O Thou who hast surrendered thy will to God! By self-surrender and perpetual union with God is meant that men should merge their will wholly in the Will of God, and regard their desires as utter nothingness beside His Purpose. Whatever the Creator of mankind has ordained for creatures to observe, the soul, having they diligently, and with the utmost joy and eagerness, arise and set no limit to its longing. The spirit which its remnant has displayed after so many years of persecution, dispersion and support, both moral and financial. Pressed as the American Bahá’í community, must by the twofold obligation of proclaiming the verities of their Faith to the American public and of consolidating the vast enterprises initiated throughout Latin America, the stalwart and privileged followers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in North America cannot allow so great an opportunity to advance the vital international interests of His Cause to

The Work of Rehabilitation

Dearly-beloved co-workers: The reports recently received from various sources, regarding the sad conditions prevailing among the members of the sorely-stricken, long-suffering Bahá’í communities in Germany and Burma, are of such a distressing nature as to merit the energetic, the immediate, and collective intervention of their fellow-workers in lands which have providentially been spared the horrors of invasion and all the evils and miseries attendant upon it. Upon the slip from their grasp. I feel confident that in the discharge of this additional task they will exhibit those same traits that have distinguished their stewardship for so many years to so glorious a Cause.

Your true brother,

Shoghi Effendi
Haifa, Palestine. December 21, 1945

The following two paragraphs in the same letter of December 21, 1945, were written by the Guardian through his secretary:

In view of all the German and Austrian Baha’is have passed through, and the naturally disorganized state of their affairs, after so long a period of suppression and suffering, he feels that your Assembly should by all means do all in its power to help them and protect them. If you feel that the suggestion of Mr. Eichanauer is feasible, he advises you to carry it out. Although he has stated that the Bahá’ís mission in Central and South America must be completed before the American believers can start teaching campaigns in other countries, this does not mean that those friends whom duty or business takes abroad are not to serve the Cause all they possibly can. Likewise it does not mean that help should not be given to Bahá’i brothers and sisters in desperate need—such as is the case at present in Burma, the Philippines, Austria and Germany.

In view of the terrible conditions prevailing in Europe today, and the tremendous suffering which the German and Austrian Bahá’ís have passed through, both spiritually and physically, the Guardian wishes you to please make every effort to send, during the rest of this Bahá’í year and the coming one, the contribution of the American and Canadian Bahá’ís to the International Fund to these believers, for their relief and succor. He urges your Assembly to also make every effort to supply them with Bahá’í books in German, either published in the United States or Switzerland—whichever is most speedy, economical and practical.

The German Bahá’í Community

The German Bahá’í community, dearly beloved, highly honored by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and destined to play an outstanding role in the spiritual revival of an oppressed continent, has abundantly demonstrated in the course of ten years of severest tribulations, dire peril and complete suppression, the high character of its indomitable faith. I appeal to the entire community of the greatly blessed, highly privileged American believers, to arise unitedly and contribute generously through dispatch of funds and literature—designed to alleviate the distress and rehabilitate the institutions with which the future prosecutors of the second stage of the Divine Plan must be closely associated.

The Task of Relief

Beloved Friends:

The Guardian calls the American Bahá’í community to the mighty task of contributing to the relief of the suffering Bahá’ís in war-stricken lands, and to the rehabilitation of the Bahá’í administrative order wherever it has been temporarily destroyed. This call has come to us in his letter dated December 21, 1945, and the portion written in Shoghi Effendi’s own hand is shared with the friends in this issue of Bahá’í News.

While the National Spiritual Assembly will not be in session until February 15, individual members are assembling the necessary information on which a concerted, nationwide effort can be strongly based. Pending announcement of plans and methods commensurate with the needs of the believers in Burma, the Philippines, Austria and Germany (the places specifically named in the body of that letter), the friends are naturally free to continue with the work of relief some of our communities have already undertaken on receipt of appeals from the Philippines and Germany.

A contribution of $300 has been cabled to the National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma for the stricken Bahá’ís of Burma and a special donation of $1,500 has been rushed to the National Fund by a devoted individual believer for this work of international relief. The Guardian himself has diverted to this purpose the contribution which is made regularly to the International Fund in his care.

The spirit of Bahá’u’lláh is a world spirit, His truth a world truth, and the power of His Faith is a world power. Therefore, though we carry heavy tasks in both North and South America, He will assist us to achieve our full share of this new

Bahá’í News

Bahá’í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Bahá’í community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: "The News, you now have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function.... I would urge you to enlarge its scope... that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise.

"It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá’í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause."

The contents include: material supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly, such as the Guardian’s messages, the Assembly’s letters and its general statements and reports; Committee plans which have been approved and authorized; Committee news reports of activities; annual reports from local Assemblies; news items from local Assemblies; activities in regional areas as reported by or through the National Teaching Committee; activities in Central and South America as reported by the Inter-America Committee; news from other lands gathered from the bulletins of the various National Assemblies; a record of new enrollments and transfers; a record of deaths; photographs of general Bahá’í interest.

Bahá’í News is Central Office for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá’í News Committee: Horace Holley, Garreta Bussy, Eleanor S. Hutchens, Mabel F. Paine. Address: Bahá’í News Committee, c/o Mrs. Garreta Bussy, 503 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois. responsibility in Europe and the East. May our first great enterprise as Bahá’í world citizens penetrate the citadels of infamy and desolation, and rescue the oppressed ones in the Name of Bahá’u’lláh!

Faithfully and devotedly,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Use of Corporate Seal
The National Spiritual Assembly has approved the recommendation made by the Legal Committee concerning the use of the seal by incorporated local Assemblies: that if they wish to do so, it is entirely proper for an Assembly to affix its seal on its letters of credential. The National Assembly itself will hereafter use its seal on credentials issued to Bahá’ís proceeding to foreign countries.

Review of Magazine Articles
The National Spiritual Assembly has recorded the view that magazine articles about the Cause, written by individual believers as their personal understanding of the teachings, need not be officially reviewed, but all statements about the Faith which are officially sponsored by a Bahá’í body are to be reviewed and approved before publication. Individual authors may submit manuscripts to the Public Relations Committee for an advisory opinion if they wish.

The Bahá’í World, Vol. IX
A Correction
It has been pointed out that in the "In Memoriam" section, the photograph used with the article about the late Miss Alma Knobloch is not of Miss Knobloch herself but of her sister, the late Mrs. Pauline Hennen. Committees, Assemblies and individual believers who send in photographs for use either in The Bahá’í World or in Bahá’í News are requested to write the title and date of picture on the back, since many illustrations pass through several hands before they are published, and unlabeled photographs make errors possible.

Glossary
Extensive research and editorial work is being done by Mirzá ‘Alí-Kuli Kháñ in compiling a glossary of Bahá’í terms. The Index Committee is rendering valuable assistance in recording the terms which should be included in a complete Bahá’í glossary. The Guardian’s advice and direction has been requested, so that the work in its final form will conform to his wishes.

Removal From Membership
The friends are informed that Mr. Baer Salov of Montclair, N. J. has been taken from the Bahá’í membership list on receipt of his written statement that he agrees with the attitude of the New History Society in its rejection of the Bahá’í Order established under the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

Public Teaching Bulletins
Nos. 8 and 9 of this bulletin, entitled “A World Faith,” have been mailed out by the National Contacts Committee to its special list of names. Copies are available to local assemblies and individual believers at the rate of 50 for 50 cents or 100 for $1.00. Send order to the National Office with remittance payable to National Bahá’í Fund.

Public Meetings
Atlanta
The public meeting held in Atlanta was a great success. The following report comes to us from Mrs. David Ruhe, chairman of the Atlanta Committee for Public Meetings:

"Atlanta held its Public Meeting of the National Campaign on Sunday, January 13, in Morehouse Chapel of Morehouse College. Music provided by the Spelman-Morehouse Choir opened the program in a beautiful and inspiring way. The speaker was Mrs. Dorothy Baker, who gave a most illuminating talk on the subject "Religion Returns." John Inglis of Birmingham, Alabama, served as chairman of the meeting. There were 210 people present; 40 signed cards saying that they would like to make a further study of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. The auditorium was attractive with graceful palms as background on the stage and a stunning floral arrangement in the foreground. The splendid book display sent by the National Public Meetings Committee stood to the left of the platform, and was closely examined by most of those present. A lively question-and-answer period followed the lecture. Many remained to meet Mrs. Baker and ask further questions.

"On the following night, Monday, January 14, there was a dinner at 6 p.m. in honor of Mrs. Baker in the Civic Room of the Ansley Hotel. The public meeting in the same room at 8 p.m. was opened with two piano selections by Chopin brilliantly played by Atlanta's leading young pianist, Mr. Billy Schatten. Dorothy Baker spoke before 75 people on the subject, "World Order is the Goal." The interest shown was very sincere, and many remained until 10:30 p.m. to ask questions. We feel sure that study classes will result from both these meetings.

"In addition to our two public meetings, the regional committee held an inter-regional conference which was a wonderful success and a great inspiration to all who attended. There were visiting Bahá'ís present from Birmingham, Ala.; Jackson, Miss.; Memphis, Tenn.; Nashville, Tenn.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Greensboro, N.C.; Greenville, S.C.; Augusta, Ga.; and Miami, Fla. An inter-racial dinner at the YMCA on Saturday night, January 12, was the opening event of the two-day conference. The subject of the evening's program was "Strengthening the Administrative Order." The participants were Miss Sue Langford, Mr. John Inglis, Mrs. Kate Whitmore, and Mrs. David Ruhe. Mrs. Terah Smith acted as chairman. On Sunday morning the subject was, "Ways and Means of Reaching the Masses," with Mr. Robert Durr, Mr. John Inglis, and Mrs. Ruth Meurer as participants. Mrs. Ruhe served as chairman. The talks and discussion that followed were informative and inspirational. Mrs. Dorothy Baker was our consultant and throughout the two days gave us many helpful thoughts.

"Although it is too early to measure results, we can say with certainty that the events of the three days were a high spot to all the Bahá'ís and renewed our determination to give out courageously the Message of Truth for our day. The Public Meetings attracted many new souls. We feel deeply grateful for all the wonderful aid and assistance given us by the National Public Meetings Committee. The publicity provided by Mr. Henning was outstanding. It is our hope that every city and town in America will find it possible to hold such a meeting soon. The work involved is tremendous, but the fruits are in direct proportion to the effort put forth."

Public Relations
The Public Relations Committee will from time to time inform the friends of those current magazines, books and newspapers which contain Bahá'í illustrations or articles on the Cause. The Committee thanks each of the believers who has so kindly brought these references to our attention. The intention is not to duplicate the function of Bahá'í News Service in listing news and publicity emanating from believers, but to record news about the Cause produced by non-believers.

In Locomotive Engineer for June, 1945, we find a quotation by ‘Abdul-Bahá set in a box for special emphasis.

The pamphlet entitled “This Is Your America” issued by the CIO Political Action Committee makes a brief reference to the word Bahá’í.

The magazine, Canadian Geographical Journal, March, 1944, contains an article on “Symbolism and the Humanities” by Sylvia King, with three Temple views, one full page.

The June, 1945, issue of Flying mentions Point Oboe, the code name assigned to the Bahá’í Temple. “Navigational fixes are given from that landmark” in flights from Glenview to carriers in Lake Michigan.

The Pure Oil News of February, 1945, featured the Temple in a three-page illustrated article.

A member of the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church is writing a book on different religions which contains a clear and sympathetic article on the Bahá’í Faith.

An article by Virginia Pearson entitled “Those Worlds Beyond the Sun” appeared in Mind Digest for November, 1945. The author relates a subjective experience in which she states that ‘Abdul-Bahá appeared to her in visions many years ago.

In Saturday Night, the weekly magazine of Canada, an excellent article about the Cause was published December 8, 1945, using the Toronto Public Meeting as its connection with current news events.

The rotogravure section of the Chicago Sunday Tribune of January 6, 1946, contains a very attractive view of the Temple taken by a staff photographer.

One of the most helpful newspaper references which has ever appeared in this country was the full page, colored photo of the Temple as illuminated during the Centenary celebration, with an extensive article, published in the Chicago Sunday Tribune of June 17, 1945. The editor kindly lent us the color photos for reproduction, and copies will be announced for teaching use in the next issue of Bahá’í News.

PUBLIC RELATIONS COMMITTEE

North American Teaching

We are happy to report that several Assemblies have been preserved through the settlement of believers who have already given valiant assistance in other cities during the Seven-Year Plan. Mrs. Beulah Proc­tor, one of the early pioneers in Halifax, has offered to move to Moncton, as Mrs. Annie Romer has been unable to become established there although she plans to give them teaching assistance from time to time; Mrs. Edward Belcher of Binghamton, N.Y., former pioneer in Sioux Falls, S. D. and Syracuse, N.Y., has moved to Boise, Idaho. Other Assemblies that have been re­inforced have received assistance in other cities during the Seven-Year Plan. Mrs. Beulah Proc­tor, one of the early pioneers in Halifax, has offered to move to Moncton, as Mrs. Annie Romer has been unable to become established there although she plans to give them teaching assistance from time to time; Mrs. Edward Belcher of Binghamton, N.Y., former pioneer in Sioux Falls, S. D. and Syracuse, N.Y., has moved to Boise, Idaho. Other Assemblies that have been re­inforced have received assistance in other cities during the Seven-Year Plan.

Particularly do we appeal to the returned service men who, in seeking to re-establish themselves, might consider going to a city where their presence would aid immeasurably in strengthening and consolidating these newly established units of the Faith.

Teaching help has been made available to many of the small Assemblies through visits from teachers able to spend week-ends or longer on circuits. During the Thanksgiving holidays, Dr. Edris Rice-Wray spent six days in Oklahoma City, Okla. The visit coincided with the death by accident of Charles Ittner, and the Assembly reports: “Probably the best opportunity we have ever had here to present the Bahá’í Teachings to a sizeable group was at the funeral services conducted for Mr. Ittner. Many expressed their feelings with words of praise for the beautiful services. . . . Our only public meeting was held at the Biltmore hotel. About 35 people attended, announcements having been sent to about 500. Dr. Rice-Wray gave a splendid talk and we are hopeful that we can interest several new people to attend a class.” Several firesides were also arranged as well as a meeting at the Student Union. of the University of Oklahoma at Norman, Okla., where there was a request for books for the University Library following the meeting.

In Boise, Idaho, a series of lectures was given by Mrs. Marguerite Reimer Sears from December 13th to 18th, with "excellent publicity and a 10-minute radio interview ... besides breakfast, lunch, and dinner scheduled with interested students. . . . Everyone seemed to cooperate to make everything a success," Mrs. Sears writes. "The total non-Baha'i attendance at the meetings was twenty, six of whom heard of the Faith for the first time."

Other Assemblies received teaching assistance during January from the following teachers: Mr. Allen McDaniel visited Greenville, S.C.; Mrs. Harry Ford visited Wilmington, Del.; William DeForge visited Scranton, Pa.; and Mrs. Amelia Collins visited Worcester, Mass. From Halifax, N.S., Mrs. Annie Romer reports "two broadcasts, one on Baha'i Ideals in Education" and the other 'Peace on Earth: Good Will to Men'. Then we had three meetings on 'Peace' which we climaxed with an International Peace Party. . . . 24 non-Baha'is, French, English, Russians, West Indians, Canadians, Americans, and Chinese, present. We had films . . . on the Arts of Russia, one on Nova Scotia, and one on India." Memphis and Nashville, Tenn., were visited by Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Blum, on their recent trip West, as well as St. Louis, Mo.

Regional Teaching Committee reports indicate that contacts are being made in new areas, new groups are springing up and several groups are ready for Assembly status this April. The RTC for Alaska reports a ten-day teaching trip made by Mrs. Verne Stout to Fairbanks, where two fireside meetings were arranged, and many contacts were made. The Ind., Ohio and Ky. RTC reports that "Miss Clara Edge was asked to go into Media County for a week's teaching program, and her work was very successful." It is reported that Oak Park, Ill. and Santa Barbara, Calif., have sufficient members through transfer, to secure Assembly status this April, and Calif., Nev. and Ariz. RTC reports that work is going forward in Huntington Park, California, and that San Mateo is working hard to achieve Assembly status.

As part of the National Campaign, the New England RTC arranged a Teaching Conference in Boston and 19 Baha'i communities were represented. The Conference was followed by a public meeting with Mr. Ralph Bates of Springfield, Mass. as speaker. The RTC for Md., Va. and West Va. also planned a Regional Conference in Washington to follow up the efforts of the National Campaign there, with Dr. Edris Rice-Wray as guest speaker. Two public meetings were held, one a panel discussion on Race Unity at which Dr. Rice-Wray spoke with two non-Baha'i speakers. Both were very well attended.

"Not until, however, . . . the prizes won through the operation of the Seven-Year Plan are adequately safeguarded and the basis of the newly established Administrative Order sufficiently consolidated . . . can the ambassadors of the Faith of Baha'u'llah . . . be called upon to undertake . . . collective responsibility for the diffusion of His Message, and for the erection of the fabric of His Administrative Order, amidst the sorrow-stricken, war-lacerated, sorely bewildered nations and peoples of the European continent."

Publishing Announcements

The Publishing Committee announces a special price on orders for Volumes V and VI of The Baha'i World—both copies will be sold for $4.50, a discount of $1.00 from the combined list price of the two books. This offer holds only when both volumes are ordered together.

Baha'i cards: a series of ten postcard size cards, each carrying a different passage from the Teachings, has been produced by the Public Relations Committee to enable individual believers to spread the message. The cards can be mailed with a 1c stamp as postcards, used as enclosures with letters, or handed out at meetings. Sold only in lots of 100 sets, or 1000 cards, at $3.10.

Archives Secretary

Material for the National Baha'i Archives should be addressed to the Secretary of the Archives Committee, Mrs. Gertrude Struven, 714 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill.

Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Baha, Letters of the Guardian, and sacred relics should be sent by registered mail with return receipt.

Louhelen Baha'i School

Here is an advance notice of dates for the five sessions at Louhelen Summer School for 1946:

Workshop Courses—June 29-July 10 (inclusive)
Junior Youth Session—July 13-19 (inclusive)
Mid-summer Session—July 22-28 (inclusive)
Laboratory Session—July 31-August 11 (inclusive)
Senior Youth Session—August 14-25 (inclusive)

Details will come later, but both youth and adults are assured new and exciting experiences for the coming summer. Both adult sessions are now 12 days in length, the Laboratory Session has been replaced by the Workshop Courses, which are scheduled to open this season June 29. A 10-day course is planned for the senior youth with two extra days allotted for a Youth Conference.

This opportunity for organized study, together with the intimate fellowship of many Baha'is from many sections of the country is of special value to isolated believers and members of small groups. There is no better way for a Baha'i to enjoy his vacation.

If you have not already done so, why not appoint a Summer School Committee in your local community to encourage attendance at all of our summer schools? Such a committee, which would include the Youth, could arrange displays and publicity bulletins, help arrange "share - the - ride" transportation, help in developing funds for financial assistance to the Youth, etc. Such a committee, publicizing all three schools with special emphasis on its own area, could assist greatly in the very important educational program of our Baha'i Summer Schools.

If you want to make reservation early, want information on rates for board and room, write to Louhelen Baha'i School, Davison, Michigan.

With this issue we are inaugurating a section of devotional material which may be used by the friends for meditation throughout the month, if they so desire. It should serve to remind us of the spiritual implications of the fast.

Local Communities

Additional Annual Local Reports
BURLINGAME, California, reports that a Temple display in a downtown window brought many inquiries. The community held a series on Tuesday night study classes and conducted eleven public meetings with an average attendance of twenty-five. Each week two children's classes were conducted. The younger children, ages 6 to 10, studied the outline on creation and the Bahá'í Child's A B C while the older group, ages 13 to 18, studied the Chosen Highway and the Dawn Breakers.

The community worked with the San Mateo group hoping to assist it to attain assembly status. Both Burlingame and San Mateo newspapers carried advertising for the public meetings and for the radio series over station KYA.

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island, was successful in contacting other organizations. When Matthew Bulloch spoke, the Urban League sent notices to its 300 members, and the World Affairs Council sent notices to its 150 members. Through the International Institute, Bahá'ís took part in a pageant on the oneness of religion, gaining mention of the Faith at three teas, and doing a pageant on the oneness of religion, gaining mention of the Faith at three teas, and doing

Other Local News
When the city was almost paralyzed by strikes, the FLINT, Michigan, Bahá'ís sent the pamphlets, "Industrial Justice," to sixty local clubs and organizations. The community had inquiries for literature, and because of sections on consultation, study aids, etc. However, my husband and I would like to point out an error on page 13, where you refer to our marriage. This is under the Anchorage, Alaska, report. My husband's name is Mr. Verne Stout, not Green!

Other News from Other Lands
Norway
In a letter to a friend, Mrs. Aagot Krantz-Ramslie, one of the two Bahá'ís in Norway, writes of the bombing and burning of the town (Kristiansund), in which she lives. Her house alone was mercifully spared. She was busy ministering to the shelterless people. She has translated many pages from the "Gleanings" and "Hidden Words" and sends some in letters to friends. One friend to whom she sent some of these extracts wrote, "During the time of afflictions, when I thought I could not bear living another day, your letters with enclosed quotations seemed the voice of the Lord. ... I gave all my troubles into the hands of the Beloved of all the worlds and left them there for a solution, and in most miraculous ways they were solved."

Germany
John Eichenauer wrote from Stuttgart in December, 1945, "Now that the German Bahá'ís can correspond with one another, regardless of the zone in which they live, plans are being made to re-establish the National Spiritual Assembly. Several pamphlets have been published and a radio program has been submitted to 'Radio Stuttgart.'"
Public Meetings; Youth Activities: "Public meetings in the Wurttemberg area were inaugurated on the first of December by an address, 'And the Light came out of the Darkness' by Dr. Koller-Jüger of the Stuttgart Assembly, to over 200 people in the Leberbildungsanstalt in Esslingen. Youth activities are blossoming in several cities."

How to send relief to German Bahá'í: "The needs of the German Bahá'í community are for food to get through the winter. Potatoes are filling, but every day they get monotonous, and I don't know how long they will last. Any one who wishes may send food packages to me for the friends. Sugar, coffee, tea, raisins, nuts, preserved meats, soup mixes, candy, vitamins and mineral tablets and any other concentrated foods you can spare will do wonders here. Cigarettes and tobacco can be included. Few smoke; they usually use cigarettes to get their homes repaired, have wood delivered or to barter for food. Old clothes would, no doubt, come in very handy.

"Yours truly expects to be here until next April or May. Address John C. Eicher, ASN 39857209, Tec 4, Det E-1 1st Mil Govt Bn (Sep) APO 758, c/o Postmaster NY, NY."

"Most of the Bahá'ís in the American zone live in Stuttgart (60) and Esslingen (30); there are about 20 in the Heidelberg-Neckargemünd area and another 20 in the Frankfurt area. Any thing intended for the Stuttgart and Esslingen Bahá'ís could be sent to me, and for those farther north, send to Sergeant Bruce Davison, AFN Frankfurt APO 757, c/o Postmaster NY, NY."

"Bruce also expects to be here another six months.

"Please don't postpone anything you wish to do for these faithful servants of Bahá'u'lláh."

Lidia Zamenhof

News reaching us from two separate and reliable sources seems to confirm the sad truth that Lidia Zamenhof died in Poland in August, 1944. More details will appear next month.

'İraq

The Centenary celebrations were held in the Haziratu'l-Quds at Baghdád. On the front walls of the guest house confronting visitors and callers were the twelve basic Bahá'í principles written on large sheets of white linen in very large characters. Inside walls were decorated with the choicest of Persian rugs. The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Declaration of the Báb on May 22 was for Bahá'ís only and included readings from the Qur'án, the Old and New Testaments and Nabil's account of the Declaration of the Báb. A selection from the Qa'yu'mu'1-Asmá', which the Báb revealed on that sacred night 100 years before, was read at the exact hour of His Declaration.

After this program delegates and other Bahá'ís were guests of a banquet provided through the generosity of Shoghi Effendi. Representatives from 15 Bahá'í centers in Iraq were present.

Meetings on May 23, 24, 25 and 26 were attended by both Bahá'ís and invited guests. Among them were people of rank, state officials, business men, journalists and men of letters, about 44 in number. Subjects of some of the addresses were: "The Birth of a New World Order," "The Future Life of Mankind," "The Bahá'í Faith Establishes the Oneness of Mankind," "The Way to Peace," "New Spiritual Resurrection" and "Divine Remedy for Ibs of Mankind."

As at all the Centenary celebrations, congratulatory telegrams were sent to the Guardian and to all the National Bahá'í Assemblies of the world as well as to neighboring local assemblies. The beautiful replies received were a source of great joy and happiness to the friends and strengthened the ties of love and bonds of unity.

Brief Notes

Mme. E. Schmitz, 49 Rue Mon Desert, Nancy, France, is a Bahá'í, and an ardent Esperantist. She would like to hear from the Bahá'ís.

Mme. Draja Ilic, a devoted and able worker for the Cause in Belgrade, Jugoslavia, died July 23, 1942, after a painful illness. War conditions such as insufficient food and poor nursing contributed to her illness and death.

Johanne Sorensen, a Bahá'í in Denmark, married during the war and is now Johanne Hoeg. She has made some translations of Bahá'í books into Danish. Her address is: Johanne Hoeg, Jerslev, Jylland, Denmark.

Mrs. Palmgren and Miss Zetterlund are Bahá'ís in Sweden. Mrs. Palmgren has done some translating of Bahá'í writings.

“Be Filled with Love”

You must manifest complete love and affection toward all mankind. Do not exalt yourselves above others but consider all as your equals, recognizing them as the servants of the one God. Know that God is compassionate toward all; therefore love all from the depths of your hearts, prefer all religious groups before yourselves, be filled with love for every race and be kind toward the people of all nationalities. Never speak disparagingly of others, but praise without distinction. Prolong not your tongues by speaking evil of another. Recognize your enemies as friends and consider those who wish you evil as the wishes of good. You must not see evil as evil and then compromise with your opinion, for to treat in a smooth, kindly way one whom you consider evil or an enemy is hypocrisy and this is not worthy or allowable. You must consider your enemies as your friends, look upon your evil-wishers as well-wishers and treat them accordingly. Act in such a way that your heart may be free from hatred. Let not your heart be offended with anyone. If someone commits an error and wrong toward you, you must instantly forgive him. Do not complain of others. Refrain from reproaching them and if you wish to give admonition or advice, let it be offered in such a way that it will not burden the bearer. Turn all your thoughts toward bringing joy to hearts. Be ware! Beware! lest ye offend any heart. Assist the world of humanity as much as possible. Be a source of consolation to every sad one, assist every weak one, be helpful to every considered in the same category as those of Ruhi; the friends are not forbidden to read them.” (This refers to the articles and pamphlets approved by the Reviewing Committee for the World Order Magazine Editorial Committee and published some years ago).

National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

It was our joyous privilege only a few months ago to acclaim the termination of the state of war throughout the world, with all its blessed promise of an opportunity given humanity to heed the dire lessons of conflict and rebuild civiliza-and justice revealed by His Word. We are in a time of transition, neither peace nor war, when many powerful interests manifest the scope of the problems still to be solved in the realms of politics, economics, race relations, and religion.

The condition of uncertainty and lack of direction cries out to us as Bahá'ís to attain and show forth from our inmost souls, and in our individual actions, and in our mutual relations, and in our community development, and in our public Bahá'í activities, the qualities and virtues, the wisdom and integrity, the steadfastness and the universality, which the Báb suffered martyrdom to create in mankind. Bahá'u'lláh endured continuous oppression to ordain as the Law of human existence, and 'Abdu'l-Bahá travelled from city to city to exemplify and proclaim.

While, on the one hand, a bewildered multitude implores the gift of assurance which only the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh can offer, on the other hand the organizations of disunity and division, superstition and error, ambition and exploitation multiply their efforts to crush or beguile a world not yet conscious of the illimitable power which God has in this Day invested in a united mankind.

Our highest privilege as believers in the unity of God, our supreme duty as members of the new world order of Bahá'u'lláh, is simple, clear and incapable for every single Bahá'í. First, a true Bahá'í is one who attains full understanding of the fundamentals of the Faith. Second, a true Bahá'í will realize his responsibility to maintain within himself the capacity for consultation and unified action with his fellow-believers.

Therefore the National Spiritual Assembly issues this appeal to the entire American Bahá'í community — believers, Assemblies and committees — to strive to attain the very reality of spiritual understanding and the highest degree of union in all Bahá'í consultation and action. Our sense of limitation is no excuse, since Bahá'u'lláh has revealed the blessed truth that faith is an association with a spiritual power able to transcend all limitations of men. Let us grasp anew the great teaching that virtue is the life of doctrine, and the inner acceptance of human oneness is worth more than the volumes dealing with the outer mechanisms of peace.

In whatever village or city the spirit of Bahá'u'lláh takes possession of the hearts, there will unfold great and mighty expressions of Bahá'í victory. This is a decisive hour for humanity. It is a decisive hour for each and every Bahá'í.

Now with reference to the matter of international Bahá'í relief, about which so many ardent letters have come to the National Assembly. All aspects of this vital subject were discussed at the February meeting, and the following facts emerged which are recorded for the information of the friends throughout the United States and Canada.

1. A cash donation has been transmitted from the National Fund for relief of the Bahá'ís of Burma in response to the Guardian's appeal.
2. The Guardian has established an international Bahá'í trust fund in Tihrán to receive and handle (under his direction) the cash donations intended for rehabilitation of the dissolved Bahá'í institutions and for relief of distress.
3. The Guardian has called upon the American Bahá'í community to provide Bahá'í literature where conditions have made it impossible, as in Germany, for the believers to maintain publishing activity.
4. Appeals have been received for contributions of food and clothing needed by the Bahá'ís of Germany in letters written by John Eichenauer and Bruce Davison. Communication at present cannot be maintained with the native German Bahá'ís, but eleven-pound shipments can be made for them to the American Bahá'ís in the Army of Occupation, if a letter of request (See Emendation, P. 3) can be shown to the local postmaster.
5. Appeals have been received likewise from the Philippine Bahá'ís for various relief supplies, and a report on conditions there has been received from Alvin Blum. Eleven-pound shipments can be mailed directly to the Philippine Bahá'ís once a week by each individual sender (or group or Assembly if collective action is taken).
6. The National Assembly has no record of any American Bahá'í in Austria at present. First class mail can be addressed to natives of Austria, limited to two ounces. Food shipments can be made to Austria via Denmark.

6. The American Bahá'í community is requested until further notice to send food, clothing and other needed supplies for relief to German Bahá'ís through the American believers now in Germany, and direct to the Bahá'ís of the Philippines, in accordance with the existing government regulations. (See Emendation, P. 3.)

7. Contributions sent to the National Fund in cash for international Bahá'í relief will be devoted to publications of Bahá'í literature and as donations transmitted by the National Assembly.

Baha’i News

Baha’i News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada as the official newspaper of the Bahá’í community. The first issue appeared in December, 1925.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: "The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function... I would urge you to enlarge its scope... that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanize in, financial, educational and otherwise. "It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá’í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause."

The contents include: material supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly, such as the Guardian’s messages, the Assembly’s letters and its general statements and reports; Committee plans which have been approved and authorized; Committee news reports of activities; annual reports from local Assemblies; news items from local Assemblies; activities in regional areas as reported by or through the National Teaching Committee; activities in Central and South America as reported by the Inter-American Committee; news from other lands gathered from the bulletins of the various National Assemblies; a record of new enrollments and transitions; a record of deaths; photographs of general Bahá’í interest.

Inter-American News
Completion of Teaching Tours
The itineraries of Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala and of Mr. Charles Mason Remey in Latin America are nearing completion. The Salas were due in Havana, their last stop, on February 20th, having visited most of the Bahá’í Centers in both Central and South America in a tour lasting three months.

Mr. Remey is attempting to visit all cities in South America where Bahá’í’s reside. In traveling from Buenos Aires to Punta Arenas, Magalanes, a hazardous journey was completed by bus and car, as no other transportation was available. Mr. Remey was particularly impressed with the key people who are being attracted to the Cause in Punta Arenas. He was last heard from in Santiago, Chile, on his return trip by air.

While political conditions in some countries have prevented the holding of large public meetings during the visits of these itinerant teachers, reactions indicated in reports received from all centers visited have been very gratifying. The Inter-America Committee is deeply appreciative of the efforts of these teachers, who themselves have been greatly impressed and have written glowingly of the work of the North American Pioneers.

Inter-America Bahá’í Congress
While a detailed report has not been received to date of the Teaching Conference in Panama City, we have learned that seven Republics were represented by native believers, namely, Cuba, Venezuela, Chili, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Panama. Six North American pioneers attended, including those from Columbia and Costa Rica, which made nine countries represented in all. This first Inter-America Congress surpassed everyone’s expectations, especially in the number of native believers attending.

Mrs. Amelia Collins represented the National Spiritual Assembly and the Inter-America Committee at the Congress. She is stopping over on her return trip in San Salvador, Guatemala City, and Mexico City.

News of Pioneers

Elizabeth Cheney reports that the number of native believers in Managua has reached nineteen. A Spiritual Assembly in Nicaragua is, therefore, assured this year. En route to the Panama Congress and, following this, to her new post in Bogota, Colombia, Miss Cheney visited our new pioneer, Evelyn Larson, who has recently located in San Jose, Costa Rica. An enthusiastic report of the progress being made there was given.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bode have arrived in Rio de Janeiro as Baha'i settlers. There are now six pioneers in Rio, and prospects are good for the formation of an Assembly in April. Mrs. Harold V. Armstrong and Virginia Orbison are actively engaged there in the translation and publication of Baha'i literature in Portuguese. News from Sao Paulo, Brazil, indicates that excellent contacts are being made by Gertrude Eisenberg, who has been teaching there for several months.

Dr. Malcolm King has arrived at his new post in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. A study class, public meetings, and assistance with work on French literature are keeping him very busy.

Mrs. Shirley Ward is leaving in early March for Buenos Aires. Her experience in radio and assistance with Spanish publications will make her services there very valuable.

Flora Hottes has accepted a position teaching English in Montevideo. The Baha'i community is growing, and she hopes to remain there indefinitely. Wilfred Barton has recently returned from Uruguay. He is visiting his mother in Chicago.

Gwenne Sholtis is very happy with her Baha'i work in La Paz. Three new membership cards have come from there recently. She, also, is teaching English classes.

Ecuador and the three Central American Republics of Honduras, Guatemala, and Nicaragua are at present without pioneer teachers. The most youthful Spiritual Assembly seems to be very well established and vigorous, however.

One of our pioneers, Louise Baker of Caracas, will be married on February 26th to Mr. William Waterman of Philadelphia. Mr. Waterman is employed as an oil geologist in Venezuela. Their home will be in Caracas for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker will be present at the marriage in Caracas.

Public Relations

1. Projects

The Public Relations Committee reports the following projects in which the Assemblies, Regional Committees, and individual believers are offered helpful material for publicity and contact work.

1. Cardsize reprints. This is a series of ten different Baha'i texts printed on postcard size bristol for use by individual believers as postcards, enclosures with letters, etc. 25 sets (250 cards) have been sent to Assemblies and Regional Committees. The cards may be obtained from the Publishing Committee at the rate of 100 sets (1,000 cards) for $3.10. The purpose of these cards is primarily to stimulate more teaching by individual believers in their daily contacts.

2. Chicago Sunday Tribune reprint. With the kind cooperation of the Publishing Committee, the Public Relations Committee has been trying since June, 1945 to place an order for 50,000 reprints of the full page colored illustration of the Temple and the excellent article about the Faith which appeared in the Chicago Sunday Tribune of June 17. The editor has kindly placed the color plates and the original photos at our disposal for this purpose. We are finally able to advise the friends that the reprints are now available. Copies are being given to Assemblies and Regional Committees; the Committee is mailing out a number to the National Baha'i list of influential persons and organizations, and the National Assembly has allocated quantities to other National Committees. The remainder of the edition is turned over to the Publishing Committee for sale at the price of twenty copies for $1.00.

3. Portfolio. The Committee has issued a bound pamphlet containing a presentation of the Faith in its relation to the world crisis, for use in making special contacts such as with newspaper editors, educators, friendly clergy and other persons and organizations active along lines sympathetic to the Baha'i ideals. 1,000 copies are being mailed out direct, 2,000 copies are turned over to the Publishing Committee for sale at the rate of 50c per copy, including a mailing envelop.

4. Press releases. Two releases have already been sent out to papers in towns of more than 100,000 population, and also to local Assemblies and Regional Committees—on the atomic bomb and on industrial justice. Two more will be issued shortly, one on the Guardian's plan for international Bahai relief, the other on Persia as the country of origin of the Faith. Copies of all releases issued by this Committee will be sent on request where groups, traveling teachers and others can use them.

5. Official Navy photo of Temple. The Naval Air Station at Glenview has given us two aerial views of the Temple with permission to reproduce. Copies of one of these have been sent to papers which have a Sunday rotogravure section. Plans are in discussion for using this same picture in a larger number of papers, and a later announcement will be made.

2. Features

The Committee wishes to give special emphasis to the outstanding work done by some of the local Assemblies in getting publicity on the release on the subject of industrial justice. We refer particularly to the action of the Flint Assembly in placing the release in the Flint Journal of January 23 as a paid advertisement, with an offer to send further information on request. As this release gives the Master's statement on the subject, the Flint Assembly has found a way to bring the Baha'i teachings on strikes and wages and government responsibility to the public in the very heart of the troubled motor industry. From South Bend, also, we have a clipping in which the same release is presented under the large heading: Baha'i Peace Plan—Labor and Capital.

The following references to the Faith in publications outside the Cause have been brought to our attention through the kindness of a number of Baha'is, and we list them here for the information of all believers.

The Navy aerial picture was used as front cover illustration on the magazine published by the Navy Air Station of Glenview on January 15, 1946.

Temple illustrations and Baha'i literature have been given to the editor of National Architect at his request, for a feature article on the Cause.

A notice of Temple meetings and guiding has been placed in a bulletin called the Welcomer which a special organization sends to every family who moves to Wilmette, Evanston, Highland Park, Winnetka, Glencoe and Kenilworth. This bulletin is issued annually, and contains data and information useful to new residents in the area.

A passage from words of the Guardian was quoted in Motive of May, 1945, the magazine of the Methodist Student Movement.

Temple pictures have been given to Conoco Travel Bureau, Continental Oil Co., for reproduction in their bulletin for tourists.

A misleading statement about the Cause was published in Bergen County Panorama, and the correction of this has been taken up with the civil authorities who sponsored the publication.

My Home Town, the Souvenir of Chicago issued for Service Men and Women, carries an illustration of the Temple as central feature of its page of illustrations of churches.

The book entitled Days With Walt Whitman, by Edward Carpenter, contains a reference to the Cause. There are also Bahá'í references in Sunday After the War, by Henry Miller, published by New Directions and in Persian Gulf Command, by Joel Sayre, Random House.

Mr. Joseph Kuperberg, Bahá'í of New York, had an article entitled "New Religion Builds Health" in Let's Live magazine of April, 1945.

3. Policy

The aim of the Public Relations Committee is first, to watch out for important public opinions, events and trends which affect the Bahá'í Faith either favorably or unfavorably, and to take such action with the approval of the N. S. A. as seems best adapted (with the means available) to make the particular situation an occasion for promoting the Bahá'í teachings; second, to issue material which will aid the friends in developing their community, committee or personal contacts with non-Bahá'í organizations and leaders; third, to develop as rapidly as possible a group of nationally prominent persons who are acquainted with the basic Bahá'í teachings and favorably disposed toward the Faith; and fourth, to provide press releases dealing editorially with Bahá'í teachings related to important current events—as for example, the release on industrial justice.

The Committee itself is nothing more than an agency of the National Spiritual Assembly and the servant of the believers. It wishes to be useful, but under no conditions to invade the area of work assigned to other Committees or any other Bahá'í institution. The friends need tools with which to serve the Cause under the highly involved and changing conditions of this era. The credit for using the tools belongs to those devoted and valiant souls who stand on the battle line between faith and unfaith, filled with the spirit of teaching.

We welcome advice, suggestions, names and addresses of prominent persons who should be added to the National mailing list which receives Bahá'í material from time to time.

North American Teaching

Effects of the National Campaign

The success of the National Campaign meetings continues to be a great stimulus to the teaching efforts that are being carried forward to follow up the interest aroused in those areas. Encouraging and surprising results are reported, the most recent from Mr. Harlan Ober of Beverly, Mass., who visited Toronto late in January on a circuit planned to provide regular teaching help to the Assemblies and groups in that region. Mr. Ober reports that "the great activity and unity generated in getting the big meeting is producing wonderful results on the friends. They have a new confidence, and the tremendous effort they made has been invigorating to them."

During Mr. Ober's visit in Toronto two public meeting were held which "filled the Center to capacity" and we understand that talks were also given before a luncheon group, a dinner group at the University Club, and a life insurance salesmen group arranged by Mr. John Robarts. Mr. Ober reports that one of the salesmen "later joined several others who are near to declaring themselves, when I talked about the Will and Testament. Two have asked to join since that meeting." Just outside the city in Forest Hill Village at the Robarts' home, two groups of people came in to a Sunday morning meeting, and in Scarboro nearby, an afternoon meeting at the home of Miss Doris Richardson drew an audience of about 25. Meetings were also arranged for Mr. Ober in Hamilton, Ottawa, and in Montreal.

Mr. Carl Scheffler of Evanston, Illinois, on his return from the recent New Orleans meeting of the National Campaign, stopped over in Jackson, Miss., where he spoke on "Education for World Peace" to a group which included ten non-Baha'i's. "Several strangers were attracted by the newspaper notice. They were quite taken by the Message and remained to talk with the believers until quite late," Mr. Scheffler reports, and adds that he "met a number of men who are State officials, the day following the lecture, at the State Capitol." In Memphis, Tenn., Mr. Scheffler reports an audience of "very refined people who listened very attentively and expressed appreciation."

The New England RTC planned a teaching Conference in Portsmouth, N. H. to follow up the interest created through the big meeting held in that region. Besides the afternoon conference with the believers, there was a radio broadcast by Mr. Ober, and a public meeting that night at which Mr. William Towart, a pioneer settler of Providence, Rhode Island, gave a very good talk on "The Price of World Peace is World Religion."

Circuit Speakers

A circuit through two Western States was arranged to provide for the teaching help of Mrs. Ethel Thompson, of Boise, Idaho. Four public lectures were given in Butte, and in Helena two public fireside meetings were planned. The Spokane Assembly reports a public meeting attended by 32, which was advertized by press and radio, an evening fireside meeting, afternoon meetings and a luncheon meeting arranged for Mrs. Thompson's visit.

During the Christmas holiday period Dr. Edris Rice-Wray covered a circuit in New Jersey and reports that "four talks were arranged by the Regional Committee . . . at the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark; at the Center in West Englewood, and though it was New Year's Eve (they had 25 to 30 out); and third at the Kelsey home in West Englewood. They had 35 to 40—a fine group. The final one was at Maud Gaudreaux's studio in Ridgewood." Miss Aline Lindenstruth of Duluth and Mr. Hushang Javid of Chicago accompanied Dr. Rice-Wray on this trip and she writes: "They spoke on every program . . . preceded me with 15-minute talks and everyone seemed to like it . . . It gave variety, presented youth enthusiastic enough to speak for their Faith, and gave them experience. . . ."

Regional Meeting at Harrisburg

The Regional Committee met at Harrisburg, Penna., in January "as a halfway point for all the members to get together." Mr. Stuart Sims broadcast in the morning and spoke at the public meeting held that evening, and Miss Florence Weaver gave the point of view of the youth and how the Faith affected their lives. There were 20 present. "Five new seekers were really interested . . .," writes Mrs. Ethel Crane, the secretary, "and the RTC was very happy over the results."

In California the RTC has worked with the Huntington Park group in an effort to re-establish this Assembly. Regular teaching help has been provided each month. In December Mrs. Virginia Foster spoke to an audience of 127 on "The Door of Hope for Today" and Mrs. Charles Witt spoke in January on "The Way to Peace and Freedom" to be followed in February with a talk by Mr. Joel Marangella on "Youth and the Rising World Community." Mrs. Foster also spoke at a fireside meeting in Fresno at the home of Mrs. Delia Brandin on "The Soul of America."

Canada

From Charlottetown, P.E.I., Mrs. Ruth Moffett reports that the fifth "Seminar" closed February 10th with a group of fifteen new people definitely attracted and three new members confirmed, — Mrs. Daisy Lyle, and Mrs. Hilda Johnston of Charlottetown and Mr. Leo Lagarde, a serviceman there temporarily. This is the culmination of a teaching effort which began in October and has been going forward since with 81 lectures at the Queen Hotel, 89 classes, 32 teas and parties and 14 radio broadcasts. The first permanent Fireside Class has now been formed." On February 16th Mrs. Moffett began two weeks of intensive teaching work in Moncton, N.B., and she states that "they have arranged three lectures every day, some service club addresses and broadcasts. With Annie Romer to inspire them they have been working like beavers in preparation. . . ."

Need for Reinforcements

Regional Bulletins indicate the need for reinforcement in seven different localities, so we again wish to urge those who are free to do pioneer settlement work to contact the Committee immediately.

The task given us by the Guardian continues to be that of the preservation of the status of the present assemblies; the multiplication of groups; their steady and progressive conversion into full fledged assemblies; as well as "the proclamation of the Faith by "bold, concerted measures.""

—NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

Publicity for Public Campaign

This committee in co-operating with the Public Campaign program prepared six publicity releases, a total of sixteen copies, and nine advertisements for the three Atlanta daily newspapers in publicizing the January 13th Atlanta meeting. Attendance at the New Orleans Public Meeting of January 28th was aided by the use of sixteen releases and eight advertisements prepared for that city's three newspapers. Of the thirty-four releases for the Los Angeles Public Meeting of February 8th, because of the importance of the suburban area adjacent to the city, all but sixteen of the news items were released to the suburban and racial newspapers. The advertising, as well, made up of twenty-one insertions, was concentrated in the four daily newspapers of Los Angeles but space was also used in nine suburban and racial newspapers.

Schedules have been completed for the publicity and advertising of the Denver Public Meeting, which is set for March 8th, and plans are in the work for the New York City, Portland, Detroit and Chicago meetings, which follow in the order given.

NEWS SERVICE COMMITTEE

New Orleans Public Meeting

The weeks of advance work in connection with these meetings, which covered contacts with colleges, civic organizations, and groups working for better race relations were very fruitful. The press was most cooperative and through its help the Faith was publicized the week before the meetings. For the first time the people of this city became aware of the Teachings.

The first meeting was held January 27th at the Y.W.C.A. and was inter-racial. Both races were well represented. This group was made up of members of the New Orleans Race Relation Committee, the interracial Youth College group, the Urban League, and others, reached through notices in all papers in the city, white as well as colored. The outstanding contribution made by these outside groups was a talk given by the secretary of the Youth College group. These young people reflect the Bahá’í spirit in ignoring all barriers of race, class, and creed. They have invited some of our Bahá’í young people to join them in their work. This is most encouraging and may become a nucleus for a real Bahá’í youth group in the city. Many cards were signed indicating a desire to know more about the Teachings. A follow-up meeting was arranged to be held at the Bahá’í Center February 7th.

The second meeting, at the St. Charles Hotel, January 28th, was a great success, both in numbers and in the type of people attracted. Deep interest was shown, andquirers all helped to make the teach­ings, a larger one will soon be necessary.

A follow-up public meeting is booked for February 13th at the St. Charles Hotel. Mr. Philip Marangella will be the speaker.

NEW ORLEANS PUBLIC MEETING COMMITTEE

The Los Angeles Public Meeting

The remarkably unified action of all the Bahá’ís in the southern area stirred 800 people to attend the National Public Meeting of February 8th at 8 P.M. in the Elks Temple of Los Angeles. Many of the shut-ins assisted with prayer. One group of 19 used the same supplications, late on the afternoon of the meeting and into the evening. No less remarkable was the turn-out of many Bahá’ís whose busy life has prevented them from being able to participate in the activities of the Cause.

The well-organized mailing division arranged a master list of names with original contact records made. Contact was made with city wide inter-racial groups and their newspapers.

Dr. William Madsen of Pasadena acted as chairman for the meeting. Mrs. Marzieh Gail and Mr. William Sears gave the addresses. Their audience lingered long. Bahá’í artists contributed to the music of the evening: Mrs. Helga Nielsen of Burbank gave a piano solo; Mrs. Willis Brewer of Long Beach sang, accompanied by Mrs. Ingenuus Buner of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Brewer later sang a duet. Approximately 19 young Bahá’ís acted as ushers for the evening.

The Long Beach Community was most generous in lending the friends an unusual display. An automatic slide projector three by four feet in size showed continuously in progress colored slides of the Temple, of Green Acre, and of Geyserville, with printed notations. It created great interest. There were also eight enlargements of Temple photographs black and white, in stunning frames. Two maps of the hemispheres, with white pins locating all Bahá’í groups and assemblies in the world, hung on the wall behind the Temple model itself. Around the model, the property of the Los Angeles Assembly, the flower committee had arranged fresh blossoms. The Bahá’í book display had arrived from New Orleans just in time to be arranged at the entry wall of the huge lecture hall.

