dr. Mariette Bolton gave them a talk on Bahá’í history, after which community singing was enjoyed by all.

On Sunday morning, January 16, the regular fortnightly Yerrinbool Bahá’í Sunday School was held at “Bolton Place,” at which time the visiting Bahá’ís spoke to the children. On Sunday afternoon, a round table talk and discussion was enjoyed and then followed by singing.

On Monday, January 17, we commenced the studying of the Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, after which Mrs. Hyde Dunn spoke to us on Bahá’í Administration. In the afternoon, the Bahá’ís were invited to the home of a local resident where all spent a pleasant time talking of the Teachings and completed the afternoon by saying healing prayers for the host.

On Tuesday, January 18, the Bahá’ís journeyed by motor car to Canberra, the Capital of Australia, which is 120 miles from Yerrinbool. Upon entering Canberra, the prayers “upon entering a city” were recited, after which the Greatest Name was said 95 times.

On Wednesday, January 19, after two hour session, a picnic was given to all the children of the local community, at which 23 children were present, all having a happy time. The Feast was then conducted and in the evening all journeyed 12 miles to Bowral, at the invitation of an investigator. A most pleasant hour was spent in spreading the Teachings.

ACTIVITIES IN IRAN

From Haifa News Letter

In our News Letter of March, 1938, we referred to the services of Agha Mowhebat’ulláh Há’í, in Iran. It will be remembered that a group of seven young Bahá’ís, including Agha Há’í himself, obtained permission, last year, from our beloved Guardian to travel to Haifa. The Government authorities in Tihraín having refused to grant passports to these believers, the latter decided to make it possible for one of them to go on a teaching tour in Iran. In this noble and praiseworthy way they turned their disappointment into a new determination. Thus in compensation for their profound sadness in being deprived of their visit to Haifa, there sprang in their hearts a new vision—the vision of visiting fellow-believers in distant and lonely spots of the land, revitalizing their spirits in the Faith and conveying the Message to souls thirsting for heavenly Truth. The National Spiritual Assembly of Iran approved of their plan and appointed Agha Há’í to go on a teaching tour for seven months.

Our beloved Guardian has recently received a detailed account of the successful teaching tour undertaken by this faithful and devoted believer. The gist of this account is as follows:

Agha Há’í visited 27 towns and villages, some of the latter being in remote and infrequent localities. In all these places, he met the believers, revived their spirits, organized their activities and established Spiritual Assemblies where none existed before.

The Bahá’í population of these villages varies from twenty-five to as many as 1,450 in a single village. It is noteworthy that in two villages near Abadeh, non-believers refer their difficulties and disputes to the Spiritual Assembly of the believers, and beg the latter to act as a court of justice for them. The said Spiritual Assembly also helps the poor and the needy non-believers from its own charity funds.

The last two Bahá’í News Letters of the National Spiritual Assembly of Iran are replete with glad-tidings about the growth and development of Bahá’í institutions. We gather that according to instructions given by our beloved Guardian a Central Bahá’í Youth Committee has been organized. The duties of this Committee are as follows:

1. To be informed of the activities of Bahá’í Youth throughout Iran.
2. To be in communication with Local Bahá'í Youth Committees appointed by the Bahá'í Spiritual Assemblies.

3. To translate into Persian, foreign news and subject matter that is of interest to the Bahá'í Youth and an encouragement to them to serve the Faith.

4. To suggest useful projects for the progress and upliftment of the Bahá'í Faith in Iran.

In accordance with the instructions given by our beloved Guardian, a “Bahá'í World” Committee has been formed in Tehran for the purpose of collecting the necessary materials—such as appropriate articles and photographs—and sending them to the Editorial Committee, in America, of this very valuable biennial Bahá'í publication.

The Spiritual Assembly of Tehran is actively engaged in devising proper means and methods of inculcating in individual believers the desire and enthusiasm for spreading the Message. At the same time trained Bahá'í teachers are fearlessly promulgating their Faith throughout the breadth and the length of the country.

We learn that the International Symposium of the Bahá'í Youth of Tehran was held in that city with great success. A special program previously approved by the Spiritual Assembly was carried out in an atmosphere of love and spirituality.

The Nineteen Day Feasts are celebrated regularly by the friends.

We have received a list of 58 resolutions that were passed by the Bahá'í Youth Groups of Iran when the International Symposium was held on the 25 of February, 1938. The following are some of the most outstanding resolutions:

1. To correspond with the Bahá'í youth throughout the world.
2. To edit a monthly magazine and call it “The Bahá'í Youth Magazine.”
3. To establish a Translation Board for the purpose of translating Bahá'í sacred literature from Persian into foreign tongues and vice-versa.
4. To enlarge the field of promulgating the Bahá'í Faith by publishing appropriate articles in daily newspapers.
5. To prepare a registration card giving full information about every individual believer.
6. To appoint a special census committee for the Bahá'í Youth.
7. To centralize in various localities Bahá'í books and literature so that beginners in the Faith may benefit thereby.
8. To establish Bahá'í reading rooms and libraries.
9. To collect the writings and the poems of the early believers.
10. To inculcate in the minds of every individual believer the independence of the Bahá'í Faith from all other faiths.
11. To prepare and edit a Persian “Bahá'í World,” concerning Bahá’í activities in Iran.
12. To organize a Bahá'í Summer School.
13. To send more Bahá'í teachers throughout Iran.
14. To appoint a committee for the purpose of finding employment for those believers, if any, who are without work.
15. To collect funds in order to build a Bahá'í Hospital in Tehran.
16. To organize classes for the purpose of training Bahá'í teachers.
17. To acquaint the Bahá'í Youth with the wonderful plan of World Order according to the Teachings of Bahá'ulláh.
18. To familiarize the believers with the Bahá'í Calendar.
19. To organize an Esperanto Class.

Reports of the teaching work through Southern India from October 15, 1937—when I arrived in Bombay, the short visits and lectures in Bombay, Surat, Poona, the trip across the continent of India from Bombay to Calcutta and across the sea of Bengal to Burma, and the work in Burma have been written. Also a report was given of the work in Calcutta, December 3-12 at the Second Indian Cultural Conference and the First Convention of Religions held in Calcutta. Likewise the work of the Bahá'ís of Calcutta, the press articles and the public lectures.

CALCUTTA

However, I should like to add another word about Calcutta. There is a reference to Bengal in the Tablet which 'Abdu’l-Bahá wrote to Mr. Pritam Singh which is very encouraging—I cannot quote it and there is not time to send and get it before I mail this, but it was to the effect that spreading the Cause in Bengal will help in spreading the Cause all over India. It was beautifully expressed, in a couplet, which translated reads:

The Indian nightingales will all break forth into sweet songs.

By the Iranian sweet which will be carried to Bengal.

I should like to emphasize what great opportunities come in presenting the Bahá'í Faith in great congresses. The call is raised to thousands, the newspapers carry the resume of the lectures and there are innumerable opportunities to speak individually with people of capacity, the thinkers of India; for it is usually the progressive, liberal souls, those determined to help make a better world, who go to such congresses.

A great scholar, Professor M. H. Hidayat Hosain of the Royal Asiatic Society Library of Calcutta, a leading Orientalist of the world, has written about Qurruatu'-'Ayn. Perhaps he is one of the first great Indian scholars to write about the Faith. He said that he had met the fine Iranian Bahá’í teacher, Ibn Asdaq, who came to India about 1902 or-03. “He was so charming, so spiritual, so cultured!” said Professor Hosain, “and we read the Iqán together in Persian!” This very sentence throws an illuminating light to us to-day, on the qualities that a Bahá’í teacher should possess. We must all be Bahá’í teachers to-day, and the great Scholars of this and the coming generation will be quickened or left unawakened perhaps by the way we present the cause to them.

Another point, if some Bahá’ís from Iran, Bahá’ís of capacity, would give up their businesses in Iran and come and settle in Southern India and build up their businesses in all the different cities of the South here, it might advance the Cause tremendously in these critical days. People in our United States have given up their businesses to move and settle in other States. It is an important goal. There is a great cultural affinity between Iran and India, Iranians could do a glorious work here.

The Bahá’í Cause has made remarkable strides in Calcutta since I visited that city in 1930. They have a good hall, fine meetings and the membership seems to have increased five times its number in 1930.

SHANTINIKETAN, India, at the International University of Dr. Rabindra Nath Tagore.

Mr. Isfandiar Bakhhtiari of Karachi, a member of the National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma, and I visited Shantiniketan on February 13, 14, 1938. We were guests in the School Guest House. It was a great privilege to meet Dr. Tagore and to hear him talk with deep love and appreciation of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá whom he had met in Chicago in 1912. I am writing the interview for Bahá’í World, volume VII. Dr. Tagore said that the Bahá’í Faith is a great ideal to establish and that they in Shantiniketan welcome all the great religious aims and will be most glad if a Bahá’í-Chair of Religion can be arranged in their school.

He and Mr. Bakhtiari spoke of Iran (Mr. Bakhtiari is an Iranian, he came from Yezd to India about twenty years ago), and of Dr. Tagore’s trip to Iran. The Poet asked particularly about the progress of the Bahá’í Faith in the Land of Its Birth, and praised the tolerance and fineness of the Bahá’ís.

Dr. Tagore’s School has a very excellent selection of Bahá’í books in the Library and they take great interest to have it as complete and up-to-date as possible.

A lecture was given in the hall before the whole student body and the professors. Questions were asked and answered. They brought all the Bahá’í books for an exhibition in the hall, and near the close of the lecture I explained the books, one by one. Mr. Bakhtiari was invited and chanted some Bahá’í prayers in Persian. (Many of the cultured people of India know Persian, and the Urdu language, which is used by several millions of people, is akin to Persian).

The Associated Press and the United Press used interviews and one professor whom I had known in Marburg University and who knows the Cause well wrote an article about the lectures for the Associated Press of India.

When can a Chair of the Bahá’í Faith be established at Shantiniketan? Bahá’ís must help in this.

TRIVANDRUM, TRAVANCORE. Mr. Bakhtiari and I worked in Trivandrum, December 19-23, 1937. I do not know that any Bahá’í teachers had ever visited Trivandrum and given lectures and press interviews before. It is a very progressive State where the young Maharaja of Travancore, twenty-six years old, has recently opened the Hindu State Temples to peoples of all castes—a most courageous, thrilling move that may help untouchables in other States likewise to receive similar privileges.

We had a charming, illuminating audience with the Maharaja of Travancore and his very cultured progressive mother the Maharani of Travancore, at the Palace. I am sure they know very well all the modern religious movements, for they are most liberal Hindus, most awake to the needs of world unity. (I am writing an article about the audience.)

Mr. Clarmont P. Skrine, British Resident of Madras States, received us graciously, at the British Residency in Trivandrum. He has known much about the Bahá’í Teachings and met many Bahá’ís during his visits to Iran. We learned from him that the late F. H. Skrine of London who wrote a book about the Bahá’í Faith nearly thirty years ago was his father. The Resident told us his father had been very interested in the Cause.

We lectured in the Theosophical Hall of Trivandrum. The President of the Lodge, Professor R. Srinivasan, Principal of the Maharaja’s College of Science arranged it. Dr. and Mrs. Jayaram Cousins were present and both spoke a little. Dr. Cousins, one of the great scholars of Travancore, said that thirty years ago they had been given Eric Hammonds’s book “The Splendour of God” and that they have always loved this Bahá’i book. Mrs. Cousins who is a friend of Lady Blomfield stopped over in Haifa on her way to India and visited Shoghi Effendi. She spoke with enthusiasm Shoghi Effendi, his spirit, his culture, his charm. Dr. Cousins sometimes accompanies the Maharaja on the latter’s trips abroad. I hear from others, but I do not know, that the great Dewan (Prime Minister) of Travancore is a fervent Theosophist.

One reason that we went to Trivandrum just at this time was because the Ninth All-India Oriental Conference, which convenes only once in two years, was to be held there December 20-22, and it seemed most important to try to get the Bahá’í Teachings to as many Oriental scholars as possible—for who will be the Professor Edward G. Browne, the Count Gobineau, the Baron Rosens of India if we do not interest the scholars; We wish the great Hindu, Muslim, Buddhist, Zoroastrian scholars to write about the Bahá’í Faith in its relation to their own Faiths. I gave a very short talk in the Conference on the Bahá’í Faith from the standpoint of great Oriental scholars. Mr. Bakhtiari gave a short talk about Qurrátull’-‘Ayn, Iran’s great woman poet.

Articles about the Cause were prepared for the press from the very first day we arrived, and then the Travancore Journalists’ Association gave a tea in our honour in their clubhouse. They wrote several articles and they will write articles in future about the Cause. They wish news of the progress of the Cause in different parts of the world.

"MARCHING TOWARDS THEIR GOAL"

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dear co-workers:

I wish to reaffirm in person my sense of joy and gratitude, as expressed in my last cable to your Assembly, at the new spirit of alertness and determination which you have so clearly demonstrated while yet on the threshold of your year of stewardship in the service of the Cause of Bahá'í. I am filled with fresh hopes, and yearn to witness, ere the present year draws to a close, not only the fulfillment of an unexampled record of service but the revelation of such depths of consecration as will astonish, nay thrill, both the members of your own community and the rest of the Bahá'í world. Pregnant indeed are the years looming ahead of us all.

The twin processes of internal disintegration and external chaos are being accelerated and every day are inexorably moving towards a climax. The rumblings that must precede the eruption of those forces that must cause "the limbs of humanity to quake" can already be heard. "The time of the end," "the latter years," as foretold in the Scriptures, are at long last upon us. The Pen of Bahá'u'lláh, the voice of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, have time and again, insistently and in terms unmistakable, warned an unheeding humanity of impending disaster. The Community of the Most Great Name, the leaven that must leaven the lump, the chosen remnant that must survive the rolling up of the old, discredited, tottering order, and assist in the unfoldment of a new one in its stead, is standing ready, alert, clear-visioned, and resolute. The American believers, standard-bearers of this world-wide community and torch-bearers of an as yet unborn civilization, have girt up their loins, unfurled their banners and stepped into the arena of service. Their Plan has been formulated. Their forces are mobilized. They are steadfastly marching towards their goal. The hosts of the Abhá Kingdom are rushing forth, as promised, to direct their steps and reinforce their power. Through their initial victories they have provided the impulse that must now surge and, with relentless force sweep over their sister-communities and eventually overpower the entire human race. The generality of mankind, blind and enslaved, is wholly unaware of the healing power with which this community has been endowed, nor can it as yet suspect the role which this same community is destined to play in its redemption. Fierce and manifold will be the assaults which governments, races, classes and religions, jealous of its rising prestige and fearful of its consolidating strength, will seek to silence its voice and sap its foundations. Unmoved by the relative obscurity that surrounds it at the present time, and undaunted by the forces that will be arrayed against it in the future, this community, I cannot but feel confident, will, no matter how afflictive the agonies of a travelling age, pursue its destiny, undeflected in its course, undimmed in its serenity, unyielding in its resolve, unshaken in its convictions.

Your true brother,

July 5, 1938. Shoghi.
THE ANNUAL BUDGET

During the first three months of the present Baha’i year the sum of $14,- 477.77 was received by the National Baha’i fund. The budget calls for $103,000.00 per year or $37,000.00 per three month period, leaving a shortage of $23,022.23. In other words, we are getting less than 45 per cent of the requirements.

In analyzing these figures, and in consideration of the number of recognized believers, we find that the average contribution amounted to $4.80 for the three month period, or $1.60 per month, or exactly 5 cents per day, for each believer, which is no more than the cost of a cup of coffee.

If every believer will help to bring the average up to 11c or 12c per day, our obligation toward the completion of the Temple will be fulfilled, the teaching work will progress and the heart of our beloved Guardian will be gladdened.

Shall we fail in this, our most sacred obligation? Shall we be confronted with remorse and sorrow for having missed our opportunity, which will never recur, the greatest privilege of our generation, and which will be remembered and revered in millenniums of Baha’i history?

It is toward this end that our prayers and meditation must be directed, which will give us happiness in the realization that all and each have united to exercise our greatest privilege. If we do this we cannot fail.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

FAITH AND DEEDS

O Son of My Handmaid!
Guidance hath ever been in words, and now it is given in deeds. That is, every one must strive to show forth deeds that are pure and holy, for in words all partake, whereas such deeds as these are special to Our loved ones.
Strive then with heart and soul to distinguish yourselves by your deeds. In this wise We counsel you in this holy and resplendent Tablet.—BAHA’U’LLAH

He wishes you particularly to impress the believers with the necessity of maintaining the flow of their contributions to the Temple, and also to stress the importance of the institution of the National Baha’i Fund which, in these early days of the administrative development of the Faith, is the indispensable mediator for the growth and expansion of the Movement. Contributions to this fund constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause.

—SHOGHI EFFENDI.

Each and every believer, undaunted by the uncertainties, the perils and the financial stringency afflicting the nation, must arise and insure, to the full measure of his or her capacity, that continuous and abundant flow of funds into the National Treasury on which the successful prosecution of the Plan must chiefly depend.—SHOGHI EF­FENDI.

TEACHING—“Unto Every One the Duty”

Teaching the Cause of God has ever been the basis of vital existence for the followers of Baha’u’llah. The instructions of ‘Abdu’l-Baha on this point multiply in memory and expand in meaning as one attempts to recall them, reaching their great summation in the closing paragraphs of His Will:
“Of all the gifts of God the greatest is the gift of Teaching. . . . Of such gift how can we deprive ourselves?”

Nay, may we understand this in a narrow sense. “God hath prescribed unto unto every one the duty of teaching His Cause. Whoever ariseth to discharge this duty, must needs, ere he proclaimeth His Message, adorn himself with the ornament of an upright and praiseworthy character, so that his words may attract the hearts of such as are receptive to his call. Without it, he can never hope to influence his hearers. . . . If he be kindled with the fire of His love, if he forgeteth all created things, the words he uttereth shall set on fire them that hear him.”
The Guardian re-stated it in these terms to Baha’i youth: “They should attract people to the Cause not so much through the exposition of its principles and teachings but through the power of their individual lives.”

But penetrating as our insight may have been in the past through the aid of such instruction, and however dedicated our lives to the diffusion of His holy Faith, surely the heart of every believer must quicken with fresh joy to the opportunities of these present days, so “unutterably precious.” We have been prepared in thought and resolution for some years for this hour. We have come gradually to understand, without the shock or parasis of fear to which an unwitting world must be subject at the climax, that “nothing short of the fire of a severe ordeal, unparalleled in its intensity, can fuse and weld the discordant entities that constitute the elements of present-day civilization, into the integral components of the world commonwealth of the future . . .”

These words of Shoghi Effendi date back to 1931; the continuous influence of others like them, growing imperceptibly in emphasis and scope, have brought us safely to the last enunciation, the gravity of which we know in our inmost beings cannot be over­ weighted. “The time of the end, the latter years, as foretold in the Scriptures, are at long last upon us.”

And now at long last, too, the “gift of teaching” becomes a diviner gift, a more cherished mission, the privigle to carry the essence of life to cavernous reaches of death, to replace despair by faith, hopelessness by knowledge, and stricken terror by the strong courage of attachment to God’s untailing Will. This is the distinction of the closing years of Baha’u’llah’s initial century. This is the spirit which will inform all whom the Divine Plan has claimed as instruments of its fulfillment. This consciousness is the spring of sustained, undeviating action, from its first surge to the mighty culmination.

The American believers, standard­ bearers of this world-wide community torch-bearers of an as yet unborn civilization, have girt up their loins, unfurled their banners and stepped into the arena of service. Their Plan has been formulated. Their forces are mobilized. They are steadfastly marching towards their goal. The hosts of the Abha Kingdom are rushing forth, as promised, to direct their steps and refine their power. Through their initial victories they have provided the impulse that must now surge and, with relentless force sweep over their sister­ communities and eventually overpower the entire human race.” “. . . They must not throughout these six remaining years, allow themselves to be delected from the course they are now steadily pursuing.”

We are far today from that fecundity of effort which will “astonish, may thrill, both the members of your own community and the rest of the Baha’i world.” However great the achievements of the past, they are but traces, merest foreshadowings of a mats urge. Yet the news from every part of the American continent is already gathering momentum, and to every Assembly, group and individual believer, this record is sure to bring re-enforcement, stimulation, and the release of energy into a host of new and varied patterns of accomplishment.

The Faith continues its penetration into Virgin States and areas. From Laramie comes the enrollment of Mrs.
Ada M. Padner, first Bahá’í of Wyoming, who learned of the Cause through the joint efforts of the Lily­ whites and Mrs. Ruth Moffett. She writes: ‘Christ’s Teachings were very penetrating and vital to my life and I thought I really knew Christ, but I have found out that I really did not fully understand until I became a Bahá’í . . . . Signing the card is the most sacred duty I have ever done in my life . . . .’ This warm attraction is already being turned by our new friend into teaching, for a study group meets weekly in her apartment.

Exceptional results have been obtained by Miss Rezsi Sunshine, dur­ing a three-months’ stay in Arkansas.
Several weeks were spent in Little Rock, Eureka Springs, and Hot Springs, and in each city books were requested by the public libraries. Miss Olive Black, librarian in Eureka Springs, wrote to Miss Sunshine: ‘I have read the book, Security for a Failing World, . . . . and I think it should be in every School, College, University, and Public Library in the United States. It is the sanest exposition of the Divine purpose of life
I have ever read . . . . I shall not miss an opportunity to recommend it to all my friends and patrons.’ In addition, contacts were made with five or six presidents of Women’s Clubs, and with the Rabbi of the Reformed Temple of Little Rock, all of whom promised speaking opportunities in the Fall.
Because of the summer heat, Miss Sunshine is temporarily in Massacusetts, but plans to return to Arkansas to continue her outstanding work.

A final report of the visit of Mrs.
Terah Smith and Miss Marguerite
Reimer to North Carolina includes some interesting episodes. In addition to contacts in Raleigh previously reported here, Miss Reimer spoke to the student body of the North Carolina State College for Negroes in Durham which, like Duke University, is endowed by the Duke fortune. Also in this city, Mrs. Smith made ‘an address before the personnel, number­ing about eighty, of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co. This company is capitalized and directed directly by Negroes. Each Saturday they hold a Forum which fosters all types of education. The previous lectures had been on the Prophets:
Moses, Buddha, Confucius, and Muhammad. So the stage was properly set for the introduction of the Faith.

The enthusiastic interest was thrilling.
After open discussion one of the oficials gave a summation which showed a remarkable understanding of the Teachings and the inner reality of the Cause.’

Mrs. Ruth Moffett has also reported extensive teaching activities in the South. During April she and two friends travelled more than 3400 miles in eleven States and fifty cities. Lectures were given before twenty-five universities and colleges and over ten radio stations. A Bahá’í study group was organized in Montgomery, Alabama, and visits were made to twenty libraries to discuss the placement of Bahá’í literature. The cities visited by Mrs. Moffett included: New Orleans, Mobile, Fairhope, Pensacola, Montgomery, Tuskegee, Birmingham, Telladega (Alabama), Atlanta, Chatt­ aooaga, Nashville, and Camden (Kentucky).

A method which might well serve as a model for many individual believers has been adopted by Miss Mildred F. Varnum, a member of the Bahá’í community of New York City.
She has returned to her ‘home town’ in Bangor, Maine, and intends to remain until the Cause is established.
The local newspaper gave her excellent publicity, featuring the Faith as the reason for her return, and a meeting is planned for August in the Town Hall or Church supported by her grandfather. She writes: ‘I am thrilled with this privilege of serving Bahá’u’lláh in this my beloved Maine where I was born and my forebears were among its pioneers.”

A somewhat similar plan is being followed by Miss Marion Holley in the San Joaquin Valley, California, a territory in which her mother, Grace B.
Holley, did pioneer work. Two teach­ing circuits were arranged in April and May for Mr. Joseph Bray and Miss Beatrice Irwin, with fireside groups in Woodlake, Bakersfield, and Fresno.
Miss Irwin also spoke to the High School senior class and to three hundred Grammar students in Woodlake, as well as to a study class of the Congregational Church in Bakersfield.
There have since been several exchanges between this class and the Bahá’ís. The success of these circuits has grown out of the efforts of three isolated believers, Mrs. Estelle Wa­ caser, Mrs. Horace Tillyer, and Mrs.
Sylvia Dewey.

Most stimulating news has come from Mr. and Mrs. Ward Calhoon of the Milwaukee community, who turned a vacation trip to Cuba into a teaching campaign. They were assisted in every decision by the inspira­tion of Bahá’u’lláh, choosing in this way a steamship agency in Miami where they met the President of the Cuban Chamber of Commerce, and by him were given several valued introductions in Havana. This gentleman had published an article on the Calhoons

The architect’s beautiful vision emerges into more impressive outer expression as and the principles of the Faith in the Sunday Advance, a large newspaper of Havana, and articles were also carried by the only English newspaper, the Havana Post, and by three Cuban papers. Several important contacts were made in Havana and deep interest was aroused. While passing through Florida, the Calhoons spoke to the Bahá'ís in Jacksonville, St. Augustine, and Miami, showing motion pictures of Bahá'í activities and the Temple.

Other believers have also reported the extension of Bahá'í contacts while on vacation. Mrs. John Becktel of Kansas City, accompanied by Miss Carolyn Christensen, visited relatives for three days in Billings, Montana, and was able to speak of the Cause and distribute literature to thirteen people. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schoeney of Phoenix cooperated with the Teaching Committee by calling on isolated believers in Santa Rosa and Las Vegas, New Mexico.

Another vital phase of teaching progress is the consolidation of Bahá'í Groups throughout the continent. Perhaps the most notable work during this period was done in Duluth, Minn., when the believers cooperated with Mr. Philip Marangella and Miss Josephine Kruka for three weeks in May. A series of five public talks were arranged at the Spalding Hotel, and in addition Mr. Marangella spoke at the Y. M. C. A., the morning service of the A. M. C., and the Saturday Luncheon Club of business men and women. The Duluth Group "now numbers eight declared believers, and with the new students who were attracted we hope to have an Assembly." Two new enrollments have been listed for Knoxville, and with the transfer of Mrs. Louise Caswell's membership, the Knoxville Group now has seven members. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Guy have reported the establishment of a Group in Orlando, Florida, which includes residents of Pine Castle. It is hoped that membership may be sufficiently increased in one or the other of these cities to allow the election of an Assembly by next April. Scranton, Pa., has a new Group of ten, resulting from the teaching work of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ives and Mrs. Inderlied of Binghamton. Long Beach, California, has reorganized a Group of seven, and is receiving much help from the Los Angeles Assembly. Roseville, Michigan, now has five members and recently arranged meetings for Miss Lydia Zamenhof. Madison, Wisconsin, has reported its fifth enrollment. In Helena, Montana, a Group was organized last April with eleven believers.

Meantime a great number of devoted Bahá'ís in isolated areas are carrying forward the banner of the Divine Plan. Although it is impossible to mention them all, these few references may hearten other isolated friends. Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter of Santa Paula, with the help of Mrs. Marich Carpenter, has arranged weekly meetings throughout the year in her home which reached a high point with a violin concert by Mr. Roderick White, followed by a talk on "Bahá'u'lláh, the Greatest Musician," by Mrs. Buelah Lewis. The splendid exhibit of Bahá'í books, pictures, and Persian and Arabic texts, which is represented by a photograph in this issue, was arranged in Santa Paula at the Dean Hobbs Blanchard Memorial Library.

Mr. Kenneth Christian and two fellow Bahá'í students at Cornell University, Stuart Cody and Henry Setz, with the cooperation of friends from nearby centers, scheduled public lectures during the school year of 1937-38 for Mr. Harlan Olier, Dr. Heist, Mr. Philip Marangella, Mrs. Terah Smith, Dr. Emeric Sala, and Mr. Allen McDaniel. Accompanying Mr. McDaniel's talk on the Temple was a three-day exhibit of the Temple Model in Willard Straight Hall lobby, and it is estimated that 3000 people saw it. Several hundred leaflets were distributed, good publicity in three papers was obtained, and the faculty has invited Mr. McDaniel to return next year.

A report from the Regional Teaching Committee of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, British Columbia, and Alaska demonstrates a splendid cooperation between this Committee and the individual friends, in carrying the Faith to new areas. Several study groups are being formed in British Columbia, in Victoria by Miss Audrey Applegate of Vancouver, in Westminister, in West Vancouver through Mrs. Monroe, and in towns of the Okanagan Valley such as Armstrong, where there are already four believers. Both Miss Doris Skinner and Mr. Rowland Estall have planned teaching visits to the Valley, where they will extend Bahá'í contacts in Vernon, Penticton, Nelson, Trail, and Kamloops. Also in this region pioneer work is being advanced in Tacoma, to which city Mr. Charles Knight of Seattle has recently moved, in Wenatchee, and through weekly visits of Dr. and Mrs. Speno, in Coeur d'Alene and Sandpoint, Idaho. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Seymour of Monroe have gone to Juneau, Alaska, for the summer.

Thus do we see in every part of this great continent the evidences of the self-sacrificing efforts of the believers. More and more are finding in action the gift of confirmation, in teaching the light of inspiration and guidance, in concerted effort under the standard of the Divine Plan a strength and blessing which only unity confers. For the American Bahá'ís, spiritual heirs of the heroic founders of our Faith, inherit too that glorious promise of the Báb: "God will assist all those who arise to serve Him!" Our gratitude for the opportunity of service in such unequalled days can recognize no bounds.

STATUS OF ASSEMBLIES IN CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA

Regarding the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City, the general principle is that the N. S. A. of America should strive to prepare and train all groups in Central and South America to attain the status of an Assembly, and, once formed, to endeavor to consolidate their position. These Assemblies, however, as soon as established, will cease to be formally under the jurisdiction of the N. S. A. of the U. S. and Canada.—Shoghi Effendi, May 25, 1938.

MEETINGS OF NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

It has been found desirable to revise the schedule of meetings published in a recent issue of Bahá’í News. The new schedule follows, and it is pointed out that the plan calls for the formal public meeting on the evening before the business sessions of the Assembly begin, and a regional conference on the Sunday afternoon falling within the dates given, wherever local conditions make a conference feasible.

October 7, 8, 9, Knoxville, Tenn.
December 9, 10, 11, Urbana, III.
February 3, 4, 5, Los Angeles.

PUBLIC TEACHING BULLETIN
"A NEW WORLD ORDER"

For several years the National Spiritual Assembly has issued occasional numbers of a bulletin containing only excerpts from Bahá’í literature and intended for non-believers. Copies have been mailed out to lists of interested persons compiled by the Contacts Committee and received from other sources, and copies have also been purchased by a number of local Assemblies.

The Assembly has decided to develop this bulletin in order to make it more useful for teaching work. Hereafter it will be issued as a single sheet, printed on both sides, and carrying no date but merely a serial number, which will greatly extend the period of time in which copies can be used. Moreover, the bulletins will be sold in quantity, not less than 50 copies per order, at a cost of 1c each.

Orders and payments should be sent directly to the Treasurer of the National Spiritual Assembly. This bulletin is not handled by the Publishing Committee.

Advance orders are desirable, in order to determine how many to print.

ECONOMY IN TEACHING PLANS

While the requirements of the National Fund are not being met, and the future progress of Temple construction not yet assured, the National Assembly wishes to advise National and Regional Teaching Committees, Summer Schools and local Assemblies to exercise all possible economy in teaching work, by giving preference to nearby teachers where invitations involve traveling and living expenses. The budget supporting the Seven-Year Plan is our first concern.

REFERENCES TO THE FUND AT NINETEEN DAY FEASTS

Questions having arisen as to propriety of mentioning the Bahá’í Fund, and receiving contributions, at Nineteen Day Feasts, the National Assembly is of the opinion that under the Guardian’s explanation of the threefold character of this Feast, the consultation period should be used as much as possible for promotion of the Seven Year Plan in all its phases. But the regularity of contributions to the Fund should not be contingent upon personal attendance at the Nineteen Day Feast.

"THE CHARTER OF THE NEW WORLD ORDER"

"The creative energies released by the Law of Bahá’u’lláh, permeating and evolving within the mind of Abdu’l-Bahá, have, by their very impact and close interaction, given birth to an Instrument which may be viewed as the Charter of the New World Order which is at once the glory and the promise of this most great Dispensation."—Shoghi Effendi.

In order to promote a more direct and intimate spiritual association with the provisions of the Master’s Will and Testament on the part of the American Bahá’í Community, the National Spiritual Assembly will publish a series of excerpts from the Will, together with selections from the interpretive writings of the Guardian. The friends are urged to give deep thought to this new department in Bahá’í News.

The House of Justice

It would be helpful to bear in mind certain basic principles with reference to the Will and Testament of Abdu’l-Bahá, which together with the Kitáb-i-Aqdas, constitutes the chief depository wherein are enshrined those priceless elements of that Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Bahá’í Faith...
To dissociate the administrative principles of the Cause from the purely spiritual and humanitarian teachings would be tantamount to a mutilation of the body of the Cause, a separation that can only result in the disintegration of its component parts, and the extinction of the Faith itself.

It hath been ordained by God that in every city a House of Justice shall be established; the members must be according to the Number of Bahá’u’lláh, and if the number exceed this, no matter. The members of the House must regard themselves as trustees and representatives of God in the created world. And when they enter the House, they must consider themselves as being in the Presence of God, the Supreme, the Most exalted, as seeing Him Who is unseen, and strive to fulfill for the good of the public the Trust placed in them for the sake of God, as though they were managing their own affairs and choosing that which is best.

That the Spiritual Assemblies of today will be replaced in time by the Houses of Justice, and are to all intents and purposes identical and not separate bodies is abundantly confirmed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Himself. Not only will the present-day Spiritual Assemblies be styled differently in future, but will be enabled also to add to their present functions those powers, duties and prerogatives necessitated by the recognition of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, not merely as one of the recognized religious systems of the world but as the State Religion of an independent and Sovereign Power. And as the Bahá’í Faith permeates the masses of the peoples of the East and West, and its truth is embraced by the majority of the peoples of a number of the Sovereign States of the world, will the Universal House of Justice attain the plenitude of its power, and exercise, as the supreme organ of the Bahá’í Commonwealth, all the rights, the duties, and the responsibilities incumbent upon the world’s future superstate.

And now, concerning the House of Justice which God had ordained as the source of all good and freed from all error, its members must be elected by universal suffrage, that is, by the believers. Its members must be manifestations of the fear of God and day-springs of knowledge and understanding, must be steadfast in God’s faith and the well wishers of all mankind. By this House is meant the Universal House of Justice, that is, in all countries, a secondary House of Justice must be instituted, and these secondary Houses of Justice Must elect the members of the Universal one. Unto this body all things must be referred. It enacts all ordinances and regulations that are not to be found in the explicit Holy text. By this body all the difficult problems are to be resolved and the guardian of the Cause of God is its sacred head and the distinguished member for life of that body. Should he not attend in person its deliberations, he must appoint one to represent him. Should any of the members commit a sin, injurious to the common weal, the guardian of the Cause of God hath at his own discretion the right to expel him, whereupon the people must elect another one in his stead. This House of Justice enacts the laws and the government enforce them. The legislative body must reinforce the executive, the executive must aid and assist the legislative body so that through the close union and harmony of these two forces, the foundation of fairness and justice may become firm and strong, that all regions of the world may become even as Paradise itself. Unto the Most Holy Book every one must turn and all that is not expressly recorded therein must be referred to the Universal House of Justice. That which this body, whether unanimously or by a majority doth carry, that is verily the Truth and the Purpose of God himself.

An attempt, I feel, should at the present juncture be made to explain the character and functions of the twin foundations that support this mighty Administrative Structure—the institutions of the Guardianship and of the Universal House of Justice. Their common, their fundamental object is to insure the continuity of that divinely-appointed authority which flows from the Source of our Faith, to safeguard the unity of its followers and to maintain the integrity and flexibility of its teachings. Acting in conjunction with each other two inseparable institutions administer its affairs, coordinate its activities, promote its interests, execute its laws and defend its subsidiary institutions.

The interpretation of the Guardian, functioning within his own sphere is as authoritative and binding as the enactments of the International House of Justice, whose exclusive right and prerogative is to pronounce upon and deliver the final judgment on such laws and ordinances as Bahá’u’lláh has not expressly revealed. Neither can, nor will ever, infringe upon the sacred and prescribed domain of the other. Neither will seek to curtail the specific and undoubted authority with which both have been divinely invested.

No wonder that He Who through the operation of His Will has inaugurated so vast and unique an Order and Who is the Center of so mighty a Covenant should have written these words: "So firm and mighty is this Covenant that from the beginning of time until the present day no religious Dispensation hath produced its like." "Whatsoever is latent in the innermost of this holy cycle," He wrote during the darkest and most dangerous days of His ministry, "shall gradually appear and be made manifest, for now is but the beginning of its growth and the day-spring of the revelation of its signs."

Publishing Announcements

The Committee is pleased to report a new title added to the series of Teaching Literature pamphlets:

Religion and The New Age, by A. G. B. Sold only in lots of 100 copies.

Editions have also been obtained of two pamphlets in wide demand:

Tests: Their Spiritual Value, by Mamie L. Seto. Per hundred, $1.50 net.
Radiant Acquiescence, by Orcella Rexford. Per hundred, $1.50 net.

Since the Guardian has recommended Sale’s translation of the Qur’an as most suitable for study by believers, the Publishing Committee informs the friends that they can order a copy at any local bookstore. Ask for “The Koran,” translated into English from the original Arabic by George Sale. The Publisher is Frederick Warne and Co., Ltd., London, with an American office at 381 Fourth Avenue, New York. This New York office does not sell single copies retail, but sells only to bookstores. The work can be obtained for $1.00 per copy, but including illustrations and Preliminary Discourse the cost is $4.00.

Archives Announcements

In 1936 the National Spiritual Assembly requested the Archives and History Committee to make an effort to obtain a history of each local Bahá’í Community, prepared under the auspices of the Local Assembly.

Following this, a request was made through Bahá’í News for local histories to be prepared and forwarded to the Committee, and some suggestions were given as to the particular subjects to be emphasized in the historical write-up. To date fifteen Assemblies have responded. Some of the local histories received have been quite detailed and complete, particularly the one prepared by the Philadelphia Assembly.

The request is renewed that each Local Assembly which has not already done so, appoint a committee or an historian to prepare a history of the Cause in its own Community. Perhaps the most valuable sources of information will be files of Assembly minutes and correspondence or memories of the early believers. The committee would greatly appreciate receiving many more of these records during the current Bahá’í year.

Thirty-two of the seventy-eight local Spiritual Assemblies have filled out and returned the Questionnaire which was mailed by the National Spiritual Assembly last year and to the Secretaries of the newly formed Communities after April 21st of this year. While the information entered in the Questionnaire supplies only a brief summary of local history, the cumulative information which would be available should all Assemblies respond would be considerable.

Approximately half of the communities that have returned the Questionnaire indicate that a local archives committee is included among the standing committees of the Community. Such a committee or a local archivist in each Assembly, would, in time, prove very useful, not only in organizing and preserving local records but in assisting the National Committee in the collection and preservation of the Tablets of 'Abdu’l-Bahá. The letters of the Guardian and sacred relics brought back by American believers who have visited the Holy Shrines.

Recent Gifts to the Archives

The most precious Bahá’í possessions of the National Bahá’í Archives consist of the following gifts of the Guardian, coming from the International Archives:—Three original illuminated Tablets in the Hand-Writing of Bahá'u'lláh, one a prayer, and two Tablets to ʻAbdu'l-Bahá from His Father. The last gift received was the Locks of the Hair of Bahá'u'lláh, which were arranged and preserved by the hands of the Greatest Holy Leaf. These gifts have come from Haifa within the last four years.

Within that time the number of the Master's original Tablets which have been given to the National Archives has increased from approximately 1,000 to 1,600. Four years ago, aside from the Guardian's letters to the National Spiritual Assembly, there were few letters from the Guardian in the National Archives. Now there are several hundred.

Since the Convention a gift from Mr. Ernest Harrison of Montreal has been received, consisting of what he believes to be a complete Baha'i library in English. Also the original negative and positive copy of the motion picture film of ʻAbdu'l-Baha taken in New York City has been sent to the archives by the National Spiritual Assembly. This was formerly in the possession of Mr. Roy Wilhelm.

YOUTH ACTIVITIES

The National Youth Committee urges each local Youth Group to participate in the activities planned for the current year.

Study Days. In development of the plan adopted last year, the following Study Days have been arranged:

September—The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh. First half.

October—The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh. Second half.

(Use the Study Outline on this subject published by the Publishing Committee.)

November—Some Answered Questions. Part I.

January—Some Answered Questions. Part II.

March—Some Answered Questions. Part III.

April—Some Answered Questions. Part IV.

May—Some Answered Questions. Part V.

Youth Bulletin. This will be continued, and young people are requested to assist by obtaining subscriptions and manuscripts.

Mid-winter Conference. Sub-secretaries have been requested to arrange at least one conference on a regional basis this winter.

Sub-secretaries are also requested to arrange a meeting of area members, submit Study Day reports obtained from all groups and report all youth activities.

Two meetings. These are to be held locally as Feast or public meetings, based on The Dawn-Breakers, with about three talks. Possible subjects: 1, on the Fore-runners of the Bab; 2, on Táhirih, Vahid, Qudus. This is an international effort.

Fourth Annual International Bahá'í Youth Day. The date is to be February 26, 1939, the subject "The Unfoldment of World Civilization." Complete outlines will be published in Bahá'í Youth for December.

ESPERANTO CONGRESS

The Congress held at Cleveland, July 1, 2 and 3 was of exceptional interest to Bahá'ís as well as to Espe­rantists on account of the presence of Miss Lidia Zamenhof. Miss Zamenhof was listed in the program as Bahá'í speaker, and found many opportunities to promote the Faith. A letter from the National Spiritual Assembly was presented to the delegates.

The following two resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"To Miss Lidia Zamenhof, talented daughter of the beloved founder of our language, we wish to express our deepest gratitude for the inspiration of her presence and for her unselfish cooperation in the various Congress activities.

"To the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada, we convey our feeling of appreciation for the great part they have played in making it possible to have Miss Zamenhof in America to spread the Cause of Esperanto throughout this country."

“THE GRACE THAT SUSTAINS”

With this issue of BAHÁ’I NEWS is included a special insert reprinting the Guardian’s messages received since January 10, 1936. The friends are asked to note carefully that the last two messages in the series—the letter dated September 10 and the cablegram dated September 24, 1938 are now published in BAHÁ’I NEWS for the first time, though both were immediately sent to the local Assemblies.

With reference to these successive messages, establishing and developing the Seven-Year Plan, the National Spiritual Assembly sent to local Assemblies the following statement in the October bulletin:

While we have all read and meditated on these messages singly, their meaning and power as a whole are overwhelming. In letter after letter, cablegram after cablegram, Shoghi Effendi has developed the theme of devotion, sacrifice, understanding and mighty action for this very period of the severest danger humanity has ever suffered. The existence of the Bahá’i Community itself, and its destined capacity to become the instrument for the release of God’s blessing of world order and peace, depend entirely upon our individual and collective response to these directions, warnings and supreme appeals. Nothing can diminish the authority and influence of Divine truth, but that authority can and will be exercised through others if we, the present community of believers and servants, fail to perform our holy task.

“Therefore the National Spiritual Assembly, profoundly conscious of the gravity of the hour, implores the local Assemblies, communities and groups to grasp and incorporate in their very souls the vital import of the Guardian’s words. Shoghi Effendi has created a new and higher reality for the American Bahá’ís. He summons us to such heroism and such unity as we have never achieved before. This station of the true Bahá’í and of the true Bahá’í community must now be realized on earth, here and now.

“Let the Spiritual Assemblies appreciate the vital nature of their responsibility; let all individual Bahá’ís, without exception, seek consecration for service to the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh. Let suitable occasions be made at once for the study of Shoghi Effendi’s words. Let individuals steep themselves in the successive messages, for the enclosed reprint will be sent to the entire American Bahá’í community in the next issue of Bahá’í News. Let there be daily prayer. Let the Nineteen Day Feasts, the Anniversaries and every teaching meeting be illumined with the Light of Faith and the melting enthusiasm of determined action.

“What lethargy has seized us, to permit the Seven-Year Plan to lag so seriously behind its schedule? Are we sick or crippled, in this, the Day of God? Is there not a Remover of difficulties, a Healer, a Divine Physician Whom we claim to love and obey? Beloved friends! The religion of God has been revealed not to make us complacent, but to teach and inspire us how to act and how to achieve! A few Assemblies, stirring with this new influx of power, have already raised their standard of sacrifice for the National Fund. Can any Assembly, community, group or individual believer dare to remain outside the creative, protective and accomplishing spirit which the Guardian symbolizes and by his words, conveys?

Anniversary of the Birth of Bahá’u’lláh

“Now, in order to unite and concentrate the devotion and energy of the entire American Bahá’í community, the National Spiritual Assembly appeals to have November 12, the Anniversary of the Birth of Bahá’u’lláh, observed with an ardor that will consume every veil of irresolution and of spiritual ignorance, that by the Divine power the American Bahá’í community may be completely transformed. Every believer should resolve to attend, and attend in that humility which is essential in those who approach the Throne of God. Not words but inward and outward deeds now determine the station of faith in Bahá’u’lláh. The National Spiritual Assembly longs for the privilege of sharing with the Guardian the news that his repeated appeal has at last kindled the flame of sacrifice in the heart of America!”

“Loyalty to World Order”

The cablegram received September 24 is clearly more than any re-emphasis laid on the importance of the Seven-Year Plan. The Guardian here calls upon the American Bahá’í community to separate itself in heart and soul from the disturbances seizing upon the peoples, races and nations, and manifest, individually and collectively, the true Bahá’í attitude upon current world events.

One realizes that the channel of grace that sustains the System of God’s Order will be clogged if we fail to heed this vital command. It is apparent that Bahá’ís are to act and speak as true Bahá’ís during these crucial times, not descending into the dark vortex which is, actually, separation from God. It is not our part to be victims of mass psychology in these days of despair, but to reflect that Light that shines to illumine the regeneration and the unification of the world of mankind.

To a lesser degree, the same forces sundering the peoples and nations are likewise making for division within each nation, and therefore the command applies to conditions in this continent and not merely to international affairs. The spirit of the Faith implies voluntary and complete aloofness from all elements of dissension and political influence, local, national or worldwide.

But co-equal to the warning stands the all-powerful assurance that obedience widens and deepens the channel of that Divine grace! Bahá’ís are to be amazed by the power of the Faith in these times, awed by its victory through any and every pure instrument, even the weakest and humblest soul.

The Guardian’s cablegram is a message to the entire American Bahá’í community. May we all be completely loyal and responsive to this impressive command.

National Spiritual Assembly.

“HEARTENED (BY) MESSAGE”

The following cablegram was received from the Guardian on October 14, in reply to a cabled message sent to him from the National Assembly gathered at Knoxville, Tennessee.

"Heartened (by) message. Praying added fervor, deepened longing, acceleration Temple construction, increasing momentum teaching force. May both culminate (in) placing, (at) appointed time, final contract heralding consummation (of) hopes born thirty years ago (in) the hearts (of the) American believers."—Shoghi.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE TEACHING BUDGET

The friends will have noted in the June issue of BAHÁ’I NEWS that one of the three major items of the 1938-39 Budget is $30,000 for teaching in North and South America. Due to past confusion in our understanding of the teaching budget, the National Spiritual Assembly has thought it well to point out that budgeting is based not upon the actual possession of funds, but upon the analysis of what amounts are needed to accomplish the work. Budgeting does not make such amounts available, and teaching projects can be financed and funds voted only as the believers make this possible.

Last year, for example, the National Budget called for $30,000 for teaching; yet only $11,000 was actually spent. It might be of further interest to know that the teaching fund must cover all expenses connected with the National Teaching Committee, the Regional Committees (twelve in number), the Inter-America Committee, the distribution of free literature, the Library Committee with its placement of literature in public libraries, and the financing of Summer School programs.

Surely it is evident that we, as American Baha’is, cannot fulfill the Guardian’s great hopes for us, nor transpone into the world of actuality the glorious pattern of the Divine Plan, without that supply of funds which constitutes, at the present time, the life-blood of these nascent institutions you are laboring to erect. And these are the further words which Shoghi Effendi has addressed to us: "Contributions to this fund constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause."

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

"THIS OPPORTUNITY OF TEACHING"

It is now some three months since the arrival in this country of Shoghi Effendi’s stirring announcement that "the time of the end," "the latter years," as foretold in the Scriptures, are at long last upon us." In the heart of every believer the impact of these words has reverberated for weeks, and each of us is seeking to understand them, to relate them to the events which surround us, to discover those "depths of consecration" which conceal the secret of our future persistence, obedience and faith. Now, at this moment, the prophetic warnings of the Old Testament arrest us as never before, since we are the very people of this Book, that "generation of the half-light" whose lives are set by the will of God, in the midst of "a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time..." (Daniel, 12)

One miracle of this opportunity of teaching, the immense scope of which we can gradually perceive as we meditate upon the Tablets of the Divine Plan, is that our exertions are now, and will increasingly become, the very source of life to this fated generation. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord: And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." (Amos, 8) To ease this restlessness, to assuage the pangs of such distress, to be providers for the hungry offspring of earth’s most terrible famine—this is to teach the Cause of God today. Shall we not, therefore, receive in eagerness the news of every advance along the vast frontier of our teaching program, as it penetrates not only into pioneer territories but into new areas of deprivation, wherever they exist?

The news of greatest import for the unfoldment of the Seven-Year Plan is the growing activity of groups of the friends. For not by individual effort alone, no matter how sacrificial, can this monumental labor be accomplished. The heights to which heroic individuals may arise will continue to stimulate, to shame, or to inspire us all to a like standard of dedication. But only when each unit of our Administrative Order attains the full orbit of its activity, when every local Spiritual Assembly is reaching out for wider responsibilities of teaching, when Committees are functioning in wholeness and efficiency, when each Bahá’í Group is pressing forward to achieve its natural goal of Assembly status, and when the whole body of the Cause in America is performing in vigor, part linked to part in a mighty movement of coordination—only then will these two continents feel the full pressure of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. It is thus with great joy that we note the signs of this very symphony of motion.

The Binghamton Assembly has extended its interest from its own community to neighboring cities, notably Scranton, Syracuse and Ithaca. During June and July speakers including Mrs. Inderlied, Mrs. Terah Smith, Mrs. Palmatier, and Mrs. Vergason were sent on several occasions to Scranton, and two carloads of the Binghamton friends joined the new Scranton Bahá’ís in a farewell picnic for the Ives. A three-day youth conference was held in Binghamton the end of May, with an average attendance of fifty, including representatives from New York City, Syracuse, Scranton, and Ithaca, five of whom became confirmed believers during the sessions. Nor has this widened scope lessened the local activities of the community, for Binghamton was able to send forty-seven to the annual picnic at the McDaniel Farm, to meet for informal suppers and discussion on an average of three times a week at the summer cottage of Mrs. Noyes, and now starts the coming season with a new Center, seven students preparing for membership, and the determination to double its numbers within the year. In this resolve Scranton and Syracuse likewise share.

The Lima Assembly maintains a Contacts Committee of nine which last Fall began pioneer work in adjacent towns. Lima now reports the acceptance of the first three believers from Celina and Montezuma. Also, a home group has just recently been opened for a Bahá’í study course at Wapakoneta. A Pioneer Center in Cleveland has just recently been joined to the roll of Bahá’í Groups through the tireless efforts of the Philadelphia Assembly and seven believers are now meeting weekly.

A new Group has also been announced at Hinsdale, N. H., as the result of the fusion of seven isolated believers of Hinsdale, Ashuelot, and Bernardstown. An application for Group status has come from Arlington, Va., a pioneer state, where several former Bahá’ís of Washington, D.C., have organized a unit of Bahá’ís.

It is hoped in each of these localities that the friends may find such stimulus in community functioning as to enable them speedily to grow into local Spiritual Assemblies. As Hinsdale has written: "We have considered ourselves a Group for some time, but believe we feel more a unit already for just getting ourselves organized."

While on this subject, the work of the Madison Group claims mention, in arranging two fifteen-minute broadcasts for Marguerite Reimer on stations WIBA and WBIA. Her subjects were "The Bahá’í House of Worship" and "The Objectives of the Bahá’í Faith." It was estimated by the latter station that its broadcast had a listening audience of seventy thousand.

Perhaps the most interesting use which any of us has yet made of radio is planned jointly by the Vancouver Assembly and the Regional Teaching Committee of that area. By employing a larger station than was last year used in the series prepared by the Vancouver Assembly, it will be possible to reach all fireside groups in British Columbia simultaneously with ten weekly broadcasts, developing a presentation of the Faith which can be used as a basis for further local study and discussion. Congratulations to Vancouver for initiating a teaching method of prime importance!

The report of the Regional Committee of Alabama and Florida contains heartening news of the penetration of the Cause into the South. A weekly newspaper for colored people, The Florida American, has recently been started in Gainesville, Fla., by two Bahá’ís, Miss Bessee Marie Garrison and Mr. L. M. Bennett, with the hope that it will become a real teaching medium. A front-page column was devoted in the second issue to "The History of the Martyrdom of the Bahá’í." In Hollywood, Fla., Mrs. Amelia W. Bodmer is using the opportunities of a Trailer Park to scatter the Message throughout America. During the past year eighty-seven visitors, who came to inspect her trailer, have heard the Cause and received literature. Six of these, actual residents of Hollywood, are now seriously studying it and two of her students, Willis and Hannah White of Dania, have just registered as believers.

Miss Alma Knoblock recently spent several months in Bristol, Augusta, and Taylor, S. C. Aside many fireside groups, a direct presentation of the Faith was arranged for two hundred students of the Theological Class of Cook’s College, given jointly by Miss Knoblock and Miss Clair Glover of Augusta.

Pioneer work is now being carried on by Miss Virginia Taylor of Cheviot, Ohio, in Louisville, Ky., to follow up the fine contacts made there by Mrs. Grace Ober. Five visits were made in May and June, two Bahá’ís were located, and the campaign was closed for the summer with a picnic of fifteen interested women. A study class was planned by Miss Taylor to begin in September.

A model of the Temple was recently displayed in a furniture store in Albuquerque, N. M., resulting in an opportunity for a further showing at the New Mexico State Fair, October 9-16. The following voluntary letter was addressed to Dr. Morris by the store: "It may interest you to know that your temple model displayed in our window has drawn a lot of comments, and while at first we put it in our window merely to accommodate you, frankly it has surpassed all expectations from a publicity angle." Surely another talking point for local Publicity Committees! Thus do the followers of Bahá’u’lláh, singly and in groups, advance in the teaching program they have set themselves. "In these days," the Master wrote many years ago, "the most important of all things is the guidance of the nations and peoples of the world." How much truer have these words become in our own tumultuous period. How much more apparent that every believer "is holding in his hand a trumpet, blowing the breath of life over all the regions." In these times of war and the rumor of war, should we not read again that last magnificent teaching Tablet addressed "To the believers of God and the maid-servants of the Merciful of the Bahá’í Assemblies in the United States of America and Canada"? For here is the true definitions of the "armies of God," and these are the sole instructions to ensure the victory. May each of us become an active soldier in the army of Bahá’u’lláh, worthy of the title of His "apostle," and eager for a part in His conquest—the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth!

MEMORIAL TO KEITH RANSOM-KEHLER

The National Spiritual Assembly has recently transmitted $1,000 for the cost of constructing the Memorial to Keith Ransom-Kehler at Isphan, Iran, where this heroic Bahá’í soul ascended to the Kingdom.

The conditions which appeared to make it impossible to carry on the construction work have recently changed; and the National Assembly hopes to have news from Iran that work on this first International Bahá’í Memorial has begun.

GERMAN EDITION OF REVISED ESSLEMONT BOOK

With the Guardian's consent, the National Spiritual Assembly has sent funds sufficient to purchase and save for the Cause the types of the new edition of the Esslemont book in German translation which had to be abandoned in Europe some time ago on account of unfavorable conditions. It is hoped that the edition can soon be printed in Switzerland or some other country where copies could be circulated.

"THE CHARTER OF THE NEW WORLD ORDER"

"The creative energies released by the Law of Bahá’u'lláh, permeating and evolving within the mind of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, have, by their very impact and close interaction, given birth to an instrument which may be viewed as the Charter of the New World Order which is at once the glory and the promise of this most great Dispensation."—SHOGHI EFFENDI.

In order to promote a more direct and intimate spiritual association with the provisions of the Master's Will and Testament on the part of the American Bahá’í Community, the National Spiritual Assembly will publish a series of excerpts from the Will, together with selections from the interpretive writings of the Guardian. The friends are urged to give deep thought to this new department in Bahá’í News.

The Hands of the Cause of God

It is incumbent upon the members of the House of Justice, upon all the Aghán, the Afán, the Hands of the Cause of God to show their obedience, submissiveness and subordination unto the guardian of the Cause of God, to turn unto him and be lowly before him. He that opposeth him hath opposed the True One, will make a breach in the Cause of God, will subvert His Word and will become a manifestation of the Center of Sedition. Beware, beware, lest the days after the ascension (of Bahá’u’lláh) be repeated when the Center of Sedition waxed haughty and rebellious and with Divine Unity for his excuse deprived himself and perturbed and poisoned others. No doubt every vainglorious one that purposeth dissension and discord will not openly declare his evil purposes, nay rather, even as impure gold, would he seize upon diverse measures and various pretexts that he may separate the gathering of the people of Bahá. My object is to show that the Hands of the Cause of God must ever be watchful and so soon as they find anyone beginning to oppose and protest against the guardian of the Cause of God cast him out from the congregation of the people of Bahá and in no wise accept any excuse from him. How often hath grievous error been disguised in the garb of truth, that it might sow the seeds of doubt in the hearts of men! O ye beloved of the Lord! It is incumbent upon the guardian of the Cause of God to appoint in his own lifetime him that shall become his successor, that differences may not arise after his passing. He that is appointed must manifest in himself detachment from all worldly things, must be the essence of purity, must show in himself the fear of God, knowledge, wisdom and learning. Thus, should the first-born of the guardian of the Cause of God not manifest in himself the truth of the words:—"The child is the secret essence of its sire," that is, should be not inherit of the spiritual within him (the guardian of the Cause of God) and his glorious lineage not be matched with a goodly character, then must he (the guardian of the Cause of God), choose another branch to succeed him.

The Hands of the Cause of God must elect from their own number, nine persons that shall at all times be occupied in the important services in the work of the guardian of the Cause of God. The election of these nine must be carried either unanimously or by majority from the company of the Hands of the Cause of God and these whether unanimously or by a majority vote, must give their assent to the choice of the one whom the guardian of the Cause of God hath chosen as his successor. This assent must be given in such wise as the assenting and dissenting voices may not be distinguished. (secret ballot)

O friends! The Hands of the Cause of God must be nominated and appointed by the guardian of the Cause of God. All must be under his shadow and obey his command. Should any, within or without the company of the Hands of the Cause of God disobey, and seek division, the wrath of God and His vengeance will be upon him, for he will have caused a breach in the true faith of God.

The obligations of the Hands of the Cause of God are to diffuse the Divine Fragrances, to edify the souls of men, to promote learning, to improve the character of all men and to be, at all times and under all conditions, sanctified and detached from earthly things. They must manifest the fear of God by their conduct, their manners, their deeds and their words.

This body of the Hands of the Cause of God is under the direction of the guardian of the Cause of God. He must continually urge them to strive and endeavor to the utmost of their ability to diffuse the sweet savors of God, and to guide all the peoples of the world, for it is the light of Divine Guidance that causeth all the universe to be illumined. To disregard, though it be for a moment, this absolute successor. This assent must be given in such wise as the assenting and dissenting voices may not be distinguished.

Another source of confusion arises in connection with orders for Bahá'í photographs, Greatest Name cards,ringstones, etc. These are to be obtained from the Photograph and Sales Committee, H. E. Wairath, Chairman. The most important work published by the Committee this year is the Guardian's translation of "Prayers and Meditations by Bahá'u'lláh." Together with "Gleanings From the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh" it constitutes the source of inspiration and guidance to Bahá'ís.

The first of May, Mrs. Emogene Hoagg came to Louhelen Ranch, and before the first summer school session conducted a study class two nights a week for the Flint community, and also spoke before a number of groups in nearby towns.

The two youth sessions attracted more young people than previous years and from a greater number of cities.

The laboratory session through the contact and publicity courses and public meetings made it possible to reach several hundred people. Twelve towns were contacted by members of the session and resulted in Kenneth Christian's speaking before two Rotary Clubs and in engagements being made for August speakers.

There was a demand for our Bahá'í speakers, so Mr. Carl Scheffler came a week before the August session, and spoke before Rotary Clubs in Lapeer, Imlay City and Port Huron, to the Carvan Club in Saginaw, and to groups in Flint, Clio and Marysville.

ANOTHER TEMPLE MODEL ON EXHIBIT

This display was arranged by Drs. A. L. and E. Lenore Morris in the American Furniture Company store at Albuquerque, N. M.

Robert Gaines of Urbana also gave several informal talks in August to youth groups.

During the August session Mr. McDaniel and Mr. Ober each spoke before men's clubs in a number of towns previously contacted. Mr. McDaniel spoke over the radio in Port Huron.

During the entire season through these many contacts and the meetings at the summer school between 850 and 900 people heard of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Efforts are being made to continue the follow-up work in these many places.

In September, at the Flint flower show, the Louhelen Summer School displayed a model of the Bahá'í Temple surrounded by flowers. This attracted much attention.

The week following the August session Mrs. Caswell and Mr. Ober made contacts and did follow-up work in Saginaw, Pontiac, Port Huron and Fenton. Mr. Ober gave a talk over the radio in Port Huron.

MISS ZAMENHOF IN DETROIT

A detailed report of Miss Zamenhof's work in Detroit has just been received by her Esperanto Committee and as it contains some further Bahá'í news, I am sending in a short report at this time.

You will remember that one of the Detroit groups that she addressed upon her arrival was called True Kindred and we had no explanation as to the sort of organization this might be. This report explains that it is an auxiliary Masonic organization. She spoke to another Masonic group later on, called "High-Twelve." I also learn that her newspaper publicity included the following: 32 clippings from 19 presses of 7 languages. They are mailing me photostat copies of this publicity for forwarding to the National Publicity Committee. Apparently, no one took care of this, at the time, for the Bahá'ís, so that the photostat copies are to take the place of the originals.

A vacant store in Convention Hall on the ground floor was hired for the class. It had two windows and in one was put an exhibit of Bahá'í literature and in the other that of Esperanto. Many people passed by these windows daily and stopped to watch the classes in session and to examine the display of unusual literature. Some pictures were sent me, one showing the people at the window, which I shall turn over to the Publicity Committee.

Miss Zamenhof gave four public Bahá'í talks in English in this class room. They were announced to her classes, and outside of a few Bahá'í friends they constituted the principal part of her audience. 'Abdu'l-Bahá's portrait was placed on the wall of the class room.

Practically all of the talks she gave in nearby cities were arranged by the Bahá'ís. I will add to those already reported, Flint and Marysville, Mich. This fact, together with those mentioned herein, show a remarkable cooperation between the two groups of Bahá'ís and Esperantists.

The report ended with an eloquent testimonial to Miss Zamenhof herself.

REGIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE of Eastern Canada

Through a suggestion made by Mrs. Loveday in Green Acre during 1937 that Moncton, her former home, would be a fertile ground for pioneer work, Mrs. Howard Coby Ives after communicating with the National Teaching Committee went to Moncton. She opened a vigorous campaign availing herself of every opportunity.

Through her untiring efforts an Assembly was formed in Moncton on April 21st and this we feel was the most outstanding event in Canada during the past year. During the first six weeks of her stay Mrs. Ives gave public lectures, radio addresses and formed a study class. One of the radio broadcasts was given from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island where in a few hours visit she was able to contact the Mayor and several other leading citizens. This visit by air was due entirely to the efforts of Miss Ruth Wilson (then a non-Bahá'í).

MESSENGERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

From Letters and Cablegrams Received by the National Spiritual Assembly, January 10, 1936—September 24, 1938

"THIS IS TRULY PROVIDENTIAL"

Dearly-beloved co-workers: This new stage in the gradual unfulfillment of the Formative Period of our Faith into which we have just entered—the phase of concentrated teaching activity—synchronizes with a period of deepening gloom, of universal impotence, of ever-increasing destitution and widespread disillusionment in the fortunes of a declining age. This is truly providential and its significance and the opportunities it offers us should be fully apprehended and utilized. Now that the administrative organs of a firmly established Faith are vigorous and harmoniously functioning, and now that the Symbol (i.e., the House of Worship) of its invincible might is lending unprecedented impetus to its spread, an effort unexampled in its scope and sustained vitality is urgently required so that the moving spirit of its Founder may permeate and transform the lives of the countless multitudes that hunger for its teachings. That the beloved friends in America, who have carried triumphantly the banner of His Cause through the initial stages of its development, will in a still greater measure prove themselves capable of meeting the challenge of the present hour, I, for one, can never doubt. Of the evidences of their inexhaustible vitality I am sufficiently and continually conscious. My fervent plea will not, I feel certain, remain unanswered. For them I shall continue to pray from all my heart.—SHOGHI.

January 10, 1936.

THE GUARDIAN’S MESSAGE TO THE 1936 CONVENTION

Convey (to) American believers abiding gratitude efforts unitedly exerted (in) teaching field. Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systematically extended. Appeal (to) assembled delegates ponder historic appeal voiced by 'Abdu’1-Bahá (in) Tablets (of the) Divine Plan. Urge earnest deliberation with incoming National Assembly (to) insure its complete fulfilment. First century (of) Bahá’í era drawing to a close. Humanity entering outer fringes most perilous stage its existence. Opportunities (of) present hour unimaginably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order.—SHOGHI. Cablegram received May 1, 1936.

"FRESH CONQUESTS AND UNPRECEDEDENTED TRIUMPHS"

I fervently hope and pray that the year into which we have just entered may be signalized by fresh conquests and unprecedented triumphs in the teaching field within the United States and beyond its confines. A systematic, carefully conceived, and well-established plan should be devised, rigorously pursued and continuously extended. Initiated by the National representatives of the American believers, the vanguard and standard-bearers of the radiant army of Bahá’u’lláh, this plan should receive the whole-hearted, the sustained and ever-increasing support, both moral and financial, of the entire body of His followers in that continent. Its supreme immediate objective should be the permanent establishment of at least one center in every state of the American Republic and in every Republic of the American continent not yet enlisted under the banner of His Faith. Its ramifications should gradually be extended to the European continent, and the scope should be made to include those countries, such as the Baltic states, Poland, Greece, Spain and Portugal, where no avowed believer has established any definite residence. The field is immense, the task gigantic, the privilege inestimably precious. Time is short, and the obligation sacred, paramount and urgent. The American community must muster all its force, concentrate its resources, summon to its aid all the faith, the determination and energies of which it is capable, and set out, single-minded and undaunted, to attain still greater heights in its mighty exertions for the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh.—SHOGHI. May 30, 1936.

"THE UTMOST EFFORT"

"I cannot refrain from adding a few words to renew and reaffirm my fervent plea to you, and through you to every individual member of the American Bahá’í community, to exert the utmost effort in order to further the cause of teaching throughout the American continent. Every possible assistance, whether moral, financial, or administrative, should be continuously, generously, and systematically extended to this most urgent, this sacred and meritorious Cause. My heart yearns to learn of any speedy and effective action which the valiant members of that community may determine, whether collectively or severally, to undertake. The invisible hosts of the Bahá’í Kingdom are arrayed and ready to rush forth and ensure the triumph of every stout-hearted and persevering herald of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh."—SHOGHI.

"TIME IS SHORT"

...entreat (the) American believers (to) ponder anew (the) urgency (to) rededicate themselves (to the) task (of the) complete fulfilment (of the) Divine Plan. (The) National Assembly’s energetic leadership (and) careful planning (are) ineffectual unless supplemented by vigorous action by every believer, however humble, however inexperienced. Time is short. (The) sands (of a) chaotic, despairing civilization (are) steadily running out. Founded on (the) unity (and) understanding so splendidly achieved, functioning within (the) framework (of the) administrative Order, (so) laboriously erected, inspired (by the) vision (of the) Temple edifice (so) nobly reared, galvanized into action (by the) realization (of the) rapidly-deteriorating world situation, (the) American Bahá’í Community should rise as never before (to the) height (of the) opportunity now confronting it. Audaacity, resolution (and) self-abnegation (are) imperatively demanded. Impatiently and prayerfully waiting.—SHOGHI.

"INTENSIFY TEACHING WORK A THOUSANDFOLD"

I am eagerly awaiting the news of the progress of the activities initiated to promote the teaching work within, and beyond, the confines of the American continent. The American believers, if they wish to carry out, in the spirit and the letter, the parting wishes of their beloved Master, must intensify their teaching work a thousand fold and extend its ramifications beyond the confines of their native land and as far as the most distant outposts of their far-flung Faith. The Tablets of the Divine Plan invest your Assembly with unique and grave responsibilities, and confer upon it privileges which your sister Assemblies might well envy and admire. The present opportunity is unutterably precious. It may not recur again. Undaunted by the perils and the uncertainties of the present hour, the American believers must press on and prosecute in its entirety the task which now confronts them. I pray for their success from the depths of my heart.—SHOGHI

"UNSPAKEABLY GRATEFUL"

American Bahá'í Community, c/o Bahá'í, New York:

Overjoyed, unspeakably grateful (for) American believers' signal response (to) my reiterated appeal, (The) inaugurated campaign (is) fraught with consequences involving the immediate destinies (of the) American community. (The) shadows encircling sore-tried human society (are) noticeably deepening. (The) world crisis (is) inexorably moving towards climax, challenging the torchbearer (of) Bahá'í civilization (to) scale loftier heights (of) individual heroism, (to) scatter more widely throughout the length and breadth (of) the American continents, (to) participate more strenuously (in) concerted effort organized by National, Regional (and) local agencies dedicated to the prosecution (of) noble enterprise, (to) pour forth more abundantly (their) resources in support (of) the fund created for its furtherance, (and) resolve more determinedly (to) conquer whatever obstacles might retard its ultimate fruition. (The) Dawn-Breakers (in) previous age have on Persian soil signalled by their acts (the) birth (of the) Faith (of) Bahá'u'lláh. Might not American believers, their spiritual descendants, prove themselves in turn capable (of) ushering in on world scale the civilization of which that Faith is (the) direct source and sole begetter.—SHOGHI

"THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE UNDERTAKING"

Dear and prized co-workers:

I cannot allow this communication to be sent without adding a few words in person and stress afresh the significance of the undertaking in which the entire Bahá'í community has embarked. The promulgation of the Divine Plan, unveiled by our departed Master in the darkest days of one of the severest ordeals which humanity has ever experienced, is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to fulfill their unimaginably glorious Destiny. As the proclamation of the Message reverberates throughout the land, as its resistless march gathers momentum, as the field of its operation widens, and the numbers of its upholders and champions multiply, its potentialities will correspondingly unfold, exerting a most beneficent influence not only on every community throughout the Bahá'í world, but on the immediate fortunes of a travelling society. The repercussions of this campaign are already apparent in Europe, India, Egypt, Iraq and even among the sore-tried communities in Persia and Russia. The Faith of God is gaining in stature, effectiveness and power. Yet, until, however, the great enterprise which you are now conducting runs its full course and attains its final objective, at its appointed time, can its world-encompassing benefits be fully apprehended or revealed. The perseverance of the American believers will, no doubt, ensure the ultimate realization of these benefits.—SHOGHI

"A COMPLETE REDEDICATION"

Dearly-beloved co-workers: Pressure of work in connection with my recent translation of the prayers and meditations of Bahá'u'lláh has been responsible for the unfortunate delay in acknowledging the receipt of your communications all of which testify most strikingly to the vigor, the efficiency and the exemplary loyalty with which you are conducting and coordinating the manifold teaching and administrative activities of our beloved Faith. The program of the teaching campaign is most remarkable and reassuring: the uninterrupted prosecution of this holy enterprise and its extension to the South American continent and the islands of the Pacific will no doubt attract unimaginable blessings and must entail far-reaching consequences. In the course of this year, when the American believers are commemorating the 25th anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to America, a mighty impetus should be lent to this campaign which you have so splendidly initiated. A complete rededication to its ideals, its purposes and requirements on the part of all individuals and Assemblies, can alone befit such a nation-wide celebration. I pray that you may fulfill your high destiny.—SHOGHI

"NOW FURTHER REINFORCED"

Deeply moved your message. Institution (of) Guardianship, head cornerstone (of the) Administrative Order (of the) Cause (of) Bahá'u'lláh, already ennobled through its organic connection with (the) Persons of Twin Founders (of the) Bahá'í Faith, is now further reinforced through direct association with West and particularly with (the) American believers, whose spiritual destiny is to usher in (the) World Order (of) Bahá'u'lláh. "WITH ADDED FERVOR"

Accept. Deeply touched (by) American believers' spontaneous expression of ever-increasing devotion to crowning institution (of) World Order (of) Bahá'u'lláh. Noblest contribution individual believers can make at this juncture to consecrate newly-acquired tie is to promote with added fervor unique plan conceived for them by 'Abdu'l-Bahá.—SHOGHI

Second, resume with inflexible determination exterior ornamentation (of) entire structure (of) Temple. Advise ponder message conveyed (to) delegates (through) esteemed co-workers, Fred Schopfthofer. "THE CALL HAS GONE FORTH ... THE PATH IS CLEAR"

The responsibilities which, under your direction and in response to my plea, the American community is now assuming over and above the task they have already undertaken in connection with the Divine Plan, proclaiming in unmistakable terms their unwavering determination to prove themselves worthy of the sublimity of their mission, and of their privileged position among their sister communities in both the East and the West,—the twofold task they have arisen to perform will, if carried out in time, release the potentialities with which the community of the Greatest Name has been so generously and mysteriously endowed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to carry out in its entirety and to its final consummation this dual enterprise would shed on the closing years of this first century of the Bahá’í Era a luster no less brilliant than the immortal deeds which have signalized its birth, in the heroic age of our Faith. To the American believers, the spiritual descendents of the heroes of God’s Cause, I again address my plea to arise as one soul and to prosecute with unrelaxing resolve the high mission with which their immediate destiny is inextricably interwoven. The call has gone forth, the path is clear; the goal manifests and within their reach. Though their responsibilities be pressing and heavy and the obstacles formidable and manifold, yet the spirit of our invincible Faith will enable them to conquer if they arise unitedly and determinedly and persevere till the very end.—Shoghi. June 4, 1937.

SEVEN YEAR PLAN

Immeasurably gratified National Assembly’s initial step presentation Seven-Year Plan. Successful operation Temple enterprise necessitates carrying out faithfully energetically following successive steps. First, expedite preliminary investigations. Second, utilize Fred’s historic munificent donation by immediate signature contract for next unit. Third, redirect with added force nationwide appeal to entire community insure uninterrupted completion first unit and accumulation sufficient funds enable placing without delay final contract. Fourth, place final contract as soon as half required sum available in National Treasury. Fifth, re-emphasize supreme obligation triumphant consummation so vital a part of American believers’ twofold task by May, 1944. Advise communicate above message all believers stimulate universal response Assembly’s future endeavors.—Shoghi. Cablegram received July 4, 1937.

"AN INESCAPABLE ... RESPONSIBILITY"

Much heartened (by) compelling evidences accelerated speed with which teaching campaign inaugurated throughout Americas (is) now progressing. Greatly cheered (by) realization no more than five States and three Canadian Provinces remain still deprived (of) radiant Light which unfolding, divinely conceived Plan is rapidly diffusing. In a world perilously near cataclysmic convulsions destined experience, at a time when forces of repression are launching their assaults and conspiring (to) undermine foundations, (of) most powerful strongholds (of) Faith (of) Bahá’u’lláh in land of its birth and in heart of both Asiatic and European continents, an inescapable, well-nigh staggering responsibility rests on America, its one chief remaining citadel. Who among its stalwart defenders will arise, untrammelled (and) unafraid, to implant its banner in those States, Provinces (and) Countries where its standard is still unhoisted? Entreat afresh American community heed vital urgency (of) my impassioned plea (and) spur efforts bring speedy termination (of) first Stage in evolution (of) so important (a) phase of dual task they have so enthusiastically shouldered.—Shoghi. Cablegram received August 4, 1937.

CONVENTION DELEGATES INCREASED TO HUNDRED SEVENTY-ONE

Election of hundred seventy-one delegates for this year’s and future Conventions absolutely essential. Admitted expansion American community vitally demands it. Appeal delegates unable attend in person exercise conscientiously ballot right by mail. Increased participation by believers in Convention proceedings reinforces authority and broadens basis national representatives and knits them closer to entire body electorate. Advise share message American believers.—Shoghi. Cablegram received November 21, 1937.

"ALL SHOULD ARISE"

To this letter ... I wish to add a few observations connected with the wider and more challenging issues with which the American believers as a body are now being confronted. As I lift up my gaze beyond the strain and stresses which a struggling Faith must necessarily experience, and view the wider scene which the indomitable will of the American Bahá’í community is steadily unfolding, I can not but marvel at the range which the driving force of their ceaseless labors has acquired and the heights which their belief has attained. The outposts of a Faith, already persecuted in both Europe and Asia, are in the American continent steadily advancing, the visible symbols of its undoubted sovereignty are receiving fresh luster every day and its manifold institutions are driving their roots deeper and deeper into its soil. Bless and honored as none among its sister communities has been in recent years, preserved through the ineradicable dispersions of Divine Providence for a destiny which no mind can as yet imagine such a community cannot for a moment afford to be content with or rest on the laurels it has so deservedly won. It must go on, continually go on, exploring fresh fields, scaling nobler heights, laying firmer foundations, shedding added splendor and achieving added renown in the service and for the glory of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh. The seven year plan which it has sponsored and with which its destiny is so closely interwoven, must at all costs be prosecuted with increasing force and added consecration. All should arise and participate. Upon the measure of such a participation will no doubt depend the welfare and progress of those distant communities which are now battling for their emancipation. To such a priceless privilege the inheritors of the shining grace of Bahá’u’lláh cannot surely be indifferent. The American believers must gird up the loins of endeavor and step into the arena of service with such heroism as shall astound the entire Bahá’í world. Let them be assured that my prayers will continue to be offered on their behalf. —Shoghi. November 25, 1937.

"CERTAIN VITAL REQUIREMENTS"

The Seven Year Plan, with which the immediate fortunes of the American Bahá’í community are so closely interwoven, demands, at this critical stage in its development, serious and prayerful consideration of certain vital requirements, without which such a stupendous task can never be brought
"A YEAR HAS ALMOST ELAPSED"

A year has almost elapsed since the Seven Year Plan has been launched with characteristic vigor and noble enthusiasm by the American Bahá’í Community. For no less than six consecutive years this two-fold and stupendous enterprise has been set in operation, must, if the American believers are to prove themselves worthy of their high calling, be wisely conducted, continually reinforced and energetically prosecuted to its very end. Severe and unprecedented as may be the internal tests and ordeals which the members of this Community may yet experience, however tragic and momentous the external happenings which might well disrupt the fabric of the society in which they live, they must not throughout these six remaining years, allow themselves to be disheartened from the course they are now steadily pursuing. Nay, rather, as the impelling forces which have set in motion this mighty undertaking acquire added momentum and its potentialities are more fully manifested, they who are responsible for its success must as time goes on evince a more burning enthusiasm, demonstrate a higher sense of solidarity, reveal greater depths of consecration to their task, and display a unyielding determination to achieve its purpose. Then, and only then, will the promise of the Divine Plan, be worthily accomplished and fulfilled.

The wider its range the more striking will be the evidences of Divine assistance. The moment, therefore, has arrived when the Bahá’ís of both Continents should be so thoroughly infused with the all-conquering Spirit of Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw nigh unto Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw nigh unto Him. The moment is the earnest appeal voiced by Him in those Tablets, in which He exhorts them, “in these countries, capitals, islands, assemblies and churches, to enter the Abhá Kingdom. The scope of your exertions must needs be extended. The wider its range the more striking will be the evidences of Divine assistance.” The moment is the moment, therefore, when the Bahá’ís of both Continents should be so thoroughly infused with the all-conquering Spirit of Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw nigh unto Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw nigh unto Him. I heartily welcome and am deeply touched by the assurances conveyed in your last communication, and am particularly rejoiced to learn of the steps already taken by your Assembly to insure the uninterrupted progress of the ornamentation work on the Temple. The determination and zeal which you have so clearly evinced in taking these initial steps augur well for the continued expansion and ultimate fruition of the two-fold enterprise you have undertaken to accomplish. Individual believers and local Assemblies will assuredly be greatly heartened and reinvigorated by the splendid initiative that has marked the beginning of your year's stewardship in the service of this glorious Cause. The high expectations we all cherish will no doubt be fulfilled.—SHOGHI.

"PRAYING INSTANTANEOUS RESPONSE"

Rejoiced thankful initiative resourcefulness newly elected National Assembly prompting them signalize inauguration period stewardship by launching third stage in progressive unfoldment seven year plan. Such far-sighted action evokes in me deepest longing that they will not alone accomplish placing final contract but will have also ere expiry allotted year embarked on concluding stage by insuring uninterrupted prosecution of closing phase of an enterprise which for no less than thirty years has engaged attention and challenged resources of entire American Bahá'í community. Praying instantaneous response sustained support all those whom destiny has primarily associated with Revelation in so gloomy epoch of this luminous symbol of Bahá'ulláh's transcendent Sovereignty.

"MARCHING TOWARD THEIR GOAL"

Dear co-workers:
I wish to reaffirm in person my sense of joy and gratitude, as expressed in my last cable to your Assembly, at the new spirit of alertness and determination which you have so clearly demonstrated while yet on the threshold of your year of stewardship in the service of the Cause of Bahá'ulláh. I am filled with fresh hopes, and yearn to witness, ere the present year draws to a close, not only the fulfilment of an unexamined record of service but the revelation of such depths of consecration as will astonish, nay thrill, both the members of your own community and the rest of the Bahá'í world. Pregnant indeed are the years looming ahead of us all. The twin processes of internal disintegration and external chaos are being accelerated and every day are inexorably moving towards a climax. The rumbles that must precede the eruption of those forces that must cause "the limbs of humanity to quake" can already be heard. "The time of the end," "the latter years," as foretold in the Scriptures, are at last long upon us. The Pen of Bahá'u'lláh, the voice of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, have time and again, insistently and in terms unmistakable, warned an unheeding humanity of impending disaster. The Community of the Most Great Name, the leaven that must leaven the lump, the chosen remnant that must survive the rolling up of the old, discredited, tottering order, and assist in the unfoldment of a new one in its stead, is standing ready, alert, clear-visioned, and resolute. The American believers, standard-bearers of this world-wide community and torch-bearers of an as yet unborn civilization, have girt up their loins, unfurled their banners and stepped into the arena of service. Their Plan has been formulated. Their forces are mobilized. They are steadfastly marching towards their goal. The hosts of the Abhá' Kingdom are rushing forth, as promised, to direct their steps and reinforce their power. Through their initial victories they have provided the impulse that must now surge and, with relentless force sweep over their sister-communities and eventually overpower the entire human race. The generality of mankind, blind and enslaved, is wholly unaware of the healing power with which this community has been endowed, nor can it as yet suspect the role which this same community is destined to play in its redemption. Fierce and manifold will be the assaults which governments, races, classes and religions, jealous of its rising prestige and fearful of its consolidating strength, will seek to silence its voice and sap its foundations. Unmoved by the relative obscurity that surrounds it at the present time, and undaunted by the forces that will be arrayed against it in the future, this community, I cannot but feel confident, will, no matter how afflicting the agonies of a travelling age, pursue its destiny, undeflected in its course, undimmed in its serenity, unyielding in its resolve, unshaken in its convictions.

"UNBROKEN SOLIDARITY, UNQUENCHABLE ENTHUSiasm"

Dear and valued co-workers:
I feel truly exhilarated as I witness the ever-recurrent manifestations of unbroken solidarity and unquenchable enthusiasm that distinguish every stage in the progressive development of the nation-wide enterprise which is being so unflinchingly pursued by the whole American Bahá'í community. The marked deterioration in world affairs, the steadily deepening gloom that develops the storm-tossed peoples and nations of the Old World, invest the Seven-year Plan, now operating in both the northern and southern American continents, with a significance and urgency that cannot be overestimated. Conceived as the supreme agency for the establishment, in the opening century of the Bahá'í Era, of what is but the initial stage in the progressive realization of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Plan for the American believers, this enterprise, as it extends its ramifications throughout the entire New World, is demonstrating its power to command and all the resources and utilize all the facilities which the machinery of a laboriously evolved Administrative Order can place at its disposal. However we view its aspects, it offers in its functioning a sharp contrast to the workings of the moribund and obsolete institutions to which a perverse generation is desperately clinging. Tempestuous are the winds that buffet and will, as the days go by, fiercely assail the very structure of the Order through the agency of those who in this forefend task is being performed. The potentialities with which an almighty Providence has endowed it will no doubt enable its promoters to achieve their purpose. Much, however will depend upon the spirit and manner in which that task will be conducted. Through the clearness and steadiness of their vision, through the unvitiated vitality of their belief, through the incorruptibility of their character, through the adamantine force of their resolve, the matchless superiority of their aims and purpose, and the unsurpassed range of their accomplishments, they who labor for the glory of the Most Great Name throughout both Americas can best demonstrate to the visionless, faithless and restless society to which they belong their power to proffer a haven of refuge to its members in the hour of their realized doom. Then and only then will this tender sapling, embedded in the fertile soil of a Divinely appointed Administrative Order, and energized by the dynamic processes of its institutions, yield its richest and destined fruit. That the community of the American believers, to whose keeping so vast, so delicate and precious a trust has been committed will, severally and collectively prove themselves worthy of their high calling. I for one, who in my association with them have been privileged to observe more closely than perhaps any one else the nature of their reactions to the momentous issues that have confronted them in the past, will refuse to doubt.

—SHOGHI.

LOYALTY TO WORLD ORDER
OF BAHÁ'U'LLAH

Loyalty to world order Bahá'ú'lláh, security its basic institutions, both imperatively demand all its avowed supporters, particularly its champion builders of American continent, in these days when sinister uncontrollable forces are deepening cleavage sundering peoples, nations, creeds, classes; resolve despite pressure fast crystallizing public opinion abstain individually collectively in word, action, informally as well as in all official utterances publications from assigning blame, taking sides, however indirectly, in recurring political crises now agitating, ultimately engulfing human society. POTENTIAL SPIRITUAL POWER HOUSE

The potential power resources of America are being studied and surveyed with a view to their more efficient utilization through development, coordination and integration. Vast resources of water power now lie idle in the streams which course down the mountain slopes—east and west. Under ground are large areas of coal, gas and oil; fuels for the future generation of steam and for the production of electric energy. As our material civilization expands, its daily needs multiply and we become increasingly dependent on the electric current to light our homes, offices, factories and farms, to furnish transportation and communication from place to place, and to move our machinery in the home, workshop, mine or field.

Little do we realize the complete coordination of a multitude of parts, the harmony of adjustment of diversified elements and the unity of action required for the operation of an electric system. A closed valve, a thrown switch or a missing cable may throw an entire community into darkness and despair.

Communities are still dependent largely on local generating stations. To ensure dependability of service, especially in case of possible damage from storms and breakdowns from unforeseen sources, systems are being connected and developed into so-called "grids" which cover a region or section of the country. Thus the various sources of power are inter-connected so that the production of electric energy is augmented, assured, and protected for every part of the region; any person or family may have light, heat or power anywhere and at any time.

The Bahá’ís scattered throughout America, as isolated believers, in groups, or in communities, are potential units of spiritual power. As isolated believers, they are the nuclei for the development of power centers, which expand with the growth of the communities. Such growth is a measure of the harmony and unity of action among the believers, who constitute the elements of the spiritual power house. Personal antagonisms, selfish actions, disobedience of the Administrative order and lack of cooperation bring about maladjustments and even breaks in the spiritual power system—often to such extent that spiritual power is not radiated out to the community, but the community itself becomes inert, inactive and darkened.
What a mighty task has been set before us by our Guardian in the Seven Year Plan! Each and every believer must begin with the self, cleansing and purifying and raising the self to the place of selfless service, obedience and cooperation. Then, and only then, do we become suitable units to function in the spiritual power house. The local Spiritual Assemblies have the responsibility of so uniting and harmonizing these elements into a smoothly running, efficiently operating generating station of spiritual power, which should gradually radiate the Power of the Spirit throughout their communities.

In time, these spiritual power houses, the Baha'i communities will spread throughout the length and breadth of the land and through the National Spiritual Assembly become interconnected into one great spiritual superpower system.

In reply to the letter written the Postmaster of Wilmette by the National Spiritual Assembly conveying the appreciation of the Convention for the Wilmette design for Air Mail Week, the Postmaster wrote on September 7: "We felt that in choosing this (Temple) for our design, we were taking the outstanding building not only of Wilmette, but of the world, seeing that there is no other to compare with it in architecture.

"We also wish to thank you and your followers for the interest shown by them in mailing these cachets to their friends during Air Mail Week."

Radio Committee

The Radio Committee urges cooperation from Assemblies, groups and individual teachers. They are requested to send the Radio Committee copies of all radio talks that are presented, not, of course, including those that may have been secured from the Radio Committee itself. The Radio Committee is developing as many talks as possible and acts as clearing house for this type of teaching material.

Assemblies, groups and teachers are also requested to report their broadcasts, mentioning the results secured, what subjects are most successful, how many inquiries are received for copies
The creative energies released by the law of Bahá'u'lláh, permeating and evolving within the mind of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, have, by their very compact and close interaction, given birth to an Instrument which may be viewed as the Charter of the New World Order which is at once the glory and the promise of this most great Dispensation.—Shoghi Effendi.

In order to promote a more direct and intimate spiritual association with the provisions of the Master's Will and Testament on the part of the American Bahá'í Community, the National Spiritual Assembly will publish a series of excerpts from the Will, together with selections from the interpretive writings of the Guardian. The friends are urged to give deep thought to this new department of Bahá'í News.

World Unity

Should differences arise they shall be amicably and conclusively settled by the Supreme Tribunal, that shall include members from all the governments and peoples of the world.

"O ye beloved of the Lord! In this sacred Dispensation, conflict and contention are in no wise permitted. Every aggressor deprives himself of God's grace. It is incumbent upon everyone to show the utmost love, rectitude of conduct, straightforwardness and sincere kindness unto all the peoples and kindreds of the world, be they friends or strangers. So intense must be the spirit of love and loving-kindness that the stranger may find himself a friend, the enemy a true brother, no difference whatsoever existing between them. For universality is of God and all limitations earthly. Thus man must strive that his reality may manifest virtues and perfections, the light thereof may shine upon everyone. The light of the sun shineth upon all the world and the merciful showers of Divine Providence fall upon all peoples. The vivifying breeze reviveth every living creature and all things endured with life obtain their share and portion at His heavenly board. In like manner, the affections and loving-kindness of the One True God must be bountifully and universally extended to all mankind. Regarding this, restrictions and limitations are in no wise permitted.

"Wherefore, O my loving friends! Consort with all the peoples, kindreds and religions of the world with the utmost truthfulness, uprightness, faithfulness, kindness, good-will and friendliness; that all the world of being may be filled with the holy ecstasy of the grace of Bahá, that ignorance, enmity, hate and rancor may vanish from the world and the darkness of estrangement amidst the peoples and kindreds of the world may give way to the Light of Unity. Should other people and nations be unfaithful to you show your fidelity unto them, should they be unjust toward you show justice toward them, should they keep aloof from you, do not let them affect you to yourself, should they show their enmity be friendly toward them, should they poison your lives sweeten their souls, should they inflict a wound upon you be a salve to their sores. Such are the attributes of the sincere! Such are the attributes of the truthful.

"O ye beloved of the Lord! It is incumbent upon you to be submissive to all monarchs that are just and show your fidelity to every righteous king. Serve ye the sovereigns of the world with utmost truthfulness and loyalty. Show obedience unto them and be their well-wishers. Without their leave do not meddle with political affairs, for disloyalty to the just sovereign is disloyalty to God Himself."

"In every Dispensation," writes 'Abdu'l-Bahá, "the light of Divine Guidance has been focussed upon one central theme... . In this wondrous Revelation, this glorious century, the foundation of the Faith of God and the distinguishing feature of His Law is the consciousness of the Oneness of Mankind."

"Let there be no mistake. The principle of the Oneness of Mankind—the pivot round which all the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh revolve—is no mere outburst of ignorant emotionalism or an expression of vague and pious hope... . It does not constitute merely the enunciation of an ideal, but stands inseparably associated with an institution adequate to embody its truth, demonstrate its validity, and perpetuate its influence. It implies an organic change in the structure of present-day society, a change such as the world has not yet experienced... . It calls for no less than the reconstruction and the democratization of the whole civilized world—a world organically unified in all the essential aspects of its life, its political machinery, its spiritual aspiration, its trade and finance, its script and language, and yet infinite in the diversity of the national characteristics of its federated units.

"It represents the consummation of human evolution—an evolution that has had its earliest beginnings in the birth of family life, its subsequent development in the achievement of tribal solidarity, leading in turn to the constitution of the city-state, and expanding later into the institution of independent and sovereign nations."

"The principle of the Oneness of Mankind, as proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh, carries with it no more and no less than a solemn assertion that attainment to this final stage in this stupendous evolution is not only necessary but inevitable, that its realization is fast approaching, and that nothing short of a power that is born of God can succeed in establishing it.

"So marvellous a conception finds its earliest manifestations in the efforts consciously exerted and the modest beginnings already achieved by the declared adherents of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh who, conscious of the sublimity of their calling and initiated into the ennobling principles of His Administration, are forging ahead to establish His Kingdom on this earth."

THAT MYSTIC CHAIN

Did not the attitude of the Greatest Holy Leaf, as she approached the close of her life, bear eloquent testimony to the incomparable share which her steadfast and self-sacrificing lovers in that continent have had in lightening the burden which had weighed so long and so heavily on her heart? And finally who can be so bold as to deny that the completion of the superstructure of the Mashriqí-ádhistán—the crowning glory of America's past and present achievements—has forged that mystic chain which is to link, more firmly than ever, the hearts of its champion-builders with Him Who is the Source and Center of their Faith and the Object of their truest adoration?

LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL.

From July 9 to 19, the Louhelen Summer School Committee conducted an unusual course of study—a Laboratory course which was designed to prepare individuals for the teaching field. The response from those in attendance at this experimental session was so great that plans are already under way to gradually pattern all the Louhelen sessions in the future after the Laboratory Session this summer.

Four basic courses made up the program of study. Mrs. H. Emogene Hoag gave her course on "The Three Worlds." Kenneth Christian gave a course on the organization and systematic study of the teachings. This completed the work of the morning. In the afternoon a course in public speaking was conducted. In the evening Mrs. Alice Bacon and Marguerite Reimer gave a course in public speaking, radio, and personal contacts.

The chief difference between the Laboratory Session and other sessions was the emphasis on personal study by all the students present and the absence of the lecture-note-taking method. It was this practical, supervised study and research that brought such enthusiasm response from those present at the Summer School. Some individuals literally studied into the morning hours.

The success of this new venture has caused the Louhelen Committee to start more definite preparations whereby Louhelen may actually become a school for intensive and scholarly study of the Faith. In view of this, the first major need which presents itself is an adequate library. The following works are needed:

1. Books and materials on Comparative Religions, especially books and materials on Christianity and Islám.
2. Books and articles on the subject of Science and Religion, the Influence of Religion, etc.
4. Copies of all Bahá'í publications.
5. Copies of compilations made by individuals.

The aim of the Louhelen Committee is to build up a large extensive, and complete Library which will meet all the needs of the Bahá'í student. As soon as such a Library is established as part of the School, there will be a place for intensive research and study.

LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

"ENDEAVOR TO SPREAD A NETWORK OF BAHÁ'IS"

To the believers of the U. S. and Canada:

There has lately been referred from the National Spiritual Assembly a resolution adopted by the last Convention requesting "the National Assembly to endeavor to spread a network of Bahá'ís in virgin territory of North America." Beloved friends, the National Teaching Committee has no choice but to refer this resolution back to you!

To establish such a network is one of the two avowed purposes of the Seven Year Plan, the very aim of the Guardian in his series of impassioned messages, dating from that first historic cablegram of May 1, 1936. "Would to God," he appealed "every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination this glorious century embrace light Faith of Bahá'u'lláh... ."

Beloved friends, our Guardian is never vague in his claims upon us, nor does he underestimate the power which is ours for the asking. Not one of us presumes that, of himself alone, he is equal to the standard of heroism required. Yet not one of us would dare to doubt Shoghi Effendi's confidence that we can attain it, through the help of Almighty God! Our goal is plain to us all; how shall we reach it?

Fortunately we have the answer from the Guardian himself, and it is as a reminder that the Committee publishes again excerpts from his memorable words.

May 19, 1936: "Convention plea addressed to American believers cannot achieve its purpose unless dauntless pioneers promptly rise and, forsaking homeland, permanently reside countries where light of Faith not yet penetrates."

June 4: "To the American believers, the spiritual descendants of the heroes of God's Cause, I again address my plea to arise as one soul and to prosecute with unrelaxing resolve the high mission with which their immediate destiny is inextricably interwoven."

June 26: "As the Guardian's telegraph clearly reveals, this teaching plan has two chief objectives: first, to establish a center in every State within the U. S. A. and then in every State throughout the American continent. "

"What the Guardian would strongly advise is, first, to concentrate heart and soul on the first part of this teaching program, namely, to have at least one center established in those States of the American Republic where there are as yet no believers. This task can best be accomplished by means of settlement in these States by at least one believer."

November 14: "An effort should be made to facilitate, as much as possible, the extension of the teaching work by helping those who are financially unable to reach their destination, and once there to encourage them to settle and earn the means of their livelihood."

August 4, 1937: "Who among its stalwart defenders will arise, untrammeled (and) unafraid, to implant its banner in those States, Provinces (and) Countries, where its standard is still unhonored?"

Shoghi Effendi has stripped the blindness of inertia from our eyes, has directed us toward an unquestionable goal, and has defined the means whereby we may assuredly succeed. What more is there for him to say? The Cause needs pioneers! The Cause needs single-hearted individuals who, with pure motives and simple faith, accept the promise of Divine assistance in establishing new ties and homes. It needs young couples whose lives are not yet entrenched, and who believe that in obedience to the Will of God they may discover their deepest happiness, and win their most enduring security. It needs us all, and not one of us wishes to escape! But above all, if the network is to be laid down, and the initial stage of the Divine Plan consummated, there must be volunteers who, like the early followers of the Master, dared to risk their futures because He asked it.

"Forsaking home, kindred, friends and position a handful of men and women, fired with a zeal and confidence which no human agency can kindle, arose to carry out the mandate which `Abdu'l-Bahá had issued. . . . These men and women have been instrumental in extending, to a degree as yet unsurpassed in Baha'i history, the sway of Bahá'u'lláh's universal dominion. . . . It would be impossible for me to unfold in this short compass the tale of such heroic actions. Nor can any tribute of mine do justice to the spirit which has enabled these standard-bearers of the Religion of God to win such laurels and to confer such distinction on the generation to which they belong." (World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, pp. 87-88).

The National Teaching Committee would direct attention also to a statement previously prepared and issued in Baha'i News, September, 1937, page 3. It is prepared to lend every aid in its power to those friends who gallantly arise in this pioneer service.

May not our generation, too, earn the praise of the Guardian? Are we not also faithful to the mandate of 'Abdu'l-Bahá?

Beloved friends, the following article was written for us by Albert and Alice Entzminger, who have preceded us in the arena of service. Our love and gratitude go to them for their dauntless spirit in establishing the Faith in the pioneer State of Oklahoma. May their account inspire us to follow in this path!

Faithfully yours,

TEACHING COMMITTEE

"THE GREAT URGE"

"Let your exertions, henceforth, increase a thousand-fold. . . . "The scope of your exertions must needs be extended. The wider its range the more striking will be the evidences of Divine assistance. . . ."—`Abdu'l-Bahá.

"The moment this Divine Message is carried forward by the American believers . . . this community will find itself securely established upon the throne of an everlasting dominion. . . . Then will the whole world resound with the praises of its majesty and greatness."—`Abdu'l-Bahá.

It was during the late summer of 1936 when Shoghi Effendi's first appeals had stirred the American believers, that we felt the great urge to respond to his call. But the fact that we were both new and inexperienced in the Cause made us hesitate. Also at the same time we were bound in an unhappy situation, release from which seemed well-nigh impossible. But the urge persisted and finally in inspiration we addressed our first letter to the Guardian, expressing to him the joy that was ours in having received in this Day the glorious Message of Bahá'u'lláh. In our letter, also, we made mention of our great desire to serve, however humble that service might be, saying nothing, however, of the obstacles which lay in our path.

It was but a few weeks later when suddenly in a most miraculous manner things began to happen, and almost before we realized it we found ourselves freed from the difficulties that had bound us. It was then we laid our entire problem before the National Teaching Committee, offering to them our services wherever they might think it best for us to go. Soon their suggestion was received that we, a family, take up our residence in Oklahoma City where, according to their records, Baha'i work had been done some years previously.

So it was that in January, 1937, through the assistance of both the National Teaching Committee and our own Geyserville Community, we left California to become Oklahomans. Just the day before our departure came the reply from the Guardian, and we recognized through what Power these doors had been opened to us.

A week later we found ourselves, a family of four, in Oklahoma City in the midst of winter, without acquaintance and without means of livelihood. On the train the four of us had contracted the flu and we were ill on arrival; so our first thought was to rush to a hotel and to bed. Our prayers for healing brought response and a few days later our problem became one of finding a home. Having left our furniture and practically all our personal effects in California, we required a furnished house; but just at that time, with two children, without work, and without the needed references, this was no easy matter. But again Bahá'u'lláh was with us. One day during a blizzard we set out, and at the first place we called we found not only a clean, delightful little cottage, but a genial landlord who hesitated not at all that we were strangers and who also welcomed children. You may be sure we made great haste to move our baggage to our new home. From the first the children adapted themselves marvelously to the different climate, to the new school system and the city life. Almost immediately we were able to make contacts, and we were amazed at the surprising number of instances we were able to give the Message to strangers who came to our door.

At once we started to look up the contacts which had been furnished us by the Teaching Committee and found, much to our surprise, true believers. Our joy knew no bounds. These devoted souls had responded to the fine work done by Orcella Rexford and Edwina Powell, and although they had not communicated or been in touch with the Baha'i world and were thus completely isolated, their faith in Baha'u'llah remained firm. With their immediate cooperation we were soon able to form a study-class, meeting each Sunday afternoon, to be followed later by still another class on week-day afternoons. Later, in the month of September, these small classes evolved into a registered Baha'i Group of nine.

Significant also was the manner in which, after five months of fruitless effort, employment was finally obtained. Here definitely there was another lesson that we were to learn. We had felt that the first thing was to find work, and because this was our understanding we brought upon ourselves many misgivings which could well have been spared us, had we fully realized that the paramount thing was really submission to God's will. For undoubtedly God had other plans. Not until our study classes were well launched, and a physical infirmity of long standing, incorrectly diagnosed by California doctors, was completely and miraculously corrected by our new-found Baha'i friends, was a position finally secured. And this long sought position, with a newly-organized company, could not under any circumstances have been available before; it became so on the very first day that we were physically able to accept it!

Many, indeed, were the other evidences of Divine Aid that we received,—in our contacts, in our material needs, in the many beautiful and inspiring messages of encouragement and support. Never shall we forget these first months in Oklahoma, for indeed it was then that we were privileged to feel the exhilaration of His Nearness and receive the assurance of His never-failing help. Always there was response to our prayers for strength and guidance, and this response came to us in such manner that we lived in a veritable "valley of astonishment."

As we write these words our stay in Oklahoma City has been but eighteen months, and the Group of nine which was organized in September, 1937, is now a Baha'i Community of ten, for on April 21st of this year was elected the first Spiritual Assembly in this State. Also we are hopeful that very soon our number will be increased. During this time, Bahá'ís from all parts of the country have come to our assistance. Many were the letters that we received, often with names of friends for us to contact. The Teaching Committee has kept us well supplied with literature and has written frequent letters of advice and stimulation.

"How great, therefore, is the bounty of the Abba Beauty Who, notwithstanding our utter unworthiness, hath through His grace and mercy breathed into us in this divinely-illumined century the spirit of life, hath gathered us beneath the standard of the Beloved of the world, and chosen to confer upon us a bounty for which the mighty ones of bygone ages had craved in vain." "The souls of the well-favored among the concourse on high, the sacred dwellers of the most exalted Paradise, are in this day filled with burning desire to return to this world, that they may render such service as lie in their power to the threshold of the Abba Beauty."—(Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh, p. 18).

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

The National Publicity Committee is tremendously impressed by the number of individual believers who singly and alone have opened up new publicity channels over various parts of the country. A great deal of this new publicity material which has come to the National Press Books since May first this year has been the result of long and arduous effort.

From the newspapers of Eagle River and Manitowoc, Wisconsin, have come long articles on the Temple and the Cause through the efforts of Mrs. Ruth Moffat. Some of these carried a picture of the Temple.

Miss Marguerite Reimer with the assistance of Mrs. William Russell, was successful in having numerous articles on the Cause published in connection with her radio talks given this summer in Madison, Wisconsin. These articles gave summaries of her talks. This type of publicity was effectively negotiated also by Mrs. Olivia Kelsey in Columbus, Ohio.

The Corpus Christi (Texas) Daily Chronicle rewarded Mrs. Kathryn Frankland's continuous efforts, last August, by giving her a permanent column under the name, Loom of Reality. This column is a compilation of quotations from outstanding public figures on subjects of general interest which always include quotations from the Teachings.

Many of the believers have given good publicity to the Cause by contributing to Editor's columns which are open to comments from the paper's readers on any subject. Mr. C. H. Pettit of Bucyrus, Ohio, has had several such articles on various phases of the Teachings as well as direct articles in the news space of Bucyrus papers. Mrs. Margaret Atwater of Miami, Florida, has continued in her success during the summer in having articles published in a "To the Editor" column which give the Teachings without mentioning names. One of Mrs. Atwater's articles on "Baha'u'llah, the Manifestation of God" was printed with her by-line in Phoenix, Arizona. Clinton Bugbee of Phoenix has been instrumental in having published a picture of the Temple with a long description of the building as well as other accounts of the Cause. It is interesting to note that a very long article on the Temple and the precepts of the Cause was reprinted from the Duke City News of Albuquerque, New Mexico in a Fernandina, Florida newspaper on June 24th mentioning that Dr. Lenore Morris had moved and opened Baha'i headquarters in Albuquerque.

So far, we have heard from two of the three Summer Schools. A great deal of fine publicity was obtained in newspapers of seven communities neighboring the Geyserville Summer School as well as many outstanding articles on the sessions, personal and the Faith in the Geyserville paper. A part of the splendid publicity received in the papers in and around Davison, Michigan, concerning the activities at Louhelen Ranch was stimulated through the efforts of Mrs. Wendell E. Bacon, who directed a laboratory course in publicity. This gave practical experience to those who attended this session in July. The members of the class went to work on articles and releases and were successful in having some of them published in the papers of neighboring communities. Davison, Michigan, last month celebrated its founding; in connection with the celebration, the Davison newspaper printed a long article by Mr. Eggleston on the history of the Baha'i Summer School at Louhelen Ranch.

Among the pioneer workers who have succeeded in obtaining effective publicity during the summer months is Mrs. C. N. Wells of Pinelot, California. She had had several articles published on the Cause. Mrs. Catherine Hall of San Diego, has had great success by having the picture of the Temple published in seven newspapers with accompanying articles of explanation, in San Diego and Ocean Beach.

Maywood, Illinois, has received publicity through the published list of its monthly Baha'i activities as well as the picture of the Temple. Lima, Ohio, had a similar idea in making up an article on the weekly Baha'i activities. The meetings of Lida Zamenhof brought a good deal of notice from the papers there.

In the International section of the Press Books there are many pages given over to the tremendous volume of publicity that our beloved Martha Root has obtained in India. Lengthy articles, some of which are in English, from no less than nine East Indian cities on phases of the Cause, its principles and laws, give us added incentive to strive in this country for greater publicity results. Mrs. Stuart French's Cape Cruise resulted in an article about the Faith in a paper of Oslo, Norway. Several clippings from the North-China News give accounts of the Teachings and also a review of Lorol Schofielder's book, "Travel and Adventure the World Over."

Mrs. Esther Segu of Augusta, Georgia, has found effective the reporting of the Nineteen Day Feasts giving a short discussion of Baha'i beliefs or activities all over the world. She uses a short line quoted from the Teachings or from other Holy Books as the closing paragraph of these notices and articles.

The newspapers of Omaha, Nebraska, have used many articles on the Cause and several pictures through the efforts of Dorene Halliday. Marvin Newport succeeded in opening new channels for publicity in Liberty, New York, published items on the Faith. The Drs. Morris are receiving more and more notice for the Cause in the press of Albuquerque, New Mexico. One long article was a direct quotation from Baha'u'llah. Through the efforts of Mrs. Mathews and Mrs. Little a newspaper in Chattanooga, Tennessee, published a long article on the Cause.

Many more believers have succeeded in spreading the Cause through this means during the summer months; Mrs. Johnson of Batavia, Illinois; Mrs. Bertha Kirkpatrick in Ann Arbor, Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. Meese in Benton Harbor, Michigan and Mrs. Lorol Jackson and Mrs. Edwina Powell in Helena, Montana.

Although only forty Assemblies out of seventy-eight have been heard from thus far, since May first this year, there is evidence of great activity. We would like to mention some of the outstanding work accomplished during the summer which is usually a slow season. Flint, Michigan, published five outstanding articles on "World Economics—a Solution" which ran as a series. Scranton, Pennsylvania, has reported many Baha'i activities and meetings through the efforts of Mrs. Helen Interlief, Boston and Springfield, Mass.; St. Paul, Minnesota; Teaneck, New Jersey and many others.

The National Publicity Committee issued a general bulletin in August. It includes a general survey of the services offered to any and all believers who have any opportunity to obtain publicity openings. These services include releases on the Cause and pictures of the Temple. This picture service includes both mats and glossy prints. There is an advance publicity service for Bahá'í speakers and teachers to help build up meetings and to interest the public.

We urge the local listing of Bahá'í Centers, groups and isolated believers as a means both of spreading the Cause and of assisting visiting believers in locating the friends.

We have outlined the valuable possibilities of reviewing articles from the World Order Magazine for use in local papers. There are many dignified ways of publicizing the Cause when one sets one's ingenuity to the task, may we all become conscious of this need.

The Bahá'í News Service address has been changed to 125 Fourth Street, Wilmette, Illinois. Those desiring the last bulletin may receive it upon request through this address.

INTERNATIONAL AUXILIARY LANGUAGE COMMITTEE

The International Auxiliary Language Committee has the following to report for the summer and the beginning of the new season of 1938-39.

The Esperanto course at Green Acre was not well attended, only ten persons enrolling as reported by Miss Orloff, who was assisting Miss Zamenhof. These ten, however, were very enthusiastic and enjoyed both the course and Green Acre. The Committee wish to thank the National Spiritual Assembly and the Green Acre Committee for their co-operation for the course itself and the hospitality extended to Miss Zamenhof, and for the welcome given to the Esperantist visitors from Boston.

After leaving Green Acre, Miss Zamenhof visited Boston from September 6th to the 13th and had a very busy program there. The following is a schedule of her time:

Tuesday, Sept. 6—Talk on Dr. Zamenhof under auspices of the Boston Esperantists.
Wednesday, Sept. 7—9:30 A.M.—Radio Broadcast, interviewed by Station WORL.
11:00 A.M.—Received at the City Hall by the Mayor of Boston.
8:00 P.M.—Attended the regular Nineteen-Day Bahá’í Feast.

Thursday, Sept. 8—9:00 P.M.—Talk before Discussion Group, composed of young Jewish men and women, graduates of college.
Friday, Sept. 9—5:45 P.M.—Worldwide radio interview over Short Wave Station WIXAL.
8:00 P.M.—Talk under auspices of Boston Bahá’ís.

Saturday, Sept. 10—10:30 A.M.—Talk from pulpit of Temple Israel, by special invitation of Rabbi Harry Levi, a great friend of Esperanto and admirer of Dr. Zamenhof.
7:30 P.M.—Reception by group of Polish Jews.

Monday, Sept. 12—8:00 P.M.—Talk under auspices of Boston Bahá’ís.
Tuesday, Sept. 13—8:00 P.M.—Talk before group of Jewish girls, high school graduates.

These were her formal engagements, but there were many other sandwiched in between these, when Miss Zamenhof talks to individuals on the Cause.

From Boston she has gone to Cleveland to give her Esperanto course there. Her address is c/o C. R. Cairns, 1861 East 86th Street.

Some interesting information has just come to me from Oklahoma City. A New York Esperantist was out there this summer on business. Having advertised for contacts with persons interested in learning Esperanto he was able to start a class of from 40 to 50 persons from the responses he received. Mrs. Entzminger got into touch with him and the family joined the class, so that these contacts will be open to this very alive Bahá’í Community. I will quote from her letter to me—“Our joy, at this opportunity of making new acquaintances of this type, is indescribable and we give thanks to Bahá’ú’l-Ábah with all our hearts for this miraculous opening.

When we came here to Oklahoma City over a year ago we tried to find contacts through Peace groups, Race-Amyty groups, etc., but we could find nothing that was not controversial. In fact the Race Amyty Society were forced to disband almost before they could meet, due to threatening letters repeatedly sent to members. So you see with what joy we welcome this new activity.” Mrs. Entzminger mentions a Latin teacher in a Junior High School and an attorney, as active in this Esperanto group. If this is a fair sample of the people contacted, they will present a fine opportunity for the Entzmingers who are so well able to take advantage of it.

Madras. Mr. Bakhtiari and I worked in Madras, December 25-January 3, 1938. We met the few friends and talked about how to promote the Faith, and had the Feast. We visited all the large libraries to see what Bahá’í books they have. The University of Madras Library has an excellent collection and the Librarian, Mr. S. R. Ranganathan, is keenly interested in books of Bahá’í kind. He is in correspondence with American Bahá’ís, the N. S. A., but up to this time he had never met a Bahá’í. His face is full of light. He said the Bahá’í books are drawn out and much read. (We later found many who have been reading the books.)

Adyar Theosophical Library, at Adyar, Madras, has also a good collection of Bahá’í books, and we found that many university students living in that section have been reading these books. We visited editors of all the leading newspapers of Madras and all used interviews followed by other articles about the Faith and resumés of our lectures later. Over two hundred articles about the Bahá’í Faith have appeared in the newspapers of Ceylon and India from September 13 to February 13, 1938. (I urge all Bahá’í teachers when possible, to carry a type-written and make out good resumés of all lectures and give out to all newspapers. When one speaks, one may speak to hundreds, but through the press one can reach tens of thousands and sometimes hundreds of thousands.)

A large public lecture was given in Ranade Hall, a cultural centre whose directors are connected with the university and some newspapers. Dewan Bahadur K. S. Ramaswami Sastri, retired District Sessions Judge and one of the brilliant scholars of Madras presided; the lecture was under the auspices of the South Indian Cultural Association. In introducing us he spoke concisely about the Cause, quoted the “Dawn-Breakers” and Words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá—has since presided again and has written for me to use in the West, two short articles, which were really his introductions; these are most interesting because they show the Bahá’í Faith in its relation to Hinduism. He is a great Hindu scholar who has arisen to write about the Faith. I lectured in the Y. M. C. A. in Madras, Mr. Bakhtiari chanted and we both spoke before the Brahmo-Samaj Society of Madras. Brahmo-Samaj is a very quickened spiritual movement of India, a little like our Unitarianism of the West, its members are always friendly and very sympathetic to the Bahá’í Teachings. The Madras Brahmo-Samaj has since translated into Telugu language, “What is the Bahá’í Movement?” booklet and one thousand copies are being distributed. This is the first booklet, I think, that has ever been published in Telugu, and it is a fruit of the visit to Madras.

Also, two thousand booklets, “The Dawn of the New Day” translated into Tamil language are being published (were to be finished by February 15), Mr. Ishaaq Pahlavan, a devoted faithful Bahá’í in Madras agreed with this. The Tamil newspaper that published the booklet used the history and principles in a nearly three column article that has a circulation of twenty thousand. We felt very happy about these booklets because Tamil is much used in Southern India, Ceylon, Straits Settlements and a large colony in Durban, South Africa.

Mr. Bakhtiari, Mr. Pahlaván and I went out to Adyar to three sessions of the International Theosophical Convention held December 26 to January 3, 1938; we met many friends. The Vice-President of the International Theosophical Society, Mr. Dutta, said to me that the Bahá’í Teachings are the highest essence of Hinduism. Mr. Bakhtiari who did such great work returned to Karachi the evening of January 3rd.

As Madras is such an important spiritual and cultural centre in Southern India, Mrs. Shírin Fozdar and I came to Madras when we were returning from Colombo and stayed for six days, January 18 to 23, met the press, lectured in Pachaiyappa College of Madras University, also gave a public lecture in the P. S. High School, Mylapore Section, to several hundred students; lectured at an annual meeting of the Brahmo-Samaj ladies, and Shírin spoke at an evening meeting of the Brahmo-Samaj and broadcast. Some of the young men who had been interested in the Cause went to Madras in March of last year, arranged a meeting in their school where we spoke and they said they would form a study class. Mr. Pahlaván has a meeting sometimes for ANNUAL REPORT, IRAN

The following reference to the Annual Report of the National Spiritual Assembly of Iran was written by the editor of the circular letter issued by the Haifa Spiritual Assembly in August, 1938:

The Report is divided into nine sections. The first section deals with the teaching of the Faith. We learn that no less than thirty-three Bahá’í teachers were engaged in different parts of the country in the promotion of the Faith. These teachers included three women volunteers and three members of the National Spiritual Assembly. In addition, the said Assembly, on numerous occasions, encouraged the believers in various ways to convey the Message to souls thirsty for it. The Spiritual Assembly of Tehran passed a number of resolutions urging the believers to redouble their efforts in fulfilling their paramount duty of teaching the word of God.

The Report quotes from a number of communications addressed by various Bahá’í teachers, and local Spiritual Assemblies to the National Spiritual Assembly, recording the results of their activities in their various fields of service. The gist of their contents is a tale of love and devotion and sacrifice mirroring forth the unity of the believers, the strength of their organizations, the spirituality pervading their activities and above all their courage and steadfastness in conveying the Message in an environment charged with persecution and evil intentions.

The results of the teaching activities have been very encouraging, indeed, as a number of new believers have joined the Faith and seven new Spiritual Assemblies have been established.

In the second section of the Report we learn that twelve historical sites in various parts of the country—sites connected with the hallowed history of the Faith—have been acquired by the National Assembly. These sites include part of a house in Shiraz known for having been occupied at one time by the Báb, and a number of burial places of Bahá’í martyrs. Steps have been taken to purchase similar sites, one of them being the shop in which the Báb sold merchandise in Shiraz.

The following excerpts from the third section of the Report will convey to the friends in the West the conditions under which their brothers and sisters live and labor in many parts of Persia.

In Sangsar, nine believers including five members of the Spiritual Assembly of that town were imprisoned for sixty-two days, the reason being the closing of their shops on the Anniversary of the Proclamation of the Báb—a Bahá’í Holy Day. On being released the believers were threatened that should they take another Bahá’í Holy Day and close their shops they would not be allowed to open them again and would be forbidden to conduct the same type of business anew.

In a village in the district of Khurāsān and Fārs a number of believers, old and young, were critically beaten with sticks and stones.

In Jahrom, a town in the district of Fārs, a Bahá’í child was stopped in the market place by a group of people and cruelly beaten. As the father ran to protect his child he too was set upon and beaten.

In the village of Marwast, near Yazd, while a handful of friends were assembled in the house of a believer who was sick in bed, all of a sudden a number of policemen and two soldiers all armed, entered the house and attacked the believers with sticks and clubs and the butt of their rifles inflicting painful injuries. Having satisfied their fiendish natures, they left the house taking away with them two Bahá’í books, a carpet and some articles of furniture.

In Kirmānšāh, the authorities have forbidden the believers to hold their meetings. It was in this town that Dr. ’Abdu’l-Hájí Jáwíd, a Bahá’í and an officer in the army, was demoted to the rank of an ordinary soldier and sentenced to two years service in the army. In our News Letter of February, 1938, we reported the case in detail. It was in this connection that the officer questioning Dr. Jáwíd made the remarkable statement: “Well, let us put the truth aside now. To-day, His Majesty the King says that no one has the right to use the word Bahá’í in the column headed by ‘religion’ (in the identity card). Anyone who disobeys this rule will be punished.”

In all the foregoing cases, no action was taken by the Government to redress the injustice done to the believers or to put a stop to further oppressions. Having made in vain several representations to the Government concerning the persecutions suffered by the believers, the National Spiritual Assembly wrote directly to the Prime Minister exposing the situation clearly and courageously. The letter to the Prime Minister brings out the following points:

(a) Discrimination is made between believers and non-believers by the officials in every government department. Whenever a Bahá’í applies for a position, as soon as he says that he is a Bahá’í, his application is rejected,
The work of building the Hazrat-ul-Quds (Baha'i Hall) in Tihra is now in process of construction. The Nineteen-Day Feasts are being observed more and more diligently in most Baha'i centers in the country. In Tihra, sixty-four such meetings are held regularly.

TABLET OF BAHAI'ULLAH

He is the Almighty
My hair is My Ambassador. Proclaiming at every moment upon the Branch of Fire in the Rose Garden of Holiness and Light, perchance the people of the world become severed from the dust soaring toward the Seat of Nearness, the Station wherein the Light emanated from the Beauty of God, the Mighty, the Unconstrained. O Thou, ye servants of Fire! Sing and praise, then become rejoiced and hasten ye toward the Adored One while crying: There is no God but God, the Knowing, the Wise, the Loving.

He is the Wise
My Hair is My Fire. Therefore it is enthroned upon the seat of My cheek and is pasturing upon the Rose Garden of My Face. This is the station wherein the Son of Inron stripped from himself the garment of all save Him, and attained to the Lights of Holiness from the Fire of God, the Powerful, the Mighty, the Forgiving.

He is the Mighty, the Beloved
My Lock is My Chain—whosoever clings to It shall never err from everlasting to everlasting, for therein is hidden the Guidance which leads to the Light of Beauty.

He is God
My Hair is My Attributes—in which My Beauty is Concealed! Perchance the Eyes of the strangers from among My servants may fall (rest) on it, thus have We hidden from the Infidels the Beauty which is Shining and Exalted.

He is the Eternal
My Hair bears witness to My Beauty—that I am God and there is no God beside. Verily I have been Single, the Unique, the Omniscient, the Loving, the Unending, the Self-Subsistent God before the beginning of Creation. O ye people of Immortality, Listen ye to what emanates from those disheveled, waving, flying locks (tresses) upon the Sinai of Fire in the Tabernacle of Light on this throne of Manifestation. Verily, there is no God beside Me. Verily I have been the King, the Sovereign, the Peerless, the Everlasting, the Exaustless, the Ancient, the Holy.

In the Beginning before there was no Beginning. O ye Inhabitants of the heavens and the earth, should ye purify your ears ye would hear from My Tresses, that verily there is no God but He. He is unique in His Essence, and barred from any reference; not withstanding this how did they oppose this Beauty when His Bounty encircled all those who are in the seas of command and creation. Wherefore be ye just in yourselves in judging this Faith which is firmly founded in love for this Youth who is riding upon the snow white camel between the heaven and earth, and be firm and steadfast in Truth.

This is the Tablet read by Mrs. Thomas Collins in presenting at the Convention the Guardian's gift of locks of Baha'u'llah's Hair. The Tablet is shared with the believers with the Guardian's permission.

ANNUAL CONVENTION IN IRAQ
(From the Bahai News Letter published quarterly by the N. S. A., at Baghdad.)

Annual Convention
The eighth Annual Convention of the Bahai's was held in Baghdad on Friday evening, April 22, 1938. Fifteen delegates and a number of friends attended. All those present felt the soft breezes of Divine guidance dominating and directing their deliberations for the promotion of the interests of the mighty Cause of Baha'u'llah. Who, through His infinite grace and power, has caused us, His weak and lowly servants, to gather together, in the midst of an unbelieving and chaotic world, to praise His Name and participate in the establishment of His unique New World Order.

The Convention lasted four hours, during which the secretary of the N. S. A. first read the Beloved Guardian's foregoing telegram and his letter of April 1, 1938; then the Annual Report was delivered—different recommendations being submitted, in the course of the discussion that ensued, for consideration by the incoming N. S. A.; and last, but not least, the new N. S. A. was elected.
The Annual Report, which was brief, revealed the efforts of the outgoing N. S. A., which were mainly directed toward the construction of the new Haziratu'l-Quds, (i.e., Bahá’í Headquarters); the formation of the first Spiritual Assembly in Huwaydir and Ya’qubahyih; and the safeguarding of the interests of our beloved Faith in this country.

News Items

A magazine published at Karachi, India, entitled “Mira” (East and West), contains in its issue dated July and August, 1938, a Frontispiece reproducing a photograph of Abdu’l-Bahá, and the following articles of Bahá’í interest: The Bahá’í Faith and the Modern World, by T. L. Vaswani; A University of the Spirit, Martha L. Root; and Three Bahá’í Leaders, a report of a meeting held by Miss Root.

A significant contribution to Bahá’í periodicals is “Penda Siperore,” a magazine founded by Refo Chapari at Tirane, Albania, and printed in the Albanian language. The title is the Albanian translation of “The Supreme Pen.” Mr. Chapari, who translated some Bahá’í books into Albanian while a resident in New York many years ago, has been most active in service since returning to his native land.

The Committee on International Auxiliary Language reports that the articles on International Language published in recent issues of World Order have been very helpful to the Spiritual Assembly of Oklahoma City in making new contracts.

“With a heart overflowing with exultation and love from this Blessed Spot, I am sending,” writes Miss Adelaide Sharp from Shiraz, “the greetings and love of the friends to the Spiritual Assembly of this city.” Last night a number of believers and myself lighted candles at the Holy Shrine and prayed in behalf of the National Spiritual Assemblies, and each represented a different country.”

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Colby Ives, who have traveled and taught so extensively in many parts of America in recent years, have established residence in Toronto and become members of the local community.

The Editorial Committee of The Bahá’í World wishes the friends to cooperate by sending to Kenneth Christian, State School of Agriculture, Morristown, N. J., all possible information concerning references to the Faith in current books and magazines.

The Bahá’í communities of New York, Chicago and Vancouver were recently favored by a brief visit from Miss Kitty Carpenter, a Bahá’í of New Zealand.

On Sunday, October 2, 1938, the W. P. A. Federal Music Project of New York City rendered a Swedish Program which was broadcast over a local station. This program rendered “Persian Legend: Quarrat’ul-Ayn,” composed by Count Axel Wachtmeister, whose inspiration was received from the noble life of that Bahá’í martyr and pioneer.

Mrs. Frances Stewart, who sailed for Buenos Aires some weeks ago for several months of teaching activity on behalf of the Inter-America Committee, has begun to send interesting accounts of her experiences. The Inter-America Committee will report her activities in Bahá’í News as soon as possible.

Miss Josephine Kruka sailed for Finland on June 22, with the ardent intention of establishing the Faith in the land of her family origin. In letters written since her arrival there, Miss Kruka reports that in Finland the national religion is closely associated with national patriotism, which has prevented the use of newspaper or radio facilities. Despite these obstacles, Miss Kruka has confirmed a young minister and has held meetings in the home of a friend who received the Message from her in Duluth some years ago.

Miss Beatrice Irwin has returned after several months spent in London, where she resided at a Unity Feast held August 31. Miss Irwin reports that she is still receiving communications from contacts she made in Mexico during 1937.

Several months ago a group of the Cleveland friends became interested in Braille. Since then nine of the smaller books have been transcribed including Hidden Words. The copies are used locally but it is intended to place others at the disposal of libraries. Mr. A. C. Engelder, member of the National Braille Committee is directing the work and Mr. Alolph Fehér and Mrs. Carrie Turner, Braille experts, serve as coaches and editors.

Annual Election

The result of the election of the N. S. A. for 1938-1939 was as follows, the officers being elected in the first meeting of the Assembly at the close of the Convention:

Mr. Munir H. Wakil, Chairman; Mr. David S. Toeg, Vice-Chairman; Dr. Jamil I. Baghdadi, Secretary; Mr. Salim E. Joory, Treasurer; Mr. Adib R. Baghdadi, Mr. Jial Shiri, Mr. ‘Abdu’l-Razzaq ‘Abbas, Mr. Husayn A. Shihadi, Mr. Salman Dloomy.

The vacancy in the membership of the N. S. A., recently occasioned by the transfer of Mr. A. R. ‘Abbas to Mosul, has been filled by Mr. Ibrahim Shiri, who was elected by the delegates.

New Haziratu’l-Quds: Letters from the Guardian

The great importance which the Beloved Guardian attaches to the new Haziratu’l-Quds at Baghdad can be realized from his letter, in Arabic, dated April 1, 1938, addressed to the N. S. A. It reads:

“I am directed by the Beloved Guardian to write you that a sum of £50 is enclosed herewith as a contribution toward the completion of the Haziratu’l-Quds. He firmly hopes that the entire believers and Spiritual Assemblies of that region will, with utmost earnestness, unity and concord exert their efficacious endeavors to procure the means for the achievement and completion of this great enterprise.”—N. Zeine.

“May God, through His all encompassing power, aid you to complete this momentous enterprise.”—Shoghi.

In a subsequent letter dated May 13, 1938, Shoghi Effendi stresses the urgency of the undertaking as follows:

“He (the Guardian) said, ‘To complete this momentous enterprise during this year, without delay or retardation, is one of the paramount, sacred and bounden duties of the trustees of the National Assembly of that region. Steadfastness, earnestness and inducement of the friends in all the Bahá’í Centers in ‘Iraq, he further pointed out, ‘are attractive of steady Divine confirmations.’”

“TRIUMPHANTLY USHERS IN FINAL PHASE OF THE MAJOR TASK”

New Temple Contract Placed—Summary of Seven Year Plan

The Guardian's cablegram of November 29, 1938, quoted in the last issue of Baha'i News, establishes for the American Bahais a new and higher spiritual summit from which to survey the progress already achieved and the task still to be completed in fulfillment of the Seven Year Plan. The hour is fateful and propitious, calling for complete understanding of all the elements of the Plan, both in Temple construction and in teaching effort, and summoning all believers to a supreme consecration of the Plan, both in Temple construction and in teaching effort, and summoning all believers to a supreme consecration of the spirit in service to the Faith of Bahai.

Local Assemblies, National Committees, groups, traveling teachers, members of organized communities and isolated believers—all alike are to grasp the essential facts, assist in clarifying the vital issues and seize this potent occasion to create the means of final victory in the courageous and steadfast soul of the American Bahai community. Surpassing is the confirming power that has been released; unequalled must be our determination to be worthy instruments in the hands of that world-transforming Destiny manifested by Bahai.

Gallery Section Near Completion—Work Begins on First Story

When the Seven Year Plan was created for us by the Guardian, only the Temple dome and clerestory had received their exterior decoration. The gallery, first story, surrounding stairs and metal doors and window grills were all still to be undertaken. The total cost of these successive contracts, as reported in the special announcement inserted in Baha'i News of June, 1937, was $350,000.

During that year the contract for decorating the gallery section was placed at an estimated cost of $125,000, and at the present time this contract is completed except for portions of the nine pylons, which will be done in the spring of 1939.

The National Spiritual Assembly recently was informed that savings both in time and cost could be effected if a contract were placed for the execution of the hand-carved models required in the exterior decoration of the first story; if, in other words, instead of waiting until a contract could be given for all the work on the first story, a contract were given for the first stage in that work. Such a contract has been given to Mr. Earley by the Temple Trustees, in the amount of $21,000, and the believers are therefore informed that work on the first story is now under way.