As an aid to the follow-up teaching work, small folded cards were printed and distributed in the chairs. These listed the addresses of the Bahá’ís homes in which, on three consecutive Friday evenings, fireside groups will be held for those who are interested. Space was given to permit the signing of names and addresses. The chairman of the evening allowed time between the speakers for the people to sign these cards, and the ushers collected them. The cards also listed a number of questions which seekers usually ask, questions that would be answered in the fireside discussions. They were compiled so as to attract people of different backgrounds.

The city-wide advertising and publicity articles, the radio programs presented over the Los Angeles Peace program hour two Sundays before February 8th, and the spontaneous cooperation of the Southern California friends in bringing inquirers all helped to make the teaching venture a confirmed success.

World Language

The World Language Committee appeals to the Local Spiritual Assemblies for help in its increasingly important work. So vast has become the scope of our teaching that it has become almost impossible for us alone to carry on our growing projects.

We wish to offer the following suggestions for consideration of the Local Assemblies:

1. That each Local Spiritual Assembly devote one public meeting this year to the subject of world language.

2. That local World Language Committees be appointed, in order to help us in the teaching work. Will those Assemblies who appoint such Committees kindly send to us the names and addresses of the committee members?

The National Spiritual Assembly has placed at our disposal a fine supply of literature. Last year several Assemblies made requests for these booklets, but they were not available at that time. We are now ready to fill any requests, and will be glad to help any of the Local Spiritual Assemblies in this respect.

The most recent report from the Local Spiritual Assembly of Miami carries news of interest: An Esperanto Club has asked permission to meet at the Bahá’í Center, and they have been granted the opportunity of meeting there every Monday evening under the leadership of David Earl, a believer who is serving in the Navy at Miami. He writes:

"Naturally I let the class know what my Faith was and gave them a little information about it from time to time, distributing some of the literature Mrs. Davis has put out. Results: one class-member remembered seeing the exhibit at New York World’s Fair and was very happy to make another contact with the Faith, even borrowing books from our library at the Center; two others have been coming often since then to our regular public meetings and have even attended some Bahá’í study classes; and two others have occasionally attended the public meetings. So a total of five persons have shown more or less interest in the Teachings, directly because of the Esperanto class. That alone is a recompense for the efforts put forth—but also, they know some Esperanto too!"

"In June I was asked to give a talk on Esperanto to the young people of the Miami Shores Community Church. I prefaced my talk by explaining why I was interested in the International language ideal—then talked about forty minutes on the subject assigned. When I finished, the first question was 'What is your religion about?' So I spent almost as long answering questions on the Faith as I had talking on Esperanto. Further, I invited them to the Center to a regular public meeting, and a few weeks later eight or ten of them came in a group to the Center to see what a Bahá’í public meeting was like. More service to the Cause through Esperanto!"

We earnestly repeat our appeal to the Local Spiritual Assemblies to help us in our great work!

Selected Writings

The attention of all the believers is again directed to the series of three pamphlets published in 1942 with the title of Selected Writings of Baha’u’llah, Selected Writings of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and Selected Writings of Shoghi Effendi. Together, they supply a representative compilation of the Bahá’í teaching in a most convenient form, either for individual study or group teaching use. The edition printed was so large that all three pamphlets can be obtained from the Publishing Committee for 25c.

Branch Libraries

The Library Committee has recommended that the friends try to present some basic literature to "branch libraries" in their cities to give sufficient information on the Teachings to attract readers to the Main Public Library collections. Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, which is small (conserving library shelf space), comprehensive and inexpensive, makes a splendid donation for these libraries. Since these branch libraries have often been overlooked by the friends, we offer this brief summary from our files to encourage further donations:

Canada: We have records of Bahá'í books in all large public libraries but no branches.

It is encouraging to report that there is basic literature in all the branch libraries in the following cities:

- Denver, Colo., 12 branches
- Atlanta, Ga., 5 branches
- Springfield, Ill., 3 branches
- Gary, Ind., 7 branches
- Glendale, Calif., 3 branches
- Columbus, Ohio, 6 branches
- Pasadena, Calif., 4 branches
- Toledo, Ohio, 5 branches
- Philadelphia, Penna., 36 branches
- Pittsburgh, Penna., 15 branches
- New Orleans, La., 5 branches

Several cities have Bahá'í books in a number of branches and we hope that the friends continue their good work with a 100% record soon:

- Lincoln, Neb., books in 3 of the 8 branches
- Chicago, Ill., books in 25 branches
- Baltimore, Md., books in 12 of the 25 branches
- Boston, Mass., books in 12 of the 30 branches

We have very little information on Bahá'í books in the "branch libraries" in the following cities:

- Detroit, Mich. (records for 4 of the 25 branches)
- New York City (records for only 6 branches)
- St. Paul, Minn. (only South St. Paul branch listed)
- Cincinnati, O. (records for 2 branches)
- Cleveland, O. (records for East Cleveland Heights—no other branches)
- Los Angeles, Calif. (record of only 1 branch library)
- Miami, Fla. (records for 2 of the 8 branches)
- Indianapolis, Ind. (record for only 1 of the 18 branches)

We have no records of Bahá'í books in the "branch libraries" in the following cities:

- Birmingham, Ala. (11 branches)
- Buffalo, N.Y. (no data)
- Fort Wayne, Ind. (5 branches)
- St. Louis, Mo. (29 branches)
- Rochester, N.Y. (12 branches)
- San Francisco, Calif. (21 branches)
- Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma, Wash. (no data)
- Milwaukee, Wis. (no data)
- Minneapolis, Minn. (no data)

Temple Guides

September and October, 1945

The number of visitors to the Temple continues to be astonishing, as also their receptiveness and the great quantity of literature they purchase there.

In September the total was 4424 as compared to 2451 in Sept. in 1944. These came from 46 states and the District of Columbia, 4 provinces (9 cities) of Canada, Hawaii, Netherlands, Chile and Brazil. The numbers guided on Sundays were 894, 557, 465, 379, and 188. The total number on Sundays was 2483, week-days 1941, including Labor Day which was 702.

In October the total was 2357 as compared with 2771 in October, 1944. Fifty per cent came on Sundays. They came from 41 states, the District of Columbia, 12 from 3 provinces of Canada, from Barbados, Trinidad, Brazil, England, China, Australia, Czechoslovakia, and the Philippines.

The following organizations visited in a body: (June, July and August are included because they were omitted in the last report.)

- June—13 North Shore Girl Scout Troop, Winnetka, Ill.; 17 Evanson, Ill.; 22 Prairie Club, Chicago (Hikers)
- July—19 Rebecca Guild from Grace Evangelical Church, Milwaukee, Wis.; 12 Youth Group from the Pilgrim Cong'1. Church, Oak Park, Ill.
- August—25 Rogers Park Play School, Chicago, Ill.; 40 Jehovah Lutheran Church, Chicago.
- Sept.—15 Girl Scout Troop, Wilmette, Ill.; 23 Students from Evangelical Institute, Chicago.
- Oct.—30 Lions Club, Winnetka, Ill.; 18 As You Like It Readers Club, Harvey, Ill.; 16 Y.W.C.A. Northwestern University.

From January 1, 1945, through October 31, 1945, Bahá'í literature in the amount of $1,877.43 has been sold by the guides, including 1137 copies of "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era."

Week-day guiding will continue indefinitely owing to the fact that visitors continue to arrive in great numbers, many of whom come from remote and sparsely settled states and foreign countries. We feel this necessary, since it is doubtful if any but a few of these would have another opportunity to visit the Temple or hear of the Faith. We hope that it will be possible to so heat the Temple that it can be open every day in the year.

Among means of serving the Cause Temple Guiding is unique. None other is so full of possibilities of teaching with widespread effect. The enthusiastic comments of the visitors and their interest is amazing. They come here desiring to learn and delighted with what they hear.

More fireside groups and public meetings are needed everywhere. We should like all of you, no matter where you live, who wish to be listed as willing to hold fireside groups, to send your name to the Guides Committee. We will keep a list at the Temple. Many visitors would be interested in attending such meetings.

Since we shall need many more guides and public speakers for the work by next summer, we invite those who would like to spend their vacations in Wilmette to volunteer for this work. It will be necessary for you to prepare yourself well and to be approved as a teacher by your Local Spiritual Assembly or Regional Teaching Committee. We will furnish Guides Study Courses to those who are so approved if they will apply for them. Some assemblies are holding guide study classes and supervising them. Only those who seriously intend to do this work should apply for Courses, as the supply is limited.

The four who spent their vacations last summer in Wilmette guiding in the Temple found it a most thrilling work. They were Roan Orloff, Boston, Massachusetts; Clara Edge, Grand Rapids, Michigan; Muriel Barrow, Shandaken, New York; and Mary Beasley, Detroit, Michigan.

The total number of visitors to the Temple from January 1 to October 31, 1945, was 24,396. Last year for the same period it was 16,391. The total since Guide Service started, July 1, 1932, is 205,824!

Permanent Memorial Exhibit

The Bahá’í Committee on American Memorial to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, at the request of the National Spiritual Assembly, is endeavoring to establish a permanent exhibit in the Evergreen Cabin at West Englewood, New Jersey, commemorating the Master’s visit to America. Any newspaper clippings, photographs, relics or accounts of personal interviews with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, that have any bearing on His visit in this country will be acceptable. Photostatic copies of these precious mementos can be made and used in lieu of the originals should the owners not wish to part with them. Whatever information or articles any believer has, will he or she please submit them to, or contact the Secretary of this Committee?

Bahá’í College Students

The College Speakers Bureau is anxious to obtain the names of Bahá’í students in educational institutions.

The Bureau wishes to compile this list of Bahá’í students in order to make special contact with them, both as a possibility of presenting a Bahá’í speaker in the college where they are enrolled and for assistance in teaching among undergraduates.

Names and addresses of the Bahá’í students should be sent to the secretary of the Bureau.

RUTH RANDALL BROWN, Sec’y, Box 111, Ingomar, Pa.

College Speakers

In cooperation with the Race Unity Committee, the College Speakers Bureau is glad to report that Mrs. Joy Earl is spending three months in the south visiting many well-known colleges. Mrs. Terah Smith will visit several colleges in Georgia this month in connection with a teaching trip. Dr. Edris Rice-Wray will fill an opening at Iowa State University and will have an opportunity to speak to the students and faculty and make a radio address.

News of Other Lands

Egypt

The British Bahá’í Journal gives the following description of the Haşiratu’l-Quds in Cairo:

Philip Hainsworth spent some time in Egypt on his way to East Africa and stayed in the Haşiratu’l-Quds in Cairo for a few days’ leave. He gives the following description of it:

“It is very new and a most beautiful place. It was only completed a matter of one hour before the Centenary celebrations were due to begin. As soon as the workmen finished, swarms of the friends dashed around the place and cleaned it up so that everything should start on time. The exterior and dome is still incomplete.

CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS IN CAIRO, EGYPT, MAY 22-24, 1944

Banquet for Ladies. One of the Banquets for Men.

It is a nine-sided building of simple design but unusual, with a dome on top supported on nine pillars, about 15-20 feet above the main body of the building. Eventually the surface will be covered with some plastic material and the dome will be floodlit.

“It lies a hundred yards back from the main road between a Coptic Church and a Mosque. (This Mosque was built specially to oppose the Haşiratu’l-Quds and meetings are held in it for the sole purpose of raising hatred against the Bahá’ís.)

“In the basement of the Haşiratu’l-Quds are five rooms, kitchen, etc., the rooms being used for the library and book store, for the Youth Groups (boys and girls meet separately for the present), the local assembly, etc. Above the basement is the reception hall, a small office, and the large assembly hall, which will seat 150 or so. The next floor has the two guest rooms, the archives room, the N.S.A. room, library (display), bathroom and small kitchen. Above this again is the flat sun roof with the dome rising above all.”

Our readers will remember the great success which attended the Egyptian Centenary celebrations. About 400 believers from all parts of the world were present.

Child Education

Dear Parents and Teachers:

In the teaching process there comes a time when a child has assimilated sufficient knowledge on a given subject to express some of this knowledge in his own words. Through this means of expression his learning becomes more firmly imprinted on his mind and soul. The following was dictated by a child eight and a half years old, who had been studying the Faith for about a year.

“Bahá’u’lláh was a good man. He was good to us. We love Him. We should love all God’s Men. We should be good, and if we are we will be happy, and so will God. If we pray every night, God will know we love Him. God knows everything we do and say. He knows what we think, too. We are dumb compared to God!

“Bahá’u’lláh taught us to worship God, and He taught us the Hidden Words. ‘A Bahá’í has to believe in Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá too. ‘Abdul-Bahá went on with Bahá’u’lláh’s Teachings. Shoghi Effendi is the living grandson of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. He is the head of all Bahá’ís around the world.”

Egypt attended and a fine group of non-believers was attracted to the Faith and have since come to the Baha'i meetings in Cairo. We have recently received a detailed account of the Centenary celebrations which, by showing the obstacles the Egyptian believers had to overcome, makes the success of this great event even more striking. The completion of their Haziratu'l-Quds by May, 1944, seemed, in 1943, impossible, owing to lack of funds and difficulty in obtaining materials. But contributions from the Guardian revived the hopes of the N.S.A. Materials were miraculously procured. Carpentry was entrusted to three committees, in Cairo, Beni-Suef and Port Said. Electrical installations were contributed by the friends of Beni-Suef and the plaster by Port Said.

Centenary Celebrations: Preparations for the great event were made by various committees and included obtaining the consent of the police, arranging accommodations for the several hundred out-of-town Baha'is, some in hotels, but most in homes of Cairo Baha'is, arranging the program, arranging for refreshments and meals in tents which were pitched beside the Haziratu'l-Quds, approving the names of non-Baha'is who expressed a desire to attend, etc. The celebration lasted for three days. The program included addresses on "The Position of Women in the Baha'i Cause," "The Life of Qurratu'l-Ayn," "The Accord between Religion and Science," "Why Baha'is feel Tranquility," readings from the Qayyumu'l-Asma', the "Dawn Breakers" and Abdul' Baha's American Addresses, and music.

The audience was divided, children up to twelve occupying the basement, men the second floor, and women the third. A public address system had been installed by means of which all could listen to the program. Those in attendance were from different nationalities and faiths—Moslems, Christians and Jews. All were conscious of a new, matchless and life-giving spirit. The fragrances of spiritual love and brotherhood were diffused.

Hundreds were gathered outside, eager to listen, and all the radios of the neighborhood were silent in order that people might listen to the loud speakers. Many poor people gathered around the building and were fed. Celebrations in Cairo are generally more or less disorderly, but this one was marred by no disturbing incident.

New Field of Service: Soon after the Centenary the Guardian wrote advising the Egyptian Baha'is to establish the Cause in new localities and contributing 1,000 pounds to help finance pioneers and aid in the general teaching work. As a result, three new assemblies have been formed, in Suez, Tanta and Sohag. Two believers have settled in Khartoum, Sudan, and the believers there are well organized, holding weekly meetings, attending Nineteen Day Feasts regularly and keeping in communication with the National Spiritual Assembly.

Sabri Effendi Elias of Alexandria has returned to Ethiopia, after a long absence which began when the Italian war against Ethiopia broke out in 1933. Reports show that he is promoting the Cause in a wonderful way and it is hoped that he can stay in Ethiopia permanently.

Persecutions: In Tanta, when the Spiritual Assembly was formed, the Baha'is were attacked, beaten and, in one case, wounded by a mob which the police dispersed with great difficulty. Later, however, as the people of Tanta came to know the Baha'is better, a friendly feeling came about, and now many of the people of Tanta are inquiring about the Cause.

Baha'i Marriage Certificates Still Unrecognized: Recently an application of a Baha'i for permission for his wife (a Palestinian resident) to become a resident of Egypt was refused on the ground that the Baha'i marriage certificate of the couple was not legal, since the Baha'i Faith is not recognized by the Egyptian Government. This case is being appealed. Such verdicts are frequent in spite of the judgment pronounced by the Grand Mufti of Islam in Egypt in which he proclaimed the independent status of the Baha'i Faith. The Egyptian Baha'is are preparing a memorandum in which they hope to gain from the Egyptian Government the right to enjoy the privileges sanctioned by the Constitutional Law on an equal footing with other religious communities.

Burma

Superb Services rendered the Cause by Siyyid Mustafá Roumie

Our November issue carried the news of the death of Siyyid Mustafá Roumie and the Guardian's cable, which spoke of his "magnificent achievements" entitling him to "join the ranks of the Hands of the Cause of Baha'u'llah." Readers will remem-
Siyyid Muṣṭafā belonged to a noble family of Baghdad, 'Trāq. His father had settled in Madras, India. When Sulayman Khan Iyās, popularly known as Jamāl Effendi, the first Bahá'í teacher sent by Bahá'u'lláh to India in 1875, arrived at Madras, Siyyid Muṣṭafā was in his early twenties. He was very spiritual and very careful in the observance of his religious duties. The moment, therefore, he came in contact with the commanding personality of Jamāl Effendi, he was attracted to him. He became a firm believer of the truth of the Cause and enkindled with love for it. When Jamāl Effendi left Madras, he accompanied him and travelled with him throughout India and Burma.

On reaching Burma in 1878 he left Jamāl Effendi and settled in Rangoon, where he married into a wealthy Indo-Burman family of traders and became a partner in their business.

Jamāl Effendi succeeded in establishing two Bahá'í groups in Burma, one in Rangoon and one in Mandalay. Siyyid Muṣṭafā followed up his teacher's work and, under the direction of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, succeeded in developing these groups into Spiritual Assemblies.

In 1910 the firm in which he was a partner failed, and, soon after, his wife died. From this time on he devoted his whole time to the service of the Faith. In 1899 he carried to the Holy Land, with other Bahá'ís, the marble casket made by the Bahá'ís of Mandalay for the Holy Remains of the Báb. He was received by 'Abdu'l-Bahá most graciously and was the recipient of many favors from Him.

Besides consolidating the Centers at Rangoon and Mandalay he was assisted in establishing a new Center at Daidanaw, a village in the township of Kungyangoon. It happened that the headman of Daidanaw was involved in a troublesome legal case. In the Rangoon court when his application for bail was granted there was no one to stand surety for him because he was a stranger. One of the Bahá'ís of Rangoon, happening to be in the court room, at once offered himself as surety. This impressed the headman and his companions and they inquired of the Bahá'í to which Faith he belonged. When told of Bahá'u'lláh and His great Message they were very desirous to hear more of it. They were brought to Siyyid Muṣṭafā, who convinced them of the truth of the new Revelation. The headman and his party went back to their village and related this experience to the people. The elders of the village held a consultation and decided to invite Siyyid Muṣṭafā to their village to teach them the new Faith of God. This Siyyid Muṣṭafā did in his own convincing manner and the village embraced the Cause en masse. Siyyid Muṣṭafā set about bettering the lot of these people. With financial aid from Rangoon Bahá'ís he started a school in the village. He translated several Bahá'í books into Burmese, supervised translations into Urdu and wrote Lessons in Religion in Burmese.

Siyyid Muṣṭafā was entirely detached from the world. He loved the Beloved Guardian to such a degree that in all his daily life he followed his example. He knew that the Beloved Guardian loved and appreciated nothing but work and service for the Divine Faith, and he worked for it day and night unmindful of his health.

He was about 99 years of age at the time of his death, but his spirit was as young as the spirit of a youth of 22. If he heard of an inquirer he would walk a long distance to meet him. His method of teaching was to help the inquirer to be self-reliant in his search for truth and remove from his mind the attitude of dependence upon so-called religious leaders. He would build his argument on the knowledge of the inquirer and convince him of the truth proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh.

The Passing of Lidia Zamenhof

From Mrs. Mabelle L. Davis comes the news of two reports of the passing of Miss Lidia Zamenhof, daughter of the inventor of Esperanto, and prominent Bahá'í teacher. The friends will remember her successful lecture tour in this country before the war.

Through a Danish periodical, the Dansk Esperanto-Blad, December, 1945, we learn that a Polish Esperantist wrote to Mr. E. Malmgren of Sweden, one of the officers of the International Esperanto League, as follows:

"In the last few days before the wailing up and closing of the Jewish quarter, I went to Miss Zamenhof and offered to hide her with my Polish family. But that noble woman refused my offer to save her, saying that I and my family would perish as well as the Jew who was found. Miss Zamenhof was burned in the crematory for Jews in Treblinka, a place between Warsaw and Bialystoko."

A report which seems to confirm this came to Miss Roam Orloff from Mrs. Anne Lynch in Switzerland: that Lidia Zamenhof died in August, 1944.

Marion Holley and David Hofman were married in Northampton, England, Sunday, October 21, 1945.

Auckland, New Zealand, Bahá'ís are settled in a new Center in a good position on the main street of the city.

"Be in Perfect Unity"

You have heard the Divine call. ... You have good intentions, your purpose is the good pleasure of God, you desire to serve in the kingdom of the merciful One. Therefore arise in the utmost power. Be in perfect unity. Never become angry with one another. Let your eyes be directed toward the kingdom of truth and not toward the world of creation. Love the creatures for the sake of God and not for themselves. You will never become angry or impatient if you love them for the sake of God. Humanity is not perfect. There are imperfections in every human being and you will always become unhappy if you look toward the people themselves. But if you look toward God you will love them and be kind to them, for the world of God is the world of perfection and complete mercy. Therefore do not look at the shortcomings of anybody; see with the sight of forgiveness. The perfect eye beholds imperfections. The eye that covers faults looks toward the Creator of souls. He created them, trains and provides for them, endows them with capacity and life, sight and hearing; therefore they are the signs of His grandeur. You must love and be kind to everybody, care for the poor, protect the weak, heal the sick, teach and educate the ignorant. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Beloved Friends:

For the first time in the history of the National Spiritual Assembly, an election to fill a vacancy in its membership has been held after the Convention period. On account of Mr. Wilhelm's inability to attend the meetings this year, with the Guardian's approval, the delegates serving at the annual election of 1945 were called upon to vote by mail for one new member. The tellers appointed to count the ballots cast at the 1945 election served again; and their report states that Miss Elsie Austin was elected. Miss Austin will therefore, from March 16, receive the weekly reports prepared for the members of the National Assembly, and attend the one remaining meeting to be held prior to the 1946 Convention.

The fifteen highest votes were: Miss Elsie Austin, 30; Miss Edna True, 12; 9 each for Mr. Paul Haney and Mrs. Marjorie McCormick; 7 each for Mr. Wm. Kenneth Christian, Mr. Rowland Estall and Mr. Clarence Niss; 6 each for Mr. Curtis Kelsey and Mr. Emeric Sala; Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher, 5; 4 each for Mr. Carl Scheffler and Mr. Albert Windust; 3 each for Mr. Mathew Bullock, Dr. Kathryn True, Mrs. Sarah S. Walrath. Seven received two votes each, and one vote was cast for each of twenty-two persons.

For the annual election of local Spiritual Assemblies on April 21, the NSA has sent out copies of the Assembly Roll used for reporting these elections. Through the National Teaching Committee, the Regional Teaching Committees are also receiving copies for use by groups prepared to form an Assembly for the first time. A brief bulletin explaining the conditions under which new Assemblies can be formed has also been distributed. Where there are exactly nine adult Bahá'ís, the Assembly is formed by joint declaration, and a different type of form is needed, copies of which may be obtained from the National Assembly.

Unexpectedly the NSA was advised by Mr. John Eichenauer on March 19 that no more packages should be sent to him or to Mr. Davison for the relief of German Bahá'ís. Details were not given in the cabled message. No doubt the shipments were so numerous from all parts of the country that the two devoted believers could not receive any more. It is hoped that postal regulations will be changed soon to permit us to send direct parcels and letters to German Bahá'í Assemblies.

The latest available financial report is dated January 31, 1946. Total cash on hand, $27,681.35; received in January, $17,437.12; expenditures, $9,772.70; carmarked, $11,213.25; available for use, $16,468.10.

The friends, and particularly the local Assemblies, are reminded of the Guardian's explicit instruction that all Orientals coming to America are to be received as Bahá'ís only when having credentials from the proper Bahá'í administrative body of their own country. Such credentials are to be sent to the National Assembly here, which will issue its own credentials permitting the believer to be enrolled as member of the Bahá'í community. All other cases should be reported to the National Assembly and its advice awaited before action is taken.

National Committees

Radio

The National Radio Committee is very pleased to advise the friends that it now has a wide variety of good material for broadcasting. The following are available without cost to Assemblies, Regional Committees, and isolated Bahá’ís who can secure radio time:

3 Dramatic Presentations of the Faith (for a fifteen minute broadcast). Transcription records. These have been produced by a professional radio director and each has a large cast of professional actors. The transcriptions compare favorably with the best professional programs. Many small local stations will allot time free for this type of program as it offers a quality which they are glad to get.

1 half hour Dramatic presentation of the Faith. Transcription record. Produced and written by a Bahá’í with long radio experience. A fine production showing the establishment of the Faith all over the world. Carey McWilliams, the negro author, is the principal non-Bahá’í guest on this program. Has a good cast. Suitable for all types of stations interested in educational programs.

4 scripts, fifteen minutes in length. These present the wide aspects of the Faith. They are interesting, comprehensive, and accurate.

Samples of “spot announcements.” These are useful for the friends as models from which to write their own spot announcements.

Question and Answer script. An informative script with questions about the Faith asked by the announcer and answered by a Bahá’í. A good introduction to the Faith.

Variety of short selections from the Bahá’í Writings suitable to be used with musical intervals to make up a fifteen minute program.

New transcriptions records, in addition to the ones mentioned above, are now in the process of being made. We hope to complete a series of thirteen. These will include dramatic shows, interviews, and round table discussions. We hope the friends will take advantage of this material which has taken us so many months to produce. We feel that we have taken a long step forward and we know that the friends will agree when they hear the transcriptions.

National Radio Committee

Public Relations

The Public Relations Committee brings three new projects to your attention:

1. An Official Navy Photograph of the Temple (aerial view) has been made available to us and the committee has arranged to distribute mats to 4,000 newspapers in small towns. Extra mats have been obtained, and mats will be sent on request to local Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees. It is hoped that many of the larger papers can be interested in using the picture through the efforts of the friends.

2. A release has been sent to papers in towns having a population of 100,000 or more, on the subject of the building up of the Bahá’í centers in Germany, Burma and the Philippines. A copy is enclosed with this letter for local assemblies and regional teaching committees. Where necessary, the release can be re-dated, shortened, or rewritten as a letter to the editor. The main thing is to obtain as much Bahá’í publicity as possible in these crucial days.

3. For assisting in special contacts, a portfolio has been printed entitled — “Bahá’í — The Coming of World Religion.” An edition of three thousand copies has been produced, part of which are being sent direct to a National List, and the remainder will be sold through the Publishing Committee at 50 cents per copy. A complimentary copy is being sent your Assembly or Committee under separate cover. It is suggested that you consider how these portfolios can be used for impressing the Bahá’í teachings on leaders of your community.

The committee urges local assemblies to develop a list of the key persons and organizations of the city, and adopt some definite plan for bringing the Faith to their attention at regular intervals. It is important to the unfoldment of the Faith that in every city there be a number of interested and informed friends, persons of capacity and influence who respect the teachings and admire their aims and purposes.

The successful policy will be based on effort to share the teachings with leaders without exerting pressure to enroll them as members of the community. Depending on conditions, the question is one of wise and patient contact, either through personal ac-

Bahá’í News

Bahá’í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’í of the United States and Canada as the official newsletter of the Bahá’í community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: “The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function . . . I would urge you to enlarge its scope . . . that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise.”

“It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information, and spreading the work, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause.”

The contents include: material supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly as well as the Guardian’s messages, the Assembly’s letters and its general statements and reports; Committee plans which have been approved and authorized; Committee news reports of activities; annual reports from local Assemblies; news from other lands gathered from the bulletins of the various National Assemblies; a record of new enrollments and transfers; a record of deaths; photographs of general Bahá’í interest.

Bahá’í News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá’í News Committee: Horace Holley, Garreta Busey, Eleanor S. Hutchens, Mabel H. Paine. Address: Bahá’í News Committee, c/o Miss Garreta Busey, 503 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois.
quaintance, distribution of selected Bahá’í literature, notices of public meetings, or occasional invitations to participate in special programs of general appeal, such as peace, social justice, race unity, religious unity, etc.

This is a long-term effort, to be pursued steadily from year to year in full realization of the fact that one by one all human hopes and beliefs will fail, and ultimately the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh alone can maintain the foundation of social progress. Educators, editors, social workers, race and minority leaders, liberal clergy, artists and scientists, professional men and women, as well as civic leaders — this relatively small group can be favorably disposed to the Faith, and its natural endowment of talent and capacity is a precious asset which challenges the believers to fulfill some of the great promises which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá made to the American Bahá’ís. A number of assemblies have been pursuing this policy for years, with splendid results.

Finally, we ask your cooperation in sending for our National List those local names and addresses which you regard as of first importance, so that through our mailings we can reinforce your local work.

of the masses. Bahá'u'lláh has come to the men of this Day to explain that "these oppressions are preparing humanity for the advent of the Most Great Justice."

Bahá'u'lláh brings a message to the world which admits of no race qualifications. In the words of Dr. Khan, "The acceptance of the principle of the Oneness of Mankind is a step toward Universal Peace. Kings may express this principle through their edicts; governments through their parliaments; musicians through their instruments and poets through their writings." The practice of brotherly love and friendliness toward all is man's new conception of divinity. Let the Bahá'ís in their everyday activities help to lay the foundation stones of this heavenly kingdom!

The musical renditions offered by Miss Adele Keshelac, Miss Ida Noyes, Mrs. Joy Earle, Miss Lois Keller and Miss Lydia Martin contributed the harmony of atmosphere which supported beautifully the harmony of spirit so characteristic of Green Acre.

Inter-American News

The newest pioneer, Mrs. Shirley Warde, formerly a member of the San Francisco Community, left Miami by Pan American Airways, March 5th, with her final destination Buenos Aires. En route to her post, Shirley stopped over in Ciudad Trujillo, Bahía, Rio de Janeiro, and Montevideo. In Buenos Aires, she is to assist the Publishing and Distributing Committee with their arduous and demanding tasks, and to help the Community in their teaching activities. Because of her rich experience in radio, Mrs. Warde will devote herself especially to a wider and more effective use of this medium of promoting the Faith in the various Latin American centers.

The Inter-American Committee rejoices especially over the news from the Rio of the formation of a group in that city, consisting of Leonora Armstrong, Virginia Orbison, Mary and Edward Bode, Dr. Tomas Sanchez Egea, and Hans Sirach. Dr. Sanchez Egea, the Secretary of the Group, became a Bahá’í in Montevideo. Virginia Orbison and Edward Bode have been added to the Portuguese Publishing and Distributing Committee, of which Leonora Armstrong is the Chairman. Plans are being formulated for the immediate publishing in Portuguese, of Bahá'u'lláh and The New Era and Dispensation.

From Chile comes the news of the certain formation of a Spiritual Assembly in Valparaiso, where a lovely Group has been developed under the joint auspices of the Santiago and Punta Arenas Assemblies. Marcia Steward has been concentrating her efforts on Valparaiso for several months, assisted by two former members of the Punta Arenas Assembly, now living in Valparaiso. This will make the third Bahá’í Community in Chile.

After attending the Panama Conference, Elisabeth Cheney proceeded to Bogota, where she will remain at least until the April election.

From the Panama Conference, Mrs. Amelia Collins travelled through Central America, stopping over in San Salvador, Guatemala City, and Mexico City, en route home. Mrs. Collins brought back a most enthusiastic and heartening account of the Panama Conference, and of the inspiration it was to all those participating in it.

Dr. Malcolm King reports from Port-au-Prince, Haiti, encouraging evidences of deep interest in the Bahá’í talks which he is giving.

Artemus Lamb is currently in the United States on business, and hopes to attend the Convention before returning to Punta Arenas.

After devoting her full efforts to assisting with the arrangements for Panama Conference, Gayle Woolson is now in San Jose, and will divide her time between Costa Rica and Panama. Evelyn Larson is remaining as pioneer in Costa Rica, and Cora Oliver is at present spending her holiday in San Jose.

Denver Public Meeting

The Public Meeting at Denver, part of the National Campaign, was held at the Shirley-Savoy Hotel on March 8th, with an audience of about 375. The A Cappella Choir of the East Denver High School opened the meeting with five selections, and Mr. Carl Scheffer spoke on the subject "The Price of World Peace Is World Religion." Mrs. E. R. Roberts was chairman.

In preparation for this meeting the Denver Spiritual Assembly was able to get daily notices in both leading papers, the Denver Post and the Rocky Mountain News, in addition to paid advertising. On the radio a half hour transcription was given the Sunday before the big meeting and one of fifteen minutes on the Sunday after. This was followed up by a broadcast given by Mr. William Sears in person on March 17th. Sixteen spot announcements mentioned the public meeting on KFEL and one free announcement was given over KVOD.

An attractively printed card invited the public to attend three follow-up meetings at the Cosmopolitan Hotel on the three evenings following the lecture of Mr. Scheffler.
The subjects were "The Challenge of the Atomic Bomb," "Unity or Disintegration," and "Universal Teachings.

Spiritual Assembly).

Local Communities

Several communities have reported indirect teaching through social functions this month. The Bahá'ís of TÉA-NECK, New Jersey, have been hosts to several cultural gatherings at their Bahá'í Center, Evergreen Cabin,
West Englewood. On two occasions non-Bahá'ís presented the entire program drawing their friends for the audience. One evening a former resident of Java and Bali spoke of those islands, illustrating his talk with ex­ quise colored pictures. Subsequently the speaker became very much interested in the Faith. Another well-publicized, well-attended meeting was a program by the poet letter-carrier of West Englewood, who read his poetry to the musical accompaniment of a Bahá'í pianist, and who showed colored slides of the nearby country scenes. Many town residents made their first visit to the Bahá'í
Center for this program.

When Dr. Alain Locke was scheduled as a speaker for the Rhode Islaland School of Design's exhibition of Negro art, the Negro College Club and the PROVIDENCE Bahá'í held a joint meeting for which Dr. Locke talked on "Democracy in Human Relations" and spoke of being a
Bahá'í. There were twenty non-Bahá'ís present in spite of bad weather.
His talk was reported and the next Sunday's program was announced in both the Urban League Bulletin and the Providence Chronicle. As a result of this unsolicited publicity, the Sunday meeting for Mr. George Goodman, a Negro Bahá'í from HARTFORD, Connecticut, had a record attendance.

NEW YORK CITY has held a series of Latin American evenings.
There was a capacity audience in the Bahá'í Center for the one held January 25th, the first to be held entirely in the Spanish language. It was advertised through the Spanish newspaper LaPresse and over the Spanish radio station, WBNX, and through invitations sent in the mail.
Mr. Eduardo Ricci was chairman for the elaborate Spanish program.
Dr. Ernest Chenel, professor of Romance Languages at Fordham University, spoke on "The Inca Empire," Ritta Mae Lawrence, Bahá'í pioneer to Buenos Aires, gave the Bahá'í message, and there was a technicolor sound movie, "South to the Land of the Conquistadores." Blue Mountain and his trio furnished Latin American folk music.

A Bahá'í banquet held at PITTS­ BURGH's Webster Hall Hotel on January 26th was very successful. There were sixty present, most of whom knew a little about the Faith. The atmosphere was responsive and friendly. Among the guests were twelve members of the soriety of which Elsie Austin was once grand president. The pamphlets, "The Bahá'í Peace Program," were used as place cards and were all of them taken home to be read. The waiters asked for copies too! After the turkey dinner came the program: a welcome by the chairman of the local spiritual assembly, Mr. Otto Zmeskal; and an introduction to the Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Walter Buchanan; a few words from Tom Dunbar, recently discharged from the army; piano selections by Mrs.
Harris, member of the Delta sorority; a talk about the souvenir peace pamphlet by Mr. Bishop Brown; introduction to Miss Austin by Florence Zmeskal; and an excellent and inspiring talk by Miss Elsie Austin. The Pittsburgh Cour­i sent a reporter and photographer.

The Bahá'ís of URBANA and CHAMPAIGN, Illinois, celebrated
Naw-Rúž this year with an inter­ cractal dinner at which about 120 people heard the Message of Bahá'úlláh.
Each Bahá'í invited one or more guests but more than half of the tickets were bought by non-Bahá'ís interested in better race relations. Mr.
Taylor Thomas, of the Champaign
Group, was master of ceremonies.
The non-Bahá'í speaker was Prof.
Charles Shattuck of the University of Illinois, who made a plea for Negro students to become active in the theater of that institution.
Margaret Swengel told about Bahá'í youth work for race unity, and Mrs. Margery McCormick spoke on "The World Safe for Mankind."

The DANVILLE, Illinois, Bahá’í assembly felt that that community was drawn together in harmony and fellowship when a surprise covered-dish supper was held in honor of two Bahá’ís, Mrs. Ruth Chavis and Mrs. Marie Weaver, whose birthdays fell on the regular study class evening. The study of the Dawn-breakers was enriched by the presence of Mr. Farnhang Javid, a student at the University of Illinois from Thrân, and a fourth generation Bahá’í, who helped the class with pronunciation. Another study class is beginning in Danville using the outline prepared by Mamie Seto.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, announced the holding of their first meeting in a public auditorium on January 13th. The program built about the subject, "The Need for Universal Peace," was composed of talks in Spanish by Mr. Marcelino Castro and Mr. Lucien McComb, Jr., of readings from the teachings in Spanish, and of music by a non-Bahá’í. The Bahá’ís were able to obtain the use of the room free of charge and have been promised the future use of it also. They feel that it is the best auditorium for their use in San Juan, housed as it is in a building entirely devoted to civic affairs and connected with the cultural society, Ateneo Puertorriqueno.

ST. LOUIS Bahá’ís are conducting a series of fellowship meetings the first Sunday of each month with community singing, recreation, and refreshments. A ten minute talk is given on one of the following: What It Means to Be a Bahá’í in Relation to — Personal Character Building, Contact with Family, Contact with Friends, Contact with Business Associates, Contact with Denominational Churches, Contact with Other Races, and Contact with the World at Large.

Public meetings are held on the Bahá’í principles at the new Bahá’í Library, Musical Arts Building, 549 N. Boyle.

News from Other Lands

Moslems Look to America

A well known Egyptian daily has printed an account of Bahá’í activities in the United States with the subtitle, "Necessity of a Moslem Cultural Center in America to Inform the Americans of the True Moslem Cult." The article, sent by airmail from the paper’s New York correspondent, remarks on the great religious freedom which exists in the United States and on the energy with which American Bahá’ís are making use of this freedom. It comments on the general meetings which Bahá’ís hold in many large cities and particularly on the wide-spread propaganda which Bahá’ís of San Francisco conducted at the time of the San Francisco Conference. The correspondent draws the conclusion that the Moslem world should also take advantage of the religious freedom offered by the United States by building a mosque in Washington and establishing a cultural center "to impart to Americans the truth about the Moslem cult."

The article gives in full "The Bahá’í Peace Program, a statement published by Bahá’ís in many American papers" showing the aim of Bahá’ís to be "to transform all the nations into a spiritual unity . . . ."

and closes with the 10 basic Bahá’í principles.

Thus through a widely circulated newspaper have the Bahá’í teachings been brought to the notice of many Moslems.

India

We learn that the Indian friends inaugurated in January a 4½ Year Teaching Plan to terminate in 1950 on the Centenary of the Martyrdom of the Báb. The goal is the establishment of at least 63 centers in British India, Burma, and the most important Indian states. All dissolved assemblies are to be reestablished and all groups turned into assemblies. They have divided India into 8 zones, naming certain towns in each where work is to be concentrated.

The Indian Bahá’í Youth Committee has been authorized by the N.A.S. to organize the Summer School and supervise the children’s character training classes. Both these activities are at Panchgan, a hill station and health resort. Just three days before the Summer School started plague broke out at Panchgan and caused the committee the greatest anxiety "but by Divine Grace there was a lull in the epidemic for 15 days, exactly the period of the Summer School."

Egypt

Egyptian Bahá’ís from 17 different places in Egypt gathered last summer for their first summer school which was held at a beautiful spot on the eastern bank of the Suez Canal overlooking the Mediterranean.

Mecca

The Persian Bahá'ís sent by the Guardian to Mecca to establish a Bahá'í Center in this stronghold of Islam are being confirmed and blessed by Bahá'u'lláh. They have developed many friendships through trying to be of service to those with whom they are associated, have won the respect of the authorities in Mecca, and have had no opposition from any source. They have a Bahá'í library, named in honor of Mulla 'Ali Bastami, the first Bahá'í martyr in Arabia.

Marian Jack in Bulgaria

A letter from Miss Marian Jack in Sofia, Bulgaria, tells of disaster but also of hopeful signs. One Bahá'í was crushed to death when her bombed house fell on her. Almost all the Bulgarian Esslements were burned when this house was destroyed. At the time of her writing Miss Jack was copying by hand some translations of the Writings a Bulgarian friend had made. Some of the Sofia Bahá'ís have passed on, “one dear man was killed,” and several went away but “interest in the Cause continues in spite of our inability to organize.”

Sweden

Mr. Gustav Sundquist of Stockholm, Sweden, writes of meeting Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh on their recent travels. He is aflame with joy at finding the Truth after a twenty years' search and will do everything he can to bring the knowledge of the Cause to the Swedish people, for, to quote him, “to learn of Bahá'u'lláh is the only thing which can help an unhappy world.” He is translating short extracts from the Writings to distribute, would like to print them, but finds this difficult as the war ruined his business and he has a family to support.

Norway

Miss Schubarth writes from Oslo of corresponding with some who have become interested in her translation of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era. A letter from the Guardian has given her increased courage and joy in the knowledge of his prayers for her teaching and her health. She is partly incapacitated by rheumatism and is using the time to correct translations made years ago.

Our readers will remember that Mrs. Ramíl's town of Kristiansund, Norway, was bombed and burned. The inhabitants are consequently lacking in clothing and would welcome used clothing. Address: Mrs. Krantz-Ramsli, Kristiansund, Norway.

British Isles

Meetings in Hyde Park: The Committee appointed for the purpose has duly commenced to hold meetings on Sunday mornings in Hyde Park. The meetings have been very successful, good crowds listening on each occasion. This is a good method of making the name and the basic teachings of the Faith known to large numbers of people, and it has resulted too in some people coming to the Centre for further information.

Pioneer Settlers at Work: Nottingham and St. Ives are the first places to have pioneer settlers at work under the Six Year Plan by which British Bahá'ís are working towards the goal of nineteen assemblies distributed among the different countries of the British Isles by 1950.

Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh in London: The British community had the great pleasure recently to receive a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh of New York, who came over here on business. They visited Bahá'í communities and friends in various parts of the country. In London Mrs. Mottahedeh spoke at two well-attended meetings, one at the Bahá'í Centre. The other meeting was held in a private cinema which was rented. The film of the American Centenary Convention meetings, lent by Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh, was shown, and Mrs. Mottahedeh spoke on the activities of the Faith on the American Continent.

Brief Notes

The British N.S.A. has a collection, used for exhibition, of translations in 38 different languages of Dr. Esslemont’s book. Following the Guardian’s advice, the Australian N.S.A. has decided to conduct for the present only one summer school. This was held December 28, 1945, to January 6, 1946, at “Bolton Place,” Yerrinbool, N.S.W.

The British Bahá'í Convention will be held April 27, 28.

Australian and New Zealand Bahá'ís will hold their Convention May 11 to May 19 in Sydney. This time (during the school holidays) was chosen as being the most convenient.

“Heed Not Your Weaknesses”

O my beloved friends! You are the bearers of the name of God in this Day. You have been chosen as the repositories of His mystery. It behooves each one of you to manifest the attributes of God, and to exemplify by your deeds and words the signs of His righteousness, His power and glory. The very members of your body must bear witness to the loveliness of your purpose, the integrity of your life, the reality of your faith, and the exalted character of your devotion. . . . Heed not your weaknesses and frailty; fix your gaze upon the invincible power of the Lord, your God, the Almighty. Has He not enabled Moses, whose staff was His only companion, to vanquish Pharaoh and his hosts? Has He not established the ascendancy of Jesus, poor and lowly as He was in the eyes of men, over the combined forces of the Jewish people? Has He not subjected the barbarous and militant tribes of Arabia to the holy and transforming discipline of Muhammad, His Prophet? Arise in His name, put your trust wholly in Him, and be assured of ultimate victory.

The Báb
From His Address to the Letters of the Living.

Public opinion and the masses, as well as the establishment of the newly fledged local Assemblies throughout Latin America on an unassailable basis, and the dissemination of Bahá’í literature among its people, demand, whatever the nature of the supplementary responsibilities that will have to be assumed in the years to come, the closest attention on the part of the entire body of the American believers, and must continue to be regarded as the fundamental issues facing their national representatives. The exploits immortalizing the first stage of the Divine Plan, however glorious their record, have yet to yield their noblest fruits. Efforts unremitting, systematic, and continent-wide in their scope, can alone garner a harvest worthy of the high confidence placed in them by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. May they prove themselves increasingly worthy of so high a privilege, so glorious a task.

Message From the Guardian

“Efforts Unremitting”

Dear and valued co-workers:

The assistance extended by the American Bahá’í Community to the long-suffering German believers is a further evidence of their readiness, so abundantly demonstrated in the past, to champion the interests, and to rehabilitate the institutions of their sister communities throughout the Bahá’í world. This support, so generously extended, so consistently and faithfully offered by the rank and file of the American believers, and particularly by their elected national representatives, is but a subsidiary aspect of the tremendous undertakings which, in both the North and South American continents, the standard bearers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh have initiated and developed, for the promotion of its interests, during the concluding decades of the first Bahá’í century.

The two-fold task which they have so nobly undertaken—the proclamation of the Faith in the North American continent and the consolidation of its nascent institutions in Latin America—must, whatever plan is devised in the coming years for the furtherance of their world-wide mission—be relentlessly prosecuted. That further responsibilities, of a momentous character, will have to be superimposed on the stalwart prosecutors of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Divine Plan, as they gird up their loins to carry a stage further their historic labors in obedience to His wishes, no one can for a moment doubt. As the field of their activities, ranging over entire continents, grows in scope and in importance, the aims and purposes associated with the first stage of their glorious mission must, in no wise, be either neglected or forgotten. The steady multiplication of groups and of Spiritual Assemblies throughout the States of the great American Republic, the continual broadcasting of the Divine Message to the leaders of public opinion and the masses, as well as the establishment of the newly fledged local Assemblies throughout Latin America on an unassailable basis, and the dissemination of Bahá’í literature among its people, demand, whatever the nature of the supplementary responsibilities that will have to be assumed in the years to come, the closest attention on the part of the entire body of the American believers, and must continue to be regarded as the fundamental issues facing their national representatives. The exploits immortalizing the first stage of the Divine Plan, however glorious their record, have yet to yield their noblest fruits. Efforts unremitting, systematic, and continent-wide in their scope, can alone garner a harvest worthy of the high confidence placed in them by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. May they prove themselves increasingly worthy of so high a privilege, so glorious a task.

“Fundamental Issues”

Beloved Friends:

In a world beset by differences of opinion and policy, the followers of Bahá’u’lláh may well appreciate their blessing in the true union which the Guardian maintains for the entire Bahá’í community. Most grievous of all confusions are those which arise when persons supporting the same general truths disagree on how those ideals should be served.

As we turn to the message Shoghi Effendi has given us in his letter of March 25, we note the emphasis he lays on the “fundamental issues” we are to pursue with complete determination and resolve during years to come. As we work in those two fields, “the proclamation of the Faith in the North American continent and the consolidation of its nascent institutions in Latin America,” we shall remain under the light of guidance, and receive the reinforcement of supernal Power.
In that same letter there is a passage written by the Guardian through his secretary which goes to the very heart of our individual and collective spiritual problems:

"The believers, to better understand their own internal condition, should realize that the forces of darkness in the world are so prevalent and strong that their morbid and turbulent influence is felt by all. They should therefore consciously strive to be more loving, more united, more dedicated and prayerful than ever before, in order to fight against the atmosphere of present-day society which is unloving, disunited, careless of right and wrong, and heedless of God."

An event of great historical moment for the Faith has been reported to us by cable from John Eichenauer in Germany: that a two-day Convention of German Baha’is has been held, with nineteen delegates and the institution of the National Spiritual Assembly has been recreated by the election of nine members. Thus the irresistible power of the Faith has asserted itself under most dramatic circumstances. We rejoice in this notable strengthening of the pillars of the new world order, and we pray for the mighty confirmation of our brothers and sisters in Germany and in all countries overrun by war.

In our recent general letter on the subject of international Baha’i relief we listed the address of Sr. Perfecto Tabora in Manila. We now learn that Sr. Tabora has moved, the new address being 22 Halum Street, Mesa Heights, Quezon City, P. I.