Before taking this important step, the opportunity was reported to the Guardian, and his approval was re­ceived in the following cablegram on November 29: "Approve placing immediate contract (for) models. Delighted. Unbounded gratitude. —Shoghi." Incidentally, a further saving in cost has been effected in the decoration of the first story by purchasing all the quartz in advance under a special agreement with the owners of the quarry.

Future Temple Contracts

The unfinished Temple work is to proceed under the following schedule:

1. Models for first story (already contracted) $21,000.00
2. Quartz for first story (already contracted) 5,000.00
3. Molds for first story 29,000.00
4. Casting and applying units to first story 93,000.00
5. External staircase, metal work, including outside doors 75,000.00

Total future cost in Seven Year Plan $225,000.00
Plus gallery contract (funds on hand) 125,000.00

Total Temple cost in Plan $350,000.00*

Considering now that figure of future cost $225,000.00
We have on hand in the Bahiyih Khanum Fund as of December 10, 1938 $37,047.20

General Office: 130 Evergreen Place, West Englewood, New Jersey
Balance necessary from contributions before end of Seven Year Plan (for Temple) $187,952.80

The Annual Budget

The Annual Budget reported for the current Baha'i year contains the item of $75,000 for Temple construction, and this item stands unchanged either by the Guardian's cablegram published last month or by the placing of the new contract for models. We must bear in mind that each year of the Seven Year Plan is charged with its vital share of the total responsibility. The successive contracts are placed as funds are available, and consequently there must be a certain rate of income during the first five years of the Plan if the work is to be completed by the end of the first century of the Baha'i Era. That rate, the Temple work alone, is $75,000 each for the third, fourth and fifth years of the Plan.

From the 1938 Convention to the October meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly at Knoxville, the contributions received under the Annual Budget provided little surplus for the new Temple Fund. The following message addressed by the Guardian to the National Assembly on October 14, sent in reply to a heartfelt cablegram despatched to him from that meeting, augmented the determination of the members to strive for the success of the Seven Year Plan: "Heartened (by) message. Praying (for) added fervor, deepened longing, acceleration (of) Temple construction (and) increasing momentum (in) teaching force. May both culminate (in) placing, (within) appointed time, final contract heralding (the) consummation (of) the hopes born thirty years ago (in) the hearts (of) the American believers."

A Twofold Task

"Increasing momentum" must also be our determined ideal in the field of teaching. Are we collectively responding even yet to that appeal cabled to the Convention in 1936: "Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Baha'u'llah and establish structural basis of His World Order."

In our inexpressible gratitude for the bounty we have received from the Guardian's recent donation to the Fund, and his association of future construction with the Greatest Holy Leaf, may we hold the balance between our services to Temple and those we are privileged to render in promoting the teaching work.

National Spiritual Assembly.

* Estimated cost. The estimate of cost for gallery section was higher than actual cost so far.

With every fresh crisis that plunges a helpless humanity deeper and deeper into the morass of despair and degradation, the pioneers of the nascent Faith of Baha'u'llah are elevated to nobler heights of triumph, evince a rarer spirit of self-abnegation and courage, and disclose more compelling evidences of their capacity and power.

Every operation to matter how indirectly connected with the dual responsibilities assumed by the American believers, must continue to be conducted and supported with that self-same assiduity, sternness of purpose and steadiness of vision that have garnered them thus far so rich a harvest. A work so auspiciously begun, so efficiently organized, so rapidly extended, so uniquely blessed, can never be allowed, however somber the clouds looming on the international horizon, to fall into obsolescence or to appear to have sustained the least injury from the world-shaking forces that now batter on the tottering institutions of human society. The adamant determination of those who support it will enable it to yield at the appointed time its destined fruit. Your true and grateful brother, SHOGHI.

"THIS HISTORIC ENTERPRISE"
A Letter from Shoghi Effendi

"With reference to the ornamentation of the gallery section of the Temple; the Guardian wishes me to express his entire satisfaction at the rate at which the work is progressing, and also to assure your Assembly of his approval of the suggestion made by Mr. Earley, which will have the effect of expediting considerably the work of the ornamentation of the first story."

"He further wishes me to stress the importance of placing the contract for the models and molds before the completion of the present contract, as this, he strongly feels, will save much time, and would in addition enable your Assembly, in the meantime, to accumulate more funds and thus insure the uninterrupted progress of the ornamentation of the rest of the Temple."

"He would, in closing, urge your Assembly, and wishes, through you, to renew his plea to the entire body of the American believers, to spare no effort to bring this historic enterprise to final consummation at the appointed time. They would certainly be failing in one of their most vital obligations, at this crucial period in the development of the Cause, if they allow the work of that sacred edifice to suffer any setback. But there is surely no ground for any such doubt. Rather, there is every reason to believe that the American Bahá'í Community, the range and quality of whose achievements have raised it to so unique and enviable a position among its sister communities throughout the West, will, as in the past, endeavor with one accord to fulfill, to the very last and with that same spirit of abnegation and heroic resolve that have characterized its previous accomplishments, all its obligations and responsibilities under the Seven Year Plan."

BAHÁ'Í ANNIVERSARIES

A Letter from Shoghi Effendi

"The Bahá'í day starts and ends at sunset, and consequently the date of the celebration of Bahá'í feasts should be adjusted to conform to the Bahá'í calendar time. For further particulars on this subject you should refer to the section entitled 'Bahá'í Calendar' in 'The Bahá'í World.'

"The Guardian would advise that, if feasible, the friends should commemorate certain of the feasts and anniversaries at the following time:

- The anniversary of the Declaration of the Báb on May 22, at about two hours after sunset.
- The first day of Ridvan, at about 3:00 P.M. on the 21st of April.
- The anniversary of the Martyrdom of the Báb on July 9 at about noon.
- The anniversary of the Ascension of Bahá'u'lláh, on May 29 at 3:00 A.M.
- "The Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá on November 28, at 1:00 A.M.
- "The other anniversaries the believers are free to gather at any time during the day which they find convenient."

"THE CHARTER OF THE NEW WORLD ORDER"

Arise and Teach

"O ye that stand fast in the Covenant! When the hour cometh that this wronged and broken winged bird will have taken his flight unto the celestial concourse, when it will have hastened to the Realm of the Unseen and its mortal frame will have been either lost or hidden near the dust, it is incumbent upon the Ahnán, that are steadfast in the Covenant of God, and have branched from the Tree of Holiness; the Hands, (pillars) of the Cause of God, (The Glory of the Lord rest upon them), and all the friends and loved ones, one and all to bestir themselves and arise with heart and soul and in one accord, to diffuse the sweet savors of God, to teach His Cause and to promote His Faith. It behooveth them not to rest for a moment, neither to seek repose. They must disperse themselves in every land, pass by every clime and travel throughout all regions, Bestirred, without rest and steadfast to the end they must raise in every land the triumphal cry "O Thou the Glory of Glories"! (Yá-Bahá'u'l-Abhá), must achieve renown in the world wherever they go, must burn brightly even as a candle in every meeting and must kindle the flame of Divine love in every assembly; that the light of truth may rise resplendent in the midst of the heart of the world, that throughout the East and throughout the West a vast concourse may gather under the shadow of the Word of God, that the sweet savors of holiness may be diffused, that faces may shine radiantly, hearts be filled with the Divine spirit and souls be made heavenly.

"In these days, the most important of all things is the guidance of the nations and peoples of the world. Teaching the Cause is of utmost importance, for it is the head corner-stone of the foundation itself. This wronged servant has spent his days and nights in promoting the Cause and urging the peoples to service. He rested not a moment, till the fame of the Cause of God was noise abroad in the world and the celestial strains from the Abád Kingdom roused the East and the West. The beloved of God must also follow the same example. This is the secret of faithfulness; this is the requirement of servitude to the Threshold of Bahá!

"The disciples of Christ forgot themselves and all earthly things, forsook all their cares and belongings, purged themselves of self and passion and with absolute detachment scattered far and wide and engaged in calling the peoples of the world to the Divine Guidance, till at last they made the world another world, illumined the surface of the earth and even to their last hour proved self-sacrificing in the path of that Beloved One of God. Finally in various lands they suffered glorious martyrdom. Let them that are men of action follow in their footsteps!" 1

The promulgation of the Divine Plan, unveiled by our departed Master in the darkest days of one of the severest ordeals which humanity has ever experienced, is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to fulfill their unimaginably glorious Destiny. As the proclamation of the Message reverberates throughout the land, as its relentless march gathers momentum, as the field of its operation widens, and the numbers of its upholders and champions multiply, its potentialities will correspondingly unfold, exerting a most beneficent influence not only on every community throughout the Baháí world, but on the immediate fortunes of a travelling society. The repercussions of this campaign are already apparent in Europe, India, Egypt, Iraq and even among the sorely-tried communities in Persia and Russia. The Faith of God is gaining in stature, effectiveness and power. Not until, however, the great enterprise which you are now conducting runs its full course and attains its final objective, at its appointed time, can its world-encompassing benefits be fully apprehended or revealed. The perseverance of the American believers will, no doubt, insure the ultimate realization of these benefits."

"To the American believers, the spiritual descendants of the heroes of God's Cause, I again address my plea to arise as one soul and to prosecute with unrelaxing resolve the high mission with which their immediate destiny is inextricably interwoven. The call has gone forth, the goal manifest and within their reach. Though their responsibilities be pressing and heavy and the obstacles formidable and manifold, yet the spirit of our invincible Faith will enable them to conquer if they arise unitedly and determinedly and persevere till the very end."—SHOGHI EFFEendi.

EXTENSION TEACHING
BY LOCAL ASSEMBLIES

The National Teaching Committee is overjoyed to report a nation-wide movement on the part of Local Spiritual Assemblies to undertake extension teaching. Although for some years this method has been discussed as a likely one for creating new centers of Baháí life, never until now has it really been tried on a large scale. In the past weeks letters have poured in, telling of plans, naming prospective cities, reporting with enthusiasm new efforts made. Of one thing there can be no doubt, those Assemblies that have dared to pioneer are speedy transformed. Their rewards are an unprecedented vitality, the zest of hope in untouched horizons, the discovery of prayer as a constant guide, and that same unfailing confirmation which the Master has promised to every "fearless warrior, who armed with the power of true Knowledge, hastens unto the field . . ."

But more than this, the entrance of Assemblies, of whole Baháí communities into the extension of the Seven-Year Plan guarantees a security in achievement, a solid, steadily-advancing growth which no onslaught can hope to obstruct or impair. If your own Assembly has not yet awakened to its part in this mighty program, perhaps the following news will arouse it. And surely these words written by Shoghi Effendi, as he defined in 1923 the structure of National and Local Assembly life, bear also on the requirements of our day most pointedly: "But let us be on our guard—so the Master continually reminds us from His Station on high—lest too much concern in that which is secondary in importance, and too long a preoccupation with the details of our affairs and activities, make us neglectful of the most essential, the most urgent of all our obligations, namely, to bury our cares and teach the Cause, delivering far and wide this Message of Salvation to a sorely-stricken world."

The Assembly in Glendale, Arizona, has voted to sponsor pioneer work in Mesa, a Mormon community about twenty miles distant. 2

Los Angeles has agreed to carry forward the work begun last year by the Regional Committee in Las Vegas, Nevada. At the same time San Francisco will work in Reno, Nevada. Thus two major efforts will converge on this new State. Los Angeles has an active Extension Committee which is introducing a course of six lectures by different teachers in several nearby towns, as well as in Bakersfield, 125 miles away.

Oakland has undertaken responsibility for new contacts in Lodi, Stockton, Turlock, Modesto, Fresno and Woodlake, all cities of the San Joaquin Valley. It has also offered its help in Reno.

In the Northwest the Assemblies have assumed teaching responsibilities as follows: Monroe in Everett, Washington; Vancouver in West Vancouver and New Westminster; Seattle in Tacoma; Spokane in Coeur d'Alene and Sandpoint, Idaho; Portland, in a circuit of Oregon cities including Salem, Eugene, and Medford. In this area the Regional Committee is cooperating with Assemblies in coordinating, routing, and maintaining up-to-date information on available teachers. It has been suggested that local teaching programs be so planned that speakers may also work in outside territory, wherever possible on circuits, as this has proved the most promising way of making new contacts.

Oklahoma City will extend its work to El Reno, about twenty-five miles away. The believers here have been thrilled at an astonishing development of Esperanto classes, and by cooperating on committees have made many new and liberal friends. Esperanto is now being taught not only in eight city districts, but in outlying cities such as El Reno, Edmond, and Shawnee.

Detroit has begun weekly study groups in Grosse Poite and Dearborn, and has plans for Highland Park. Detroit has likewise emphasized cooperation with the Esperanto Society, as a follow-up of Miss Zamenhof's visit.

Miami, Florida, is discussing extension work with much interest, with definite plans expected soon. Weekly public meetings have been greatly stim-led by a display of the Temple model.

"St. Paul, Minn., is sponsoring extension work in Hudson and Eau Claire, Wisconsin. The friends are also helping the new Group in Duluth.

Toronto has arranged a series of twice-monthly public meetings in Hamilton, Ontario. Speakers during October were Marzieh Carpenter and Mabel Ives.

Lima has an Extension Committee of thirteen, now at work in Wapakoneta, Van Wert, Celina, Montezuma, Delphos, and Bluffton. The following suggestions from the chairman, Mrs. Kepler, will assist us all: The members place their chief reliance upon prayer, using the Teaching Tablets, the Tablet of Ahmad, and prayers for guidance at every meeting and during contacts by co-members. Calls are made upon new contacts frequently, and a record is kept noting the reactions. Pamphlets are sometimes left with the offer to return to discuss them. The new friends are invited to public contacts by co-members.

There is a variety of other notable news from Assemblies. One of the most stimulating reports has come from New Haven, where “many events have conspired to turn an ineffectual, lukewarm community into a virile, awakened, inspired group.” Again the real secret is prayer. The 1938-39 teaching program is all-inclusive, with its study classes, fireside and youth groups, and public meetings. Extension work by fireside teaching is carried on in Milford, Washington, Wallingford, Norwich, and Waterbury. It is New Haven's goal to have nine functioning Assemblies or Groups in Connecticut by 1944! The community is also active in its association with non-Baha'i organizations, an especially fruitful contact having been made at an interfaith discussion at the Jewish Community Center. The celebration of Ridvan also demands mention. During each day of this period a gathering was held in a different home, each host inviting his own guests and arranging his own program. Much diversity resulted, including a Persian dinner, a memorial for the Holy Mother, reading of the Creative Word with recordings of Wagner’s "Parsifal," original poetry, etc. Another interesting meeting was a talk on the early history of the Faith in New Haven, by the chairman of the Archives Committee. The proof of vitality is growth: in the past year nine new believers have enrolled and two have been re-instated!

Springfield, Ill., has written enthusiastically of a month's visit from Marga Reimer, during September and October. Three radio broadcasts were given, four public talks, and a lecture for a negro Forum. Miss Reimer also met twice a week with the believers, giving valuable teaching suggestions.

Cincinnati has developed many fine contacts this past year through public and fireside meetings scheduled for visiting teachers. These have included Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Mrs. Margery McCormick, Mrs. Louise Caswell, Mrs. Grace Ober, Mr. Louis Gregory, and Mr. Harlan Ober. A study class has been formed which promises a bright future.

Pasadena, Calif., is experiencing a rebirth as a result of community prayer. Three weekly study classes are now conducted for inquirers; a monthly public meeting is fast growing in attendance; three new members have been accepted; and on December 3rd a wonderful Amity Dinner was given, the full account of which has not yet reached us. This Assembly also hopes to begin extension work soon.

Springfield, Mass., has reported the visit of Mrs. Amelia Collins, who spent some time in Paxton. A guest at one meeting was the daughter of Edward Bellamy. Various other informal groups met with Mrs. Collins at Montson, Three Rivers, and Paxton, and many new friends were introduced to the Cause from these and other nearby cities.

A comprehensive report from Binghamton, N. Y., for August and September brings news of this Assembly's far-flung interests. Binghamton believers are assisting in Scranton, Syracuse, Ithaca, and Norwich. Six have enrolled during this period and others are studying, with new classes also for teen-age girls and children. The most interesting activity was the Baha'i participation in the World Congress of Youth held at Vassar College, August 16th-23rd. Miss Ida Noyes, Binghamton's youth chairman, spent the entire week, as did Mrs. Frances Stewart of Utica, who was hostess for the South American delegation. A Temple model was displayed and over 3,000 pieces of literature were distributed. President and Mrs. MacCracken of Vassar became acquainted with the Faith, Mrs. Roosevelt inspected the Temple model, Professor Howson of the Department of Religion asked for a picture of the Temple to be hung in the Vassar Library, and books are to be sent also. Several other Baha'is from Binghamton and New York City visited the conference, and two informal discussion groups were held. One of the guests was a Chinese girl, the 'heroine of Shanghai.'

Baha'i participation in the Canadian National Exhibition was also most noteworthy. This Exhibition, from August 26th to September 10th, is the world's largest annual fair and this year it had a record attendance. With the help of Montreal and Toronto, a beautiful exhibit of the Temple was arranged (photograph in December issue), designed by Mr. W. S. Maxwell. About 5,000 pieces of literature were given to visitors from as far afield as South Africa. It is hoped that this effort will result in increased Baha'i activity throughout Canada.

In Michigan exceptional work is being done by Marzieh Carpenter and the Eggelstens. Conferences have been made in eleven cities and Mrs. Carpenter has spoken before thirty-two groups, including Rotary, Kiwanis, Shriners, Exchange, Women's, Church, and school groups.

Eighty-eight Baha'is from sixteen communities of California and Arizona met in a Regional Conference at Bakersfield, California, on the weekend of October 15th-16th. The activities included a tea for new people; two radio talks; a teaching conference on "Pioneer Teaching in the Seven-Year Plan"; a Baha'i luncheon in the open air; and a public meeting Sunday afternoon, when Mrs. Reuel Lewis and Mr. Leroy Iaas spoke on "A Baha'i Interpretation of World Crisis." The teaching conference has led to a remarkable impetus in spirit and extension work, in those communities which sent delegates. All were happy at the following cable from Shoghi Effendi, in reply to a conference greeting: "Apprecipitate message. Praying complete realization highest hopes.

The San Joaquin Valley was also visited during August by Miss Claudia Coles Aldridge of London, England, who spoke four times at fireside groups in Bakersfield, on the radio there, and in Fresno, Woodlake, Three Rivers, and Atascadero.

The reports from our smaller Groups and pioneer areas and teachers are as brimming with good news as all of the others. There Groups have recently organized in Bexley and Circleville, Ohio, and in Marysville, Michigan. The Marysville and Fort Huron Bahá'ís have sponsored four radio broadcasts since spring, with Allen McDaniel, Harlan Ober, and Marzieh Carpenter as speakers. They also arranged a two-week exhibit of the Temple model in three business localities, and during this time an article was prepared on the Temple which was read over the local radio station. In Jamestown, N. Y., there are six registered believers. Recently a talk was sponsored on the practical function of religion in the life of a business man, to which many contacts were made for future club meetings. In this time an article was prepared on the practical function of religion in the life of a business man, to which many contacts were made for future club meetings.

Some years ago a letter received from Haifa stated that "Shoghi Effendi feels that in any locality where the number of adult declared believers reaches nine, a local Assembly should be established. He feels this to be an obligation rather than a purely voluntary act."

A contact with the Phoenix Club, a liberal group, opened many doors. Weekly meetings with an attendance of twenty to forty are held at the Marlborough Hotel and the Winnipeg Free-Press gave much space for publicity. There were also engagements at various clubs, with invitations for the Spring. Mrs. King met several people who had contacted the Cause in other cities. A Jewish rabbi had heard of it in Buffalo, a newspaper man in Cleveland; three Junior College teachers had known Mrs. Ives in Moncton; an Esperanto teacher had met Bahá'ís in Minneapolis. Study classes will be carried on by Miss Lillian Tomlinson, who already has motored with several friends to visit the Temple, and a loan library is established at her home. There are also Bahá'í books at the Phoenix Club and in the Metaphysical Library.

Mrs. Lulee Mathews recently spent three weeks at Mrs. R. D. Little in Covington, La., during which time two intensive study classes were carried on and several talks were given. A lovely gift was made by Mrs. Mathews of a Fellowship House, to be used not only by the Bahá'ís but as a Community Center. The building was dedicated on the anniversary of the Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Mrs. Little writes: "Although the little house seems very unimportant in size we all feel that it is destined to achieve great things. It will supply a great need and will through this make it possible to promote and demonstrate the Bahá'í teachings. All are deeply touched...."

The Group in Albuquerque, N. M., has reported its activities at the New Mexico State Fair, October 9th to 16th, in connection with an exhibit of the Temple model. One believer was in constant attendance and hundreds of registrations were obtained, which are being catalogued for future work. Two thousand picture postcards of the Temple were given and on Children's Day each child received one. Many of the visitors spoke of having seen the Temple in Wilmette. The friends report that the Fair was attended by many who had spent their lives in isolated ranch and mountain homes, and also by those of varied racial groups, such as Spaniards, Mexicans, Indians, and Negroes. These were delighted with the universal viewpoint of the Faith and accepted literature with gratitude. Buffet suppers are now being held for those newly-interested, and the believers report a great stimulation to their work since the Fair. Surely these few Bahá'ís have won the admiration of us all with their real sacrifice of time and means.

Other new areas have their pioneer teachers. In Huntington, West Virginia, Harold Hunt of Washington, D. C., has found employment and is making many fine contacts. Speaking engagements have been arranged for Stanwood Cold at the International Club of Marshall College and the YMCA Forum. Mr. Hunt was also able to introduce the Faith to Commander Hughes of the U.S.S. Penney. Miss Nayan Hartfield has been working in Greenwood, Miss., with an isolated believer, Mrs. Bivins. During October new contacts were made in Little Rock, Ark., by Mrs. Iva Snack of Muskogon, during a short visit. The Teaching Committee has also received advice that Miss Rezi Sunshine has returned to Arkansas. In Fort Sam Houston, Texas, a weekly study class is held, according to Mr. H. R. Hurlbut.

A teaching trip through Ohio was made by Charles Mason Remey in October. He also spent several days in Urbana, speaking four times at the University of Illinois, and for the first public meeting to be arranged in Danville, a city in which Urbana has begun extension teaching.

Mrs. Ruth Moffett was scheduled on the Ohio-Pennsylvania circuit in October, when five new study groups were formed. In August she made forty-two talks in Eagle River, Wis., leading to a study class of about twenty-five persons of great capacity. Classes were also held for ten days on the Puza Estate, outside of Eagle River, which was dedicated as a future Bahá'í Summer School.

An extensive trip through the Southern States was made by James Stone, Jr., of Tenafly, N. J., in connection with his business, from July to September. During his short trip in each city Mr. Stirling attempted to locate the isolated believers, traced through the libraries those who had read Baha'i books, and developed many new contacts. His report will greatly assist in future plans for these undeveloped areas.

Lorrol Jackson is now in Butte, Montana, holding weekly study classes and assisting an Esperanto group of young people. She forwarded in October the registration of Irene Caldwell, age seventeen, who has been reared in the Faith.

Beatrice Irwin writes from London, where she arrived on August 14th, that she spoke about the Temple during a television broadcast arranged by the British Broadcasting Company.

This account by no means completes the important and exciting news on hand. Especially the splendid organization of our Regional Committee will have to be considered in a later review. But enough has been related to thrill us all with the movement alive in the Cause, as it advances in its quest for the men and women of the future. Potential world citizens: America is filled with them! We have only to be diligent and faithful in the search, and Baha'u'llah Himself will surely guide us.

Five outlines have been prepared and reviewed for the teaching and training of children in study classes and in the home. One of these, "To Live the Life," is now available in mimeographed form, and deals with the code of life as given by the Master. These twenty-four lessons are adapted to children of ages 7 to 10, or more. Each lesson includes an introduction to the lesson, a story from scriptures or accepted Baha'i sources, and memory passages from the Words of Baha'u'llah. Each lesson is prepared in two sheets, attractively designed in the outline of the House of Worship, and is... so arranged as to make a complete book of 48 pages for each child when the course has been completed. When ordering, ask for one complete set for each child in the group, price 20c per set. Suggestions for the teacher will be included without extra charge and without special mention. The committee requests that the complete order be sent at one time whenever possible in order to effect a saving in postage. The twenty cent rate includes postage. Address orders to the secretary, Miss El­core Georgenson, 615 W. Elm St., Lima, Ohio.

Four more outlines are in the making and notices will appear when they are ready for distribution. They will cover the following subjects:

INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

Mrs. Francis Benedict Stewart has arrived in Buenos Aires, South America, and has begun her arduous labors as a Baha’i teacher in Latin America. The Inter-America Committee wishes to share with all the friends extracts from her first two letters:

“My heart knows that next April 21st a Spiritual Assembly will be formed here. I only had to suggest that I had come to make plans to bring the people together to teach the Baha’i Faith, the response was immediate. They are arranging that I may have an exhibit of Baha’i literature. A very fine man has been elected President with many liberals about him, I have an introduction to him as well as to many of the foremost educators.”

“Last week I addressed six different groups, besides having countless personal interviews. This week has been glorious! A group of well known men in the field of science and education invited me to address them and all are clamoring for the books. A well known astronomer spent an evening fascinated with the cycle of manifestation and the evolution of civilization. I have appointments for every hour of next week as I am gathering together those who have expressed the desire for deeper study and from this we shall bring forth our permanent group I feel sure.”

Although the report of Miss Zamenhof's work in Cleveland has not been sent in yet and for this reason a final report on that phase of the activity of this Committee cannot be made, we have something of real interest to report which took place during her last days in America.

Miss Zamenhof arrived in New York, November 15 and was here for two weeks awaiting the sailing of her steamer for Poland. During the second week of her stay she addressed the first meeting arranged by the Brooklyn Teaching Committee, to which the Esperantists of that Borough were invited. They responded so well and showed such interest and attraction that the Committee wish to bring it to the attention of the Baha'is; as it implies, that now is the time for us to interest the Esperantists in the Baha'i Faith. They were more receptive than formerly, and this is due undoubtedly to Miss Zamenhof's devoted and self-sacrificing service during the last year. Now, while this condition exists, is the time to contact them. And very fortunately, an occasion has just arisen by which the Baha'is can not only contact the Esperantists but also reach entire strangers by means of classes in this auxiliary language.

They have been filming in Hollywood a play in which the Lunts appeared on Broadway about two years ago, called 'Idiot's Delight.' To avoid a difficulty which would have prevented the film's being shown in the European countries, parts of this film are spoken in Esperanto and the scene transferred to a mythical country. Clark Gable and Norma Shearer are the stars. Any one will readily appreciate the publicity that this will give to Esperanto and the large number of strangers that one can attract to a class advertised in a local paper. To have this happen just at the moment when the Esperantists themselves are showing interest in our Faith, cannot be a coincidence. It must be the "Assistance of the Blessed Perfection." Such an opportunity will not come our way again; an opportunity which can be used in the smallest town as well as in the largest city. Where there are Esperantists in a city, they will be glad to cooperate by teaching the class. Where there is none, it is a simple matter for a Baha'i to teach the class by studying a lesson or two ahead of the students. An easy textbook can be bought from the Esperanto Association in Washington, for 20c each, with a reduction for an order of 20 books.

Another opening which the Committee would urge the Baha'is to use through Esperanto, is the Youth Hostel Movement. It originated in Germany over twenty years ago, but is not more than five years old in this country. It is growing rapidly and has a definite need of members who can speak Esperanto. Any young person who can speak it who became a member would be considered a definite asset and welcomed accordingly. Because of the small numbers of Esperantists in America, none of them young with the exception of the Cleveland members, this need cannot be met by them. Which leaves the field clear for the Baha'is. It is needless to stress the value of this opportunity for our young people who wish to spread the Cause, not alone in our own country but in Europe as well. The headquarters of this movement are in Northampton, Mass., if you wish to get in touch with them.

Baha'is will find that the people who join their Esperanto classes in turn belong to other groups and societies, with whom contacts can be made. For instance, the Quakers and International Rotary endorse Esperanto. In Boston, when the Esperantists observed the birthday of Dr. Zamenhof, the Baha'i cooperated with them, and Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan was the principal speaker on the program. One of the younger Esperantists, who is president of a Portuguese organization consisting of fifty persons, has asked that Dr. Khan come and speak to them.

Certainly, "This is the Day whenon naught can be seen except the splendors of the Light that shinneth from the face of thy Lord, the Gracious, the Most Bountiful." Della C. Quinlan, Chairman.

THE SONG CELESTIAL

Letter from the Guardian

With Shoghi Effendi's consent is published this excerpt from his letter to Mr. Howard Colby Ives dated June 30, 1939:

"The announcement of the forthcoming publication of The Song Celestial has rejoiced and refreshed the heart of our beloved Guardian. He fervently hopes that this latest production of your able pen will bring wide response from the believers, and that they will cooperate in giving it the publicity it truly deserves, and thus help it realize the purpose for which it has been written, namely, to introduce the Faith through the presentation of the Teachings in an attractively artistic form.

MEETING AND CONFERENCE AT URBANA

The December meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly included a public meeting, luncheon with the Spiritual Assembly and a regional Conference representing friends from a large number of centers.

The public meeting, held in a parlor of the Woman's Building, University of Illinois, was arranged by the Baha'i Young Group of the University. The speakers were introduced by Miss Sweeney, an undergraduate. Allen B. McDaniel presided, Harlan Ober spoke on The Spiritual Remedy for World Strife, and Horace Holley on World Community: A New Creation. Beautiful and appropriate music was contributed by Sol Cohen and Julius Cohen.

Mrs. Marjory McCormick presided at the Conference Sunday afternoon, which concluded with a buffet supper. About seventy Baha'is were present, representing the following cities: Urbana, Chicago, Milwaukee, Kenosha, Peoria, Wilmette, Winnetka, Springfield, Detroit, Washington, Boston, Montreal, Dubuque, Los Angeles, West Englewood, New York. Twenty-five different believers spoke briefly on some subject provided in the agenda, which is evidence of the true spirit of consultation.

BAHA'I FELLOWSHIP HOUSE
At Covington

From Mrs. Louie Mathews comes the following report on the establishment of a public meeting place devised to accomplish a difficult teaching task in a prejudiced environment.

Covington, Louisiana, is a small city seventy-five miles from New Orleans. Marion Little makes her home there and there is no group or Assembly in the state and in order to have a focal point from which to spread the teachings, it was decided to establish a small community house here in order to make a practical demonstration of Baha'i ideals.

An old unused shop standing at the entrance of St. Paul's College was leased very inexpensively. A wooded tract bordered by a small stream made a natural boundary line; it was dilapidated but not irredeemable, so we went to work painting and plastering and raking while a fireplace, pantry and a tight roof were built by a local carpenter. Long steps were placed at the entrance so that in summer with the doors open the meetings could take place under the trees.

The newspapers gladly ran articles describing it and praising the enterprise, but they refused to use the word "Baha'i" as this section of the country is dominated by clergy and they did not think it a wise move. On December 10, 1938, it was completed and invitations to the dedication were sent to all the ministers and priests as well as to the people.

As Marion Little is well known and looked up to by all the various religious bodies, she was elected as chairman. The name of "Fellowship" according to the Baha'i use of the word was explained and the quotation which inspired it was read: "Consort with all the people with love and fragrance for fellowship is the essence of unity and unity is the source of order in the world." The twelve Baha'i principles followed, with a short explanation of each.

Then the Mayor of the city was introduced. He graciously thanked us for our gift to Covington of such a center and recommended all citizens to help make it a success.

There followed a splendid address by Mr. Pitcher, the superintendent of schools. He stressed the need in every community of such a center actuated by the Baha'i spirit and said that he had caught a little of its fire. Miss Olga Kaufmann, a moving spirit in the Thesophic group, read the golden rule as given down the ages. Mrs. Anna Smith, a former teacher of Latin in the high schools and a believer, read a paper showing the trend towards universality in many centers today, the coming of age of the people and supported her conclusions with many quotations from the Baha'i writings. In closing Louie Mathews spoke on the differences between the ideals of fellowship in the new day, and those to which we were accustomed, the depth of insight that must be used to bring a spiritual amalgamation about, and read from The Baha'i World Mr. Holley's article, a portion of which was printed in the St. Tammany Farmer. Mrs. Ellis, well known as lecturer and teacher, and who has come into the Faith, read 'Abdu'l-Baha's prayer for the Americas.

About sixty attended and all expressed enthusiasm for the project and entered into the spirit, differences were laid aside and a spirit of fellowship appeared among those present.

Baha'i meetings and classes have been arranged and the rooms have been offered to other groups. It is hoped that all the friends will pray that it may be the means of attracting the people of the state of Louisiana and bringing to them the knowledge of the future World Order of Baha'u'llah.

NEWS ITEMS

The National Assembly requests believers who send in copies of letters received from the Guardian to submit also a copy of their letter to him.

The Nineteen Day Feast falling on December 31 was this year observed by the New York Baha'i Community from 9 P. M. to midnight. Following the program of readings and the consultation, a buffet supper was served until eleven-thirty, when the moving picture film of 'Abdu'l-Baha was shown. His voice record played, and the meeting ended with prayers.

An interested group was gathered together by Orellia Reed at Wilmington, Delaware, a few months ago, and a study class organized which has been conducted by Mrs. Huff of Philadelphia.

The Spiritual Assembly of Yonkers has arranged to have one of the believers listed in the telephone directory under "Baha'i" as well as under the believer's personal name, thus enabling traveling believers and interested local persons to make contact readily with the Faith. The general question of a permanent local address for Baha'i correspondence is still unsolved in the majority of communities. It is hoped that each Assembly will make effort to establish some address not subject to frequent alteration as secretaries move or new officers are elected.

Local Assemblies are requested to notify the National Teaching Committee which members of the community reside in nearby towns. This information will enable the Committee to develop helpful plans and suggestions for the extension of Assembly teaching. The data is helpful also in connection with the election of new Assemblies where none of Baha'i is now voting members of a community, reside outside its civil limits.

From Mr. Ouiskoule, our Baha'i brother of Shanghai, has come some copies of a leaflet he has prepared containing an "Equation of Baha'i and Gregorian Calendar" with explanatory text. He is also distributing the pamphlet...
he pamphlet "Some Principles of the Bahá'í Faith," and this teaching work will have the loving prayers and best wishes of all the friends.

ACTIVITIES IN THE BRITISH ISLES

Teaching Report

In accordance with the plan made by the N.S.A. at the beginning of the year, teaching has been arranged in Bradford and Torquay. In Bradford, Mr. Norton has given a room in his warehouse for Bahá'í meetings, and several have already been held. The plan is for a teacher to go there every two weeks. The Manchester Spiritual Assembly will send one every month and the N.S.A. will do the same. In Torquay Mrs. Stevens is holding meetings, and will be assisted by Mrs. Slade for a short while in November. The secretary of the N.S.A. recently visited Manchester, Bradford, Torquay (where an address was given to the Psychology Club) and Brighton. An invitation has been received to present the Faith to the Bournemouth Psychology Club.

The London Spiritual Assembly has appointed regional teaching groups to work in their own districts, and several fireside meetings are held regularly. Four new believers have been declared.

In Manchester new people are coming to the meetings, and the children's class on Sundays is very popular. Three new believers have been declared.

Three new believers were declared at Summer School, and we take this opportunity of welcoming them. They were Mrs. Ward of Torquay, Mrs. Rosalind Vance of Sowberry Court, and Miss Bonney of London.

Summer School, 1939

The following plans have already been made for next year's Summer School. The date is July 22nd to August 12th, and the place is High Leigh, Hoddesdon, Hertfordshire, about thirty miles north of London. A prospectus and full programme will be published later, but in the meantime the friends are urged to try and come during the bank holiday week-end, as we have to guarantee an attendance of fifty during that period. The rates are eight shillings per day inclusive, and there are plenty of single rooms available.

A Bahá'í Newspaper

The National Spiritual Assembly has approved plans for the publication of a monthly newspaper. It will be called The New World Order and a design for the front page has been made by Mr. Donald Millar. It will be sold for threepence per copy or an annual subscription of three and sixpence including postage. The paper is chiefly a means of contact and publicity, and the first number will be sent to five thousand people. It will contain an editorial, short articles, quotations from the Bahá'í Writings, excerpts from current speeches and other material which will help to create a body of opinion in favor of the universal principles of Báb and Bahá'u'lláh. It is intended to follow up the contacts which will be established by those people who respond to the first number.
THE RAREST PRIVILEGE EVER CONFERRED BY PROVIDENCE UPON THE AMERICAN BAHÁ'Í COMMUNITY

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dearly beloved co-workers:

I have, in a recent cable addressed to your Assembly, felt it necessary to stress the paramount need of maintaining the proper balance between the Temple construction work and the teaching activities which have been initiated and are being so energetically conducted under your direction in accordance with the Seven Year Plan. The twofold aim you are now pursuing should at no time become obscured, nor should either one of the dual responsibilities you have assumed be allowed to preponderate over the other. The urgency of the task connected with the ornamentation of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar has been rightly recognized, and its immediate needs have been generously and promptly met. A similar, not a mightier effort should now be energetically and promptly made. A similar, yet a mightier effort should now be energetically and promptly made.

The period ahead is short, strenuous, fraught with mortal perils for human society, yet pregnant with possibilities of unsurpassed triumphs for the power of Bahá'u'lláh's redemption Cause. The occasion is propitious for a display, by the American Bahá'í Community, in its corporate capacity, of an effort which in its magnitude, character, and purpose must outshine its past endeavors. Failure to exploit these present, these golden opportunities would blast the hopes which the prosecution of the Plan has thus far aroused, and would signify the loss of the rarest privilege ever conferred by Providence upon the American Bahá'í Community. It is in view of the criticalness of the situation that I was led to place at the disposal of any pioneer willing to dedicate himself to the task of the present hour such modest resources as would facilitate the discharge of so enviable a duty.

The Bahá'í World, increasingly subjected to the rigors of suppression, in both the East and the West, watches with unceasing astonishment, and derives hope and comfort from the rapid unfoldment of the successive stages of God's Plan for so blest a community. Its eyes are fixed upon this community, eager to behold the manner in which its gallant members will break down, one after another, the barriers that obstruct their progress towards a divinely-appointed goal. On every daring adventurer in the service of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh the Concourse on high shall descend, "each bearing aloft a chalice of pure light." Every one of these adventurers God Himself will sustain and inspire, and will "cause the pure waters of wisdom and utterance to gush out and flow copiously from his heart." "The Kingdom of God," writes 'Abdu'l-Bahá, "is possessed of limitless potency. Audacious must be the army of life if the confirming aid of that Kingdom is to be repeatedly vouchsafed unto it... Vast is the arena, and the time ripe to spur on the charger within it. Now is the time to reveal the force of one's strength, the stoutness of one's heart and the might of one's soul."

Dearly-beloved friends! What better field than the vast virgin territories, so near at hand, and waiting to receive, at this very hour, their full share of the onrushing tide of Bahá'u'lláh's redeeming grace? What theatre more befitting than these long-neglected nine remaining states and provinces in which the true heroism of the intrepid pioneers of His World Order can be displayed? There is no time to lose. There is no room left for vacillation. Multitudes hunger for the Bread of Life. The stage is set. The firm and irrevocable Promise is given. God’s own Plan has been set in motion. It is gathering momentum with every passing day. The powers of heaven and earth mysteriously assist in its execution. Such an opportunity is irreplaceable. Let the doubter arise and himself verify the truth of such assertions. To try, to persevere, is to insure ultimate and complete victory.

January 28, 1939.

LETTER FROM THE GUARDIAN

The Guardian’s letter of January 28, 1939, the postscript of which, in his own hand, is reprinted above, contains other passages here brought to the attention of the friends:

Regarding Ahmad Schrab’s recent compilation of the reported words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá published under the title “I Heard Him Say,” the Guardian wishes the believers to ignore this book, as it is wholly unreliable, as evidenced by a passage in which the Master is reported to have indirectly stated that Bahá’u’lláh, the First Letter of the Living, had survived the Báb.

Concerning the nature of the activities to be conducted in the Foundation Hall; for the present, the Foundation Hall can be used for the holding of administrative gatherings, feasts, and public meetings, but the auditorium should be reserved exclusively for purposes of worship.

He is also delighted at the progress of the ornamentation work on the Temple and has every reason to hope that the recently inaugurated Bahá’í Khánum Fund will receive such steady flow of contributions from the individuals, groups and Assemblies as to insure the completion of the entire exterior decoration on that unique edifice even before the time fixed under the Seven Year Plan. He wishes you to send him two large size photographs showing the latest progress of the ornamentation, for the Mansion in Bahji and for the international Archives of M. Carmel.

In conclusion, I wish to renew once more his plea contained in his successive messages to the American believers regarding the paramount urgency of intensifying the campaign of teaching in Northern and particularly in Southern America. Now that the Temple work is progressing so satisfactorily and may well be completed before the year 1944, the American believers should concentrate with added determination on the fulfilment of the second task they have pledged themselves to accomplish under the Seven Year Plan. The teaching campaign which under the guidance and exemplary leadership of your Assembly has been steadily advancing is far from having attained the objective and will require much greater self-sacrifice and resourcefulness than have so far been displayed. The remaining five years will have indeed to witness a renewed and added consecration by each and every one of the friends in the supreme task of opening up not only the remaining states and provinces in the United States and Canada, but also the Latin countries of South America, where the difficulties of language, and the age-old religious conservatism of the masses, coupled with the growing economic and political nationalism of their respective governments, create barriers which the combined and united exertions of the American believers, reinforced by Divine confirmations, alone can remove.

The Guardian will ever pray that the American Bahá’í Community may continue to be sustained in its efforts for the attainment of this high and noble objective. For there can assuredly be no victory more brilliant and befitting with which they can celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of the Faith, than the triumphant termination of the inter-American campaign of teaching.

A DEEPENING OF SPIRIT

To the American Bahá’í community has come from the Guardian three communications which call for a deepening of our personal and collective life in the Faith: the cablegram of January 26, a general letter dated December 25, 1939, and the letter dated January 28, reprinted above.

“Nine Holy Souls”

Within the brief period from the receipt of the cablegram to the meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly at Los Angeles on February 3, the inspiration to arise as a pioneer teacher had seized upon a number of friends. These offers were received with gratitude and admiration. In addition, one believer has offered to contribute the expense of settling a teacher in Alaska for one or two years. This effect is evidence of the spirit of consecration which has been quickened in the Bahá’í community.

It was found possible to take action on these unoccupied areas, and other actions will be reported after the next meeting.

Miss Honor Kempton will proceed to Alaska, Miss N. Grace Bissell to Vermont, and Miss Helen Griffing to Nevada, with the loving best wishes and full cooperation of the Teaching Committee and the National Assembly. Their sacrifice and devoted efforts to establish the Faith in those areas will no doubt be prayerfully followed by all their coworkers.

These facts were reported to the Guardian by cablegram, and on February 11, Shoghi Effendi sent the following cabled reply:

“Heart flooded (with) joyous gratitude (at) realization American believers (are) rising magnificently (to meet the) challenge (of this) utterly precious hour. Convey (to) Alaska, Nevada (and) Vermont pioneers (my) immense appreciation (of their) marvelous, instantaneous, exemplary response. Prayers continually accompany them.”

“The Advent of Divine Justice”

This is the title of the Guardian’s general communication to the American Bahá’ís, in the form of the printed pamphlet which will be sent as soon as possible to all the believers. Members of communities will receive them through their Spiritual Assembly, members of groups through their correspondent, and the isolated friends direct.

It would appear that in “Bahá’í Administration” the Guardian had described and created our functions and duties within the community, in “The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh” he had revealed the relations of the community to the entire world, and now he creates the realities of the spiritual life in action to obtain the universal goal of the Cause of God.

Temple Construction

The February meeting acted also to further the other precious aim, that of completing the exterior of the House of Worship before the end of the first century of the Bahá’í Era.

From the National Fund the sum of $8,000 was appropriated to the Bahá’í Khanum Fund, and the Temple Trustees were authorized to enter into a contract with the John J. Earley Studios for making the molds required for the first story. Thus, there are three contracts proceeding simultaneously: that for the gallery section, almost completed; that for the first story models, begun in December, 1938; and the new contract for molds. In addition, the quartz needed for the castings of the first story units is being acquired by monthly purchases under very favorable conditions, an economy that will not show until the next contract, that for casting the units and applying them to the first story surface, is under way.

The January issue of Bahá’í News summarized the steps in Temple construction. To bring the report to date, the financial statement of March 1 gives this information about the Bahá’í Khanum Fund.

These figures are very impressive, in that they show that the Gallery and Models contracts are financially provided for in full, and of the $29,000 needed for the Molds contract the sum of $22,137.36 is now on hand. The purchase of quartz need not alter these figures, as the monthly payment is small and can readily be appropriated from the National Fund.

However, gratifying as it is, the question of Temple construction still requires the following sums through new donations:

The first of these three items will be payable in four or five months, and the second item will be needed immediately after the models and molds are completed, unless the contract for casting and application is to be divided into a series of smaller and partial contracts.

Formation of New Assemblies

The February meeting considered a very large number of applications from groups requesting authority to form a new Assembly on April 21.

Of these, authority was given to the groups of Huntington Park, Calif., Scranton, Pa., Helena, Mont., Knoxville, Tenn., Jamestown, N. Y., East Cleveland, O., and Wauwatosa, Wis. Since the meeting, the group in Eagle River, Wis., has qualified. At the March meeting it is hoped that authority can be given several more groups.

Annual Convention

Plans for the Convention were adopted, and the Convention Call has already been issued to the local Assemblies. The Thirty-first Annual Convention will open Thursday morning, April 27, and continue through Sunday morning, April 30, with a public meeting in Foundation Hall Sunday afternoon.

Los Angeles Meeting

In addition to the regular meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly, a rich and varied program had been prepared. Thursday, February 2, a radio broadcast shared jointly by Horace Holley, Allen B. McDaniel and Roy C. Wilhelm. This was the last in the radio series conducted by the Los Angeles Assembly leading up to the public meeting Thursday evening. This meeting was held in the Music Room, Hotel Biltmore, and those attending exceeded 550. Allen B. McDaniel presided, Horace Holley spoke on "World Community: A Divine Creation" and George O. Latimer on "The Future Civilization." On Saturday, the members had the pleasure of luncheon with the Spiritual Assembly of Los Angeles. Sunday afternoon was devoted to the Regional Conference, which dealt with an agenda containing fourteen interesting topics. About 200 believers were present, and all remained for supper after the conference. Monday afternoon a number of believers with the members of the National Spiritual Assembly gathered for prayer and devotion at the shrine of Thornton Chase and the graves of Thomas Collins and Elmore Ducket.

These few words fail to describe the importance of such gatherings for consultation and for fellowship and devotion, which tend so much to unify the deeper consciousness of the believers and make them an instrument for more inspired service.

The World's Fairs

The World's Fairs being conducted this year at San Francisco and New York are a remarkable coincidence in relation to the vast stimuli given to teaching at the present time. The Teaching Committee presented a beautiful design of a Bahá'í exhibit, and this was authorized. Further interesting details will be available very soon. The New York Assembly through its Committee reported a number of projects under way. The space necessary for a paid exhibit at the latter Fair is extremely expensive, but it is hoped to surmount this obstacle and also have the Faith represented in several other ways.

Inter-America Teaching

Reports were presented which show that Mrs. Stewart has had far-reaching results from her mission carried out under the direction of the Inter-America Committee. Study groups have been established at Buenos Aires, Montevideo and Valparaiso, the details of which will be reported as soon as possible. It is hoped that Mrs. Stewart can prolong her visit to South America and consolidate the results already achieved.

Action was also taken to adopt a regular schedule for printing Spanish translations of the Bahá'í literature, and a member of the newly formed Assembly in Mexico City is being invited to attend the Convention as the guest of the National Assembly, thus bringing this group into closer touch with the American believers and enabling their representative to consult with the Inter-America Committee and the National Assembly on plans for extending the Faith throughout Latin America.

May we all become so open to the power of the Spirit that we can begin to realize what confirmations await every sacrificial act, and every ardent effort, every increase in the unity of the Bahá'í Community!

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

BAHÁ'Í NEWS

A Bahá'í News Editorial Committee, consisting of Allen B. McDaniel, Harlan Ober and Horace Holley, has made recommendations to the National Spiritual Assembly which have been approved and adopted, as follows:

1. That the contents of each issue be arranged according to the following departments:
   A. The Guardian.
   B. The National Spiritual Assembly.
   C. The Temple.
   D. National Committees, beginning with the Teaching Committee.
   E. Summer Schools.
   F. International.
   G. Miscellaneous items.

2. That the National Assembly request committees, in preparing their reports intended for publication, to give the right value to news items, as at present some committees write extensively about comparatively unimportant matters, and other committees will deal with an important matter in a few words.

3. That news concerning local Assembly activities be solicited and published.

4. That a summary of the actions be published after National Assembly meetings.

5. That the Convention issue be no longer called "Bahá'í News" but be a bulletin carrying the Annual Reports and be entitled "Annual Reports of the National Spiritual Assembly, Trustees and Committees"; that the first page contain the Guardian's words about the Convention, and that any special statement concerning the Convention which the National Assembly might issue with the Convention Call be also included.

HOW TO SUBMIT ITEMS FOR PUBLICATION IN BAHÁ'Í NEWS

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes Bahá'í News to reflect the varied activities of the American Bahá'í Community, and at the same time constitute the means by which the Guardian's messages, the plans of the National Assembly itself, and important news from other lands, can be brought to every American Bahá'í.

In order to stimulate the flow of news items available for publication, the following procedure has been adopted and is now recommended to the friends.

1. All activities conducted directly under the jurisdiction of the local Spiritual Assembly should be reported by the Assembly itself, and submitted as news and not as part of a communication to the National Assembly dealing with other matters. Individual members of the local community should report their activities to the local Assembly, which can work them into their general news reports.

2. Teaching activities conducted under a Regional Committee should be reported to that Committee, which in turn should forward all teaching news to the National Teaching Committee, and the National Teaching Committee prepares regular news reports for Baha'i News based upon all this information.

3. Other National Committees, like the Baha'i News Service, Radio Committee and Child Education Committee, the Committee on Braille Transcription, and the Committee on International Auxiliary Language, should receive from individual believers, groups and Assemblies such news items as are specialized in each committee. For example, make reports on publicity direct to the Baha'i News Service; and each of these committees will then, as frequently as possible, prepare general news reports for Baha'i News.

4. The remaining National Committees, like the Summer Schools and Publishing Committees, will prepare their own news items and submit them for publication.

5. In order to fix a uniform publishing date for Baha'i News the friends are informed that hereafter it will appear the first of each month, and all items intended for a certain issue must be received not later than the twenty-third day of the preceding month.

6. The National Spiritual Assembly prefers each issue to consist of eight pages, which calls for simplicity and brevity of treatment in the handling of all items and reports.

"DRAW NIGHT UNTO BAHAA'ULLAH"

I render Thee thanks, O Thou Who hast lighted Thy fire within my soul, and cast the beams of Thy light into my heart, that Thou hast taught Thy servants how to make mention of Thee, and revealed unto them the ways whereby they can supplicate Thee, through Thy most holy and exalted tongue, and Thy most august and precious speech. But for Thy leave, who is there that could venture to express Thy might and Thy grandeur; and were it not for Thine instruction, who is the man that could discover the ways of Thy pleasure in the kingdom of Thy creation? (Prayers and Meditations, p. 283).

In all Dispensations the law of prayer hath constituted a fundamental element of the Revelation of all the Prophets of God. . . . Moreover, in the traditions the terms 'sun' and 'moon' have been applied to prayer and fasting, even as it is said: 'Fasting is illumination, prayer is light.' (Kitab-i-Iqan, p. 39).

That which Thou didst ordain for Thy handmaidens as circle round the throne of Thy majesty, and gaze, at eventide and at dawn, on Thy beauty. (Prayers and Meditations, p. 79).

For Thine ardent lovers Thou hast, according to Thy decree, reserved, at each daybreak, the cup of Thy remembrance, O Thou Who art the Ruler of Rulers! These are they who have been so inebriated with the wine of Thy manifold wisdom that they forsake their couches in their longing to celebrate Thy praise and extol Thy virtues, and flee from sleep in their eagerness to approach Thy presence and partake of Thy bounty. (Prayers and Meditations, p. 143).

My remembrance of Thee, O my God, quencheth my thirst, and quietest my heart. My soul delighteth in its communion with Thee, . . . I give thanks to Thee, O my God, that Thou hast suffered me to remember Thee. What else but remembrance of Thee can give delight to my soul or gladness to my heart? Communion with Thee enableness to dispense with the remembrance of all Thy creatures, and my love for Thee empowereth me to endure the harm which my oppressors inflict upon me. (Prayers and Meditations, p. 195).

Commune intimately with His Spirit, and be thou of the thankful. (Gleanings, p. 280).

CHILD EDUCATION COMMITTEE

A correction of last month's news column is regretfully offered. The price of each course, including "To Live The Life," posted in the January News at 20c per copy, will be 25c. Mailing charges in the United States and Canada are included in this rate.

In addition to this course, "To Live The Life," adapted to ages 7 to 10, two more courses are now in mimeographed form and ready for distribution. "Baha'i Principles," adapted to children from 8 to 15, is offered in twelve lessons, each lesson stating a suggested presentation for the teacher, an applicable story from scriptural Books or accepted Baha'i publications, and a suggested memory passage in keeping with the theme of the lesson. This outline should be purchased for the teacher only. For the children themselves, however, a set of twelve pictures for coloring, portraying the theme of each lesson. Each individual child may have one of these sets at 10c per set. Each lesson will deal with one of the principles, and the color plates will coincide with the lesson in every case.

"Baha'i Founders," ages 9 to 15, in 18 lessons, is a text book course, based on "Baha'u'llah and the New Era." Each chapter of the text, "Baha'u'llah, 'Abdu'l-Baha, and the Guardian, and the chapter on the qualities of a Baha'i, are used with stimulating questions and memory passages. It is suggested that each child have both text book and course. No hand work. Course 25c.

The friends are requested to order as nearly as possible each time in full amounts because of the very definite saving in express costs. Address orders to the secretary, Miss Elyce Georgenson, 615 W. Elm St., Lima, Ohio.

A careful study of the teaching of tiny tots is being made, with the view of making definite recommendations in a spring number of the News.

The Parents and Teachers column, to begin in the April issue of Baha'i News, will seek to discuss, in the light of the Baha'i Faith, our common problems in teaching and training children. The friends are invited to submit questions of general interest, or to contribute to the column. For this department, address the chairman, Mrs. Dorothy Baker, 615 W. Elm St., Lima, Ohio.

FINAL REPORT ON MISS ZAMENHOF

A very good report of Miss Zamenhof's activity in Cleveland has been sent in lately, making it possible for this Committee to complete their report of her work.

The Cleveland Spiritual Assembly arranged a reception and public meeting for Miss Zamenhof at International House, which was well attended. She also spoke at their rooms one evening and at a meeting which she herself arranged, on a Sunday afternoon at the home of one of the Esperantists. There were 20 persons present and Mrs. Moffat was the second speaker. I understand that this Esperantist is definitely interested and is corresponding with Miss Zamenhof about the Revelation. The following quotation from the letter sent from the Cleveland Spiritual Assembly is relevant to the interest aroused: "Miss Zamenhof during the entire (Esperanto) course included some hint of the teaching so near to our hearts and I am sure we shall see the maturing of the many seeds planted during her stay."

Her Esperanto propaganda, in the charge of a group of young High School and college students, was very well planned and an immense amount of work went into it. Unfortunately, they did not reap the reward which such labor merited, as her arrival in Cleveland coincided with the breathless days before the Munich Conference. Although she was interviewed by the 3 principal papers, Cleveland Press, Plain Dealer, and Cleveland News, also Urban Newspapers, Inc., nothing appeared. In spite of the fact that one paper had an illustrated article all set up, ready to print. However, she did receive generous publicity from the foreign language press and foreign English publications. A representative of the Polish press met her at the Union Station on her arrival. Another publicity item is her interview over Station WHK by Professor Frank Tomich of Kent College.

This last is representative of the good arrangements that the Esperantists made for her talks. She spoke for them at Cleveland College, Schaufler College, Henry George School, Shaker Heights High School, Lincoln Boule-

YOUTH STUDY DAYS

The Fourth Outline in the series prepared for the Youth Study Days is based on Part IV of "Some Answered Questions."

Suggested Preliminary Readings: Reality of Man, pp. 6-36; index references to Evolution, Soul, Mind and Spirit, Immortality and Healing, in "Baha'i Scriptures" and "The Proclamation of Universal Peace."

Questions raised by non-believers? Do Baha'i accept the Darwinian theory of evolution? Is not man a species of animal, sharing the same powers and senses? In man's vertebral column there is an indication that he once possessed a tail. Does this not prove that our ancestors were apes? How long has man existed? Has man always had a soul? God "Made man in His image." Are we then not all parts of the Divine Spirit? Is the Christian doctrine of the Holy Trinity accepted by Baha'is? Can human nature be changed? Are all men born with equal capacities? Can we know God? Does God forgive sin? If a man consciously performs good deeds throughout his life, is this sufficient for salvation? Is the course of our lives predestined? Has man free will? Can we speak with the dead? (See pp. 206, 215, 223, 229, 230, 239-67-74, 241, 249, 247, 256-58, 261-77-82, 269, 276, 283, 287, 292.)

Tenth Annual Convention, India and Burma

Every year the days of Ridvan are days of happiness and joy for the Bahá'ís. They hold their annual Convention in these days to consult together on recent developments in the Holy Cause in India and Burma. With a world full of chaos and class hatred and a country torn with communal riots and charged with a spirit of division and disunity on all sides these lovers of the Abba Beauty gather together calmly and without any regard to the struggle that rages around them, to discuss ways and means to promote the Divine Teachings of “Oneness of Humanity” and of “World Peace” in a world which, though yearning for such beneficent Teachings, yet ignores them out of sheer craze for war which seems to be the sure and culminating end of the present muddle.

The delegates and visitors all arrived a day previous to the date of the Convention. The representatives had come from Bombay on one side and from Rangoon on the other. One of the distinguishing features of this year’s Convention was the presence of our most beloved sister, Miss Martha L. Root. She is love incarnate and her loving influence gave the delegates and the visitors a fresh impetus. She joined us in public lectures and inspired us with a spirit of sacrifice that is peculiar to her.

After the office-bearers of the Convention had been elected a cablegram was sent to the beloved Guardian supplicating for his blessings and prayers for the success of our deliberations. He sent us the following encouraging reply and our hearts flow with gratitude for his unique favors for us—

Assure Convention Delegates Loving Fervent Prayers Success Deliberations Dearest Love Martha.

Telegrams were also received from Bombay and Calcutta Bahá’ís, congratulating the Convention and the incoming National Spiritual Assembly.

Mr. R. K. Oliani read the Annual Report in the Persian on behalf of the National Secretary. The Treasurer also presented his report. The delegates then took up the general discussion of the Report and after discussing the various propositions suggested in the Report recorded them as recommendations for submission to the new N. S. A.

The most important of these recommendations are probably those of a Summer School in India and Burma and of the 6-year Teaching Plan.

Evenings were devoted to public lectures in the various public halls of the town. The subjects were well chosen and the speakers gave interesting and impressive talks to the audiences.

On April 27 these lectures were arranged in Khaliqdina Hall in the heart of the city under the chairmanship of Mr. Hattim Alvi, present Mayor of Karachi. Miss Martha Root spoke on the Teachings of the Divine Educator, Bahá’u’lláh; Abbas Ali Butt spoke on Bahá’í Faith and the Oneness of Humanity and Prof. Pritam Singh recounted the History of the Bahá’í Faith. The Chairman wound up with an elaborate exposition of the Divine Faith and impressively supported the views expressed by the speakers.

On April 28, Theosophical Hall had a fairly good audience and the lectures began under the chairmanship of Mr. Durgadas Advani, the then Mayor of Karachi. Miss Martha Root gave an account of her world tours in the interest of World Peace; Mrs. Shirin Fozdar explained the Bahá’í Faith in its bearing on the World Unity; and Mr. H. M. Manji addressed the audience on Divine Remedy for Economicills. April 29 was the 9th day of Ridvan and the Friends of Karachi were all on holiday. They all gathered in the Hazrat-ul-Qods and we had a sumptuous dinner followed by a tea-party in the afternoon to which about 500 of the important personages of the town were invited. The garden of the Bahá’í Hall was gaily decorated and tables were laid on the lawns. By 5 p.m. the guests had all arrived and tea, pastry, ice-cream and other refreshments were served. Beloved Martha was aglow with divine splendor moving here and there among those noble guests and talked to them about the Divine Faith in her own sweet manner.

The President of the local Spiritual Assembly thanked the guests for their presence there; Mr. Mehrban Jamshed on behalf of the local Bahá’í Youth Group presented an address of welcome to Miss Martha Root in which glowing tribute was paid to her incomparable services for the Holy Cause. In her moving reply Miss Martha Root surveyed the progress of the Bahá’í Faith in the five continents of the world. She was followed by Abbas Ali Butt who traced the progress of the Faith in India and Burma. Mr. Pradhan, the first Principal of the Shivaji High School, moved by a lovely reminiscence of his meeting with Abdu’l-Bahá while returning from Europe, rose up and in words expressive of his noble emotions thanked the Bahá’ís of Karachi for their hospitality and incidentally spoke of the greatness of the Bahá’í Faith and of its suitability for the present-day world.

On April 30 public lectures were again held in the Theosophical Hall under the chairmanship of Mr. Jamshed Nusserwanjee Mehta, a great citizen of Karachi and for a long time the Mayor of that town. Miss Martha Root spoke on “How we can work for World Peace”; Prof. H. C. Kumar spoke on the “Oneness of Humanity” and Prof. Pritam Singh delivered a speech on “The relations of Bahá’í Faith with other Religions.”

On May 1 two of the interested Hindu friends arranged for public lectures in the Jain Temple under the chairmanship of their chief religious leader, Muni Maharaj. The temple was full to its capacity and the audience heard the Baha'i Message with wrap attention. Miss Martha Root, Mrs. Shirin Fozdar and Mr. H. M. Manji spoke impressively and conveyed the Message of Bahá’í to these noble souls. In the afternoon public lectures were held in the Bahá’í Hall under the chairmanship of Prof. H. C. Kumar. Miss Martha Root spoke on “Teaching the Bahá’í Faith”; Mr. Hishmá’ulláh Kóreishí spoke on the “New World Order” and Abbas Ali Butt spoke on the “Power of the Holy Spirit.”

May 2 was the last day of Ridvan and once more the friends of Karachi had gathered in the Bahá’í Hall to observe the Day. After the formal meeting they dispersed in groups in the gardens, some having a peaceful Holy Wasp. Their sonorous voices rose in varying cadence once from one corner of the garden and then from the other and it seemed as if the whole atmosphere was charged with the spirit of real joy and happiness. Dinner was served and was followed by chanting of prayers in the garden. Meanwhile some of the Hindu friends came and carried Miss Martha Root, Mrs. Shirin Fozdar and Mr. H. M. Manji to Shar­da Mandal where to an audience of students and scholars they spoke on the “Progress of the World of Humanity” and delivered the Message in most interesting and attractive words. At 6 p.m. Messrs. Hishmá’ulláh Kóreishí and H. M. Manji were invited to speak at the Karia High School to the students and teachers of the Bahá’í Faith. At 7 p.m. Mr. Sohrab Kátrik, one of the leading Parsees of Karachi and President of the Young Men’s Zoroastrian Association, had arranged for Bahá’í lectures under the auspices of his Association in Katrik Hall under the chairmanship of Mr. P. C. Tarapore, editor of the Daily Gazette. Miss Martha Root spoke on the Challenge of Tomorrow and Mrs. Shirin Fozdar spoke on the Bahá’í Faith and its relation with the Zoro­astrian religion. Mr. Sohrab Kátrik thanked the lecturers and the chairman and garlanded them, presenting them each with a copy of the Jubilee Book as a memento of the occasion.

On May 3 at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Momenz­adhí gave a tea party to which he invited the Iranian Consul-General H. E. Áqá Fahimi and his wife, Mr. Hatim Alvi, Miss Martha Root and members of the N. S. A. After the tea Miss Martha Root, Mrs. Shirin Fozdar and Mr. H. M. Manji spoke impressively of their impressions of Iran during her tour in that holy country.

On May 4 Mr. Sohrab Kátrik in­vited Miss Martha Root, Dr. and Mrs. Fozdar and the President of the local Spiritual Assembly, Mr. Isfandiar K. B. Bakhitiari, to a tea party to which he had also invited some of the notables of the town. After refreshments conversa­tion turned on the Bahá’í Faith and the guests and the host all expressed their appreciation of the Divine Teachings.

On May 5 Mr. Pradhán gave tea to Miss Martha Root, Mrs. Shirin Fozdar and some of the delegates to the Convention. He was very kind and his lovely daughter left nothing undone to serve her guests with the delicacies which she had prepared with her own hands. The talk about the Divine Faith was really very uplifting and impressive.

Martha L. Root in India

Colombo, Ceylon.—Dr. and Mrs. Fozdar and I went to Colombo, Cey­lon, for ten days, January 5 to 16, 1938. It was my second trip to Colombo since September 13. The press used many favorable and long articles about the Bahá’í Faith, the editors and journalists were our true friends. A newspaper in Tamil language also published the history and principles translated into Tamil. I spoke before the Rotary Club of Colombo and was broadcast from the luncheon table. Shirin spoke over the radio about Quránu’l-Ayn and sang one of the latter’s poems. A gramophone record was made of this song. Both broadcast speeches were printed in full in the Colombo papers. One public lecture was given in Colombo University under the auspices of the University Col­lege Economics Society, and another public lecture took place at the Rama­krishna Mission School. We spoke before the teachers of a Buddhist school for girls, and Dr. and Mrs. Fozdar spoke at the Parí Club. Some very fine Muslim people invited us to their homes, so also did some Christians, Hindus and Buddhists. We invited a number of people to our hotel. The Mayor of Colombo called. Shirin spoke before the Women’s Interna­tional Club. It was all a most worthwhile visit to Colombo. Dr. Fozdar after helping us much, returned from Colombo to his hospital work at Ajmer.

Bangalore.—Mrs. Fozdar and I came via Madras to Bangalore and Mysore where she had been ten months before. Three Bahá’í lectures were scheduled for the three days of our stay, January 24, 25, 26, at the Mythic Society, a high Cultural Society in Bangalore, in Daly Memorial Hall, a building given by the Maharaja of Mysore. The Secretary of the Mythic Society, a lawyer, Mr. S. Srikan­th, ably presided at the three lectures; all were reported in the Bangalore Post. Questions were asked and answered and each day the audience increased. Teachers from the Fort High School present invited us to come over to their school and speak to seven hundred boys. The Dewan of Mysore, an Ir­anian, a Muslim, is so fine in his char­acter that Bahá’ís could well say he is “Bahá’í” in spirit, in the sense that he seems to have all the perfections in activity.” He received us and did everything to help us—he helps the Muslims, the Hindus, the Jews, the Christians. He invited us to a great garden party where he was the guest of honor and introduced us to some friends as Bahá’ís. The Vice-Chancel­lor of Mysore University and his wife were in Bangalore and invited us to their home; he was most kind and help­ful both times Mrs. Fozdar came. One of the Magazines in Bangalore promises to publish three articles about the Cause. One man in Bangalore said in fun: “The people swarm like locusts to eat the Bahá’í Teachings!” It was not quite like that, but certainly people were interested and you can see from this account that we found friends everywhere who helped us to spread the Fragrances of the Teachings.

Mysore City.—The next days, Janu­ary 27, 28, 29, were spent in Mysore City. Mrs. Fozdar and I each gave two lectures in the University and she spoke to an Educational Association. One Professor who presided at my lect­ure said that he had read seven or eight Bahá’í books carefully, and that when a distinguished Ramakrishna Swami spoke in that same University Hall on “Modern Religions” and did not mention about the Bahá’í Faith, this Professor who was acting as Chairman said that one of the most important modern religions had been left out and he gave the history of the Bahá’í Movement.—I told the audience it was like that in our country; at the World’s Parliament of Religions, in Chicago, Exposition, in 1893, a Pro­fessor, founder of Beirut University, has spoken about the Bahá’í Faith and now we have thousands of Bahá’ís in America.

"POTENTIALITIES OF GOD'S CREATIVE PLAN"

Dearly-beloved co-workers:

I was deeply stirred by the news conveyed in your recent cable. The abiding assurance I derived from its contents eases the burden of my cares and fortifies me in my tasks. The illustrious community of the American believers, contemptuous of risk or peril, is driving ahead, relentlessly and with its whole vigor, towards the dual goal which the Seven Year Plan has set before it. The virtual completion of the contract for the gallery section of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar, the inauguration of the First Story Construction Fund, the signature of the contract for the models of the Main Story, the prompt response to the Fund newly associated with the memory of the Greatest Holy Leaf, the consequent placing of a further contract for the construction of the molds, the acceleration of pioneer teaching activity and the resultant penetration of the Faith into practically every State and Province in the United States and Canada—all these have, in the course of the second year of the Seven Year Plan, followed in amazingly swift succession. With dramatic swiftness, with unyielding resolve, with uncompromising fidelity and superb courage, the community responsible for such a unique demonstration of Bahá’í initiative and enterprise is overcoming the barriers, whether material or moral, that threaten to interfere with the execution of its declared purpose.

The task regarded as an essential preliminary to the crusade destined to embrace the whole of Latin America is now in full swing and is being rapidly carried out. A further step, designed to hasten the conclusion of the final phase of the ornamentation of the Temple, has also been taken. As the days roll by, as the perturbations of an imperiled civilization are more alarmingly manifested, the potentialities of God’s creative Plan correspondingly unfold, and the valor and heroism of its intrepid supporters are more widely and convincingly demonstrated. With every successful effort to muster its young and scattered forces, to perfect its methods, to extend the range of its operations, to deepen its spiritual life and to scale loftier heights of individual heroism, there will, I cannot but feel confident, be granted to this community a greater opportunity to prove its worth, and a fuller measure of celestial strength to enable it to reenact, on the soil of the United States and Canada and throughout the entire Western Hemisphere, those stirring exploits that have shed such luster on the apostolic age of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Though much has thus far been achieved, yet the processes now set in motion through the evolution of the Plan are still far too rudimentary to permit even a faint glimpse of the brilliancy of the epoch in which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s own Plan must come to fruition. Not ours to attempt, at the present moment, a survey of the distant scene, or to seek to visualize its glories, or to dwell on the consequences of the eventual attainment of an as yet far-off goal. Ours is the solemn, the inescapable duty to labor faithfully and unremittingly to insure that no opportunity is being missed, that no avenues are left unexplored, that might, however indirectly, contribute to the furtherance of those tasks that claim so insistently our immediate attention. That those into whose hands this dynamic Plan has been entrusted are aware of the essential character of their obligations and will discharge worthily their duties, no one, viewing the range and quality of their achievements, can entertain the slightest doubt.

Your true and grateful brother,

Shoghi.

THE ONENESS OF MANKIND

The Guardian, in "The Advent of Divine Justice," has created a new and higher standard of loyalty to the principle of the Oneness of Mankind on the part of the American Bahá’í Community, and has specifically declared that this standard must become the keynote of the policy of the National Spiritual Assembly in its capacity of the national representative and the director and coordinator of the affairs of the community. The National Spiritual Assembly must set the example and facilitate the application of this vital principle to the lives and activities of those whose interests it safeguards and represents.

This new standard involves the obligation to encourage and protect the members of the racial, religious and class minorities comprising the American Baha'i Community.

Its application in Baha'i affairs requires the participation of, and the sharing of responsibility by, these minority elements in the conduct of the activities of the Faith through the various institutions, including Assemblies, Conventions, Conferences and Committees.

The Guardian declares that in cases where individuals belonging to these minorities are already qualified and fulfill the necessary requirements the communities are to arrange their affairs so that representation of as many of these divers elements as possible is to be secured.

It is recorded that the National Assembly has already taken a number of actions in accordance with the spirit of this instruction, namely, in preparing the program of the Annual Baha'i Congress following the 1939 Convention, and in publishing two leaflets compiled from the Master's words concerning race amity and the reconciliation of Christians, Jews, and Muhammedans.

The National Assembly understands that this recent instruction from the Guardian is to be considered by the believers in the light of his previous clear instructions concerning the character of Baha'i elections and the qualifications of the membership of Assemblies, described in the following words: "only those who can best combine the necessary qualities of unquestioned loyalty, of selfless devotion, of a well-trained mind, and of recognized ability and mature experience." It is for the believers to realize each for himself the extreme desirability of fostering the minority elements in the Cause and contributing to the safeguarding of human life in America as a vital spiritual privilege and responsibility in the light of the Guardian's urgent appeal. The horizon of our Baha'i love is to be extended, and our understanding of the true nature of Baha'i unity is to be deepened and demonstrated in action. The ideal is to develop the Baha'i Community that it will become the haven of refuge for the grief-stricken and oppressed of all religions, races and classes in the land.

The National Assembly is confident that the believers will take the Guardian's counsel to heart, and pray for wisdom in their effort to apply it to every aspect of their individual and collective Baha'i life. The American Baha'i Community must needs take a great step forward toward the goal of the World Order of Baha'u'llah.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

TEACHING ACTIVITY

"The companions of God are, in this day, the lump that must leaven the peoples of the world. They must show forth such trustworthiness, such truthfulness and perseverance, such deeds and character that all mankind may profit by their example. . . . Vie ye with each other in the service of God and of His Cause."

These Words of Baha'u'llah, drops only from the ocean of new bounties showered upon us by our Guardian, speak to us simply but directly of the responsibility which, for so many years, we have negligently carried. "Children of the half-light" we have been in many ways, content to serve this precious Faith with half our minds and bodies, loath to loosen our grasp upon the world around us and sail "on the ark of complete independence, with . . . faces set toward the Day-Spring of Beauty." Such is our history; but to-day is there one soul among us, throughout this American continent, who can any more doubt that the time for choosing has come? Is this not truly the judgment, when God is requiring us to judge ourselves and elect our destiny? "How great is the Cause, how staggering the weight of its Mess-

DEDICATED TO THE UNITY OF RELIGION AND THE ONENESS OF HUMANKIND

Descriptive Card for Baha'i Exhibit Prepared by Directors of Temple of Religion.
Another visitor to Arkansas is Marvin Newport, lately of the New York community, who spent ten days in early January in Little Rock, en route to California. Through meeting a prominent young lawyer, talks were arranged for the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs which aroused great interest and received outstanding publicity. Many receptive persons were introduced to the Faith, including a columnist on the Arkansas Democrat who discussed it for four hours and asked for literature.

Mr. Newport also spoke in Hot Springs to a group of eighteen, brought together by Miss Sunshine, and to several classes of the Synagogue in Little Rock. He reports that future prospects are promising, especially as many liberal leaders stated they were aware of the need for inter-racial amity, if the State is to progress.

Prior to arriving in Arkansas, Marvin Newport did other important work in Colorado, Minn., where he had attended school. He was invited to speak before the Women’s Club, Chamber of Commerce, the College Assembly, of two hundred students, and the College class on comparative religions. The Superintendent of Schools became so interested that he requested books for the College and public libraries, and the “whole town was buzzing Banā’i!”

Mr. Newport also made personal contacts and addressed clubs and schools in Grand Rapids, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Peoria.

Texas is another fertile region at this time. Five new believers have been listed at Dallas and four at Fort Worth. Minn. Orlova has. been for some weeks in this area, addressing several large groups, one of more than a hundred in the home of Mrs. Roy Curby. In El Paso, Miss Myriam Grabler has secured employment and is hoping to establish a study class.

Houston has become, since December, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Calhoun of Milwaukee. Having chosen to pioneer, these friends have received most wonderful confirmations. Mr. Calhoon found immediate employment as director of public relations in a large store, and in this position has met many persons who were later invited to fireside groups. These are held almost nightly and in addition, a room has been rented in the Y. W. C. A, where weekly study classes are now held. The first class had an attendance of eleven, the last reported drew nineteen. With the aid of Mrs. Kathryn Frankland and Mr. Klus, the work is progressing rapidly and we have just had a report of two newly-confirmed believers.

The following sentences written by Mr. Calhoon carry to us all the inspiration which descends so bountifully upon the “daring adventurer in the service of the Cause.” “Bahá’í work is progressing wonderfully; in fact the miraculous, or rather apparently miraculous ways new prospective truth seekers are being ushered into my presence would sound like a fairy tale, if I had the time to relate the many such instances which are happening here almost daily. . . . The unusual speed in acceptance has almost startled us. Last night at a fireside meeting, two stated their desire to become voting Bahá’ís, and at a previous meeting another stated that he felt like a potential Bahá’í. . . . Bahá’u’lláh has showered such significant bounties and assistance on our humble efforts we are almost ashamed to lift our faces in prayer to Him, when we consider how undeserving we are of such unquestionably great assistance on our humble efforts we are almost ashamed to lift our faces in prayer to Him, when we consider how undeserving we are of such unquestionably great assistance.

The words of Shoghi Effendi take on new meaning when related to experiences like these: “God’s own plan has been set in motion. . . . The powers of heaven and earth mysteriously assist in its execution. . . . Let the doubter arise and himself verify the truth of such assertions.”

A wonderful report has been forwarded by Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Eggleston of a teaching campaign conducted from October 16th to December 16th, in cities surrounding Loudon, Roanoke. A total of 43 talks were scheduled for Mrs. Marziah Carpenter, in thirteen towns, before non-Bahá’í organizations such as Rotary, Lions, Exchange, Shriners, University Women’s, Zonta, other Women’s Clubs, and High Schools. She was booked as a Bahá’í and at all times delivered direct Bahá’í talks. The results were most outstanding, from the standpoints of newspaper publicity, response, requests by other clubs for similar talks, and a greatly increased interest in the Faith and the Summer School. In fact, the publicity and interest obtained could not have been duplicated, it was felt, had Mrs. Carpenter spoken from Bahá’í platforms. The Committee attributes much of this success to a combination of efficient business methods and especial reliance upon prayer. “Every hour for some ten hours daily, members of the nearby Flint community and others have offered successive prayers, every contact made, and every talk given, has been preceded by especial supplication.” This drive included exhibits of the Temple model and placement of books in libraries. It is hoped to follow with another speaker before the coming Summer School sessions.

Mrs. Gayle Woolson has spent the months of December and January in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where she has found many opportunities for teaching which have carried her also to the near communities of Marion, Mt. Vernon, and Iowa City. Her public engagements have included such groups as Rotary, Optimists, High Twelve (Masonic), Hi-Y Clubs of four high schools, Coe College, and Phonetic Club of Syrian girls.

Meantime in Davenport, Iowa, Mrs. Gertrude Struven has been following up the work which she and Mrs. Woolson did, by spending at least one week a month there. During each visit of a study class is held, a radio talk given, and personal teaching is carried on with eight or ten persons. There are now two believers registered.

Also in Iowa, we are informed by Mrs. Ruth Moffett, a study group of twenty-two meeting in Independence, under the chairmanship of a well-known Unity leader.

This year finds a new and thriving Bahá’í community at Eagle River, Wis., where the work of Mrs. Moffett has resulted in a Group of eleven believers. The Regional Secretary, Mrs. Margery McCormick, recently visited them and reported almost twenty-five people studying the Cause faithfully since last October. These friends have applied for Assembly status, because “the majority felt that with world conditions being as grave as they are, they would like all the spiritual assistance that might come from functioning as a Bahá’í Assembly.” Thus do our new friends set us an example in Administrations.

Bahá’ís are spending the winter season in two cities of South Carolina. In Columbia are Miss Maud Mickle and Miss Alta Wheeler of Buffalo, who are holding two fireside groups weekly. They have also contacted key individuals, including the President of Allen University, the professor of sociology at the University of South Carolina, and the secretary of the Esperanto society. Meantime in Charleston Miss Louise Thompson and her sister, of Effort, are continuing the work begun a year ago by Mrs. Hoagg, Mrs. Bodmer, and Miss O’Neill, with personal contacts and small study groups. Much stimulation to their teaching is anticipated from the visit of Mr. Charles Mason Remy, who left Washington in late January for a month’s trip to the groups and isolated believers of Florida, Georgia, and the Carolinas. Mention should also be made of Mrs. Olga Mills, who has settled for the winter in Tryon, North Carolina.

Mrs. Mabel Ives has forwarded a fine report of teaching in Toronto and Hamilton, Ontario, in which she and Mrs. Ives have assisted since their move to Toronto the middle of October. Two or three study classes are held weekly, one of these at the King Edward Hotel with an attendance of fifteen to twenty. A Youth class is following the 36-lesson course, and some seventeen young people are vitally interested. To this work Miss Elsie Beecroft, lately of New York City, is valuably contributing. At the Sunday public meetings, attracting capacity audiences, Howard and Mabel Ives have been alternating as speakers. Three new believers recently enrolled.

The Toronto Assembly is also conducting extension work in Hamilton, and hopes to open two or three other neighboring cities. The Seattle Assembly has accepted thirteen believers this year, as the result of intensive fireside groups, and reports that "their vision and understanding of the New World Order was marvelous." Seattle has also begun a correspondence campaign for developing out-of-city contacts.

Eliot, Maine, is sponsoring extension teaching in Portsmouth, Dover, and Salmon Falls, N. H.; and in South Berwick and Portland, Me. A weekly study class of eight or nine has been formed in Portland. On November 6th a dinner was given at Mrs. Greenleaf's home, which was attended by sixty persons from these cities and visitors from Boston and Buffalo.

The New England Regional Committee is cooperating with the Radio Committee to open Vermont through radio. A registration was recently received from a new Bahá’í who first heard the Cause mentioned on the Springfield radio broadcast some months ago. Radio talks are also being arranged in Portland, Manchester, and Bangor.

These notes by no means represent the scope nor do they impart the full momentum of the Seven-Year Plan, as it surges forward on the teaching front. They are a cross-section merely, attesting nevertheless to the exertions, the ambition, the ingenuity and devotion of hundreds of our fellow-believers. Beloved friends, even this is not enough. The Guardian is requiring more of us: indeed, we have been as a people asleep to this very hour. Now, by the bounty of Bahá’u’lláh, he wakens us!

"The field is indeed so immense, the period so critical, the Cause so great, the workers so few, the time so short, the privilege so priceless, that no follower of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, worthy to bear His name, can afford a moment's hesitation." "There is no time to lose. There is no room left for vacillation. Multitudes hunger for the Bread of Life... To try, to persevere, is to ensure ultimate and complete victory"—National Teaching Committee.

"DRAW NIGH UNTO BAHÁ’U’LLÁH"

"Every man of insight will, in this day, readily admit that the counsels which the Pen of this wronged One hath revealed constitute the supreme animating power for the advancement of the world and the exaltation of its peoples." (Gleanings, p. 93.)

"The ordinances of God have been sent down from the heaven of His most august Revelation. All must diligently observe them. Man's supreme distinction, his real advancement, his final victory, have always depended, and will continue to depend, upon them. Who so keepeth the commandments of God shall attain everlasting felicity." (Gleanings, p. 289.)

"They whom God hath endowed with insight will readily recognize that the precepts laid down by God constitute the highest means for the maintenance of order in the world and the security of its peoples. He that turneth away from them, is accursed among the abject and foolish... "Know assuredly that my commandments are the lamps of My loving providence among My servants, and the keys of My mercy for My creatures... Were any man to taste the sweetness of these words which the lips of the All-Merciful have willed to utter, he would, though the treasures of the earth be in his possession, renounce them one and all, that he might vindicate the truth of even one of His commandments, shining above the day spring of His bountiful care and loving-kindness.

"Say: From My laws the sweet smelling savour of My garment can be smelled, and by their aid the standards of victory will be planted upon the highest peaks. The Tongue of My power hath, from the heaven of My omnipotent glory, addressed to My creation these words: 'Observe My commandments, for the love of My beauty...' Think not that We have revealed unto you a mere code of laws. Nay, rather, We have unsealed the choice Wine with the fingers of might and power." (Gleanings, pp. 331-332.)

"Happy is the lover that hath inhaled the divine fragrance of His Best-Beloved from these words, laden with the perfume of a grace which no tongue can describe." (Gleanings, p. 332.)

BAHÁ'Í EXHIBITS AT THE WORLD'S FAIRS

At this date, only a preliminary announcement can be made on the important subject of these two Baha'i Exhibits. In a later issue, illustrations and full descriptions will be given to the friends.

Golden Gate International Exposition: Here there are two different exhibits in the Bahá'í booth taken in the Homes and Gardens Building, and one in an accessory building of the Hall of Religion. The latter exhibit consists of the Temple model, accepted for display by the Exposition without cost to the Fund. The photograph of this model appears in the present issue of Baha'i News.

The booth in the Homes and Gardens Building includes an area of 19 feet by 7½ feet, beautifully designed, as will appear when an illustration is available. This exhibit features the Temple model and also includes Bahá'í literature and free literature for distribution to visitors.

A public meeting will be held in the Auditorium of the Hall of Religion once a month. Bahá'ís will also conduct frequently the Inter-Denominational Vesper Services held Sunday afternoons.

A broadcast of the Bahá'í Exhibit and the Temple was given from the Fair grounds on February 28, arranged by Mrs. Silvia Matteson King and Miss Claudia Coles Aldridge. The script, in the form of a fifteen-minute interview, was prepared by Mrs. King and Miss Aldridge, and delivered by the latter.

New York World's Fair: A contract has been signed for a space measuring fifteen by ten feet, in the Communications Building. Mr. John J. Earley is preparing the design, for installation before the Fair opens on April 30.

LETTER FROM THE GUARDIAN

With regard to the Racine Assembly's request for an explanation of the passage on page 231 of the "Gleanings," beginning with the words: "From it (the earth) have We created you," etc., this is a verse from the Qu'ran and the quotation mark has been wrongly omitted from the text and should be added after "time." Bahá'u'lláh in quoting this passage seeks to refute the argument of the Muslims, who attach a purely literal interpretation to this verse of the Qu'ran, and therefore consider it as implying bodily resurrection. To these Muslims, He says, that you who literally believe that the human body will return to dust and will be raised from it again, and therefore attach so much importance to this mortal world, how then can you wax so proud, and boast over things which are but perishable and consequently void of any true and lasting value.

The Guardian is delighted at the steps which the N. S. A. has taken to arrange for a Bahá'í exhibit at the World's Fair to be held in San Francisco next spring, and also at the New York World's Fair, on both of which occasions, he hopes, the Faith will be effectively represented and given effective and widespread publicity. He would urge your Assembly never to miss such opportunities of presenting the Cause to the general public, and would, in particular, recommend that such Bahá'í exhibits should in future be frequently and regularly held in various parts of the country, as they can be of far-reaching benefit to the teaching work in America.

In conclusion, he wishes me to stress, now that the Temple Fund is swelling through the munificent and steady flow of contributions from the believers, the necessity for the N. S. A. to exert every effort to place the contract for making the molds* before the coming Annual Convention, so that the assembled delegates, who will be meeting under the glorious dome of our beloved Temple next April, may have the full assurance that the ornamentation work on that Edifice will continue to progress with full pace throughout the coming year, and that they may also have a tangible proof of your Assembly's unsparing determination and inexhaustible resourcefulness to carry out that task to full and speedy completion.

SETTLEMENT OF THE NINE AREAS

Within two days after the Guardian cabled that the immediate obligation is to complete the settlement of the unoccupied areas, the National Assembly found it possible to announce that the necessary arrangements had been made. Three pioneers were reported in Baha'i News for March. The action taken at the meeting held March 24, 25 and 26, in consultation with the Teaching Committee's representative, authorized the following settlements:

- Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Dahl, West Virginia; Mr. Harold Hunt, West Virginia; Mrs. Marguerite Reimer Sears, Utah; Mr. and Mrs. Allah K. Kalantar, Delaware; Mr. Rowland Estall, Winnipeg; Miss Doris Skinner, Calgary; Mrs. Beulah S. Proctor, Nova Scotia; Miss Evelyn Ciff, Nova Scotia; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McNally, Rhode Island; Mrs. H. Emogene Hoagg, South Carolina.

"Assure each pioneer immeasurable gratitude" was Stoghi Effendi's immediate cabled response.

The significance of this achievement is doubtless not clearly realized by any believer at present, but we may with reverence note that one great step has been taken in the prosecution of the Master's Divine Plan. The way is open for concentration of effort upon the other American nations and peoples, and the international responsibility of the American Bahá'í Community has definitely begun.

FOR PARENTS AND TEACHERS

The Importance of Child Training

Bahá'u'lláh enjoined education upon all. During the days of the historic visit of our beloved Master on this continent, He spoke many times of the training of Bahá'í children. He said, "Encourage the children from early childhood in the study of every science, and urge them to acquire every art, in order that through the favor and assistance of God, the heart of every one may become a mirror reflecting the mysteries of beings, and fathom the reality of everything, and that he may gain world-wide renown in sciences, knowledge and arts."

The Bahá'í parent knows that scientific education is not enough. The spiritualization of character to the point at which it dominates one's manner of living is in great achievement. "Divine education," stated 'Abdu'l-Bahá, "is the sum total of all development. It is the safeguard of humanity. The world of nature is a world of defects and incompleteness. The world of the Kingdom is reached by the highway of religion and is the heaven of all divine virtues." "Make ye an effort" He further writes, "so that these children may be trained and educated and that each of them may become perfect in the world of humanity."

A child is like a green branch, tender and easily trained. The sacred duty of every Bahá'í parent is the development of the little children under the supreme guidance of the Manifestation of God through His life-giving Word. And if, through the divine education, belief is

It is clear and evident that when the veils that conceal the realities of the manifestations of the Names and Attributes of God, may of all created things visible or invisible, have been rent asunder, nothing except the Sign of God will remain—a sign which He, Himself, hath placed within these realities. This sign will endure as long as is the wish of the Lord thy God, the Lord of the heavens and of the earth. If such be the blessings conferred on all created things, how superior must be the destiny of the true believer, whose existence and life are to be regarded as the originating purpose of all creation.—BAHA'I.

ITEMS OF NEWS

The National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles has begun publication of a monthly entitled The New World Order intended for non-believers. This interesting and ambitious Bahá'í vehicle will surely receive the best wishes and cooperation of the friends. The subscription price is 3 shillings, 6 pence a year. Postal orders are to be sent to "The Editor," 46 Bloomsbury Street, London, W. C. 1, England.

A booklet entitled "Mrs. Eddy's Successor" by Saxby Vouler Fenfold, has been issued by New Canaan Publications, New Canaan, Conn. The author, a student of the Bahá'í Teachings, but not an enrolled believer, is seeking to bring the Cause to the attention of Christian Scientists. The booklet was issued without consultation with any American Bahá'í body, and therefore has no recognition as a Bahá'í publication. The text, however, does disclose excellent knowledge of many aspects of the Teachings.

One Professor said: "What we professors and students need is a great quickening of religion in our inner life. If the Bahá'í Faith brings that, we will study it."

We met one Professor who is a relative of Qurratu'll-Ayn and he has made a deep study of the Bahá'í Teachings.

The Mysore University Library in the past year has gathered quite a good selection of Bahá'í books and these are being read by the students. The Librarian and the former librarian are most friendly to our cause. I believe that great scholars from Mysore will write about the Teachings.

One Professor in the University is the Director of Broadcasting and Mrs. Fozdar and I both gave radio talks which were sent out to six newspapers and magazines in India. A young private secretary from a neighboring state told us that when he visited the Hill Palace of the Maharaja of Mysore in 1933, there was a book on the table, the life of 'Abdu'l-Bahá which he carefully studied. The Mysore University Library will have pictures of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and a picture of the Bahá'í Temple at Wilmette to hang on the Library wall.

Mrs. Fozdar, as I said, had been to Bangalore and Mysore ten months earlier and made many friends and this helped us very much. May she go again and many times to Southern India! She is not only a very fluent speaker but they called her the Bahá'í nightingale of India when she sang the Qurratu'll-Ayn songs!

Hyderabad, Deccan.—Then we came to Hyderabad, Deccan where we were the guests of the State and stayed in the State Guest House. We arrived at 5 p.m., and at 6:30 o'clock I broadcasted. This radio talk was published in full in their newspapers.

I broadcast again and Mrs. Fozdar gave a radio speech about Qurratu'll-Ayn and sang. A gramophone record was made of her speech and song and the talk was published. We gave a public lecture the second evening under the auspices of the Writers' Association of Hyderabad. We spoke before the Hyderabad Ladies' Association to two hundred and fifty members and the wife of the second son of the Nizam presided. This beautiful young Princess is a grand-niece of the late Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey. Lady Akbar Hydari, wife of the Prime Minister is President of this Association.

I spoke in Osmania University and at the same time Shirin spoke at the Nizam's College. Excellent articles appeared in the newspapers. The Secretary of the Prime Minister, a Cornell man, had attended a Bahá'í Conference in Geneva, N. Y., where he had been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willard McKay. There he had met Miss Mary Maxwell; he said he felt even then she had a very high destiny and that she was the most radiant girl he had ever met. We were invited to the home of the Prime Minister and to the home of Sir Amin Jung; the latter had received Mrs. Schopflocher, later myself, then Keith and then Mr. Schopflocher. He loves the Teachings and says they do not take away from any other Faiths. Says if he would be able, he would go to the Bahá'í Convention in Karachi in April, but he is quite ill. The Bahá'ís of Hyderabad never once helped us, and came with us to the station when we left. They came to the public lectures and brought booklets for distribution. Mrs. Fozdar spoke to a large group in a private home the last evening and broadcasted. We were in Hyderabad only three days, evening of January 31 to early morning of February 4.

"STERNER, MORE GLORIOUS CHAPTER"

THE THIRD YEAR OF THE SEVEN YEAR PLAN

"Momentous deliberations of Thirty-First Convention," Shoghi Effendi cabled in reply to the message sent him by the Convention, "opening sterner, more glorious chapter in corporate life of ever-advancing, steadily-expanding American Baha'i community."

The third year of the Seven Year Plan transports us to a greatly enlarged theatre of Bahá'i activity, calls for a correspondingly increased responsibility and effort, and gives us assurance of a predestined reinforcement from the Divine Power.

This new intercontinental area of Baha'i teaching has been clearly described by Shoghi Effendi in "The Advent of Divine Justice," which brings into full action the Master's Plan for America, and the Guardian has also strongly accent the purer attitudes and higher qualities that must characterize the new humanity created by the Faith of Baha'u'llah.

"Brilliant conclusion of second year in Seven Year Plan evokes universal admiration of the Baha'i world," Shoghi Effendi assured the delegates and friends in his message to the Convention. All present were immersed in the mighty sea of the vision of achievement, and the hearts of delegates and visiting friends were shaken by the forces released for the guidance of the American Bahá'ís throughout the coming year. At the Convention our Baha'i host was augmented by four members of the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City, the first Latin-American Baha'ís to attend the annual meeting, and also by the honored Mr. and Mrs. Sabet of Tehran, thus creating an international gathering.

Now the National Spiritual Assembly, after studying the recommendations of the delegates and the reports of committees, presents to the American Baha'i community the schedule of
K. Summer Schools. The function of the race unity activities of former years is to be enlarged in order to fulfill the Guardian’s instructions concerning all minorities.

M. Youth activities. Child training.

IV. Temple Construction. The annual budget contemplates the completion of the exterior decoration by 1942, and the success of this schedule of operations represents a vital aspect of the Seven Year Plan. For the coming year, the following task is assigned:

A. Completion of gallery contract.
B. Completion of first story molds contract.
C. Completion of first story molds contract.
D. Completion of purchase of quartz needed for first story.
E. Begin casting and application of external decoration to first story. This item has paramount importance, for delay in beginning this part of the work would interfere with the schedule adopted for the Seven Year Plan.

The keynote of Bahá’í effort and policy for the current year has been sounded by Shoghi Effendi in his words: “Sterner, more glorious chapters.” The element of self-discipline and sacrifice replaces the irresponsible happiness the American Bahá’ís have enjoyed in the past, with their freedom from physical oppression and the social ostracism heaped upon their co-workers in other lands.

“The Advent of Divine Justice” prepares us for the mighty task, strengthens our courage, centers our energies, and guides our steps along the true path. The Guardian has given a vast bounty to the American Bahá’í community. Our only adequate gratitude must be expressed through the carrying out of each year’s allotment of the Seven Year Plan.

The National Spiritual Assembly places this brief statement of plans and policies in the hands of the Bahá’í community with a heartfelt prayer that each local Assembly will continuously strive to promote its schedule, that groups will identify themselves with its success, and that each individual Bahá’í will feel that upon him or her there lies a weighty responsibility throughout the year.

Alone among the peoples of earth, the Bahá’ís are an organic body, moved by one Spirit. If we fail in the least part of the common task, it can only be because we ourselves prevented the Spirit from accomplishing its mission. Therefore, let us deepen our Bahá’í lives from day to day, and contribute with all our power to that unity which is the sole instrument through which the Spirit works.

“The one chief remaining citadel, the mighty arm which still raises aloft the standard of an unconquerable Faith, is none other than the blessed community of the followers of the Most Great Name in the North American continent. By its works, and through the unfailing protection vouchsafed to it by an almighty Providence, this distinguished member of the body of the constantly interacting Bahá’í communities of East and West, bids fair to be universally regarded as the cradle, as well as the stronghold, of that future New World Order, which is at once the promise and the glory of the Dispensation associated with the name of Bahá’u’lláh.”—SHOGHI EFFENDI, The Advent, pp. 5, 6.

The Advent of Divine Justice.

These items were followed, and time was found for consultation on each of the topics. By vote of the delegates, the Saturday afternoon session was continued until 6:30 P. M. The message to the Guardian, however, was transferred to the opening, in the hope that his reply could be received before the meetings concluded.

The Guardian’s Cablegram

The two messages received from Shoghi Effendi are reprinted in another section of this issue. The second cablegram indicates that the first was not sent in reply to the Convention’s message to the Guardian, but was his greeting and advice to the delegates. His reply was not received in time to announce at the Convention.

Early in the meeting it was voted to precede consultation on each subject with a reading from appropriate passages in “The Advent of Divine Justice,” the power and majesty of which sustained the consciousness of the believers on a high level.

A description of the sessions written afterward, even a verbatim report of all discussion and remarks, would fail utterly to re-create the quality of the radiant and soaring spirit which so firmly united the delegates and visiting friends.

An Inter-Continental Gathering

The presence of four members of the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico, and of two honored guests from Tehran, symbolized the widening of the horizon of Bahá’í effort by the American Bahá’í community in prosecution of the Seven Year Plan. Their remarks, their prayers, their gracious presence, all contributed to the inspiration of the swiftly passing day.

Indeed, a great part of the discussion centered upon the topic of Inter-American teaching, which now ranks equally with the teaching work to be accomplished in North America.

The Teaching Committee’s report that eighty-one Bahá’ís have volunteered for pioneer work, and that twenty-seven pioneers have been sent out, was concrete evidence of the new motion which the Guardian has communicated to the Faith in America.

The walls of Foundation Hall were specially arranged with a display of the Master’s Tablets of the Divine Plan, and with a most interesting exhibit made by the Committee on Child Education.

Reports

The publication of the Annual Reports in advance of the Convention left but few to be presented during the sessions: a supplementary report of the National Assembly, its financial statement, and remarks concerning the properties administered by the Trustees. The Seven Year Plan was fundamentally the sole concern of the Thirty-First Convention, with its threefold branches of Teaching in North America, Teaching in Latin America, and completion of the exterior decoration of the Temple.

Significant was the sound of actual construction work proceeding on the gallery contract during the sessions, and joyous was the sight of the new work so far advanced since the Seven Year Plan was adopted only two years ago. Within two years, the friends have contributed almost one-half of the entire sum estimated for the entire construction work to be achieved before 1944.

Bahá’í Amity

The Guardian’s vital statement on the Bahá’í responsibility for the application of the principle of the oneness of mankind had impressed the friends deeply before the Convention opened, and the passages in “The Advent of Divine Justice" bearing upon this urgent matter were pondered and discussed at length. A resolution calling upon the National Assembly to constitute Bahá'í Amity activities was the fruit of this consultation, which brought forth the sincere views of white and colored friends.

Among the matters which came up during the sessions reference can be made to the following:

The need for a more informative and complete form of annual financial statement.

The availability of a number of Bahá'í designers, architects and engineers for consultation and recommendation in connection with the function of the Temple Technical Committee.

The recommendation that the annual budget for the coming year be fixed at as large a figure as feasible.

The suggestion that local Assemblies provide Latin American Teaching Committees, and that contacts be made with Latin American students in American universities.

Presentation of the spiritual principle of donating to the Bahá'í Fund.

The recommendation that the principle of the oneness of mankind be applied to the living conditions of delegates during the Convention period.

Consultation on the first cablegram received from the Guardian. Consultation on his cablegram received September 24, 1938, which stressed the need of believers rising above the level of the subtle waves of propaganda now engulfing the world.

Consideration of the Guardian's wish as reported by pilgrims, that a National headquarters be established in the vicinity of the Temple.

Presentation of the Guardian's views on the attitude of believers in the event of war, with the recommendation that the National Assembly publish these views.

The Bahá'í attitude on voting in civil elections was discussed.

The Child Education Committee reported three new outlines for the year, and offered a few simple instructions for their use. The outlines were presented merely as techniques for reaching the child mind rather than as rules and teachings of a final nature. The freedom of every teacher to proceed with ingenuity and variation was made clear, and it was pointed out that any course of the kind had only relative value and perfection. Formal arrangements as used in Sunday Schools were discouraged.

Parent education is the new trend of this committee. An editorial column in Bahá'í News will suggest to parents from time to time new ways of inculcating faith in the heart of a child, and of producing those attributes so necessary to the Bahá'í life.

Discussions on children's clubs and activities, devotion, home problems, and techniques for the scientific approach to creation added greatly to the general stimulus to child training. The committee voiced the hope that the friends would continue to make suggestions throughout the year.

Members of the Youth Committee also ably described the important activities fostered by the youth of the Faith, who have brought about the special Youth programs at Summer Schools, the publication of a Youth quarterly, and many special local activities as well as the International Youth Day.

Explanations about the Bahá'í exhibits at the two World's Fairs, and a report on the preparation of a traveling exhibit for State Fairs were presented.

The three Summer Schools were discussed, and representatives of each Summer School Committee reported on current plans.

Consultation on the work of the Radio Committee.

In greater detail was presented the various activities of the National Teaching Committee, with reports on various phases of the work by individual members and teachers.

Ridvan Feast

Foundation Hall was thronged by Bahá'ís and attracted friends for the celebration of the Feast of Ridván, Saturday evening. A beautiful program had been arranged by the local Assemblies of the Temple area, with readings, remarks from a number of friends, and addresses by Mr. Sabet and Mr. Espinosa. Then followed material refreshment and fellowship among the friends.

Locks of Bahá'u'lláh

With reverence the believers heard the reading of the Tablet on the Hair of Bahá'u'lláh, and gazed upon the precious locks which the Guardian last year committed to the care of the American Bahá'ís.

Unforgettable were the presentations of teaching work in various parts of Latin America by individual believers who found the doors open for establishing the Faith in the hearts of individuals. The recommendation that pioneer teachers be settled in Central America was an immediate result of the Guardian's cabled advice and instruction. A number of pioneer offers were frequently presented to the gathering.

Inspiring also were those remarks by teachers who have served the Cause

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT

National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada

The month covered by this supplementary report has been notable in the swift development of events, signifying a great acceleration in the field of Baha'i action.

Communications from the Guardian received in this period include, first, the following cablegram dated April 1: "Assure each pioneer inmeasurable gratitude. Such vigorous response, in such perilous times, to so vital a call, opens brilliant epoch in the formative age of the Faith of Baha'u'llah. Impeled congratulatory Assembly for its wise, efficient stewardship."—And second, a letter dated March 17, which informs us that the roll of pioneers has been augmented by the names of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Bidwell, who had informed Shoghi Effendi that they have established residence in Greenville, South Carolina, in order to raise up a Baha'i community in that State.

To the number of local groups qualified to form new Assemblies, the groups at Albuquerque can now be added.

From Miss Martha Root has come a bundle of newspaper clippings describing her activities in Australia, with a schedule indicating some thirty public meetings during the first few weeks after her arrival from India.

The far country of Lapland has been illuminated with the light of the Faith by the indefatigable energy of Mrs. Lorrol Schopflocher, who has been traveling in that land and spreading the Message in recent months.

The reprint of the Master's address at the Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at Chicago in 1912, already mentioned, has now been made, and copies are available to delegates and friends. In a few words, 'Abdu'l-Baha gave the American people so many years ago the reality of human oneness, and now it is our privilege to ponder His message on race unity with deeper understanding, and share it with the leaders of opinion throughout the country. Similar reprints of striking Baha'i texts are to follow as rapidly as conditions justify, thus adding to our teaching literature a series of expositions that cannot fail to command the attention of awakened souls.

The present Convention is privileged to receive visits from co-workers from other lands. Mr. and Mrs. Sabet are here from Tihiran, on a visit that will take them to a few of the larger cities and perhaps also include both World's Fairs.

Moreover, we have as honored guests not one, as had been anticipated, but four members of the new Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City: Pedro Espinoza, Mrs. Refugio Ochoa, Miss Zanay da Jurado, and Mrs. Maria Luisa Jurado, radiant in their enthusiasm and ardent in their service to the Faith. This visit is a great historic event, for it marks the true beginning of that new inter-continental teaching task which the Guardian has expounded for us in "The Advent of Divine Justice." We join hands and hearts with these co-workers from Baha'u'llah's own native land, and with the co-workers from the newest country blessed with the institution of a Spiritual Assembly. The Master, surely, beholds with joy from on high a gathering so blessed and so pregnant with promise of future achievement.

Our foundation has been firmly laid in nearly ninety local Spiritual Assemblies, in the House of Worship rapidly nearing completion, in three Summer Schools, and in a Baha'i community which has acquired a great diversity of experience and manifests a rich variety of gifts. Each successive general communication from the Guardian has clarified our vision, deepened our aims and extended our horizon of consciousness. And now, as the world trembles on its collapsing basis, the American Baha'i community, numbering some thirty-five hundred souls, is bidden to exemplify the coming of the Kingdom to mankind. In reverence and in true humility we can but turn to the words of Baha'u'llah:

"O people of Baha! Ye are the breezes of spring that are wafted over the world. Through you we have adorned the world of being with the ornament of the knowledge of the Most Merciful. Through you the countenance of the world hath been wreathed in smiles, and the brightness of His light shone forth. Cling ye to the cord of steadfastness, in such wise that all vain imaginings may utterly vanish. Speed ye forth from the horizon of power, in the name of your Lord, the Unconstrained, and announce unto His servants, with wisdom and eloquence, the tidings of this Cause, whose splendor hath been shed upon the world of being."

"This is the day in which to speak. It is incumbent upon the people of Baha to strive, with the utmost patience and forbearance, to guide the peoples of the world to the Most Great Ho-

THE STATUS OF PILGRIM’S NOTES

It was moved, seconded and voted to record the view that in the light of the Guardian’s general instruction, as quoted below, the National Assembly cannot sanction the publication and distribution through official Bahá’í channels of notes and records of pilgrims, as—

“Bahá’u’lláh has made it clear enough that only those things that have been revealed in the form of Tablets have a binding power over the friends. He says: ‘May be matters of interest can in no way claim authority. This basic teaching of Bahá’u’lláh was to preserve the Faith from being corrupted, like Islam which attributes binding authority to all reported sayings of Muhammad. This being a basic principle of the Faith we should not confuse Tablets that were actually revealed and mere talks attributed to the founders of the Cause. The first have absolute binding authority while the latter cannot in any way claim our obedience. The highest thing this can achieve is to influence the activities of the one who has heard the saying in person.”

He would also urge you to attach no importance to the stories told about ‘Abdu’l-Bahá or to those attributed to Him by the friends. These should be regarded in the same light as the notes and impressions of visiting pilgrims. They need not be suppressed but they should not also be given prominence or official recognition.

“He has also said that whenever he has something of importance to say, he invariably communicates it to the National Assembly or in his general letters. His personal letters to individual friends are only for their personal benefit and even though he does not want to forbid their publication, he does not wish them to be used too much by the Bahá’í News. Only letters with special significance should be published there.”

“NEWLY UNDERTAKEN CAMPAIGN CENTRAL AMERICA”

A strong foundation has been laid for Inter-America teaching work during the past few years, with the establishment of a Bahá’í community in Mexico City, the formation of study groups in South America by Mrs. Stewart, the teaching and publicity accomplished by Miss Beatrice Irwin, Mrs. Louise Mathews, Mrs. Nellie S. French, Mrs. Joel Stebbins, Mr. Philip Marangella and Mr. William deForge, and the schedule of translation and publication into Spanish developed with the cooperation of the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City.

A new and more powerful impulse has been given this activity by actions taken in consultation with the Inter-America Committee since the Convention. It has been decided to apply the language qualification as indicated by the Guardian, and also to make certain that each pioneer can enter the country under conditions making it possible to remain long enough to establish a Bahá’í group.

The definite projects already approved include: Mrs. Louise Caswell to remain six months in Panama for study and survey of conditions. Mr. Philip Marangella is to proceed to Cuba. Miss Eve Nicklin will return to Brazil for settlement in Rio de Janeiro. Antonio Rocca will go as pioneer to Honduras. Mr. Mathew Kasah has notified the National Assembly of his departure for Panama.

Other important projects are under consideration and in process, and will be reported as soon as possible.

An entirely new phase in the development of the Seven Year Plan is definitely under way, and its success requires the most ardent support of the entire American Bahá’í community.

Those coming to the Laboratory Session of Louheilen Summer School are requested to bring as far as possible: "Some Answered Questions", "Bahá’í Scriptures", "Gleanings", "Promulgation of Universal Peace", "Foundations of World Unity", "Hindustan", Mrs. Haig’s outline entitled "Conditions of Existence: Servitude, Prophethood, Deity". Also please study in advance pages 6-9 in this outline (formerly entitled "The Three Worlds").

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

The Library Committee announces that the following books are available for presentation to new public, college and university libraries: The Bahá’í World (current volume), Some Answered Questions, Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era, Foundations of World Unity, Security for a Failing World. Several of these titles will be sent to any librarian who will place our books on her circulating shelves.

We suggest that traveling teachers contact us for library information on the states which they plan to visit. Also, would the teachers try to drop a card immediately upon making a library contact giving the librarian’s name and address to facilitate placing books? Books will reach the library within a week or so.

All library information is welcomed by this committee; lists of Bahá’í books already on the shelves; reports of circulation; librarian and reader receptivity; a brief summary of local Bahá’í activity. This enables us to judge library needs. It is also important that we do not duplicate books already available.

We supply book reviews to be published in local newspapers. We advise that you secure the librarian’s approval and cooperate with her at all times before publishing any announcement or reviews. Make the librarian a friend of the Cause whenever possible.

This committee would like to make our library records as complete as possible to be of greater service to teachers, and to enable us to indicate
NO GREATER DEMONSTRATION

A STATEMENT BY THE NATIONAL YOUTH COMMITTEE

"No greater demonstration can be given to the peoples of both continents of the youthful vitality and the vibrant power animating the life, and the institutions of the nascent Faith of Bahá'u'lláh than an intelligent, persistent, and effective participation of the Bahaí Youth, of every race, nationality, and class, in both the teaching and administrative spheres of Bahá'i activity."

Who among the Bahá'í youth of America has failed to thrill at these stirring words of Our Guardian in "The Advent of Divine Justice," as he calls us to active participation in the teaching program of the National Spiritual Assembly?

"Though lacking in experience and faced with insufficient resources, yet the adventurous spirit which they possess, and the vigor, the alertness, and optimism they have thus far so consistently shown, qualify them to play an active part in arousing the interest, and in securing the allegiance, of their fellow youth in those countries."

Thus does he tell us that we, too, have a part to play in the establishment of the Faith in the countries of Latin and South America.

"Through such a participation the critics and enemies of the Faith, watching with varying degrees of skepticism and resentment, the evolutionary processes of the Cause of God and its institutions, can best be convinced of the indubitable truth that such a Cause is intensely alive, is sound to its very core."

It is to this second requirement that the National Youth Committee wishes to call attention at this time. Some young people, no doubt, are already familiar with Spanish, having studied it in high school or college. Many others who are still in school will make it a point to include this in their program of study when returning to classes next year.

For the benefit of the remaining young people who have finished their schooling, we recommend that each Youth Group, wherever possible, provide its members with the means for studying these two languages. It may be possible to do this by employing government-paid teachers, or by sharing the cost of lessons once or twice each week. Whatever method is used, we should keep always in mind our objective, which is to prepare ourselves for service under the Inter-America Committee.

There can be no doubt that if we do this we shall have taken another significant step toward the fulfillment of our destiny "under the shadow of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh," and it is hoped that every young Bahá'í in America will arise to "intelligent, persistent, and effective participation ... in both the teaching and administrative spheres of Bahá'i activity."

IN MEMORIAM

It is clear and evident that when the veils that conceal the realities of the manifestations of the Names and Attributes of God, nay of all created things visible or invisible, have been rent asunder, nothing except the Sign of God will remain—a sign which He, Himself, hath placed within these realities. This sign will endure as long as is the wish of the Lord thy God, the Lord of the heavens and of the earth. If such be the blessings conferred on all created things, how superior must be the destiny of the true believer, whose existence and life are to be regarded as the originating purpose of all creation—Baha'u'llah.

MY PLEA, MY SUPREME ENTREATY

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dear Co-workers:

I have in two recent, successive messages, called to your Assembly, giving expression, as far as it lay in my power, to the feelings of overpowering gratitude which the response of so many pioneers to the call of teaching has evoked in my heart. I have moreover felt impelled to convey my congratulations to the members of your Assembly who, through their resource, unity and single-mindedness, have lent so needed and timely an impetus to the mighty work associated with the second year of the Seven Year Plan. There can be no doubt whatever that what the American believers, no less than their elected national representatives, have accomplished, the long and assiduous care of the former and the potent methods employed by the latter, have witnessed to the uprising of a new spirit on which the defamers of the Cause may well pause to reflect, and from which its lovers cannot but derive deep joy and solace. I again wish to thank with all my soul those whose acts have stirred the imagination of friend and foe alike.

In my desire not to omit anything that might help to spur on or reinforce the community of the American believers as they move on to their destiny, I feel it necessary to add a word of warning in connection with the work that has been so splendidly begun lest it should be jeopardized or frustrated.

The initial phase of the teaching work operating under the Seven Year Plan has at long last been concluded. They who have pushed it forward have withstood the test gloriously. By their acts, whether as teachers or administrators, they have written a glorious page in the struggle for the laying of a continent-wide foundation for the administrative Order of their Faith. At this advanced stage in the fulfilment of the purpose to which they have set their hand there can be no turning back, no halting, no respite. To launch the bark of the Faith, to implant its banner, is not enough. Support, ample, organized and unremitting, should be lent, designed to direct the course of that work and to lay an unassailable foundation for the fort destined to stand guard over that banner.

The National Spiritual Assembly, the National Teaching Committee, the Regional and local teaching committees, no less than the itinerant teachers, should utilize every possible means calculated to fan the zeal, enrich the resources and insuring the solidarity and permanency of the work, of those who, actuated by so laudable and shining a spirit of self-sacrifice, have arisen to face the hazards and perils of so holy and historic an adventure. Indeed every believer, however humble and inexperienced, should sense the obligation to play his or her part in a mission that involves so very deeply the destinies not only of the American Bahá’í community but of the nation itself.

Whether through the frequency of their visits, the warmth of their correspondence, the liberality of their support, the wisdom of their counsels, the choice of the literature placed at the disposal of the pioneers, the members of the community should, at this hour when the sands of a moribund civilization are inexorably running out, and at a time when they are preparing themselves to launch yet another stage in their teaching activities, insure the security and provide for the steady expansion, of the work initiated in those territories so recently set alight from the torch of an inextinguishable Faith. This is my plea, my supreme entreaty.

Your true and grateful brother,
April 17, 1939.

Shoghi

The following portion of the same letter was written by the Guardian through his secretary:

Before closing I wish to express once again the feelings of unbounded satisfaction and gratitude that fill the heart of our beloved Guardian at the repeated evidences of the steady extension of pioneer teaching in both the Northern and Southern America, and at the unanimous and unconditional response made to his recent teaching appeals by the individual believers, local Assemblies, regional and national teaching committees and last, but not least, by the distinguished members of your own Assembly who have assuredly spared no effort to coordinate, and reinforce the activities and sources of the entire community towards the accomplishment of the colossal task set forth by the Seven Year Plan. Such exemplary response, truly reminiscent of the intrepid faith, fearless courage and irreproachable fidelity so characteristic of the immortal pioneers of the Heroic Age of the Cause, indeed befits the high spiritual rank which the American believers so deservedly and incontestably enjoy. It surely cannot but excite the envy and the admiration of all their sister communities, whether in the East or in the West, and, in particular, offer true and abiding solace to those of their co-religionists who, though harrassed and persecuted, turn their eager and conﬁdent hearts to their dear American brethren, whose inestimable privilege it is now to compensate, through their heroic exploits, what their disabled fellow-believers are prevented from accomplishing for the further spread and greater glory of their faith.

PRAYER FOR THE TEMPLE

O God! O God! We implore Thee with throbbing heart and streaming tears to aid each one who strives in the erection of the house of the Lord wherein Thy Name is mentioned at morn and eventide.

O Lord, send down Thy benediction on whosoever serves this ediﬁce and aids in the upraising of this Temple for the unity of all sects and religions. Conﬁrm him in every good deed among mankind; open the doors of riches and wealth unto him; and make him an inheritor of the treasures of the Kingdom which perish not; cause him to be a sign of giving unto the people; uphold him by the sea of Thy bounty and generosity, which forever surges with the waves of Thy grace and favor. Verily, Thou art the Generous, the Bountiful, the All-Glorious!—'Abdu'l-Bahá.

"MUST Usher in... THROUGH LIVING SACRIFICE"

The objectives chosen for the Third Year of the Seven Year Plan were previ­ously set forth in the ﬁrst volume of Bahá’í News. The objectives are nothing else but the progressive steps of progress which every American Bahá’í Community must undertake in the pursuit of its one and clearly deﬁned goal. The speciﬁc nature of the observable actions is thoroughly outlined in the Annual Budget for 1939. The ﬁrst step consists in thorough, widespread, inquiring and concerted efforts to impress the friends with the need of consideration of the details of that Plan. The entire American Bahá’í Community, and not merely parts of it here and there, must be fully conscious that the value and signiﬁcance of the present Bahá’í year depend upon our success in achieving this minimum of result.

The next step beyond knowledge of the Plan is the spirit of consecration by which every dormant faculty will be quickened and the latent capacities awakened to the plane of decisional action. We are but dimly aware of what one consecrated personality can accomplish through the power of the Holy Spirit, though we have before us the inspiring record of the Bahá’í heroes, saints and martyrs to attest the validity of the supreme miracle. Even less have we become aware of what a united Bahá’í Community can achieve, when imbued with one spirit, resolved upon one goal, concentrated upon one effort and advancing along one path. The Third Year Plan, marking the successive stages to the Advent of Divine Justice, is not a period of time which we can traverse passively as passengers in a ship. It is a period of spiritual struggle, each soul with itself, for the attainment of that Victory which the Divine Will can alone achieve through humble and devoted servants. The Third Year is already advanced. We now have but eleven months remaining. The task can not be laid down a single day, but every hour has its vital part. Through living sacrifice we are to reveal ourselves as Bahá’ís, and not by doctrinal belief alone.

The necessities of the Seven Year Plan, in fact, are our Divine protection from the visible and invisible po­ne­ slings of a collapsing civilization. Our tasks and difficulties are our mysterious endowment of grace from on High. In single-heartedness of devotion and consecration of effort we shall stand within the Providence of assurance in this Day when the foundations of the nations tremble and are hid low.

Therefore let us employ, more unit­edly, more courageously and more de­terminedly than ever before, those blessed means given us to acquire capacity to serve the Faith of Bahá’u’l-

National Archives Announcement

Among the gifts made to the National Archives during the Convention were two collections of the Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, one of these comprising thirty original Persian Tablets addressed to Mrs. Agnes S. Parsons, and the other, eighteen original Persian Tablets to Mrs. Marie A. Watson. Both collections are accompanied by typed copies of original translations, and both were presented by Miss Leone S. Clair Barnitz of Washington, in whose keeping these Tablets had been placed by Mrs. Parsons.

A number of sacred relics which belonged originally to members of the Holy Household were presented by Mr. Roy Whilhelm and by Miss Jessie E. Revell. The gifts made by the latter were formerly the possessions of Miss Elizabeth H. Stewart, who received them from Persian believers.

For Parents and Teachers

Prayer

There is no habit as necessary to the spiritual well being of our children as the habit of prayer.

From Mr. Harry Ford, superintendent of schools in Little Falls, New York, comes a helpful statement based on his own experience. “Prayers may come as naturally from the child as the songs that flow through his lips when he feels physical and mental happiness. . . . Prayer may be a part of helping a child catch happy thoughts or see lovely things. When he is filled with joyous feelings, it is easy to instill the idea of a kind God, a just God, a loving God. . . . Early he may feel the need of help in being good, in heeding the instructions of parent or teacher, in being kind and gentle. What greater help can he find than talking it over, conversation with God Who has given the promise of help?”

Teach the child the value of the pause, the 'rest' in the symphony of life. (Later we may call it meditation.) The pause renders the soul receptive toward God.

"The child loves the rhythmic sounds that come from the read or repeated word, even before he can understand them. There are many simple prayers from Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. They may be read to the child. If he wants to repeat or learn some of them, it is an indication that his capacity has developed to a point where he can benefit by such learning."

As children grow older, sit down with them until prayer becomes a habit. Bahá'u'lláh enjoins: "Chant (or recite) the Words of God every morning and evening. The one who neglects those who understand."

There are many simple prayers from Bahá'u'lláh and His agreement, and he who turns away from it today is of those who have turned away from God."

However, it is well, even as adults, to measure our capacity; how much more the capacity of the child! Bahá'u'lláh makes this further statement: "To chant but one verse with joy and gladness is better for you than reading all the Revelations of the Omnipotent God with carelessness.

Burden not the soul so as to cause exhaustion and languor, but rather refresh it that thus it may soar on the wings of Revelation, to the dawning place of proofs. This brings you nearer to God, were ye of those who understand." This is very important, for the child's spirit should be made bright with prayer.

To the Bahá'í child there is a world of meaning in one short prayer. A mid-western mother reports that Carol, aged five, astonished a neighbor by taking the hand of her small child who was unhappy, saying, "Come, we will sit down and have a prayer to remove difficulties, and you will be happy again!"

Every child is a little bundle of growing habits, and every day is important in forming them. You may use a verse from the supplications of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, or even a single line from the matchless utterance of His Holiness, Bahá'u'lláh; it is all good. The important thing is to get started.

Summer Reading

Vacation days for the children are here, and summer reading offers innumerable opportunities to broaden the sympathies, appreciations and qualities desirable in child mind and heart. A brief story and book list is suggested below, and to this every mother or teacher, with the help of a good reference librarian, may add.

The important thing is to get started.

One further word. While the suggestive power of the story book is not to be minimized, again and again let us remind ourselves that familiarity with the words of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and our Guardian are more effective in moulding character than every other branch of learning. Before introducing these meaningful stories to the children, it is suggested that some of the more simple, direct quotations that seem related to the themes of the stories be read to them, and a few lines memorized. Summer lessons in faith may thus be combined with the happy reading hour.

84 reproductions of documents and 58 reproductions of music, a total of 294 halftone plates.

Security for a Failing World

The well-known book by Stanwood Cobb brought out in a paper-bound edition at a lower price which should make it possible to use it more extensively in teaching. Per copy, $0.75.

Character

This work, by Stanwood Cobb, the Publishing Committee can now supply, but as the Committee does not carry stock, but fills orders through another source, cash should be sent in ordering it.

Concerning this book, the Guardian wrote to Prof. Cobb the following on December 15, 1938, which is published with the Guardian’s consent:

“He fully approves of the method you have adopted of presenting the teachings indirectly in that book, and in a way that would not seem propagandic, and trusts that this will serve to attract the interest of the non-Bahá’í leaders to the Cause. The book, the Guardian feels, is not only of considerable value to the teaching work, but should also prove of special interest to the believers, and in particular to the young Bahá’ís, who can derive from its perusal the knowledge and guidance necessary for the training and upbuilding of their character. The friends should therefore welcome this new publication, and endeavor to use it in their studies, and also as a means for the teaching and spread of the Cause.” Per copy, $1.25.

Baha’i Catalog

A new catalog is available, corrected to April 1, 1939. Copies will be supplied to Assemblies on request, and Assemblies are urged to make use of them, but with discrimination.

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

The Inter-America Committee shares with the believers the following excerpt from a letter written by Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart dated Buenos Aires, May 19, 1939.

“The group here is delighted that I am remaining one more month and I spend one afternoon a week with the people helping in translations and then we meet every Friday evening for our regular Bahá’í Study Group, meeting at the home of Miss Elizabeth Howard Saavedra—a wonderful young woman, widely known and dearly loved here. Her ancestors are of the old colonial families and her grandfather an admiral of the Argentine Navy. She is tireless in introducing me to very important people and the Bahá’í interest grows every week. I have met with Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, English, German, Jewish and American groups and out of each are people prepared for this message and anxious to write of it to friends in their respective home lands. Tonight I am invited to the home of Mr. who was the Ambassador from Czechoslovakia. He and his wife and two wonderful sons have invited a group of friends to hear me speak of the Bahá’í Cause. Among their guests will be some French, Belgians and Yugoslavs. May Bahá’u’lláh give me the right words, for these are all very important people in this city and can be a great force for the Cause here. Somehow my heart is very happy and I feel much will come from this gathering. After every group meeting people come up to me and urge me to meet other groups—to come to their homes to meet individuals they know would be interested in this message and so the Blessed Name is being repeated more and more each day and I feel so certain the Cause will have deep roots here and grow into a great Tree of Blessing to the whole nation.”
NATIONAL PRESS BOOK REPORT

Since the last Press Book report of November 1938, many news clippings have been mailed in to this Committee indicative of a great increase of publicity work in pioneer territory.

From the state of Arizona, Phoenix and Glendale have mailed in a large number of splendid news articles from Coolidge, Mesa, and Tucson as well as from Phoenix and Glendale. A picture of the Temple with a long article on the Temple appeared in the Coolidge Examiner. Such an article and picture appeared also in the Glendale News among other articles of explanation on the Faith. Mesa is a new project, and the friends have succeeded in obtaining space for publicity in the Mesa Journal Tribune.

Miss Georgy Fitzgerald of Los Angeles has been most successful in obtaining publicity for the Cause during the National Assembly meeting there in February. Many, many articles, pictures of the Temple and National Assembly members were printed not only in Los Angeles papers but also in Santa Monica, Hollywood and Huntington Park papers. This year, news clippings have also come from Riverside, Whittier and Long Beach through the efforts of the Los Angeles friends. Los Angeles has covered a large amount of territory with very effective publicity.

Mrs. French still writes her column, Loom of Reality, with great success. Most outstanding was the newspaper publicity in connection with Pasadana’s Amity Banquet last December. Both the Pasadena Star-News and the Pasadena Post carried long accounts of the speeches after the dinner and long articles about the dinner before the event.

Glendale, California, through the efforts of Mrs. Shirley Wardle succeeded in obtaining newspaper space concerning the meetings of Mrs. Helen Bishop.

San Francisco obtained publicity in large amounts for their January meeting on the Oneness of Mankind. Miss Lucy Marshall has now taken over the publicity work of Mrs. Kevah Munson who has moved to Los Angeles. Many papers in towns near and far have been successfully contacted by the San Francisco publicity committee. We covered the splendid work done for the Glendale session in the last report. San Francisco also reached as far as Reno, Nevada where the papers carried Baha’i publicity at the time of Mrs. Seto’s teaching visit there. The papers of Budde carried a picture of the Temple with an article.

In Canada, the Hamilton and Toronto, Ontario, papers have carried a great deal of publicity due to the successful efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ives. Mrs. Gertrude King of San Francisco stopped last year in Winnipeg, Manitoba, and stopped at the editor’s office. The result was a short notice of her visit and a mention of the Cause.

Mrs. Anna L. Duffy has consistently obtained space for long articles on the Cause in the Norwich, Connecticut, Bulletin.

Washington, D. C., obtained space for a picture of the Temple showing the actual work on the gallery section.

Margaret Atwater of Miami has been successful in her efforts in Gainesville as well as Miami. Long articles signed with her name have appeared from time to time all this last year. Jacksonville, Florida has obtained space for meeting notices with quotations from the writings in the Times-Union. There also appeared in a German paper, the Florida’s Deutsches Echo, in Miami, two articles on the Cause by Margaret Atwater; one article on the Temple with a picture and one on Bahá’í, the Manifestation of God, also with a picture.

Outstanding work is being done in Key West, Florida by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf, who is the only Baha’i in that city. Recently she was successful in having the picture of the Temple printed with a long article on the Temple and the Faith.

Our international section of the Press Book has grown to include an article on Esperanto appearing in a South African paper written by Miss Roan Orloff of Boston. Phillip Marengello made a teaching trip to Havana, Cuba and obtained publicity in a Cuban paper. The picture of ‘Abdu’l-Baha was printed and notices about Mr. Marengello. While in Dubu, last spring, he was instrumental in receiving a great deal of publicity for the Cause in a Finnish paper.

William DeForge of Teaneck made a trip to Santo Domingo last fall and was responsible for a publicity article in Spanish. A long article in a San Juan, Puerto Rico paper also was due to his effort.

Marvin Newport who was responsible for such splendid publicity work last summer in Liberty, New York, has done equally fine work in many places since then. In the early autumn he visited Coleraine, Minnesota where he obtained space for a picture of the Temple and an article. He visited Pekin and Carlinville, Illinois where he interviewed the local papers in carrying articles on the Cause. Later he stopped in Little Rock, Arkansas, and was instrumental in having an item printed about the Cause.

In Illinois there are several pioneer ventures that have included newspaper interest. Some clippings from Moline, came from the effort of Mrs. Gertrude Struven of Wilmette and Mrs. Gayle Woolson of St. Paul. Newspapers of Batavia, Aurora and St. Charles carried many articles and pictures both of the Temple and of Mr. Holley who spoke at a large pioneer public meeting in St. Charles. This great amount of publicity was due to the efforts of the members of the publicity committee of Maywood. Maywood also did a splendid piece of publicity work in the local papers arranging the reproduction of the Temple picture many times as well as various articles on the Cause.

Nina Matthiesen of Bristol, Wisconsin, gave a set of Bahá’í books to the public library of Antioch, Illinois—a neighboring town—and was responsible for placing the book reviews of these books with the local paper, which were printed. Newspaper clippings on the Cause have also been received from Marion, Illinois.

Many neighborhood papers in Chicago have printed notices, reports and articles on the Cause through the efforts of Mrs. Katherine Mortensen.

Mrs. Gaines of Urbana did an outstanding piece of publicity work in Champaign and Urbana when the National Assembly met there in December. Long articles on the meetings, the personalities and the Regional Teaching Conference were printed in the three local papers. Danville, Illinois, is a pioneer teaching project of Urbana, this year, and the Danville Commercial-News has carried quite a number of pictures of speakers and the reports of meetings held there.

Mrs. Gertrude Struven has been most successful in obtaining space for progress pictures of the Temple and a number of articles on events at the Temple as well as explanatory articles on the Cause in the Wilmette Life. This publicity has come about after years of patient and consistent work.

Peoria and Springfield have had publicity in relation to a number of public meetings with out-of-town speakers, some of them members of the National Assembly.

It is with great deference that we speak of the very splendid work being done by Mrs. Gayle Woolson in Iowa. She has spoken to a large number of organizations. These meetings have been reported in the papers with some principles of the Cause mentioned from time to time. Long articles on the Temple with pictures have been printed in many papers. She has sent us innumerable clippings from papers of five Iowa towns near Cedar Rapids, Des Moines, Mt. Vernon, Marion, Davenport and Iowa City papers, and other activities. Mrs. Woolson was also instrumental in obtaining publicity for the Cause in Hudson, Minnesota, where she and Miss Steinmetz held meetings and did pioneer work under the auspices of the St. Paul Assembly. St. Paul itself has been successful in having notices of its meetings printed and several large pictures of the Temple.

In a St. Louis, Missouri, paper there appeared a large picture of the Temple.

A number of Bahá'í groups and assemblies in Michigan have obtained publicity for the Cause through the public meetings held with Mrs. Margery McCormick and Mrs. Ruth Moffett. Battle Creek, Ludington, Grand Rapids, Grosse Point, Detroit, Grand Haven, Muskegon, Ann Arbor and Marysville have all carried on publicity work through the work of circuit teachers.

Butte, Montana, has received numerous mentions in newspapers through the agency of Bahá'í public meetings and other activities. Mrs. Lorol Jackson and Mrs. Edwina Powell have assisted in this effort.

The Red Bank, New Jersey, Standard has carried a large number of articles on the Cause as a result of the successful efforts of Mrs. Stuart Sims. Teaneck, New Jersey has continued its usual persistent and continuous publicity effort by arranging for the printing of notices and articles.

In New York state, Ithaca, Washington Heights, Syracuse, Rochester, Yonkers, Geneva, Binghamton and Buffalo have been active in obtaining publicity for the Cause in local papers. Mrs. Marzieh Carpenter assisted with public meetings in Buffalo. Her picture and a report of the meeting were printed.

In a Plainsville, Ohio, paper there was space given to the principles of the Cause. Mrs. Ruth Moffett was responsible for this work. The Lima School of the Air is given much space in Lima, Ohio. The friends have been ingenious in arranging effective display ads for the newspapers. They have been most successful also in obtaining space for long articles on local activities with pictures of speakers.

The newspapers of Columbus, Cincinnati, Toledo and Dayton, Ohio, have carried notices of Bahá'í activities and notices about the Cause through the efforts of the friends in each of these cities. The items about Convention delegates seem to be of special interest to newspapers.

Philadelphia and Scranton, Pennsylvania, have been consistently active in arranging for space for comment on Bahá'í activities and explanations of the principles of the Cause.

Knoxville, Tennessee, papers have accepted items on Bahá'í activities and ideals through the successful efforts of Mrs. Louise Caswell. Mr. Klus of Chicago has received mention for the Cause in a Houston, Texas, newspaper.

Sound Bend, Indiana, has been active and successful in obtaining newspaper space for the reporting of Bahá'í meetings, notices of activities and explanations of the Bahá'í principles.

In the state of Wisconsin we have received many publicity clippings from Kenosha, Racine, and Milwaukee. Kenosha has found effective publicity in reporting in some detail the outline of Forum discussions held every week.

Mrs. Russell of Madison has continued to receive space for articles on the Cause.

Although the National Press Book, so far this year, has had clippings from only fifty-one Assemblies, nevertheless its pages are filled with newspaper articles and notices from many pioneer centers where there are only groups or isolated believers.

The Press Book that will go to Shoghi Effendi will be on display at the Convention. We hope that the Friends will take the time to look through its pages and share with us the thrill of watching the growing interest in the Bahá'í Cause.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

NEWS OF THE EAST AND WEST

The monthly news letter of the National Spiritual Assembly of Iran contains the following excerpt from a letter received from the Guardian on the characteristics of a Bahá’í.

"Today the greatest foundation and most reliable criterion is good deeds, not words. Whatever body of men has this basis is confirmed and has Truth on its side, and whatever group lacks it is deprived of God's bounty. All fame, all argument, if not supported and accompanied by good deeds and conduct and worthy morals, is rejected and repudiated by the entire world.

"Good conduct, a spirit of fellowship, affection, union, cooperation, purity of heart and honesty are the distinguishing characteristics of the friends. For these qualities, of which the people of the world are deprived, are the first and last convincing proof of this Cause. This is the reliable touchstone, and the only distinguishing feature of Bahá'ís as compared with other peoples. It is the prime object of all Prophets, and the sole distinguishing characteristic of the friends. The friends, a new sovereignty, a new name and recognition, and the innumerable disasters borne by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, is not the creation of a new brotherhood, but the realization of the oldest desires of the past, that is, the brotherhood of man."

The following account of Youth Activities is taken from the Bahá'í News Letter of the National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma, March, 1939.

"We are overjoyed to report that five of our youth groups participated in the 4th Annual Youth Symposium on February 26th. The program chocked out by the American Youth Committee was adopted at all centers with some modifications suited to our Country. Youth Plans for the whole year have also been formulated. There will be three meetings during the year and weekly study classes in which "Some Answered Questions" will be studied according to the outline published in the Bahá'í News of America. Iranian and Urdu translations of this outline may be called for direct from the National Secretary. We give below the proceedings of those Groups' meetings which have come to our hands before going to press.

"Karachi:—The Symposium was held on February 26th; and although the weather was abnormally bad, the attendance was most satisfactory. Press publicity had preceded the meeting. Prof. H. C. Kumar was in the chair. The following program was gone through:

1. Opening Prayer by Jamshid Pur-i-Khursandi; (2) Poems and Prayers by Children; (3) Ibrahim Manji, Duties of the Youth (in Gujarati); (4) Shah Beltram Mazkori, Universal Faith (in Iranian); (5) Farid­doon Yazamedi, Lost Horizon and the History of the Bahá'í Faith (in Urdu); (6) Azezullah Rastani, Oneness of Religions (in Iranian); (7) Mehrab Janshed—Oneness of Religions (in English); (8) The President summed up and concluded his speech with the following words: 'The Remedy for the ills of the world today is the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.' The meeting came to a close with a chanting of prayers in English by Rustam Arshar Janshadi and in Persian by Farid­doon Yazamedi. Light refreshments were served.

"Bombay:—The Bahá'í Youth Group of Bombay observed the Fourth Annual World Bahá'í Youth Symposium on February 26; in the Bahá'í Hall when Mr. Jannudas Mehta, M. L. A., presided. The Hall was packed to its utmost capacity and many prominent ladies and gentlemen were present.

The proceedings opened with a prayer by Miss Daulat Jamshid Hakimian. In explaining the real significance of the Symposium the president said that the Bahá'í Youth all over the world today observed this day with great eclat and the real object of doing it was to convey the Message of Peace and Unity, as propagated by Bahá'u'lláh, the Founder of the Bahá'í Faith, to the leading citizen of the world. He further said that it was a praiseworthy object and we should all greatly admire and encourage their efforts in this direction.

"Mr. K. B. Manavi spoke in Gu­jerati on 'The Horizon Regained.' Dr. K. M. Irani explained in English the fundamental Teachings of the Bahá'í Faith, Miss Meherangiz Boman Irani told the audience what real leadership ought to be like. She was followed by Mr. Shaukat Hashmi who spoke in Urdu on the Bahá'í Teachings.

"The President in his closing remarks, said that what greatly attracted him towards the Bahá'í Faith was its principle of the Independent Investigation of Truth. This same Teaching is in the Bhagwát Gita but as it is not followed in practice it needed reiteration and therefore Bahá'u'lláh has laid great stress on it. There is no coercion whatever in the Bahá'í Faith. Every one is free to investigate and find out the Truth for himself or herself and then to accept it.

"Miss Koochangiz Kationars proposed a vote of thanks to the chair and Miss Boman Irani garlanded the President. After Mr. Rustom M. Naimi had recited the closing prayer, the friends partook of light refreshments and the meeting dispersed.

"Poona.—The Bahá'í Youth, as usual, showed exceptional zeal and devotion in the observance of the Annual Youth Symposium. An impressive meeting was held at the National Hotel, opposite Railway Station. Extensive press publicity had been done and the meeting was well attended. Bahá'í Literature was tastefully exhibited and the display roused the interest of some sincere seekers who finally carried away some books with them. The following program was gone through:—

(1) Prayer; (2) "Abdu'l-Bahá's Faith (a lecture); (3) Thy Remembrance is my Remedy (a song); (4) Words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá; (5) Word Order (a lecture); (6) Reading from the Hidden words of Bahá'u'lláh; (7) Benediction (with music). Light refreshments were served.

A. Blundell, Thou Hast Asked, by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick.

Our distinguished International Bahá'í teacher, Miss Martha L. Root, is arriving at San Francisco from Auckland, N. Z., on board the Mari­posa, due in that city on June 13. The National Spiritual Assembly will consult with her as to how best may be fulfilled the Guardian's wishes as expressed in the Guardian's first cablegram to the Convention. Miss Root plans to spend two weeks at the Geyersville Summer School after a stay in San Francisco. She is accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Bolton, two Bahá'ís of Austra­lia, who will leave the boat at Los Angeles. They also will attend the Summer School.
Dearly-beloved friends:

The concerted activities of the followers of Baha'u'llah in the North American continent assume, as they multiply and develop, a dual aspect, and may be said to fall into two distinct categories, both equally vital and complementary to each other. The one aims at the safeguarding and consolidation of the work already achieved; the other is designed to enlarge and multiply and develop, a dual aspect, the structural machinery of their Faith, and multiplying its administrative agencies, and are legalizing the status of the newly established institutions. Slowly and patiently they are canalizing the spirit that at once directs, energizes and safeguards its operation. They are exploiting its potentialities, broadcasting its message, publicizing its literature, fostering the aspirations of its youth, devising ways and means for the training of its children, guarding the integrity of its teachings, and paving the way for the ultimate codification of its laws. Through all the resources at their disposal, they are promoting the growth and consolidation of that pioneer movement for which the entire machinery of their Administrative Order has been primarily designed and erected. They are visibly and progressively contributing to the enrichment of their unique community life, and are insuring, with magnificent courage and characteristic promptitude, the completion of their consecrated Edifice—the embodiment of their hopes and the supreme symbol of their ideals.

As to those into whose valiant and trusted hands—and no believer, however humble is to think himself barred from joining their ranks—the standards of a forward marching Faith have been entrusted, they too with no less zest and thoroughness are pushing farther and farther its frontiers, breaking new soil, establishing fresh outposts, winning more recruits, and contributing to the greater diversification and more harmonious blending of the elements comprised in the world-wide society of its followers.

The Edifice of this New World Order, which the Bab has heralded, which the mind of Baha'u'llah has envisioned, and whose features 'Abdu'l-Bahi, its Architect, has delineated, we, whatever our capacities, opportunities or position, are now, at so precarious a period in the world's history, summoned to found and erect. The community of the Most Great Name in the Western Hemisphere is, through the nature of its corporate life and the scope of its exertions, assuming, beyond the shadow of a doubt, a preponderating share in the laying of such a foundation and the erection of such a structure. The eyes of its sister communities are fixed upon it. Their prayers ascend on its behalf. Their hands are outstretched to lend whatever aid lies within their power. I, for my part, am determined to reinforce the impulse that impels its members forward to meet their destiny. The Founders of their Faith survey from the Kingdom on high the range of their achievements, acclaim their progress, and are ever ready to speed their eventual triumph.

Far be it from me to understate the gigantic proportions of their task, nor do I for one moment overlook the urgency and gravity of the times in which they are laboring. Nor do I wish to minimize the hazards and trials that surround or lie ahead of them. The grandeur of their task is indeed commensurate with the mortal perils by which their generation is hemmed in. As the dusk creeps over a steadily sinking society the radiant outlines of their redemptive mission become sharper every day. The present world unrest, symptom of a world-wide malady, their world religion has already affirmed must needs culminate in that world catastrophe out of which the consciousness of world citizenship will be born, a consciousness that can alone provide an adequate basis for the organization of world unity, on which a lasting world peace must necessarily depend, the grandeur of which is itself inaugurating a new world civilization which will mark the coming of age of the entire human race.

Fortified by such reflections, the American believers, in whichever section of the Western hemisphere they find themselves laboring, whether at home or abroad, and however dire and distressing the processes involved in the disintegration of the structure of present-day civilization, will, I feel convinced, prove themselves, through their lives and deeds, worthy of that priceless heritage which it is their undoubted privilege to proclaim, preserve and perpetuate.

Your true and grateful brother,

SHOGHI.

May 22, 1939.

The following passages are also from the Guardian's letter of May 22:

In connection with the Baha'is' exhibition at the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition, he feels deeply appreciative of the efforts exerted by the N. S. A. in conjunction with the San Francisco Assembly for the arrangement of such an attractive and impressive display and has every reason to hope that the exhibit your Assembly is now holding at the World's Fair in New York will prove equally successful, and result in giving the Faith a befitting and widespread publicity. He welcomes your offer to send him photographs of this last exhibit at New York, and would also appreciate your giving him a report on the public interest shown on both occasions.

He wishes me, in conclusion, to stress the paramount importance, now that the teaching campaign in the United States and Canada has been successfully extended to embrace every State and Province in these two countries, of insuring by all means available the systematic and vigorous penetration of the teaching force in the Latin Republics of Central America—the opening up of which he has, in his recent cabled message to the Annual Convention, set as the chief immediate teaching objective facing the Community of the American believers during this year. Since the nine hitherto unoccupied territories in the North American Continent have at last been definitely settled, and following the formation during this past year of the first local Spiritual Assembly in the heart of Mexico, this southward penetration of the teaching campaign is but a natural and logical step which should now be resolutely and unfaithfully pursued.

That this new and crucial stage in the Inter-American teaching campaign is infinitely more difficult and challenging than any teaching attempt undertaken so far collectively by the American believers, fraught as it is with problems which they have never had the opportunity to tackle before, and might for this reason appear at first quite beyond their present-day resources and strength, the Guardian himself has readily admitted in his "Advent of Divine Justice." But through full resolve to the existence of such obstacles and difficulties, whether religious, political, racial, or otherwise, he feels absolutely confident that these barriers, no matter how insuperable they may prove to purely human attempts and endeavors, cannot in the long run offer any effective resistance to the onward march of the invincible army of Baha'u'llah which, however insignificantly small and poorly equipped materially it may appear, is endowed nevertheless with such celestial strength as will undoubtedly enable it to break down one by one every barrier it may encounter in its spiritual conquest for the redemption and guidance of human souls.

It is the assurance of such divinely-promised victory, stressed time and again and in language indeed unmistakable by Baha'u'llah and 'Abdu'l-Baha, coupled with the ever-growing evidence of the incomparably glorious teaching achievements accomplished by the American believers in recent years, and in particular during the last two decades following the ascension of 'Abdu'l-Baha, that fill the Guardian with confidence and courage, and impel him to set up such an admittedly high goal before the American Baha'i Community, thus leading it, resolutely and infallibly, ever onward towards the high spiritual destiny which has been, irrevocably and yet so deservedly, chosen for it by God in this glorious age and dispensation.

The supreme objective of the American believers in the year just entered is to insure the uninterrupted prosecution of the Temple construction work and to accomplish the present and perhaps the most difficult stage in the Inter-American teaching campaign recently and officially inaugurated. The scope of the dual task ahead is now clear and defined. It is now for the newly-elected Assembly to devise ways and means for its efficient, complete and speedy execution.

THE BAHAI' WORLD

VOLUME VII

The National Assembly expresses the hope that every believer will make the effort to own a copy of this international record of the Faith for the period 1936-1938. Nothing gives us a more impressive view of the Baha'i World Commonwealth in its crucial early days. The two Frontispiece Illustrations, the maps and great variety of photographs, the special articles—all have their part in deepening in believers their sense of solidarity with Baha'i communities in all lands.

The importance of this work has been stressed by the Guardian. "This unique record of world-wide Baha'i activity attempts to present to the general public, as well as to the student and scholar, those historical facts and fundamental principles that constitute the distinguishing features of the Message of Baha'u'llah to this age. I have, ever since its inception, taken a keen and active interest in its development, have personally participated in the col-
UNIVERSAL DIVINE GUIDANCE

The thoughtful American Bahá’í can discern three successive stages in the evolution of the Bahá’í community since the Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

The first stage represented the formation of the Administrative Institutions and the Administrative Order on a local and national scale. We learned how to establish Assemblies, conduct the Convention, coordinate the activities of Committees and individual believers, and realize our Bahá’í life in terms of a new, spiritual Society.

During the second stage, the Guardian, through his “World Order” letters, enlarged our conception of the Faith and created the vision of the Administrative Order as the fulfillment of the universal ideal of World Peace. We came to realize that the institutions formed during the first stage, and the community fostering them and protecting them, constituted the pattern and nucleus of the World Commonwealth, the creation of which is the unique mission of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

In “The Advent of Divine Justice” we are witness to a third stage, now coming to consciousness throughout the Bahá’í community, characterized by the spiritualization of our personal and collective will—the consecration of our lives, together with our Administrative Institutions, to the essential task of establishing the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh throughout the Americas and eventually throughout the world.

This present, third stage, now in its preliminary phases, is to gather the real fruit of all that has gone before. It represents the culmination of our intentions as declared believers. It challenges the capacity of our concentrated energies. It tests our sincerity. It claims the utmost from every Assembly and Committee. It promises the way of spiritual glory, but it demands a greater sacrifice than we have ever made before.

As new conditions become manifest in the successive seasons of the year, and in the successive stages of individual life, so new conditions have been created for our Bahá’í lives and activities, which we must each make effort to realize, appreciate, and to which inwardly and outwardly we must learn how to respond.

The mighty aims laid down for us by the provisions of the Seven Year Plan are not a program nor schedule which we ourselves adopted and which, therefore, we might later choose to abandon. They were created by Bahá’u’lláh Himself, and made implicit in His Tablet to the Americas; made explicit by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in His series of Tablets we now term “America’s Spiritual Mission,” and they were brought into the field of action by the Guardian in “The Advent of Divine Justice” and those preceding and later letters and cablegrams which unfold the Seven Year Plan.

The American Bahá’í community is therefore under Divine Guidance. Unlike other communities, groping their way through the wilderness of confusion and error, the believers tread the path illumined by the Sun of Truth. The end is known and assured. The means are at hand. It is for us to proceed steadily, and in perfect unity, along that blessed Path through all the days of life on earth.

Can we not, realizing the stupendous nature of this blessing, learn how to conduct our Bahá’í affairs in a profounder spirit of awareness, live our Bahá’í lives in a more powerful station of assurance, and perceive the successive plans and budgets adopted by the National Spiritual Assembly as nothing else than those steps by which the entire community is to advance toward the ultimate goal? Without this awareness that there is no end without means, no collective action without instrumentalities, the plan and budget reported by the National Assembly in the May issue of BAHÁ’Í NEWS have no likelihood of success. They must be viewed and felt in the light of the Divine Plan itself. They must be upheld as the only existing, the only possible, means of transforming faith and loyalty into visible achievement.

The capacity of local Assemblies to quicken the consciousness of the friends, enable the daily processes of Bahá’í community life, stand firm on the necessity of complete success in our collective undertaking—this is the foundation we are to lay if we be of those truly elected to serve the Cause of God. To teach in America and Latin America, and to complete the Temple—these are the twofold aims given us under Divine Guidance. When we undertake these aims with unity and consecration, success will be achieved.

CHILD EDUCATION

‘Abdu’l-Bahá once said: “The fathers and especially the mothers, must always think how they can best educate their children; not how to fondle and embrace them and thus spoil them. By every means at their disposal they must inculcate into their growing bodies, minds and spirits, the principles of sincerity, love, trustfulness, obedience, true democracy, and kindness toward all races; thus hereafter the world of civilization may flow in one mighty current and the children of the next generation may make secure the foundation of human solidarity and good will."

As we read these words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, we note that in enumerating the various attributes He would have parents cultivate in their children, He includes obedience. It is well to consider, in this New Day, when enlightened parents are breaking away from the old idea of blind obedience on the part of the child and are attempting to set him free from too much adult dominance in order that he may develop his own personality and initiative, that parents do not make the mistake of too little restriction and become lax. The more obedient a child is, the more true freedom he may enjoy, for extreme liberty is licence. Of this Bahá'u'lláh wrote: "Know ye that the embodiment of liberty and its symbol is the animal. That which beareth man is submission unto such restraints as will protect him from his own ignorance, and guard him against the harm of the mischief-maker."

Mrs. Amy Dwelly, formerly associated with the Merrill-Palmer Nursery School, writes for us: "From infancy on, obedience can and should be taught. This magnificent lesson, however, cannot be learned suddenly or without effort. One of the secrets of teaching a child to obey is to begin when he is very young by giving him a few important commands that he understands perfectly and seeing to it that he always obeys them. Too many don'ts; no's and can'ts confuse and puzzle a very young child with the result that he usually ignores them all. The few well chosen commands given to a child should be related to his health, safety and spiritual well being, but these should be always obeyed. The successful parent does not nag, but he is consistent."

'Abdu'l-Bahá said to the children one day, "Be obedient unto thy father and mother, caressing brother and sister, and day by day adding to thy faith and assurance."

Elsewhere He says, "The integrity of the family bond must be constantly considered and the rights of the individual members must not be transgressed. The rights of the son, the rights of the father, the rights of the mother, none of them must be transgressed, none of them must be arbitrary. This sort of mutual respect and understanding, such as one expects to find in every Bahá'í family, is the soil in which sincere obedience will flourish.

Upon all Bahá'ís entrusted with the training of a child, is placed the divine responsibility of teaching him obedience to God's Commands, so that he will indeed be, "fully prepared to render instant, exact and complete obedience." This is beofcial to himself. Bahá'u'lláh wrote: "O ye peoples of the world! Know assuredly that My commandments are the lamps of My loving providence among My servants, and the keys of My mercy for My creatures."

"Observe My commandments, for the love of My beauty. Happy is the lover that hath inhaled the divine fragrance of His Best Beloved from these words, laden with the perfume of a grace which no tongue can describe. "Think not that We have revealed unto you a mere code of laws. Nay, rather, We have unclosed the choice Wine with the fingers of might and power."

More important still, as your child grows older, he will take his place in the great army of Bahá'u'lláh in this Day of God. The victories of any army are commensurate with the obedience of its soldiers. Consider an army of a country. How impossible to capture a city if each soldier were occupied with his own concerns! Even when a man is sincerely sure that he is right, his disobedience can cause loss to the entire army.

Vahid at Yazd commanded his servant Hasan to convey the treatises of the Báb to a certain place on the road to Mihriz, warning him that in no wise must be change his course. Nabil tells us: "No sooner had Hasan mounted his horse and prepared to leave than the cries of the sentinels reached his ears. Fearing lest they capture him and seize the precious manuscripts in his possession, he decided to follow a different route from the one which his master had instructed him to take. As he was passing behind the fort, the sentinels recognized him, shot his horse, and captured him. Meanwhile Vahid chose the same route that he had advised his servant to take, and, arriving safely at that spot, was surprised to find that Hasan was missing. Vahid knew immediately that he had disregarded his directions and had been captured by the enemy."

And so the treatises penned by the hand of the martyred Báb were lost.

Obedience! To the words of Bahá'u'lláh, the Master, the Guardian! Obedience to the Administrative channels of their grace! A reverence for law; nay, a love and gratitude for law: this, parents, is the greatest protection, the most profound benefit, and the fondest heritage that you can bequeath to your child, the spiritual soldier of tomorrow.

CHILD EDUCATION COMMITTEE.
WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

With the intensification of teaching effort, the friends are urged to realize how World Order Magazine provides material adapted for the presentation of the Faith to special groups or persons with special interests and backgrounds.

In the May issue, for example, “Transition in World Economy” by Emeric Sala and “The World of Tomorrow,” by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick, are of distinct interest to those who follow international affairs. “The Destiny of America,” an excerpt from the Guardian’s “The Advent of Divine Justice,” in the June issue has unique value in clarifying one of the major issues of the day.

The June issue also presents “Rejoice, O Israel,” by Alice Simmons Cox, admirably suited for the enlightened Jew who feels overwhelmed by the tragic condition of his race in so many parts of the world. A series of Questions and Answers by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick began in June with a brief statement on “Is Pacifism the Answer to War?” In the July issue the questions answered is “How Can Capital and Labor Be Reconciled?”

Coinciding with the first pioneer work among the Indians is published “The Vanishing American,” by Pasupuleti Gopala Krishnaya in July, an article casting a new light on the social and religious consciousness of this indigenous race. “Mankind Is One,” by Doris McKay, also appearing in July, can be used effectively in connection with Race Unity teaching. This article concludes her series entitled “The Oneness of Religion” which (based upon the course given at Green Acre in 1938) has assembled important excerpts from many Holy Books in relation to the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh, and clarified the unity and progressive character of religion.

For the student of psychology, “The Crisis of the World Psyche,” by Wilfrid Barton, in the July issue, offers material of extreme importance. A series on the Seven Valleys, beginning in July with “The Valley of Search,” by Zoe Meyer, will successively present studies, by different Bahá’í authors, of the spiritual truths revealed by Bahá’u’lláh in “Seven Valleys.” “Do We Believe in God,” by G. A. Shook, begins a series of philosophic essays dealing with fundamental concepts of thought and experience. “Islam,” by Ali-Kuli Khan represents the fullest exposition of the history of that Faith which has yet appeared through Bahá’í channels.

NEW PLANS FOR PIONEER TEACHING

The latest developments in Pioneer teaching and settlement in areas which require assistance:—

Mr. Gerard Sluter is proceeding to Guantanamo, and Mrs. Antono Rocca to Honduras. Mrs. Stewart is extending her stay in Buenos Aires, which the Guardian desires. Mr. Philip Marangella has gone to Cuba. Miss Mary Hartfield is engaged in the establishment of herself in St. Louis, Mo., Miss Jane Reasoner will work among the Blackfoot Indians, near Calgary, Alberta. Miss Honor Kempn has transferred her residence to Anchorage, Alaska, from Juneau.

Mr. Mathew Kassab has settled in Panama, and is now working under the supervision of the Inter-America Committee. Other important plans for teaching in Latin America and North America are in progress, and further reports will be made from time to time.

In the light of the Guardian’s recent message, the historic importance of these valiant efforts is manifest.

IN MEMORIAM
It is clear and evident that when the veils that conceal the realities of the manifestations of the Names and Attributes of God, may of all created things visible or invisible, have been rent asunder, nothing except the Sign of God will remain—a sign which He, Himself, hath placed within these realities. This sign will endure as long as is the wish of the Lord thy God, the Lord of the heavens and of the earth. If such be the blessings conferred on all created things, how superior must be the destiny of the true believer, whose existence and life are to be regarded as the originating purpose of all creation.—BAHÁ’U’LLAH.

Mrs. Fatty B. Moore, New York.
Mr. Joseph G. Gray, San Francisco.

SHAHNAZ WAITE
On June 2, the Spiritual Assembly of Los Angeles received the following telegram from Shoghi Effendi:
“Passing Shahnaz, beloved pioneer, deeply lamented. Record (of her) outstanding services imperishable. Reward assured. Ardent prayers.”

ADDRESS FOR CORRESPONDENCE
Time will be saved if letters intended for the National Assembly or World Order Magazine be addressed, during July and August, to Green Acre, Eliot, Maine.

NEWS OF EAST AND WEST
Bahá’í News Letter No. 2, issued by the National Spiritual Assembly of Egypt, is devoted to an account of the remarkable events accompanying the Bahá’í burial of Mohammed Effendi Soliman at Ismailia, on December 9, 1938.
This believer has informed his friends and relatives that a Bahá’í funeral service should be performed after his departure. He also drew up a will stating that his heirs should submit to the jurisdiction of the Spiritual Assembly. Arrangements were made for the funeral ceremony, and the police department was informed. A non-Bahá’í brother of the deceased then attempted to persuade the believers that the Muslim ceremony should be performed. The dispute was taken to the police, who upheld the documents prepared by the deceased and turned over to the Assembly. The relative then became so infuriated and threatening that he was detained in the police headquarters, and the Bahá’í ceremony was duly carried out.
However, a crowd of some 3,000 persons gathered and despite police protection, the Bahá’ís could not carry the coffin into the cemetery. The po-
The Spiritual Assembly of France has issued a circular letter from which the following passages are gleaned:

"Cette année, qui suit celle de l'Exposition, a amené moins d'Amis à Paris. Nous avons pourtant eu la visite, non seulement de plusieurs Amis iraniens, mais aussi du Dr. Mac Cormick, de Mr. et Mrs. Grieve, de Miss Story, de Mrs. Lynch et tout dernièrement de Mrs. Dary, de Wisconsin, revenant d'Haïfa.

"Le groupe de Lyon continue son action et déploye toujours le même ardeur pour obtenir des adhérents. Madeleine Migette est allée à Genève pour assister à la Semaine de la Paix où l'on traitait des religions chrétiennes; Mrs. Lynch et elle-même y parleront de la Cause, la faisant ainsi connaître en un nouveau milieu.

"Le petit cercle de Marseille est toujours pour son avancement; des Amis travaillent à Orléans et sur la Côte d'Azur où nous espérons bientôt avoir un groupe très intéressant avec, à sa tête, un homme éminent.

"Nous continuons notre œuvre d'édition de nos précieux livres. Les Entretiens d'Abdul-Baha à Paris en 1911 et 1912 viennent d'être publiés en langue française, traduits de l'anglais par Madame Hesse et ronéoépigraphes par Mrs. Lynch. Le prix de cet ouvrage, qui forme un fort volume, est de 15 francs plus le port."

"Nous venons de faire paraître la Dispensation de Bahá'u'lláh, écrite par le Gardien Shoghi Effendi et traduite en français par M. Karakaya. Cet ouvrage, ronéoépigraphes, comprend quatre parties: le Báb, Bahá'u'lláh, Abdul-Baha, et l'Ordre Administratif. Le prix en est de 5 francs plus le port."

"Monsieur Fernandez, un de nos grands sympathisants, vient d'écrire un article documenté sur la Cause qui paraîtra prochainement dans une importante encyclopédie des Religions."

"Un livre qui remporte un grand succès, Islam, par l'orientaliste universellement connu Henri Massé, donne un aperçu fort réussi sur le Bahá'isme."

"La Conférence de la Jeunesse bahá'íe qui devait se tenir pendant les vacances de Neël, a été remise à la Pentecôte, en Mai, sur la demande de groupes et Amis habitant la province ou l'étranger. Nous ne doutons pas qu'il aura le même succès que les années précédentes et nous invitons tous les Amis qui pourront se déplacer à ce moment, à nous faire la grande faveur d'y assister et de nous aider de leurs précieux concours."

The Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City has taken steps to secure legal recognition from the government. "The study of the laws has been terminated according to the instructions received from the Guardian through the medium of Mr. and Mrs. Mathews, and they have been presented to the Mexican Government. We had an interview with the chief of the Department so as to render the usual declarations, and we are only waiting for their resolutions. We also inaugurated the winter courses for the Bahá'í teachers on the 6th of February and these will end on April 15, so we will soon have expert and excellent teachers."

The Spiritual Assembly of Cincinnati dedicated its new public Bahá'í Center, 206 East University Avenue, on May 23. "The Assemblies in this region have been asked to send a representative to assist in the service and we also wrote to Shoghi Effendi asking for his special prayers. The Cincinnati Assembly was incorporated on November 22, 1938."

While in Beduuna this spring, Mrs. Louise Erickson succeeded in having the local newspaper, Royal Gazette, publish the text of "Treasured Memories," by Lilian McNeill, which appeared in the January issue of World Order Magazine. This article was an intimate account of the late Queen Marie's acceptance of the Bahá'í Faith.

With the cooperation of the Boston Assembly and the National Library Committee, Duncan McAlear has accomplished a remarkable service in placing Bahá'í literature in Libraries of Massachusetts. "During the past few months I have interviewed the Librarians of 21 Libraries in Eastern Massachusetts and placed . . . a total of 49 books. There are now Bahá'í books in 32 Libraries in 26 cities and towns in Massachusetts. . . . I find most of the Librarians very receptive to the Bahá'í Message and willing to cooperate with us in the placing of the books."

NATIONAL OFFICE IN THE TEMPLE AREA

The National Spiritual Assembly announces that beginning October 1, 1939, the Office of its Secretary will be maintained in the former Bourgeois studio (now part of the Temple property) at 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

This action was taken subject to approval by the Guardian, whose endorsement was conveyed in the following cablegram, received June 22:

"Delighted welcome transference (to) Temple area. Loving appreciation."

The members wish to point out that this step, which represents the beginning of the establishment of a National Administrative Office in the Temple area, conforms to words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá revealed in the series of Tablets now known as "America's Spiritual Mission," and to several passages in the Guardian's general communications. Of these latter, the following are cited:

"The seat round which its spiritual, its humanitarian and administrative activities will cluster are the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár and its Dependencies."—The World Order of Bahá'ú'lláh, pp. 156-157.

"But however inspiring the conception of Bahá'í worship, as witnessed in the central Edifice of this exalted Temple, it cannot be regarded as the sole, nor even the essential, factor in the part which the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, as designed by Bahá'u'lláh, is destined to play in the organic life of the Bahá'í community. Divorced from the social, humanitarian, educational and scientific pursuits centering around the Dependencies of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, Bahá'í worship, however exalted in its conception, however passionate in fervor, can never hope to achieve beyond the meagre and often transitory results produced by the contemplations of the ascetic or the communion of the passive worshiper. It cannot afford lasting satisfaction and benefit to the worshiper himself, much less to humanity in general, unless and until translated and transfused into that dynamic and disinterested service to the cause of humanity which it is the supreme privilege of the Dependencies of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár to facilitate and promote. Nor will the exertions, no matter how disinterested and strenuous, of those who within the precincts of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár will be engaged in administering the affairs of the future Bahá'í Commonwealth, fructify and prosper unless they are brought into close and daily communion with those spiritual agencies centering in and radiating from the central Shrine of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár. Nothing short of direct and constant interaction between the spiritual forces emanating from this House of Worship centering in the heart of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, and the energies consciously displayed by those who administer its affairs in their service to humanity can possibly provide the necessary agency capable of removing the ills that have so long and so grievously afflicted humanity. For it is assuredly upon the consciousness of the efficacy of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, reinforced on one hand by spiritual communion with His Spirit, and on the other by the intelligent application and the faithful execution of the principles and laws He revealed, that the salvation of a world in travail must ultimately depend."—General letter dated October 25, 1929, included in Bahá'í Administration.

THE VISIBLE EVIDENCE

Every member of the American Bahá'í community is urgently requested to ponder the importance—nay, the immediate necessity—of meeting the requirements of the Annual Budget adopted in order to achieve the tasks set for us this year under the Seven Year Plan.

As reported in Bahá'í News for May, the total Budget of $150,000 falls into three separate classifications: $35,000 for Administration; $40,000 for teaching in North and South America; and $75,000 for new Temple construction.

What is apparently not yet clearly realized is the fact that the essence of the Seven Year Plan consists of the Guardian's clarion call for two tremendous tasks in addition to all those activities which a few years ago represented our normal Bahá'í schedule of undertakings. These "normal" activities can be maintained on an Annual Budget of $35,000, or less than $3,000 in contributions per month. The growth of the American Bahá'í community has been such that an average of $3,000 per month can be confidently anticipated by the National Spiritual Assembly from year to year. It is the difference between this $35,000 and the total Budget of $150,000 which represents the vital distinction between collective spiritual success and our mutual failure to meet the Guardian's appeals.

Community Prayer and Consultation

And now, that this paramount issue may be energetically handled, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes each and every local Assembly to devote three successive Nineteen Day Feasts, beginning with that to be observed on August 20, to prayer and discussion, during the consultation period, for the furtherance of the Budget for the Third Year of the Seven Year Plan. A spirit of deep devotion is needed, and such a unified response that the members of the community will feel that they are, indeed, drops in the one Ocean of a regenerated mankind, and leaves on the one Tree of fruitful service under the heat and light of the arisen Sun.

The members of the National Spiritual Assembly likewise make appeal to the local groups and isolated believers to ponder their own capacity to join in the mighty effort, whose aim is the continuance of Temple construction beyond the present contracts which will soon be completed, and the sending and maintenance of pioneer teachers to all areas which Shoghi Effendi has named for settlement this year.

National Spiritual Assembly.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE INTERNATIONAL FUND

The friends are informed that the National Spiritual Assembly has increased its monthly offering to the International Fund, through the Guardian, from $190 to $285. The heartfelt hope is expressed that the sacrifice of the believers will make it possible to increase greatly its contribution.

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS

The schedule of National Assembly meetings has been revised as follows:

The meeting to be held February, 1940, will be on the 23, 24 and 25, at Wilmette.

The 1940 Convention will be held on April 25, 26, 27, and 28, with the Public Meeting on Sunday evening instead of afternoon. A meeting of the National Assembly will precede, on April 24, at Wilmette instead of Evanston.
of belief, inevitable and right for an early stage of development, which began and ended with the expression of the sincerest sentiment.

One meaning of this present, so crucial era, is that our personal and group faith must be raised from feeling and mental speculation to the plane of will. We must learn how to live religiously, in the vital vigor of work and sacrifice for one common aim, and not merely select from our religion a few attitudes that seem best fitted to our human personality. Only when it arrives at the fusion of will is faith mature and complete. Resolution brings thought and feeling to their degree of fruitfulness. Action, imbued with thoughtfulness and pure sentiment, has become the criterion of faith.

The Guardian has patiently prepared the community for fitness to fulfill the Seven Year Plan. The letters published in Baha’u’llah Administration expounded the principles of the administrative order. The letters more recently published in The World Order of Baha’u’llah revealed the larger implications of the institutions which had been raised. There is no turning back to the era of details and procedures now that the Plan has been begun. We are committed to a definite and a supreme task. By achieving each portion of it within the allotted time we cling to the robe of His mercy and blessing. We make our destined contribution to the victory of His Faith upon earth.

The newer and younger believers can assimilate the essential truths of the Teachings and of the administrative order far more swiftly and more readily than those who were obliged to learn them by experience and in relation to actual problems that existed and had to be solved. We can not turn back to the past, nor can they who now in increasing numbers join our ranks. The third year of the Seven Year Plan is already one-quarter gone, and we have not yet responded adequately to its allotted task. How to create capacity for action is the paramount question of these days and weeks.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

BRIEF OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE ON APPEALS

I. When a Local Spiritual Assembly acts in its juridical capacity, the final verdict and the points in brief should be given to the party concerned in writing and placed on the Assembly file. The party at interest is encouraged to accept the decision.

II. If appeal is made, the N.S.A. will acknowledge the appeal and immediately obtain from the Local Spiritual Assembly its filed information.

III. The party at interest is given opportunity to point out any miscarriage of justice in the verdict.

IV. The National Spiritual Assembly may then sustain the decision of the L.S.A. or indicate to it, points justifying reconsideration, or it can reverse the original decision.

V. The National Spiritual Assembly acts directly only in matters which it considers of national importance and concern.

For additional information the friends are urged to study the following references in Baha’u’llah Procedure: Sec. 4; Sheet 15, 16, 17, 18.

THE FORMATION OF NEW ASSEMBLIES

The National Spiritual Assembly completes the details of procedure to be followed when new Assemblies are formed.

1. Groups having nine or more declared believers, all resident in the same civil community, are to apply before February 1 for authority to form an Assembly on April 21 of that year.

2. Any member of the group who is a voting believer in an already established adjacent community must withdraw from that community before joining the group applying for the right to form a new Assembly.

3. When a group is qualified to form an Assembly, all its members are obliged to join in asking for the authority to elect.

4. All established Assemblies are to report their voting list to the National Assembly by February 1 each year, and the voting list is not to include the names of any believers who have joined a group which is planning to form a new Assembly on April 21.

5. Applications from groups, and voting lists of established communities, must be in the hands of the National Assembly by February 1.

6. Groups which form a new Assembly on April 21 cannot be represented at the Convention held that same year.

7. Groups authorized to form a new Assembly will receive notice from the National Assembly not later than April 1, together with copies of the proper form for use in reporting its formation to the National Assembly.

In a recent letter written by the Guardian to the National Assembly he emphasizes one aspect of the matter as follows: “He wishes me to stress the fact that from now on any group that is formed must belong to one civil community, as otherwise endless confusion and misunderstanding would ensue. The limits of each civil community must be clearly recognized, and no overlapping should be allowed under any circumstances.”

A MESSAGE FROM THE TEMPLE PROGRAM COMMITTEE
“The Bahá'í House of Worship stands as a flaming beacon and a symbol of hope amidst the gloom of a despairing world.” We are wondering if those who are asked to speak in that hallowed spot and proclaim the Message of Bahá'u'lláh to a suffering humanity realize the great privilege that is theirs. One of the prayers revealed by “Abdu’ll-Bahá is that “our voices may be raised from great assemblies and from our doors may stream the flood of God's praise.” Here in the Temple, this opportunity is presented to the speaker. It is our earnest plea that any of the friends who is invited by the Temple Program Committee to address a public meeting in the Bahá'í House of Worship will exert every effort to accept this invitation, even to the point of personal sacrifice.

As the Guardian declares in The Advent of Divine Justice: “Every instrument in the administrative machinery which, in the course of several years, they have so laboriously erected must be fully utilized, and subordinated to the end for which it was created. The Temple, that proud embodiment of so rare a spirit of self-sacrifice, must likewise be made to play its part, and contribute its share to the teaching campaign designed to embrace the entire Western Hemisphere.”

MISS MARTHA L. ROOT RETURNS FROM THE EAST
With grateful joy is announced the fact that Miss Root, after heroic and most remarkable teaching activities in India, China, Japan and Australia, will arrive at San Francisco from Honolulu during August. After her arrival the National Spiritual Assembly will consult with her in order to carry out the Guardian's wish that her great experience be drawn upon for the promotion of Inter-American teaching.

ARTICLE ABOUT BAHÁ'ÍKHANUM
The institution of the Bahá’í Khánun Fund for Temple construction has led to many interested inquiries for copies of the beautiful article concerning the Greatest Holy Leaf written by Mrs. Marjory Morten for The Bahá’í World. It is readily available in a recent volume of that work. As the Guardian has written through his secretary, “the friends who are keen to have a copy of the article will do well to purchase the volume in which it appears.”

RECENT OBSERVANCES OF BAHÁ'Í ANNIVERSARIES
Following the date of May 29, when the Anniversary of the Ascension of Bahá'u'lláh was observed by a number of communities at the early morning hour indicated by the Guardian, the National Assembly has received communications emphasizing the confirmations which came to those who found it feasible to carry out the Guardian's wishes.

By conducting the Anniversaries at the definite hour given by Shoghi Effendi, the observance is made continuous for twenty-four hours around the world, an unbroken chain of holy devotion binding the members of the World Faith more firmly to its Author and Source.

CHILD EDUCATION
TRUTHFULNESS
“Truthfulness,” “Abdu'l-Bahá asserts, “is the foundation of all human virtues. Without truthfulness progress and success in all the worlds of God are impossible for any soul. When this holy attribute is established in man, all the divine qualities will also be acquired.”

Mrs. Amy Dwelly sends us the following suggestions for teaching truthfulness:
1. Always be truthful with the child himself, even in the smallest details.
2. Refrain from teasing him when he is too young to understand that you are joking. It is taking an advantage of a little child to tell him fabulous tales just because he is gullible enough to believe anything a grown person tells him.
3. Guard against accusing a child of untruths. Often he may simply be telling a manufactured story about something he has imagined. Pleasantly help him to see the difference.
4. Refrain from unduly harsh discipline which makes the child afraid to tell the truth. Examples such as the following are numerous. Little Jenny, an orphan, spilled some pudding on her dress. Disgusted, she stared with frightened eyes at the nurse. “I didn't do it,” she exclaimed. A few days later, we had Jenny in an ice-cream parlor, where she again dropped food on her dress, making a stain. This time she looked up not with fear but with regret in her eyes and said, “I did it. I'm so sorry.” In the first instance the child was afraid of punishment and therefore attempted to escape by denial. In the second, she had no fear and therefore responded naturally.

It is especially important to separate fear from the adventures in truthfulness in order that courage and fearlessness may become the habit. Dr. Stanwood Cobb, in relating his early experience at Roberts College in Turkey, speaks often of the habit of untruth into which his fearful and oppressed young students had fallen, and of their complete emancipation from this form of spiritual illness when unnecessary causes for fear and distrust were removed, and encouragement to fearlessness replaced them. Long before adulthood the young soul may become conscious of the sovereignty of standing alone if necessary against a world for the sake of truth. Consider how the mother of Ashraf is immortalized by Bahá'u'lláh Himself for urging her son to the highest act of truthfulness, a testimony of his faith even in the face of death itself.

"Call thou to mind the behavior of Ashraf's mother, whose son laid down his life in the Land of Zánjan. He, most certainly is in the seat of truth, in the presence of One Who is the Most Powerful, the Almighty.

"When the infidels so unjustly decided to put him to death, they sent and fetched his mother, that perchance she might admonish him, and induce him to recant his faith, and follow in the footsteps of them that have repudiated the truth of God, the Lord of all worlds. . . ."

"And when addressing him she said: 'My son, mine own son! Fail not to offer up thyself in the path of the Lord. Beware that thou betray not thy faith in Him before Whose face have bowed down in adoration all who are in the heavens and all who are on the earth. Go thou straight on, O my son, and persevere in the path of the Lord, thy God. Haste thee to attain the presence of Him Who is the Well-Beloved of all worlds!"

"On her be My blessings, and My mercy, and My praise, and My glory. I Myself shall attone for the loss of her son—a son who now dwelleth within the tabernacle of My majesty and glory, and whose face beameth with a light that envelopeth with its radiance the Maids of Heaven in their celestial chambers, and beyond them the inmates of My Paradise, and the denizens of the Cities of Holiness. Were any eye to gaze on his face, he would exclaim: 'Lo, this is no other than a noble angel.'"

So closely, then, is truthfulness bound to our loyalty to God Himself! Even a young child could be taught to say and to practice these admonitions of His Holiness, Bahá'u'lláh: "Let your eye be chaste, your hand faithful, your tongue truthful, and your heart enlightened." "Let truthfulness and courtesy be your adorning."}

BOOK EXHIBIT NEAR TEMPLE ARRANGED DURING CONVENTION

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

The Library Committee is happy to report that librarian receptivity is far greater than at any previous period. Believers write that they are finding no difficulty in placing books in new libraries.

We should like to avoid all misunderstandings with librarians concerning these gift sets. Therefore, will the believers always interview the head librarian and try to secure her written confirmation that she will accept the books before writing to this committee? We also ask you to try to judge the library needs closely before offering the complete gift set. In less important libraries, we suggest that the librarians are offered the basic set of Foundations of World Unity and Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era. Follow up the circulation of these books before placing additional books on library shelves. In this way, we can meet the book demands where the need and receptivity is greater.

The friends have responded enthusiastically to the appeal for library pioneering, and our activities have more than doubled in the past several months. A total of 84 libraries have accepted books for their shelves. These libraries included 16 college and university libraries, and 68 public libraries. It is gratifying to report that much of this activity was in the Southern and New England States. One of the most outstanding library pioneers is Duncan McNair of the Boston Assembly who has devoted a day a week to library interviews for some time. Through his efforts, a survey was made of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, and about forty libraries were supplied with books. He is now planning a similar survey in Vermont, Maine, and Rhode Island; in cooperation with the North Eastern Regional Committee. He reports excellent receptivity everywhere, and has sent in many written confirmations from librarians, and Library Boards.

The Vermont project will interest other groups. They are planning to place an Exemplum furnished by the Regional Teaching committee in 25 important libraries, and will call on the library committee for other books where the need is greatest. This is a splendid idea, and the library committee is willing to cooperate with other Assemblies or committees undertaking similar projects.

Southern college and university librarians have been most responsive. The librarian at Southern University, Baton Rouge, wrote that there was great interest in the Bahá'í teachings there. A professor in the Department of Religion at Goucher College, Baltimore has asked for two sets of books, one for Goucher College and the other for the University of Virginia. He intends to study the teachings during his summer vacation. Dillard University, Tuskegee Institute, Telledega College, Atlanta University, Fisk University, Miles Memorial College, and others have graciously accepted books.

We are also happy to tell the believers that the Department of Education for the Philippine Islands accepted a set of books for the National Library at Manila. A set of books was sent to Finland recently. Books have also been requested for the Juneau, Alaska, library, and for the Canal Zone Library, Panama. Another request is for the Chinese Embassy at Washington.

This brief summary indicates the widespread activities of library pioneers.

NEW LIBRARY BUILDING AT LOUHELEN SUMMER SCHOOL

Gifts from two believers have made it possible to erect and partially complete a simple library building at Louheilen Ranch. This will fill a real need for even in its unfinished condition it will furnish a quiet place for study which will be greatly appreciated by all attending the school. It is called the Memorial Library.

The school is also grateful for gifts of Bahá’í books which have been made by a few individuals and Assemblies. It is the wish of the committee to build up a good working library to include Bahá’í books and general books for reference in subjects related to the Bahá’í teachings. Gifts of new or used books in good condition will be acceptable.

THE GUARDIAN’S WORDS ABOUT “CHARACTER” BY STANWOOD COBB

The following excerpt is reprinted with Shoghi Effendi’s permission, from a letter written to Prof. Cobb on January 9, 1939:

“He has noted with particular satisfaction the references made to the Master and the Cause, and trusts this will serve to attract the attention of many thoughtful leaders to the Faith, and awaken widespread and genuine interest in the teachings. A single seed when planted at the right time and the right way will take root, grow well, and yield abundant fruitage. Your book, likewise, is of such simple and beautiful expression, and presents the spiritual ideals and teachings of the Cause in an indirect but most effective and convincing language that every serious and unbiased reader is bound to be impressed by its perusal, and to be stimulated to investigate and study the Cause. This volume represents your experiences of many years as a Bahá’í, and is the fruit of your labors as a student of the teachings in the field of educational philosophy. May it serve to inspire the educationalists of our time to assist in spreading and vindicating those spiritual ideals which Bahá’u’lláh and the Master have set as the highest and noblest goal of every education.”

INTER-AMERICA REFERENCE LIBRARY

The following works have been selected for the new Inter-America Reference Library, established by Mrs. Mathews at Colorado Springs. They are recommended to believers preparing themselves for later teaching work in the Inter-America field:

The People and Politics of Latin America, by Prof. Williams.

The Other Spanish Christ, by John A. MacKay.

Union Now, by Clarence K. Streit.

Venezuela, by Erma Ferguson.

Guatemala, by Erma Ferguson.

Handbook of Latin American Studies, edited by Lewis Hanke.

Some, if not most of these titles, can doubtless be found in the local public library.

The above are new titles. The Committee also refers particularly to A Traveller’s Narrative, translated by Edward G. Browne from the manuscript given him by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as an accurate source of information about the early days of the Faith. Per copy, $2.50.

CREDENTIALS FOR TRAVELING BELIEVERS

In view of the fact that an imposter, claiming to be a Bahá’í, has recently visited several communities and obtained funds from believers, it is again pointed out that traveling believers should have credentials from their local Assembly or, if they are isolated believers or members of unorganized groups, credentials from the National Assembly. In cases of doubt, local Assemblies and groups should always request credentials from visitors.

BRaille TRANSCRIPTIONS

This Committee reports the helpful work being undertaken by the Cleveland group of volunteer workers who are transcribing into Braille for the blind, and proof-reading and binding the transcriptions.

This group, which is composed of members of the Cleveland community, have organized to establish a Reserve Braille Library where transcriptions of some of the smaller pamphlets can be held in readiness to send out on short notice, for loan or donation, to blind believers or seekers.

Mr. A. C. Engelder is the organizer of this group and the teacher of book-binding. The proof-readers of Braille literature are Mrs. Turner and Mr. Adolph Feher.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

IN MEMORIAM

It is clear and evident that when the veils that conceal the realities of the manifestations of the Names and Attributes of God, may of all created things visible and invisible, have been rent asunder, nothing except the Sign of God will remain—a sign which He, Himself, hath placed within these realities. This sign will endure as long as is the wish of the Lord thy God, the Lord of the heavens and of the earth. If such be the blessings conferred on all created things, how superior must be the destiny of the true believer, whose existence and life are to be regarded as the originating purpose of all creation.—BABA'U'L-LAH.

Mrs. Margaret Campbell, Los Angeles.

Miss Lillian James, Chicago.

THE NINETEEN DAY FEAST FOR ISOLATED BELIEVERS

The isolated believer must celebrate the Nineteen Day Feast alone unless he is fortunate enough to be able to meet with a believer in a nearby city or town. When we are alone the Cause is apt to take secondary importance in our daily lives, but when we know that we are a part of the great body of isolated believers all celebrating the Feasts there is an added warmth and nearness in the hour devoted to it. It might be advisable to recall some of the instructions about Nineteen Day Feasts and their observance.

"Only members of the Bahá’í Community, and visiting Bahá’ís from other Communities, may attend these meetings, but young people of less than twenty-one years of age, who have studied the teachings and declared their intention of joining the Community on reaching the age of twenty-one may also attend.

"Regular attendance at the Nineteen Day Feast is incumbent upon every Bahá’í, illness or absence from the city being the only justification for absence. Believers are expected to arrange their personal affairs so as to enable them to observe the Bahá’í Calendar." (Baha’i News, Aug., 1925.)

Shoghi Effendi has said that the Bahá’ís should regard this Feast as the very heart of their spiritual activity, their participation in the mystery of the Holy Utterance, their steadfast unity one with another in universality raised high above the limitations of race, class, nationality, sect, and personality, and their privilege of contributing to the power of the Cause in the realm of collective action.

"Their privilege of contributing to the power of the Cause in the realm of collective action," can be the thought of every isolated believer as he celebrates the Nineteen Day Feast. Throughout the country and world the Communities celebrate the Feasts but great power could be added if the hundreds of isolated believers would join them in praying for the establishment of the World Order of Bahá’ulláh.

The Spiritual Assembly of Wilmette kindly shares with the friends the following news:

"During the Convention this last year, Mrs. Mineola Hannen who has served as housing chairman for several years was able to arrange for the accommodations of 125 friends in the homes of 34 Wilmette residents. After the Convention, each of these residents was personally contacted and thanked for her and his hospitality and kindness to the visiting Bahá’ís and tactfully given an opportunity to express any opinion.

"We were delighted when they all, without exception remarked upon how happy their relations with the Bahá’ís had been and how exceptionally gracious and courteous they felt the Bahá’ís were always.

"As a result of these contacts the Wilmette Community decided to invite those who had indicated a special interest to a special meeting at the Hannen home near the tower of peace.

"On the evening of June 2nd, such a meeting was held when 39 guests and resident Bahá’ís attended. Mr. Ed. Struven introduced the subject with a brief talk on the Temple. Mrs. Corinne True and Mrs. Maxwell carried on the theme with short talks on the Teachings.

"The social period which followed when refreshments were served was opened to questions from the visitors and guests. Their response was of interest and the Community feels that the meeting was successful.

"Another such meeting will be held shortly for those who showed a particular interest in the Cause and more particularly for some of those who had been invited but expressed regret because of a previous engagement. Some of these we know to be genuinely interested.

"We expect a fireside group to materialize from these contacts. Many of the friends who attended the Convention assisted with these contacts, probably unknown to themselves."

A number of interesting letters have been received by Mrs. Lorol Schopfholder testifying to the quickening effect of the teaching work she has carried on in Finland, Lapland and other countries of Northern Europe. From a letter written by a clergyman is quoted: "Allah-u-Abáh. I wish you all the greatest blessings in the Prophet’s name. You (addressing the Green Acre believers) are so fortunate to be gathered together to discuss the most important present-day affairs under the leadership of those inspired through the grace of the Prophet. It is now a year since my eyes opened to behold these great truths (Miss Kruka first gave him the Message) and since then I have been a thirsty deer searching deeply in order to quench the thirst."

A gathering at Green Acre was privileged to hear details about Mrs. Schopflocher's unusual experiences, which it is hoped will be made available in a later issue of BAHÁ’I NEWS.

From Mrs. Bertha Matthiesen comes a letter relating recent phases of her teaching activities in Europe.

"Following Shoghi Effendi's instructions I spent three months in the North, one month in Copenhagen, two in Stockholm, and due to a hotel strike, only a few days in Norway. The North offers opportunity for a more or less free teaching field. It takes long residence, however, to accomplish satisfactory work.

"I returned to Budapest via Vienna and on the evening of April 21, in Alag, Hungary, we established a Spiritual Assembly. There were present twelve believers, one of whom is a minor. There is a wonderful opportunity for a worker in Hungary, but it should be one who understands European conditions.

"After Budapest I remained in Vienna for a month and was often with the friends, individually of course."

From the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles we have this news of the annual election.

"Immediately following the election, the N.S.A. met to elect its officers with the result that it is now organized as follows:

Chairman: Miss Grace Challis.
Vice-Chairman: Mr. Arthur Norton.
Secretary: Mr. David Hofman.
Treasurer: Mrs. K. V. Brown; Mr. Balyuzi, Mrs. Langdon-Davies, Mr. Lee, Mr. Sugar, Miss Wellby.

"The Ridvan Feast on Saturday evening was a happy occasion when the friends were entertained by Lady Blomfield at her home in Hampstead."

The N.S.A. of Australia and New Zealand reports the sessions of the Second Annual Summer School.

"The second Bahá’í Summer School in Australia was held at Bolton Place, Yerrinbool, from January 7 to 15, 1939. Friends from other States arrived at Yerrinbool on Jan. 7th, and those from Sydney on January 8th. It was most gratifying that there was an increase of numbers over last year. On Sunday, January 8th all friends gathered at Bolton Place at 11 a.m. The Chairman, Mr. Stanley Bolton, opened the first session, asking Mr. O. Whitaker to recite the Prayer for all Nations, after which Mrs. Mariette Bolton spoke and extended a welcome to all present. The following cable from our Beloved Guardian was read:— "Assure attendants Summer School special prayers, signal success, urge intensely study Teachings, deepen spirit Bahá’í Fellowship, extend scope activities. SHOGHILI."

"Our Guardian's words of encouragement and assurance of his prayers were received with gratitude and joy by the friends. The chairman then read greetings from the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia and New Zealand, the local Spiritual Assembly of Sydney, also from Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Dunn, the Australian Pioneers, Miss Margaret Stevenson, Miss D. Burns, Miss E. A. Blundell and Miss F. de Lisle of Auckland, New Zealand; Mrs. Miller of Perth, W. A.; Mrs. M. Dixon and Mrs. Wheeler of Melbourne, Vic.; Miss Elfie Baker of Goldsbrough and Mrs. M. Almond of Adelaide, S. A.; Miss Greta Lamprell and Miss Jensen of Hobart, Tasmania. Mrs. M. Dewing of Auckland, N. Z.; Miss Dorothy Dugdale and Miss Ethel Dawe of Adelaide, who attended the Summer School, personally gave greetings and love from their respective communities. The meeting then closed with a Prayer for Unity. Afterwards luncheon was served.

"On January 8th at 2.30 p.m., the friends and local residents assembled in the Yerrinbool Public Hall where a lecture entitled, 'The Bahá’í Message to Mankind' was given by Mrs. O. Routh of Sydney. Although it was a very hot day everyone listened most attentively. The chairman, Mr. O. Whitaker, invited all visitors to attend the Summer School sessions. Bahá’í literature was distributed. Afterwards, outside the Hall, all gathered to be photographed.

"Some of the friends in Australia and New Zealand who were unable to attend the Summer School kindly contributed to the programme by sending in papers on Bahá’í subjects which were read and much enjoyed. Those sending in papers were: Mr. Miller, Mr. David Miller, Mrs. M. Almond, Mrs. Dixon, Miss M. Rowling, Miss Greta Lamprell, Miss F. de Lisle, Miss D. Burns, Miss E. A. Blundell.

"The session began each morning at 9.30 a.m. with a devotional period followed by the subjects and helpful discussion. On Monday evening, January 9th, the friends visited the home of a local resident. During this happy time many subjects on the Summer School Programme were discussed, closing with prayer.

"On Tuesday afternoon, January 10th, the friends journeyed to Mittagong, seven miles from Yerrinbool, where they had been invited by an investigator to attend a Conference of the Student Christian Movement, held at Frensham College, one of the State's leading colleges for Ladies. There were 300 attending the Conference, and the Bahá’ís were asked and answered many questions on the Bahá’í teachings. The Conference was also told of the coming of Miss Martha L. Root to Sydney. In the evening the Bahá’ís were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dains of Bowral, where they had invited some 20 people, among whom were Clergy and a representative of the local newspaper. Here again questions were asked, during the evening discussion, which were answered by the Bahá’ís.

"On Wednesday, January 11th, at 3.30 p.m. the friends gathered at the home of a local resident to hear a radio broadcast by Miss Ethel Dawe of Adelaide. In the evening a round table discussion took place, followed by prayers.

"On Friday evening the local residents held a Social in their Hall to which the Bahá’ís were invited. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all.

"On Sunday, January 14th at 10 a.m. the children of Yerrinbool residents were invited to the Bahá’í 'Rose Garden' Sunday School, held at Bolton Place. Some of the visiting Bahá’ís spoke to the children. On Sunday afternoon a picnic was held at which over 60 friends were present. This brought the 1939 Bahá’í Summer School to a close in the spirit of love and harmony in which the session began. All those who have had this privilege of time set apart for 'intense' study of the 'Teachings' will go away strengthened to 'extend their scope of activities,' which is our beloved Guardian's desire and prayer for us all."
Dearly-beloved co-workers:

A triple call, clear-voiced, insistent and inescapable, summons to the challenge, all members of the American Bahá’í community, at this, the most fateful hour in their history. The first is the voice, distant and piteous, of those sister communities which now, alas, are fettered by the falling chains of religious orthodoxy and isolated through the cruel barriers set up by a rampant nationalism. The second is the plea, no less vehement and equally urgent, of those peoples and nations of the New World, whose vast and unexplored territories await to be warmed by the light and swept into the orbit of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. The third, more universal and stirring than either of the others, is the call of humanity itself crying out for deliverance at a time when the tide of mounting evils has destroyed its equilibrium and is now strangling its very life.

These imperative calls of Bahá’í duty the American believers can immediately if only partially answer. Their present status, their circumscribed resources, delbar them, however great their eagerness, from responding completely and decisively to the full implications of this threefold obligation. They can neither, individually nor through their concerted efforts, impose directly their will upon those into whose hands the immediate destinies of their persecuted brethren are placed. Nor are they as yet capable of launching a campaign of such magnitude as could capture the imagination and arouse the conscience of mankind, and thereby insure the immediate and full redress of those grievances from which their helpless co-religionists in both the East and the West are suffering. They cannot moreover hope to wield at the present time in the councils of nations an influence commensurate with the stupendous claims advanced, or adequate to the greatness of the Cause proclaimed, by the Author of their Faith. Nor can they assume a position or exercise such responsibilities as would enable them by their acts and decisions to reverse the process which is urging so tragically the decline of human society and its institutions.

And yet, though their influence be at the present hour indecisive and their divinely-conferred authority unrecognized, the role they can play in both alleviating the hardships that afflict their brethren and in attenuating the ills that torment mankind is none the less considerable and far-reaching. By the range and liberality of their contributions to mitigate the distress of the bereaved, the exiled and the imprisoned: by the persistent, the wise and judicial intervention of their elected representatives through the authorities concerned; by a clear and convincing exposition, whenever circumstances are propitious, of the issues involved: by a vigorous defence of the rights and liberties denied; by an accurate and dignified presentation of the events that have transpired: by every manner of encouragement which their sympathies may suggest, or their means permit, or their consciences dictate, to succor the outcast and the impoverished; and above all by their tenacious adherence to, and wide proclamation of, those principles, laws, ideals, and institutions which their disabled fellow-believers are unable to affirm or publicly espouse; and lastly, by the energetic prosecution of those tasks which their oppressed fellow-workers are forbidden to initiate or conduct, the privileged community of the American Bahá’ís can play a conspicuous part in the great drama involving so large a company of their unemancipated brethren in the Asiatic, the European and African continents.

Their duties towards mankind in general are no less distinct and vital. Their impotence to stem the tide of onrushing calamities, their seeming helplessness in face of those cataclysmic forces that are to convulse human society, do not in the least detract from the urgency of their unique mission, nor exonerate them from those weighty responsibilities which they alone can and must assume. Humanity, helpless and impotent, is admittedly hovering on the edge of an awful abyss, ready to precipitate itself into that titanic struggle, that cruel whose chastening fires alone can and will weld its antagonistic elements of race, class, religion and nation into one coherent system, one world commonwealth. "The hour is approaching," is Bahá'u'lláh's own testimony, "when the most great commission will have appeared . . . I swear by God! The promised day is come, the day when tormenting trials will have surged above your heads, and beneath your feet, saying: 'Taste ye, what your hands have wrought.'" Not ours to question the almighty wisdom or fathom the inscrutable ways of Him in whose hands the ultimate destiny of an unregenerate yet potentially glorious race must lie. Ours rather is the duty to believe that the world-wide community of the Most Great Name, and in particular, at the present time its vanguard in North America, however buffeted by the powerful currents of these troublous times, and however keen their awareness of the inevitability of the final eruption, can, if they will, rise to the level of their calling and discharge their functions, both in the period which is witnessing the confusion and breakdown of human institutions, and in the ensuing epoch during which the shattered basis of a dismembered society is to be recast, and its forces reshaped, re-directed and unified. With the age that is still unborn, with its herculean tasks and unsuspected glories, we need not concern ourselves at present. It is to the fierce struggle, the imperious duties, the distinctive contributions which the present generation of Bahá'ís are summoned to undertake and render that I feel we should, at this hour, direct our immediate and anxious attention. Though powerless to avert the impending contest the followers of Bahá'u'lláh in the American continent in their efforts to completely emancipate their fellow-Bahá'ís on the one hand, and to speedily rehabilitate the fortunes of their fellow-men on the other, be in the main unsurmountable, such impediments cannot as yet be said to exist that can frustrate their efforts to fully discharge the second duty now incumbent upon them in the inter-continental sphere of Bahá'í teaching. The field, in all its vastness and fertility, is wide open and near at hand. The harvest is ripe. The hour is over-due. The signal has been given. The spiritual forces, mysteriously released, are already operating with increasing momentum, unchallenged and unchecked. Victory, speedy and unqualified, is assured to whosoever will arise and respond to this urgent and vital call. In this field, as in no other, the American believers can most easily evince the full force of their latent energies, can exercise in their plentitude their conspicuous talents, and can rise to the highest level of their God-given opportunities.

Fired by their zeal, their love for and faith in Bahá'u'lláh, armed with that Holy Charter, wherein 'Abdu'l-Bahá's mandate investing them with their world mission is inscribed; piloted through the instrumentality of those agencies which a divine, a smoothly functioning administrative Order has providentially placed at their disposal: disciplined and invigorated by those immutable verities, spiritual principles and administrative regulations that distinguish their religious beliefs, govern their individual conduct and regulate their community life; aspiring to emulate the example of those heroes and martyrs, the narrative of whose exploits they have admired and pondered, it behooves all members of the American Bahá'í community to gird themselves as never before to the task of fittingly playing their part in the enactment of the opening scene of the First Act of that superb Drama whose theme is no less than the spiritual conquest of both the Eastern and Western Hemispheres. Their immediate task, under the Seven Year Plan, the object of which is the establishment of a minimum of one Bahá'í center in each of the Republics of Middle and South America, has now been gloriously ushered in through the settlement of one pioneer in most of the Central American Republics, and bids fair to be recognised by posterity as the original impulse imparted to an enterprise that will go round the world. That impulse must, as time goes by, communicate itself to the farthest extremities of Latin America, and must be reinforced in every manner, by as many of the American believers as possible. The broader the basis of this campaign, the deeper its roots, the finer the flower into which it shall eventually blossom. That its call may be heeded, that its implications may be recognized and its potentialities progressively unfold, is my earnest prayer, and the supreme longing of my heart.

Your true brother,

“FULFIL UNFLINCHINGLY THE REQUIREMENTS”

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dear and valued co-workers:

The readiness of your Assembly, as expressed in your recently called message, to transfer the National Bahá'í Secretariat to the vicinity of the Temple in Wilmette has evoked within me the deepest feelings of thankfulness and joy. Your historic decision, so wise and timely, so surprising in its suddenness, so far-reaching in its consequences, is one that I cannot but heartily and unreservedly applaud. To each one of your brethren in the Faith, throughout the United States and Canada, who are witnessing, from day to day and at an ever-hastening speed, the approaching completion of their National House of Worship, the great Mother Temple of the West, your resolution to establish within its hallowed precincts and in the heart of the North American continent the Administrative Seat of their beloved Faith cannot but denote henceforward a closer association, a more constant communion, and a higher degree of co-ordination between the two primary agencies providentially ordained for the enrichment of their spiritual life and for the conduct and regulation of their administrative affairs. To the far-flung Baha'i communities of East and West, most of which are being increasingly proscribed and ill-treated, and none of which can claim to have had a share of the dual blessings which a specially designed and constructed House of Worship and a fully and efficiently functioning Administrative Order invariably confer, the concentration in a single locality of what will come to be regarded as the fountain-head of the community's spiritual life and what is already recognized as the mainspring of its administrative activities, signals the launching of yet another phase in the slow and imperceptible emergence, in these declining times, of the model Baha'i community—a community divinely ordained, organically united, clear-visioned, vibrant with life, and whose very purpose is regulated by the twin directing principles of the worship of God and of service to one's fellow-men.

The decision you have arrived at is an act that befittingly marks the commencement of your allotted term of stewardship in service to the Cause of Baha'u'llah. Moreover, it significantly coincides with the inauguration of that world mission of which the settlement of Baha'i pioneers in the virgin territories of the North American continent has been but a prelude. That such a decision may speedily and without the slightest hitch be carried into effect is the deepest longing of my heart. That those who have boldly carried so weighty a resolution may without pause or respite continue to labor and build up, as circumstance permit, around this administrative nucleus such accessories as the machinery of a fast evolving administrative order, functioning under the shadow of, and in such close proximity to, the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, must demand, is the object of my incessant and fervent prayer. That such a step, momentous as it is, may prove the starting point for acts of still greater renown and richer possibilities that will leave their distinct mark on the third year of the Seven Year Plan is a hope which I, together with all those who are eagerly following its progress, fondly and confidently cherish.

The American believers, while straining to accomplish befittingly this particular task, must simultaneously brace themselves for another sublime effort to discharge, ere the present year draws to a close, their manifold responsibilities allotted to them under the Seven Year Plan. The placing of yet another contract for the casting of the ornamentation of the First Story of the Temple, the permanent settlement of the six remaining Republics of Central America, and the extension of continual support, both material and moral, to those weaker States, Provinces and Republics that have been recently incorporated in the body of the Faith, combine to offer, at this hour when the fate of civilization trembles in the balance, the boldest and gravest challenge that has ever faced the community of the American believers both in the propagative and administrative spheres of Baha'i activity. In the field of pioneer teaching, and particularly in connection with the opening of the Republics of Haiti, Salvador, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Dominica and Guatemala, the utmost encouragement should at all times be vouchsafed by the elected representatives of the community to those who, out of the abundance of their hearts, and in direct response to the call of their Faith and the dictates of their conscience, have renounced their comforts, fled their homes, and hazard ed their fortunes for the sake of bringing into operation the majestic Plan of 'Abdu'l-Baha, while special support should be extended to those who ap-

In closing I wish to express the Guardian's unbounded satisfaction at the most gratifying news of the opening up of the three Central American Republics of Cuba, Panama and Honduras to the light of the Cause, and to urge your Assembly, on his behalf, to make a special, and indeed supreme effort for the settlement, in the course of this year, of the six remaining Republics of Central America. Whatever the cost and sacrifices which such admittedly difficult campaign would entail, and however tentative the efforts of those pioneers who offer themselves for service in these religiously conservative, politically unsettled, and climatically inhospitable countries, the one supreme and immediate objective is to insure laying down, ere the termination of the current year, and in each one of these Republics such foundations, rudimentary though they may be, as would provide future Bahá’í teachers working in these regions such means and openings as would considerably facilitate their task of further extending the scope and consolidating the foundations of the Cause in Central America.

LETTERS FROM THE GUARDIAN

The Guardian wishes me to express his approval of the budget of $150,000 fixed by the N. S. A. for teaching work and Temple construction during the current Bahá’í Year, and trusts that the individual believers as well as all the local Assemblies will cooperate in raising that sum, and thus make it possible for your Assembly to carry on, regularly and uninterruptedly, its twofold national tasks in this third year of the Seven Year Plan.

The Guardian also welcomes your Assembly's decision to maintain the plan of holding public meetings and regional conferences in various parts of the country, and also views with approval your Assembly's decision to include the city of Toronto in the schedule of the N. S. A. meetings for this year.

In closing I wish to express the Guardian's unbounded satisfaction at the most gratifying news of the opening up of the three Central American Republics of Cuba, Panama and Honduras to the light of the Cause, and to urge your Assembly, on his behalf, to make a special, and indeed supreme effort for the settlement, in the course of this year, of the six remaining Republics of Central America. Whatever the cost and sacrifices which such admittedly difficult campaign would entail, and however tentative the efforts of those pioneers who offer themselves for service in these religiously conservative, politically unsettled, and climatically inhospitable countries, the one supreme and immediate objective is to insure laying down, ere the termination of the current year, and in each one of these Republics such foundations, rudimentary though they may be, as would provide future Bahá’í teachers working in these regions such means and openings as would considerably facilitate their task of further extending the scope and consolidating the foundations of the Cause in Central America.

Whoever feels the urge to volunteer for pioneer work in either one of these apar to be best qualified for the strenuous labors which pioneering under such exacting circumstances demands. Care should be exercised lest any hindrance, should, for any reason be placed in the way of those who have, whether young or old, rich or poor, so spontaneously dedicated themselves to so urgent and holy a mission.

Towards this newly-appointed enterprise a more definite reorientation is needed. To its purposes a more complete dedication is demanded. In its fortunes a more widespread concern is required. For its further consolidation and speedy fulfillment a larger number and a greater variety of participants are indispensable. For its success a more abundant flow of material resources should be assured.

Let the privileged few, the ambassadors of the Message of Bahá’u’lláh, bear in mind His words as they go forth on their errands of service to His Cause. "It behoveth whosoever willeth to journey for the sake of God, and whose intention is to proclaim His Word and quicken the dead, to bathe himself with the waters of detachment, and to adorn his temple with the ornaments of resignation and submission. Let trust in God be his shield, and reliance on God his provision, and the fear of God his rainment. Let patience be his helper, and praise-worthy conduct his succourer, and kindly deeds his army. Then will the concourse on high sustain him. Then will the denizens of the Kingdom of Names march forth with him, and the banners of Divine guidance and inspiration be unfurled on his right hand and before him."

Faced with such a challenge, a community that has scaled thus far such peaks of enduring achievements can neither falter nor recoil. Confident in its destiny, reliant on its God-given power, fortified by the consciousness of its past victories, galvanized into action at the sight of a slowly disrupting civilization, it will—I have no doubt—continue to fulfill unflinchingly the immediate requirements of its task, as-
Central American States should be encouraged to do so and while the N. S. A. is conscientiously bound to facilitate his settlement it has also the right of exercising its own discretion whenever there are a number of similar applicants, through extending special financial support to all those pioneers whom it considers to be best qualified for the task.

This present phase of the inter-continental teaching campaign, coinciding as it does with the steadily rising tide of uncertainty and gloom throughout the world, acquires a special significance, and offers indeed a unique challenge to the community of the American believers, who, as the undisputed "vanguards of the Faith in the West" are now called upon to demonstrate in fields hitherto unexplored and through exploits as yet unrivaled by any of their sister-communities throughout the West, the efficacy of this new saving grace of God revealed in this age through the person of Baha'u'llah.

The Guardian will continue to pray that the members of the American Baha'i community may arise and meet the challenge of the present hour with such audacity, such self-sacrifice and such unflagging determination as truly benefits their incontestably high spiritual position, and in a manner that would evoke the admiration and excite the envy not only of the entire body of their co-religionists, but of the whole unbelieving world outside.

July 4, 1939.

He wishes you now to ask all the newly-incorporated local Assemblies to have a photograph of their Assembly taken and sent through your Assembly to Haifa. These Assembly pictures are needed to accompany the certificates of incorporation when published in the next issue of The Baha'i World.

In closing he wishes me to stress once again the vital importance of the present stage in the collective teaching undertaking of the American believers represented in the opening up and definite settlement of the Central American Republics—which, as emphasized only recently in his cable message to the N. S. A. constitute the chief and immediate teaching objective of the American believers throughout the present Baha'i year. No effort, he feels, should be spared to open up, however tentatively, each of the remaining Central American Republics in the course of the remaining eight months, and every facility and encouragement extended by the N. S. A. to all those who volunteer to settle and work in these territories. Only through such systematic teaching effort, guided by the N. S. A. and collectively supported by the entire body of the friends, can the Inter-American teaching campaign, which ushered in the period of the world spiritual mission of the American believers, forge ahead, be steadily extended in its southward penetration, and the high teaching goal set up by the Seven Year Plan completely attained at the appointed time. Let us take courage, and consecrate our all to the furtherance of this divinely-appointed task.

WORK BEGUN ON TEMPLE MAIN STORY

New Contract Approved By the Guardian

Gallery Section Completed

A mighty achievement has been accomplished by the American Baha'i Community in the completion, by August, 1939, of the external decoration of the gallery section of the House of Worship. Despite rising costs of labor and freight rates during the work, the contract has been completed at a total cost of $125,250, the original estimate having been $125,000. Had these additional costs not been offset by rigorous economy, the final figure would have been about $130,000.

The believers can rejoice that so great a step toward the final goal has been taken. We enter now the final stage in the vast undertaking which, as the Guardian has emphasized, has been before us for not less than thirty years. Undoubtedly spiritual blessings will descend even more abundantly to inspire all our activities for the Faith with the completion of such a large part of the external decoration.

Continuous Construction Imperative

The fundamental meaning of the Seven Year Plan is that it requires, and makes possible a continuous, even accelerating, march toward its two objectives of Teaching and Temple completion. There can be no spiritual depression to interfere with this rapid march, no matter what conditions exist in the social world.

Therefore the plan had been adopted, submitted to the Guardian and approved by him, of continuing Temple construction without interruption throughout the calendar year of 1939. Under a new contract amounting to $10,000, the Earley Studios will complete, by December 31, the ornamentation of the lower one-third of all nine pylons of the main floor of the House of Worship. Other contracts made from time to time thereafter will no doubt bring the external decoration to entire completion well before the end of the First Baha'i Century.

Considerable Saving In Contracts For Models and Molds

The final estimated cost of these two contracts for making the models and molds called for by the external design of the first, or main, story, is $40,000, or $10,000 less than the original estimate, due in large measure to the fact that the Temple Trustees found it financially possible to place both these contracts at practically the same time.

These two contracts apply directly to the external decoration of the first story and bring the work to the point where the units can be cast and applied to the surface of the structure. From now on, beginning with the modest contract for $10,000 already reported, the results of this expenditure of $40,000 will produce results visible to the world.

Donations of $13,000 Required

To meet the terms of the new contract, and at the same time carry out necessary filling and leveling of grounds, an amount estimated at $13,357.94 is required through contributions to the National Fund between now and December 31. That sum is much less than was set up for Temple construction for the period May 1 to December 31, 1939 in the current Annual Budget. The Budget was in fact adopted to provide for the necessary expenses of Teaching and Temple, if the Budget is maintained, there will be no occasion for special appeals.

However, in advance of receipt of funds sufficient to maintain the Budget, the National Spiritual Assembly reports that it has assumed the obligation to meet Temple construction costs by December 31 to the extent of $13,357.94, in full confidence that the guidance of the Guardian, and the readiness of the Baha'i community to sacrifice for the fulfilment of the Seven Year Plan, will discharge this obligation to the penny.

The Guardian's Approval

The Guardian's approval, conveyed in a cabled message received August 7, 1939, is as follows—

"Delighted approve placing contract (for) pylons (of) main story. Praying response (of) believers (will) insure uninterrupted completion entire edifice. Loving gratitude."—Shoghi
TEACHING ACTIVITIES

Since Convention time, when the great news was released of the completion of the initial phase of the Seven Year Plan, our Bahá’í pioneers have pressed forward irresistibly in their spiritual quest for the North American continent.

Miss Honor Kempton, who stopped in Juneau, Alaska, from April 18th until May 30th, has now moved to Anchorage, where she is making arrangements to open a circulating library. Her whole journey has been an adventure in stimulating and important contacts, including Alaska’s most famous aviator, the owner of a Bank in Fairbanks; an Engineer of Mines who worked on the Temple in the early days; a Finnish woman to whom the Faith came as thrilling news, of interest not only to herself but to her brother still living in Finland. In Seward Miss Kempton attended the marriage of a boat friend from Juneau, on route to her new home in McKinley National Park. "I got up early one morning of her wedding day and went to her sisterroom and read Bahá’í Tablets on Marriage to her. ... Later she told me how it had moved her and had made her think." In Anchorage Miss Kempton has received the friendly interest and advice of the newspaper publisher, the president of the First National Bank, and a number of others. She has met Sidney Laurence, Alaska’s famous artist, a member of the Royal Academy with work in the Louvre. She has also visited Palmer, in the Matanuska Valley colony, where literature was presented to Dr. Albrecht, one of the colony’s best-known pioneers, and to the minister of the United Protestant Church. Perhaps Miss Kempton’s happiest occasion was her first fireside meeting, when she spoke at length of the Faith to the young woman who manages her apartment building. "I shall never forget my exaltation and joy. I tried to be calm and quiet, but oh, how I was seething inside for pure joy. ... I am hoping she will be the first Alaskan Bahá’í ... As she left she turned and said: 'This is my birthday and I think you have given me the most beautiful birthday gift I have ever received.'"

In connection with this stirring report of Alaska, mention should be made of the liberal offer of Mr. and Mrs. Rafollah Y. Motahedeh of New York City, to defray the expenses of a pioneer in Alaska for a year.

Another most important Alaska news item is that Miss Betty Becker of Kansas City sailed for Juneau the end of July, after a visit to the Geyserville Summer School. She will settle there as the second pioneer for Alaska.

The pioneer work in Canada has received tremendous impetus through the settlement of Miss Doris Skinner in Calgary in April; Mr. Rowland Estall in Winnipeg in May; Mrs. Beulah S. Proctor and daughter in Halifax in April, followed later by the Grenville Wades of Moncreif; a cross-continent business and teaching trip of Mr. Emeric Sala; the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard King to Winnipeg and Regina; and new plans of the Regional Committee of Eastern Canada and Newfoundland for teaching in the Maritime Provinces.

Three weeks after his arrival in Winnipeg, Mr. Rowland Estall wrote that these were weeks "of the most rapid and astounding development of a Bahá’í community that I have ever witnessed. Two hours after I arrived I met Emeric Sala who had come here from Montreal the day before. Half an hour later we were talking to Miss Lilian Tomlinson, in her home, about the Cause and the future development here just as though we were any other Teaching Committee, meeting to consider ways and means for a teaching campaign in a long-established Bahá’í city." Using contacts made by Mrs. Sylvia King "during her previous visit in which she laid such a remarkable foundation for this work." Mr. Sala arranged a lecture before the Phoenix Club on May 31st. Charles Clay, literary editor of the Free Press, "was chairman and gave one of the best introductory talks on the Faith I have heard from anyone." Mr. Estall spoke briefly on the principles. "Towards the end of the meeting in walked Sylvia and Leonard King who had just arrived, so Sylvia wound up a successful evening with a talk on Bahá’í methods of attaining these objectives. You can hardly imagine the impression it created in the minds of the audience to have three speakers, from Montreal, San Francisco and Vancouver respectively, converge on their little club in one evening to tell them about the Bahá’í Faith. I felt as though Bahá’ílách was taking no chances, like a generalmarshalling all his forces at one point for a simultaneous and decisive attack which could only result in victory. Winnipeg was 'tapped' for the Faith that night. Two students are about ready to accept the Faith, and will be the first to join with Mr. Estall in forming a Bahá’í Group. He writes: "My earlier doubts and hesitation, even at this short distance, appalled me!"

Other reports from Mr. Sala and Mrs. King describe the pioneer work which was next arranged by these pioneer workers. One day was spent in Regina by the Kings, during which plans were completed for a public lecture at the Hotel Saskatchewan, with Mr. A. T. Hunter, past president of the Institute of International Affairs, as chairman. A telephone call to an interested student in Saskatoon laid the basis for Mr. Sala’s visit there also, on June 19th. Through a chain of circumstances after his arrival, he was invited to speak to nine members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. "I knew that I was assisted, for these intelligent young men and women listened with real interest to the most challenging claims of the 19th Century’s Revelation. They took all the pamphlets I had and expressed interest in a study group."

The lecture in Regina, which was announced over the radio, was attended by about fifty people, "and it was one of the most successful meetings I have ever had." Mr. Sala continues. "I spoke about forty minutes, beginning with an indirect approach, but feeling, as I went on about the station and the mission of Bahá’í, that the audience continued to follow me and that the challenge made met with no resentment. The question period lasted another forty minutes. We had about 100 pamphlets on hand. Every one was taken."

So far as teaching records are concerned, no public Bahá’í work has ever been done previously in these two cities of Saskatchewan.

Miss Doris Skinner secured a position within two weeks after her arrival in Calgary, Alberta. Both Mr. Estall and Mr. Sala have stopped over for fireside meetings and contacts. An isolated believer in the southern part of Alberta, Miss Elizabeth Conlon, has offered to invite a group for Miss Skinner to teach. The latter writes: "Really I don’t know why more Bahá’ís don’t do pioneer work; it is quite the most exciting experience I have ever had. I wouldn’t go home again for anything."

Mrs. Beulah Proctor has been joined in Halifax, Nova Scotia, by Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Wade, transferred from Montreal. "Mr. Wade has made some excellent contacts with professors of the University here which will materialize in the fall when classes open again, for he has been invited to give some round table talks to the men." In connection with a new position, Mrs. Proctor spent ten days in Liverpool, making many contacts. "I should say that there are about twelve people really interested in the Cause there... One man, a chef in a small place where I went to eat, accepted the Cause as soon as I had finished telling him the story... I have been invited to give a talk about the Bahá’í Faith to the Women’s Institute later on and also to give a talk to men and women of the town some Sunday afternoon."

Teaching in Hamilton, Ontario, has continued through the efforts of the Toronto Assembly with Mrs. Mabel Ives and Mrs. Mary Barton, resulting in the first declared Bahá’í, with at least four others "on the way." Mrs. Barton writes: "There is a great joy and thrill in being out in the pioneer teaching field, indescribably rewarding; but certainly it makes one tremendously humble about one’s own poor efforts in relation to the importance and greatness of the work, and without turning constantly to Bahá’ulláh, one couldn’t go on, for there is no adequate sufficiency in one’s own strength and capacity."

"The friends will be happy to know that through the generosity of one of the believers, Mrs. Ives will be able to continue her teaching work uninterrupted for another year."

Our pioneers of Providence, Rhode Island, Mr. and Mrs. Don T. McNally, are now holding Wednesday fireside meetings for a young group. Contact with the radio station has resulted in a suggestion from its managers that "we bring talks on science, religion and education, and they would try to introduce the Cause from that angle. They are from Chicago and have seen the Temple. We are trying to arrange for a Temple display in October... The experience of coming here has been the most glorious adventure of our lives and we are now so fully aware of the power of Bahá’ulláh and of our inability to do anything ourselves... One really must get out in the world to know the real value of being a Bahá’í and experiencing the fellowship that exists within those sacred twelve principles."

Mr. and Mrs. William Sears are now well established in Salt Lake City where they have recently purchased a home. Mr. Sears has been made assistant manager of radio station KUTA in Salt Lake City. Recent Bahá’í visitors have included Mrs. Sylvia King, who spent twelve days, and Mrs. Helen Bishop, who spoke before the young people’s group at the Unitarian Church, "We love Salt Lake City and feel that a slow beginning is a firm ending. So far I have a small list of about fifteen who have been given a picture of the Cause... We expect in the fall to do some extensive radio work. Until then we will continue doing ground work."

Miss Helen Griffing, in Reno, Nevada, has had the assistance of three Bahá’í teachers, Mrs. Mamie Sebo, Mrs. Helen Bishop, and Miss Joy Allen. "For a pioneer who is supposed to be enduring suffering and hardships I’m having the time of my life." Excellent contacts are being made among all classes of people, and it is reported that Miss Griffing already has many friends, as she is taking an active part in community life. Three of these new friends attended the Geyserville Summer School with Miss Griffing in July. From Charleston, West Virginia, come the first reports from Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Dahl. Preliminary contacts are being made, and books have been accepted by the YWCA library. "After we have become more settled the way will undoubtedly open for the institution of a coordinated effort... Remember West Virginia is your home."

Miss Nyeo Grace Bissell, who has settled in Rutland, Vermont, reported in April that "contacts have been made with the city librarian, the newspaper editor, and the Zonta Club, as well as with several private individuals." She continues, "I am overwhelmed when I think of the great bounty of being allowed to come to Vermont. I love this State and even today, with a heavy snowfall—unseasonably late—it is glorious to me."

This sampling of the reports which are flowing into the Teaching Committee from all parts of America, not only from pioneer teachers, but from the whole army of Bahá’í’s followers, is a striking proof of the confirmation vouchsafed to Bahá’ís in this chaotic time. Almost alone among peoples, we who are dedicated to the unfolding of the Divine Plan, have reason to anticipate the future with eagerness. For these are the very words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, addressed to us in the Divine Plan: ‘The full measure of your success is as yet unrevealed, its significance still unapprehended. Ere long, ye will, with your own eyes, witness how brilliantly every one of you, even as a shining star, will radiate in the firmament of your country, the light of Divine Guidance, and will bestow upon its people the glory of an everlasting life.”

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE.

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

Since the Convention, several of the plans that were in the air, have become events, and others have been ratified by the National Spiritual Assembly, to be carried out in the coming months.

Three sub-committees have been formed: Eastern States, Middle, and Pacific Coast area, respectively. These co-workers will discover contacts among the Pan-American societies, which are reaching out to our southern neighbors, and fostering good will or material reciprocity.

In August, Miss Eva Nicklin, cooperating with the Administrative Order, will settle in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, as a permanent resident. Mr. Philip Marangello is leaving for Havana; and, for at least one year, will advance the New World Order in Cuba. Mr. Gerard Shute, now of Toronto, has left for Guatemala.

In Mexico City, Mr. Pedro Espinosa, and the friends, are working on the translations into Spanish of Some Answered Questions; Foundations of World Unity; Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá; Bahá’í Procedure. The booklet of Prayers may be bought from the Publishing Society or from the Assembly in Mexico.

Our representative to Panama, Mr. Mathew Kaszub, is gaining newspaper publicity of excellent type, and is giving a series of lectures in the School of Arts and Trades. We are watching the post for the next page of his refreshing, "Tropical News—published 9 degrees north of the Equator..."
"I had a good announcement in all three newspapers about my lecture in the Theosophical Hall. This was not in the religious section of the paper, so, happily, I was not messed up with the sectarians. The subject was Cycles of Civilization. I went out to Gamboca this afternoon, Sunday, the 4th of June, but my audience had gone to an important funeral, so there were only a few high school children. I also believe in burying the dead! I did talk to a few of the live ones,—who were not following corpses . . ."

In Selano, Nueva Vizcaya, Philippine Islands, Mr. Felix Madella is waiting for the Spanish registration cards to give students in the class. Already, he has petitioned for letterheads printed with the suggested form: "The Philippine Spiritual Assembly, The New Scientific and Spiritual Religion, the Baha'i Teaching, Which is Bringing New Life to a Spiritually Dead World." He writes: "I am proud to inform you that one of my co-workers on the Baha'i Movement will donate at least six hectares of land on a beautiful site on the top of a very low hill and along the sides of a National Road . . . to help us start and push to put up a temporary, semi-permanent building and to buy an adjacent suitable lot for our Reading Baha'i-Room . . ."

From Buenos Aires, comes another letter from Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart, in part, as follows: "May 25th was celebrated as the great, national patriotic holiday of Argentina— the winning of the Revolution against Spain. Early in the morning, a friend and I (Maria Casati of the Baha'i Group) went to see a parade of poor, miserable, exploited Indians that came from Patagonia, and from the northern forests, to beg schools, lands, and food for their tribes. . . . The Committee in charge invited me to meet the Indians and I held a long interview with them, and told them that the great Prophet for the New Age had demanded Justice for them also, and that a new spirit of unity and love was pervading and silently working in all corners of the earth. One Indian said he wanted to talk to me alone, for he is a descendant of an ancient chief of the Incas, and he wanted to tell me of an ancient legend when all mankind would unite and worship the Great Spirit together! . . . His wife, a German woman, soon after I began unfolding the Great Message, interrupted me, saying: 'Yes, I heard of the Bab, of Baha'u'llah, of Abdu'l-Baha in Germany, and have longed to know more of their mission.' They feel the Message must be carried to the Indians of all America and possibly this man can do it!"

"Then last week I was given a book, Dr. Ricardo Rojas, the professor in Latin-America and Spanish literature of the University here, and a famous writer wrote, The Christ Invisible. I read it and found the last few chapters a wonderful prophecy that these are the days of the Apocalypse and Revelations, that chaos is engulfing a wandering humanity and only 'A New Spiritual Messenger and a New Message adapted to this New Age' could save humanity! I, of course, used his book as my introduction and then I gave him the glorious Message, that both the 'New Prophet' and 'The New Spiritual Message' have been given to the world! Well, he was fascinated and then I told him I was soon sailing, he stood up and said, 'No, not yet, for I must know more of them.'"

Shoghi Effendi, in a letter dated May 12, 1939, sends the following instructions through his secretary, "The importance of establishing the Faith in that republic (i.e., Panama) as already stressed by the Guardian in his last general letter, cannot be overemphasized, and whatever the obstacles that may have to be faced by future Baha'i pioneers in that country, the task of insuring the spiritual conquest of that territory, of whose far-reaching possibilities as a radiating center for the diffusion of the light of the Cause throughout Central and South America Abdu'l-Baha has so explicitly written in the Tablets of the Divine Plan, must be vigorously and systematically pursued. . . . In closing, Shoghi Effendi wishes me to stress the all-importance of the teaching work in Central America. While the teaching campaign in South America should be continually and vigorously prosecuted, special attention, he feels, should be directed to Central America, aiming at the permanent establishment of at least one believer in each one of its republics, before the end of the present year."

PARENTS AND TEACHERS

Work Is Worship

Fall study classes for children are soon to be under way. An interesting suggestion comes to us from the Children’s Workshop Community at Biltmore, Holland. Here children of mixed ages, sexes, religions, and social opportunities are gathered in a community life of work, study and play, with partial responsibility in government.

The little citizens have built their own furniture, hot-houses and equipment, and each year raise flowers and vegetables in their gardens.

They learn many languages, being European children, among them Esperanto, which they speak fluently and use as a medium of correspondence with children everywhere.

The natural bents of the children are studied and fostered, and always with an emphasis of cooperation rather than competition.

The success of the experiment is evidenced by the increase in numbers from a mere handful to one hundred and twenty in a short space of time.

This experiment is interesting to Bahá’ís both from the point of view of its cosmopolitan nature, and because of its emphasis on happy, cooperative work. American Bahá’í groups may find it possible to experiment in some small way in this direct method of teaching the ideal of work is worship. Bahá’í parents, if not group leaders, are in an excellent position to do this most happily.

A few simple rules should be of assistance to parent and teacher.

1. Choose work as nearly as possible adapted to the child.
2. Keep the spirit of it happy.
3. Insist upon regularity.
4. Encourage always, but praise the work only when the praise can be sincere.
5. Compare new work with old, thus developing the urge for improvement and new achievements.
6. Cultivate the love of doing hard things, but never strain a child beyond his actual ability.
7. Motivate the work; that is, plan ahead with the worker what shall be done with it when finished.
8. Keep the spiritual basis always alive. Teach them a few of the Utterances of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on work.

“Work done in the spirit of service is worship.”—‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

“The best of men are they that earn their livelihood by a profession, and expend on themselves and on their kindred, for the love of God, the Lord of all worlds.”—Bahá’u’lláh.

“...it is incumbent upon every one of you to engage in some one occupation, such as arts, trades, and the like. We have made this your occupation, identical with the worship of God, the True One. Reflect, 0 people, upon the mercy of God, and upon His favors; ... Waste not your time in idleness and idleness, and occupy yourselves with that which will profit yourselves and others besides yourselves. ... Every soul who occupies himself in an art or trade, this will be accounted an act of worship before God.”—Bahá’u’lláh.

MANUSCRIPTS FOR REVIEW

The National Spiritual Assembly requests Bahá’í authors to submit their manuscripts for review to the National Assembly and not directly to the Reviewing Committee. The material is to be in final form, as the function of correcting manuscripts and improving the writing has not been extended to the Reviewing Committee.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

National Committees are requested, through their chairmen, to provide ten copies of the Minutes of each meeting, one copy for the Guardian and nine for the members of the National Assembly. Committees which do not meet for consultation are to provide ten progress reports every three months.

*In correction of name misspelled in a previous announcement.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Publishing Committee wishes to announce that the two volumes of Proclamation of Universal Peace, the American edition of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, hitherto sold separately at $2.50 per copy, can now be supplied bound together as one volume, with cloth cover, for $2.50 complete—one-half the former cost.

These are the days when the fundamental verities which the Master released for the American continent have become the outstanding problems and topics for discussion. The combining of these two volumes into one will make it easier for every active believer to possess a copy.

An Index to Bahá’í Procedure has been supplied by the Index Committee, and copies will be inserted in all unsold copies of the Procedure, but the friends who already possess a copy can obtain the Index for 50c. Assemblies are requested to stock a supply for local sale, as the Committee is not equipped to sell these small cost items on individual order.

Pooma.—We left on an early train for Poona and arrived there in the night. Poona is a Bahá’í paradise and one of the high spiritual lights in India. The first morning, February fifth, we had a beautiful program of welcome in the Bahá’í Hall in the National Hotel. The pupils from the Bahá’í school marched to the hall. All Bahá’ís were present, and after the program tea was served.

The entire stay was so well arranged that even New York and Tibrin would say “Bravo!” I think the plan could with profit be carried out in other cities. At 7 P. M. that first day, the President of the Local Spiritual Assembly gave a tea in the Bahá’í Hall for twenty-four journalists of India. I had prepared my speech, (the resume), to journalists very carefully and made carbon copies. I spoke on Journalism and the Cause and then read to them my interview and distributed it to them. Shirin spoke and there was a resumé of her talk. Questions were asked and some of the journalists came each day afterwards and were very interested. (If it had been a big reception we could not have spoken intimately of journalism and the Cause and what Bahá’ís said about the press.)

The next forenoon, Sunday, at ten o’clock, a great lecture was staged in the cinema theatre, “Deccan Talkies” to more than a thousand people, 99 per cent of whom were university and college students. Many came who could not get into the hall. We had the loudspeaker. Mr. K. F. Nariman, one of the very popular men in India, was the Chairman, and he was sympathetic to the Faith. Fourteen copies of the resumés of our speeches were given to the journalists whose papers represented several different languages. A number of students and journalists came to the hotel afterwards to ask further.

In the afternoon we visited the Bahá’í School to meet the pupils.

The following morning, Monday, the Bahá’í school presented a Peace Play and Bahá’í Songs for us. In the afternoon a tea was given in the Bahá’í Hall by the Local Spiritual Assembly President to the educators of Poona. I spoke to these professors about the Bahá’í Faith in various universities of the world and what great scholars have said and written about it. At each tea there was a fine and beautifully arranged exhibition of Bahá’í books and we explained the books for they were interested. Shirin spoke on Qur’án’-i-Ayn and sang, and we both gave resumés to the reporters. The professors said they would gladly arrange lectures in their schools when we come again.

The third afternoon the tea by the President was for the lawyers of Poona. We had a talk and discussion followed; they, too, said they would arrange lectures when we return, for most of them belong to clubs.

One lawyer said in fun: “I belong to Brahmo-Sangh but we are a little lazy in working, (but I say ‘it is all right, for the Bahá’ís are promoting all the ideals for which we stand!’)

That night the Bahá’ís gave a farewell party for us. In the times in between lectures and interviews we had a number of heart to heart talks about Haifa and about promoting the Cause.

The Bahá’í School in Poona is a model and I believe great Bahá’í spiritual teachers for the Cause will come out from that school. They are getting a marvelous training there.

The Secret of the very wonderful Bahá’í work in Poona is mobilized Unity for service! The Holy Spirit is with them, attracted by their unity. The Bahá’í world over the five continents has been gripped at times by Poona’s work, and travelling over India three times as I have, I have met a number of fine people who said they first heard of the Teachings when staying for a few days in the National Hotel of Poona. I must give tribute to Poona because since 1915, when I first met them, I feel they are “living the life” up there.

Bombay.—Early the morning of February ninth we entrained down to Bombay. Bombay is the “Mother City” of all the Bahá’í work in India. Many dear Bahá’í friends met us at the station with smiles and garlands of sweet jasmines and roses and fragrant bouquets. Such a great program was planned, but alas, as all the chairmen and most of the journalists of Bombay were at Haripura for two weeks to the fifty-first Congress of India, it was thought best by all of us that we postpone the intensive campaign in Bombay until March twenty-first. However, in these three or four days there we had a glorious welcome reception in the Bahá’í Hall and they asked us to tell about the tour. We lectured in C. L. High School, Dadar, Bombay, to more than five hundred students and met with the Bahá’í friends who are arranging our program. We spoke Sunday in Bahá’í Hall to a large audience. We were so happy to see all the friends. There are nearly eight hundred Bahá’ís in Bombay.

My baggage from Shanghai—those suitcases that I had to leave behind when I fled as a refugee from Shanghai bombings on August 17—arrived in Bombay. February fourth, thanks to our dear Bahá’í brother Mr. Ous­kouli of Shanghai who saved them for me and sent them on. I was very, very thankful to get those bags.

I received a telegram from our beloved Guardian. He approves the publication in India of my little book, Tahirih, Iran’s Greatest Woman. He suggested I stay in India until about January first and then proceed to Aus­tralia and New Zealand for a prolonged tour. So I expect to sail December 29 for Australia and New Zealand, disembarking first at Perth.

Our Guardian wishes Shirin Fozdar to go to United States to speak, and I hope she can leave in December. The Bahá’ís of our country will be so happy to have her come. She left February 14, for her home in Ajmere and I have come to Surat to visit the blessed family, Mr. N. R. Vakil and his wife and two daughters and to do some writing. It is heavenly to be with them and a great help to my work. Mr. Vakil was the first Hindu in India to become a believer and he is one of the great Bahá’ís of this world. Our loved Guardian has said he hopes the two young daughters will some day come to Iran and to the United States as Bahá’i teachers. He is a very distinguished lawyer and deeply spiritual. They will come some time when his health will permit. Mr. Vakil and family with a few others may go to America on their next trip. I shall write about the work in Surat and in Bombay in my next report.

I thank from the depths of my heart and soul the N. S. A. members in India and Burma for their love and their wonderful help and the splendid way they have planned the work in India. The Cause is progressing very much in India, and I truly believe that India will become a strong Bahá’í country, standing in line with the nations leading in the new world order. Allah-u-Abdub Deep and abiding love to all of you.
HEIRS OF BAHÁ’U’LLAH’S COVENANT

"Lauded be Thy name, O Lord my God! Darkness hath fallen upon every land, and the forces of mischief have encompassed all the nations. Through them, however, I perceive the splendors of Thy wisdom, and discern the brightness of the light of Thy providence.

"They that are shut out as by a veil from Thee have imagined that they have the power to put out Thy light, and to quench Thy fire, and to still the winds of Thy grace. Nay, and to this Thy might be a witness! Had not every tribulation been the vehicle of Thy providence, no one would have dared oppose us, though the powers of earth and heaven were to be leagued against us. Were I to unravel the wondrous mysteries of Thy wisdom which are laid bare beclouded asunder.

"Glorified be Thou, then, O my God! I beseech Thee by Thy Most Great Name to assemble them that love Thee around the Law that streameth from the good-pleasure of Thy will, and to send down upon them what will assure their hearts.

"Potent art Thou to do what pleaseth Thee. Thou art, verily, the Help in Peril, the Self-Subsisting."—BAHÁ’U’LLAH.

Beloved friends:

Our lives, in these days of the manifestation of the Divine Will, are immersed in mystery. Beneficent powers, supremely enthroned above the world of violence and denial, await to employ the Bahá’í community for the steady consolidation of The Most Great Peace. We must be more conscious of the sustaining power of God than ever before, more humble, more expectant of spiritual victory, more alive in the world of the soul than in the realm of physical personality.

That ours collectively is a significant and noble mission the Guardian attested in these words, written July 28:

"Though powerless to avert the impending contest the followers of Bahá’u’lláh can, by the spirit they evince and the efforts they exert, help to circumscribe its range, shorten its duration, allay its hardships, proclaim its salutary consequences, and demonstrate its necessary and vital role in the shaping of human destiny. Theirs is the duty to hold, alight and undimmed, the torch of Divine Guidance, as the shades of night descend upon, and ultimately envelop, the entire human race."

In part, this unique mission given to a small and unassuming body of human beings must be exemplified in the world of public action, through the steady prosecution of Temple construction and the activities of the Teaching and Inter-America Committees. Nothing can divert our attention from the oft-reiterated command to continue the twofold task throughout the remaining years of the Seven Year Plan.

In part, this unique mission is spiritual, subjective, exemplified by capacity to attain a purer consciousness and a more consecrated being. Without this deepening of our lives, this individual striving for union with the Holy Spirit, the public work of the Cause will fall lamentably short of its full purpose. Therefore, pending the formulation and announcement of any particular general plans that might appear to be proper and befitting for the community of the faithful in time of war, let us give each one full attention to the need of fresh inspiration for our inner life. Let us ponder again the mighty Teachings on the regeneration of the soul. Let us strive for worthiness to drink of the Elixir that is the source of man’s real existence. Let us realize that without inspiration from on high we can not exemplify the firmness, the courage, the radiance and the wisdom of those who, in the very hour of battle, carry within themselves the evidences that God has ordained the Most Great Peace.

Our guidance for these special days is, of course, derived from the words of the Guardian. Nevertheless there is a Tablet revealed by the Master, translated by Shoghi Effendi on January 28, 1919, perusal of which cannot but illumine our hearts at so crucial a time.

"This world war has come to an end. We trust that at least it will lead to the preliminaries of Universal Peace, just as it is plainly foretold in the Blessed Tablets.

"The greatest means for its realization is in the entreaty and supplication of the friends to the Kingdom of God. Ye should all implore and pray, supplicate and beseech that through the grace of God this world-consuming war may be changed into a world-illuminating Peace. It is certain that the entreaty and supplication of these servants will be acceptable at the Divine Threshold, for we wish naught save the tranquillity of the world of existence, purpose nothing but unity among men and at nothing save the eradication of ignorant prejudices, so that all religions and races, embracing one another, may gather under the shade of the pavilion of the Oneness of God.

"O ye sons and daughters of the Kingdom! the most pressing need today is harmony and unity among the friends of God. Strive your utmost for this. Not until this intimate unity is realized can universal harmony be established. Therein lies the reasons of Christ's saying: 'Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted.' Exert ye a great deal of effort on this momentous question."

Since that Tablet was revealed the organism of Bahá'ís has forever been established by the Guardian as Head of the administrative order. The phrase "intimate unity," however, reveals deeper layers of spiritual association that must be attained in prayer and communion.

In essence, we have come to a great and mighty hour in the history of mankind. All things are to be changed, and all things will be in perturbation. The condition of pure, conscious faith alone will be immune to the forces of destruction. "Glorified be Thou, O my God! I beseech Thee by Thy Most Great Name to assemble them that love Thee around the Law that streameth from the good-pleasure of Thy will, and to send down upon them what will assure their hearts." These words, taken from a prayer of Bahá'u'lláh, may well be realized as the expression of that constant prayer our souls must learn how to become.

National Spiritual Assembly.

SUFFERINGS OF THE BELIEVERS IN TURKISTAN AND CAUCASUS

The National Spiritual Assembly has learned with deep grief of the sufferings of the Bahá'í communities in Turkistan and Caucasus. Some years ago their Assemblies and Committees were dissolved, as reported at the time, and their literature and records confiscated. At present many of the friends have been imprisoned, including women, and some have died in incarceration, while the majority have been deported to Iran and a few to Siberia. Bahá'í activities and teaching are forbidden.

The American Bahá'ís can assist at this time only through such contributions as the National Assembly may find it possible to offer for the relief of the Bahá'í refugees within Iran. As evidence of the unbroken and unbreakable solidarity of the believers throughout the world, it is hoped that sums adequate to the importance of the case, and commensurate with the number of those in want, may from time to time be dispatched with the love of the American friends. A contribution in the amount of one hundred pounds sterling for the relief of these believers was recently cabled to the Guardian as a donation from the American Bahá'ís through the National Spiritual Assembly.

PUBLIC MEETING AND REGIONAL CONFERENCE AT TORONTO

The meetings at Toronto coincided with the receipt of the Guardian's cabled message of August 28, and with the outbreak of international war. A deep sense of responsibility permeated all the meetings, those of a public or regional character as well as the business sessions of the Assembly itself.

On Friday evening, September 1, a public meeting was held at the King Edward Hotel, arranged in consultation with the Toronto Assembly. The subject announced was "Order for a Chaotic World."

The lecture hall was well filled when the meeting began, and a large number of newly attracted friends, as well as a number attending their first Bahá'í gathering, shared with the Bahá'í community in constituting the audience. Mr. Allen B. McDaniel presided at the meeting, presenting Mr. Harlan Ober who spoke on "The Oneness of Man-kind—the Foundation" and Mrs. Dorothy Baker whose subject was "The World Tomorrow." A beautiful spirit was manifest, and the gathering dissolved into small groups who remained in intimate discussion long after the meeting was over.

Another public meeting, specially arranged, consisted of an illustrated lecture by Mr. McDaniel on the Bahá'í House of Worship, delivered at the Theosophical Center on Saturday evening, September 2.

A regional teaching conference, with Mr. George Spendlove presiding, was held at the King Edward Hotel, Sunday afternoon, September 3. The conference dealt with many vital questions, with chief emphasis laid on the meaning of the Guardian's latest cablegram, the needs of the National Fund, and the importance of developments in the National Teaching and Inter-America activities.

MEETINGS OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

To assure the necessary concentration of effort at meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly, when matters of such extreme importance require attention, it has been decided to publish the following memorandum as notice to the friends.

No interruption whatsoever in the business of the National Assembly is to be permitted during sessions. Plans for consultation and interviews are to be submitted in advance. Individual members of the Assembly are not to make personal engagements during business sessions. The pressure upon individual members having proved detrimental to the transaction of Assembly business. In dealing with the believers, the Assembly expects to receive matters in written or documentary form and not submitted in the form of oral statements reported to an Assembly officer or member.

RECTITUDE OF CONDUCT

Such a rectitude of conduct must manifest itself, with ever-increasing potency, in every verdict which the elected representatives of the Bahá'í community, in whatever capacity they may find themselves, may be called upon to pronounce. It must be constantly reflected in the business dealings of all its members, in their domestic lives, in all manner of employment, and in any service they may, in the fu-tute, render their government or people. It must be exemplified in the conduct of all Baha’i electors, when exercising their sacred rights and functions. It must characterize the attitude of every loyal believer towards non-acceptance of political posts, non-identification with political parties, non-participation in political controversies, and non-membership in political organizations and ecclesiastical institutions. It must reveal itself in the uncompromising adherence of all, whether young or old, to the clearly enunciated and fundamental principles laid down by ‘Abdu’l-Baha in His addresses, and to the laws and ordinances revealed by Baha’u’llah in His Most Holy Book. It must be demonstrated in the impartiality of every defender of the Faith against its enemies, in his fair-mindedness in recognizing any merits that enemy may possess, and in his honesty in discharging any obligations he may have towards him. It must constitute the brightest ornament of the life, the pursuits, the exertions, and the utterances of every Baha’i teacher, whether laboring at home or abroad, whether in the front ranks of the teaching force, or occupying a less active and responsible position. It must be made the hallmark of that numerically small, yet intensely dynamic and highly responsible body of the elected national representatives of every Baha’i community, which constitutes the sustaining pillar, and the sole instrument for the election, in every community, of that Universal House whose very name and title, as ordained by Baha’u’llah, symbolizes that rectitude of conduct which is its highest mission to safeguard and enforce.

So great and transcendental is this principle of Divine justice, a principle that must be regarded as the crowning distinction of all Local and National Assemblies, in their capacity as forerunners of the Universal House of Justice, that Baha’u’llah Himself subordinates His personal inclination and wish to the all-compelling force of its demands and implications. “God is My witness” He thus explains, “were it not contrary to the Law of God, I would have kissed the hand of My would-be murderer, and would cause him to inherit My earthly goods. I am restrained, however, by the binding Law laid down in the Book, and am Myself bereft of all worldly possessions.” “Know thou, of a truth,” He significantly affirms, “these great oppressions that have befallen the world are preparing it for the advent of the Most Great Justice.” “Say,” He again asserts, “He hath appeared with that Justice wherewith mankind hath been adorned, and yet the people are, for the most part, asleep.” “The light of men is Justice,” He moreover states, “Quench it not with the contrary winds of oppression and tyranny. The purpose of justice is the appearance of unity among men.” “No radiance,” He declares, “can compare with that of justice. The organization of the world and the tranquility of mankind depend upon it.”—Shoghi Effendi, The Advent of Divine Justice, pp. 22-23.

CONSOLIDATION OF TEACHING IN SETTLED AREAS

While news from our Baha’i “front” continues to mount in zest and achievement, including recent registrations of the first resident Baha’is of Delaware, Rhode Island, and Alaska, the consistent consolidation of teaching throughout the rest of the American continent cannot be neglected. Its scope has now outgrown our reports; the following items are but brief samples of the splendid work of Assemblies, Groups, and individuals in every part of the land.

The Temple models are gaining greatly in usefulness. In upper New York State a model was exhibited at the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts and at the Museum in Schenectady, with accompanying talks by Mr. Allen McDaniel. It will also be shown at the New York State Fair from August 26th to September 9th. In Wichita during March, an exhibit at the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company prepared the way for a lecture series by Mrs. Gayle Woolson, and in April this model traveled to Kansas City for a week’s display. Milwaukee arranged for space at the Wisconsin State Fair in August. The New England Regional Committee is planning a series of exhibitions in the Fall. A picture of the prize-winning floral display at the Sacramento Flower Show, in connection with a Regional Conference there in April, has already been reproduced. From Redbanks, N. J., Mrs. Ellen Sims has sent a thrilling account of the display in the local newspaper office, and later in a miniature World’s Fair at the largest department store in Newark. She writes: “All small communities would be pleasantly surprised at the good will which results from the exhibition of our beautiful Temple. . . . I believe that this display promoted a better spirit on the part of the business men and local citizens towards the Baha’i Faith. Publicity was secured in two newspapers. . . . The radio talk was also most successful. . . . We have just received word from Newark that the Temple is the outstanding display at the Fair-o-Scope, and has attracted great attention.

Interesting work has been accomplished by Mr. Duncan McAlear, with the active help of the Boston Assembly, the New England Regional Committee, and the National Library Committee. Early this year he conducted libraries in many towns and cities of suburban Boston, placing books and receiving requests for book reviews and autobiographical sketches of the authors. Later he placed literature in twelve New Hampshire libraries in cities of over 10,000 circulation. He now plans to contact 25 to 30 other libraries throughout the Region, especially in Vermont.

Our Bahá’í Groups have flourished during the new year. Atlanta has organized a Group of eleven members. Omaha has increased to nine with the registration of a teacher of Spanish. San Diego has added a member to become five. Through the recent assistance of Mrs. Nellie S. French and Mr. Marvin Newport, Madison now numbers seven. Waukegan has organized with eight. After two years of patient teaching by Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Wells, with visitors from Los Angeles and elsewhere, Big Bear Lake is a Group of eight believers. In Atascadero (California) nine registered Bahá’ís are preparing for Assembly status in April.

The teaching campaign in Wichita was a fine success. Mrs. Gayle Woolson spent a month there until April 22nd, giving three public lectures after careful advance publicity arranged by the Regional Committee. A study class was formed, and also four direct Bahá’í talks were given to civic clubs. In Atascadero (California) nine registered Bahá’ís are preparing for Assembly status in April.

The visiting campaign in the east has continued. Mrs. E. Carpenter of Santa Barbara Group and Mrs. C. E. Carpenter of Santa Paula, was a weekend campaign in the new territory of Ojai and Ventura. Principal speakers were Miss Virginia Orison of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Louise Caswell was invited to address 200 delegates to the Business and Professional Women’s Convention on “Woman’s Place in the New World Order.” Many inquiries resulted from her account of the life of Táhirih.

Orcella Rexford has reported a Bahá’í talk in Miami to 300 persons, in Jacksonville to 250, and in Atlanta to over fifty. Study classes have been organized as a result of each lecture.

The visit of Stanwood Cobb to Montreal and St. Lambert in February deserves special mention. In lectures to the Faculty Club of McGill University, Sir George Williams College, two high schools, and at several Bahá’í public meetings, “a vision of the beauty and scope of the Bahá’í ideal of education was presented for the first time to many people.” It is felt that Dr. Cobb “will leave a lasting impression in Montreal.”

As an example of the spirit of self-sacrifice which motivates our Bahá’í teachers, it is recorded that Mr. Walter H. Blakely has returned to the Teaching fund three hundred dollars advanced to him for pioneer work in Alabama.

A report of 1938-39 has been received from the New York Teaching Committee, and may well serve as a model to Assemblies of well-directed and intensive work. “The region was divided into six sections with separate committees. . . . The activities included all kinds of meetings, public meetings of varying sizes, study groups, fireside meetings, indirect approaches and intimate personal meetings. All helped their uses and values. . . . About ten different fireside groups have been held each week (in Manhattan). Most of these were for new seekers. . . . In Harlem five fireside groups have been held with one Sunday meeting. . . . Enthusiastic meetings have also been held in Long Island and there will soon be an Assembly in this section.”

The three believers of Covingdon, although a contrast in size to large communities like New York, are setting a potent example by meeting each morning at Fellowship House for prayer. Mrs. Marion Little writes: “This I feel will cause the power of the Holy Spirit to radiate through this region by the use of the Word of Bahá’u’lláh.”

Such an example is perhaps the best conclusion to a teaching survey. Incomplete though it must be, the account of our corporate activity is a thrilling one, certainly to impart vigor and freshness to future work. Beloved friends, may we not push on with highest confidence, remembering the promise of Shoghi Effendi: “I, for my part, am determined to reinforce the impulse that impels its members forward to meet their destiny. The Founders of their Faith survey from the Kingdom on high the range of their achievements, acclaim their progress, and are ever ready to speed their eventual triumph.”

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

The Inter-America Committee through its chairman has received the following thrilling letters from different parts of the world. The first from Wilfred Barton on his way to Montevideo.

“The passengers on the S.S. Uruguay are German, English, French, Spanish, Brazilians, colored and white. They are friendly and seem to have no hostility to each other, the predominant attitude and atmosphere is dejection and hopelessness. I have had opportunity to give the Message to a number of them, received with sympathetic attitude of mind. I think we should all bear in mind, whenever the war passions and sabre rattling threaten, that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’i predicted future glory for the German nation, of course spiritual glory. When we stopped at the Barbados I asked a colored boy, Mr. Ridley Wento, to have lunch with me and he asked to have Bahá’í literature sent him. I think the Barbados will be a wonderful post for teachers in the Faith. Besides your many contacts in Trinidad I have made a new one. C. O. Waterman, Trinidad, he would be glad to attend a study class when a teacher goes to that island. Arriving in Río de Janeiro I found Mrs. C. M. Cooper at home and had a splendid evening with her, whenever a new library can be formed here, she will be glad to take it again. I expect to meet Miss Holtsapple and the Worleys tomorrow.

“The New York believers gave me a very special send off. I cannot express how deeply their presence and their demonstration touched me, and what I felt for that group of staunch and devoted believers, perhaps we shall some day attain to the station set for... us by the Master when He says 'The believers should become enamored of each other.'

From the Philippines have come two recent letters, one from Felix Maddela and the other from Alejandro N. Maza. From the former comes the following: "We have hard time here to finish our work, some members want to wait to hear more suggestions before enrolling in Spiritual Assembly, maybe you think this is best? However, I have suggested to the group that if we desire to be a part of Inter-America work we should write a joint letter to the Guardian of the Bahá'í Faith, Shoghi Effendi, and hear good advice and good words that would help us to wait till literature and enrollment cards come. We desire the authority to translate Principles and World Religion, then we take boat and go forth to convert other islands, these are the dialects into which they must go, Ilocano, Tagalog, Visayan, Cagayan and others. We could not finance printing but gladly do the work. Please write quickly and not wait at all as all eager to hear from you." From Sr. Maza.

"I am now vice-chairman of our group and therefore write to tell you, I wish to call your respective attention to send me many books and pamphlets so I could study night and day the beautiful scientific and spiritual principles of my religion. Then I would be able to tackle all questions asked me even by the clergy and our many antagonists. Hoping for immediate action I remain," (signed) Alejandro N. Maza.

And the following touching letter from the Argentina.

"I am disposed to work upon your books here. I am not looking so much for the benefit the sale would bring, but because I am sincerely and deeply interested in divulging the Bahá'í spirit, myself I am not able to make material sacrifices, for the motifs already expressed, be assured when I can I will do more.

"I beg to state that I am of Swiss nationality, and came to the Argentine in 1915, here I have to fight very hard for living never having learned the knavish tricks that lead to making money. Reading your letter and the booklet that you sent to me, a new ray of hope entered by soul. Since a boy I have loved goodness that speaks to me of God. But since reading of the Bahá'í Faith new ideas come into my mind, all of a sudden I am awake and alive and I live to promulgate the big Faith and science of Bahá'u'lláh. This is my sincere wish to work for this cause—please help me to do it. Excuse my bad English, but hope you will understand my meaning. Awaiting your good news, I remain yours," (signed) F. Schneepal.

Recent appointments ratified by the N.S.A. are:

Mrs. Louise Caswell and Mrs. Cora Oliver arriving in Panama City in time for Congress of Nations to be held there.

Mrs. Gayle Woolson and Mrs. Ford sailing in October for Costa Rica. Mr. Antonio Roca going overland to Honduras. John Eichenauer, Jr. leaving for San Salvador to enter school in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw of San Francisco have sailed for Haiti.

From Balboa in the very heart of the Canal Zone comes news of our first believer in that country, the first believer from central America, he is Sr. Joseph Wantuk, taught by our first pioneer to Panama, Mathew Kazab. He is an American citizen, married, with one child and in active business. He is the first fruit of the Divine Message and will surely assist the teachers and visitors to that land. Speaking both English and Spanish he will be able to form groups of both races. He has written a full declaration of Faith.

We are thrilled to announce the departure for Montevideo of Mr. Wilfred Barton. He will assist the group left by Mrs. Francis Stewart and endeavor to find work in some orchestra so that he can remain.

Our great pioneer teacher Mrs. Francis Stewart has just returned from South America after an intensive effort which has left six groups and countless individuals studying the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Her last letter written from sea is quoted in part:

"It was surely the will of Bahá'u'lláh—my staying on these additional weeks in Buenos Aires—and I am so happy I did. The Bahá'í work became an endless chain, as newly interested friends told others and our own weekly meetings finally had up to 60 attending the study sessions and still when I spoke at the last meeting, the evening of July 7th, several new people were present, telling me not to go yet for they knew of so many others that are prepared for this Cause. On this occasion, July 7th, I referred to the Martyrdom of the Bab and translated passages from that glorious message to the Letters of the Living. I had announced the names of the local committee that would remain in charge of the regular study work and urged all to cooperate and assist them in all ways so that soon it may be possible to establish the first Bahá'í Spiritual Assembly of Argentina that in turn would take the Cause to the entire Republic.

"On July 11th our ship started the all day journey down the great rivers of Argentina and at 10 P.M. we passed the distant lights of Buenos Aires at an hour that the Bahá'í Com-spirit and principles of the Divine Plan to a home region.

The suggestion is that each Assembly, alive to its responsibility within its own city limits and in nearby communities, should survey these areas which so literally depend upon its resourcefulness and conscientious administrations of the teaching program for that news which is the priceless introduction to God's guidance and Word. Through the use of a map, mounted on cardboard and displayed for all to see, the soldiers of the campaign could be charted, just as we chart the centers of Bahá'í life throughout the continent. Based on the position of each believer, as well as upon those factors which determine normal regions of activity in any city, the Assembly could then outline its pioneer plan. Contacts could be made, neighborhood newspapers utilized, firesides established, teaching circuits arranged; in fact, all the techniques of our national and international work could be locally applied. Such a program, comprehensive in scope, effective in method, aimed to cut down and eventually to obliterate the blank spaces on our Bahá'í maps, could well rally and direct the energies of every individual. Thus each Spiritual Assembly, at the head of its own "army of life," might join the heroic campaign in which our valiant brothers are already engaged.

This, or a similar project, the National Teaching Committee would recommend to Assemblies and Groups for study and action. For it must surely be apparent that the intent of the Guardian, already written in "The Ad­vent of Divine Justice," is for each one of us to carry his full weight in the tremendous opportunity vouch­safed to America.

"It is the bounden duty of every American believer, as the faithful trustee of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Divine Plan, to initiate, promote, and consolidate, within the limits fixed by the administrative principles of the Faith, any activity he or she deems fit to undertake for the furtherance of the Plan. All must participate, however humble their origin, however limited their experience, however restricted their means, however deficient their education, however pressing their cares and preoccupa­tions, however unfavorable the environ­ment in which they live. . . . Let these words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, gleaned from the Tablets of the Divine Plan, ring likewise in their ears, as they go forth, assured and unafraid, on His mission: . . . Exert yourselves; your mission is unspeakably glorious. Should success crown your enterprise, America will assuredly evolve into a center from which waves of spiritual power will emanate, and the throne of the Kingdom of God will, in the plenitude of its majesty and glory, be firmly established."

CHILD EDUCATION

Justice

"Each man has been placed in a post of honor which he must not desert," wrote 'Abdu'l-Bahá. "A humble work­man who commits an injustice is as much to blame as a renowned tyrant. Thus we all have our choice between justice and injustice. I hope that each one of you will become just and direct your thoughts toward the unity of mankind, that you will never harm your neighbors nor speak ill of anyone; that you will respect the rights of all men and be more concerned for the interests of others than for your own." This is the standard that we desire for our children. Let them memorize it!

The first justice is concerned with their thinking. Bahá'u'lláh wrote: "The source of all these utterances is justice. It is the freedom of man from superstitions that he may discern the Manifestations of God with the eye of oneness, and consider all affairs with keen vision." With this statement in our minds, how are we to apply the principle of justice? Yesterday the basis of child guidance was a set of rules set down by great-grandmother, grandmother, and a whole host of anxious relatives. Today we have Teachings direct from God. Let us, then, as 'Abdu'l-Bahá has said, "Be willing to clear away all that we have superstitiously learned, all that would clog our steps on the way to Truth; we must not shrink, if necessary, from beginning our education all over again."

The first step to justice for a Bahá'í child, then, is to grow in the knowledge of the Word, so that he will possess a true measuring rod of Truth.

The second justice has to do with the child's social relations. Bahá'u'lláh has told us, "Consort with the followers of all religions in a spirit of friendliness and fellowship." And again, "Close your eyes to racial differences, and welcome all with the light of oneness."

"The purpose of justice," He declares, "is the appearance of unity among men." "No radiance can compare with that of justice." Does this not mean, then, that our children should be permitted to play with all of the little children of the earth, regardless of color, race, or creed?

The third justice must regulate the child's affairs. To allow our children... to work and play with many others is not enough. If the children quarrel, for instance, we have no right to prefer our own to other children, for this is detrimental to all. Bahá'u'lláh reminds us, “Decide justly between men and be ye the emblems of justice amongst them.” Mrs. Peggy True, in a recent letter to this column, reminds us that justice can be taught from a window! We often see one child taking advantage of another. This is the ideal opportunity to teach justice by insisting upon fair play, whether the child be our own or a friend. Very often, in quarrels, she writes, children have their own methods of establishing justice. One boy who was playing selfishly with a steam-shovel, aroused the animosity of the group with his own greediness. “We will not play with you,” they insisted, “unless you take your turn with the rest of us.” Soon he was left to himself, and in due time was quite willing to divide fairly with the group, in order to have the enjoyment of their companionship.

The rights of others are a very important part of justice. Bahá'u'lláh tells us, “Lay not on any soul a load which you would not desire for yourself.” And again, “They who dwell within the Tabernacle of God, and are established upon the seats of everlasting glory, will refuse, though they be dying of hunger, to stretch forth their hands and seize unlawfully the property of their neighbor, however vile and worthless he may be.”

From Mrs. True comes also the suggestion that a common injustice on the part of parents is comparison. It is not fair to either child to say, “John isn't as bright as Mary,” or, “Henry can play the piano and swim beautifully, but Jack can't do either.” Instead of comparing one child with another, let us praise all of the gifts quite impersonally as to their relation to others. Let us also compare each child’s progress with his own past record; as, “How much better Mary swims now than she did last year.” Bahá'u'lláh points out this type of injustice in “Gleanings” when he says, “The whole duty of man in this Day is to attain that share of the flood of grace which God poureth forth for him. Let none, therefore, consider the largeness or smallness of the receptacle. The portion of some might lie in the palm of a man's hand; the portion of others might fill a cup; and of others even a gallon-measure.”

Reward and punishment is an ever-present problem. The parent, being in a position of authority, becomes the exponent of the words, “O people of God! That which trained the world is Justice, for it is upheld by two pillars, reward and punishment. These two pillars are the sources of life to the world.” Neither flabby lawlessness on the one hand, nor unreasoning dictation on the other, should be regarded as wholesome. Divine Justice will exact from a whole world obedience to divine law, and the pillars of reward and punishment will “maintain the world in uprightness and protect the nations.”

How can the child understand Divine Justice, if these pillars are entirely unknown to him, and his relations to society is fundamentally lawless from the beginning?

Every child is a potential governor in the New World Order. Will he be ready? Will his every thought and deed be just? Will he have regard for law? Will his membership exalt his House of Justice to a God-like stature? Will he be a “Trustee of God on earth”? “Bestir yourselves, O people, in anticipation of the days of Divine Justice, for the promised hour is now come.”

We will be aided in all of our efforts to establish justice among this new little generation, for Bahá'u'lláh says, “Should thou cause the rivers of justice to spread their waters amongst thy subjects, God would surely aid thee with the hosts of the unseen and the seen, and would strengthen thee in thine affairs.” We would find this as true today as when spoken to Sultan 'Abdu'l-Aziz. The Kingdom of God is primarily the Kingdom of Justice; let us then prepare ourselves and our children for this Kingdom, so that the Most Great Peace may be established in the world.

MAKING BAHA'I HISTORY

Four women of the era of Bahá'u'lláh may together, develop almost any constructive idea! Returning from the Convention in Georgia Wiles's car a plan was discussed that has already borne fine fruits.

A Summer School for the South has not yet seemed a possibility, so why not try a traveling Baha'i Institute? So after much consultation and the careful laying of local plans, Georgia Wiles and the Regional Secretary, left Nashville, Tennessee, on the morning of Sunday, June 18, with Knoxville as the first objective.

We were received with open arms by the Knoxville Baha'is and their friends, about thirty in all, (including two babies of seven months each and their grandmothers!) at the suburban home of Mrs. Eva Weiss. We had a beautiful meal, an abundant picnic supper, eaten indoors because of a sudden storm, then were called to the porch to see the perfect arch of the rainbow, and we joyfully accepted it as a promise of many confirmations on our journey.

Monday afternoon we enjoyed an informal meeting with Baha'is and non-Baha'is at the home of Mrs. Earl Shedderly. In the evening, at the Andrew Johnson Hotel, with Mrs. Louise Caswell presiding, some 18 persons heard the Message, given under the general subject of “This Changing World.”