The Assemblies are reminded that Annual reports of the local activities to April 21, 1946, will be most welcome, and the information shared as fully as possible with the friends in Baha’i News.

Faithfully yours,

Public Meetings Campaign

The public meetings in Brooklyn, Portland, Detroit, and Chicago rounded out the campaign conducted by the National Spiritual Assembly and inaugurated in Toronto last October. We are printing below reports of three of these final meetings. No official news has come from Detroit, but we understand that there was a large attendance at the meeting there in spite of the transit strike which was called just at that time.

Brooklyn

The largest Bahá’í gathering yet to be held in Brooklyn was that of March 25, 1946, sponsored by the National Public Meetings Committee. Between 700 and 800 people, many of them uninformed about the Faith, thronged to the dignified and impressive Brooklyn Academy of Music to hear Miss Hilda Yen speak on “Peace Plans Compared” and Mr. Masjid Vakil in Shiráz where the Bab silenced His enemies.

Philip Sprague presided. Musical selections were presented by Walter Oltzki of the Metropolitan Opera, Philippa Schuyler, gifted 14-year-old pianist and composer, and the Gerard Duo Quartet, conducted by Gerard Altenaar of the Royal Conservatory of Holland.

Cards requesting further information about the Faith and notices of future meetings were signed by more than 110 persons.

Particulars about those who participated in the meeting and the topics presented, Bahá’í quotations, the address of the New York center, etc., appeared on six pages of the attractive “Program and Magazine of the Brooklyn Academy of Music”

—NEW YORK SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Portland

On March 28, the Portland Baha’i community held its Public Meeting of the National Campaign in the Neighbors of Woodcraft auditorium, with approximately 350 people attending. Mrs. Helen Bishop spoke on “The Price of World Peace Is World Religion,” and held throughout her address the complete and enthusiastic attention of her audience. Mr. Robert L. McCoy, formerly soloist with the Washington, D. C., Symphony, sang two selections before and after the address.
Large bouquets of beautiful mixed flowers were used effectively as decoration.

Both the Oregonian and the Oregon Journal advertised the meeting extensively, and two radio transcript broadcasts aroused marked interest. Posters, distributed throughout Portland and neighboring Vancouver, paid well for the time and effort expended.

The Portland community is especially enthusiastic concerning the follow-up work done by Mrs. Bishop. On April 1, at the regular weekly meeting, she spoke to an audience of sixty people; on April 8, she again addressed the meeting. Both audiences included people who had been interested by her able and profound explanation of the Message. On several occasions Mrs. Bishop attended fireside meetings and dinners to which she was invited to explain the Cause. She also addressed a group of sixty-five persons on April 5 in Corvallis, Oregon.

This community is greatly inspired by the outcome of the Public Meeting and all the follow-ups. To our minds, the activity has been highly successful in that the Message has reached many people, and in a most profound way.

Chicago

A most successful meeting was held in Chicago in the beautiful Ballroom of the Continental Hotel April 11th. This was the last of a series of eleven nation-wide meetings arranged by the Public Meetings Committee. It was a beautiful occasion.

The splendid and effective publicity prepared by the Baha’i News Service, the personal efforts of the Chicago believers, and the full cooperation of adjacent Baha’i communities within a radius of two hundred miles resulted in an audience of nearly a thousand interested people, many of whom heard of the Baha’i Faith for the first time.

Mr. Albert Windust, who always radiates a genial, charming friendliness, acted as Chairman. Miss Carol Smith of Hollywood, Illinois, entertained the gathering with two beautifully rendered solos. The main part of the program was then entered upon. The speakers, Marzieh Nabil Gail and Kenneth Christian presented the subject of the evening—"The Price of World Peace Is World Religion" in a scholarly fashion. The non-Baha’i’s present could not help but be impressed with the tremendous potentialities for Peace embodied within the Baha’i Faith. Meetings of this type are far reaching in their deepening effect on the public in its understanding of the fundamental principles of the spiritual program inaugurated by Baha’u’llah for this day.

Inter-America News

An English translation has just been received of a special number of the Spanish Baha’ Bulletin, which is devoted to a description of the first Latin-American Baha’i Conference held in Panama City, January 21-25, under the auspices of the Baha’i International School at Colorado Springs and of the Inter-America Committee.

A few excerpts from this report will indicate the warmth of spiritual unity in the Faith of Baha’u’llah experienced alike by the Latin believers from seven Central and South American countries and the six North American pioneers who attended the Conference.

"The Conference was a great success, exceeding our highest hopes. A marvelous spirit of brotherhood, happiness and cooperation permeated all the meetings and activities, and everybody took his part in perfect coordination with the others... Every morning there were informal teaching sessions and every evening a public lecture was held. "The Guardian wrote that to Panama would fall the honor of holding the first Baha’i Latin-American Conference, which would be followed by many others."

Morning sessions were given to the study of selections from God Passes By, and to round table discussions on the Administrative Order and on teaching problems in Latin America. At one of these sessions the characteristics of a Baha’i teacher were described as, "... profound faith, deep impersonal love for all alike, tact, eagerness to listen with understanding to the viewpoint of the student and his problems, capacity to present the Cause of God in such a way that he can easily understand it and apply it to his own life, great patience, perseverance, humility, living the Baha’i life, complete obedience to Baha’i Administration, generosity, courage, and the capacity to find in every disaster nothing but a great opportunity to serve."

Whether from distant Chile or from nearby countries, all who came, native believers as well as pioneers, were given parts by the Conference Committee appointed by the Spiritual Assembly of Panama City, either as leaders of discussions or as speakers in public meetings or over the radio. The Smaller Assemblies

During the past month the focus of teaching activity has been the preservation of the status of the smaller Assemblies by reinforcing their ranks and supplying teaching help to provide an increase of membership before April 21st. Especially intensive teaching has been going forward in Moncton, N.B., and Halifax, N.S., where Mrs. Ruth Moffett, Mrs. Annie Romer and Mrs. Beulah Proctor have been bending every effort to attract and confirm believers. A recent report advises that Moncton has added Miss Ann McLean to its rolls and Halifax has a study class of from 10 to 15 to be conducted by Mrs. Romer. Plans have been made to provide return visits by Mrs. Ruth Moffett to both Charlottetown and to Moncton for additional help during April.

The Louisville, Ky., community has also received teaching help in March and April, as well as the promise of further reinforcements very soon. Mrs. Marion Little spent a week early in March making new contacts and arranging for a public meeting. In order to secure a suitable meeting place Mrs. Little provided suppers to an audience of 27 at one of the local hotels. Mrs. Marguerite Ulrich spent the first week of April endeavoring to bring the attracted ones closer, and early in May Dr. Edris Rice-Wray plans to visit Louisville to give them still further help.

A letter from the secretary of the Greenville, S. C. LSA comments that "having prayed for help in the teaching work, we have received a deluge." A project for Greenville provided the teaching help of Mrs. Terah Smith for two weeks, and during that period Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Blum and Mr. and Mrs. William DeForge arrived there. A symposium was immediately arranged in order to utilize all the available talent.

Recent Events

The itinerant teachers, Mr. Mason Remey and Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala, have now returned home from their teaching tours in South America. They are expected to be present at the Convention and to relate some of their experiences.

En route to Buenos Aires, Shirley Ward has spent several weeks in Río de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, Brazil. Excellent contacts have been made in both cities. Owing to most energetic teaching on the part of our pioneers in Río, it is fully expected that a Spiritual Assembly will be elected there on April 21.

Managua, Nicaragua, now has twice the number of believers required for electing a Spiritual Assembly; Valparaiso, Chile, will also have its first Spiritual Assembly this year, and in Puntarenas, Costa Rica, a Spiritual Assembly will be re-established. A number of Bahá’í groups have been organized throughout Latin America as a result of extension teaching during this and former years.

After April 21 Marcia Steward will leave Valparaiso for Central America where she will assist in the consolidation of Assemblies and in public teaching in the countries north of Panama. Hascel Cornbleth has left Los Angeles to pioneer in Quito, Ecuador.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker have recently returned home after visiting Assemblies in Caracas, Venezuela; Kingston, Jamaica; and Havana, Cuba. Louise Baker is remaining in Caracas until after the election. However, she plans to attend the Convention.

Artemus Lamb returned to the United States on personal business in the early spring, but will leave directly after attending the Convention in Wilmette, to continue his teaching work in Punta Arenas, Chile.

Regional Conference

Forty Bahá’ís attended a Regional Conference and public meeting held in Wilmington, Del., on March 9th to aid and stimulate local teaching efforts. The subject of the meeting was "The Bahá’í Faith" and the speakers included Miss Jessie Revell, Miss Edith Segen and Mr. Stuart Sims.

Circuits

A circuit arranged by the New York RTC provided the teaching assistance of Miss Julia Goldman to the Assemblies of Syracuse, Geneva, Rochester, and Buffalo, New York.

In connection with a business trip, Mr. Alvin Blum visited the communities of Oklahoma City, Okla., Topeka, Kansas, Omaha, Neb., Kansas City, and Independence, Missouri.

Settlers

To enable the Butte, Montana, Assembly to maintain its status, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McAllister of Seattle have settled there. Mr. McAllister became enrolled as a Bahá’í on Naw-Rúz and early in April left for Butte, so the continuance of this Assembly is assured.

Mrs. Florence Cox, formerly a pioneer in Regina and Charlotte-town, moved to Laramie, Wyo., early in March and is now established in an apartment which "is the library and class room for the Bahá’ís." A class is at present underway through which Mrs. Cox hopes "will increase for we had an attendance of 9 the first evening and 10 the second."

Groups

Regional Committees have also been working with many of the larger groups to prepare them for Assembly status on April 21st as well as with disbanded Assemblies ready to become reconstituted on that date.

National Campaign

The follow-up teaching activities, in the key cities where the meetings of the National Campaign have been held, are going forward through the help of outside speakers. In Portland, Ore., Mrs. Helen Bishop, who was speaker for the large public meeting held there, spent several weeks assisting with the follow-up teaching activities.

Mr. John Inglis and Mr. Robert Durr of Birmingham, Alabama, were speakers for meetings arranged to follow-up the National Campaign meeting held in New Orleans, stopping over in Jackson enroute.
To provide a follow-up speaker for Atlanta, Ga., a circuit was developed for Mr. Philip Marangella which included Birmingham, Greenville, Columbia, Augusta and Mobile, Alabama.

Mr. Monroe Ioas spent three days assisting Denver in its plans to continue the interest aroused during the National Campaign meeting, and visits were also made to Laramie, Wyo., and Colorado Springs, Colo. Mr. Ioas also assisted with a meeting in Detroit on April 7th, followed by Mrs. Margery McCormick, who remained from April 13th to 17th assisting the community in its follow-up activities. Mr. John Roberts of Toronto is scheduled to speak for a meeting to be held in Detroit May 5th.

A series of four meetings has been arranged to follow the large public meeting held in Chicago, beginning with Mr. Horace Holley, speaking on "Religion for the Modern World" April 16th; Mrs. Orcella Rexford on "Iran's Contribution to World Culture" with sound films of Iran April 23rd; Mr. Philip Marangella, whose subject is, "And His Is the Power and Glory" April 30th; and Mrs. Helen Bishop, closing the series May 7th with a talk on "The Goal of the Twentieth Century."

... an intensification of effort is imperatively required, aiming at a bolder proclamation of the verities of a God-given Faith, at a systematic and continent-wide dissemination of its authentic literature, at a closer contact with the masses as well as the leaders of public thought, at a further consolidation and multiplication of the administrative centers scattered throughout the new world and, above all, at a more convincing revelation of Bahá’í love, unity, solidarity and self-sacrifice which alone can hasten the consummation of the preliminary undertakings required to terminate the period of transition." Local Communities

Urbana Public Meeting

Inspired by the success of the recent meetings held in large cities under the auspices of the National Public Meetings Committee, the Spiritual Assembly of Urbana arranged a meeting with Miss Hilda Yen as speaker on March 29th. The meeting was held in one of the lecture rooms of the University of Illinois. Permission to use the room was obtained by the Bahá’í Youth Group, an organization registered with the University authorities and headed by two active young Bahá’ís, Mr. Farhang Javid and Miss Margaret Swengel.

600 folders with a very attractive picture of Miss Yen and a short account of her various and vivid experiences and rare qualifications as a speaker were used as posters on University bulletin boards and for mailing to individuals. Her lecture also obtained good publicity in the three daily papers of Urbana and Champaign and through two spot announcements on the radio.

The lecture room, accommodating nearly 300 people, was filled to capacity with a representative audience containing leaders of thought in the community as well as many students, including a number of young Chinese men and women. Miss Yen’s subject was “Peace Plans Compared.” Although she spoke longer than is the custom at the University, she held the enthusiastic attention of her audience. Miss Swengel, as chairman, emphasized the in Edmonton, a reading from The Gleamings, music by a non-Bahá’í guest, and a talk by Mrs. E. J. Rimek, beginning with an explanation of the meaning and origin of Naw-Rúz and concluding with world unity. The talk was followed by a general discussion and refreshments. All the guests—Christian, Muslim, and Bahá’í—expressed great pleasure at being present.

“It was a beautiful warm spring night, clear, blue and star-spangled, just the kind of night for New Year’s Eve, herald of the birth of a New Year.”

Race Unity in Miami
The Miami, Florida, Bahá’í Community held a race unity lecture in Liberty Square Auditorium on March 16th when Mrs. Joy Earl was the speaker. Printed announcements were distributed, and, although there was little time for advance publicity, sixty-five attended. The race unity committee has sponsored bi-monthly meetings alternately in the white and in the colored districts, and the community maintains a public meeting place where both races may meet together. Every nineteen days the senior youth group of Miami mimeographs a page of news called “Scratches and Scribbles.”

Other Local Activities
A public speaking class is sponsored by the Chicago assembly. Professor Mills of Northwestern University was engaged to present a series of ten classes. Aside from the regular public and fireside meetings, the Chicago youth hold monthly all day study classes for the declared youth of the area.

Letters from Bahá’ís in Germany
The following are summaries of letters from Germany which relate some of the important events for the Cause in that country and show in some detail what happened in the German Bahá’í communities between May and September, 1945.

From Marta Weiss of Esslingen, August, 1945:

“The first general meeting of German Bahá’ís in 8 years took place May 23, 1945, when “21 true souls” came together at the Bahá’í Home on the hill overlooking Esslingen. John Eichenauer, a Bahá’í in the U. S. Army, was present bringing love and greetings from the Ameri- can friends. “One had the feeling that all the friends were with us in their prayers. Our thoughts were of the entire globe, but mostly particularly of Haifa.” John brought them a copy of World Order containing a report of the 100th Anniversary Celebration in Haifa, also a copy of God Passes By.

From John Eichenauer, Bad Cannstatt, Germany, August 28, 1945:

“Dearly beloved Bahá’ís of America! If you could have been here today, you would have felt yourselves carried into the realms of paradise.

The Bahá’ís of Stuttgart and Esslingen gathered at the Bahá’í Home on the hill overlooking Esslingen and the verdant Neckar valley...

“That our Division hovered around in this area had something to do with Divine intervention, not because of myself, but in order that some Bahá’ís could convey to these friends the greetings from the Bahá’í world without, from which they have been deprived for about eight years, long, hungry, terror-filled years. We were seated in the lecture hall for lunch, with quotations from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá hanging from the walls. From there I went to an adjoining room to play the organ. How my heart warmed as the Bahá’í children gathered around. It seems almost unbelievable that out of all this destruction, disorder and chaos, the foundations of that World Civilization of Bahá’u’lláh have emerged well-anchored, that the fire and zeal of the believers has remained unflamed, and that their plans for the spreading of the Faith in the coming months will make the Bahá’í world sit up and take notice.

“As the afternoon wore on Bahá’ís came in droves from Stuttgart and Esslingen, aged and infant, drawn by that irresistible Power of the Cause, that indescribable happiness that pervades every Bahá’í meeting. Here are Friedrich and Annamarie Schweizer, two pillars of the Cause; there is Paul Gollmer, the National Secretary, who risked so much to preserve Bahá’í relics; there are his two daughters, Lilo and Agnes, who both lost their husbands in the war; not far away is Herr Richter of Leipzig, who was on the Russian front, found his way to Denmark, was finally discharged this month and is now looking for his wife and child from one town to the next... You are particularly drawn to the youth, Valtrout Kuebler, Hildegard Muller, Peter Rommel and many others. Then somebody asks you, ‘Did you hear from Mason Remey?’ ‘Did you hear Helen Bishop?’ ‘Did you hear from my brother, who is a prisoner of war in Colorado or Missouri or New York?’ You say that literature is on the way and only hope that there are plenty of pamphlets in German for these spiritual beavers to disseminate. Well do I remember my embarrassment on May 22 in the home of Anna Köstlin when a Bahá’í asked me how many Bahá’ís in America and I could offer no reply when he said, ‘5,000 is not very many... for America.' If the American believers could only be transported into this environment, realize the hardship and privation that these exemplary souls have undergone and are still undergoing to a lesser degree, they would rise up as a powerful, spiritual radio and television transmitting station to proclaim with undaunted fervor the Message of the Lord of Hosts. Have you ever been seated in your homes reading your Baha'i books and had fear clutch at your heart because you thought the shuffle of feet outside your apartment was some Gestapo agent coming to check up on your activities? Did you ever have to hide your pictures of 'Abdu'l-Baha because you didn't want them confiscated or desecrated? How long must our beloved Guardian spend his energy directing appeals to the outstanding American believers who fulfill the Seven Year Plan by the skin of their teeth, who pass up so many opportunities to share the Message with their fellowmen that only by the Grace of God is the Instrument of the Cause left in our hands, who have to be pleaded to on bended knees in order to complete a budget that should be many times as large for the tremendous task we have before us.

"As these thoughts race through your mind the 75 some odd believers are gathering in the garden for a picture; you hope it will have a galvanizing effect on the American community. Now they are gathering again in the lecture hall. Hugo has just read a prayer, and now Paul Gollmer is reading from 'Sun of Truth,' a Tablet of 'Abdu'l-Baha. The meeting over, Annamarie Schweizer asks you to her Friday evening study class. Dr. Koller mentions her Monday evening class, you realize the need of getting the youth together, you wish you had more time to give to the Cause... Then, when you feel that you could go on living in this exalted atmosphere forever, you are reminded of the end of the day. You never have felt the warmth that you feel when you shake the hand of each believer and embrace and kiss them and whisper 'auf Wiedersheen, Allah-u-'Abha'. And so you leave this spot of Paradise and wind your way back to Cannstatt, eager to share your joy with your Bahá'í brother (Calvin Wilder), who, as early as May 6, without any address whatsoever, helped you search for the Bahá'ís in the spiritual heart of Germany.

From John Eichenauer, Bad Cannstatt (near Stuttgart), Germany, to N.S.A. of U.S. and Canada, August, 1945:

"Bahá'í of Wilmette, Calvin Wilder and self found 100 Bahá'ís in the Stuttgart, Eslingen, Goppingen, Geisingen area." (As reported in the November News, John obtained written authorization for Bahá'í meetings in Stuttgart from Captain Carvel Busey, Religion and Education Officer of the Stuttgart Military Government Detachment.) John had two interviews with Captain Busey which proved helpful to the Cause. At the second meeting Herr Gollmer, Chairman of the Stuttgart Assembly, and Dr. Adelheid Koller, another member, were present. Herr Gollmer had filled out the political questionnaire which the Military Government requires. This questionnaire when completed reveals one's political history for the past ten years, especially as to whether one had joined the Nazi party. (No one absolutely had to join it.) He was given other forms for the other members of the Stuttgart L.S.A. to fill out. Herr Gollmer showed Captain Busey copies of correspondence between the N.S.A. of the U.S. and Canada and Himmler concerning suspension of German Bahá'í activities.

"Capt. Busey said that each Local Assembly would have to apply for authorization and that later on the National Assembly could apply for authorization at USFET in Frankfort. Eventually the American National Assembly can present the case of all the Bahá'ís in Germany and Austria before the Four Power Control Commission in Berlin.

"The shipping date of our division..."
is uncertain. I am trying to get into Mil. Gov't. or UNRRA in order to remain in Germany for 6 months or a year and help bring the Bahá'ís of Europe together."

From Mara V. Edmonstone, Publicity Chairman of the Miami Bahá'í Assembly, October, 1945:

"As soon as hostilities ended Bruce Davison got busy in Frankfurt, where he was stationed. He advertised for Bahá'ís and received four answers. Within a week they all met. Among them is Mrs. Horn, who formerly lived in the United States. She was sent to Frankfurt by the Guardian. The Frankfurt Bahá'ís began holding regular meetings. They are also holding study classes."

From John Eichenauer and Bruce Davison, Hedderheim, Frankfurt, Sept. 27, 1945:

"To National Spiritual Assembly, Wilmette, Ill."

"We are planning teaching activities for American Zone, publication of literature, radio and press publicity and coordination with Bahá'í communities in Europe.

"This evening we are observing the Feast with the Frankfurt Bahá'ís."

In Stuttgart and Esslingen, 7 weekly meetings and study classes are being held.

Vienna

Mrs. J. R. Bolles of New York City has received a letter from Fr. Pollinger of Vienna in which he says "nearly all of us survived those darkest years except the Jewish friends, of whose fate we scarcely can get a glimpse or trace." He speaks also of having "studied Bahá'í works in the last silent years, the 'Book of Certitude,' 'Nabil's Narrative,' prayers, etc., which I never before had opportunity to read thoroughly." He will "try to translate the words of our beloved Guardian into German and convey your loving letter to all the friends here."

Mr. Pollinger's address is Vienna II. 2. F. Bocklinstrasse 4/15.

First Ukrainian Bahá'í

In July, 1938, at the request of Lidia Zamenhof, a Russian translation of the Kitáb-i-Iqán was sent from the International Bahá'í Bureau at Geneva, Switzerland, to Mrs. Vasyl Dorosenko, a Ukrainian living in Eastern Poland. A correspondence ensued between Mrs. Lynch of the Bureau and Mr. Dorosenko, who soon declared himself a believer.

Mr. Dorosenko was a scholar, for many years engaged in education, first as teacher and then as inspector, but by 1938 had retired and was living in the country near Kremenetz. He was an Esperantist and a deeply religious seeker, and had investigated many religious and philosophical movements, but had not joined any. He belonged to a group of seekers associated with the Theosophical group in Kremenetz. He read "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era" in Esperanto and explained the contents to the group of seekers, who received his message gladly. Of this book he wrote "It has become my daily reading, I cannot do without it. With it I have health, wealth and happiness."

With the Guardian's approval he began to translate this book into Ukrainian. He shared the Message with more and more people. He wrote that they appreciated especially the "Hidden Words" in Russian and the prayers, which were sent them by Miss Zamenhof.

Early in 1939 Miss Zamenhof visited this group in Kremenetz and gave four talks on the Cause before the Theosophical Group and the Seekers and left them a typewritten copy of "Some Answered Questions" in Esperanto.

Soon after, Mr. Dorosenko was taken ill. He was still in bed when he wrote his last letter to Mrs. Lynch, and it has not been possible to find out what happened to him later because a few months afterwards Eastern Poland became again Russian territory and all communication ceased.

Sweden

A letter from Mr. Sundquist of Stockholm reports the death of Mrs. Palmgren in the autumn of 1944. This leaves Mr. Sundquist, as far as we know, the only Bahá'í in Sweden. He has distributed a thousand pamphlets giving an introduction to the Bahá'í Faith and has translated "Bahá'u'lláh and His Message," but cannot afford to have it printed. He has received many inquiries about the Faith and writes that it is glorious to work for it. Mrs. Palmgren had translated "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era" and it has been printed, Mr. Sundquist's address is, Brankyrkagatan 36, Stockholm, Sweden.

This news from Sweden has come to us from Mrs. J. R. Bolles, to whom we are often indebted for news from Europe. At the request of the Guardian Mrs. Bolles has visited the Bahá'ís in several European countries and carries on correspondence with them, thus rendering a beautiful and valuable service to our European brothers and sisters and to us.

India

The Bombay friends have their own structure for a Haqíqátu'l-Quds. It is a five storied structure and it is hoped that its occupation will be a great step forward in the activities of the Bombay friends.

BAHÁ'Í NEWS

NO. 184 JUNE, 1946 YEAR 103 BAHÁ'Í ERA

“The First Choice”

Every man of insight will, in this day, readily admit that the counsels which the Pen of this wronged One hath revealed constitute the supreme animating power for the advancement of the world and the exaltation of its peoples. Arise, O people, and, by the power of God's might, resolve to gain the victory over your own selves, that haply the whole earth may be freed and sanctified from its servitude to the gods of its idle fancies—gods that have inflicted such loss upon, and are responsible for the misery of, their wretched worshippers. These idols form the obstacle that impeded man in his efforts to advance in the path of perfection. We cherish the hope that the Hand of Divine power may lend its assistance to mankind, and deliver it from its state of grievous abasement.

O people of God! Do not busy yourselves in your own concerns; let your thoughts be fixed upon that which will rehabilitate the fortunes of mankind and sanctify the hearts and souls of men. This can best be achieved through pure and holy deeds, through a virtuous life and a godly behavior. Valiant acts will insure the triumph of this Cause, and a saintly character will reinforce its power. Cleave unto righteousness, O people of Bahá! This, verily, is the commandment which this wronged One hath given unto you, and the first choice of His unreserved Will for every one of you.

BAHÁ’U’LLÁH

Faith to the masses. The second objective is completion of the interior ornamentation of the holiest House of Worship in the Bahá’í world designed to coincide with the fiftieth anniversary of the inception of this historic enterprise. The third objective is the initiation of systematic teaching activity in war-torn, spiritually famished European continent, cradle of world-famed civilizations, twice-blessed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s visits, whose rulers Bahá’u’lláh specifically and collectively addressed, aiming at establishment of Assemblies in the Iberian Peninsula, the Low Countries, the Scandinavian states, and Italy. No effort is too great for community belonging to the continent whose rulers Bahá’u’lláh addressed in the Most Holy Book, whose members were invested with spiritual primacy by 'Abdu'l-Bahá and named by Him apostles of His Father, whose country was the first western nation to respond to the Divine Message and deemed worthy to be first to build the Tabernacle of the Most Great Peace, whose administrators evolved the pattern of the embryonic world order, consummated the first stage of the Divine Plan, and whose elevation to the throne of everlasting dominion the Center of the Covenant confidently anticipated as the resistless impulse propelling the Plan accelerates, the American Community

To the Convention

Hail with joyous heart the delegates of the American Bahá’í Community assembled beneath the dome of the Mother Temple of the West in momentous Convention of the first year of peace. The souls are uplifted in thanksgiving for the protection vouchsafed by Providence to the preeminent community of the Bahá’í world enabling its members to consummate, despite the tribulations of a world-convolving conflict, the first stage of 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s Plan. The Campaign culminating the Centenary of the inauguration of the Bahá’í Era completed sixteen months ere the appointed time the exterior ornamentation of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár, laid the basis of the administrative order in every virgin state and province of the North American Continent, almost doubled the Assemblies established since the inception of the Faith, established Assemblies in fourteen republics of Latin America, constituted active groups in remaining republics, swelled to sixty the sovereign states within the pale of the Faith.

The two-year respite, well-earned after the expenditure of such a colossal effort, covering such a temendous range, during so dark a period, is now ended. The prosecutors of the Plan who in the course of six war-ridden years achieved such prodigies of service in the Western Hemisphere from Alaska to Maganlanes are now collectively summoned to assume in the course of the peaceful years ahead still weightier responsibilities for the opening decade of the Second Century. The time is ripe, events are pressing, Hosts on high are sounding the signal for inauguration of second Seven Year Plan designed to culminate first Centennial of the year nine marking the mystic birth of Bahá’u’lláh’s prophetic mission in Shíyá-Chál at Tihrán.

A two-fold responsibility urgently calls the vanguard of the dawn-breakers of Bahá’u’lláh’s Order, torch-bearers of world civilization, executors of 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s mandate, to arise and simultaneously bring to fruition the tasks already undertaken and launch fresh enterprises beyond the borders of the Western Hemisphere.

The first objective of the new Plan is consolidation of victories already won throughout the Americas, involving multiplication of Bahá’í centers, bolder proclamation of the must rise to new levels of potency in response to the divine mandate, scale loftier heights of heroism, insure fuller participation of the rank and file of members, and closer collaboration with the agencies designed to insure attainment of the fourfold objectives, and evince greater acuity in tearing down the barriers in its path.

Upon the success of the second Seven Year Plan depends the launching, after a respite of three brief years, of a yet more momentous third Seven Year Plan which, when consummated through the establishment of the structure of the administrative order in the remaining sovereign states and chief dependencies of the entire globe, must culminate in and be befittingly commemorated through world-wide celebrations marking the Centennial of the formal assumption by Bahá'u'lláh of the Prophetic Office associated with Daniel's prophecy and the world triumph of the Bahá'í revelation and signaling the termination of the initial epoch in the evolution of the Plan whose mysterious, resistance processes must continue to shed ever-increasing lustre on successive generations of both the Formative and Golden Ages of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

Pledging ten thousand dollars as my initial contribution for the furtherance of the manifold purposes of a glorious crusade surpassing every enterprise undertaken by the followers of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in the course of the first Bahá'í century.

(signed) Siocan

From his Letter of March 25th

The following passages are from letter dated March 25, 1946, written through his secretary:

He wants the American friends to help their destitute brothers and sisters in Europe and Asia all they can. This includes sending food and clothing when feasible.

The chart you sent him on the cable that the project for a Bahá'í Radio Station can not be carried out at present; he considers that such a station would be a very great asset to the Cause, not only as a teaching medium and a wonderful form of publicity, but also as an enhancement of its prestige. He feels your Assembly should not drop the matter but go on investigating ways to make such a project materialize as soon as possible.

National Spiritual Assembly

"Your First Order of Business"

Beloved Friends:

The members of the newly elected National Spiritual Assembly send greeting to the American Bahá'ís.

The Guardian's message addressed to the Convention inaugurates a second Seven Year Plan whose four objectives are to carry the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh far along on the path of world victory. Our tasks are tremendous, requiring the consecrated effort and sacrifice of every single believer, and the spiritual reinforcement poured forth upon the unified body of the followers of Bahá'u'lláh can alone assure our full measure of success.

A copy of that message appears above, and your help is requested in sharing it with the local community or with the believers of the regional area through the regional bulletin.

The meetings of the National Assembly were maintained through four days following the Convention in order to cope with the four great objectives set up by Shoghi Effendi, prepare plans commensurate with the immensity of the work, appoint the committees, and define the financial requirements of the campaign in its first year.

The results of that study have been embodied in a special bulletin and issued to every individual believer of North America. When the bulletins are received you are urged to make their contents your first order of business, so that by discussion and consultation the Guardian's objectives may be thoroughly grasped, the plans and methods involving the annual Bahá'í budget and committee functions be clearly understood, and the entire American Bahá'í community be aroused to instant and whole-hearted action.

Not one single Bahá'í can be spared in this, our supreme responsibility.

The way to victory has been disclosed, and we can only acquire worthiness to celebrate the Centenary of "the year nine marking the mystical Birth of Bahá'u'lláh's prophetic mission in Siyáh-Chál at Tihrán."

Reaching the masses with the message at this time is of the greatest importance. More initiative should be shown by all the Bahá'ís, and encouraged by the NSA and local Spiritual Assemblies.

Pending the discussion of the definite plan, the local and regional teaching work must be reinvigorated, and the needs of the new national budget assured of hearty support. As the Guardian states, the time of respite is over, and every passing day must yield its full fruit.

The incoming Assembly has organized as follows: Mrs. Dorothy Beecher Baker, Chairman; Mr. Paul Haney, Vice-Chairman; Mr. Horace Holley, Secretary; Miss Edna M. True, Recording Secretary; Mr. Philip G. Sprague, Treasurer; Miss Elsie Austin, Mrs. Amelia E. Collins, Mr. George O. Latimer, Mr. William Kenneth Christian.

Faithfully yours,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Telegram to the President
The National Spiritual Assembly on May 10 sent the following telegram to the President, White House, Washington, D. C., in order to bring to the official attention of the government the Baha'i teachings on the subject of industrial justice.

"On behalf American members of the Baha'i Faith we respectfully affirm the right and duty of government to intervene in industrial disputes affecting paramount interests of general public. We believe there can be no social order in this new era without legislation and court procedure upholding conceptions of justice based upon interdependence and partnership of all classes and their equal responsibility before the law. We appeal for completely representative and non-partisan handling by government of issues which go to roots of our civilization, transcend scope of technical economics, and involve essential questions of social philosophy pertaining to religion as well as to the state. In one form or another these same issues are agitating and confusing every nation and people throughout the world. Our hope is that by attaining a solution in terms of moral unity, mutual respect and the spirit of cooperation America may demonstrate to mankind that material and spiritual welfare are two aspects of the same truth. May the divine Father and Lawgiver guide and sustain you in fulfillment of your historic mission."

In Memoriam
Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life and joy, and the carrier of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life.—Bahá'u'lláh
Mr. Charles Johnson, Mauston, Wisconsin. (Passed on in 1942 but not previously reported).
Mr. Charles P. Michael, Scranton.
Mr. Frank Spink, Muskegon Heights, Michigan.

Portrait of 'Abdu'l-Bahá
The Temple Librarian and Sales Committee has obtained an edition of one hundred copies of the steel engraving of 'Abdu'l-Bahá which has been so greatly beloved by the friends. Per copy, $2.00, postpaid. Send orders to Mr. Harry E. Warrath, 4653 Beacon Street, Chicago 49, Illinois.
Accuracy of Bahá'í Texts

The friends are requested to bear in mind that the authenticity of all passages taken from Bahá'í Writings should be verified before being circulated, whether as quotations used on programs, mimeographed bulletins intended for believers, or printed for the public. The books and pamphlets issued by the Publishing Committee are accurate sources of the revealed Word as far as the National Assembly knows.

The Guardian informed the National Assembly some years ago that, in the case of new translations from the Persian, the material will be passed upon by him before publication.

The Convention

Cable to the Guardian

The following reply was sent to the Guardian, Friday, April 26, from Foundation Hall:

120 delegates and unusual number of visiting friends assembled in Convention reminiscent of Centennial in spirit and size, listened with profound emotion to momentous decisions of beloved Guardian's cable on first goals of second Bahá'í century.

Overwhelmingly grateful for Guardian's confidence in American believers, completely humbled by immense responsibilities, Convention dedicates itself to prayerful consultation on new goals within well defined plan so graciously given to canalize our efforts.

Spurred by Guardian's generous gifts, we prepare for sacrifice and achievement, and beseech fresh measures of spiritual grace. Desire ever closer bond beloved Guardian and long his presence.

Thirty-Eighth Annual Bahá'í Convention

Temple Foundation Hall
Wilmette, Illinois
Friday, April 26, 1946

Highlights of the Convention

The 38th Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada assembled in Foundation Hall of the Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette, on April 26, 1946, in great eagerness to hear the "momentous historic decisions" promised in the Guardian's recent message. From as far South as Punta Arenas, southernmost city of the world, to the frontier community of Alaska came Bahá'ís in this hemisphere numbering about 750. To add to this joyous occasion was the appearance of James Barrett and his wife from Chile, Alvin Blum, who spent many months in the Philippines, Sgt. John Eichenauer who arrived during the Convention from his post in Germany, Duncan McAlary who returned recently from France, Mrs.

The Convention

Judd Stroud, a newly-declared believer from Holland. Of the 942 people registering at the Convention, 135 were delegates.

At the opening of the Convention, following the prayer, the convention officers were elected: Mr. George Latimer, chairman, Mr. Horace Holley, secretary.

The Guardian's Message

With rapt attention the audience listened to the Guardian's message, telling of two Seven Year Plans for the American Bahá'í Community. The first of these Seven Year Plans is to begin immediately, to be followed by a respite of three years, and another Seven Year Plan, ending in the year 1963, in fulfillment of the prophecy of Daniel, at which time the world-wide triumph of the Bahá'í Faith will be proclaimed.

As the four objectives of the immediate Seven Year Plan were read, the audience was awesomely silent, since each of the objectives in itself seemed a tremendous task. The first objective is the consolidation of victories already won through the Americas, involving multiplication of Bahá'í centers, and bolder proclamation of the Faith to the masses; the second objective, the completion of the interior ornamentation of the House of Worship in Wilmette; the third objective, formation of three National Spiritual Assemblies, one in Canada, one in Central America, and one in South America; and the fourth objective, the imitation of systematic teaching activity in war-torn spiritually famished Europe.

The National Fund

The Guardian's initial gift of $10,000 gave impetus to the embarking on such work, and one believer offered another $10,000, while another contributed $1,000 and other sums poured in, totaling $30,000 during the Convention period. This, according to the treasurer, is only a start, since the Bahá'ís must double their contributions if we are to achieve the goals. We were reminded of a story about 'Abdu'l-Bahá in which he had asked one of the Bahá'ís to do something. She delayed in the matter, and a few days later came to Him saying she was ready to do it. He replied, "Now it is too late." We were reminded that we should fulfill these objectives before it is too late, and that the Guardian never asks us to do anything that is beyond our reach. We need a new viewpoint about the Bahá'í Fund, not that of contributing money, but that of "achieving the goal" set by the Guardian. The treasurer reported that 106 assemblies had contributed last year to the Fund but 28 failed to do so. We were requested not to send money in cash as it is often lost, but to make out a check or money order to the National Bahá'í Fund.

Projected Radio Station

In addition to these four objectives, the delegates recommended that the National Spiritual Assembly take legal steps to obtain the only remaining Frequency-Modulation Band in the Chicago area, and thus pave the way for a radio station operating either from the Temple or the Temple area. The cost of installation was estimated at $15,000, with a maintenance cost of $10,000 per year. This initial cost would include playback machine and equipment for cutting records. On the 40 hours a week allotted to this station, only educational material could be broadcast, thus eliminating commercials.

Completion of Temple

The National Secretary explained that the Guardian, in his request for an estimate of the interior ornamentation of the House of Worship, stated that the ornamentation should be along the lines designed by Mr. Louis Bourgeois, modified to make it less expensive. The estimate for this work amounted to $450,000. A description of the interior was given and the need for an additional $5,000 for the completion of the utilities. As a matter of publicity interest, it was announced that the Domestic Engineering Magazine contained photographs of the Temple, particularly of the boiler room, stating that it was the finest to be found anywhere in the United States. Also at the recent Oilburner Convention in Philadelphia, attention was drawn to the oil burner in the Temple as it was one of the largest installations in the country. It was reported that pictures of the Temple appeared in a newspaper in Paris and in one or two editions of the military paper.

International Relief

The new International Bahá’í Relief Fund now contains $1,500 to be used for food, clothing and literature. Of particular interest is the need of the Bahá’ís in Germany, France and the Philippines. It was announced that John Eichenauer, now on terminal leave, had just arrived in the country from Germany and might be able to get to the Convention. Meanwhile Alvin Blum who spent many months in the Philippines, brought word from the believers there and greetings from the Bahá’ís in New Zealand. He stated that the need is great and besides food, such simple things as buttons, thread, and materials are not available. Later, when John Eichenauer arrived, he read the following cablegram from the Guardian: "Greatly rejoice news convention, election NAS (Germany). Deeply appreciate reaffirmation undivided loyalty beloved friends, heart filled with hope for unprecedented expansion and consolidation of Bahá’í activities. Will transmit ten thousand pounds collected for national fund as soon as possible. Should be devoted relief, promotion teaching work, multiplication of centers, expansion literature, establishment of Faith in Austria and renting or purchase as soon as possible, adequate housing in Frankfurt as National Hazíratul-Quds designed to become focus of Bahá’í activity for all German and Austrian believers. Praying abundant blessings. Eager to receive reports of progress of community destined to develop as prophesied by 'Abdu’l-Bahá into most powerful center of spiritual illumination of the entire European continent. Deepest love. Smirz."

German NSA

John Eichenauer brought greetings, from 32 Assemblies in Germany and told how he first made contact with the Bahá’ís on May 6, 1945, and later met a group in Stuttgart. There have been two youth conferences, and on October 20, 1945 the first spiritual assembly was formed in Heidelberg. The NSA of Germany was restored on April 7, 1946, being the first chance that many believers had to meet together in nine years. Many members had been in concentration camps, but four of the original National Spiritual Assembly members were still there. There was an attendance of almost 200 at this election meeting in Stuttgart. He also told of the work of two other Bahá’ís in Germany, Captain Henry Jarvis in Heidelberg, and Sgt. Bruce Davison of Frankfort. Owing to the efforts of the Bahá’ís in America, many hundreds packages of food and clothing arrived through these servicemen to be distributed. However, due to the great response, it was necessary to ask the Bahá’ís to curtail the sending of these packages as it was a strain on the three young men receiving them. On June 15th, Sgt. Eichenauer plans to return to Stuttgart as a civilian, working under Restitution Controls. He said that there are many positions open now in Germany under civil service for $3,400 per year. Those interested can write to the Overseas Branch of the War Department, Washington, D.C. He gave addresses of Bahá’ís in Germany and France who would distribute packages. One of these addresses was that of Paul Gollmer whose house stood unharmed in the midst of blocks of rubble. Eighty per cent of Stuttgart was destroyed but Mr. Gollmer’s house still stood. Sgt. Eichenauer told of attending the United Nations meeting in London through a pass which he obtained from Mrs. Roosevelt.

France and England

It was recommended that a National Service Committee be formed to handle the contributions of food, clothing, and other needs to the Bahá’ís in Europe and the Philippines, so that parcels may be sent systematically, and where needed most. Duncan McAlear reported on his observations in France. He said that in Nancy, France, 96% of those who are between the ages of 18 and 21 have tuberculosis including twelve young people who are interested in the Faith. They need especially food, soap, and sufficient vitamins to improve their condition. Mr. McAlear said he remembered how the Guardian said, "Turn to your Bahá’í brothers and sisters who are living with you in the Kingdom. Indeed the believers have not fully realized how to draw on each other in times of need," and he began to write to the isolated believers in England and France, sharing their letters. He felt that there was a whole network of Bahá’ís who had gained strength from this correspondence.

Mrs. Motahedeh told of her visit to London and of the depressed feeling of the believers there. She said that the Bahá’ís in London took courage when they heard of the problems of the pioneers to South America, saying, "We suffered here involuntarily during the war, but those who went to South America did so voluntarily." There is no housing in many parts of England, and no soap, she said. And the need is great for food, fats, oils, vitamins, broth, and meal. An idea of the situation is seen when a suit costs $300, bedroom slippers $100, an apple 90c, and an ordinary dinner $20.00. Very few people can afford these things.

Pioneers for Europe

Further work on the Fourth Objective of the Seven Year Plan was proposed by Mr. Tony Rocco who offered to pioneer in his native land, Spain; Mr. Philip Marangella who offered to pioneer in Italy, and requested the translation of literature into Italian for this work; Mrs. Solveigh Corbit who offered to go to Norway; Mrs. Judd Stroud who offered to go to Holland where there is only one other Bahá’í. Mrs. Stroud came to America in December, where she learned of the Faith. As preparation for her pioneer work, she plans to go to a Bahá’í Summer School.

Projected National Assemblies

Discussing the Third Objective outlined in the Guardian’s Cable, the Canadian delegates felt that the believers in Canada would approach the formation of a National Spiritual Assembly with enthusiasm. There are about 200 believers in Canada now, and as an aid to their development before forming the National Spiritual Assembly, it was suggested that they have more help in spreading the Faith, that one member from Canada be placed on each National Committee to gain experience in committee work, that they form a Canadian Coordinating Committee, and that some effort be made to teach the Canadians who speak French, as they are the "minority group" in Canada.

Public Relations

The Faith has begun to attract the attention of many non-Bahá’ís. Saturday Night, a Canadian paper, contained a message from Ruhiyyih Khanum. Mr. Marinoff, son-in-law of Mr. Albert Einstein, is now writing a book on the Faith. A professor at Iowa State University is writing a book which includes material on the Faith. A new book just off the press, "Iran", includes part of a chapter on the Faith. Literature has appeared in Stars and Stripes, and in three copies of the French paper, Fraternité. The Public Relations Committee report that during the last year, special literature was sent to all the governors of the states, the White House, the Supreme Court, and senators and representatives who are considered liberal in their viewpoints. The chairman of this committee read interesting replies from many outstanding people in this country. Mr. Victor Alexander, of Hollywood, who is in the film industry, offered to make some pictures about the Faith. The delegates moved to have the National Spiritual Assembly approve this project. Mr. Balling, also a non-Bahá’í, offered to change the World Order Magazine so that it would be acceptable on the newsstands. It was moved to have the National Spiritual Assembly approve this project also. Another interesting fact was that Massachusetts now legalizes Bahá’í marriage.

The National Secretary emphasized the difficulties in holding the meetings of the National Spiritual assembly last year, because of strikes, priorities, and transportation troubles. The total time of meetings amounted to 25 days and nights in business sessions. It was announced that Mr. Roy Wilhelm had finally been permitted by the Guardian to resign from the National Spiritual Assembly due to ill health. In his place, by special election of last year’s delegates, Miss Elsie Austin was elected.

The Election

On Sunday morning, April 28th, the National Election was held, and the following were members of the new National Spiritual Assembly: Miss Elsie Austin, Mr. Philip Sprague, Mr. Horace Holley, Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Mrs. Amelia Collins, Mr. George Latimer, Miss Edna True, Mr. Paul Haney, Mr. Kenneth Christian. The new Assembly met, and elected the following officers: Dorothy Baker, chairman, Paul Haney, vice-chairman, Horace Holley, corresponding secretary, Edna True, recording secretary, and Philip Sprague, treasurer.

Reply to the Guardian

In reply to the Guardian’s message, the Convention sent a cablegram telling of their humility in face of the immense responsibilities outlined by the Guardian, and their desire to be aided by his prayers to attain these goals.

Teaching in North America

In regard to Objective I of the Guardian’s message, the National Teaching Committee pointed out that there are at present 27 states who have only 1 assembly, and many pioneers who left their homes for the first Seven Year Plan are desirous of returning. In order to safeguard the victories of this First Seven Year Plan, there is an immediate need for 25 Bahá’ís to pioneer in the following areas: Charlottetown, Montón, Louisville, Ky., Greenville, S. Car., Brattleboro, Vt., Boise, Idaho, Toledo, Ohio, and Chevy Chase. These needs are most urgent. In addition, one more settler is needed in Knoxville, Tenn.; two settlers in West Vancouver, B. C., West Haven, Conn., Geneva, N.Y., Seneca Township, Findlay, Ohio, Granger Township, Hinckley Township, Ohio, Urbana, Ohio, Glenfield, N. Dak., Inglewood, Calif., San Mateo, Calif., and Monroe, Washington.

It was stated that only 72 new Baha’is entered the Faith in this Continent last year, which indicates that we need to stop and study our lives and teaching methods in order to confirm those souls who may be ready. The importance of prayer was emphasized. It was stated that Martha Root felt that the only time she failed was when she didn’t pray before it; and that ‘Abdu’l-Baha when asked how to have a successful meeting said to pray beforehand. In Toronto the Baha’is have a prayer squad which operates constantly, and also pray during Baha’i meetings.

Along with prayer was the emphasis for the need of love and unity among the believers. The Guardian said, “Unity of the heart attracts the outpourings of the whole sphere. Prayer is the power that promotes our faith. Do not observe faults because we cut off the hearts and kill the whole spirit.” We must live the Baha’i life individually and also in groups. A timely excerpt was read from the Tablet by ‘Abdu’l-Baha written on the occasion of the beginning of the House of Worship in Isfahán: “The forces of darkness in the world are so prevalent and strong that their mobb and turbulent influence is being felt by all. Therefore you should strive to be more loving in order to fight against the atmosphere every passing day.”

Another point which was emphasized was that we should meet with the believers in other ways than just the Nineteen-Day Feasts. We should enjoy social gatherings, plan social functions, and associate more closely in other activities.

The importance of an attractive Center for Baha’is was discussed, and also the need for listing the Baha’i Secretary in the telephone books so that people who are interested, or who are travelling through the cities may know where to find out about meetings.

The most successful teaching medium, the fireside group, was discussed. Owing to the hospitality, and the intimacy of the gatherings, interested people could feel free to discuss more in detail their views. It was suggested that we use a series of short five or ten lesson courses rather than a thirty-six lesson course which might frighten some people away because of its length.

The great need for training more good teachers was discussed. In addition, we must try to have a variety of speakers so that they will give the different aspects of the Faith rather than just one in which a particular teacher is interested.

Reaching the Masses

A new method of teaching more boldly and to the masses this year was that of the large public meetings in key cities where a number of national committees such as radio, teaching, contacts, and publicity, keyed their work to these projects. The chairman of the Public Meetings Committee reported on the meetings held in the eleven key cities, with an attendance averaging from 250 to 800 people. Although there were many problems in this the first year of the venture, and a number of unforeseeable difficulties such as an ice and sleet storm in Washington, D.C., a transportation strike in Detroit, and the opening of the United Nations Organization in New York City, the cities were enthusiastic about this method of teaching as it enabled them to carry out effectively a very good meeting and to give a fine presentation of the Faith to the public through radio, newspaper, and the lecture platform. Milwaukwi and Urbana, following the same ideas, put on their own public meetings, which were very successful. Cities who are desirous of having such meetings this year should indicate their desire to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Radio

Another method of teaching was outlined by the Radio Committee who played for the Convention the first of a series of fifteen-minute dramatizations called The Worldover Series. The committee is planning to make thirteen different transcriptions which can be circulated all over the country. There is time on these broadcasts for local announcements of meetings, to tie in with the story of the Faith. The Radio Committee emphasized the importance of having radio scripts approved in order to prevent any law suits against the Faith. Each assembly is responsible for any material put on the air over its stations.