Mrs. Terah Smith, of Atlanta, spoke on “Seeing Beyond the Impending Crisis,” Mrs. Georgia Wiles, of Nashville, on “The Individual's Responsibility to the New World Order,” and Nellie Roche's subject was “The New World Order.” This program, in general, was carried out in Atlanta and Augusta. In both these cities Louise Caswell spoke also. Characteristic of Bahá’í meetings there was much conversation after the program, and all seemed loth to separate.

Leaving her classes in Spanish at the University of Tennessee for the most important work, Louise Caswell went with us to Atlanta, where we first enjoyed a delightful supper as guests of Miss Rena Gordon, a radiant Bahá’í from Montreal, whose business has taken her to Atlanta.

Later, there were present a company of 21, 8 Baha'is and the others present members of the new class studying the Teachings under Terah Smith. Orcella Rexford has conducted classes in Atlanta, recently, and most of those present had become interested in the Bahá’í Faith through her.

Arriving in Augusta for luncheon, we were welcomed by Dr. Marie Kershaw, our hostess, and her house guest, Miss Alma Knobloch. A delicious luncheon and much conversation inspired us all.

Then to the lovely and hospitable home of Esther Segel near along the fragrant pine trees, where we were her guests for the night. At five, a company of some thirty women, mostly non-Baha'is, came in for tea. Miss Alma, and all four of us spoke, and the company lingered until after seven o'clock!

Then back to the Bahá’í Center, which serves also as the office and home of Dr. Kershaw, and an audience of twenty-five, in terrific heat, listened most attentively to our talks. We were delighted to have in that audience one colored believer, a teacher, who had brought a young friend with her.

At Georgia Wiles' suggestion, several of us stopped on our way home at the grave of Dr. Zia Bhagdadi for prayers, and we all felt a strong spiritual sense of oneness.

Next morning we held a meeting of the Regional Teaching Committee at the office of Dr. Kershaw, with much discussion and much work accomplished.

Arriving in Atlanta too late to dress, we went travel-stained to the home of Mrs. Whitaker, the mother of Mrs. Thelma Allison, a colored believer of the Nashville Community, and had a most impressive meeting with twelve present, three non-Bahá'ís, five colored persons, and seven white.

Due to the activities of Communists, laws in Georgia and especially Atlanta, are drastic prohibiting interracial gatherings, even in private homes, but a beautiful spirit of love and unity was felt here by all of us. Everywhere we found the greatest spirit of enthusiasm and dedication to the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh. In Knoxville, we found that the believers are rapidly developing themselves to administer the affairs of the Community, that they may be prepared for the day when Louise Caswell leaves them, and great things can be expected from that Community.

In Atlanta and Augusta, we found earnest groups of highly intelligent and well-educated people, vitaly interested in the study of the Teachings, and in the application of the Teachings to their daily lives.

And when in Atlanta and in Augusta, in the heart of the deep South, we find the colored and white races meeting together in love and unity, and now in this New Day, seeking to create between themselves and for the example of others, a new interpretation of their older relationship of mutual dependence, and of loving service one to the other. We believe that through the power of Bahá'u'lláh, we of the South are greatly blessed that to us has been given the delicate task of leading others to a realization of the Oneness of Mankind, when, given more time, we can bring together, under the Shield of Bahá'u'lláh, the two races most widely separated, and yet most closely knit together by many precious ties! It is one of the Mysteries and Bounties of God!

This is all a long way from a Summer School, but everything must have a beginning, so at least our pioneering has begun, and the Summer School even now has a small savings account in the bank.

As we rode along at high speed over a fine road, and in safety, we, four women, felt awed at our priceless privilege of being granted this opportunity of contributing our time, money, and energy to spread the Bahá'í Faith. For Who but Bahá'u'lláh has given women their opportunities in this day for self-development, for the freedom of thought and action made possible by their financial independence?

It was a loving and joyous service in His Name, and Georgia Wiles and the Secretary arrived home after travelling nearly twelve hundred miles, tired, but jubilant!

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

“VIGOROUS, CONSTANT INTER-ACTION”

In a cablegram received October 3, 1939, the Guardian hails as an “historic act” the action of the National Spiritual Assembly in transferring its central Office to the Temple area, “signaling auspicious conjunction (in) heart (of) North American continent (of the) institutions (of) Haziratu’l-Quds (and) Mashriqu’l-Adhká’r, the twin foci (of) steadily evolving American Bahá’í community life”. The remainder of that message specifically describes and interprets their distinctive and also their joint significance.

The resulting condition, in the considered view of the National Spiritual Assembly, is one which involves not merely the national Bahá’í institutions and a relatively few believers, but likewise the local Bahá’í institutions and the entire Bahá’í community. What we now witness is a symbolic representation of the ever-deepening relationship between the social and the spiritual Teachings revealed by Bahá’u’lláh. What we are to realize is that this relationship is no mere formal tie between institutions, but a blending of motives in every Bahá’í heart. We Bahá’ís are being summoned to a higher plane of conscious faith, a new reality created by Bahá’u’lláh for the inauguration of that World Civilization, His Kingdom.

We must, each one, and day by day, endeavor with all our hearts to attain balance between personal feeling and social responsibility, between freedom and discipline, between love and justice — the unique achievement of the Bahá’í life.

For the Mashriqu’l-Adhká’r may be likened to a projection of the profound level of spiritual reverence which God has established as the endowment of the human soul; and the Haziratu’l-Quds similarly may be likened to a projection of that social relationship which arises during the maturity of the human race. We can feel and realize the corresponding aspects of reality in our own personal lives, and this sense of intimate association between the person and the community is the sign of the Kingdom. For no citizen nor subject of any political body on earth can experience the working of a Divine destiny in his loyalty to that political entity.

The occasion, indeed, calls for a new and clearer understanding of some of the passages which the Guardian has inserted, like gems, in the pure gold of his exposition of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh:

“Those priceless elements of that Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Bahá’í Faith... the essential unity that underlies the spiritual, the humanitarian, and the administrative principles enunciated by the Author and the Interpreter of the Bahá’í Faith... To dissociate the administrative principles of the Cause from the purely spiritual and humanitarian teachings would be tantamount to a mutilation of the body of the Cause, a separation that can only result in the disintegration of its component parts, and the extinction of the Faith itself...

Not only will the present-day Spiritual Assemblies be styled differently in future, but they will be enabled also to add to their present functions those powers, duties, and prerogatives necessitated by the recognition of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, not merely as one of the recognized religious systems of the world, but as the State Religion of an independent and Sovereign Power... The administration of the Cause is to be conceived as an instrument and not a substitute for the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh... it should be regarded as a channel through which His promised blessings may flow...

For Bahá'u'lláh has not only imbued mankind with a new and regenerating Spirit, He has not merely enunciated certain universal principles, or propounded a particular philosophy... In addition to these He, as well as 'Abdu'l-Bahá after Him, has, unlike the Dispensations of the past, clearly and specifically laid down a set of Laws, established definite Institutions, and provided for the essentials of a Divine Economy... a pattern for future society, a supreme instrument for the establishment of the 'Most Great Peace,' and the one agency for the unification of the world, and the proclamation of the reign of righteousness and justice upon the earth... this priceless gem of Divine Revelation... shall evolve within the shell of His law, and shall forge ahead... till it embraces the whole of mankind... That the Cause associated with the name of Bahá'u'lláh feeds itself upon those hidden springs of celestial strength which no force of human personality, whatever its glamour, can replace; that its reliance is solely upon that mystic Source with which no worldly advantage, be it wealth, fame, or learning can compare; that it propagates itself by ways mysterious and utterly at variance with the standards accepted by the generality of mankind, will... become increasingly apparent...

Therefor e as each one makes a mighty effort to attain his own degree of perfection, may we never overlook the truth that all sincere effort of every kind and quality, is for Bahá'í distinctioned by its useful effects upon the unity and power of the entire community. May the American Bahá'í community become as one body striving, with thousands of ardent hands, to fashion the Mashriqí-Adídkár as its supreme instrument of prayer, and augment its social institutions as its instrument of brotherhood and of peace.

IN MEMORIAM

MARTHA L. ROOT

The National Spiritual Assembly shares with the American friends a spirit of profound grief in the recent loss of our co-worker, Miss Martha Root, whose days of service on earth ended September 28, in Honolulu, while a guest of Mrs. Kathryn Baldwin. Her passing significantly took place on an island between the eastern and western continents; this great Bahá'í hero belonged to the world. The following heart-stirring message came from our Guardian on October 3:

"Martha's unnumbered admirers throughout Bahá'í world lament with me (the) earthly extinction (of) her heroic life. Concourse on high acclaim her elevation (to) rightful position (in) galaxy (of) Bahá'í immortals. Posterity will establish her as foremost Hand which 'Abdu'l-Bahá's will has raised up (in) first Bahá'í century. Present generation (of) her fellow-believers recognize her (to be the) first, finest fruit (which the) Formative Age (of the) Faith (of) Bahá'u'lláh has as yet produced. Advise hold befitting memorial gathering (in) Temple (to) honor one whose acts shed imperishable lustre (on) American Bahá'í community. Impelled share with National Assembly expenses (of) erection (of) monument (in) symbolic spot, (the) meeting-place (of) East and West, to both (of) which she unsparingly dedicated (the) full force (of her) mighty energies."

The Honolulu Advertiser wrote: "Miss Root was born in Richwood, Ohio, August 10, 1872... She was an international Bahá'í teacher, journalist, author, and lecturer, who literally carried the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh to every part of the earth... She was an ardent Esperantist, and attended their congresses both in Europe and America. Some idea of the scope of her work may be glimpsed from the fact that she lectured in more than 400 universities of the world. She was received by kings, queens, princes and princesses, presidents, statesmen, and writers... The Bahá'ís of Tehran regard her as an angel of purity and as a true Bahá'í—that is—a possessor of all human virtues. One fruit of her visit to Persia was the writing of the life of Iran's greatest woman, 'Táhirih, the Pure.' She also prepared for publication a story called, 'White Roses of Persia.'... This disciple of Bahá'u'lláh started life as a newspaper woman, and in that career achieved exceptionally high rank by virtue of unusual intelligence and extraordinary energy... The amount of good she did can not be overestimated."

It would be impossible for the Bahá'í world to trace in its full and rich detail her untiring services. In 1919, we find her visiting every important South American city. Possessing no Spanish or Portuguese literature, and without speaking knowledge of these languages, she was, with the help of translators, heard and read by thousands, and because of her, the first Bahá'í booklet in Portuguese was prepared by Brazilians for publication.

In Europe and Asia, thousands heard her message, from the humblest firesides, to the palaces of royalty. To Thomas Masaryk, first president of the Republic of Czechoslovakia, Martha gave the Bahá'í Teaching; and to King Faisal of Iraq; to Y. S. Tsao, president of the Tsing Hua University, who translated many Bahá'í writings into Chinese; to Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Yugoslavia; to Nishanuma, head of the Board of Religions of Japan; and to Queen Marie of Rumania, of whose interview the Guardian himself wrote:

OUR BAHAI PIONEERS

That our Baha'i pioneers, in the field and at home, are resolved to support the Guardian's call to "hold aloft (the)
Torch whose infant Light heralds birth
(of) effulgent World Order;" no one who reads the swiftly-mounting file of teaching reports can doubt. The American community is at work with the highest determination to spread the Faith in every part. The following notes are but highlights, inadequate representations of the achievements and spirit which the stress of our times calls forth.

In Rhode Island the Cause has been established through the ceaseless efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Don T. McNally, reinforced by the confirming power of the session at Green Acre. Mrs. Helen Wilson of Pawtucket and Miss Elena
Marsello of Providence have registered as believers, and enrollment cards have been requested for two others. Mrs.
McNally has been invited by a colored Episcopal minister to teach a class of fifteen girls in the church. Library books have been placed and are in use.
"It is interesting to note that the Cause has attracted both Negroes and whites, Catholics, Christian Scientists, and two who termed themselves atheists, in adtion to our Jewish friends. Your prayers and those of the many friends are being answered and the true seekers are being attracted, as though to a center, by a mutual gravitation to our great Cause."

Mrs. Beulah Proctor in Nova Scotia was successful in arranging a Baha'i exhibit at the Halifax Exhibition begining August 28th, featuring a large picture of the Temple, with book display and Persian prints. She is also conducting an enthusiastic youth class which met for five weeks during the Summer and has voted to continue this Fall. Two of the larger department stores with rental libraries have agreed to place Baha'i books on their shelves.

A Temple model was displayed without cost in the Fine Arts building of the Utah State Fair in September, through arrangements of Mrs. Margarette Sears of Salt Lake City. Fireside meetings have resulted in two study groups, and Mr. and Mrs. Sears, who recently bought their home, have invited visiting teachers to stop to assist in this work. Much of their early success is due to the fine contacts made in the city by Mr. Sears, through his work in radio.

In far-away Juneau, Alaska, Miss Betty Becker is seeking employment and establishing contacts, both with those whom Miss Kempton had met and with new people. She has reported an initial fireside group with five inquirers, who have asked for weekly study. Despite certain unfavorable elements, such as the strangeness and transiency of many residents in this capital city, Miss Becker is working with the greatest confidence in future results.

Meanwhile in Anchorage Miss Honor Fettig has opened her bookshop and lending library, calling it "The Book Cache." She writes: "I know what a cache means in Alaska. They are familiar landmarks throughout the whole country. A little thatched hut built high up on stilts, to store the food away from the bears and wolves and to keep it dry. The law is that you may open up a cache and eat, but must never leave it empty; always leave something for the trapper or prospector who is lost or starving. So my cache will store books and I pray that it will never be empty." Her most thrilling news, however, is of the first Alaskan Baha'i, Miss Janet Whitenack, who had gone to Anchorage from New York to open a bookshop! On meeting Miss Kempton she relinquished her plans. During this meeting it was discovered that Miss Whitenack had studied the Cause in New York and she was immediately fired with renewed interest. A young woman, graduate of Syracuse University, she has moved to Fairbanks where she is already formulating plans for spreading the Teachings. In her own words: "The more I think about it, the more convinced I am that my whole life experiences, family background, training, education and travel all point to one thing—Baha'i service in the Far North."

A name recently added to our pioneer roll is Miss Martha Fettig, who reached Birmingham, Alabama, on August 1st. Immediate employment as a nurse was found and accepted, although it was in a branch of nursing particularly uncongenial. This job ended the middle of September but Miss Fettig has every expectancy of placement. She has discovered two friends who sponsored a fireside for Ruth Moffett in 1938, and who were present at the World Parliament of Religions in 1893 when the Faith received its first mention in America. Another testimony to the joys of pioneering is added by Miss Fettig: "I have found 'America's Spiritual Mission' a great help in spiritual stimulation and read parts of it every day. I will also say that on reaching Birmingham I felt an indescribable inner happiness which no doubt was due to the prayers of the friends."

Another new pioneer is Mrs. Katherine Moscrop of Vancouver, who began in September a visit of several months to Regina, Saskatchewan. She arrived just in time to arrange a small fireside on September 8th for Rowland Estall, who was passing through the city on business. Miss Frances Mennies and two former members of the Winnipeg Phoenix Club assisted her. "Nothing was allowed to go unchallenged, and it was most evident that these people were greatly impressed by the logical, sane and wonderful Teachings. I am indeed most fortunate to have such fine people so early, and may God help me to lead them to their goal."

A few days before this meeting Mrs. Moscrop, Mr. Estall, Miss Mac McKenna of Vancouver, and Miss Doris Skinner met together in Calgary, Alberta, to discuss the progress of the Faith in Canada. They represented four provinces. During this time a meeting of fifteen non-Baha'i was arranged by Miss Skinner, from which a study class is developing. Recently a radio talk was given in Calgary by Dr. Margaret Bolton. Many Baha'i books are being circulated. Recently the Teaching Committee has been advised of Baha'i work done in Regina by Mrs. Clarice Blair of Los Angeles, shortly after she became a believer a few years ago. Many people were interested and Baha'i literature was widely circulated. Undoubtedly this earlier effort will contribute to the spread of the Faith today.

The activities of Mr. Rowland Estall are heroic in scope. During his first business trip through western Canada as a manufacturers' agent, in addition to the talks in Calgary and Regina mentioned above, he spoke in Vancouver and West Vancouver. He had earlier laid the foundation of his business in visits to Toronto and Montreal, in both of which cities he lectured, as well as in St. Lambert. He also made excellent contacts with two University professors who, with a few others, have started an important social and religious reform movement in Canada and have published a popular textbook of the movement. During July Mr. Estall taught regularly in Winnipeg a study group of six to eight inquirers, following an outline of seventeen lessons which he developed on the World Order, using as a basis of each discussion a different free literature pamphlet which was distributed. The first result of his Winnipeg work is the registration of Miss Lillian Teminson, Dr. Mariette Bolton also visited and spoke in Winnipeg to the Quota Club.

In Reno, Nevada, Miss Helen Griffin is constantly widening her contacts for the Faith through active cooperation and membership in public welfare and civic organizations. On August 27th a "magnificent meeting" with fifteen new people was arranged on short notice for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop and Mrs. Forsyth Ward, returning to California from Louhelen. Mrs. Bishop, who had spoken in Reno during May as well, reported that group much the same, "We were astonished that the work was so promising and the questions so keen . . . Helen’s moving spirit is drawing the one Spirit to the work in Reno. Now she is making contacts at the University." Other recent visitors to Reno were Miss Dagmar Dole, who addressed the first weekly study class, and Mr. Frederick Kluss.

Cheering news has come from Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Dahl in Charleston, W. Va. A number of contacts have been made with individuals and libraries in this city, Beckley and Parkersburg. Books were accepted by the West Virginia State College and its president has expressed his interest to have a Bahá’í speaker. "We are very happy, and thank God for the privilege of having become settled here for the purpose of endeavoring to serve in solidifying the outposts of the Cause on this continent. In the AEF in France I pioneered in going over the top of the infantry as an observer and scout, but there victory was problematical, whereas it is now assured, as our goal is God-given and victory already established by Bahá’u’lláh’s Word."

Nearby in Huntington, W. Va., Mr. Harold Hunt is expanding his teaching work. Fine publicity was received from a columnist of the leading newspaper, who wrote at length and very favorably of the Faith and its representative. As a result, literature was accepted by the Public Library and the librarian, as well as the librarian of Marshall College, have shown considerable interest. Recently Mr. Hunt spoke before the Townsend Club. He has been able to distribute a great deal of Bahá’í literature.

Miss Neysa Bissell has reported the deep interest in the Faith of two women of Rutland and Woodstock, Vermont. The Rutland Free Library has received a donation of books from the Regional Committee.

Working against unfavorable conditions of intense summer heat and the opposition of two ministers who publicly warned their congregations of the Cause, Mrs. Ruth Moffett has achieved notable results in Iowa. After a series of daily meetings, a study group of fifteen was begun in Independence. She then traveled to Waterloo where her campaign consisted of four public lectures and broadcasts on the radio, resulting in a regular class of ten. Both of these groups are meeting twice weekly. In addition, Mrs. Moffett gave several talks at Iowa State College, Cedar Falls.

The New England Regional Committee, through its very active secretary, Mrs. Amelia Bowman, has forwarded registrations of two new members in the Three Rivers Group and the fourth believer in the Portland Group. A Group also exists in Dover and another has just been formed in Portsmouth. Much impetus was given to this Region by the splendid courses at Green Acre. The Committee is planning a circuit for the Temple model through perhaps ten New England cities, and is also financing the placement of 25 copies of Esselmont in Vermont libraries by Mr. Duncan McAlear.

A teaching campaign was carried on one week in August by the Group at Big Bear Lake, California. Nightly public meetings were scheduled in the Community Auditorium, featuring Mrs. Beulah Lewis of Los Angeles. A display of the Temple model was arranged near the post office of this mountain resort, which became "the center of attraction with the vacationists." So effective was this work that it is planned to follow a similar schedule next year.

A multitude of items remain, before this teaching summary can claim even its most superficial completeness. There is nothing for it but to "continue in our next." Yet as we await further news of far-flung activities, may not each of us ponder these words of our beloved Guardian, anxious to discover how we may yet exert our forces to win and merit the heights his faith discerns for us:

"With every fresh crisis that plunges a hapless humanity deeper and deeper into the morass of despair and degradation, the pioneers of the nascent Faith of Bahá’u’lláh are elevated to nobler heights of triumph, evince a rarer spirit of self-abnegation and courage, and disclose more compelling evidences of their capacity and power." "Thiers is the duty to hold, aloft and unchained, the torch of Divine Guidance, as the shades of night descend upon, and ultimately envelop, the entire human race."

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

Louise Caswell sailed for Panama from San Francisco on September 25th, on the S. S. City of Norfolk. John Eichenhauser, Jr., embarked at Los Angeles bound for San Salvador by the same steamer.

Antonio Roca left by motor for Honduras via Mexico. Mrs. Cora Oliver sailed from New York September 29th bound for Panama City. The N. S. A. has ratified the appointment of Mrs. Gayle Woolson and Mrs. Ford for Costa Rica in October.

Mrs. Nurse has arrived in Montevideo for a three-months stay with her son, and Mr. Wilfrid Barton is there also . . . living at present with the leader of our study group, Sr. Simon Rosenzweig. In Santos, Mr. Barton spent an evening with our friends from Washington . . . Mr. and Mrs. Worley. On his way to the Argentine here he also found Miss Holsapple had come down from Bahia to greet the Worleys.

Our teacher — fresh from Latin America — Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart, has been asked to go to Washington and confer with the State Department. Also she had the opportunity of taking the pulpit Sunday night in a Presbyterian church. The ministers and rabbis of Utica all know that Mrs. Stewart is a Bahá’í and all ask her help in their work without any objections.

PROGRESS IN TEMPLE CONSTRUCTION

The Temple Trustees are gratified to report that the contract given to the John J. Earley Studio in August, for the external ornamentation of the lowest third of the nine first story pylons, has been completed well ahead of the schedule date of December 31, and with a saving on the estimated cost.

From the progress report dated November 2:

"The entire quantity of 600 tons of the white quartz from Annapolis Rock, Maryland, has now been accumulated, at the rate of fifty tons per month for one year. This material is stored and on hand in the yard of the Earley Studio at Rosslyn, Virginia, and will be available for the ornamentation of the main story of the Temple next year.

"The casting of the last section of the lowest lift of the main story pylons was completed about the middle of the month (i.e., October). Subsequently, Mr. Earley's men have pointed up, cleaned and finished the surfaces of the nine sections of the pyramid ornamentation. Before leaving the work, the scaffolding was removed about the pylons and the foundation structure and grounds were cleared of material and debris so as to leave the structure in a presentable appearance until work is resumed next April."

The meaning is this that in every place first a Mashriq'1-Adhkar must be founded; then a School for the education for orphan children, and the poor; then the Hospital and Medical Dispensary must be founded; then the

"THE NECESSARY FOUNDATION" FOR
INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

1. "These undertakings ... require ... on the part of the National Spiritual Assembly and of both the National Teaching and Inter-America Committees, painstaking investigations preparatory to the sending of settlers and itinerant teachers ..."

2. "The number of Bahá'í teachers, be they settlers or travelers, must be substantially increased."

3. "The material resources to be placed at their disposal must be multiplied, and efficiently administered."

4. "The literature with which they should be equipped must be vastly augmented."

5. "The publicity that should aid them in the distribution of such literature should be extended, centrally organized, and vigorously conducted."

6. "The possibilities latent in these countries should be diligently exploited, and systematically developed."

7. "The various obstacles raised by the widely-varying political and social conditions ... should be closely surveyed and determinedly surmounted."

8. "The careful translation of such important Bahá'í writings as are related to the history, the teachings, or the Administrative Order of the Faith, and their wide and systematic dissemination ... would appear to be the chief and most urgent measures to be taken simultaneously with the arrival of the pioneer workers in those fields."

9. "In countries where no objections can be raised by the civil authorities or any influential circles, this measure should be reinforced by the publication, in various organs of the Press, of carefully worded articles and letters, designed to impress upon the general public certain features of the stirring history of the Faith, and the range and character of its teachings."

10. "Every laborer in those fields, whether as traveling teacher or settler, should ... make it his chief and constant concern to mix, in a friendly manner, with all sections of the population ... study the approach best suited to them, to concentrate ... on a few ... and to endeavor ... to implant such love, zeal and devotion in their hearts as to enable them to become in turn self-sufficient and independent promoters of the Faith in their respective localities."

11. "An effort ... can and should be made, not only by representative Bahá'í bodies, but also by prospective teachers, as well as by other individual believers to seize every opportunity to make the acquaintance, and awaken the genuine interest, of such people who are either citizens of these countries, or are in any way connected with them."

12. "Care ... should be exercised lest in their eagerness to further the international interests of the Faith they frustrate their purpose, and turn away, through any act that might be misconstrued as an attempt to proselytize and bring undue pressure upon them, those whom they wish to win over to their Cause."

13. "I would particularly direct my appeal to those American believers who may find it possible, whatever be their calling or employment to establish permanently their residence in such countries as may offer them a reasonable prospect of earning the means of livelihood."

14. "Should they find it impossible to take advantage of so rare and sacred a privilege, let them ... to appoint a deputy who, on that believer's behalf, will arise and carry out so noble an enterprise."

15. "As those who have been able to leave their homes and country. . . a special duty ... devolves upon them to keep ... in constant touch with the National Committee specifically entrusted with the promotion of their work, and to cooperate with their fellow-believers in those countries."

HOW TO LIST BAHÁ'Í PUBLICATIONS

A recent letter from the Guardian advises the National Assembly that all Assemblies, in issuing programs or any pamphlet containing a list of authorized Bahá'í literature, should place the writings of 'Abdu'l-Bahá before, and not after, the works of any Bahá'í, including those of the Guardian himself. This is a mark of respect and in deference to the Master’s unique station.

MEETINGS AND CONFERENCES AT SAN FRANCISCO

Between October 12 and 15 the National Spiritual Assembly, with the help and cooperation of the Assemblies of the Bay region, conducted three public meetings, a regional conference, and also met in consultation with the Teaching and Inter-America Committees on important current projects.

The first public meeting was held Thursday evening, October 12 at the Fairmont Hotel. The program included: Leroy Ioas, Chairman, and addresses by Dr. Herbert I. Priestly, Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Horace Holley.

On Sunday, October 15, a Vesper Service was held at the Temple of Religion and Tower of Peace, Treasure Island, and a public meeting was conducted in the same hall that evening.

The Vesper Service program: Mrs. Charles M. Cooper, Chairman, address by Harlan Ober, and readings by Mrs. Thomas Collins. Music by Roberta Butler McDaniel, soprano, Esther Hjelte, organist and Laura Kelsey Allen, violinist.

SHOGHI RABBANI. October 23, 1939.

Sunday, October 15, 1939 was designated Bahá'í Day at the World's Fair.

The Regional Conference, with Mr. A. Y. Seto presiding, brought together a good number of believers with the members of the National Assembly, and an extensive agenda was presented for consultation, the essential items being: recent Messages from the Guardian, the Plans for the Third Year of the Seven Year Plan, progress of Temple construction, and current Teaching activities in North and South America.

CREDENTIALS OF BELIEVERS FROM THE ORIENT

The National Spiritual Assembly feels that Oriental believers visiting America should transmit their credentials to the Secretary of the National Assembly, so that proper credentials may be issued by the National Assembly for their use while in America. If, therefore, a Bahá'í from the Orient should hereafter present his credentials to any local Assembly, that Assembly is requested to see that the credentials are transmitted.

BAHÁ'Í LITERATURE

The Publishing Committee announces two new pamphlets.

Assurance of Immortality, a brief compilation on immortality very suitable for giving to non-Bahá'ís who suffer bereavement and need Divine assurance. Four pages, sold in lots of ten copies only. Price per ten copies $0.50

The Bahá'í Teachings On Universal Peace, a statement by the National Spiritual Assembly submitted to the United States Government in 1934 and to the Government of the Dominion of Canada in 1935 as basis for any necessary subsequent appeal for the exemption of Bahá'ís from active military duty in war. Sold in lots of ten only. 12-page pamphlet. Price per ten copies $0.50.

The friends are reminded of the extreme importance of the Guardian's The Goal of a New World Order as the Bahá'í exposition of the vital questions of international order and peace. Shoghi Effendi himself has attributed special importance to this pamphlet for public teaching use. Sold in lots of ten only. Price per ten copies $0.50.

BAHÁ'Í RING STONES

For a long time, Bahá'í ring stones have not been available, but notice is now given that the Photograph and.
Sales Committee is again in a position to fill orders. The stones are oval, some brown and some green, with the Baha’i text gold inlaid. The price each is $2.50 or $3.00, according to size. The ring stones can be obtained from Mr. Harry E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Illinois.

PROPERTY AT COLORADO SPRINGS TRANSFERRED BY MRS. LOULIE A. MATHEWS TO BAHAI TRUSTEES

On September 4, 1939 Mrs. Loulie A. Mathews executed an Indenture of Trust under which title to property at Pine Valley, Colorado Springs, is to be vested in Trustees for the benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly, Mrs. Mathews retaining full use and control of the property during her life.

This munificent donation is an important contribution to the facilities of the American Baha’i community for service to the Faith, Mrs. Mathews having plans for developing at Pine Valley a School for the training of Baha’is for international teaching.

This plan was welcomed by the Guardian in a letter addressed to Mrs. Mathews on December 14, 1938: “The Guardian feels also deeply appreciative of your generous offering to the N.S.A. of your ranch in Colorado Springs. Your idea to turn this property into a training school for Inter-America teaching work, he feels, is splendid.”

IMPORTANT NOTICE ABOUT MATERIAL FOR THE BAHAI WORLD VOL. VIII

In order to comply with the instructions of the Guardian all material for The Baha’i World Vol. VIII, must be ready and in the hands of the chairman of the editorial staff by December first. Any manuscripts received after that date cannot be assured of either safety in transmission or acceptance by the Guardian. Many important assignments are still unfulfilled and the editors would emphasize the need for careful attention to the instructions of Shoghi Effendi.

Address all manuscripts to: Mrs. Nellie S. French, Chairman, 786 Chester Avenue, San Marino, California.

FALL CLASSES OPEN FOR CHILDREN

The Child Education Committee extends its thanks to the forty-three communities who responded to roll call this fall. Many expressed real regret that no organized work for children had yet been started in their cities, although a number of Baha’i children could be counted among their numbers. We call the attention of the friends to the appeal of the beloved Master during His sojourn among us, for active teaching among the children. For as few as two Baha’i children, He would often say, classes in spiritual education should be formed. These children are the next line of defense; they will become Baha’i teachers!

From, New York, Chicago, Milwau­kee, Oklahoma City, East Cleveland, Peoria, Urbana, Racine, Riverton, Philadelphia, Manoa, Cincinnati, St. Paul, Binghamton, Maywood, Helena, Flint, Wilmette, Toronto, and Lima, reports of organized work were received, and in addition to these have come encouraging accounts of work done by some parents with individual children removed from group life.

A few of our groups have kindly permitted us to share their pictures with the children. We hope for many more pictures, and reports of their noble and inspiring work.

CHILD EDUCATION COMMITTEE

WINTER SESSIONS AT LOUHELEN SCHOOL

Louheilen is no longer merely a summer school! A winter session has been arranged, for those Baha’is who have sufficient pioneer spirit to face the inconveniences of December weather at the ranch in order to learn how to study and to teach the Faith of Baha’u’llah, both at home and abroad. For seven days, December 26th through January 1st, instructors, experienced in the field, they represent, will give courses in:

1. Pioneer Teaching, especially in Central and South America. This will include practical information for those who wish to prepare themselves to teach, sooner or later, in those localities.

2. Study Methods for Deepening in the Faith, a course which will provide a frame of reference for an orderly study of the teachings.

3. Methods of Teaching without Public Speaking. This will be valuable to local communities wishing to conduct classes in which the members themselves can take part. It will include instructions for actual study during the class period.

Because winter accommodations at the ranch are at present limited, not more than ten students can be registered for this session, and these must be willing to sacrifice a measure of personal comfort for this opportunity to increase their understanding of the Cause of Baha’u’llah and to teach it.

To make reservations for this session, write to Mrs. L. W. Eggleston, Lou­heilen Ranch, Davison, Michigan. The rates are $2.25 per day.

ARCHIVES COMMITTEE

What is without doubt the most detailed and carefully prepared “Baha’i Reminiscences” to be written by any American believer, has been completed and placed in the National Archives by Mr. Charles Mason Remey. This work was typed in duplicate on standard letter size paper, and consists, at present, of fifty-one bound volumes. It will grow in size as time goes on. In addition to the typed material this work is profusely illustrated with facsimiles of many historic Baha’i manuscripts and with numerous photographs.

As time goes on Mr. Remy’s Reminiscences will increasingly be regarded as an invaluable source book for future historians and biographers of the Cause.

It is hoped that this important gift will encourage many of the believers, particularly those who have been active as international teachers, to place a complete collection of their Baha’i papers and correspondence in the National Archives. It is particularly important just now, in order that the history of the achievement of the Seven Year Plan may be complete and may be preserved for posterity, that the Baha’i papers or manuscripts of the pioneer teachers in Central and South America, in Mexico, in Alaska, and in the United States and Canada, may come into the Archives of the National Spiritual Assembly under which these teachers are functioning. Doubtless this can be arranged in cooperation with the Teaching and Inter-American Committees.

The Archives and History Committee wishes to correct a former announcement with reference to the Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Baha addressed to Mrs. Agnes S. Parsons, which were presented to the Archives recently by Miss Leona Barnitz of Washington. In this collection were forty-one original Tablets to Mrs. Parsons with an original translation of one Tablet and typed copies of original translations of the others; also, six original Tablets to other members of Mrs. Parsons’ family.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

The Library Committee would like to make the following suggestion to the various Assemblies in order to increase the circulation of the collections of Baha’i books in Main Public Libraries. Many readers do not visit the Main Libraries excepting for further reference study, and being unaware of the teachings, do not call for our books which are frequently not placed on open shelves. If these books are to be used more extensively, it seems necessary to call attention to them by placing more basic books in Branch Libraries. Some time ago, the Philadelphia Assembly made a survey of the thirty-six Branch Libraries in that city and presented a copy of Esslemont or Spirit of the Age to each of these libraries. The National Teaching Committee has asked this committee to bring this matter to the attention of the Assemblies in the hope that more Assemblies will try to arrange to place at least one basic book in as many Branch Libraries as possible this year. Since the library systems differ in their distribution of books to Branch Libraries, it is suggested that the Main Public Library be contacted before presenting books. In some large cities, as New York City, the Branch Libraries will accept books for their shelves which have been previously approved and accepted in the Main Library. In such library systems, the presentation can be made directly to the Branch Libraries. This committee will be glad to assist the Assemblies in giving information which will aid them in making the contacts and attracting the interest of the librarians to our books. Such a project would of necessity take a long period of time before its accomplishment, especially in the larger cities; but no matter how small a beginning is made, it will fill an urgent need.

ENROLLMENT AND TRANSFERS

IN MEMORIAM

“It is clear and evident that when the veils that conceal the realities of the manifestations of the Names and Attributes of God, nay of all created things visible or invisible, have been rent asunder, nothing except the Sign of God will remain—a sign which He, himself, hath placed within these realities. This sign will endure as long as is the wish of the Lord thy God, the Lord of the heavens and of the earth. If such be the blessings conferred on all created things, how superior must be the destiny of the true believer, whose existence and life are to be regarded as the originating purpose of all creation.”

NEWS OF EAST AND WEST

Page 8 of an attractive illustrated booklet published by Universal Atlas Cement Company consists of an illustration of the Temple, with accompanying description. Page 13 is a colored photograph of the Reception Room of the Company in New York, showing a mural of the Temple directly behind the reception desk.

American Astrology Magazine for November, 1939 contains an article entitled “New World Religion” by Dane Rudhyar in which the author writes many excellent ideas about the Faith.

Writing of the Bahá’í Exhibit at the Wisconsin State Fair (illustrated in this issue of Bahá’í News) the local Teaching committee says: “The Temple was a magnet and on the added potency of the Creative Words of Bahá’u’lláh, attracted many people. One of the great barriers of World Peace, Prejudice, was broken down in many instances through contact with visitors at the Booth. A number of books were on display and attracted great attention. Some 190 names were registered in the guest book, many of whom expressed the desire of attending classes and lectures, and about 1800 people stopped and asked questions about the Temple itself and the Cause.”

From far-off Baghdad on October 12 came this cablegram: “Sudden passing beloved Martha Root caused inexpressible grief. National Assembly extend heartfelt condolences (to) dear American Bahá’ís.”

The new Assembly of Helena, Montana writes that “Helena is awakening. We recently moved into a centrally located room and have attracted several new people of capacity. They have purchased books and study outlines and have attended study class regularly and show a genuine interest in the Cause. Already they have expressed their desire to become able to tell the world.”

Nearly ninety believers attended the meeting conducted by the Oakland Assembly on October 16 to commemorate the Visit made by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to the Goodall home at Oakland in 1912. Dinner was served at the Women’s City Club, after which remarks were made by Mrs. Ella Goodall Cooper, J. V. Matteson, Miss Ella Bailey, Mrs. S. W. French, Louis G. Gregory, Mrs. Katherine Franklin, Mrs. H. Eno­gene Hoag, Lorne Matteson, Mrs. Matteson, Horace Holley, and Leroy Ioas. Arthur Ioas presided at the meeting.

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the British Isles incorporated under The Companies Act, 1929, as an unlimited company without a share capital, on August 5, 1939. The incorporation papers are published as a Memorandum of Association, accompanied by Articles of Association corresponding to By-Laws. This action is an important achievement by the National Assembly. The document will no doubt be published in the next issue of The Bahá’í World.

Correction is made of an error on page 8 of Bahá’í News for August. The correct name should have been Miss Bertha Matthesien.

Oglethorpe University, Georgia, has selected the Book of Certitude (Tablet of Iqán) for preservation in the Crypt of Civilization. “The world’s most authentic sources of knowledge contained in books are being selected by a committee of experts for microfilming, page by page, so that they may be preserved for the world of the future. This work has been going on now for nearly two years and will culminate when the records are sealed with the closing of the Crypt in May, 1940. It is to remain inviolate until the year 8113 A. D.”

I implore Thee, O my God, by Thy Most Great Name, to enrapture the nations through the potency of the Word which Thou didst ordain to be the king of all words, the Word whereby the goodly pearls of Thy hidden wisdom were uncovered, and the gem-like mysteries which were wrapped up within Thee were unaveled. Deprive them not, by Thy grace and bounty, of the things Thou didst desire for them, and suffer them not to be far removed from the shores of the ocean of Thy presence.

Every existence, whether seen or unseen, O Lord, testifieth that Thy mercy hath surpassed all created things, and Thy loving-kindness embraced the entire creation. Look upon them, I entreat Thee, with the eyes of Thy mercy. Thou art the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Compassionate. Do with them as becometh Thy glory, and Thy majesty, and Thy greatness, and Thy bounteousness and Thy grace. Deal not with them according to the limitations imposed upon them, or the manifold vicissitudes of their earthly life.

BAHÁ'ÍS AND WAR

The following letter from the Guardian on this important subject was addressed to the N. S. A. of the British Isles, and is reprinted from the bulletin of that Assembly dated September, 1939:

"His instructions on this matter, conveyed in a letter addressed to your Assembly during last November were not intended for that particular occasion, but were meant for present conditions, and for any such emergency as may arise in the immediate future."

"It is still his firm conviction that the believers, while expressing their readiness to unreservedly obey any directions that the authorities may issue concerning national service in time of war, should also, and while there is yet no outbreak of hostilities, appeal to the government for exemption from active military service in a combatant capacity, stressing the fact that in doing so they are not prompted by any selfish considerations but by the sole and supreme motive of upholding the Teachings of their Faith, which make it a moral obligation for them to desist from any act that would involve them in direct warfare with their fellow-humans of any other race or nation."

"There are many other avenues through which the believers can assist in times of war by enlisting in services of a non-combatant nature—services that do not involve the direct shedding of blood—such as ambulance work, anti-air raid precaution service, office and administrative works, and it is for such types of national service that they should volunteer."

"It is immaterial whether such activities would still expose them to dangers, either at home or in the front, since their desire is not to protect their lives, but to desist from any acts of wilful murder."

"The friends should consider it their conscientious duty as loyal members of the Faith, to apply for such exemption, even though there may be slight prospect of their obtaining the consent and approval of the authorities to their petition. It is most essential that in times of such national excitement and emergency as those through which so many countries in the world are now passing that the believers should not allow themselves to be carried away by the passions agitating the masses, and act in a manner that would make them deviate from the path of wisdom and moderation, and lead them to violate, however reluctantly and indirectly, the spirit as well as the letter of the Teachings."

"THE PASSING OF DEAREST MARTHA"

In a letter dated October 20, 1939, addressed to Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer, the Guardian, through his secretary, refers to the passing of Miss Martha L. Root.

"The very sad and indeed distressing news of the passing away of our beloved Martha was a great shock to the Guardian, who feels unutterably sorry at this heavy blow sustained by the Cause. Her departure constitutes the heaviest blow which the teaching force not only in America but throughout the entire Bahá'í world has sustained since the passing of our beloved Master. May the memory of the distinguished services it had been her unique privilege to render in so many fields and over such a long and uninterrupted period of years serve as a source of continued inspiration to the present-day and future generations of..."
Baha’i teachers, to whom she will indeed ever be the very embodiment of those teaching qualities which only a few Baha’i teachers, whether in the East or the West, can claim to have attained.

"To you, and to all the dear American friends who are now so profoundly deploRING beloved Martha’s passing, the Guardian feels moved to convey the assurances of his deepest and most loving sympathy in your great bereavement. May Bahá’u’lláh comfort your grief-stricken hearts, and cause this calamity to further cement the unity, deepen the devotion and increase the resourcefulness of the American believers, and in particular those dear pioneers who are so indefatigably laboring in foreign and distant fields.

In the Guardian’s hand: “The passing of dearest Martha and the circumstances of her severe and painful illness have brought profound sorrow, grief-stricken hearts, and cause this letter to convey the assurance of his deepest and most loving sympathy in your great bereavement. May Bahá’u’lláh comfort your grief-stricken hearts, and cause this calamity to further cement the unity, deepen the devotion and increase the resourcefulness of the American believers, and in particular those dear pioneers who are so indefatigably laboring in foreign and distant fields.”

—Shoghi Effendi

December 13, 1939.

The strong and solid foundation upon which must be supported all Baha’i enterprises is the character of the Baha’i community here in North America itself. With every step the community takes in the direction of spiritual maturity, or ethical improvement or social unity, the power available for the tasks of the Seven Year Plan is augmented in a most mysterious way. The National Fund can only be replenished out of this great reservoir of Baha’i unity; and from this same reservoir also come those quickened souls who arise to plant the banner of His Faith in foreign lands.

It is the quality of our local community life which determines the mighty outcome of the forces struggling to establish the “advent of Divine Justice” in this age. We cannot hope for heroic souls to be nourished out of collective indifference, nor funds to be sacrificed in an atmosphere of personality, nor our numbers to be augmented by teaching aimed to bring groups under personal influence rather than within the orbit of Divine law.

From time to time, therefore, prayerful attention should be turned upon the character of our local community life, holding its every aspect and element up to the standard laid down by the Master and by Shoghi Effendi, to see what we might do to exalt these daily activities to the plane of radiance and understanding.

Have we by Assembly and community consultation adopted teaching plans reflecting the full wisdom and capacity of the believers? Are the members of the Spiritual Assembly fully conscious of the nature of their trusteeship in an institution created to serve the highest interests of the people? Do we, each one individually contribute to the spirituality and enthusiasm of Baha’i gatherings, or come to them cherishing some secret resentment or hope? Have we come to realize the duty laid upon us to keep informed of the Guardian’s messages and the national plans and activities reported through Baha’i News and other channels?

Special consideration might be given to the importance of the spirit that should animate all Baha’i teaching, whether in one’s own home as a fireside group or in groups and audiences not yet part of the Baha’i community. The rights of the individual believer were analyzed by the National Spiritual Assembly some years ago and a statement on the subject published in Baha’i News, later reprinted in Baha’i Procedure (Section Two, Sheet 20). This has apparently been taken by some of the friends to mean that the element of assembly authority does not apply to groups taught in one’s own home. If this were so, then groups could be maintained whose activities and aims might lie entirely outside the local Baha’i community. Teachings could be given out which might incline many new friends in the wrong direction.

The truth is, of course, that the qualification of faith under which we pledge “close association with the spirit as well as the form of the present day Baha’i administration throughout the world” renders any artificial separation of the individual from the community impossible. It is as the Guardian declared: “Shoghi Effendi would urge every Baha’i who feels the urge to exercise his right of teaching unofficially the Cause, to keep in close touch with the Local Spiritual Assembly of the locality in which he is working. The Local Spiritual Assembly while reserving for itself the right to control such activities on the part of individual...
Baha’is, should do its utmost to encourage such teachers and to put at their disposal whatever facilities they would need in such circumstances. Should any differences arise, the National Spiritual Assembly would naturally have to intervene and adjust matters.” (Baha’i Procedure, Section One, Sheet 16).

But all this is means to an end, and the end consists in developing the Baha’i community to become an ever-increasing power to establish the truth on earth. Let us open our minds and hearts, and pray for capacity to confirm and bring in persons of character, intelligence and spiritual vision, The Cause of God is for all mankind.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

THE DETERMINATION OF MEMBERSHIP

The National Spiritual Assembly feels it desirable to record a brief explanation of the twofold authority involved in the question of voting membership in the Baha’i community, the authority of the local Assembly, and that of the National Assembly.

The By-Laws vest original authority over membership in the local body, with the National Assembly serving as final authority when local decisions are appealed. However, in Baha’i Procedure is found the statement that local Assemblies, before removing names from the voting list, should refer the matter to the National Assembly and obtain its advice before taking action.

To remove any impression that this supplementary ruling involves a discrepancy in view of the statements in the By-Laws, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to point out the following facts:

1. It is possible for a local Assembly to exercise original jurisdiction over the admission of believers to the voting list because the Guardian has laid down a set of qualifications of membership which is uniform throughout the entire Baha’i community, and the effect of which is to provide the local Assembly with a clear and simple code.

2. There are general qualifications covering the removal of members from the voting list, but nothing in the nature of a clear and simple code which all local Assemblies could apply in a uniform manner. Lacking anything in the nature of a judicial code, each Assembly would have to base action upon its own degree of experience and understanding; and the result would inevitably be to involve the matter of expulsion in overwhelming complication. In one locality a believer would be expelled for reasons which in another locality might seem entirely insufficient. In one city the factor of sentimentality might prevent the operation of any discipline, while in another city a rigid insistence upon Baha’i laws and principles might result in the operation of discipline at the expense of unity and spiritual truth.

3. The National Spiritual Assembly therefore retains the right and duty to give definite permission before the local Assembly can either suspend or expel any member of the Baha’i community.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

THE FORMATION OF NEW ASSEMBLIES

Official Notice to Assemblies and Groups

The National Spiritual Assembly completes the details of procedure to be followed when new Assemblies are formed.

1. Groups having nine or more declared believers, all resident in the same civil community, are to apply before February 1 for authority to form an Assembly on April 21 of that year.

2. Any member of the group who is a voting believer in an already established adjacent community must withdraw from that community before joining the group applying for the right to form a new Assembly.
3. When a group is qualified to form an Assembly, all its members are obliged to join in asking for the authority to elect.

4. All established Assemblies are to report their voting list to the National Assembly by February 1 each year, and the voting list is not to include the names of any believers who have joined a group which is planning to form a new Assembly on April 21.

5. Applications from groups, and voting lists of established communities, must be in the hands of the National Assembly by February 1.

6. Groups which form a new Assembly on April 21 cannot be represented at the Convention held that same year.

7. Groups authorized to form a new Assembly will receive notice from the National Assembly not later than April 1, together with copies of the proper form for use in reporting its formation to the National Assembly.

In a recent letter written by the Guardian to the National Assembly he emphasizes one aspect of the matter as follows: "He wishes me to stress the fact that from now on any group that is formed must belong to one civil community, as otherwise endless confusion and misunderstanding would ensue. The limits of each civil community must be clearly recognized, and no overlapping should be allowed under any circumstances."

PUBLIC MEETING AND REGIONAL CONFERENCE AT NEW YORK

The latest in the series of public meetings held by the National Spiritual Assembly in cooperation with local Assemblies was conducted at the Bahá'í Center in New York City Thursday evening, November 30, the hall being thronged with an interested and sympathetic audience.

AFIELD WITH OUR REGIONAL COMMITTEES

For some months, so great has been the volume of news received from every part of the United States and Canada, the National Teaching Committee has found it impossible to include in its monthly surveys an adequate description of the far-flung work of its thirteen Regional Committees. Yet the responsibility which has been imposed upon these units of the Administrative Order by Shoghi Effendi is great and serious. Writing on April 17th, 1939, he said: "The National Spiritual Assembly, the National Teaching Assembly, the Regional and local teaching committees . . . should utilize every possible means to fan the zeal, enrich the resources and insure the solidarity and permanency of the work, of those who . . . have arisen to face the hazards and perils of so holy and historic an adventure." And in The Advent of Divine Justice, addressing all who "are holding administrative positions" on any of the above-mentioned bodies, he admonished them "to bear in mind the vital and urgent necessity of insuring, within as short a time as possible, the formation . . . of groups, however small and rudimentary, and of providing every facility within their power to enable these newly-formed nuclei to evolve, swiftly and along sound lines, into properly functioning, self-sufficient, and recognized Assemblies." (p. 46.)

The role of the Regional Teaching Committees, in cooperation with their co-workers, is thus clear-cut and dynamic. It is in an effort to clarify their vision, strengthen their organization, and widen the scope of their indispensable services, that this series of articles has been undertaken. Each month we shall visit a different Regional Committee and by first-hand observation discover its method of operation and its achievements, confident that in each example there lies an important contribution for its fellows.

The Committee for Ohio, Indiana, and Western Pennsylvania, with membership of Florence Reeb, Secretary, Frank Warner, Helen McCoy, Mary Elmore, and Lothar Schurgast, was organized on July 16th. Its functions it conceived as assistance to the fifteen isolated believers, development of areas not taken over by Assemblies, and consultation with Assemblies or Groups (two as of July, 1939) at their request. A letter was therefore addressed to each Assembly in the region, stating the Committee's readiness to discuss teaching plans. A second letter was sent to each isolated Bahá'í, offering similar consultation as well as to provide teachers and free literature.

As a result, four joint meetings were held with the following Assemblies in their home communities: Columbus, Ohio, on August 13th; Dayton, Ohio, on September 10th; Indianapolis, Ind., on September 17th; and Pittsburgh, Pa., on October 22nd. Public meetings were sometimes scheduled in connection with the Committee's visit. Growing out of the teaching conferences were innumerable suggestions, most of them generally applicable, which are summarized below. In describing one such meeting, the Secretary wrote: "A very solemn and inspiring consultation period followed, each one expressing himself freely and frankly."
The work of organized communities was found to be of three kinds: consolidation, attraction of new people, and opening new cities.

1. Consolidate the community through (a) spreading the teaching responsibility among more believers; (b) classes for training teachers; (c) definite responsibilities for youth members; (d) quizzes on essential administrative principles.

2. Attract new believers by: (a) a contacts committee; (b) building up a mailing list of progressive and humanitarian people; (c) enclosing teaching pamphlets with mailed invitations; (d) asking each Bahá’í to mail a selected number of pamphlets monthly, according to a predetermined sequence; (e) fireside meetings to supplement public meetings, which should be viewed only as a starting point; (f) “spilling out” into new sections of the city.

3. Open new cities by: (a) finding a few sympathetic people and strengthening their interest by personal contacts, rather than promoting large public meetings; (b) utilizing club contacts; (c) making regular calls; (d) providing articles for newspapers; (e) establishing a strong nucleus as a foundation for later public work; (f) remembering at all times that “We are the planters; Bahá’u’lláh the Reaper; there is no way of measuring our work.”

As proof of the efficacy of these principles, teaching has been developed in the following new cities of the Region this year: Gahana, Groveport, Granville, Lithopolis, Urbana, Springboro, Troy, Piqua, and Chillicothe, all in Ohio.

As previously noted, the Committee also addressed a letter to the fifteen isolated believers, enclosing a questionnaire on the present status of their Bahá’í work and covering such points as the opportunities for speakers or fireside groups, and the need for literature in public libraries or for personal distribution. Two pamphlets were enclosed in each letter, one for the isolated believer and one to be given to a friend.

Seven replies to this preliminary inquiry, and to these a second letter was sent, including further literature and offering to forward The Advent of Divine Justice if not already received.

To those who had not replied, the Committee wrote a second letter, asking the following questions:

1. Have you signed a registration card as an isolated believer?
2. Have you ever been registered with a Bahá’í Community?
3. If so, which Community?
4. Is the address we have used your present address?
5. Are you receiving the Bahá’í News regularly?

With the passing of one who was the foremost exemplar, “the first, finest fruit” of the Formative Age, every Bahá’í pioneer and indeed, every servant of Bahá’u’lláh who in action or life is a teacher of the Cause, must feel a deepened determination to take up some measure of the great work to which she was dedicated. To Martha Reimer, the Master wrote His glorious promise: “... thou art sowing a seed that shall in the long run give rise to thousands of harvests. ...” Yet to each of us, however circumscribed, comes the solemn assurance that to “proclaim unceasingly His Cause... shall be better for you than all the treasures of the past and of the future, if ye be of them that comprehend this truth.” And from the efficacy of these words of Bahá’u’lláh no least follower less to withstand the urge to acquaint others with the warm, stimulating and essential truths they encompass. . . .” Lloyd Byars, former Bakersfield Bahá’, is also living in Salt Lake City and these three are sponsoring study classes on Administration and the Thirty-six Lessons. In September the Temple model was displayed at the Utah State Fair. “At first it seemed that we were going to buy space and have a booth, but after much investigation we found... that we could enter it in the Fine Arts Building, free of charge since it was not in competition. The model is placed at a very strategic place in the building, in the center of the floor on a rather large table. Surrounding it are rows and rows of oil paintings covering the walls. They make an interesting background for the model.”

In Winnipeg, Rowland Estall is teaching an enlarged study group, following a course worked out with the President of the Phoenix Club which is built on the principles that “the average person does not think from ideas and principles to method and practice but in the reverse order, from practical things, institutions, methods back to principles and motives; that most people are better observers than philosophers and grasp the nature of causes only after observation of their effects; hence, that we can best introduce them to the Bahá’í Faith by outlining first, the nature of the Bahá’í World Community as it exists today and its past achievements, secondly, its ultimate purpose and principles and, only lastly, its motivating influence and source.” His course is thus divided into three parts: (1) Structure of the World Community; (2) World Civilization, the Goal; (3) A World Faith, the Foundation. A report will be made later as to the success of this method. Meantime many important contacts are being made. Mr. Estall has been invited to address the congregation of the Unitarian Church, whose minister is an Icelandic. “Incidentally there are some 10,000 Icelandic people in Winnipeg, which is second only in number to the population in Reykjavik, capital of Iceland.”

Katherine Moscrop left nine to twelve persons interested in the Faith and ready for a fireside meeting, as she departed from Regina, Sask., on December 8th to return to her home in Vancouver for the holidays. Two very helpful friends have been the public librarian, who accepted books for the library, and the retired Dean of Women of Regina College. A proprietor of a camera shop “was so interested in the architecture (of the Temple) and what it stood for that he is making a trip to Wilmette this winter just to see it. . . . He is a world traveler and has seen all the world’s important buildings, but nothing to compare with our own Temple.” On Armistice week-end Mrs. Moscrop visited Winnipeg and was able to assist Rowland Estall with several of his students. In summarizing her Regina experience, Mrs. Moscrop, who celebrated her first Bahá’í anniversary in October, wrote: “I don’t think I have ever been so happy and uplifted as I have been here. The spiritual joy and satisfaction experienced at times has been nearly overwhelming, and often I have felt strength and help coming to me when I need it most. Especially when teaching, I try to leave the channels free for power from above, and sometimes answers to questions will come to me in a miraculous fashion, truly the promises of the Master made manifest.” She hopes to return to Regina after January 1st.

In Calgary, Alberta, a regular study group has been meeting since September. “Among the different beliefs represented are Christian Science, Unity, Theosophy, Buddhist, Catholic, and British Israel, so you can see for yourself that anything can happen at our meetings, and it generally does!” It is apparent that our pioneer, Doris Skinner, has a nice sense of humor for she continues: “It is amazing, isn’t it, this power the Cause has to disrupt our quiet existence and transplant us in strange cities among strange people. I was discussing this with one of my class when she said she didn’t see how anyone had the courage. I carefully explained that it was not courage that was required, but rather that certain something called faith. She promptly replied, ‘That’s not faith you’ve got, that’s sheer luck,’ and thus blasted not only my masterly explanation but me too! The trials of a pioneer!”

Mrs. Beulah Proctor has forwarded a long and fascinating report of her Bahá’í exhibit at the Provincial Exhibition in Halifax, N. S. For a week beginning August 28 she was the only attendant, working from morning to 11 p.m. Persian prints were used, with the Greatest Name and a large sign captioned “Bahá’í Faith.” Much interest was aroused and many people have continued to follow up their contacts by calling upon Mrs. Proctor to borrow literature and discuss the Faith. Although Halifax is living under war conditions, with blockouts, planes overhead day and night, survivors from torpedoed ships arriving, and the city full of soldiers and sailors,—our pioneer is having fireside groups almost every night. Her most successful work continues with the youth, and the following account of one member seems too stimulating to omit, of “a student from Dalhousie University, an East Indian from Trinidad. . . . His father is the Missions minister for the United Church there and it was through the missions that he was sent to Halifax to get his letters so that he could continue teaching in Trinidad. After our friendship ripened he told me, ‘To listen to the missionaries there you were under the impression that you would be treated as an equal here, but I have been sadly awakened to the opposite of this.’ He had managed to go along for a year without mixed friendships. . . . Last Wednesday we (the youth group) got onto the subject of oneness and equality of races... They all had certain limitations and believed in oneness up to the point of marriage, and then thought the line should be drawn there... R. asked if he might speak and said, 'I for one believe in different races marrying and since reading the Bahá’í books I notice that Bahá’u’lláh has said that He would raise up a race of men that our present people could not realize in their greatest imagination. It might interest you to know that the beginning of his promise is taking place in Trinidad. There is not racial prejudice and the offspring of these mixed marriages are beginning to show a finer type of mind and even appearance.' He went on to say that he was in love with a girl who was three-quarters Chinese and one-quarter colored, a musician, graduated from college with high honors... He told the story of his social life here and then said, 'I am going to study the Bahá’í Cause because it is the only religion that lives what it teaches. The only happiness I have had in your country I have had through Mrs. Proctor... I hope with all my heart that the National Teaching Committee will send a pioneer to Trinidad as they have one point they will not have to struggle with, and that is racial prejudice.'

The arrival of Mabel and Howard Ives and Mary Barton in Memphis, Tenn., brings another demonstration of the confirmations promised by Bahá’u’lláh. On their first Sunday in this new city, October 15, they attended the Unitarian Church. "The greatest thrill was hearing the minister read for a Scripture lesson from the words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, quite a long selection; no credit given to the author however!" The minister has since asked Mrs. Ives to take the pulpit in his absence. Many friends were made at the Church that first day and five women were found who had previously contacted the Faith, two in Wilmette, the others in Yonkers, Urbana, and through Marie Hopper. Later while dining in a restaurant, our pioneers were approached by a young woman who introduced herself as a former resident of Portsmouth; she was most eager to hear of the progress of the Cause and, although living twenty miles distant in Hernando, Miss., came for a discussion one evening. With this auspicious beginning, Mrs. Ives began the real work of arranging a campaign of six lectures for the first week of November, which drew an attendance of thirty to thirty-three. Fireside meetings were then held at the apartment of Mrs. Barton, and latest advice is that two study classes are meeting weekly. Thanksgiving week-end was spent with friends in Gulfport, Miss., where Mr. and Mrs. Ives were invited to conduct the Sunday morning service at the Gulf Park College.

West Virginia received a tremendous impetus with the visit of Stanwood Cobb, November 8-12, under the auspices of the Regional Committee. In Huntington Harold Hunt arranged a series of meetings, obtaining five excellent newspaper accounts. The first lecture was before the YMCA weekly forum of seventy-five representative professional and business men, on "America's Destiny of World Leadership." A return engagement has been asked by the forum. Twelve younger men met for informal discussion of the Faith in the studio of the society editor of the leading paper. A direct Bahá’í talk to the International Club of Marshall College; a public lecture that evening at the Governor Cabell Hotel, with about twenty-five inquirers; and a talk for the children of the City Home for Derelict Children completed the formal engagements, but in addition personal contacts were made with several leading citizens.

In Charleston Mr. Cobb addressed a luncheon meeting of the Civic Club, directly on the Faith, and received excellent publicity which included a summary of the Teachings. This meeting, plus two fireside groups in the Dahl home, were arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Dahl. We quote from Mr.
Cobb's report: "... the individuals and groups interested in the Cause in both cities are people of culture, capacity and leadership. Any gains made ... will furnish splendid foundations for future expansion of the Cause in these cities. The work of the Dahls and of Mr. Hunt is especially to be commended ... The Dahls have made ... will furnish splendid foundations for future expansion of the Cause in these cities. The work of the Dahls and of Mr. Hunt is especially to be commended ... The Dahls have made one great gain for the forwarding of the Baha'i work in finally finding an ideal home high up on a hillside overlooking the city, where they can invite friends ... It should be noted ... that the western part of the State, dominated by Huntington and Charleston, is markedly progressing in wealth and industry. ... There is every indication that this region will advance very rapidly in the next twenty-five years." Mr. Hunt has already been invited to speak to the youth group of the Congregational Church on the Baha'i Faith, and is planning a regular study class as an outgrowth of this teaching campaign.

Just prior to Mr. Cobb's arrival, Louis Gregory spent three days in Charleston and talks were arranged for him at the First Baptist Church (where Mr. Dahl had spoken the week before), at a joint meeting of two High Schools, before a thousand students of West Virginia State College at Institute, and for the students of Bluefield State Teachers' College (also addressed by Mrs. Dahl). Bluefield College and the library at Beckley accepted books.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, although losing Gayle Woolson to the Latin America work, has gained as an isolated believer, Marvin Newport. During November these two worked jointly for nineteen days, during which period Mr. Newport spoke to nine dubs and schools, with other engagements arranged later. "Our aim has been to attract members of minority groups such as Negroes, Mexicans, Syrians, and in this aim we have met with success ..." Contacts were also made with several influential citizens who are reading literature. Two study classes, averaging nine or ten members predominantly youth, have been established. Mrs. Woolson summarized the work as follows: "Much was accomplished and I am so very happy over the excellent follow-up work Marvin is doing. He has attracted many people by his fine presentation of the Teachings, and by his zeal and untiring efforts. I am sure he will remain in Cedar Rapids until a firm Baha'i group is well established."

Although there is much other news of our pioneers, from Alaska, Vermont, Missouri, Rhode Island, etc., the limitations of our space demand that this account be closed. The splendid work done in Oklahoma City during the month's visit of Miss Roan Orloff, which resulted in many joint meetings of the Esperantists and Baha'is, will be left for the International Auxiliary Language Committee to report. Our Regional Committees have been most active, but their work, too, will be reported in another place, with the inauguration this issue of a monthly column devoted to the methods and achievements of each Committee. The news from our Assemblies, Groups, and isolated believers we shall have to postpone until the next survey, since it would minimize their exceptional contributions to hasten over them now.

As the teaching program has developed these past months, many believers have been reminded of earlier work done in pioneer areas. The Committee would ask that all accounts of such work be sent directly to the Secretary, Miss Charlotte Laidfoot, 156 Nova Drive, Piedmont, California, rather than to the pioneers themselves, in order that the record of American teaching achievement may be permanently preserved.

"Blessed is the spot, and the house, and the place, and the city, and the heart, and the mountain, and the refuge, and the cave, and the valley, and the land, and the sea, and the island, and the meadow where mention of God hath been made, and His praise glorified."

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE.

From San Salvador comes the news of our first believers through John Eichenauer, Jr. He says Luis O. Perez is the first declared believer; Emilio Bermudez, a city worker, is the second, and Jose Manuel Vela, a school teacher, is the third. Mr. Eichenauer expects to have a group as soon as Clarence Iverson reaches San Salvador.

On October 27, 1939, the Mexican Assembly's formal opening took place. Their new Assembly rooms consist of two large meeting rooms, a library, guest room and kitchen at a central location, No. 65 Bucareli, Apartment 2. They are now incorporated as the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahai's of Mexico City.

The Chairman is Sr. Pedro Espinosa de los Monteros, and the Secretary, Senora Marie Luz Guinchard. As there is no word for "chairman" in Spanish, the word "president" has to be used.

They have a class for children registering twenty, and a youth group with more than thirty members. Literary and musical evenings are interspersed between classes and several times a week a lunch is served.

Our hearty congratulations on this extensive program. We may well emulate the spirit and enterprise of our first Latin American Baha'i Assembly.

From Panama, through Cora Hitt Oliver and Louise Caswell, came a little article on injustice towards minority groups and as this is one of the main issues with the Bahais today and one which we are constantly working to overcome—not only the world’s intolerance but indifference—the friends will be deeply interested in their reactions in Panama.

Mrs. Louise Caswell has already entered the University of Panama.

Mrs. Cora Hitt Oliver had a very interesting journey on a Grace Line boat. She wrote in part:

"I have been able to give the Message to the ship's Doctor, a young scientific engineer, on his way to Peru, and the wife of an army officer on her way to Panama. ... I have found in the library here (on the ship) two Baha'i pamphlets ... the trip has been very pleasant, smooth sailing and beautiful weather. I will write you frequently and keep you informed of all that I am doing."

Gerrard Sluter has another article in the Simeone on the Baha'i Faith. He is certainly very active.

Extract of letter received from Anthony Roca on his way to Honduras:

"I spent eight days among the Bahais of Mexico City. Their new center is beautiful. I found it impossible to take my car any further. I had to sell it and proceed by train. Crossing the border of Guatemala I was received in a very friendly manner and encountered no difficulties. There I stayed with our Baha'i brother, Gerrard Sluter. We were indeed happy to meet in a foreign land knowing that both of us have the mission to spread the New Faith to the people of Central America, those people so in need of this illumination. We exchanged ideas and talked over how we could best serve the Cause. Gerrard introduced me to his acquaintances and I believe that his work will soon result in the establishment of an Assembly though greatly hampered by lack of Spanish literature."

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Publishing Committee wishes to report the preparation of two new Study Outlines, which are now published with the approval of the Study Outline Committee and the Reviewing Committee.

Fundamentals of Baha’i Membership, prepared by Study Outline Committee. This Outline fills a very important purpose, serving on the one hand to enable local Assemblies, groups and individual teachers to prepare students for enrollment in the Baha’i community, and on the other hand providing a most interesting survey of the fundamental Teachings for further study by believers already enrolled. Mimeo-graphed. Per copy, 35c net.

Deepening the Spiritual Life, prepared by Horace Holley. "The purpose of this Outline is to suggest an approach to the Baha’i Teachings by which the believer’s awareness of the spiritual life will be intensified. The aim is not to increase the believer’s intellectual knowledge, but to stimulate his capacity for realizing truth in terms of inner experience." References are given for daily meditation and weekly readings over a period of six weeks, with suggestions on how to use the Outline for groups or by single individuals. Sold only in lots of ten copies. For ten copies, 50c net.

RACE UNITY

In The Advent of Divine Justice Shoghi Effendi has called to our attention the dangers of racial prejudices and the great need in the world for freedom from these prejudices. These are his words:

"As to racial prejudice, the corrosion of which, for well nigh a century, has bitten into the fibre, and attacked the whole social structure of American society, it should be regarded as constituting the most vital and challenging issue confronting the Baha’i community at the present stage of its evolution. The ceaseless exertions which this issue of paramount importance calls for, the sacrifices it must impose, the care and vigilance it demands, the moral courage and fortitude it requires, the tact and sympathy it necessitates, invest this problem, which the American believers are still far from having satisfactorily resolved, with an urgency and importance that cannot be overestimated.

"To discriminate against any race, on the ground of its being socially backward, politically immature, and numerically in a minority, is a flagrant violation of the spirit that animates the Faith of Baha’u’llah. The consciousness of any division or cleavage in its ranks is alien to its very purpose, principles, and ideals. Once its members have fully recognized the claim of its Author, and, by identifying themselves with its Administrative Order, accepted unre­servedly the principles and laws embodied in its teachings, every differentiation of class, creed, or color must automatically be obliterated, and never be allowed, under any pretext, and however great the pressure of events or of public opinion, to reassert itself. If any discrimination is at all to be tolerated, it should be a discrimination not against, but rather in favor of the minority, be it racial or otherwise."

"Freedom from racial prejudice, in any of its forms, should, at such a time as this when an increasingly large section of the human race is falling a victim to its devastating ferocity, be adopted as the watchword of the entire body of the American believers, in whichever state they reside, in whatever circles they move, whatever their age, traditions, tastes, and habits. It should be consistently demonstrated in every phase of their activity and life, whether in the Baha’i community or outside it, in public or in private, formally as well as informally, individually as well as in their official capacity as organized groups, committees and Assemblies. It should be deliberately cultivated through the various and everyday opportunities, no matter how insignificant, that present themselves, whether in their homes, their business offices, their schools and colleges, their social parties and recreation grounds, their Baha’i meetings, conferences, conventions, summer schools and Assemblies."

"Let them call to mind, fearlessly and determinedly, the example and conduct of ‘Abdu’l-Baha while in their midst. Let them remember His courage, His genuine love, His informal and indiscriminating fellowship, His contempt for and impatience of criticism, tempered by His tact and wisdom. Let them revive and perpetuate the memory of those unforgettable and historic episodes and occasions on which He so strikingly demonstrated His keen sense of justice, His spontaneous sympathy, for the down-trodden, His ever-abiding sense of the oneness of the human race, His overflowing love for its members, and His displeasure with those who dared to flout His wishes, to deride His methods, to challenge His principles, or to nullify His acts."

The following are words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá: "God is no respecter of persons on account of either color or race. All colors are acceptable unto Him, be they white, black, or yellow. Inasmuch as all were created in the image of God, we must bring ourselves to realize that all embody divine possibilities. In the estimation of God, all men are equal. There is no distinction or preference for any soul, in the realm of His justice and equity. God did not make these divisions; these divisions have had their origin in man himself. Therefore, as they are against the plan and purpose of God they are false and imaginary."

Again 'Abdu'l-Bahá says: "The diversity in the human family should be the cause of love and harmony, as it is in music where many different notes blend together in the making of a perfect chord. If you meet those of a different race and color from yourself, do not mistrust them, and withdraw yourself into your shell of conventionality, but rather be glad and show them kindness."

These words of Shoghi Effendi and 'Abdu'l-Bahá are clear. The National Spiritual Assembly has at once acted upon them and established the Race Unity Committee. One purpose of this committee is to help all Bahá'ís overcome our prejudices, for we all have prejudices in one degree or another. Shoghi Effendi tells us that freedom from racial prejudice "should be deliberately cultivated" by each of us in our every-day contacts. We must exert ourselves ceaselessly; we must sacrifice ourselves; we must use care and vigilance, moral courage and fortitude, tact and sympathy in solving this problem. The Race Unity Committee, in a series of short articles, will attempt to present material which will help us to understand and appreciate minority groups many of which are suffering very unjustly today. It is the hope of the Race Unity Committee that freedom from racial prejudice may really become the watchword of the entire body of the American believers.

PRESS BOOK REPORT

Reflecting the ever increasing fervor and activity of the friends, the 1939-1940 National Press Books are adding more new leaves between their already bulging covers. New groups of the reading public are being reached through the endeavors of pioneers in Central and South America as well as in the United States and Canada.

Unique is the work being done by Elsa Vento of the Toronto community in her articles taken from the Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Foundations of World Order which she has translated into the Finnish language. These have appeared in full length in the Vapaa-Sanakirja, the independent Finnish paper in Toronto, the Canadan-Untiset, a weekly Finnish language paper of Port Arthur, Ontario, Canada and the New York Times, a Finnish paper with the largest circulation of any Finnish paper in the United States. Through these mediums the Teachings are reaching a new reading public.

Farther afield, two Panama papers, the Star and Herald and the Panama Tribune have published brilliant articles on the Cause by Mathew Kaszab. These were printed in English.

Gerrard Sluter has written articles in the Spanish language which have appeared in Síntoma, a paper as well as in the magazine, Diogenes. He included many paragraphs directly from the Teachings.

Pioneer work in the United States and Canada has achieved the publication of articles on the Cause in the following papers and localities: Charles- tone, N. C., through the Hilpert Daily; the Lander Enterprise of Lander, Wyoming, through Mrs. Lucie Jackson; Edmonton Journal, of Edmonton, Alberta, through Mrs. Bolton, of Sydney, Australia; Cape-Cod Standard Times of Hyannis, Mass., through Miss Rezzi Sunshine; Rutland Daily Herald and North Adams Transcript of Rutland, Vt., through Mrs. Louise Erickson of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Bissell of Rutland, Vt.; Delta, Colorado; Asheville; Butte; Ashville; Eagle River; Kensasha; Madison; Taylor—Bolivar and Evanston; Michigan—Grand Haven, Grand Rapids, Chico, Junction, Ft. Madison and Detroit; Massachusetts—Three Rivers and Springfield; Wisconsin—Racine, Eagle River, Kenosha, and Madison; New Jersey—Teaneck and Red Bank; Oklahoma—Oklahoma City; Ohio—Dayton, Columbus and Bucyrus; Georgia—Augusta; Tennessee—Knoxville; Connecticut—Waterbury and Norwich; Hawaii, T. H.—Honolulu; Florida—Jacksonville and Miami; Indiana—South Bend; New York—Yonkers; Colorado—Colorado Springs; Missouri—Kansas City; also the North China News.

There is a great deal of publicity which we have not yet received from the friends. We urge you to send in three copies of all clippings with the name of the papers and dates cut from the papers themselves to the Bahá'í News Service, 125 Fourth Street, Wilmette, Illinois.

As these reports appear, they will feature various of the outstanding publicity received for the Press Books. Since there are so many splendid clippings, the Committee will report often.

A compilation on Immortality, published in the October number, has since been reprinted as a leaflet. "They Met the Dawn," by Alice Simmons Cox, begins a series of three chapters presenting a study of the spiritual effects of Revelation upon the culture of the times. "The Valley of Unity," by Helen Pilleington Bishop, continues the series on the Seven Valleys of Baha'u'llah. G. A. Shook's "Science Contributes" is another study of the relations of culture, science, philosophy and religion in his series. Other articles are: "Man's Illusion," by Pearle U. Easterbrook, "The Concept of Federation," by Sirdar D. K. Sen, "The Time Has Arrived" by Ben Ellison, and "Truth and Society," by Horace Holley.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS

RACE ATTITUDES

Every Baha'i parent will be interested in Bruno Lasker's book, Race Attitudes in Children. We quote from it: "We may get a hint as to the sources of childish attitudes by carefully noting how children themselves describe their feelings toward other peoples. The following quotations are from the replies of boys to a questionnaire which asked them to write down the names of any peoples that they did not like and to state why they did not like them. . . . The test under review was taken by a teacher in the choir school of a church known throughout the country as a center of liberal Christianity in a cosmopolitan city; the answers, therefore, might be expected to be more tolerant than those which a similar questionnaire would produce under average conditions in a public school. This is what the boys say (in their own spelling):"

- "'Italians, Chinese, Mexicans, Japs and Portuguese and Germans (Spaniards and Russians being crossed out again after reflection). The Italians are a very unclean and sneaking race. The Chinese and Japs are a stealing and distrusting people. The Mexicans are a stingy and conspiracy people. The Portuguese are a very blood-thirsty and dishonest people. Germans are hateful because of their love for war and bloodshed."

- "'Jews. Because they live in dirty places. Chinese. Because they have such a bad reputation. Niggers. Because they are crooks and too free with razors. Italians. Because they are such a nasty and dirty people."

- "'Negro. I do not like the Negro because he fits with razers and are very sly. Chinese I dont know but I dont like they thats all. Mexican are very sly they sneak upon you. Japannese I dont like them. Jews I dont like them. Indians kill the white people and that is why I dont like them."

- "'Chinese Because I do not like to be knifed."

- "'Mexican Because they are lazy, like some of us."

- "'Negros — Unreasonable dislike probably. (This, to judge from the language and handwriting, from an older boy.)"

- "'black race — think they own the country red race — they kill Chinese — " "

- "'Japiness they steal Irish — they swair and lie Germans — crooks Chinese — to crafty Cannibal — Eat up people Serians — not clean people Germans — War makers Turkeys — torturers "I don't like Chinese because they stab you with knives "I don't like Italian's because they robb."

- "'Jewish A race that believes Jesus was not on earth Italian to dirty Black race. Do not know. Chinese You can never tell what they are going to do next."

Mr. Lasker mentions, as three of the causes of such attitudes, fear, combative-ness, and ridicule. Of the first, he writes: "One can fancy the lasting impression made upon children who have often been frightened by the warning, 'If you are not good the black man will get you.' Describing combative-ness as an incentive to prejudice, he quotes a high school teacher: 'I remember a scene at a roadside in southern New Jersey where one set of children, from 4 to 10 years old, was standing on a bridge and stoning another set of children who had been driven underneath the bridge, and were not allowed to come up. One of the groups was colored, and the other white." Ridicule is the most subtle and, according to Mr. Lasker, is "a weapon of self-assertion." Life-long wounds often result, as in his stated case of Georg Brandes, the Danish writer, who, when walking in the street as a child, encountered the first ridicule of his Jewish blood. "I'd like to see a Jew," he later said to his mother, whereupon she held him to a mirror. He cried out, terrified, and with that cry, "became different."

Bahá’í parent, these subtle social weapons are all around your child. No suasion of parent or teacher can alone effect protection. Constant recourse to the Holy Utterances can protect him. Every child has a clean beginning. He is, at first, not soiled by prejudices. A young mother writes confidently to this column: "Very little children have no prejudice against other little children, no matter what race or color. It is a common sight to see small children in the nursery schools playing happily with each other."

The burning passages included in The Advent of Divine Justice point out to the discerning the travesty of present-day American life. Every Bahá’í parent sees again in them the need of waging honest war against the hosts of prejudice, "those strange illusions that take possession of the human heart." A few of these and other simple passages are suggested for your children. Do you think that they could memorize them? They will make your children proud of the garment of unity which is their great distinction. Keep the garment always shining and new with a few of these thoughts:

"Close your eyes to racial differences, and welcome all with the light of oneness."—BAHA’ULLAH.

"God maketh no distinction between the white and the black. If the hearts are pure, both are acceptable to Him."—‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ.

"In the estimation of God, there is no distinction of color; all are one in the color and beauty of servitude to Him."—‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ.

"The establishment of unity between the colored and white will be an assurance of the world’s peace."—‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ.

"Let all associate, therefore, in this great human garden, even as flowers grow and bloom together side by side without discord or disagreement between them."—‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ.

"This handful of dust, the world, is one home. Let it be in unity."—BAHA’ULLAH.

"Know ye not why we have created you all from the same dust? That no one should exalt himself over another."—BAHA’ULLAH.

"Regard ye not one another as strangers. Ye are the fruits of one tree; the leaves of one branch."—BAHA’ULLAH.

"Light is good in whatsoever lamp it is burning.
A rose is beautiful in whatsoever garden it may bloom,
A star is as radiant whether it shines from the East or the West."—‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ.

Mr. John Landus, Chicago.
Mrs. Ada C. Divine, Ithaca, N. Y.

Dear co-workers:

The association of the First Mashriqui’l-Adhkär of the West with the hallowed memories of the Purest Branch and of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s mother, recently re-interred under the shadow of the Báb’s holy Shrine, inaugurates a new, and at long last the final phase of an enterprise which, thirty years ago, was providentially launched on the very day the remains of the Forerunner of our Faith were laid to rest by our beloved Master in the sepulchre specifically erected for that purpose on Mt. Carmel. The birth of this holy enterprise, pregnant with such rich, such infinite possibilities, synchronized with, and was consecrated through, this historic event which, as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Himself has affirmed, constitutes the most signal act of the triple mission He bore the name of her whose ebbing life was brightened and cheered by those tidings that unmistakably revealed to her the depth of devotion and the tenacity of purpose which animate the American believers in the cause of their beloved Temple. And now, while the Báb’s world vibrates with emotion at the news of the transfer of the precious remains of both the Purest Branch and of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s mother to a spot which, watched over by the Twin holy shrines and in the close neighborhood of the resting-place of the Greatest Holy Leaf, is to become the focus of the administrative institutions of the Faith at its world center, the mere act of linking the destiny of so far-reaching an undertaking with so significant an event in the Formative Period of our Faith will assuredly set the seal of complete triumph upon, and enhance the spiritual potentialities of, a work so significantly started and so magnificently executed by the followers of Bahá’u’lláh in the North American continent.

The Plan which your Assembly has suggested to raise the sum of fifty thousand dollars by next April, which will enable you to place the necessary contracts for the final completion of the entire First Story of the Mashriqui’l-Adhkár, meets with my unqualified approval. It was specially in order to initiate and encourage the progress of such a plan that I felt impelled to pledge the sum of one thousand pounds in the memory of these two glorious souls who, apart from the Founders of our Faith and its Exemplar, tower together with the Greatest Holy Leaf, above the rank and file of the faithful.

The interval separating us from that date is admittedly short. The explosive forces which lie dormant in the international field may, ere the expiry of these fleeting months, break out in an eruption that may prove the most fateful that mankind has experienced. It is within the power of the organized body of the American believers to further demonstrate the imperturbability of their faith, the serenity of their confidence and the unyielding tenacity of their resolve.

We stand at the threshold of the decade within which the centenary of the birth of our Faith is to be celebrated. Scarcely more than four years stand between us and that glorious consummation. No community, no individual, neither in the East nor in the West, however afflicting the circumstances that now prevail, can afford to hesitate or falter. The few years immediately ahead are most crucial. A resolve must be taken to solve the problems that beset our beloved Cause and to undertake a visit to the Holy Land. The Guardian particularly welcomes the appointment by your Assembly of a new Race Amity Committee, and fervently hopes that this will enable the friends to make the fullest possible response to the vital call for inter-racial unity and understanding, and specially to his instruction regarding the treatment of colored minorities within the community. It was also a matter of deep gratification to him to know that the number of recognized local Spiritual Assemblies throughout the United States and Canada had reached eighty-eight on the 21st of April of last year, and would urge that special effort be exerted by your Assembly to increase that number to one hundred by the next meeting of the Annual Convention.

With reference to the permission granted by the Marriage License Bureau of the City of Chicago to the Chicago Assembly to perform Bahá’í marriages, the Guardian considers this as an historic achievement, and trusts that it will open the way for the accordence of a similar recognition to other local Bahá’í Assemblies throughout the States. He would certainly approve that all incorporated local Assemblies make similar representations to their respective civil Marriage Bureaus for the legal recognition of Bahá’í marriage ceremonies. In the performance of a Bahá’í marriage, the chairman and secretary of the local Assembly should act as its representatives. The ceremonies themselves must be very simple. The marriage certificate, copies of which in Arabic and Persian are published in the Bahá’í World, and which bears the signatures of both parties and of their parents, should be translated and adopted by the American friends. This is indeed a tremendous step forward in the ultimate adoption and enforcement of the laws of Bahá’u’lláh in the West.

With regard to Munirih Khánum’s account of her life, concerning which certain questions have been raised by some of the believers; what has been written by Munirih Khánum herself in that account, and also the references to the subject made by Nabil in his Narrative should be taken as the accurate standard, and not what has been reported in Dr. Esslemont’s book.

Regarding the time for the holding of the nineteen Day Feasts and elections; the Guardian would advise your Assembly to urge the friends to hold such gatherings on the prescribed day before sunset. If impossible, then it is permissible to hold them on the preceding day. In connection with the nine holy days, however, the friends should consider it obligatory to celebrate them on the prescribed day before sunset.

The Guardian wishes your Assembly to abandon the practice of appointing associate members to some of the committees, as reported in the July news letter. Such a practice, he feels, tends to create confusion and misunderstanding. Those already associate members, however, may at the discretion of the N.S.A. be added to the full membership of the committees.

In connection with the request received by your Assembly from a Chicago believer for permission to be married in the Temple, Shoghi Effendi... wishes your Assembly to abide by his directions on the subject as contained in his letter of January 29, 1939.

The news of the donation of two hundred copies of the last issue of the Bahá’í World made by our very dear Mr. Schopflocher to various national and local Assemblies outside of the United States was received with deepest appreciation by the Guardian, who feels confident that this action will create widespread enthusiasm throughout the Bahá’í world, and will also considerably help in giving due publicity to this invaluable international record of the Faith.

He also wishes me to express his deepfelt appreciation of the increase recently made by the N.S.A. in its monthly contribution to the International Fund. He will pray that your Assembly may be richly rewarded for this truly generous assistance you are extending toward the promotion and safeguarding of the interests of the Cause at its world-center in the Holy Land.

Regarding the construction of a memorial dedicated to the late Miss Martha Root at the cemetery in Honolulu: Shoghi Effendi highly approves of your Assembly’s proposal, and hopes that the contribution of one hundred pounds he has already cabled through Mr. Wilhelm for that purpose will serve to stimulate the friends to send in further donations that would enable the N.S.A. to erect a befitting monument in honor of our departed sister. He wishes you to impress upon the friends the necessity of their acting promptly and generously in this matter. He is eagerly awaiting for a copy of the design of the proposed monument.

As to the design itself he prefers to leave it to the discretion of the N.S.A. With reference to the matter of the consent of the parents to a Bahá’í marriage; as this is a vital binding obligation, it is the duty of the Assemblies to ascertain, before giving their sanction, that the consent obtained has been given freely by the parents themselves.

The Guardian approves of the recommendation made by the editors of World Order to publish in that magazine hitherto unpublished material from the Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and hopes that in response to your request he will also be able to send you, from time to time, any such material he can gather from the Sacred Writings.

“VIGOR AND SPIRITUAL HEALTH OF THE COMMUNITY”

On January 19 the National Spiritual Assembly received from the Guardian a cablegram containing this significant instruction: “Urge Assembly focus attention (at its) forthcoming meeting (upon the) dual, vital, urgent obligation: (the) conservation (of the) vigor (and) spiritual health (of the) community and (the) intensification (of effort) aiming (at realization of) recently approved Temple Plan. Sleepless vigilance (to) ward off subtle attacks (of enemies (is) first prerequisite (to) sound unfoldment (of the) processes (of the) enterprise already operating.”

The believers in all lands are under the supreme favor of guidance from on High. They strive to uphold day by day, ideals and principles which relate to their own development and the illumination and harmony of mankind. But on the other hand, to aid the endeavors of those who outwardly claim allegiance but secretly try to destroy the Divine Edifice through enmity to its leader, would manifestly be the most grievous of errors.

Historically such disloyalty, synchronizing with the expansion of the Faith, had its appearance when some who were professedly loyal to the Báb, disobeyed His Covenant by refusing to accept Bahá’u’lláh as the expected One of the Béyân. They were urged on by a sordid ambition which brought them ignominy, oblivion and loss. Later the same condition became apparent after the ascension of Bahá’u’lláh when a few corrupt people violated His solemn Covenant by refusing to accept its Center, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Again, a diminishing few, urged on by vaulting ambition and an obvious desire to organize within the Cause, a group that would circle around themselves, have refused to acknowledge the station of our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, and the New World Order of administration called into being by the Will of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

Under the authority of the Guardian, the time has now come to act against these “insidious adversaries” who have even gone so far as to flout the Beloved’s Will and Testament, the very pillar of our unity, by claiming the right to use the term “Bahá’í” to designate their personal activities. The matter is therefore being taken to the courts, and as soon as possible their excuses will be made a matter of public record. It will be seen whether the present enemies of the Faith can succeed any better than those enemies who have preceded them: Suhbi-Ezel, Mohamet Ali, Kheirella and their like, whose denial of the Truth became historic facts beyond recall.

In connection with this legal action, we have this message from Shoghi Effendi in his cablegram of January 23: “Praying victory similar (to the) one recently won (over) Covenant-breakers (in the) Holy Land be achieved by American believers over insidious adversaries (in the) Covenant.”

Our community health and vigor consists of an abounding faith—a deep, immovable conviction as to the fundamental truths which constitute the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh. These fundamental truths are precisely those which the Guardian set forth as the qualifications of Bahá'ís:

“Full recognition of the station of the Founder, the Author, and the True Exemplar of the Bahá'í Cause, as set forth in 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Testament—unreserved acceptance of, and submission to, whatsoever has been revealed by their Pen; loyal and steadfast adherence to every clause of our Beloved's sacred Will; and close association with the spirit as well as the form of the present day Bahá'í administration throughout the world...”

Bahá'ís who have accepted these qualifications and not wavered in their devotion to them; Bahá'ís who realize that each individual believer should study and pray in order to remain in the spirit of the Faith, and whole-heartedly uphold the general activities of the Cause—these believers have health of spirit because they remain within the area of nearness where the Holy Spirit sends its beneficent rays.

Bahá'ís have this solid foundation for spiritual health; that their status as followers of Bahá'u'lláh and members of the Bahá'í community is safe and secure until they, themselves, create clear evidence that they do not accept the fundamental qualifications of a Bahá'í. Reflection upon this truth will reveal what a mighty blessing it is to belong within the Community of the Greatest Name. Every denier removes himself from the Cause.

Let us recall the Guardian's words two years ago: draw nigh to Bahá'u'lláh, that He may draw nigh to us. Therefore prayer and meditation are an element of health; association with the Bahá'í community is an element of health; sacrifice for the promotion of the great objective of the Seven Year Plan—Temple completion and teaching throughout the Americas—this, too, is an element of health. Finally it is to be cited the mysterious truth that to retain spiritual health we must not associate with any person who has ever been definitely pronounced a violator of the Divine Covenant.

The Báb's holy words to the Letters of the Living whom He was sending on their missions—these words are of the essence of health. Or turn again to page 63 of The Advent of Divine Justice, where the Guardian directs our attention to passages in the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh which “cannot fail to produce on the minds and hearts of any one...who approaches them with befitting humility and detachment, such powerful reactions as to illumine his entire being and intensify tremendously his daily exertions.”

Moreover, we have the unique holiness of the Guardian's successions of World Order letters to surround us with protection against the ignorance or malice of non-believers and against our own negative suggestions. A distinct part of the aim and purpose of those letters was to reveal the futility of the arguments of the deniers and violators. Thus, on the very first page of the first World Order letter: “I am indeed inclined to welcome these expressed apprehensions inasmuch as they afford me an opportunity to familiarize the elected representatives of the believers with the origin and character of the institutions which stand at the very basis of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. We should feel truly thankful for such futile attempts to undermine our beloved Faith—attempts that protrude their ugly face from time to time, seem for a while to create a breach in the ranks of the faithful, recede finally into the obscurity of oblivion, and are thought of no more. Such incidents we should regard as the interpositions of Providence, designed to fortify our faith, to clarify our vision, and to deepen our understanding of the essentials of His Divine Revelation.”

This theme is developed further in passages to be found in The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh on pages: 4, 8, 10, 15, 17, 18, 51, 72, 89, 90.

In conclusion, let us recall the Guardian's summary of the first four decades of the history of the Faith in America, in America and the Most Great Peace.

Shoghi Effendi shows us how the Cause progresses and evolves through a succession of trials and tests, victories and achievements. Each time a test is met by the friends, they are prepared for a new and greater victory.

It may be that another period of test is being initiated. If so, let us meet it, not merely with courage but with the very flame of passionate devotion to Him, the Most Powerful, the Most Mighty, the Most Merciful! National Spiritual Assembly.

TEACHING IN THE SOUTHERN STATES

Since receipt of the dynamic call to a higher level of Bahá'í Service by the beloved Guardian in his magnum charta of the New Hour of the Faith, the National Assembly, with the assistance of various Committees, has been studying most carefully all the aspects of our teaching work under the Seven Year Plan.

Undoubtedly the most challenging issues in connection with our teaching work in this country is that of the expansion of the Faith in the Southern States. The National Assembly, therefore, has asked the Regional Teaching Committee for the Southern States, the Race Unity Committee, and the National Teaching Committee to study this problem anew in the light of the Guardian’s stirring appeal and instruction in The Advent of Divine Justice, and publish for the friends, the results of their survey to serve as a general basis for our immediate teaching work in that area.

It is axiomatic that within the circle of the Faith itself, no such thing as color distinction can exist. There is only one spirit, the spirit of devotion to Bahá'u'lláh, and of seeking His grace. Within any Bahá'í Community, worthy of its name, there can be no consciousness of division or cleavage of any type within its ranks. “Once its members have fully recognized the claim of its Author, and by identifying themselves with its Administrative Order, accepted unreservedly the principles and laws embodied in its teachings, every differentiation of class, creed, or color must automatically be obliterated, and never be allowed, under any pretext, and however great the pressure, of events or of public opinion, to reassert itself.”

To bring to the world at large, this ideal state of society, is the most delicate and difficult of our teaching tasks. After careful study, the three Committees find their concerted view to be that the method approved by Shoghi Effendi, in the following excerpt from his letter to the National Assembly of March 22nd, 1937, is still the best way to meet our serious responsibilities in this Section—

“Regarding the problem of teaching in districts of mixed colored and white populations, the Guardian fully approves of the policy adopted by the N.S.A. to the effect that the teaching work should be carried simultaneously with the two races in the south without the slightest discrimination. For the Teachings are obviously not intended for only one race or one class. Your Assembly's suggestion that Bahá'í public meetings should henceforth be conducted separately for whites and colored and that study classes, resulting from such meetings should likewise be conducted separately until individuals of both races are truly...”
confirmed believers is splendid as it will undoubtedly help in removing the misunderstandings and obstacles that have thus far stood in the way of the expansion of the Faith in the Southern States. To alienate either the white or the colored race would be indeed unfair and unjustifiable. The solution proposed by your Assembly thus marks a step in advance over the methods which the friends have hitherto enforced in their teaching work in the Southern States. The Guardian therefore trusts that it will be brought fully to the attention of the friends, and that they will each and all arise to apply it in their future teaching activities.

"In this connection, however, he wishes me to stress the fact that the two races should ultimately be brought together, and be urged to associate with the utmost unity and fellowship and be given full and equal opportunity to participate in the conduct of the teaching as well as administrative activities of the Faith. Nothing short of such ultimate fusion of the two races can insure the faithful application of that cornerstone principle of the Cause regarding the oneness of mankind." (March 22, 1937. Bahá’í News No. 108, June, 1937).

In developing the public teaching work in this specific area, the National Teaching Committee and the Southern Regional Committees will take active steps to see that the directions of the Guardian that teaching should be carried forward simultaneously with both groups is carefully and rigidly adhered to.

The following concrete suggestions, approved by the National Assembly, are offered by the three Committees for the application of the Guardian's instructions—

1. Teachers shall work in close consultation with the Southern Regional Committees and shall undertake no public teaching projects without first receiving the Committee's approval and cooperation.

2. Teachers should be fully cognizant of the problems of the South.

3. Before making final plans for public speaking, the Teachers should survey the field of local race groups and liberal leaders, and contact them alike.

4. The general theme of public teaching should be the world ideal of the Faith as a whole, rather than one of the social principles, which might prove provocative, such as race union. The best results will be achieved if the Manifestation is established as rapidly as possible, as the Center of the Faith, and the Source of spiritual life today, as well as the Establisher of the true principles of living.

5. The most effective method of teaching in new areas is the Fireside Gathering, and discussion with friendly groups, rather than public campaigns. When fireside gatherings grow into study groups, they should be developed in consultation with the Regional Committees.

6. All public presentations of the Faith, such as radio talks, newspaper publicity, etc., should be developed through local Assemblies or Regional Committees.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

"A NEW FAITH RISING . . ."

Report of the National Teaching Committee

In 1853 an American lecturer, William Estall, anticipated with such remarkable clarity the rise of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and the activities which characterize the Bahá’ís even today, that we are here reprinting his words, doubly interesting to us all because they were used to introduce Rowland Hall to his recent talk to the Unitarian Church in Winnipeg.

"I see a new faith rising in the hearts of men, and organizing itself in human society. It will have the human interests, the practical sense, the sanity of Confucius, but in the service of the grand ideals of a Marcus Aurelius or a Jesus; it will, with Buddha, loosen the cords that bind men so tightly to the earth, and master all other loves than the love of right and the love of love; and yet it will seek to organize right and love in the daily work of the world, and no service to man shall be so material or so low that it may not also be holy; it will, with Socrates, inspire to all science, but the darling effort of science shall be to find the way to those far and shining heights that shall be anew the object of the aspirations and worship of men—to ascertain the laws and true methods of advance. Under the stress of the new faith, wrought organically out of the present and the past, men will again look beyond themselves, will again be sanctified, will again feel a glow in the heart, and feel themselves happy in contributing ever so little to so divine a result."

Certain it is that Mr. Estall was happy in his address to the combined Unitarian and Federated Icelandic Churches, on October 29, 1939. His subject was "A New World Order," and he says: "I have never felt more inspired or free to speak without reservation of Bahá’u’lláh’s principles and plan for world regeneration." About seventy-five Icelanders heard him, while the Icelandic weekly, Heimskringla, carried a three-column article on the Faith. Several other speaking dates resulted from this contact. Mr. Estall is most enthusiastic about these new friends, for, as he writes: "The Icelanders . . . have a background of one thousand years of democracy and peace and it is evident in their lives.
which seem to have a strikingly noticeable spiritual refinement and integrity." His talk coincided with the publication in Iceland of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, two pages of which arrived in printer's proof for the occasion! Mr. Estall is also conducting a weekly study class, has been asked to speak for the Theosophical Society, and has again resumed his business as manufacturer's agent.

The Regional Committee for Eastern Canada has forwarded a heartening account by Mrs. Emeric Sala of her visit to the Maritime Provinces from Nov. 14th to Dec. 8th. A highlight was her four-day stay in Halifax, N. S., where she was deeply impressed by the selfless devotion of our pioneers, Mrs. Beulah Proctor and her daughter Shirley. Each evening after work these two keep open house for all who wish to learn of the Faith, and there are many inquirers, especially as a result of the Halifax Exhibition. Other contacts are the officers from the warships in port. "As a naval base the city swarms with young French and English sailors. Beulah has contacted these young men over the counter. Though she is not permitted to speak of the Cause in the store, she invites them for tea . . . She speaks of the Faith, giving them a Bahá'í book or pamphlet, writing in it the Greatest Name, explaining its meaning. She says, as I heard her say with such quiet dignity and spiritual power: 'Call upon God by this Name if you should ever be in great danger and He will most assuredly help you. And if you must die, die with this word on your lips. You will be comforted and this comfort and protection will reach all those you love whom you leave behind.' I was shown a grateful letter of thanks for her hospitality written by a young officer. Below his signature he had written, 'Aláh-u-Abhá!' Here in Beulah, as strong as her deep faith, is the safety-zone for Halifax . . ."

Mrs. Sala then visited the Moncton, N. B., community. Three very active children's groups (ages five to fourteen), which include fourteen children, are led by three adults. The children celebrate the Feast days at their own meetings. Two members have had opportunities to teach the Faith as the fulfillment of the Bible, to Bible classes which they lead. "One of the ministers went so far as to say that should there be a fuller revelation of truth he did not wish to deprive his congregation or himself of it!" Mrs. Sala gave the initial talk to one of these groups. She also spoke for Moncton's first public meeting. Part of the program was a panel discussion in which seven of the believers took part. Excellent publicity was obtained, one paper running well over a half-column.

The Committee also forwarded the report of a teaching visit to Sherbrooke last July, by Mr. Ernest Harrison and Mr. W. Suter, to contact two men who have been studying Bahá'í literature for some time. One of them has introduced the Faith to about fifty citizens of Sherbrooke, although he has had to work slowly because of the Church. The other is now ready to register as a believer.

In the far South our pioneers are progressing rapidly in New Orleans. Frederick Babo wrote on December 25th: "Last week I visited Dillard University and had a most interesting talk with the librarian and learned that the four Bahá'í books in the library are out most of the time . . . The university is non-sectarian and the result of the contact was that the committee of public assemblies is going to act upon a lecture on the Bahá'í Movement before the entire student body . . ." Mr. Babo, who is employed by a radio station as announcer, was able to broadcast Bahá'í radio scripts three nights a week for almost a month. This privilege was later withdrawn, but not until he had encouraging response from the audience. He and Mrs. Logelin are in close touch with the Theosophical group. They and Miss Berk have been recently reinforced by Eloise McAlister, a Bahá'í from Miami, to whom Mr. Babo was married on January 6th.

Louisville, Ky., has had several Bahá'í speakers this Fall through the help of Miss Virginia Taylor. These include Mr. and Mrs. Clarence La Roque; Miss Davison, who spent a month in the city; Mrs. McCoy, Regional Committee member; and Mrs. Lorene Dustan of Cincinnati. A Bahá'í library has been established for the study class through a legacy from Mrs. Christine, to which the friends contributed in her memory.

Atlanta, Ga., now numbers seven believers, with a regular study class conducted by Mrs. Terah Smith. A lecture for Mrs. Dorothy Baker was scheduled by Mrs. Dorothea Fettig, although closely confined by her work, is seeking radio openings and maintaining contacts made there and in Birmingham. She writes: "We do need more pioneers in the South!"

Harold Hunt held the first of his weekly public classes in Huntington, W. Va., on December 21st.

Difficult business conditions have been the lot of Miss Nayan Hartfield in St. Louis, Mo.: "I will not be discouraged, however, and will continue in obedience to prayers." Miss Opal Howell of Kansas City has spent a weekend in St. Louis, and several inquirers are studying the literature. The hardiness of our pioneers is reflected in these words from Bahá'u'lláh, sent to us by Miss Hartfield: "It behoveth thee to consecrate thyself to the Will of God... Do thou beseech God to enable thee to remain steadfast in this path, and to aid thee to guide the peoples of the world to Him Who is the manifest and sovereign Ruler...."

Winter in Alaska is no deterrent to our three Baha'i heroines. Miss Janet Whiteneck in Fairbanks has asked for literature and registration cards, as she anticipates a study group shortly. "The University Library near here and the Public Library have both agreed to place a set of Baha'i books on their shelves. Through my bookstore, I think I shall have many opportunities to reach people who are ready to become believers when they understand the Faith. It will be a wonderful experience to me and I am looking forward to it eagerly."

Miss Honor Kempston is deluged with opportunities to speak of the Faith in Anchorage. As proprietor of a bookshop, she contributes a weekly article in the Alaskan and has been able to mention Baha'i books occasionally; she has also spoken before the Women's Club. At a formal dinner given by the U. S. Commissioner, she was able to discuss the Baha'i view of racial prejudice, in connection with the move to bar Jewish refugees. She writes humorously: "Another thing is the surprise at myself—how positively fluent I am becoming in speaking of the Cause. I find myself waiting eagerly for an opportunity to argue for the Faith— it always comes. It is a joyous experience and I am truly grateful for such privileges." Several individuals are studying the Faith with deep attraction.

In Juneau Miss Betty Becker has been conducting a study group since early Fall; her problem is that regular residents are difficult to reach, and many of the students are transients. Two recent friends, however, have offered to arrange home meetings for her. On Christmas Day Miss Becker was invited to the Government Hospital for Indians, and a nurse has taken literature to distribute. Other interesting contacts have included the President of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Alaska, and the sister of Miss Green, former Baha'i librarian of Juneau.

Teaching in Montana has had a renewed impetus this year. The Spiritual Assembly of Helena has opened a Baha'i Center and sponsors weekly study classes which are well attended; a children's class is also held. Arrangements have been made to exhibit the Temple model at the Placer Hotel. On November 3rd, six of the believers visited Butte for an inter-community day of great happiness to all. In October Harlan Ober did fine work in Helena. Mrs. Lorrol Jackson is carrying forward her indefatigable teaching in Butte and reports that a two-weeks' book display in a downtown window has resulted in a number of inquiries.

Six new students of the Faith formed a study class last Fall in Laramie, Wyo., according to Raphael Lillywhite. Two of these have since asked to register as believers. There are already three adult believers in this city. Mr. Lillywhite is also assisting two students in Wadell, Colo., with literature.

Mrs. Kathryn Frankland has returned to Texas and is now in San Antonio, where Mrs. W. C. Nichols is working with her for the establishment of a Baha'i Group. Mrs. Mary Edson has established her home in Houston.

The Assembly in Albuquerque, N. M., was active even through the summer months, when three weekly classes were conducted by Dr. Lenore Morris. Six of the believers visited the Bressets in Las Vegas for a fireside meeting in the Fall. Listing in the Religious Directory of the University of New Mexico has been obtained.

Several travelling teachers have sent most interesting reports, only the highlights of which can be summarized in our allotted space. Mrs. Ruth Moffett advised us in September that she had just given a series of lectures in Eagle River and had organized a youth group of twelve members. Somewhat earlier she placed Baha'i books in the public libraries of Independence, Waterloo, Des Moines, Rhinelander, and Eagle River, presenting book reviews in each case to the librarians and local newspapers.

During the past months Miss Alma Knochloch has worked intensively in Georgia, at Augusta and Forest Hill; and in South Carolina, at Columbia, Spartanburg, Greenville, and North Augusta. She has been especially successful with youth in several of these communities.

During 1939 Miss Beatrice Irwin has assisted in the public teaching work of many Assemblies throughout the United States, particularly in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Washington, Baltimore, Wilmette, and California. Twenty-one talks were given in the East. She is at present in Southern California, where she has been able to contact several important men.

Mr. Louis Gregory was able to lend his support to innumerable communities, during his journey to and from San Francisco for the October meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly. Talks were given in the Bay Region, Southern California, Denver, Kansas City, Evansville, West Virginia, and Philadelphia. He has recently spent some time in Wilminton, Del., where he addressed the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and spoke for three firesides in the Kalantur home.

From Fairbanks to New Orleans, and from Halifax to San Francisco, the followers of Bahá'u'lláh on this continent are pressing forward with unprecedented ardor and concentration. While the reports of this mighty effort must arouse, in each one of us, a certain confidence, our overwhelming sense is of humility, in the face of such responsibilities as only the Guardian can adequately describe: "What the American believers have, within the space of almost fifty years, achieved is infinitesimal when compared to the magnitude of the tasks ahead of them. The rumbles of that catastrophic upheaval, which is to proclaim, at one and the same time, the death-pangs of the old order and the birth-pangs of the new, indicate both the steady approach, as well as the awe-inspiring character, of those tasks." (Advent of Divine Justice, page 9).

AFIELD WITH OUR REGIONALS

II. New England

The Regional Committee for Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, consisting of Mrs. Amelia Bowman, Secretary, Mrs. Florence Morton, Mrs. Elsa Isaacs, Mrs. H. Chamberlain, Mr. Charles Paul, Mr. Duncan MacAlear, Mr. Lou Keller, and Miss Marjorie

BAHA'I NEWS

Wheeler, listed at its business meeting in September fourteen Groups and twenty isolated believers. Seven of these Groups had been newly organized since summer: Portsmouth, Dover, Salmon Falls, Portland, Providence, Norwich, and West Haven. This rapid expansion can be traced to the Committee’s constant emphasis on the importance of teaching in one’s own city. As a consequence, many believers who had been traveling from forty to sixty miles as members of nearby communities, determined to pioneer at home; the election of a Spiritual Assembly in West Haven this April will be a major result.

As its chief function, the Committee determined to aid these local Groups in several specific ways:

1. By making available a series of four lectures, as follows: October—"The Pathway to Peace and Freedom"; November—"The Torch of Divine Guidance"; December—"The Promise of All Ages"; and January—"The Promised Kingdom". We quote from the letter of announcement: "In these four talks it is hoped the entire picture of the New World Order will be unfolded and many new inquirers listening to these talks will be attracted to study and investigate and get a glimpse of the wonderful vision we have of the future, and ‘the approach of that recreated society, that Christ-promised Kingdom’."

2. By correspondence in arrangements for exhibits of the Temple model.

3. By correspondence throughout the year. The first general letter, outlining these plans, was mailed to twenty-two believers and Groups on October 5th, and brought immediate replies.

The circuit of the Temple model throughout New England was most ably executed. During October the model was exhibited in Providence, R. I., in the Simmons Florist Shop, surrounded by a Persian garden; it attracted such notice that the proprietor was enthusiastic in his praise and assisted in publicity. It was then displayed at the Library in West Haven, Conn., from October 26th to November 3rd, "beautifully decorated with smilax and white asters and Bahá’í books encircling it." Rutland, Vt., arranged the next exhibit, followed by Keene, N. H., in November. During the first week of December it was placed in a Nature Food Store in Springfield, Mass., and was then moved to Boston, to be exhibited at the Bahá’í Center until January 2nd. Portsmouth, N. H., next had the model for two weeks.

Future plans include stops in Dover, N. H., Portland and Bangor, Me. The Committee has been active in many other ways as well. Its plan for Vermont included placement of twenty-five copies of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in public libraries by Duncan MacAleave, who had previously carried out a similar project for the Library Committee in twelve libraries of New Hampshire. "Inasmuch as we hope in the future to have some radio broadcasts this seems very important groundwork to be done, for surely those who are interested will turn to their libraries for information too."

Another successful enterprise has been the arrangement of Inter-Community Conferences, at Worcester in May, Springfield on June 18th, and Green Acre the last week of August (a Regional Teaching Conference). Then in November, the pioneers of Providence and Rutland met with the Salmon Falls Group, after which a second meeting was scheduled in Portsmouth, which all these friends attended.

The Committee is also undertaking to write to each name forwarded from the New York World’s Fair Exhibit.

An impressive feature of the work in this Region is the Committee’s effort to keep every believer, no matter how isolated, closely in touch with the activities of his fellows and the progress of the Cause. Many letters have been sent, informing the friends of the year’s plans, the services available through the Committee, asking them to correspond with pioneers, advising them of the Green Acre program, and of the New York Regional Conference and Louiseh Winter School. Full cooperation was extended to the National Radio Committee, whose chairman is also a Regional member, and the Green Acre Summer School was made to play a central role in the development of the entire area. As a direct result of attendance at School, three believers enrolled in Rhode Island, a pioneer state, and three in Portsmouth, to form new Groups.

No Committee has given more thoughtful consideration to the needs of pioneers; Miss Neya Bissell and Mr. and Mrs. Don McNally have received every help and encouragement, and the remarkable growth of the Faith in Rhode Island, particularly, is attributable in a large measure to the cooperation between the pioneer teachers and the Regional Committee.

In estimating the accomplishment this year, it is plain that the New England Committee has excelled in spreading the Cause to new areas, through radio, publicity, library placements, and public or fireside talks. In addition, it has, through the consolidation of Bahá’í Groups, laid the foundation for future teaching and Administration, the uses of which must needs increase through such effective labors.

"Praise be to God, that the North-eastern states are in the utmost capacity. Because the ground is rich, the rain of the divine outpouring is descending. Now you must become heavenly farmers and scatter pure seeds in the prepared soil. The harvest of every other seed is limited, but the bounty and the blessing of the seed of the Divine Teachings is unlimited. Throughout the coming centuries and cycles many harvests will be gathered." (‘Abdu’l-Bahá in The Divine Plan.)

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING ACTIVITIES

From the Mexican Assembly comes our first copy of Bahá’í News in Spanish, (Novedades Bahá’ís). It is a six-page illustrated chronicle of their activities, which will be translated and sent to the Assemblies. We congratulate them on this splendid achievement.

They have recently entertained Clarence Iverson and his mother, and previous visits have been made by Miss Maria Bertha Bohman of Chicago, Illinois, Gerrard Sluter, and Antonio Roca. Printing, translating, and teaching takes all their time. Maria Luz Guinchard is planning to teach in Guadalajara, Jalisco, Mexico.

Mr. Gerrard Sluter writes that he is greatly restricted by governmental rules. He has been informed recently that no outsider can obtain employment in Guatemala, nor has he secured the hoped-for permission to hold public meetings, but he is carrying on his work in the Theosophical Society, which is naturally difficult.

It may be remembered that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá prophesied of the pioneers, "Many a test will be visited upon you. Troubles will befal you, and suffering afflict you."

From San Salvador, where John Eichenauer, Jr., is in charge, comes overwhelming news. He has eleven Central American believers and our first Central American Indian. For the formation of an Assembly, he is awaiting Clarence Iverson of Phoenix, Arizona, who expected to arrive in San Salvador by January first.

Antonio Roca of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, hoped to display a Temple model at the National Industrial Exposition, but due to the character of the exhibit, he could not accomplish it, so he had a picture painted of the Temple, 3x5 feet. This he has promised to photograph and send to us.

To Nicaragua Mr. Mathew Kasab was sent. On the Pacific Coast are two cities, Managua and Granada, separated only by thirty-five miles. He found these cities backward with illiteracy predominating, the people with no clothes, nor proper environment. By bus he crossed to Bluefields on the Atlantic side to look over the teaching field. His address is, care of Anna Crowell, Bluefield, Nicaragua.

Miss Gayle Woolson, 235 Fuller Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota, has at last started for Costa Rica, where she will be joined by Mrs. Amelia Ford.

From Mrs. Louise Caswell and Mrs. Cora Hitt Oliver, who are attending the University of Panama, we have excellent reports: great interest in the faculty in the University; a recent trip throughout the Canal Zone; and the initial step taken towards a journey to the interior to teach the Indians.

Miss Margaret Lentz has reached her post in San Domingo, where her address is Pension Martí, Avenida Independence 115, Ciudad Trujillo, Santa Domingo R. D., West Indies. She spent three days with Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Marangella in Cuba, where they are enthusiastically teaching the Faith.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw from San Francisco are now in Jamaica. Their address is 45 Sherwood Drive, Constance Spring P. O., Jamaica.

Letters have been received from South America from Sr. Torno in which he speaks of the growing group. Wilfrid Barton has been visiting Buenos Aires and will now return to Montevideo. Mrs. Stewart has given us an address, Mr. Charles O’Hanlon in Rio de Janeiro, who will, she thinks, act as an agent in sending books through to Montevideo and Buenos Aires. Mr. Pilipak took three Baha’i Worlds on his recent trip to the city of Rio de Janeiro.

He finds it difficult to get packages and books farther. Miss Leonora Holzapple has left Bahia to teach throughout Brazil. Mr. Wilfrid Barton of Winnetka, Illinois, has paid a visit to our group in Buenos Aires. He reports most enthusiastic and active teaching work. We have in Mr. Salvador Torno a cultivated and very spiritual man in whom we have great confidence as a leader.

BAHA’I CALENDAR

Under this title in Baha’i News hereafter, the National Spiritual Assembly will list all Feasts, Anniversaries, National and Regional Meetings for the period of two months beginning with the date on that issue of Baha’i News. For example, in the present issue dated February, 1940, the Calendar lists all events of February and March.

Since it would not be feasible to include meetings of a merely local character, the regional classification will cover all meetings which concern three or more neighboring local Assemblies (Inter-Assembly meetings) as well as all such regional meetings as concern the entire area of any region.

National Committees, Regional Committees and local Assemblies should report items for the Baha’i Calendar by the twentieth of the month preceding date of issue (i.e., February 20 for March, March 20 for April, etc.).

Nineteen Day Feasts: February 7, Dominion; March 2, Loftiness; March 21, Splendor.

Anniversary: March 21, Feast of Naw-Ruz.

Period of Fasting: Nineteen days beginning March 2.

Meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly: February 23, 24, 25, 356 Sheridan Road, Wilmette; March 29, 30, 31, West Englewood, N. J.

TRUTH AND RUMOR

A society as large and diversified as the American Bahá’í Community will from time to time inevitably encounter the problem of rumors about happenings and personalities.

The National Assembly points out that there is a way by which every believer can determine whether a story involving the Cause is true or false. Through what channel has the story come? If international in scope, then the only authentic source of information is the Guardian. If national, the channel is the National Assembly. If local, it is the local Assembly.

By applying this simple test, believers can concentrate upon fact and truth and avoid the waste of energy which results from reliance upon unfounded rumor and gossip.

EXPLANATION OF TRANSFER OF MEMBERSHIP

Questions are frequently asked about the details of the proper transfer of membership when a believer changes his residence.

1. From a community to a community. When a believer moves from a

FIRST MEETING IN HAZIRATUL-QUDS

The first meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly in its new National Office or Haziratul-Quds took place on January 20, 21 and 22, 1940, and in order to give suitable recognition to the occasion in the light of the Guardian’s words concerning the conjunction of the Mashriq-ul-Adhkar and Haziratul-Quds, the members of the National Spiritual Assembly carried out a special program of readings. The first part of this program was conducted in the National Office, and the second part in the Auditorium of the House of Worship, on Saturday morning. On Sunday morning, the Regional Conference being held in the Foundation Hall added its prayers to those already recited in celebration of the new establishment.

This program of readings will be compiled and issued to the Assemblies and groups as a memorial of the occasion.
city which has a Spiritual Assembly to another city which also has an Assembly, his local Assembly of the city he is leaving should give him a letter addressed to the Spiritual Assembly of the city where he is establishing his residence, certifying that he has been a voting member of that community. This letter enables the Spiritual Assembly in the city of his new residence to enroll him as a voting member without questioning his Baha'i status. Both the Assemblies concerned in such transfers should report them to the National Assembly.

2. From a community to the isolated list. When a believer moves from a city which has a Spiritual Assembly to a city which has no Assembly, his Assembly should report this fact to the National Assembly, and give the believer's new permanent address. The National Assembly then requests the Teaching Committee to send the believer an enrollment card applying for recognition as an isolated believer. When the record is completed, the believer will receive Baha'i News from the National Assembly direct. In this connection the word "isolated" is used whether the believer is alone in the city or whether the city has a group. The Local Assembly is to report this transfer to the National Assembly.

3. From the isolated list to a community. Any believer moving into a city which has a Spiritual Assembly, should apply to the National Assembly for a letter certifying that he has been enrolled as an isolated believer, and this letter when presented to the local Assembly will enable the Assembly to enroll the believer as voting member of the community without questioning his Baha'i status. The Local Assembly is to report this transfer to the National Assembly.

4. Travelling believers. A travelling believer should carry credentials from his local Assembly if he is a voting member of an organized community, or from the National Assembly if an isolated believer. All American Baha'is, however, who travel outside the United States and Canada, should have credentials from the National Assembly. Travelling believers, if members of an organized community, receive their copies of Baha'i News from their own local Assembly; if isolated, from the National Assembly.

BOOKS ON RACE RELATIONS

"O contending peoples and kindreds of the earth! Set your faces towards unity, and let the radiance of its light shine upon you. Gather ye together, and for the sake of God resolve to root out whatever in the source of contention amongst you. Then will the effulgence of the world's great Luminary envelop the whole earth, and its inhabitants become the citizens of one city, and the occupants of the same throne... There can be no doubt whatever that the peoples of the world, of whatever race or religion, derive their inspiration from one heavenly Source, and are the subjects of one God."

—BAHA'U'llAH, Gleanings, p. 217.

The need for racial unity is perhaps more apparent today than at any other time in the world's history. Baha'is everywhere are engaged in working for true brotherhood among all the races of the world. In our work we discover that one of the biggest obstacles to understanding between the various races is ignorance of each other. The White race knows very little about the actual accomplishments of the Negro race. The Yellow race is uninformed about the achievements of the White race. It is believed by many students of race problems that greater harmony and good-will cannot exist between the various races until they are better acquainted with each other's peculiar cultures. We must study the background, history, progress, accomplishments, and peculiar problems of every race. Only then can we achieve a deep and lasting appreciation for each other. Only then will we have a strong foundation on which to build race unity.

We are fortunate today to have many books from which we can learn much about other races. This month we shall mention a few books which will give us considerable insight into the Negro race.

In a small book called Negro Americans What Now? by James Weldon Johnson, the author calls attention to the fact that white people must be educated to an understanding of their Negro brothers. These are his words: "The ignorance of white people concerning us constitutes one of our greatest obstacles.—The greater part of white America thinks of us in stereotypes; most of these stereotypes coming to them second-hand by way of the representation of Negro life and character on the stage and in certain books. In the main they are exaggerated, false, and entirely unlike our real selves... White people must be educated. They must be taught the truth about us... White America must not only be made thoroughly conscious of the handicaps, injustices, and wrongs under which Negro Americans struggle, it must also be made familiar with the elements of strength and of excellence possessed by the race. And white Americans must learn not only about the material but also about the artistic and spiritual contributions that Negro Americans have made to our common cultural store."

In the book the Negro Genius by Benjamin Brawley we get a good picture of the artistic and spiritual contributions of the Negro race. Mr. Brawley describes the works of Paul Lawrence Dunbar, William S. Braithwaite, W. E. C. DuBois, Countee Cullen, Roland Hayes, Marian Anderson, and other Negroes of rare talent and genius. Race Relations by W. D. Weatherford and C. S. Johnson is a large volume giving many concrete facts and statistics about the achievements of the Negro people. The following paragraph telling of their recent progress is an example of what may be gleaned from this book: "In 1863, the year of emancipation, between 8 to 15% of the Negroes were able to read and write. In 1930, less than 18% were unable to read and write. In 1870 there were 3,300 schools for Negroes with 149,581 pupils enrolled. In 1930 in eight southern states there were in the public elementary schools 2,133,353 Negro students, in the high schools, 106,275, and in the colleges approximately 25,000. In 1911 there were 5,000 Negro graduates of colleges and nine doctors of philosophy; in 1933, the number of these graduates had mounted to 16,000 and the doctors in philosophy to 90. There are 89 Negroes listed in Who's Who in America. Up to 1930 Phi Beta Kappa had elected 116 Negroes to membership. Since then the number of Negroes in the professional class had increased from 32,879 to 137,263, or 417.4%. This number includes 3,605 doctors, 56,829 teachers, 430 artists and art teachers, 210 librarians, and 425 authors and editors.†

"America's Tenth Man" (published by Conference on Education and Race Relations, 710 Standard Building, Atlanta, Georgia) is a pamphlet describing the Negro's part in American history. Figures are given showing what advancement Negroes have made in the fields of industry, education, business, religion, music, literature, art, and health. This is a pamphlet which every Bahá’í should own.

What the Negro Thinks by R. R. Moton is a very poignant portrayal of the discriminations, insults, humiliations, and abuses suffered daily by Negroes in theaters, restaurants, barber shops, hotels, and swimming pools. In politics, housing, employment, law courts, and in government, they are not given their full rights as American citizens. Likewise in railroads, street cars, elevators, waiting rooms, the Negro is usually given poorer accommodations than white travellers. Moton makes us aware of the problems of the Negroes. We cannot overlook these, but rather we must be informed of them and then strive to correct them.

It is the hope of the Race Unity committee that every Bahá’í will be stimulated to read some of these books.

Bahá’u’lláh says: "Close your eyes to racial differences, and welcome all with the light of oneness."

PARENTS AND TEACHERS

Books Around the World

"The world is one country, and mankind its citizens."

This month we have received from Miss Flora Hottes of Kenosha a well-selected book list. "For at least ten years or more," writes Miss Hottes, "children's books have been reflecting, in ever-increasing measure, the deepening world awareness of the fundamental unity of human kind. Now, a great and growing number of children's books, dealing with life in different countries, are real story books of high literary merit, exquisitely illustrated. These depict, with sympathetic knowledge, the racial spirit, national cultures, and religious faiths, not as antagonistic, but as essentially human and fundamentally similar. This is indeed a sign of the times."

PUBLIC MEETING AND REGIONAL CONFERENCE

The concluding public meeting and regional conference of the current Bahá'í year were conducted by the National Spiritual Assembly with the assistance and cooperation of the Spiritual Assembly of Chicago on January 19 and 21, 1940.

The public meeting was held in Kimball Recital Hall, 306 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago. The program, under the title of “World Crisis and Universal Peace,” included a talk on “The Spirit of the Americas” by Mrs. Dorothy Baker; on “Religion Plays Its Part” by Leroy Ison; and on “The Structure of World Peace” by Louis G. Gregory. Harlan Ober presided as chairman of the meeting. A large audience of Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís, the former from many different cities, contributed to the spiritual importance of the occasion.

The Regional Conference was held in Temple Foundation Hall Sunday, January 21, from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., Miss Sophie Loeding presiding. Among the subjects considered were: Teaching (Community, Pioneer, Regional, Youth); and National Fund in relation to the aims of the Seven Year Plan. Despite the severe weather, Assemblies, groups and isolated believers in the area were well represented. Each topic was first briefly presented by a chosen representative, then opened for general discussion.

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

“WELCOME PARTICULARLY RECENT ACTION DESIGNED EXPEDITE TERMINATION (OF) DIVINELY-FOUNDED TEMPLE . . .”

SHOGHI EFFENDI CONTRIBUTES TO BAH'IYIH KHANUM FUND

The Guardian of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh has by his cabled and written encouragement and approval, and by his munificent donation, assured the success of the next great undertaking in the completion of the House of Worship.

“ORDAINED (TO BE THE) ARK”

As reported in BAHA'I NEWS of November, the Guardian referred significantly to the Temple construction work in his message dated October 23:

“Welcome particularly recent action designed expedite termination (of) Divinely-founded Temple ordained (to be the) Ark destined (to) ride triumphant (the) tidal wave (of) world-en-circling calamities and offering sole refuge (to) storm-tossed sufferers of sinful, steadily sinking civilization.

This heart-stirring message was soon followed by the cablegram received December 26, which forever associates the House of Worship with the sacred memory of the Purest Branch and the Master's Mother, and gives us one more example of the Guardian's self-sacrifice in his unique service to mankind:

“PLEDE THOUSAND POUNDS”

“Christmas eve, (the) beloved remains (of) Purest Branch and Master's Mother laid in state (in) Báb's Holy Tomb. Christmas day, entrusted (to) Carmel's sacred soil. The (the) ceremony (in) presence (of) representatives (of) Near Eastern believers profoundly moving. Impelled associate America's momentous Seven Year enterprise (with) imperishable memory (of) these two holy souls who, next (to) Twin Founders (of) Faith and (its) Perfect Exemplar, tower, together with Greatest Holy Leaf, above (the) entire concourse (of) the faithful. Rejoice privilege (to) pledge thousand pounds my contribution (to) Bahá'íh Khanum Fund designed (for) inauguration (of) final drive (to) insure placing contract next April (for) last remaining stage (in) construction (of) Mashriqu'l-Adhkár. Time (is) pressing, opportunity priceless, potent aid providentially promised unfailing.”

“The PLAN . . . MEETS WITH MY UNQUALIFIED APPROVAL.”

This vital matter is more fully expounded in the Guardian's letter dated December 27:

“The Plan which your Assembly has suggested to raise the sum of fifty thousand dollars by next April, which will enable you to place the necessary contracts for the final completion of the entire First Story of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, meets with my unqualified approval. It was specially in order to initiate and encourage the progress of such a plan that I felt impelled to pledge the sum of one thousand pounds in the memory of these two glorious souls who, apart from the Founders of the Faith and its Exemplar, tower, together with the Greatest Holy Leaf, above the rank and file of the faithful.

“The interval separating us from that date is admittedly short. The explosive forces which lie dormant in the international field may, ere the expiry of these fleeting months, break out in an eruption that may prove the most fateful that mankind has experienced. It is within the power of the organized body of the American believers to further demonstrate the imperturbability of their faith, the serenity of their confidence and the unyielding tenacity of their resolve.”

“FINAL COMPLETION OF THE ENTIRE FIRST STORY”

Since the Seven Year Plan was initiated, a vast amount of work has been done on the House of Worship: the gallery section completed, the models and molds for the first story practically completed, part of the nine first story pylons completed, and the quartz and steel needed for completing the exterior decoration of the first story purchased and paid for.

What remains to be done is the casting and application of the ornamentation to the first story, and the casting of the units which will constitute the surrounding staircase.

In the Bahá'í Khanum Fund as of January 22, we have a balance of $14,259.99 which can be devoted to the cost of this new construction.

The Guardian has given full approval to the signing of a contract for completing the first story and the surrounding steps by April 1 provided the National Spiritual Assembly has $50,000 on hand.

Deducting the $14,259.99 from this necessary $50,000, we have the amount that must be contributed to the National Fund by April first, over and above what is required for current expenses —$35,740.01.

The work to be done under this new contract will require about two years. During that two years, beginning April 1, 1940, there must be accumulated the balance required to meet the cost, or $55,816.78.

The execution of this proposed contract means that all the exterior ornamentation of the House of Worship, and the surrounding steps, will have been completed by 1942, and this will leave two years more to take care of the metal doors and some beautifying of the grounds.

The exact figures determining the new contract are as follows:

1. Cost of casting and application of units to first story . . . . . . $ 95,000.00
2. Cost of external stairs ........................................... 30,000.00
3. Total cost .......................................................... $125,000.00
4. Deductions for items already paid:
   External decoration on pylons, (lower portion) . . . . . . . . . . . . $10,104.65
   Quartz already purchased ......................................... 5,175.00
   Steel and wire already purchased ............................... 3,903.57
   Total ............................................................... $19,183.22
5. Amount to be contributed April 1, 1940 . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . $105,816.78
6. Less cash on hand before contract can be placed . . . . . . . . . . . . 50,000.00
7. Amount to be contributed in 1941 ................................ $ 55,816.78

"TIME PRESSING, OPPORTUNITY PRICELESS"

The inauguration of this vitally important Temple work means that between now and April 1, 1940, the National Fund must receive donations (in addition to the amount needed for maintaining all other activities) amounting to $35,740.01.

It is for each American Bahá’í to realize the urgency of the Guardian’s call and determine the degree of his or her sacrifice.

It is for the newer believers, who have entered into the blessings and opportunities provided for them by the sacrifices of those who preceded them, to realize that they have a special privilege.

It is for the Spiritual Assemblies to augment and intensify the effort of the National Spiritual Assembly to impress the Guardian’s deepest hopes upon every member of the local community.

It is for the Correspondents of groups to discuss the Plan with all other members of the group and take action.

It is for the pioneers in the field, who are so close to the realm of sacrifice where the Divine Will is all-potent, to reinforce the efforts of their fellow-believers with daily prayer.

Finally—to provide the occasion for consultation and collective action, that the holy flame ignited in the hearts by Shoghi Effendi may enkindle the entire Bahá’í community of North America—the National Spiritual Assembly requests the consultation periods of the Nineteen Day Feasts on February 7, and March 2 to be concentrated on the fulfilment of the Plan, and the nineteen day periods of the fast to be devoted to supplication for the attainment of the true spirit of sacrifice for the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

Our Beloved Temple
Words of Shoghi Effendi

It seems befitting, in connection with the Temple completion plan announced as an insert in this issue of Bahá’í News, to ponder again those words which the Guardian addressed to the American Bahá’ís on March 21, 1932, in the letter reprinted as The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh.

“And finally, dearly-beloved brethren, let me once more direct your attention to the pressing claims of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar, our beloved Temple. Need I remind you of the imperative necessity of carrying out to a successful conclusion, while there is yet time, the great enterprise to which, before the eyes of a watching world, we stand committed? Need I stress the great damage which further delay in the prosecution of this divinely-appointed task must, even in these critical and unforeseen circumstances, inflict upon the prestige of our beloved Cause? I am, I can assure you, acutely conscious of the stringency of the circumstances with which you are faced, the embarrassments under which you labor, the cares with which you are burdened, the pressing urgency of the demands that are being incessantly made upon your depleted resources. I am, however, still more profoundly aware of the unprecedented character of the opportunity which it is your privilege to seize and utilize. I am aware of the incalculable blessings that must await the termination of a collective enterprise which, by the range and quality of the sacrifices it entailed, deserves to be ranked among the most outstanding examples of Bahá’í solidarity ever since those deeds of brilliant heroism immortalized the memory of the heroes of Nayriz, of Zanjan, and of Tabarsi. I appeal to you, therefore, friends and fellow-disciples of Bahá’u’lláh, for a more abundant measure of self-sacrifice, for a higher standard of concerted effort, for a still more compelling evidence of the reality of the faith that glows within you.

“And in this fervent plea, my voice is once more reinforced by the passionate and perhaps the last, entreaty of the Greatest Holy Leaf, whose spirit, now hovering on the edge of the Great Beyond, longs to carry on its flight to the Abba Kingdom, and into the presence of a Divine, an almighty Father, an assurance of the joyous consummation of an enterprise, the progress of which has so greatly brightened the closing days of her earthly life. That the American believers, those stout-hearted pioneers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, will unanimously respond, with that same spontaneous generosity, that same measure of self-sacrifice, as have characterized their response to her appeals in the past, no one who is familiar with the vitality of their faith can possibly question.”

National Spiritual Assembly

Local Assemblies which, in addition, feel the need for additional meetings of the friends at more frequent intervals, can unquestionably contribute powerfully to the achievement of the mighty task.

The Guardian’s most recent word of instruction and counsel is in his cablegram received January 18:

"Urge Assembly focus attention (at its) forthcoming meeting (upon the) vitally urgent obligation . . . intensification effort aiming realization (of) recently approved Temple Plan . . . Victorics unsuspected (are) within reach (of) community. (The) sooner (they are) achieved, (the) sharper (the) contrast offered (with) distracting miseries afflicting (a) generation (which) Faith alone can (and) must eventually redeem.”

National Spiritual Assembly.
Beloved Friends:

There are events in a spiritual Cause which have the special characteristic that they seem luminous with the light of inner significance. They shine through the twilight of our ignorance and incapacity. They are revealing of the vital importance of intention as well as of truth.

Such an event has now transpired in the Bahá’í Community of America. Let us endeavor to rise above the inevitable human feeling of grief and seek to apprehend it through the higher understanding that comes to us from the Manifestation and from those whose mission was created by Him.

Concerning those who leave their country to teach in foreign lands, Bahá’u’lláh has said: “They that have forsaken their country for the purpose of teaching our Cause—these shall the Faithful Spirit strengthen through its power. A company of Our chosen angels shall go forth with them, as bidden by Him Who is the Almighty, the All-Wise. How great the blessedness that awaits them who hath attained the honor of serving the Almighty! By My life! No act, however great, can compare with it, except such deeds as have been ordained by God, the All-Powerful, the Most Mighty. Such a service is, indeed, the prince of all goodly deeds, and the ornament of every goodly act. Thus hath it been ordained by Him Who is the Sovereign Reveler, the Ancient of Days.”

Again, we have these gemlike words from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá: “If you plant a seed in the ground a tree will become manifest from that seed. The seed sacrifices itself to the tree that will come from it. The seed is outwardly lost, destroyed, but the same seed which is sacrificed will be absorbed and embodied in the tree, its blossoms, fruit and branches. If the identity of that seed had not been sacrificed to the tree which became manifest from it, no branches, blossoms or fruits would have been forthcoming.”

It is in the light of such utterances that we should approach the message from Shoghi Effendi which conveys to us the mystery associated with the passing of May Maxwell in Rio de Janeiro while teaching the Cause:—

“'Abdu'l-Bahá’s beloved handmaid, distinguished disciple May Maxwell (is) gathered (into the) glory (of the) Abhá Kingdom. Her earthly life, so rich, eventful, incomparably blessed, (is) worthily ended. To sacred tie her signal services had forged, (the) priceless honor (of a) martyr’s death (is) now added. (A) double crown deservedly won. (The) Seven Year Plan, particularly (the) South American campaign, derive fresh impetus (from) the example (of) her glorious sacrifice. Southern outpost (of) Faith greatly enriched through association with her historic resting-place destined remain (a) poignant reminder (of the) resistless march (of the) triumphant army (of) Bahá’u’lláh. Advise believers (of) both Americas (to) hold befitting memorial gathering.”

Cablegram received Feb. 27, 1940.

And as to the radiant heroism that must characterize those who serve the Faith of God, how could it be more nobly expressed than in these words of Ruhiyyih Khanum:—

“Humbly grateful beloved mother answered Guardian's call, turned southward (and) sacrificed (her) life for the) Holy Faith. Beg prayers (her) daughter may follow her footsteps."—RUB'AYYIH KHANUM.

Cablegram received March 4, 1940.

Now, we may be assured, there are

LETTERS FROM

The following excerpts from letters written by the Guardian through his Secretary to individual Baha'is are published with Shoghi Effendi's consent.

"Regarding the five steps of prayer outlined by the Guardian, and recorded by Mrs. Moffett in her booklet, the Call to Prayer, those, he wishes me to explain, are merely personal suggestions and need not, therefore, be adopted strictly and universally by the believers."—To Wilfrid Barton, June 30, 1938.

"In connection with your question regarding the reference made by 'Abdu'l-Bahá to 'His Highness Emmanuel' in Vol. III of His Tablets; this obviously refers to the Bahá'í Faith, as the text shows it clearly, and is in no way a reference to Swedenborg."—To Willard P. Hatch, May 9, 1938.

"With reference to your son's request for advice regarding the observance of the Bahá'í Fast; much as the Guardian realizes the difficulty which a believer of his position, attending a military school, will have to encounter if he wishes to strictly conform to the regulations of the Fast, he nevertheless would advise him to make every effort to obtain from the school authorities the necessary permission. In case his request is refused the only alternative for him would be to obey his superior."—To Mrs. Louise Caswell, October 27, 1938.

"Such hindrances (i.e., illness and outer difficulties), no matter how severe and insuperable they may at first seem, can and should be effectively overcome through the combined and sustained power of prayer and of determined and continued effort."—To Mrs. Alice S. Cox, February 6, 1939.

"As regards the celebration of the Christian Holidays by the believers; it is surely preferable and even highly advisable that the friends should in their relation to each other discontinue observing such holidays as Christmas and New Year, and to have their festival gatherings of this nature instead during the intercalary days and Naw-Ruz. . . . Concerning the question how long it takes for the spirit to properly disconnect itself from the body; there is no reference to that in the Writings. . . . The healing prayers revealed by Bahá'u'lláh can be effective even though used by non-believers. But their effectiveness is of course greater in the case of those who fully accept the Revelation."—To Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards, March 19, 1939.

"Concerning the idea of the Bahá'í World Order and the proper emphasis which should be laid on the social aspect of the Faith; the Guardian feels the necessity for all teachers to stress the fact that the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh can, under no circumstances, be divorced from the spiritual principles and teachings of the Cause; that the social laws and institutions of the Faith are inescapably bound up and closely interwoven with the moral and spiritual principles enunciated by Bahá'u'lláh, Who, Himself, indeed, has time and again emphasized the underlying oneness and the identity of purpose of all His spiritual, doctrinal, and social teachings. The Friends, while emphasizing both of these aspects, should, in particular, point out that they constitute parts of one and the same plan, and elements of a single, divine and world-embracing system."—To Leroy Ios, April 14, 1939.

"Concerning your question as to the status of those individuals whom the local Assembly or the N. S. A. have considered it necessary to deprive of the voting right and to suspend from local meetings and gatherings; such action which local and National Assemblies have been empowered to take against such recalcitrant members, however justified and no matter how severe, should under no circumstances be considered as implying the complete expulsion of the individuals affected from the Cause. The suspension of voting and other administrative rights of an individual, always conditional and therefore temporary, can never have such far-reaching implications, since it constitutes merely an administrative sanction; whereas his expulsion or excommunication from the Faith, which can be effected by the Guardian alone in his capacity as the supreme spiritual head of the Community, has far-reaching spiritual implications affecting the very soul of that believer. The former, as already stated, is an administrative sanction, whereas the latter is essentially spiritual, involving not only the particular relationship of a believer to his local or National Assembly, but his very spiritual existence in the Cause. It follows, therefore, that a believer can continue identifying himself a Bahá'í even though he may cease to be a voter of the Community. But in case he is excluded from the body of the Cause by an act of the Guardian he ceases to be a believer, and cannot possibly identify himself even nominally with the Faith."—To Harlan Ober, May 8, 1939.

"It is certainly most difficult to thoroughly grasp all the Surahs of the Qur'an, as it requires a detailed knowledge of the social, religious and historical background of Arabia at the time of the appearance of the Prophet. The believers cannot possibly hope, therefore, to understand the Surahs after the first or even second or third reading. They have to study them again and again, ponder over their meaning, with the help of certain commentaries, and explanatory notes as found, for instance in the admirable translation made by Sale, endeavor to acquire as clear and correct un-standing of their meaning and import as possible. This is naturally a slow process, but future generations of believers will certainly come to grasp it. For the present, the Guardian agrees, that it would be easier and more helpful to study the book according to subjects, and not verse by verse and also in the light of the Bab, Baha’u’llah and ‘Abdu’l-Baha’s interpretations which throw such floods of light on the whole of the Qur’an.”—To Mrs. Gertrude Struven, August 22, 1939.

MOVING PICTURE FILM OF ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ

Assemblies and individual Bahá’ís can obtain copies of the moving picture film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, taken in 1912 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard MacNutt, Brooklyn, for $10.00 per copy, in the 16 mm. size which is now most convenient. It is non-inflammable film, can be sent through the ordinary mails, and exhibited without fire hazard or requiring a licensed operator. It can be shown on any standard 16 mm. projector.

The availability of the historic film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá will no doubt lead many Assemblies to obtain a copy. Orders should be placed through Mr. Harry E. Walrath, Photograph and Sales Committee, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes this film to be shown only under conditions of dignity and reverence.

MEMBERSHIP IN OTHER ORGANIZATIONS

The National Spiritual Assembly asks the friends to give careful and prayerful thought about their connection with non-Bahá’í organizations, and endeavor, each for himself, to make any adjustment necessary in order to consolidate his spiritual and social life in the new World Order of Baha’u’llah. For, as the Guardian has instructed in recent years, it is not merely ecclesiastical or political organizations from which Bahá’ís are to withdraw, but also any other type of organization whose aims and influence are incompatible with the nature of the Faith.

Thus, in the letter reprinted in Bahá’í Procedure, Section One, Sheets 7 and 8, the Guardian explained:

“Formal affiliation with and acceptance of membership in organizations whose programs or policies are not wholly reconcilable with the Teachings is, of course, one of the questions. In the case of the World Fellowship of Faiths, however, Shoghi Effendi sees no objection if the American National Assembly decides to appoint one or two Bahá’í representatives to address some of the public meetings held under their auspices. To merely address such gatherings on a subject which is in harmony with the spirit of the Teachings does not constitute acceptance by the Bahá’í speaker of the entire program of the Fellowship. We should welcome and seize every opportunity that presents itself, however modest it may be, to give a wider publicity to the Cause, to demonstrate its all-inclusiveness and liberal attitude, its independence and purity, without committing ourselves, whether by word or deed, to programs or policies that are not in strict conformity with the tenets of the Faith. Shoghi Effendi hopes that this principle will guide your distinguished Assembly in its dealings with various associations which will increasingly seek, in the days to come, the support of Bahá’í individuals and Assemblies for the attainment of their ends.”

AMENDMENT TO DECLARATION OF TRUST

Article V has been amended to read as follows: The central office of this trust shall be located in the Village of Wilmette, State of Illinois, U. S. A., site of the Bahá’í House of Worship.

BAHÁ’Í SCHOOL AT PINE VALLEY, COLORADO SPRINGS

In answer to inquiries, the announcement is made that there will be no sessions of the School to be established on the Mathews property open to believers this year. The activities at the School will be in the nature of consultation on future plans. Notice will be published when the School is open to Bahá’ís.

FIRST WINTER SESSION
LOUHELEN BAHÁ’Í SCHOOL

Dec. 26, 1939—Jan. 1, 1940

All those who attended the first winter session at the Louhelen Bahá’í School were deeply impressed with the inspirational spirit, the atmosphere conducive to concentrated study and the objective program of this session.

During the week, seventy-one different people, representing twelve towns of four states, were present.

The theme of this session was “Methods of Training for Acceptable Service.” The program included a series of lectures by Frances Benedict Stewart, on Latin American conditions and peoples, their history and culture, giving to all present a better understanding of these neighboring countries. The first part of the week was devoted to Study Methods and actual work on a frame of reference of Bahá’í literature, directed by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick. The latter part of the week was spent discussing Teaching Methods, the various factors which condition the approach, and the points of contact. Ettel Nell-Furbush presented the Bible and Christian Science approach. Frances B. Stewart discussed the Catholic, Theosophical and Rosicrucian points of similarity and disagreement with the Bahá’í teachings. Harry Jay demonstrated his methods of conducting group study of the direct Word. He also proved his method of transferring this ability, by way of self-help outlines, to others who have no teaching training. A discussion of methods of developing teachers systematically was indicative of a felt need.

At the conclusion of the session, the students enthusiastically expressed an appreciation of the benefits derived from the exchange of ideas and they felt a very special stimulus to carry on their work.

Of this first winter session, one student stated: “This experiment is a real contribution toward the further development of the Bahá’í school.”

INTER-AMERICA NEWS

Mrs. Lorol Schopflocher is visiting our Centers in Mexico and Central America, and will report her journey through the Inter-America Committee.

Mrs. May Maxwell and Miss J. Bolles have gone to South America for a short visit.

Miss Leonora Holsapple left Bahía this winter for an extensive teaching tour. She placed Bahá’í literature in seven different book shops in Panamá, and also distributed literature in Maccio, holding meetings in both cities. She has translated and published Esselmont in Portuguese.

Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart is leaving soon to spend a year in South America; we may, therefore, expect our first South American Assembly in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala of Toronto have left New York to settle inCaracas, Venezuela.

Mr. John Stearns goes this month to Quito, Ecuador.

Mr. Gerard Sluter, after excellent teaching efforts in Guatemala, reports formation of a study group.

Mr. Antonio Roca has completed his six-months’ teaching in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, and through his efforts, the noted poetess, Angela Ochoa Velázquez, became attracted to the Bahá’í principles and has written a splendid article in the foremost publication of Honduras on the Faith.

Mr. Clarence Iverson has arrived in El Salvador and is assisting Mr. John Eichenauer, Jr., in the teaching work of San Salvador.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Laws of Seattle, Washington, are sailing on the Rakuyou Maru on the 21st of March for Santiago, Chile, where they will make their home.

Mr. Filapac, steward on the S.S. Uruguay now carries Bahá’í Worlds as far as Rio de Janeiro where Mr. Charles O’Hanion distributes them through the countries of South America. This is a definite gain since such large books take four to six months, otherwise, to reach their destination.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Blackwell are going to Haiti in the near future.

Miss Margaret Lentz of San Domingo writes of our first believer there, Maria Teresa Martin de Lopez. She intends to help Miss Lentz with Bahá’í work and, as soon as it can be arranged, will live with her and give all her time to the Cause.

The Assembly of the Philippine Islands is being formed with eighteen believers.

The new Inter-America Address Book has been completed.

A STUDY COURSE FOR TEMPLE GUIDES

The greatest attraction of the Bahá’í Faith in the Western World is the Temple. Those who come to it look to you and to me to tell them about the Bahá’í Cause. Nor can we leave it to the select few who voluntarily come in as guides and shoulder the load of the guide work. Nor will we if we look upon this as the golden opportunity that it is—a real test of our knowledge of the Teachings, and a real test of our loyalty to the Cause, to lay aside a part, a definite part, of our time and devote it to this marvelous outlet for advancing the Teachings.

Whether you are a lecturer of note, whether you teach in your home, whether you have ever guided, whether you live near or far, the Temple stands there where you can give of your best efforts to those who are eager to hear and to know.

Shoghi Effendi has made it clear that a very high standard is set for guides for the Temple, and this standard has been followed in making up a Study Course for guides, seasoned or new, to study so that they may attain this standard, and use it as a means of making a proper presentation of the Cause and the interesting features of the Temple.

This course has been prepared by the Temple Guide Committee, under the direction of the National Spiritual Assembly, and gives in concise and complete form all the essential details that a guide must know to function properly, based upon the rapid advances being made in the Cause. This Course is up-to-date and contains not only useful and essential but interesting points about the Temple and excerpts from the Teachings that are an invaluable aid in guiding the many and varied types of people who come to the Temple, either through interest or curiosity.

Very shortly this Guide Course will be announced, with complete details as to place the meetings will be held, dates, etc.

The cooperation of believers in the Temple area is requested.

TEMPLE GUIDE COMMITTEE

RADIO ACTIVITIES

During the past year nearly 700 radio talks were sent out to all the Assemblies and Regional Committees at request of The National Teaching Committee. These included a different series to each Assembly in a State, suggesting in following letters, that these Talks might be exchanged between the Assemblies, thus securing a series acceptable to each different locality. We also expressed the wish that each Assembly try to secure small stations which cover their localities, which permit easier access to the public because their programs offer more free time. We did hope also to receive reports as to their successes, which Talks proved to be acceptable and effective in securing good response, and what Talks did meet with the approval of the most stations. To date, only a few comments have been received which leaves us guessing as to what kind of material to use, or what kind of Talks to compile to meet differing conditions.

In a few cities the Talks sent were most successful in opening the stations for frequent broadcasts during the year, one every week ever since the first contact, and several more series were compiled in accordance with their suggestions and sent to them for further use. A few sample Talks have been sent us by different teachers who were successful with them, for which we are very grateful. Others have written us that the names, “Bahá’í Faith,” “Bahá’u’lláh,” “Abdu’l-Bahá,” could not all be used in any one Talk, but it is generally agreed that “The Bahá’í Faith” and “Bahá’u’lláh, The Founder of The Bahá’í Faith” were permitted, to which all our separate Talks conform. Some stations are willing to accept the Principles and Teachings without any restrictions; others will grant time for only the most indirect approach which, wherever used, has gained for us the growing confidence of the radio officials so that later, more direct Talks were kindly permitted.

We have educational talks; a series on the essentials for world peace; several interviews that are popular; two different ones on The Temple, compiled from our Temple pamphlets, for use especially with the exhibition of The Temple model, which gives an important opportunity to introduce the public to our Faith even in quite new places, doubly impressed by The Temppeople, with its accompanying exhibition to prove itself as established in the world; another series on "The Philosophy of Baha'u'llah" requested by one of the station program directors; a series on "The History of The Faith" is being prepared,—one ready for order. —"The First Woman Suffragist of the World, Famed in The East"—this series can be given on such periods as "Lives of Great Men and Women," which many stations have. A series on "The Prophecies" has just been prepared for us by Mrs. Elizabeth Greenleaf which has been requested several times, and this series will soon be ready for order; it is in two parts. We are anxious to have a series on "Comparative Religion"—a better subject might be given,—and this will announce that we are about to invite Mrs. Bishop to compile this series for us, as it has been requested in some places, and because our Committee is busy on the historical series and drama.

We shall welcome any and all Talks proven successful in order that we may build a Library for the practical and scientific presentation of our Faith, built upon actual experiences over the country. Do let us have the cooperation of every Assembly and Regional Committee, and please give us your criticisms freely and frankly. This is all pioneer work with unique and limitless opportunity and responsibility, but we are groping blindly because only by our combined efforts can we be successful in attracting all over this great continent our unseen audiences; and to do this most efficiently we believe we have to carry the Creative Words themselves which radiate their own powers. Therefore we have compiled as much as possible our Teachings in quotations, conforming to limitations set by stations. We are trying to be a clearinghouse of all kinds of Radio Broadcasts.

May we give you a suggestion arising from our experiences in New England? Here it has proven effective to choose a good center, a well-known station, and also one small station in one of our big cities, and Massachusetts led in this plan,—to succeed if possible in the presentation of our Interviews on "World Peace"—at a time when a peace-drive was planned throughout the state, while The Temple model was being exhibited also,—"The Temple of Light; A House of Prayer" and "America's Great Opportunity." The prestige of one large, well-known station in one city, and one small station in another large city, opened the way for other broadcasts in a Vermont city. If Managers or Program Directors in one large city have carried our Talks, their names could be used as references, and other stations will listen to our story without so much criticism or objection. It has proven easier by choosing a Baha'i who has had experience in meeting objections with the faith of the Dawn-Breakers, because program directors give us all kinds of wild objections, and doors do not open readily at best in the radio field, unless you pay for time. It calls for fearless refutation of their objections together with earnest prayers to God to open prejudiced ears. They are anxious to have all new material possible and do not like to be out-done by other stations, which is in our favor.

The follow-up work of these Talks is exceedingly important, or else our efforts are lost. This cannot be done unless at the end of the Talk, the announcer adds this,—"All those who wish a copy of this Talk, please send promptly to this station, their names and addresses," which fortunately is their custom. This brings immediately to us those who are interested, who are ready for a wise system of contact and teaching without the long, laborious efforts trying to find them. This work may be done by both Assemblies and Regional Committees, covering groups, isolated believers as well as individuals especially fitted for this type of work, together with the prayers of the Assemblies and all not participating, for the success of the broadcasts in their region. It also gives opportunity for believers to invite to their homes those they know will be interested in the Talk, or the groups.
Baha'i News

studying, to meet, hear the broadcast, then follow up with some reading perhaps, and discussion. Here is opportunity for a systematized effort of the Regional Committees to notify Groups everywhere to form fireside groups for neighbors and friends who would be impressed by a broadcast of the Message and distribution of our little pamphlets if thought wise—a United County Program.

From what has been learned in this field, we find that with the help of the Regional Committees, groups could easily multiply with every broadcast. With the cooperation of all Assemblies, and their most experienced teachers for first contacts with the stations, preparing the way for those with good voices, to be ready to read familiarly, as though speaking, the Talks, there is nothing we cannot expect from the vast resources of the station to reach all the inhabitants of this whole country. And no one can experience the work without coming to find that the Radio is Baha'u'llah's Own created mouthpiece given to us to spread His Revelation to the world, especially this Continent. We of the Committee fully believe this work has not yet begun to scratch the surface of its destined place in the preliminary work of teaching in new areas, and for the development of those cities where there are Assemblies, where consultation and legislation are a wise equipment for anyone starting out to do the broadcasting of our Faith in this difficult time of transition, when everything is subjected to doubt.

Who knows what vast results would accrue to our Beloved Faith if we all cooperated in this pioneer field in our own cities and states, to send the echo of the Call of Baha'u'llah here from the West back to the land of The Dawn-Breakers! And by air!

Parents and Teachers

Spring Classes Open for Children

The Child Education Committee is happy to learn of the increased number of groups now participating in the spiritual education of young Baha'is and their friends.

The parents are reminded by 'Abdu'l-Baha: 'It is incumbent upon you to train the children from their earliest childhood! It is incumbent upon you to beautify their morals!' To one of the teachers of the children in Washington, D. C., he said: 'The Tablets, for the children, in which the Tablets are read, the Teachings of His Holiness Baha'u'llah explained, and the Word of God read to the children, is exceedingly blessed.' "Undoubtedly meetings should be held regularly and invested with importance; so that day unto day its circle may be enlarged and be quickened with the breaths of the Holy Spirit. But firmness and steadfastness are necessary, that it may not continue for a few days and later on little by little be forgotten. Its continuation depends upon firmness." Baha'is parents are challenged by the lack of moral emphasis in the public schools. A news summary of WHCC, reporting on the article "Religion and Children in a Democracy" prepared for presentation and group discussion at a recent White House conference states: "Approximately one-half of the children and youth of America receive no formal religious instruction. Yet religion is presented as one of the fundamental essentials of the preservation of a democracy. The problem of the youth of the land is termed an unsolved problem... serious question is raised as to how the child's religious needs shall be met as he grows older. It is pointed out that religion was once a part of the integral education of children in this country, the first schools having been religious schools. But as a result of several factors, such as the rise of the district school, increasing curriculum demands, and sectarianism of American religion, teaching of religion was excluded from public schools.

The report then estimated that approximately half the child population received no religious instruction whatever, citing as an authority the Department of Research of the International Council of Religious Education which has calculated that in 1926 of an estimated 30,000,000 children between the ages of 5 and 17, approximately 16,000,000 received no form of religious instruction." This most important factor, then, of our children's preparation for life is lacking in the educational system. Baha'is parents do not accept this defeat. No day is without its precious benefit to the Baha'i child who knows that before he sleeps at night there will be time to draw near to Baha'u'llah with the loving and sympathetic help of a devoted Baha'i parent. Perhaps there is in his city a group of children who come together during the week in a class for study as well. With what joy must our beloved Master look upon such children. 'Make ye an effort,' He said, 'so that these children may be trained and educated and that each of them may become perfect in the world of humanity.' "There comes a time in the development of character when nobility of expression becomes habitual. We then hardly have to try to be good." "Cultivation by the farmer maketh of the grain the harvest, and the effort of the gardener maketh of the seed a noble tree. The gentle teacher promoveth the children of the school to a lofty altitude and the bestowal of the trainer placeth the little child upon the throne of ether." "Therefore, the beloved of God and the maid servants of the Merciful must train their children with life and heart and teach them in the school of virtue and perfection. They must not be lax in this matter; they must not be inefficient." Child Education Committee.

National Press Book Report

Newspapers are mirrors reflecting the consciousness of a people. An increasing awareness of the Baha'i Community is being reflected in these mirrrors of the western hemisphere indicating a steady and vigorous growth of the Community.

A new field for publicity activity is opening up to many of the friends who have been changing their mode of living from city dwellers to country folk. Several of the friends have become "farm-minded" and have moved into isolated districts. Usually such locations are within easy driving distances of not one but several small farming communities which support weekly papers with a good sized circulation. To attract people in these localities whose lives necessarily differ in routine and interest challenges the ingenuity of the believers.

Among others, the Matthiasens, formerly of Chicago, have gone into an isolated farming district in northern Illinois. They have been successful in obtaining generous responses from the papers of both Antioch, Illinois, and Bristol, Wisconsin. Articles on the Cause and more specifically on personal Baha'i activities have been printed as well as pictures of the Temple. With the cooperation of the near-by Kenosha Assembly a large amount of Bahá'í publicity has been obtained in the Kenosha papers about the Bristol-Antioch group. Kenosha papers have large country circulation.

Allen McDaniel in Waterford, Virginia, has done much the same type of work from his farming community where he has become isolated. The Blue-Ridge Herald of Purcellville, Virginia, through the efforts of Mrs. C. L. Robey printed a picture of the Temple and comments on Mr. McDaniel's lecture there. The Loudown Times of Leesburg, Virginia, printed several articles about Mr. McDaniel's Temple lecture.

Isolated believers can take heart from the work that is being done in finding ways to approach newspapers. The February bulletin issued by this Committee gives suggestions to isolated believers and can be obtained upon request.

A noticeable amount of new publicity is coming in from the southern part of the United States through the efforts of pioneers. The Columbia (S.C.) Record through the efforts of Miss Alta Wheeler has printed Bahá'í notices. The Fayetteville (W. V.) Tribune printed a long article on the Cause through the efforts of the Hilbert Dahls. Both the Commercial Appeal and the Press-Scimitar of Memphis, Tenn., have carried many articles on Bahá'í activities and personalities with excerpts from the Writings through the endeavors of Mrs. Mabel Ives.

The Rutland (Vt.) Daily Herald printed notices of activities through Miss Neya Bissell who is pioneering in Vermont. Papers at both Saranac Lake and Lake Placid have carried articles through the efforts of Mrs. Louise Erickson. The enterprise group in Circleville, Ohio, has obtained sustained response from the local paper concerning the Cause. Both the Omaha (Neb.) Star and World Herald have printed splendid long, signed articles by Doreene Holliday.

In addition to those who have contributed to the Press Books as listed in the last report we would like to mention the following town and friends: State of California—Hollywood, Huntington Beach, South Gate and San Diego; State of New York—New Haven and West Haven; State of Illinois—Maywood and Urbana; State of Michigan—Ann Arbor, Grosse Pointe and Dearborn; Moncton, New Brunswick and Toronto, Ontario, Canada; State of New York—Jamestown, New Rochelle, and Syracuse, Tennessee, Chattanoogaa; State of Washington, Spokane.

Among newspapers from other parts of the world, the Rangoon Times (India) has a long article in English by Mrs. Shirin Fozdar. The Norges Kvinde, November 17th and the Aftenposten of November 24th of Oslo, Norway, carried articles on the passing of Martha Root.

This Committee has ready two new releases for general newspaper use and a six-page bulletin on publicity. These may be obtained by request. The National Press Books will close March 31st. We urge all the friends to mail in all their clippings by that date so that the Books may be arranged for Convention. If you do not know how to paste the clippings in preparation for mounting, we beg of you to ask us. It is very simple to paste the name of the paper and the date from the paper on to the top of the clipping, cutting the edges of both clipping and heading even with the column lines.

If we can be of any assistance please write us.

CINCINNATI BAHÁ'Í CENTER

The house at 206 E. University Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio, was given to the Cincinnati Bahá'í Assembly in December, 1938, by Miss Josephine E. Vogler in memory of her mother, Mrs. Carolyn Vogler, an early Bahá'í in Cincinnati, and Adelle Stuber, their spiritual mother, another early Bahá'ís of Cincinnati.

In order to accept this property the Assembly incorporated under the laws of Ohio, receiving papers under date of Oct. 17, 1938.

This meeting place is now known as the Bahá'í Center, and is used for our Feast meetings, weekly public meetings and has a fairly complete library of Bahá'í books, which the public is invited to use. The Center is used constantly for dinner meetings for attraction, discussion meetings, study classes and youth meetings.

The house was dedicated as the Bahá'í Center on May 23, 1939, and has been the means of increasing the activity of the Bahá'í community and the resulting increase in membership from 19 to 26.

JAMESTOWN ASSEMBLY ADOPTS PLAN TO INCREASE CONTRIBUTIONS TO NATIONAL FUND

A special report has been received from the Spiritual Assembly of Jamestown describing how it worked out ideas and plans to increase the community's support of the National Fund. This report reveals so much concentration of effort upon the important task, and such cooperation among the friends, that an outline is published for the information of other Assemblies.

Consultation started on receipt of general communications from the National Assembly reporting Budget needs and requesting assistance from local Assemblies. Suggestions included desirability of each believer contributing at every Nineteen Day Feast, even though the sum had to be small, that a local Budget be planned, and that there be unified action from the community in raising funds by personal effort. The Assembly figured the proportionate share of the local community in the National Budget of $150,000 by showing that this means an average contribution of $50 for the year from every American Bahá'í. This made it amount to $750 for the year for Jamestown, or about $40 per Bahá'í month. Consultation at the Nineteen Day Feast brought out a number of ways in which believers could earn extra money for the Fund, and above all gave emphasis to the spiritual elements in the relationship of Bahá'ís to the progress of their administrative institutions. The result of this extensive and cooperative effort was to intensify the feeling of responsibility and devotion throughout the community.

NEWS OF EAST AND WEST
The volume on Illinois, in the American Guide Series (the WPA books on the various States) entitled Illinois, a Descriptive and Historical Guide, published by A. C. McClurg and Co., Chicago, has an article on the Temple on page 414, and a photograph between pages 586-587. Although an effort is being made to correct an inaccuracy in the next edition, the Bahá’í references in this work, prepared and issued under Federal auspices, are most gratifying. The text was prepared by the staff of writers engaged in preparing the book.

El Eco de Mexico, a magazine published at Los Angeles in Spanish, contains in the issue dated November 1, 1939, an article on the Cause entitled "Una Nueva Doctrina, El Movimiento Bahá’í," with illustration of the Temple and of Mrs. Charles R. Witt, Los Angeles Bahá’í.

The Bahá’í Faith is represented in a new handbook entitled "Where Do You Belong?" which lists modern religious and philosophical movements. It is published by Marya Mason, care of Fellowship of Divine Truth, 219 S. Broad Street, Philadelphia, and copies can be obtained for $0.30.

Another reference to the Cause, in connection with the WPA, is the leaflet, Tour Topics, Volume 3, Number 78, November 12-16, 1939, which announced WPA Free Educational Chicago Tours for Chicagoans. Adult Educational Program of the Works Progress Administration, sponsored by the Chicago Board of Education. The Bahá’í Temple is on the list of these tours.

A second article on the Faith has appeared in American Astrology, December issue, entitled "The New World Religion. 2, Bahá’í World Order," by Dane Rudhyar. Here is the result of an independent study of Bahá’í books by a non-believer who uses his own channel to convey his impressions to the public. Undoubtedly many are being acquainted with the Cause by this series of articles in American Astrology who might not otherwise have learned of it for many years.

Mrs. Frances L. Wells, Correspondent of the group at Pine Knott, Calif., sends an interesting account of the display of the Temple model (see illustration in a late issue) which the group arranged for the last week in August, 1939, and extended two more weeks. The group, Mrs. Wells writes "took advantage of this wonderful opportunity by holding four public meetings, one of which was for youth. Mrs. Beulah Storrs Lewy, was our guest speaker for the occasion and we have had wonderful response as result of these fruitful gatherings... It is estimated that hundreds saw the Temple model and all the pamphlets we could get were given away. The map from the Year Book showing our many centers in the world was framed on the door together with a card setting forth the twelve basic Bahá’í Principles..."

The Universal Atlas Cement Co. has issued a bulletin to architects entitled Architectural Concrete Slabs which illustrates and describes the Bahá’í Temple as an example of the use of this material. The bulletin is also incorporated in the well-known reference book, Sweet’s Catalog.

The Peoria Assembly conducted a meeting for Race Unity on January 25, the program of which was printed on the outside back cover of Bahá’í Reprint No. 1, The Image of God, an excellent idea. The speakers were Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Mr. Louis C. Gregory, Mrs. Alice Cox presiding.

The New York Assembly continued its Latin-American teaching activities with a program given at the Bahá’í Center on January 17 entitled An Evening in Puerto Rico. Patria Aran Gosnell spoke on "Puerto Rico—Its Culture and People"; a puppet show based on a child’s story entitled Peres & Marina was given by Pura Belpré; illustrations from the story book were exhibited by Querco-Chiesa; a travelogue film was shown, dance selections were rendered by Mercedes Virella and piano selections by Alicia Morales. A program for Inter-Racial Unity was carried out by the New York Assembly on January 31, with addresses by Mr. James A. Rogers and Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan, Mr. Bruce Wendell presiding.

The Indianapolis Assembly began an Esperanto class on January 15, with an able instructor secured through the WPA Adult Education Project. The friends believe that this class will provide many contacts for the believers.

The weekly publication Newsweek included in its February 19 issue an article reprinting the Bahá’í marriage of Oscar P. Stone and Eleanor Samuels at Teaneck. The National Assembly has written the editor of Newsweek in order to correct errors of fact and opinion in their references to Bahá’í marriage.

NINTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE BAHA’IS OF IRAQ
The Ninth Annual Bahá’í Convention was held Saturday evening, April 22, 1939, in Bagdad. Fourteen delegates attended, three others sending
One thing that distinguishes the Bahá’í Faith from all other institutions and movements which are found to have risen up in almost all the religious systems of the world is that Bahá’u’lláh has not only enunciated beneficial principles for the good of humanity. He has at the same time brought a full scheme and powerful organization to help in administrating and practising those principles. The Annual Convention is one of the potent factors of this administration. It provides an occasion for the whole body of the believers of a country to take part in the affairs of the Faith and to elect a body through their delegates to manage and carry out the wishes of the entire Community throughout the year.

The delegates to the 11th Annual Convention hailed from all parts of India and Burma. There were Messrs. Isfandiar Bakhtiar and Khasroove Ardshir Izydayr from Karachi, Messrs. Siyyid Mahmud Fassan and Ahmed Yazdani from Delhi, Mr. Siyyid Ghulam Mortaza Ali from Rangoon, Messrs. Siyyid Mahfuzul Haq Ilni and Habib Mehrali Manji from Bombay and Mr. Mujibur Rahman from Calcutta. These, with visitors from Bombay, Delhi, Lahore, Simla, Jaipur and the whole community of Calcutta, constituted a congregation whose hearts were washed clean of the hatred that seems to have gripped the world, by the throat and is killing it by strangulation.

The Convention was opened by Prof. Pritam Singh, the senior member of the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly and Mr. Isfandiar Bakhtiar read the opening prayer.

Mr. Isfandiar Bakhtiar and Mr. Habib Manji were elected President and Secretary of the Convention, respectively.

Mr. Habib Manji read the special prayer for the Convention and the proceedings began.

The following cablegram was then despatched to the beloved Guardian:

"Rabbani. Haifa. Convention supplies confirmations, directions Six-year Teaching plan."

The Secretary of the outgoing N.S.A. then read the annual report in Urdu and a discussion followed ending in several recommendations based on the Annual Reports and on the suggestions of the delegates. These recommendations related to the prosecution of the Six-Year Plan of Teaching and to other important affairs concerning the Holy Faith. Those of the recommendations that were accepted by the N. S. A. appear as resolutions in the Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of that body.

The election of the N. S. A. took place on April 28 at 3:30 p.m. Messrs. Mujibur Rahman, Khusroove Ardshir Izadyar and Siyyid Mortaza Ali were selected as tellers. As the name of each delegate was called out he placed his ballot in the box; the ballots of the absent delegates received by post were thrown in the box by the National Secretary. The results which were as follows were declared at 5 F. M. the same day:

1. N. R. Vakil.
2. Mrs. Shirin K. Fozdar.
3. Miss Hla Hla.
4. Isfandiar K. B. Bakhtiar.
5. Prof. Pritam Singh.
7. Mahuuzul Haq Imi.

The most encouraging feature of this year's Convention was the Cablegram from the beloved Guardian, which ran:

"Urge delegates' earnest deliberations aiming settlement unoccupied provinces, wider dissemination (of Literature), deeper consecration (for service. Fervently praying (for) unprecedented victories."

SHOGHI.

This blessed Cablegram showed us once more the way to prosecute the Six-year Plan of Teaching and how to conduct the affairs of the Holy Faith in general.

A telegram was received from Dr. M. E. Lukmani on behalf of the Spiritual Assembly of Bombay offering greetings and congratulations to the newly-elected National Spiritual Assembly.

Dr. K. K. Bhargava of Jaipur offered to buy at cost price the whole stock of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era in Hindi for free distribution while Mrs. Shyama Bhargava sent a telegram requesting the Convention to accept a feast from her on the 9th Day of Ridvan. The feast was both grand and sumptuous and the friends enjoyed it very much more so because these detached souls from different parts of India and Burma had the occasion to meet at one table with the whole community of Calcutta and to have joyous talks with each other. To see these shining faces thus engaged in conversation was a real joy and a foretaste of the time when the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh will have its full sway in this world.

Evenings during the Convention days were devoted to public lectures and some very interesting and impressive speeches were delivered in Bahá'í Hall, Theosophical Society's Hall, and the Bahá'í Hall. On the whole, the Convention created a very good impression in the minds of those who came in contact with the servants of Bahá'u'lláh. These lectures were held during the days and at a time when the All-India Congress Committee had met to decide the affair of the Congress President. Naturally the whole atmosphere was charged with the political issue of the day and the attention of the people was diverted to these happenings.

SHOGHI.

As a justifying document, a copy of the marriage contract of Dr. Saleh issued by the Spiritual Assembly of Haifa and legalized by both Palestine authorities and the Egyptian Consulate in Jerusalem was enclosed with that petition. It is earnestly hoped that the year 96 shall, through Bahá'í confirmations and the guidance of our Guardian, inaugurate the far-reaching stage in the history of the cause.

NEW PUBLICATIONS (THE DAWN-BREAKERS)

The National Spiritual Assembly announces with much delight the start of publishing the Arabic translation of Nabil's history. Needless to remind the friends of the importance of the work undertaken by Judge Abdul-Galeel Bey.

This wonderful volume will constitute over 600 pages besides illustrations and Tablets.

Prices fixed were P.T. 25 (5 shillings) for each ordinary copy and P.T. 70 (14 shillings) for the De Luxe Edition besides postage.

It is hoped that early subscriptions will help its early appearance and be a cause of great service to the spread of the cause.

CABLEGRAM FROM THE GUARDIAN

I came from Surat to Bombay, March 15.* Wrote a radio speech and broadcast it over The All-India Radio, March 17. Finished some writing for Bahá'í World Volume VII. Beginning March 21, Naw-Ruz, the Bahá'ís of Bombay had arranged a remarkable program. We had a Feast in Bahá'í Hall in the forenoon and another Feast for several hundred in the evening. The youth gave a Bahá'í play and original poems to welcome me. March 22, the former Mayor presided at a large gathering where I spoke under the auspices of the Social Workers' Society of Bombay.

Mrs. Shirin Fozdar arrived in Bombay March 23, and we spoke together on every program in that city. March 23, the L. S. A. of Bombay gave a reception in Bahá'í Hall for two hundred guests—journalists, educators, statesmen and others. The Mayor of Bombay came and at the close of our short talks. The press took photographs and used good articles. Lectures were given before Theosophical Societies, Brahma-Samaj, Buddhist Society, Arya Samaj, and an Oriental Institute. High Schools and a number of public lectures were given in the large Bahá'í Hall, centrally located. The Bahá'í community in Bombay is the "mother" group, the largest, the oldest, and all the friends did glorious work.

THE PRINCIPLE OF TRUSTEESHIP IN THE BAHÁ'Í COMMUNITY

Beloved Friends:

On April 21, as the American believers gather for the election of their local Spiritual Assemblies, it will be well if we make effort to realize once more, and more deeply, the nature of our association with these divinely-created institutions of the future world order. A divine institution can never be assumed nor taken for granted: its potent force continues to exert itself as a commanding influence upon all its members throughout the duration of the cycle it was established to serve. Therefore, although there have been years of study and thought devoted by the Baha’i communities to the subject of administration, no one can feel that for him the subject is exhausted and his knowledge complete.

This is the year when the Guardian has urgently appealed for effort to elect one hundred local Assemblies in the United States and Canada. This call will bring many new Assemblies into existence. Whatever their present knowledge of Baha’i community affairs may be, actual experience is required before that knowledge can ripen into understanding. The first requisite, nevertheless, is the factor of knowledge—knowledge of what ‘Abdu'l-Baha and what Shoghi Effendi have said about the local, national and international institutions of the Faith. The Guardian’s letters published with the title of Baha’i Administration have by no means been absorbed into the collective mind and heart. They are a source of knowledge and inspiration to which we should turn time and again.

Knowledge, of necessity, begins as a catalog of facts, and then traverses a chapter of basic definitions. First the alphabet, then the words, then the sentences; and finally, the capacity to use language creatively as an instrument of feeling and thought. This experience we repeat when we enter the Faith. It is a new world, a new medium, and the final test of our knowledge lies in the way we act.

At the basis of Baha’i community life there lies the principle of trusteeship. Every Baha’i is first of all a trustee in relation to his capacity to serve the Faith. The divine law that conscious man serve His Cause brings about a complete reorganization of personal character. Secondly, every member of a Baha’i institution, whether Assembly or Committee, is a trustee in relation to the activities of that institution. No one can serve a divine institution with the primitive personal instincts. The principles of personal possession, personal control and personal influence, legitimate in their own limited fields, do not pertain to a Baha’i institution. There must be ser-
"THIS SUPREME, THIS INFALLIBLE ORGAN"

Words of Shoghi Effendi

The passing of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, so sudden in the circumstances which caused it, so dramatic in its consequences, could neither impede the operation of such a dynamic force nor obscure its purpose. Those fervid appeals, embodied in the Will and Testament of a departed Master, could not but confirm its aim, define its character and reinforce the promise of its ultimate success.

Out of the pangs of anguish which His bereaved followers have suffered, amid the heat and dust which the attacks launched by a sleepless enemy had precipitated, the Administration of Bahá'u'lláh's invincible Faith was born. The potent energies released through the ascension of the Center of His Covenant crystallized into this supreme, this infallible Organ for the accomplishment of a Divine Purpose. The Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá unveiled its character, reaffirmed its basis, supplemented its principles, asserted its indissolubility, and enumerated its chief institutions. With that selfsame spontaneity which had characterized her response to the Message proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh, America had now arisen to espouse the cause of the Administration which the Will and Testament of His Son had unmistakably established. It was given to her, and to her alone, in the turbulent years following the revelation of so momentous a document, to become the fearless champion of that Administration, the pivot of its new-born institutions and the leading promoter of its influence. To their Persian brethren, who in the heroic age of the Faith had won the crown of martyrdom, the American believers, forerunners of its golden age, were now worthy successors, bearing in their turn the palm of a hard-won victory. The unbroken record of their illustrious deeds had established beyond the shadow of a doubt their preponderating share in shaping the destinies of their Faith. In a world writhing with pain and declining into chaos this community—the vanguard of the liberating forces of Bahá'u'lláh—succeeded in the years following 'Abdu'l-Bahá's passing in raising high above the institutions established by its sister communities in East and West what may well constitute the chief pillar of that future House—a House which posterity will regard as the last refuge of a tottering civilization.

In the prosecution of their task neither the whisperings of the treacherous nor the virulent attacks of their avowed enemies were allowed to deflect them from their high purpose or to undermine their faith in the sublimity of their calling. The agitation provoked by him who in his incessant and sordid pursuit of earthly riches would have, but for 'Abdu'l-Bahá's warning, sullied the fair name of their Faith, had left them in the main undisturbed. Schooled by tribulation and secure within the stronghold of their fast evolving institutions they scorned his insinuations and by their unwavering loyalty were able to shatter his hopes. They refused to allow any consideration of the admitted prestige and past services of his father and of his associates to weaken their determination to ignore entirely the person whom 'Abdu'l-Bahá had so emphatically condemned. The veiled attacks with which a handful of deluded enthusiasts subsequently sought in the pages of their periodical to check the growth and blight the prospects of an infant Administration had likewise failed to achieve their purpose. The attitude which a besotted woman later on assumed, her ludicrous assertions, her boldness in flaunting the Will of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and in challenging its authenticity and her attempts to subvert its principles were again powerless to produce the slightest breach in the ranks of its valiant upholders. The treacherous schemes which the ambition of a perfidious and still more recent enemy has devised and through which he is still striving to deface 'Abdu'l-Bahá's noble handiwork and corrupt its administrative principles are being once more completely frustrated. These intermittent and abortive attempts on the part of its assailants to force the surrender of the newly-built stronghold of the Faith its defenders have from the very beginning utterly disdained. No matter how fierce the assaults of the enemy or skilful his stratagem they have refused to yield one jot or one tittle of their cherished convictions. His insinuations and clamor they have consistently ignored. The motives which animated his actions, the methods he steadily pursued, the precarious privileges he seemed momentarily to enjoy they could not but despise. Thriving for a time through the devices which their scheming minds had conceived, and supported by the ephemeral advantages which fame, ability or fortune can confer, these notorious exponents of corruption and heresy have succeeded in protruding for a time their ugly features only to sink, as rapidly as they had risen, into the mire of an ignominious end.

—The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, pages 89 and 90.

TRUE VICTORY

Shoghi Effendi's effort to free us from the political practices and methods of the old order is intended to develop us to that station of unity which Divine Guidance uses as its entrance into this troubled world. The true victory of Bahá’í life is victory over self, so exalting us above the personal plane that our participation in the choice of Bahá’í workers may express the Will of Bahá’u’lláh.

We glimpse this tremendous victory in The Adven of Divine Justice, which stands like a mighty gate at the entrance to the Kingdom—a gate that bars the way to the weak and the insincere—the gate flung open to all who expend themselves in service to His Faith.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

THE BAHÁ’Í CONCEPTION OF MARRIAGE

The following paragraphs are taken from a letter written by the National Assembly to the Editor of Newsweek in order to correct and complete its article on Bahá’í marriage published in its issue of February 19. They are reprinted here for the information of the believers.

“The Bahá’í conception of marriage is a reconciliation of three vital principles: obedience to God, personal freedom of choice, and social responsibility. Marriage in the Bahá’í community is a divine institution; the two persons concerned marry because it is their will and desire; and before the Bahá’í Assembly will sanction the marriage it must have the written consent of all four parents, or of all parents who have survived. The followers of Bahá’u’lláh believe that marital love can not be isolated from the whole texture of personality, and therefore this love, to be real and permanent, must be subordinate to the love of the soul for its Creator.

“This conception, the Bahá’ís believe, renews and re-creates the institution of marriage, ridding it of any merely ecclesiastical ritualism and priestly authority on the one hand, and of all superficial civil license on the other. Bahá’í marriage has been observed in this country for many years, but always, until recently, in addition to the civil ceremony. Of late years a number of local Assemblies have incorporated as religious bodies, and authority to conduct a legal marriage derives from this new status.

“It might be added that Bahá’í marriage also reflects the underlying spirit of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, which aims to produce a unified, harmonious society and not simply a new religious sect. We regard the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh as the psychological and sociological laws of the new era of history—the era characterized by world problems and the ultimate conflict between the human soul and materialism. The faith of the Bahá’ís is that the older, provincial culture and ethics can not solve world problems, and when this is more generally recognized, the Bahá’í Faith will be accepted as the World Faith of man.”

LOCAL ASSEMBLIES
Digest of Annual Teaching Reports

Many years ago the friends in East and West were instructed by Shoghi Effendi to establish local Spiritual Assemblies, in a series of letters which grow in value and meaning as our experience unfolds. Certain memorable phrases may well motivate us today, as we labor to strengthen the support of these basic institutions and to increase the scope of their teaching responsibilities. “The members of the Spiritual Assembly must day and night endeavor to create love and unity among the believers, to glorify the Cause of God and to propagate the Divine Faith," the Guardian wrote to the Eastern Bahá'ís in 1923. And to America on February 23, 1924: "The various Assemblies, local and national, constitute today the backbone upon the strength of which the Universal House is in future to be firmly established and raised. Not until these function vigorously and harmoniously can the hope for the termination of this period of transition be realized."

In view of these clear statements, we rejoice to discover in the annual reports received from the local Spiritual Assemblies, the evidences of original and active work on the part, not only of our larger Assemblies, but of the smallest and most remote. Confident that every community will profit by these reports, we have therefore compiled a number of excerpts which will certainly be useful to us all.

Berkeley, California, inaugurated a campaign of pioneering at home this year "which has served to stimulate, as well as concentrate, the energies of each individual member in one organized drive. For over nine months the Berkeley Bahá'ís have been playing a game. Just as children accomplish difficult tasks while pretending, we decided each to act the part of a pioneer Bahá'í at home. We tried to imagine what could happen in Berkeley if all of us who have worked here so long were removed, and one fresh pioneer Bahá'í arrived to open up Berkeley. It positively hurt to realize that with new courage, new vigor, and a new approach, this little city could soon hum with the news of the Cause. So we agreed to pretend that each one of us was a lone pioneer moving into Berkeley bag and baggage with two objectives uppermost: to spread the Message widely, and to make new Bahá'ís. Thus we started on the project unencumbered, with no past to pull us down, with no despair or discouragement."

The following methods were used in this united campaign:

1. Daily prayer at a stated time by all members of the Teaching Committee.

2. A series of firesides in different homes, with each host inviting his own circle of friends plus persons interested at former meetings. Fourteen firesides were given by Bahá'ís and five by non-Bahá'ís, with a total attendance of 309, of whom 225 were non-believers. This project constantly gathers momentum; it has spread the Cause to many parts of town and to many different types of people; several inquirers have become believers; many of the non-Bahá'ís are spreading the Faith in their clubs, making Bahá'í openings, and sending literature by mail to friends throughout the world.

3. Publicity: regular news articles; programs and literature sent to selected mailing list and to Fair contacts.

4. Luncheons, visits, gifts, attentions to those showing friendship for the Faith.

5. Three exhibits of the Temple model: at Architecture Hall of the University of California from January 22 to February 5, with an illustrated Temple lecture in conjunction with this at a professor's home; at "The Flower Shop," February 5 to 12, and at the Yazdi Shop beginning February 12.

6. 'Opening up' the University of California, with the Temple exhibit, short news items in the student newspaper, and a weekly discussion group at the YWCA sponsored by Bahá'í youth.

Los Angeles, California, also reports that its firesides have been the most successful teaching work. Eight regular groups are held, three of these in sections of the city not previously active. "We have divided the city into nine sections with the intention of opening at least one fireside group in each section. Have chosen teachers of experience, preferably the newer ones, accompanied by a relatively inexperienced assistant, who reads and gives a short talk on the subject, developing confidence." These groups stress "hospitality and warmth" and their success can be judged by the fact that thirty new Bahá'ís have been enrolled.

New Haven, Connecticut, writes: "As our Guardian has informed us that freedom from racial prejudice should be adopted as the watchword of the entire body of the American believers, and in accordance with the suggestions for pioneering at home, a deliberate attempt has been made to attract the negro race in this city. About forty homes of members of this race have been visited with the result that many friends have been made, several are making a study of our Bahá'í books, and one has become a member of our Community and is on our Local Spiritual Assembly." On November 16th Mrs. Bechtold spoke to thirteen colored women of a Neighborhood Reading Circle; also two believers spoke on the Faith at the African Methodist Episcopal Church. "Another attempt at pioneering has been an effort to bring the Bahá'í Braille books for the blind to them, and a set of fifteen volumes of the 'New Era' has been accepted at the State Board of Education for the Blind at Hartford."

James-town, New York, has started a Bahá'í University, the plan of which merits some detail. 'In a more than serious attitude, we conceived in the early days of our Community the necessity of a more deep and thorough study on certain of the Teachings. To do this, and not impair our regular public teaching work, we felt a distinctive title was necessary to understand the purpose of this effort. The word University stands for a comprehensive further study on a variety of subjects... The first term began September 17th with the following courses and instructors: Esperanto—Miss Onoloe Eddy; Public Speaking and Teaching Practice (including reading aloud)—Mr. John P. Stearns; Prayer and Meditation—Mr. and Mrs. Willard McKay. The Holiday Season intervened between the first and second term, which began January 7th and will continue through April 14th. The courses follow: Esperanto—Miss Eddy; Bahá'í Administration—Mr. Fred Reis; Bahá'í Expression—Mrs. Doris McKay; Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh—Mr. Willard McKay.

"Bahá'í Expression is a continuation of the public speaking, with emphasis on the Bahá'í application. It includes analysis of the seeker, psychological effects of teaching, background of seeker, and fireside efforts and methods. The University courses are presented every other Sunday evening, beginning at 7:15 and ending about 10:30. This gives us eight-three-quarter hour courses a term. Class methods vary with lesson matter and there are practically no rigid teaching methods. We find this a very successful venture in enlightening and deepening our Community membership's understanding of their Faith. Certain 'almost-persuaded' contacts are also permitted to attend University classes." Students gain practical experience through the monthly public meetings and fireside groups which are sponsored by the Assembly.

Youth activities in Binghamton, New York, deserve special notice. The most notable project was the "June weekend" which was reported in Bahá’í News. We had thirty-two young people from out of town, some of them isolated youth to whom such an event was a source of inspiration, and some newly interested ones to whom it was a practical demonstration of Bahá’í fellowship. To our own friends it served to show that the Bahá’í Faith is something much bigger than just our local group. We hope this will be an annual affair. Since the Jamestown community gave the meeting at our June weekend, our youth group returned the favor by spending a weekend in their city in the early fall...

We also cooperated with Geneva in a series of three picnic meetings at which talks and discussion were led by members of our group, for which a group of young people from Geneva and Canandaigua were the audience... One other thing. A group of twenty-two members of a young people's Sunday School class from Endicott attended one of our youth group meetings early in December. They had been studying Comparative Religions, and wrote to ask if they might learn of the Bahá’í Faith by coming to us, instead of having someone come and speak to them... This seemed quite significant to us, as it was our first taste of the time when groups would come seeking!

Chicago has based its most successful teaching project on the new contacts made with visitors to the Temple Exhibits at Treasure Island and the Wisconsin State Fair. Last summer personal letters were sent to these names with enclosures of literature. A musical and reception was then arranged to which they were invited. "The response was most gratifying, about 150 people being present." Each month since a similar type of reception has been held, "with an enlarging and an increasingly interested audience." Entertainment has included technicolor pictures of Hawaii and the Holy Land. "At these gatherings the Bahá’í Faith was not specially stressed, although at each of them a few minutes were devoted to remarks about the Cause. The purpose of the meetings was primarily to establish a contact with people who had expressed an interest in the Exhibit and to further a friendly feeling between them and ourselves." The next event was the public meeting arranged for the National Spiritual Assembly, at which time announcement was made of a series of four lectures beginning January 29th, a comprehensive outline of the Faith by Mr. Horace Holley. The Teaching Committee next plans to arrange a class for intensive study. "We are greatly encouraged with the result of the continuity of effort with the same group of people and we are hopeful that at the close of the year the Message will have taken root in new soil.

Indiana, Indiana reports: "In the broadest sense we consider the complete reorganization of this Community to be the most successful achievement this year... We carefully reviewed the efforts and methods of the past two years... and took effort to create the necessary steps to evolve from a fireside group into one of larger dimensions." These steps included leasing a Bahá’í hall, sponsoring a public meeting for Mr. Holley in the American Legion Auditorium, and organizing a study group in Esperanto for local believers. It was provided by the Work Projects Administration. "You will note that our efforts are very definitely those of a group rather than individuals; this is one of the elements which we have striven to develop as much as possible... We are beginning to feel a greater sense of assurance and too, a closer and more intimate relationship of individuals as a Community, and believe that the fruits of this better organized and systematic action will be evident in the coming year.

Detroit, Michigan, produced twelve new believers this year by fireside group or personal contact work, and has also supplied thirteen members for pioneer work. "At the close of 1939 five of the community withdrew to start a group in Grosse Pointe, five in Dearborn and two in Lincoln Park all at the same time, which meant re-election to the Spiritual Assembly and reorganizing of committees. We have supplied one pioneer, Mr. S. C. Brandon, who went to Houston, Texas..." In addition, many activities have been carried on at the Bahá’í Center, which was acquired "for the first time in years" after the Temple exhibit at the Detroit Flower Show last March. These activities included a class in public speaking, two series of public meetings addressed by local believers, various public meetings for visiting teachers, Sunday afternoon teas bi-monthly, open feasts to attract inquirers, a children’s group, and a youth group. Considerable radio work has been done and "we are now working on a special series of Esperanto programs for radio." "Teaching work in Flint and at Lou... play, for a month at the Public Library. A fine meeting was held for Mrs. Dorothy Baker last June, with seventy people present.

Jacksonville, Fla., obtains long articles each week in the largest newspaper which reaches three-quarters of the State. A monthly period for radio broadcasting is also arranged. A new city opened is Green Cove Springs, about sixty miles distant.

Dayton, Ohio, a community totaling only sixteen members, added five of these this year. “Our most successful effort is what we term Meetings of Attraction, designed to further the interest of newly-contacted people and also to attract new ones. A social and informative time is combined, using our own talent as well as Bahá’ís from nearby towns. These meetings, along with the firesides, have resulted in the enrollment of five new Bahá’ís.”

East Cleveland, Ohio, has its individual method of making contacts. “We attend every Sunday a group of modern thought people, at which time the chairman always asks us to read Bahá’í prayers, to take part in their discussion, and they announce regularly our Bahá’í meetings. As a result, seven of their members are coming to our weekly meeting, very much interested in our Bahá’í activities. They have manifested the desire to study and come with us to the Convention.”

Oklahoma City, with only twelve members, has been without any outside help this year, except for the visit of Miss Roan Orloff on behalf of Esperanto. Nevertheless, through Miss Orloff, a subsequent opportunity for Mr. Entzminger to address the Esperantists, and much individual work, the Bahá’ís have won many friends. A recent contact was made with the president of the Pan-American club which opens a new field of endeavor. “Truly many, many people here know of the Bahá’ís, and now it is for our Assembly to work on a plan to get those who are truly interested into classes.” Outside of Oklahoma City, contacts exist in Yale, Claremore, Tulsa, Lawton, and Chickasha, and interest is maintained through correspondence. Recently the Spiritual Assembly has offered to assist some fine new contacts in Tulsa, resulting from the visit of a Peoria believer, and the devotion of our Oklahoma co-workers is reflected in this personal comment on the action: “We are so eager to assist them that I, for one, would be willing to walk there. Oh, I mean it! Sometimes I get so full of the Bahá’í spirit that I could burst! Then I take up my pen, or put on my hat and coat and make a call on someone with whom I can talk about the Teachings!”

Here then, in the challenging reports of our local Spiritual Assemblies, we may observe pioneering in a variety of aspects — at home, among minority groups, with the blind, in outlying communities, and through the working out of diverse teaching and study methods.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

The April number, the first of Volume VI, is an adaptation of the magazine to a new and more direct teaching function. The magazine aims at present to: 1, convey information to Bahá’ís about the teachings as they apply to important social problems and as they make possible a higher order of spiritual experience; 2, provide believers with material which they can use in their own teaching work; 3, give study material to groups and communities; 4, maintain a forum for correspondence on matters pertaining to the teachings; 5, develop means to serve the National Committees which produce material intended for the believers to convey to the public—the Teaching, Inter-America, Radio, Race Unity and other Committees; 6, reflect the growth of the organic Bahá'í community, which will develop more and more knowledge, insight and dramatic activity; 7, offer an instrument for the administrative body to publish any official statements which might have interest for the public as well as the Bahá'í; 8, publish hitherto unpublished Tablets and Bahá'í Writings as they may be received from the Guardian.

RACE UNITY
A Reading List

How Odd of God by Lewis Browne is a thoughtful analysis of the factors that have produced prejudices between the so-called Jews and Gentiles. Mr. Browne presents a concise, clear history of the Hebrew people, and explains the significance of the Torah or book of the Law, and the Talmud which is an extensive compilation of rabbinic law written through the centuries. Mr. Browne later analyses the constant segregation which the Jews have endured during the last 1900 years. He states: "In each instance it is clear that the segregation persists because of external pressure rather than internal wilfulness."1 The Jews have longed to be assimilated and accepted, but repeatedly they have been rejected and despised by those around them. The fate of the "New Christians" in Spain after 1492, of the "Marranos" in Portugal, and the unfortunate "Chuetas" in Majorca are good examples of the ceaseless persecutions suffered by the Jews. Mr. Browne says that "always everywhere they (the Jews) remain distinct from the rest of the population as though recent immigrants."2 The author finally points to Russia where race barriers no longer exist and where the Jews are accepted on an equal basis with all other peoples. This he sees as the ultimate solution of this age-old problem—a complete breaking down of racial prejudices coupled with a striving for true brotherhood. This, too, is the Bahá'í vision and hope.

Common Ground by Morris S. Lazarson is an attempt to point to the common beliefs and spiritual values of Protestants, Catholics, and Jews. The Bahá'í reader will profit greatly by reading this volume, for he will gather much factual material about the relationships between these three groups, and he will gain a new feeling of the need for a renewal of religious life in the world. Mr. Lazarson states the following: "We need a new dynamic in American life; something that will set us on our feet again; something that will override the selfish interests that tear the nation asunder; something so great and compelling that it will sweep us up by its life so that we may see beyond the lesser loyalties of personal or class interest, give us a vision of what we might be as a people and the strength to realize that vision." It must be, he says, only a dynamic of the spirit—that will bind the masses and the classes into one brotherhood; that will sweep away old prejudices and mold us into one people.3 All the way through this book the reader feels that the author has caught the Bahá'í idealism. He says: "Let us try religion in the largest sense. We have had churches and synagogues and cathedrals; we have had preachers and rabbis and priests—perhaps we have not had enough real religion."4 Again he remarks that all religious groups have two tasks which they can accomplish together: "Insistence upon the spiritual values as the basis of human life and the expression of those values in economics and politics and in human relations."5 The influence of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is spreading, and many of our writers are catching the new spirit of this day.

There are a great many other books on this subject which will throw light on the problems of wiping out antisemitic feelings. Professor Herbert A. Miller recommends the following: Anti-Semitism Yesterday and Tomorrow by Lee J. Levinger; Jewish Experiences in America by Bruno Lasker; Christians Only by Heywood Broun and George Brit; and Mr. Emmanuel by Louis Golding. You are sure to find at least one or two of these books in your local library. The Race Unity Committee urges you to read as widely as possible on this subject so that you understand the meaning of its many problems may grow.

Shoghi Effendi wrote these words to a Bahá'í youth about a year ago: "Above all they (Bahá'í youth and of course, all Bahá'ís) should strive to get rid of all their ancestral prejudices, whether of race, creed, or class, and thus attract through the example of their lives many outsiders to the Cause. At a time when racial prejudice is becoming so widespread and intense, it should be their constant endeavor to associate and mingle with the members of all races, and thereby demonstrate to the world at large the hollowness, nay, the stupidity of the racial doctrines and philosophies which are so increasingly poisoning the minds of individuals, classes and nations throughout the world. Only by the example of our lives can be achieved a lasting solution to the race problem. We must constantly "endeavor to associate and mingle with the members of all races." Finally we must unceasingly pray: "0 my God, Unite the hearts of Thy servants, and reveal to them Thy great purpose. May they follow Thy commandments, and abide in Thy law. Help them, 0 God, in their endeavor, and grant them strength to serve Thee. O God, leave them not to themselves, but guide their steps by the light of Thy knowledge, and cheer their hearts by Thy love even Vehil. Thou art their help and their Lord!"

The other seventeen Bahá'í months will appear similarly in the course of the coming year. These monthly calendars have been designed by Mr. Irving W. Stevens of the Chicago Bahá'í Community and the drawing were made by Miss William James of Toronto.

Frequent reference to this type of calendar will begin to give us the habit of thinking of dates in terms of the Bahá'í calendar. To use it correctly, follow the Guardian's instructions as to the hours when some of the Anniversaries are to be observed, the fact that the Bahá'í day begins at sunset, etc.

The Bahá'í Schools are assuming an increasingly important function in the educational program of the Faith. They have been steadily evolving from more or less general lectures, to the point where they provide definite Study Courses, attuned to the requirements of the Teaching Plan and to life in the New World Order.

Each of the Schools draws from a large section of the country and provides the opportunity for those broader and deeper contacts which mean so much in the development of the Bahá'í life. Not only have minds been stimulated and horizons expanded, but many deep and lasting friendships have had their beginning in the happy and constructive atmosphere of a Bahá'í School.

In planning your vacation have you considered the possibility of attending one of the Schools, sharing in its activities, and renewing your enthusiasm through contact with those who are finding the heavenly confirmations that come from service in the Cause?

ENROLLMENTS AND TRANSFERS

GREETINGS FROM NORWAY

Dear Baha'i Friends:
Already three years have gone since I sent my last greeting. It is difficult to get time for all one wants to do, but in my prayers every day my thoughts and good wishes embrace you all.

There is as yet little visible result of the Baha'i work done in Norway. However, I am going on translating and telling about the Cause whenever I find people wanting to listen. Copies of the Norwegian Esskemont are freely distributed. The pamphlet The World Religion by our beloved Guardian is published in Norwegian and is also freely distributed.

For more than a year there is a new Baha'i in Norway. Mrs. Agot Krantz Ramsli. Vaagevei 7, Kristiansund. Mrs. Krantz Ramsli has learned of the Baha'i Faith in America and she writes me that she distributes literature and promulgates the Teachings whenever possible.

Several dear friends, Mrs. Schöffer, Mr. and Mrs. French, Miss Bertha Matthiasen and Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins and their daughter Mrs. Dodge have made very welcome, although short, visits in Oslo these last years.

Last summer I went to England for the Baha'i Summer School, and it was a feast to meet so many of the English believers as well as hearing the good lectures and talks.

Words have just now come to me about the passing of our beloved sister Martha Root. I cannot express my feelings of loss and sorrow, and I send to all the friends, and especially to the American believers, her dear companions, my deepest sympathy and condolence. I have succeeded in getting a necrology of our dear sister in one daily paper and in a women's weekly, as well as in an Esperanto paper.

I gratefully acknowledge the receipt of News Letters and other communications from Haifa, Tihrid, Bagdad, India and Burma, Poona, Cairo, Geneva, United States and Canada, Auntie Victoria, Albuquerque, N. M., England, France, Australia, and from youth Groups in Iraq and America. Some time ago I received a copy of Advent of Divine Justice by Shoghi Effendi, which I have read and am rereading with the greatest interest and admiration. As there was no name of the sender I take this opportunity to express my appreciation, hoping the kind sender in some way will read this.

With loving greetings to each and all of my dear Baha'i brothers and sisters I am, humbly in His Service,
faithfully yours,

Johanna Schurbart.

April 5, I came with Mrs. Shirin Fozdar to her home in Ajmer for one week's visit. Dr. Fozdar had arranged everything so well. They have interested many friends. We spoke at the Ajmer Women's Club, and I lectured in Government College, Ajmer. (Mrs. Fozdar had spoken there a short time before.) Every day friends came or we went to their homes. In Ajmer I wrote my speech, "What the Baha'i Faith Can Do For Poverty," for the Indore Conference.

April 14, I arrived in Indore to take part in the All-Faiths' League Convention. The Poona friends had so kindly mimeographed five hundred copies of my speech and forwarded them to Indore. The United Press in Indore sent out two hundred copies of my speech with advance interview to newspapers throughout India. It is still appearing in newspapers; only yesterday I received The Rangoon Times, with the entire speech. four columns, printed in the July 1, edition. In the first two weeks it came out in newspapers aggregating 300,000 copies altogether. In Indore I also published seven thousand copies for distribution, and Bombay gave us two thousand "Dawn of the New Day" for distribution at the Conference. Mrs. Fozdar arrived in Indore April 17. She is Honorary Secretary of this League. Interviews and her speech were sent out that day all over India.

We both spoke at the opening of the Convention, April 18, more than fifteen hundred people were present. I read the following cablegram from our beloved Guardian: "Martha Root, Care of Postmaster, Indore. Convey All-Faiths' League Convention expression my best wishes for success deliberation. May divine Guidance enable assembled representatives achieve their high purpose and extend range their meritorious activities. Shoghi." Baha'i literature was given out at every session during the four days. All religions were represented in the audiences, delegates coming from all parts of India; the thinkers of India were there! 1,500 people were present at every evening session and often more than 1,000 at the day session. There were 1,500 present when Shirin spoke and when I spoke on April 20.

I. TABLET OF VISITATION,
BAHÁ’ULLÁH

The praise which hath dawned from Thy most august Self, and the glory which hath shone forth from Thy most effulgent Beauty, rest upon Thee, O Thou Who art the Manifestation of Grandeur, and the King of Eternity, and the Lord of all who are in heaven and on earth! I testify that through Thee the sovereignty of God and His dominion, and the majesty of God and His grandeur, were revealed, and the Day-Stars of ancient splendor have shed their radiant in the heaven of Thine irrevocable decree, and the Beauty of the Unseen hath shone forth above the horizon of creation. I testify, moreover, that with but a movement of Thy Pen Thine injunction "Be Thou" hath been enforced, and God's hidden Secret hath been divulged, and all created things have been called into being, and all the Revelations have been sent down. I bear witness, moreover, that through Thy beauty the beauty of the Adored One hath been unveiled, and through Thy face the face of the Desired One hath shone forth, and that through a word from Thee Thou hast decided between all created things, causing them who are devoted to Thee to ascend unto the summit of glory, and the infidels to fall in the lowest abyss. I bear witness that he who hath known Thee hath known God, and he who hath attained unto Thy presence hath attained unto the presence of God. Great, therefore, is the blessedness of him who hath believed in Thee, and in Thy signs, and hath humbled himself before Thy sovereignty, and hath been honored with meeting Thee, and hath attained the good pleasure of Thy will, and circled around Thee, and stood before Thy throne. Woe betide him that hath transgressed against Thee, and hath denied Thee, and repudiated Thy signs, and gainsaid Thy sovereignty and risen up against Thee, and waxed proud before Thy face, and hath disputed Thy testimonies, and fled from Thy rule and Thy dominion, and been numbered with the infidels whose names have been inscribed by the fingers of Thy behest upon Thy holy Tablets. Waft, then, unto me, O my God and my Beloved, from the right hand of Thy mercy and Thy loving-kindness, the holy breaths of Thy favors, that they may draw me away from myself and from the world unto the courts of Thy nearness and Thy presence. Potent art Thou to do what pleaseth Thee. Thou, truly, hast been supreme over all things.

The remembrance of God and His praise, and the glory of God and His splendor, rest upon Thee, O Thou who art His Beauty! I bear witness that the eye of creation hath never gazed upon one wronged like Thee. Thou wast immersed all the days of Thy life beneath an ocean of tribulations. At one time Thou wast in chains and fetters; at another Thou wast threatened by the sword of Thine enemies. Yet, despite all this, Thou didst enjoin upon all men to observe what had been prescribed unto Thee by Him Who is the All-Knowing, the All-Wise.

May my spirit be a sacrifice to the wrongs Thou didst suffer, and my soul be a ransom for the adversities Thou didst sustain. I beseech God, by Thee and by them whose faces have been illumined with the splendors of the light of Thy countenance, and who, for love of Thee, have observed all whereunto they were hidden, to remove the evils that have come in between Thee and Thy creatures, and to supply me with the good of this world and the world to come. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Most Exalted, the All-Glorious, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Compassionate.

Bless Thou, O my Lord, my God, the Divine Lote-Tree and its leaves, and its boughs, and its branches, and its stems, and its offshoots, as long as Thy most excellent titles will endure and Thy most august attributes will last. Protect it, then, from the mischief of the aggressor and the hosts of tyranny. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Most Powerful. Bless Thou, also, O Lord my God, Thy servants and Thy handmaids who have attained unto Thee, O Thou, truly, art the All-Bountiful, Whose grace is infinite. No God is there save Thee, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Generous.

II. PRAYER FOR THE PUREST BRANCH, BAHÁ’ULLÁH

Lauded be Thy name, O Lord my God! Thou seest me in this day shut up in my prison, and fallen into the hands of Thine adversaries, and beholdest my son (The Purest Branch) lying on the dust before Thy face. He is Thy servant, O my Lord, whom Thou hast caused to be related to Him Who is the Manifestation of Thyself and the Day-Spring of Thy Cause.

At his birth he was afflicted through his separation from Thee, according to what had been ordained for him through Thine irrevocable decree. And when he had quaffed the cup of reunion with Thee, he was cast into prison for having believed in Thee and in Thy signs. He continued to serve Thy Beauty until he entered into this Most Great Prison. Thereupon I offered him up, O my God, as a sacrifice in Thy path. Thou well knowest what they who love Thee have endured through this trial that hath caused the kindreds of the earth to wail, and beyond them the Concourse on high to lament. I beseech Thee, O my Lord, by him and by his exile and his imprisonment, to send down upon such as loved him what will quiet their hearts and bless their works. Potent art Thou to do as Thou wilt. No God is there but Thee, the Almighty, the Most Powerful.

III. PRAYER FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF JUSTICE, ‘ABDU’L-BÁHÁ

O God, my God! We are servants of Thine that have turned with devotion to Thy Holy Face, that have detached ourselves from all beside Thee in this glorious Day. We have gathered in this Spiritual Assembly, united in our views and thoughts, with our purposes harmonized to exalt Thy Word amidst mankind. O Lord, our God! Make us the signs of Thy Divine Guidance, the Standards of Thy exalted Faith amongst men, servants to Thy mighty Covenant. O Thou our Lord Most High! Manifestations of Thy Divine Unity in Thine Abhá Kingdom, and resplendent stars shining upon all regions. Lord! Aid us to become seas surging with the billows of Thy wondrous Grace, streams flowing from Thy all-glorious Heights, goody fruits up-on the Tree of Thy heavenly Cause, trees waving through the breezes of Thy Bounty in Thy celestial Vineyard. O God! Make our souls dependent upon the Verses of Thy Divine Unity, our hearts cheered with the outpourings of Thy Grace, that we may unite even as the waves of one sea and become merged together as the rays of Thine effulgent Light; that our thoughts, our views, our feelings may become as one reality, manifesting the spirit of union throughout the world, Thou art the Gracious, the Bountiful, the Bestower, the Almighty, the Merciful, the Compassionate.

Share joyful news (with) entire body (of) American believers.

V. TRIBUTE TO THE GREATEST HOLY LEAF, SHOGHI EFFENDI

No sooner had 'Abdu'l-Bahá stepped upon the shores of the European and American continents than our beloved Khanum found herself well-nigh overwhelmed with thrilling messages, each betokening the irresistible advance of the Cause in a manner which, not withstanding the vast range of her experience, seemed to her almost incredible. The years in which she basked in the sunshine of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's spiritual victories were, perhaps, among the brightest and happiest of her life. Little did she dream when, as a little girl, she was running about, in the courtyard of her Father's house in Tbiiran, in the company of Him Whose destiny was to be one day the chosen Center of God's indestructible Covenant, that such a Brother would be capable of achieving, in realms so distant, and among races so utterly remote, so great and memorable a victory.

The enthusiasm and joy which swelled in her breast as she greeted 'Abdu'l-Bahá on His triunphant return from the West, I will not venture to describe. She was astounded at the vitality of which He had, despite His unimaginable sufferings, proved Himself capable. She was lost in admiration at the magnitude of the forces which His utterances had released. She was filled with thankfulness to Bahá'u'lláh for having enabled her to witness the evidences of such brilliant victory for His Cause no less than for His Son . . .

The ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, so tragic in its suddenness, was to her a terrific blow, from the effects of which she never completely recovered. To her He, Whom she called "Agá," had been a refuge in times of adversity. On Him she had been led to place her sole reliance. In Him she had found ample compensation for the bereavements she had suffered, the desertions she had witnessed, the ingratitude she had been shown by friends and kindreds. No one could ever dream that a woman of her age, so frail in body, so sensitive of heart, so loaded with the cares of almost eighty years of incessant tribulation, could so long survive so shattering a blow. And yet, history, no less than the annals of our immortal Faith, shall record for her a share in the advancement and consolidation of the worldwide community which the hand of 'Abdu'l-Bahá had helped to fashion, which no one among the remnant of His Family can rival . . .

Bear thou this my message to 'Abdu'l-Bahá, thine exalted and divinely-appointed Brother: If the Cause for which Bahá'u'lláh toiled and labored, for which Thou didst suffer years of agonizing sorrow, for the sake of which streams of sacred blood have flowed, should, in the days to come, encounter storms more severe than those it has already weathered, do Thou continue to overshadow, with Thine all-encompassing care and wisdom, Thy frail, Thy unworthy appointed child.

Intercede, O noble and well-favored son of a heavenly Father, for me no less than for the toiling masses of Thy ardent lovers, who have sworn undying allegiance to Thy memory, whose souls have been nourished by the energies of Thy love, whose conduct has been molded by the inspiring example of Thy life, and whose imaginations are fired by the imperishable evidences of Thy lively faith, Thy unshakable constancy, Thy invincible heroism, Thy great renunciation. Whatever betide us, however distressing the vicissitudes which the nascent Faith of God may yet experience, we pledge ourselves, before the mercy-seat of Thy glorious Father, to hand on, unimpaired and undivided, to generations yet unborn, the glory of that tradition of which thou hast been its most brilliant exemplar.

In the innermost recesses of our hearts, O thou exalted Leaf of the Abhá Paradise, we have reared for thee a shining mansion that the hand of time can never undermine, a shrine which shall frame eternally the matchless beauty of thy countenance, an altar wherein the fire of thy consuming love shall burn forever.

VI. TABLETS FOR THE PUREST BRANCH, BAHÁ'U'LLÁH

"At this very moment," Bahá'u'lláh testifies, "My son is being washed before My face, after Our having sacrificed him in the Most Great Prison. Thereat have the dwellers of the Abhá Tabernacle wept with a great weeping, and such as have suffered imprisonment with this Youth in the path of God, the Lord of the promised Day, lamented. Under such conditions My Pen hath not been prevented from remembering His Lord, the Lord of all nations. It summoneth the people unto God, the Almighty, the All-Bountiful. This is the day wherein He that was created of the light of Bahá has suffered martyrdom, at a time when he lay imprisoned at the hands of his enemies."
Our Lord, O Lord, my God! I testify that Thou didst sacrifice Thyself before the face of thy Lord, the Almighty, the Unconstrained. Thou, in truth, hast been wronged, and to this testifiesth the Beauty of Him, the Self-Subsisting. Thou didst, in the first days of thy life, bear that which hath caused all things to groan, and made every pillar to tremble. Happy is the one that remembereth thee, and draweth nigh, through thee, unto God, the Creator of the Morn."

"Glorified art Thou, O Lord, my God!" He, in a prayer, astoundingly proclaims, "Thou seest me in the hands of Mine enemies, and My son blood-stained before Thy face. O Thou in Whose hands is the kingdom of all names. I have, O my Lord, offered up that which Thou hast given Me, that Thy servants may be quickened and all that dwell on earth be united."

"Blessed art thou," He, in another Tablet affirms, "and blessed he that turneth unto thee, and visiteth thy grave, and draweth nigh, through thee, unto God, the Lord of all that was and shall be ... I testify that thou didst return in meekness unto thine abode. Great is thy blessedness and the blessedness of them that hold fast unto the hem of thy outspread robe ... Thou art, verily, the Truth, the Knower of things unseen."

When Thou wast laid to rest in the earth, the earth itself trembled in its longing to meet thee. Thus hath it been decreed, and yet the people perceive not. ... Were We to recount the mysteries of thine ascension, they that are asleep would waken, and all beings would be set ablaze with the fire of the remembrance of My Name, the Mighty, the Loving."

VII. TABLETS FOR THE MOST EXALTED LEAF, BABA'ULLAH 'ABDU'L-'BAHA'

Concerning the Most Exalted Leaf, the mother of 'Abdu'l-Baha, Bab'ullah has written: "The first Spirit through which all spirits were revealed, and the first Light by which all lights shone forth, rest upon thee. O Most Exalted Leaf, thou who hast been mentioned in the Crimson Book! Thou art the one whom God created to arise and serve His own Self, and the Manifestation of His Cause, and the Day Spring of His Revelation, and the Dawning-Place of His Signs, and the Source of His commandments; and who so aided thee that thou didst turn with thy whole being unto Him, at a time when His servants and handmaidens had turned away from His Face. ... Happy art thou, O My handmaiden, and My Leaf, and the one mentioned in My Book, and inscribed by My Pen of Glory in My Scrolls and Tablets. ... Rejoice thou, at this moment, in the most exalted Station and the All-highest Paradise, and the Abha Horizon, inasmuch as He Who is the Lord of Names hath remembered thee. We bear witness that thou didst attain unto all good, and that God hath so exalted thee, that all honor and glory circled around thee."

"O Nayvábi!" He thus, in another Tablet, addresses her, "O Leaf that hath sprung from My Tree, and been My companion! My glory be upon thee, and My loving-kindness, and My mercy that hath surpassed all beings."

We announce unto thee that which will gladden thy soul, and assure thy soul, and rejoice thine heart. Verily, thy Lord is the Compassionate, the All-Bountiful. God hath been and will be pleased with thee, and hath singled thee out for His own Self, and chosen thee from among His handmaidens to serve Him, and hath made thee the companion of His Person in the day-time and in the night-season."

"Hear thou Me once again," He reassures her, "God is well-pleased with thee, as a token of His grace and a sign of His mercy. He hath made thee to be His companion in every one of His worlds, and hath nourished thee with His meeting and presence, so long as His name, and His Remembrance, and His Kingdom, and His Empire shall endure. Happy is the handmaiden that hath mentioned thee, and sought thy good-pleasure, and humbled herself before thee, and held fast unto the cord of thy love. Woe betide him that denieth thy exalted station, and the things ordained for thee from God, the Lord of all names, and him that hath turned away from thee, and rejected thy station before God, the Lord of the mighty throne."

"O faithful ones!" Baha'ullah specifically enjoins, "Should ye visit the resting-place of the Most Exalted Leaf, who hath ascended unto the Glorious Companion, stand ye and say: 'Salutation and blessing and glory upon thee, O Holy Leaf that hath sprung from the Divine Lote-Tree! I bear witness that thou hast believed in God and in His signs, and answered His Call, and turned unto Him, and held fast unto His cord, and chanced to the hem of His grace, and fled thy home in His path, and chosen to live as a stranger, out of love for His presence and in thy longing to serve Him. May God have mercy upon him that draweth nigh unto thee, and remembereth thee through the things which My Pen hath voiced in this, the most great station. We pray God that He may forgive us, and forgive them that have turned unto thee, and grant their desires, and bestow upon them, through His wondrous grace, whatever be their wish. He, verily, is the Bountiful, the Generous. Praise be to God. He Who is the Desire of all worlds; and the Beloved of all who recognize Him.'"

And, finally, 'Abdu'l-Baha Himself in one of His remarkably significant Tablets, has borne witness not only to the exalted station of one whose "seed shall inherit the Gentiles," whose Husband is the Lord of Hosts, but also to... the sufferings endured by her who was His beloved mother. "As to thy question concerning the 54th chapter of Isaiah," He writes, "This chapter refers to the Most Exalted Leaf, the mother of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. As a proof of this it is said: 'For more are the children of the desolate, than the children of the married wife.' Reflect upon this statement, and then upon the following: 'And thy seed shall inherit the kingdom of the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.' And truly the humiliation and reproach which she suffered in the path of God, all of which she endured with patience and thanked God therefor and praised Him, because He had enabled her to endure afflictions for the sake of Bahá. During all this time, the men and women (Covenant-breakers) persecuted her in an incomparable manner, while she was patient, God-fearing, calm, humble and contented through the favor of her Lord and by the bounty of her Creator."

VIII. PRAYER FOR THE BUILDERS OF THE MASHRIQUL-ADHKÁR, 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

O God! O God! We implore Thee with throbbing heart and streaming tears to aid each one who strives in the erection of the house of the Lord where-in Thy Name is mentioned at morn and eventide.

O Lord, send down Thy benediction on whosoever serves this edifice and aids in the upbringing of this Temple for the uniting of all sects and religions. Confirm him in every good deed among mankind; open the doors of riches and wealth unto him; and make him an inheritor of the treasures of the Kingdom which perish not; cause him to be a sign of giving among the people; uphold him by the sea of Thy bounty and generosity which forever surges with the waves of Thy grace and favor.

Verily, Thou art the Generous, the Bountiful, the All-Glorious!

IX. TABLET OF VISITATION, BAHÁ'U'L-LÁH

The praise which hath dawned from Thy most august Seat, and the glory which hath shone forth from Thy most effulgent Beauty, rest upon Thee. O Thou Who art the Manifestation of Grandeur, and the King of Eternity, and the Lord of all who are in heaven and on earth! I testify through Thee the sovereignty of God and His dominion, and the majesty of God and His grandeur. were revealed, and the Day-Stars of ancient splendor have shed their radiance in the heaven of Thine irrevocable decree, and the Beauty of the Unseen hath shone forth above the horizon of creation. I testify, moreover, that with but a movement of Thy Pen Thine injunction "Be Thou hath been enforced, and God's hidden Secret hath been divulged, and all created things have been called into being, and all the Revelations have been sent down.

I bear witness, moreover, that through Thy beauty the beauty of the Adored One hath been unveiled, and through Thy face the face of the Desired One hath shone forth, and that through a word from Thee Thou hast decided between all created things, causing them who are devoted to Thee to ascend unto the summit of glory, and the infidels to fall in the lowest abyss.

I bear witness that he who hath known Thee hath known God, and he who hath attained unto Thy presence hath attained unto the presence of God. Great, therefore, is the blessedness of him who hath believed in Thee, and in Thy signs, and hath humbled himself before Thy sovereignty, and hath been honored with meeting Thee, and hath attained the good pleasure of Thy will, and circled around Thee, and stood before Thy throne. Woe betide him that hath transgressed against Thee, and hath denied Thee, and repudiated Thy signs, and gainsaid Thy sovereignty, and risen up against Thee, and waxed proud before Thy face, and hath disputed Thy testimonies, and fled from Thy rule and Thy dominion, and been numbered with the infidels whose name have been inscribed by the fingers of Thy behest upon Thy holy Tablets.

Wait, then, unto me, O my God and my Beloved, from the right hand of Thy mercy and Thy loving-kindness, the holy breaths of Thy favors, that they may draw me away from myself and from the world unto the courts of Thy nearness and Thy presence. Potent art Thou to do what pleaseth Thee. Thou, truly, hast been supreme over all things.

The remembrance of God and His praise, and the glory of God and His splendor, rest upon Thee, O Thou who art His Beauty! I bear witness that the eye of creation hath never gazed upon one wronged like Thee. Thou wast immersed all the days of Thy life beneath an ocean of tribulations. At one time Thou wast in chains and fetters; at another Thou wast threatened by the sword of Thine enemies. Yet, despite all this, Thou didst enjoin upon all men to observe what had been prescribed unto Thee by Him Who is the All-Knowing, the All-Wise.

May my spirit be a sacrifice to the wrongs Thou didst suffer, and my soul be a ransom for the adversities Thou didst sustain. I beseech God, by Thee and by them whose faces have been illumined with the splendors of the light of Thy countenance, and who, for love of Thee, have observed all whereunto they were hidden, to remove the veils that have come in between Thee and Thy creatures, and to supply me with the good of this world and the world to come. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Most Exalted, the All-Glorious, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Compassionate.

Bless Thou, O Lord my God, the Divine Lote-Tree and its leaves, and its boughs, and its branches, and its stems, and its offshoots, as long as Thy most excellent titles will endure and Thy most august attributes will last. Protect it, then, from the mischief of the aggressor and the hosts of tyranny. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Most Powerful. Bless Thou, also, O Lord my God, Thy servants and Thy handmaidens who have attained unto Thee. Thou, truly, art the All-Bountiful, Whose grace is infinite. No God is there save Thee, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Generous.
Dear co-workers:

The fourth year of the Seven Year Plan enters upon its course in circumstances that are at once critical, challenging, and unprecedented in their significance. The year that has passed has in so far as the rise and establishment of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in the western hemisphere is concerned, been one of the most eventful since the Plan began to operate and exercise its potent and beneficial influence. Both within and without the Community of the Most Great Name, the events which the last twelve months has unfolded have in some mysterious way, whether directly or indirectly, communicated their force to the Plan’s progressive unfoldment, contributed to the orientation of its policy and assisted in the consolidation of the diversified undertakings, both primary and subsidiary, that fall within its orbit. Even the losses which the ranks of its stout-hearted upholders have sustained will, when viewed in their proper perspective, be regarded as gains of incalculable value, affecting both its immediate fortunes as well as its ultimate destiny.

The successive international crises which agitated the opening months of the year that has elapsed, culminating in the outbreak of the war in Europe, far from drowning the enthusiasm or daunting the spirit of the prosecutors of God’s Plan, served by deflecting their gaze from a storm-tossed continent, to focus their minds and resources on ministering to the urgent needs of that hemisphere in which the first honors and the initial successes of the heroes of the Formative Age of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh are to be scored and won.

The sudden extinction of the earthly life of that star-servant of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh, Martha Root, who, while on the last lap of her fourth journey round the world—journeys that carried her to the humblest homes as well as the palaces of royalty—was hurrying homeward to lend her promised aid to her fellow-countrymen in their divinely-appointed task—such a death, though it frustrated this cherished resolution of her indomitable spirit, stole the hearts of her bereaved lovers and admirers to carry on, more energetically than ever, the work which she herself had initiated, as far back as the year 1919 in every important city in the South American continent.

The subtle and contemptible machinations by which the puny adversaries of the Faith, jealous of its consolidating power and perturbed by the compelling evidences of its conspicuous victories, have sought to challenge the validity and misrepresent the character of the Administrative Order embedded in its teachings have galvanized the swelling army of its defenders to arise and arraign the usurpers of their sacred rights and to defend the long-standing strongholds of the institutions of their Faith in their home country.

And now as this year, so memorable in the annals of the Faith, was drawing to a close, there befell the American Bahá’í community, through the dramatic and sudden death of May Maxwell, yet another loss, which viewed in retrospect will come to be regarded as a potent blessing conferred upon the campaign now being so diligently conducted by its members. Laden with the fruits garnered through well-nigh half a century of toil-some service to the Cause she so greatly loved, heedless of the warnings of age and ill-health, and afire with the longing to worthily demonstrate her gratitude in her overwhelming awareness of the bounties of her Lord and Master, she set herself in such a spirit of consecration and self-sacrifice as has truly merited the crown of martyrdom.

To Keith Ransom-Kehler, whose dust sleeps in far-off Isfahan; to Martha Root, fallen in her tracks on an island in the midmost heart of the ocean; to May Maxwell, lying in solitary glory in the southern outpost of the Western Hemisphere—to these three heroines of the Formative Age of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, they who now labor so assiduously for its expansion... and establishment, owe a debt of gratitude which future generations will not fail to adequately recognize.

I need not expiate on other, though less prominent, events that have contributed their share to the furtherance of the Seven Year Plan, or marked its systematic development. The association of the Fund, specifically inaugurated for its prosecution, with the hallowed memories of both the Mother and Brother of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the establishment of at least one pioneer in each of the Republics of Central and South America; the ushering in of the last phase of the external ornamentation of the Temple; the conjunction of the institutions of the Hazíratul-Quds and the Mashriqí-Adhkar in the heart of the North American continent; the founding of yet another institution designed as a training school for Inter-America teaching work; the steady rise in the number of groups and assemblies functioning within the Administrative Framework of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh—these stand out as further evidences of the animating Force that propels the Plan towards its final consummation.

Varied and abundant as have been the past manifestations of this driving, restless Force, they cannot but pale before the brilliant victories which its progressive and systematic development must achieve in the future.

The American believers, standing on the threshold of the fourth year of the Seven Year Plan, pursue their God-given task with a radiance that no earthly gloom can dim, and will continue to shoulder its ever-growing duties and responsibilities with a vigor and loyalty that no earthly power can either sap or diminish.

On April 25 the delegates sent the following message to the Guardian:

An earlier instruction from the Guardian is found in Bahá’í Procedure, Section One, Sheet 17: "The Guardian wishes me to draw the attention of the friends through you that they should be very careful in their public addresses not to mention any political figures—either side with them or denounce them. This is the first thing to bear in mind. Otherwise they will involve the friends in political matters, which is infinitely dangerous to the Cause."

Such advice is to be viewed as urgent and imperative. Local Assemblies will surely see that the Guardian’s words are upheld. But the supreme matter is to render those positive and constructive services to the Faith which will attract confirmations, not try to avoid mistakes and errors which involve penalty. As the Bahá’í community endeavors to achieve the goals set for each year of the Seven Year Plan, we will all come under the protection of unity.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

functions of the national office

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

While the National Office in Wilmette, designated by the Guardian as Hazrat’ul-Quds, is primarily an administrative center, its use should by no means be confined to purely administrative work, but should include such activities of a social and intellectual character, both local and national, as can best establish its character as the foremost teaching and administrative center of the Faith throughout the States.

In the conduct of any social activity at the National Office, however, great care should be taken to maintain strictly the dignity of the place, particularly in view of its proximity to the House of Worship, which makes it doubly essential for all the believers to conform to the standards of conduct, and of social intercourse set up in the Bahá’í Teachings. As a teaching center, where Bahá’í lectures, conferences and meetings, whether local, regional or national, could be held, the Hazrat’ul-Quds can also prove of invaluable help, and the N.S.A. should indeed see to it that the necessary facilities are provided in the building for that purpose.

By thus combining these three features, namely teaching, administrative and social, the Hazrat’ul-Quds can best fulfill its mission, as the visible symbol of the steadily-growing national Bahá’í Community in Northern America, and as the chief rallying center for all its activities and plans throughout that Continent.—SHOGHI EFFENDI, through his secretary, February 27, 1940.

‘THE EXECUTORS OF ‘ABDU’L-BAHÁ’S MANDATE MUST AND WILL STRAIN EVERY NERVE’

The Guardian’s Instructions for Fourth Year of Seven Year Plan

The message from Shoghi Effendi to the 1940 Convention has created the basis for all plans intended to promote the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh throughout the Americas during the Bahá’í year begun May 1, 1940. The National Spiritual Assembly, therefore, at the very opening of the year, seeks to transform these instructions into the structure of achievement which our collective efforts are to raise on that foundation by April 30 next.

"Overjoyed, elated (that) dynamic energy, invincible valor (of) American believers impelled them far outstrip (the) goal fixed (for) third year (of) Seven Year Plan ... Unperturbed (by) gathering gloom (of) tottering civilization without, contemptuous (of the) assault (of the) pernicious enemies within, (the) executors (of) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s mandate must (and) will strain every nerve (in the) course (of the) ensuing year ..."

1. "Multiply (the) number (of) enrolled pioneers."
2. "Consolidate work achieved (in) newly opened North American States (and) Provinces."
3. "Insure prompt settlement (of) remaining Republics."
4. "Prosecute unremittingly ornamentation (of) last unit (of) Mashriqu’l-Adhkar."
5. "Expedite formation in isolated centers (of) nuclei capable (of the) establishment (of) local Assemblies."

For the attainment of these ends, the National Spiritual Assembly reports a budget of $150,000 for the Fourth Year of the Seven Year Plan.

International, Administrative and Property Maintenance, including all committee budgets except Teaching in North and South America $13,000.00
Teaching activities throughout the Americas 30,000.00
For Temple construction, to complete the external ornamentation of the first story, including the circular Stairs 80,000.00
For contingency reserve ... 5,000.00

‘Bahá’u’lláh’s Spiritual Sovereignty’

The Guardian’s Convention message concludes: "Urgently plead, fervently pray (that) all ranks (of the) valiant forerunners (of) Bahá’u’lláh’s commonwealth may, ere expiry (of) allotted term, bring fruition (of) mission (to) insure ascendancy (of) Bahá’u’lláh’s spiritual sovereignty over entire Western hemisphere."

Beloved friends! The American Bahá’ís are called upon to rise to the great height required if we are to become "executors of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s mandate"—the most glorious privilege offered to mankind in this generation. "All ranks" are needed. Every Bahá’í has a vital part to play. Every administrative body has its function to discharge. The formative agencies of His World Order can only acquire strength and wisdom as they now meet the challenge of a war-torn world. Above and beyond the pressing demands of each passing day let us keep our gaze upon the ultimate goal of the Seven Year Plan: the establishment of the first pillars which must sustain the Most Great Peace.

The Five Steps of Service

Multiply pioneers. The Guardian’s resounding call to the souls of the Bahá’ís, that pioneers arise for the settlement of new areas throughout the Americas, though it has evoked magnificent response, continues to press its appeal. What he wrote on July 28, 1936 must still be our spiritual standard: "The American believers, if they wish to carry on, in the spirit and the letter, the parting wishes of their beloved Master, must intensify their teaching work a thousand fold..." Believers who desire to respond to the call for pioneers should communicate with the National Teaching Committee for posts in North America and with the Inter-America Committee concerning settlement in Latin-American fields.

Consolidate work in North American States and Provinces. The settlement of pioneers in these new areas is but the first step, the aim being the establishment of Bahá’í communities qualified to form a Spiritual Assembly. Three new States are now represented in the Bahá’í Administrative Order: South Carolina, Nebraska... and Utah. Teaching plans and projects planned to intensify this work will be reported from time to time throughout the year.

Prompt settlement of remaining Republics. The Inter-America work this past year exceeded the Guardian’s hopes. Spanish literature, the most urgently needed element in this teaching field, is now rapidly becoming available. Copies of the Eslemont book in Spanish, the Master’s Will and Testament (the excerpts published in pamphlet form) and Some Answered Questions are expected during May and June. Plans for the additional settlements wanted by Shoghi Effendi will be reported.

Ornamentation of last unit of Mashriqu’l-Adhkahr. This means the completion of the nine pylons, the casting and application of the units to the first story, and the construction of the surrounding staircase. On April 29 the National Spiritual Assembly had a Bahá’í Khanum (Temple construction) Fund amounting to $30,000.00, and contracts have been authorized for the completion of the pylons, the external decoration of three of the nine faces of the first story unit, and for the casting and application of certain units to the other six faces, the plan being to continue the operations both in the Earley Studio and at the Temple site simultaneously. The item of $80,000.00 included in this year’s budget, plus the $30,000.00 cash on hand, will complete all the construction called for in the Seven Year Plan except metal work, including outside doors, and whatever grading is done on the grounds, including cost of fill and bulkhead.

Let us heed this vital point: the budget item of $80,000.00 covers the estimated cost of completing the entire first story, including pylons and stairs. This work can be done by the summer of 1941 if the Temple Trustees are supplied with sufficient funds to place the contracts on the most economical basis.

As for the cost of doors and metal work and grounds, to be met in later annual budgets, no estimates are yet in hand.

Formation of nuclei capable of establishment of local Assemblies. The formation of sixteen new Assemblies in one year is an indication of the mighty power which is consecrating the teaching efforts of committees, Assemblies and individual believers. The possibilities for the current year will be carefully examined, and measures taken to continue this development of the organic American Bahá’í community into a body of influence and power for serving His Revelation.

"On the threshold of the fourth year"
"The American believers," the Guardian writes in his communication dated April 15, "standing on the threshold of the fourth year of the Seven Year Plan, pursue their God-given task with a radiance that no earthly gloom can dim, and will continue to shoulder its ever-growing duties and responsibilities with a vigor and loyalty that no earthly power can either sap or diminish."

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

MAY MAXWELL MEMORIAL AT BUENOS AIRES

The Guardian has given the American Bahá’ís the rare privilege of contributing to the expense of the monument to be constructed at the grave of Mrs. Maxwell in Buenos Aires, shrine and symbol of the unity of the Americans in the spirit of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

The National Assembly will, when details of the construction are available, make an appropriation from the National Fund, and the friends are free to make special contributions for this purpose.

Shoghi Effendi’s cablegram on this subject will be found elsewhere in the present issue.

NEW SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLIES

The National Spiritual Assembly reports the formation of new local Spiritual Assemblies by the Bahá’ís of the following cities:

- Alhambra, Calif.
- Burbank, Calif.
- Big Bear Lake, Calif.
- Beverly Hills, Calif.
- Santa Barbara, Calif.
- Santa Rosa, Calif.
- Hamilton, Ontario, Canada
- West Haven, Conn.
- Atlanta, Georgia
- Oak Park, Ill.
- Waukegan, Ill.
- Brookline, Mass.
- Omaha, Nebraska
- Salt Lake City, Utah
- North Augusta, South Carolina
- Madison, Wisc.

The total number of local Assemblies in the United States and Canada, as result of the elections held April 21, 1940, is 102, fourteen more than in 1939.

THE FIRM FOUNDATION

"The importance, nay, the absolute necessity of these local Assemblies is manifest when we realize that in the days to come they will evolve into the local House of Justice, and at present provide the firm foundation on which the structure of the Master’s Will is to be reared in future."

—SHOGHI EFFENDI

The formation of sixteen new local Spiritual Assemblies in one year is an event of far-reaching importance in the evolution of the Administrative Order of the Faith. Despite the pressure of earth-shaking happenings around us and the concentration upon our own vital plans for the coming year, we must not fail to realize this accretion of power and energy, and this multiplication of the agencies serving the Faith. For in sixteen new cities of North America has the element of spiritual authority been established, that sole instrument through which the ignorance, the disunity and the sufferings of mankind are to be remedied. In sixteen cities have magnets of divine attraction been created, and sixteen doors of confirmation have been opened from the world of darkness to the world of light.

This new body of administrators will not need the years of effort required by the older communities to understand the nature of a Spiritual Assembly and employ it in consecrated service for the promotion of the Cause. They have before them the Guardian’s clear words of instruction, and around them is an ocean of infinite spiritual power which can be drawn upon according to their collective capacity.

That the foundation now being laid in these new communities may be firm and strong, the National Spiritual Assembly recommends a careful review of the Guardian’s formative words as recorded in Bahá’í Administration.

"To it (the local Assembly) all matters pertaining to the Cause must be directly and immediately referred for full consultation and decision . . .”

"The matter of Teaching, its direction, its ways and means, its extension, its consolidation, essential as they are to the interests of the Cause, constitute by no means the only issue which should receive the full attention of these Assemblies. . . . It is incumbent upon them to be vigilant and cautious, discreet and watchful, and protect at all times the Temple of the Cause from the dart of the mischief-maker and the onslaught of the enemy. They must endeavor to promote amity and concord amongst the friends, efface every lingering trace of distrust, coolness and estrangement from every heart, and secure in its stead an active and whole-hearted cooperation for the service of the Cause.

"They must do their utmost to extend at all times the helping hand to the poor, the sick, the disabled, the orphan, the widow, irrespective of color, caste and creed..."

By such explanation and exhortation has the Guardian, since the Master's Ascension, fostered, encouraged and guided the rise of the institutions which prepare the way for the new world order of Baha'u'llah. Let us serve these institutions in the spirit of their essential purpose, develop our capacity by study of the Guardian's instructions, and realize that initiative does not mean the right to substitute our human conceptions for the organic teachings which we have received. The spirit of initiative is a most precious asset, but its energies are to be released in ways that reflect the principle of unity and consultation.

Advice Concerning Solicitation of Funds and Reception of Orientals

The National Spiritual Assembly reminds the friends that the institution of the Baha'i Fund is a protection for the believers as well as their instrument for serving the Faith. Under this institution, the only appeal for funds is that which comes from the local or National Assembly and therefore is for purposes which have been investigated and fully authorized. None of the believers have responsibility to contribute funds through any other than the official channel, and no local Assembly need concern itself over solicitations received from foreign lands except through the National Assembly. As for those who seek financial assistance and claim to be Baha'is, the friends before taking action should assure themselves that such persons have proper credentials. Finally, the friends are reminded once more that the Master, and after Him the Guardian, warned us to be vigilant and not receive Orientals as believers unless they carry with them a letter of authentic credentials from a local or National Assembly. The purpose of this advice is not to dampen the ardor of sympathy, but to emphasize those teachings which hold us responsible for determining the difference between true and counterfeit objects of our solicitude.

Teaching at the Temple

The record of visitors who are guided through the House of Worship, in addition to those attending the weekly public meeting, is very impressive and perhaps not appreciated by the majority of the friends.

The following information about the first four months of 1940 reveals how important the Temple guiding activity has become.

First, it is to be understood that the House of Worship is open daily only in the warmer months, May to October, and all groups who come at other times do so by special arrangement with the Chairman of the Guide Committee, Mrs. John Hageman. In January, 1940, there were 43 different groups including 288 individuals; February, 49 groups, 180 persons; March, 201 groups, 910 persons. Eight hundred eighty-nine persons visited the Temple during April, and the number would have been much larger if guiding had not been suspended during the Convention period.

To illustrate the variety of interests represented by the groups: during the same four months the Guide Committee has received wives of delegates to the National Convention of American Tobacco Distributors, 130; apprentices sent from Great Lakes Naval Training School, 55 in one group, 48 in another, 242 in seven additional groups; WPA tour sponsored by Chicago Board of Education, 129; high school students from three Indiana towns, 162; young people from Willmette Methodist Episcopal and Evanston First Presbyterian Churches, 70; an Evanston hiking club, 35.

Total number of visitors in the four months, 2,267, an increase of 784 more than during the same period last year.

The special classes for guides enrolled forty-six believers volunteering to serve in this important National teaching activity.

Press Book Report

The Baha'i News Service Committee in making its final survey of recent clippings before the close of the Press Books would like to share interesting publicity news.

The Montana Standard of Butte, Montana carried a splendid article on the Temple written by the head of the Art Center in Butte in connection with the display of the Temple model. Lorral Jackson of Butte reports that a similar article with a mat is making the rounds of some seventy-five newspapers throughout the state as an attraction of the Art Center. She has been told that this publicity may continue for several months.

Because of the difficulties in obtaining space in metropolitan dailies for material on the Cause and the Teachings, two long articles appearing this last year are of interest. The New York World-Telegram and the Washington Post in their readers' contributor columns carried long articles on the Cause. The World-Telegram article incorporated a lengthy quotation from the Teachings which is most unusual. Margaret Atwater of Miami, Florida has had great success in using such columns for Baha'i articles. This last year in addition to the North China Daily News, papers in Asheville, S. C., and Miami, she has contributed a long article on the Faith to the Egyptian Gazette of Cairo, Egypt. This appeared in English. The Italian paper, L'Eco of Springfield, Massachusetts published two long articles on the Cause in its outside contributor column—one article by Bruno Lasker on Race Attitudes in Children which was also published in the January Baha'i News and an article on International Language by Alice Bacon, Baha'i of Monson, Mass.

The Regional Teaching Committee of Kansas and Missouri obtained splendid publicity in towns new to the Cause by placing Dr. Esselmont's book in the Public Libraries and releasing a splendid book review to the papers. The Dodge City, (Mo.) Journal, Lexington, (Mo.) Advertiser, St. Charles Banner and News, and St. Charles Censor-Monitor carried these articles.
Clippings from new localities include Tolleson, Arizona; a series of articles appeared in the Tolleson News; Manitowoc, Wisconsin; Medina, Ohio; Monrovia, California; Vernon, British Columbia; and Oconomowoc, Wisconsin. The Ward Calhoun recently moved into Oconomowoc and released a short article on their new residence with some comments on their activity and interest in the Bahá’í Faith.

The following Assemblies and groups now represented in the Press Books have not been listed in former reports: Peoria, Illinois; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Indianapolis, Indiana; Santa Rosa, and Turlock, California.

A great deal of space has been obtained for material on the Temple, Bahá’í activities and the Teachings in Wilmette and in other North Shore papers through the tireless efforts of Mrs. Gerrrude Straven. This has not been an easy task and has taken much effort, tact and wisdom.

Evidence of Bahá’í tact and ingenuity appears in a short item from the Red Bank (N. J.) Standard. Mrs. Ellen Sims wrote the publisher a note of thanks for the cooperation of the Standard in publicizing Bahá’í activities during the year. This note which was published mentioned the appreciation of the National Bahá’í News Service for the clippings from the Standard, which Mrs. Sims had submitted, for the National Press Books which are being preserved in both the International Center at Haifa, and in the National Archives.

The Bahá’í News Service Committee wishes to express its own appreciation to the friends for their great assistance in mailing in their clippings on time and also for their help in arranging the clippings for mounting.

CHILD EDUCATION

Tablets and Prayers

The former generation of American Bahá’í parents and children received many Tablets and prayers penned by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Himself. A few of these are given below for the Bahá’í children of this important time.

O my Lord! O my Lord!

I am a child of tender years. Nourish me from the breast of Thy mercy, train me in the bosom of Thy love, educate me in the school of Thy guidance and develop me under the shadow of Thy bounty! Deliver me from darkness, make me a brilliant light; free me from unhappiness, make me a flower of the rose-garden; suffer me to become the servant of Thy Threshold and confer upon me the disposition and nature of the righteous ones; make me a cause of bounty to the human world and crown my head with the diadem of eternal life!

Verily, Thou art the Powerful, the Mighty, the Seer, the Hearer!

(Vol. III, Tablets of ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá, p. 595)

O thou darling dear!

Turn thy face toward the Supreme Kingdom and chant thou this commune:

O Thou Pure God! I am a little child; make Thou the bosom of Thy Gift a dear resting-place of comfort, and suffer me to grow and be nurtured with the honey and the milk of Thy love and train me under the breast of Thy knowledge; bestow Thou freedom while in a state of childhood and grant Thou excellence.

O Thou Incomparable One! Make me the confidant of the Kingdom of the Unseen! Verily, Thou art the Mighty and the Powerful!

(Vol. III, Tablets of ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá, p. 588)

O thou Glorious Lord!

Make thou this little maid-servant a brilliant-starred daughter of the Kingdom; endear her in the Threshold of Oneness and overflow her with the cup of Thy love, in order that she may raise the cries of joy and ecstasy and mix ambergris with musk.*

Verily, Thou art the Powerful and the Mighty, and Thou art the Wise, the Seer!

(Vol. III, Tablets of ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá, p. 551)

O thou plant of the Garden of the Love of God!

Thy letter was received. Its content was of utmost grace and sweetness. As

* This metaphor means the state of prayer and communion with God.
thou hast turned thy face toward the Supremes Kingdom, I hope thy disposition and nature will prove agreeable and comforting to thy brother and sister.

Although thou art small, yet I hope thou will become great in the Kingdom. His Highness Christ saith: "Happy is the condition of children!" God willing, thou art one of those children.

Be obedient and kind to thy father and mother, caressing brother and sister, and day by day adding to thy faith and assurance.

(Vol. III, Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 551)

To the children in the Sunday School.

I am glad to see these bright, radiant children. God willing, all of them may realize the hopes and aspirations of their parents.

Praise be to God! I see before me these beautiful children of the kingdom. Their hearts are pure, their faces are shining. They shall soon become the sons and daughters of the kingdom. Thanks be to God! they are seeking to acquire virtues and will be the cause of the attainment of the excellences of humanity. This is the cause of oneness in the kingdom of God. Praise be to God! they have kind and revered teachers who train and educate them well and who long for the glory, mercy, and become veritable. In the utmost perfection and delicacy may they at last bring forth fruit.

I supplicate God that these children may be reared under his protection and that they may be nourished by his favor and grace until all, like beautiful flowers in the garden of human hopes and aspirations, shall blossom and become redolent of fragrance.

O God! Educate these children. These children are the plants of thy orchard, the flowers of thy meadow, the roses of thy garden. Let thy rain fall upon them; let the Sun of Reality shine upon them with thy love. Let thy breeze refresh them in order that they may be trained, grow and develop and appear in the utmost beauty. Thou art the giver! Thou art the compassionate! (Vol. I, Promulgation of Universal Peace, pp. 188-189.)

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS

The National Spiritual Assembly has adopted the following schedule of meetings for the year 1940-1941. Annual Souvenir of the Convention, April 24, 25, 26, 27.

Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Baha, at Evergreen Cabin, West Englewood, N. J., 2:00 P.M., Saturday, June 29.

THE THIRTY-SECOND ANNUAL CONVENTION

Another Convention has written its scroll of deathless achievement, welding into oneness, by its spirit, many peoples of the earth. Sublimity and beauty inspire those who approach the Temple, all the more as its outward dress nearing completion. The impression grows with the signs found within. The Bourgeois model, showing the consummation of the Temple ideally; the book display amidst artistic settings; the various maps, charts and pictures illustrating every phase of Baha'i activity in the western world; the Oriental rugs, drapery and sacred relics which link the Cause with its place of birth; a throng of joyous, loving friends representing many backgrounds of culture, racial varieties and schools of thought; but above all, the mysterious atmosphere of oneness, sanctity and blessed confirmation to be found in the Mashriqul-Adhkár, visible representation of the body of Baha'u'llah, the Universal Manifestation of God. What a favor to mingle freely with the friends of God! What a blessing even to be linked with those who attain this blessed meeting! Happy are those in every land who see the signs of God.

During the sessions of the Convention the workmen, bringing the pylons to completion, were always busy, yet they caused no disturbance to the friends in consultation in the foundation below. The harmony among the workmen, the fine cooperation given by the authorities of the Village of Wilmette and the State of Illinois, shows the growing attraction and power of the Faith.

The Convention was opened as is usual, by the Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, who eloquently voiced welcome to delegates and friends, stressing the great needs and responsibilities of such an hour, as well as elation over the signs of victory. The Convention organized by electing by ballot the chairman and secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly as its officers.

The Convention cabled the Guardian as follows: "Greetings to (the) beloved Guardian (of the) Baha'i Faith. Delegates joyfully assembled (in) thirty-second annual Convention, turn for Guidance, supplicating Baha'u'llah (to) strengthen (and) confirm them in (the) promulgation (of the) Faith and the completion (of the) Mashriqu'l-Adhkar. Confident (the) Power of God will triumph in (this) war-torn world."

To a message from the outgoing Assembly the Guardian replied: "(I) marvel (and) rejoice (and) am thankful (for the) manifold blessings (and) accomplishments signalizing (the) opening (of) auspicious year (for the) American Baha'i Community."

Even earlier came our Guardian's long cablegram (quoted elsewhere) which was immediately transcribed and circulated among the friends and served as inspiration, light and guidance for the consultation of those memorable days.

As illustrating the world-wide penetration of the Faith, greetings and love came by letter or cablegram from many parts of the world:

Tehran, Iran; the Canal Zone, Panama; Kingston, Jamaica; San Antonio, Texas; Colorado Springs, Colorado; Charleston, West Virginia; Monroe, Washington; San Francisco, California; Fairbanks, Alaska; Honolulu, Hawaii; Mexico City; Montevideo, Uruguay; San Salvador, C. A.; Butte, Montana.

These beautiful messages were redolent of devotion, faith, sacrifice, service and the universal love which is the reality of existence.

The roll call showed 115 of the 171 accredited delegates present in person. This number was later increased to 121. Of the full number of delegates, 167 were counted as voting either in person or by mail. The remaining four ballots, sent by mail, arrived too late to be counted in the election of the National Spiritual Assembly.

The supplemental report of Mr. Holley, the secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly, showed the fine progress of the work on the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, which bids fair to be completed, in outer ornamentation within two years less than the time generically set by the Guardian; the work of filing, in and grading the grounds; the organization of Spiritual Assemblies in various cities, bringing the total up to 102; plans for a tunnel from the street to the Temple entrance; the purpose by them stated, of Mr. and Mrs. Siegfried Schopflocker to give their valuable properties in Eliot, Maine, to wit: Old Bull Cottage and Nine Gables estate, to the Trustees of the National Spiritual Assembly, retaining only their present interest during their joint and several lives; the purpose to make the World Order Magazine serve the believers in such a way as to make it self-supporting; the extended teaching services rendered by the Baha'i exhibits at various exhibitions; the presentations of the Teachings on peace and the New World Order to the President of the United States; the contemplated transfer of the National Treasurer's Office from West Englewood to the Haziratu'l-Quds; recent messages from the Guardian; new publications of the teachings in Spanish to meet the needs of the Inter-America Committee; the defense of the Cause against outside attacks by authentic teachings and constructive actions; the progress of the plan for the Martha Root Memorial, upon which Temple projects in progress and rapidly going ahead; the spirit of love and sacrifice which makes concerted action possible.

An especially interesting phase of consultation centered around reaching the scientific world with the teachings on peace and a new world structure. The possible results of such an effort seem measureless. Many incidents were told as indicating the heart-hunger and veiled mentalities of many eminent people, these conditions expressed in speeches, radio talks, magazine articles and various other ways. As one savant put it: "Can man live without God?" The Baha'i World, which has the Guardian's own review and approval, was suggested as the best appeal to the minds and hearts of scientists and educators, in the presentation of the Baha'i Teachings. The advisability of preparing a new and brief compilation on peace was also considered.

At this moment the friends at Fruitport, Michigan, expressed their love and understanding in a very pleasing way, favoring the Convention with a tribute in beautiful flowers.

Some time was given to the status of Baha'i youth, who, although reaching maturity at fifteen, according to the revealed Words of Baha'u'llah, do not attain voting membership in Baha'i communities until reaching the age of twenty-one. The matter is a complicated one, due to the requirement of twenty-one as the age of maturity by the laws of the country and the question whether a departure from this at this time would affect property holdings; also whether or not a change in America would not involve a corresponding change in many lands. It was felt and expressed that all the laws of Baha'u'llah that are known, should be applied without delay. But information reached the Convention that this particular matter had been referred to the Guardian for his elucidation and instructions.

Amid much pleasantry, mingled with serious thought, the Treasurer and the Assistant Treasurer made supplementary reports and addresses, commending the sacrifices of the friends which were accomplishing such marvelous results. The "Green Bag" of the Treasurer, never aggressively projected, but ever discreetly in view, appeared to conceal a magnet which had an attraction for cash. Green is said to be the color of happiness. Near the close of the Convention, the Treasurer reported that about six thousand dollars, formerly limited to personal use, had been drawn into universal service by the allowance of his bag.

During consideration of the Treasurer's report one wise in the ways of the world made an eloquent address in comment upon it, which is revealed, the sacrifices of the workers, who as far as they were able, were defraying their own expenses and when unable to do so, were accepting little or nothing beyond the cost of simple living. The few who found a stipend necessary were receiving what a day laborer would often despise, although the type of work they were doing required for it years of preparation. A case in point was the Treasurer's reference to two of the most eminent and useful workers who had recently made a reduction in their expenses which would save the cause six hundred dollars per year.

The Treasurer averred that no one should be told how much he should give, this being a matter entirely left to the individual and to God. Those moved by the spirit of generosity should make their connection with the Great Power House. Many blessings are promised them. Time was also suggested as an element of sacrifice. Now is the time to use the labor and material needed to complete the Temple, lest later their availability become difficult through the exigencies of warfare.

The Chairman for the Trustees and the Maintenance Committee, told of the progress of the Temple work, unveiling its transcendent beauty and general praise it is attracting from architects and builders and their acknowledgment that when completed it will be the most beautiful building in the world. Already it has progressed two years ahead of schedule, this through the sacrifices and loving cooperation of the friends. The pylons are rising like pillars of light into the world. One of the many signs of favor is that in a contract for $29,000.00 with the architect, Mr. Earley, $10,000.00 had been saved. At this point the Temple Prayer was read.

Another member of the Maintenance Committee stated that the said committee had been authorized to purchase fill for the grading of the Temple grounds at 35c per yard. Later, through the wrecking of an old building at the Northwestern University, it had been found available at 13 cents per yard. Still later, now, it is costing but 67c. Since the purchase of the land that forms the site of the Hazratu'l-Quds, Lake Michigan gave that land a beach. Now that beach is being filled in without cost and will, in time, become a beautiful lawn or be used for additions to the Office. May this not illustrate how the things of the earth, which avoid those who turn away from God, seek to serve those who love Him and obey His behests?

Teaching
The National Teaching Committee, through its officers and workers, gave a fascinating recital of the expansion of this vital service in North America, relating stories of pioneers to make the work more humanistic and interesting, and referring to the statistics in the printed report, showing actual and relative gain. Twenty-five States and Provinces are still without Spiritual Assemblies, an incentive to new effort and struggle. Forty-four pioneers are now working in the vast area comprising Alaska, Canada, and the States, with a forward march on every front, a powerful enthusiasm and the noblest of purposes.

Spiritual tributes were paid the Regional Teaching Committees, through which many new centers have come into being. There has been a large circulation of literature and many visits made by traveling teachers with much follow-up work. The Temple models and book exhibits have had a major part in attracting inquirers and impressing them with the value and beauty of the Teachings. Much interest has been aroused in virgin territory by these models. Traveling libraries are another impressive feature. The number of Baha'i centers is now 102, exceeding the Guardian's expectations. Despite this praiseworthy attainment, there are yet hundreds of cities untouched, so there must be no rest, but continued effort. Pioneers in Salt Lake City, Albuquerque, Miami, a returned teacher from Germany and Hungary and others, lent variety and interest to the discussion. The friend who had traveled abroad warned against mailing or sending literature into countries where its circulation is forbidden by the government, as it will under such conditions only increase the difficulties of the loyal friends.

Baha'is and the World War
These thoughts were brought before the Convention by those especially praying for peace. The prayers of the friends may have a wonderful effect upon the state of the world. By praying and holding meetings to pray for peace, by concentrating upon the great activities outlined by the Guardian, Temple construction and teaching, they may be the means of shortening the duration of the war and limiting its scope. According to an ancient prophecy, in this day confirmed, "Unless these days are shortened there will be no flesh left alive. But for the sake of the elect they will be shortened."

This blessing is manifestly promised to the Community of the Greatest Name. It does not appear inevitable that we should be drawn, as a nation, into the present war. But we must, as a nation, take part in the social and economic relations of the world.

Teaching Methods
A reading from the Holy Words on "The Will (to teach) the Plan and the Deed," drew out an interesting consideration of methods. There was some advocacy of a public speaking school to be organized in each center. There was also the nice distinction to be observed between talks intended for Baha'is and those for inquirers. The idea of learning to teach by actually teaching was impressed. Teaching by service, the right approach to minority groups, such as Filipinos, etc., by knowing their utmost longings and hopes; putting into practice in every day living the prayers and revealed Word; "Treating the mystical way with practical feet," as a great educator said of 'Abdu'l-Baha, were other expressions of teaching wisdom.

One of mature wisdom in world affairs as well as the Cause, warned against a Babel of Words in giving the message. Deeds, he averred, count most of all. Give to people what they lack. Teach the new administrative order. This is now very important, in view of the visible failure of the old. Science is a vital part of the dynamics of the Cause. People must be trained to be wise in electing the Universal House of Justice. Stress the unique and universal features and then others, that transform the life of the individual.

The happiness of teaching was another point driven home. No real joy without it! Here the Treasurer, Green Bag and Company, all beaming and lovable, suggested teaching by sacrifice!

Traveling teaching tours and firing new souls with Baha'i enthusiasm; supplying books to isolated believers; social contacts and refreshments, dinners, entertainments, each and all with the noble purpose of spreading the teachings; each in turn received due emphasis. Every sincere effort counts on the part of the proponents of the Faith.

A beautiful and impressive picture of the fine cooperation, mutual confidence and understanding of the two races in the Baha'i community of Nashville, Tennessee, was placed before the Convention by its delegate, who also pointed out that the region of the Southern States is as large in area as all of France, that the problems there are complex and difficult; that there are many social and economic changes in progress. She expressed the conviction that Nashville bids fair to lead the nation in racial adjustment. Outsiders who know nothing of conditions may do more harm than good by making head-on collisions with what they know not. Do not ignorantly attack a problem. Cooperate, but do not antagonize, was her thought.

Still another view was, look ever to the Higher World for Guidance. Accept and apply the Divine Teachings always, avoiding only their occasional use from day to day.

Race Unity
An unusually interesting item of consultation was the vital subject of race unity. The committee, as one result of its surveys, gave the numbers of the various minority groups as follows:

Negroes 12,000,000
Jews 4,500,000
Indians 337,000
Esquimos 30,000

Each of the above groups except the Esquimos, has been contacted by the committee during the past year. The Spirit of Bahá'u'lláh, given to the body of mankind, is the fire of attraction in souls for the higher and all-embracing unity. The wise approach to the various minorities, first to contact, and then deepen their knowledge of the Faith and to draw them gradually into the various Bahá'í communities, is the evident goal. Many Bahá'í communities as well as outside organizations are asking for real knowledge along this line. The discovery by many of the world's great scientists, that the differences between races is at most entirely superficial, if not entirely imaginary, and their conviction of the essential unity of the human family, are powerful aids to the logic of workers. As the popular mind largely adheres to the old superstitions, the work of dislodging them is a vital step toward unity. The Divine Teachings are wonderful, perfect and complete. Happy therefore are those who discern clearly and follow the vision. One delegate suggested as a tactful method of presenting the teachings was to link all races together. Another was, as far as possible, to present the Revelation in its universal aspects and as a whole. The mysterious Power that aids those who work for this end is a sign of victory.

The American Indian
Milwaukee reported work among the Indians and it was brought to the attention of the Convention that a young Indian was in the meeting as a visitor. The chairman and the delegates accorded him so enthusiastic a welcome that it resulted in his acceptance of the Faith, which for some time he has been investigating. He has long been seeking "a religion that would work." He is a very intelligent, thoughtful and serious young man, an Indian of full blood and feels that God is now calling him to a great understanding and mission. What he knows and tells of his own people, their religion, history and culture, is most interesting.

*He has since been enrolled as member of the Milwaukee Bahá'í Community.

The brilliant work for race unity done in Pasadena, New York, Peoria, Chicago and other centers was told by various friends.

The Election
The chief and central purpose of the annual Convention is the election of the National Spiritual Assembly. The time appointed for this was Friday afternoon, April 26, the second day of the Convention, which would give time for the newly elected body to consult with the delegates. At the hour appointed the Divine Instructions were read; prayers were uttered; a period of meditation followed; and in an atmosphere signalized from the turmoil and agitation which usually accompany such a matter in many other gatherings, the ballots were cast. The next morning the committee whose task it was to count them and who were commanded for their work, announced the re-election of the body of last year.

Inter-America Teaching
This committee deplored the enforced absence of its Chairman to whom it ascribed an aura of inspiration. It related the great happenings in South and Central America as an inspiring chronicle of dreams and visions. Latin-America, it felt, must be reached first of all, through the heart; later the head. Mention was made of the eminent service of Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart, who is again setting out on a trip to this vast area; of the stimulating effect and results of the recent visit of Mrs. Lorol Schopflocher to all pioneers in Central America; of the work of Miss Leonora Holzapple, the first resident pioneer in Brazil; of Miss Martha Root, first Bahá'í of all to visit those countries to the South; and of all the brave pioneers now settled in the many countries of this vast region. It is the wish of the Guardian that those who go should not return until they have established a real foundation. The promised confirmations are ready to descend upon those who make the effort. The beautiful book compiled by the chairman, Mrs. Loulie A. Mathews, and containing the photographs and other material about those who have pioneered during past years in Latin-American countries, was on exhibition. It is intended as a gift for Shoghi Effendi. It was much admired. Real pioneers, not mere travelers, is now the appeal of this committee for these countries, all of which save two, are now entered. The courage, faith, vision, severity and heroic sacrifices in overcoming trials, were vividly pictured and brought home to the listeners in the wonderful report of this committee. The gift of Temerity Ranch, Colorado Springs, and its availability and use as a training tool for the development of the American missions was announced.
school for teachers in the Latin-American countries, is a sign of Providence to those lands.

Bahá’í Schools

The three established Schools, Green Acre, Louhelen and Geyersville, had their plans and programs ably set forth by their respective committees. Their special work is the training of Bahá’í teachers in the correlation of religion and science, deepening the knowledge of the Cause, especially among the youth, offering the relaxation of a vacation in which the mind rests by change of labor; promoting physical, mental and spiritual health; encouraging sociability; confirming those who come to them in the joyousness of real life and the acceptance of the Glorious Message. Laboratory courses are coming more and more into favor. The importance which the Guardian attaches to these schools their future evolution into Bahá’í universities would impress all who came to avail themselves of their present facilities.

Other Education Plans

The Braille work among the blind which makes the Teachings available to them; suggested plans to reach the deaf and dumb, and even the insane, were proposed during this very sympathetic spiritual consultation. Hearts that are moved and expect results. A statement is more likely to be taken if someone can be quoted as having made it, as this takes the responsibility off the paper. The chairman told how he had an article about the New World Order published by sending it to the editor coupled with a letter of praise for an editorial in which the editor was trying to find a way out of the glooms and shadows of the day.

The Spirit of the Convention

The whole Convention was spiritual, as well as attested by the unity, love and harmony of those who composed it. But special emphasis was given to the mystical and spiritual by the half-hour given each morning to the reading of Creative Words and Prayers preceding each session; laying a solid foundation in the hearts for the light of consultation. The committee which arranged this also planned the Memorial to the late Mrs. May Maxwell.

May Maxwell Memorial

This Memorial consisted of the reading of Tablets and Prayers, the chanting of the Victory Tablet by our Persian brother, Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan, and eulogies by a few among her many loving friends, of those who were closest to her in service and association during past years. Those who had a part were Charles Mason Remey, Miss Juliet Thompson, Philip Sprague, Miss Marion Holley, Miss Agnes Alexander, Mrs. Frances B. Stewart and Ernest Harrison.

How glorious the life that sacrificed all in the Path of God and took its flight while in the arena of service in a strange and distant land! Forever blessed is she, "Under the shadow of the Favor of her Lord."

The Feast of El-Ridván

This greatest of all Bahá’í celebrations, the joyous festival commemorating the Declaration of Báb’s will at Baghdád in 1863, had its program planned by the Spiritual Assembly of Urbana and its feast prepared by that of Chicago. As planned, the significance of the Feast was the subject of the first address. Others were spiritual joy and sacrifice, centering around the lives of the Purest Branch, the Exalted Leaf, and the Greatest Holy Leaf, souls who were trained by the Manifestation; also that unique expression of love and sacrifice manifested in Bahá’u’lláh Himself. Among those who spoke were Mrs. Corinne True, Miss Juliet Thompson, Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan, Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Mr. Albert Windust. Speech was followed by presentation in turn of the film and voice record of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, following which refreshments were served to about seven hundred visitors and friends. This was, as fated to be, an impressive, joyous and memorable occasion.

The Teaching Meeting

This Convention, unprecedented by previous ones, lasted four days and had the grand finale in the public teaching meeting of Sunday evening. George O. Latimer of Portland, Oregon, presided and with his usual genial and affable grace, pointed to and expressed reality.

The two speakers were Miss Elsie Austin of Washington, D. C., farmer assistant Attorney General of Ohio, and Mrs. Helen Bishop of Geyersville, California, Bahá’í teacher and international traveler. This program was praised very highly by those who heard it and the hope was expressed that the addresses in a condensed form might later appear in the next volume of The Bahá’í World.