As a means of understanding more about the Faith, the programs for the Summer Schools were announced. At Louhelaen, a special midsummer session in child guidance will include not only Bahá’í teachers, but also others who are specialists in this field. Another feature of Louhelaen will be a conference for Bahá’í parents the weekend of July 20-21. The Geyserville committee announced that they are to extend the Summer School from two weeks to one month. The Green Acre committee announced a program including sample meetings of Assemblies in action, and a special conference on “Securing the Peace” as well as a Race Unity Conference and a Latin-American Conference.

Conferences
Announcement was made of the Rice Lake School in Canada, near Toronto, which will have a conference for one week, beginning July 27th. As they can only accommodate fifty people, reservations should be made soon. Then followed announcements of some new conferences: one in Banff, Alberta, Canada, from August 11-17, reservations to be made through Miss Elizabeth Brooks, Box 121, Winnipeg, Canada, a five-day conference at the end of June in Halifax, N.S., and a summer school in Homer, Alaska, to be held on the five acres given by Marjorie McCormack of Alaska.

Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh announced a plan to have Dr. George Townsend, author of “Heart of the Gospel,” and “Promise of All Ages,” come from Dublin this summer and visit all summer schools.

Latin America
News of the Latin American work included the announcement of 135 new Bahá’ís, almost twice the total of new believers in North America. The work in Latin America is only fifteen years old, but already twenty countries have assemblies. All had cabled their greetings to the Convention. There is a noticeable trend towards liberation in Latin America and a greater receptivity of Bahá’í literature. Sgt. Jim Barrett, accompanying by his beautiful Chilean bride, outlined the work of publicity at the recent Panama Conference, telling of the newspaper and radio work. He said that this was very successful and that Latin America is far ahead of North America in free radio time.

Mr. Artemus Lamb brought greetings from Punta Arenas, southernmost city of the world. They felt that radio programs in Chile had a great deal to do with the forming of the spiritual assembly as the climate was bad, and the daylight hours few. Consequently, people listened to the radios a great deal, and incidentally, to the Bahá’í broadcasts. He spoke of the bond between Punta Arenas and Alaska since the Guardian had mentioned these two especially when speaking of the teaching work in this hemisphere.

Louise Baker told of some of the interesting teaching work in South America, stating that it was the work of many Bahá’ís, coming from time to time, that established the Assemblies; that there is a great bond between the pioneers and the local group; and that the believers are naturally very loving and gracious.

Mrs. Rosemary Sala quoted from Bahá’u’lláh, “And the love of God, like unto an artery, shall beat over the heart of five continents,” saying that one can feel this spirit of love when travelling through the countries in Latin America. The spirit of their devotion reminded her of the days of the Dawn-Breakers, and yet these were Bahá’ís in this hemisphere. Of interest is the Five Year Plan which the Bahá’ís of Ecuador have made for themselves, at the completion of which the Assembly is to visit Haifa. Mrs. Sala stated that seventy percent of the believers are men, and that Bahá’u’lláh had blessed the American believers with fruits far beyond their deserving.

Mr. Emeric Sala reminded us that the work of those who labor in the Kingdom will endure for millenniums, and that in travelling in Latin America he witnessed the birth of an entire new civilization. Of interest also is the fact that 80% of the believers are not white. He said that pioneers must endure hardships we can never appreciate such as heat, disease, uncomfortable travel, mosquitoes, bad food, many delays over visas, and life in near-slam conditions.

Mr. Mason Remey told of his visit to each of the countries in South America saying that they have great love and affection largely from the heart. The believers are universally friendly and loving. He said that he had to go down to South America to see how strong the Cause is in North America, so strong that it had kindled the hearts and stirred the believers to leave their homes and pioneer in South America.

The Colleges
A report from the College Speakers Bureau emphasized the specialized work they are trying to do in some colleges, particularly those in the Temple area. The work of Mrs. Joy Earl in Negro colleges in the South, of Mrs. Terah Smith in taking to white colleges in the South, and of Dr. Edris Rice-Wray at Iowa State College where she is helping a professor with material for a book on the Faith, was described. It was requested that if anyone knew of Bahá’ís who are in a college or university, or someone who is sympathetic to the Faith in colleges, he should communicate such information to the College Speakers Bureau. At present, in the University of Illinois there are two Bahá’i students, which allows the Bahá’ís to be listed as a religious group. The Bureau would also like to know of any religious weeks or forums on social, economic, current events, historical or philosophical subjects which would accept Bahá’í speakers.

Youth
The Youth Committee reported that 105 youth attended the banquet held during the Convention. At present, the Youth Committee is adjusting to the post-war location of its members, and attempting to keep in touch with all the Bahá’í youth. A message from the Guardian of October 20, 1945 was read, in which he urged the young Bahá’ís in every city to make a point of keeping in touch with local youth activities and clubs, and to make their views known to as many young people as possible. He also emphasized the high example that these youth must set for the world in chastity, politeness, friendliness, hospitality, and optimism for the future of mankind.

The chairman of the Youth Committee outlined their program of study, teaching activity, research, and circulation of the Youth Bulletin. The keynote, they felt, should be the close working of youth and adults. It was suggested that the National Spiritual Assembly ask the Guardian if the New York City Baha’i Laws which serve as a model for this country, could be amended so that Bahá’í youth from 15 to 21 may be listed as Bahá’ís. The presence of one youth member on each national committee was also discussed.
Child Education

The Child Education Committee emphasized that parents should teach themselves so that they may know how to answer their children. They should also find ways of making each child feel he is a part of the Bahá'í world. Interest can be aroused if the child is approached correctly, and summer schools not only help to develop the children, but also give them an opportunity to meet many other Bahá'í children.

Questionnaires

The Questionnaires Committee passed out questionnaire cards which may be handed to friends or strangers by the Bahá'ís. The purpose of these cards is to build a mailing list and really attract the attention of those who might be interested. If the local assembly wishes it may have its own address printed on the cards for their return. These questionnaire cards may also be used as a basis for study groups.

Libraries

The Library Committee requests that we check on the books in the libraries and bring them up-to-date, that we call these books to the attention of those interested, and that we also take them out occasionally. Attention was called to a National Religious Book week, May 5-12 during which we might ask to have Bahá'í books displayed. The Library Committee would like to have books placed in the following cities: Montgomery, Ala., Tampa, Fla., Rockford, Ill., Evansville, Ind., Lexington, Ky., Meridian, Miss., Canton, O., Salem, Ore., El Paso, Tex., Norfolk, Va., Roanoke, Va., as well as eleven colleges and universities. The suggestion was made of placing books or a subscription to World Order Magazine in branch libraries as well as main libraries, and that we supply the libraries with good books to offset any books attacking the Faith. One believer stated that he became a Bahá'í because he was surprised at the statements of criticism against the Faith. He said, "No person could be as bad as these people are reported to be." The suggestion was made not to appear disturbed if the librarian noted books attacking the Faith, but to draw attention to the good books. We should also request that New History books be catalogued under New History Society.

Meetings for the Public

During the Convention there were several public meetings. On Friday evening, the Bahá'í Youth presented a series of lectures; Ross Woodman outlining the decline of present-day civilization and the ultimate collapse due to its lack of spirituality, Betty Schefler outlining the power of religion when unified, Fari Walrath outlining the institutions and laws of the new world-wide civilization of Bahá'ulláh, and Robert Imagire presiding as chairman.

On Saturday evening, the Feast of the Rívdán was celebrated, with the Milwaukee Bahá'ís acting as hosts. The chairman described the atar of roses which the Guardian had sent for the Rívdán Feast at the time of the Centennial, but which did not arrive until later. Mr. Mason Remey talked on "The Lesser and the Most Great Peace," Mrs. Margery McCormick on "The Descent of the Son of Man in Great Glory," and William Sears on "Incidents in the Life of Bahá'ulláh." After the Rívdán Feast, Oreella Rexford explained a sound film on Iran which we had the opportunity of seeing.

Sunday afternoon, the last of the Public Meetings Committee series presented Mrs. Charles R. Bishop, speaking on "The Price of World Peace Is World Religion," and Mr. Ali Yazdi speaking on "World Order in the Making," with Mr. Harlan Ober presiding as chairman.

A very personal note of the life of the Guardian gave a fitting climax to the last evening of the Convention when Mrs. Joy Arnold, who was born in Tibrán and lived in Haifa, told details of the Guardian's marriage.

Green Acre

Children's Classes

The children’s classes are an important feature of the Green Acre Summer School. If you are planning to attend the School with your children, you will be glad to know that they will be taught each morning, except Sunday, by competent teachers. Classes will be held this year in the Arts and Crafts Studio.
The youngest group—three to six years—will be under the supervision of Amy Brady Dwelly, a trained Nursery School teacher. There will be a devotional period, handwork, games, stories, and all that will make the smallest children happy during the morning at Green Acre.

The middle group—seven to eleven years—will be taught during July by Marguerite Sears, and during August by Helen Campbell. These children will have a period of Bahá'í study, handcraft, music, games, and nature study.

The oldest group—twelve to fourteen—will be supervised, the Committee hopes, by a young man of college age.

Gifts

Under the guidance of the Guardian, Green Acre has become a school, the beginning of that great Bahá'í University which will arise there in the future. The cooperation of the friends has been an active factor in the success of the summer school. Many gifts have helped to make the dormitories more comfortable and attractive. The Program Committee wishes to make known some of the things most needed for the coming season, June 29 to September 2, 1946:

2. Table and bridge lamps.
3. A reading stand.
5. A mimeograph.
6. A typewriter for the library.
7. A projector for slides (550 watts), especially needed.

If you can supply any of these needs, the Committee will gladly pay the express.

Inter-America News

The Inter-America Committee is most joyful and thankful to be able to announce that the goal of a spiritual Assembly in every country of Latin America is now realized. Assemblies are formed for the first time in Managua, Nicaragua, in Valparaíso, Chili, and in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. An Assembly has been reestablished in Puntarenas, Costa Rica.

The ten Central American countries now have eleven Spiritual Assemblies including the two in Costa Rica. The ten Republics of South America have at present fourteen Spiritual Assemblies, with three in Chili, and two each in Brazil and Columbia.

In addition to the twenty-five Assemblies in Latin American countries (this does not include those in Jamaica and Puerto Rico) there are at least ten Bahá'í groups. North American pioneers are assigned to only two of these groups, Quito and Sao Paulo.

As reported by the Chairman of the I.A.C. on the Convention floor, it is planned to form a number of regional committees throughout Central and South America whose functions will be to build groups into Assemblies, to carry the Teachings to new localities, forming new groups, and to carry the Teachings to the masses by means of the radio. These committees will be composed of native believers as well as of North American pioneers.

Perhaps the friends in North America will be glad to hear that Bahá'ís membership in Latin America is increasing at a far more rapid rate in proportion to total membership than is being reported from the centers in this country. In a two week's file of correspondence from assembly secretaries and pioneers, which accumulates between meetings of the I.A.C., one usually finds ten or more new membership cards. There were seventeen of these cards in the last file available to the writer.

Local News

The Philadelphia Bahá'ís are holding regular monthly study days. They begin at 3:30 to study individually in the Kitáb-í-Íqán, share supper, and in the evening hold a question and answer period using Horace Holley's study outline for the Íqán.

To follow up their large public lecture attended by 850-1000 persons at the Continental Hotel on April 11th, Chicago Bahá'ís held four special public meetings at their Michigan Avenue Center. On April 18, Horace Holley spoke on "Religion for the Modern World," on April 23, Orcella Rexford spoke to an audience of 106 on "Iran's Contribution to World Culture" showing a sound film on Thirán, on April 30, Philip Marangella spoke on "And His Is the Power and the Glory." Mrs. Helen Bishop was scheduled to speak on May 7th on "The Goal of the Twentieth Century." Horace Holley was invited to share the platform with Dr. Preston Bradley and Rabbi Levi for the Town Public Forum to discuss, “Can Religion Meet the Challenge of the Times?” There were estimated to be 800 present.

Baha’is in San Francisco cooperated with the Cosmos Club, an organization among the city’s Negroes who are interested in inter-racial culture. Mr. Leroy Ioas was invited to speak a few minutes about the Faith to an audience of a thousand persons. He and Mrs. Ioas were invited to lead the grand march and Baha’i girls were among the ushers. One of the Negro churches made Mr. Ioas’ talk the subject of a sermon the next Sunday.

The Beverly, Massachusetts Race Unity Forum program reached us, listing several races among the speakers. Dr. Glenn Shook spoke for the Baha’i Faith, and with him on the platform were Senor José B. Cortes, Director of the Philippine Center in Boston, and Mr. S. P. Pu, graduate student in economics at Harvard.

News From Other Lands

Germany

The following notes are based on an account by John Eichenauer of the first national convention held by the German Baha’is since the war. The Convention was held in Stuttgart, April 6 and 7, Splendor 17 and 18. The 19 delegates were from the four communities of Esslingen, Frankfurt, Heidelberg and Stuttgart. On Saturday evening 150 believers from all over the American Zone gathered in a reconstructed, bomb-damaged room to listen to annual reports. Loving hands had converted the room into a hall of dignity and beauty. Flowers and green sprigs decorated the tables of the audience and the speakers’ rostrum. After music and prayer Herr Paul Gollmer welcomed all and summarized the historic tasks before them, above all that we must be self sacrificing and living examples of what we believe.

John Eichenauer spoke of a letter he had received from the Guardian in which he urged everyone to write to him of his experiences during the war and since.

Brief reports of the work already done since May, 1945, when hostilities ended, were given by Frs. Marta Weiss and Edith Horn, Dr. Hermann Grossman, Frau Brauns-Forel, daughter of the famous Swiss scientist, Frau Annamarie Schweizer, Dr. Adelheid Koller-Jager and others. From our reports in former issues of Baha’i news the friends will realize how very active the German Baha’is have been, holding public meetings, youth meetings and conferences, fire-side and study groups, and Nineteen-Day Feasts and giving thorough publicity to their public activities.

Dr. Grossman spoke eloquently of the importance of the Baha’i work and how only a supreme effort could attract the masses from their disillusion and waywardness.

“Sonne der Wahrheit” (Sun of Truth), comparable to World Order Magazine, was reported as almost ready to go to press with a leading article on the history of the Faith in Germany since Dr. Fisher, an American dentist, first proclaimed it in Stuttgart in 1906.

Convention delegates met Sunday at 8 a.m. in the apartment of Herr Gollmer on Neckarstrasse. This street, formerly one of the most beautiful in Stuttgart, is now lined with fire gutted and bombèd out buildings. For some unknown reason the four-story building containing Herr Gollmer’s apartment escaped destruction.

Among the suggestions made by the delegates to the NSA about to be elected were the appointment of committees to review membership lists for believers whose voting status is not clear, to send teachers to other Zones in Germany, to establish central direction of youth, teaching and publication activities. The eligibility of believers who were members of the Nazi party (regardless of the reason) for election to the NSA was discussed and it was decided they would not be eligible.

The following were elected to the NSA: Dr. Adelheid Koller-Jager, Frau Hedwig Schubert, Dr. Hermann Grossman, Herr Paul Gollmer, FrL Edith Horn, Herr Fred Kohler, Herr Eugen Knorr, Frau Marta Brauns-Forel and FrL Marta Weiss. The NSA decided to meet monthly.

As the hour of the NSA session approached the delegates departed for the Baha’i School Site near Esslingen to attend a devotional program. About 100 believers and visitors attended this meeting.

Excellent publicity was gained for the Convention.

John’s account closes with these words: “Thus was concluded two of the happiest and most dramatic days of my service in the Cause of Baha’u’llah.”

British Isles

The Baha’i’s of the British Isles held an important teaching conference in Manchester, February 2 and 3. The first session was devoted to reports from the 5 assemblies and 2 groups with discussion of the same. Through the devotional period at the second session the Conference was lifted to a realm of dedication and spiritual resolution greatly reinforced by H. Balyuzi’s inspired message. At the third session true collective action took place. The Conference selected 9 “goal towns,” a goal town being defined as, a Baha’i community carrying on “active work... with sufficient regularity to justify reasonable hopes of an Assembly within the period of the Six Year Plan.”

“With Absolute Detachment”

By the righteousness of God! Who so openeth his lips in this Day and maketh mention of the name of his Lord, the hosts of Divine inspiration shall descend upon him from the heaven of My name, the All-Knowing, the All-Wise. On him shall also descend the Concourse on high, each bearing aloft a chalice of pure light. Thus hath it been fore-ordained in the realm of God’s Revelation, by the behest of Him Who is the All-Glorious, the Most Powerful.

There lay concealed within the Holy Veil, and prepared for the use of God, a company of His chosen ones who shall be manifested unto men, who shall aid His Cause, who shall be afraid of no one, though the entire human race rise up and war against them. These are the ones who, before the gaze of the dwellers on earth and the denizens of heaven, shall arise and, shouting aloud, acclaim the name of the Almighty, and summon the children of men to the path of God, the All-Glorious, the All-Praised. Walk thou in their way, and let no one dismay thee. Be of them whom the tumult of the world, however much it may agitate them in the path of their Creator, can never sadden, whose purpose the blame of the blamer will never defeat.

New Enterprises

Obstacles, however formidable, should be determinedly surmounted, every opportunity seized, rank and file of believers continually stimulated and reminded of their responsibilities and directed into channels of active service. No time to lose, great sacrifices demanded, unity, audacity and stern resolution essential. Devout prayers offered at Shrines.

From telegram received May 5, 1946:

Greatly welcome initial evidences of magnificent responses of Assembly to new Plan. Invoking divine assistance for vigorous, wise, sustained prosecution of manifold activities to be initiated in North America, Latin America and European continent.

Telegram received May 9, 1946:

(This message came in response to the telegram sent to the Guardian by the National Spiritual Assembly from its meeting May 5, 1946, following the Convention, as follows: “You have disclosed to American Baha’is the glorious path of faith leading to world spread of Baha’u’llah’s Message and ascendency of the authority and dominion of His Divine Revelation. Awed but resolute the Assembly has pondered the four objectives of Seven Year Plan, formulated measures, established necessary agencies and adopted annual budget of $250,000 sanctified by your contribution. Invoking divine aid for purification of the souls and attainment of the spiritual worthiness requisite to success of America’s mission under mandate conferred by ‘Abdu’l-Baha.”)

Opening phase of spiritual conquest of the old world under divinely conceived Plan must be speedily and fittingly inaugurated. Feel necessity prompt dispatch of nine competent pioneers to as many countries as feasible charged to initiate systematic teaching work, commence settlement and promote dissemination of literature. Urge establishment of auxiliary office in Geneva as adjunct to International Bureau equipped with facilities to foster development of assemblies in countries falling within the scope of Plan. Recommend European Teaching Committee undertake without delay measures aiming at close collaboration of British

The following letter was written by the Guardian through his secretary, April 13, 1946:

“In the February Baha’i News, page 3, it mentions that magazine articles about the Cause ‘written by individual believers as their personal understanding of the teachings’ ... need not be reviewed officially. He feels this is unwise in view of the Master’s own instructions that articles about the Cause should not be published by individuals without proper approval of some responsible body.

“The Guardian says the local Assemblies can pass upon such articles; it is not necessary to refer them to a national committee.

“So often persons can be carried away by their enthusiasm and express something detrimental to the Faith. Therefore they must either refor their articles to their local Spiritual Assembly or the National Reviewing Committee.""

In connection with this direction, the National Assembly has voted to publish the communication from the Guardian and advise the believers that magazine articles are henceforth to be reviewed by local assemblies where the author is member of an organized community, otherwise the article is to be submitted directly to the National Reviewing Committee in the usual way. (The local assembly acting in each case is determined by the residence of the writer, not the location of the magazine).

Who Can Assist?

Beloved Friends:

Before this issue of Bahá'í News reaches you, each member of the Bahá'í Community of North America will have received an individual copy of the bulletin prepared by the National Assembly on the subject of the new Seven Year Plan. Consideration of the objectives of the Plan and the channels through which effort is to be directed has become, and will long remain, our first and most imperative concern.

The new Seven Year Plan comes to us as guidance, charged with authority and power, not as mere wish and hope unable to rise above the destructive pressure of human affairs. To be a Bahá'í is to have capacity to recognize the Guardian's plans as guidance and to feel the power offered to the spirit of every believer who arises to serve. This arena of service is truly a divine gift to us above the dominion of kings and states, for in that arena we dwell in the light of the Most Great Peace, partake of the food of inspiration, and work with the tools of the most effective force. We build, while others seek to emerge from the wreckage of the past. Therefore Bahá'ís are free of fear and spared the tragedy of frustration. We need not be rich, superior in health or intelligence, or have any other human advantage. With faith the lowliest can achieve success in the Kingdom, where the law of existence is inspiration by the Holy Spirit and not struggle and competition.

The new Plan has a tremendous range of possibility. From time to time the Assembly wishes to give special emphasis to some one particular feature, in its effort to stimulate the hearts and give direction to the efforts.

At the outset of the Plan, therefore, the Assembly stresses the continuous and vital need of pioneers within the United States and Canada. This community of North America is the storehouse of that power on which the Divine Plan of 'Abdu'l-Bahá depends for its consummation from stage to stage. It is not for all of us to serve in Latin America or in Europe, however we might long to do so. But there are many more able to arise as settlers here than can volunteer to work in the foreign field.

In this issue of Bahá'í News the Assembly lists sixty local groups having five or more believers and therefore capable of development to local Assembly status within two or three years. (See page 11.)

May each believer ponder this list of cities, towns and villages. Who can arrange his or affairs so as to offer to the National Teaching Committee to assist in this great and fundamental work? The Cause is a unit. Those who serve in the formation of a large number of new Assemblies are in reality contributing to the work in Central and South America and the countries of Europe.

The believers in these various groups likewise have each one a glorious mission to teach the Cause and confirm new believers, thus lessening the immensity of the task. New Bahá'ís, and Bahá'í settlers, to a total number of over one hundred and fifty are urgently required. What can we do to assist the National and Regional Teaching Committees in their weighty and responsible task?

The Guardian Appeals for Thirty New Local Assemblies

Appeal National Teaching Committee uniedly arise play notable part in stupendous exertions now being made by Bahá'í communities throughout Americas in furtherance of second Seven Year Plan. Plead focus attention enable thirty groups having six or more members speedily attain Assembly status. Devoutly praying number of Assemblies functioning in North America will reach one hundred and seventy-five ere expiry of second year of second stage of Divine Plan. Attainment of this immediate objective will challenge and galvanize all other agencies functioning in Latin America and European continent to follow the superb example set for sister committees laboring at the heart of the mother community of the Western hemisphere.

Credentials for Traveling Bahá'ís and Appeals for Financial Help

Once more it has become necessary to remind the American believers that every traveling Bahá'í is expected to carry credentials and need not be recognized as a believer if credentials are lacking. It is also pointed out that, whether or not a visitor has Bahá'í credentials, any request for loans and financial assistance should be decided by consultation of the local assembly rather than by any individual believer. From time to time the National Assembly learns of cases where be-believers have been deceived and their generosity abused by persons who in some cases claim falsely to be Bahá'ís and in other cases are Bahá'ís whose stated need for funds should be subjected to scrutiny.

For example, a warning has been received from the Fort Wayne Assembly concerning a Mr. Williams who has used the name Bahá'í in solicitation of funds; and instances have been reported from Providence and Boston recently of an enrolled believer misreporting his circumstances to the friends.

"Unnecessary Administrative Details"

Immediately after the Convention the Guardian cabled the National Spiritual Assembly to point out the "overwhelming responsibility" resting upon its members in connection with the new Seven Year Plan. He declared: "Feel necessity eliminate unnecessary administrative details enabling Assembly members to focus their attention at sessions on the diverse imperative requirements of the plan."

This calls for an immediate and complete readjustment of the agenda of NSA meetings, so that each meeting can be devoted to prayerful meditation and action on those matters which are really essential to the progress of the great international campaign.

The National Spiritual Assembly cannot accomplish this result without the conscious and hearty cooperation of the entire American Bahá'í community. "Unnecessary administrative details" are for the most part laid upon the NSA by individual believers, local assemblies and committees who fail to carry their full measure of responsibility in some activity or relationship and therefore feel obliged to ask the NSA to take over and solve the problem or finish the task.

The Guardian is not altering the nature of the administrative order. What he seeks is to free its highest level of administrative authority in America of details which others can and should assume, so that the particular contribution of that level can be rendered through clarity of vision, preservation of balance and encouragement and direction of Bahá'í affairs as a whole.

Prayerful consideration is sought, by all the believers, of this crucial matter. A little more maturity, a little more thoughtfulness, a little more conscientious effort on the part of the communities and assemblies, will do more than anything to place the National Spiritual Assembly in a true relationship with the Guardian and with the objectives of the plan which Bahá'u'lláh has formulated through His one chosen representative on earth today.

Radio Script Writing

The Faith has urgent need of believers trained in the preparation as well as delivery of radio scripts. This is a new literary technic, combining dramatic and informative elements in a way different from that of the popular and effective public speaker or influential author of books and essays.

The National Assembly appeals to the friends to make use of whatever facilities are available to them in colleges and universities, or at Bahá'í Summer Schools, for training in the technic of radio script writing.

The published list of committees includes one for Radio Script Review, and scripts are to be submitted to that committee for approval for national use.

The Bahá'í School Committees are likewise requested to include in their courses as soon as possible programs in script writing to be conducted by professionals, and to submit projects with estimates of cost for approval by the National Assembly.

North American Teaching

The Guardian's message to the Annual Convention gives the first of the four objectives of the second Seven Year Plan as "The consolidation of victories already won," the "multiplication of Bahá'í centers," and a "bolster proclamation of the Faith to the masses." The accomplishment of this first objective is our immediate task and each believer can aid in its achievement by holding fireside meetings through settlement in areas needing assistance, and by supporting the local teaching effort materially and spiritually through your attendance at public meetings and your contributions to the fund.

During the Convention period nine believers volunteered to settle in communities where reinforcement is needed to hold the assembly status, and plans are underway already for the settlement of three of these volunteers. The Louisville, Ky., community has been strengthened through the settlement of Miss Frances Jones, formerly a pioneer in Sioux Falls, S.D., and late in June Mrs. Kathryn Frankland, a former pioneer in Albuquerque, Little Rock and Houston, will further reinforce this community. Miss Josie Pinson of Charleston, S.C., is making arrangements to move to Greenbriar, S.C., in August to help in the consolidation of that community, and Mrs. Annie Romer, a former pioneer in Halifax, N.S., after a rest in the Temple area, will settle there also. Arrangements are also under way to provide reinforcements to other communities now needing assistance to hold assembly status, but the demand continues to exceed the supply of settlers available for this type of teaching service.

An appeal from the NTC for believers to aid with the teaching work in the small, new assemblies as part of their Convention trip, won response from several teachers and provided very stimulating help. In this way also the spirit of the Convention was brought to these small communities and news was supplied in a way to provide reinforcements to other communities now needing to hold the assembly status, but the demand continues to exceed the supply of settlers available for this type of teaching service.

The week-end of May 24th Mr. John Robarts, the newly appointed chairman of the new Canadian National Teaching Committee, made a flying trip to the Maritimes and spent a day in each of the communities there. Details of this trip will no doubt be given in a forthcoming issue by the new Committee.

Conferences in many regions have brought to the isolated believers, groups and communities, reports of the Convention activities to inspire and stimulate participation in the achievement of the goals of the new Plan.

Temple Guides

For the Months of January, February, March and April, 1946.

Records of previous years continue to be surpassed each month by the number of visitors to the Temple. Records for these four months for the years 1945 and 1946 are as follows:

The Temple was opened for daily tours this year on April 1st instead of May 1st, which in previous years was the opening date. During January, February and March tours were conducted on Sunday only.

In January, 1946, visitors came from 26 states, the District of Columbia, 1 province of Canada, and Mexico, Bolivia, Norway, France, Switzerland, and Palestine.

In February, 1946, they came from 31 states, the District of Columbia, 1 province of Canada, and Mexico, Nicaragua, Brazil, El Salvador, and Palestine.

In March they came from 37 states, the District of Columbia, 2 provinces of Canada, and Mexico, Trinidad, England, China, India, and Sweden.

In April they came from 39 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, 2 provinces of Canada, and China, France, England, and Sweden.

The total number of visitors guided through the Temple from June, 1932, when guiding began, through April, 1946, was 216,386.

Many have answered our invitation to come to Wilmette to help in the Guide Work during vacation months. They have been sent study courses and are preparing themselves for this work. Mrs. Terah Smith of Atlanta stayed over for one week after the convention to serve in this way.

The increasing importance of guide work in the minds of the guides themselves is shown by the following excerpt:

"Dear—, I wonder sometimes if you people who live near the Temple appreciate the wonderful privilege you have always so near you! I know some of you do, but all of you should. It is the greatest privilege in the whole world today. That is literal. There is no other spot on the face of the entire globe where so much service may be rendered as you blessed souls have right at your door.

"You know, in ancient days, those who served at the holy places were specially blessed and only those who were pure and without flaw were permitted to render such service. You remember that, at long periods of history, only virgins were allowed to serve, since virgins typified purity. And always it has been to those rare souls whose dedication and love of God surpassed everything else that service at the Temple was permitted. It has been a high office that was striven for, sometimes for years, and that always was performed with deep love and joy. It is, and always has been, the closest a servant of God may come to the realization of that precious nearness. It is the greatest outward symbol of an inner devotion.

"And, of course, in this Day it is even more precious than at any other time in the past. For now, here at this Temple, we may not only offer up a continual prayer of gratitude, thanksgiving and worship, as has always been done, but we have the inestimable privilege of proclaiming to dozens and sometimes hundreds of people a day, the wonderful Truth of this Day and Age we, as Bahá'ís, are ushering in. The wonder of that is an amazement to me.

'Day after day, as I've guided there at the Temple, I've seen people come in who were discouraged, bewildered, sometimes even desperate with the problems, that, to them, had no solution, and, time after time, I've watched their eyes clear and then grow blazing bright as they realized that, through the Bahá'í Revelation, there was a Plan, there was hope, there was the wonderful certainty of a glorious future where-in the age-old promise of God to man would be fulfilled. And we, as guides at the Temple, have this inestimable privilege, this glorious opportunity, of opening the doors of hope and new spiritual life to these people.

"And so many people! this coming year there will be thousands more than we had last year—just as last year there were thousands more than the years before. It is the greatest teaching field there is in the whole world. Whereas the average pioneer works months before a single soul is touched, here at the Temple we are able to set aflame dozens of people each day. It is an amazing, astonishing thing to watch. And the fact that we are allowed to reach these souls, that we are privileged to hold the Divine match that sets them aflame, is a bounty that should fill our hearts to bursting with gratitude.

"You remember in the 'Gleanings' Bahá'u'llh mentioned the fact that all the holy ones of the past would give all they possessed to be alive for one instant in the great Day. And when I guide in the Temple I can easily realize why. The glory of proclaiming this Day—the thrilling joy of announcing to the world that, at long last, the promise of all ages is being fulfilled, is certainly a privilege that has never, in any era, been experienced before. And it is our privilege.

"In the mystery and bounty of God, we are being permitted to serve Him in this magnificent and wonderful way. And I think we should pray constantly, from the depths of our hearts that we may attain to a station that is worthy of such a privilege—that, like the servants in the temples of old, we may always strive toward that degree of selfless service and of complete devotion and dedication that will allow us, in the eyes of God, to be fit and qualified to guide humanity through His House of Worship.

"I do pray that all of you who are within any practical distance of the Temple may not, for a single instant, forget the bounty and privilege that is at your door. Guide at the Temple in every spare instant and with all your hearts—for there is nothing more wonderful in this world that you may do."

TEMPLE GUIDES COMMITTEE
By Mary Haggard, Chairman

Bahá'í Study Aids

The purpose of the Study Aids Committee is, primarily, to aid Bahá'ís in their study of the Bahá'í Teachings and not, directly, to bring new believers into the Cause (which is the function of teaching committees.) Of course in this day every believer is enjoined to teach the Cause, and the Study Aids Committee by encouraging study has also for its purpose the improvement of teaching effectiveness through study of the Sacred Writings.

We are all surely agreed that it is very important to emphasize study for new believers. Study broadens and deepens one's knowledge of the Cause. Study, especially in small groups, promotes unity through placing emphasis on the Teachings, not on personalities. Study promotes action, through increasing one's awareness of the greatness of the Cause and creating the desire to have an active part in its unfoldment.

For the new believer, especially, study reveals the importance of his function in the group, for upon each one of us rests the responsibility of the establishment of World Order, through the application of the teachings given us by Bahá'u'lláh.

"To strive to obtain a more adequate understanding of the significance of Bahá'u'lláh's stupendous Revelation must, it is my unalterable conviction, remain the first obligation and the object of the constant endeavor of each one of its loyal adherents" (Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh, p. 8).

In these words the Guardian himself urges us first and foremost to study. Then we can give to others the true, clear Teachings and, with the impetus of the inner realization of "the unfailing efficacy of the Message," demonstrate that the Bahá'í Faith is actually building a workable world unity today.

Inter-America News

A Message from the Guardian

In reply to a request by the Inter-America Committee that the Guardian suggest a city in which to hold the next Latin-American Teaching Conference, the following message has been received: "Advises Buenos Aires, Panama. Immediate task confronting Committee further multiplication centres, increasing and consolidation existing assemblies designed reinforce representative character future National Assemblies. Urges intensification effort dissemination literature, increase activities itinerant teachers both North and Latin American, establish closer relationship between existing groups, assemblies. Fervently praying attainment objectives." (Signed) Shómár Conferences will, therefore, be arranged in both of these cities. They will probably be held after January 1st, and will be under the auspices of special committees appointed by the local Spiritual Assemblies.

Numerous reports reach the I.A.C. of extension teaching activities and the multiplication of centers. In Colombia, for example, with assemblies in Bogota and Medellin, Calli, and Barranquilla. Sr. Ernesto A. Flores is the guiding spirit and enthusiastic teacher in Cartagena, and Sr. Victorino Magagna, who studied the Faith while a student in the University in Santiago, Chili, has recently come home to Barranquilla, where he will be of great assistance to the Cause.

It is evident that the leaven of the Divine Plan is working among the native believers.
We are informed that the Guardian has approved the plan of the National Spiritual Assembly to set as a goal to be attained at the end of five years, or in 1951, the formation of National Assemblies covering Central America and South America. Word is coming from all of the Latin countries telling of how thrilled the believers were upon receiving the Guardian’s Convention message, and describing how they are already beginning to arise to meet their new responsibilities. One description of this nature is contained in a recent letter from Marcia Steward, who on her way to do itinerant teaching for several months in the five Central American countries north of Panama, has visited Assemblies in Lima, Quayaquil and Panama City since the Guardian’s message was received. She writes, “I left Lima with the most profound admiration and joy... for the way the Faith is developing and consolidating with marvelous rapidity. Coming direct from Chili, I have been able to view the different communities from a whole new standpoint, and what I have seen has filled me with a joy that is unexpressible. One senses the surging of the Sea of the Covenant... The Guardian’s latest cable has caused a new surging tide of the spirit, which is manifesting in startling changes, in overnight growth, in a visible maturing action, in an assumption of responsibilities all through the communities. “It is hard to express what I felt amongst the believers in Quayaquil... There is a poignancy about that particular group, a yearning for more knowledge and for help, an eagerness to spread the Faith... They are so dear, so faithful, so young... “Panama, too, is a revelation to me. Last night there were forty people at a meeting, people of every color, race, and religion, including Muhammadans. A spirit of union and peace prevailed, and one sensed the flowing together of the races.”

The acceptance of new responsibilities is also evident in the spirit of sacrifice among the Latin believers. A check has come from a friend in La Paz, Bolivia, to be used for Bahá’í relief in Burma. Evelyn Larson reports that the Assembly in San Jose, Costa Rica, has started a special fund to help pay for finishing the interior of the Temple. A Chilian believer is making it possible to start a Bahá’í Summer School in that country.

Difficulties hard to overcome, and too detailed to report in brief space, have handicapped the publication and dissemination of Bahá’í literature in Latin-America. However, four new titles in Spanish were reported less than a year ago, and three additional titles have just come from the press in Buenos Aires. These are, Some Answered Questions, The Great Announcement, and Wisdom of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. A new and improved printing of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era has been made in Portuguese, together with Bahá’í Prayers and two pamphlets. The efforts of all concerned, the Committee, pioneers, and native believers, are definitely being intensified in this field.

Teaching in the Maritimes

The report of the Regional Teaching Committee for the Maritimes was not received in time to be included in the Annual Report of the NTC and so a brief digest of their report is given as follows:

“There are five isolated Bahá’ís in the region, making a total number of 34 in the Maritime Provinces.

Visiting Teachers

“Charlottetown—Mrs. Ruth Moffett, October 15, '45 to February 15, '46, gave 81 lectures at the Queen Hotel, 189 classes, and 14 broadcasts. Mrs. Moffett addressed the students of the Prince of Wales College. Three new members signed, one since removed. "Halifax — During Mrs. Moffett’s visit March 9th to March 25th, there were 33 lectures and classes and 2 radio broadcasts. Mrs. Moffett addressed the Haddeassah Club, the Public Radio Forum, Dalhousie University, etc. Willard McKay visited Halifax Feb. 28th to March 2nd.

“Moncton — There was special teaching work by Mrs. Annie Romer in February to prepare for Mrs. Moffett’s visit, Feb. 16th to March 6th. During that period there were 19 lectures, 24 classes, 3 broadcasts, a reception, a farewell dinner, and talks before several organizations. Several reported interested. Mrs. Beulah Proctor also assisted with the work.

Activities Within Centers to April 1st

“Moncton—A study meeting was begun in September on “The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.” Special publicity with quotations from Bahá’í Writings were weekly inserted in paid space. An Esperanto class was organized by and conducted by Mrs. McEwen which several Bahá’ís and excellent non-Bahá’i contacts have been attending. Since Mrs. Moffett’s Seminar in Moncton there is a class in “Dispensation.” There have been numerous fireside meetings in the various homes throughout the year.

“Halifax — A week-end Maritime
Teaching Conference was held in Harring Cove, N.S. from June 30th to July 4th. The teachers were Mrs. Laura Davis, of Toronto and Mr. Willard McKay of Charlottetown. There were 24 present at some of the meetings. While representatives from Charlottetown and Moncton were present and preliminary consultation was carried on by mail, this project was inaugurated by the Halifax friends.

Assembly meetings were held on alternate Monday evenings at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wade and a study class on “World Order of Bahá’u’lláh” was held at the various homes. Meetings for non-Bahá’ís were held regularly on Thursday or Friday evenings. About 75 Service men and students were reached and 4 indicated an intention to enroll at a future date. From Oct. 27th to January 19th, meetings were held at the Women’s Council House. This was also a publicity project. The whole month of December was devoted to the subject of Peace, including a special radio broadcast, and 2 discussion meetings, climaxing by a brilliant international Peace party with 10 nationalities represented and 35 non-Bahá’ís present. During “Education Week” a radio broadcast was given in “Bahá’í Ideals in Education.” Copies were distributed to teachers and principals of schools. Public relation work was very strong here with 75 leading people receiving literature. A lending library has been established.

Charlottetown—Through May and June, 1945 weekly advertised meetings were held at the Queen Hotel and a series of 20 broadcasts was finished. Early in July a Bahá’í Library was opened with Florence Cox in residence; and the room was open daily and considerable literature was given and sent out. There was a weekly advertised public meeting there from July to October 1st. Mrs. Cox also conducted a class on “Dawn Breakers” for several weeks. On October 1st it was decided to move the meetings to the Queen Hotel while retaining the Bahá’í Library, as the room was too small for the fall projects.

“Since October our entire effort has centered around the teaching activities of Mrs. Moffett. When she left on February 25th, immediate plans were drawn up to consolidate the gains of more than four months of intensive effort, as follows: 1. Study Class under L.S.A. to complete ‘Dispensation,’ followed by ‘Heart of the Gospel’ with Bahá’í and Christian references. 2. Weekly public meetings — forums, musicales, addresses — newspapers and radio publicity, at the Queen Hotel, alternating with meetings at the homes of the McMays and the Gearys on Saturday evenings. 3. Fireside established by Mrs. Moffett at the home of Helen Gidden to be continued each week. 4. Two Feasts of Attraction, Feb. 27th and March 20th and a special New Year broadcast with Spring music and a Bahá’í talk on ‘The Return of Spring.’

“Mrs. Moffett returned March 25th to April 4th, and classes and conferences were held at the Queen Hotel and at the various homes; with a number of social occasions. Successful contact was made with most of the people on her ‘attracted’ list.

Local Bahá’í News

The first MILWAUKEE Bahá’í marriage took place on March 9, 1946, when Miss Florence Masshardt, a WAC stationed at Fort Dix, New Jersey, and Mr. Albert S. Royse of Columbus, Ohio, were united at the Bahá’í Center, 744 North 4th Street, Milwaukee. The bride and groom presented letters of consent from all four parents, and the ceremony was witnessed by the chairman and secretary of the Milwaukee Bahá’í Spiritual Assembly, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s marriage tablet was read, the groom repeated, “Verily, we are content with the Will of God,” and the bride rejoined, “Verily, we are satisfied with the Desire of God.”

The printed program for the Latin American evening scheduled by the NEW YORK Bahá’ís for June 7th, included the Spanish translation of the inscriptions above the entrances to the House of Worship. The entertainment was to include music by Señor Angel del Busto, composer and bassoon virtuoso, and Gladys Mayo del Busto, and two sound motion pictures, the Walt Disney “South of the Border,” and “Americans All.”

Some good ideas for weekly Bahá’í talks are given in the programs for WEST CHESTER, PA. Among them were the following: A New Justice for a New Day, Youth Prepares for Peace, True Happiness through Religion, The Millenial Promise, World Cooperation, Dedication to a Cause, Freedom as a Step toward World Peace, Love and Fellowship, Pales-

Youth dance at the cabin in West Englewood, N. J. held at the time of a Bahá’í youth conference from nine northeastern states, held in the New York Bahá’í Center and in West Englewood, May 18 and 19, 1946.

A world unity forum was conducted in BEVERLY, MASS., on April 20th. Harlan Foster Ober was chairman. Dr. Glenn Shook, professor of physics at Wheaton College, spoke on "Atomic Energy and a Unified World," while Mrs. Wendell Bacon spoke on "The Price of World Peace is World Religion." There were thirty-four present of whom thirteen were non-Baha’i.

Community cooperation is practiced by LOS ANGELES in its widely distributed program. The telephone numbers are listed for information concerning Baha’i classes not only in Los Angeles but also for Alhambra, Beverly Hills, Burbank, Glendale, Long Beach, Maywood, Pasadena, San Marino, and Santa Monica. The Los Angeles ideas for subjects include The Perfect Man; The Path of True Liberty; Panorama of Religions; Three types of consultation; The Door of Hope: the Bab; The Fulfillment of Prophecy: Baha’u’llah; and New Life for the World.

News of Other Lands

Geneva Baha’i Bureau

The annual report from Mrs. Anne Lynch, secretary of the International Baha’i Bureau at Geneva, Switzerland, contains interesting news of the European Baha’is.

One of the functions of the Bureau is to maintain an international Baha’i library. To this end all Baha’i publishing committees are asked to send two copies of each publication printed since 1939. The Bureau already has Baha’i literature in 42 languages.

The Bureau also serves as a link between isolated believers and groups of believers in Europe and other parts of the world and as a central bookstore. It has a large number of books, pamphlets and multigraphed material available for distribution and sale. Since financial conditions in most European countries are very difficult, it would be only fair to set aside part of this stock for free gifts. The report adds, "Will the friends whom this may interest get in touch with the Bureau? Let us lose no time in lending a hand to those who need such help in promoting the Baha’i Message." Address Baha’i Bureau, 40 Grand Rue, Geneva, Switzerland.

The following countries are now in touch with the Geneva Bureau: Austria, Austria, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Egypt, France, Germany, Great Britain, Morocco, Norway, Palestine, Persia, and the U.S.A.

The report from Austria shows only eight Baha’is left of the once flourishing community of over eighty. The food situation is very grave. Luise Lappinger, former member of the Vienna Assembly, wrote on April 4, "Food is so scarce that |I often wonder how it is possible to live on so little."

An earnest seeker, Mr. Renard of Ligny, Belgium, wrote to the Bureau in 1940 expressing his desire to take the proper steps to become a Baha’i. In 1946 he writes: "I had hoped so much to regain possession of my minute stock of Baha’i literature and my annotations made in studying it. But I had served in the Army, my wife had taken refuge in France and my house had been plundered in 1940—nothing was left...

I would be very grateful to receive all the literature that you can send to me on the Cause and wish to assure you that I have the most ardent desire to continue my study of it in order to consecrate my efforts to the promotion of so lofty a Faith."

Marta Weiss, Kesselwarm, Esslingen, a/N wrote to the Bureau in April requesting addresses of Baha’i groups throughout the world, adding, "It is so important for our youth to have the stimulating experience of hearing and learning from youth of other countries. We would be very grateful for such a list." As the addresses at the Geneva Bureau are 6 years old youth groups in the countries reached by this report are asked to get in direct touch with Marta.

Vuk Echtner of Prague, Czechoslovakia, spoke on the Baha’i Cause as the New World Order in the city of Pilsen in April. He feels very much the lack of information material: pamphlets, leaflets, etc.

Madame Acard, "Le Clos Fleuri," La Poterie, Hyeres (Var), France, has adopted two children and is bringing them up as Baha’is. She expresses gratitude for parcels sent by American friends and adds, "The only thing I dare ask for is baby food and soap. . . . And yet I must say that I long for news more than I do for food. It does not matter if the friends write in English. I could have the letters translated."

Bahá'í groups in Zurich and North-eastern Switzerland remain firm and continue seed sowing through talking with friends about the Cause, distributing their lending publications and occasionally holding public meetings. The American friends will be interested to know that the Zurich group owes its beginnings to the labors of Mr. Mason Remey and Mrs. Anna Kunz.

"The Fragrance of Letters" by Ruhiyih Khanum

This beautiful and inspiring article appeared in the January number of "The Herald of the South," Australian Bahá'í Magazine. The author quotes the many letters from all over the world which stream into the Guardian's mail bag and adds her own illuminating comments. We can make only a few brief excerpts from this heart warming article.

"From letters one glean bright and lovely facets of the many-sided whole that goes to make up Bahá'í activity and thought. Here is an excerpt from a Regional Teaching Committee's bulletin (of which there are dozens now to meet the needs of the many believers and the work they undertake): 'Senor Pecora Blue Mountain, our Bahá'í brother, a native Peruvian of Inca Indian origin, is making a goodwill tour for South America. He visits the Bahá'ís in the cities through which he passes, sharing that very valued quality of fellowship and love Bahá'ís know so well. We deeply appreciate the privilege of this contact. While in Birmingham, (Alabama) it was arranged for him to give a piano concert of South American music over station WSGN . . .'

"These regional News Letters or Bulletins are very stimulating reading. Take this, for instance: 'Please understand the purpose of this publication. It is to try and keep you informed of the plans and activities of this committee and of the region in the hope that by so doing we all may become better acquainted and more unified and thus better able to spread the light of the Faith and cast the anchor of its Administrative Order throughout the states of Utah, Wyoming and Colorado, thence throughout America, and thence throughout the world.' Those 'thences' are pretty ambitious! The calm, determined way he rolls them out one would not be surprised if he had added 'and thence throughout the Solar System.'"

International Relief

(Editors' note: The following bulletin was received just as Bahá'í News was being made up. Part of it is being printed in this issue. Other addresses will be given later.)

The Committee on International Relief 1946-1947 appeals to assemblies, regional committees, groups, and isolated believers to send immediately names and addresses of individual believers, assemblies, and groups in Europe and the Philippines in need of relief, to its chairman Mrs. Randolph Bolles, Box 165, Washington, Conn. Specify if possible the kind of relief most needed.

What and Where to Send Attached is a list of believers who are in urgent need of assistance. Confine the relief to food, clothing, edible fats, and other essentials. It is not intended that cash be sent to the individual Bahá'ís.

This committee recommends to Bahá'ís residing in:

Western States of the United States and Western Canada to concentrate their relief upon the Philippines at present and the far eastern countries when names and addresses will be available.

Middle Western States to concentrate on Finland, Norway, Switzerland, Holland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Jugoslavia, Germany, and Hungary.

Southern States and Eastern Canada to concentrate on the southern part of France—Marseilles, Lyon, Hyères, Toulouse.

Eastern States and Eastern Canada (including New England) to concentrate on the rest of France, on Germany, and on Great Britain.

Packages to Europe are not to exceed 42 inches in length and girth, and their weight is not to exceed 11 lbs, including wrapping. Postage: 14 cents per pound. One package a week (per person).

This service is now available only to the American zone in Germany. It is recommended that dehydrated food and powdered milk be shipped in preference to canned food. (Powdered milk is more nourishing and palatable.) Edible fats in tins only. Avoid any glass containers. Coffee beans, tea, dried fruits, sugar, hard candies, chocolate, sweet cocoa, sewing thread, darning thread (except for England), canned meats, canned fish, vitamins, first aid medicines (except for England), all kinds of wearing apparel, shoes, underwear, bed linens, towels, etc. Please see that all garments are usable, cleaned and repaired. It is hoped that the National Spiritual Assembly will recommend all local assemblies in the United States and Canada to appoint relief committees to collaborate and assist in this vital and imperative work.

Address all correspondence to the chairman of the Committee for International Relief, Mrs. Randolph Bolles, Box 165, Washington, Connecticut.

Relief Agencies

"I Desire Distinction for You"

Be pure, O people of God, be pure; be righteous, be righteous ... The betterment of the world can be accomplished through pure and goodly deeds, through commendable and seemly conduct ... Equity is the most fundamental among human virtues ... He that is unjust in his judgment is destitute of the characteristics that distinguish man's station ... Be ye the stewards of God amongst His creatures, and the emblems of His generosity amidst His people ... Let truthfulness and courtesy be your adorning—let your acts be a guide unto all kind, for unity and accord; for love and justice. In brief, you must become distinguished in all the virtues of the human world; for faithfulness and sincerity; for justice and fidelity; for firmness and steadfastness; for philanthropic deeds and service to the human world; for love toward every human being; for unity and accord with all people; for removing prejudices and promoting international peace. Finally, you must become distinguished for heavenly illumination and acquiring the bestowals of God. I desire this distinction for you.

BAHÁ'ULÁH

I desire distinction for you. The Bahá'ís must be distinguished from others of humanity. But this distinction must not depend upon wealth — that they should become more affluent than other people. I do not desire for you financial distinction. It is not an ordinary distinction I desire; not scientific, commercial, industrial distinction. For you I desire spiritual distinction; that is, you must become eminent and distinguished in morals. In the love of God you must become distinguished from all else. You must become distinguished for loving humanity; for unity and accord; for love and justice. In brief, you must become distinguished in all the virtues of the human world; for faithfulness and sincerity; for justice and fidelity; for firmness and steadfastness; for philanthropic deeds and service to the human world; for love toward every human being; for unity and accord with all people; for removing prejudices and promoting international peace. Finally, you must become distinguished for heavenly illumination and acquiring the bestowals of God. I desire this distinction for you.

"Praying Speedy Initial Victories"

Rejoice at news of impending departure of pioneers for Transatlantic field of service. Delighted at appointment of Latin American committees; at noble determination of National Teaching Committee, and projects for proclamation of Faith to masses. Urge all agencies cooperate, bend energies, and persevere in attainment of all objectives of Plan. Praying speedy initial victories in both hemispheres.

All Must Participate

(The following is a portion of the Guardian's long letter to the individual believers, dated June 15, 1946.)

Dear beloved friends:

It is not for us, at this crucial hour, to delve into the future, to speculate on the possibilities of the Plan and its orientation, to conjecture on its impact on the unfolding of an embryonic World Order, or to dwell on the glories and triumphs which it may hold in store, or to seek to delineate the mysterious course which a God-given Mission, impelled by forces beyond our power to predict or appraise, may pursue. To try to obtain a clear view of the shape of things to come would be premature inasmuch as the glittering prizes to be won are directly dependent on the measure of success which the combined efforts that are now being exerted must yield. Ours is the duty to fix our gaze with undeviating attention on the duties and responsibilities confronting us at this present hour, to concentrate our resources, both material and spiritual, on the tasks that lie immediately ahead, to insure that no time is wasted, that no opportunity is missed, that no obligation is evaded, that no task is half-heartedly performed, that no decision is procrastinated. The task summoning us to a challenge, unprecedented in its gravity and force, is too vast and sacred, the time too short, the hour too perilous, the workers too few, the call too insistent, the resources too inadequate, for us to allow these precious and fleeting hours to slip from our grasp, and to suffer the prizes within our reach to be endangered or forfeited. So much depends upon us, so pregnant with possibilities is the present stage in the evolution of the Plan, that great and small, individuals, groups and Assemblies, white and colored, young and old, neophytes and veterans, settlers, pioneers, itinerant teachers and administrators, as isolated believers, as organizers of groups, and as contributors to the formation of local or national Assemblies, as builders of the Temple, as laborers on the home-teaching front, or in Latin America, or in the new transatlantic field of service—all, without exception and in every sphere of activity, however modest, restricted, or inconspicuous, must participate and labor, assiduously and continually, until every ounce of our energy is spent, until, tired but blissful, our promised harvest is brought in, and our pledge to our Beloved fully redeemed.

However dark the outlook, however laborious the task, however strange and inhospitable the environment, however vast the distances that must be traversed, however scarce the amenities of life, however
To be privileged to render, in His stead, on so colossal a scale, at such a challenging hour, and in the service of so sublime a Plan, so great and enduring a service, is a bounty which we can never adequately appraise. We stand too close to the noble edifice our hands are rearing, the din and tumult into which a war-devastated world is now plunged are too distracting, our own share in the furtherance of those global aims, tasks and problems that are increasingly absorbing the attention of mankind and its leaders is as yet too circumscribed for us to be in a position to evaluate the contribution which we, as the executors of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Mandate, as the torch-bearers of a civilization of which that Order is the mainspring and precursor, are now being led through the ineradicable dispensations of an almighty Providence, to make to the world triumph of our Faith, as well as to the ultimate redemption of all mankind.

“A God-Given Mandate”

Beloved Friends:

Shoghi Effendi has addressed to every individual Bahá’í of North America a communication which immerses us in the potent and creative spirit of the world-embracing Divine Plan destined to assure the consummation of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. In this message each of us may draw near the very central citadel of the Bahá’í Revelation, where its floodgates of power are open and the forces of inspiration are undimmed and unchecked by an ignorant world. There can be no higher privilege for us at this crucial hour than to ponder the Guardian’s words, concentrate on their significance, and open our hearts to their blessing.

With all possible swiftness, the National Spiritual Assembly has taken steps to place a copy in the hands of every believer. In mimeographed form, ten pages in length, the communication, which has been entitled “A God-Given Mandate,” is being addressed to the individual home by first class mail. While preparing the large edition needed for this purpose, one copy has first been sent to each National Committee, each Regional Teaching Committee, and each local Assembly. These advance copies are for the inspiration of such Bahá’í gatherings as are held before individual distribution shall have been effected, and to prepare the friends by consultation to realize the vital importance of this message issued from the World Center of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

“Might not this second and still greater adventure,” the Guardian asks, after speaking of the first Seven Year Plan, “undertaken by the trustees of a God-Given Mandate, demonstrate in both hemispheres, despite the prodigious scale on which it is launched, such prodigies of service as will carry its prosecutors far beyond their avowed objectives, and eclipse, through the wisdom, the valor and exploits of those pioneers and administrators immediately responsible for its planning and execution, the splendor of every previous collective enterprise undertaken by the followers of Bahá’u’lláh in the West?”

“However dark the outlook,” the Guardian also states, “however laborious the task, however strange and inhospitable the environment, however vast the distances that must be traversed, however scarce the amenities of life, however irksome the means of travel, however annoying the restrictions, however listless and confused the minds of the people and races contacted, however trying the setbacks that may be suffered, we must, under no circumstances, either falter or flinch. Our reliance on the unfailing grace of an all-loving, all-preserving, ever-sustaining, ever-watchful Providence must, however much we may be buffeted by circumstances, remain unshaken until the very end.”

Immense will be the changes in the conditions of the world before the fateful year of 1953 is attained. Great will be the spiritual risings and fallings. May to us each and all be granted the supreme bounty of faithfulness, loyalty and devotion, unity and activity, through every passing day until that goal is won!

Death proffered unto every faithful believer the cup that is life indeed. It brought to us rich joy and the bearer of gladness. It conferred the gift of everlasting life.—BAHÁ’U’LLÁH.

Bahá’í News

Bahá’í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Bahá’í Community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: “The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function... I would urge you to encourage its success, in that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise.

“It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá’í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause.”

Bahá’í News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by the Bahá’í News Editorial Committee: Garretta Busey, chairman, John Ashburn, Alice Simmons Cox, Mabel Hyde Paine, Margaret Swengel. Editorial office: Miss Garretta Busey, 545 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois.

Please report changes of address to which Bahá’í News is to be sent and other matters pertaining to its distribution to the Bahá’í National Office, 538 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.
The Proposed Bahá’í Radio Station

Since the Convention session which indicated such interest in the possibility of acquiring an FM Radio Station at the Temple, in the light of the Guardian’s statement on the subject, the National Spiritual Assembly has consulted with a member of the Radio Committee, appointed a special committee to investigate further into the details of the matter, and acted to keep the subject actively before the members.

This is in the nature of a brief progress report for the information of the Bahá’í community.

Among the principal items bearing upon the matter are:

1. The Guardian has received a detailed report. His consent must be obtained before the Assembly would feel justified in using the House of Worship as a radio transmitter or studio.

2. The necessary FM wave band is still obtainable.

3. FM broadcast programs have as yet only a very small audience, but the listeners will undoubtedly increase from year to year.

4. Responsible firms urge all interested to realize that actual installation and operation costs are likely to be very much higher than would be indicated by advance estimates. Figures already available run from $30,000 to $75,000.

Further reports will be made from time to time.

Treasurer’s Report

Dear Bahá’í friends:

Now since your National Assembly has established a new budget of $50,000.00 for the current Bahá’í year it is well for us to watch form month to month how we progress towards the achievement of this goal, for upon our success or failure to support the financial requirement of the Guardian’s Plan will depend the success of the whole Seven Year Plan. During the month of May, which is the first month of our new Bahá’í year, our budget was $20,333.30. Contributions from May 1st to May 31st amounted to $11,448.81, which means that there was a deficit in meeting our budget obligations of $9,884.49.

One hundred Assemblies contributed during the month of May, 39 Assemblies did not contribute, 55 Groups contributed and 102 isolated believers contributed.

Regional Conference at Banff, Alberta, Canada, 1945. For the announcement of the 1946 conference, to be held in August, see Bahá’í News for July.

With the initiation of the new Seven Year Plan, the opening up of Europe as a new teaching territory, the commencement of the interior decoration of the Temple, and with the increased financial demands made upon the Fund by Inter-America and National Teaching Work, it is well for each believer to follow closely the degree of “complete, exact and immediate obedience” which the Guardian is calling for.

With delays beyond the Treasurer’s control your Yearly Report had not yet been sent out when this was written. However, it is hoped that in the near future each believer will receive a detailed report of all of the different expenses of the Faith.

Inquiries regarding the handling of the Fund, or any other question, will be gladly answered by the Treasurer’s Office.

PHILIP SPRAGUE, Treasurer

National Committees

International Relief

The Committee on International Relief reemphasizes the importance of sending relief packages to the Friends in war-devastated countries. Again, the Committee emphasizes the advisability of sending help through reliable agencies, such as CARE. This agency has acquired army surplus parcels: it guarantees delivery within three months (or less) or money back. The parcels include solid meat, stews and hashes (9.8 lbs.); fruit jam and pudding (3.6 lbs.); vegetables (2.3 lbs.); sugar and candy (3.9 lbs.); cocoa, coffee and beverage powders (1.1 lbs.); evaporated milk (0.8 lbs.); preserved butter (0.5 lbs.); cheese (0.4 lbs.); and a can opener, cigarettes, and soap. This 40 pound package costs $15.00. Send order blanks to CARE, 50 Broadstreet, New York, New York.

In using such agencies, unfortunate experiences such as that of having packages arrive filled with stones or with all of the chocolate removed may be avoided.

Some addresses have already been given in Bahá’í News for July. A list of additional addresses follows:

I. England.

On all parcels clearly mark “Gift—Not for Resale” both on front of the package, and on the customs declaration tag. Gift packages may not be sent more than once a month when mailed by the same addressee. There is a small duty on most foodstuffs that must be paid by the addressee. Make sure that all clothing sent is labelled on tag as “worn.”

To comply with both U.S. and British postal regulations, gift packages should not weigh over 11 pounds gross weight or be over 42" in length or 72" in length and girth combined. They may be insured, but not registered.

Location of Pioneers

The North American believers will be interested in knowing where our pioneers in Latin America are now stationed. The list follows:

- Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Bode, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
- Mrs. Louise Caswell, Panama City, Panama.
- Mr. Hasle M. Cornbleth, Quito, Ecuador.
- Miss Flora E. Hottes, Montevideo, Uruguay.
- Dr. Malcolm M. King, Port-au-Prince, Haiti.
- Miss Josephine Kruka, Havana, Cuba.
- Mr. Artemus Lamb, Punta Arenas, Chile.
- Miss Evelyn Larson, San Jose, Costa Rica.
- Miss Elena Marsella, Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic.
- Miss Eve Nickin, Lima, Peru.
- Miss Cora Oliver, Panama City, Panama.
- Miss Gwennie D. Sholtis, La Paz, Bolivia.
- Miss Jean Silver, Havana, Cuba.
- Mrs. Marcia Steward, Guatemala City, Guatemala.
- Mrs. Shirley A. Warde, Buenos Aires, Argentina.
- Mrs. Gayle Woolson, Bogota, Columbia.

A former pioneer in Brazil, Miss Gertrude Eisenberg, has recently returned to the United States, but her place in Sao Paulo will soon be taken by Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Miessler, who expect to leave in August for permanent settlement in Brazil.

This distribution of teachers leaves two South American countries, Paraguay, and Venezuela, and three Central American countries, El Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua, without North American pioneers. However, Marcia Steward is visiting all of the Central American centers consulting with Spiritual Assemblies, holding public meetings, and helping with extension teaching.

Elizabeth Cheney, who has been stationed in Bogota, Columbia, for several months, has recently visited Bahá’í groups in Cartagena and Barranquilla, Colombia, and Assemblies in Caracas, Venezuela, and Havana, Cuba. Miss Cheney is en route home. She will be located in Wilmette for at least a year and will serve as Secretary of the Inter-America Committee, taking over these duties from Miss Edna True, who is now organizing the work of the new European Teaching Committee.

The Thirty-Fourth Annual Souvenir Feast

By chartered bus, automobile, train and ferry, about 500 Bahá’ís and their friends gathered with picnic lunches June 29th to participate in the Thirty-Fourth Annual Commemoration of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Unity Feast, on the grounds at Evergreen Place, West Englewood, New Jersey.

For the first time in all those... years it rained intermittently throughout the day, thereby breaking a tradition, but as the Chairman, Mr. H. Borrah Kavelin, said, it is traditional for Bahá'ís to break traditions.

The Picnic. At noontime, guests began arriving and found picnic tables arranged for their convenience under the trees on the west lawn. Desserts of cakes and doughnuts; and hot and cold beverages were served to them under an awning at the south side of the Cabin. It started to rain at two o'clock, but the friends found adequate shelter on the porches and in the Cabin.

The Program. By the time the program was scheduled to begin, the sun had come out and danced on the sprays of water playing in the fountains, and glistened through the drops of rain which clung to the ferns and flowers in the rock gardens and hanging baskets. Light was reflected everywhere! Everyone gathered on the east lawn which recently had been graded and seeded, and formed an amphitheatre about the east porch of the Cabin. A loud speaker system made it easy to hear the program from any place on the lawn. This is the first time that the program has been presented in this part of the grounds, and it was found very much better, as the heat of the afternoon sun was not as intense as it is on the west side at that time of the day.

The chairman, Mr. H. Borrah Kavelin, opened the program with a prayer and a few words of greeting and then introduced the pianist, Lucille Rothman, a 16 year old honor student of the Curtis School of Music in Philadelphia. She played most brilliantly Robert Schuman's "Papillons," Opus No. 2. Mrs. Emilie Moore Kalantar read the address which the Master gave to the group gathered here in 1912 at the first Unity Feast. Then the pianist Lucille Rothman played "Rondo Capriccioso," Opus No 14, by Felix Mendelssohn, and two encores.

The theme, "Birth of a World Commonwealth," was divided into four phases and was presented as follows: Individual's Aspect, Bruce Wendell; Youth's Aspect, Miriam Raubitschek; Social Aspect, Bahiyyih Randall Ford; Spiritual Aspect, Dr. Ali Kuli Khan.

Each subject was handled briefly but thoroughly and clearly and was very well received by the audience. The Chairman closed with the "Prayer for All Nations" and announced the service which would follow at the Pine Grove where Safi Kinney conducted a half-hour of prayer and chanting on the ground made holy by the sacred presence of our Beloved Master, in June 1912.

Once again it started to rain, and so the guests came indoors. While some finished the contents of their picnic baskets, or partook of refreshments served by the committee, others met and visited friends they had not had the opportunity to greet during the afternoon. At 7 p.m. the sun again shone and cast a friendly parting glow through the pines upon the scene of this thirty-fourth Unity Feast at West Englewood.

News of Assemblies and Groups

Inter-Racial Difficulties in South Bend

Mrs. Sarah Russell, secretary of the South Bend Assembly, reports that inter-racial gatherings in their new center have been the cause of threats from unknown persons. Mrs. Russell has remodeled her grandmother's house, next door to her own, part of which is to be used as a Bahá'í center. She writes:

"South Bend had an Inter-Community Conference, the first of its kind, here Sunday, with believers from Ohio, Indianapolis, and Fort Wayne. We had about twenty-five visitors and a wonderful meeting. The youth held their conference here also. Both were at the Y.W.C.A. The social gatherings were held at the new center. About seventeen or more youth attended, most of them colored. The neighbors were on their porches and didn't like the picture." Mrs. Russell goes on to say that her husband was called by telephone at his place of business and told that the racial gatherings would have to stop immediately or the Ku Klux Klan would have something to say about it. When Mr. Russell informed the police and the FBI, he was told that, since it was not a threat by mail or from another state, it was a local police matter. If it happened again, however, he was to let the FBI know about it.

Successful Meeting in Atlanta

Atlanta reports that the most successful public meeting since Dorothy Baker's visit in January was held on June 30th. The thirty-nine people who attended (twenty-three colored and sixteen white) were very much interested in a talk given by Mrs. Marguerite Ulrich, whose subject was "God Calleth the Nations." Music was provided by Miss Marjorie Ulrich, Miss Florence Ulrich, Lecture room in the Hazratul-Quds at Sydney, New South Wales.

Latin American Evening

The Pan-America Committee of New York City presented a highly successful Latin-American Evening at the center on Friday, June 7th. The program included Angel del Busto, world's foremost bassoon virtuoso, who was accompanied at the piano by his wife, Gladys Mayo del Busto. Two movies were shown: Walt Disney's sound and technicolor, "South of the Border" and "Americans All." The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers, Spanish shawls, and the flags of the twenty-one Latin-American countries. Borrah Kavelin gave the Message of the Nineteen Day Feasts and at the close he sang, "In the Name of God." An invitation was broadcast over the local Spanish station, WBNX, and there was a capacity audience.

Public Meetings in St. Louis

The St. Louis Assembly has put out a very interesting program of Sunday evening public meetings for July and August, with two speakers for each evening. The speakers are Mr. Louis L. Landry, Mrs. Velma Sherrill, Mr. Anna M. Ferrill, Mr. Nayan F. Hartfield, Mrs. Mary Wunsch, Mrs. Jennie Anderson, and Mrs. Mary Wallace. An interesting feature of the program is the announcement of the subject for July 7th, "Religions of the Ages." The nine living religions are listed with the approximate dates of their origin, a device which makes the subject look very tempting.

News Bulletins

The June bulletins issued by Boston and San Francisco have come to us this month. We know that many other bulletins and news letters are issued by assemblies in between these two coastal communities.

Boston's Center Fund

Boston is trying to raise money for a new center without interfering with contributions to the National Bahá'í Fund. Proper attendance at the Nineteen Day Feasts and at the public meetings was emphasized in the bulletin. On the latter subject, we quote: "Our Program committee has been and is doing an outstanding job of securing a steady succession of splendid speakers for our regular Sunday meetings. The least we can do is to attend these meetings with at least one non-Bahá'í and as many more as we can properly interest.''

News from Japan

The San Francisco news letter contains this interesting note: "Michael Jamir reports in a letter from Japan, 'In a Bahá'í way things seem to be shaping into a regular study group which will have its first meeting this Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Nagamma (Mrs. Emma Smith's sister) and Mr. Sawada know many of the Teachings.'”

Baha'í Wills

At one of the feasts in San Francisco, Dr. Nichols, at the request of the Assembly, opened a discussion on the question of cremation and wills. The news letter summarizes this interesting discussion as follows: "It was pointed out that many new Bahá'ís do not know of Bahá'u'lláh's prohibition of cremation. 'Abdu'l-Bahá explained that rapid disintegration of the body is contrary to laws of nature and not to be allowed, unless public health requires cremation because of an epidemic of contagious disease.'

"Friends who have included a request for cremation in their wills before becoming Bahá'ís often fail to change the will and a burial procedure, which as Bahá'ís they would not have wished, is carried out by non-Bahá'í relatives who are not acquainted or in sympathy with Bahá'í laws.

"It was pointed out that Bahá'u'lláh has left a definite plan for distribution of one's estate which it is recommended that Bahá'ís follow, though it is not a law. It was suggested that sealed copies of wills be given to the Assembly for safe keeping and for checking after the passing of believers, to make certain that distribution of the estate is made in accordance with their wishes. Also that it would be wise for friends, whose families do not live in the community, to leave names and addresses of nearest of kin with the Assembly for notification in case of serious illness or death.

"In this connection we pass along a suggestion from one of the friends which the assembly found acceptable. That is, to have one's funeral, or that of any Bahá'í for whom you might have the responsibility, listed in the vital statistics section of local newspapers as a Bahá'í service.'

Letter to the Editors

Thank you for publishing the account of our Naw Rúz celebration in the May News issue. There is, however, one error which should perhaps be rectified if possible. The person who gave the splendid talk was Mrs. Ina Trimble and not myself. The reason I should like you if possible to correct this in the next issue is that I want Mrs. Trimble's friends in the United States and Canada to share the fact that she prepared and gave it and to know how splendid it was. Ina Trimble, is, you see, a crippled lady who feels that her contribution to the Faith is very limited. This is not the case. Besides, she was the first resident Bahá'í in this city. If it isn't too much trouble, would you mind making this correction so that Ina's friends can know she is getting out of her home whenever possible and is very ably making her contribution to the Faith which has meant so much to her since becoming a member?

Thank you very much.

Sincerely yours,
Kathleen M. Rimpler

News of Other Lands

Germany

A report from Esslingen covering the year 102, April, 1943-March, 1946, written by Fr. Maria Weiss, shows great activity among these staunch Bahá'ís and also a spirit of joyous devotion to our beloved Cause.

For eight years all Bahá'ís in Germany was dissolved and the friends, mindful of Bahá'u'lláh's injunction to obey the government under all circumstances, did not meet until May 23, 1945, after the abolishment of this prohibitive measure.

From that time on the Esslingen Bahá'ís were intensely active. The Bahá'í Festivals, November 12 and March 21 were celebrated in beautifully decorated homes with selections from the Holy Writings and music. Unity Feasts were attended by about 30 believers and 15 youth. Regular weekly meetings were devoted to a thorough study of the Teachings. Thirteen new believers were registered during the year. Three well-attended public meetings were given at the Bahá'í School during December. Great interest was shown by those attending and introductory courses were arranged for those desiring to know more about the Cause. The public meetings had to be discontinued on account of lack of heat.

Hildegard Muller reports that the youth meet each week for study-teaching and are attracting new members. They publish a youth-newspaper each nineteen days. The wonderful conclusion of the year was the youth meeting on March 17, 1946, in Esslingen Bahá'í Home, where 12 different cities were represented.

Egypt

Bahá'u'lláh's prophecy concerning the atomic bomb, and articles on the Bahá'í Faith and its Peace Plan have appeared in the Egyptian newspapers and been broadcast from the Egyptian Broadcasting Station.

Bahá'ís of Tanta in Lower Egypt have endured mob persecutions with great fortitude and have finally been rewarded. An important government official summoned the ringleaders of the mob and told them: "Your evil deeds have shown you to be far removed from the teachings of Islam, for Islam is a religion of peace. It also seems that you are ignorant of the fact that there are more than 400 different religions on the face of the earth and that the Qur'an says: 'If your Lord should so desire it, He would gather all the peoples of the world into one nation.' Then he warned them to stop their attacks on the Bahá'ís and made them sign a statement of good behavior. Since then, the believers of Tanta have not been harmed or molested.

The Bahá'ís of Sudan are hoping to establish a Spiritual Assembly in Khartoum soon.

Abyssinia

Through the efforts of the Bahá'í pioneer in Addis Ababa, Sabri Effendi Elias, a number of outstanding Abyssinians have recently embraced the Faith. The Abyssinian Government has at last granted officially to Sabri Effendi Elias the necessary permit to live in Abyssinia permanently if he desires.

Australia and New Zealand

Two Summer Schools were held at "Bolton Place," Yerrinbool, one in October, 1945, and one in January, 1946. The management, which, up to this time, had been the personal responsibility of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Bolton, the founders of the School, has been transferred to the N.S.A. of Australia and New Zealand.

Summer School was held in New Zealand at the Auckland Center. The afternoon sessions were devoted to intensive study. The evening sessions consisted of lectures or readings followed by questions and discussion. There were non-Bahá'ís guests and guest speakers, among them the Reverend C. W. Chandler, a Church of England Canon, who is sympathetic with the Bahá'í Message and who in 1944 invited an American Bahá'í station in Auckland during the war to preach in his church.

"For the Triumph of My Cause"

O SON OF MAN! Humble thyself before Me, that I may graciously visit thee. Arise for the triumph of My cause, that while yet on earth thou mayest obtain the victory.

Lauded be Thy name, O Thou in Whose hands is the kingdom of all names, and in the grasp of Whose might are all that are in heaven and all that are on earth! I entreat Thee, by Him Who is Thy most Effulgent Name Whom Thou hast made a target for the darts of Thy decree in Thy path, O Thou the King of eternity, to rend asunder the veils that have shut off Thy creatures from the horizon of Thy glory, that haply they may turn their faces in the direction of Thy mercy, and draw nigh unto the Day-Spring of Thy loving-kindness.

Leave not Thy servants to themselves, O my Lord! Draw them through the influence of Thine utterances unto the Dawning-Place of Thine inspiration, and to the Fountain of Thy Revelation, and to the Treasury of Thy wisdom. Thou art He to Whose strength and power all things have testified, Whose Purpose nothing whatsoever of all that hath been created in Thy heaven and on Thy earth hath been able to frustrate.

Render, then, victorious, O my God, Thy servants who have set their faces toward Thee, and directed their steps to the seat of Thy grace. Send down, then, upon them what will keep them safe from the danger of turning to any one but Thee, and from fixing their eyes upon aught else except thyself.

Potent art Thou to do what Thou wilt, and to rule as Thou pleasest. There is no God but Thee, the God of glory and wisdom.

The Responsibilities of Maturity

Beloved friends:

The more we ponder the far-reaching implications of the Guardian’s letter of June 15, following swiftly upon the second Seven Year Plan cabled to the Convention, the more ardent becomes our resolve to act upon this call inaugurating so important a stage in the world mission of the American Bahá’ís.

The majority of the friends were active in the Faith when the Guardian initiated the teaching mission for Central and South America. Never in our Bahá’í experience had so great a teaching task been laid upon us in addition to the basic work of spreading the message in our own land. In that hour began the maturity of soul which must characterize the members of the American Bahá’í community. The nature of maturity is ability to take care of one’s self and at the same time take care of others who are yet small and weak.

The Latin American teaching work, historically, represented a spiritual parenthood for the believers of the United States and Canada. Collectively we assumed responsibility for the protection, guidance, support and education of children (as others had cared for us in the earlier years of the Faith) until they in their turn could evolve to their own mature state and join as partners in the work of the Divine Plan.

It is an astounding miracle, that in so brief a time, with so few available workers, the basis of the Bahá’í administrative order could have been laid in the republics of Central and South America, and the mighty power of the Bahá’í spirit given these precious new instruments by which to hasten the salvation of a darkened world. A task utterly impossible if undertaken by individuals on their own initiative could be consummated when undertaken by individuals representing the community of the Greatest Name!

Now the American Bahá’ís are held responsible for establishing an Assembly in each of ten countries of war-torn Europe—countries not all of which can at present even receive a visit from an American Bahá’í. Already the new European Teaching Committee has outlined its work, adopted plans, and is preparing to send the first body of Bahá’í workers across the sea. An office is to be maintained in Geneva, Switzerland, for the better coordination and encouragement of the work in the various lands. New translations are being printed of standard Bahá’í works. With marvelous speed and force the challenge is being met in the name of the entire Bahá’í community.

Let those of us who cannot take a mission in the international field remember that the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh is a unit, and all types of service are acceptable and mutually interdependent. Whoever serves valiantly in his own small village here, loving the Cause and loyally supporting its needs—such a soul may surely be accounted a pioneer in the spiritual sense; and though the drums are not sounded, the work is added to the total score of victory when the task is done. With a high sense of mission may each of us catch a new and clearer vision of the importance of his or her own Bahá’í work and bring to it the consecration of the pioneer who stands alone beneath a foreign sky.

Committee Projects for the Seven Year Plan

In this report the National Spiritual Assembly informs the believers of the important projects and activities already approved for a number of national committees directly concerned with the work of the Seven Year Plan. Similar reports will be made from time to time, and each committee will make its own report
Cable from the Guardian

Profundly grieve passing dearly-beloved, great-hearted, high-minded, distinguished servant Bahá'u'lláh, John Bosch. His saintly life, pioneer services, historic contribution of institution of summer school, entitle him to rank among outstanding figures of the closing years historic, and opening years of the formative age of the Bahá'í Dispensation. Concours on high extol his exalted services. Assume his wise and valiant companion of my deepfelt sympathy. Advise hold special gathering in Temple as tribute to his imperishable memory.

Cablegram received July 29, 1946.

3. College Speakers Bureau

This committee is developing a campaign of Bahá'í literature to supplement its function of placing speakers on college platforms. The country has been divided into four zones, each zone to be under the intensive supervision of one committee member. In the distribution of Bahá'í literature, faculty members will be chosen from a number of departments such as History, Religion, Economics, Fine Arts, Oriental Languages and Culture, Sociology, Architecture, etc.

4. Public Relations Committee

This committee will carry on activities carried over and coordinated from the three committees formerly known as Contacts, Bahá'í News Service, and Public Relations.

It will provide literature and contact by mail with persons of capacity and influence whose names and addresses are selected by the committee itself or sent in by other committees and individual believers. The aim is to develop a national list for the public teaching bulletin to be issued four times a year, so that continuous contact will be maintained in the case of persons who give evidence of real interest.

Three press releases a month will be sent out—two of these directly to the press and one to assemblies, groups and other believers who can place articles in the local press. The friends will be kept informed of this and other material through a mimeographed bulletin.

Plans are under way for an advertising campaign to be conducted in national magazines. This campaign will concentrate on calling attention to a new pamphlet reprinting several talks of the Master from The Promulgation of Universal Peace, the pamphlet being entitled World Order Through World Faith. Material will be given to local Assemblies and groups which would like to repeat all or some of these advertisements in the local press.

Later reports will deal with other activities of this committee.

The Reporting of Bahá'í Activities for Bahá'í News

In order to clarify the method by which news of the various kinds of activity is to be gathered and reported for publication in Bahá'í News the National Spiritual Assembly has recorded the following general plan.

1. Local Assemblies are reminded of their duty and responsibility for submitting regular monthly reports briefly outlining the more important activities of Bahá'í activity.

Bahá'í News

Bahá'í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Bahá'í Community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: "The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function. . . . I would urge you to enlarge its scope . . . that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise."

"It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá’í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause."

Bahá'í News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá’í News Editorial Committee: Garretta Busey, chairman, John Ashton, Alice Simmons Cox, Marthe Gail, Doris Holley, Ammariah Kuns Honnold, Eleanor Sweney Hutchens, Mabel Hyde Faine, Margaret Sweney. Editorial office: Miss Garretta Busey, 503 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois.

Please report changes of address to which Bahá’í News is to be sent and other matters pertaining to its distribution to the Bahá’í National Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.
public activities and conferences in their communities.

2. Each local Assembly is authorized to appoint a News Reporter empowered to send monthly news direct to Bahá’í News.

3. Regional Teaching Committees, in addition to the reports they are expected to continue sending to the National Teaching Committee, are now responsible for sending monthly statements to Bahá’í News outlining the principal news items of the area.

4. National Committees are requested to submit monthly outlines to Bahá’í News reporting plans and projects in which the Bahá’ís are to participate and news representing the application and progress of their committee plans.

5. Regional Teaching Committees are to send a copy of their bulletins to the Bahá’í News Committee.

6. The Bahá’í News Committee will receive monthly from the National Office copies of communications from Haifa which are to be made available to the Bahá’í community; bulletins and reports received from other National Assemblies, and such other items as may come to the attention of the National Office that are not likely to be known to other contributors of news.

7. The National Office will from time to time provide editorials, bulletins, announcements and other items of general news interest and importance.

8. Bahá’í photographs are to be regarded as news of outstanding interest.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
Treasurer’s Report

During the month of June contributions received for the National Bahá’í Fund, $17,173.46; contributions to the Temple and Trustees Account, $648.25; 94 Assemblies contributed, 44 Assemblies did not contribute; 48 Groups contributed and 92 isolated believers.

During July up to July 30th the deficit in meeting our Budget amounted to $9,556.07; during the month of July contributions to the National Fund amounted to $12,422.95; and contributions to the Temple and Trustees accounts $4,159.30; 106 Assemblies contributed; 32 Assemblies did not contribute; 81 Groups contributed and 131 isolated believers; as of July 31st the deficit in meeting the Budget as set up by the N.S.A. at the beginning of this Bahá’í year amount to $12,807.22.

This really is serious because the Budget set up this year was developed from actual figures that each committee used during the past Bahá’í year.

Bahá'í Study Aids

The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh is in effect today. We have, however, yet to complete the framework on which this structure can come into expression on this earth. The Guardian tells us: "Without the study and application of the Administration, the teaching of the Cause becomes not only meaningless, but loses in effectiveness and scope."

How, then, can we better support our teaching activity and our community living than by "obtaining a more adequate understanding of the significance of Bahá'u'lláh's stupendous Revelation" as it unfolds through His own divinely ordained instrument of the Administrative Order?

To fulfill this purpose, the Bahá'í Study Aids Committee will soon have ready an outline aid for the study of the Administrative Order as a divine instrument. One copy will be sent to each Assembly secretary and to the secretary of each Regional Teaching Committee. The Study Aids Committee can only suggest that this study be undertaken, or reviewed, but as we think of the Guardian, awaiting the time when the believers "learn to function according to Bahá'í laws and principles," may we not feel our individual responsibility more keenly and, by increasing each one his own understanding and practice of the Administrative Order, hasten the coming of the Bahá'í World Commonwealth?

The Bahá'í Study Aids Committee will be glad to help any of the friends, through correspondence, with the study of the Administrative

International Relief

The friends are urged to check with their local postal authorities concerning the changes in regulations for gift packages to war-devastated countries. The contents of such packages should still be limited to essential relief items, such as non-perishable foods, clothing, soap, and medicines. Other special requests (money, expensive equipment, books, etc.) should be referred directly to the National Spiritual Assembly. The packages should be marked “GIFT PARCEL” and the contents itemized and the value stated. If such is done, in case of damage or loss, the addressee will have the opportunity of placing claim for the loss.

The Committee on International Relief suggests another organization for handling relief to Germany and Austria: Committee for the Relief of the German Needy, Inc., 220 East 23 Street, New York 10, New York.

Temple Guiding

There is no field of teaching where so many people can be reached in so short a time and with the cost of so little effort and money, as guiding at the Temple. The inquirers come from all parts of the globe, where in time Baha’i communities will be established. We, of the Temple Area, have a special privilege in having this wonderful opportunity of giving our message of hope and healing to the stream of visitors who pour through the building.

The Guides’ Committee, wishing to share this privilege with others than those of the Temple area, as well as to supply the increasing need for guides, welcomes vacation guiding. The Committee has on hand a few copies of the Guide Courses and will make them available to those seriously interested.

It is of the utmost importance for those guiding at the Temple to have the proper qualifications for meeting the public and adequately presenting the Faith. Therefore, a letter from one’s own Assembly, or from the secretary of the region in which he lives, must accompany the request for the Guide Course.

The Committee will make every effort to secure accommodations in the vicinity of the Temple and to welcome the visiting guides. Address communications to Mrs. John M. Haggard, Chairman, 1229 Cleveland St., Wilmette, Illinois.

The number of visitors for each month continues to exceed the number for the same months of previous years. In May, 1946, there were 2,754 visitors as compared with 1,821 in May, 1945. In June, 1946, there were 2,815 visitors as compared with 2,332 in June, 1945.

In May visitors came from thirty-nine states, the district of Columbia, Panama, Hawaii, the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba; and the countries of Belgium, Sweden, England, Scotland, Latvia, India, China, Argentina, Mexico, and Cape Colony, S. Africa.

In June, visitors came from forty-five states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Alberta, Quebec, Saskatchewan; Australia, Samoa, Mexico, Brazil, Peru, the Philippines, Venezuela, the Netherlands West Indies, China, Palestine, Italy, Greece, France, Holland and Sweden.

During the first six months of 1946 the total number of visitors was 11,025, which is 3,600 more than for the same period of 1945. Since we had 10,552 more last year than ever before, it is evident that the scope of Temple guide work is becoming increasingly greater each year.

Books sold at the Temple during May totaled $271.92 and during June $434.46, a total of $712.38.

Latin-American News

Incorporation of Assemblies

The second seven year plan has opened with the incorporation of the Faith in the first two South American countries. The Colombian government granted incorporation to the Bogotá Bahá’í Community, with similar protection extended to all other groups and Assemblies in that country, on May 27th of this year, while a similar incorporation was granted to the Community of Asunción, Paraguay, with protection to all other groups and Assemblies that may be formed in that country, on June 11th. Incorporation was applied for in Paraguay prior to the application in Colombia, even though it was granted a little later, and the form of application used in Colombia, and now being used in Venezuela, was worked out by the friends in Paraguay last October.

Brazil

Other news of major importance in Latin America is the opening of Brazil to the Bahá’í Cause. Because of certain difficult conditions, Brazil had been like the forgotten stepchild, even though a valiant pioneer, Mrs. Leonora Armstrong, lived there for many years, and prior to the close of the first seven year plan, was successful in forming the first Bahá’í Assembly in Bahia. Then conditions changed. Miss Virginia Orbison, who had given notable service in many parts of South America, and then returned to the United States for a much needed six months of change and medical care, was sent to Rio de Janeiro the fore part of last November. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bode followed as settlers, and an Assembly was elected in the capital this April. Miss Orbison is now arranging to transfer to Sao Paulo, the great industrial city of Brazil, where Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Miessler of Columbus Grove, Ohio, will follow her as pioneer settlers. It is hoped that a third Assembly will be formed in that city this year.

The Regional Committees

New plans are being put into effect in Latin America this year. One, the use of regional committees, which have been used successfully in North America. The 19 countries have been divided into eight regions. Each region has been asked to choose a goal city for the formation of a new Assembly this year, and each country is expected to form at least one additional group in addition.

New Memberships

During the past month fifteen membership cards have been received from the Latin-American field: three from Caracas, Venezuela; three from Havana, Cuba; one from La Paz, Bolivia; two from Guatemala City, Guatemala; one from Panama City, Panama; and five from the City of Mexico. Of the last five, three were completely new members, and two others had considered themselves as Bahá'ís for a time, but had not before signed an affirmation of faith.

Teaching by Correspondence
A correspondence teaching plan on an international scale is to be begun in Latin America this year. Outstanding people, who are universal in sentiment; those who respond at public meetings or write to radio stations asking further information about the Faith, will be circularized and taught by mail through the new correspondence teaching committee. The Masons in Venezuela and in Cuba, including 40 Venezuelan lodges and 18,000 active Cuban Masons, have offered themselves for this type of teaching. It is hoped that members of the Masonic Lodge and of other universal type groups in other Latin-American countries, will take advantage of this opportunity to learn the Bahá'í Message. Correspondence teaching in Colombia last year resulted in a second Assembly and half a dozen smaller groups.

Radio
A radio committee has been set up for Latin America, so that scripts in Spanish may be available for all groups able to obtain radio time. Mrs. Shirley Warde, who has done such outstanding radio work in North America, heads this committee, assisted by Hugo Arteagabietta and Artemus Lamb, both of Chile. Mrs. Warde is now in Buenos Aires making arrangements for the first Latin American Bahá'í Conference to be held in South America. This is tentatively scheduled for November 6 to 11 in Buenos Aires. The second Latin American Bahá'í Conference for Central America, Mexico and the Antilles, will be held in Panama City a little later in the year.

The Inter-America Committee deeply regrets the loss of efficient and beloved Miss Edna True as their secretary, but realizes that her experience is essential for the new European work. Miss Elizabeth H. Cheney has been brought in, after nineteen and a half months of teaching in many Latin-American countries, to continue in Miss True's place.

Local Communities
A number of news sheets have come to Bahá'í News in recent months, including those of Dayton, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Chicago. The following items are of particular interest:

Dayton—The January Dayton Bahá'í News tells of four public meetings held over a period of eight weeks during November and December at the Miami Hotel. John Haggard, Wilmette, spoke on "Behind and Beyond Atomic Power"; Carl Sheffler, Evanston, on "Science and Religion"; Mary Evelyn Hoobler, a Bradley College graduate, and Albert Segen, who has traveled extensively, on "Peace and World Government"; and finally on December 16th Thomas H. Sauter, city engineer of Cuyahoga Falls, spoke on "The Foundation of a Just and Lasting Peace." The newspapers of Dayton are becoming better and better educated in the Bahá'í Teachings and generally give very good cooperation. In August all the Dayton papers carried general write-ups on Bahá'í Summer Schools, in addition to mentioning the three Dayton believers who attended three different Bahá'í Schools. The papers always carry an announcement of all Bahá'í meetings held to commemorate Bahá'í Holy Days. The Bahá'í Community of Dayton has been incorporated, the final papers having been duly signed and sealed by the State in January of 1946.

San Francisco—A well attended meeting was held at the Forum Club on the afternoon of April 14th in

This message, dated April 8, 1946, was broadcast over the American Forces Network reaching Paris, Bremen, Berlin, Bayreuth, Normandy, Frankfort, and a few stations in Austria: “And in Stuttgart, Germany, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of Germany held its first meeting in nine years. The group seeking world unity through religion was banned in 1937 by Henrich Himmler, and many of its members were imprisoned by the Gestapo.”

Much of our other European news... this month is culled from a new bulletin issued from the International Bahá’í Bureau at Geneva and called the Geneva Bureau News Exchange. It gives us several heartening signs of re-awakened activity among the Bahá’ís of “that spiritually famished continent.”

Two Letters from Germany

Annelie Homan, Stuttgart, writes:

“. . . ‘The misery and suffering of the war years, the present day distress, and the knowledge of difficult times ahead have caused many hearts and minds to ripen for the acceptance of Bahá’u’lláh’s Teachings. The souls around us are starved for the Word of God, and it is up to us to show them the Light. The best means for this are our weekly meetings. What a joy it is to see new faces each time! We are now 67 declared believers in Stuttgart.’”

A letter received from Mrs. Leidinger, mother of a prisoner of war, reveals both the handicaps which German Bahá’í youth suffered under during the Hitler regime and the way in which at least one of them kept his faith in spite of these handicaps. Mrs. Leidinger writes that her son, Reinhold, has interested one of his fellow prisoners in the Faith. He himself has been deprived of a thorough instruction in the Faith, because he had been perforce a “Hitler Youth” and so received compulsory instruction based on principles directly opposite to those of the Faith. But he knew enough of the fundamental truths of the Faith to derive spiritual sustenance from it and pass it on to one of his comrades. Then he wrote home asking for a “Bahá’í letter for his friend and some booklets.” The account adds that the Bahá’í letter was sent to the friend and two Bahá’í books for Reinhold.

Switzerland

The editor of a weekly paper issued in Berne and Zurich has published an article about Bahá’u’lláh written by a Bahá’í of Paris, Mr. A. Alexander. This editor has become interested in the Bahá’í Teachings and will be glad to use his paper to publicize them further. His nephew is also interested and desires more material about the Cause so that he may make the Teachings known among his friends.

Yugoslavia

Through Mrs. Bolles we have heard from Mme. Desanka Toklu-Forgovice-Tokin, a Bahá’í who teaches music in Vrsac, Yugoslavia. She expresses deep gratitude for all that Mrs. Louise Gregory did for her in confirming her in the Faith. She also writes of the “awful strain of these days,” which has injured her health. She has been obliged to move to very poor quarters because her former lodgings were confiscated by the state. We quote the following from her letter: “We spent the days of May 23 and 29 in ardent prayers for the realization of the religious brotherhood in the whole world. May the Abater of all troubles grant us our prayers. I deeply regret that I cannot write to Palestine, and thank you for having sent my respects there.” For Mme. Tokin’s address and needs see June News.

Professor Desanka Toklu-Forgovice, Bahá’í of Yugoslavia.

Italy

Geresina Campani of Florence is, so far as we know, the only Bahá’í in Italy. She writes Mrs. Bolles of the fearful strain she and her family are under. Her husband does his best, but prices are so high that “nothing he can earn is enough.” Her daughter, husband and baby, not yet a year old, had their house destroyed by Allied bombs in 1943 and had to live with 25 other refugees for 45 days in three rooms without light or water. They are now living with her parents, the Campanis. Her husband, a doctor, has as yet no position. She speaks of Italy as “no more the land of songs and joy. Too many tragedies in the largest tragedy of the war.” But she closes with this note of hope: “that a real Peace will issue from so great a turmoil, that our children and grandchildren may see a healthy world (healthy in spiritual meaning).” She gives her adress as Viale duce di Genova, 24 Florenze, Italy.

Czechoslovakia

Vuk Echtner has written of an Esperanto meeting devoted to the Bahá’í Cause held in Prague on June 5. The meeting was very successful. With the help of a good Bahá’í teacher from outside he thinks a Bahá’í assembly could soon be formed.

A new book on the Cause written in Czech was published in April. It is entitled The Orient and the New Era and is a compilation of fragments “from the Czech translation of Dr. Esslemont’s book and from A World Religion and The Goal of a New World Order by Shoghi Effendi.”

Mr. Echtner has taken up again his work for the blind and has “assumed the editorship of the magazine ‘Aurora,’ a Braille publication.” He is in touch with Mr. Harald Thilander of Sweden. According to Mr. Thilander the international movement for the blind has suffered greatly through the war. Mr. Echtner thinks that Bahá’ís could help to revive it through working with the “World Association of Organizations for the Blind.” He has a plan of work to suggest in this connection and “would be glad to communicate it to the World Language Committee.” Perhaps our national committee would like to write Mr. Echtner regarding this. A letter sent to him in care of The International Bahá’í Bureau, 40 Grand Rue, Geneva, Switzerland, would reach him.

Another letter from Mr. Echtner described a shop window exhibit of Esperanto and Bahá’í books and pictures arranged by him in a busy part of Prague. For the benefit of inquirers attracted by the exhibit Mr. Echtner has arranged a correspondence course on the Bahá’í Faith in Esperanto.

India

The youth committee of Poona has catalogued the Bahá’í library there and ordered many new books. They have also conducted a children’s training class every Sunday morning.

The Poona Youth Day Symposium was a successful occasion, attracting about 50 youth of both sexes, many of whom expressed their interest and intention to study the Bahá’í Teachings. A half-column article in the leading vernacular daily gave a good account of the symposium.

‘Iraq

Foundations of a Hazíratu’l-Quds are being laid in Baghdad, and two other 'Iraqi Assemblies have taken steps toward renting or building such a center.

The Baha'is of Iraq have contributed more than 6,000 rupees for relief of their stricken brethren in Burma.

“Help Ye the One True God”

The Day Star of Truth that shineth in its meridian splendor beareth us witness! They who are the people of God have no ambition except to revive the world, to ennable its life, and regenerate its peoples. Truthfulness and good-will have, at all times marked their relations with all men. Their outward conduct is but a reflection of their inward life, and their inward life a mirror of their outward conduct. No veil hideth or obscureth the verities on which their Faith is established. Before the eyes of all men these verities have been laid bare, and can be unmistakably recognized. Their very acts attest the truth of these words.

O friends! Help ye the one true God, exalted be His glory, by your goodly deeds, by such conduct and character as shall be acceptable in God have been able to subdue and conquer the citadels of the hearts of men.

BAHÁ’U’LLÁH, Gleanings p. 271

“My Constant Prayer, My Ardent Hope”

Letter from the Guardian
To the N.S.A.