Thus passed into history the thirty-second Convention, with a record of love, happiness, harmony and constructive service unsurpassed, rarely equaled.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHA’IS OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA
1939-1940

Beloved Friends:

A few days before the opening of the Thirty-second Annual Convention, work was resumed on the exterior decoration of the House of Worship. The nine pylons will be completed during the next few months under a contract made possible by the balance in the Bahá’íkhánanum Fund. Those attending the Convention, moreover, have noted that the grounds have been filled in and a new level attained corresponding to the level of the exterior stairs, almost around the edifice. The approach to Foundation Hall from Linden Avenue is being left ungraded for a time, as it will be necessary to provide a tunnel from the street to the entrance into what will then be the underground basement of the Temple. The Temple Maintenance Committee has been able to obtain all this fill at a cost of only one-third the quotation obtained a year ago.

In the April bulletin the friends were informed of the Guardian’s telegram received March 31: “Suggest if feasible place immediate contracts for completion (of) pylons and ornamentation (of) one whole face. Praying early success.”

Investigations have been made to determine how best to carry out this wish, and how to proceed with the balance of construction as funds are made available from time to time. The result of these investigations, not determined at the date of this writing, can be reported orally to the delegates and later issued to the entire Baha’i community.

The important matter at this time is to realize the present status of the amount of Temple construction work definitely allocated to the seven years ending 1944. Financially, the work to be undertaken amounted to $350,000 in June, 1937. The work has been completed henceforth with amounts to $79,680.50, plus an estimated $50,000 for metal doors, grilles and landscaping. Within three years of a period covering seven years the American Baha’is, with these munificent donations made by the Guardian himself, have thus accomplished Temple construction work amounting to about $220,000.00.

Through contracts amounting to less than $40,000 a year for the next two years, the exterior of the House of Worship can be completed two years before the termination of the Seven Year Plan. This truly is a notable achievement to contemplate, and a high standard to set for future generations of believers.

Another current accomplishment comparable in importance is the addition to the number of local Spiritual Assemblies made at the time of the annual election on April 21. While all reports are not yet received, the National Assembly can state that since mentioning the eleven applications on hand by the middle of March, groups in Oak Park, Illinois, North Augusta, South Carolina, Hamilton, Ontario, Salt Lake City, Utah, and Alhambra, California, have developed to the point of electoral capacity, the group at La Crescenta, California may have likewise qualified, while Knoxville, Tennessee has resumed Assembly status and Scranton, Pennsylvania, has emerged from the difficulties caused by the loss of two active believers who moved to another city. These conditions mean that the American Baha’is have in all probability met the Guardian’s expressed hope that one hundred Assemblies exist after April 21, 1940.

In a previous section of the report, reference was made to the new properties donated to the Faith this year. This information can now be amplified by the news that Mr. and Mrs. Schopflocher are prepared to execute a trust deed transferring to the Green Acre Trustees title to their property in Eliot, Maine, with the provision that they retain full use and control during their lifetime, the same provision written into the gift of properties at Geyersville and at Colorado Springs. The Eliot property includes the cottage known as “Ole Bull” house and the famous “Nine Gables” house, studies and farm.

The Assemblies of Boston, Honolulu, Peoria, Binghamton and Helena have recently incorporated, and By-Laws have been approved for the Newark Assembly.

Beginning with the April number, World Order Magazine has worked out a more directly Baha’i function and is prepared to provide material for study as well as articles on the Teachings or on personal experience of avowed Baha’is. This change was made under authority given by the National Assembly, with the twofold aim of serving the believers and of making the magazine self-supporting. The essential point to note in the change is that experience has proved the only effective way to reach non-Baha’is is through Baha’is.

The two World’s Fair Baha’i exhibits, at New York and San Francisco, will be conducted again this year. New exhibit material has been prepared by the Baha’i Exhibit Committee and is to be seen at the Convention. The element of visual education is being rapidly developed for Baha’i teaching, and no doubt the number of regional and local exhibits will greatly increase during the coming year.

Material on Baha’i marriage certificates, with request for advice and instruction, has been sent to the Guardian. The National Assembly hopes that it will soon be able to provide a proper form for use by those Assemblies which have satisfied the legal requirements laid down by their state codes. The Guardian is also being consulted concerning any changes in the local By-Laws necessary to define this new authority of local Assemblies. A standard By-Law will be added to the approved local By-Laws when the Guardian’s instructions have been received.

The Assembly is pleased to report that through its Chairman, Baha’i Teachings on peace have been conveyed to the President through his Secretary, and assurance received that the material was placed in the President’s hands.

New publications under way since the publication of the Annual Reports include: Spanish edition of Eskenmont’s Baha’u’llah and the New Era; Spanish edition of excerpts from the Master’s Will and Testament; Study Outline and Aids for the Guardian’s World Order Letters, prepared by the Study Outline Committee; a Comprehensive Study Course for children, prepared by the Child Education Committee; and three Baha’i Reprints which make it possible to hand out important excerpts from the writings of Abdul-Baha and words of Shoghi Effendi in attractive and convenient form.

Actions taken at the meeting of the National Assembly held immediately prior to the Convention include authorizations for continuance of Temple work, decision to transfer the Treasurer’s Office to the National headquarters at Wilmette, and approval of the brief prepared by the attorney in connection with the legal suit against the parties misuse the name "Baha'i."

The friends are urged to give their careful attention to the passages in which the Guardian refers to the nature of attacks against the Master and His Will and Testament, appearing on pages 89 and 90 of The World Order of Baha'u'llah. Here we find the clearest statement in the writings for discussion of the New History publication dated April, 1940 with new believers and with those attracted to the Faith who have not yet gained the background of understanding and experience to discern the hollowness of any argument and claim based upon failure to accept the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Baha. The matter will soon come to trial, and the friends can rest assured that the true nature of the Baha'i Faith and of its Administrative Order will be established in accordance with the power and scope of the written and authentic Teachings.

Let us realize now the significance of the first collective spiritual gathering of the Baha'is of all the Americas as meetings are held in all Baha'i Centers on April 26 to commemorate the martyrdom of Mrs. Maxwell. It is indeed a historic occasion, a point of renewal and fresh beginning in the Inter-America teaching work. We recall Baha'u'llah's mighty Tablet to the Presidents of these Republics, the Master's call sounded in the Tablets of America's Spiritual Mission, and the Guardian's vision of the future expounded in The Advent of Divine Justice. The Baha'is of America stand at the converging center of the most tremendous power ever to stream into the hearts of mankind. This is the power ordained to remove mountains of prejudice and cross all the seas of ignorance and division. Ours but to make ourselves instruments to serve those ends and be used by that power! While the world is engaged in political debate and struggle, may the friends of God drink the cup of unity which contains the mysterious ingredient of all success.

In conclusion, the recent messages from the Guardian are recorded.

BAHA'I EXHIBITS

About two years ago, in view of the projects for an exhibit at each of the World Fairs in 1939, a committee, consisting of Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman, Carl Scheffler and Rex and Mary Collison, was appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly, with special consideration to the preparation of a plan and program for a permanent Baha'i exhibit which could be transported from place to place and shown at State Fairs, annual meetings of educational, religious, peace and similar organizations, at conferences, conventions and other gatherings.

Data were collected and studied of the experience of Baha'i communities which had held exhibits. Outstanding was the Baha'i Exhibit at the National Canadian Exposition at Toronto in August-September of 1938 and 1939.

Mr. Carl Scheffler prepared a design for a portable exhibit, which was used for the Baha'i exhibit at the New York State Fair at Syracuse in September, 1939.

In August, 1939, an exhibit was maintained at the Wisconsin State Fair, by the Baha'i communities of Kenosha, Racine, Wauwatosa and Milwaukee.

During the summer and fall of 1939, the National Spiritual Assembly with the active cooperation of the Baha'i communities of New York and of the Bay region of San Francisco, maintained the beautiful and unique exhibits at their respective World Fairs. Many thousands of visitors were met and contacted, large quantities of free literature were distributed and many people attracted to and interested in our Faith.

In view of the experience involved in the two World's Fair exhibits, no definite steps have been taken toward the construction of the proposed traveling exhibit. Further studies are being made, however, with a view toward the gradual development of a workable program for this form of teaching medium, which has been enthusiastically endorsed by our Guardian.

Faithfully submitted,

CENTRALIZATION OF THE NATIONAL OFFICE

About two years ago, the National Spiritual Assembly appointed a committee consisting of Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman, Leroy Loas and Siegfried Schopflocher to consider the practicability, method and expense involved of combining and centralizing the administrative activities and offices of the National Assembly in one location presumably within the area of the Universal House of Worship.

Consultation was had with the various national officers maintaining full time offices and personnel, consideration was given to the housing of a national office in Wilmette, and finally approval of our Guardian was sought in such an impor-tangent step in the development of our Faith in America. The National Assembly with the cooperation of this Committee and of the Temple Maintenance Committee arranged for the removal of the office of the National Secretary from New York City to the Bourgeois Studio on October 1, 1939. Provision was made for a home for Mr. and Mrs. Holley in addition to the Secretary's office.

On October 3, 1939, the Guardian, in a cable message, hailed as an "historic act" this significant step taken by the National Spiritual Assembly, and as "signalizing suspicionous conjunction (in) heart (of) North American continent (of) Haziratu'l-Quds (and) Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, the twin foci (of) steadily evolving American Baha'i community life."

On January 20, 21 and 22, 1940, during the sessions of the National Spiritual Assembly at its first meeting in the Haziratu'l-Quds, recognition of this memorable occasion, in the light of the Guardian's message, was given by special programs of readings in the National Office, in the Auditorium of the House of Worship and at the opening of the Regional Conference in the Foundation Hall. A budget of $31.00 was prepared by Mrs. Helen Inderlied of Morrisville, N. Y., for these efforts.

A budget of $83.00 was granted by the National Teaching Committee to cover costs of hall rental and publicity for the public meetings and also to help out in a small way the extra expenses of the resident teacher. Up to the present time $70.00 of this has been received and used for these purposes.

On the evenings of Nov. 3rd, 4th and 5th, Mrs. Dorothy Baker gave three public addresses to good audiences. Her subjects were "Government Looks Ahead," "Religion Plays Its Part," and "The Conquest of the West." These were given at the Hotel Syracuse. A week later the management of the Hotel Syracuse donated the use of a smaller room for a second series of three talks given by Mr. Kenneth Christian of Morrisville, N. Y. As a result of these two series of public talks a group of about 20 people were interested in the Faith to the extent of attending meetings at the apartment of Mrs. Inderlied on one or more occasions. Such meetings have been held twice a week ever since with an average attendance of about ten. The group includes a number of people connected with Syracuse University. Many phases of the Faith have been presented from time to time by Mr. Christian, Mr. and Mrs. Belcher and occasionally other friends from nearby places. One of the group has registered as a believer and it is expected that these efforts will in time result in a strong Syracuse community.

While on this same trip Mrs. Baker spoke in three places where teaching work is being carried on by nearby Baha'i communities and thereby stimulated interest and progress at Hamburg (Buffalo), Canandaigua (Geneva) and Norwich (Binghamton). The meeting at Hamburg was entirely arranged by Mrs. Edith McLaren, the one resident Baha'i.

Mrs. Baker also visited Little Falls where Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ford are carrying on a most interesting experiment in indirect teaching through a public peace forum which is drawing together a large number of leaders of thought in that city. This forum, which averages 100 in attendance, has had several Baha'i speakers on its platform—Mr. Mountford Mills, who opened the series of lectures, Mrs. Frances Stewart and Mr. Stanwood Cobb. Besides the forum Mr. and Mrs. Ford also have a smaller, more intimate group to whom they speak directly of the Faith. It was this group who heard Mrs. Baker and also Kenneth Christian, Mr. Louis Gregory and the Baha'i forum speakers.

During February Mr. Gregory while visiting several Baha'i communities in this region, also spoke most successfully to the study group in Syracuse and met several interested people in Canandaigua as well as meeting the Little Falls group already referred to.

During the year the Temple model loaned by the Teaching Committee was used by several Assemblies and also exhibited in the following places: several weeks at the Museum of Fine Arts at Syracuse followed by a lecture on the Temple by Mr. Allen McDaniel before the Society of Architects of Syracuse; several weeks at the Schenectady Museum followed by a Temple lecture given by Mr. McDaniel at the Museum and arranged by Miss Ella Quant, the one believer in Schenectady; and also several weeks at the Historical Museum at Auburn.

Early in September the model was also used in connection with a Baha'i Exhibit at the New York State Fair at Syracuse. This exhibit sponsored by the Baha'i Exhibits Committee was designed by Mr. Carl Scheffler and built and installed by Rex and Mary Collison with the help in putting it up of Edward Belcher and Mehdi Firoozi. During the two weeks of the Fair the exhibit was in constant charge of one or more of the following: Ed Belcher and Ida Noyes from Binghamton, Elizabeth Brooks from Rochester and Mary Collison from Geneva. Among the many people who saw the exhibit about 100 names were given by people who wished to be notified of any future public Baha'i lectures in Syracuse. This list was of course used when the series of public lectures was given in November. We were disappointed to find that there was almost no response from these people but they will be given another chance later. The repetition of the exhibit this coming summer will be doubtless added to the teaching efforts in Syracuse and bear more fruit next year.

ONTARIO

The commencement of Baha'i teaching work in Hamilton was the "adoption" of that city by the Spiritual Assembly of Toronto. Twice-monthly public meetings were begun, and speakers were Mrs. Maritzi Carpentier and Mrs. Dudley Blakeley. Later a series of public meetings and study classes was undertaken by Mrs. Howard Ives. In February, 1939, Mrs. Mary Barton of Winnetka arrived in Hamilton and remained for four months, undertaking the supervision of study classes and the confirmation of individuals. Occasional visits were made by F. St. G. Spendlove of Toronto. The Groups and study-groups endeavored to formulate ways and means inviting suggestions as to what form our current year and we ace most appreciative of this convenient place of the Regional Teaching Committee of in Chicago in the attractive rooms of the meetings have been held there during the future.Assembly hopes to regular teaching activities in Oshawa in early Toronto improved. As the visitors.

Baha'i Assembly, the McKay spent the weekend of the 2nd in Hamilton. The group now numbers four, with several applications pending.

After consultation with the National Spiritual Assembly, the Spiritual Assembly of Toronto applied for its second representation in the Canadian National Exhibition, with a display of the Temple model lent by the Montreal Community exhibited in the effective setting designed by W. S. Maxwell. The Exhibition is the largest annual exhibition in the world, with the largest average daily attendance. As a result the name "Baha'i" was brought to the attention of a substantial proportion of the visitors to the Exhibit, numbering more than a million and a half. One new Baha'i was added to the Toronto Community, and the attendance at study classes and public meetings was improved. As the Exhibition is truly national in character, it is hoped that a knowledge of the Cause will be carried to all parts of the Dominion by returning visitors.

A teaching trip to Oshawa, Ontario, was made by Mrs. Howard Ives in the early summer. The Toronto Spiritual Assembly hopes to be able to undertake regular teaching activities in Oshawa in the future.

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Toronto

Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan

On July 15 a meeting of the members of the Regional Teaching Committee of Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan was held in Chicago in the attractive rooms of the Chicago Bahá'í Center. Our subsequent meetings have been held there during the current year and we are most appreciative of this convenient place in which to hold our discussions. We immediately endeavored to formulate ways and means for assisting isolated believers, Bahá'í Groups and study-groups which constitute our particular responsibility in this region. As a preliminary survey, letters were sent to all people listed with us, inviting suggestions as to what form our help might take that might best serve their particular needs.

Almost unanimous were the replies in expressing desires for teachers prepared to give public talks or those who could remain for a considerable period of time, to teach and conduct study classes. As a result, members of the Regional Teaching Committee have traveled extensively, covering our entire region, visiting isolated believers, giving public lectures and, most worth while of all, remaining in some places for several weeks at a time, to encourage and help deepen the friends in their knowledge of the Faith.

Many of the isolated believers were limited in their supply of Bahá'í literature so some of the most essential books were secured and are now serving as a circulating library. They are sent by mail to be held for one month and are replaced by others as desired. We found too, that the isolated believers, deprived for the most part of association with fellow-believers, are full of questions regarding the teachings of their Faith. To answer these, we have secured the cooperation of some of the older believers who long to teach but are unable to absent themselves from their homes, to correspond with these isolated ones, answering their questions or explaining just where in the teachings the desired information may be found.

It was felt that the Regional Teaching Committee should sponsor exhibits of the Temple model at the various State fairs. Local Bahá'í Communities had already undertaken this in some places but we did plan for such an exhibit at the State fair in the State capital of Springfield, Illinois. We were assisted in this responsibility by the Bahá'ís of the Urbana, Springfield and Peoria communities. These communities were happy to report, that with the help of Bahá'u'lláh, they were able to display the model in a particularly attractive place, the center of the large horticultural room. Surrounded at a little distance with beautiful cut-flower displays of all sorts, our lovely model was daily the center of attraction. It is estimated that a hundred thousand people passed through this room during the nine days of the fair. We feel that many, many hundreds were contacted in this way and heard the message of Bahá'u'lláh, as symbolized by the Temple, for the first time.

"How beautiful! What do you suppose it is?" were some of the questions and exclamations heard. "Have you seen it?" we would immediately respond. "That is the Bahá'í Temple at Wilmette, Illinois. It is open to the public daily during the summer months and on Sundays all the year round. We are sure you will enjoy a trip through it." Thus with various questions and answers, and to the interested, pamphlets appropriate to their tastes, did three or four believers who daily served beside this most stimulating project, joyously tell the glad tidings of the advent of a Prophet of God come once again to this worn and weary world.

Later on, at their own initiative, the Bahá'í Group of Madison displayed a model of the Temple in the lobby of one of their leading hotels. Mrs. Sarah Wall was invited to give a public talk upon the Temple and several people were interested and joined a study class as a result of this project. Newspapers gave this event considerable publicity. Among others who have contributed their time and ability to the work of this region, are Mr. Carl Scheffler, who together with Mr. Clarence Niss, have traveled far and wide through the three states, Mrs. Margo Johnson, who has labored valiantly in her home city of Batavia, Mrs. Virginia Camelon and Mrs. Ruth Moffett, who have served in many places.

Situated near the Temple as we are, we have many inquiries sent by mail regarding the history and beliefs of our Faith and send out much printed matter as well as personal letters in reply.

We take great happiness in announcing that two of our Bahá'í Groups have developed community status. Waukegan, Illinois and Madison, Wisconsin will be organized as Spiritual Assemblies on April 21st. Four new Bahá'í Groups in our region, Grosse Pointe and Kalamazoo, in Michigan, Antioch and Manitowoc in Wisconsin, enthusiastically anticipate their speedy growth and development.

Martha L. Root in India and Burma

The Dewan (like a Prime Minister) of Indore who opened the Convention, Sir S. M. Bapna, invited Shirin and me to his home to tea. For twenty years he has tried to interest the people of Indore in establishing courses in the study of Comparative Religions in all the schools of Indore. He has had a textbook written and published for the children and another is being written for the boys and girls, and a third textbook on Comparative Religions for the College students. How we hope the Bahá'í Faith will be included in those textbooks! If you have any Bahá'í books that you think would help him, please send them. Thanks. His address is just Indore, India. He belongs to one of the foremost families of Rajputana and Central India. His ideals are most lofty and he has set his heart on having these textbooks as perfect as possible—and representative of all the religions.

Our Bahá’í Faith was criticised by one ultra-orthodox group at the Convention. I answered it, Shirin answered it another time, and non-Bahá’ís championed our Faith! Really the criticism did no harm!

One man had a paper on the need of a great universal religion, and explained what it ought to inculcate. A great Hindu professor arose and said: ‘The Bahá’í Faith we have been hearing so much about in this Convention is a universal religion and it inculcates all your suggestions and more. The Bahá’í Faith is ready, why not accept it for a universal religion?’ The man who had prepared this paper had not heard of the Bahá’í Teachings until he came to this Convention; he was very much impressed by the Message. It is remarkable how many Religious Conventions are being held in different parts of India, and the N. S. A. of India and Burma are invited to send, and do send, Bahá’í speakers to every one of them. The N. S. A. is very efficient and very, very spiritual; they work almost beyond human endurance and they are as united as one soul in nine bodies.

From Indore, Shirin and I came to Karachi arriving April 25. Here the N. S. A. of India and Burma held their annual Bahá’í Convention during Ridván. There was a stir throughout Karachi that week, every one was talking about the Bahá’í Faith. Everything was so well planned in advance both by the N. S. A. and the L. S. A. of Karachi. We had a tea for the journalists and our chairmen the day after our arrival. The Convention opened the following day, April 27. A great meeting was held in the largest hall in Karachi, Khalikdina Hall, that same evening. The man who became Mayor of Karachi a few days later was our Chairman, Mr. Abbas Ali Butt of Simla, Prof. Pritam Singh of Lahore and I spoke. April 28, the Mayor presided and Shirin Fozdar and I spoke at a public lecture in theosophical Hall. Mr. H. Manji of Bombay also spoke. April 29, the L. S. A. of Karachi gave a great garden party, inviting 350 guests to Bahá’í Hall Gardens. It was a beautiful event and almost all religions were represented. Here, too, Abbas Ali Butt and I spoke. April 30, another public lecture was held in theosophical Hall. Mr. Jamsheed Mehta, Mayor who had been my Chairman when I was in Karachi in 1910, acted as Chairman. Prof. Pritam Singh and I were the speakers. Sunday, May 1, we spoke in a Jain Temple at 8.30 a.m. and in Sharda Mandir, a large school, at 6 p.m., and a great public meeting was held in Bahá’í Hall in the evening when the speakers were Abbas Ali Butt, Mrs. Hashmatullah of Delhi and myself. May 2 we were invited to speak at a public lecture arranged by the Parsis and held at Katrak Hall. The Managing Editor of ‘The Daily Gazette’ presided. Mrs. Fozdar and I spoke. Some of the N. S. A. members and Mr. Manji spoke in a school at 6 p.m. These were only some of the events. Mr. Momenzadhi gave tea for the delegates to meet the Iranian Consul and his wife. The L. S. A. rented a large bungalow next to Bahá’í Gardens as the home for all delegates during that week. The Bahá’ís had breakfasts and teas and dinners for the Bahá’í friends to meet one another and several people of Karachi had dinners or teas where we spoke informally. During the eight days the N. S. A. held their sessions.

Then the N. S. A. members left, and I began the task of printing my book Tahrihah the Pure, Iran’s Greatest Woman. Mr. Isfandiar Bahktihi helped me every day, always going with me to the printer. It was so difficult to get the accent marks, etc., and it has taken three months, but patiently at last it is finished, three thousand copies. It is announced in Appendix III that some of the copies have gold leaf letters—we couldn’t get the gold leaf, and I could not delay my scheduled tour any longer, so they are printed in two styles only, red with gold-dust letters and in blue paper covers. One thousand copies have just been mailed out. Fifteen hundred will be used in India. Very recently I say it—my dream was to have the Bahá’í Faith, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Shoghi Effendi and Tahrihah go together, in this book, on a teaching tour around the whole world! A preacher preaches to a few hundred or thousands or tens of thousands, but a book can be a preacher for centuries and to millions yet to be born. I hope you will speak of Tahrihah in women’s clubs, in universities and high schools, over the radio—just tonight a college boy of Karachi said to me: ‘I read the book yesterday and I could not sleep; I was thinking all night of the glory of Tahrihah’s beautiful life.’ You will see that I tried to make the book complete for non-Bahá’ís, so they would know of the Cause. The book is a ‘Bahá’í teacher!’ It has been sent to several rulers, statesmen, universities. I believe it will be translated into several languages.

During the three months here in Karachi, besides the book, I have spoken several times each week, or met people in small groups. In Bahá’í Hall there were two public meetings each week and one Youth Group meeting. I was invited to speak again in several societies and to some new organizations. Some of the Bahá’ís had groups in their homes, and I invited people to my place. The Mayor came and he invited us to his home and to several events where he was the guest of honor. He is a Muslim, a liberal Muslim, and he has read a number of our books. He asked me to speak in the discussions at the meeting in Municipal Corporation Court Hall which he called to form a Universal Peace Brigade in Karachi.
DEDICATION OF THE CONJUNCTION OF

HAZIRATU’L-QUDS AND MASHRIQU’L-ADHKÁR
BY THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BÁBÁ’IS OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA

I. TABLET OF VISITATION,
BÁHÁ’ULLÁH

The praise which hath dawned from Thy most august Self, and the glory which hath shone forth from Thy most effulgent Beauty, rest upon Thee, O Thou Who art the Manifestation of Grandeur, and the King of Eternity, and the Lord of all who are in heaven and on earth! I testify that through Thee the sovereignty of God and His dominion, and the majesty of God and His grandeur, were revealed, and the Day-Stars of ancient splendor have shed their radiance in the heaven of Thine irrevocable decree, and the Beauty of the Unseen hath shone forth above the horizon of creation. I testify, moreover, that with but a movement of Thy Pen Thine injunction “Be Thou” hath been enforced, and God’s hidden Secret hath been divulged, and all created things have been called into being, and all the Revelations have been sent down.

I bear witness, moreover, that through Thy beauty the beauty of the Adored One hath been unveiled, and through Thy face the face of the Desired One hath shone forth, and that through a word from Thee Thou hast decided between all created things, causing them who are devoted to Thee to ascend unto the summit of glory, and the infidels to fall in the lowest abyss.

I bear witness that he who hath known Thee hath known God, and he who hath attained unto Thy presence hath attained unto the presence of God. Great, therefore, is the blessedness of him who hath believed in Thee, and in Thy signs, and hath humbled himself before Thy sovereignty, and hath been honored with meeting Thee, and hath attained the good pleasure of Thy will, and circled around Thee, and stood before Thy throne. Woe betide him that hath transgressed against Thee, and hath denied Thee, and repudiated Thy signs, and gainsaid Thy sovereignty and risen up against Thee, and waxed proud before Thy face, and hath disputed Thy testimonies, and fled from Thy rule and Thy dominion, and been numbered with the infidels whose names have been inscribed by the fingers of Thy behest upon Thy holy Tablets.

Wait, then, unto me, O my God and my Beloved, from the right hand of Thy mercy and Thy loving-kindness, the holy breaths of Thy favors, that they may draw me away from myself and from the world unto the courts of Thy nearness and Thy presence. Potent art Thou to do what pleaseth Thee. Thou, truly, hast been supreme over all things.

The remembrance of God and His praise, and the glory of God and His splendor, rest upon Thee, O Thou who art His Beauty! I bear witness that the eye of creation hath never gazed upon one wronged like Thee. Thou wast immersed all the days of Thy life beneath an ocean of tribulations. At one time Thou wast in chains and fetters; at another Thou wast threatened by the sword of Thine enemies. Yet, despite all this, Thou didst enjoin upon all men to observe what had been prescribed unto Thee by Him Who is the All-Knowing, the All-Wise.

May my spirit be a sacrifice to the wrongs Thou dost suffer, and my soul be a ransom for the adversities Thou didst sustain. I beseech God, by Thee and by them whose faces have been illumined with the splendors of the light of Thy countenance, and who, for love of Thee, have observed all whereunto they were bidden, to remove the evils that have come in between Thee and Thy creatures, and to supply me with the good of this world and the world to come. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Most Exalted, the All-Glorious, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Compassionate.

Bless Thou, O Lord my God, the Divine Lote-Tree and its leaves, and its boughs, and its branches, and its stems, and its offshoots, as long as Thy most excellent titles will endure and Thy most august attributes will last. Protect it, then, from the mischief of the aggressor and the hosts of tyranny. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Most Powerful. Bless Thou, also, O Lord my God, Thy servants and Thy handmaidens who have attained unto Thee. Thou, truly, art the All-Bountiful, Whose grace is infinite. No God is there save Thee, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Generous.

II. PRAYER FOR THE PUREST BRANCH, BÁHÁ’ULLÁH

Lauded be Thy name, O Lord my God! Thou seest me in this day shut up in my prison, and fallen into the hands of Thine adversaries, and beholdest my son (The Purest Branch) lying on the dust before Thy face. He is Thy servant, O my Lord, whom Thou hast caused to be related to Him Who is the Manifestation of Thyself and the Day-Spring of Thy Cause. At his birth he was afflicted through his separation from Thee, according to what had been ordained for him through Thine irrevocable decree. And when he had quaffed the cup of reunion with Thee, he was cast into prison for having believed in Thee and in Thy signs.

He continued to serve Thy Beauty until he entered into this Most Great Prison. Thereupon I offered him up, O my God, as a sacrifice in Thy path. Thou well knowest what they who love Thee have endured through this trial that hath caused the kindreds of the earth to wail, and beyond them the Concourse on high to lament.

I beseech Thee, O my Lord, by him and by his exile and his imprisonment, to send down upon such as loved him what will quiet their hearts and bless their works. Potent art Thou to do as Thou wilt. No God is there but Thee, the Almighty, the Most Powerful.

III. PRAYER FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF JUSTICE, ‘ABDU’L-BÁHÁ

O God, my God! We are servants of Thine that have turned with devotion to Thy Holy Face, that have detached ourselves from all beside Thee in this glorious Day. We have gathered in this Spiritual Assembly, united in our views and thoughts, with our purposes harmonized to exalt Thy Word amidst mankind. O Lord, our God! Make us the signs of Thy Divine Guidance, the Standards of Thy exalted Faith amongst men, servants to Thy mighty Covenant. O Thou our Lord Most High! Manifestations of Thy Divine Unity in Thine Abbá Kingdom, and resplendent stars shining upon all regions. Lord! Aid us to become searing with the billows of Thy wondrous Grace, streams flowing from Thy all-glorious Heights, goodly fruits up on the Tree of Thy heavenly Cause, trees waving through the breezes of Thy Bounty in Thy celestial Vineyard. O God! Make our souls dependent upon the Verses of Thy Divine Unity, our hearts cheered with the outpourings of Thy Grace, that we may unite even as the waves of one sea and become merged together as the rays of Thine effulgent Light; that our thoughts, our views, our feelings may become as one reality, manifesting the spirit of union throughout the world. Thou art the Gracious, the Bountiful, the Bestower, the Almighty, the Merciful, the Compassionate.

IV. “BLESSED REMAINS TRANSFERRED,” SHOGHI EFFENDI

Blessed remains (of) Purest Branch and Master's Mother safely transferred (to) hallowed precincts (of the) Shrines (on) Mount Carmel. Long inflicted humiliation wiped away. Machinations (of the) Covenant-Breakers (to) frustrate plan defeated. Cherished wish (of) Greatest Holy Leaf fulfilled. Sister, Brother, Mother (and) Wife (of) 'Abdu'l-Bahá reunited at the one spot designed (to) constitute focal center (of) Bahá'í Administrative Institutions at Faith's World Center. Share joyful news (with) entire body (of) American believers.

V. TRIBUTE TO THE GREATEST HOLY LEAF, SHOGHI EFFENDI

No sooner had 'Abdu'l-Bahá stepped upon the shores of the European and American continents than our beloved Khamún found herself well-night overwhelmed with thrilling messages, each betokening the irresistible advance of the Cause in a manner which, not withstanding the vast range of her experience, seemed to her almost incredible. The enthusiasm and joy which swelled in her breast as she greeted 'Abdu'l-Bahá on His triumphant return from the West, I will not venture to describe. She was astounded at the vitality of which He had, despite His unimaginable sufferings, proved Himself capable. She was lost in admiration at the magnitude of the forces which His utterances had released. She was filled with thankfulness to Bahá'u'lláh for having enabled her to witness the evidences of such brilliant victory for His Cause no less than for His Son.

The ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, so tragic in its suddenness, was to her a terrific blow, from the effects of which she never completely recovered. To her He, Whom she called “Agá,” had been a refuge in times of adversity. On Him she had been led to place her sole reliance. In Him she had found ample compensation for the bereavements she had suffered, the desertions she had witnessed, the ingratitude she had been shown by friends and kindreds. No one could ever dream that a woman of her age, so frail in body, so sensitive of heart, so loaded with the cares of almost eighty years of incessant tribulation, could so long survive so shattering a blow. And yet, history, no less than the annals of our immortal Faith, shall record for her a share in the advancement and consolidation of the worldwide community which the hand of 'Abdu'l-Bahá had helped to fashion, which no one among the remnant of His Family can rival.

VI. TABLETS FOR THE PUREST BRANCH, BAHÁ'U'LLÁH

“At this very moment,” Bahá'u'lláh testifies, “My son is being washed before My face, after Having sacrificed him in the Most Great Prison. Thereat have the dwellers of the Bahá Tabernacle wept with a great weeping, and such as have suffered imprisonment with this Youth in the path of God, the Lord of the promised Day, lamented. Under such conditions My Pen hath not been prevented from remembering its Lord, the Lord of all nations. It summoneth the people unto God, the Almighty, the All-Bountiful. This is the day wherein he that was created of the light of Bahá has suffered martyrdom, at a time when He lay imprisoned at the hands of his enemies.”

“Upon thee, O Branch of God!” He solemnly and most touchingly, in that same Tablet, bestows upon Him His benediction, “be the remembrance of God and His praise, and the praise of all that dwell in the Realm of Immortality, and of all the denizens of the Kingdom of Names. Happy art thou in that thou hast been faithful to the Covenant of God and His Testament, until Thou didst sacrifice thyself before the face of thy Lord, the Almighty, the Unconstrained. Thou, in truth, hast been wronged, and to this testifieth the Beauty of Him, the Self-Subsisting. Thou didst, in the first days of thy life, bear that which hath caused things to groan, and made every pillar to tremble. Happy is the one that remembereth thee, and draweth nigh, through thee, unto God, the Creator of the Morn."

"Glorified art Thou, O Lord, my God!" He, in a prayer, astoundingly proclaims, "Thou seest me in the hands of Mine enemies, and My son blood-stained before Thy face, O Thou in Whose hands is the kingdom of all names. I have, O my Lord, offered up that which Thou hast given Me, that Thy servants may be quickened and all that dwell on earth be united."

"Blessed art thou." He, in another Tablet affirms, "and blessed be he that turneth unto thee, and visiteth thy grave, and draweth nigh, through thee, unto God, the Lord of all that was and shall be. . . It testify that thou dost return in meekness unto thine abode. Great is thy blessedness and the blessedness of them that hold fast unto the hem of thy outspread robe . . . Thou art, verily, the trust of God and His treasure in this land. Erelong will God reveal through thee that which He hath desired. He, verily, is the Truth, the Knower of things unseen. When thou wast laid to rest in the earth, the earth itself trembled in its longings to meet thee. Thus hath it been decreed, and yet the people perceive not. . . Were We to recount the mysteries of thine ascension, they that are asleep would awaken, and all beings would be set ablaze with the fire of the remembrance of My Name, the Mighty, the Loving."

VII. TABLETS FOR THE MOST EXALTED LEAF, BAHÁ'U'LLÁH 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

Concerning the Most Exalted Leaf, the mother of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Bahá'u'lláh has written: "The first Spirit through which all spirits were revealed, and the first Light by which all lights shone forth, rest upon thee, O Most Exalted Leaf, thou who hast been mentioned in the Crimson Book! Thou art the one whom God created to arise and serve His own Self, and the Manifestation of His Cause, and the Day Spring of His Revelation, and the Dawning-Place of His signs, and the Source of His commandments; and Who so aided thee that thou didst turn with thy whole being unto Him, at a time when His servants and handmaidens had turned away from His Face. . . . Happy art thou, O My handmaiden, and My Leaf, and the one mentioned in My Book, and inscribed by My Pen of Glory in My Scrolls and Tablets. . . Rejoice thou, at this moment, in the most exalted Station and the All-Highest Paradise, and the Abhá Horizon, inasmuch as He Who is the Lord of Names hath remembered thee. We bear witness that thou didst attain unto all good, and that God hath so exalted thee, that all honor and glory circled around thee."

"O Navváb!" He thus, in another Tablet, addresses her, "O Leaf that hath sprung from My Tree, and been My companion! My glory be upon thee, and My loving-kindness, and My mercy that hath surpassed all beings, We announce unto thee that which will gladden thine eye, and assure thy soul, and rejoice thine heart. Verily, thy Lord is the Compassionate, the All-Bountiful. God hath been and will be pleased with thee, and hath singled thee out for His own Self, and chosen thee from among His handmaidens to serve Him, and hath made thee the companion of His Person in the day-time and in the night-season."

"Hear thou Me once again," He reassures her, "God is well-pleased with thee, as a token of His grace and a sign of His mercy. He hath made thee to be His companion in every one of His worlds, and hath nourished thee with His meeting and presence, so long as His name, and His Remembrance, and His Kingdom, and His Empire shall endure. Happy is the handmaiden that hath mentioned thee, and sought thy good-pleasure, and humbled herself before thee, and held fast unto the cord of thy love. Woe betide him that denieth thy exalted station, and the things ordained for thee from God, the Lord of all names, and him that hast turned away from thee, and rejected thy station before God, the Lord of the mighty throne."

"O faithful ones!" Bahá'u'lláh specifically enjoins, "Should ye visit the resting-place of the Most Exalted Leaf, who hath ascended unto the Glorious Companion, stand ye and say: 'Salutation and blessing and glory upon thee, O Holy Leaf that hath sprung from the Divine Lote-Tree! I bear witness that thou hast believed in God and in His signs, and answered His Call, and turned unto Him, and held fast unto His cord, and clung to the hem of His grace, and fled thy home in His path, and chosen to live as a stranger, out of love for His presence and in thy longing to serve Him. May God have mercy upon him that draweth nigh unto thee, and remembereth thee through the things which My Pen hath voiced in this, the most great station. We pray God that He may forgive us, and forgive them that have turned unto thee, and grant their desires, and bestow upon them, through His wondrous grace, whatever be their wish. He, verily, is the Generous. Praise be to God. He Who is the Desire of all worlds; and the Beloved of all who recognize Him."

And, finally, 'Abdu'l-Bahá Himself in one of His remarkable Tablets, has borne witness only to the exalted station of one whose "seed shall inherit the Gentiles," whose Husband is the Lord of Hosts, but also to the sufferings endured by her who was His beloved mother. "As to thy question concerning the 54th chapter of Isaiah," He writes, "This chapter refers to the Most Exalted Leaf, the mother of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. As a proof of this it is said: 'For more are the children of the desolate, than the children of the married wife.' Reflect upon this statement, and then upon the following: 'And thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.' And truly the humiliation and reproach which she suffered in the path of God is a fact which no one can refute. For the calamities and afflictions mentioned in the whole chapter are such afflictions which she suffered in the path of God, all of which she endured with patience and thanked God therefor and praised Him, because He had enabled her to endure afflictions for the sake of Bahá. During all this time, the men and women (Covenant-breakers) persecuted her in an incomparable manner, while she was patient, God-fearing, calm, humble and contented through the favor of her Lord and by the bounty of her Creator."

VIII. PRAYER FOR THE BUILDERS OF THE MASHRIQUL-ADHKAR, 'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

O God! O God! We implore Thee with throbbing heart and streaming tears to aid each one who strives in the erection of the house of the Lord where-in Thy Name is mentioned at morn and eventide.

O Lord, send down Thy benediction on whosoever servest this edifice and aids in the upraising of this Temple for the uniting of all sects and religions. Confirm him in every good deed among mankind; open the doors of riches and wealth unto him; and make him an inheritor of the treasures of the Kingdom which perish not; cause him to be a sign of giving among the people; uphold him by the sea of Thy bounty and generosity which forever surges with the waves of Thy grace and favor.

Verily, Thou art the Generous, the Bountiful, the All-Glorious!

"BEFORE THE THRONE OF BAHÁ'U'LLÁH"

Cablegram from Shoghi Effendi

(The) stupendous struggle now convulsing (the) major part (of the) European continent (is) progressively revealing (the) ominous features, (and) increasingly assuming (the) proportions, (of) (the) titanic upheaval foreshadowed seventy years ago (by the) prophetic pen (of) Bahá'u'lláh. (The) disruptive forces associated (with) humanity's world-shaking ordeal (are) closely interrelated (with) the constructive potentialities inherent (in the) American believers' Divinely-ordained Plan. "CONTINUOUS CONSECRATION"

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dear and valued co-workers:

To these words, written on my behalf, and in answer to your particular questions relating to the administrative issues that confront you in these days, I wish to add my own tribute to the magnificent man in which you face the problems, both spiritual and administrative, which the expansion of the Faith is continually raising, and to the way in which you resolve them, explain their nature, and derive fresh strength from your experience of any one of them. The text of the annual reports, demonstrates this fact, and establishes for all time the high standard according to which the administrative machinery of the Faith is functioning, developing and consolidating itself under your able and energetic direction. As the administrative processes expand, as their operation steadily improves, as their necessity is more fully and strikingly demonstrated, and their beneficent influence correspondingly grows more apparent and evident, so will the blessings, the strength and guidance bestowed by Him Who animates and directs these processes be more abundantly vouchsafed to those who have been called upon to utilize them, in this age, for the execution of God's Purpose and for the ultimate redemption of a sore-stricken travelling humanity. Many will be the setbacks, the shocks and the disturbances, which the commotions of a convulsive age must produce, yet no force, however violent and world-wide in its range and catastrophic in its immediate consequences, can either halt these processes or deflect their appointed course. How great, then, the privilege, and how staggering the responsibility, of those who are destined to guard over them and to bring them eventually to full fruition. Nothing short of utter, of continuous consecration to His Will and Purpose can enable them to fulfill their high destiny. Haifa, May 15, 1940.

BAHÁ'IS AND MILITARY SERVICE

The further spread of the area of hostilities, involving now the Bahá'ís of so many countries, including Canada, makes it imperative for the believers to understand the principles which control the relation of Bahá'ís to military duty. The National Spiritual Assembly therefore summarizes the different points at issue for the information of all Bahá'ís.

1. Bahá'ís are obedient to their government. The Bahá'í teachings do not sanction any principle of pacifism under which, for the sake of individual conscience, citizens claim the right to repudiate their obligation for military service when required.

2. Bahá'ís, however, belonging as they do to a Faith whose essential purpose is to manifest the oneness of mankind and establish world order, are by their Teachings required to apply for exemption from combatant service whenever such exemption is legally provided by their government in time of war. Whenever possible the military duty of Bahá'ís is to be rendered through fields not involving the act of killing.

3. Such exemption is granted under statutes enacted in connection with the actual state of war and cannot be obtained before the state of war exists.

4. This exemption, for Bahá'ís, is claimed for them by their administrative bodies and is not sought by the individual believer for himself. Until there is a draft act, or the enactment of compulsory military duty, the conditions under which exemption can be officially granted do not exist.

5. In the case of the United States and Canadian governments, the National Spiritual Assembly some years ago filed a statement on the Bahá'í Teachings concerning international peace, to provide a basis on which formal petition might be made for exemption of Bahá'ís from combatant service in view of the nature of their Faith. Since September, 1939, local Assemblies of Canada have petitioned for exemption of Bahá'ís on the basis of that statement filed by the N. S. A. The reply made has been to the effect that Canada has not yet adopted compulsory service, hence exemption is not necessary.

6. Military service may be voluntary as well as compulsory. The principle laid down by the Guardian controlling voluntary enlistment is found in the following excerpt from his letter to the National Assembly of the British Isles as reprinted in Bahá'í News for January, 1940: "There are many other avenues through which the believers can assist in times of war by enlisting in services of a non-combatant nature—services that do not involve the direct shedding of blood—such as ambulance work, anti-air raid precaution service, office and administrative works, and it is for such types of national service that they should volunteer.

"It is immaterial whether such activities would still expose them to dangers, either at home or in the front, since their desire is not to protect their lives, but to desist from any acts of wilful murder."

National Spiritual Assembly.

"THE ENTIRE COMMUNITY MUST, AS ONE MAN, ARISE TO FULFILL THEM"

Beloved Friends:

The American Bahá'ís have come to the hour of their most glorious destiny. While others see only the manifestations of violence ruining the old civilization, the followers of Bahá'u'lláh behold the signs of regeneration and reformation of the human world. Their faith assures them that nothing can prevail except the Divine decree. Their spiritual knowledge embraces the understanding of current world events interpreted by 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Guardian in countless passages and texts. Now we must translate this unsinkable faith into such vigorous teaching efforts that thousands will hasten to drink the cup and join our ranks.

A deeper zeal for teaching, the National Spiritual Assembly is convinced, constitutes the essence of the Bahá'í life in this hour. The very life of the spirit is nothing else but a continuous testimony to the Victory which Bahá'u'lláh manifested in the power of the Greatest Name. Bahá'í faith is no mere creed—its basis is complete conviction that the oneness of mankind is now being established upon the earth. Bahá'ís believe in the superiority of the power of God over all other forces, and the fulfillment of His policy over all human policies, and in the immortality of the soul above all instruments of destruction which hate and ignorance can devise. It is that universal faith which we are to demonstrate in this hour for a humanity fallen prey to the false gods of national, racial and sectarian prejudice.

This universal faith is not a philosophy but an inner experience. Without this inner experience the most learned of men is impotent, while as the Guardian has assured us, the simplest of men, imbued with true faith, can move the hearts of a multitude. Unlike former religions, the faith of the Bahá'í can mature in spiritual knowledge given by the teachings, and be perfectly demonstrated through the unity of the new social order which Bahá'u'lláh has established.

Therefore it is the plea of the National Assembly that the American Bahá'ís arise in active teaching service. It is to the teachings, requirements, and recommendations of the Seven Year Plan that the community of the American believers must henceforth direct their careful and sustained attention. The entire community must, as one man, arise to fulfill them. To teach the Cause of God, to proclaim its truths, to defend its interests, to demonstrate, by words as well as by deeds, its indispensability, its potency, and universality, should at no time be regarded as the exclusive concern or sole privilege of Bahá'í administrative institutions, but be they Assemblies or committees. All must participate, however humble their origin, however limited their experience, however restricted their means, however deficient their education, however pressing their cares and preoccupations, however unfavorable the environment in which they live. 'God,' Bahá'u'lláh, Himself, has unmistakably revealed, 'bahá prescribed unto every one the duty of teaching His Cause.' Say, 'He further has written, 'Teach ye the Cause of God, O people of Bahá, for God has prescribed unto every one the duty of proclaiming His Message, and regardeth it as the most meritorious of all deeds.'" (The Advent of Divine Justice, pp. 37, 38)

The more desperate the condition of the world, the more penetrating is His Word. The more incautious men become of solving their problems, the more convincing is the new World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. Let it be the first concern of each believer, to seize this Divine opportunity to teach. Let it be the first concern of each Assembly and each committee, to inspire, prepare, reinforce, assist and consolidate a vastly enlarged teaching activity.

Who, of those we know, are prepared for the Message? What fireside meetings can be held? What more potent public meetings arranged? Which teaching literature is best adapted for this person or that group? Is our community consecrated to continuous study of the Teachings? Are we using our opportunities for publicity and radio? These are the questions we should be raising at this time, leaving behind as much as possible those minor issues of personality which consume time and strength without advancing the essential interests of the Faith. Those who are consecrated to teaching effort enter the world of the spirit where higher laws protect us from our negative self.

"The field is indeed so immense, the period so critical, the Cause so great, the workers so few, the time so short, the privilege so priceless, that no follower of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, worthy to bear His name, can afford a moment's hesitation. That God-born Force, irresistible in its sweeping power, insinuable in its potency, unpredictable in its course, mysteriously in its works, and none the less so in its manifestations—a Force which, as the Bahá has written, 'vibrates within the innermost being of all created things,' and which, according to Bahá'u'lláh, has through its 'vibrating influence,' 'upset the equilibrium of the world and revolutionized its ordered life,'—such a Force, acting even as a two-edged sword, is, under our very eyes, unloosening, on the one hand, the age-old ties which for centuries have held together the fabric of civilized society, and is unloosing, on the other, the bonds that still fetter the infant and as yet unemancipated Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. The undreamt-of opportunities offered through the operation of this Force,—the American believers must now rise, and fully and courageously exploit them. "The holy realities of the Concours on high," writes 'Abdu'l-Bahá, "yearns, in this day, in the Most Exalted Paradise, to return unto this world, so that they may be aided to render some service to the threshold of the Abhá Beauty, and arise to demonstrate their servitude to His sacred Threshold."

COMMUNICATION FROM THE GUARDIAN

For the information of the believers, the National Assembly cites the following passages from a letter written by the Guardian, through his secretary, dated April 15, 1940.

"In the matter of the use and distribution of prayer beads, in this and other matters of secondary importance he does not wish that any hard and fast rules be set up. The believers should not be required to use prayer beads, nor should they be prevented from doing so, as the Teachings do not contain any specific instruction on the subject."

"The letter received by the Vancouver Assembly from the Department of National Defence acknowledging their letter on the subject of the exemption of Baha'is from combatant military duty has been read with gratification by the Guardian who, indeed, welcomes this action as yet another step forward in the consolidation and recognition of the administrative institutions of the Faith."

"Regarding the question of Baha'i membership in secret fraternal organizations: he thinks that for the present this matter should be left to the discretion of the friends, and that no statement on the subject, defining in a rigid and uniform way their attitude towards such bodies, would be necessary."

THE TEACHING REQUIREMENTS OF THE SEVEN YEAR PLAN

The Guardian's exposition of this subject in The Advent of Divine Justice (pp. 37-48) is summarized here in order to lend supreme emphasis to the subject of teaching, which the National Assembly wishes to make paramount this year. The friends will recall that the Guardian's references to Inter-America teaching were similarly summarized in Bahá'í News of November, 1939.

1. Superb and irresistible as is the beauty of the First Mashriqu'l-Adhkar of the West, it should be regarded as no more than an instrument for the more effective propagation of the Cause.

2. In this respect it should be viewed in the same light as the administrative institutions of the Faith which are designed as vehicles for the proper dissemination of its ideals, its tenets, and its verities.

3. It is ... to the teaching requirements of the Seven Year Plan that the community ... must henceforth direct their careful and sustained attention.

4. To teach ... should at no time be regarded as the exclusive concern or sole privilege of Bahá'í administrative institutions.

5. How often ... have the lowliest adherents ... been capable of winning victories for their Cause.

6. The field ... so immense, the period so critical, the Cause so great, the workers so few, the time so short, the privilege so priceless, that no follower ... can afford a moment's hesitation.

7. So precious an opportunity ... may never again recur. Now is the time, the appointed time, for the American believers ... to proclaim, through the agencies and channels of a specially designed Administrative Order, their capacity and readiness to rescue a fallen and sore-tried generation.

8. The teaching campaign ... acquires ... an importance ... that cannot be overestimated.
9. Launched... through the creative energies released by the Will of 'Abdu'l-Bahá... it must... be carried out in conformity with certain principles.

10. Those who participate... must... thoroughly familiarize themselves with the... history and teachings... study... the literature... delve into its teachings, assimilate its laws and principles, ponder its admonitions, tenets and purposes, commit to memory certain of its exhortations and prayers, master the essentials of its administration... keep abreast of its current affairs.

11. They must... obtain... a sound knowledge... of Islam.

12. They must, whenever they contemplate any specific mission in the countries of Latin America... acquire a certain proficiency in the languages... of those countries.

13. No participator of this inter-American campaign must feel that the initiative... must rest solely with those agencies, whether Assemblies or committees, whose... concern is... this vital objective.

14. It is the bounden duty of every American believer... to initiate, promote and consolidate, within the limits fixed by the administrative principles... any activity he or the deeds fit to undertake.

15. Neither should the threatening world situation, nor... lack of material resources, of mental equipment, of knowledge, or of experience... deter any prospective pioneer teacher.

16. Having on his own initiative... resolved to arise... let him carefully consider every avenue of approach... survey the possibilities... devise such methods as association with clubs... or participation in social, cultural, humanitarian, charitable, and educational organizations.

17. Let him... preserve its dignity, and station... safeguard the integrity of its laws and principles... decide... the suitability of either the direct or indirect method of teaching.

18. Let him... shower... kindness upon the seeker... refrain at the outset from insisting on such laws and observances as might impose too severe a strain... Let him, as soon as that stage (maturity of faith) has been attained, introduce him to the body of his fellow-believers, and seek... to enable him to contribute his share to the enrichment of its (the Bahá’í community’s) life.

19. Let every participator... bear in mind the necessity of keeping in close and constant touch with those responsible agencies designed to direct, coordinate, and facilitate the teaching activities of the entire community.

20. They... should, through constant interchange of ideas, through letters, circulars, reports, bulletins... insure the smooth and speedy functioning of the teaching machinery of their Administrative Order.

21. Upon every participator... rests the spiritual obligation to make of the mandate of teaching... the all-pervading concern of his life.

22. If he be member of any Spiritual Assembly let him encourage his Assembly to consecrate a certain part of its time... to... consideration of such ways and means as may foster the campaign of teaching.

23. If he attends his summer school... let him consider such an occasion as a... precious opportunity... to enrich... his knowledge.

24. Let him... seek... through inter-community visits to stimulate the zeal for teaching.

25. Let any one who feels the urge... direct in particular the attention... of the Negro, the Indian, the Eskimo, and Jewish races to His Faith.

26. Let those... holding administrative positions... bear in mind the vital and urgent necessity of insuring... the formation... of groups... and enable these... nuclei to evolve... into properly functioning... Assemblies.

27. To implant... the banner of Bahá’u’lláh in the heart of these virgin territories, to erect the structural basis of His Administrative Order in their cities and villages... constitute... the first and most significant step.

TRANSLATION OF THE TABLET OF "THE EPISODE TO THE SON OF THE WOLF"

In the June issue of Bahá’í News, a cablegram from the Guardian was published which announced that he was sending the first part of his translation of Epistle To the Son Of The Wolf.

This was received in a letter dated May 7, 1949, with the following comment: "A careful comparison of this new translation of the Guardian with that of Mrs. Chanler’s clearly reveals how inadequate and misleading the latter is both from the point of view of accuracy and of faithfulness. It further shows how unconscientious Ahmad Sohrab has been in comparing that old translation with the original Persian and Arabic text of the Tablet. His description in the preface of the book of Mrs. Chanler’s rendering as ‘accurate’ and ‘faithful’ is altogether untrue, as not only her translation abounds with mistakes, but also reveals many important omissions. The term ‘Fear of God’ has apparently been deliberately changed in some cases into ‘Love of God’ towards the end of the book, as the French version which she translated proves (it)."

CONCERNING THE POSITION OF AMERICA IN THE WORLD WAR

With the Guardian’s consent, the National Assembly publishes an excerpt from the letter written by him to Miss Juliet Thompson on November 21, 1940. In giving permission, the Guardian informed the Assembly that "it should be published only for the information of the friends, and does not imply any collective action to be taken by them."

"With regard to your question concerning the future position of America in the coming world war: it would be certainly premature to make any definite forecast at the present time, and the impression* that the Guardian meant that America would be necessarily drawn into the field of hostilities is also not correct. One thing, however, is absolutely certain, and which the Guardian himself has more than once emphasized, namely that nothing short of a full assumption by America of the grievous burdens, responsibilities and duties that naturally fall upon her as one of the leading nations of the world can enable her to fulfill the high political mission which she has been called upon to play in the future political and social reconstruction of mankind. The destiny of America is inseparably bound up with that of the rest of the world, and it would be impossible therefore to conceive of her taking, in the long run, a purely passive attitude in regard to political and social developments that transpire in and agitate the remaining four continents of the globe.

* The impression that the last section of The Advent of Divine Justice means that America will inevitably enter the war.

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

Among the important items of current news:

A Spanish edition of the excerpts from the Master's Will and Testament has been published by the American Baha'i Publishing Committee from the translation made by Mrs. Frances B. Stewart, the title being "La Ultima Voluntad Y Testamento De 'Abdu'l-Baha." Copies can be obtained for 20 cents.

Work is being hastened as rapidly as possible on the printing of the following Spanish translations: Dr. Essement's Baha'u'llah and the New Era, Some Answered Questions, The Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Baha. When these books are ready, no time will be lost in getting copies to the pioneer teachers and groups.

Cuba: Mr. and Mrs. Philip Marangella have reported the confirmation of four Baha'is in Havana. This makes a strong group for development of a Spiritual Assembly. The address for correspondence is uncertain at this time, on account of a typhoid epidemic which has apparently compelled Mr. and Mrs. Marangella to seek residence in another quarter of the city. The arrangement for extending Mr. Marangella's stay in Cuba for three months after July 15 had just been made when he advised by cable of the need for change of residence. The new Baha'is are: Mr. Jack Zoller, Mr. Eugenio Gines, Mr. Domingo Santos del Rio, and Mr. Perfecto Perez Toledo.

Honduras: The following excerpts from reports prepared by Mr. Antonio Roca after his return give the salient features of this pioneer's accomplishments.

"I left Milwaukee September 23, 1939 by automobile via Laredo, Texas, arriving in Monterey, passing Mexican border September 27th. I immediately started giving the message contacting people who had contacted me on my previous trip to Mexico. I reached Mexico City on September 28th, 1939 at 9 P.M.

"On the 29th of September I visited Mr. Espinoza and had a real treat and surprise to find a beautiful four room Center and was very happy to see that the Baha'i Cause in Mexico had made such a great progress in such a short time. Mr. Espinoza and all the other friends were very friendly and explained to me the future plans they had for developing the Faith.

"Tegucigalpa is a town of about 45,000 inhabitants, the only capital in the world without railway connection, the main transportation facilities being trucks but mostly ox-carts. The town is small, colonial style, mostly one and two story buildings and some of the streets are still not paved. In the main Plaza there stands the great 'Colonial Time Cathedral' which my ancestors had given to the Central American Republics. I was overjoyed to be the chosen one to be able to give the message to those people so very much needed in this 20th century.

"Well prepared and fortified with an overflow of the spirit, I went to the newspapers, 'El-Cronista' and 'La Epoca,' the only two there. They printed an article on my arrival and on the principles of the Faith, and extended a welcome to me and wished that my visit to their city would be pleasant, which is customary in that country.

"I first contacted the Spanish people, having to take my meals in a Spanish Restaurant and had a room in the Hotel Honduras. People showed an astonishing and surprising attitude that a born Spaniard would dare to come into a country where the Catholic Religion had ruled for 400 years, and was still extremely strong and teach such a Message as I had. But, nevertheless, with the Great Power of Baha'u'llah was able to travel all over the city and teach the Cause without any interference. After being there about ten days contacted the president of a Spiritual Society, 'Nuevo Orienta,' a Mr. Gonzalez, and he gave me addresses of those who he felt might be interested in the Cause. I was quite elated, they having sent three delegates to greet me on my arrival, and felt that perhaps here was a group who would become the Center for a group of seekers. They came three times to my room, that is as a group, and asked questions. They believed that what we taught was true, but it would be unable for them to carry on their commercial methods which they had been using with their society. They recognized that the 'Book of Certitude' could only have been revealed by a Prophet of God and I continued to pray that Baha'u'llah will nurture those seeds and they may eventually bear fruit. Some of the people I talked to had been censured by the Government and they were afraid to come to the meetings. There were many Theosophists, Rosicrucians and Masons, and after hearing of the Message would ask for bigger books, not just pamphlets. None of the people I contacted made any effort to put at my disposal facilities where I could teach and some even said that I was teaching Anti-Christ. I visited people at their places of business and homes and they would promise that they would come to my room for classes but never showed up. The entire clothing business was controlled by Palestinians from Bethlehem. After being there a short time every one seemed to know the word 'Baha'i' and it was discussed by many people among themselves and some of them would call me into their stores and ask me what I had. These people from Bethlehem after finding out that we were proclaiming the New Manifestation, they being Orthodox believers, were prone to deny and even laugh at the Cause and they were very antagonistic. There were many hours and days when I felt that my efforts would be a complete failure and that it would be impossible to establish the Faith in such a small town where every one knew every one else and particularly in business, and all business being controlled by different colonies, German, Spanish, Arabians. The natives are either very rich or very poor, being 50% Indian or Indian descent. In less than three months many hundreds of people heard about Baha'u'llah and His teachings. It was about two months after being there that I contacted the first believer, a famous writer and poetess, Mrs. Angela Ochoa Velasquez, and she was the instrument in bringing the rest of the believers. A group came to my hotel room to study and 7 of them declared themselves, three of them dropping out again when they realized the great purity of the Cause. It was then necessary to start an Assembly and to establish in Central America we all made an extra effort to contact souls who had already shown an interest in the Cause. When they realized that they would be the first to establish such a group and knowing that it would be necessary to register with the Government they feared it and we were unable to accomplish forming such an Assembly. But we were able to again contact three souls who became real believers. "On March 10th we were privileged to meet at the Airport, Mrs. Loral Schofrocher who stayed with us three days and helped us tremendously with our teaching work. She gave three lectures at the Hotel Asia, the attendance being 22, 35, 20. Every one hearing her was so pleased and enthusiastic, some of them later attending our classes, but as yet not confirmed. "I am happy to report seven steadfast believers, who have attended classes for over three months, two or three times a week, and we feel that they will carry on with some little help. I left with them the necessary books and pamphlets sent to me by the National Publishing Committee. They all need our prayers for their spiritual growth and steadfastness. They promised earnestly to strive to establish an Assembly and Centre in Tegucigalpa. "The greatest hindrance of all my teaching work was the lack of translations of Baha'i books, such as the New Era, Some Answered Questions, and Procedure. "I estimate that over 2,000 people heard the Message of Baha'u'llah in Tegucigalpa. All the Government employees were very cordial to me personally and gave me full freedom of expressing the purpose and greatness of the New World Order."

The following pioneers report on May Maxwell's Memorial Services:

Costa Rica: Mrs. Amelia Ford and Mrs. Gayle Woolson, "We started our Baha'i study class on Friday, April 26th, the same evening that we, as well as Baha'i's the world over, observed the memorial meeting for May Maxwell. At our first meeting there were four Costa Ricans present: Senora Americana de Castillo, Senorita Marta Guerra, Senor Edgar Sanz Bleu, and Senor Jose J. Ulloa. The person who had been most cooperative with us, Senor Julian Castillo, was not able to be present at that meeting. . . ."

Jamaica: Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw, "The memorial meeting for Mrs. Maxwell was held with reading from the Hidden Words and prayer book, and I also spoke of her service to the Cause of Baha'u'llah and sacrificing her life in His Cause. It was indeed a very spiritual meeting."—Rosa L. Shaw.

Haiti: Mrs. Ruth Blackwell, "I have no memorial service to report except that I had a prayer for Mrs. Maxwell moi-meme. She was the sacrifice for this work."

Dominican Republic: Miss Margaret Lentz, "There is nothing to report except that I read for myself the cables and reports and recited the prayers for the Departed. Maria Teresa did the same, as I had sent her copies and given her the hour that was indicated for the memorial gatherings."

El Salvador: Clarence Iverson, John Eichener, Jr., "... on Friday evening, April 26th, we held our memorial meeting. We began at 7 so as to be the same time the Convention held theirs. We read the Victory Tablet first, the N. S. A.'s letter, with the Guardian's cables about her station, the cable Rubiyih sent us 'Loving Gratitude Lorol Clarence Yourself' which she sent us March 16th when Lorol was here, pg. 279 of P. and M. and Teaching report of Mrs. Maxwell of Baha'i News No. 48, Feb., 1932. At 8:00 P.M. Mr. Miguel Angel Canales, one of our students joined us and we held another meeting at the time specified in the N. S. A.'s letter. We read the N. S. A.'s letter again, 140, 343, 169-171 from Gleanings, and 254 from P. & M."

The first Baha'i baby born in South America, is Anthony Roy Worley, in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, March 29, 1940. The Chairman of the Inter-American Committee presented an engraved cup to our first pioneer baby.
Gerrard Sluter reports that there are twenty-one believers in Guatemala and he is now in San Salvador visiting Clarence and Johnny on his way to Honduras to take Antonio Roca’s place who has returned to the United States.

Mrs. Stewart is doing excellent work in Mexico City, first stop in her year’s teaching journey. She proceeds next to El Salvador.

Quite a part of a letter from John Eichener, Jr., “Another letter I received was from Dorothy Candels, a Bahá’í youth of London, England, secretary of the assembly, dated March 7th. I had told her of my activities here and she wrote of their work, especially in the north of England, and of the darkened streets, sandbagged buildings. Also, Antoinette Bolton, a Bahá’í youth of Sidney, Australia, whose parents I met last year at Geyserville, in a letter dated February 21st, wrote us of their summer school Jan. 6 to 21st. Sixty in attendance.

“In our activities here, Clarence and I have both done individual work as Lorol advised us to forget about the former group of persons whom I thought were really interested and work with the ones she met. Through one of these, Ana Rosa Ochoa, we met Mr. Francisco Gavi­na, a historian, other than the integration of men, after cruel wars, attired in long tunics with heads wrapped in turbans; neither is their Cause horrified to contemplate, from the height of a new ideal, the pestilential ruins of a corrupt civilization which went down before the assult of cannon and machine-gun.

From those horrors there will arise, according to the faith of the Bahá’ís, the new era of peace and fraternity, the principles of which are the breaths of life from the Holy Spirit that creates men anew.

If we do not believe in the (ultimate) realization of this noble cause inasmuch as it is far too noble for this epoch of cannibalism, we appreciate at least the sincerity and purity of the ideals sustaining these two youths of twenty years—which is, of itself, something rare at this hour when humanity suffers the reaction of all passions.

—By Ana Rosa Ochoa.

RACE UNITY

“Consent with all the people with love and fragrance. Fellowship is the source of order in the world. Blessed are they who are kind and serve with love.”

A small but important minority group to whom the Bahá’í Teachings will be spread in the future are the Eskimos, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has written, “Dispatch ye teachers to Greenland and the home of the Eskimos . . . fused among the Eskimos, its effect will be very great and far-reaching.”

How much do you know about the Eskimos? Here are a few facts to arouse your interest so that you will want to read further about these northern brethren of ours. There are estimated to be about 30,000 Eskimos in the world today. These Eskimos inhabit the Arctic regions extending from the Bering Straits over the northern coast of America and its groups of Arctic islands to the east coast of Greenland. Anthropologists do not agree as to the origin of the Eskimos, but the greater number today accept the view that the Eskimos are merely one kind of North American Indian, both in blood and language.

The living conditions of these people are very simple. Seal is their staple winter food and their most valuable resource supplying them with dog food, clothing, boats, tents, harpoon lines, light, and heat. The walrus, narwhal, whale, bear, and to a smaller extent the deer, fox, and hare, also afford important supplies. Thousands of birds are stored for winter use. In summer caribou are hunted, the skins of which furnish the clothing for the next winter.

Dwellings are of two kinds; tents for summer use and houses for winter use. The tents are made of sealskin. The igloos or winter houses are varied in structure among the different groups. Usually they are built of stems chinked and covered with moss and banked up with snow. Many of the western and Laborador Eskimos, however, build their houses chiefly of wood.

The Eskimo family sometimes consists of from 4 to 60 people. Voluntary members who are blind, crippled or ill are taken into the household. The head of the family is proud of these, for by supporting them he proves that he is a capable breadwinner. The Eskimos are known for their great generosity and hospitality. They are friendly to strangers. On the whole the Eskimos are a happy people who are naturally fond of song and music. We are told that they laugh as much in a month as ordinary civilized people do in a year.

In the societal life of the Eskimos public opinion is a strong force. There are no chiefs, soldiers, police or prisons, and there are practically only two punishments: the disapproval of the community and death.

If you will read any one of the following books, you will learn a great many more facts about the Eskimos told in a delightful fashion by these various authors:

Baha’i Children and The Calendar

Thank thou God that thou hast stepped into the arena of existence in such a blessed Age and hast opened ears and eyes in such a Day of Promise.”

—Baha’i Scripture, 850.

Let us look at the Baha’i Calendar in relation to our children. What significance does it have for them?

Before attempting to answer this question, we must first consider what is the child’s idea of time. A very young child has no time concept at all. Gradually he begins to learn through concrete experiences that the time of activity is called day-time and the time of inactivity (that is when he is asleep) is called night-time. Light and dark are not always associated with day and night for him. Frequently a small boy or girl upon awaking from an afternoon nap thinks that a new day has begun. All during the pre-school years there is much confusion in his understanding of this matter. Finally the day becomes associated with the light-giving sun (Why can’t we have the sun all the time? a small girl asks, concluding that then there would be only day and activity) and the night becomes associated with the darkness and also with the stars if the child’s attention is drawn to the contents of the night sky. But even after this simplest division of time is clarified for him, the pre-school child is still confused about yesterday; today and tomorrow. Remarks such as, “Mother brought me new shoes tomorrow,” (meaning yesterday) or “I will drink all my milk yesterday” (meaning tomorrow) are very common during this period. From a child’s point-of-view a minute is a very small amount of time; an hour a very great amount of time; while a day is endless.

When a child talks about time his concept is of something concrete exactly as though he were speaking of a piece of cake or an apple. A child once covered a sheet of paper with his scribblings and called it, “a piece of the day.” Children know that somehow clocks and watches are used for telling time but their concept is not that of a mature person. For example when Mary’s mother told her she might get up at three o’clock and showed Mary just where the two hands of the clock would be at that time, Mary age five, a few minutes later set the hands in that position and innocently insisted that it was three o’clock.

However the child whose day is well planned and run on schedule will understand the division of time more quickly than one whose day is irregularly spent. The same is true of the days in the week. After the hours, days and weeks are fairly well understood the child will then be ready to understand months and here is... where the Bahá’í Calendar can be introduced to advantage.

There are two special appeals that this calendar will make to the child if his parents will use them. One is the fact that a child likes to have names for every and anything. True the months of our current civil calendar do have names but they are not the attractive and understandable names such as the Bahá’í months have. Secondly, the child delights in celebrations. Each name on the Bahá’í Calendar such as Glory, Light, and Splendor and others suggest a celebration. Take for example, the month of Ráhmat (translated Mercy, though Kindness is more within the experience of the child); this month, the child or children in a Bahá’í family could celebrate by being especially kind to his family, his friends; pets; yes and even his garden (we remember that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá used to speak to the flowers) in so far that he will not neglect its care. Now he goes on to the month of Kalimat (words). This he will celebrate by giving especial attention to the words he uses. They will be kind, comforting and full of praise for others; and so on through the year.

Just as the child on a regular schedule, around the clock, through the day, develops into a stronger, sturdier child physically than one whose physical needs are not attended to, so will the child who goes through the year month by month practicing spiritual qualities as suggested by the Bahá’í Calendar grow stronger and firmer spiritually than a child who neglects this practice. A wise parent will help his children to recognize and to follow the Bahá’í months on through the Bahá’í year.

An additional advantage is the fact that the child will develop the habit of thinking in Bahá’í terms relative to time. There needs to exist no confusion between the Civil and the Bahá’í Calendars no more than a child’s language is handicapped if he learns another language as well as his own provided of course that he is well grounded in his own language before he is taught another. Similarly, when a child is capable of grasping the idea of a month he will have no difficulty in recognizing the difference between the two calendars.

It would be interesting to help him find his own birthday date on the Bahá’í Calendar or any other date that is especially interesting to him. The more he thinks in terms of the Bahá’í Calendar the more familiar he will become with it.

When the child has celebrated all the Bahá’í months at the end of the year and begins all over again he will better grasp the idea of a year and its possibilities. Then as the years go by he will be prepared to think in terms of cycles and particularly spiritual cycles. Great then will be his appreciation of the fact that he is living in the Greatest Spiritual Cycle of all time.

“This is a new cycle of human power—The gift of God to this enlightened age is the knowledge of the oneness of mankind and of the fundamental oneness of religion. War shall cease between nations and by the will of God the Most Great Peace shall come; the world will be seen as a new world, and all men will live as brothers.”—(‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Bahá’í Scriptures, page 273.)

BAHÁ’Í NEWS

Nineteen Day Feasts: July 13, August 1, August 20.

Meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly: July 2, 3, 4, at 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette; August 17, 18, 19, at Green Acre, Eliot, Maine.

Bahá’í Schools: Green Acre, weekly courses, July 1 to August 31; Geyserville, July 7 to 28; Louheilen, Laboratory session, July 3 to 12; General session, August 11 to 18; Second Youth session, August 21 to 25.

TEACHING PRINCIPLE APPLIED TO WRITTEN WORD

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to point out to the believers that the principle under which the teaching work is conducted as a spiritual obligation and not for financial return applies to that type of teaching work done through writing as well as that which is carried on through classes and lectures. Particularly in the case of Bahá’í compilations, graded lessons and study courses or outlines, the Assembly feels that the important principle concerning the basis of Bahá’í teaching laid down by the Guardian a few years ago should now be generally adopted throughout the Bahá’í community. Written and printed teaching, therefore, is not to be sold under conditions providing financial return to the author or compiler. This type of study material, when approved by the Reviewing Committee and recommended for publication, should be regarded as the author’s donation to the progress of the teaching work, a service performed in the spirit of devotion to the Faith. No doubt there will be great spiritual reward for those who make such contributions as their sacrifice for the Cause.

BAHÁ’Í NEWS GIVEN TO ENROLLED YOUTH

The National Assembly wishes all duly enrolled Bahá’í youth hereafter to receive copies of Bahá’í News, through their local Assembly, if they reside in an organized community, through their group correspondent, or as isolated believers direct from the National Secretariat. Assemblies and groups are requested to see that their youth members (between fifteen and twenty-one) receive copies regularly. If this calls for additional copies to be sent to the Assembly or group, the National Assembly should be informed as soon as possible.

The cooperation of the National Youth Committee is also requested in order that all isolated enrolled youth may be provided with copies, which means that a complete list of names and addresses must first be made.
ASSEMBLIES REQUIRING SPECIAL TEACHING ASSISTANCE

Any local Assembly whose community membership falls below the minimum of nine believers required to maintain the Assembly status, and any Assembly which feels that there is danger that the number will drop to less than nine, are requested to notify the National Spiritual Assembly at once, so that effective teaching work can be arranged in order to increase the local membership.

The July issue of World Order Magazine contains as special feature some excerpts from the Guardian's translation of Epistle to the Son of the Wolf. This passage is published under the title "With the Waters of Detachment."

The July issue also contains: "The Human Soul in This World of Chaos," Alice Simmons Cox; "The Fortified City," William Kenneth Christian; Bahá'í Answers to World Questions; "What Is Secure?" TEACHING AT THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP

During May, 1940, 1,581 persons visited the Temple and were guided through the edifice. This brings the total of visitors since January 1, 1940, to 3,648. In May, 1939, the visitors were less than 1940 by 308.

Some of those who came this May were from Chile, Poland and India. The Bahá'í Temple is becoming a world institution.

A large number of clubs and organizations brought their membership to the Temple:

NEWS OF EAST AND WEST

The Library Committee has received from Mrs. Shirley Warde a very appreciate letter written by the Secretary of the Library Board of Burbank, Calif.

"The Burbank Library Board wishes to thank you and your organization for the four lovely Bahá'í books recently received. These are the first books of this kind that we have received and they are a distinct addition to our library of which we are so proud."

The Twenty-Eighth Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Unity Feast at West Englewood was held Saturday afternoon and evening, June 29. The program as announced consisted of a concert from two to three P.M., address on The Oneness of Humanity by Annamarie Hannon and on Universal Peace by Harlan Ober, Roy C. Wilhelm presiding. A special Pan-American program followed. At the pine grove where the original Feast was held a period of prayers and meditations was conducted by Bernard B. Gottlieb. The evening session was devoted to informal talks. Word has been received that Mme. Laura Dreyfus-Barney, recently arrived from Paris, was among the distinguished Bahá'í guests present from other countries.

The most recent News Letter (April, 1940) received from the Haifa Assembly states that "It is our privilege to convey to you the glad tidings that our beloved Guardian is in the best of health. We are certain that this good news will always gladden the hearts of the believers throughout the world."

Copies of the photograph record of Martha Root's message of farewell to the believers of Auckland, N. Z. This recording was made at the request of the local Assembly, which has very kindly made arrangements to furnish copies for fifteen shillings sixpence, postage additional, in New Zealand currency. Send orders to Miss Margaret B. Stevenson, Secretary, 3 Cowie Road, Parnall, Auckland, S. E. 1, New Zealand.

Postcard size illustrations of the Bahá’í Exhibit at the Golden Gate World’s Fair, San Francisco, can be obtained from the Photograph and Sales Committee, H. E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago.

Copies of The Rangoon Times have been received containing reproductions of extensive Bahá’í articles filling several columns of this paper. One is entitled “New Faith for Old,” by Shirin Fozdar; another, “The New World Order,” by Ormsby Molliss.

In these days the receipt of bulletins and news letters from the believers of other countries is a twofold blessing. The American friends can well appreciate the difficulties under which most National and local Assemblies throughout the Bahá’í world are obliged to maintain their activities, the slowness of communication, the increased economic pressure and also the element of supervision and censorship imposed in so many places during the war period. But the spirit of oneness within the Bahá’í community will resist these divisive influences and eventually overcome them and replace them with cooperation and harmony.

Among the news letters recently received are: Bahá’í News of the National Spiritual Assembly of Egypt and Sudan, March-April, 1940; Bahá’í News Letter, National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma, March, 1940; The New World Order, public teaching bulletin of the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles; Bahá’í Magazine, Herald of the South, published quarterly by the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia and New Zealand; Bahá’í Quarterly, also issued by the NSA of Australia and N. Z.; Bahá’í News Letter, December, 1939, published by the National Spiritual Assembly of Iraq; and Bahá’í Journal, the organ of the NSA of the British Isles, issue of April, 1940.

From Egypt we call the following notes:

Bahá’í books and documents brought from Palestine by one of the believers were seized in customs on charge of political character and sent to El Azhar University for examination. At the University it was decided to destroy the literature. The NSA then made formal protest to the Prime Minister and the local authorities. The books were then returned to the Customs department. The matter is still in process of final settlement. A plot of land will be purchased in an important quarter of Cairo for the construction of a Hazíratu’l-Quds. The NSA used the copies of The Bahá’í World received as a gift from Siegfried Schöpflecher for distribution to leaders of the Egyptian government, to the various consultants, and to the British Embassy.

From India and Burma:

A six-year teaching plan has been adopted which the Guardian emphasizes strongly. Among the current teaching activities we note that the Bombay Assembly has held an important public meeting in the Municipal Hall, Kalyan, presided over by Mr. Ganesh Krishna Phadke, member of the Legislative Assembly, and the speakers listed were H. M. Manji, N. K. Bhagwant, M. H. Ilmi, and Mrs. Shirin Fozdar. Prof. Pritam Singh was invited to attend the Jubilee Celebrations of the Quadian Movement and found opportunity to give the Bahá’í message to many. He was accompanied by Maulvi Abdallah Vakil, who also taught actively. Prof. Singh has addressed the Multan Government College on the subject of Religion and Youth. At Lahore, many Hindu friends are becoming interested. The International Bahá’í Youth Day was observed in many cities of India, notably Karachi and Bombay. At Kadvai, a small town near Bombay, the believers are undergoing persecution. After two weeks of public agitation the Bahá’ís are being boycotted by the other residents. The difficulty seems to arise from the fact that some believers have been Muslim priests who now realize the significance of the administrative order. Copies of a Bahá'í calendar can be obtained for one anna each, postage additional, from National-Book- Stall, Deepchand Ohja Road, Bunder Road Extension, Karachi, India.

From a letter received by the NSA of Iraq from the Guardian: "The Guardian expressed utmost gladness and delight over the glad tidings of the completion of the Haziratu'l-Quds ... and said, 'The region of Iraq will be an arena where lights will shine, and the first connecting link between Iran, which is the cradle of the Faith, and the Holy Land, the Point of Adoration of the people of Bahá'. This momentous institution, therefore, is to be regarded as the first of the great preliminaries and glorious institutions which will be established in that blessed land, culminating in the recovery of the House of God, the hoisting of the Banner of His Faith, and the proclamation of His Dispensation in that region."

From Australia and New Zealand:

Deep consideration is being given The Advent of Divine Justice. A very moving In Memoriam notice of Martha L. Roo has been published. The Guardian's letter of instruction to the NSA of the British Isles (published in a recent issue of Bahá'í News) has been adopted with the request it be observed by the believers of Australia and New Zealand. Appreciation is expressed for the gift of copies of The Bahá'í World made by Mr. Schopflocher. The subscription of Herald of the South is five shillings per year. Address: Secretary, Herald of the South, P. O. Box 447D, Adelaide, South Australia. The Bahá'í Summer School at Yerrinbool, New South Wales, was in session from January 6 to 20, but no report concerning it has yet been received.

From the British Isles:

The National Assembly has issued the following instruction: "During these days of turmoil there are many conflicting influences at work. Many new societies and movements, some harmless and some, under the guise of humanitarian or religious purposes, actively seditious, are coming to birth. It is the sacred duty of all followers of Bahá'u'lláh to remain aloof from all such movements, to withhold themselves from political entanglements, and to engage, with single minds and high resolve, in the dissemination of the 'divine fragrances.' While contempt 'with all people with joy and fragrance' they should be on their guard lest they be led, however unintentionally, to compromise the Faith. In all cases of doubt, the friends should consult their local Spiritual Assembly of the National Spiritual Assembly." In a letter from the Guardian to an English believer, the following excerpt was published by the National Assembly of that land. "The latest news he has received from the British NSA regarding the general conditions of the Cause in England, and in particular with reference to the extension of the Teaching work has been most exhilarating, and he indeed will pray that whatever hardships and privations which our dear English believers may come to endure in the course of this war, their vision of their high and essential duties and responsibilities towards the Faith, and their zeal to further extend and consolidate its interests, may increasingly deepen, and thereby enable them to fitly acquire themselves of their high task."

"WHILE THERE IS YET TIME"

"The American believers, standing on the threshold of the fourth year of the Seven Year Plan, pursue their God-given task with a radiance that no earthly gloom can dim, and will continue to shoulder its ever-growing duties and responsibilities with a vigor and loyalty that no earthly power can either sap or diminish. With these words, our beloved Guardian, in his letter of April 15, 1940, blazes the trail that the American believers are to follow in the prosecution of the Seven Year Plan in the days to come. In a world filled with travail and terror, amid political, economic and social convulsions of increasing intensity and extent, the path will not be easy nor the way plain. As our Guardian has intimated in recent letters, communication with our World Center may be cut off in the near future by the spread of the war to the Mediterranean area. VITAL REQUIREMENTS OF SUPREMLY CHALLENGING HOUR

(The) long-predicted world-encircling conflagration, essential pre-requisites (to) world unification, (is) inexorably moving (to its) appointed climax. LETTER FROM THE GUARDIAN

In connection with the selection of particular photographs of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for circulation among the friends, the Guardian strongly feels that no definite ruling should be laid down establishing the superiority or distinction of any particular photograph. The friends should be left quite free to use their individual independent judgment in this matter.

The Guardian does not advise your Assembly to authorize for the present the use of Bahá’í historical material in the radio program . . . nor does he think the time is ripe to translate and publish Bahá’í certificates of marriage and divorce. He prefers to wait until a sufficient number of Assemblies have been empowered to conduct legally these Bahá’í rites. When the time comes he will formulate the proper form of certificate for universal adoption by the American believers.

In connection with the formation of new Assemblies and the maintenance of their Assembly status, the Guardian wishes to reaffirm the general principle that only those who reside within the city limits of any given locality have the right to either vote or be elected as member of the Assembly, even though this may involve frequent dissolution of the Assembly owing to insufficient number of members. It will, on the other hand, serve as a stimulus to those outside these limits to establish a group and eventually an Assembly of their own.

Regarding the age of fifteen fixed by Baha’u’llah: this relates only to purely spiritual functions and obligations and is not related to the degree of administrative capacity and fitness which is a totally different thing, and is, for the present, fixed at twenty-one.

Regarding Naw-Ruz: if the vernal equinox falls on the 21st of March before sunset, it is celebrated on that day. If at any time after sunset, Naw-Ruz will then, as stated by Baha’u’llah, fall on the 22nd. As to which spot should be regarded as the standard, this is a matter which the Universal House of Justice will have to decide.

The American N.S.A. need not therefore take any action in this matter at present.

Haifa, May 15, 1940.

INFORMATION NEEDED

The Guardian has requested the National Spiritual Assembly to send him the original of the Tablet from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá published in Vol. I, pages 106–108 of the Tablets.

From the Archives Committee we learn that this Tablet, on the subject of the Mother of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, was revealed to Mr. Hans Christian Anderson, then of Racine, and the copy of the translation on file bears the notation: “Received from
Beloved Friends:

The followers of Bahá'u'lláh have been given the privilege which, as the Master Himself declared, was the highest aspiration of the great souls of past times. Bahá'ís alone can understand the unfoldment of world events in accordance with a schedule and a consummation laid down by the Divine power and beyond the control of any earthly force. Bahá'ís alone can make a direct spiritual contribution to the new World Order which inwardly is the oneness of man and outwardly is a scheme of institutions and relationships consecrated to the Most Great Peace.

As we know from the statement made in The Goal of a New World Order, the beginnings of peace will have been achieved by 1963. By that date the Lesser Peace will have been established. After that date, the hosts of Bahá'u'lláh will augment their mighty task of spiritual education until the whole earth is confirmed and the Most Great Peace realized.

In contrast to the present world outlook, such a consummation appears utterly impossible. Today violence rides the tempest and destruction hurts its fires from the clouds.

The supreme issue between faith in Bahá'u'lláh and theological belief or scientific conviction is that faith receives awareness of the Power behind all human events and transcending all human knowledge. The Bahá'ís accept revealed Truth as a mighty task of spiritual education until the whole earth is confirmed and the Most Great Peace realized.

In the present world outlook, such a consummation appears utterly impossible. Today violence rides the tempest and destruction hurts its fires from the clouds.

Thus the Bahá'ís feel secure and safe within the very whirlwind of violent struggle and change. He knows that the Plan will prevail, and that individuals, nations, races and classes cannot prevent, prevent nor exploit the Justice which Bahá'u'lláh has brought down from the Mountain of God. There is a limit placed upon evil and violence beyond which they cannot go. When the world has been purified for Truth, the denier's sword will be broken and the schemes of the materialists brought to naught. The only liberty man has today is to choose whether he shall give his life to the destructive or to the constructive phase of the same Divine Plan. It is illusion to think that there can be any liberty asserted outside the dominion of His Will.

But to contribute our lives to the constructive phase of world transformation demands more than the passive reading of Sacred Writings or the mere acknowledgment that certain principles, like the continuity of Revelation, are true. We must be so transmuted by the Power itself that our lives are in spiritual movement and convey the ardor and the light of Truth.

Then will more and more believers arise and join the ranks of the Bahá'ís as they witness the effects of Bahá'u'lláh's Revelation on the flow of His followers. For the world is confused, weary and sick to death of words. Its healing depends upon a release of spiritual energies more potent than any other force encountered on earth. Are not many of the Guardian's recent appeals directed to this point: that we deepen our spiritual lives, until Bahá'u'lláh can use us as instruments to impress His Will upon the whole world?

A PLEA FOR PERMANENT LOCAL ADDRESS

Many years ago the National Spiritual Assembly requested the local Assemblies, whenever possible, to establish a permanent address for correspondence, that changes in the office of Secretary or the address of the Secretary, might not interfere with the working of the organization. Bulletin and Bahá'í News from the National body to the local Assembly and community.

In response to this request, a few Assemblies have taken a Post Office Box address for correspondence, and in other cases a local Bahá'í Center maintained year after year has provided the necessary continuity and permanence. However, with the great growth of Assemblies to the number of one hundred and two, the need for efficiency becomes urgent.

The plea is therefore renewed, that local Assemblies consult at their earliest opportunity on this question, and take some action toward securing a more or less permanent address for correspondence. Counting changes of address of Secretaries, and changes in the office of Secretary, the National Spiritual Assembly is obliged to take account of, and duly report, as many as twenty corrections in the Assembly Roll each year.

Not only will a permanent address make it possible for the National Assem-
The standard letterhead size of 8 1/2 by 11 inches is best for official correspondence, and should not be exceeded. Letters from individuals need not conform to the business standard. The purpose of these suggestions is twofold: to make for greater clarity and convenience in handling current correspondence, and for greater efficiency in filing. Sometimes it is necessary to consult a letter written many years ago.

In Memoriam

Grant, O my Lord, that they who have ascended unto Thee may repair unto Him Who is the most exalted Companion, and abide beneath the shadow of the Tabernacle of Thy majesty and the Sanctuary of Thy glory. Sprinkle, O my Lord, upon them from the ocean of Thy forgiveness what will make them worthy to abide, so long as Thine own sovereignty endureth, within Thine most exalted kingdom and Thine all-highest dominion. Potent art Thou to do what pleaseth Thee. — Bahá’u’lláh.

The Importance of the Spiritual Assembly

Among the qualifications of faith accepted by every Bahá’í is “Full recognition of the station of the Forerunner, the Author, and the True Exemplar of the Bahá’í Cause,” but how many of us can actually claim full recognition? Would we not be blinded by a Light more brilliant than any sun if we gazed directly at it rather than saw it by reflection?

One of the signs of Revelation is the power to change the prevailing society. This sign is of surpassing importance today, when the whole chain of Revelation is to be consummated by the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

Let us think of the institution of the local Spiritual Assembly as a pillar of the world civilization of the future — as Bahá’u’lláh’s own instrument for bringing in the new qualities and the new capacities which mankind needs in order to live in a condition of peace. Bahá’í institutions are identified with justice, and to reflect that quality the members of the Assembly must realize that a Bahá’í institution progresses by the sacrifice of its members’ personal interests and opinions.

With one hundred and two local Assemblies existing in North America at present, there are nine hundred and eighteen souls called upon to be an active and responsible part of the structure of the Faith. The development, the capacity and the consecration of this great body of administrators is of vital importance to the welfare of the Cause. These believers are, first of all, responsible for knowing the Bahá’í teachings concerning the origin, nature and functions of a local Spiritual Assembly.

“In the Most Holy Book is revealed:

The Lord hath ordained that in every city a House of Justice be established wherein shall gather counsellors to the number of Bahá, and should it exceed this number it does not matter. It behooveth them to be the trusted ones of the Merciful among men and to regard themselves as the guardians appointed of God for all that dwell on earth. It is incumbent upon them to take counsel together and to have regard for the interests of the servants of God, for His sake, even as they regard their own interests, and to choose that which is meet and seemly. Thus hath the Lord your God commanded you. Beware lest ye cut away that which is clearly revealed in His Tablet. Fear God, O ye that perceive.

Furthermore, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá reveals the following: It is incumbent upon every one not to take any step without consulting the Spiritual Assembly, and they must assuredly obey with heart and soul its bidding and be submissive unto it, that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Otherwise every person will act independently and after his own judgment, will follow his own desire, and do harm to the Cause.

“The prime requisites for them that take counsel together are purity of motive, radiance of spirit, detachment from all else save God, attraction to His Divine Fragrances, humility and lowliness amongst His loved ones, patience and long-suffering in difficulties and servitude to His exalted Threshold. Should they be graciously aided to acquire these attributes, victory from the unseen Kingdom of Bahá'í shall be vouchsafed to them. In this day, assemblies of consultation are of the greatest importance and a vital necessity. Obedience unto them is essential and obligatory. . . ." (Bahá'í Administration, p. 21.)

Before we consider the duties and functions of an Assembly, it is imperative that we immerse ourselves in the spirit of these words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, which the Guardian brought to our attention in one of his earliest communications. It is the "victory from the unseen Kingdom" for which every local Assembly must pray unceasingly these days.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Beloved Friends:

Could the words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá carry more weight than at this present hour: "... This world-consuming war has set such a conflagration to the hearts that no word can describe it. In all the countries of the world the longing for Universal Peace is taking possession of the consciousness of men. There is not a soul who does not yearn for concord and peace. A most wonderful state of receptivity is being realized. This is through the consummate wisdom of God, so that capacity may be created, the standard of the oneness of the world of humanity be upraised, and the fundamentals of Universal Peace and the divine principles be promoted in the East and the West."

Our Canadian pioneers, undaunted by war conditions and "the deepening pessimism and preoccupation with day-to-day events," are strengthening the Faith throughout the Prairie Provinces. On April 2nd a conference was held in Calgary by Doris Skinner, Katherine Moscrop, and Mrs. Pine. The last-named, a resident of Vermilion, had seen no Bahá'ís for ten years; through this stimulation she is now actively spreading the Faith and has placed books in the public library. Doris Skinner has been invited to speak to a new group in Vulcan, and in Edmonton she has another excellent contact. Meanwhile, Mrs. Moscrop proceeded to Regina for a stay of two months; in May she held her first fireside of ten persons, and at least five other meetings are planned. She has also been asked to introduce the Faith.

Rowland Estall has summarized his year's work in Winnipeg, through which over 300 people in 9 public meetings (including clubs and churches) heard a comprehensive introduction to the Teachings, some 10 firesides were held, a study group met for several months, and one believer enrolled. Commenting on a comparison of work achieved in an organized Bahá'í community with his progress in Winnipeg, Mr. Estall writes: "I begin to think that I must have been asleep before, and that probably most believers in the Community (and perhaps in most other Communities) were too . . ."

In British Columbia, Austin Collin is pioneering in Vernon and Penticton, while the Armstrong group meets weekly.

TEACHING ACTIVITIES IN NORTH AMERICA

Glowing reports of Toronto have come from Doris McKay, who spent ten days in May in that city and Hamilton. "I have never known such a high degree of receptivity as that community is showing forth. I feel they have a great destiny . . ." Thirteen meetings were held in the two localities, and in Toronto almost fifty new people were met in fireside, youth, and public meetings. Hamilton has invited Mrs. McKay to return as often as possible, to strengthen the work of our new Assembly.

Further north Honor Kempton, through an accident in which her ankle was broken, has discovered what "grand people there are in Anchorage." She is now up and making splendid progress in widening her contacts. A minister has begun active opposition. "I am definitely marked in town and I am glad of it. The time has come, I feel, for me to take my stand for the Bahá'ís. For some time especially in these difficult and stormy times. Nothing can hurt me and no matter how they try to hurt the Book Cache, it will only serve to deepen my own experience of the confirmations from unseen sources." Miss Kempton has referred many Alaskans, traveling Outside, to Bahá'ís in various cities.

Betty Becker moved to Sitka in February, leaving five or six persons in Juneau deeply interested in the Faith, with some fifty others informed of it. She is now holding firesides in this new area, and has the cooperation of the local editor to publish articles when "we feel the time is appropriate."

Moving to the South, we note many encouraging reports. In New Orleans about eleven are attending the Friday night meetings of Fred Babo and Dorothy Logan; recently all drove to Covington for a meeting at Marion Little's, "the largest single meeting of people interested, almost to the point of declaration, held in this section . . . At last the thick ice of indifference is cracking and melting perceptively toward the Cause. A new believer, Rex Naugle, Jr., is radio's Vagabond Poet. An isolated believer of Greenwood, Miss., Mrs. Evelyn Bivins, was able as delegate to the Mississippi Congress of Parents and Teachers to bring the Bahá'í program before the conference as the blueprint for world society. She is now planning a radio series as "an introduction to the Cause" to succeed her program, Parent's Forum."

In February Allen McDaniel visited West Virginia, where he addressed the West Virginia Society of Professional Engineers in Charleston, and later spoke to a local chapter of this organization in Huntington. About eighty men in Charleston heard his Temple talk with slides. Public meetings were also held in both cities with fine publicity. In May Mason Reney did fruitful work in public presentations of the Faith in the two cities, also making interesting contacts. Our pioneers, Harold Hunt and the Dahl, are "encouraged and making progress." Exhibits of the Temple model are now planned, and speaking dates for the coming year with the Charleston West Side Women's Club have been obtained for Mr. Cobb, Mr. McDaniel, and Mr. Dahl.

Charles Mason Reney recently completed a tour by trailer coach of the Southern States, during which stops for meetings and contacts were made in Augusta, Ga.; Charleston, S. C.; Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Daytona, Palm Beach, Miami, Orlando, and Pine Castle, Florida; Atlanta, Ga., Knoxville and Nashville, Tenn.; Indianapolis; Huntington and Charleston, W. Va. Among his interesting comments are the following from Nashville: "There is a very beautiful and fine Assembly there well supported by superior types of both the colored and white races. During the four days I was in Nashville there were two meetings in the homes of believers, one large meeting in the chapel of Fisk University and another in the industrial and Agriculture College for the colored . . . with about 1,100 students and faculty . . . I also met Prof. Bromfield's class in the study of religion at Fisk University . . . and talked with Dr. Jones, President of the University . . ."

Olivia Kelsey has moved to Louisville, where a program on May 23rd was attended by twelve, including a Swedensborgian minister. A local reporter has prepared an article on the Faith for the Sunday Magazine section.

Three public meetings were arranged in Daytona, Florida, in March and April by Winifred Richards and Mrs. Guy, who plan to continue the plan weekly. They have also placed books in public libraries of Daytona, Daytona Beach, and Ormond. In West Palm Beach a Miami believer, Miss Esther Webster, is now living and with Nellie Hope Lloyd is conducting weekly classes. Hollywood (Fla.) has become a center for contacts with individuals from all parts of the country, through Mrs. Bodmer who resides permaently at the Hollywood Beach Trailer Park. Two colored friends have accepted the Cause in Columbia, S. C. and have begun a children's group, according to Mrs. Mickle who will return there in the Fall. In Hot Springs, Ark., the first believer of that state, Miss Roberta Wilson, has registered through Rezsi Sunshine.

We have received the story of Salt Lake City's winning in one brief year through the solid and faithful efforts of our pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. William Sears, and a whirlwind campaign for Mrs. Ruth Moffett, with support of Mr. Reimer. From Feb. 18th to March 28th fifty-seven public lectures were given by Mrs. Moffett at the Hotel Newhouse, with a total attendance of almost a thousand. The Temple model was displayed at the Hotel during this entire period, remarkable radio advertising was procured by Mr. Sears without cost, over a thousand books and pamphlets were distributed, and seven lectures on the Faith for clubs and radio were arranged. The result was a study class of twenty-five which met three weekly, until enough students had enrolled to organize a Local Spiritual Assembly. This class, a fireside, and a youth group are carrying on.

Two new Bahá'ís have registered in Fargo, N. D., through the efforts of Marguerite Breugger and Charlotte Wright, who arranged weekly classes throughout the winter. About fifty persons have learned of the Cause and many are reading. "I have spoken at the Unity Center here many times at the request of their leader," writes Mrs. Breugger; she has also been invited to address a Lodge. This summer the Faith will be introduced to Columbus, Mont., by Mrs. Wright. Meanwhile in Bismarck, a Bahá'í library has been maintained by a new believer, and three have accepted the Cause, according to Mrs. Breugger.

Lorrol Jackson has forwarded the registration of Mrs. Joan Palmer of Butte, Mont., and tells of a youth group and children's class just started by Irene and Eveline Caldwell, the latter only fifteen years old. Mrs. Helen Wilkes of Seattle stopped en route from Convention, giving splendid help. The Temple exhibit at the Butte Art Center earlier in the spring was a great success, and the director commented "that groups are coming in from the little towns around just to see the Temple." Publicity was sent out to some 75 newspapers in the State.

Marvin Newport, on leaving Cedar Rapids in April, had enrolled two believers and attracted some nineteen students; he will remain in a few weeks. During his six-months' teaching effort, 26 classes were held with an average attendance of eight, 17 civic and religious groups were addressed, and over 300 persons read Bahá'í literature. Mr. Newport won the friendship of one minister, was publicly attacked by another.

Gertrude Struven is also teaching in Iowa, having visited Davenport, Moline and Rock Island, Ill., five times last winter. "A very good group, quite promising," of about twelve students has developed, with the active aid of a young Australian Bahá'í, Jim Heggie, now studying at the Palmer School.

Ruth Moffett has forwarded the enrollment of Mrs. Helen McLaughlin of Independence, Iowa, thereby increasing the number of believers to six. Registrations have also come from Mr. and Mrs. George Worthington, members of a class started in Fort Wayne, Ind., by Mrs. Moffett. During the past year this energetic teacher conducted 265 Bahá'í lectures and classes in twenty cities of six States, addressed 19 non-Bahá'í organizations and gave two radio talks. She was able to start three Bahá'í groups in Iowa and contribute remarkably in Salt Lake City.

Thrilling news from the McNallys of Providence, R. I., is the registration of Angela Morgan, American poetess and author of those lines so well-known to Bahá'ís—"To be alive in such an age..." A conference of New England Bahá'ís was held in Providence on March 31st, which included the first public presentation of the Faith in that city.

Since Convention the activities of the Milwaukee Assembly in "pioneering at home" and planning a "Fireside Night" have passed into Bahá'í history. So successful was the scheme whereby every believer held a fireside on the same night, that the Convention recommended similar action for the entire country.

The annual report of the New York City Assembly is a fascinating portrayal of the program which a large community may sponsor. Its Bahá'í Center is always busy: weekly public lectures attracting 150 people; a teacher's class; prayers daily at noon; discussion groups; a children's class based on Bahá'í lessons, handicrafts and entertainments; special public meetings arranged on Inter-Racial Unity, presenting Bahá'í speakers coupled with such personalities as Lyman Beecher Stonew, Roy Wilkins, editor of "Crisis," Joel Rogers, negro historian, and Bruce Wendell, negro pianist; Esperanto classes (the Lidja Zamenhof Studrondo); and National Nights for Latin Americans arranged by the Unity Committee.

This last-named Committee consists of twelve members representing every minority element of the community. Deciding to concentrate on Latin American work, the members arranged monthly programs including these features: "a speaker of the country chosen who would command attention and respect among his countrymen residing in New York," "an exhibition of typical paintings and drawings portraying the contemporary art life and feeling," a travel film, music "in song and dance form," "some light refreshment typical of the country," a Bahá'í chairman to make a brief statement of the Faith. "These meetings have been brilliant successes, the Hall filled to capacity, over 50 per cent of the au-

URGENT CALL FOR INTER-AMERICA PIONEERS

The virgin field of Latin America is calling. The time has come, and the need of Pioneers for this field is uppermost. The vibrant call given in "The Advent of Divine Justice" is ringing through the Bahá’í world. Every Bahá’í that hears it, answers, deep in his heart: "Here am I, Here am I," and many, overlooking everything, try to put this answer into practice.

It is because of this fervent response that the Inter-America Committee feels it must point out a few of the conditions that should be considered by those preparing themselves for this important work.

Besides the obvious need of deep understanding of the Bahá’í teachings and knowledge of the Spanish language, the pioneer must be able to present our glorious Faith with utmost tact, keeping always in mind that Bahá’ís do not mix in politics and being careful not to antagonize the ruling classes, for this might close doors before any effective work is done.

Pioneers should study carefully the fundamentals of the Catholic and Protestant Churches to be able to present the Bahá’í teachings as the glorious culmination of the teachings of Christ, as well as of the teachings of all the other Manifestations of God, and to answer clearly and convincingly any questions made by the Catholics and Protestants that form the majority of the inhabitants of the Latin American Countries.

The pioneers should also be prepared to overcome by their universal love, unselfishness and the complete absence of national, racial and social prejudices the rather unfavorable impression given by some investing companies, business men, tourists and even some of the missionaries sent from this country to Latin America.

The Inter-America Committee will gladly help, with all the information at its disposal, any inquirer intending to volunteer for this most important pioneer work. The Inter-America Committee numbers among its members Mr. Octavio Illescas, who is a native of Mexico and a graduate of the University of Minnesota and therefore well qualified to offer the most valuable advice to those contemplating service in this glorious field. Besides Mr. Illescas there are several who have visited South America and Mexico and the West Indies and Pioneers are urged to communicate with the committee for all particulars. Correspondence until further notice should be addressed to the chairman, Mrs. S. W. French, at 786 Chester Ave., San Marino, California.

INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

RACE UNITY

Bahá’í communities everywhere, in accordance with the Guardian’s wishes about minorities as given us in the Advent of Divine Justice, are attempting to spread the Bahá’í Faith to minority groups living in their vicinity. Recently we have learned of the acceptance of two members of the Indian race by the Milwaukee Assembly. On May 7th the Milwaukee Bahá’í Assembly sent the following message to the Guardian: "Admitted today full-blooded Ojeda Indians man woman and American wife Fired to spread cause Indians pray success." Shoghi Effendi replied as follows: "Assure Welcome Delighted Praying Increasing Success." This is a thrilling piece of news for all of us, for we recall ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s words in the Tablets of the Divine Plan: “You must attach great importance to the Indians, the original inhabitants of America. For these souls may be likened unto the ancient inhabitants of the Arabian Peninsula, who, prior to the Revelation of Muhammad, were like savages. When the Muhammadan Light shone forth in their midst, they became so enkindled that they shed illumination upon the world. Likewise, should these Indians be educated and properly guided, there can be no doubt that through the Divine teachings they will become so enlightened that the whole earth will be illumined." In other parts of our country, in Los Angeles, Albuquerque, Phoenix, and Chicago, contacts are being made with the Indian groups. We have learned recently that the Blackfeet Indians in Montana have been presented seven Bahá’í books for their library at Browning, Montana. A letter welcoming these Bahá’í books has been received from the Blackfeet Indian Agency.

Many Bahá’í Assemblies have conducted interesting race unity programs this winter. In Pasadena, California, "Interracial Panel Chats" were conducted once a month at the Bahá’í Center. Mr. Ellison writes: 'The term 'Panel Chat' is used instead of discussion group in order to avoid lengthy dissertations which might cause misunderstanding. Since interracial groups, Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís, participate, everything is done to keep a spirit of amity. The purposes of the meetings are to bring about Race Unity, to acquaint new people with the Cause, to bring to the attention of the Bahá’ís those people in the fields of Science, Medicine, Social Welfare, Education, Recreation, Engineering, Industry, Cultural and Vocational pursuits—who are more or less fulfilling the practical application of the prophecies of the Teachings in their daily work."

Peoria, Illinois, reports a race unity banquet held January 25 in a large dining room of the Peoria Women’s Club. There were about 100 people present including many representatives of various races and nationalities. The program was as follows:

Chairman, Alice S. Cox
Vocal Solos—Mrs. Esther Bush
Deep River Harry T. Burlage
Steal Away Will M. Ramsey
Address—Foundations of Human Oneness Mrs. Dorothy Baker
Vocal Solos—Mrs. Leila Antonson
Cielito Llano Arr. by L. Nuño
La Golondrina Arr. by J. Rosamunde Johnson
Noche de Ronda Maria Teresa Lara
(Maria was introduced by Damar Is Hernandez, Mexican artist who teaches at Bradley College.)
Address—Adventuring in Race Unity
Mr. Louis Gregory
Community Song America

We are reprinting this here because it may offer helpful ideas to other Bahá’í communities who may wish to conduct similar meetings. Peoria writes that the dinner has brought them remarkable results. One confirmation came about

Brooklyn, and some fifteen firesides throughout the City. The Assembly also maintained the Bahá’í Booth at the World’s Fair. This is by no means a complete record; in every field the New York believers were extraordinarily active, and have set a high standard for Bahá’í teaching in this country.

We long to share every item of news from our co-workers; yet the fact that the deeds of the American believers have at last outstripped the limits of our space is surely a thrilling sign. For "These souls are the armies of God and the conquerors of the East and the West!"

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE.

dience being of the Latin American country presented. . . We strongly urge other communities with large foreign elements to attempt these programs as part of their teaching work . . ." New York reminds us, however, that such plans require careful groundwork, while contacts should be made only by "members who are skilled in dealing with delicate situations calling for tact and instant discrimination."

Charged with Regional responsibility for Long Island and Westchester, New York reports three Groups functioning in New Rochelle, Larchmont, and Armonk. There are also public meetings in through this gathering. The Bahá'í community as a whole developed a new fire of enthusiasm and a clearer understanding of the importance of human oneness. Mrs. Cox writes: "The effect of the effort on the race unity committee was most remarkable. In practical experience and in experience in working together the committee did not begin the project with many advantages. Enthusiasm gave birth to great effort, however, and the very consciousness of lack of ability made it necessary to turn to Bahá'u'lláh with trust and confidence. Fine consultation and cooperation within the committee, and with other members of the community, close contact with the Assembly, too, grew out of this situation. Apparently there were some wasted steps, many persons had to be invited before a few could be found who cared to attend, etc.—but the result of application of ardor, prayer and coordinated effort was proof that the aid of Bahá'u'lláh comes to those who work in His Light."

Miami, Florida, has recently established a race unity committee. Chicago again held a very successful race amity banquet this spring. New Haven, Conn., has been contacting the Negro race by visiting about fifty homes during the winter and giving the Message personally to the occupants of these homes. The Race Unity Committee would like to hear what your community is doing. Have you perhaps new methods or techniques to suggest by which minority groups may be reached? Please write us of your activities so that we may share your experiences and ideas with all the Bahá'ís.

RACE UNITY COMMITTEE.

LIBRARY REPORT

A number of librarians have reported in the newspaper recently that there is an increasing demand for books along spiritual lines. The time is ripe for placing a basic Bahá'í book in as many libraries as possible during the coming year. Those who think they have little teaching capacity might render the Cause a great service by placing a basic book in their own local libraries. It would be interesting to know how many of the friends first contacted the Cause through library books. Such information would stimulate us to greater library pioneering.

Reports coming to this Committee from all over the country show that the teaching committees, assemblies and groups are working ardently to contact more libraries. Projects have been launched in New Jersey and Massachusetts to place a copy of Esslemont in fifty new libraries. The New York Assembly has just placed a Esslemont in every public library in greater New York. It is most important that the books are kept in constant circulation to keep them on open shelves and to create a demand for further Bahá'í literature. Encourage your friends to borrow books from the public libraries instead of lending your personal copies.

An excerpt from a recent letter from Duncan McAlear, member of the N. E. Regional Teaching Committee states: "The Bahá'í Faith loses prestige when our books are not found on local library shelves. On securing the New England names from the World's Fair, we found to our chagrin that more than half of the people came from towns where we had no Bahá'í books in libraries, and therefore lost a good point of contact."

Do not overlook the importance of placing books in Hebrew libraries. Rabbi Falk, Regional Director of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, wrote to a member of this committee some time ago, saying, "Many of our older classes in our religious schools conduct courses in Comparative Religions and I know that they would welcome information about the Bahá'í Faith." We have a number of copies of Adveni of Divine Justice (fabricoid) for presentation to Hebrew libraries, and will include another title or two from our regular list.

We now have quite an impressive list of colleges and universities that have accepted sets of Bahá'í books. If the friends contact any students from leading Afieid with our Regionals

Although the Regional Teaching Committees have not as yet been organized for 1940–41, post-Convention news is proof that the work goes on, and in that very spirit which 'Abdu'l-Bahá enjoined for the progress of the Divine Plan: "In short, O ye believers of God! Endeavor ye, so that you may take hold of every means in the promulgation of the religion of God and the diffusion of the fragrances of God."

The New England Committee has recently sent to all its Groups and isolated believers copies of the Victory Tablet and of a prayer of Bahá'u'lláh (p. 14 of Prayers and Meditations). "It has been suggested that Bahá'ís might do well to... invite their neighbors and friends in each week for an hour of prayer for the establishment of Universal Peace." A new Group has been formed at Hamden by withdrawals from New Haven, and believers have transferred to Wells, Maine, and Pittsfield, N. H. The Temple model was exhibited at the University of Maine in May, went to Norwich, Conn., on June 10th, and will next be routed to New London. Bates and Bowdoin Colleges have asked for the model next year.

In Springfield Mrs. Bacon gave a week's radio broadcast each morning, beginning May 27th, on subjects related to the Faith. The annual picnic of the Springfield Assembly was scheduled June 16th, with Harlan Ober as speaker, and as usual all the New England friends were invited.

The Committees for Kansas and Missouri continued in May its placements of Dr. Esselmont's book in public libraries, accompanied by book reviews in local papers. Earlier in the Spring placements had been made in Dodge City, Kansas; St. Charles and Lexington, Missouri. Miss Howell now reports that books have been accepted in Jefferson City and Sedalia, Mo.; and Hutchinson and Emporia, Kans. The librarian of Missouri Teachers College has requested any available Bahá'í literature, and Miss Howell observed that bound volumes of World Order Magazine in this library have "been checked out more than the Bahá'í books in any other library I have visited in this region."

The Committee for California, Nevada and Arizona is making fine use of the traveling library in conjunction with its teaching effort in San Diego. (There are two such libraries, containing twenty books and eight study outlines, now in use by Regional Committees.) As a result of a fireside for twelve new persons in early June, addressed by Mrs. Beulah Lewis, a non-Bahá'í home has been opened for monthly meetings. Southgate has now become a Group and Bakersfield is planning to do so. Since the organization of six new Local Spiritual Assemblies in California this year, our Regional Committee faces almost a virgin territory!

It is our hope that these events are but a foreshadowing of incomparable successes in the coming months. May isolated believers, Bahá'í Groups, and Regional Committees wield their efforts to the Guardian's goal: a Spiritual Assembly in every State and Province of North America by 1944!

"...All the regions in the estimation of the True One are one region and all the cities and villages are ideally equal and similar to each other. Neither holds distinction over another. All of them are the fields of the hearts and the habitation of the souls of men." ('Abdu'l-Bahá.)

Child Education

"O Friend! In the garden of thy heart, plant not but the rose of love and from the nightingale of desire and yearning loosen not thy hold. Treasure the companionship of the righteous and withdraw thyself from fellowship with the ungodly." (Hidden Words.)

How, a mother asks, can I teach my child to distinguish between desirable and undesirable companions? How can I teach him to ignore outward appearances such as color of skin, poverty, physical disabilities and to see rather than spiritual qualities among his associates? My son often finds disobedient, objectionable children very exciting and amusing. He frequently imitates them in his own behavior.

Perhaps the answer to this mother might be put into a single word—appreciation. If, for example, we want children to distinguish between good and poor music, we begin early to expose them to good music and thus lay a foundation for a true appreciation of music. Later when they hear all sorts of music, they will be able to distinguish between the good and the poor.

Coming back to our small boy, we may say that if he is going to appreciate real values in human relationships, he must be taught this appreciation early. Those who are with him while he is young, must endeavor to show forth the attributes of God. The child must be treated honestly, fairly, kindly and sympathetically. The Golden Rule must be the rule of the home in which he lives. He too must be expected to be as just in his dealings with others as they are with him. This includes his treatment of the grown-ups as well as children both older and younger than himself. 'Abdu'l-Bahá has said: "There are also sacred duties of children toward parents; these duties are written in the Book of God, as belonging to God. The children's prosperity in this world and the Kingdom depends upon the good pleasure of parents, and without this they will be in manifest loss." (Star of the
This law functions. The qualities are to surf detrimental but later outward factors, as for example little others but this will recognize them and look for them. Recognize the spiritual qualities we see.

Behavior has been brought up in an atmosphere of hair. "However, children against companionships that few or many depending upon the child's appreciation of spiritual values. Children do show preferences among each other. These preferences may be determined by outward factors, as for example little Lupe's fondness for Fanny because, as he expressed it, "Fanny has such yellow hair." However, children have an appreciation of deeper qualities and it is our duty as Baha'i parents and teachers to intensify and expand this appreciation.

One must of course protect young children against companionships that are detrimental but later the child will be on his own responsibility to choose from a greater variety of children. If the child has been brought up in an atmosphere of love, justice and tolerance, he will resent hatred, injustice and intolerance. A child may go through a phase in which he seems to prefer the child whose objectionable behavior is more dramatic than that of others but this admiration is only on the surface. The child who has been given an early appreciation of spiritual qualities will recognize them and look for them in his companions. Like attracts like. This law functions in the animal kingdom among the various species and it functions also in the human kingdom where spiritual qualities are to be found.

We as adults must be ever ready to recognize the spiritual qualities we see developing in our children and appreciate them. This does not mean perpetual praise, which is of course objectionable, and may even act as a stumbling block to further spiritual development. Children naturally like to be singled out for special attention. However, it is well to teach them that real distinction lies in possessing spiritual attributes. Older children should memorize the following words given to us by 'Abdu'l-Baha:

"I desire distinction for you. The Baha'i's must be distinguished from others of humanity. But this distinction must not depend upon wealth— that they should be more affluent than other people. I do not desire for you financial distinction. It is not ordinary distinction I desire; not scientific, commercial, industrial distinction. For you I desire spiritual distinction; that is, you must become distinguished in morals. In the love of God you must become distinguished from all else. You must become distinguished for loving humanity; for unity and accord; for love and justice. In brief, you must become distinguished in all virtues of the human world; for faithfulness and sincerity; for justice and fidelity; for firmness and steadfastness; for philanthropic deeds and service to the human world; for love toward every human being; for unity and accord with all the people; for removing prejudices and promoting international peace. Finally you must become distinguished for heavenly illumination and acquiring the bestowals of God. I desire this distinction among you. This must be the point of distinction for you." (Promulgation of Universal Peace, page 183.)

When the child, then, has gained an appreciation of true values for himself and for all of mankind, he will have become truly discerning which is of tremendous importance in this prejudice-ridden world as we find it today.

WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE

The leading article for August, by George O. Latimer, is on the subject of The Lesser and the Most Great Peace. This theme is of the utmost importance, and Mr. Latimer's presentation will be helpful to Baha'i students and teachers. The subject of peace is further developed in the August number by Annamarie Kunz Honnold in a most interesting article, World Order: How?

What the editors hope is the first in an extensive series of contributions presenting the experiences and achievements of pioneers in To South America in 1919, edited by Helen Bishop from Martha Root's diary notes.

The compilation by Mrs. Busey on The Divine Art of Living deals in Chapter V with Prayer and Meditation. Other contributions are: Baha'i Answers to World Question, Book Review by Florice Holley, a Study Outline, and editorial comment, With Our Readers.

Specially featured is an excerpt from words of Shoghi Effendi entitled Universal Foundation.

The editors note with gratification the increasing use of the magazine by groups as source of study material, and by active teachers as free literature.

BACK NUMBERS OF BAHAI MAGAZINE

The Publishing Committee has been authorized to announce a special offer on back numbers of Star of the West, Bahai's Magazine, and World Order. These periodicals have been published through a combined period of thirty years, and make available valuable Bahai material not to be found elsewhere.

The Committee proposes that each believer, and especially the newer friends, consider carefully the importance of adding files of the magazine to his or her Bahai's Library. It should be realized that when any issue is sold out, it will never again be available. Already some of the earliest numbers are entirely out of print.

The special price is 10c per copy, postpaid. On this basis, any Bahai's can acquire his set of magazines gradually, five or ten copies at a time. The complete inventory as of August 1, 1940 is as follows:

Bahai's Magazine, Star of the West

Incomplete.

World Order Magazine
Vols. I-V, April, 1935 to March, 1940.

TEMPLE TEACHING

The Temple Guides Committee reports that during June 1864 visitors were guided through the House of Worship. In June, the number of visitors was 1478. The total from January 1 to June 30, 1940 was 5879, an increase of 1332 over the number who came during the same period last year.

During June nine large groups visited the Temple, seven of which were of sailors from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station on tours, sponsored by the YMCA of Waukegan, Illinois. These seven groups numbered 347.

The other two groups received in June included two teachers and 12 children from the Summer School of the Lincolnwood Public School, Evanston, and 14 adults from the Evanston YWCA.

It thus becomes apparent that the House of Worship is evolving into the most important teaching center in North America. In order to take advantage of this unique opportunity to receive the blessing conferred upon all who serve the Holy Edifice, more Temple guides are needed.

A class in practice guiding is held at the Temple all day on Friday of each week for those who wish to become Temple Guides. All who wish to become guides are invited to attend.

The following is an excerpt from a letter received by the Guide Committee from the National Spiritual Assembly. It shows the importance that body attaches to the work that the guides are doing in the Temple.

“The teaching work carried on at the Temple is clearly representative of the Cause to a degree exceeding the teaching work carried on anywhere else in North America. Those who apply for information about the Faith while visiting the House of Worship are justified in assuming that they are in touch with the vital spirit of the Bahá’í Faith. The National Assembly hopes that your committee can secure full cooperation from believers in the Temple area, and the members point out that the result of the world calamities must be the intensification of public interest in the Faith.”

The visitors to the Temple seem to be more favorably impressed with these teachings this year than ever before.

It is a great privilege to serve by giving God’s Word to the world in God’s House. In June people from 29 different states and from the following foreign countries came to the Temple: Chili, Haiti, Toronto and Calgary, Canada, Philippines, China and Palestine. Those who can partake in this work are indeed fortunate.

PHOTOGRAPHS NEEDED FOR MAKING SLIDES

The National Spiritual Assembly has recently authorized the Archives and History Committee to prepare a series of fifty small, 2 x 2 inch, slides on the Temple. Many of these are copies of Mr. Allen McDaniel’s series of lantern slides.

The small slides will be much less expensive, and can be shown in a kodascope type of projector.

This committee is also authorized to make a collection of photographs for conversion into slides on the following subjects:

1. Views of the Holy Land, particularly of the Shrines in Akká and Haifa, also places of historic interest to the Cause in Iran.
2. Photographs of the Bahá’í Schools, of Evergreen Cabin and Malad House.
3. Views of local Bábí centers, and of places of historic interest to the Cause in this country.
4. Photographs related to the travels of Martha Root, Keith Ransom-Kehler, and May Maxwell.

The Archives Committee will be very grateful if the friends who have such photographs will loan them for copying. The name of the lender should be written on the back of each photograph, and, if possible, a brief description should accompany each picture, indicating when and where it was taken, names of people shown, etc. Etcetera. Of course, if some of the friends wish to make gifts of these photographs to the Archives, this will be very acceptable.

No snapshots should be sent which are not quite sharp and clear and which are not approximately 3 x 4 inches or larger in size. A prompt response to this request will mean that pioneer teachers and local assemblies may have such visual material as an aid to teaching within a few months. Please mail photographs to:

IV. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The Bahá’í National Office is located at 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois, and all communications intended for the National Spiritual Assembly, or for the Temple, Green Acre, Wilhelm, Bosch, Wilson and Mathews Trustees, should be sent to this address.

After October 1, 1940, communications intended for the National Treasurer are also to be sent to 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.
Beloved Friends:

We come now to the midpoint of the Seven Year Plan, that supreme and culminating effort of this generation of Bahá'ís in America to serve the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. May we not pause a moment for renewed vision of the importance of our great enterprise, and for deeper consecration to the discharge of the responsibilities which the beloved Master has laid upon our souls.

Within the brief span of three and one-half years the American Bahá'í community has surpassed all expectation in meeting the schedule of Temple construction. In rapid succession we have witnessed the application of the ornamentation to the gallery floor of the House of Worship, then to the nine pylons of the main story; and now at this hour the ornamentation is proceeding swiftly on the first of the nine faces of the main story. Moreover, the grounds themselves are being graded! proceedings swiftly on the gallery floor of the House of Worship, then to the laying of the sidewalks in 1942, preceded by the building of the surrounding stairs. Last of all will come the placing of the nine permanent doors, the signal to the world that the exterior of the House of Bahá'u'lláh has been completed!

Likewise, in the realm of teaching the American community has made miraculous advance in this same period of time. Our unoccupied areas have pioneers, or groups, or Assemblies, Spiritual Assemblies have been formed in Mexico City, Bahía, and Buenos Aires, groups raised in Havana, Tegucigalpa, Guatemala, Montevideo and Panama, and pioneers are striving heroically in other nations of Central and South America.

The world, however, as the Guardian has been warning us for many years, has drawn inevitably to the verge of prostration; and we behold now, with the eye of the spirit, that the only real life in mankind is that new spiritual life which Bahá'u'lláh confers. The contrast between the world and the Kingdom is overwhelming. It compels us to attain maturity of soul in order to serve the Faith with the whole power of our capacity.

Convinced that the Temple work is progressing satisfactorily, the National Spiritual Assembly now wishes the friends to grasp the necessity for concentrating on teaching work during the second half of the Seven Year Plan. Here there remains unfulfilled the mightiest opportunity ever offered to a small, inconspicuous and humble group of human beings.

The teaching work calls for a movement of the entire Bahá'í community, the utmost concentration of effort on the part of all Assemblies, Committees, groups and individuals along with all the enthusiasm and initiative the community can summon to its aid.

The National Spiritual Assembly, to open the way to a more widespread, free and unified teaching effort, indicates the path which the Guardian has laid down for the administrative relationships involved, and thus makes it possible for every worker to see clearly the plan of action as a whole.

As Shoghi Effendi has written: "The local Spiritual Assembly can not delegate to any one of the local committees the authority to exercise any control or supervision over any other committee or body which it has itself appointed. All local committees are directly and solely responsible to the local Assembly which alone can exercise the power of supervision over them"—an explanation which applies similarly to the National Committees.

National Committees: The National Spiritual Assembly appeals to every Committee to energize its labor, study its possibilities and apply for any necessary budget or approval of plans. Whatever coordination may be needed between the services, functions or fields of effort of various Committees will be supplied by the National Assembly in accordance with the Guardian's administrative instruction. Any Committee encountering problems or conditions requiring the exercise of authority is to report the matter to the National Assembly without delay.

Regional Committees: These are to be regarded as independent committees, not controlled by any other Committee under the constant supervision of the National Assembly itself. Their functions include:

1. Coordination of Inter-Community conferences.
2. Cooperation with local Assemblies in organizing teaching circuits.
3. The routing of traveling teachers within the region.
4. Rendering assistance to groups and preparing groups for the election of a Spiritual Assembly.
5. Encouraging and stimulating teaching activities of isolated believers.
6. The extension of teaching work to areas within the regions where no Assemblies or groups exist. The Regional Committee is to exercise initiative in the areas outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies. A local Assembly wishing to carry on extension teaching in nearby centers should notify the Regional Committee, which will then leave those centers for development by the Assembly.
7. The Regional Committee should inform itself of all the facilities which are at the disposal of groups and isolated believers for teaching work—teaching literature, lantern slides, material for public exhibits, radio talks, publicity, books for placement in public libraries, etc. The use of the many facilities which have been developed in recent years is to be encouraged among groups and the active isolated friends.
8. Enrollment cards of new believers are to be carefully recorded by the Regional Committee and the signed card then sent to the National Office at 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette.

In later issues of Baha'i News, the National Spiritual Assembly will endeavor to point out some of the teaching functions of local Assemblies. Not until the whole body of the Baha'i community is filled with the same blessed spirit of radiant enthusiasm can we be assured that we are actually meeting the high expectations which the Guardian cherishes for the community. May we fully understand and faithfully obey the great spiritual law of this Cause: "In this new cycle, education and training are recorded in the Book of God as obligatory and not voluntary. (Abdu'l-Baha.) Without basis in this Divine command, our teaching activities might lose their inner spirit and reflect too much the promotion methods of the society surrounding the American Baha'is. May our understanding be purified and our souls filled with passionate resolve to hold aloft the banner of His Faith!"

A MOST BEFITTING AND DIGNIFIED EXHIBIT

"The stone casting representing the windowhead of the main story ornamentation of the Temple which you had shipped on board the American Export Liner 'Excalibur' was safely received only two days ago, and was found in excellent condition. It has already, at the Guardian's direction, been placed at the entrance to the garden adjoining the Shrine of the Bab. The size of the casting, and the intricate and beautiful designs, and the excellent location it has been given, are such as to highly impress all visitors. It makes indeed a most befitting and dignified exhibit, and is bound to awaken considerable interest in the Cause. The Guardian feels most grateful to the N. S. A. for their gift, which constitutes indeed one more tangible proof of the bonds of undying devotion and attachment that so indissolubly unite them with the world-center of the Faith in the Holy Land."—SHOGHJI EFFENDI, through his secretary, to Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, April 22, 1940.

Two views of this casting in the garden at Haifa were published in Baha'i News for September, 1940.

"THE VOICE OF TRUTH, NEVER TO BE CHALLENGED"

In our effort to be fully informed of the teachings and principles that explain the nature of the local Spiritual Assembly, we come upon many extraordinary statements compelling profound reflection on our part before we can realize their meaning. For example, the Guardian wrote many years ago: "And, when they are called upon (i.e., the members of the local Assembly) to arrive at a certain decision, they should, after passionate, anxious and cordial consultation, turn to God in prayer, and with earnestness and conviction and courage record their vote and abide by the voice of the majority, which we are told by our Master to be the voice of truth, never to be challenged, and always to be whole-heartedly enforced."

Such is the high and unique station given to the institution established by Babâ'llâh as the basis of His world order! But that station is one we must achieve by our ardent individual and collective efforts. It is the fruit of a condition that is attained, and not a power which can be exercised by the ignorant, the superficial and the divided souls.

In previous statements on the subject of the local Spiritual Assembly we have cited the functions with which it has been endowed and for which it is responsible. One of the most vital functions of an Assembly is to maintain the unity of the believers in the community. Success in this weighty responsibility resting upon each and every elected member is absolutely essential to the coming of the Most Great Peace. The unity of Baha'is, however, is and must be conscious, sincere, whole-hearted and joyous, and not merely that outward lack of discord resulting from the application of authority and power.
Bahá'ís unite in and through their Assembly, not under its dominion. Bahá'ís cherish and protect their Assembly because if they allow it to be destroyed they will become victims to the terrible and implacable disorders of the world. It is the truth and the spirit which unites Bahá'ís, not personality by charm nor government by force. The source of all unity is Bahá'u'lláh. The unique Stations He created and the institutions He established are sacred because of their connection with and dependence upon Bahá'u'lláh. From that connection and dependence they exercise miraculous powers—powers which originate in Bahá'u'lláh and are sustained by His Spirit.

That is why a true Bahá'í is in full and continuous union with other Bahá'ís in any city or any country where he mingles with them. In turning to Bahá'u'lláh, in becoming Bahá'ís, we consciously and resolutely leave behind every human tie or consideration which could prevent us from being in unity with all other Bahá'ís. Thus, there is not such a thing as a "hyphenated" Bahá'í—a German-Bahá'í, a white-Bahá'í, a rich-Bahá'í, a colored-Bahá'í, or a poor-Bahá'í in the sense of any group limitation. The quality of our Bahá'í relationship is from our soul and not from our family, our race, our class, our nationality or our former creed.

This is the root of the matter, infinitely important for us to realize at this stage of human history, when the edifice of mankind draws so near to the point of destruction. The kind of Bahá'í Assembly we should all strive for in our city or town is one in which and through which the unity of Bahá'u'lláh is achieved—the universal unity binding in spirit all who sincerely turn to Him. Thus, even in a small Bahá'í community, the friends should include and reconcile types of persons which, in the world, are in mutual enmity, bitterness and conflict. By sacrificing, for Bahá'u'lláh, any opinion or condition at variance with His teachings, we attain the right and the privilege to associate with all other sincere believers in the realm of faith and progress. On the other hand, the Faith does not seek to unite discordant elements which represent rejection of Bahá'u'lláh. We do not throw open the doors of Bahá'í membership to any who might wish it without meeting the conditions of faith which the Guardian has explained. The door through which believers enter His Cause is the door of spiritual experience. We can enroll only those whom Bahá'u'lláh Himself accepts to be His servants and workers in His Kingdom.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

Montevideo—Wilfrid Barton writes from Montevideo: "You will be glad to know that we have several new contacts here which are very promising indeed—persons of real capacity. Besides, a small nucleus of the group interested by Mrs. Stewart is continuing to show interest. Through the assistance of one of the latter we have succeeded in obtaining a very nice room located conveniently in the center of town to hold our public meetings. We have had three meetings so far, and, though the attendance has been modest in proportions, the quality of those few attending and the eager interest they have shown have been a source of great encouragement to Simon and me. The problem which will now occupy our attention is how we may increase the numbers of those attending and enlarge the circle of our contacts. As for me, the most fertile field for Bahá'í contacts has proved to be through my musical interests and activities. One of these I feel is worth mentioning here. When the famous Lehner quartet was here in Montevideo a short while ago, I put myself in touch with Mr. Imre Hartman, cellist of the quartet, to arrange to take a few lessons. In the course of our first interview I had occasion to mention the Cause to Mr. Hartman and he immediately showed considerable interest, asking me various questions and accepting the leaflet which I offered him. Later I had dinner with Mr. Hartman and Mr. Roth, violist of the quartet, and the occasion again arose to discuss the Cause at even further length. I am keeping in touch with Mr. Hartman, who is now in Buenos Aires, and I hope soon to have the opportunity to put him in touch with the Baha’is there when the circumstances prove favorable.”

Quito — From Quito, Ecuador, John Stearns writes us: “At the beginning of the month I transferred residence from the Pension, taking over part of a house in the north residential section together with four other young men. Before undertaking this arrangement the matter of my religious status was, of course, carefully discussed. I occasionally have opportunity to talk with them of serious matters. The change of address gives me a kitchen in which to pursue experimental work with the native materials for candy and provides several other advantages. I continue to eat at the Pension occasionally and keep my acquaintances there. . . . I did not visit Guayaquil as anticipated. I did not visit Guayaquil as anticipated. San José, Costa Rica—Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Woolston report four confirmed believers on August 1st, 1940. Since April 26th, 1940, weekly classes have been held at which the average attendance has been five or six persons. On May 2nd Mrs. Ford presented the Bahá’í Message before the Theosophical Society, and this lecture was advertised in the Society in the weekly newspapers. The editor of the Spanish magazine “Alma Tica,” which has a circulation of 3000 copies in Central and South America, has consented to publish the Spanish translation made by Mrs. Ford of the Guardian’s pamphlet, “World Religion.”

Havana, Cuba—Philip Marangella writes that a Bahá’í Center has been established in a beautiful old Spanish colonial building in Havana. The room has been furnished and the bookcase stocked with all available literature. There are now six declared believers in Havana. He sends the following names and some of the friends send them words of welcome. These are the latest:

Mr. Jack Zeller, Malecon 671, Havana, Cuba.
St. Librado Gonzalez Benavides, Amistar 162 (Alto), Havana.
Sr. Jose de la Luz V. Perez, Factoria No. 135, Havana.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Received October 15, 1940.

Mr. Marangella writes that the first believer to register was Sr. Perfecto Perez y Toledo, Oguendo 358, Apto 52.
2nd was Eugenio Gines, Escobar 107, Altos, Havana.
3rd was Domingo Santos del Rio, Sitios 266, Havana.

These friends appear in the photograph with Mr. and Mrs. Marangella.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti—Mrs. Ruth Blackwell writes of conditions in this country in which she says the Catholic influence is like a vise and she is forced to remain almost in seclusion. She has been living with a native family, speaks, reads and writes French. She requests literature in French and hopes to rent a house when her husband joins her.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras—Mr. Gerrard Sluter wrote before leaving for Colombia that the first Unity feast was held on June 5th at which five Bahá’ís attended. Professor Tany Viana held the fourth feast in his home. Professor Viana has dedicated a book shelf and a “History of Central America” as the beginning of a Bahá’í reference library.

The local Bahá’í Fund has been established which all are, loyally contributing small sums. Thus the group was in a position to buy some flowers and send a delegate to the funeral of a son of one of the Bahá’ís. A Teaching Committee has been formed which is a kind of Executive Committee for the community. There are now six active Bahá’ís in Tegucigalpa, and public meetings are to be held every Saturday night, which are given publicity.

San Salvador—John Eichenauer writes that good use has been made of the extra copies of World Order, putting them in the two main social clubs, the Casino and the International Club. A quotation from the Writings was inserted in Cyclopedia, one of the main literary magazines. A social sports club has been contacted, a number of whose members have expressed interest in the principles of the Teachings. Meetings are held each Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning and ideas about how to get people out would be appreciated.

Jamaica—Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, who have recently returned to this country, report difficulties in teaching in Jamaica on account of class distinctions. A customs official who saw their Bahá’í books let them through without any trouble because he had heard about the Faith. Mrs. Shaw fell into conversation with three ladies on a street corner who were waiting for a car and discovered one of them had lived in Montreal where she worked for Mrs. Maxwell, who took her to Bahá’í meetings.

Dominican Republic—Miss Margaret Lenz writes from Trujillo, Republic of Domingo, that another young woman has been confirmed there. Her name is Sr. Ana Margret Schaefer. Miss Lenz is very happy in her work, and having been for some years attached to the International Bureau at Geneva, Switzerland, she is a very accomplished linguist and understands pioneer work.

Baha—We learn from Bahia, Brazil that a Spiritual Assembly has recently been formed there with Miss Leonora Holwall and Mr. and Mrs. Worley as teachers. This is indeed good news.

New Translation—The Publishing Committee announces that the Spanish translation of “Bahá’ulláh and the New Era” is now ready and shipments have been made to pioneers and groups. (See Publishing Committee report in this issue.)

Applications from Volunteers—The Inter-America Committee wishes to inform all applicants to the field of pioneer service in Latin America that pending the approval of the applicants by the Committee and their acceptance by the National Spiritual Assembly no move whatsoever should be made by the applicants toward securing Consular advice. The observance of this instruction is of the utmost importance since premature action may lead to complications which would frustrate the plans entirely.

When an application has been approved the applicant will be advised immediately, his post will be determined and he will then receive definite instructions as to how to proceed by the duly appointed representative of the Inter-America Committee with whom he will establish the necessary correspondence. By following this plan all arrangements will be facilitated and a uniform procedure will be established which is absolutely essential to the carrying out of successful entry into the various countries. Visitors to these countries also, even though not engaged in pioneer service, are invited to avail themselves of the facilities offered by the Inter-America Committee through their representative. In this way the Inter-America Committee will be able to inform the various Bahá’í Centers of the proposed visits.

Pioneers are needed in Peru where a married couple would be most acceptable, and there are positions to be had for men in Panama where no knowledge of Spanish is necessary. In the case of women in Panama only expert stenographers or trained nurses are in demand.

Inter-America Bulletin — A regular bulletin has been inaugurated which will be sent to all pioneers by air mail as often as occasion warrants, and certainly once a month. In this bulletin, there will be a page devoted to Spanish translation of some of the writings. The remainder of the contents will serve to keep the pioneers in touch with each other and with us, and will carry information regarding the translations which are ready for use as well as news items about the progress of the Temple and any news of particular interest.

All friends contemplating pioneer service or those intending to make a visit to any of the countries coming within the range of the work of this Committee are requested to communicate at once with the Committee through the Chairman.

FIRST LATIN-AMERICAN SESSION

The first Bahá’í Latin-American Session was held at Temetery Ranch in Pine Valley, near Colorado Springs, Colorado, from June 12th to June 24th, 1940. A cable was sent just before the opening from Shoghi Effendi brought with it innumerable blessings. It was significant that the number of believers able to accept the invitation to attend the Session was nineteen. Perfect weather aided our material plans as we had set a tent on the lawn and thus had an al fresco dining room from which could be glimpsed the plains that stretch to the East of the mountains. There are no boarding houses or restaurants in the neighborhood and the city of Colorado Springs is fourteen miles distant.

A circulating library of Latin-American books and the maps of these countries had been prepared.

Two periods were set aside daily for prayer and meditation which was followed by consultation lasting an indefinite time. The Committee has edited the discussions and has sent the report in pamphlet form to the Assemblies.

Our first evening was arranged for a meeting between the Colorado Springs Assembly and the friends from afar, who had come from many directions: Louisiana, California, Honolulu, Chicago, Wilmette, New York, and New Hampshire. With considerable trepidation we had sent out five hundred invitations to the public of the city, though they had never evinced any interest either in our public Bahá’í meetings nor responded to invitations to fireside groups. There was no doubt that our Guardian’s prayers for the success of these meetings was answered, for, to our utter astonishment, every meeting was well attended; we had never less than fifty and towards the end of the Session more than a hundred in attendance.

Our program included two lectures on Latin-American music by well known authorities, Prof. James Sykes and Prof. Nicolas Slonimsky. Added to which we had a concert of South American composers. Prof. C. W. T. Penland added greatly to our program by a lecture with colored slides of the "Flora of the High Andes." And we had Mrs. Louise Caswell who showed slides of the Temples of the world and afterwards related her experiences in Panama as a Pioneer.

We had four Baha'i Talks held in the Half Way House, Colorado Springs, which is a lovely building dedicated to recovering patients, able to work here and sell their handicraft. Our first talks were given by Horace Holley and George Latimer on the Baha'i remedies for world conditions. The second evening we had a symposium of four fifteen-minute speakers on "Progressive Revelation," given by Raphael Pumpelly, Mrs. Charles Bishop, Marion Holley and George Latimer. "The Historical Background of the Baha'i Faith" was next presented by Miss Marion Holley and Mrs. Charles Bishop. Our first symposium was so successful that we chose this form of presenting the Faith for our last public talk.  "Deepening the Spiritual Life" in four separate aspects were given by Mr. Pumpelly, Mrs. Mary Barton, Mrs. Bishop and Mrs. Loulie Mathews. We closed the two-week Session with a Baha'i picnic.

The committee appointed to develop plans for the school and a course for teachers will submit plans to the National Spiritual Assembly as soon as feasible.

It is hoped that as a means of advancing knowledge and understanding of teaching in Latin-America, the school will take its place among Baha'i institutions and fulfill a special destiny.

TEACHING ACTIVITIES, NORTH AMERICA

Beloved Friends:

We in America cannot, if we would, neglect the part we are now called to play in this planetary crisis. Whether within or without the Ark of the Faith, our hearts admit the logic of the Guardian's diagnosis that "the immediate future must, as a result of this steady, this gradual, and inevitable absorption in the manifold perplexities and problems afflicting humanity, be dark and oppressive for that nation." But while this certainty oppresses our contemporaries, it can but energize the active Baha'i. Indeed, Baha'i's everywhere are already busy at building a new world!

Katherine Didier and Rouihah Jones arrived in San Juan, Puerto Rico, on July 24th, where they hope to obtain teaching posts. Through Miss Didier's former stay there, many doors are already open and their arrival was heralded with a comprehensive article on the Faith in "El Mundo," the "most important newspaper in all the islands of the Caribbean..." Fine contacts were made on shipboard.

Great strides mark progress in Alaska, where Betty Becker and Myrtle Dodge of San Francisco have lately found employment, thus bringing the number of our pioneers to five. Appreciative words come from Fairbanks and Anchorage of the work and influence of Joy Allen. A Regional Committee has been appointed. In Fairbanks Betty Becker and Janet Whitenack "are now studying with two prospects regularly (with) quite a few others lined up. In addition, we have talked to a number of people who travel from one part of Alaska to another—Honor sends us people to follow up, and we send some to her. . . ." Sitka, since Miss Becker left, is an open field for another Baha'i pioneer. "I left behind me many friends and also several people who are heartily in sympathy with the teachings. . . . It seems to me that if we had a Baha'i couple who had money to invest and could establish themselves in Sitka, they should not be so very long in forming a Spiritual Assembly."

Mrs. Moscrop has reported three meetings, with an average attendance of eight, during her recent campaign in Regina, Sask., which laid the foundation for a regular group in autumn. Her comments are timely: "Altogether, there are approximately twenty-six who are willing to study. . . . There are dozens of others who have received literature and information. . . . So far I haven't met anyone who is antagonistic to the Teaching; in fact there is a noticeable difference in the outlook of the general populace from that which I found in my first visit. Men and women of all classes are beginning to wonder what is ahead of them and are consequently far readier to listen to a constructive, world-embracing program such as the Baha'i Faith offers. . . ." Mrs. Moscrop also made a weekend visit to Winnipeg, where she found Rowland Estall "well and happy and full of great plans. . . ."

Mr. Estall himself forwarded in June the enrollment of Miss Winnifred Harvey, a former Winnipeg resident who is now permanently located in Ottawa. "This NOTICE CONCERNING TREASURER'S OFFICE

The Office of the Treasurer is located at 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois, instead of 536 Sheridan Road as previously announced.

The National Assembly has opened a Canadian Bahá’í Fund as a department of the National Bahá’í Fund, to function during the period when transmission of funds from one country to another is under special restriction. All donations in Canadian currency intended for the National Bahá’í Fund, Bahá’í Kahanum Fund, etc., are hereafter to be sent to Mr. Siegfried Schopficher, Assistant Treasurer, 1102 University Street, Montreal, P. Q.

Checks and postal orders should be made payable to Canadian Bahá’í Fund.

Apirations made by the National Assembly for activities in Canada will be paid from this bank account in Montreal.

news is doubly thrilling because it signifies not only the acceptance of Bahá’ulláh’s mandate by another awakened soul, but means as well the pioneer establishment of the Faith in a new Canadian city, this time the Capital of the Dominion.

Steady progress is being made in Fargo, N. D., where the Bahá’í group has been joined by “a very fine man of rare qualities.” The new believers are active, and “through their efforts many names have been added to the list of inquirers.” Mrs. Breugger also sends an enthusiastic account of her opportunity to speak for Station VVOX on “What is the Bahá’í Faith?” A very marvelous response... many cards, letters, and telephone calls came in requesting more talks on the same subject... I do firmly believe that it will be through this medium that the Cause will be more fully publicized in this particular State..."

Since Convention Mrs. Ruth Moffett has achieved wonderful results in several cities. A chance contact at the Temple led her to visit Fort Wayne, Ind., in May where in three days of intensive teaching, with the full cooperation of this new friend, Mrs. Worthington, a study group was formed with nineteen members. The registrations of Mr. and Mrs. Worthington are already reported. The next campaign was for nine days in Danville, Ill., during June, a project which the Urbana Assembly sponsored. After nineteen public lectures, two study classes were formed. Urbana wrote: “We consider these results very remarkable; also very spiritual was the atmosphere of the meetings.” Mrs. Moffett then proceeded to Kalamazoo, Mich., where three resident believers and Miss Mae Servais, Chicago Bahá’í, cooperated in a seventeen-day campaign of thirty-three lectures, accompanied by daily publicity. The meetings culminated in a Bahá’í fellowship picnic on July 6th, attended by ten believers and twenty-four new friends. There are fifteen persons in the continuing study class.

In addition to such intensive work, Mrs. Moffett found time to spend three days in Grand Rapids, Mich., early in June, where various well-attended meetings were held through arrangements of the local Bahá’ís.

On July 21st the Kalantars were hosts for a Bahá’í Youth Conference in Wimington, attended by about thirty young people from Washington, Baltimore, Red Bank, Philadelphia, Newark, West Englewood, Tenafly, and New York City. After two conference periods, a well-publicized public meeting was held, featuring Mrs. Sims, Mr. Lucien McComb, and Miss Harndeh Nabil, on “Youth’s Place in a Chaotic World.” A permanent result was the election of an inter-community committee “to arrange similar gatherings in the future.” The previous day several of these young Bahá’ís accompanied Mr. Kalantár to a Bahá’í picnic in Philadelphia, where he introduced nine or ten of them for brief talks. Other reports from the Kalantars show steady growth in Wilmington; through persistence in arranging meetings and widening contacts, and with help in obtaining publicity from Mrs. Snyder, the Faith is becoming much more widely known. Guest speakers at Bahá’í meetings have included Miss Doris Lohse and Mr. George Miller of Washington, Mrs. Walter B. Guy of St. Augustine, Mrs. Stone and James Stone of Teaneck, and Miss Gretchen Westervelt of New York City.

Augusta’s annual report outlined a diversified and stimulating program, including meetings coupling a Bahá’í speaker with a Theosophist, a Rabbi, and an Episcopalian minister; exhibits illustrating Bahá’í principles, such as dolls dressed in various national costumes, the flag of many nations, books of the great religions, and an exhibit on How to Attain Happiness; considerable race unity work; and extension teaching in North Augusta.

The special project at Vogel Park, Cleveland, Ga., June 8-15, with delegates from eight southern States, has given a thrilling impetus to teaching throughout the South. Four new believers have been reported, two as direct result of this conference, from Louisville, Memphis (Tenn.), New Orleans, and Nashville.

Mabel Ives writes of a special confirmation class in Memphis, and of their hopes for a week’s campaign in the Fall to widen contacts for next year, and perhaps to win several representative men now studying the Teachings. In July Mrs. Ives joined her husband, who has been working in Hot Springs, Ark., at the invitation of our new believer, Robert Wilson.

Nellie Roche has reported an interracial meeting, the first of a series leading up to a teaching project for November in Nashville. Twenty-five representatives of the two races attended, only half of them Bahá’ís, and “what was first intended as a local affair developed into an interstate, even an international occasion!” There were guests from Mississippi, Alabama, and a young graduate of the University of Montana “on his way back to his native Liberia.”

From Louisvile Olivia Kelsey reports that two students have asked to enroll. Despite summer heat, a new study group has been started with an interesting membership, including a lawyer and an architect. The head of the Urban League has asked Mrs. Kelsey to address some forty women at the Y.W.C.A. She has also been asked to review “I, Mary Magdalene” for the Penwomen’s League. In June Mrs. Kelsey visited Lexington to make preliminary arrangements for a study class in the Fall, finding several who were eager to discuss the Teachings. While carrying on this ambitious program, Mrs. Kelsey is also employed and is studying business opportunities for next year.

Reports of unusual interest have come from many of our teachers. Orcella Rexford, who was an instructor at Vogel Park, has forwarded some good publicity obtained in a Neuan, Ga., paper. She had spoken at Jacksonville, and planned to return north via Greenville, S. C., and Huntington, W. Va., for Bahá’í work. Last year, according to her annual report, Miss Rexford taught large audiences in Atlanta, Boston, and New York City, leaving classes for local follow-up.

Louis Gregory has served in the teaching field most actively these past months, speaking to many meetings arranged by the friends throughout New York State, in the Chicago area, Peoria, Lima, Detroit, and other centers. He was guest in the pulpits of three churches; spoke on the radio in Peoria and assisted with an outstanding Race-Unity dinner there; and most recently was featured in two lectures and a radio talk on May 11th, at “The Seventy-Five Years of Progress Exposition” arranged by the colored citizens of Detroit.

Dorothy Baker is another whose teaching activities have taken her to widely-separated groups in such cities as Findlay, Ohio; Buffalo, Syracuse, Hamburg, and Canandaigua, N. Y.; Washington, D. C.; Key West, Atlanta; Ann Arbor and Ypsi-

TEMPLE TEACHING

The number of visitors in the month of July, as reported by the Temple Guides Committee, was 2,479. Since January 1, 1940, the total number of persons who have been guided through the House of Worship is 8,358.

In July eight different groups of apprentice seamen from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, with a total of 539 young men, were received. It is highly interesting to note that nearly every Saturday and Sunday two or three bus loads of these sailors arrive on tours sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. of Waukegan, Illinois.

Other groups during July were 42 children from a child's camp, 16 from the Summer School for teachers, Northwestern University, 54 girls from Wilson Avenue Y.W.C.A., Chicago, 26 children from the Y.M.C.A. of Waukegan, Illinois, and 30 women from the Y.W.C.A. of Highland Park, Illinois.

The foreign countries represented were Mexico, Palestine, France, Cuba, Germany, Uruguay, Iran, Greece. Visitors also came from 40 states of the United States and from five Provinces of Canada.

These brief facts present one of the most impressive and far-reaching teaching activities being conducted in North America today. The House of Worship, our spiritual inspiration and the dynamic center of all Bahá’í action, will unquestionably more and more assume a commanding position with respect to the promotion of the Faith in the West.

Fortunate are the believers who serve as Temple guides, since they have all the opportunities of the pioneer who settles in a foreign land, but here the world comes to the teacher. Important, likewise, that the Committee has prepared special teaching material for the guides, since this assures accuracy.

THE BAHA’I WORLD, Volume IX

Announcement

Will all Bahá’ís please make a note of any reference to the Bahá’í Faith which they see or hear about in current papers and magazines, or in books, in order that the Editorial Committee may have as complete a section as possible containing such references for publication in Vol. IX, which covers the period April 1940 to April 1942. Notification of such references should be sent to Mrs. Bertha H. Kirkpatrick, Olivet, Mich.

BAHA’I YOUTH BULLETIN

The National Youth Committee hopes that the forthcoming issues of the Bahá’í Youth Bulletin will be of greater interest to all “youths” and also to many adults than they have ever been before. The Bulletin policy has changed: the young people want more news. This means that less space will be given to essay articles. All young people who have “news” of special and outstanding interest, whether in the isolated, community, or pioneer fields, who have a novel teaching idea or a unique plan of work, should send such items to Mrs. Annamareé K. Honnold, 277 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, N. Y. Thus it is hoped that more young people will want to subscribe to the Bulletin; the editor wishes that Bahá’í Youth would become as indispensable to “youths” as Bahá’í News is to the entire Bahá’í community.

Subscriptions can now be made by sending 40¢ per year to Mrs. Mae G. Dyer, 211 Schermerhorn, Brooklyn, N. Y.

RACE UNITY

The Race Unity Committee at a recent meeting passed a motion to urge the friends in each Bahá’í community to make race unity the topic at the consultation period of one of the feasts. We suggest the following items for your discussion:

1) Has your group made a special appeal to any of the minority organizations of your city?
2) What approaches do you feel would be most effective?
3) What is the essential difference between the Bahá’í ideal of unity and other efforts in that direction?
4) Is your group informed about the major gifts of the great American minorities?
5) Have you suggestions or recommendations to share with us?

We hope that each Bahá’í community will cooperate with the Race Unity Committee in carrying out this suggestion. Plan now to consult on race unity at your next feast. Please let us hear about your plans and activities so that we may share them with the entire Bahá’í community.

(Write to Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Chairman, 615 West Elm Street, Lima, Ohio.)

The importance of our race unity work cannot be over-emphasized. Let us again recall the words of our Guardian in the Advent of Divine Justice: “As to racial prejudice, the corrosion of which, for well nigh a century, has bitten into the fibre, and attacked the whole social structure of American society, it should be regarded as constituting the most vital and challenging issue confronting the Bahá’í community at the present stage of its evolution. The ceaseless writhings which this issue of paramount importance calls for, the sacrifices it must impose, the care and vigilance it demands, the moral courage and fortitude it requires, the tact and sympathy it necessitates, invest this problem, which the American believers are still far from having satisfactorily resolved, with an urgency and importance that cannot be over-estimated.”

BAHA’I EXHIBIT AT AMERICAN NEGRO EXPOSITION

The Temple Exhibit at the American Negro Exposition which was held at the Chicago Coliseum, July 4th to September 2nd, attracted those in attendance by the hundreds each day and proved to be a wonderful teaching medium to this great minority group.

The attendance to August 15 was 80,000 and it was estimated that 200,000 would attend during the two-month period. This Exposition celebrates the 75th since the Emancipation and is a great demonstration of the progress of the Colored Race.

On Thursday, August 22, we arranged with the management to have a Bahá’í program for the evening and it was advertised Bahá’í Night. The program lasted for one and one-half hours and two speakers, one white and one colored, to carry out the idea of mutual co-operation, explained the Faith and its Principles, etc. A musical was also to be arranged. This idea of the cooperation of the two groups, white and colored, has been carried out at the exhibit, the attendants being arranged in this representative way. It also brings to everyone the idea and shows the power of the Word of Bahá’u’lláh in bringing us together in the spirit of Oneness. I wish to quote from a letter received August 10th from the African-American Emancipation Commission: “Your exhibit at the Exposition has caused favorable comment, particularly because of the very fine representatives that have been in attendance there. The American Negro Exposition is very anxious that your Faith present a program developing your fundamental beliefs,” etc.

The week of August 5-11 was Roman Catholic Week and many contacts were made with this group. A number of Priests and Nuns stopped at our exhibit, asked questions and accepted the leaflets offered to them. Some even expressed the desire to visit the Temple. Many other groups have also been en tour and at times it has taken as many as five attendants to handle the visitors at our exhibit.

There have been many interesting contacts, one especially I wish to relate. A man came to the exhibit and after listening for a few moments, said, “Several years ago, I had the pleasure of riding from Haifa to Cairo, in the same compartment with Shoghi Effendi.” A lady said, “I have prayed at the Tomb of Bahá’u’lláh.”
Perhaps the questions most commonly asked, are: "What is this Temple doing at this Negro Exposition? Do you believe in Christ? Do you accept the Bible? What is Truth? Why do you have white attendants? What kind of service do you have?" Pictures of the Temple exhibit have been taken.

I believe that this is the first time the Baha'is have had an exhibit at a minority activity.

Mrs. Fred Mortensen.

LIBRARY COMMITTEE

The Library Committee has the following books for presentation to public, college and university libraries: Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, Foundations of World Unity, Some Answered Questions, World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, Promise of All Ages, Baha'i World, Volume 7. The first donation to a new library consists of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era and Foundations of World Unity. A more comprehensive set will be sent, however, when local interest in the Faith and the teaching activity warrants additional titles.

Will the friends make certain that they do not suggest other titles than the above to librarians, as we often receive requests from librarians for books not available for presentation from this committee?

Copies of Advent of Divine Justice are available in fabricoid for Hebrew Libraries. Contact your local synagogue, Y.M.H.A. and Y.W.H.A. libraries. Many of these groups have classes in Comparative Religion and would accept some Baha'i books.

We have learned that some of the State Library Commissions have traveling libraries to provide books upon request to readers who do not have access to local public libraries. They also send books to supplement the titles in township, county and other libraries. Would the Regional Chairman investigate such state library facilities? We understand that there is a wide circulation of books through these channels, especially in sparsely populated states where the residents receive packages of books regularly upon request. The Library Committee will cooperate in placing comprehensive sets in such traveling libraries.

We shall be happy to assist the many new groups and isolated friends who are now engaged in widespread teaching activities. Time is pressing and many people are becoming aware of the Faith through the many exhibits, radio talks and other projects which are spreading the knowledge of Bahá'u'lláh rapidly throughout the country. We cannot reach each soul personally but we can make certain that these people will have access to our books in their local libraries. The public libraries offer one of the greatest indirect teaching mediums. Most librarians do not have a budget for religious literature and will readily accept books offered to them.

CHILD EDUCATION

O heedless ones! Think not the secrets of hearts are hidden nay, know ye of a certainty that in clear characters they are engraved and stand manifest in the holy Presence. (Hidden Words.)

When do our children begin to have "secrets of the heart" which they believe are hidden? The new born babe brings his secret with him which even his parents cannot completely fathom. They feel, in his presence, as though they were before something sacred; something mysterious; something indescribably precious, a bit of heaven perhaps. But this is not the kind of secret or secrets to which we refer. We mean, of course, conscious secrets. When does the child first hide from his parents some of his thoughts and his feelings? No one really knows. What do we do know is that the type of child training that he has in the precious early years hastens or retards the desire for him to keep back his thoughts and feelings from others.

The young child is naturally frank and spontaneous. The amount of frankness and spontaneity will vary largely between individual children but confidence and trust are characteristic of childhood. Gradually these qualities are modified; in some cases, alas, to be lost almost entirely while in other cases to become tempered with judgment.

The child who becomes secretive is usually one who has lost confidence in those about him. This may have been brought about through a number of channels. The child's serious remarks may have been laughed at too often; he may have been ridiculed; or given a sense of insecurity or of failure or of shame. Perhaps the largest single factor in producing an undesirable form of secretiveness in children is a sense of guilt. He has done something, perhaps quite natural to childhood, yet he has been taught that the thing is bad; so when, inspired by his natural instinct, he again commits the act (it may be as harmless a thing as playing in water) he has a sense of guilt. This then becomes a secret thing which he must not reveal. It becomes hidden.

The building up in a child of a sense of guilt is poor child psychology. Baha'i parents know that "Abdu'l-Baha has taught that, "Everything in existence is good and only the lack of goodness makes a thing evil. The being is created good but when the lack of good is to be seen in it, then it becomes bad. Evil is not created by God" (Baha'i Writings, par. 963.) Since evil is not created by God why should we give little children a sense of guilt or evil, especially when this does not act as a deterrent but leads only to a feeling of necessity for keeping secret his thoughts, words and deeds?

This does not mean, of course, that a child should be left to do whatever his fancy dictates regardless of results. It means simply that we shall emphasize right behavior. Our efforts will be to encourage such attributes as justice, kindness, obedience, love for others and many other such characteristics. Thus the child will grow up free from any devastating sense of guilt but rather he will have a sense of satisfaction when he lives up to these ideals (according to his age and understanding of these ideals) and he will have correspondingly a sense of disappointment rather than guilt if and when he fails.

Those children who already have shadowy secrets which they think they are hiding completely and which for the sake of their own spiritual development, should not be kept hidden, need to be taught that: "whatsoever ye have concealed within your hearts is to Us open and manifest as the day." (Hidden Words.) This thought should never be used to frighten the child such as has been done so often in past generations. The child needs to think of Bahá'u'lláh as one who is ever present like a kind and tender father who gives to the child comfort and security. He should never conceive Him as a sort of Ghostly Guard spying upon the child at all times. Such were the thoughts of the small boy who after pilfering an apple, hid under the porch to eat it, where, as he said, "God can't find me."
the matter of hiding guilty thoughts or deeds is a question of training through sympathy and understanding by the adults so as to eliminate any real or imagined necessity for such secrecy. With older children it becomes necessary to give them instructions directly from the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Báhá, thus helping them to realize the uselessness of trying to hide that which is impossible to hide from them. Rebuild the child's confidence and broaden his conception of goodness. Encourage him to learn by heart the following prayer and to meditate thereon. "Hold Thou my right arm, O God! and dwell continually with me. Guide me to the fountain of Thy knowledge, and encircle me with Thy glory. Set Thine angels on my right hand, and open mine eyes to Thy splendor. Let mine ears harden to Thy melodious tone, and encircle me with Thy Presence. For Thou art the strength of my heart and the trust of my soul and I desire none other beside Thee."

WORLD ORDER IN PUBLIC AND UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

For about five years, gift subscriptions of World Order were presented to approximately 600 Public, University, YMCA and YWCA Libraries in many countries by a non-Bahá'í friend. This generous assistance is no longer available, and it is therefore suggested that local Assemblies consider how they can assist in this important kind of teaching work. The donation of subscriptions to Libraries and Colleges in the city or in the vicinity, if done by our 102 Assemblies, will mean no burden of expense for any one Assembly but in the total of results will maintain contact with a great number of non-Bahá'ís.

For further information, write the Business Manager of the magazine, C. R. Wood, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

NEWS OF EAST AND WEST

No. 23 of Bahá'í Journal, published by the National Assembly of the British Isles under date of June, 1940, outlines a Four Year Teaching Plan which was recommended by the Convention to the incoming NSA in principle, and by the Assembly immediately approved and set under way. The Convention recommendation read: "That the whole Bahá'í Community should engage in a four year plan of Teaching, with the object of having nineteen local Spiritual Assemblies established by Adán, 1944." Words of the Guardian recently received by the British NSA: "May the Almighty bless, sustain and protect the English believers, who in these days of unprecedented turmoil, stress and danger, are holding aloft so courageously the banner of the Faith, and who will, in the days to come, contribute, through His grace and power, a notable share to its establishment and recognition in the West." The National Spiritual Assemblies elected for 1940-1941—Mr. Arthur North, Chairman and Treasurer, Mr. H. B. Balyuzi, Vice-Chairman, Mr. David Hofman, Secretary, Miss Margarette Welly, Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Langdon-Davies, Mrs. Brown, Mr. Sugar, Miss Grace Challis, Mr. Asgar-Zadeh.

A circular letter dated May 15 has been received from the Spiritual Assembly of Paris. This communication expresses thanks for all the acknowledgments received since the Assembly issued its last letter in January, 1939. "From this gigantic struggle in which are plunged the entire strength of the Order of Good must arise a humanity regenerated by suffering. It is Good which will conquer; once again the Angel will lay the Dragon low. That is why we, the Bahá'í groups of France, who are in this tragic hour wholly involved in the terrible battle, we shall not abandon our efforts and we shall continue our activity as much as possible. During the year 1938-1939 we had to suffer the departure from Paris of all our young Persian students who had been the faithful friends of our meetings. Consequently, the opportunity of arranging the Annual Conference for the young Bahá'ís temporarily disappeared. Nevertheless, the idea was maintained and we succeeded in organizing some special meetings... on May 28 and 29, 1939, with our young believers from the Provinces." New believers were enrolled in a number of cities, and the French translation of Gleanings has been completed. "We cry with one ardent faith upon the protection of God and of Bahá'u'lláh." Of special interest to American believers is the French pamphlet entitled "Etude Sur Portes de Paris by Howard Colby Yves de Jeanne Montefiore, donnée en conférence à Paris en Mars 1939."

The progress report of Temple construction dated July 1, 1940 stated that Mr. Ealy and his assistants at the Temple have continued to make good progress in the casting of the ornamentation of the nine pylons of the main story. "During this time the second lift of the nine pylons has been completed and two sections of the third lift have been finished. At the present rate of progress, Mr. Earley should complete the ornamentation of the pylons about the middle of next September and within the estimate for the entire cost of this phase of the work.

"Excellent progress has been made at the Earley Studio at Rosslyn, Virginia, in the continuation of the casting of the sections of the ornamentation for the three faces between the pylons. Up to June 28 the following castings have been made and are being seasoned in the yard of the Studio, preparatory to shipment to the Temple: 9 large left-hand window grilles; 3 large right-hand window grilles; 3 small left-hand window grilles; 12 small arches for window openings; 3 soffits for main entrance doorways; 7 large columns; 39 cornice brackets; 3 large central panels above main arch. It is planned to ship a carload of the casts to Wilmette in about two weeks (July 15), so that Mr. Earley can get started on the erection of this material during the course of the next two months."

BRAILLE WORKERS

Volume III of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, Braille edition, was left at the Convention Exhibit and taken home by Chairman of the Braille Exhibit after the Convention. The owner can obtain the book by notifying Mrs. Gertrude Schurgast, 6213 Coleridge Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

"ITS NECESSARY AND VITAL ROLE"

The American Bahá'ís, under the guidance of Shoghi Effendi, are being educated to understand the mystery unfolding so rapidly in this Day of God, when the nations and peoples are summoned before the high court of destiny to answer for their failure to attain peace.

Far removed from the attitude of the pacifist on the one hand, and that of the nationalist on the other, is the view which the Guardian has been expounding over a period of years with increasing emphasis. Only by rising to the clear height of his spiritual insight can we hope to avoid entanglement in one or other of the extreme positions which today are irreconcilable by the forces of human reason or will.

"Though powerless to avert the impending contest," the Guardian pointed out in his letter dated July 28, 1939, "the followers of Bahá'u'lláh can, by the spirit they evince and the efforts they exert, help to circumscribe its range, shorten its duration, assuage its hardships, proclaim its salutary consequences, and demonstrate its necessary and vital role in the shaping of human destiny. Theirs is the duty to hold aloft and undimmed, the torch of Divine Guidance, as the shades of night descend upon, and ultimately envelop, the entire human race. Theirs is the function, amidst its tumults, perils and agonies, to witness to the vision, and proclaim the approach, of that re-created society, that Christ-promised Kingdom, that World Order whose generative impulse is the spirit of none other than Bahá'u'lláh Himself, whose dominion is the entire planet, whose watchword is unity, whose animating power is the force of Justice, whose directive purpose is the reign of righteousness and truth, and whose supreme glory is the complete, the undisturbed, and everlasting felicity of the whole of human kind."

The essence of the insight we need as Bahá'ís is to be found in these words. While detesting war, the Bahá'í recognizes the destructive phase of Divine power as the counterpart of its construction. There can be no peace as the mere perpetuation of all the organized disunities which preceded, led up to and made inevitable, the present world conflict. Peace means the harmonious relationship of all peoples and all social agencies in one organic world order. Evil must be destroyed, mankind must be purified, before the Kingdom can be revealed to human sight.

Though the Baha'i cleaves to the constructive phase, he must recognize the dual process which Shoghi Effendi described in The Unfoldment of World Civilization: "As we view the world around us, we are compelled to observe the manifold evidences of that universal fermentation which, in every continent of the globe and in every department of human life, be it religious, social, economic or political, is purging and reshaping humanity in anticipation of the Day when the wholeness of the human race will have been recognized and its unity established. A twofold process, however, can be distinguished, each rendering, in its own way and with an accelerated momentum, to bring to a climax the forces that are transforming the face of our planet. The first is essentially an integrating process, while the second is fundamentally disruptive. The former, as it steadily evolves, unfolds a System which may well serve as a pattern for that world policy towards which a strangely-disordered world is continually advancing; while the latter, as its disintegrating influence deepens, tends to tear down, with increasing violence, the antiquated barriers that seek to block humanity's progress towards its desired goal..."

In The Goal of a New World Order, written more than eight years ago, Shoghi Effendi declared: "We have but to turn our gaze to humanity's blood-stained history to realize that nothing short of intense mental as well as physical agony has been able to precipitate those epoch-making changes that constitute the greatest landmarks in the history of human civilization... That nothing short of the fire of a severe ordeal, unparalleled in its intensity, can fuse and weld the discordant entities that constitute the elements of present-day civilization, into the integral components of the world commonwealth of the future, is a truth which future events will increasingly demonstrate."

The Baha'i, therefore, is able to balance and reconcile truths and events which to others mean but hopeless agony and supreme defeat. What makes the unbeliever cry out that there is no Justice in the universe, makes the Baha'i realize that nothing can happen except what divine Justice decrees. We must try to convey these convictions to the public. This is the type of teaching to which masses will respond. The Baha'i view enhances the intensity of prayer without confounding reason. It recognizes the depth of the tragedy moving human hearts, but joins tragedy itself with the inmost virtue of faith in God.

But when understanding has been attained, we as Baha'is make only the beginning of obedience to the urgent call. The prime and vital matter is to teach. Never again can there be just this combination of forces on earth which makes it possible to establish a Faith which is the fulfillment of the entire prophetic era! Our capacity to teach is the pure flame of all action, all worship and all prayer. No believer, and no Baha'i body, can afford to hesitate a single instant. Divine reinforcement will come to every person and every agency striving to spread the Faith of Baha'u'llah.

"Would it seem extravagant... to expect that in the midst of so enervable a region of the earth and out of the agony and wreckage of an unprecedented crisis there should burst forth a spiritual renaissance which, as it propagates itself through the instrumentality of the American believers, will rehabilitate the fortunes of a decadent age?"—SHOGHI EFFENDI, America and the Most Great Peace.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

REMAIN ALOOF FROM POLITICAL AFFAIRS

We should—every one of us—remain aloof, in heart and in mind, in words and in deeds, from the political affairs and disputes of the Nations and of Governments. We should keep ourselves away from such thoughts. We should have no political connection with any of the parties and should join no faction of these different and warring sects. Absolute impartiality in the matter of political parties should be shown by words and by deeds...

According to the exhortations of the Supreme Pen and the confirmatory explanations of the Covenant of God, Baha'is are in no way allowed to enter into political affairs under any pretense or excuse; since such an action brings about disastrous results and ends in hurting the Cause of God and its intimate friends. (Words of Shoghi Effendi published in Baha'i News Letter of the NSA of India and Burma, December, 1939).

IN SERVICE TO THE SPIRIT

The Baha'i community represents the coming together and perfect blending of two orders of reality—the reality of the Spirit, and the reality of the Form. What we see in the individual as the struggle between body and soul is true also for society. Perfect health for the individual is the condition of harmony. Human society today is in torment because its form no longer corresponds to the needs of the spirit, and hence a new form must be created.

This creation is the miracle of our experience as Baha'is. The unified Baha'i community is nothing less than the sole type of social health existing in the world today. Its form, that is, its institutions and procedures, offers itself as channel to the dynamic force of the Holy Spirit without which civilization is dead. The form of itself is nothing, like the wooden form of a violin. But in the hands of the Musician, its instrumentality becomes the channel by which the higher world can interpenetrate the lower and raise the lower from dream to waking, from death to life.

In every phase of existence, the Form is necessary to the Spirit, but it is the Spirit which establishes the aim, the purpose and the activity of the Form. The child is man in the body-building period. When the Form is complete, the Spirit descends in the fulness of its power. Likewise, a period of time is needed for new communities to adjust to their Baha'i institutions and learn how to operate them for Baha'i ends. But we must take care lest the time of body-building be extended too long.

In this crucial hour, with the Guardian's successive messages resounding in our hearts, each local Assembly is called upon to examine carefully its plans and methods in order to concentrate upon constructive measures for the entire community. Each meeting should devote time to the subject of teaching locally, and to support of the national Temple and teaching plans. This is the paramount aim of the Administrative Order today, and should not be obscured or deferred.
on account of relatively unimportant matters. By establishing an order of business in which the important matters come first, local Assemblies can prevent their time and strength from being wasted by lesser questions presented by individual believers. The principle of spiritual efficiency surely means that Assemblies give first consideration to the Guardian's wishes, then to national needs, then to matters affecting the whole local community, and only then deal with personalities.

Miraculous achievement is assured the people of Bahá’u’lláh, but on condition that they do the will of Bahá’u’lláh and not substitute their own wishes and desires. If a community has not accomplished any services to the Cause for a period of years, but has simply existed in a passive condition, let the friends honestly face the situation and attempt strongly to become an instrument for the Spirit. No institution, no group, no person is ever an end to itself. Its vital life depends on capacity to become a means for some higher end. This is why the new Revelation produces such perturbation in the old society; it rends the veil from those conventional and materialistic methods by which self-interest has long remained concealed.

Many Assemblies would be surprised and gratified to learn how many different kinds of teaching material has been provided by the devoted effort of National Committees in recent years. For example, to list some of them, we have: Exhibit and display material, including a Temple model.
Braille literature for the blind.
Radio scripts on a number of subjects.
Slides for illustrated lectures.
Moving picture film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.
The Master’s voice record.
Bahá’í News Service, providing publicity material.
Child education material.
World Order Magazine.
Books for Library Placement.
Study Outlines.
 Pamphlets and leaflets presenting the Cause in many different ways.

TEACHING ACTIVITIES, NORTH AMERICA

Regional Teaching Committees report news of constructive activities of many different types in all parts of the United States and Canada.

From Nellie J. Roche, Secretary of the Regional Committee for Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, Northern Alabama and Northern Georgia, we learn of the special teaching project developed at Vogel Park, Cleveland, Georgia last June, already mentioned briefly in Bahá’í News:

“The history of the spread of the Bahá’í Faith in the South entered a new phase during the week of June 8-15, 1940, when, in all, twenty-nine Bahá’ís and their friends, from seven southern states and Ohio, were privileged to live together in spiritual love and unity in Vogel Park near Cleveland, Georgia. There were nineteen in residence, the others being guests for a day or so.

“The high point was on Friday evening, the last one together, when two persons declared themselves Bahá’ís! What joy there was!

“The program of instruction was brilliantly conceived and as brilliantly presented by Mrs. Howard Ives, Mrs. Or­cella Rexford, Dr. Glenn Shook and Mrs. Terah C. Smith, chairman of program. Two phases of Bahá’í life were stressed: (1) the development of the individual Bahá’ís on all planes of life as a preparation for his greatest personal participation in (2) the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, as presented from Bible prophecy, various historic concepts of government and religion, and their relationships, culminating in Bahá’í Administration.

“Program:
Standards for the New Age, Mental and Physical Health—Mrs. Orcella Rexford.
Standards for the New Age, Prayer and Spiritual Health—Mrs. Terah C. Smith.
Prophecy Fulfilled—the Promise of All Ages—Mrs. Howard Ives.
Building the New Government for the Golden Age of Bahá’u’lláh—Mrs. Howard Ives.
The New World Order—Dr. Glenn Shook.

“Several sessions of a most helpful teaching seminar were held with Mrs. Ives, Mrs. Rexford, and Mrs. Smith taking part.”

The adjoining area of North Carolina, South Carolina and Southern Georgia, through Esther Sego, gives particular mention to the teaching work of Mrs. Amalie Bodmer and of Louis G. Gregory. Mrs. Bodmer has done excellent work in and near Ashville, N. C. On September 6 she wrote that she had made 68 contacts since her arrival June 22, all of whom received a copy of Bahá’í Principles and The Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá . . . Eight people in Ashville proper have had the message . . . In the three years she has been teaching from the trailer, 221 persons have been contacted and only ten refused to take copies of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era.”

“In Columbus, Mr. Gregory spoke briefly at Benedict and at Allen University. He also spoke at Mrs. Pearl Dixon’s home where there were eleven present and a fine spiritual atmosphere. Interest in a further meeting was expressed . . . Miss Mickie and Miss Wheeler were invited to the church of a minister present. Augusta had the great privilege of having Louis in their midst the following day. He made several valuable contacts, among them a Methodist minister and professor at Payne College who opened two classes to him although it was during the examination period.”

“A class of seven to ten Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís has been meeting at Mrs.
Sego's home to study and discuss race origins, race relations and similar topics under the direction of Prof. Fred Steely of Paine College. Mrs. Eason of Raleigh reports that there will be five believers in Raleigh this winter.

The Regional Teaching Committee of Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and District of Columbia has lacked a Secretary for some months, but interesting news comes from individual teachers.

From Harold Hunt, Huntington, West Virginia:

"The Huntington group of interested pupils and believers on October 27th were greatly favored by the visit to this beautiful city of Mrs. Frank Baker.

"The meeting was held in the large dining room or ballroom of the Frederick Hotel. Only two dollars was asked for this privilege, and the hotel further graciously accorded Mrs. Baker the use of a private mezzanine parlor without charge for the evening circle of interested ones.

"At the conclusion it seemed that no one wished to leave. It was very striking.

"The meeting was an entire success, interesting contacts being made, and a deep impression of the value of the Baha'i Teachings, their effectiveness being left with all present.

"That evening a group met including Mr. Long, Miss Jessie Burgess, a newcomer, Mrs. Edwards and an occasional visitor, Mr. Mortison. This circle went further into the teachings for the purpose of a more intense diffusion of the power of the Cause. It was regrettable that Nason Adkins, the first one here to verbally declare himself, had cut his foot with an ax, and Miss Hazel Bragg, also studying and ready for declaration was sick, forced to remain at her post in a Kentucky Hospital. She works at Riverview Hospital, Louisa, Ky.

"Plans are under way for group contacts for Stanwood Cobb on November 9 and 10. The Superintendent of schools, Mr. Nutter, is endeavoring to have a group meet Prof. Cobb at a Dutch Treat luncheon. And Mrs. Pritchard, a social leader, (the leader) has expressed a desire to meet him also. Later preparations will be started for interracial contacts for Mr. Schurgast of Cincinnati."

The New England region is being stirred up through visits from Amelia Bowman, Secretary of the Regional Committee, who is carrying out a comprehensive teaching plan. Her first report deals with results in a number of cities in Vermont. From October 11 to 31 she was active in Rutland, Springfield, Chester, Brattleboro, Bellows Falls, Northfield, Randolph, Windsor, Montpelier and Barre.

In Rutland Mrs. Bowman met the Rabbi of the local Synagogue who had visited the Temple at Wilmette and was sympathetic. He will help promote her plans for talks before organizations on "The Destiny of America." The radio station broadcast the entire text of "A Pattern for Future Society" by Shoghi Effendi in connection with her local meetings. On October 28 she spoke before the Lions Club on the Baha'i Peace Plan, giving our literature and discussing the theme a half hour beyond the usual time.

Mrs. Bowman also spoke at a meeting of the Lions Club in Barre on the 29th, with over forty young business men present. The theme of world federation produced a wonderful response. She presented a number of books to the Public Library, and has arranged a later public meeting in the city for Florence Morton.

Two public meetings were held in Montpelier, at the Kiwanis Club and at the Montpelier Tavern. The latter meeting attracted the president of the Women's Club. Mrs. Bowman is laying a foundation for increased Baha'i activity in Vermont, and incidentally creates interest in Green Acre in this nearby but hitherto inactive state.

INTER-AMERICA TEACHING

The Baha'i Community of North America will rejoice with the Inter-American Committee at the acceleration of the Latin-American work. In obedience to the call of our beloved Guardian for more pioneers in South and Central America, the committee reports the following pioneers and visitors who are sailing this historic month of November for service in this field.

Two pioneers from Los Angeles, Mrs. Eleanor Adler and Mrs. Marcia Steward Atwater, are sailing together from New Orleans on the S.S. Santa Marta, November 16. Mrs. Adler is to settle in Bolivia at La Paz. She is the first to carry the message of Baha'u'llah to this country. Mrs. Atwater disembarks at Valparaiso, but intends to establish residence in Santiago, Chile.

Miss Elizabeth Cheney of Lima, Ohio, is sailing November 30 on the S.S. Uruguay. She will disembark at Buenos Aires December 17, where she will spend a few days before going on to Asuncion, Paraguay, to settle.

Miss Gertrude Gewertz is leaving shortly for Costa Rica, where she will assist in the pioneer work in Port Limon.

Mrs. Enos Barton sails on November 13 on the S.S. Brazil, for a visit with her son, Mr. Wilfrid Barton. Mr. Barton is a pioneer in Uruguay.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Wood of Cabin John, Maryland are prospective pioneers. They have been accepted by the National Spiritual Assembly to go to Rio de Janeiro.

Mrs. Sara Ellen Peake left in October to marry Mr. John Stearns, who is pioneering in Ecuador. She will be able to assist greatly in the work of spreading the Cause in that country.

Panama—Mrs. Louise Caswell writes asking that all the believers assist in the Latin-American work: "I believe that kindness, hospitality and true warmth (we should never stop short of a handshake with a Latin) will bring forth spiritual fruit seven hundredfold." (She rein Nueva Vizcaya, writes that there are

There is also a children's class of nine young people.

Buenos Aires—A letter received just in time to be briefly mentioned before sending off the news of the Inter-America Committee for Baha'i News tells of the very fine reception which Philip Sprague had on his arrival in Buenos Aires. He speaks of the cordiality of the friends there, of their delight to receive the Teachings which Mr. Sprague is so well qualified to present, and of the fact that many of the friends speak English perfectly and therefore should have a larger number of Baha'i books. Mr. Sprague sends a splendid clipping from a newspaper in Buenos Aires which for want of time we cannot now translate even in brief, but suffice it to say that the Cause was given wide publicity and very well received and many valuable contacts made.

Rio de Janeiro—From Mrs. Mathews we have received a copy of a most delightful letter from Mr. Cecil Best of Rio who thanks Mrs. Mathews for the copy of the Proceedings of the First Latin-American School Baha'i Session and expresses his pleasure at the visit of Miss Jeanne Bolles and Philip Sprague and says that it is their intention to remain in Rio to form a Spiritual Assembly there. Miss Holsapple was with them, and having been so long a resident of Brazil, she will be most helpful.

Quito, Ecuador—Mr. John Stearns still retains the same address for his mail although he has taken up other quarters.

It seems helpful.

Mrs. Hoagg is one of our most distinguished international teachers. She has spent long periods in the Holy Household when 'Abdu'l-Baha was in our midst and has been greatly valued by the Guardian with whom she worked in typing The Dawn Breakers. She was also in charge of the International Bureau at Geneva, Switzerland for some years. We feel that Cuba is especially fortunate. The address of the Center remains the same as listed in the last Bulletin.

Before leaving Havana Mr. Marangella reported the names of three new believers:

Mr. Philip Marangella has returned to this country and Mrs. H. Emogene Hoagg has gone to Havana to supplant him. Mrs. Hoagg is one of our most distinguished international teachers. She has spent long periods in the Holy Household when 'Abdu'l-Baha was in our midst and has been greatly valued by the Guardian with whom she worked in typing The Dawn Breakers. She was also in charge of the International Bureau at Geneva, Switzerland for some years. We feel that Cuba is especially fortunate. The address of the Center remains the same as listed in the last Bulletin.

Sr. Angel Ofier, San Miguel, 22, Havana.

Sr. Carlos Ortiz, Portas, Aguilar, 368, Havana.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras—Before leaving Tegucigalpa, Mr. Gerard Slater wrote that newspaper publicity brought an inquiry from Sr. David Medina Benegas in Tela, on the north coast of Honduras. Sr. Benegas said that he is secretary of a Masonic Lodge and a Theosophist. He asked for literature and offered his cooperation. He had previously heard of the Cause and was interested in learning of the work being done in Honduras.

Mr. Slater reports stopping at Costa Rica on his way to Bogota, Colombia. A meeting was arranged by Mrs. Woonson and Mrs. Ford where he spoke to a group of twenty. He tells in glowing terms of the work being done by these Pioneers and reported four new believers.

Philippine Islands—Sr. Felix R. Madera, Chairman of the Spiritual Assembly in Nueva Vizcaya, writes that there are twenty members in their community. Regular classes are held for those interested in learning about the Cause, having an average attendance of eight persons.

MESSAGES FROM THE GUARDIAN

Cablegrams and postcards written by the Guardian since 1932, published in Baha'i News as they were received, but not available in book form, have been compiled and printed as a pamphlet. Copies have been sent as gifts by the National Spiritual Assembly to all believers in North America and to pioneers. Members of organized communities receive them through their local Assembly; copies were sent to organized groups through their Correspondent, while the isolated friends were sent a copy direct. The friends who are so conscious of the spiritual power flowing through the Guardian's messages will appreciate what inspiration this pamphlet conveys.

"During this four week period (i.e., October), the casting of the various sections of the ornamentation for the nine faces of the main story has been continued and excellent progress has been made. "All of the small columns have been cast; the last of the nine doorway arches was cast during the last day of the period (i.e., October 31), and the large panels over the nine main entrances have been completed... The casting of the large columns will proceed during November. "On October 1, a car containing eight small columns, six arches, 12 large grilles and six small grilles was shipped from Roslyn. On October 3, a similar car containing 87,084 lbs. of crushed stone and 12 small columns, 10 pieces of ornament and 40 pieces of reinforcing steel was shipped..."

CORRESPONDENCE WITH FRENCH ESPERANTISTS

The National Spiritual Assembly has been advised that for the present it will be better for the friends to discontinue any correspondence with Esperantists in France, Baha'i or non-Baha'i.

TEMPLE TEACHING

From the August report of the Temple Guides Committee the following excerpts are taken for the information of the friends:

"A brief résumé of the visitors attending the Temple will show the results secured in guide work. During August, 1940, there were 10,609 visitors guided through the Temple. Although this is 192 fewer than in August, 1939, the explanation, I believe, is quite obvious; namely, that people coming onto the Temple grounds on the East side of the building, and finding no proper sign to instruct them where to find the entrance, leave without knowing they can go through the Temple or that guides will be provided. July and August, 1940, are the only months of this year that have shown a decrease over the same months of 1939. We should have had from 2,000 to 3,000 more visitors during these two months. And yet, despite this loss, the first eight months of 1940 shows an increase of 478 over the same period of 1939, the total during the eight months of this year being 10,900.

"A very interesting point is the widespread area from which visitors come. The August visitors were from 35 different States and also from the following foreign countries: Kingston, Jamaica, B.W.I., Plymouth, B.W.I., Montague, P. E. I., Manila, P. I., The Hague, Holland.

"Apprentice seamen from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station are coming to the Temple in increasing numbers, 633 of them having visited the Temple in August. A total of 2,046 seamen have visited the Temple since January 1, 1940.

"Other visiting groups include: The Phi Beta Kappa Society of Chicago and a Teacher's Class from the summer school of Northwestern University were shown through the Temple during August.

"A further idea of how the total of visitors through the Temple is mounting is shown by the fact that since July 1, 1932, the number of visitors totals 113,635."
both these numbers are proving useful, especially to the groups and isolated friends who welcome means of fresh information and contact with other Baha'is.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE PREPARATION OF BAHÁ'Í MANUSCRIPT

When a manuscript is sent in to the Reviewing Committee to be passed on for Bahá'í content and literary style, an author often has to spend a great deal of time in revision because he has been unacquainted with the acceptable procedures for preparing manuscript. We offer these Suggestions for the Preparation of Bahá'í Manuscript to facilitate the work of the author and of all committees concerned and to save time and expense in handling inadequately prepared manuscripts.

The Reviewing Committee has the right to assume that there will be no need for them to verify statements and quotations or to alter or correct construction, spelling, punctuation, or capitalization. Before the writer has typed the final draft he should carefully revise his manuscript in terms of the preceding suggestions.

Only typewritten manuscript can be accepted for review. It should be typed on the standard commercial sheet 8 1/2 inches wide by 11 inches high; neither onion nor paper of similar weight should be used; an original, not a carbon copy, should be presented to the Reviewing Committee.

The following definite instructions are given for the final draft.

1. Page Arrangement:
   a. The maximum length of line should be six inches.
   b. The main text should be double-spaced.
   c. One side only of the sheet should be used.
   d. Leave a margin of about an inch on all four sides of the typing.
   e. Do not economize too much on paper, as this makes the reading difficult.
   f. Type the same number of lines to each page, if possible.
   g. Do not divide a word at the end of the line, go over to the next line with the whole word.

2. Paragraphing:
   a. Paragraph indentation should be uniform and four or five spaces are sufficient.
   b. If block typing is used there must be a triple space between paragraphs.

3. Chapter Headings:
   a. Begin each chapter or other large division of manuscript on a new page.
   b. Omit periods after centered heading.
   c. Headings on the Table of Contents and the text should agree in wording, sequence and number.

4. Titles Quoted:
   a. Titles of books, poems, periodicals, etc., mentioned in the text should be underscored, not quoted.

5. Quotations:
   a. Quotations exceeding two lines in length should be typed without quotation marks, with lines single-spaced, in separate paragraphs, indented on each margin about six spaces more than the normal margin.
   b. Quotations of two lines or less should be included in the body of the text.
   c. Mark carefully open and close quotes and open and close parentheses and brackets, to be sure that they are always present in pairs.
   d. Brackets should be used, not parentheses, when words are inserted in a quotation for the sake of clarity.
   e. The source of a quotation should be made clear either in the context or by a reference. The reference should include author, title, page, and date of issue. The date of issue is especially important if the quotation is from a magazine article. If few quotations are used in the manuscript the source can be given directly after the quotation. But if there are many, they should be numbered and listed with corresponding numbers in an index at the end of the manuscript.
   f. All quotations from Bahá'í books should be taken from the latest edition. If the latest edition is not available, the edition used should be stated. In quoting follow the text exactly. No quotation should be taken from another quotation; the original source must be used. It is the custom of the Reviewing Committee to check a few quotations for accuracy. If they are badly quoted, the manuscript is returned at once to the writer for correction, without further reviewing consideration.

6. Transliteration of Oriental Words:
   a. In order that the spelling and marking of Bahá'í words conform to the rules for the transliteration of Oriental words, a sheet of these transliterations should be obtained from the Publishing Committee before the last typing of manuscript (or refer to transliteration section in The Bahá'í World).

7. Inserts:
   a. Any page that needs inserts or has material scratched out, should be retyped.
   b. No author's comment should be left in the margin.

REVIEWING COMMITTEE

RACE UNITY PROJECTS

Milwaukee was recently the scene of unusual activity among minority groups of the city. On Saturday, September 28, the community entertained fifty Indian friends, representing the Indian councils of Milwaukee. On Sunday the Race Unity Committee were guests of the city, and a public meeting was held at the Center, with friends from many race groups attending. Indian guests offered music; a Jewish friend acted in the genial capacity of chairman; and the speakers represented the white and colored groups of American life. At the close of the meeting, one of the visitors said: "There can be no question; this is a proof." On Monday evening, Rev. Battles acted as host to the speakers in his own church, the Calvary Baptist. Milwaukee's busy week-end impressed every heart with the reality expressed in the vivid words of 'Abdu'l-Baha; that "all are one in the color and beauty of servitude to Him." An Eskimo speaker was announced for the coming week at the Center.

The Temple area was particularly heartened by the outstanding accomplishment of Chicago this summer, when the friends were permitted to display a Temple model at the National Negro Exposition, celebrating the 75th year of Negro freedom. It is estimated that 12,300 pamphlets were distributed. An evening of the Exposition was given over to the Bahá’í Faith, and 600 attended the program. Fireside meetings have resulted for the fall, and a fine public follow-up meeting was held at the Center on October 3rd, when members of the Race Unity Committee were invited to share in the program. The committee feels deeply the high significance of these meritorious deeds at the very heart and center of the Bahá’í Faith in America, for ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has said: "When such meetings are established, and the participants associate with each other with perfect love, unity, and harmony, the angels of the Kingdom praise them, and the Beauty of Bahá’u’lláh addresseth them, 'Blessed are ye! Blessed are ye!' . . . When a gathering of these two races is brought about, that assemblage will become the magnet of the Concourse on high, and the confirmations of the Blessed Beauty will surround it."

Every Assembly and group is urged to send in to the Race Unity Committee, reports of projects in race fellowship. All are urged to use the direct message at such meetings, and to present the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh as the common meeting place of every heart, for "opposition, enmity, and prejudice among the white and colored cannot be effaced except through faith, assurance, and the teachings of the Blessed Beauty."

"THE TORCHBEARER OF THE NEW, THE WORLD CIVILIZATION"

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dearly-beloved friends:

My heart is thrilled with delight as I witness, in so many fields, and in such distant outposts, and despite such formidable difficulties, restrictions, obstacles and dangers, so many evidences of the solidarity, the valor, and the achievements of the American Bahá’í community. At the end of the First Century of the Bahá’í Era approaches, as the shadows descending upon and enveloping mankind steadily and remorselessly deepen, this community, which can almost be regarded as the solitary champion of the Faith in the Western World, is increasingly evincing and demonstrating its capacity, its worth, and ability as the torchbearer of the New, the World Civilization which is destined to supplant in the fulness of time the present one. And more particularly in the virgin and far-flung territories of Latin America, it has in recent months, abundantly given visible evidence of its merits and competence to shoulder the immense responsibilities which the carrying of the sacred Fire to all the Republics of the Western Hemisphere must necessarily entail.

Through these initial steps, which, in pursuance of the Plan conceived by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, this community has taken, through the settlement in each of these sovereign states of the New World of American Bahá’í pioneers, through the formation of Bahá’í groups and the establishment of two Assemblies in Buenos Aires and Bahía, the American National Assembly, as well as its Inter-America Committee, and all subsidiary agencies, no less than the individual members of the North American Bahá’í community who have sacrificed and are still sacrificing so much in their support of this Divine and momentous Plan, have earned the unqualified admiration and the undying gratitude of sister Assemblies and fellow-workers throughout the Bahá’í World.

Their work, however, is only beginning. The dispatch of pioneers, the provision of adequate means for their support, their settlement and initiation of Bahá’í activities in these far-off lands, however strenuous and meritorious, are insufficient if the Plan is to evolve harmoniously and yield promptly its destined fruit. The extension by the Parent Assembly—the immediate source from which this vast system with all its ramifications is now proceeding—of the necessary support, guidance, recognition and material assistance to enable these newly-fledged groups and Assemblies to function in strict accordance with both the spiritual and administrative principles of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, would seem as essential and urgent as the preliminary task already achieved. To nurse these tender plants of the Vineyard of God, to foster their growth, to direct their development, to accord them the necessary recognition, to help resolve their problems, to familiarize them with gentleness, patience and fidelity with the processes of the Administrative Order and thus enable them to assume independently the conduct of future local and national Bahá’í activities, would bring the plan to swift and full fruition and would add fresh laurels to the crown of immortal glory already won by a community that holds in these days of dark and dire calamities, valiantly and almost alone, the Fort of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Fortified by these reflections, let them gird up their loins for still mightier exertions and more brilliant victories.

December 3, 1940.

SHOGHI

GLAD-TIDING FROM THE HOLY LAND

"It will certainly rejoice your heart to know that notwithstanding the difficulties created by the war situation, the Cause in the countries neighboring the Holy Land is making steady headway. In Damascus where the friends are well advanced with their plans for the purchase of a plot of land as site for their future Hazíratu’l-Quds, and in Egypt where the authorities have at last granted, though only to two of our communities in Cairo and Isma‘iliyyih, special burial grounds, the prospect appears to be particularly bright and promising. This glad-tidings will assuredly impart infinite joy to all our American friends, and stir them to scale still nobler heights of self-sacrifice in service to our Cause."— SNOGH EFFENDI, through his secretary, November 7, 1940, in letter to Mrs. Thomas Collins.

BANISH SUPERSTITION

The great purpose of Divine Revelation is the education of mankind. The Teachings written by the Supreme Pen, now authoritatively translated to us; also their interpretation and applications first by the Master and now by the Guardian, are related universally to the peace, well-being and progress of all mankind. They are also like a sharp sword which separates truth from error, light from darkness, life from death. Man attains that for which he struggles on the basis of his faith in them.

As for mankind, submerged in a sea of superstition, the waves of which are increasingly violent and destructive! The hold of illusions upon people can be realized only by those who, divinely aided, have wholly or partially escaped. One superstition is the belief in and fear of death, despite the fact that all nature in its variegated forms and all true religion as well, impress the continuity of life. One formerly in close contact with the Master, registered the observation, possibly inspired, at any rate true, of how a man will sleep in a place with other men who are perfect strangers to him, at times, without fear of injury to body or possessions. Yet the same man would fear the nearness of a corpse during his hours of sleep, although it can neither slander, beat nor kill him, all of which a man with physical life can do. This illustrates the hold of superstition upon most people. It is obvious that humanity free itself from all such weights, it might easily soar heavenward in executing the Will of God.

Man must apply himself to true sciences, especially those, as Bahá'u'lláh says, "which do not begin and end in mere words," for such studies will powerfully aid his release from superstitions. But the education of mankind is progressive. In the light of religion and science he is destined to make ideal progress. But the people of this stage of human development, even though guided by the glad-some Light of Revelation and trained by scientific studies, sometimes unconsciously bring into Bahá'í centers the gloomy tales and attachments of their previous associations. All such veils we must patiently and lovingly, yet very thoroughly, try to remove. Of course the Divine Teachings give no sanction for the use of force and violence even in the matter of separating souls from idolatry.

From time to time reports reach us about some of the friends, mostly the younger Bahá'ís, clinging to such idols as reincarnation, numerology, astrology and occultism expressed in psychic phenomena, for all of which there is no sanction in the Divine Teachings. The Master in his wonderful Book, Some Answered Questions, demolishes every basis of faith in reincarnation. In a signed Tablet, circulated among the early believers, He points out in the clearest terms, its ruinous effect as superstition, limiting human progress.

Psychic practices, condemned in both the Old and New Testaments of the Christian Bible, are also discouraged and forbidden by the Revelation of this new day. It is apparent what havoc they now play in the world at large, enabling demagogues and charlatans to exploit the unsuspecting, magnifying the ego and banishing capacity for spiritual guidance. When spreading the teachings, the most vital and confirmed of all human activities, should not the effort be to reach normal and balanced people, who will not veil others by their personal oddities and eccentricities? Who will not try to make the Faith revolve around themselves?

Why waste precious time with numerology, which has no basis in science, reason or revelation? Why not study instead algebra, geometry, calculus or even plain old arithmetic, confining "numerology" to concentration upon Nine, the symbol of the Greatest Name, which, with its derivatives and significances, has a message for all the beings?

Astrology, but the restatement of ancient beliefs and superstitions, should in this wondrous day give place to astronomy, science of the outward heavens, which wonderfully conveys us the Glory of God.

The Divine Sun that is Manifestation sheds light upon all true sciences and arts, rather creates them for man's use and enjoyment. Reflect upon what light and inspiration are shed upon the fine arts, architecture, painting, sculpture and music; upon the liberal arts, such as poetry, eloquence, language, logic, psychology; upon the industrial arts, such as trade, business, engineering, navigation, shipping, etc.; upon the natural sciences, such as biology, physics, chemistry, healing, pioneering, invention, and discovery; upon the social sciences, such as sociology, anthropology, history, statescraft, administration; upon the greatest of all sciences, Theophany, the science of Manifestation. When there is so much that is real within the reach of man, an inexhaustible plan of development and power, why should he concentrate upon darkness and superstition? His Maker constantly beckons him and confirms his efforts to advance. Bahá'u'lláh says:

"The heart must be free from the fire of superstition, that it may obtain the light of assurance and that it may perceive the Glory of God."

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

IN THE SPIRIT OF ACHIEVEMENT

The community of the Faith in America has been given a particular mission and a definite task to achieve by the end of the first Century of the new Era. This mission, described by the Guardian in his successive communications on the subject of the Seven Year Plan, is not merely paramount in importance, it is likewise all-inclusive, its needs and demands embracing every Assembly, every Committee, every Institution and every individual in the entire American Bahá'í community. By our collective and our individual relationship to this mission, we have access to the very Spirit of Divine Victory establishing peace and justice on the earth. As we bend our energies in its service, as we respond to its enlarging opportunity, as we strive to understand its profound implications, so do we receive capacity to achieve, for in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh it is not our personality that renders service, but the Spirit which can use it for higher than personal ends.

The Seven Year Plan is both our supreme test and our supreme opportunity. It fixes the scope and also the time of the task. It means continuous effort, not simply an occasional activity, and a whole-hearted, united effort, not merely vague wishes and pious hopes.

The Plan, as all have noted, includes two tasks of equal importance: Temple construction, and Teaching.

Temple construction, by its very nature, is a concentrated work. It requires resources provided by all believers, but the individual believer can not participate in the actual work of construction.

Teaching, however, is only partly an effort which can be concentrated by either local or national authority. Bahá'í teaching is the sum total of our inner lives reflecting spiritual truths into the world around us, and not a mechanism for psychological promotion along lines of American economic or political enterprise. We need teaching facilities, like pamphlets, and we need plans as well as authoritative supervision, for the Faith does not tolerate a jungle of conflicting personal activities, but the most elaborate of plans and the most advanced of advertising methods, alone, will not result in the confirmation of souls and the formation of spiritual communities.

Thus our teaching must always represent a balance between the vital power of faith and intelligent consultation on means, methods and occasions for collective enterprises. On the one hand, we cannot abandon teaching to the mystical element in individuals, and on the other hand we cannot concentrate teaching into the authoritative actions of local or National Assemblies and their many Committees.

The individual believer must always strive to live in the spirit of teaching, and we are assured that whoever attains this station will be witness to miraculous achievement. Bahá'u'lláh gave this assurance; the Master repeatedly emphasized this promise; and the Guardian has in many passages given it definite application. The whole conception of pioneer teaching is based on the heroism of the pioneer and not on the efficiency of the administrative order, though this too plays an essential part after the heroism has been manifested in the field of action.

It is imperative that local Assemblies attain full understanding of the nature of Bahá'í teaching, both as an expression of the inner life and as the fruit of mature consultation. The purpose of this statement is to offer a few suggestions to local Assemblies, and call attention to their heaven-sent opportunity to vitalize their communities, transform inertia into enthusiasm, and depression into radiant action.

1. Every believer has a teaching mission which can be expressed in wise use of daily contacts as well as in participation in community plans. The foundation of unity and vigorous spiritual life is encouragement of this Divine gift, and provision of all possible opportunities by the Assembly for its active use. But the individual believer should not depend upon the Assembly for opening the doors to service. Faith is that inner activity which the Holy Spirit employs to create occasions for teaching. Each of us is responsible for the character of our own inner life.

2. Teaching plans should arise from careful analysis of the available local resources and conditions and not simply imitate some method which has proved successful in some other city. The local communities are different in size; they also differ in experience, maturity and in the distribution of talents and capacities. The spirit of teaching is a conquest, not a technique learned at second-hand. Thus, in one community the important meeting may be a weekly or monthly public lecture, while in another city the Spirit may raise up an intimate fireside group which will accomplish what a formal lecture fails to achieve.

3. The aim of teaching is to enlarge our numbers with confirmed followers of Bahá'u'lláh, people of zeal, knowledge and capacity. Any community pausing too long in its growth displays a danger signal which every believer as well as the Assembly should heed. Life is growth. Absence of motion is absence of life. To overcome such a condition, we should first of all look to our own inner lives and not try to find in criticism a means of silencing our own conscience. Even a few truly consecrated believers in a community can be a channel for a renewal of general activity and enthusiasm. To possess intensity without sacrificing the principle of consultation—to recognize authority without sacrifice of initiative and enthusiasm—this is the balance which all believers might well strive to attain, and the balance without which the community can scarcely survive.

4. After setting in motion the forces of teaching for service to the Faith in the community, the Assembly should strive for additional energy which can be applied in establishing the Cause in nearby localities. Indeed the privileges are boundless and offer fulfillment to every devoted Bahá'í in the land. For as we examine the teaching field we realize how many varied types it needs, from the pioneer who can stand alone in his faith, to the enthusiastic believer able to make contacts, and from the educator who can expound the laws and principles to the administrator who can assist in coordinating the efforts and releasing the capacities of all the friends.

As the Guardian wrote in The Advent of Divine Justice (pages 44, 45): "Upon every participator in this concerted effort, unprecedented in the annals of the American Bahá'í community, rests the spiritual obligation to make of the mandate of teaching so vitally binding upon all, the all-pervading concern of his life. ... If he be member of any Spiritual Assembly

The Photograph and Sales Committee is glad to announce a new edition of the etching which reproduces the photograph of the Master known as the "smiling photograph." No copies of this etching have been available in recent years. The quality of this reproduction makes the etching beautifully adapted for framing. The price, including postage and packing, is $1.65 per copy. Order from Mr. H. E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill.

PUBLIC TEACHING IN ATLANTA

In connection with the meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly held in Atlanta, Georgia, on November 22, 23 and 24, 1940, opportunity was taken to hold another in the series of public meetings which the Assembly has been holding in different cities over a period of several years.

Particularly important have been those meetings held in cities of the South, where the number of believers is fewer and the teaching opportunity overwhelming.

The Atlanta meeting was held Sunday evening, November 24, in the Biltmore Hotel, which had given assurance that no race restriction would be imposed. The first speaker, Mr. Harlan Ober, developed the theme of The Need for a Spiritual Renaissance. This was followed by an address by Mrs. Dorothy Baker on The World Tomorrow. Horace Holley presided.

Meanwhile, the local Baha'i Committee had worked out plans for radio addresses and also for a talk in the First Congregational Church to a Negro congregation. Mr. Allen B. McDaniel spoke over the radio Friday afternoon, November 22, Mrs. Terah Smith spoke at the same station Saturday afternoon, while Mrs. Dorothy Baker delivered the address in the church Sunday morning.

The Regional Conference held Sunday afternoon is reported in a separate article.

PRESENTING THE BHA'I FAITH IN THE SOUTH

On the afternoon of Sunday, Nov. 24, 1940, an historic meeting devoted to the varied problems of teaching the Bahá'í Faith in the South, was held at the Atlanta Biltmore Hotel, Atlanta, Ga.

There were present seven members of the National Spiritual Assembly, and one or more representatives from each Regional Teaching Committee located east of Texas. Other Bahá'ís from Atlanta, and from Augusta, Ga., and Greenville, S. C., brought the total number to twenty-seven, coming from six different southern states.

Never before have so many Bahá'ís gathered together for the one purpose of discussing the varied problems that Bahá'í teachers have to face, and it was recognized by all those present as marking a new era in this most important work.

Mr. Allen McDaniel, Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, presided, and read from America's Spiritual Mission, 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Prayer for the Southern States. Then the meeting was opened for discussion, led by Nellie J. Roche, Secretary of the Regional Teaching Committee.

An informal report on the Special Bahá'í Teaching Conference held in June, 1940, at Vogel Park, Ga., was given, and permission to hold a similar conference in the summer of 1941 was granted by the National Spiritual Assembly, with financial support pledged.

It was agreed that the secretaries of the four Regional Teaching Committees east of Texas be asked to serve as the General Committee to make arrangements for the 1941 Special Bahá'í Teaching Conference.

If possible, a brief Youth Meeting will be held during this time, and arrangements will be made for a full exhibit of Bahá'í literature, and teaching materials of all kinds.

The problems of presenting the Faith in a bi-racial society as exists in the South, to two races bound together by many ties of mutual dependence and personal affection, but separated in many ways by differences in racial development and experience, by custom and tradition, and by legal enactments, were discussed, dividing themselves into three groups, (1) The White Majority; (2) The Colored Minority; (3) The Jewish Minority, with the accent on the first two as offering the greatest challenge to us.

The discussion established the fact that the greatest problem is that of presenting the Faith to the majority group, and that the importance of reaching this group in large numbers cannot be overstated. It is they, who, to a very great extent set the pattern of life, establish customs, and are responsible for the enactment of laws.

Our second group, the Colored Race, present us with grave responsibilities for offering the Pattern for Future Society, and because an alert and forward-looking minority is apt to be more immediately responsive than any majority group, this problem is quite different in many ways. The Jewish group probably offer the greatest difficulties because of their conservatism, and their racial solidarity in social, business, and religious activities.

The recent tour made by Mrs. Dorothy Baker through several Southern States was commended, and the National Spiritual Assembly was asked to make arrangements for more such tours.

Telegrams and letters of greeting from several friends unable to attend the meeting were read.

NELLIE J. ROCHE, Secretary, Regional Teaching Committee Kentucky, Middle and East Tennessee, Northern Georgia and Alabama.

INTER-AMERICA NEWS

The Inter-America Committee desires to correct the impression that Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw in visiting Jamaica met with difficulties growing out of class distinction as was stated in Baha'i News No. 139. Mrs. Shaw reports that they were treated with every courtesy. Her account of the various meetings which were held and the clippings received by the Inter-America Committee give every evidence of awakened interest, and of their gracious reception, and tactful method of introducing the Faith.

Argentine

Philip Sprague writes that within a fortnight a class which began with twenty or so members has developed into a membership of seventy who are enthusiastic and studying with great interest. He feels that there is much that can be accomplished in Argentina. Mr. Sprague has sent an additional order for books to supply the ever increasing demand. He speaks of the very delightful reception which the Friends tendered him on his arrival and the excellent newspaper publicity.

Mr. Sprague’s account was further elaborated by a letter from Mr. Salvador Tormo, who gives a stirring account of the increasing interest in the Cause. Mr. Tormo speaks of an inspiring meeting at which a retired Commander of the Argentine Navy and his wife declared themselves. He also reports a contact, which may prove exceedingly valuable, of a chemical engineer, who is a member of one of the oldest and most important families in the Argentine.

Bolivia

Mrs. Eleanor Smith Adler has been en route to her destination in La Paz, Bolivia, where she was due to arrive about the tenth of December.

Brazil

Word of the most encouraging kind has been received from Rio telling us that Miss Jeanne Bolles is there and plans to remain for some time; she is being assisted by Miss Leonora Holsapple. This news was received from Philip Sprague who visited in Rio de Janeiro and sent an enthusiastic account of his reception there. A later letter from Miss Bolles confirms his report of the interest and enthusiasm recently shown in the Cause. She also reports that all of the centers through which Miss Cheney will pass on her way to Paraguay have been notified of her coming.

Chile

Mrs. Marcia Steward Atwater will reach Valparaiso on December tenth and will proceed to Santiago, where we have a registered believer and where Mrs. Atwater has many letters of introduction.

Costa Rica

Word from our two pioneers, Mrs. Woolson and Mrs. Ford, brings us the intelligence that Matthew Kaszab has been visiting them. He spoke at a meeting of the group in Costa Rica and was very well received. They mention the establishment of a Baha’i Library and from the encouraging reports which they send, we have every reason to believe that a firm foundation is being laid in Costa Rica.

Cuba

Mrs. Emogene Hoagg is at present located in Havana and is devoting her time to deepening the consciousness of the six Friends she found there. She speaks of their great friendliness and their admiration for Mr. Marangella who recently returned to New York.

Guatemala

Mrs. Stewart is now in Guatemala and has submitted to the Committee a suggestion that it might be well for her to spend some time in the Central American Republics to consolidate the work there. This suggestion has been forwarded to the National Spiritual Assembly as the Inter-American Committee feels that this will be a fine move.

Nicaragua

Mr. Matthew Kaszab writes that he has discussed with the Friends in Costa Rica a very tentative plan for a radio hook-up of Panama, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, giving weekly talks on the Cause alternately in Spanish and English. Mr. Kaszab, whose plans are somewhat uncertain is now in Managua, Nicaragua. His address is in care of the American Consul.

Paraguay

Miss Elizabeth Cheney sailed on November thirteenth for Paraguay, stopping en route at Rio for one day, one day at Montevideo, and arriving in Buenos Aires on December seventeenth. She plans to remain there for a few days before proceeding to Asuncion, Paraguay.

Uruguay

Mrs. Enos Barton of Chicago sailed for Montevideo to join her son, Wilfred, on November fifteenth and is due to arrive on December second. Mrs. Barton will cross over to the West Coast and visit the various centers there en route home. Miss Gertrude Gewertz, to our regret, has been unable to obtain a visa to Costa Rica and will not sail as previously reported.

Mrs. Sara Ellen Peake has also been unable to get away as planned.

Translations

The translations which are now in print are being carefully reviewed by a specially appointed committee and reports will be submitted to the National Assembly in case any revisions or corrections are necessary.

Pioneers

The Inter-America Committee asks that any of the Friends considering pioneer work in South or Central America, make plans to stay for more than a year. The National Spiritual Assembly feels that it is too expensive to finance brief visits. This request applies particularly to those who need financial aid in reaching their posts.

LIST OF SPANISH TRANSLATIONS

The following Bahá'í books and pamphlets have been translated into Spanish and printed. Not all are now available, and some translations will be revised before a new edition appears. However, the list illustrates the great progress made in this very difficult field of Inter-America teaching.

BAHÁ'Í EXHIBIT AT THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR

The Bahá'í experiment of bringing the teachings to the world on a wholesale plan was a very gratifying success. Not only did the literature go into thousands of homes through the public school children, who came in groups from every district of New York and New Jersey and other nearby states, but several thousand persons passing leisurely through the building were attracted by the glorious utterances of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá upon the wall and by the Temple Model. Many stopped to ask questions of the attending Bahá'ís. The Fair opened in April, 1939, and continued until October 10 of that year, reopened on May 10, 1940, and continued until October 27. During those periods thirteen thousand persons signed the register and the following distribution was made of literature. Two hundred and forty thousand booklets which were made especially for Fair distribution, ten thousand of the large Temple pamphlet, ten thousand post cards of the Exhibit at the Fair, five thousand printed notices of lectures at the New York Center and some three thousand programs of the Souvenir at West Englewood, one thousand World Order Magazines, and five hundred Youth Magazines.

Realizing the power of the Word one catches some vision of the extent of this work in His name.

STATES AND PROVINCES LACKING A SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

"First century (of) Bahá'í era drawing to a close. Humanity entering outer fringes most perilous stage its existence. Opportunities (of) present hour unimagainably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order."

SHOGHI EFFENDI, May 1, 1936.
Examining now the map of North America alone, we find that after traversing more than half the allotted seven years we still lack a local Spiritual Assembly in the following States and Provinces. The formation of groups, however, and the registration of isolated believers has proceeded vigorously, and the basis for our collective success has been established.

Newfoundland, Labrador, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Yukon.

TEMPLE MODELS

In view of the many demands upon the Budget for Temple construction and teaching work, the National Assembly advises the friends that there are several Temple models available for exhibits, but that any local Assembly, Regional Teaching Committee or other Committee wanting the use of a model, must be prepared to assume, from its own budget, the cost of transportation to and from the designated point. The National Exhibits Committee takes care of the routing of models and their repair when necessary. Address Mr. Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman of Exhibits Committee, Waterford, Va.

TEMPLE POSTCARDS

A very attractive postcard with illustration of the Baha'i House of Worship is now available. It reproduces the photograph showing the Temple reflected in water. Price per copy, 5c.

Another new Temple card consists of a small, double card with the reflection picture in half-tone and the nine texts of Baha'u'llah selected by the Guardian to be inscribed over the nine entrance doors. This was designed as a souveni of the non-Baha'i visitors guided through the House of Worship. Price, two for 5c, or $2.00 per hundred, postpaid.

Orders filled by Photograph and Sales Committee. Address Mr. H. E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill.

A BAHAl GLOSSARY

Mr. Ali-Kuli Khan is acting for the National Assembly in the preparation of a new and more complete Baha'i glossary. In order that this glossary may contain the definition of all words and terms required by believers in their study of the Writings, the friends are requested to suggest words and terms they wish defined. The suggestions can be sent to the National Assembly, which will assemble them for the use of the special Committee.

LIBRARY ACTIVITY

The Library Committee would like to call the attention of the friends to the C.C.C. Camp Libraries and the Army Post Libraries which are making urgent calls for gift donations and offer a field for Baha'i book placements. Several requests have already come to this Committee for books for these important libraries and we hope to receive many more such requests.

Other libraries which might be contacted more frequently by the friends are the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Libraries, Women's organizations, Jewish Community Clubs, and other Hebrew Libraries. A number of Jewish Libraries have accepted copies of Advent of Divine Justice recently and asked for additional volumes. It is encouraging to report that a number of splendid opportunities for further teaching work resulted from placing books in these libraries.

Suggestions have been given by this Committee in past issues of Baha'i News which would be helpful in making library contacts and will answer many of the questions sent along to us concerning library donations and methods of approach.

Several splendid tributes to our books and teachings have been received from librarians and we should like to share a few excerpts from recent letters with the friends. Mr. James McMillen, Director of Libraries at Louisiana State University writes: "We are indeed grateful for the four works on the Baha'i Faith which you so kindly presented to the Library. The life and teachings of Baha'u'llah are of great interest to the layman as well as to the student of theology. The comprehensiveness, power and beauty of the Baha'i doctrines lend a ray of hope to this troubled and war torn world. . . . We consider ourselves fortunate to be the recipient of these publications and invite you to visit our collection in the near future."

Miss Evangeline King, Librarian of the Cheyney State Teachers College, Cheyney, Pa., writes: "Personally I am deeply interested in the Baha'i teachings and you may be sure I shall try to capture the interest of others. I should say that nothing could be more timely for us than this clear pure gospel."

Mrs. Miriam Kemp, Librarian of the Cook County School of Nursing Library, Chicago, writes: "The book (Baha'i World, Volume 7) is very interesting indeed and we appreciate your generosity in giving us such a valuable book. I'm sure that we are all eager for world brotherhood, peace and unity, to which this book is devoted."

Mrs. Brown, Librarian of the Tennessee State College, Nashville, wrote some time ago: "There are a number of our students who do get a great deal of inspiration out of reading these books."

The Library Committee has a ample supply of books available for presentation and would welcome many more requests from the friends. Contact librarians with confidence that our books will appeal to them and will be accepted readily.

THE BAHÁ’Í WORLD
References to the Bahá’í Faith for Volume IX
Will all Bahá’ís be on the lookout for references to the Bahá’í Faith in books or periodicals by non-Bahá’í authors or articles by Bahá’ís in non-Bahá’í publications? Please send these references to Mrs. Bertha H. Kirkpatrick, Oliver, Mich., for use in Bahá’í World volume IX. The information should include name, author and publisher of the book with page on which reference occurs. If the reference is in a magazine or periodical the information should include the name, publisher and place of publication of the magazine as well as the date of the issue and page on which reference occurs. This request does not refer to newspaper publicity which should be sent as usual to the Bahá’í News Service. The references may be favorable or otherwise.

RACE UNITY ACTIVITY
A recent project in the South successfully opened up for members of the Race Unity Committee, contacts with clubs, schools and universities among the colored population of the entire South. In Nashville, the Tennessee State College, as well as Fisk, opened its doors to two successive Bahá’í speakers and formed study groups for adults and students. Dr. William Hale, president of State College, said to his student body, “This program is unanswerable.” At LeMoyne College and at Henderson Business College in Memphis, Bahá’í talks were enthusiastically received. City College of Louisville heard the world order message; and high schools at Greenwood, Mississippi; Suffolk and Holland, Virginia. In August, Haines Institute; in Columbia, Benedict College and Allen University were addressed. Seven talks were given in Liberty City, a government housing project with 3,100 inhabitants in Miami. Colored churches in Jacksonville and Atlanta, home groups, and general public meetings were held throughout the South. The noble old scientist, Dr. George Carver of Tuskegee, said: “I am very partial to the Bahá’í Faith; the spirit of Christ is in it.” Dr. Fred Patterson, president of that institution, remarked: “The Bahá’í Faith has the spirit of sincerity and is without some of the usual limitations of religion.”

The inter-racial commission at Atlanta was interviewed, and in this city the National Assembly held a mixed public meeting, preceded by a most interesting conference with Southern teachers and friends.

A Milwaukee member of the Committee recently addressed the Twilight Forum of the Jews of Milwaukee, and has been privileged to collaborate with Mr. Gould, editor of the Wisconsin Jewish Chronicle. Milwaukee is also very busy with the Indian group. It is recorded that 16 boys and girls attend youth group regularly, and that Mr. Powals, now a member of the Milwaukee community, is in correspondence with Indians throughout the United States.

Detroit recently entertained the Race Unity Committee at a very lively community dinner, where a few of the following suggestions were made, and recorded by Mrs. George True:

1. Use the family approach. Children are democratic, and through neighborhood play, often bring families of varying races together.
2. Fairs and expositions held by minority groups in a city are open to friendly cooperation and display of a model of the Bahá’í Temple.
3. Visit Urban Leagues, Indian Councils, and inter-racial centers. Many of these are now receiving the World Order Magazine. Invite club groups to attend special Bahá’í events in your city.
4. Use good Bahá’í speakers who happen to pass your way, to address such groups in schools and clubs. These groups are often segregated from the general flow of your city’s life and would otherwise never find you.
5. Read some of the books listed in the bibliography supplied by this Committee, to increase your understanding and sympathy.
6. It is suggested that when reaching minorities the whole world order program be given, so that the friends reached will not confuse us with mere racial movements.
7. Cultivate the friendship of editors of minority papers and periodicals.

RACE UNITY COMMITTEE

BAHÁ’Í NEWS SERVICE
To assist the friends who are isolated or who have formed new groups since the Guardian’s change of Assembly jurisdiction, the Bahá’í News Service has arranged a planograph sheet.

This sheet displays a variety of types of publicity to illustrate ways of writing up publicity material for newspapers. Each clipping is identified as to its type by the printed headings. The illustrations include articles on the following: announcements of meetings, radio broadcasts, Commemoration services, follow-up after a lecture series, various phases of the Faith, letters to editors, weekly column, and presentation of books to libraries.

These samples are only suggestions of how to write publicity. It is better for you to write your own.

We have removed the names and dates from the headings of the clippings in order to emphasize the material in the articles themselves.

The bottom of this same sheet is devoted to the right and wrong ways to paste the names and the dates of the newspapers to the clippings themselves, when sent to this Committee for mounting in the Press Books. We hope that the friends will give this matter some attention. Publicity clippings are history in the writing. They are perishable and when improperly glued together have to be re-arranged. The clippings suffer, the Press Books are most untidy and the Committee is unable to adequately cope with the increased task. May we thank the increasing number of friends who have found it possible to help us in this great matter.

The Bahá’í News Service has available for your use:
1. Book review releases.
2. Releases on Bahá’í attitude toward certain controversial subjects.
3. A series of articles on the “Goal of a New World Order.”

CHILD EDUCATION

"One hour's reflection is preferable to seventy years of pious worship." (Iqán, p. 238).

The art of meditation needs to be practiced if it is to have its fullest results. One who has never learned this art finds it difficult of accomplishment at first. The person becomes fidgety and his mind wanders away from the subject upon which he is trying to meditate. However, by persistent effort and practice he can finally master the art. Then as the periods of meditation lengthen they will increasingly yield rich, full spiritual experiences. Children too can learn to meditate. Of course the desire must be there. How can that desire be built up? It is a matter of time and spiritual growth.

The very young child is too active and too absorbed in the world about him to take time out for the silent consideration of things spiritual and yet in his small way he does meditate. His are not usually spiritual thoughts but rather of things he sees and loves, in his world. "Why," he asks, "don't fishes sing too like little birds?" or "Does that apple mind getting bumped when he falls from the tree?" or "Are flowers afraid to stay in the garden all alone at night?" So on and on goes his questions, only, alas, in many cases to be laughed away much to the child's chagrin and disappointment. But, you say, there are no answers to such foolish, childish questions. So the matter is dismissed and an opportunity to start the child off on a simple experience in meditation is lost. Yet any one of these questions and thousands of others like them could be the means of directing the child's attention to God and His Creation and His plans as far as we know them.

A four year old girl once asked a bumble bee which was buzzing over the tall holly-hocks, "Are you talking to the flowers, Mr. Bee?" and her Bahá'í grandmother, standing in the garden near by answered, "'Abdu'l-Bahá used to talk with the flowers." Thereupon the child's eyes became as stars and she ran up to her grandmother, saying, "Tell me more." So the old lady and the little girl sat down and talked of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. And when the grandmother left, the child remained, sitting on a large stone, in a pensive mood. Since we cannot enter into the thoughts of our children we cannot say of what this child was thinking but to all appearances she was lost in meditation.

So much for the spring-board, if we may use that expression. Now we come to the question of time and place. No child can meditate unless the environment is right. The young child should be provided with a place where he can be quite alone and undisturbed where he can think things out for himself. He will not meditate on spiritual things during his early years but he will be establishing the habit of thinking things through even though in the beginning it may be largely a matter of physical experimentation with things in his environment. The mechanical pattern will be there. Then as his interests turn to spiritual things, the child will meditate upon them. All of this does not mean that he shall be set off in the yard or in his room or nursery to be completely forgotten. He will (and rightly) resent that but it does mean that he will not be constantly shadowed or hovered over by some overly concerned parent or guardian. He will have his God given right to be alone.

As the child grows older he can be encouraged to meditate on some definite subject taken from the Bahá'í writings. For example this from the Hidden Words: "O Son of Being! Attribute not to any soul that which thou wouldst not have attributed to thee, and say not that which thou dost not. This is My command unto thee; do thou observe it."

The older child may be taught that through meditation inspiration for the improvement of life on this plane may be accomplished, for 'Abdu'l-Bahá has told us that, "O people of Bahá! The faculty of meditation is the depository of crafts, arts and sciences. Exert yourselves, so that the gems of knowledge and wisdom may proceed from this ideal mine and convey to the tranquillity and union of the different nations of the world." (Bahá'í Scriptures, par. 122.)

Since meditation is of such vital importance to the spiritual development of mankind, let those who have been divinely entranced with the reading and guidance of children assist the child in developing this faculty remembering that 'Abdu'l-Bahá said that, "Through this faculty man enters into the very Kingdom of God." (Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, page 164.)

ASSEMBLIES IN RURAL AREAS

Hitherto, the only area in which a Bahá'í community of nine or more could establish a Spiritual Assembly has been the locality bounded by the civil limits of the town or city. Now, with the Guardian's approval and advice, we have a new type of area, which Bahá'í communities located in agricultural districts, outside of towns and cities, can also form an Assembly.

As, however, there must be some definite limitation for the jurisdiction of Assemblies in rural areas, the National Assembly has chosen the logical one of the township.

Beginning April 21, 1941, wherever there are nine or more declared believers residing in the same township, or outside any of the towns or cities located in the township, they will be authorized to establish a Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of that township, and the area of jurisdiction of such Assemblies will be the entire township. That means the portions of the township occupied by towns and cities.

Thus, there can be a Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the township, and at the same time, Assemblies for different towns and cities within the township, all these Assemblies having definite areas of jurisdiction entirely separate and distinct, and easily determined by the believers.

Bahá'í groups qualifying under this new principle are requested to report to their Regional Teaching Committee with a detailed explanation of the residence of each member of the group, and the Regional Committees in turn will report such applications, with a recommendation before April 21, to the NSA. In the event that confusion is caused by the fact that a township might have the same name as a town within it, the National Assembly will endeavor to suggest a solution of the problem.

Furthermore, in those States (mostly in the South) which do not have the township form of political division, the believers living in the same county, but outside of any town or city in the county, can establish a Spiritual Assembly under the same conditions as apply to the township area already mentioned.

The number of isolated believers in the United States and Canada is now about fourteen hundred, many of them resident in rural areas outside of any municipal government. The Guardian's permission gives to every isolated Bahá'í, no matter where he lives, the responsibility for striving to establish the Truth in his area so that a Spiritual Assembly can eventually be formed. This broadening of the basis of our collective participation in the world order of Bahá'u'lláh transforms the relation of all isolated believers to the Bahá'í community. Their separation from the local Assemblies is a temporary condition, not a permanent principle as hitherto. They are nothing else than pioneer teachers in their locality, and every such believer is urged to ponder his new and enlarged spiritual privileges as a Bahá'í.

The sooner that Regional Teaching Committees can report on groups of nine or more believers, the more effectively can steps be taken to prepare them for the important step of the election of a Spiritual Assembly on April 21.

REGISTRATION CARDS OF ISOLATED BELIEVERS

Individual teachers who confirm an isolated friend are requested to see that the registration (enrollment) card when filled out is sent through the Regional Teaching Committee and not direct to the National Assembly. These cards provide space for a counter-signature, and this is to be filled out by the Regional Secretary and not by the teacher. The purpose is to center responsibility for the status of the new isolated believers in the administrative body acting for each area outside the local Assemblies.

WORLD NEWS

1. Iran

The close of the year 96 and the inauguration of the Baha’i New Year 97 were doubly blessed and sanctified for the friends in Iran by the receipt of the following cablegram by the N.S.A. of Iran from the Guardian on the eve of the Ridvan Festival:

"Beloved friends of Iran remembered (at the) Holy Shrin es. (I am) fervently praying (for the) speedy fulfilment (of the) divine promises—SHOGHI."

The N.S.A. for the coming Baha'i Year was elected by 94 votes out of the statutory number of votes for Iran fixed at 95. The members are as follows:

3. Jenabi Shuja' Ala'i.
7. Jenabi Ahmad Yazdani.
8. Jenabi Dr. Younis Afrikhtih.

A number of pilgrims were able this year to reach the hallowed precincts of the Shrines in Palestine and to partake of the blessings of a visit to the Central Baha'i Institutions in Haifa and the Guardian. The glad tidings they brought back to us the steady headway the beloved Cause is making throughout the world were of great cheering effect for the Baha'is of Iran.

The Youth Committee in Tehran is going to renew its untiring efforts of last year for the up-keep of a Baha'i Summer School in Haji Abad some 39 kilometres outside Tehran. The School will be opened towards the end of June and will be of great success if administered on lines similar to those of last year.

Scheme is being worked out by a devoted Baha'i of Tehran, Mr. Abdul Hussein Zargham for the up-keep and education of a number of Baha'i orphans in his farm outside Tehran. The Youth Committee is sparing no effort to make this proposition a success. Already a number of orphans have been collected from the provinces and Tehran, and the work is started with excellent promise of future success.

An alarming fire recently broke out at night in the stores of the Rice Company in Bandar Jaz, a small port on the Caspian Sea. It threatened to destroy an extensive neighbourning quarter of the town. A Baha'i youth named Aqa Moham­ammad Sangi, member of the local S.A., who heard of the news, immediately left his bed and went out to fight the fire with no interest except his Baha'i love for his fellowmen. While owners of endangered properties left their premises in the face of the inevitable peril, he simply throw himself into the flames and with heroic sacrifice and extraordinary suffering succeeded in subduing the fire and cutting it off from the rest of the town. He reached his goal but lost his life in a glorious task watched with awe and admiration by hundreds of spectators. The inhabitants of the town, deeply moved by this disinterested and heroic sacrifice, paid a pathetic homage to the departed soul and more than 400 of them followed his body to the cemetery and attended the Baha'i interment rites, which at Muham­madans, they avoided so far. The admirable self-sacrifice shown with spontaneous impulse by this Baha'i young man had its immediate recompense in the form of the interest of the spectators in Baha'i teachings and is bound to bear in future other fruits of great importance. The fire and the heroic efforts of this departed soul in such a neglected corner of the world may in themselves not appeal to the outside world but the spontaneous and disinterested character of the self-sacrifice is instructive for us in showing in how many different ways the true Baha'i spirit can find expression capable to awaken interest in our fellowmen.

The foregoing items have been selected from recent issues of the News Letter published by the N.S.A. of Iran.

2. Irak

From the News Letter issued by the N.S.A. of Irak the following reports are reproduced.

The Tenth Annual Baha'i Convention was held on April 26, 1940, in the Haziratu'l-Quds of Baghdad, and was attended by seventeen delegates. The meeting was opened by the chanting of a Tablet, which was followed by a word of welcome addressed to those present by the Presiding Officer of the N.S.A. Then the permanent Chairman and Secretary of the Convention were elected. The annual report of the activities of the outgoing N.S.A. was then read by the Secretary (a brief summary of the Report is given below). This was followed by a discussion by the delegates of urgent matters of the Cause, particularly the question of teaching and the establishment of new centers, according to the expressed wishes of the Beloved Guardian. A number of other recommendations were made for consideration by the incoming N.S.A., which was elected at the end of the session.

The main items in the N.S.A.'s Report were:

a. Completion of half of the building of the Haziratu'l-Quds of Baghdad.

b. Gradual purchase of modern furniture for the completed half of the Haziratu'l-Quds, including the National and Local Assembly rooms, the Archives and Library rooms, and the meeting hall.

c. The start to institute a befitting National Archives and National Library.

d. Subscriptions in the Arabic translation of the "Dawn-Breakers," being printed by the N.S.A. of Egypt.

“I SHARE YOUR SORROW IN THE LOSS . . . OF BELOVED FATHER DUNN”

I share (your) sorrow (in the) loss, (and) participate (in your) rejoicings (for the) triumph, (of) beloved Father Dunn. (The) magnificent career (of this) veteran warrior (of the) Faith (of) Baha'u'llah reflects (the) purest luster (of the) world historic mission conferred (upon) American community by 'Abdu'l-Baha. LETTER FROM THE GUARDIAN

Excerpts from Letter Written to the National Spiritual Assembly Through His Secretary

The copy of the Convention photograph, as well as copies of the photograph showing the Temple reflected in water which he had specially requested you to mail to him have also safely arrived. The Convention photograph he has already placed in Baha'u'llah's Mansion in Bahji. And as to the Temple photographs, they are being distributed to various Baha'i centers and individuals.

The Guardian warmly welcomes the step the N.S.A. has taken with the view of transferring the headquarters of the national Treasurer and of the Publishing Committee to Wilmette—which action he thinks will effectively help in further unifying, coordinating and consolidating the activities of the N.S.A. This is the type of action which he contemplated when making the statement mentioned in his letter of July 4, 1939. As the Cause steadily expands throughout America the need for a center in which most, if not all, of the national activities of the Faith would be visibly concentrated becomes apparent, not only because this would mean greater efficiency and coordination in the activities of the N.S.A., but also in view of the added prestige which the Cause would acquire through the establishment of such a center. Whenever feasible the Guardian would recommend that more national committees should transfer their offices to the vicinity of the Hazratull-Quds, which constitutes the nucleus around which the entire administrative machinery of the Cause will have eventually to be set up and function. Such development does not entail the slightest departure from the principles of Baha'i Administration nor should it imply further centralization, and is only a step forward in the evolution of the national administrative center of the Faith in America.

With reference to the suggestion made in your letter of July 13th that group status should be defined as beginning with five believers in the same city, or town; the Guardian considers this regulation inadvisable and unnecessary. Next to an isolated believer any number of confirmed Baha'is less than nine persons should be considered as automatically constituting a Baha'i group. No regulation, however, need be introduced regarding this matter. In this connection he wishes me to reaffirm his previous vital instruction that extreme care should at all times be taken by your Assembly not to introduce into the Cause any additional rules and regulations, even in the form of suggestions, that would tend to make the Baha'i administrative order a highly complex and codified system. Only when absolutely required, and with the Guardian's previous approval, should any new regulations be laid down.

The Guardian does not think it would be necessary to obtain his approval before granting recognition to the newly-established Assembly in Buenos Aires, or to any group in Central and South America that seeks to organize a local Assembly. For the present it devolves upon the American N.S.A. to initiate, guide, encourage and nurture all Bahá’í groups and Assemblies established in these territories. This is a vital part and an admittedly arduous task of the teaching campaign which the N.S.A. has undertaken and is now so relentlessly pursuing in Central and South America. However temporary such a jurisdiction on the part of the N.S.A. may be, it should nevertheless be exercised with the utmost care, tact and vigilance.

The Guardian wishes me also to express his gratification at the action taken by the Temple Trustees for the purchase of fill for the Temple grounds. He is delighted to know that this has contributed to increase the value of the land of the Hazírat’u-Quds.

In closing he wishes me to stress again the urgency and all-importance of the teaching campaign in Central and South America which, he is most happy and encouraged to note, is proceeding with full vigor. The self-sacrifice, resourcefulness, and pioneering spirit displayed by so many Bahá’í teachers, coupled with the guidance and continued encouragement given them by your Assembly, he confidently hopes, will insure the successful prosecution of this campaign of unprecedented magnitude in the history of our beloved Cause.

"VOW THEMSELVES TO INCOMPARABLY SUBLIME TASK"

Beloved friends:
The Guardian’s cabled message of October 29, 1940, is a call for positive action from the very depths of our hearts. "I beg them to close their ranks jointly, severally and vow themselves to incomparably sublime task whose operation must hasten the ascendency of the beloved Cause and the spiritual redemption of a reconstructed mankind."

Such a call impels us to pray and reflect as individual believers. It likewise impels us to enter every meeting of Bahá’í consultation and devotion with chastened spirit. Through the years the American friends have penetrated deeper and deeper into the mystery of oneness. We have tried to unify on the basis of agreement with a number of liberal principles. We have attempted to unify on the basis of outer conformity with an administrative order. We have had mystical experiences of unity, and agreement on the articles of a world Faith. But now a truer unity is required, such as arises from the penetration of one Spirit through all the bodies, when minds and hearts are no longer assertions of independence but servants of one higher Will.

The Guardian’s call is both the reiteration of assurance such as the Master expressed and a warning that events and circumstances are at hand when our community will be subjected to severe test. What favored children the American believers have been, protected from persecution and physical ordeal such as kindled the flame of sacrifice in Eastern lands! Soon, perhaps, the period of childhood will end and the eternal foe of Revelation, the ecclesiasticism which denies the Manifestation from age to age, will find ways of challenging our beliefs, our institutions and our social order.

We have but to turn back to the Guardian’s letter of June 15, 1935 (reprinted in Messages from the Guardian) to realize that such a challenge is predestined and indeed necessary for the greater growth of the Faith in this stage of development. Straw that show the blowing of the wind are the article by William M. Miller in The Moslem World, reprinted in pamphlet form and also reprinted in a magazine promoting inter-church unity, and the significant fact that in Iran it appears from the press the government has taken over the educational and missionary establishments maintained by a Christian sect, thus bringing their influence to an end. Repercussions of this event will no doubt be felt more and more in America in the form of increased attacks on the Cause of Bahá’ulláh.

Moreover, the climactic character of civil events approaches culmination, augmenting confusion and violence during the interval before world order can be created. Thus the small community of believers, like a boat in a great sea, may be tossed about on the angry waves, calling for the utmost loyalty of the crew to the Captain’s commands.

Whatever realm we survey, the call to unity is of the utmost importance to one and all the friends. At every turn in the road, the Guardian gives us the true counsel and the supreme imperative to grow in capacity to serve. May we now, "jointly and severally," realize what it means to vow ourselves to the "sublime task."

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

THE DOOR OF CIVILIZATION

For many months, the National Assembly has been endeavoring to encourage and train the local Assemblies by brief statements in Bahá’í News.

This month let us consider the institution of the local Assembly as a device through which the true civilization, gift of the Spirit, is to enter the world of humanity and displace those limited and competitive societies of the past that now come to their end of unbridled authority and unmoral power.

"The importance, nay the absolute necessity of these local Assemblies is manifest when we realize that in the days to come they will evolve into the local House of Justice, and at present provide the firm foundation on which the structure of the Master’s Will is to be reared in future." (Bahá’í Administration, page 32)

"In order to avoid division and disruption, that the Cause may not fall a prey to conflicting interpretations, may lose thereby its purity and pristine vigor, that its affairs may be conducted with efficiency and promptness, it is necessary that every one should conscientiously take an active part in the election of these Assemblies, abide by their decision, enforce their decree, and cooperate with them wholeheartedly in their task of stimulating the growth of the Movement throughout all regions. The members of these Assemblies, on their part, must disregard utterly their own likes and dislikes, their personal interests and inclinations, and concentrate their minds upon measures that will conduce to the welfare and happiness of the Bahá’í Community and promote the common weal." (Bahá’í Administration, page 36)

"With these Assemblies, local as well as national, harmoniously, vigorously, and efficiently functioning throughout the Bahá’í world, the only means for the establishment of the Supreme House of Justice will have been secured." (same page)

And finally, these words, written November 14, 1923 (page 47): "Let us pray to God that in these days of world-encircling gloom, when the dark forces of nature, of hate, rebellion, anarchy and reaction are threatening the very stability of human society, when the most precious fruits of civilization are enduring severe and unparalleled tests, we may all realize, more profoundly than ever, that though but a mere handful amidst the seething masses of the world, we are all in this day the chosen instruments of God’s grace, that our mission is most urgent and vital to the fate of humanity, and, fortified by these sentiments, arise to achieve God’s holy purpose for mankind."

The very sublimity of the mission carries with it a grave responsibility. The administrative order is the instrument for the transmission of a Divine will to mankind. The Bahá'í community is the arena in which we demonstrate our faith. Thus, all that concerns the local Assembly is of great importance. It must have a wisdom commensurate with its power. As it contributes to unity, the Assembly helps release the forces of the Kingdom, but if it prevents unity, then it resists those illimitable powers.

Let us realize that the quality of our spiritual lives is determined locally. It is in our own community that we meet the vital issues of truth and error, justice and injustice, love and prejudice. The occasions may appear small and insignificant, but they nevertheless contain every test by which God tries and disciplines His servants. Could we behold with a spiritual eye, we would recognize how and why the Master, on one occasion, could warn a group of believers that their continued disunity would lead to the ruin of the city. Similarly, where reverence, knowledge, humility and sacrifice exist, blessings will descend beyond human capacity to create. While gloom encircles humanity, can we not reflect more and more of His glory of Light?

INTER-AMERICA NEWS

Costa Rica

Glorious news has come from Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Woolson in Costa Rica. "We are very happy with the progress of the work here and overjoyed to have ten Bahá'ís. They are all great souls. The Message has been given in five of the seven Provinces of Costa Rica and everybody seems to be waiting to hear of the Glorious Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. There is so much to be done that it makes one wish she were an infinite number of persons and that there were no such thing as time and space." The whole Bahá'í Community rejoices with our Pioneers in Costa Rica and will add their prayers for their continued growth.

Nicaragua

Mr. Mathew Kaszab writes of a successful lecture given at the Masonic Temple at which there were thirty-one persons present. He is hoping to have Mrs. Stewart assist him in the near future as he is assured by friends in Nicaragua that a much larger crowd can be gathered for a meeting at the International Club. He reports several people reading the Bahá'í books and a few definitely interested.

Ecuador

We learn from Mr. John Stearns that the Cause is slowly, but surely progressing and ever greater opportunities for presenting the Teachings are being made. He encloses a registration card for Sr. Les Gonzales, one of the four young men with whom he is sharing a house.

Havana, Cuba

Word has been received from Mrs. Hoagg that Miss Josephine Kruka arrived in Havana about the middle of December to assist her with the work of spreading the Cause.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

Miss Leonora Holsapple writes that she has taken an apartment with Miss Jeanne Bolles to have a convenient place to hold meetings. The first was held on the Báb's birthday. The meetings are small, but representative of several nationalities and the people seem very open minded and sympathetic to the Cause. They promise to develop into a regular study group. Miss Holsapple speaks of the great pleasure derived from the visits of several visiting Bahá'í teachers, Mrs. Barton, Miss Cheney and Mr. Sprague.

Argentina

Word of the most encouraging sort has come from Mr. Sprague in Buenos Aires. He reports that his classes are assuming tremendous proportions and that the quality of their belief is very wonderful. In addition to the classes already held several times a week in his apartment, a Youth Group has started which meets twice a week. The Youth Group is led by Mr. Carlos Foos.

A Temple model has been shipped to Buenos Aires to aid in the teaching. Miss Elizabeth Cheney on her way to Paraguay writes of her stay in Buenos Aires: "Mr. Sprague had scheduled her to speak on Divine Unity and to my amazement about sixty people came piling in until every foot of space on chairs or cushions on the floor, seemed to be completely occupied." From the Buenos Aires Friends she secured introductions to important persons in Paraguay which may prove of great value in her work there.

Philip Sprague sends the enrollment card of Mrs. Gladys Sharpe from Buenos Aires and states that there are several others who are uniting with the Community at once. He also asks for a mat of the Temple as now completed and sends copies of an illustrated paper from Buenos Aires which contains a lovely article in Spanish with the photograph of the Center of the Covenant and a large picture of the Temple under construction. Also there is a photograph reproduction of the group meeting in his apartment, a large group only half of which is shown in the picture. He further states that all but one of the radio talks have been translated and that in about a week they will be having two half-hour periods a week for their programs for one month. This is glorious news!

Venezuela

With regret the Inter-America Committee reports the return to Canada of two valued pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Salla.

Santiago, Chile

Mrs. Marcia Steward Atwater reports very satisfactory developments in Santiago. She has taken a house for three months and has started weekly meetings. At the first, nine guests were expected. Mrs. Atwater is learning Spanish rapidly as the resident Bahá'í, Senora Espinoza, does not speak English. Senora Espinoza has been cooperating in every way. Mrs. Atwater has made many important contacts and reports that excellent publicity has been promised. She has found the Chileans very gracious and kind.

Panama

Mrs. Oliver again writes from Panama asking for more Bahá'ís in that territory. "With all of us working the doors will Grave of Mrs. May Maxwell, Buenos Aires, Argentine, where the memorial is to be constructed.

BOLIVIA

We have received very good news from Mrs. Adler in Bolivia. She reports: "The people who know about the Cause are represented thus: An American woman, social leader—people in the diplomatic service, individuals in Bolivia on mining projects—the man and his associates who have done the work of bringing 10,000 refugees into Bolivia—Manager of the American Cable Co., an Englishman. The people in whose Pension I am living, the man is a Lieutenant Colonel in the Bolivian army, his wife, who is French, besides several others to whom I have spoken briefly, but who have pamphlets, and two young Bolivian men, about thirty in all.

"Almost everything at the dinner table here is discussed from the Bahá’í angle. They have all had the Cause presented to them in detail, and it is practically a Study Group.

"The city is beautiful, adobe walls throughout, against which brightly garbed Indians lean, so still they remain when squatting or leaning; they are almost as decorative as a mass of flowers. They are to be seen in every section of the city. The better class of them are strong and straight and proud in their bearing. Among themselves their spirit is not crushed: how to reach them! I ache to be able to speak Spanish. I am afraid I shall miss much because I do not. I am trying, but it is difficult. Please encourage the study of Spanish among the Bahá’ís."

The Inter-America Committee wishes other applications for consideration, but such as know the languages and can promise to remain in a post for one year or longer (preferably permanently), will be given preference.

AN ATTACK UPON THE CAUSE

1. Letter written December 28, 1933.

Dear Mrs. Dilling:

The members of the National Spiritual Assembly have noted with surprise your reference to the Bahá’í Faith on page 128 of your book entitled "The Red Network, A Who’s Who and Hand Book of Radicalism for Patriots."

Your description of the world religion founded by Bahá’u’lláh is one that cannot be recognized by any person at all acquainted with the teachings and spirit of this faith.

No official Bahá’í body, nor any recognized believer, has ever taken part in conferences of the War Resisters International. Furthermore, the quotation from The World Tomorrow, July, 1933 issue, referring to the imprisonment of Bahá’ís in Turkey was inaccurate and incomplete in that the editors were unaware of the fact that the Turkish government after full investigation, dismissed the charges and freed the prisoners. As it happens, the National Spiritual Assembly sent representatives to call on the Turkish Ambassador at Washington in connection with this episode, and the records at the Embassy will fully bear out the facts I bring to your attention.

In conclusion I would like to state that the Bahá’í Faith is the only revealed religion which specifically charges its members with obedience to government as a spiritual and not merely a civil duty and obligation. This principle, together with the other principles which have been upheld by American Bahá’ís for more than forty years, make it perfectly clear to any unbiased person that your statement about the Bahá’í Cause is a complete deviation from the truth.

We bring these facts to your attention on the assurance that you intend your book to be sufficiently accurate to command the respect of intelligent and sincere persons.

We respectfully request you to place on file the enclosed copy of letter we have sent to Mrs. Albert W. Dilling, author of the book entitled "The Red Network, A Who’s Who and Hand Book of Radicalism for Patriots."

The National Spiritual Assembly is ready at all times to supply the Federal Government with any information concerning the Bahá’í Faith that may be desired.

2. Letter to Department of Justice written December 23, 1933.

Department of Justice, Washington, D.C.

Gentlemen:

We respectfully request you to place on file the enclosed copy of letter we have sent to Mrs. Albert W. Dilling, author of the book entitled "The Red Network, A Who’s Who and Hand Book of Radicalism for Patriots."

The National Spiritual Assembly is ready at all times to supply the Federal Government with any information concerning the Bahá’í Faith that may be desired.

3. Letter written December 13, 1940.

Dear Mrs. Dilling:

Our attention has been called to the fact that editions of your book entitled “The Red Network” issued since 1935 contain the same erroneous references to the Bahá’í Faith which we corrected in the letter written you on December 28, 1935.

We still assume that you intend your book to be a statement of facts and not a compilation of unfounded rumors or suspicions, and this being the case we are glad to offer to provide you with authentic statements about the aims and purposes of the Bahá’í Faith which prove to any unbiased person that this Faith could not possibly be listed among the Communist and radical movements your book is intended to expose.

We are also very glad to extend you an invitation to visit our national office recently established at the above address (i.e., 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette), where all our records are available.

For your information I would like to state that a copy of the letter we wrote you on December 28, 1935, was sent to the Department of Justice at Washington on the same date.

4. No reply has been received, up to February 27, 1941, to either of the two communications sent to the author of the book, which therefore makes it clear that accurate information and truth are not part of the author’s intention in its publication.

5. The friends will find a reference to Bahá’ís of Turkey in the Guardian’s letter of February 12, 1929, in “Bahá’í Administration.” In Bahá’í News of April, 1933, page 4, there is a cablegram from the Guardian stating that the friends in Istanbul had been acquitted, but 53 believers were still imprisoned in Adana. In the following month’s issue reference is made to a later cable from the Guardian reporting the friends in Adana had been released.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY.

TEACHING PROJECT IN

SOUTHWESTERN STATES

Not many months ago Shoghi Effendi vividly described the spirit which he hoped would motivate our American community in 1940. “The American believers,” he wrote, “standing on the threshold of the fourth year of the Seven Year Plan, pursue their God-given task with a radiance that no earthly gloom can dim, and will continue to shoulder its ever-growing duties and responsibilities with a vigor and loyalty that no earthly power can either sap or diminish.”

Surely the teaching efforts just concluded in the Southwest, by the joint labors of Beatrice Irwin and the Bahá’ís of Albuquerque, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, San Antonio, Phoenix, and Glendale, in the period from October 12 to December 4, are a surpassing witness to the vitality which animates our Faith in these critical days.

The campaign was carefully prepared in each city, with the cooperation of various National Committees, to obtain wide publicity and personal contacts, and to consolidate with adequate literature and plans for follow-up study. Among the materials provided were Temple model, slides for Temple lectures, traveling library for display, diversified free literature, radio transcription, radio talk mats and publicity on the Temple, photographs and publicity of the speaker, and books for library placements and sale. Especially useful as gifts in contact work were World Order Magazine and Miss Irwin’s own pamphlet, “Heralds of Peace.”

A tangible measure of results is preserved in generous columns of publicity accorded in every city, often accompanied by headlines and photographs.

It is not as easy to measure the human results; we are assured only that countless new persons, significant in their various communities, were reached in the preliminary arrangements for lectures and exhibits, and that hundreds heard news of our Faith in a presentation which linked it dynamically with the unfolding destiny of our embattled world. “It was one of the most interesting assembly periods we have had in a long time,” the principal of Sumner High School in Kansas City wrote, “... The importance of the message of the Great Teacher... made a lasting impression on our boys and girls...” And from the president of St. Phillip’s Junior College in San Antonio came these words: “You have turned our hearts and minds to that ideal which transcends the many forces which are at work among men... May the light which you have brought us be our guide until we shall have reached the mountain top of a new day...”

The following are highlights of the campaign in each city:

Albuquerque: The Temple model was exhibited in the central window of the Albuquerque Gas and Electric Company, “attractively arranged with palms and a book display,” in “the most prominent spot in the city.” The exhibit was regularly announced on the radio, together with the public meetings, and gained a great deal of comment.” There were three lectures at the Hilton Hotel on successive nights, which attracted about a hundred inquirers. Many outstanding people met Miss Irwin through interviews, luncheons, and dinners. These included an Indian leader and his wife, “one-time Pueblo spokesman for New Mexico in government affairs;” a distinguished ethnologist who plans to include a section on the Bahá’í Faith in his forthcoming cultural world history; the state leader of the Townsend society; a women’s editor; a Rabbi, “one of the most stimulating encounters of the week”; two professors; and several others. “This we definitely know,” the Assembly secretary wrote, “personal contacts were successful and Miss Irwin in her intelligence and spirituality and breadth, lent prestige to the Cause in this city.”

Kansas City: The Faith was directly presented in three public lectures at Journal Centre and the Municipal Auditorium, which drew about 125 inquirers. The finest opportunities, however, were in lectures for the Kansas City Advertising Club (approximately seventy), Sumner High School (1,000 colored students), the Presidents and Past Presidents of women's clubs (about eighty-five women), a men's fraternity, and the Theosophists. "In every instance Miss Irwin gave the Baha'i Cause first mention; she was received most favorably." Her talk for the Advertising Club received almost a column in the Ad Club News, including announcement of all Bahai lectures, and in the next issue Miss Irwin's photograph and talk were featured on the cover. This publication reaches several hundred readers. Bahais from Topeka and Independence also met Miss Irwin. In summary the Local Assembly wrote: "This has been a very satisfactory campaign. ... There were many new faces and entire new groups which were unable to contact... We feel that she has given prestige to our Assembly and to the Cause."

Oklahoma City: "This city is vigorous-minded, and to a considerable extent open-minded," Miss Irwin remarked, and in her work there she was able to reach many diverse sections of the community. Her engagements included 600 students of Oklahoma City University (Methodist), 300 students of Douglass High School (colored), Inman-Page School (about 35 faculty and students), University Women's Forum of seventy members, the Pen-Women's Club, Hadassah Society of Jewish women, and department heads and patrons of Harbour Longmire Furniture Co. At all of these meetings the Faith was outlined, and at some of them, as with the University Women, "she presented it with such power and dignity that there can be no doubt of the deep impression it left..." There were also two public meetings at the YWCA and Hotel Biltmore, attracting about 120 strangers. The Temple model was displayed at the John A. Brown Co., a leading department store, which "distributed about seventy-five of the Temple pamphlets, enclosing one with every new book sold while the model was on display; and for more than a week at Harbour Longmire, "in a very attractive setting just inside the main entrance..." The Assembly secretary concluded that "much good has been accomplished in publicizing the Faith in this city. The Temple model attracted a great deal of attention and comment, and Miss Irwin's presentation gave dignity to our Cause. Quite a number of contacts have expressed interest to study further..."

San Antonio: The campaign here was a fine opportunity for publicity which our Baha'i Group had been unable to obtain previously. Chief features were five hundred personal invitations, a wealth of publicity in three daily papers, eight large posters displayed in leading hotels and centers, a fifteen-minute talk over KTSF, and a large poster with "a beautiful 20x30 picture of the Temple, which stood in the Auditorium lobby for many days." The Temple model was displayed at Joske's leading department store of Texas, "in a niche window all to itself with fine gold background..." and Miss Irwin had two interviews with the store manager. Mrs. Frankland's adventure in obtaining this beautiful location is a tale in itself! Two public meetings were scheduled at the Municipal Auditorium, with book displays. There were also lectures for the International section of the Women's Club, the International Institute of the YWCA, and St. Phillips' Junior College (colored), as well as several informal meetings in Baha'i homes. As Mrs. Frankland wrote, "All of this... is bound to bring results..."

Phoenix and Glendale: Three public meetings were held in Phoenix, attracting about 150 persons, at the YWCA, Adams Hotel, and Westward Ho Hotel, the last named "a very fine gathering... and a real gift for the Cause in Phoenix." There was also a public meeting for about forty at Veteran's Hall, Glendale. Broadcasts were arranged on stations KAS and KPHO. The Temple model was displayed for a few days at the Phoenix Floral and Seed Co., and later at Dorris-Heyman, leading furniture store, "in a 20-foot window with draped background." The Brackett-Darrow Book Shop arranged "a fine book display." Miss Irwin also addressed about 500 students of Phoenix Junior College, "a high-spot of the stay..." Many personal interviews were held with public citizens, including the Episcopalian Dean, a Rabbi, the manager of Town Hall, the Dean of Phoenix Junior College, and others. "As a result of Miss Irwin's campaign, a Monday evening study class is operating for seekers."

One of the most interesting aspects of this campaign was Miss Irwin's report of "finding the public, on the whole, extremely responsive..." She continued, "The work was always a source of joy and refreshment, and education in methods of more penetrating contact with a bewildered world, that has no other solution than this for its increasing problems." Certainly this is the knowledge which will spur us on in months to come. The labors and real sacrifices required for teaching are great; in every city of this campaign the way was prepared by many believers, nameless in our report, without whose devotion no success could have been won. Yet all who participated share in the rewards, and their example quickens us all to nobler effort.

"The Founders of their Faith survey from the Kingdom on high the range of their achievements, acclaim their progress, and are ever ready to speed their eventual triumph.---Shoghi Effendi.

National Teaching Committee

PROGRESS IN TEACHING

The following items have been gleaned from reports and correspondence representing Regional Teaching Committees, Assemblies and individual teachers who have been active in the field. Taken together, they reveal a widespread, intensive teaching effort embracing all of North America, a general advance made possible by the action of the entire American Baha'i Community including Na-
Northern Committees, local Assemblies and teachers both resident and traveling.

Eastern Canada

The regional activities for fall and winter were planned at a general conference held at Montreal on October 13, 14 and 15 in three sessions, one for the committee and two open to all the friends. The report from Moncton mentioned particularly the class of fourteen children conducted by Mrs. King and Mrs. Geary. From a Sunday School class taught by Mrs. King, five women enrolled in a Bahá’í class and of these two were later confirmed. In Halifax, Mrs. Proctor has maintained open house for the drafted men and taught by her spirit of hospitality as well as by discussion of the message. Miss Winifred Harvey, pioneer teacher in Ottawa, told of her work in gathering a nucleus of interested friends. Mrs. Schopfucher spoke on the problem of public teaching under present world conditions.

Reports on Mrs. Beulah Proctor’s activities in Halifax and on Mrs. Doris McKay’s visit to Moncton give further interesting details.

Mrs. Proctor made excellent contacts at the Exhibition and gave out more than three hundred pamphlets. One young East Indian accepted the Faith. Her work brings her in touch with men called upon for heroic service in time of war. She has explained the Faith to many of these, given them literature, selected prayers for them and conveyed the meaning of the Greatest Name. (Some have returned after service at the front, where the Faith was a living reality in their hearts.) In order to continue this pioneer service, Mrs. Proctor has conducted a rooming house and held a position in a department store. “Every moment in this house has been most valuable to the Cause.”

In Moncton, Mrs. McKay conducted a study class in Administration, with demonstrations of group consultation in action. Some weeks there were three or four evenings a week, during which Mrs. McKay took up other phases of the teachings. Including fireside meetings, children’s classes, public meetings and the study classes, an average of ten meetings a week was held for six weeks. On one occasion a group of the Moncton friends drove to Halifax and joined with Mrs. Proctor in two meetings. They found a number of attracted friends and consider that her activity has been true pioneering for the Cause.

The Moncton friends now feel that when they again have nine resident believers, the basis for a permanent Bahá’í community has been laid.

New England

Previous reports have described some of the activities conducted by the Regional Committee in Vermont. During November Mrs. Bowman arranged a display of Bahá’í books in a window of the Kellogg Free Library, with an enlarged photograph of the Temple and posters with texts explaining the Cause, effective publicity for Burlington. In the same city a public meeting was held at the Van Ness Hotel on November 6. An unusual experience was a forum at a fraternity house of the University of Vermont where Mrs. Bowman answered questions for two hours. Several of the friends are now studying the teachings, one of them having been a pupil of Kenneth Christian a few years ago. Organizations contacted include the Cleefer Club. There is one resident believer in the city, Mrs. Elizabeth Van Patten. Other cities visited by Mrs. Bowman in the state were St. Albans, Vergennes, Middlebury,Brandon, Pittsford and Rutland. A symposium on World Citizenship was held by Mrs. Bowman and Mrs. Florence Morton in Montpelier and Rutland, where books were placed in the library. Fireside meetings and many personal contacts are reported by Mrs. Bowman during the rest of November in Portsmouth and Ashuelot, N. H., Eliot, Maine, and Springfield and Three Rivers, Mass. The World Citizenship symposium was also given at Hotel Bridgeway, Springfield.

Other cities where the two believers gave the symposium in December were Boston and Worcester. Mrs. Bowman’s talk on The Destiny of America aroused great interest at meetings in Three Rivers, Mass., and Providence, R. I. Talks on the Faith were made at Providence by Dr. Elizabeth Kidder and Mr. Harlan Ober, as well as at Malden and Mass.

New England youth held a Teaching Clinic at Hotel Garde, New Haven, December 8, with an attendance of 39. The program included discussion of subjects on inspirational teaching, chairmanship, model round table, questions and answers, race unity, visual education, contacts and administration. Youth dealing with these subjects were Anne MacNally, Betty Murray, Ellen Curran, Joel Marangelli, Dorothy Champ, Norman Smith, Frances Bacon, Ben Kaufman, Jeanne Steed, Jack Steed. Mrs. Bowman also took part.

During the first half of January, 1941, the Regional Committee mentions a meeting with Mrs. Bowman and Mr. Duncan MacAlear speaking at Providence, a talk for the Rotary Club of Brandon, Vt., by Mrs. Bowman, a week’s visit in Rutland with the pioneer teacher, Miss N. Grace Bissell, and a talk for the League of Women Voters in Portsmouth.

Upper New York

Reviewing the many activities reported from this area, we begin with the picnic at the Morrisville community grounds held in May for believers of Central New York. After planning for an attendance of forty, eighty-five friends came, representing Geneva, Syracuse, Camandiaugus, Auburn, Little Falls, Binghamton, Earlville, Morrisville, Baldwinsville, Richfield Springs, New York City and Newark. Four members of the faculty of Syracuse University attended, bringing a student who is from India. Mr. Kenneth Christian writes that eleven racial and national groups were embraced in the gathering.

Under the general theme of The Bahá’í Looks at the World Today, informal talks were made by Mrs. Mary Collison, Mr. Joseph Noyes, Mrs. Helen Inderleid, Miss Idas Noyes, Dr. Albert D. Heist and Mrs. Roberta Christian. An illustration of this gathering appears in the current issue of Bahá’í News.

Since the present Regional Committee was appointed, news and plans of the area have been made available to the communities, groups and isolated friends throughout the region by means of a Bulletin for Region of Upper New York, and the following items are taken from this bulletin.

The second inter-community picnic was held Sunday, August 4, at East Mexico Point on Lake Ontario, with about sixty believers and friends present. Mr. Ned Blackmer presided, Mrs. Inderleid discussed The Spiritual Meaning of the Cause, as outlined on page 61 of The Advant of Divine Justice, Miss Ida Noyes spoke on Balance, and questions and answers followed.

The Hamburg, New York group greatly enjoyed public meetings addressed by Mrs. Robert Wilkin of Niagara Falls and Mrs. Doris McKay, attended by about twenty inquirers. Mrs. Edith McLaren of Hamburg hopes to have one speaker a month and a weekly adults’ and children’s study groups hereafter. At Lima a meeting has been held in the Tollis home with friends from Rochester, with Mrs. McKay as speaker. From Little Bahá’ís and Friends at Montevideo, January, 1941. The American Believers Are: Mrs. Mary Barton, Miss Elizabeth Cheney and Wilfrid Barton.

Falls, where Mr. and Mrs. Ford conducted such an interesting public forum last winter comes the report that informal social gatherings each Sunday evening during the summer kept the interested friends together. Dr. Townsend's The Heart of the Gospel was read aloud from week to week. In Schenectady Miss Ella Quant has given out Braille literature for the blind, called on minority groups, addressed a meeting in a Negro church, whose minister suggested that a class be formed to study the Baha'i teachings, and Miss Quant has kept in touch with this congregation. The weekly meetings in Syracuse have been well attended. Among the visiting speakers have been: Mrs. Harry Ford, Miss Elizabeth Brooks, Miss Ida Noyes and Mr. Kenneth Christian.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Eggleston traveled through New York state recently and visited a number of groups, including Batavia, Geneva, Morrisville, Binghamton and Buffalo.