Dear and valued co-workers:

The new Plan on which the American Bahá’í community has embarked, in the course of the opening years of the second Bahá’í century, is of such vastness and complexity as to require the utmost vigor, vigilance and consecration on the part of both the general body of its practitioners and those who are called upon, as their national elected representatives, to conduct its operation, define its processes, watch over its execution, and ensure its ultimate success. The obstacles confronting both its participants and organizers, particularly in the European field, are formidable, and call for the utmost courage, perseverance, fortitude and self-sacrifice.

The precarious international situation in both Hemispheres, the distress and preoccupation of the masses, in most of the countries to which pioneers will soon be proceeding, with the cares of every day life, the severe restrictions which are still imposed on visitors and travellers in foreign lands, the religious conservativism and spiritual lethargy which characterize the population in most of the lands where the new pioneers are to labor, add to the challenge of the task, and render all the more glorious the labors of the national community that has arisen to achieve what posterity will regard as the greatest collective enterprise, not only in the history of the community itself, but in the annals of the Faith with which it stands identified.

The initial success of the enterprise which has been so auspiciously launched, the enthusiasm which it has already engendered throughout Latin America, the hopes it has aroused amid the suffering and scattered believers in war-torn Europe, the feelings of admiration and envy it has excited throughout several communities in the Bahá’í world in both the East and the West, augur well for the future course of its operation, and foreshadow the splendors of the victories which its consummation must witness. The forces that have been released through the birth of the Plan must be directed into the most effective channels, the spirit that has been kindled must be continually nourished, the facilities at the disposal of its organizers must be fully utilized, each and every barrier that might obstruct its expansion must be determinedly removed, every assistance which Bahá’í communities in various lands may wish, or be able, to offer, should be wholeheartedly welcomed, every measure that will serve to reinforce the bonds uniting the newly-fledged communities in the Latin world, and to stimulate the movement, and raise the spirits, of itinerant teachers and settlers laboring in the continent of Europe must be speedily undertaken, if the colossal task, which in the course of seven-brief years must be carried out, is to be befittingly consummated.

The sterner the task, the graver the responsibilities, the wider the field of exertion, the more persistently must the privileged members of this enviable community strive, and the loftier must be the height to which they should aspire, in the course of their God-given mission, and throughout every stage in the irresistible and divinely guided evolution of their community life.

Setbacks may well surprise them; trials and disappointments may tax their patience and resourcefulness; the forces of darkness, either from within or from without, may seek to dampen their ardor, to disrupt their unity and break their spirit; pitfalls may surround the little band that must act as a vanguard to the host which must, in the years to come, spiritually raise up the sorely ravaged continent of Europe. None of these, however fierce, sinister or unyielding they may appear, must be allowed to deflect the protagonists of a God-impelled Plan, from the course which ’Abdu’l-Bahá has chosen for them, and which the agencies of a firmly established, laboriously erected, Administrative Order, are now enabling them to effectively pursue. That they may press forward with undiminished fervor, with undimmed vision, with unflinching determination until the shining goal is attained is my constant prayer, my ardent hope, and the dearest wish of my heart.

Your true and grateful brother,

Shoghi Effendi

Haifa, Palestine
July 20, 1946

The following statements were written by the Guardian through his secretary in a letter dated July 20, 1946, the postscript of which, signed by Shoghi Effendi, is printed above.

Seven Year Plan

You can well imagine that much of his thoughts are now centered on the work of the new Seven Year Plan. Its tremendous importance cannot be over emphasized, for on its success hangs the success or failure of the future work which ’Abdu’l-Bahá in His wisdom apportioned to the Bahá’ís of North America. The Guardian, however, having had now for 25 years the experience of working with the American believers, no longer has any doubts as to their capacity for work, their devotion, their loyalty and their determination to never fail their Faith! It is therefore with a mind at rest and a confident heart that he has entrusted to them the great tasks of the next seven years.

Temple Services

As regards the whole question of the Temple and services held in it: He wishes to emphasize that he is very anxious, now that this first and greatest Temple of the West has been built, and will, within a few years, be used for worship and regular services by the Bahá’ís, that no forms, no rituals, no set customs be introduced over and above the bare minimum outlined in the teachings. The nature of these gatherings is for prayer, meditation and the reading of writings from the Sacred Scriptures of our Faith and other Faiths; there can be one or a number of readers; any Bahá’í chosen, or even, non-Bahá’í, may read. The gatherings should be simple, dignified, and designed to uplift the soul and educate it through hearing the creative word. No speeches may be made, no extraneous matter introduced.

The use of pulpits is forbidden by Bahá’u’lláh; if, in order to be more clearly heard, the platform reader stands on a low platform, there is no objection, but this should not be incorporated as an architectural feature of the building.

As he already informed you by cable, he thinks that the best seating arrangement from every standpoint is that the section of the audience in the center of the auditorium, beneath the dome, should face towards ’Akka, and all the other seats around this central space should be placed in the form of a circle so that the seats face inwards towards the center of the Temple. In other words a central mass facing ’Akka-wards, surrounded by circular rows of seats facing inwards.

The reader should stand where he or she will be best seen and heard by all. All minor details regarding this matter are left to the discretion of your Assembly to decide after receiving the advice of experts. As he already informed you, he suggests using fixed rather than movable seats.

Vocal music alone may be used and the position of the singers or singer is also a matter for your Assembly to decide; but again, there should be no fixed point, no architectural details marking a special spot. Acoustics should certainly be the main consideration in placing the singers.

The Guardian feels that the Temple, if divided into an auditorium and eight or nine small rooms, would have a far too circumscribed seating capacity for a National House of Worship and that also the small rooms would serve no useful purpose whatever. In view of this he instructed you to do away entirely with these superfluous rooms; the whole main floor of the building should form one vast auditorium with no dividing walls at all. What provision for keeping the cold out, and what entrances you wish to make constant use of, are matters for your Assembly to decide after receiving expert advice.

Color may be used in the interior—and, indeed, it was Mr. Bourgeois' intention to use it, as the original cross-section showing the interior, which now hangs here in the archives, shows. (The photographic plate and reproduction of this drawsolutely universal, and what might seem a beautiful addition to their mode of celebrating a Feast, etc., would perhaps fall on the ears of people of another country as unpleasant sounds—and vice versa. As long as they have music for its own sake it is all right, but they should not consider it Bahá’í music.

Acts of Immorality
Any blatant acts of immorality on the part of the Bahá’ís should be strongly censored; the friends should be urged to abandon such relationships immediately, straighten out their affairs, and conduct themselves as Bahá’ís; if they refuse to do this, in spite of the warnings of the Assembly, they should be punished through being deprived of their voting rights. The N.S.A. is empowered to settle such cases of flagrant immorality without referring them to the Guardian.

Formation of National Assemblies in Central and South America and Canada
As he already informed you by cable, the West Indies, Mexico and Panama are considered part of Central America, and will be under the jurisdiction of the Central American N.S.A. The Canal Zone and Puerto Rico also are part of this area and under its jurisdiction. Two N.S.A.’s will be formed; one for Central and one for South America. They will adopt their own constitutions after election, which should follow as closely as possible that of your own body. This new constitution—for obviously these two new N.S.A.’s will not seek for Latin America to have two different ones—will be in Spanish, and will be published in the Bahá’í World. There, with their sister constitutions in English, German, Arabic and Persian. The Canadian constitution should, likewise, be patterned on and closely follow your own.

Your Assembly must determine the number of delegates, and call the first Conventions of these three new national bodies, and they must receive a certain amount of supervision and guidance from you until the end of the present Seven Year Plan, when they will pass directly under the supervision of the Guardian. Your Assembly is, so to speak, their sponsor, and they will become independent at the end of this present plan.

Bahá’í Funeral Services
There is no objection whatsoever to non-Bahá’ís being present when the long prayer for the dead is read*, as long as they respect our manner of reading it by rising and standing as the Bahá’ís do on this occasion. Nor, indeed, is there any objection to non-Bahá’ís being present during the reading of any Bahá’í prayer for the departed.

An official Bahá’í funeral service should only be given for a believer, but there is no objection to the reading of Bahá’í prayers, or indeed to a Bahá’í conducting the funeral service of a non-Bahá’í, if this has been requested.

In reporting Bahá’í marriages it is much better to mention that the ceremony was performed by the Assembly, as this is the proper thing to do, and an individual only acts for the Assembly on this occasion. As a funeral is not a legal ceremony more latitude can be allowed, especially as the family of the deceased may want some particular Bahá’í friend to officiate.

International Relief
Concerning the question of the Philippines, they are not under your Assembly’s jurisdiction, but you can, being such a sturdy and prosperous community, lend them a helping hand and advise them. The Guardian urges great caution, however, in handling the situation there; this is a new community which has never had any close contact with Bahá’ís from other countries, and well organized and recognized administrative bodies—such as existed in Germany, Austria and Burma before the war. You should ascertain if the people requesting help really need it, and are really Bahá’ís. He would not recommend that anything more than food parcels, clothes, and Bahá’í literature be sent them at present, and he hopes the way will open for a competent Bahá’í teacher to visit them, and help them organize their affairs on a true Bahá’í basis.

He feels that sufficient relief funds have now been accumulated in Tehran, and that, except for any parcels of food and gifts individual believers may still wish to send, any sums on hand for this purpose should be directed into the European teaching and publishing work.

Radio Station in Temple
The Guardian approves in principle of a radio station, and sees no objection to its being in the Temple; but he considers the cost you quote too much of a burden at the present time for the Fund to bear, in view of the multiple expenses of the new Seven Year Plan. If there is any way it can be done for a price you feel the Fund could pay, and which would be more reasonable, he approves of your doing it.

Object of Inter-Racial Work
The following letter by the Guardian, written through his secretary, was addressed to the Race Unity Committee on December 30, 1945, and is published with the Guardian’s consent.

“He feels that as the main object of the Bahá’í inter-racial work is to abolish prejudice against any and every race and minority group, it is obviously proper for them to include in particular any group that is receiving especially bad treatment—such as the Japanese-Americans are being subjected to. There is also no reason why work should not be done among and in cooperation with the Mexicans, the Chinese and so on.

"He has always been very anxious to have the Indians taught and enlisted under the banner of the Faith, in view of the Master's remarkable statements about the possibilities of their future and that they represent the aboriginal American population.

"The Negros, likewise, are, one might say, a key problem and epitomize the feelings of color prejudice so rife in the United States. That is why he has so constantly emphasized the importance of the Bahá'ís actively and continuously demonstrating that in the Faith this cruel and horrible taint of discrimination against, and contempt for, them does not exist but on the contrary is supplanted by a feeling of esteem for their great gifts and a complete lack of prejudice in every field of life.

"The work of the Race Unity Committee should include, as far as is possible, contacts with all minority groups, and wherever there is a particularly stout prejudice against a special group—such as the feelings against the Japanese in the Western States and the Negros in the Southern (states), etc., efforts should be made to counteract it by showing publicly the Bahá'í example of loving tolerance and brotherly association."

Keep in Touch with Local Youth Activities

The following excerpts from letter of the Guardian, written through his secretary and addressed to the National Youth Committee under date of October 29, 1945, are published with the Guardian's consent.

"He feels that one of the primary duties of your Committee is to encourage young Bahá'ís to prepare themselves for pioneer work, in Latin America; as he has already informed the American believers, the tremendous tasks facing them in Europe—indeed, all over the world—cannot be embarked upon until they have finished the work begun in South America. In this field youthful Bahá'ís have already accomplished much, and he hopes others will arise and follow them.

"Now that the war is over and so many young people are being released from the services and returning to a more normal life, the young Bahá'ís in every city should make a point of keeping in touch with local youth activities and clubs, and should make their views known to as many young people in as many ways as possible. Above all, they should set a high example to them; chastity, politeness, friendliness, hospitality, joyous optimism about the ultimate future happiness and well-being of mankind, should distinguish them and win over to them the love and admiration of their fellow-youth. The thing which is most conspicuously lacking in modern life is a high standard of conduct and good character; the young Bahá'ís must demonstrate both, if they hope to seriously win over to the Faith members of their own generation so sorely disillusioned and so contaminated by the laxity war gives rise to."

National Spiritual Assembly

National Consultation on Race Unity

Dear Bahá'í friends:

At its September meeting the National Spiritual Assembly adopted comprehensive plans for general consultation on the subject of race unity teaching, to focus attention upon this basic application of the principle of the oneness of mankind and prepare the way for the adoption of new methods and policies which can intensify the influence of the entire Bahá'í community as an instrument for the removal of prejudice and separation between the races on this continent.

Steps have been taken to invite the members of the National Race Unity Committee to consult with the NSA from 9:00 to 10:00 a.m., Sunday, December 8, and to hold a general consultation with the believers in Temple Foundation Hall from 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. that same day. Luncheon will be served in Temple Foundation Hall if possible.

The Temple Program Committee has been requested to arrange the program of the public meeting at 3:30 p.m. December 8 as a meeting devoted to the theme of "The Bahá'í Basis for Human Relations," dealing directly with the Bahá'í conception of unity.

A special invitation is being extended to the National Teaching Committee and the Regional Teaching Committees and Assemblies of the following States to be represented at the general conference:

- Maryland
- Virginia
- West Virginia
- Dist. of Columbia
- No. Carolina
- So. Carolina
- Georgia
- Florida
- Kansas
- Missouri
- Nebraska
- Alabama
- Mississippi
- Louisiana
- Arkansas
- Oklahoma
- Texas

The Status of Bahá'í Youth in the Community

Since there has not been a common understanding of the place of Bahá'í Youth in the community, the National Spiritual Assembly has decided upon the following principles:

First, the term "Bahá'í" is not limited to declared believers twenty-one years of age or older. Young people between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one are Bahá'ís even though they may be referred to as Bahá'í Youth. The members of a community, are all the declared believers in that community, regardless of age.

Second, each individual, fifteen years of age and older, becomes a registered believer upon acceptance of the qualifications of faith set forth.
by the Guardian and by declaration to a Spiritual Assembly or to a Regional Committee. All individuals, regardless of age, should be lovingly and carefully prepared for acceptance into the community.

Third, it is not necessary for a regularly enrolled Bahá’í Youth to redeclare his faith at the age of twenty-one. When a Bahá’í Youth declares his faith, it should be a spiritual step binding upon him for the rest of his life and not a mere statement of some future intention. On reaching the age of twenty-one, the individual is to notify the local Assembly secretary or the regional committee so that he may be registered as a voting member.

Fourth, individuals between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one have all the rights and privileges of a community member except voting in Bahá’í elections. Bahá’í Youth may participate without question in all the consultations of the community; they may serve on any committee of the local Assembly; in fact, it is the conviction of the members of the National Assembly that local Assemblies should use all feasible opportunities to give encouragement, experience, and training to the younger members of the community. Bahá’í Youth may also serve on national and regional committees.

Fifth, members of the community under twenty-one may not serve as Convention delegates or as members of a local or National Assembly. In these matters, as in voting for these positions, the age limit of twenty-one must be maintained in order to assure the legal position of the local and National Assemblies.

Sixth, the children of believers may attend the Nineteen Day Feasts and other intimate gatherings of the community, but when they reach the age of fifteen, the local Assembly should lovingly inquire if they wish to declare their faith and enroll as members of the community. If they do not declare their faith after fifteen, they do not have the rights and privileges of community membership. The local Assembly is cautioned not to exert undue pressure on such young people but to treat them in a very kindly spirit and, when they wish to declare their faith, to assist them in careful preparation to understand the significance of such a step.

The Guardian has repeatedly stated the tremendous responsibilities to be discharged by the present generation of Bahá’í Youth. All local Assemblies are urged to adopt a consistent policy of encouragement for the development of a generation of trained and devoted Bahá’í Youth.

The First Pioneers to Europe

The great new project of the Second Seven Year Plan is that of bringing the Message of Bahá’u’lláh to ten European countries. Therefore the National Spiritual Assembly appointed a European Teaching Committee with the following membership: Edna True, Chairman, Mary Barton, Paul Haney, Anna Kunz, Charles Mason Remey, Julia Shows, Mary Sprague, Dr. Katherine True and Clara Wood.

The first meeting of the European Teaching Committee was held on June 26, 1946, and plans were laid out in accordance with the Guardian’s letter to the Bahá’ís of North America dated June 15, 1946. In this message of the Guardian, the committee was directed to dispatch nine pioneers immediately to the capitals of Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, Switzerland, Spain and Portugal, to start their teaching work; to furnish the pioneers with adequate Bahá’í literature translated into all the languages needed for these countries.

The Guardian’s convention message and his letter to the North American Bahá’ís in June, created tremendous interest throughout the United States and the European Teaching Committee is very happy to report that a number of wonderful souls have volunteered to take up pioneer work in the goal countries mentioned by the Guardian. As of this date (Sept. 3, 1946), the committee can report that these posts have been filled by Bahá’í pioneers who are nationals of the countries the Guardian wishes opened up at this time. This is one of the miracles of Bahá’u’lláh, because these volunteers already are completely familiar with the languages necessary and the fact of their being nationals greatly expedites the matter of getting passports and visas.

As a vital part of the European teaching campaign, the Guardian has requested that the European Teaching Committee set up an auxiliary office in Geneva, Switzerland, as an adjunct to the Bahá’í International Bureau. Mrs. Etty Graeffe has been chosen to be in charge of this office and is sailing on September 7 to make a survey of the goal countries.

on her way to Geneva. With Mrs. Graeffe will sail Mrs. Solveigh V. Corbit, who will be our pioneer to Norway. On Sept. 18, Miss Rita Van Sombeek and her sister, Mrs. Jetty Straub, of the New York City Bahá’í community, will take up their posts in Holland. Later, on Oct. 18, Mr. and Mrs. Anders Nielsen with their son, of the Burbank, Calif., Bahá’í community, will embark for Denmark, to take up their post in that country. Miss Madeline Humbert of the New York City Bahá’í community, leaves in late September or early October, for Belgium to serve as pioneer in Brussels. As soon as traveling and passport arrangements can be completed, our chosen pioneers will be dispatched to Spain, Portugal, Italy and Luxembourg.

Our chairman, Miss Edna True, will be sailing the latter part of September to make a personal survey of some of the goal countries and to help in establishing the Geneva office and to consult with the British Publishing Trust.

Each pioneer will be equipped with Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in the language of the country to which he is going as well as with a pamphlet for free distribution, which has been especially compiled by the European Teaching Committee for this purpose. The committee is also very fortunate in having some of the other Writings already existing in several of the languages required.

The committee feels assured that the community of the believers in North America will join them in their special prayers for the inauguration of this new and tremendous project.

Plan of the Public Meetings

Campaign

The function of the Public Meetings Committee as outlined by the National Spiritual Assembly is “to bring the teachings to the leaders and masses through a series of public meetings in various cities to be conducted with the cooperation of the respective local Assemblies.”

Continuing the work so admirably begun last year, “key cities” have already been selected: Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Montreal, Binghamton, Urbana, Albuquerque, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Baltimore, Miami, Nashville, Pittsburgh, and Cleveland. The climax of the campaign will be the Convention Public Meeting.

The theme this year is “World Order Through World Faith” and in most instances but one speaker will be used. This together with a fine musical program, well-planned publicity, exhibits, and radio broadcasts will, we know, again bring the name Bahá’í to the attention of the masses.

The programs or invitations this year are quite outstanding in appearance, something that will not be idly laid aside by those receiving them.

The first meeting is scheduled for Minneapolis on October 13th and the prayers of all the friends are requested for this city and each one to follow.

The eleven key cities of last year have been supplied a budget and invited to again join in this work by putting on a similar meeting this year. They will all use the theme “World Order Through World Faith” and thus the momentum begun last year will be doubled.

Special stress is being laid on the follow-up work to be planned well in advance by a special committee organized for this purpose, which with the assistance of the Regional and National Teaching Committees has, by far, the most important work to do, that of keeping alive the interest of the seekers attracted to the Cause through the public meetings.

—PUBLIC MEETING COMMITTEE

National Bahá’í Advertising Begins

Following general approval of plans by the NSA in July, the Public Relations Committee met July 28 and made decisions on details of the work. This report covers activities conducted in July and August, 1946.

1. Two releases have been sent direct to newspapers and news magazines during each of these two months, through the public relations firm of Harry Coleman, Chicago. The list includes papers in towns of 25,000 and more population. The subjects used in July: Commemoration of the Martyrdom of the Báb; plans for interior ornamentation of Temple; August themes: world changes in religion today; the public campaign to be conducted this year on world order through world faith.

2. A release for use by Assemblies, groups and active workers locally has been prepared in each of these months, for distribution through the committee bulletin. This series of publicity does not duplicate the material issued direct.

3. A schedule of national advertising has been adopted, including the following magazines: Newsweek, for the general public; World Report, for those directly interested in world peace; Editor and Publisher and Publishers Auxiliary, for editors, columnists, feature writers; and Broadcasting, for radio announcers, station managers, program editors, etc. The public advertising goes in two magazines having a circulation of 763, 781. The papers going to press and radio workers have a circulation of 34,795.

The general, public advertising features the theme of World Truth for a World Era, and offers free copies of booklet reprinting several talks from The Promulgation of Universal Peace. This is a 32-page pamphlet entitled World Order Through World Faith, carrying out the theme of the whole public campaign this year.

The advertising planned for professional men in the press and radio fields is intended to make the name “Bahá’í” have a definite and important significance. A copy of the summary of the teachings is to be sent free on request.

The September schedule has been placed as follows: Newsweek, September 23, ½ column; Editor and Publisher, September 14, ½ column; Publishers Auxiliary, September 14, 42 lines (three inches); Broadcasting, September 14, ½ column.

This effort marks the beginning of national Bahá’í advertising in America, and the accumulative effort should be to make the Faith far more generally known to the public and also to key persons influential in press and radio fields.

4. The Committee has entered into a contract with the Coleman firm for professional services including publicity, advertising and special public relations work from July, 1946 to April, 1947. The firm is now working with the various Chicago bureaus which can feature visits to the Temple by national convention and other travelers coming to Chicago this year.

5. The Committee is preparing 200 copies of a “Public Relations Kit” containing publicity, advertising and other material which can be used by national committees, local Assemblies, groups and traveling teachers.

6. Contacts by mail. The Committee is mailing out to selected lists of key persons on a regular monthly schedule copies of printed matter.
including the Summary of the Teachings, Chicago Tribune Temple picture reprint, and special reprints of Bahá’í material: A Pattern for Future Society, Industrial Justice, The Principle of Religious Unity, and The Reality of Brotherhood. 10,000 each of these four reprints are to come from the printer in September. 10,000 Summaries were printed in August. A second edition of The Coming of World Religion is expected by September. Lists of names can be sent to the Committee for this contacts work, and the Committee will use as many as possible, as well as names taken from the Temple Guides Committee Register of Visitors.

7. In order to make available for local use the material offered by the Committee in form of publicity, advertising, photographs, etc., a plan has been adopted for issuing a bulletin about nine times during the year. The first number was prepared in July, but the mimeographing and mailing has been delayed by conditions outside our control. The bulletin also offers useful suggestions for local campaigns. Our present direct press publicity schedule carries the Bahá’í releases to some 673 papers in about 350 towns.

Latin American News

Latin American activity is hitting a new high in preparation for consolidation of existing Bahá’í Communities and the extension of the Message to the masses. Chile is setting the pace by opening extension teaching in four different cities; two in the deep south; one under the direction of the so recently formed Assembly in Valparaiso, and another further north. The four are Temuco, Mulchen, Valdivia and Viña del Mar. The friends in Guayaquil, Ecuador, have been assisting Hascel Cornbelt in the goal city of Quito. A center has been opened and Hascel reports regular weekly meetings with average attendance of 15.

Gayle Woolson is now teaching in Cali where the Masons have opened their lodge to listen to the Message. She will also visit Guayaquil and Quito in Ecuador, and later, Medellin, Cartagena and Barranquilla in Colombia. Miss Lotus Peterson of St. Paul is planning to leave as a pioneer to open up the new goal city of Maracaibo, Venezuela. The Assembly in Caracas is doing extension teaching in Maracay, Valencia and Puerto Cabello. Mrs. Woolson will visit them later. Gwene Sholtis is working in the new goal city of Sucre, Bolivia, with the result that there are now four active Bahá’ís there, one brand new, and several persons near to the Cause. Miss Sholtis will go in December to Lima for change of climate and will join there in the regional drive to open Callao. The Assembly of Lima, Peru, assisted by Miss Eve Nicklin, has opened a center in Callao; there is a small group and a new believer has just registered.

Miss Virginia Orbison has gone to the goal city of Sao Paulo, Brazil, and the first believer there has just registered. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Miessler of Columbus Grove, Ohio, are sailing to Brazil on the 15th of September, to settle there as resident pioneers. Mr. Miessler is manager of the Sao Paulo branch of a large importing firm.

In Central America, Mrs. Marcia Steward is making a survey of all six countries with a view to consolidating existing Assemblies and stimulating extension teaching work. Mrs. Louise Caswell has gone to the goal city of Colon, where there are now three active believers, one just registered. Dr. Escalante is opening extension teaching in the new goal city of La Ceiba in Honduras. In the West Indies, Dr. Malcolm King, pioneer at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, and chairman of regional work in the Islands, will make a trip to Kingston, Jamaica, to consult with the Assembly, choose a goal city in Jamaica and begin regional teaching there. In Cuba, Joan Silver is teaching in the goal city of Cienfuegos, and Dr. Walter Biomquist of Havana has been visiting and teaching in Santa Clara, with the result that a class of twenty-two students has been formed. Santiago is the goal city in the Dominican Republic and the Assembly in Ciudad Trujillo is doing extension teaching there.

Mrs. Shirley Warde and the Assembly of Buenos Aires are preparing the first South American Teaching Conference to be held in that city November 8 to 11. Delegates from all the South American countries are invited to attend and splendid publicity has been granted. Mrs. Amelia Collins will attend as official representative of the Inter-America Committee and of the National Spiritual Assembly. Mrs. Warde, Artemus Lamb of Punta Arenas and Hugo Arteagastabettia of Valparaiso are collaborating on an up-to-date radio series, including suitable scripts for all cities and also transcriptions on discs. Artemus has been making a survey of Chile and plans also to survey Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, to consult with his regional committee and assist in the stimulation of extension teaching. Fourteen new Bahá’ís have registered this month.

Appeal for Settlers and Teachers

The seven most critical cities in the United States requiring urgent teaching help are: Brattleboro, Vt., Wilmington, Del., Greenville, S.C., Louisville, Ky., Fargo, N.D., Lafayette, Wyo., Boise, Idaho.

The National Spiritual Assembly makes urgent appeal that all believers who can volunteer to settle in any of these cities, or even give brief or occasional teaching help, notify the National Teaching Committee at once.

Bahá’í Literature in Spanish for North America

The Bahá’í Publishing and Distributing Center for Spanish literature in Panama requests that believers desiring to order Spanish books for North America be apprised of the Summer Teaching Circuits

The program of expansion and consolidation which has been outlined by the Guardian for the first two years of the second Seven Year Plan involves the immediate reinforcement and strengthening of seven of our "spiritual prizes" won during the first Seven Year Plan; the further consolidation of fifty small Assemblies; the speedy conversion into Assemblies of "over thirty groups having six or more members"; the achievement of a hundred and seventy-five Assemblies functioning in North America.

The National and Regional Committees are bending every effort to bring these needs before the body of the believers and to solicit their help in this great task. Regional Teaching Conferences have been held in many cities to stimulate and focus the attention of the believers on the goals which have been set for the region; inter-regional circuits have been developed to provide teaching help to the weaker Assemblies; the large Assemblies have been asked to cooperate with the Regional Teaching Committees by providing teaching help to nearby groups and Assemblies, as well as settlers to reinforce and hold the status of established Assemblies; and various teaching bulletins and teaching aids have also been made available.

During the summer RTC reports indicate that twenty new isolated believers have been enrolled, and many regional projects have been completed with most encouraging results.

Nine inter-regional circuits provided teaching assistance to Assemblies in the Northeastern, Southern, Central and Western states. Mrs. Mamie Seto of San Francisco, Calif., enroute to Louhelen in June visited Boise, Ida., Salt Lake City, Utah, and Laramie, Wyo. Successful meetings are also reported in Lima, Cleveland, and Albuquerque. Commenting on her trip Mrs. Seto writes: "Everywhere I went I found a new readiness on the part of people, which makes our new task easier."

During July and August while attending the Green Acre Bahá'í School, Mrs. Sara E. Witt of Santa Monica, Calif., gave teaching help to the Assemblies of Portsmouth, Boston, Providence, New Haven, Hampden, Brattleboro and the group in Hartford, Conn. In Brattleboro, Mrs. Witt spoke on "The Gateway to Spiritual Rebirth" and the local Spiritual Assembly reports that Mrs. Witt "has given us a very encouraging start for our work under the Second Seven Year Plan." Mr. and Mrs. Crane of Hackensack, N. J., also visited Brattleboro enroute home from a teaching trip to the Maritimes in July.

Mrs. Margarite Ulrich of Oak Park, Ill., with her two daughters, Marjorie and Florence, and Robert Miessler visited Greensboro, N.C., Greenville, S.C., Augusta and Atlanta, Ga., from June 17th to 30th. The Augusta Assembly reports that Mrs. Ulrich "gave a talk on the Temple and Temple slides which were shown at the Oliver General Hospital" as well as at the homes of Mrs. Sego and Mrs. Allen. The young people entertained with violin, piano and vocal music and at the Greenville meeting Robert Miessler gave a review of This Earth One Country, fireside meetings as well as public meetings were planned in all of the cities visited.

Another group, composed of Miss Pari Zia-Walrath, Miss Betty Scheffler and Mr. Harlan Scheffler, from the Temple area, and Mr. Ross Woodman of Winnipeg, Manitoba, devoted their vacation period to teaching and presented symposiums in Sioux Falls, S.C., Fargo, N.D., Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., from July 22 to 31st.

On a circuit planned in cooperation with the Canadian Teaching Committee, Dr. Edris Rice-Wray attended the Conference at Banff, Alberta, in August and on her return made several stop-overs in Montana and Minnesota.

Mr. Alvin Blum of Little Rock, Ark., again visited St. Louis, Independence, Kansas City, Missouri and Topeka, Kansas, in August and reports the meetings well attended. En route to International School this summer, Mr. Mason Remy made stop-overs in Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind. and Topeka, Kansas.

In August, when Mr. John McHenry with his wife and two children moved to California, stop-overs were arranged and meetings were planned in Waterloo, Iowa; Omaha, Neb.; Cheyenne and Laramie, Wyo.; Denver and Colorado Springs, Colo.; Salt Lake City and Reno, Nevada.

Another Bahá’í family moving to California from New York state, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd H. Munson, and their son, are making stop-overs enroute so that the friends can plan fireside meetings in Port Wayne, Ind., Peoria, Ill., Oklahoma City, Okla., and in Albuquerque, N.M. They also plan to visit isolated believers in Joplin, Mo., and Jefferson City, Mo., and in Kingman, Arizona.

Mrs. Ruth Moffett visited Manchester and Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in July and two new believers were enrolled following the meeting. In Cedar Rapids she appeared on the "Distinguished Guest" program for a ten-minute broadcast during which she was interviewed.

Regional Teaching Committees also report many circuits and projects which have been successfully completed during the summer months. One of especial significance, because it resulted in the strengthening of one of the weaker Assemblies, is the Regional Teaching Conference held in Richmond Highlands, Washington, on July 27th and 28th. Arrangements were made for twenty three over-night guests by a local housing committee and a food committee planned a dinner served cafeteria style to sixty-one persons attending the Conference. ‘Saturday afternoon the conference discussed the Guardian’s message,” Mrs. Helen Wilks, RTC secretary, reports, “and in the evening a public meeting was held in the Masonic Hall, beautifully decorated for the occasion by Venus Curl of the Seattle community. Mr. John Schurcliff of Tacoma and Mrs. Alice Elmendorff of Seattle spoke on ‘Unity in World Religion.’ About seventy-five attended this meeting. On Sunday, a study class on ‘The Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá,’ was conducted and in the afternoon Convention and Summer School reports were given.

The children sang songs which they had learned at Summer School, and stood on a natural rock platform edged with rocks and flowers, with trees on either side, which made a beautiful setting.” The report further states that as a result the Assembly is “over the hump,” and that much care is being given to the planning of follow-up meetings there, with the chairman, speaker, and hostess working together closely to insure the success of the meetings.

Another very successful project at Hampton Institute, Va., is elsewhere reported in this issue.

In many regions the groups and Assemblies arranged picnics. In Hartford, Conn., 45 people attended a picnic which was given excellent publicity — with a picture of Mr. George Goodman, the speaker, in the local papers—and other regions report similar success. Regional projects have also been developed to help groups in an effort to increase the membership to the required nine for Assembly status in April. In Columbia, S.C., the group is being given regular monthly teaching help by Mrs. Esther Sego of Augusta, Ga. Another group at Glenfield, N.D., is to receive the help of Miss Margaret Detwiler of Fargo, N.D., during the month of September, and this group has recently had a visit from Mr. Hassan Abas who stopped there on his way home from a teaching trip to Edmonton, Alta. The Washington and Oregon RTC plans to send regular teaching help to the groups at Auburn, Kirkland and Bremerton over a period of months to help these groups increase their membership. Groups and Assemblies have been visited by Miss Agnes Alexander of Hawaii, who is visiting in the United States.

Renewed activity is reported from all regions, with the efforts of the believers directed toward the course charted by the Guardian to accomplish the task “summoning us to a challenge, unprecedented in its gravity and force.”

What Displays Do You Need?

What kind of display-exhibit material do you need or would you like to have in your community? Do you have available space or large or small store windows; can you use a booth at the near-by state or county fair? Would your public library use a counter display?

This committee covers the wide range activity field of sound film, slide-programs and photographs. But as an immediate project, it is the desire of this committee to develop the most effective display ideas possible to attract the largest number of people. They hope to keep the ideas simple enough for the friends to construct and assemble displays from the materials at hand.

One project now under the direction of the committee, as of its August 11th meeting, is a portfolio of photographs and designs of actual and proposed displays and exhibits. Whatever of this project is accepted by the National Assembly will be circulated among the friends to assist them in meeting local needs. For this reason the Visual Education Committee would appreciate an immediate response of surveys of local needs and an outline of requirements.

Baha’is and Military Service

In recent months the National Spiritual Assembly has received several requests for a clarification of the present obligation of Bahá’ís in connection with military service, with particular reference to whether the establishment of the United Nations Organization alters the spiritual necessity for Bahá’ís to apply for and maintain a non-combatant status when the conscription laws provide this opportunity for those who are opposed to combatant training and service because of their religious convictions.

Since the Teachings sanction an international police force as an agency of a sovereign world government, and approve the use of military force against recalcitrant nations refusing to abide by the decisions of a Supreme Tribunal, the question arose as to whether the existence of the United Nations Organization in its present form should change the attitude of Bahá’ís toward military duties which might require the taking of human life.

The National Spiritual Assembly referred this question to our Guardian, and received the following reply in a letter from Haifa, dated July 20, 1946:

“As there is neither an International Police Force nor any immediate prospect of one coming into being, the Bahá’ís should continue to apply, under all circumstances, for exemption from any military duties that necessitate the taking of life. There is no justification for any change of attitude on our part at the present time.”

Therefore it is still the spiritual obligation of Bahá’ís in the United States and Canada who may be called into military service to apply for a non-combatant status in accordance with the previous instructions of the National Spiritual Assembly as outlined in the various special bulletins and rulings issued since 1941, and which can be obtained from the National Office. It is also still incumbent upon those already in the armed forces to maintain their non-combatant status, regardless of the consequences upon their personal safety, their convenience, the type of... activity they must discharge, or the rank to which they may be assigned. (See ruling of N.S.A., published on page 4, Bahá’í News, April, 1946.)

Hampton Institute Entertains Bahá’ís

Hampton Institute, the oldest institution of learning for Negroes in the United States, Alma Mater of Booker T. Washington, was host to the Regional Teaching Committee for Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia which met there, on Saturday and Sunday, July 27-28. About fifteen Bahá’ís from the region attended. They were housed in “The Moorings,” an Alumni hall; and their meals were served on the campus at the Holly Tree Inn.

On Saturday evening a public Bahá’í meeting was held in Clarke Hall, about forty attending. Talks were given by Mr. Williams and Miss Elsie Austin of Washington, D.C., on the subject, “The Key to Success in World Affairs.” Major Walter H. Brown, Secretary of Hampton Institute, gave a message of welcome and told of the origin and aims of the Institute. After the meeting colored slides of the Bahá’í Temple and of the various Bahá’í summer schools were shown by Mr. George Miller of Washington.

At dinner Sunday at the Holly Tree Inn we had a number of guests from Hampton and Newport News. Among the guests was President Ralph Bridgeman, of Hampton Institute. He gave a word of welcome and told of the program under way to make Hampton an educational institution which recognizes no barriers of creed, nationality, or color.

The last meeting of the series was Sunday afternoon when a round table discussion was held on “Race Unity in World Affairs.” Miss Austin was moderator and the other participants included a physician, an educator, a Y.W.C.A. secretary.

Several people on the faculty at Hampton attended and seemed to be very much interested in the Bahá’í Faith. Fifteen questionnaire cards were turned in at the meetings. A display of Bahá’í books was at the back of the room and was of much interest to many. Pamphlets for free distribution were on hand and were taken in quite large numbers. Many students who were not able to attend other meetings stopped to look over the literature and take pamphlets.

Because the meetings fell between summer sessions and on a weekend many of the students were away and there was not a large presentation of students in the audience. However, the meetings were well attended, all things considered, and it was felt that the venture was most successful in that “key” people at Hampton had a good opportunity to learn about the Faith and seemed warmly interested in it. The invitation has been extended to the Bahá’ís by the Secretary of the Institute to hold similar conferences at Hampton again.

“We felt also that this teaching project was unique in that we were able as a group to associate informally for two days with those whom we wished to interest. It was a little like holding a Bahá’í summer school on a non-Bahá’í campus, and seemed to be a more effective way to stimulate real interest than the holding of an isolated meeting. All of us who went were extremely happy over the whole trip and hope that many seeds were sowed.”

News from Local Communities

Local news has come to us from several communities, three of which, Atlanta, Charloittetown and Chicago, have appointed news reporters, who already have gone into action. We eagerly await news from others as well.

In ATLANTA the theme for the August weekly Sunday meetings was The Prophet, with the following subtitles: “The Purpose of the Prophet,” “The Proofs of Prophethood,” “The Word of the Prophet,” and “The New Creation.” In September each of the major Prophets will be considered. One of the Atlanta projects is the association of some of the community with a group known as Georgians United for World Federation. Margaret Ruhe writes, “By attending the bi-monthly meetings of this group we are getting acquainted with a variety of liberal individuals who sooner or later may be ready for the Faith. In the discussion periods we have a wonderful opportunity to hear each one give his views, and also, we are enabled to give the Bahá’í point of view. This group is composed of Quakers, Unitarians, Bahá’ís, Theosophists, Christian Scientists, Communists, Agnostics, Baptists, etc. In every city there are such groups; we recommend that Bahá’ís everywhere associate with them. Here is one good avenue towards finding ready souls.” Public lectures featuring out-of-town speakers have been held in the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. John Robarts from Toronto spent from August 16 to 23 in CHARLOTTETOWN doing contacts work. There was a public meeting on “Faith for Freedom” and a broadcast on “A World Faith.” Christine McKay includes a sample of their new publicity venture. In an attempt to make the word “Bahá’í” les formidable to the public, a series of Saturday morning insertions in the Charlottetown Guardian has been initiated with the title, “The Word Bahá’í Means Light.” This is followed with a very short one sentence quotation from Bahá’u’lláh or ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in which various facets of that Light are revealed. The fourth Maritime Bahá’í Conference was held at Keppoch about five miles from Charlottetown, P.E.I. from June 29 to July 1. The attendance from the three Maritime Provinces varied from nineteen to twenty-four. Doris Richardson of Toronto was the guest teacher.

On August 8, 1946, the CHICAGO Community had a program presenting the Case of the American Indian with Mr. Ed Towas, who is a member of the Oneida Tribe and President of the Indian Council as the Bahá’í speaker. The entertainment was by American Indian Artists of Chicago with Anita Sky Eyes rendering readings and songs. Present were about forty-nine of which thirty were non-Bahá’ís. A Japanese-American Citizen’s Group meets once a month at the Center. Recently they requested that a Bahá’í speaker tell them about our Faith, whereupon Horace Holley gave them the message.

From Oak land comes word that several programs were sponsored at which the late Orcella Ford spoke. A radio talk, a large public meeting, two public classes, and a banquet led the way to weekly classes attended by a group of non-Bahá’ís at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones. “God’s Word does not return unto Him void.”

The JACKSON invitation-to-a-meeting folder includes a photograph of the House of Worship, a quotation from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on “You Must Be Happy,” prayers for the removal of difficulties, for healing and for protection while travelling, as well as explanations of Bahá’í words and information as to where further material may be obtained.

The CLEVELAND Bahá’ís have inaugurated a new series of public meetings which are held every Sunday at 11 a.m. at the International Institute. Excellent publicity in the newspapers and on the radio is being received. Sarah Martin Pereira writes, “The Community members have spent a summer of intensive study following the study outline of Horace Holley, ‘Deepening the Spiritual Life.’ There is a great deal of enthusiasm about the fireside study groups from which the names of new Bahá’ís should soon be forthcoming.”

The Bahá’í Journal of LOS ANGELES continues to come our way. The August issue states that Andrew Moller is planning a trip by air to Denmark in order to visit his mother who is ill. He will take an international Bahá’í traveler’s letter, and he hopes to spread the Bahá’í Glad Tidings of world peace. In the same issue is carried a short biography of and splendid tribute to John D. Bosch, who passed away on July 22, 1946. He and his wife gave to the Bahá’í World Religion all of their property at Geyserville, California for a Bahá’í School. “It was through this beloved Bahá’í (Mr. Bosch) that the famous scientist Luther Burbank became attracted to the Faith. Luther Burbank told John and Louise Bosch ‘of asking his secretary to read to him from the Bahá’í Teachings when he, all worn out and tired would come to the house to rest on his sofa awhile—he felt restoration coming to him from hearing read the divine words—he was a natural believer.’” To John Bosch and Luther Burbank together Abdu’l-Bahá revealed a Tablet.

Intensive Work in the British Isles

Our readers will remember that the British Bahá’ís have selected 9 goal towns, in which to establish spiritual Assemblies as a step toward the completion of their Six Year Plan. With the cooperation of visiting teachers, a program of regular activity has been mobilized in eight goal towns and four other towns. The cities in which intensive work was done in March and April were Leeds, Northampton, Blackburn, St. Ives, Blackpool, Nottingham, Birmingham, Liverpool, Exeter, Torquay, Bournemouth, Altrincham and Bradford. Among the activities described in these towns we note an exhibition in a shop viewed by 400 people 196 of whom signed the visitors’ book, a Naw-Rúz meeting attended by 84 which brought a notable tribute to the Faith from the non-Bahá’í chairman, a reading of “The Eternal Covenant,” Mr. Balyuzi’s script, which made a direct appeal in a new way to a number of people, the use of a sound truck for advertising and a public meeting at a Theosophical Center. Among the workers in England we note David and Marion Hofman and Mr. Mottahedeh, all well known to American believers. In Blackburn Mr. Mottahedeh spoke at a fireside, “with such love for all in his heart (that) everyone was very happy.” At the Shop Exhibition at Leeds “every Bahá’í friend who assisted... felt happy and excited... the atmosphere was so spiritual and peaceful. We had a gramophone hidden away playing soft music, and the sun shone in making the flowers look gayer than ever.”

"No Will But Thy Will"

Glorified art Thou, O Lord my God! Thou seest me dwelling in this prison-house that lieth behind the seas and the mountains, and knowest all well what I have endured for Thy sake and for the sake of Thy Cause. Thou art He, O my God, who hath raised me up at Thy behest, and bidden me to occupy Thy seat, and to summon all men to the court of Thy mercy. It is Thou who hast commanded me to tell out the things Thou didst destine for them in the tablet of Thy decree and didst inscribe with the pen of Thy Revelation, and who hast enjoined on me the duty of kindling the fire of Thy love in the hearts of Thy servants, and of drawing all the peoples of the earth nearer to the habitation of Thy throne.

And when, as bidden by Thee, I arose and called out, by Thy leave, all Thy creatures, the wayward among Thy servants opposed me. Some turned away from me, others listened to my claim, a few hesitated, while others were sore perplexed, notwithstanding that Thy testimony was set forth before the followers of all religions, and Thy proof demonstrated unto all the peoples of the earth, and the signs of Thy might, so powerfully manifested as to encompass the entire creation.

I have no will but Thy will, O my Lord, and cherish no desire except Thy desire. From my pen flowed only the summons which Thine exalted pen hath voiced, and my tongue uttered naught save what the Most Great Spirit hath itself proclaimed in the kingdom of Thine eternity. I am stirred by nothing else except the winds of Thy will, and breathe no word except the words which, by Thy leave and Thine inspiration, I am led to pronounce.

Behold, then, O my God, my loneliness among Thy servants and my remoteness from Thy friends and Thy chosen ones. I beseech Thee, by the showers of the clouds of Thy mercy, whereby Thou hast caused the blossoms of Thy praise and utterance and the flowers of Thy wisdom and testimony to spring forth in the hearts of all them that have recognized Thy oneness, to supply Thy servants and my kindred with the fruits of the tree of Thy unity, in these days when Thou hast been established upon the throne of Thy mercy. Hinder them not, O my Lord, from attaining unto the things Thou dost possess, and write down for them that which will aid them to scale the heights of Thy grace and favor. Give them, moreover, to drink of the living waters of Thy knowledge, and ordain for them the good of this world and of the world to come.

Thou art, verily, the Lord of Bahá and the Beloved of His heart, and the Object of His desire, and the Inspirer of His tongue, and the Source of His soul. No God is there but Thee, the Inaccessible, the Most High. Thou art, verily, the Almighty, the Most Exalted, the Ever-Forgiving, the Most Merciful. Bahá'í. Prayers and Meditations, p. 106.

The Forces Mysteriously Released Are Inconceivably Potent

The opening year of the second Seven Year Plan so auspiciously inaugurated is half spent. The entire American Bahá'í Community, galvanized through fuller perception of the progressive unfoldment of its glorious destiny, is geared to a higher speed of organized activity, and uplifted to a new level of collective achievement. The forces mysteriously released, designed to direct the operation and stimulate the processes to insure the consummation of the second stage of the Divine Plan, are inconceivably potent. Full, rapid use of these forces, by an organized community alive to the sublimity of its mission, is imperative. The manifold agencies, local, regional, national and international, directly responsible for prosecution of the Plan are now called upon to achieve, in their respective spheres, termination of this current year, successes so conspicuous as shall immeasurably fortify hopes of winning, within the stipulated time, a total, decisive victory. An immediate notable increase in the number of pioneers, particularly for the newly-opened transatlantic field of service, is the more necessary basis of this challenging hour. The present trickle must at all costs swell into a steady flow of consecrated settlers and itinerant teachers, who, mindful of the Master's poignant plea, careless of their limited resources, undismayed by the somber international outlook, undeterred by the formidable character of the tasks undertaken or by the obstacles to be surmounted, will, in both the administrative and teaching spheres, arise to accomplish feats outshining the exploits immortalizing the record of American Bahá'í's stewardship in both continents of the New World since the inception of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Divine Plan. May the months immediately ahead be productive of results exceeding my fondest expectations.

"Mounting Evidences of Magnificent Work"

Overjoyed, grateful for mounting evidences of magnificent work achieved. Assure the departed and the prospective pioneers of my boundless gratitude, fervent prayers and loving admiration, and abundant reward for exemplary response and magnificent labors.

Smoun Haija, Palestine October 19, 1946 (Cablegram)

Note: The Guardian's message of October 19 was sent in reply to the cablegram which the National Assembly addressed to him from the October meeting as follows:

There Is No Time to Lose
Dear valued co-workers:

As the opening phase of the Second Year Plan draws inexorably to a close, the American Bahá’í community, which has already abundantly demonstrated its capacity to carry to a triumphant conclusion the initial stage of the Plan conceived by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, must equally—nay, even more convincingly—prove to the entire Bahá’í world, its inflexible determination and undoubted ability to discharge befittingly whatever responsibilities the constant evolution of the Plan may impose upon its members under any circumstances and in whatever continent of the globe. As the field of their historic labors steadily widens, as the implications of their high mission become more apparent, as the complexity of their task increases, as the agencies designed to facilitate and accelerate its execution multiply, the members of this community must, individually as well as collectively, redouble their efforts, evince a nobler spirit of self-sacrifice, display greater resourcefulness, unity, initiative, steadfastness and enterprise, rise to loftier heights of heroism and self-abnegation, and establish, more convincingly than ever, their right to be regarded as the worthy champions of a glorious Cause, the principal builders of a unique Order, the chosen trustees and executors of a divinely conceived Plan.