Forty-five believers from upper New York met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Bevan early in November, representing Albany, Saratoga Springs, Balsam Spa, Schenectady, Little Falls, Morrisville, Syracuse, Geneva, Waterloo, Linwood, Rochester, Buffalo, Jamestown, Binghamton, and conducted a program containing ten subjects, followed by an informal symposium. This conference led to two plans: the placing of books in public libraries throughout the region; and the establishment of regular teaching circuits. Places from Geneva west are to be under the direction of Mrs. Mehdil Firooz; places from Elmira and Syracuse east to be handled by Mr. Kenneth Christian. The first speaker arranged for the Eastern New York circuit was Dr. Glenn A. Shook, whose meetings will be reported later.

Mr. Allen B. McDaniel presented an illustrated lecture on the Temple in Syracuse on November 8 which the Regional Committee reports was very impressive to the audience. Dr. Piper of Syracuse University reviewed The Dawn-Breakers at the first meeting conducted by Mrs. Inderleid as a class to study that work.

West Virginia
Before the Regional Committee could organize after changes in its membership, the three residents Baha'i's in West Virginia, Mr. Harold Hunt in Huntington, and Mr. and Mrs. Hilbert Dahl in Charleston, took advantage of opportunities and have been able to report much constructive activity.

Mr. Hunt arranged a Baha'i Children's Party in honor of Mrs. Dorothy Baker at Huntington on October 27, and an interested group of adults also heard Mr. Baker at Frederick Hotel the same day. The Herald-Advertiser of Huntington carried an illustrated notice of Mrs. Baker's visit in its edition of October 20. Though her time in both Huntington and Charleston was brief, Mrs. Baker had opportunity to carry the local contacts a step forward and to bring enthusiasm to the resident workers. The West Side Women's Club of Charleston has listed three Baha'i speakers for the current season: Stanwood Cobb, Hilbert Dahl, and Allen R. McDaniel. The Daily Mail and the Gazette, in issues dated November 3 and 9, featured the talk on "America's Destiny in Leadership of the World" by Mr. Cobb, who also addressed the children's class conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Dahl. With Dr. and Mrs. Lehner of West Virginia State College, the three believers drove to Huntington to meet with Harold Hunt and his group.

The Temple model was displayed at the Postal Telegraph office in Parkersburg, and this enabled Mrs. Dahl to answer many questions about the Faith from the District Superintendent.

During the fall semester, Hilbert Dahl conducted talks and discussions on alternate Sundays at the West Virginia State College, the result of tactful contact with faculty members for a year and a half. This meeting is by invitation of the college Religious Activities Committee. Mr. Dahl hopes that the result is to make an opening for traveling teachers to give the message more and more openly.

The Huntington Advertiser on November 9 carried an excellent notice of the talk by Stanwood Cobb at Hotel Frederick.

South Atlantic States
Mrs. Dorothy Baker's circuit through the south Atlantic states through November included nine different cities. In addition to the reports concerning Huntington and Charleston, West Virginia, given above, we have the following interesting notes.

In Louisville, Kentucky, Mrs. Baker spoke at a public meeting on her way south and again on returning north, which resulted in more intensive study on the part of six or eight attracted friends.

In Nashville there were two public meetings open to both races, two talks at Tennessee State College, one at Fisk University and two fireside group meetings.

In Knoxville, the Assembly arranged a public dinner meeting for Mrs. Baker and a few personal contacts for intensifying interest.

At Memphis Mrs. Baker gave two talks at the Henderson Business School and held one meeting for the colored friends.

In addition, two hotel meetings, two fireside groups, two youth meetings and participation in a panel discussion at the YWCA were carried out.

In a brief visit to Hot Springs, Mrs. Baker spoke at a public meeting and carried out a number of contacts, besides assisting three advanced students of the Cause to organize their study for admission into the Baha'i community. At Greenwood she addressed a colored High School, a fireside group and a public meeting, and noted an unusual response from Jewish people who attended.

At Tuskegee, the famous Negro University, Mrs. Baker found an eager response from faculty leaders, but had to decline an invitation to address the student body because of previous engagements in Atlanta.

News of other regional areas will be digested for the next issue.

WORLD NEWS

2. Iraq

c. Contribution to the Spiritual Assembly of Damascus, for the purchase of a plot for their Haziratu'l-Quds.

d. The publishing of the quarterly "Baha'i News Letter."

g. And last, but not least, vigilance over the integrity of the body of the believers, and safeguarding the interests of the Cause.

Among the expressed wishes of the Guardian, conveyed by the visitors to Haifa, was that the friends should assist the believers of Damascus in purchasing a plot of land for the building of their Haziratu'l-Quds, which, as the Guardian had pointed out, was very significant. Accordingly, a sum of about 140 was immediately raised by the believers of Baghdad, for this blessed purpose.

A further sum of 26 was recently transmitted to the N.S.A. as advance subscription in the Arabic translation of Nabíl's Narrative, which is still under print in Cairo. We hope this important publication will soon be available.

The Fifth Annual Baha'i Youth Symposium was held in the Haziratu'l-Quds of Baghdad on the 25th of February, 1940. A group of young believers and a number of their non-Baha'i friends attended, and some photos of the Baha'i youths were taken. The programme of the meeting was as follows:

1. A Word of Welcome .......................................................... Jamil I. Bagdadi
2. Opening Prayer (Tablet) .................................................. Abdu'l-Razzaq Abbas
3. Summary of Baha'i History and Principles ......................... Kamil Abbas
4. Unity in Diversity (by 'Abdu'l-Bahá) Jamil I. Bagdadi
5. A Tablet of Baha'u'llah Abdur-Razzaq Abbas
6. The World Needs the Baha'i Faith Ni'mat Saboor
7. Effect of Superstitions and Ignorance on Religion Ahmad Najmu'd-Din
8. Closing Prayer (Tablet) Ibrahim Shmi'

It is generally felt that the Symposium was fairly successful, and a few non-Baha'i youths have shown keen interest in the Teachings. They are now studying the Cause.

3. India and Burma

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of India and Burma has published the proceedings of its Twelfth Annual Convention in pamphlet form containing English and Iranian translations of the text. A few excerpts follow:

The convention was held at Poona and as regards attendance it was probably the most remarkable in recent years. Believers from such far-off places as Karachi had come in numbers to attend it.

The election of the National Spiritual Assembly was held on the afternoon of the 28th April. Messrs. Khosrow Ardshir Izadyar, Habibullah Manji and Shah Bahram Mobedzadieh were selected as tellers. As the name of each delegate was called out he or she placed his or her ballot in the box; the ballots of the absent delegates received by post were thrown in the box by the National Secretary. The results which were as follows were declared at 6 p.m. the same day:

Mr. N. R. Vakil 12
Mrs. Shirin K. Fozdar 10
Mr. Isfandiar K. B. Balchirri 14
Prof. Pritam Singh 12
Mr. Mehfuzul Haq Ilmi 10
Dr. S. Hismat Ali 8
Mr. S. H. Kershi 7
Mr. Habibullah M. Manji 5
Abbas Ali Butt. 14

The 9th Day of Ridvan, the 29th of April was a gala day for all who had gathered there. The believers of Poona had prepared a feast unprecedented both in its sumptuousness and spirituality. It was a sight that is hardly met with in these days in the world. The Bahá'ís had gathered together and were partaking from one table. They were drawn from different communities. There were Hindus, there were Muslims, and there were Parsees all mingled together as members of one great family.

PUBLICITY.—In compliance with the resolution passed last year 19 copies of the World Order Magazine have been regularly supplied to the Universities of India and Burma. In addition to these 19 copies 3 copies of the magazine have been contributed by the Bombay Youth Group and Service Committee and supplied on their behalf to a college and to two institutes of learning. 3 copies were subscribed by the Poona Spiritual Assembly and supplied to three colleges of their town; one copy was supplied on behalf of Mr. J. M. Rustom to a leading library in Nagpur. We altogether subscribed for 49 copies last year and have sent remittance for 50 copies this year. Out of the 70 copies of Baha'i World Vol. VII presented to the N.S.A. by Mr. Siegfried Schoepflecher about 25 were presented free to the libraries and colleges of India, Burma and Ceylon; others were subscribed to the leading citizens who are sympathetic towards the Holy Faith. The gift has been very much appreciated by all to whom it has been made and we hope that this splendid publication will prepare many souls to search for more knowledge about the Divine Faith.

Some of the friends wrote articles and published them through the press. Mr. H. M. Manji's two articles in Hindi appeared in the Satyag with a photograph of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Bombay and Karachi local Spiritual Assemblies made frequent use of the local press to publish notices of functions followed by a brief description of the function and the Divine Teachings. Through Karachi local Spiritual Assembly Sadhu Viswanî's papers published beautiful "In Memoriam" articles for our dear sister Miss Martha L. Root.

TEACHING.—Owing to abnormal conditions having broken out much All-India work could not be done this year. Mrs. Shirin Fozdar, toured the Punjab and delivered lectures and spiritual exercises in Lahore, Amritsar, Ferozepore Jammu, Rawalpindi and Ludhiana. Prof. Pritam Singh made similar lecturing trips to Ferozepore, Jammu, Amritsar and Multan.

Local Spiritual Assemblies however had been more active. Bombay, Karachi, Delhi and Calcutta all did their best to teach the Faith in their respective jurisdictions.

An appeal was issued in the beginning of the year concerning the Six-Year Plan of Teaching and most of the friends responded most generously. Some promised to go and settle in places where the Divine Faith has not yet penetrated. Others gave liberal donations in money and literature. Owing to the disturbed conditions during the year, however, nothing tangible could be done.

Mr. M. H. Ilmi visited Kadwai near Bombay where many old believers lived. Many of them possess tablets from 'Abdu'l-Bahá. They had been dormant for all these years. Mr. Ilmi urged them to action. This incited fanaticism among the Moslems of the place and the usual persecutions began. They started a hue and cry against the believers which terminated in their social boycott which frightened a number of the believers to go back to the Modern community; but a greater number of them are firm. It is hoped that this eruption of popular fanaticism will soon die down and the friends of the place will form themselves into a local Assembly.

BÁHÁ’Í YOUTH—The organization started 4 years ago has now developed into a strong body and its activities have become more and more organised. The Annual symposium was again held this year on February 2 which synchronized with the date on which the same function was held by Bahá’í Youth organizations all over the world in accordance with the programme published by the World Bahá’í Youth Committee of America. A Plan for the year 1940–41 has been chalked out and if the youth are assisted in carrying out this Plan they will have advanced many milestones before the end of the Plan is reached.

4. Australia and New Zealand

These items appear in the Báhá’í Quarterly published by the N.S.A. of Australia and New Zealand:

Only one meeting of the N.S.A. was possible during the past Bahá’í year. This took place in Sydney, 9th and 10th December, 1939, and was attended by the Australian members only, Mrs. Jackman, Miss Brooks and Mr. Brown of Adelaide, Mrs. Routh, Mr. Whitaker and Mr. Bolton of Sydney. At this meeting, after careful deliberation, the National Book Depot was voted as impracticable, but it was decided to assist the Spiritual Assemblies of Adelaide, Sydney and Auckland, by advancing them each a stock of books for which they need pay the N.S.A. only as their sales enable them to do so. The N.S.A. hopes that from this small beginning these Spiritual Assemblies will gradually be able to enlarge their stocks until each has its own depot. Arrangements are being made to give these Assemblies further assistance, orders for books having been sent to both England and America for that purpose.

Letters expressing gratitude for parcels of books given to them by the N.S.A. have been received from the Melbourne, Perth and Hobart groups.

A fire proof safe has been purchased in which all historical and important documents will be placed for safety during these calamitous times.

The “Herald of the South” committee continues its praiseworthy efforts to make the magazine a useful and popular teaching medium, and has been greatly encouraged by the many expressions of appreciation from subscribers that have been received. The committee appeals to all believers to subscribe and to do their utmost to increase the circulation of this publication. The Auckland Spiritual Assembly has set a fine example by sending 12 subscriptions from the Spiritual Assembly itself, this quite apart from individual subscriptions from the Auckland friends. From Hobart there are three times as many subscriptions as believers.

Owing to the unsettled times the National Teaching Committee has been only partially successful in carrying out its plans. Visits to Melbourne have been made by Mr. Brown, Mrs. Axford and Miss Brooks and valuable teaching work done there. The Teaching Committee is particularly grateful to the Melbourne Secretary, Mrs. Eleanor Wheeler, who has been indefatigable in her efforts to arrange meetings for the Bahá’í teachers to give talks and lectures in Melbourne. The enrollment of Mr. W. Cover in Melbourne has been the cause of great rejoicing to the National Teaching Committee. The committee hopes to widen its sphere of activity during the present year.

The N.S.A. has been in consultation by correspondence throughout the year and has functioned vigorously and efficiently. All the Assemblies have contributed freely and spontaneously to the National Fund. Reports from the various Spiritual Assemblies and groups have been carefully studied and a vigilant eye has been kept on the manner of the growth of the Cause. By means of the news letter, “Bahá’í Quarterly” the N.S.A. continues to keep the believers informed of the affairs of the Cause.

Mr. S. Schopflicher’s gift of thirty-five volumes of the “Bahá’í World” Vol. VII was tremendously appreciated by the N.S.A. and the best possible use made of the books. Our love and gratitude to “Freddie.”

_Adelia_The advertised monthly public lectures by Mrs. Dobbins and Miss Brooks continue to attract large audiences. The third year of the Bahá’í Youth Group has been marked by an extension of activities and considerably increased attendance at the Meetings. Esperanto classes are held regularly.

_Sydney_: Father and Mother Dunn hold a regular Saturday night Fireside Group, and their home has an open door for visitors who wish to discuss the Bahá’í Teachings. The advertised public talks given every first Sunday in the month have found excellent response, and as a result, inquirers have attended the Monday night study class and other meetings. Six new members were enrolled during the year.

_Auckland_: Thirty-one Public Libraries in New Zealand were circularised with a view to supplying them with Bahá’í literature. The “Herald of the South” is sent to all the University College libraries and the “World Order” magazine to the Auckland Municipal Library. Seventy-two copies of a special leaflet for newspapers prepared by the N.S.A. of U.S.A. and Canada have been distributed to Newspaper Offices with a request that they be filed for reference.

_ Hobart_, Tasmania: We are slowly acquiring books and other literature which we trust will be the nucleus of an adequate library in the future. Feasts and anniversaries are observed by this small group and weekly meetings are held for devotion and study. Four talks are being prepared to be given at intervals of two weeks to selected people to whom written invitations will be sent.

FUNCTIONS OF TEMPLE DURING CONSTRUCTION PERIOD

The Bahá’í House of Worship has been endowed with a glorious spiritual mission in the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh. The friends are well aware of the words of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on this subject, as well as of the Guardian on many occasions. In order to clarify the views as to what functions the Temple is to discharge during the present construction period, the National Spiritual Assembly has had the matter studied by a special committee, and now shares with the friends the following explanation.

The House of Worship is to serve the two great ends of worship and of teaching. The Temple Program Committee, in addition to the present Sunday afternoon public meeting, the purpose of which is teaching rather than worship, has been authorized to inaugurate a meeting of worship and devotion for the friends, and also to resume the holding of the Bahá’í Anniversary meetings for the nearby communities, groups and isolated friends. The House of Worship exercises a stabilising influence, being open for official use in accordance with the Bahá’í calendar, not only as to date but also as to the hour when this is specified by the Guardian. In case this provision makes it impossible to hold any one Anniversary in the Temple, it should be arranged locally by each Assembly. The use of the Temple for individual worship is also emphasized. At such times as the building is open, believers are urged to enter it for individual prayer and meditation.

As for the purpose of teaching, the House of Worship exercises a widespread influence through the services of the guides, and guiding is to be continued. In addition, the building can be used for classes for guides and for continuation of the present children’s class until the nearby Assemblies can each maintain its own local children’s class.

The Temple can also be used for meetings of those Committees now closely identified with the House of Worship: Temple Program Committee, Temple Guides Committee, and Archives and History Committee.

Relevant to this general subject is the use of the Temple by groups of believers who come from a distance. The National Assembly feels that such groups can be given the use of the kitchen but that there should be no picnicking on the grounds.

Finally, the matter of storage of Bahá’í material in the basement has been considered, and the feeling of the Assembly is that Archives material, and some publishing stock, can be at least temporarily held in the foundation structure pending final arrangements.

The Temple Program Committee has jurisdiction over all meetings in the House of Worship, except the Archives Committee meetings or the committee meetings and study classes of the Temple Guides, while the Temple Maintenance Committee is in charge of the physical equipment.

PUBLISHING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Revised Catalog

The Publishing Committee has issued a new catalog, corrected to January, 1941, and Assemblies are requested to notify the Committee how many copies they wish for local use.

Bahá’í Prayers

The newest publication is a new prayer book, containing a selection of prayers revealed by Bahá’u’lláh, the Bab and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá translated by Shoghi Effendi. 72 pages. Paper cover, $0.35. Bound in leather, $0.75.

World Order Magazine

Bound volumes of Vol. VI, from April, 1940 to March, 1941, can now be provided. The cost for the volume is $2.50. When the believer provides his own copies of the twelve monthly issues, the binding cost is $1.10. In the latter case, write to the Publishing Committee for instructions where to ship the twelve issues.

Appreciations of the Bahá’í Faith

The series of remarkable statements made about the Cause by prominent persons in many countries, which have been a feature in successive volumes of The Bahá’í World, have been reprinted in pamphlet form at the Guardian’s suggestion. This pamphlet will be widely used for publicity and special teaching purposes. The cost per copy is 50 cents, but it can only be sold in lots of ten. For ten copies, $1.50.

Publishing Office

The work of the Publishing Committee is conducted in the supplementary administrative building at 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois, and the Western Division is discontinued as of March 1. Correspondence with Mrs. Emma F. Smith in connection with the settlement of outstanding accounts of the Western Division should be addressed to her at 1495 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco.

THE BAHA’I WORLD

Volume IX—1940-1942

The editorial committee of The Bahá’í World Vol. IX, with the permission of the National Spiritual Assembly, is appealing to all pioneers who have served the Cause in foreign countries to send at once to the chairman of the committee a personal photograph to be accompanied with a list of dates and countries in which each has served. A small photograph, if clear, is sufficient, but we prefer a photograph of the individual and not one in a group.

The object in soliciting these is to preserve the records for future historical use, but in this issue of The Bahá’í World space will not permit the publishing of the valuable historical accounts which should never-the-less be prepared and placed in the archives. A very interesting section of this volume will be devoted to pioneer service in South and Central America and the Islands as well. It is hoped that the friends will respond immediately to this urgent call.

OUR BAHA’I SCHOOLS

As the winter adventures in teaching draw to a close we might ask ourselves, “What is the greatest adventure of summer?” No answer could be more fitting than that summer schools are again offering the greatest of all opportunities for deepening our knowledge, improving our techniques, and drinking in the refreshing atmosphere of Bahá’í association.

In The Advent Of Divine Justice, the Guardian, speaking of each American believer, says: “If he attends his summer school—and every one without exception is urged to take advantage of attending it—let him consider such an occasion as a welcome and precious opportunity so to enrich, through lectures, study, and discussion, his knowledge of the fundamentals of His Faith as to be able to transmit with greater confidence and effectiveness, the Message that has been entrusted to his care.”

Plans are already under way for the summer sessions of our four schools. An insert will be placed in the April Baha’i News, giving the programs in full; and it is felt that by this means the friends will not only have a complete schedule for their own reference, but every Bahá’í may literally become a publicity committee for non-members.

The Green Acre School this year plans to feature the study of Spanish in every way possible. A recent letter from Shoghi Effendi to one of the schools, states: “... the study of Spanish, the Guardian feels, should henceforth become a regular feature of all existing Summer Schools and...
Reference and Lending Library, an Institution of Louhelen Bahá’í School.

provide all prospective pioneers with... training in Spanish history and customs...” A request has come from the Green Acre Committee for any contribution that the friends can make, such as, a linguaphone, Spanish victrola lessons, and instruction books. Last year a Spanish table added greatly to dining room pleasure, and this year the committee hopes that through the generosity of those interested, even more participation will be stimulated. Information regarding cost and type of needed equipment may be had by writing to the secretary of the Green Acre Committee, Miss Marjorie Wheeler, 84 Pleasant St., Worcester, Mass.

The Louhelen School has continued to hold out a warm welcome through the winter months in the form of a cozy library where approximately 1,800 books are kept. These books carry a wide range of material on religion, philosophy, psychology, sociology, philology, the useful arts, science, literature, history, and fiction. The public librarian in charge of cataloguing for Detroit and vicinity maintains that this library has by far the finest class of books in the area. Bahá’í books are, of course, the major attraction. There is never a time when Bahá’í books are not in circulation, and far oftener they are loaned to non-Bahá’ís. Mr. Howard Scahill, a real friend of the Cause, has given his services in building up the library, cataloguing the books by the Dewey-Decimal system, and attracting the people of the vicinity to its hospitable shelter.

An average of 25 or 30 books circulate constantly to the public in the winter months, and considerably more in the summer, and this does not include study within the walls. The library is equipped to insure and carefully preserve all literary relics as well as up-to-date books. Old letters of an interesting nature, or copies of such letters, out of print volumes, pamphlets, calendars, outlines, and other papers, would be received with gratitude by the Louhelen Committee. Every book is given a presentation plate bearing the name of the donor. Volumes autographed by Bahá’í authors are particularly valued gifts. Subjects are carefully indexed under such headings as Temple teaching, pioneer developments, pilgrimages, pictures, maps, records of Bahá’í teachers, the Holy Land, and of course special subjects for study. All reference work in connection with school courses is made quickly accessible. A unique feature of the library is its attraction to local children, who seem to spring up from everywhere. Plans for a Saturday group are under consideration.

YOUTH MEETING IN NEWARK

A Teaching Clinic for Bahá’í youth was held at the Hotel Douglas in Newark, N. J., on October 27, 1940. Arranged and sponsored by the communities of Newark and East Orange, an audience from New York, New Rochelle, Binghamton, Philadelphia, Washington, Florida, Ohio, and many parts of New Jersey attended. The entire teaching field from the Bahá’í viewpoint was covered in an ambitious program which won an enthusiastic reception. The interesting experiment of following the example of a radio program in respect to continuity proved extremely successful. Music, meditation, announcements, and questions were provided through the mediums of a loud speaker and a microphone in an adjoining control room. Results were highly gratifying; many departed determined to repeat the Clinic in their own communities and already plans are being made for another in February in West Englewood.

About 60 believers attended this conference. The program as included interesting subjects assigned to Benjamin Kaufman, Gertrude Gewertz, Jack Steed, Shirley Quigley, June Wright, Betty Murray, Ellen Sims, Norman Smith and Mae Dyer. Curtis Kelsey conducted a “model round table.”

"Now is the moment in which to cleanse thyself with the waters of detachment that have flowed from the Supreme Pen, and to ponder, wholly for the sake of God, those things which, time and again, have been sent down or manifested, and then to strive, as much as lieth in thee, to quench, through the power of wisdom and the force of thy utterance, the fire of enmity and hatred which smouldereth in the hearts of the peoples of the world. The Divine Messengers have been sent down, and their Books were revealed, for the purpose of promoting the knowledge of God, and of furthering unity and fellowship amongst men. But now behold, how they have made the Law of God a cause and pretext for perversity and hatred. How pitiful, how regrettable, that most men are cleaving fast to, and have busied themselves with, the things they possess, and are unaware of, and shut out as by a veil from, the things God possesseth!" — BAHÁ’U’LLÁH, Epistle to the Son of the Wolf, page 12.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Cablegram received May 2, 1941.

It is his considered view that the Regional Teaching Committees, though appointed by the N. S. A., should be directly responsible to the National Teaching Committee, inasmuch as this body's specific task is to supervise, direct and coordinate, under the general guidance of the N. S. A., all teaching activities throughout the U. S. A. and Canada.

The N. S. A.'s final jurisdiction over both the National Teaching Committee and the Regional Teaching Committees is certainly indisputable, and is of the same nature and character as the authority to which it is entitled over all other national committees.

The Regional Teaching Committees should henceforth be asked to send their reports directly to the National Teaching Committee, and to ask for their directions as to the most effective way they can carry on their respective teaching tasks. By so doing, the National Teaching Committee will undoubtedly help in relieving the N. S. A. of unnecessary details, and will also avoid duplication and congestion of work, particularly now that the N. S. A. is assuming such great responsibilities under the Seven Year Plan.

From letter dated February 2, 1941, written through the Guardian's Secretary.

The Guardian will pray that the general conditions outside the Cause and the inevitable repercussions which further deterioration in the international situation might bring on America, will not reach such a point as to seriously hinder the friends in bringing this enterprise (i.e., Temple construction) to full completion.

The concern you have expressed for the Guardian following recent air raids on Haifa, has deeply touched and moved him, and he wishes me to assure you that no casualties whatever have been suffered by any of the believers here, and that all Bahá’í properties and institutions, including the Holy Shrines, have been spared. No doubt, Bahá’u’lláh will continue to vouchsafe His unfailing protection to the believers in every land, how much more to those who are directly and more particularly associated with the administration of the affairs of His Faith, whether at its world-center in the Holy Land or abroad.

From letter dated November 20, 1940, written through the Guardian's Secretary to Allen B. McDaniel.

Dear and Valued Co-Worker:

The successive communications, whether letters or cables, that have lately been received from the States, whether from the National Assembly or individual believers, eloquently proclaim the magnificent spirit and the remarkable achievements of the American believers. I rejoice and feel deeply thankful for these blessings of Bahá’u’lláh vouchsafed to them in these days of ever-increasing stress and turmoil ...

SHOGHI
The Guardian's postscript to this letter.

He has been again most pleased to note that the Temple work is making steady and speedy progress, and that the Trustees hope that the nine faces of the main story ornamentation will be completed by the latter part of next year.

The news of the completion of the reinforced concrete walls, of the entrance ways and areaways, has also been most encouraging to him, and he too hopes that this will now make it possible to go ahead with the grading of the grounds, and also with their seeding, so that by next spring the Temple grounds will look as attractive as possible, especially in view of the great flow of delegates and visitors which the Temple would attract at that time of the year.

As regards the construction of the accessory building, adjacent to the caretaker's house in the Temple area, the Guardian would urge that every effort should be made to have the building ready as soon as possible for use as headquarters of both the Treasurer and of the Publishing Committee. The transfer of these committees to the vicinity of the Temple and of the Hazírat’sul-Quds is indeed a step of historic significance, and one which is bound to increase the efficiency and heighten the prestige of the national administrative institutions of the Faith in America.

From letter dated December 13, 1940, written through the Guardian's Secretary to Allen B. McDaniel.

He is fully pleased with the work so far accomplished, and hopes that by now the first three faces of the main story have been duly completed. He has now every reason to believe that should the present rate of progress in the ornamentation work be maintained throughout the coming year, and should the flow of contributions be as steady and substantial as it has been so far, the entire edifice will be completed far ahead of the schedule, thus giving still another striking evidence of the unremitting zeal and inexhaustible resourcefulness that have been so remarkably and so consistently displayed by the American believers in their collective exertions for the termination of this unique, and indeed historic enterprise.

The photographs you had kindly sent showing the progress of the various construction activities were indeed excellent, and the Guardian has distributed some of them to various pilgrims from Iran who, upon their return home, will no doubt share them with the rest of the believers. They will all derive much needed comfort and encouragement from these pictures, and will surely be further strengthened in their resolve to courageously face and patiently endure the many trials and tribulations to which they are being increasingly subjected.

From letter dated January 18, 1941, written through the Guardian's Secretary to Allen B. McDaniel.

Kindly assure the National Assembly of his deepest appreciation of their very generous offering which he will use for the promotion of vital international interests of the Faith. A separate receipt duly signed by him is enclosed for your files ...

He hopes and will continue to pray that the flow of contributions to the Temple Fund will remain uninterrupted, nay, will so increase as to insure the full consummation of this glorious and sacred undertaking at the appointed time.

From letter dated December 2, 1940, written through the Guardian's Secretary to Roy C. Wilhelm.
Regarding the state of the National Fund, which you have reported as suffering from a general slackness in contributions from both individual believers and the local Assemblies and groups. It is only evident that unless the flow of donations is regularly maintained by means of generous and continual support by all the believers, individually and collectively, the National Fund will never be able to meet the needs and requirements of the Cause, particularly in these days when the national activities of the American believers are assuming such wide and increasing proportions.

From letter dated February 3, 1941, written through the Guardian’s Secretary to Roy C. Wilhelm.

“The Promised Day Is Come”

A general letter addressed by the Guardian to the Baha’is of the West will shortly be published as a pamphlet entitled The Promised Day Is Come. Advance proofs of the first part of the letter have been given delegates and local Assemblies. Final publication can not be made until the entire text, mailed in installments, has been received. The scope of this great document is indicated by the excerpts here reprinted. Undoubtedly the study classes maintained by local Assemblies and groups for believers will revolve around this message in which Shoghi Effendi upholds the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh as supreme challenge to civilization and to man.

“A tempest, unprecedented in its violence, unpredictable in its course, catastrophic in its immediate effects, unimaginably glorious in its ultimate consequences, is at present sweeping the face of the earth. Its driving power is remorselessly gaining in range and momentum. Its cleansing force, however much undetected, is increasing with every passing day. Humanity, gripped in the clutches of its devastating power, is smitten by the evidences of its resistless fury. It can neither perceive its origin, nor probe its significance, nor discern its outcome. Bewildered, agonized and helpless, it watches this great and mighty wind of God invading the remotest and fairest regions of the earth, rocking its foundations, deranging its equilibrium, sundering its nations, disrupting the homes of its peoples, wasting its cities, driving into exile its kings, pulling down its bulwarks, uprooting its institutions, dimming its light, and harrowing up the souls of its inhabitants.

“This judgment of God, as viewed by those who have recognized Bahá’u’lláh as His Mouthpiece and His greatest Messenger on earth, is both a retributory calamity and an act of holy and supreme discipline. It is at once a visitation from God and a cleansing process for all mankind. Its fires punish the perversity of the human race, and weld its component parts into one organic, invisible, world-embracing community. Mankind, in these fateful years, which at once signalize the passing of the first century of the Bahá’í Era and proclaim the opening of a new one, is, as ordained by Him Who is both the Judge and the Redeemer of the human race, being simultaneous-ly called upon to give account of its past actions, and is being purged and prepared for its future mission. It can neither escape the responsibilities of the past, nor shirk those of the future. God, the Vigilant, the Just, the All-Wise Or­dainer, can, in this supreme Dispensation, neither allow the sins of an unregenerate humanity, whether of omission or of commission, to go unpunished, nor will He be willing to abandon His children to their fate, and refuse them that culminating and blissful stage in their long, their slow and painful evolution throughout the ages, which is at once their inalienable right and their true destiny.”

The friends will be informed when copies of the pamphlet can be ob-
The Fifth Year of the Seven Year Plan
To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and Groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

In the Guardian’s cabled Message to the Convention we have the clear and forceful expression of his plea addressed to the American Bahá’í Community at this great hour of destiny. Whatever may befall, throughout this Bahá’í year we are to pursue steadfastly the “career traced by unerring finger of Abú’l-Bahá,” and can “neither halt nor waver.”

We are to consider that the Temple ornamentation has been reduced to the final stage of performance, that of contracts executed by the Temple Trustees with the John J. Earley Studios, payment for which is to be provided through the Annual Budget outlined below.

We are to concentrate all our resources, national, regional and local, upon the teaching aspect of the Seven Year Plan. Before us lies the spiritual map of North, Central and South America. We are to strive unceasingly until on that map is indicated in glowing light the existence of local Spiritual Assemblies in all States and Provinces of North America, and of active and vigorous Bahá’í groups in all other American nations.

The first charge upon the current Budget is the sum of $30,000 set up for teaching work, about twice the amount devoted to that purpose in any previous year. Detailed plans will be announced as soon as possible. Meanwhile all the friends can prepare themselves inwardly by prayer and supplication for worthiness and capacity to be instruments for the promulgation of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

With that inward and spiritual preparation our National Committees, the Regional Committees, the valiant pioneers, the local Assemblies, communities and groups—all the American Bahá’ís, individually and collectively—will be charged with irresistible zeal and enthusiasm for the sacred task.

If any local community has been divided, any Assembly weak and ineffective, such a condition can and must be overcome, for such conditions cut us off from the Power which confirms the teaching effort of the humblest soul. Teaching, indeed, is the supreme test of our faith, our knowledge, our unity and our love of the Cause. For teaching must be motivated by pure spirit and at the same time must be made effective by the coordination of the whole community through the various teaching agencies and administrative institutions. Teaching is the health and strength of the Bahá’í community.

Annual Budget
May 1, 1941—April 30, 1942

The Budget adopted for the Fifth Year of the Seven Year Plan contains the following items:

- Teaching, North and South America $30,000
- Completion main story ornamentation 35,000
- Repayment loan for Temple construction 20,000
- Administration, including contributions to International Fund, all committee budgets except teaching, and all property maintenance and operation 40,000
- Printing cost, The Bahá’í World, Vol. VIII 6,000
- Contingent and unforeseen items 19,000

Total: $150,000

Schedule of Meetings of National Spiritual Assembly

In publishing its schedule of meetings, including the dates of the 1942 Convention, the National Assembly wishes to announce that important matters should be submitted to the Assembly a week in advance of the meeting and in writing. This will enable the members to deal with their agenda more effectively than when matters are rushed to the meetings after sessions have begun. The business of the Cause increases yearly. The believers will surely cooperate in contributing to the efficiency of the N. S. A. It must be borne in mind that its members, in addition to the affairs of the American Bahá’í community and the teaching work in South America, bear responsibility for Temple, Green Acre, Wilhelm, Bosch, and Wilson (Maiden) properties as trustees for the Bahá’ís.

Communication With the Believers

The National Assembly will this year concentrate on Bahá’í News as the organ of communication with Assemblies, groups and communities, with special letters from time to time as may be required. In Bahá’í News we have the instrument which brings... all the believers together in one great audience. It will publish as much current news as possible, and news reports should therefore be brief, to leave room for others.

In conclusion: the National Spiritual Assembly will strive to stand behind and assist all its Committees in their important undertakings. It will encourage and assist the local Assemblies in their performance of their great Bahá’í mission. It will serve the teachers and pioneers with all available spiritual and material resources. At Nineteen Day Feasts and Anniversaries let us pray for the removal of all difficulties which stand in the way of our teaching, and for the rending of all veils of misunderstanding which may prevent full cooperation among the friends. The greater our privilege, the more we will all be held to account for our motives and action in His Cause.

Faithfully yours,
in service to the Cause,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The Annual Election
At the Friday evening session of the Convention, April 25, the tellers reported the result of the annual election as follows:—
162 ballots were cast. Votes were not received from seven delegates. Two Assemblies were dissolved for lack of numbers after they had elected one delegate each, and this disqualified the two delegates.

Louis G. Gregory received 132 votes; Horace Holley 131 votes; Allen B. McDaniel, 130 votes; Roy C. Wilhelm, 125 votes; Siegfried Schopfshofer, 122 votes; Mrs. Dorothy Baker, 116 votes; Mrs. Amelia E. Collins, 90 votes; Mr. Leroy Icas, 89 votes; Mr. George O. Latimer, 83 votes.

This Assembly proceeded to organize with the following officers: Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman; Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Vice-Chairman; Horace Holley, Secretary; Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer; Siegfried Schopfshofer, Assistant Treasurer; Louis G. Gregory, Recording Secretary.

Communications intended for the National Assembly should be addressed to the Secretary or to the National Bahá’í Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois. Communications intended for the Treasurer should be addressed to the Treasurer, or to National Bahá’í Fund, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois.

The Bahá’í Cause Today
The special attention of the friends is called to the May, 1941 issue of World Order Magazine. It contains the reply written by Mrs. Marzieh Gail to the attack on the Cause written by Rev. William McElwee Miller, former missionary in Iran, as published in the October, 1940 issue of The Moslem World and later reprinted as a pamphlet circulated for some reason among members of the Bahá’í Faith.

Mrs. Gail’s admirable exposition of the issues raised by the Rev. Miller is preceded by a brief statement prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly. Extra copies of the May number have been printed, as many believers will doubtless wish to give a copy to some non-Bahá’í friend still unable to rise above the standpoint of traditional creed. In localities where the Cause is attacked by religious leaders, the friends can also make excellent use of this reply, along with the Guardian’s own clear statement reprinted under the title of Religion a Living Organism.

Copies of the May number of World Order can be obtained from the magazine business office, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, for 15c each or eight copies for $1.00. Religion a Living Organism, by Shoghi Effendi, Bahá’í Reprint No. 4, sells for $2.00 per 100 copies. The friends are urged to give special study to this question of the true relation between the Revelation of Christ and that of Bahá’u’lláh.

Temple Construction
As could be seen by the delegates present at Convention, the important matter of Temple construction under the Seven Year Plan has entered its final phase. The land graded last fall has been sown with rye grass seed to provide rootage and bind the soil against erosion as well as to cover the earth with verdure. The parking place has been arranged along Linden Avenue just west of the Temple property. The truck entrance to Foundation hall from Sheridan Road, near the bridge, needs completing the surface of the road inside the fence and also a concrete approach from the curb to the fence. This can not be done until Sheridan Road has been realigned.

As Mr. Earley explained to the Convention, the exterior ornamentation of the main story can be finished this calendar year, and work has already begun. The next and perhaps final contract under the Seven Year Plan is for the steps, and work has been authorized under an arrangement which will call for monthly payments beginning January, 1942, with the steps completed by July or August of that year.

The Legal Case

The friends are informed that with the Guardian's approval an appeal has been taken on the decision made by a judge of the New York Supreme Court on April 1, and the matter is therefore still in process of settlement.

In response to inquiries received from many believers who wish to know what they should do with the literature received unsolicited from the New History Society, the National Assembly advises the friends to mark the envelopes "refused" and drop them in the nearest post box or post office, for return to the sender.

Inter-America News

"Center your energies in the propagation of the Faith of God. Whoso is worthy of so high a calling, let him arise and promote it. Whoso is unable, it is his duty to appoint him who will, in his stead, proclaim this Revelation, whose power hath caused the foundations of the mightiest structures to quake, every mountain to be crushed into dust and every soul to be dumb-founded."—Baha'u'llah.

The Inter-America Committee wishes to bring to the attention of the Bahá'í Community of North America the eagerness with which they await new applications for pioneer posts in Central and South America. It is the obligation and the very great privilege of this community to eventually form an indissoluble chain throughout the entire Western Hemisphere. New cities must be reached and pioneers are needed to take the place of others who have been forced to return to this country. It is important that as much continuity as possible be maintained in the teaching work.

Asunción, Paraguay

Miss Elizabeth Cheney reports that she has received a permit that will allow her to stay indefinitely in Paraguay. She writes that just four weeks after arriving in Asuncion the first Bahá'í meeting was held in Paraguay. A former National Minister of Education acted as chairman. There were about thirty people present, among them persons of prominence in the country. Of particular interest was that about a third of the audience were women, which in Paraguay is very unusual as they are inclined to take very little interest in religious matters outside the narrow round of the Catholic Church. The subject of the talk was "La Paz Universal." All of those present expressed real interest and a desire to attend other meetings.

Wonderful letters have been received from Miss Cheney. She recently inclosed a picture of the Bahá'í Class in Paraguay. Due to the disturbed political conditions in the Country she has made no effort to secure publicity but has a regular attendance at the weekly meetings of approximately thirty people. Two of the members of the class are starting a Youth Group.

A noted sculptor of Paraguay has been studying a picture of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to assist him in making a head of the Christ. He said, "The Christ would have looked like that, except that He did not suffer for so many years."

The Group sent Naw-Rúz greetings to the Bahá'ís of North America.

Panama

Mrs. Louise Caswell has sent in a card for Sra. Guovara, winner of the University Women's Fellowship. She will attend the University of California at Berkeley. She attended the Bahá'í classes held by Mrs. Oliver and Mrs. Caswell.

Mrs. Oliver and Mrs. Caswell report that they have had several visitors from home who are passing through the Canal. They again stressed the need for men pioneers.

Brazil

Miss Leonore Holsapple reports that she has completed the translation of "The Goal of a New World Order" into Portuguese. This translation will prove of great value to the teaching work in Brazil.

Buenos Aires, Argentina

Mr. Philip Sprague has returned from Buenos Aires where he has been conducting a most successful group of classes. He reports that in one class there were seventeen young people, five of whom are believers. This brings the total number of believers to fifteen. Mr. Sprague was able to obtain radio time for sixteen talks. Two half-hour periods a week for eight weeks. He has also been instrumental in having the "Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh" translated into Spanish. This is indeed a great service as it will assist immensely in the teaching work throughout Latin-America.

Havana, Cuba

Mrs. Hoagg writes encouragingly of the work in Havana where she has been holding classes regularly. She has planned to stay in Cuba until the middle of April.

Mrs. Hoagg has sent in a newspaper account, which included a Temple picture, of her talk before the Women's Club of Havana. She reports two new believers.

Chile

A complete report has been received from Mrs. Marcia Atwater on her work in Santiago, the following is a quotation from her letter and will bring joy to the hearts of the friends in North America.

"First let me say that the work is being done in five distinct directions—the Theosophical Society, whose President yesterday offered me the T.S. platform for early in March and assured me of his efforts to effect a complete turn-out to hear the lecture—then secondly, a group of people whom Bahá'u'lláh has seen fit to put in my path and who come under no particular heading—these are the people who gather for the Sunday classes, which become larger and better each time. Thirdly is the Chilean Government, which doors have been opened through my connection with the Press. Am having tea tomorrow with the Minister of Information and Propaganda. Fourthly is the University group, which connections are due to mature the end of this week as we have an engagement to meet the woman who is most important in this connection, who speaks English and through whom I hope to secure permission to speak from the University platform. The latter introduction comes from two sources, the head of the Theosophical Soc. and a personal introduction I already had. Fifthly is the American Newspaper group which will act, or I should say re-act, back in the U.S. to help the Cause there. We have been interviewed, picture taken, whole story of Cause given in connection with pioneer work here, by a travelling press man from Denver, Colorado. To be short and clear we must say that Baha’u’llah has done nothing less than set on fire the entire city of Santiago. The man I mentioned from Colorado had been to the Holy Land some years ago and was telling me about it—it seemed that one day while in Beirut College he was sitting wondering which route to take to Egypt, when a young man came up to him and spent an hour helping him plan the nicest journey possible. Then this man disappeared. My friend turned to some others and said, "who in the world was that helpful stranger?" and the reply was that he was a Baha’i and it is a part of his religion to help others without renumeration. The man from Colorado could not forget that incident, and it was that act that a dear Persian brother which was responsible for my interview, pictures etc. and enabled me to interest the young American in the Faith enough to promise to read and study it! In a former letter I wrote of my having so many doors opened by friends from Washington and from these other nations and so I was most cordially welcomed as I arrived in Honduras. Women connected with our Peace organization, these women opened all doors for me and I was soon lecturing in all kinds of women's organizations and schools. I had three long visits with the President of Honduras, Sr. T. Carías and his family, his car was at my disposal during my stay and he later sent me to the great Maya ruins at Copan in his plane. I had to return to the city, for I was to be guest of the Rotary Club at a special dinner where the wives and women friends were also guests. It was a most happy occasion and one that will be long remembered. The following day a wonderful group of men and women met in the Rotary Club rooms and the Honduras Committee on Inter-American Culture was established. From among these new friends I found several who were ready for the Greatest Bond, spiritual reality, and they came to hear my Baha’i talks and joined up with the permanent group of students. Mrs. Stewart goes on to tell of her lecture at the Casino, the finest social club in Honduras, the University and in several schools where special programs were arranged for her. The Director of the School of Fine Arts was greatly interested in the Cause and asked for several pictures of the Temple, as he desired to put them in the Art Gallery as an inspiration to his students. He plans to be in the U.S. next fall and hopes to visit the Temple.

"Now I tell you the best news! I add to this a list of the people that attended nearly all of my fourteen Baha’i talks while I was in Tegucigalpa, from Jan. 21 to Feb. 25, 1941. There were 27 in all but this does not include the many, many persons who heard of the Cause or of one or more aspects of it. Many persons were constantly at my Hotel for personal interviews on all kinds of social problems and to them I explained the Baha’i attitude on these problems. Among these were the Ministers from Peru, from Mexico, a famous Historian and the President of the First Inter-American Congress of Indians held in Mexico last spring. People from Belgium, Spain, England, A r a b i a, Russia and France as well as many Latin American nations.

"On February 15 the study group elected their permanent Committee to carry on the study preparatory to the day when they can elect a Spiritual Assembly. I am so very happy over that Committee, for it is composed of outstanding people of great capacity and who stand before the Community as leaders in thought."

Guatemala

Mrs. Stewart also reports that the group in Guatemala is meeting regularly and shows splendid signs of progress.

Nicaragua

Mr. Mathew Kaszab is being assisted in the teaching work in Nicaragua by Mrs. Frances Stewart, who reports that she has received much favorable publicity and hopes to be able to give many talks while in the country.

Mrs. Stewart informs us that she has been able to contact many people in Managua and that many have been attracted to the Cause. The newspapers have given her much space. She hopes to get to Costa Rica in the near future.
San Jose, Costa Rica
Mrs. Cora Oliver writes from Costa Rica of the excellent work being done by Mrs. Woolson and Mrs. Ford. She considers the work they are doing in Costa Rica outstanding in the pioneer field.

Port Au Prince, Haiti
Good news has been received from the Blackwells. They have sent in three registration cards, a Mr. and Mrs. McBean and Miss Muriel Johnson. The McBeans have opened their home for meetings. They report it very difficult to spread the Cause in Haiti because they are handicapped by the lack of literature in French.

"Know that he is truly learned who hath acknowledged My Revelation, and drunk from the Ocean of My knowledge, and soared in the atmosphere of My love, and cast away all else besides Me, and taken firm hold on that which hath been sent down from the Kingdom of My wondrous utterances. He, verily, is even as an eye unto mankind, and as the spirit of life unto the body of all creation."—BAHÁ'U'LLAH, Epistle to the Son of the Wolf, page 83.

Our Bahá'í Schools
"Indeed it is very important for the Faith, to extend the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh amongst the youth, as it is through their activities that the Cause of our beloved Master will in future spread all over the American Continent. They have upon their shoulders all the responsibilities for the progress of the Movement; it is our duty to rear their spiritual feelings, and enlighten their hearts with the light of guidance which has been shed upon us by the Master.

"It is very interesting to follow up the development these institutions make from year to year and the way they attract attention more and more. Before long, Shoghi Effendi hopes, they will become powerful and well-established organizations that will train innumerable young men and women to go out into the world and spread the message of Bahá'u'lláh. Definite courses should be given along the different phases of the Bahá'í Faith and in a manner that will stimulate the students to proceed in their studies privately once they return home, for the period of a few days is not sufficient to learn everything. They have to be taught the habit of studying the Cause constantly, for the more we read the Words the more will the truth they contain be revealed to us."—Shoghi Effendi.

The International School has added a new feature for 1941; a youth session. As the Ranch accommodates only 19 persons, the sessions must be divided. The first concern of the International School last year was the study of the Latin American mind; its religious background and psychology. The second concern was the study of the culture, history, and music of the Latin Americans, so that a sympathetic basis of appreciation would be formed in the mind of the student. The third interest of the school was the effort to reach the people of Colorado Springs who, through the long years previously had exhibited little or no interest in the Faith. Symposiums, given by 4 teachers, were immensely helpful and from a handful of people the audiences grew to well over 100. This year the first session will be held from June 20 to June 30, the youth session from July 1st to 10th.

The Geyserville School is making plans for a busy session this year. We hear from Mrs. Louise Groger of that committee that a special feature is again being arranged for the children who attend. Last year, 24 children attended the school, 9 of them from non-Bahá'í families in Geyserville and vicinity. The effect is best expressed by the remark of one eleven year old girl, who said, "Isn't it funny, during summer school I am a Bahá'í, even if I am a Catholic the rest of the year." Classes were held regularly every day for the first two or three weeks of the school. Hours were from 9:30 a.m. to 12:00. One hour and a quarter was given to outlined work, and one hour and a quarter to art and handicraft. Outlines used were, Creation, Bahá’í Principles, and Bahá’í Founders. The Children’s Committee sponsored a Round Table, at which the following ideas and suggestions were brought forth:

1. Give children a place on the program at home and school whenever possible.
2. Use pageants and simple plays as simple mediums of childhood expression.
3. Develop neighborhood play, with Bahá’í supervision.
4. Let traveling teachers qualified to do so, assist in starting children’s classes wherever possible.
5. Use Bahá’í books as awards.
6. There is a need for songs, plays, pageants, handicraft suggestions, and more study outlines. Such original material, successfully developed in the schools, should be submitted to the Child Education Committee for further use.

The Children’s Committee of the Geyserville School calls the attention of the public to the fact that the youth group age ranges from 15 to 25, and those responsible for children under 15 are requested to see that these students enter the children’s classes. As special facilities are provided for children at this school, it is urged that every family try to bring at least one child. Every boy and girl at Geyserville enjoys a summer vacation, increased good health, a growing knowledge of the Cause and the spirit of Bahá’í living.

International Bahá’í School
Second Inter-American Session
Teachers’ Session June 20-30
Youth Session July 1-10

On June 20, if plans remain unchanged, the Session will be host to Conductor Skolanski and his orchestra of sixty young people from all the countries of Latin America. On June 21, Prof. Richard F. Behrendt, recently of Panana University, will speak on The Drama of Today As Seen in Latin America. He will be available all day to answer questions and talk over teaching problems with the Bahá’ís.

On Sunday the 22 we plan to have a joint lecture by Horace Holley and George O. Latimer. Their subjects will be concerned with the deep causes of human upheaval.

Prof. James Sykes will again speak on the music and culture of Latin America (this lecture will be repeated during the youth session).

There will be one concert in each Session gratis by the Colorado College. Dates not yet selected. There will also be in each Session colored slides shown of Latin American Cities, flora of the high Andes and some paintings done by South American artists. (This feature provided by a local professor). George O. Latimer will speak on the unfolding of the future program of Bahá’u’lláh. Date not yet determined.

Wanden La Farge will give two talks in each Session on Fundamental Psychology needed in dealing with groups of people.

Two symposiums with four Bahá’í speakers will be held in a public hall in Colorado Springs. Dates have not yet been decided.

Each day a professor will give a lesson in the Spanish language. For this there will be a charge according to the number of pupils that attend.

For the Youth Session, Prof. Hayes of Salt Lake City University will speak on Practical Philosophy in teaching work.

During the Youth Session each attending member will be asked to prepare facts in regard to one country, for a talk from which notes can be taken. Also our Bahá’í teachers from Latin America have sent in papers to be read.

The Pan American Union have made available literature and facts of vital importance for study. There will be meditation followed by discussion with a special emphasis on clarifying points in the teaching that might be misunderstood by alien thought. (What to put forth and what to explain in detail. What will enable teachers to state the Bahá’í teachings in a manner clear, comprehensible and conclusive to Latin American minds).

The effort of the Committee during the first few years of the School is to invite teachers of the Cause and set a high standard that can be a model later when the school is open to students.

As accommodations are limited, attendance has been filled by two means: first, by invitation; and second, by application. This year both Sessions with capacity of 22 persons are filled.

During the formative period there has been no charge but after the present Session the Committee will announce plans, prices and details for the coming year.

Teaching Conference
In Georgia

Vogel Park, near Cleveland, Georgia, in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, will be the meeting place again this year for the Special Bahá’í Teaching Conference during the week of June 14-21.
This conference is really an enlarged fireside group. The program is not quite complete, but classes will be given by Mrs. Howard Colby Ives, Mrs. H. Emogene Hoag, and Mrs. Terah C. Smith.

During the week-end of June 14-15 a Youth Program will be given under the direction of Miss Virginia Taylor and Miss Betty Shook. In addition, Vogel Park offers excellent swimming, boating, hiking, horseback riding, and fishing. Ample time will be given for Bahá'í fellowship, sports, and recreation.

All cottages face the beautiful lake, and are equipped with electricity, shower, fireplaces, fire wood, and are suitably furnished for housekeeping. Ice and milk are delivered daily. Each group of friends had better bring their own food, but short orders can be gotten there in the Park, and Walasayi Inn and Trading Post some three miles away serve meals.

Vogel Park is reached by U.S. Highway No. 19, the Appalachian Trail which traverses the Park from Murphy N.C., on the north, and from Dahlonega, Ga., on the south. Friends coming from Kentucky and Tennessee may find some gravel road between Chattanooga and Murphy, N.C., but the road is good.

Cottages rent for five dollars a week for each person, and reservations should be made through Nellie J. Roche, 708 Commerce Union Bank Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., as soon as possible.

Teaching by Local Assemblies

From time to time, striking and effective teaching methods are developed by local Assemblies which should be made known to other Assemblies, and Bahá'í News this year plans to give all possible space to teaching reports and news.

From recent correspondence five different teaching plans worked out locally in different parts of the country are selected for brief mention at this time.

Richmond Highlands, Washington

This young Assembly has opened a "Bahá'í Fellowship House" (see illustration) which stands under towering trees on a highroad making for easy access. From a clipping from the Aurora Herald we quote: "Work was started last week on the Bahá'í Fellowship House on the property of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Schneider, 180th and Aurora. The building, 20 x 22, will include a meeting room and small kitchen. The Bahá'í meetings will be held every Wednesday evening and courses in Esperanto, Research and Comparative Religion will be offered."

This preliminary notice was soon followed by an item, "Dedication of Home of Bahá'í Group is Told"... "Guests from Portland, Seattle, Chehalis, Everett, Kirkland, Monroe and Richmond Beach were present. "Hildore Jellissett, chairman of the local Assembly, introduced the speakers. Geo. Latimer, of Portland, was the principal speaker of the occasion, representing the National Assembly. Mark Tobey, of Seattle, followed the guests of other towns in speaking. Mrs. Schneider, of this Bahá'í Community, then formally dedicated the edifice. Her uniring efforts, assisted by local supporters, made the achievement of this undertaking a crown of glory to her and the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh in this section."

Topeka

This Spiritual Assembly inaugurated the last Bahá'í year by the preparation of a very complete booklet combining its Bahá'í Directory with the Bahá'í calendar for the year. Of convenient pocket size, the booklet consisted of sixteen pages, multigraphed on one side, all bound with the Temple postcard as front cover.

The first sheets listed the names, addresses and telephone numbers of the members of the community, followed by the names of the Assembly members with their offices, then the list of local Committees.

The successive sheets carried each one a calendar for one month, with the list of Bahá'í meetings, Feasts, Anniversaries, Assembly meetings and other Bahá'í gatherings under the calendar.

The booklet thus provided each believer with the information needed for efficient participation in the local activities of the Faith.

Wilmette, Evanston, Winnetka

These three adjoining Assemblies of the Temple area set up an Inter-Assembly Committee with a budget and authority to carry out a combined teaching program. As worked out, the program included, first, a weekly study class for all North Shore believers; second, a printed bulletin issued to a special list of about one thousand persons in the three towns, giving informal news about Temple construction; third, a series of paid notices in the three local papers announcing public meetings; and fourth, a series of meetings, one in Evanston, one in Wilmette and one in Winnetka, with the dates of November 15, December 6 and January 22 respectively. These were held in Orrington School Auditorium, Evanston, in Temple Foundation Hall, Wilmette, and in Community House, Winnetka.

Teaneck

This Assembly issued a program announced as "A Comprehensive Series of Lectures on The Bahá'í Revelation," covering subjects and speakers for a series of Sunday evening public meetings from October 6, 1940 to February 9, 1941, nineteen successive weeks. With the program was embodied an "Outline of Bahá'í History," "Basic Bahá'í Teachings," and a map and train schedule for the convenience of new friends.

This program appears unusually interesting in that its subjects, planned as a unified whole, presented the seeker with a real opportunity to learn about the fundamental purposes and teachings of the Bahá'í Faith, yet each subject was also a unit in itself and therefore the visitor felt under no obligation to commit himself for the whole course.

A well conceived and attractive program of this type is the best kind of teaching material, because it impresses and also informs even those who for any reason do not attend the meetings.

Toronto

Another Assembly which developed a series of nineteen subjects last year was Toronto. Among the subjects listed were: New World Order in Action, The Oneness of Mankind,...
The Search for Truth, etc.

The impressive method adopted for conveying these subjects to the public consisted in a series of small mimeographed bulletins entitled "New World Order," containing excerpts from the Bahá'í Writings, and each one also developing a separate subject in the form of a brief article by one of the friends.

This plan is well conceived whether intended to supplement public meetings or be a substitute for them. A good mailing list is an important asset for any Assembly, especially as there are now so many small Bahá'í leaflets, like the "Bahá'í Reprint" series, which can be used along with programs and announcements prepared locally.

We Cannot Take Sides

The following statement is reprinted from the January, 1941 issue of Bahá'í Quarterly published by the Bahá'ís of Australia and New Zealand, in accordance with the instruction cabled by the Guardian on April 19, 1941, as cited above.

A most important matter for Bahá'ís at this time, when world convulsions assume daily more destructive proportions and national hatreds are more bitterly fostered, is to get a clear vision, a balanced perspective of the attitude we should hold towards the situation. For some years the Guardian, through his messages and World Order letters (Goal of a New World Order, etc.) has been preparing us for just the conditions we are now experiencing. In clear and emphatic utterances he has been educating our minds and steering our thoughts into channels calculated to keep us clear of personal bias and inherited patriotism. Our patriotism must be always to world citizenship, world brotherhood, and the lesser loyalties must be subordinated to this supreme loyalty. In these countries of the antipodes, where loyalty to Britain is stronger, perhaps, than in Britain itself, it requires real spiritual insight and understanding to be able to rise above our limited inherited loyalties and the clamor of conflict and see beyond it the inevitable and ordained outcome of organized peace and a reconstructed mankind.

We must see in the conflict a breaking down of old ideas and forms which no longer serve mankind, but which are a distinct menace to his security, "antiquated barriers that seek to block humanity's progress towards its destined goal." It would be well to study again the "World Order" letters of Shoghi Effendi, and in the light of the tragic drama in which we are enmeshed, try to get a deeper insight and a surer ground of understanding of the "mystery unfolding so rapidly in this Day of God, when the nations and peoples are summoned before the high court of destiny to answer for their failure to attain peace." We cannot take sides or assign blame to any particular nation. The causes leading up to the war are many and deep rooted.

Groups of nations leagued together against other groups can only result sooner or later in open conflict. Never can such methods result in peace. To Bahá'ís peace means the harmonious relationship of all peoples, through their governments, their educational systems, economic systems and other social agencies. Only a world outlook, one organized world order as set out in the Bahá'í Teachings, can establish and maintain peace in our time. Now is the supreme opportunity of every Bahá'í teacher to stress at all times this consummation as the sole remedy for the tragic plight the nations are experiencing at this moment of humanity's history.

Political Entanglements

Attention is again directed to the Guardian's repeated instructions concerning non-participation in political propaganda. Bahá'í teaching insists on the removal of barriers of class, nation and race; political parties represent the interests of certain sections of the community and their legislation is directed primarily to foster and enhance those interests. Bahá'ís cannot logically identify themselves with or support any brand of class legislation. Therefore party politics should be viewed as an anachronism. As far back as 1932 Shoghi Effendi wrote, "Let them refrain from associating themselves, whether by word or deed, with the political pursuits of their respective nations, with the policies of their governments and the schemes and programs of parties and factions. In such controversies they should assign no blame, take no side, further no design and identify themselves with no system prejudicial to the best interests of that World Fellowship which it is their aim to guard and foster. Let them affirm their unyielding determination to stand firmly and unreservedly, for the way of Bahá'u'lláh, to avoid the entanglements and bickerings inseparable from the pursuit of the politician, and to become worthy agencies of that Divine Polity which incarnates God's immutable purpose for all men. To enter the arena of party politics is surely detrimental to the best interests of the Faith and will harm the Cause." 7

During election campaigns, when party feeling runs high, it is essential that all Bahá'ís, more especially those who in the past have had strong party leanings, should discipline themselves and not be led by mass emotion into controversies which would belittle the world-wide scope of the Cause with which they stand identified. On September 24, 1933, the following message was cabled by Shoghi Effendi to the N.S.A. of U.S.A. and Canada:—"Loyalty (to the) World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, security of its basic institutions, both imperatively demand all its avowed supporters . . . in these days when sinister uncontrollable forces are deepening (the) cleavage sundering peoples, nations, creeds (and) classes, (to) resolve, despite (the) pressure (of) fast crystallizing public opinion, (to) abstain individually and collectively, in word (and) action, informally as well as in all official utterances and publications, from assigning blame, taking sides, however indirectly, in recurring political crises now agitating (and) ultimately

All local Assemblies, those first established this year and those re-elected, are requested to report their Assembly roll before the meeting of the National Assembly on May 29. At that meeting the National Assembly must adopt the list of local Assemblies duly recognized for the current Bahá'í year. Many Assemblies have already reported. Any Assembly not having a copy of the form to be filled out in order to report its election can obtain one from the National Bahá'í Office.

BAHA'I NEWS
engulfing human society. Grave apprehension lest cumulative effect (of) such compromises (should) disintegrate (the) fabric, clog (the) channel of grace that sustains (the) system of God's essentially supranational, supernatural order so laboriously evolved, so recently established."

The latest news from Haifa tells of the compulsory disbanding of Assemblies in Europe, Palestine and Iran, thereby, temporarily at least, crippling the Cause in those countries. We pray that our brothers and sisters in these lands may be sustained and strengthened in their time of trial and difficulty. It behooves us, therefore, to put forth a supreme effort to strengthen the foundations and build up the structure of the faith in these far-off regions, as yet comparatively untouched by drastic war measures, in preparation for the time when we shall be called upon to vindicate our faith and take our part in the establishment of the complete Administrative Order, the Commonwealth of Nations. To voice prejudiced opinions on either local, national or international policies will tend to retard the progress of the Cause. Divine justice will be served. Our plain duty is to work for the reconstructed world that is to be.

"Praying Signal Victories"

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and Groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

This month it is our joyous privilege to announce that the Fifth Year of the Seven Year Plan has been inaugurated with a notable spiritual achievement. The entire amount required to complete the exterior decoration of the main story faces can be considered secured.

This means that it is not a time for relaxed but intensified effort. To support the vast teaching enterprise embracing the twenty-one nations of Central and South America, and the unoccupied areas of North America, the minimum budget sought by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Fifth Year of the Seven Year Plan is $30,000, which includes such related activities as the Bahá'í School programs, Race Unity projects, etc.

Teaching the Focal Point

A study of the Guardian's messages received in recent years makes it clear that teaching is to be regarded as the focal point of our collective effort—the fulfilment of those opportunities and privileges granted us by reason of prior and preparatory work done in developing the administrative order and in constructing the House of Worship. The mighty wings of the Spirit are outspread in support of those who now, in consecration and in devotion and in knowledge, arise to teach the Cause of God.

In entering upon the local, regional, national and Inter-America plans and projects made available to all the friends, let us prepare ourselves by turning again and again to the towering waves of spiritual power with which the Guardian has inundated our souls since the Seven Year Plan began.

"Appeal (to) assembled delegates ponder historic appeal voiced by 'Abdu'l-Bahá (in) Tablets (of the) Divine Plan ... Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (of) this glorious century (i. e., the First Bahá'í Century ending March 20, 1944) embrace (the) light (of the) Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order." (May 1, 1936)

"A systematic, carefully conceived, and well-established plan should be devised, rigorously pursued and continuously extended. Initiated by the National representatives of the American believers, the vanguard and standard-bearers of the radiant army of Bahá’u’lláh, this plan should receive the whole-hearted, the sustained and ever-increasing support, both moral and financial, of the entire body of believers in that country.

“Its supreme immediate objective should be the permanent establishment of at least one center in every state of the American Republic and in every Republic of the American continent not yet enlisted under the banner of His Faith... The field is immense, the task gigantic, the privilege immeasurably precious. Time is short, and the obligation sacred, paramount and urgent. The American community must muster all its force, concentrate its resources, summon to its aid all the faith, the determination and energies of which it is capable, and set out, single-minded and unswayed, to attain still greater heights in its mighty exertions for the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh.” (May 30, 1936)

“The American believers, if they wish to carry out, in the spirit and letter, the parting wishes of their beloved Master, must intensify their teaching work a thousandfold... The Tablets of the Divine Plan invest your Assembly with unique and grave responsibilities, and confer upon it privileges which your sister Assemblies might well envy and admire. The present opportunity is unutterably precious. It may not recur again.” (July 28, 1936)

“(I) entreat (the) American believers (to) ponder afresh (the) urgency (to) rededicate themselves (to the) task (of the) complete fulfillment (of the) Divine Plan.” (July 30, 1936)

“(The) world crisis (is) inexorably moving towards climax, challenging (the) torchbearers (of) Bahá’í civilization (to) scale loftier heights (of) individual heroism, (to) scatter more widely throughout (the) length (and) breadth (of the) American continents, (to) participate more strenuously (in) concerted effort organized by National, Regional (and) local agencies dedicated (to) the prosecution (of) noble enterprise, (to) pour forth more abundantly (their) resources in support (of the) fund created for its furtherance, (and) resolve more determinedly (to) conquer whatever obstacles might retard its ultimate fruition.” (October 29, 1936)

“The promulgation of the Divine Plan, unveiled by our departed Master in the darkest days of one of the severest ordeals which humanity has ever experienced, is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to fulfill their unimaginably glorious destiny.” (November 14, 1936)

Teaching—a Coordinated Activity and a Measure of Accomplishment

The aim of the Guardian’s successive messages has been, first, to quicken the hearts and fill them with longing to render service, and second, to set forth a definite program of action to be accomplished by the end of the first Bahá’í Century in 1944.

In appointing its Committees this year, the National Assembly is not merely indicating their respective functions but also supplying each Committee, as far as possible, with a definite measure of accomplishment on which it is to report progress from month to month. Activity and accomplishment, in a great coordinated Plan, with responsibility to the believers collectively through their National Spiritual Assembly, is the note to be struck by Committees this year.

Likewise, the local Assemblies are called upon to assign themselves actual measures of accomplishment this year, with specific tasks assigned to their locally appointed Committees and regular reports requested from each.

The groups of believers, even each individual Bahá’í, might well in the same way lay out for themselves some program of effort and some definite tasks to accomplish. The Guardian has shown us the key to Bahá’í service by pressing so vigorously for the fulfillment of the Seven Year Plan. That Plan is like the construction of a house, requiring blueprints for each detail and coordination of many skilful workers.

Shoghi Effendi cabled on May 1 a message to the National Assembly which gives a survey of the area of effort assigned to that body this year: “Newly elected Assembly’s objective (is) steadily direct (the) energies, energetically coordinate (the) enterprises, fan (the) flame (of) enthusiasm (and) remove impediments (to) progress (of the) teaching activities (of the) Bahá’í communities (throughout the) Americas. Praying unprecedented success.”

This is a very great responsibility as well as a very great privilege. Its fulfillment requires the unified effort of the whole body of believers and every institution of the Faith in America. The National Assembly pledges itself to aid and assist all the workers, and bespeaks the aid and prayers of the friends.

“There is no time to lose. There is no room left for vacillation. Multitudes hunger for the Bread of Life. The stage is set. The firm and irrevocable Promise is given. God’s own Plan has been set in motion. It is gathering momentum with every passing day. The powers of heaven and earth mysteriously assist in its execution.” (January 29, 1939)

Faithfully yours,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The Splendid Spirit

The following excerpts are from a letter addressed by the Guardian through his secretary to the National Treasurer:

“Indeed the splendid spirit that animates the American believers these days is a great source of joy and inspiration of the Guardian, and as the good news comes in of new victories won and new sacrifices made, one can see his spirits rise and a wave of new strength sweep over him—tired and over-burdened as he so often is.

“In this connection the letter you so thoughtfully enclosed from that dear Bahá’í who gave the difference in the price of a cheap or expensive coffin to the Fund of the Cause, greatly touched him. Such sacrifices prove the caliber of the friends and...”
THE THIRTY-THIRD CONVENTION

Various signs of progress and happiness greeted the delegates and friends who reached Wilmette for the Thirty-third Annual Bahá’í Convention. First of all was the welcome accorded by Wilmette, whose stores displayed large placards, circulated by the Chamber of Commerce, to this end. The progress of Temple construction, releasing greater sublimity and beauty, moved some to express wonderment; others smiles or tears. Love has many signs.

The grading of the grounds brings the majestic structure into bold relief.

In the Hall itself, besides the familiar rugs and books, were to be seen suspended from the walls and largely printed, the nine quotations selected by the Guardian, from the writings of Bahá’u’lláh and later intended to adorn one each of the nine Temple faces outside and soon to be completed. And here was the great joy of visiting the Temple, a God and mingling in joyous communion with His devoted and loving friends.

The Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly opened the Convention, referring feelingly to the duties of the friends to a world so grievously shaken by calamity and duties of the friends to a world so grievously shaken by calamity and approaching chaos.

Following the roll call, the Convention organized by electing George O. Latimer of Portland, Oregon, Convention Chairman and Horace Holley of Wilmette, Secretary.

Thereupon was expressed by a delegate the keynote of the Convention: The closing of ranks; harmony and peace; concentration upon the activities of the Cause.

Mr. John J. Earley, the contractor of the exterior decoration of the Temple, was introduced. He expressed profound admiration for the Bahá’ís whom he knows by their fruitful deeds. He praised the genius of the late Louis Bourgeois, architect of the Temple, and mentioned his contacts with him and the National Spiritual Assembly years prior to the work of exterior decoration. The Temple is the symbol of a new faith in a new day. Both its architecture and poetry seem an invention of the Celestial Sphere.

Looking carefully over the ten thousand forms used in the Temple there is an error of but one and a half inches, so near is it to perfection! In contrast to this he pointed out that St. Peter’s, one of the world’s greatest domes, is nothing less than fourteen hundred tons out of plumb, and would fall, were it not for chains which prevent the walls from spreading. This Temple reflects the feeling as well as the culture of its architect. Its unique plan has caused a revolution in building construction. It is a great laboratory, built with slabs and pieces, its ornamentation being poured into its own skin. In its first twenty-five years of development it has inspired ten million dollars expenditure for the uses of the same kind of material in other structures. It has thus influenced building, the greatest industry in the United States.

Mr. Earley next spoke of the mystical fire that burns within the senses, discovering new values and the joy and service of life. During all the years not a single workman has lost interest.

There will be two and one-half miles of steps with a tread of six and one-half inches, surrounding the entire enclosure. It will be built with such an amount of mobility as to be proof against rain, snow, freezing, ground swells and contractions. Its material for construction has been tested for a temperature as remote as twenty degrees below zero—this by Government experts—and has been found intact. Also a very high official of another branch of the Government examined its dome minutely and did not find a defective slab. The old architecture and materials would not have lent themselves to such requirements. I have undertaken to do what the Bahá’ís wish and feel assured that I can write your Faith in the walls of your Temple.

The address of Mr. Earley seemed to fire all with a new enthusiasm and a vote of thanks was tendered him.

Always first in point of interest, significance and value, is what comes from the Guardian. His Convention cable, already printed, was circulated among the delegates. Extracts from his letter, “The Promised Day Is Come,” were most impressively read to the Convention.

Reverential and awe-struck we listened as our Guardian, armed with the mighty Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh, and the repeated warnings of the Master, pronounced the Judgment of God upon a heedless and troubled world. He tells us the true meaning of the present greatest upheaval, which no man not favored by God can fathom.

“It is both a retributory calamity and an act of holy and supreme discipline. It is at once a visitation from God and a cleansing process for all mankind. Its fires punish the perversity of the human race and weld its component parts into one organic, indivisible, world-embracing community.”

Every created thing has a center, whether it be of rotation, gravity, radiation, dynamic energy, feeling, intelligence, spiritual perception, guidance, as the case may be. The appointed Center was the Master in His ministry. By His command His followers turn to the one appointed by His Will. While hosts are wandering, knowing hearts fill with gratitude for such a center and such a leader.

“The Mosquito of Violation”

The Convention considered with approval the Master’s instructions with regard to the protection of the Cause against Covenant-breakers. The Word of God is a spirit that overcomes all things, a power that unites the sincere of heart. It is also a sword that divides truth from error, light from darkness, genuineness from pretense. Seeing that conditions of apostasy and Covenant-breaking which harassed His own ministry would continue or be renewed from other quarters, He gave very definite instructions of protection in His Will and various Tablets. Thus He writes in His very last Tablet:

“O ye beloved ones! Guard the Cause of God! Let no sweetness of tongue beguile you—nay, rather consider the motives of every soul, and ponder the thought he cherisheth. Be ye straightway mindful and on your guard. Avoid, yet be not aggressive. Turn away from censure and from slander. Leave him in the Hand of God. Upon you rest the Glory of the Glories!”

The Master, who numbered among His other marvelous qualities a delightful sense of humor, once asked a friend: “Can the mosquito of violation withstand the Eagle of the Testament?”

“Beware of the sagacity of the faithful! For he seeth with the Light Divine.”

The Convention cabled Shoghi Effendi:

“Convention determined fulfill Master’s hopes Temple. Accelerate consolidation newly-born groups, extension believers’ faith and yearn capacity to receive your guidance, strength. Entreat prayers. Grateful bounty privilege service. Send our hearts’ devotion.”

A report was made orally by the National Secretary covering the last weeks of the current Bahá’í year, to supplement the written report already published. Among the topics presented were: messages from Haifa since March 15; new Assemblies formed on April 21; and revision of Temple construction costs.

Affairs and Means

The Treasurer spoke quite seriously of the increasingly disturbed state of mankind. He reported a deficit, due to the speeding up of construction and the noble effort to complete the Temple two years ahead of schedule, because of the times. It matters very little where people are during such a time of universal disturbance, but how happy they are in active service matters greatly. There appeared a hidden spring in the finances. From various sources a sum aggregating $10,750.00 flowed into his coffers, one of the best for several years over a similar brief period.

The Supervising Engineer mentioned the saving of ten thousand dollars, the original estimate for moulds. The pylons were erected under rapidly changing conditions of construction, but for the present there are not such great changes in the cost of labor. Savings have been made over the cost of three years. But on the other hand, there is extra necessary material which increases the original cost of four years ago. The over-run is about $8000.00, a remarkable showing. This over-run in some structures has been as much as fifty percent. The Temple is being built most economically, as testified also by Mr. Earley.

The grading of the grounds, now about completed, is preparatory to seeding with rye grass. A lovely green mound will appear over the basement floor. The accessory administration office building, the new fence and the increasing land space behind the Haziratu’l-Quds should be noted; also the increase of our land holdings on the East side of Sheridan Road. On the other hand, the transfer of ownership to the Village of Wilmette of a strip of Temple land bordering Sheridan Road, so as to change the curve of the said road to avoid accidents, will bring to us a financial indemnity from the said Village as well as the addition of land before mentioned.

Inter-American Teaching

One of the most fascinating periods of the Convention was that devoted to reports from and consideration of work in Latin-American countries. This showed how heroic and devoted pioneers, facing tremendous difficulties, such as changes of climate, customs, laws, uncertainties and upheavals and sometimes revolutions, remoteness from home, relatives and friends, meagerness of funds and support, suspicions aroused against foreign visitors, etc., are yet, under the mighty Confirmations of Bahá'u'lláh, blazing a pathway of light in the most wonderful service that can engage human endeavors. Stories of these pioneers, thrilling and humanistic, were heard with the most profound admiration and high praise. One such story is about a very delicate and refined American woman who is just now in a country swept by revolution. Yet she thinks and many other detailed recitals, and the work is being continued; the thrilling experience of flying across the Andes five nights a week.

Another pioneer recently returned, pictured the great love and attraction newly kindled in the hearts of many souls, a class formed for teaching whose number of inquirers soon became so large that it had to be divided into two sections. One enthusiastic friend caused twenty-two of his friends to attend meetings five nights a week.

"The visits of three American ladies to Mexico City and their activities; the more recent visit for the second time of another American teacher to Mexico City, this time to aid that new Center to hold a Bahá'í election according to established procedure; the campaign of three teachers in Haiti, one of whom is now touring in a truck and giving the Message to all she can reach; the thrilling experience of flying across the Andes in the line of service; the work in Cuba, gem of the Antilles, where the nucleus of a Center was formed in a few months and the work is being continued; and many other detailed recitals, created an interest which could not be equalled by the most fascinating romance.

This Crucial Hour

"Delighted. Convey (to) Milly Collins (my) ever-deepening appreciation (of) her) historic, exemplary contributions (in) this crucial hour (for the) Faith (of) Bahá'u'lláh."

SHOGHI RABBANI

Cablegram received June 3, 1941.

One who had many times traversed this vast Inter-America region described most vividly the needs of the people to achieve religious ideals and their willingness to advance. Apparently their ideas about the old religions are very limited and they have had little chance or stimulus to improve.

A returned pioneer related a story of being accosted by a government official, who apprised him that he had been informed of his activities and thought him quite deserving of being sent to jail. His reply was: "All right! Put me in prison and I shall be only too eager to give the Bahá'í teachings to the two thousand prisoners who are already there!"

He was not molested.

A vote of appreciation and thanks to this Committee was passed by the Convention. Eloquent tributes were also paid the workers, and the instructions of the Guardian to the administration, to stand by the pioneers, was brought to view. It was further stated by the Chairman that the National Spiritual Assembly, with limited funds, could provide for pioneers only in the most meager way; so that those listing for such a service should strive to the utmost, if not prepared with means for self-support, to obtain employment where they serve. The further from base, the mightier the confirmations seem to be.

The Election

The election of the new National Spiritual Assembly, was set by the agenda for late afternoon of the second convention day. The result has already been reported.

North America Teaching

The Committee Chairman stated, as the aim of this most vital plan of service, to establish a nucleus in each state and province with actively functioning Assemblies. These will become power-houses of spiritual influence and stimulate new movements of service. The intensification of the work in certain areas received special emphasis. There is a pressing demand for teachers. No other human activity can be more important at such a time. The continued work of devoted souls shows very marked and appreciable gains. The number of isolated believers, now about fifteen hundred, should prove a great stimulus to teaching and the spread of the Cause, since every true believer wants to share his faith with others. Many new centers and groups are now begging the assistance of teachers.

The work in the South is especially difficult, due to extreme orthodoxy and racial traditions, yet the Divine Plan has overcome far more difficult conditions in other lands. Those in the vanguard of service in this region report steady gains in the work and much joy in the fellowship of service.

A Southern delegate expressed the view that much of our grief and alarm is of our own making. We should not rush, but take our time in entering the Cause. But, having entered, do our utmost to close our ranks. Smooth sailing will come in future, however difficult the way may now seem.

A youthful Bahá'í, who spoke like an oracle, observed the tendency on the part of many people to become tense and constrained whenever "race" in its limited sense, is mentioned. The situation, though difficult, is not impossible of solution. The solid South shows unmistakable signs of gradually melting, as indicated by happenings both within and without. Various organizations are preparing the way for the acceptance of the full program of the Bahá'ís. Those who know Bahá'u'lláh should, with confidence and courage, do even more. Let us depend upon Guidance, and yield not to compromise, which makes greater and greater demands and stifles resolution. Let us work with a will; but never feel tense about it because this betrays a lack of balance.

The Guardian enjoins the workers to take their stand and do their appointed task, no matter what conditions betide. The sacrifices of the friends will be the means of freeing humanity from its yoke and bring the ultimate triumph of the Cause.
The vastness of Canada, as yet practically untouched by the Cause, was presented by a western pioneer who has traveled and taught there extensively. Recently he had the pleasure of contacting an Icelandic group, among whom he found rare souls who seemed ready to lay down their lives for the Cause.

A New York friend presented ideas for coordinating the teaching work by stressing (1) the spiritual, non-political unity of all mankind; (2) to invite others in regions to speak at various meetings; (3) the Spiritual Assemblies should send out a questionnaire to all of its community members with a view to finding out all their potentialities of service.

Race Unity

A survey of the South presented by the Chairman of this committee, as the result of a comprehensive tour, was summarized as follows:

1. The vast majority of people have no thought about minority groups. To them it seems that matters of race should be handled only with extreme delicacy. Their ideas and system are a combination of paternalism and the feudalism of a past age. The problem is so close to them that they cannot see it in perspective.

2. The awakening South, as indicated by the Southern Interracial Commission and the liberal attitude of many southern colleges and universities. They advocate social reform and a bi-racial culture. But any plan or suggestion for the races to meet upon an equal social plane causes a panic among them.

3. Those who, fewest in numbers, are like the Bahá'ís. They see that even the rise of a bi-racial culture will not end perpetual conflict, unless there is a strong spiritual bond and a pattern for future society adopted.

She was able to visit thirty colleges in the South which expressed interest in the Bahá'í Faith and appreciated its literature, especially the excerpt known as the pattern for future society.

It was stated that Jews are passing through a period of transition as to faith. Increasing numbers are abandoning orthodoxy. It was estimated that approximately a million Jews have become Christian Scientists, and so the Jews would seem to present a fertile field for Bahá'í cultivation.

The presence of eighteen American Indians of the Oneidas, a Wisconsin tribe, as visitors to the Convention, aroused much interest. Their coming was due principally to the work of our Bahá'í Indian brother, Eli Whitney Pawlas, a member of the tribe, and the cooperation of Clarence Niss of the Race Unity Committee. These fine Indian friends were introduced by name and given a cordial welcome. They took a keen interest in what they saw and heard. It is hoped that these contacts will result in the spread of the Bahá'í Faith among a long neglected people, with heavenly results.

Reviewing Committee

The Reviewing Committee made brief mention of its work with manuscripts, the difficulty and delicacy of the task assigned and the progress noted. It makes an annual report, very succinct and clear, dealing with the number of manuscripts reviewed and with what results. It is very important that the right sort of literature shall reach the public, presenting the Faith in a way both clear, attractive and dignified. The value of this patient and able service cannot well be overestimated.

Mexican Visitor

Pedro Espinoza, secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City, as a Convention Visitor, was invited to speak. He expressed the loving greetings of his center and gratitude for the loving cooperation and services they have received from the American friends. Good deeds and actions should be directed to all people, with much patience also. We must cultivate more than an intellectual grasp of the Teachings. Strive that the light of assurance may penetrate each and every heart, was the gist of his discourse.

For a Completed Temple

A plan suggested by the Supervising Architect, which met approval, was one for completing the outer decoration and steps of the Temple in 1941 and 1942, under a budget extended over two years. This can be done at an approximate cost of $355,000.00. The completion of the fences, already planned for this year, will be at a cost of about $35,000.00. The remainder will cover the steps. The completion of the Temple stairs will bring the entire outward structure to perfection next year. In the meantime there is to be no pause in pressing the teaching campaign which means so much to a bewildered world.

The Eternal Covenant

A seasoned veteran of service laid great emphasis upon firmness in the Covenant (which now means loyalty to the Guardian), not only as a means of protection to the loyal friends, but as one of purifying the Cause itself. The Holy Land is the Center of Illumination and its brightest reflection is now in the West. In past revelations, we have had much established. Centers of interpretation as are found today. Quite clear is the Station of the Expounder of the Verses, that of the Guardian today, who leads us under his unerring guidance from on High. This divine institution protects our faith from being rent by schisms. It is the power of cohesion and unity. This amalgam will bring to naught all opposition. Any healing that can come to Covenant-breakers rests with God. False teachings and sedulous literature are among the signs of Covenant-breaking.

The raising of obstacles has its bearing in the ultimate healing of mankind. Tests purify the faith. Such an experience ushers in the next great period of spiritual power.
Sacrifice for a Cause makes us a part of it. People of deviation know this not. If the true friends allow nothing to disrupt their unity, the attacks of foes will bring to us the richest blessings of peace and victory.

Braille

A very earnest plea was made for the blind, who should not be left without the solace of the heavenly teachings. Sometimes their insight sees much further than the eyesight of their neighbors. The Red Cross offers a course of ten lessons in Braille for $1.85. It deepens our own knowledge to study Braille. A fine service is that of transcribing the Bahá’í Teachings into Braille. Blind people in Los Angeles, instructed through the Bahá’í Teachings in Braille, were the means of bringing their families into the Faith.

Newness in Life

Besides being represented by some duly accredited delegates to the Convention, Bahá’í Youth held their ninth annual luncheon at an Evanston Hotel, attracting a large attendance among which were some elders. The scene was a brilliant one, which included variety, beauty, talents, joyfulness, enthusiasm and inspiration. They wish to be taken more seriously by their elders and given more responsibilities. Undoubtedly their elders sympathize with such aspirations and want them to advance. Certainly no obstacles can rightly be placed in their paths.

Our American Youth are doing things. Their program of music and addresses was charming and they spoke with wisdom and insight.

Education

The Child Education Committee expressed the need for greater uniformity in child education, according to the program stated in the Teachings.

A friend from Kansas, introduced by a delegate, read to the Convention teaching inspiration that had come to her, in the form of an original composition, blending of music and verse, called Light at Dawn or Early Concourse of Destiny. It proved to be a plan for presenting the Bahá’í Message and was well received.

Public speaking as a study and art was advocated as a means of effectively spreading the Bahá’í Faith. Eloquence is a divine gift, especially when it is used in testimony for God. The art of vocal expression, with intelligence to direct it, is specialized to man. He should know its value and put it to the best use.

The Convention voted its thanks to its Officers and to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Good News from Haifa

Those who have so long and well known William Sutherland Maxwell, the father-in-law of Shoghi Effendi, will appreciate information about him and his dearest interests, shared with the Convention by a Canadian friend. He lives comfortably in the Pilgrim’s House at Haifa and is working on the design of Mrs. May Maxwell’s monument, so as to please Shoghi Effendi and Ruhiyyih Khanum; and so he deems it a cooperative service. The Khanum garden, cultivated under the instructions of Shoghi Effendi, is in a wonderful shape and is developing even greater perfections. The monuments are in white marble, representing the Guardian’s own wishes and design. The house in the garden has been improved and will contain Bahá’í archives in future. Shoghi Effendi is reported working at such a rate and for such long hours as would exhaust any other person.

He reports a steady flow of visitors from Persia and the good health of Shoghi Effendi, Ruhiyyih Khanum and himself.

Feast of El-Ridván

The greatest of all Bahá’í Feasts, that of El-Ridván, commemorating the declaration of Bahá’u’lláh, was observed on Saturday evening April 26. The entire Convention covered a part of its period of twelve days.

The entire capacity of the hall was taxed by the audience of friends and visitors. The Spiritual Assemblies of Peoria and Chicago cooperated in the arrangements, the former planning the program and the latter refreshments. Mrs. Alice Simmons Cox was chairman.

The general theme was:

The Significance of the Manifestation and His Declaration:

Prayer read by Mrs. Chester F. Barnett.

Announcements and explanatory of Ed-Ridván

Reading: The Promised Day.

Address, Intimate Pictures of Bahá’u’lláh, from the Four Periods of His Life, George O. Latimer.

Address, Significances of the Manifestation, Ali Kuli Khan, N. D.

Address, The Days of Ridván with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá at Haifa, 1921, Mrs. Nellie S. French

Closing prayer read by Mrs. Chester F. Barnett.

Moving picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá taken in 1912.
Mr. Latimer's knowledge of the Manifestation was enriched by some unpublished sources. Mirza Khan’s address was a deep study of the spiritual significance of the Manifestation.

Mrs. French was favored with being with ‘Abdul-Bahá during the last three days of Ridván, 1921. The world in travail is now being prepared to grasp the meaning of “the Great Announcement,” the Declaration of the True One.

Hyde Dunn Memorial

Half an hour each day, preceding the Convention sessions, the Committee on Devotions selected readings and prayers which were impressively and beautifully read by various friends.

On Sunday morning, the last day, this period was extended to an hour, and a simple program redolent of beauty and spirituality was arranged to commemorate the late Hyde Dunn, American Bahá’í pioneer in Australia, whose sacrificial life in cooperation with his faithful wife, is used by the Most High as the means of enlightening a wide area of labor and service. The hour proceeded with reading of a Tablet of Bahá’u’lláh followed by the Guardian’s cablegram: “Beloved Father Dunn: reflecting parent luster; fourth witness.”

Prayers for the departed; Bahá’u’lláh.

Tablet of ‘Abdul-Bahá to Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Dunn, praising their teaching services and their firmness in the Covenant of God.

Prayers for the departed, Bahá’u’lláh.

Prayer for the departed, ‘Abdul-Bahá.

The program was concluded by the Tablet of Visitation of Bahá’u’lláh chanted in the original language, with its resonance and beauty.

Fragrances from Afar

Friends and workers at a distance, wired or cabled their Ridván greetings and love, and thus made themselves a spiritual part of the glorious Convention, also illustrating their far-flung Bahá’í activities. Messages reached us from: Butte, Montana; Miami, Florida; Phoenix, Arizona; Washington, D. C.; San Francisco, California; Monroe, Washington; Alaska; Denver, Colorado; Honolulu, H. I.; New York, New York; Port au Prince, Haiti; Les Cales, Haiti; Thiran, Persia; Santo Domingo; Haworth, New Jersey; Muskogon, Michigan; Muskegon Heights, Michigan; Fruitport, Michigan; East Fruitport, Michigan; Lake Harbor, Michigan; State of Washington; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Mexico City; Canal Zone; Laramie, Wyoming; Huntington, West Virginia; Richmond Highlands, California.

Public Teaching Congress

The final meeting was the teaching congress in Foundation Hall.

The first speaker was Albert Windust, with the subject: “The Ark of the Covenant.” He dealt with prophetic succession from the Adamic Day and quoted many prophecies, now fulfilled in the appearance of Bahá’u’lláh and the new and universal cycle of this great Day of God.

The concluding speaker was Mrs. Dorothy Baker on the subject: “The Great Fulfilment.”

This address was a portrayal of the diffusion of scientific knowledge, with the appearance of many inventions and discoveries as needed preparation for the unity of mankind. Its conclusion was a bright vision of the coming world super-state.

The light and cheer of these glorious Ridván days were in striking contrast to the deepening shades of earth. Traditional differences were fused by the fires of divine love, with strangeness banished and oneness enthroned. New heights of Bahá’í consultation were reached; new altitudes of sacrifice attained. There was a mightier resolution to spread the Message while there is yet time. Elevation of the standard of justice which our Guardian so much admires. Wisdom as well as love. Clearer understanding of the duty of guarding the priceless jewels which God has deposited in minds and hearts. Penetration of ancient mysteries. It is all clear now how Eden, which accorded a welcome to all, yet had its entrance guarded by cherubim after it had been vandalized by Satan. Loyalty to the ancient Commander. Firmness in His Covenant. Full confidence of victory through His favor and confirmation, which are more powerful amid trials. Greater understanding of Reality and the part of Bahá’í Administration in its true and effective unfoldment. Clearer vision of the city of God, the New Jerusalem, descending with increasing volume and power, to transform mankind.

“...“The vital force (i.e., the vital force of belief in God) is dying out, this mighty agency has been scorned, this radiant light is obscured, this impregnable stronghold abandoned, this beauteous robe discarded. God Himself has indeed been dethroned from the hearts of men, and an idolatrous world passionately and clamorously hails and worships the false gods which its own idle fancies have fatuously created, and its misguided hands so impiously exalted. The chief idols in the desecrated temple of mankind are none other than the triple gods of Nationalism, Racialism and Communism, at whose altars governments and peoples, whether democratic or totalitarian, at peace or at war, of the East or of the West, Christian or Islamic, are, in various forms and in different degrees, now worshipping. Their high priests are the politicians and the world-wise, the so-called sages of the age; their sacrifice, the flesh and blood of the slaughtered multitudes; their incantations outworn shibboleths and insidious and irreverent formulas; their incense, the smoke of anguish that ascends from the lacerated hearts of the bereaved, the maimed, and the homeless.”

Teachings on the Covenant

At this time it is incumbent upon members of the Bahá'í community, particularly the newer friends, to realize the unique nature of the Station which Bahá'u'lláh conferred upon 'Abdu'l-Bahá, for it is through the mission which the Master fulfilled that the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh can evolve into a worldwide community with those majestic institutions of Guardianship and House of Justice through which His blessing is to flow to mankind gathered into the Kingdom of God.

"When the ocean of My presence hath ebbed, and the Book of My Revelation is ended, turn your faces towards Him Whom God hath purposed, Who hath branched from this Ancient Root." (Kitáb-i-Aqdas)

"It is incumbent upon . . . my kindred to turn, one and all, their faces towards the Most Mighty Branch." (Kitáb-i-'Ahd)

"Render thanks unto God, O people, for His appearance; for verily He is the most great Favor unto you, the most perfect bounty upon you; and through Him every moldering bone is quickened. Whose turneth towards Him hath turned towards God, and whose turneth away from Him hath turned away from My Beauty, hath repudiated My Proof, and transgressed against Me. He is the Trust of God amongst you, His embodiment of authority among the believers and the instrument for the preservation of the unity of His Faith. Membership in the Bahá'í community was entirely dependent, during 'Abdu'l-Bahá's lifetime after the Ascension of Bahá'u'lláh in 1921, upon the Master's acceptance and approval. As the American Bahá'ís know, 'Abdu'l-Bahá on occasion found it necessary to expel from the Bahá'í community certain believers whose actions and attitudes had become a source of contamination to the friends. The history of faith has no parallel to the mission which 'Abdu'l-Bahá performed. Under His leadership and guidance the Cause spread to Europe and America, its literature was translated, its influence enlarged and its significance made to penetrate a growing community of believers. 'Abdu'l-Bahá Himself produced a great body of writings which clarify the fundamental teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and relate His Faith to all aspects of social activity and individual experience. Throughout His life, 'Abdu'l-Bahá exemplified the unity of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and preserved the unity of the Bahá'ís.

While in America during 1912, He explained His mission and station to the Bahá'ís:

"Today the most important affair is firmness in the Covenant, because firmness in the Covenant wards off differences.

"In former cycles no distinct Covenant was made in writing by the Supreme Pen; no distinct personage was appointed to be the Standard differentiating falsehood from truth, so that whatever he said was to stand as truth and that which he repudiated was to be known as falsehood . . ."

"But in this Dispensation of the Blessed Beauty (i.e., Bahá'u'lláh) among its distinctions is that He did not leave people in perplexity. He entered into a Covenant and Testament with the people. He appointed a Center of the Covenant. He wrote with His own pen and revealed it in the Kitáb-i-Aqdas, the Book of Laws, and Kitáb-i-'Ahd, the Book of the Covenant, appointing Him (i.e., 'Abdu'l-Bahá) the Expounder of the Book. You must ask Him (Abdu'l-Bahá) regarding the meanings of the texts of the verses. Whosoever He says is correct. Outside of this in numerous tablets He (Bahá'u'lláh) has explicitly recorded it with clear, sufficient, valid and forceful statements. In the Tablet of the Branch He explicitly states: 'Whatsoever the Branch says is right, or correct, and every person must obey the Branch with his life, with his heart, with his tongue. Without His will, not a word shall any one utter.' This is an explicit text of the Blessed Beauty. So there is no excuse left for anybody . . ." (Star of the West, Vol. 12, No. 14)

is he who endeavors to interpret the Words of Bahá'u'lláh and thereby colors the meaning according to his capacity, and collects around him a following, forming a different sect, promoting his own station and making division in the Cause." (Abdu'l-Bahá, Star of the West, Vol. 3, page 3.)

"Were it not for the protecting power of the Covenant to guard the impenetrable fort of the Cause of God there would arise among the Bábás, in one day, a thousand different sects as was the case in former ages, but in this blessed Dispensation, for the sake of the permanency of the Cause of God and the avoidance of dissension amongst the people of God, the Blessed Beauty (may my soul be a sacrifice to Him) has through the Supreme Pen written the Covenant and Testament; He appointed a Center, the Exponent of the Book and the Annuller of disputes.

"Whatever is written by Him is conformable to the truth and under the protection of the Blessed Beauty. He is infallible.

"The express purpose of the last Will and Testament is to set aside disputes from the world.

"Praise be to God that the believers in America are steadfast, but the firmer they are the better, that no one may be able to intrude and introduce disputes, for disputes destroy the foundation of God's Institution." (Abdu'l-Bahá, in Tablets to Roy C. Wilhem, August 12, 1914)

"As to the most great characteristic, and it is a specific teaching of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, and not given by any of the Prophets of the past, it is the teaching concerning the Center of the Covenant. By giving the teaching concerning the Center of the Covenant He made provision against all kinds of differences, so that no man should be able to create a new sect.

"To guard against that state of things, He entered into a Covenant with all people of the world, indicating the Person of the Interpreter of His teachings, so that no man should be able to say that he explains a certain teaching in this way, and thus create a sect revolving around his individual understanding of a part of the teachings... Whoever shall say a word from his own self shall be degraded." (Abdu'l-Bahá, Star of the West, Vol. 14, No. 15, page 255)

"My purpose is to convey to you that it is your duty to guard the Religion of God so that none shall be able to assail it either outwardly or inwardly. If you see injurious teachings coming from an individual, no matter who that individual may be, even though he be My own son, know ye verily that I am quit of him.

"If ye see any one speaking against the Covenant, even though he be My own son, know ye that I am averse to him." (Abdu'l-Bahá, Star of the West, Vol. 14)

"Any soul who violates the Covenant and Testament in the least degree, immediately he is cut off. Even in this material world he will become afflicted with remorse and regret." (Abdu'l-Bahá, Star of the West, Vol. 6, page 94)

"But the Covenant of God and His Testament is a bounty to the righteous and a curse to the wicked." (Abdu'l-Bahá, Tablets of Abdu'l-Bahá, page 438)

INTER-AMERICA NEWS

Chile

Mrs. Marcia Atwater writes that she has been accorded the utmost courtesy by the press of Santiago, that she has lectured in the Spanish language before an audience at the University of about three hundred people and that the group is functioning beautifully. It was announced that there would be a Spiritual Assembly elected on the 21st of April, but this was premature. However the group has elected its officers and the number of believers is increasing so that by next spring there will surely be a Spiritual Assembly. Mrs. Atwater is returning home very soon and hopes that some visiting teacher or some resident pioneer will soon succeed her.

Bolivia

The Inter-America Committee together with all the believers throughout the world welcome the first confirmed believer in Bolivia, Mme. Yvonne de Cuellar. In that far off land we are assured of a constant and brilliant lamp which will continue to shed its rays with increasing brilliance after the departure of Mrs. Eleanor Adler who must return home.

Brazil

Miss Holsapple writes that she is planning to spend some time now in Sao Paolo and Santos and will then return to Bahá. The teaching force is being happily augmented in Rio de Janeiro by the presence of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wood of Bethesda, Maryland, who are leaving as soon as possible to take up their residence there. Miss Beatrice Irwin is also there at present.

San Salvador

John Eichemauer has become interested in the study of Naturopathy and hopes to make this his profession. He plans to visit Nicaragua very soon and may possibly make that his headquarters. He assures us that the main object of his life is to teach the Cause and he will assist Mathew Kaszab. John also writes that any young man desiring to pioneer in San Salvador could be assisted to find occupation by Clarence Iverson. This committee will be happy to furnish addresses to those interested.

Guatemala

A beautiful letter from Sra. Barrientos tells of the earnest study of the group in Guatemala City and speaks with deep feeling of the Guardian's Convention cable which was translated into Spanish and printed in our last bulletin. The group is eager for more books and for the establishment of a Bahá'í library and a school for the Youth. What a glorious opportunity for some resident pioneer!

Venezuela

Priscilla Rhoads' plans for teaching have been somewhat frustrated by the upset condition of the country. She says she longs for someone to talk to. An interchange of letters between the pioneers is very valuable, and certainly those who are so far away from home would appreciate letters from any of the friends who may be able to write.

Nicaragua

Congratulations and welcome to the first declared believer in Nicaragua. He is Mr. Henry S. Wheelock and his card was sent in by Mathew Kaszab.

Panama

Our young women there are still hoping for reinforcements but they are a host in themselves and a great source of joy to the Committee as are also the friends in Costa Rica where the Cause is growing under the new Spiritual Assembly.

Paraguay
At last accounts the class of Miss Cheney numbered thirty people. Miss Cheney has handled the situation in Asunción in the wisest and most commendable manner. It has been found best to teach entirely by the fireside method as publicity is apt to be misinterpreted.

From a recent letter written by Miss Cheney we quote:

“The class of thirty Bahá’í students is progressing rapidly in spite of terrifically upset social conditions. Am hoping to open a special membership class next week. This matter will be taken up for consultation when we celebrate the Feast of Ridván following the regular meeting on Monday, April 28th. There are five now who have asked for Bahá’í membership, and who would sign the little Bahá’í membership cards, if I should tell them that such things existed. But I am praying, if it is the will of Bahá’u’lláh, that perhaps at least nine may be able to come in together, and my hunch is to go slowly and to make very certain that they are well prepared and have a good foundation in the teachings, for the establishment of an Assembly, or even of a smaller group, will be certain to attract great tests in a country such as this one.

“The first meeting of the new Youth Group was held Saturday night in the midst of our most recent revolutionary upset. There was no way to notify the prospective members of a postponement, for telephone service had been shut off by the government. Fortunately only a few came, bringing apologies from nine more whose parents, luckily, would not let them venture through the streets. We had a short but interesting meeting, and hope to begin full force this Saturday, since the present revolution appears to be abortive.”

Peru
Miss Nicklin is anxiously awaiting her permit to enter Peru. The difficulties now arising necessitate great patience but the Guardian never relaxes in his urge for more pioneers.

Montevideo
The very helpful visit of Mrs. Barton is being reflected in that city where her son Wilfred has now been residing for many months. Bright hopes arise from the reports of the work there. Montevideo is such a lovely city that it should have spiritual capacity with its beauty.

Haiti
No recent word from the Blackwells but we know they are doing splendid work and have several registered believers.

Cuba
Mrs. Hoagg has returned to this country for some special teaching work leaving Miss Josephine Kruka in Havana. The friends in Havana will retain their center during the summer and this committee will hope to send another teacher there in the fall.

Argentina
We are looking for the translation of the Dispensation from Buenos Aires as the details were arranged by Philip Sprague before he left. If this should be a satisfactory translation after review it will probably be printed forthwith. The Bahá’í Procedure in Spanish is now in process of being made ready for circulation in mimeographed form. The cost will be announced by the NSA.

San Domingo
Dear Miss Lentz is still waiting patiently for a visit from Gertrude Gewertz. We hope this may soon eventuate.

Applications
The committee will be glad to consider any and all applications and make recommendations to the NSA.

Our Bahá’í Schools
Louhelen Extends Season
This year at Louhelen an informal vacation season, July 19 to August 8, will be offered between the more formally planned sessions previously held. It will be possible to take up in this season a more prolonged study of Spanish, and to enjoy in a leisurely way the bountiful gifts of the new library. This is regarded as a family session. Special children’s classes will be organized, if needed, as well as fireside chats, teaching discussions, and study groups for adults.

The life of Qurratu’l’-Ayn has been written in the form of a play by Mrs. Earl Andrews of Lima. The teaching spirit is in this little play to a profound degree, and we are happy to announce that the author has offered it to Louhelen for use at both Youth sessions.

The Louhelen committee calls attention to a change of program for the Laboratory session. In lieu of the proposed public speaking course, Mrs. Virginia Camelon will present "The Heart of The Bahá’í Faith," a course tracing the historic Covenant and Covenant of Baha’u’llah in the present day. Attention is also called to the emphasis upon the study of the Qur'an in this session. This study will be intensively carried on with daily assignments. The friends are requested to bring copies of the Fq'an and the Rodwell Qur'an if possible.

Concerning this illuminating study the Guardian has written: "The knowledge of this sacred Scripture is absolutely indispensable for every believer who wishes to adequately understand, and intelligently read the writings of Baha’u'llah."

Geyserville Celebrates Fifteenth Anniversary

The Geyserville School Committee announces that the 1941 season will be the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the School on the property made available by Mr. and Mrs. John Bosch. From a circular letter issued by the Committee, we quote the following excerpts:

"It seems only a short time ago that our beloved John and Louise Bosch stood under the now famous 'Big Tree' and announced to an astonished and delighted audience that they were donating their property to establish a Baha'i Summer School. Since then much has happened. Thanks to the devotion and generosity of the believers, new and beautiful buildings have been added, attendance has grown, activities have multiplied, and in general, the school has assumed unity and dignity, and has become a rallying center to which believers gather yearly to seek knowledge and inspiration for the spread of the Cause."

"As we stand before this fifteenth milestone, we are greatly encouraged by the past growth; but as we look ahead we realize that we have only started on the long path which ultimately leads to the World Order of Baha’u’llah. We must multiply our efforts, increase our knowledge, perfect our methods, and vitalize ourselves with new power through the ever-inspiring words of the Manifestation for this day. Where could we do this better than in the Bahá’í Summer Schools throughout the land? The Bahá’í Schools have become a vital factor in the march toward a divinely ordained world order.

"It is in this spirit that we, the members of the Geyserville Summer School Committee, wish to join hands with every believer in the Western States to make the 15th Anniversary Session a great leap forward in the progress of this institution."

"The Committee welcomes any suggestions that will contribute to the growth and success of the Summer School. We are especially in need of volunteers, people who have the welfare of the school at heart, who definitely plan to be at Geyserville as long as possible, and who are willing and able to shoulder specific responsibilities."

International School

The program for the International School is outlined to cover the following points of interest:

1. Study of health and hygiene for Latin America.
2. Behavior and responsibility to the Cause, of individual teachers.
3. Techniques of speaking to groups, with knowledge of their psychology and background.
4. Importance of having a consecutive plan of teaching.
5. Danger of introducing advance teaching which might be misunderstood.
6. Necessity of taking each Latin-American country and studying the geography, history, religion, racial characteristics, cultural background, and government.

For helpful reading this month the International School Committee suggests "The Donkey Inside," a book by Ludwig Bemelman, and the magazine, "Pan-American Good Neighbor Forum." Particular attention is called to the March number of the latter, in which a stimulating article on Brazil gives good advice to those looking forward to visiting that country.

The Committee reports that Professor Stephen Torney, of the University of Utah, will replace Professor Hayes on the program. He will speak on "Practical Philosophy in Teaching Work."

Bahá’í Directory

The list of Committees appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly for the year beginning July 1, 1941, is published as Bahá’í Directory, Part I, with this issue of Bahá’í News. On account of changes and additions, the list will be supplemented in the fall with corrections to bring it up to date. Please note the brief description of functions accompanying the Committee list.

Part II of the Directory will include the local Assemblies and Groups of the United States and Canada and appear as an insert to Bahá’í News of July.

Enrollments and Transfers

The enrollment of twenty isolated believers is reported for April.

In Memoriam

Grant, O my Lord, that they who have ascended unto Thee may repair unto Him Who is the most exalted Companion, and abide beneath the shadow of the Tabernacle of Thy majesty and the Sanctuary of Thy glory.---Baha’u’llah.

"I Urgently, Insistently Plead"

(The) fate-laden world ordeal (is) moving in steady, pre-ordained crescendo. (The) blaze (of a) seemingly uncontrollable fire (is) leaping, ravaging last remaining great Power (on) European continent. Shadows (of) God's retributive act (are) fast gathering. As (the) arena (of) world convulsing contest broadens; as wounds it inflicts deepen; as issues it raises aggravate (and) multiply, so will (the) operation (of) the spiritual forces, destined (to) cast (the) burden (of a) travailing age, be accelerated. As (the) old world sinks beneath (the) weight (of a) crumbling old order, so must new world exponents (of) Bahá'u'lláh's nascent, integrating World Order climb loftier summits (of) their sublime calling. (I) urgently, insistently plead (that) all American believers, particularly (the) National Teaching (and) Inter-America Committees, above all (the) National elected representatives, arm their souls, labor more resolutely, cooperate more closely, scatter more widely, sacrifice more abundantly, (to) insure, during remaining years (of) Seven Year Plan, (the) brilliant discharge (of) the one remaining obligation (of) their dual task, whose consummation must signalize (the) termination (and) seal (the) triumph (of) First Bahá'í Century. "Intensity Our Resolution"

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dear and Valued Co-Workers:

The internecine struggle, now engulfing the generality of mankind, is increasingly assuming, in its range and ferocity, the proportions of the titanic upheaval foreshadowed as far back as seventy years ago by Bahá'u'lláh. It can be viewed in no other light except as a direct interposition by Him Who is the Or­dainer of the Universe, the Judge of all men and the Deliverer of the nations. It is the rod of both the anger of God and of His correction. The fierceness of its devastating power chastens the children of men for their refusal to acclaim the century-old Message of their promised, their Heaven-sent Redeemer. The fury of its flames, on the other hand, purges away the dross, and welds the limbs of humanity into one single organism, indivisible, purified, God-conscious and divinely directed.

Its immediate cause can be traced to the forces engendered by the last war of which it may be truly regarded as the direct continuation. Its first sparks were kindled on the eastern shores of the Asiatic continent, enveloping two sister races of the world in a conflagration which no force seems able to either quench or circumscribe. This cataclysmic process was accelerated by the outbreak of a fierce conflict in the heart of Europe, fanning into flame age-long animosities and unchaining a series of calamities as swift as they were appalling. As the turmoil gathered momentum it swept remorselessly into its vortex the most powerful nations of the European continent—the chief protagonists of that highly-vaunted yet lamentably defective civilization. The mounting tide of its havoc and devastation soon overspread the northernmost regions of that afflicted continent, subsequently ravaged the shores of the Mediterranean, and invaded the African continent as far as Ethiopia and the surrounding territories. The Balkan countries, as predicted by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, were soon to sustain the impact of this tragic ordeal, communicating in their turn the commotions to which they had been subjected to both the Near and Middle East, wherein are enshrined the heart of the Faith itself, its Cradle, its chief center of Pilgrimage, and its most sacred and historic sites.

Its menace is overleaping the limits of the Old World and is plunging into consternation the Great Republic of the West, as well as the peoples of Central and South America. The New World as well as the Old is experiencing the terrific impact of this disruptive force. Even the peoples of the Antipodes are trembling before the approaching tempest that threatens to burst on their heads.

The races of the world, Nordic, Slavonic, Mongolian, Arab and African, are alike subjected to its consuming violence. The world's religious systems are no less affected by the universal paralysis which is creeping over the minds and souls of men. The persecution of world Jewry, the rapid deterioration of Christian institutions, the intestine division and disorders of Islam, are but manifestations of the fear and trembling that has seized humanity in its hour of unprecedented turmoil and peril. On the high seas, in the air, on land, in the forefront of battle, in the palaces of kings and the cottages of peasants, in the most hallowed sanctuaries, whether secular or religious, the evidences of God's retributive act and mysterious discipline are manifest. Its heavy toll is steadily mounting—a holocaust sparing neither prince nor peasant, neither man nor woman, neither young nor old.

The Faith of Bahá'u'lláh— that priceless gem of Divine Revelation enshrining the Spirit of God and incarnating His Purpose for mankind in this age—can neither aspire nor expect to escape unharmed amid the hurricane of human disasters that blows around it. By most men unnoticed, scorned and ridiculed by some, feared and challenged by others, this world redemptive Faith, for whose precious sake the world is undergoing such agonies, finds its virgin strength assailed, and its infant institutions hemmed in, by the dark forces which a godless civilization has unleashed over the face of the planet. In the Old World, whether in Europe, Asia or Africa, it is being buffeted about, ostracized, arraigned and repressed. In certain countries its community life is being extinguished, in others its members are denied all intercourse with its World Center. Dangers, grave and unsuspected, confront its cradle and surround its very heart.

Not so, however, with the countries of the Western Hemisphere. The call of Bahá'u'lláh summons, at this challenging hour, the peoples of the New World, and its leaders to redress the balance of the old. "O Rulers of America," He thus addresses the Chief Magistrates of that continent, and the Presidents of the Republic therein... Adorn the temple of your dominion with the ornament of Justice and of the fear of God, and its head with the crown of the remembrance of your Lord, the Maker of the heavens." The Great Republic of the West, an object of special solicitude throughout the ministry of the Center of the Covenant, whose soil has been hallowed by His footsteps, and the foundation of whose edifice—the Mother Temple of the West—has been consecrated by His hand, has been singled out through the operation of His Will, and been invested by His Pen with a unique, an inescapable, a weighty and most sacred responsibility. The Mission entrusted to the community of the North American believers in the darkest days of the last war, is, after a period of incubation of well nigh twenty years, and through the instrumentality of the administrative agencies erected after 'Abdu'l-Bahá's passing, efflorescing under our very eyes. Already, since the inception of the Seven Year Plan, this community can well claim to have attained, through its deeds, a stature that dwarfs its sister communities, and can glory in a parentage that embraces every Republic of Latin America. The first Mashriqu'l-Adhkar of the West, its beautiful and noble handiwork, is virtually completed. A nucleus for a future flourishing local community is already formed in every state and province in North America. The administrative structure, following the pattern of its prototype in the U.S.A. is, through the agency of that same Plan, raising its triumphant head in the Central and South American Republics. The Plan itself, propelled by the agencies released by those immortal Tablets which constitute its charter, bids fair, in the fifth year of its operation, to exceed the highest expectations of those who have so courageously launched it. Its consummation, coinciding with the termination of the first century of the Bahá'í Era, will mark the opening of yet another phase in a series of crusades which must carry, in the course of the succeeding century, the privileged recipients of those epoch-making Tablets beyond the Western Hemisphere to the uttermost ends of the earth, to implant the banner, and lay an unassailable basis for the administrative structure of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

The quality and magnitude of the work already achieved by these stalwart champions of God's New World Order are inexpressibly exhilarating and infinitely meritorious. The immensity of the task still to be performed staggers our fancy and inflames our imagination. The potentialities with which these tasks are endowed elude our shrewdest calculations. The promise they enshrine is too dazzling to contemplate. What can we do but bow our heads in thanksgiving and reverence, steel our hearts in preparation for the strenuous days ahead, and intensify a hundredfold our resolution to carry on the task to which our hands are set at present?

Excerpts From Letter From the Guardian

It is in view of this constant expansion and increasing complexity of the inter-continental activities of the Faith, for which your Assembly has assumed a primary responsibility, that the Guardian has lately re-emphasized the necessity of avoiding over-centralization in the conduct of the affairs of the Cause, thereby relieving your Assembly of an unmanageable amount of detail and routine work, which would interfere with its clear and paramount duty of maintaining a thorough and vigilant supervision over the work of the Cause as a whole. Excessive decentralization, on the other hand, would tend to nullify the principle which places ultimate authority and responsibility in the hands of the National Spiritual Assembly. His recent instruction regarding the relationship of the Regional Teaching Committees to the National Teaching Committee safeguards this principle which lies at the very basis of the Administrative Order. The Regional Committees, although appointed by the N.S.A. should, unlike all other committees, be viewed as special adjuncts created specifically for the purpose of... helping directly the National Teaching Committee in its all-important task of stimulating the teaching activities of the Faith in North America. In a sense they are subcommittees of the National Teaching Committee, to whom their reports and all details of the national teaching activity should be constantly and directly referred.

At the present time, in view of the emphasis placed by the Guardian on the teaching phase of the Seven Year Plan, the National Teaching and Inter-America committees acquire great importance and assume added responsibility, and should be supported and encouraged by both the N.S.A. as well as the rank and file of the believers. The resources of the entire community and of the National Fund should be consecrated to this supreme and sacred purpose. The importance acquired by these two committees, however, does not make of them independent bodies, or give them the right to disregard the advice and the general directions of the N.S.A. Otherwise a conflict of authority would ensue within the administration, introducing an evil as pernicious as the tendency to over-centralize the affairs of the Cause in the hands of an over-burdened N.S.A., depriving it thereby of the vision and the necessary leisure required to ponder the policies, the problems and enterprises which the growth of the Administrative Order engenders.

The Guardian is very pleased to learn of the success that has attended the sessions at Atlanta and the removal of the disagreement within the community of that city and the work achieved by the regional conference and the public meeting open to both races. A special effort, he feels, should now be made to lay a foundation of unity between the white and colored Bahá'ís and weld the groups into communities capable of forming Assemblies representative of both races.

The action taken by your Assembly in connection with rural areas, such as township and county, as different from towns and cities, meets with his approval. He hopes that a special effort will be made to increase the number of Assemblies in these rural areas. This, he believes, is one of the major functions and duties of the National Teaching Committee this year.

The fifty photographs showing the recent progress in Temple construction have been safely received and he has already distributed them among the many pilgrims that came this year from Persia, 'Iraq, Syria and Egypt. He would appreciate another fifty copies of the Temple photograph as soon as sufficient faces are completed to represent a finished and unobstructed view of the entire edifice.

The material sent to him regarding the legal action taken against the New History Society, as well as copies of their monthly publication, have been received and the Guardian feels that Ahmad Sohrab is increasingly revealing his latent opposition to the spirit as well as the letter of the Master's Will and Testament. His references to excommunication flatly contradict the Master's own actions and attitude, of which he is personally fully aware, and are irreconcilable with some of the most emphatic and unmistakable injunctions of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in His Will and Testament. His increasingly bold criticisms of the
Beloved Friends:

The Work to Be Done

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and Groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

This year, as this would entail a diminution of the funds that should now be devoted to the vital teaching work to be carried out throughout the Americas.

Every endeavor should be made in the course of the year by the National Assembly, the National Teaching and Inter-America committees, as well as the pioneers in various fields, and indeed by each and every individual believer, to extend the scope and consolidate the basis of the teaching campaigns initiated throughout the Western Hemisphere. Any progress achieved in this most vital field at so critical a stage in the secular affairs of the American nations, will vitally affect the spiritual destinies of these republics, though the interaction of the forces at work in both fields, spiritual and temporal, may not be apparent at the present time. Bahá'u'lláh, the Guardian firmly believes, is releasing through his inter-continental campaign, at a time when decisions vital to the interests of the Western Hemisphere are being taken, forces which, as they reveal their potentialities, will increasingly assist in shaping that World Order which the American peoples of the New World are being called upon to proclaim and establish.

With the assurance of the Guardian's continued prayers for the success of your historic services.

Yours in His Service,

H. RAEBARNI

Haijá, Palestine, May 25, 1941

The American Bahá'ís have left behind the era of vague aspiration and entered that of definite accomplishment. The Guardian has given us an exact measure of our collective teaching responsibility during these three remaining years of the Seven Year Plan. This measure is: the establishment of a Spiritual Assembly in each unoccupied State and Province of North America, the reinstatement of every local Assembly dissolved for lack of numbers, and the formation of an active Bahá'í nucleus in each country of Central and South America.

This task involves a large part of the entire world— the whole of that area not yet submerged by war.

Consideration of the teaching work to be done in Central and South America will be given in the next issue of Bahá'í News. Let us concentrate now on the task in North America.

Unoccupied States and Provinces

As of July 1, 1941, there are twenty States of the United States and nine Provinces of Canada lacking a Spiritual Assembly. These are: New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Utah, Nevada. To these States should be added the three territories of Alaska, Porto Rico and the Canal Zone.

The nine Canadian Provinces to be enlisted for Baha'u'llah are: Newfoundland, Labrador, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Yukon.

Assemblies to Be Reinstated

From April 21, 1940 to July 1, 1941, fifteen Assemblies were dissolved for lack of numbers. The resulting Groups represent the most favorable point of attack for a vigorous teaching campaign, but the reinstatement of all fifteen former Assemblies will not of itself settle all the unoccupied States and Provinces. It is a second teaching problem to be undertaken simultaneously with the settlement of those areas listed above.

The fifteen former Assemblies (to which should be added the Assembly of Moncton, N.B., dissolved prior to 1940) are: Glendale, Ariz., St. Lambert, Quebec, Canada, Alhambra, Burbank, Huntington Park and Santa Rosa, Calif., Colorado Springs and Denver, Colo., Augusta, Ga., Topeka, Kan., Lansing, Mich., Knoxville, Tenn., Salt Lake City, Utah, Monroe, Wash., and Eagle River, Wis. (Two Assemblies have not yet reported.)

The National Spiritual Assembly emphasizes the fact that there are only three years left in which to complete this vast teaching program in North America. Each year must witness a definite measure of accomplishment, which means that each month, each week and every single day offers its responsibility to us all.

Concentration of effort by each participating Committee, Assembly or Group is the keynote of success in such a vast program. Let us remember that every Baha'i is a teacher and therefore no Group or Assembly can merely sit passively while awaiting help from outside. Teaching projects are of vital importance, but they are not a substitute for the continuous activity of every consecrated Baha'i.

Besides concentration upon specific tasks until each is accomplished, there is great need for coordination of all available Committee resources, and to this end the National Assembly is in communication with the Publicity, Radio, Library and Race Unity Committees in order that each Committee can contribute its material or advice in connection with the teaching activities conducted by the National Teaching Committee, the Regional Teaching Committees, local Assemblies and Groups for the settlement of Assemblies in the unoccupied areas and the reinstatement of the dissolved Assemblies. The purpose is to bring about a constantly developing technique of teaching work, with the use by the field teacher of all possible Baha'i resources.

These days are the great days in the history of mankind. They are days of prayer and consecration, days of unified action, days for achieving the superhuman aims of the Faith of Baha'u'llah. Therefore let us devote time at each successive Nineteen Day Feast to intensive discussion on ways and means to share in the teaching work.

Faithfully yours,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Proceedings of the 1941 Annual Convention

To the Convention delegates, to the Assemblies and to the individual believers, the National Spiritual Assembly reports those Proceedings of the Convention which represented recommendations or suggestions to the National Assembly, together with the action taken on them by the Assembly at its meeting held May 30, 31, June 1 and 2, 1941.

1. Voted that the speech of Mr. John J. Earley be edited by him for publication. Action. Voted to send Mr. Earley a transcript of Miss Loeding's notes on his address and ask him if he will put them in shape for a brief article in World Order Magazine at as early a date as possible.

2. Voted, a recommendation to the incoming National Spiritual Assembly to consider the feasibility of appointing regional sub-committees to the Inter-America Committee, Action. Voted to report that this recommendation has been considered but it is not yet feasible.

3. Voted to recommend the publication of Mrs. Mamie Seto's compilation on contributing to the Baha'i Fund. Action. Voted to take no action on this recommendation because this subject has been covered by instructions from the Guardian which are available in printed form.

4. Voted to recommend a letter of appreciation to the Wilmette Chamber of Commerce for their cooperation and welcome extended to the Baha’i delegates. Action. An appropriate letter has been sent.

5. Voted that it be the sense of this Convention that we urge the Temple Trustees to complete the contract for the nine faces and enter into a new contract to simultaneously do the work for the completion of the steps. Action. The necessary contracts have been executed and the work is actively under way.

6. Voted to recommend that foreign language literature be provided for the large number of refugees now coming to this country, especially in Jewish and German, the suggested works to translate being Abdu’l-Baha’s address to the Jews, and His talk in the synagogue at San Francisco. Action. Voted that until the Baha’i literature in Spanish is complete no new language be undertaken.

7. Voted to recommend that the National Assembly consider the feasibility of spreading the work of the National Committees, adding additional members, making the personnel of such Committees as representative as possible of the diverse minority groups or elements in the Cause. Action. Voted to report that for two years the Assembly has been applying as much as possible the principle that no believer should serve on more than one National Committee, and that racial elements are used as much as possible.

8. Voted to approve draft of cablegram to be sent to the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City. Action. A loving greeting was sent the Assembly by letter after the Convention.

9. Voted to recommend to the Teaching Committee that in future there be some kind of a written agreement between the pioneers and the National Spiritual Assembly. Action. The Assembly has plans in preparation relating to the purpose of this resolution.

10. Voted that the National Assembly establish a meeting for prayer and meditation to bring about peace, making it one of the essential activities of every Spiritual Assembly, community and group throughout the land. Action. Voted to report the view that the members of the National Assembly, with the body of Baha’is, should concentrate on the Most Great Peace and work diligently toward that end.

11. Voted to recommend that as many members of National Committees be appointed from within the Temple area as possible. Action. Voted to report that the Assembly is fully aware of the Guardian’s instruction that Committee headquarters be established around the Hazratu’ll-Quds as a nucleus and has been carrying out this principle as rapidly as possible. Since the National Office was moved in 1939, the Treasurer’s Office, the Publishing Office and the work of the magazine have been successively transferred, and this has necessitated the construction of an accessory Administrative Building. The Baha’i News Service, in its membership, has been in the area for some years. What the Guardian established is a trend, and the working out of the trend to its ultimate fulfillment may well involve a considerable period of time. As the way opens for further consolidation of the national administrative work in the Temple area, the Assembly will act promptly. It is pointed out, meanwhile, that National Committees are dependent on capacity, and capacity is to be used wherever it is found, a limitation which makes it impossible to transfer Committees to any one point until the requisite capacity and experience are available.

12. Voted to recommend that as the problems have grown with the increase of the teaching work, the National Assembly meet at least once a month. Action. Voted to explain that the members of the National Assembly themselves realize the demands this Office makes upon them. The present average schedule of meetings calls for about seventy-five days a year on the part of the individual members spent in travel and in the successive three and four day meetings. The believers will appreciate what this amount of time means to members who have their own personal responsibilities to make a living.

13. Voted to recommend that if Committees do not function, the Assembly should not retain them but appoint new ones. Action. The Assembly explains that in recent years, Committees have been reporting their work at regular intervals, and the responsibility involved in supervising the Committees is realized.

14. Voted to recommend that publicity material be supplied to isolated believers and groups. Action. The Baha’i News Service has suitable material on hand, and will be requested to make it available.

15. Voted to recommend that the Assembly look to the Guardian for guidance in the preparation of the Convention agenda. Action. Voted to point out that the Guardian’s instructions underlie all plans of the National Spiritual Assembly and their essence is always reflected in the Convention agenda.

Teachings on the Covenant
(Concluded)

When Abdu’l-Baha Himself passed on in 1921, He in turn left a Will and Testament which named the person of an Interpreter and Guardian to guide and unify the Baha’i community after Him, and direct within that community the development of the organic institutions created by Baha’u’llah.

Concerning this Will, we have the following significant words of comment by Shoghi Effendi in The Dispensation of Baha’u’llah—

"Abdu’l-Baha, Who incarnates an institution for which we can find no parallel in any of the world’s recognized religious systems, may be said to have closed the Age to which He Himself belonged and opened the one in which we are now laboring. His Will and Testament should thus be regarded as the perpetual, the indissoluble link which the mind of Him Who is the Mystery of God has conceived in order to insure the continuity of the three ages that constitute the component parts of the Baha’i Dispensation . . .

Being the Child of the Covenant—the Heir of both the Originator and the Interpreter of the Law of God—the Will and Testament of Abdu’l-Baha can no more be divorced from Him Who supplied the original and motivating impulse than from the One Who ultimately conceived it.
Bahá'u'lláh's inscrutable purpose, we must ever bear in mind, has been so thoroughly infused into the conduct of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and their motives have been so closely wedded together, that the mere attempt to dissociate the teachings of the former from any system which the ideal Exemplar of those same teachings has established would amount to a repudiation of one of the most sacred and basic truths of the Faith.

From the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá we quote:—

"O ye beloved of the Lord! The greatest of all things is the protection of the True Faith of God, the preservation of His Law, the safeguarding of His Cause and service unto His Word. Ten thousand souls have shed streams of their sacred blood in this path, their precious lives they offered in sacrifice unto Him, hastened wrapt in holy ecstasy unto the glorious field of martyrdom, upraised the Standard of God's Faith and writ with their life-blood upon the Tablet of the world the verses of His Divine Unity . . .

"O my loving friends! After the passing away of this wronged one, it is incumbent upon the Aghsán (Branches), the Afán (Twigs) of the Sacred Lote-Tree, the Hands (pillars) of the Cause of God and the loved ones of the Aḥá Beauty to turn unto Shoghi Effendi . . . as he is the sign of God, the chosen branch, the guardian of the Cause of God, he unto whom all the Aghsán, the Afán, the Hands of the Cause of God and His loved ones must turn. He is the expounder of the words of God and after him will succeed the first-born of his lineage descendants . . . The mighty stronghold shall remain impregnable and safe through obedience to him who is the guardian of the Cause of God . . . He that opposes him hath opposed the True One, will make a breach in the Cause of God, will subvert His word and will become a manifestation of the Center of Sedition . . .

"And now, one of the greatest and most fundamental principles of the Cause of God is to shun and avoid entirely the Covenant-breakers, for they will utterly destroy the Cause of God, exterminate His Law and render of no account all efforts exerted in the past . . .

"O ye beloved of the Lord! Strive with all your heart to shield the Cause of God from the onslaught of the insincere, for souls such as these cause the straight to become crooked and all benevolent efforts to produce contrary results."

As to the nature and validity of the elected Assemblies which represent the local and national Bahá'í communities throughout the world, these are described in the following passages taken from Bahá'í Administration, by Shoghi Effendi. The administrative bodies here mentioned, however, had existed in rudimentary form during the lifetime of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and were nurtured, fostered, encouraged and confirmed by Him. There never has been the slightest justification for any person in America to conceive of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh as an unguarded treasure to be seized and exploited for the ends of personal ambition.

"A perusal of some of the words of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá on the duties and functions of Spiritual Assemblies in every land (later to be designated as the local Houses of Justice), emphatically reveals the sacredness of their nature, the wide scope of their activity, and the grave responsibility which rests upon them.

"In the Most Holy Book (i.e., the Kitáb-i-Aqdas) is revealed:—'The Lord hath ordained that in every city a House of Justice be established wherein shall gather counsellors to the number of Bahá (i.e., nine), and should it exceed this number it does not matter. It be-hooveth them to be the trusted ones of the Merciful amongst men and to regard themselves as the guardians appointed of God for all that dwell on earth. It is incumbent upon them to take counsel together and to have regard for the interests of the servants of God, for His sake, even as they regard their own interests, and to choose that which is meet and seemly . . .'

"Furthermore, 'Abdu'l-Bahá reveals the following:—'It is incumbent upon every one not to take any step without consulting the Spiritual Assembly, and they must assuredly obey with heart and soul its bidding and be submissive unto it, that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Otherwise every person will act independently and after his own judgment, will follow his own desire, and do harm to the Cause.'

"In this day, assemblies of consultation are of the greatest importance and a vital necessity. Obedience unto them is essential and obligatory . . .

"Regarding the establishment of 'National Assemblies,' it is of vital importance that in every country, where the conditions are favorable and the number of friends has grown and reached a considerable size . . . that a 'National Spiritual Assembly' be immediately established, representative of the friends throughout that country.

"Its immediate purpose is to stimulate, unify and coordinate by frequent personal consultations, the manifold activities of the friends as well as the local Assemblies, and by keeping in close and constant touch with the Holy Land, initiate measures, and direct in general the affairs of the Cause in that country. “This National Spiritual Assembly, which . . . will have to be re-elected once a year, obviously assumes grave responsibilities, for it has to exercise full authority over all the local Assemblies in its province, and will have to direct the activities of the friends, guard vigilantly the Cause of God, and control and supervise the affairs of the Movement in general. “Vital issues, affecting the interests of the Cause in that country such as the matter of translation and publication, the Mashriq-i-Adhkár (i.e., the Bahá’í House of Worship), the Teaching Work, and other similar matters that stand distinct from strictly local affairs, must be under the full jurisdiction of the National Assembly.”

Revision of By-Laws

Notice is hereby given to all incorporated local Spiritual Assemblies that revision has been made by the National Spiritual Assembly in the standard form of By-Laws in order to conform to recent general instructions from the Guardian.

Art. III. After the sentence reading, “It shall have full and complete custody of the headquarters or meeting place of the Bahá’í community,” the following new text is inserted: “It shall have exclusive authority to conduct Bahá’í marriage ceremonies and issue Bahá’í marriage certificates within the area of its jurisdiction.”

Art. IX. Amended to read as follows: “The sphere of jurisdiction of the Spiritual Assembly, with respect to residential qualification of membership, and voting rights of a believer in the Bahá’í community, shall be the locality included within the civil limits of the municipality, township or county.” Delete the portion which begins: “but Bahá’ís who reside . . . .” etc.