Theirs is the duty, at once urgent, inescapable and sacred, to scatter more widely and as far as the extremities of both the North and South American continents, to cross the ocean in ever-increasing numbers, and reinforce, rapidly and systematically, the outposts of the Faith in Western Europe, lay, on a definite and unassailable basis, the foundations of new and flourishing communities, disseminate, energetically, and on a far more extensive scale, the literature of the Faith in all the languages which the execution of the Plan, at its present stage, demands, collaborate more closely with the two National Assemblies and their subsidiary agencies already functioning in that continent, initiate, wisely and patiently, whatever measures may be required to further the purposes of the Plan, and surmount, at whatever cost, every obstacle they may encounter in their path.

As to those who, owing to circumstances beyond their control, are unavoidably prevented from participatcommunity: all, without exception, with no reservation, without further delay, must participate. Each and every one, to the fullest extent of his or her ability, and however directly or indirectly affecting the prevailing circumstances, or circumcised the means, must arise to contribute to the success of this new enterprise, that will once safeguard the fruits already harvested through the successful conclusion of the first stage of the Divine Plan, and enable its prosecutors to launch, at the appointed time, a third and a still more glorious age in its evolution.

There is no time to lose. The task, though prodigious, is not beyond the capacity of those who, in so short a time, in such distant fields, over wide an area, and in the midst of a people so alien in temperament, language and custom, have won such conspicuous victories for their beloved Faith, and laid so enduring a foundation for its nascent institutions. This gallant community is now summoned to undertake, further and in circumstances admirably more adverse and challenging, a task infinitely more meritorious, and considerably richer in its potentials. To fail, at this critical juncture, to rise to the height of the occasion, would jeopardize the colossal work so painstakingly loosed in the course of many long years, and irretrievably shatter the hopes for the early opening of the third and most shining phase of the Divine Plan, a stage whose completion must mark the closing of the Initial Epoch in the Plan's progressive unfoldment.

May this community, faithful to 'Abdu'l-Bahá's mandate, arise as one man and carry out, in its entirety and to the fullest extent, the task which it has so spontaneously undertaken.

Bahaí News

The following passages are from the Guardian's letter of October 5, 1946, written through his secretary.

Need for Pioneers

Shoghi Effendi wants to particularly emphasize the need for more pioneers and travelling teachers, particularly in the European part, the present very unsettled part of the world, the confusion and suspicion which seems to be growing rather than dissipating, necessitating immediate action; no postponement to future years of an increase of workers abroad can be permitted, if the goals of this second Seven Year Plan are to be successfully achieved. Indeed, a time may come when the friends will look back and regret every hour of delay as a priceless opportunity irrevocably lost! Rapid as has been the work in Latin America, the work in Europe must go forward at a much more urgent pace. Although he feels the European Teaching Committee has already done wonderfully well, he urges you to appeal to the believers to arise in far greater numbers, and go abroad at once, heedless of the sacrifices involved. He himself, through his personal correspondence is constantly pressing the Bahá'ís to volunteer for this service, and hopes during the coming months many more people will place themselves at your disposal for this all-important service.

I need not tell you all that he constantly prays for your success and guidance in the discharge of your increasingly heavy duties. He admires greatly the spirit of perseverance and dedication with which you are serving, and you may call upon him at any time for his assistance and advice.

The Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the Guardianship

The Passing of 'Abdu'l-Bahá

With the approaching observance on January 6th of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Guardianship, our minds turn back this month to the events of 1921 which connect the Guardianship with the life of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. To refresh our minds concerning the passing of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, we quote brief selections from a letter of Louise Bosh written from Haifa, December 5, 1921.

"Our beloved 'Abdu'l-Bahá passed from this earth early Monday morning. It was at half-past one o'clock—that is to say, one and one-half hours after midnight on Sunday. He had no illness in bed. His departure from this world was a rather sudden occurrence. It was half an hour before he closed his benignant eyes forever that he said to Rouha Khanum, who was alone in the room with him, "I am dying." There was no one else in the room with him, as all were in their respective beds asleep, no one imaging on awakening that such could be the case. Notwithstanding the fact that our beloved 'Abdu'l-Bahá was not so well that day, and in truth had not been well for a long time, but in consideration of his work which he did every day, and the care that he took to carry out his work every day, and the attention which he paid to matters great and small, and the visitors which he received up to the last, and his inquiries after the welfare of the pilgrims present and the sick in the village, and the requirements of the holy family,—in short, notwithstanding the fever which 'Abdu'l-Bahá had that day and several days previous, which fever would come and go and was designated as malarial—the members of the household were not aware of the approaching departure.

"After Rouha Khanum had given him some medicine, she awakened the holy mother. The others, also Dr. Krug, were sent for. He happened to be (as a pilgrim) on the grounds. He and his wife were lodged, and still are at the present time, in the room which 'Abdu'l-Bahá had built for himself as an addition to his house—the room to which a stairway leads, in the garden near the entrance. So Dr. Krug was not far away and could come quickly; but alas! 'Abdu'l-Bahá breathed only a few times more and all became still within his holy temple.

"At first we were as dumb and speechless, bewildered. We stood or knelted before the bed. We gazed upon his face and could not trust our eyes. . . . Then, after awhile, the mosquito netting over the bed was let down, and this covered from our eyes the earthly remains of our Lord. We got up and went into the adjacent room, and the door of the room out of which we came was closed.

"The holy funeral took place on Tuesday morning, the casket being borne on the shoulders of men, up and up and up Mount Carmel, until the sacred spot of the Tomb of His Holiness the Bab was reached, and there 'Abdu'l-Bahá was temporarily buried.

"The holy family awaits the arrival of Shoghi Effendi Rabbani from England. Until that time nothing will be undertaken regarding the reading of the Testament of Our Lord, the Center of the Covenant of God. He left a letter addressed to Shoghi Effendi, and this letter he gave for safe-keeping to the holy mother, and gave the order to write to Shoghi to come home. . . ."

From "Star of the West," vol. XII, pp. 276-282.

When we observe on November 28 the Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, let us also prayerfully review the life-long labors of the Master and the great heritage He has bequeathed to us.

"Thus was brought to a close the ministry of One Who was the incarnation, by virtue of the rank bestowed upon Him by His Father, of an institution that has no parallel in the entire field of religious history, a ministry that marks the final stage in the Apostolic, the Heroic and most glorious Age of the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh.

"Through Him the Covenant, that 'excellent and priceless Heritage' bequeathed by the Author of the Bahá'í Revelation, had been proclaimed, championed and vindicated. Through the power which that Divine Instrument had conferred upon Him the light of God's infant Faith had penetrated the West, had diffused itself as far as the Islands of the Pacific, and illumined the fringes of the Australian continent. Through His personal intervention the Message, Whose Bearer had tasted the bitterness of a life-long captivity, had been noise abroad, and its character and purpose disclosed, for the first time in its history, before enthusiastic and representative audiences in the chief cities of Europe and of the North American continent. Through His unremitting labors, as reflected in the discourses He composed, the thousands of Tablets He revealed, the discourses He delivered, the prayers, poems and commentaries He left to posterity, mostly in Persian, some in Arabic and a few in Turkish, the laws and principles, constituting the warp and woof of His Father's Revelation, had been elucidated, the fundamentals restated and interpreted, its tenets given detailed application and the validity and indispensability of its verities fully and publicly demonstrated. Through the warnings He sounded, an unheeding humanity, steeped in materialism and forgetful of its God, had been apprised of the perils threatening to disrupt its ordered life, and made, in consequence of its persistent perversity, to sustain the initial shocks of the world upheaval which continues, until the present day, to rock the foundations of human society. And lastly, through the mandate He had issued to a valiant community, the concerted achievements of whose members had shed so great a lustre on the annals of His own ministry, He had set in motion a Plan which, soon after its formal inauguration, achieved the opening of the Australian continent, which, in a later period, was to be instrumental in winning over the heart of a royal convert to His Father's Cause, and which, today, through the irresistible unfoldment of its potentialities, is so marvellously quickening the spiritual life of all the Republics of Latin America as to constitute a befitting conclusion to the records of an entire century.

"Nor should a survey of the outstanding features of so blessed and fruitful a ministry omit mention of the prophecies which the unerring pen of the appointed Center of Bahá'u'lláh's Covenant has recorded. These foreshadow the fierceness of the onslaught that the resistless march of the Faith must provoke in the West, in India and in the Far East when it meets the federated orders of the Christian, the Buddhist and Hindu religions. They foreshadow the turmoil which its emancipation from the fetters of religious orthodoxy will cast in the American, the European, the Asiatic and African continents. They foreshadow the gath-

Race Unity Consultation

Change in Agenda

Since the general plans reported in October Bahá’í News were adopted, the National Assembly has found it advisable to provide for more intensive consideration of the teaching policies involved in the best promotion of the Faith in the Southern areas. The proposed banquet to be held Saturday evening, December 7, in Chicago is eliminated from the plans. Instead, a laboratory session will be held Saturday evening with the Race Unity Committee, non-Bahá’í consultants, and members of the NSA.

The Sunday morning conference in Temple Foundation Hall, December 8, is limited in attendance to the representatives of the Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees of the Southern States as listed in October Bahá’í News. The Conference will be devoted to the subject of teaching and race relations in the South, hence the natural limitation of the participating areas.

The public meeting Sunday afternoon in Temple Foundation Hall will be held as previously announced.

How to Increase Bahá’í Effort

Dear Bahá’í friends:

Each of you has received a personal copy of the message which Shoghi Effendi cabled from Haifa on October 7. When he calls upon the “manifold agencies, local, regional, national and intercontinental,” to achieve conspicuous successes this year, the Guardian addresses himself to every individual Bahá’í and every Bahá’í committee and Assembly now existing in North America. How can the sum total of our Bahá’í effort be greatly increased—that is, effort expressed in deeds, not words?

The answer is, by employing the full capacity each of us already has—by turning into action the devotion and the knowledge which we actually possess. The intention is mysterious and profound, but the method of realizing the intention is simple, clear and measurable from day to day. For example:

1. Do I attend the Nineteen Day Feasts regularly? If not, what prevents me?

2. Am I aware of the definite plans adopted for attaining the objectives of the new Seven Year Plan? Have I felt that I have no responsibility under the Plan if I am not a member of one of the National Committees?

3. What are the facts about my contributions to the Bahá’í Fund? Have I ever thought through this matter of expressing my faith in terms of sacrifice? Am I donating twice as much as last year?

4. Am I teaching the Faith? If not a lecturer or public speaker, do I find ways to share the teachings with others? Have I taught myself to the degree that I begin to express the basic truths and attitudes in my daily life?

5. Do I contribute to the unity and enthusiasm of my community or group? Or am I carried along by the spiritual power generated by others?

6. Am I able and willing to abandon my present way of life and offer to go to some post of difficulty and trial?

7. Do I study the teachings regularly, with others or alone?

The self-examination is the important thing, and not the particular form of questions we ask ourselves. Action today is the sign of faith, and not acceptance of any passive formula which leaves ourselves out of the daily work. Let each of us set a higher standard of Bahá’í work. Living up to a higher standard is the way to grow in strength, integrity, capacity, usefulness, assurance and the joy that nothing can take away.

National Spiritual Assembly will be held responsible to third persons for the acts of committees or other agents appointed by it, if the acts in question are within the scope of the authority and duties assigned to such committees or agents.

2. The National Spiritual Assembly will also be responsible to third persons for the acts of an employee—a person who is employed for special or particular work and who works under the general supervision and control of the National Spiritual Assembly, its committees or agents, provided that the acts are within the scope of the employee's duties and authority.

3. The National Spiritual Assembly will not be responsible for the acts of an independent contractor, i.e., persons such as contractors, caterers, or others who are employed for certain services and who are put in complete control of the work without interference from the National Spiritual Assembly or its committees.

4. As a general rule the National Spiritual Assembly will not be responsible to third persons for the acts of sub-agents who are appointed by its committees since an agent is not permitted to delegate his authority to another person. However, under certain circumstances the National Spiritual Assembly may find itself liable for the acts of such sub-agents. Such liability results when the sub-agent is appointed by a committee or agent which has been assigned work which in view of normal business customs ordinarily includes the authority to appoint other agents, and which properly conducted reasonably requires the employment of other agents.

In view of these general legal principles and the inability to make any rule which can cover all cases, the National Spiritual Assembly should guard itself against committee actions based more upon enthusiasm than wise judgment by issuing a general statement regarding the limitation of committees. The following statements are suggested for inclusion in all committee appointments by way of notice to committee chairmen:

A. It is understood in accepting this appointment that no committee or committee member shall have authority to bind the National Spiritual Assembly by any contract or agreement with third persons unless the National Spiritual Assembly shall have in writing officially and expressly assented thereto.

B. All committees or agents acting on their own initiative must advise third parties that the National Spiritual Assembly can be made liable only by its written agreement or assent to any undertaking and that no agreements made by committees or agents shall create any liability upon the National Spiritual Assembly.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Treasurer's Report

Dear Bahá'í friends:

Since we are into our sixth month of this Bahá'í year it might be well to review the Budget as of September 30th, 1946.

The total Budget for the period from May 1 to September 30 was $104,166.66.

Total contributions to the National Bahá'í Fund and Trustee Accounts amounted to $89,167.01, leaving a deficit in meeting our Budget of $14,999.65.

It might be well to remember that in this item of $89,167.01, which represents the total contributions for the period, that there are several non-recurring legacies which we have received since the beginning of this Bahá'í year.

Plans are going forward rapidly in all branches of Bahá'í activity and it will not be long before the Fund will be drawn upon in large sums for the interior decoration of the Temple.

The degree to which we support the activities which the Guardian has outlined for the Second Seven Year Plan, through the Fund, will measure our ability to reach these goals.

Faithfully,

PHILIP G. SPRAGUE, Treasurer

Greeting to Esperanto Convention

The National Spiritual Assembly sent through the Chairman of the World Language Committee the following message to the national Esperanto Convention held in July:

The American Bahá'ís send cordial greeting and best wishes. We trust that your gathering will be crowned with success in your devotion to the great principle of a universal auxiliary language which is a goal also sought by the followers of Bahá'u'lláh.

This year our hearts are deeply touched by the loving memory of the late Lidia Zamenhof, whose laudable death in Poland has shed her many friends throughout the world. The American Bahá'ís are arranging a memorial meeting in her honor to be held by our local groups in hundreds of cities throughout North America. We hope that Esperanto friends will meet with Bahá'ís on that occasion.

Memorial Gathering in Honor of Mr. John D. Bosch

A memorial meeting to honor Mr. John D. Bosch will be conducted in Temple Foundation Hall, Wilmette, Illinois, at 11 a.m., Sunday, November 2, 1946, by a special committee appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly.

Concerning Bulletins from A. J. Stenstrand

For twenty years or more, circular letters have been issued to some of the Assemblies by a party who signs himself A. J. Stenstrand, Chicago. These bulletins apparently seek to make Bahá'ís believe that Bahá'u'lláh was not a Manifestation, the One foretold by the Báb, but an imposter. When asked what to do with such communications, the National Spiritual Assembly has always advised the Assembly or individual to put them in the waste paper basket and forget them. They merit no consideration by Assemblies, with their feeble echo of the violation of a by-gone day.

Ask for Credentials

One more Assembly has reported having extended financial assistance to a person claiming to be a Bahá'í, whose statements were later proven wholly unreliable and untrue. The name used in this case was Robert Williams.

Bahá'í membership can, whenever necessary, be authenticated. Whenever a stranger, claiming to be a believer, seeks to exploit the Faith in any way, the Assembly's duty is to request credentials.

Pioneers to Europe Begin Teaching

Shoghi Effendi once said in a visiting pamphlet: "God raises up whatever means He needs to promote His Cause." This surely seems to be so as we follow the destinies of those pioneers who have volunteered to inaugurate the European Teaching Campaign. On September 7th New York harbor was filled with ships unable to move because of the maritime strike. Two ships and two ships only, the "Kingsholm" and the "Stavangerfjord," were able to sail on that day (because of special circumstances), and one of these two ships carried our pioneer to Norway, Mrs. Corbit, and our representative to Geneva, Mrs. Graeaffe. A New York daily paper reported that these two ships sailed that day "under dramatic circumstances." And our Committee adds: "Did it not!"

Through a series of equally fortuitous circumstances our Chairman, Miss Edna True, sailed September 25th on the Dutch liner "Westerdam," directly to Holland. Within two days of sailing she was able to get passage for our two Dutch pioneers, Miss Rita von Sombeck and her sister, Mrs. Jetty Straub, on the very same ship. This too is a "dramatic circumstance," as the ship these pioneers intended to leave on was indefinitely delayed by the strike, and is, at this writing, still tied up in New York harbor.

Already letters are beginning to come back from these first pioneers, and these letters are full of hope... and enthusiasm. Mrs. Corbit writes from Oslo, Norway, that there are many interested persons there. Miss Johanna Shubarth (formerly of Urbana, Illinois) has done splendid contacts work in Oslo, and through her efforts several meetings were held while Mrs. Graeffe was there. Among other things, Miss Shubarth and Mrs. Corbit are starting a study class composed of young Norwegians who speak English.

On October 18th, our pioneers to Denmark, Mr. and Mrs. Anders Nielson, will be sailing for Copenhagen to take up permanent residence there. These will be followed in the very near future by other pioneers, as soon as transportation can be arranged.

In our next report we hope to give many details of the progress of the work in Europe. This time the European Teaching Committee has wanted to share with the friends our conviction and our gratitude that the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh cannot be held back by such things as maritime strikes or any other material obstacles. “God raises up whatever means He needs to promote His Cause!” KATHERINE K. Preparation for the Latin American Conferences Excitement is running high as 19 delegates begin their trek to the first Bahá'í South American Conference, which will open in Buenos Aires the evening of November 7th. It is expected to be a memorable occasion foreshadowing the future unity of the 10 South American Republics in a single National Spiritual Assembly to be elected in April, 1951. Every one of the ten countries will be represented at the Conference by one or more delegates. The 19 en route are from countries other than Argentina, where the congress will be held.

Because of the immense distances to be traversed and the equally high expense of such journeys, one most generous Bahá'í made a sacrificial gift to aid with transportation, where necessary, so that no country, however far, might be left unrepresented. The interesting thing is that, in spite of the poverty of many of the believers, only three of the most distant countries accepted aid to the extent of a complete round trip for their delegate. Even then, he was to pay his personal expenses, hotels, etc., en route and any necessary expenses in Buenos Aires. Five of the other countries accepted aid with half of the transportation expense, for one delegate per country. Eleven are planning to go entirely at their own expense. The majority are traveling in buses or trains; sometimes part of the way by sea, in order to reduce expense and gather in the Argentine capital on the opening night.

The Buenos Aires Assembly, ably assisted by Shirley Warde, has been putting on a fine publicity campaign accompanied by a series of public meetings with audiences overflowing the Bahá'í Center and resorting to public halls in order to accommodate the people. Among North Americans who plan to be present are Shirley, Flora Hottes, now in Montevideo, and Artemus Lamb, who has been pioneering in Punta Arenas and doing regional teaching throughout Chile. His sister, Mrs. Valeria Nicholas, and his mother are en route from California to join Artemus in Santiago, Chile, where they will reside and assist the believers. Chile has three Assemblies and four new groups have recently been formed.

The first tests of combining correspondence teaching with visits of itinerant teachers has worked out very well in Cali, Colombia, this month. Mrs. Louise Caswell made some contacts there last December. These were sustained through correspondence and others added. The group invited Mrs. Gayle Woolson to visit them, when possible. She did so the middle of September with the result that 13 adults and 2 youth were confirmed as Bahá'ís and a class of 20 is continuing to study. Among the members of this new Bahá'í community are a prominent physician and the grand master of the Masons of western Colombia. Gayle continued her regional teaching trip into Ecuador, with the result that seeds planted there began to bear fruit. Three new memberships and enthusiastic reports have just come in from Guayaquil, while the secretary of the group in Quito reports two former members reconfirmed and active and one new member added, making six active members in their group. He writes, “This is fruit of the seed Johnny Stearns has sown, but Huscle Cornbleth and Gayle have now made it ripe.” He winds up, “We need registration cards. Please rush!”

Mrs. Gwennie Sholtis has been doing an outstanding teaching job in the Bolivian goal city of Sucre, where three new adult members and one declared youth have just come in through her efforts. A Bahá'í Center has been opened and meetings are continuing now in her absence. Flora Hottes and Sra. Yvonne L. de Cuellar of La Paz contributed to the founding of the group in Sucre as well as to the teaching work in La Paz.

Enthusiastic reports have been pouring in from Central America as the result of Mrs. Marcia Steward's three and a half months' teaching trip through the six countries. Mrs. Steward emphasized the guardianship and the reality of Bahá'í Administration in preparation for the election of the second Latin American National Spiritual Assembly, which will include Central America, Mexico and the West Indies. Two new membership cards accompany a most enthusiastic letter from the secretary in Tegucigalpa, Honduras. Many important persons were reached by Marcia, assisted by the members of the various assemblies. Among them was Dr. Guerrero, president of the International Court of Justice, who said to the Bahá'í representative, “I feel myself completely linked with you, and I wish you to do me the honour to consider me from now on as a member of your organization.”

Miss Louise Baker will sail from New Orleans November 1st for Vera Cruz, Mexico. She will teach in Vera Cruz and Puebla. Mr. Charles Mason Remy will leave Washington in December to visit the Panama Bahá'í Conference and also to call upon the Bahá'í Communities in the West Indies and Central America. The Conference is officially set for January 19 - 25. Mrs. Loulie Matthews of Temperiry Ranch, Colorado, plans to attend it as a representative of the Inter-America Committee. A second representative will be Dr. Edris Rice-Wray of Glenview, Ill., who will visit Guatemala on the way south and stop in some of the islands of the West Indies en route homeward. Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala of Canada have now completed their plans for a teaching trip in December including the West Indies and Venezuela.

Word has come that Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Miessler of Columbus Grove, Ohio, have just arrived in Rio de Janeiro, where they will spend a month prior to continuing to their pioneer post in Sao Paulo.

Twenty-three adult memberships and four declared youth, as well as the reconfirmation of two additional Bahá'ís, have been received from Latin America this month.

Public Meetings Series

Opens Successfully

The series of Public Meetings for 1946-1947 opened with the Minneapolis meeting on October 13th, held in the East Room of the Curtis Hotel. The "Trio Unique," a piano and string ensemble, set the stage with fifteen minutes of music while the audience was gathering. The ushers in colorful formal attire and of various races, demonstrated the Bahá'í principle of the Oneness of Mankind, as variegated flowers from the garden of humanity.

Maria Montana, a member of the Minneapolis Community and professional concert artist, contributed greatly to the program with the sacred song, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains," by F. Flaxington Harker, with violin cello accompaniment by Dr. Charles Frink.

A lighted model of the Temple, loaned by the St. Paul community, was used as a window display during the week preceding the meeting and in the hotel lobby the night of the lecture.

Daily spot announcements were made over the radio the week of the meeting. Two fifteen minute broadcasts used the transcriptions provided by the National Radio Committee. The radio director of one of the stations said that the transcriptions were so fine that if he could find time to run them again after the rush season was over (sports etc.), he would give them free time. The meeting was well publicized in the newspapers and two thousand invitations were mailed out.

The hall capacity was 450, all seats were filled, and a good many stood during the entire program, while others were turned away. The speaker of the evening was Carl Schefle and the finest tribute to his work comes through Lawrence Hautz, chairman of the evening, who said: "The audience remained glued to their seats after the completion of the lecture, and it was necessary to inform them a second time that the program was over." As follow-up work a regular Wednesday night meeting is scheduled at the Minneapolis Bahá'í Center.

The Key Cities holding meetings in November are as follows:

- Nov. 3rd—Albuquerque, N. M., speaker, Dr. Edris Rice-Wray;
- Nov. 5th—Urbana, Illinois, speaker, Miss Elsie Austin;
- Nov. 10th—Binghamton, N. Y., speaker, Mr. Matthew Bullock;
- Nov. 24th—Winnipeg, Manitoba, speakers, Dr. Edris Rice-Wray and Mr. Emeric Sala.

Salt Lake City has its meeting tentatively scheduled for December 15, with Helen Bishop as speaker; San Francisco, for Jan. 10th, with Horace Holley and Elsie Austin as selected speakers. Baltimore is planning its meeting for January 21st with William Sears as speaker.

Montreal's meeting will be held in February with Horace Holley, speaker. Miami and Nashville will also hold meetings in February, with Harlan Ober as speaker.

For the month of March Cleveland is scheduled, with Dorothy Baker, and Pittsburgh, with Kenneth Christian.

Last year's Key Cities, reporting similar meetings to date are—Atlanta, Detroit, Denver, Boston (meeting scheduled for October 25th), New Orleans (the latter part of January), New York (November 7th with Matthew Bullock as speaker), Portland (February 3rd with Mark Toby as speaker), Toronto, and Washington, D. C. (October 12th). Chicago and Los Angeles are the only cities that have not been heard from to date.

Sixteen New Settlers in Goal Cities

A review of the activities in the twenty-one regions of the United States and Alaska during the first six months of the new Plan indicates a movement toward the accomplishment of the goals which have been given us by the Guardian. To aid in the establishment of the first objective of the new Plan, a total of sixteen believers have moved to goal cities, and the National Teaching Committee has arranged twelve inter-regional circuits to give teaching assistance to the weaker Assemblies and groups holding promise of Assembly status, besides approving twenty regional projects designed to stimulate teaching activity.

Fourteen Regional Teaching Conferences have been held to focus the attention of the believers on the goals of the second Seven Year Plan and to discuss ways and means of achieving these goals. Several of the Regional Committees have provided large maps of the region designating the location of the goal cities, and the agendas of the meetings have covered such topics as: "How to bring groups to Assembly status"; "Fireside meetings"; "Consolidation of the Victories Already Won"; "Ways and Means of Securing an audience"; and various aspects of the new Plan such as regular contributions to the National Fund, need for pioneer settlers and teachers, etc.

In connection with most of the Regional Conferences, a well-advertised public meeting has been held and this has been very helpful to the smaller communities. Those cities where Conferences have been held are: Rochester, N.Y.; Red Bank, N.J.; Jackson, Miss.; Laramie, Wyo.; Topeka, Kan.; Kalama-zoo, Mich.; Fort Wayne, South Bend and Indianapolis, Ind.; Logan, Utah; San Francisco, Calif.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Washington, D.C.; Kenosha, Wis.; and Chicago, Ill. An RTC Conference in Minneapolis on Nov. 16th will provide follow-up interest for the big meeting held there in October, and a Conference and public meeting is planned for Knoxville, Tenn. in December to aid the group in its effort to increase its membership and achieve Assembly status next April.

The National Teaching Committee has planned for two conferences with Regional Teaching Committee members of nine Eastern and Southern regions to talk over general plans for the accomplishment of the goals of the new Plan. The first conference was held with members of the five Regional Committees of New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Ohio, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, in New York, N.Y. on October 20th, and the second is to be held on Nov. 10th in Atlanta, Ga., with the members of Regional Committees from the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas.

In these nine regions there are twenty-three weak Assemblies in need of strengthening, and sixteen groups holding promise of Assembly status, or over half of the thirty on which the Guardian has focussed attention to "speedily attain Assembly status." With but six months in which to accomplish the goals set for this first year of the new Plan the National and Regional Teaching Committees are endeavoring to utilize every opportunity for the furtherance of the teaching work.

The settlement of believers in the goal cities during these months has likewise been a very important part of the work of consolidation, as sixteen believers have moved to the following goal cities: Mr. and Mrs. Lucien McComb and Mrs. Gutherie of Long Island, N.Y., and former pioneers in Puerto Rico, have moved to Portsmouth, N.H.; Mr. Clarence Newport of Elmhurst, Ill. has moved to Providence, R.I.; Mrs. Barbara Jones of Lima, O. has moved to Brattleboro, Vt.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Erfurth have moved to Boise, Idaho, but unfortunately just temporarily, as they find their property is outside the city limits and they will be moving to their new home when it is completed in the spring; Miss Gertrude Eisenberg of Chicago, a former pioneer in South America, has become established in Louisville, Ky.; Miss Josie Pinson of Charleston, S. C., has secured a transfer of her position to Greenville, S.C.; Dr. and Mrs. Clyde Longyear of Los Angeles have moved to Beverly Hills, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Aldrich of Fargo have been transferred to Butte, Mont.; Mr. and Mrs. Betty Arrants of Gadsden, Ala., have settled in Knoxville, Tenn., to bring the membership of the group there to nine, thus insuring Assembly status in April. Settlers are still urgently needed and we urge anyone free to move to one of the goal cities to write Mrs. Sarah S. Walthall, Sec'y. of the National Teaching Committee, 4639 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

Twelve Regional circuits have provided teaching help to the goal cities, the most recent of which are: A circuit arranged for Mrs. Sara E. Witt of Santa Monica, Calif., through the Upper New York region in September, and during October arrangements have been made for visits to Fargo, Butte, Helena and Salt Lake City. Mrs. Witt will be the guest speaker for the public meeting in connection with the RTC Conference in Logan, Utah, on October 28th and 27th, going on to Boise, Ida., and to Reno, Nev., in November.

Mr. Duncan McAlear of Boston, Mass., covered a circuit which included Albany, Syracuse, Rochester and the Finger Lakes. Mr. William DeForge of Teaneck, N.J. made a three-day teaching tour which included New Haven, Hamden, and Orange, Conn. centers, and over Columbus Day Mr. DeForge visited Brattleboro, Vt. Mrs. Margery McCormick of Evanston, Ill. will visit Greensboro, N.C.; Greenville, S.C.; Columbia, S.C.; Augusta, Ga.; and Atlanta, Georgia the latter part of October and November.

Especially intensive teaching work has been going forward in Louisville, Ky., in an effort to build up that community, Mrs. Kathryn Frankland has been actively engaged for several months in making contacts and doing the preparatory work for a series of meetings planned by the National Teaching Committee for October and November. The series opened on Oct. 6th with a talk by Mr. Horace Holley on the subject, "World Hope of Religion," before an audience of seventy-five; excellent publicity and radio announcements advertised the meetings. A series of six 15-minute broadcasts are also being given through cooperation with the Natl. Radio Committee. Mrs. Sarah Walrath of Chicago spoke on "What should Religion do for the Individual" before an audience of fifty deeply interested and responsive people on Oct. 17th, and Mr. Carl Scheffer of Evanston, Ill., will speak on "Material and Spiritual Education" on Oct. 27th. Mrs. Frankland is following up the interest that has been aroused through fireside meetings, teas, luncheons, etc. Dr. Rice-Wray will speak early in November and negotiations are under way to provide a youth symposium and further speakers during November.

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

Developments in National Publicity and Advertising Campaign

Bahá’í advertisements have appeared in Newsweek, World Report, Editor and Publisher, Publishers Auxiliary, and Broadcast. 116 written requests for literature have been received, one of which listed eleven other persons. The total mailings of literature to October 11 have been 137. The booklet, World Order Through World Faith, is sent out with a copy of the summary.

The indirect results of the campaign are interesting and important. The advertising magazines, Printers Ink, Advertising Age, and Tide, all published a notice, and Tide interviewed our public relations counsel and on September 13 published an extensive statement with picture of the Temple.

When the article in Tide was noted by the editors of The Christian Century, they wrote an editorial about the campaign in their issue of September 2, which stated that the "plan is all right. The Bahá’ís have something to sell." They wonder, however, how the Bahá’ís are going to tell the people about the stations of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abe’l-Bahá and the Guardian.

The next link in the chain of cause and effect is that the editorial in The Christian Century was noted in the editorial office of Time Magazine, and a wire was sent to their Chicago office for information which could be used in the preparation of an article. The Chicago office interviewed our public relations counsel and a number of Bahá’ís in the Chicago area and sent the results to New York. The new religious editor of Time Magazine shortly afterward came to Chicago and spent some time in the National Bahá’í Office obtaining information and literature. His attitude was that a brief and dignified general statement about the Faith should be published in their religious section and he hoped his material would be approved.

The main point is, that every step forward in the promotion of the Faith produces unexpected and mysterious results. The confirming power of the Spirit acts whenever the believers press forward.

During September two newspaper articles have been distributed through our counsel to about 675 papers in 350 towns. The list includes a number of national magazines.

Subjects: The new European Teaching Campaign, and the need for Spiritual Education.

The following figures show the extent of public influence which can be exerted through publicity for the Faith. The Public Relations Committee has received 417 clippings of the U.S. Navy aerial picture of the Temple sent out to a special list of small town papers last spring with the caption "Landmark for Peace." Allowing for possible duplication, the Temple picture was seen by at least two million readers. Associated Press has recently distributed another picture of the Temple with caption reporting plan to complete the interior, and so far the clippings show it has appeared in seventy-seven different papers.

To assist the cities holding meetings under the Public Meetings Committee, the Public Relations Committee with its counsel has prepared three advertisements and three press releases which with change of local data can be used in all the cities. The Committee is prepared to render further service in these cities through mailings of literature to selected lists.

The Contacts Division of the Committee has mailed out 1,450 pieces of literature to a selected list of 725 persons of influence, including lecturers, radio commentators, authors, educators, musicians.

A circular letter was issued to Assemblies, Regional Teaching Committees and some active individual workers on September 16 with a sample copy of the 32-page booklet. Assemblies were requested to supply lists of names and addresses.

Our public relations counsel has carried out a number of special projects including: letter to travel and tourist bureaus, hotels and other agencies in the Chicago area with material about the Temple, to interest convention delegates and tourists visiting Chicago to include the Temple in their sight-seeing arrangements; special memo to New York papers concerning Miss Edna True’s departure for Europe on the work of the European Teaching Committee; contact with the New York Herald-Tribune Forum to include a Bahá’í speaker on their program; interviews with magazine editors, editing and placing of the advertisements and press releases.

For its contacts campaign, the Committee now has available a supply of the following printed material: The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh (summary and outline), Chicago Sunday Tribune reprint of Temple picture and article, Bahá’í—The Coming of World Religion, and these four-page reprints—The Principle of Religious Unity, Abdu’l-Bahá; The Reality of Brotherhood, The Reality of the Future Society, The Pattern for Reality of the Future Society, Shoghi Effendi; and the booklet, World Order Through World Faith.

One of the permanent projects in development is the working up of a National Bahá’í Mailing List of Key Persons and Organizations, classified according to their major interests, for the regular distribution of literature. The more names and addresses received, the more the Committee can help the local community or group.

Visual Education Committee

The Visual Education Committee for 1946-47 was assigned the functions of three former committees of allied interests, in order to coordinate the resources for visual teaching under one plan. The timeliness of this action of the National Assembly has been amply proven by the flood of inquiries which have come to the committee from all parts of the continent, and many points beyond this country. So great has been the demand that the National Assembly has suggested that we summarize our plans and the service we can offer, through Bahá'í News.

The work of the Committee falls into three areas of method, and a technical unit has been set up for each one. These units are (1) Exhibits and Displays; (2) Photography for teaching and documentary purposes; (3) Motion Pictures, silent and sound; Slides and Slide-films are part of No. 2 and No. 3. Our over-all budget is $500.00 for the year. It is therefore apparent that our work this year must be largely survey and experimental in character, and serve as the basis for efficient production and distribution to aid the teaching campaigns of the new Seven Year Plan.

At the present time, however, production on a small scale is being undertaken in each unit. Our budget will not allow us the short-cuts of using commercial firms to carry out our projects, but in two localities, Los Angeles and the Temple area, volunteer service groups are working under the supervision of a V.E.C. member to create specific designs or projects. Exhibits for the Public Meetings campaign, approved and financed by that Committee, are now getting under way in the Temple area, under the direction of Mr. Arthur H. Patterson. In California, the Los Angeles Youth Group, supervised by Leonard Herbert, are working on materials for the portfolios of sample illustrations of displays, which will serve as models for arranging small window and counter exhibits. The designs for these have been kept simple and the "props" are few and easily available. Models for travelling exhibits are still in the experimental stage, but will be reported through these columns as soon as shortages of materials can be overcome.

Exhibits for State and County Fairs, Festivals, and Community Parades, and other similar events cannot be served by the V.E.O. this year, as they involve large scale supplies and expenditures beyond our capacity.

Another committee project is the planning and preparation of synchronized slide-and-script programs to serve as teaching aids for inexperienced teachers, or to supplement the work of trained teachers. Methods of production and distribution have not been set up for this section yet.

The motion picture unit is occupied with plans for both documentary and teaching films. The script for the first Bahá'í teaching film is now being written. In the survey area a study is being made of suitable commercial films, on educational subjects, which can be used as a valuable adjunct for Bahá'í programs.

The Committee will welcome any inquiries or suggestions about its activities. New progress of the work will be reported in subsequent issues of Bahá'í News.

Please note new address for V.E.C. mail: Mrs. Clyde S. Longyear, Secretary, 456 South Bedford Drive, Beverly Hills, California.

Good Response to Questionnaire Cards

The new Questionnaire enterprise recently put into operation by the National Questionnaires Committee, is meeting with a response beyond our early predictions. The new question cards seem to fill a long felt need, that of locating new seekers. With these cards the rank and file of the believers are equipped to give the Message daily to those with whom they come in contact. Questionnaires are coming in from many different sources, including editors and faculty and students of colleges and theological seminaries. Praise for the questionnaire service is voiced by Assemblies, groups, and even non-Bahá'í seekers who have sensed the possibilities of this growing project.

In the seven-month period that this committee has been issuing these questionnaire cards, over 3,000 pieces of literature have been mailed out to new seekers who have checked the questions on subjects. So far, 33 states have been heard from as well as the Philippines and Hawaii. Through the enthusiastic cooperation of Assemblies, groups and individual believers, these cards have spread throughout the nation in less than half a year. It can be readily seen what an important tool they are in locating real seekers. Every believer should carry them with him at all times. Put your own name in a corner, if you wish, and you will then be able to ascertain how many of the cards you have handed out are bearing fruit.

Card number 3, headed "Questions I Would Like to Have Answered" has brought the greatest response to date—a proof that people are more interested in questions that concern their individual lives than they are on the general topics listed on Card No. 2. This gives us a very good idea as to what makes for attractive subjects to publicize for fireside groups and also for lecture topics. Listing them in the order in which they are most widely checked at this time:

1. What are the principles of the Bahá'í Faith?
2. What are your teachings about healing?
3. What is the difference between the mind, spirit and soul?
4. Does the soul progress more through servitude or through joy in this world?
5. Is prophecy being fulfilled?
6. What is true prayer?
7. What are some of the problems to be overcome before a lasting peace can be attained?
8. How does the Bahá'í Faith teach that workmen should share in the profits of a business?
9. How does the Bahá'í Faith propose to eliminate strikes?
10. Is it possible to attain true happiness?
11. Will the love one has entertained for another be forgotten in the next world?
12. Are we ever cut off from those in the other world?

Through the National Teaching Committee these cards are distributed to the Regional Committees for follow-up work especially when cards are sent in from places where there are as yet no Bahá'ís.
The questionnaire cards are an added incentive to Bahá'í's themselves to inaugurate Bahá'í's to become thoroughly informed of the answers to the questions on the card so that if, after handing one of these cards to an individual, he should ask him to immediately answer one of the questions, the believer will be ready to answer it. A study outline for this purpose is in the process of completion and assignment to the Study Aids Committee.

The questionnaire cards are available to assemblies, groups and regions at the rate of $5.00 per thousand or 60 cents a hundred. A special small package of fifty cards is now available to individual Bahá'ís for 35 cents.

Packages containing complete sets of answer literature for study classes may be had for 25 cents. All orders are to be mailed to Ward Calhoun, Chairman National Committee Bahá'í Questionnaires, Box 1, Oconomowoc, Wisconsin.

Temple Visitors from Six Continents

Report for July, August and September

Through the Bahá'í House of Worship, the Bahá'í Faith is becoming known in the six continents of the world. Every month visitors come from every state, or nearly every state, and many foreign countries. Some write about it in newspapers, magazines and novels, thus insinuating others to come. A number use it in their advertising. Since June, 1932, through September, 1946, 33,124 have been conducted through the building.

The largest group during this three-month period was 90. Each month has exceeded the same month of all previous years in the number of visitors. Following are comparative figures for the past six years:

For the year beginning October 1, 1945, and ending September 30, 1946, the number of visitors was 33,124. For the year ending September 30, 1945, the number was 25,298. Some of the increase may be due to the fact that in 1946 the Temple was kept open until 8 p.m. each day during July and August.

Groups visited the House of Worship from every state in the Union and from the District of Columbia. The numbers of groups from countries outside the United States will show how far-reaching the influence of the Temple is: From Hawaii there were 9 groups, from Alaska 1, Puerto Rico 2, Ontario 43, Manitoba 5, British Columbia 10, Alberta 3, Saskatchewan 4, Quebec 3, Mexico 6, Panama 1, Costa Rica 7, El Salvador 1, Honduras 1, Haiti 1, Jamaica 2, Bahamas 1, Cuba 3, Trinidad 1, Equador 1, Brazil 7, Uruguay 1, Peru 1, Bolivia 1, Chile 4, Argentina 1, British Guiana 1, Sweden 4, Iceland 1, Norway 3, Denmark 2, England 5, Scotland 1, France 1, Spain 2, Italy 1, Czechoslovakia 1, Turkey 4, Greece 2, Cyprus 1, New South Wales 1, Lebanon 4, Syria 1, Iran 3, India 3, China 1, the Philippines 2, Guam 1, Transvaal Colony 2, South Rhodesia 1, Cape Colony 3, Hunan (West Africa) 1, Egypt 1.

Much Bahá'í literature was purchased by the visitors. In July sales amounted to $531.97, in August to $496.36 and in September to $462.11.

One of the delightful and thrilling happenings was the fact that eleven members came from great distances to help in this teaching effort. Mrs. ElsBeth Renwanz of St. Joseph, Mo. arrived July 2nd and stayed until August 20th, serving nearly every day of that time. Miss Clara Edge of Grand Rapids, Michigan, served three weeks. Miss Cora Edge, Grand Rapids; Mrs. Murdoch Eaton, Grand Rapids; Miss Roan Orloff, Boston; Mrs. Della Quinlan, Brooklyn, New York; and Mrs. Catherine Healy, Montclair, New Jersey, each served one week. Those serving a few days were Mr. Murdoch Eaton, Grand and hundreds of pamphlets were given to the public. It is thought that at least between ten and fifteen thousand individuals made inquiries.

Springfield also reported that the Central Illinois Teaching Circuit held an inter-city picnic and short conference at Lincoln State Park at Old Salem on Sunday, September 8th. About 46 people from Peoria, Danville, Urbana, Champaign, Springfield and Quincy were present. Miss Pearl Easterbrook served as chairman.

Rapids; Mrs. Kathryn Alio, Dayton, O.; Mrs. Eunie Baxter, Omaha, Nebraska and Mrs. Amy Raubitschek, West Englewood, New Jersey. They felt that guiding was a real privilege and that the experience gained therefrom would give them inspiration for their teaching work back home. Needless to say the Guides Committee was more than happy to have them and appreciate the beautiful spirit they showed in sacrificing time and money to come here.

With the continual increase in the number of visitors, it is quite evident that we will need more and more guides. We hope that many more will be able to spend their vacations here next summer. All wishing to do so, should have their names approved and sent in by their Spiritual Assembly or Regional Teaching Committee, if their group has not yet reached Assembly size. The supply of Guide Courses has become exhausted, but new ones will be ready by January, we hope. When they are available, announcement will be made in Bahá’í News. These may be purchased through the Publishing Committee. A guide class is held in the Temple at 1:30 each Sunday, which any one living near may join. Classes are being held in Milford, Conn. They have given themselves well, for the interest expressed through guiding has increased.

Bahá’í Literature in Public Libraries

Since our Annual Report was made we are happy to announce that books have been placed in the following libraries:

College and University libraries

Additional books given to: University of Vermont, Burlington College, N. Y.; University of Washington, Appalachian State Teachers College, N. C.; University of Iowa, Bucknell University, Pa.; Rice Institute, Texas; Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Colorado A & M College.

Public Libraries

First donation: Logan, Utah, Dickin-

Tulsa, Okla., Lisbon, N. D., Linton, N. D., Geyserville, Cal. (Branch Library), Valley City, N. D., St. Peter Minn., Albert Lea, Minn., Valley Stream, Long Island, N. Y., Fernandina, Fla., Gainesville, Fla.

Additional books have been given to Bozeman and Glasgow libraries, Montana; Blair, Neb., South Bend, Ind., and East Jaffrey, N. H.

We regret that the Oklahoma public libraries with Bahá’í books were omitted in the Annual Report: Lebanon, El Reno, Miami, Muskogee, Norman.

The following public libraries in Missouri were also omitted from that report: Carthage, Hannibal, Jefferson City, Joplin, Liberty, Lexington, St. Charles, St. Joseph, University City, Warrensburg.

Bahá’í books are also in the following public libraries in Oregon: Cascade Locks, Corvallis, Medford, Oregon City.

Mississippi has books in the following libraries: Biloxi, Greenwood, Harrison, Laurel, McComb, Natchez, Vicksburg.

Bahá’í World, Volume 9 is not in any local Bahá’í libraries to our knowledge. Will the Assemblies report any donation of this important book to their Main Public Library for our records? Our budget was limited to college and university libraries and we know the Assemblies will respond to our appeal to present this book to large Public Libraries. It is our hope that all new Bahá’í books will be placed in their local libraries by Assembly Library Committees so that the collections in these libraries will be up-to-date.

It is most important that all of our books in the long list of libraries published in our Annual Report and given in Bahá’í News be kept in active circulation. Will the friends cooperate by using these books to keep them on "open shelves"? Mrs. Stuart Sims, Chairman.
The British Isles. A letter from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the British Isles, 1 Victoria St., London S.W. 1, points out the British believers are not much in need of relief. It says: "While living is somewhat austere and monotonous, we do not suffer from inflationary prices. The cost of living is officially estimated to be about 50% above pre-war. We are not in need of the necessities of life and feel that the need of some of the European countries is much greater. We suggest that if the American friends wish to send us parcels they might send them to the Local Assemblies and the National Assembly so that we could send them to those who need them most." The addresses of the Local Assemblies are as follows: Bradford, Bahá'í Centre, 68 Great Horton Rd., Bradford; Bournemouth, Mrs. E. Cranmer, Sec'y., 182 Seabourne Rd., Southbourne, Bournemouth; London, Bahá'í Centre, 1 Victoria Str., London S.W. 1; Manchester, Bahá'í Centre, 39 High Str., Manchester 4; Torquay, Bahá'í Centre, 14 Market Str., Torquay.

Local Communities Discuss Seven Year Plan

The National Spiritual Assembly welcomes heartily the effort made by some twenty-seven local Assemblies to respond to the request for reports on the result of consultation with the community on ways to further the Seven Year Plan.

The following specific suggestions have been compiled from the various reports, and are presented for the information of other communities.

1. Increase contributions to the National Fund. Six assemblies reported their determination to double their contributions made last year.
2. Discuss the Fund at each Feast.
3. Continue and increase newspaper advertising.
4. Organize prayer squads.
5. Increase contacts with Latin Americans.
6. Study Spanish.
7. Encourage and increase youth work.
8. Send members of the Youth Group to Summer School.
9. Give youth experience and training by service on committees.
10. Use qualified youth as chairman at public meetings.
11. Develop local mailing projects in order to assist in reaching the masses of the people. Arlington, Va., is starting a project whereby a Bahá'í text card and questionnaire card will be sent to each name in the local telephone directory.
12. Assist the Public Relations Committee by supplying names for the national mailing list.
13. Present books such as This Earth One Country, Security for a Failing World, and Heart of the Gospel to stores having lending libraries.
14. Place books in hospital libraries.
15. Place World Order on the newsstands.
16. Develop books, pamphlets, and radio talks presenting the Faith "in clear and simple language."
17. Strengthen weak Assemblies by assistance in developing the spirit and functioning of the Administration.
18. Extension teaching to build near-by groups to Assembly status.
19. Train more teachers in the local community.
20. Strengthen, and develop the new believers.
21. Special effort on the part of Assemblies to keep contact with near-by isolated believers.
22. Increase fireside teaching.
23. Use visual aids and films in fireside meetings.
24. Make Bahá'í Centers more attractive.
25. Have the Bahá'í Center open regularly as a public reading room.
26. More thorough planning of teaching projects undertaken.
27. Develop a definite program of formal and informal public meetings.
28. All Assemblies should be listed in phone books.
29. List Assembly (address and phone number) with local Chamber of Commerce.
30. Make a thorough study of A God-Given Mandate.
31. Try to lend all possible sup-
The Charleston Extension Teaching Committee was authorized by the Regional Teaching Committee to write to 110 weekly newspapers throughout the state and offer a series of brief “inspirational” quotations to be run with a call to the Temple. Enclosed with each letter was to be a pamphlet together with a sample of the 1-inch, 1-column advertisement as published last year in a Charleston daily newspaper. It is hoped the weeklies will accept this without cost. The letters have been begun.

Youth Enrollment Cards

A new form of youth enrollment card is in preparation. The local Assemblies having the older type of card on hand are requested to note that it was prepared for the registration of isolated youth and therefore provides for signature of the Regional Teaching Committee. When used for youth in organized communities, the committee signature is naturally not needed.

Even as a Fruitful Tree

"O ye, the faithful loved ones of 'Abdu'l-Bahá! It is incumbent upon you to take the greatest care of Shoghi Effendi, the twig that hath branched from the fruit given forth by the two hallowed and Divine Lote-Trees, that no dust of despondency and sorrow may stain his radiant nature, that day by day he may wax greater in happiness, in joy and spirituality, and may grow to become even as a fruitful tree.

For he is, after 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the guardian of the Cause of God, the Amín, the Hands (pillars) of the Cause and the beloved of the Lord must obey him and turn unto him. He that obeyeth him not, hath not obeyed God; he that turneth away from him, hath turned away from God and he that denieth him, hath denied the True One. Beware lest anyone falsely interpret these words, and like unto them that have broken the Covenant after the Day of Ascension (of Bahá'u'lláh) advance a pretext, raise the standard of revolt, wax stubborn and open wide the door of false interpretation. To none is given the right to put forth his own opinion or express his particular convictions. All must seek guidance and turn unto the Center of the Cause and the House of Justice. And he that turneth unto whatsoever else is indeed in grievous error.

The Glory of Glories rest upon you!"

From the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá

Messages from the Guardian

Bahá'u'lláh's Promise to Every Assembly

The following excerpt from the letter written by the Guardian through his secretary to the Evanston and Wilmette Assemblies on November 17, 1933, is published with the Guardian's consent:

"Bahá'u'lláh has given the promise that in every Assembly where unity and harmony prevail, there His glorious spirit will not only be present, but will animate, sustain and guide all the friends in all their deliberations.

"It is to unity that the Guardian has been continually calling the friends. For where a united will exists, nothing can effectively oppose and hamper the forces of constructive development."

Observance of the Guardianship

Beloved Friends:

This issue of Bahá'í News contains a special supplement on the subject of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the Guardianship. It is printed as a separate pamphlet so that each Bahá'í may give it full attention on frequent occasions before the date of January 6.

Local Assemblies and groups, as well as isolated believers, will note that the supplement gives the program to be observed at the Anniversary meetings.

The other material in the supplement consists of selections from the Guardian's messages by which we can become more conscious of the establishment of the unique powers and functions vested in the successive Guardians by 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Ruhíyyih Khánum has graciously consented to prepare a tribute to the Guardian which is expected from Haifa, and this will be made available through Bahá'í News.

From November 28 to January 6 we pass through a period of forty days, the twenty-fifth anniversary of that period which intervened between the passing of the beloved Master and the reading of the Testament by which the Guardianship was created for the world community of the followers of Bahá'u'lláh.

Well is it for us now, and well for the sublime mission entrusted to us, if we employ these forty days in humble effort to achieve worthiness to be called by the glorious title, Bahá'. It is a time of prayerfulness, meditation, sacrifice, renewed and reinvigorated resolve to serve the Faith with purer intention and firmer conviction. It is a time when our dedication may find manifestation in outer action as well as movement of spirit within.

Perhaps some devoted souls will learn the blessed art of prayer for the first time; perhaps some will respond to an urgent desire to teach in a distant city, even a foreign land; perhaps some will dedicate a special gift to the National Fund. The Guardianship is a gift and a blessing which we can never repay; but to be a Bahá'í in the time of the Guardianship is to seek continuously the best ways and means by which we may testify to our reverence and gratitude to God.

Sincerely and devotedly,
National Spiritual Assembly

Progress of the Seven Year Plan

Headquarters in Europe Established

The European Teaching Committee is very happy to announce that the headquarters for the committee have been secured in a most attractive part of the city of Geneva. These headquarters are sufficiently large to house both the European Teaching Committee and the Baha’i International Bureau. The address is 6 Cours des Bastions, Geneva, Switzerland.

Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True report that the first meeting held at the new address, the celebration of the “Birthday of the Báb,” with an attendance of nine Bahá’ís. There are several Persian Bahá’ís in the University at Geneva and six of them together with Mrs. Lynch Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True celebrated this commemorative meeting together.

Honor Kempton has secured passage on the Queen Elizabeth for November 29 to go first to England, and then to her post on the continent.

The committee wishes to announce that its next meeting will be held on December 4, and we are very hopeful that by that date we will have the names of many volunteers for the European field in response to the recent most urgent message from the Guardian.

EUROPEAN TEACHING COMMITTEE

First All South American Conference

The following cable has come from the first all South American Conference held in Buenos Aires this month: “Rejoicing great success, marvelous spirit and unity. Growing maturity evident in rising to meet responsibilities. Obvious impact on public. Congress Committee.”

A breathless letter that just came flying in from Shirley Warde, who has done yeoman service as chairman of the Congress Committee, with notable assistance from Emilio Barros, Salvador Tormo and others, is dated a few days before the opening of the Conference and comments on the great diversity of types among the 24 delegates from 9 countries in addition to Argentina. One of these is Sr. Gabriel Silva S. from Mogotes, Colombia, secretary of the second Bahá’í Assembly to be elected in that country. Mogotes is like an Alpine town, high in the lofty Andes, almost inaccessible in the rainy season. None of the Mogotes friends had ever seen a Bahá’í other than their own group, who have studied and accepted the Cause by correspondence. Marvel upon marvel has been unfolding for this young mountainer at last among Bahá’í brothers and sisters in a great city, taking part in a historic conference.

Then there is the young doctor, Dr. Luis Guillermo Molina of Guayaquil, Ecuador, one of the brilliant scientific minds of his country, and the fine city physician of Bahá, Dr. Fernando Nova, who was Brazil’s Centenary delegate; from Brazil also came a noted musician, a fine young attorney, and business men; from other countries, writers, an actor, teachers, representatives of all the walks of life in a truly Bahá’í cross-section, together with North Americans who have gone south to pioneer for the Faith. Among the latter are Artemus Lamb, whose sister, Mrs. Valeria Nichols, joined him in Buenos Aires at the time of the Conference, and will later accompany him to Punta Arenas and Santiago, Chile; also Shirley Warde, who has been doing splendid work in Buenos Aires; Mrs. Mary L. Bode, whose activity together with that of her husband, Edward, has done much to carry forward the splendid Bahá’í foundation first built in Brazil by Leonora Holsapple Armstrong, second pioneer to visit Latin America, who has remained in that country teaching for some 20 years; Flora Hottes, who has been in Bolivia and Uruguay for the past four years and is planning a trip home in the spring.

Those taking part in the Conference program include Sra. Yvonne L. de Cuellar, first Bahá’í of La Paz, Bolivia; the noted pianist, Ernesto C. Mastronardi; and Sr. Auro Cooper of Rio de Janeiro, and Dr. Nova of Bahia, Brazil; Raul Villa-gran of Punta Arenas and Esteban Canales L. de Valparaiso, Chile; Simon Rosenweig and Gambetta Rodón of Montevideo, Uruguay; Roque Centurión Miranda, first Bahá’í of Asunción, Paraguay; Alberto Lovatón of Lima, Peru; Sra. Yolanda L. de Sitronch of Caracas, Venezuela; Dr. Thomas W. Sánchez de Ega from Rio who will now settle in Sao Paulo, Brazil; the noted singer from Rio, Delvair Silva; Dr. Molina of Ecuador, Salvador Tormo, Antronik Kevorkian and Emilio Barros of Buenos Aires; Miss Hottes, Mrs. Warde and Artemus Lamb. Representatives of all 10 countries took part in the round table discussions and served as chairmen at the various meetings, which were held in a special theater, since gatherings were already overflowing the commodious Bahá’í Center even before the opening of the conference.

Plans are under way now for the first historic Bahá’í Conference for all the countries of Central America, Mexico and the West Indies, which is scheduled for Jan. 19 to 25 in Panama. The first all-Latin America conference was held in Panama last year. This year there are two Latin American Bahá’í conferences divided in accord with the future division of the countries in the two Latin American National Spiritual Assemblies, the first being held in Panama, in April, 1951. Among special visitors already expected at Panama are Mrs. Loulie Matthews and Mr. Matthews from Temerity Ranch, Colorado; Mr. Charles Mason Remy of Washington, D.C.; Mrs. Marcia Steward of Pasadena, Calif., who is now enroute to a special, project in San José, Costa Rica, calling on the communities in six countries on her way south, and Mrs. Gayle Woolson of Bogotá, Colombia. Seven More Groups Ready for Assembly Status

To pave the way for progress toward the goals of the new Seven Year Plan along the East Coast, two conferences were arranged with Regional Teaching Committee members, for intensive discussion of ways and means to accomplish the task. Twenty members of Regional Committees met with members of the National Teaching Committee in New York on Oct. 20th and eighteen from the Southeastern states met in Atlanta on Nov. 10th. These conferences have been mutually helpful and it is hoped that in the months ahead further conferences can be held to aid Regional Committees in the accomplishment of the objectives of the new Plan. Mrs. Margery McCormick, Dr. Katherine True and Mr. Monroe Joan represented the NTC at the New York Conference, and Mrs. McCormick, Mrs. Sarah Walrath and Mrs. Amelia Bowman, represented it at the Atlanta meeting.

Progress toward our goals for the consolidation of the weaker Assemblies and the establishment of thirty new Assemblies has been made during the past month, for six Assemblies have had the reinforcement of settlers or new members; seven groups have had an increase in membership sufficient to insure Assembly status; and twenty-five new believers have been enrolled by Regional Committees.

Intensive efforts have been made by resident and circuit teachers sent to the goal cities by the National Teaching Committee to strengthen and consolidate the local activities; exhibits at State and County Fairs as well as successful window displays have attracted widespread attention and have resulted in the dissemination of hundreds of pamphlets on the Faith; and Questionnaire cards have been supplied to goal cities for distribution locally to increase contacts. Six sets of colored slides have been provided by Mrs. Margery McCormick for the use of Regional Committees in an effort to stimulate fireside meetings, and records on "A New Cycle of Human Power" have been sent to Regional Committees, also for fireside teaching, by Mrs. Florence Morton.

Questionnaires have been sent to all the Spiritual Assemblies with the approval of the N.S.A. for the purpose of analyzing the various teaching activities now underway and determining the needs so that practical suggestions and help can be offered by the National Teaching Committee to increase the effectiveness of our teaching efforts.

The following believers have moved to goal cities to serve the needs of the new Plan: Mr. Joseph Silva of Beverly, Mass., has moved to Hadmen, Conn.; Miss Beverly Jones of East Orange, N. J., has moved to Montclair, N. J.; and Mrs. David Wark of Greensboro, N. C., have become established in Red Bank, N. J.; Mrs. Annie Romer is now located in Greenville, S. C.; Mr. George Monfils of Milwaukee, Wis., has moved to Fargo, N. D., to replace Mrs. Eitty Graeffe there; and Miss Bennet Dorn of Seattle, Wash., is endeavoring to become established in Reno, Nevada. The housing shortage has presented a formidable obstacle to the re-establishment of believers, and in many cases homes have had to be purchased in order to secure living quarters. In order to remain in Glendale and aid in maintaining Assembly status in that California city, Mrs. Eleazar Hollibaugh is living in a trailer, and in many cities reinforcements are assured as soon as housing facilities are available.

New believers have been enrolled in the goal cities as a result of teaching efforts during the past month as follows: Mrs. Williams of Monroe, Wash., brings the membership there to nine; San Mateo, Calif., through the recent enrollment of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Fletcher, Dr. J. W. Goldstein and Mrs. Carl Berger now has twelve members assuring Assembly status; Shorewood, Wis., has had three enrollments, Mr. and Mrs. William Nagler, and Mrs. Marie Vedder; the Laramie Assembly has been reinforced through the enrollment of N. W. Hand, Louisville, Ky., has likewise been reinforced by a new believer, Mrs. Helm; and Omaha, Neb., reports the enrollment of Mrs. Josie Longsdorf and Hanz Ehlers.

Special projects have provided teaching help to goal cities to build up the membership. The last two weeks of October Mrs. Ruth Moffett gave a series of lectures or an "Educational Seminar" on "The Message of the Age and the Coming New World Order" in Omaha, Neb., and an evening class of nine and an afternoon class of six persons have been attracted. Two lectures were also given by Mrs. Moffett at the University of Omaha Sociology Department which were well received. Mrs. Moffett has spent the month of November working in the goal cities of Toledo, Findlay, Urbana, and Lakewood, Ohio.

Dr. Edris Rice-Wray spent four... days in Louisville, Ky., early in November and during that time many meetings were arranged with those interested in the Faith, to meet Dr. Rice-Wray at luncheons, dinners, teas, and informal firesides in the evenings. The public meeting was very successful with thirty-five people attending, and a dinner meeting for twenty-five was also planned. Mrs. Gill, a believer living in the suburbs, gave a tea for about a dozen interested ladies, and Mrs. Frankland gave several fireside meetings.

These meetings were followed up with a Youth Symposium on Nov. 17th when Miss Pari Zia-Walrath and Mr. Charles Ioa of Chicago spoke to about forty people on “Youth Looks at World Unity.” Many fine contacts were made with youth and a very successful dinner meeting was also arranged. Mrs. Kathryn Frankland reports a study class underway with six or more deeply interested people and to continue the momentum which has been achieved the National Teaching Committee is arranging for Mr. Albert Windust of Chicago to speak there on December 1st.

Special projects which were developed to stimulate teaching also included an exhibit sponsored by the RTC for Georgia and the Carolinas in cooperation with the Augusta Assembly at the Youth Festival on October 22nd. A large picture of the Temple was provided for the exhibit and literature besides pictures of Bahá’í youth which were provided by the National Youth Committee. As a result of the exhibit several window displays were made possible by local stores, and another display is scheduled following the Christmas holiday.

Another exhibit which attracted widespread attention was held at the New Jersey State Fair in Trenton, N. J., from Sept. 22-29, at which slides were shown of the Temple besides the photographs and hundreds of leaflets were distributed. This exhibit was followed by a public meeting in Trenton on the Sunday evening following the Fair. The Albuquerque, N.M. LSA and the RTC co-operated in placing an exhibit at the State Fair in Albuquerque in October but a report of the project has not yet been received.

“Following the project inaugurated last year of having a Bahá’í exhibit at the Cheshire County Fair at Keene, N. H., the believers of Ashuelot, Hanisdale, and Brattleboro, Vt. in cooperation with the N.E. RTC sponsored an exhibit on Sept. 5-7 of this year,” Mr. Ben Weeden, secretary of the Brattleboro LSA describes the exhibit: “A large booth in the Parent-Teachers’ Association tent was obtained by Mrs. Doris Bolton of Ashuelot, N. H. Six believers from Brattleboro and Mr. Charles Krug, chairman of the RTC, set up the exhibit using at the back a canvas painted with sky effect on which was hung the large picture of the Temple... On the left side was another large photograph showing one of the pylons and on the right wall was a large map of the world with red cords originating from each country of the seventy-eight to which the Faith has spread and ending at miniature cut-out replicas on which were printed the number of countries and the number of languages represented. Under this map was a table with the Bahá’í Library in a fitting case. A table for free literature completed the exhibit. On the opening day of the Fair, radio station WKNE of Keene, N.H. took a portable microphone to each booth and broadcast a description of it. We were fortunate in being one of the first, thereby getting more time than many.” Many additional reports might be included of activities but space does not permit.

South American Conference

ama Committee through Miss Julie Regal, Box 1328, Ancon, Canal Zone, is asking for the names of any others who may be able to attend the conference.

Tony Fillon of Santiago, Chile, has sent out the first Spanish Bulletins to be published in that city for all of Latin America. Special issues are planned, covering the two major conferences.

Gwenne Sholtis announces that La Paz, Bolivia, will take part in the special contributions to the Temple which will mark the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Guardianship. Sr. de Cuellar has already sent a first contribution of $36.00. Gwenne will go in December for a visit and special regional work to Callao, Peru, and Miss Eve Nicklin, now in Lima, will exchange with her and go to Sucre, Bolivia, to assist the group there for a time. Word has come from Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Miessler of Columbus Grove, Ohio, that they reached their final objective in Sao Paulo, Brazil, October 29th.

The first all-Bahá’í wedding to be celebrated in Lima, Peru, united Miss Mary Angulo and David Beckett, who are members of the Bahá’í Community of that city. Mr. Beckett received the consent of his father, who is a Christian minister in England. More than 60 Bahá’ís and friends attended the wedding.

Nineteen new membership cards have been received this month.

Public Recognition of the Faith

Local committees and individual teachers working along public relations lines find it exceedingly helpful to know how the name and the ideals of the Faith are being promoted, with one motive or another, through channels outside the Cause or by non-Baha'i writers and lecturers.

Here are a few interesting examples which have come to the attention of the Public Relations Committee.

"The House of God" by Desider Holisher, published by Crown Publishers, New York, at $3.00 per copy. This is a book containing photographs of the "magnificent cathedrals, fine churches and temples of worship of all faiths in the United States." The illustration of the Baha'i House of Worship appears on page 171. This would be a very good book to present to local public libraries as a gift from Baha'is.

"Preface to Philosophy: Book of Readings" edited by Ross Early Hoople, Raymond Frank Piper and William Pearson Tolley of Syracuse University, published by the Macmillan Co. of New York and Toronto. This is the book originally intended for publication by the army as a contribution to the soldier's understanding of world truth and his appreciation of cultures other than his own. Though the material was prepared in time, the army edition was delayed and finally abandoned at the end of the war. The book is now available for general civilian use, and in one volume assembles writings of religion and philosophy from many sources. From pages 379 to 384 the Baha'i Faith is represented by a brief history, twelve statements of principle, and excerpts from the Writings of the unity and functions of the prophets, the actions of the righteous, and the principles and plan of a world commonwealth. This work is a very valuable public recognition of the Faith. (Price per copy not stated)

"The Magic Powder" by Earl J. Hadley, a history of the Universal Atlas Cement Co. and the cement industry, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. This work, of particular interest to architects, engineers and men connected with the industry, features the Baha'i House of Worship as a unique expression of architectural concrete. The frontispiece illustrates the Temple, a close-up picture appears on page facing page 197, and the building is described on pages 200 and 201. Per copy, $3.50.

"They Have Found a Faith" by Marcus Bach, published by Bobbs-Merrill Co., Cincinnati. Dr. Bach of Iowa University has made a study of "America's little-known religions, and includes a statement in the Baha'i Faith along with his accounts of Jehovah's Witnesses, Spiritualism, the Kingdoms of Father Divine, Unity, the Foursquare Gospel, Oxford Group and Psychiana. The author's investigation has been sympathetically conducted and he has apparently made a study of the Baha'i Teachings. This association of the religion of Baha'u'llah with cults springing up to fill needs not met by the traditional faiths will repel many inquirers but on the other hand may bring the Cause to the attention of souls who at present are not otherwise receiving the message. Per copy, $3.00.

Other references to the Faith in non-Baha'i publications are: illustration of Temple in Business Week, August 31, 1946; illustration of Temple and description in Airways, July, 1946; Psychic Digest, Toronto, April, 1946; Mind Digest, August 1946; International Arts Quarterly, Denver, September - November, 1946; members (a trade paper), January, 1946; and Religious Education, August 1946—a review of The Baha'i World, Vol. IX, which contains this statement: "Anyone pretending to religious literacy should become acquainted with it" (i.e., the Baha'i Faith).

The Public Relations Committee wishes to record as completely as possible all references made to the Faith by non-Baha'is, and also all references made by Baha'is in non-Baha'i publications. The believers who from time to time send information are very helpful and such cooperation is gratefully received.

PUBLIC RELATIONS COMMITTEE

Bulletin on Public Relations

The Public Relations Committee has issued the second of its series of bulletins, dated November 1946. A copy has been sent each local Assembly, Regional Teaching Committee, National Committee, and group. The committee is particularly anxious to supply copies to individual Baha'i workers who are active along publicity lines.

The second bulletin contains eighteen pages of mimeographed text, including the following subjects; Function and methods of the Public Relations Committee; a list of books and pamphlets referring to the Faith; statement on the national Advertising Campaign; suggestions on publicity and advertising for public meetings; text of the first two advertisements appearing in Newsweek; press releases issued nationally in September, October and November; teaching by mail; information about the Associated Press Temple illustration release which has appeared in 127 different papers; the advertising and publicity prepared by the...
Public Relations Committee for the Public Meetings Campaign; a statement on use of the Hotel Church Directory; and full text of five recent national press articles as sent to newspapers since September.

The committee is sending out literature as rapidly as possible to the names and addresses sent in by local Assemblies. Among the cities covered in this way are: Davison, Mich.; Sioux Falls, Alaska; New Orleans; a special California list; New Haven; Fargo; South Bend; Lima; Springfield, Ill.; Elmhurst, Ill.; Boston; East Phoenix Rural; and Colorado Springs. A total of 367 pieces mailed.

In sending names and addresses of key people and organizations, classify if possible by their interests: peace and world unity, industrial justice, religious unity, race unity.

1450 pieces of literature have been mailed to names on the national list compiled by the Public Relations Committee.

The current Bahá’í advertisement appeared in Newsweek of November 18; the next will appear in the issue of January 20, 1947. During December an advertisement is scheduled in World Report, and World Report will carry another advertisement in February.

International Bahá’í School Announcement of 1947 Season

Beginning with the 1947 season, the International Bahá’í School at Temerity Ranch, Pine Valley, Colorado Springs, will be conducted under full Bahá’í management. Since this important institution was donated to the Faith by Mr. and Mrs. Mathews, the School sessions have been arranged by a national committee appointed annually by the NSA. The hospitality, however, has been extended to guests by Mrs. Mathews as her further generous contribution to the development of the School.

A Maintenance Committee has now been appointed, and the students will make arrangements with the manager in the same way as at other Bahá’í Schools. Only a limited number can be accommodated in the charming and delightful quarters and early reservation for 1947 should be made. The cost will range from $20 to $25 per person for a ten day session.

Two ten day sessions are planned for 1947. From June 18 to June 27 the School will conduct a program for Latin America teachers, pioneers, students and guests from Latin America. From July 1 to 10 the session will be devoted to European teaching, and the program will be for European pioneers, teachers, students and guests from the European countries.

Local Assemblies are requested to bring this notice to the attention of their communities.

Winter Session at Louhelen

The Winter Session of the Bahá’í School will be held December 26 through January 1. Two courses will be given:

- Study of Some Answered Questions conducted by Harlan Ober.
- Teacher training class conducted by Miss Elisabeth Cheney.

Rates: $3.00 per day for dormitory, $3.50 per day for single room.

For reservations please write to Mrs. L. W. Eggleson, 3252 S. State Road, Davison, Mich.

Correction

In the cable from the Guardian receiving after the passing of John Bosch and published in Bahá’í News for September, certain short words had, as usual been supplied. One of the sentences was printed as follows: “His saintly life, pioneer services, historic contribution of institution of summer school, entitle him to rank among outstanding figures of the closing years heroic, and opening years of formative age of Bahá’í Dispensation.” It has been pointed out that it must have been the Guardian’s intention to say “historic contribution to institution of summer school” in view of the fact that the idea of the summer school originated with Leroy Ioaas, who consulted a number of Bahá’í teachers about it and presented it to the National Spiritual Assembly, whereupon Mr. Bosch offered his property for the school and eventually deeded that property to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Stimulating Conference at Banff

The fourth Summer Conference arranged by the Prairie Regional Teaching Committee, held at Banff August 11th to 16th, was so successful that a unanimous vote was recorded to ask the Committee to plan other similar conferences in 1947 and perhaps to make of this an annual event in Western Canada. The thirty-two who attended came from four Canadian Provinces and five of the United States. Among them were five non-Bahá’ís and three youths.

The theme of the Conference was “The Bahá’í Faith in Action.”

At the request of residents of and visitors to Banff, a public meeting was arranged at which Dr. Edris Rice-Wray gave an illustrated lecture on the Temple and its meaning, which attracted eighteen non-believers and was followed by considerable discussion.

At a specially arranged afternoon meeting, the Ven. Dr. S. H. Middle-nton, the principal of St. Paul’s Residential School for Indians at Cardston, Alta., gave a most informative and interesting talk on the history, beliefs, and needs of the Indians. He is an outstanding au-authority on this subject. In his introduction he said that he had read a number of Baha'i books and always has on hand for reference the World Order magazine. Dr. Middleton's contribution was an outstanding event of the Conference and the friends were reluctant to have him leave.

Apart from the regular program, those present enjoyed riding, swimming, a picnic, after which a group photograph was taken, and various other activities for which this beautiful mountain resort is famous. All were loath to leave.

Baha'is Take Leading Part in University Event

The Berkeley Baha'i Assembly took an active part in an important project at the University of California last summer when asked to serve on the steering committee of the Institute on Human Relations. The Institute, held June 3 to 8, was designed to work toward unity among the wide diversity of racial and religious groups on the campus.

The Institute on Human Relations was directed by the Department of Institutes of the University of California Extension Division, and sponsored by the Associated Students of the University of California, the Graduate Students Association, and the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Among the cooperating organizations were the Berkeley Baha'i Assembly, Hillel Foundation, International House, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

The Baha'i Assembly received a letter from the chairman of the Institute which stated: "We would like to have your interest and support. . . . We would very happy to see the Berkeley Baha'i Assembly enter the Institute."

A careful investigation of the aims of the Institute and its sponsors showed that the organization was non-political and non-partisan in nature. The opportunity seemed made to order. Indeed it proved to be an experience perhaps unique on any campus.

The Baha'is took a leading part in arranging inter-religious and interracial book and art exhibits which attracted tremendous student attention throughout the week. A nine day exhibit in the University Library featured the Baha'i Temple as a symbol for the Institute. Arresting to the thousands of students who passed by, the Chicago Tribune reprint, "Story of the Baha'i Temple," and the Tribune picture of the Temple were dramatically arranged in a large upright glass case, together with a card (written by the non-Baha'i student chairman of the committee!) which stated: "Baha'i—an inter-cultural religion. One approach to the problem of inter-group and human relations."

A second Baha'i exhibit also drew the interest of crowds of students and adults who came to see the paintings by Chimura Obata and the photographs by Hansel Adams. A series of Baha'i Temple pictures and details, together with a Temple booklet for visitors to read, was arranged by Mr. Obata next to his own exhibit.

Exhibits of books on human relations were held in the lobby of Wheeler Hall in connection with the programs given in the auditorium. Thirteen Baha'i books were displayed and hundreds of Baha'i pamphlets ("Pattern for Future Society," Chicago Tribune reprints, and "Christians, Jews and Muhammadans") were literally snatched up. It was notable that these books simply laid out on long tables, à la bookstalls on the Seine, attracted actual investigation by people who handled the books freely and jotted down titles.

A banquet was given for Carey McWilliams by the steering committee at which the purpose of the Institute was described and special credit given to the Berkeley Baha'i Assembly for its work.

At the final evaluation meeting, tribute was again paid to the work of the Baha'i representatives in helping to make the Institute a success. At this meeting Ali M. Yazdi summarized the Baha'i point of view and showed opportunities for carrying on the work for student unity. He offered the continued advice of the Baha'is in this field. The Institute ended on this note.

News from Local Communities

Many communities have sent in most interesting and inspiring reports during October and November. A few of the highlights are the following:

In SAN FRANCISCO the Birthday of the Báb was celebrated on October 19th with a large public meeting in the beautiful Century Club auditorium. Mrs. Robert W. Kenny and Mr. Anthony Seto spoke to an audience of 240 people, of whom about 90 were Bahá'ís of the Bay area, of the significance of this date to the Bahá'ís and to the world. Mr. Walter Olitzki of the Metropolitan Opera Company was the guest artist. The local Spiritual Assembly received a gift of shares of stock amounting in value to over $30,000 for the purchase of suitable premises for San Francisco Bahá'í activities, to be called the Helen S. Goodall Fund. The city was one of many holding memorial meetings for Lidja Zamenhof. The Esperantists of the city were invited to attend.

On October 27th ELMHURST held its third annual banquet. Over 100 persons attended, a good percentage of whom were non-Bahá'ís, thus demonstrating what the united efforts of even a few Bahá'ís can produce. The theme was "World Citizenship—Our Goal," and the program consisted of fine music and three speakers, Walter Deppe, chairman of the LSA, Togo Tanaka, young Japanese of note, and Horace Holley, secretary of the NSA.

Under the sponsorship of the ANCHORAGE Spiritual Assembly, a display of books on peace and on the Bahá'í Faith has been presented to the Anchorage Public Library. It has excited much interest in the community. A new Sunday morning fireside, referred to as the "Dawnbreakers," has been started by Miss Betty Becker in her apartment. Her guests enjoy a waffle breakfast and learn about the Bahá'í Teachings.

The LITTLE ROCK Spiritual Assembly has contracted with KXLR Radio Station for two broadcasts monthly. The friends intend to utilize all the transcription records that are available. The Assembly has had the two transcription records "A New Interpretation of History" and "A Call to Action" reproduced onto four records that fit the ordinary machine and can in this way be played in the home for fireside meetings and for other teaching work. Mr. Alvin Blum used the records in talks recently in Eureka Springs and Harrison, Arkansas. The Bahá'ís have donated the use of the Bahá'í Center to the Esperanto Group's Study Classes.

New York Begins Public Meetings Series

The New York Community, under the sponsorship of the National Spiritual Assembly, held one in a series of three public meetings at the Henry Hudson Hotel, Thursday evening, November 7th, at 8:30 p.m. Long and careful preparation was made for this meeting and the results proved extremely gratifying. In addition to sending invitations to a mailing list of approximately 3500 people, a 5-minute free radio announcement was given over station WNYC on November 7th at 8:45 a.m. Releases were sent to all local newspapers.

About 700 people were present. Cards inserted in the programs were handed to the people as they entered, with the request to fill out name and address and return to the ushers. Eighty cards were returned.

Bahá'í Literature

The Publishing Committee lists several titles of current interest.

Selected Writings—a set of three pamphlets, one compiled from words of Bahá'u'lláh; one from words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá; and one from the Guardian's writings. This set of pamphlets offers the believer, for personal study, group discussion or public teaching, a very representative collection of the Bahá'í writings. Each of the three pamphlets presents the selections by topics, making the books convenient for reference. The large edition ordered has made it possible to fix a very low price. The hope is that every believer will obtain a set for his own use. Per set of three pamphlets, $0.25.

Prophecy Fulfilled, by Elisabeth Cheney, a new edition of this interesting and helpful presentation of prophecy from the Bahá'í point of view. Rising costs make it necessary to increase the price. 100 copies for $2.50.

Industrial Justice—from 'Abdu'l-Bahá's statement on strikes, published as a chapter in "Some Answered Questions." This leaflet is one of our most timely subjects. 100 copies for $2.00.

Chicago Sunday Tribune Reprint—through the kind permission of the editor, the full page color illustration of the floodlighted Temple taken by the Sunday Tribune during the Centenary celebrations, and their article about the Faith, have been reprinted in the form of a convenient four-page folder. This reprint is effective contact material. 20 copies for $1.00.

World Order Through World Faith—seven of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's American talks combined in one pamphlet by the Public Relations Committee for their public campaign. 32 pages, per copy, $.15; 10 copies for $1.25.

Frankfort Germany's New National Center

The Guardian has congratulated the German N.S.A. on the "undivided loyalty" of the German friends and the prospects of "tremendous unprecedented expansion, consolidation of activities" and sent 10,000 pounds to be devoted to relief, teaching work, expansion of literature, and renting or purchasing of an adequate house for a National Haziratu'l-Quds in Frankfurt.

Continuous and Great Growth in Thiran

The Thiran S.A. meets at least five times a week. Besides its own activities it supervises the work of sub-committees for Teaching, Youth, Relief, Women's Progress, Travel and Liaison, Health, Education and Pioneering. Many of these committees have sub-committees. The Teaching Committee supervises weekly 75 to 85 meetings for study of the Teachings. Since the beginning of this Bahá'í year, 102, these meetings have introduced 300 inquirers to the Faith, 76 of whom have accepted the Teachings. The work of the other committees is on the same scale.

French Bahá'ís Under the Occupation

The French Bahá'ís underwent severe trials and losses during the occupation. Mrs. Stannard, who had worked for the cause for many years died in 1944; Mme. Alcan was killed in a bombing; Mme. Kennedy died suddenly in 1943; Mlle. Gallimard in 1941, both worn out by the tension of the occupation; Mme. Motezi, sister of Mme. Hesse, was sent to a concentration camp and her fate is unknown. The archives of the Paris Assembly and much Bahá'í literature were destroyed when Mr. Kennedy's house was bombed. Mr. C. N. Kennedy, 6 Rue Leon Bonnat, Paris 16 is the president of the newly elected S.A. of Paris and Mlle. Lucienne Migette its secretary.

Letters from Abroad

A personal letter received from Budapest, Hungary, and written by one who had been deeply drawn to the Bahá'í Faith reveals some of the meaning of the Guardian's phrase "spiritually famished" as applied to Europeans. We quote parts of the letter:

"Life here is very exhausting. . . . We have to count already in trillions and one gets quite crazy with it (the inflation). The material life takes so much time and is so difficult that I am unable to live a spiritual life. Eight years ago in 1937 I got the fire. Now I've lost it. I trust in God and wish I could be the same good follower of the Bahá'í Teachings as I used to be . . . but since I knew I had lost my husband I can't pray . . . There was a magic power in the Teachings, which helped me a lot . . . Now I feel old, and my Bahá'í past is my lovely remembrance of my youth."

Brief Notes from Other Lands

John Elchenauer writes from Stuttgart that the 15 (now 10) dollar relief packages distributed by C.A.R.E., 50 Broad St., New York, N. Y., are excellent. Ten days after the order is placed in New York the addressee is notified to pick up his package at the local warehouse of C.A.R.E. John urges friends to order these packages so people can prepare for the winter which threatens to be colder than the last.

Mr. Manuscher Zahib of Iran has been sent to Germany by the Guardian to tell the German friends of the Faith in Iran, especially how the Iranian friends carry out the instructions of the Guardian and the Administration in spite of persecution by the Government.

News that some of the Japanese Bahá'ís are still alive has been received. Mr. H. S. Fugita is at Janai, some 300 miles south of Tokyo. He is working as interpreter for the American Army at a railway station.

The remains of the renowned Bahá'í teacher, historian and philosopher, Abu'l-Fadl, and of the self-sacrificing pioneer and teacher, Mrs. Lua Getsinger, have been transferred to the Bahá'í cemetery in Cairo. Their two adjoining tombs, one facing the East and the other the West, were especially built at the direction of the Guardian.

Newly married Bahá'ís in Persia are still faced with the choice of some months imprisonment or payment of a fine, since Bahá'í marriage is not yet recognized officially and there is no civil registry. Many are the youths who choose the former alternative.

Slides of Haifa and Ákká

A set of 2x2 inch slides in color has recently been completed, showing views of the Shrines, the gardens on Mt. Carmel, and the garden of Ridvan. There are twenty-four slides in the set. All are Kodachrome transparencies. They are duplicates of 35 mm. transparencies sent to the National Archives Committee by the Guardian, and some are enlargements from the 16 mm. color film of the Shrines and gardens. This set is available to Assemblies and National Committees for teaching purposes. It may be purchased through the Temple Sales Committee at a cost of $6.00.

Radio Transcriptions

The Assemblies will be pleased to know that we now have available eight, fifteen minute dramatic transcriptions. They are entitled as follows:

1. A New Interpretation of History.
2. A Call to Action.
3. This Is My Faith.
4. Meet Mr. Justice.
5. A World Language.
6. Hometown, U.S.A.
7. Mr. Justice Returns.
8. Back Where They Came From.

The Assemblies are urged to make the fullest possible use of these dramatic transcriptions which have been enthusiastically received both by the friends and by radio stations. The content of the material on these transcription records is of such a high quality that professional people feel strongly inclined to use it.

These records are for broadcasting purposes only, and they are to be circulated around the country. We therefore, strongly urge the Friends to return the records to this office promptly after they have been used in their communities. It is also important that they make a notation of the number of times they used the record. After a certain amount of use the record must be discarded and a new one substituted in order to give the best broadcasting results. We would appreciate the return of the records as promptly as possible so that other Assemblies who are waiting for them will not be delayed in putting on their radio programs.

MILDRED R. MOTTAREIEN, Secretary, Radio Committee.

The Unfoldment of the Guardianship

In His Will and Testament the Master wrote: "After the passing of this wronged one, it is incumbent . . . to turn unto Shoghi Effendi—the youthful branch branched from the two hallowed and sacred Lote-trees . . . as he is the sign of God, the chosen branch, the guardian of the Cause of God, he unto whom all . . . must turn. He is the expounder of the words of God . . ." And so ‘Abdu’l-Bahá projected into the future the care and protection which He had always shown to the believers. The loving command had been spoken; the way of unity was plain; the Faith of God was protected and its progress assured.

In the early letters from Shoghi Effendi we sense the struggle and sacrifice he faced in assuming the unprecedented responsibilities of the Guardianship.

"At this early hour when the morning light is just breaking over the holy land, whilst the gloom of the dear Master’s bereavement is still hanging thick upon our hearts, I feel as if my soul turns in yearning love and full of hope to that great company of His loved ones across the seas, who now share with us all the agonies of His Separation."

"May I also express my heartfelt desire that the friends of God in every land regard me in no other light but that of a true brother, united with them in our common servitude . . ."

"Now that my long hours of rest and meditation are happily at an end, I turn my face with renewed hope and vigor to that vast continent the soil of which is pregnant with those seeds that our beloved Master has so tenderly and so profusely scattered in the past. Prolonged though this period has been, yet I have strongly felt ever since the New Day has dawned upon me that such a needed retirement, despite the temporary dislocations it might entail, would far outweigh in its results any immediate service I could have humbly tendered at the Threshold of Bahá'u'lláh."

1923

"And, now, that this all-important Work may suffer no neglect, but rather function vigorously and continuously in every part of the Bahá’í world; that the unity of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh may remain secure and inviolate, it is of the utmost importance that in accordance with the explicit text of the Kitáb-i-Aqdas, the Most Holy Book, in every locality, be it city or hamlet, where the number of adult (21 years and above) declared believers exceeds nine, a local ‘Spiritual Assembly’ be forthwith established. To it all local matters pertaining to the Cause must be directly and immediately referred for full consultation and decision."

1924

"Let us also bear in mind that the keynote of the Cause of God is not dictatorial authority but humble fellowship, not arbitrary power, but the spirit of frank and loving consultation. Nothing short of the spirit of a true Bahá’í can hope to reconcile the principles of mercy and justice, of freedom and submission, of the sanctity of the right of the individual and of self-surrender, of vigilance, discretion and prudence on the one hand, and fellowship, candor, and courage on the other."

"Not by the force of numbers, not by the mere exposition of a set of new and noble principles, not by an organized campaign of teaching—no matter how worldwide and elaborate in its character—not even by the staunchness of our faith or the exaltation of our enthusiasm, can we ultimately hope to vindicate in the eyes of a critical and sceptical age the supreme claim of the Abhá Revelation. One thing and only one thing will unfailingly and alone secure the undoubted triumph of this sacred Cause, namely, the extent to which our inner life and private character mirror forth in their manifold aspects the splendor of those eternal principles proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh."

"I feel . . . that in view of the expansion and the growing importance of the administrative sphere of the Cause, the general sentiments and tendencies prevailing among the friends, and the signs of increasing interdependence among the National Spiritual Assemblies throughout the world, the assembled accredited representatives of the American believers should exercise not only the vital and responsible right of electing the National Assembly, but should also fulfill the functions of an enlightened, consultative and cooperative body that will enrich the experience, enhance the prestige, and assist the deliberations of the National Spiritual Assembly."

"The administrative machinery of the Cause having now sufficiently evolved, its aim and object fairly well grasped and understood, and its method and working made more familiar to every believer, I feel the time is ripe when it should be fully and consciously utilized to further the purpose for which it has been created. It should . . . be made to serve a twofold purpose. On one hand, it should aim at a steady and gradual expansion of the Movement along lines that are at once broad, sound and universal; and on the other it should insure the internal consolidation of the work already achieved. It should both provide the impulse whereby the dynamic forces latent in the Faith can unfold, crystalize, and shape the lives and conduct of men, and serve as a medium for the interchange of thought and the coordination of activities among the divers elements that constitute the Bahá’í community."

"The Declaration of Trust, the provisions of which you have so splendidly conceived, and formulated with such assiduous care, marks yet another milestone on the road of progress along which you are patiently and determinedly advancing. Clear and concise in its wording, sound in principle, and complete in its affirmations of the fundamentals of Bahá’í administration, it stands in its final form as a worthy and faithful exposition of the constitutional basis of Bahá’í communities in every land, foreshadowing the final emergence of the world Bahá’í Commonwealth of the future."

In Shoghi Effendi’s first letters to us as Guardian he enclosed translations of prayers, and through these years he has continually widened our spiritual horizons by translations of superlative beauty. A mere listing gives some indication of the loving labor involved:

1925—Hidden Words of Bahá’u’lláh
1926—Kitchens
1928—The Dawn-Breakers
1935—Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh
1939—Prayers and Meditations of Bahá’u’lláh
1941—Epistle to the Son of the Wolf

"For Bahá’u’lláh . . . has not only imbued mankind with a new and regenerating Spirit. He has not merely enunciated certain universal principles, or propounded a particular philosophy, however potent, sound and universal these may be. In addition to these He, as well as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá after Him, have, unlike the Dispensations of the past, clearly and specifically laid down a set of Laws, established definite institutions, and provided for the essentials of a Divine Economy. These are destined to be a pattern for future society, a supreme instrument for the establishment of the Most Great Peace, and the one agency for the unification of the world, and the proclamation of the reign of righteousness and justice upon the earth."

"That the Cause associated with the name of Bahá’u’lláh feeds itself upon those hidden springs of celestial strength which no force of human personality, whatever its glamour, can replace; that its reliance is solely upon that mystic Source with which no worldly advantage, be it wealth, fame, or learning can compare; that it propagates itself by ways mysterious and utterly at variance with the standards accepted by the generality of mankind, will, if not already apparent, become increasingly manifest as it forges ahead towards fresh conquests in its struggle for the spiritual regeneration of mankind."

"Let them refrain from associating themselves, whether by word or by deed, with the political pursuits of their respective nations, with the policies of their governments and the schemes and programs of parties and factions."

And then came that tremendous message published under the title The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh. In its four major parts we have a summary of the “fundamental verities”, the “root principles” of the Faith.

"To obtain a more adequate understanding of the significance of Bahá’u’lláh’s stupendous Revelation must remain the first obligation and the object of the constant endeavor of each one of its loyal adherents."

"The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh should indeed be regarded, if we wish to be faithful to the tremendous implications of its message, as the culmination of a cycle, the final stage in a series of successive or preliminary and progressive revelations."

"... it emphatically repudiates the claim to be regarded as the final revelation of God’s will and purpose for mankind . . . the fundamental principle which constitutes the bedrock of Bahá’í belief, the principle that religious truth is not absolute but relative, that Divine Revelation is orderly, continuous and progressive and not spasmodic or final."

". . . the twin pillars that support this mighty Administrative Structure—the institutions of the Guardianship and of the Universal House of Justice . . . should be regarded as divine in origin, essential in their functions and complementary in their aim and purpose. Their common, their fundamental object is to insure the continuity of that divinely-appointed authority which flows from the Source of our Faith, to safeguard the unity of its followers and to maintain the integrity and flexibility of its teachings. Acting in conjunction with each other these two inseparable institutions administer its affairs, coordinate its activities, promote its interests, execute its laws and defend its subsidiary institutions. Severally, each operates within a clearly defined sphere of jurisdiction; each is equipped with its own attendant institutions—instututions designed for the effective discharge of its particular responsibilities and duties. Each exercises, within the limitations imposed upon it, its powers, its authority, its rights and prerogatives. These are neither contradictory, nor detract in the slightest degree from the position which each of these institutions occupies. Far from being incompatible or mutually destructive, they supplement each other’s authority and functions, and are permanently and fundamentally united in their aims."

"No Guardian of the Faith . . . can ever claim to be the perfect exemplar of the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh or the stainless mirror that reflects His light. Though overshadowed by the unfailing, the unerring protection of Bahá’u’lláh and the Báb, and however much he may share with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá the right and obligation to interpret the Bahá’í teachings, he remains essentially human and cannot, if he wishes to remain faithful to his trust, arrogate to himself, under any pretense whatsoever, the privileges and prerogatives which Bahá’u’lláh has chosen to confer upon His Son."

"Into such a period (of intense turmoil) we are now steadily and irresistibly moving. Amidst the shadows which are increasingly gathering about us we can faintly discern the glimmerings of Bahá’u’lláh’s unearthly sovereignty appearing fitfully on the horizon of history. To us, the “generation of the half-light”, living at a time which may be designated as the period of the incubation of the World Commonwealth envisaged by Bahá’u’lláh, has been assigned a task whose high privilege we can never sufficiently appreciate, and the arduousness of which we can as yet but dimly recognize. . . . We stand on the threshold of an age whose convulsions proclaim alike the death-pangs of the old order and the birth-pangs of the new.”

“Ceasing to call itself a movement, a fellowship and the like—designations that did grave injustice to its ever-unfolding system—dissociating itself from such appellations as Bābī sect, Asiatic cult, and offshoot of Shi‘ih Islām, with which the ignorant and the malicious were wont to describe it, refusing to be labeled as a mere philosophy of life, or as an eclectic code of ethical conduct, or even as a new religion, the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh is now visibly succeeding in demonstrating its claim and title to be regarded as a World Religion . . .”

“Their Faith, Bahá’ís firmly believe, is moreover undenominational, non-sectarian, and wholly divorced from every ecclesiastical system, whatever its form, origin, or activities. No ecclesiastical organization, with its creeds, its traditions, its limitations, and exclusive outlook, can be said (as is the case with all existing political factions, parties, systems and programs), to conform, in all its aspects, to the cardinal tenets of Bahá’í belief. To some of the principles and ideals animating political and ecclesiastical institutions every conscientious follower of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh can, no doubt, readily subscribe. With none of these institutions, however, can he identify himself, nor can he unreservedly endorse the creeds, the principles and programs on which they are based.”

To the Convention in 1936 came the historic cable which started the First Seven Year Plan—“Convey to American believers abiding gratitude efforts unitedly exerted in teaching field. Inaugurated campaign should be vigorously pursued, systemically extended. Appeal to assembled delegates ponder historic appeal voiced by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in Tablets of the Divine Plan. Urge earnest deliberation with incoming National Assembly to insure its complete fulfillment. First century of Bahá’í era drawing to a close. Humanity entering outer fringes most perilous stage its existence. Opportunities of present hour unimaginably precious. Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination of this glorious century embrace the light of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order.”

When in 1937 the Guardian married Ruhiyyih Khanum (Mary Maxwell) the National Assembly cabled the joy and loving greetings of the believers. Shoghi Effendi’s response was expressed in the cable—“Deeply moved your message. Institution of Guardianship, head cornerstone of the Administrative Order of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh, already ennobled through its organic connection with the Persons of Twin Founders of the Bahá’í Faith, is now further enforced through direct association with the West and particularly with the American believers, whose spiritual destiny is to usher in the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.”

1939

“The community of the organized promoters of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in the American continent—the spir-cial and administrative activities, absolute chastity in their individual lives, and complete freedom from prejudice in their dealings with peoples of a different race, class, creed, or color.”

In the midst of the recent War we received The Promised Day Is Come.

“A tempest, unprecedented in its violence, unpredictable in its course, catastrophic in its immediate effects, unimaginably glorious in its ultimate consequences, is at present sweeping the face of the earth . . . ”

“This judgment of God . . . is both a retributory calamity and an act of holy and supreme discipline.”

The year before the Centenary our hearts were thrilled by the cable—

“I desire to announce to the elected representatives of the valiant, blessed, triumphant American Bahá’í Community . . . the momentous decision to convene, in May, 1944, an All-American Centennial Convention comprising delegates to be separately elected by each State and Province in the North American Continent, and to which each Republic of Latin America may send one representative. All groups, all isolated believers, as well as all local communities already possessing Assemblies, will henceforth share in the election of Convention delegates. The multiplication of Bahá’í centers and the remarkable increase in the number of groups and isolated believers, prompt my decision . . . I hope to forward, in time for the solemn thanksgiving service to be held in the auditorium of the Temple on the evening of May twenty-second, at the hour of His epoch-making Declaration, a sacred portrait of the Báb, the only copy ever sent out from the Holy Land . . . ”

1944

Then the Centenary Convention came his greeting:

“Hail with glad, grateful heart the historic Assembly of the elected representatives of the followers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh throughout the Western Hemisphere participating in the first All-America Convention . . . I recall with profound emotion on this solemn, auspicious occasion the milestones in the progress of the community whose rise constitutes one of the noblest episodes in the history of the First Bahá’í Century . . . I am moved to pay a well deserved tribute . . . to the gallant band of its apostolic founders . . . to its intrepid pioneers . . . to its indefatigable administrators . . . to its heroic martyrs
. . . to its itinerant teachers . . . to its munificent supporters . . . last but not least to the mass of its stout-hearted, self-denying members whose strenuous, ceaseless, concerted efforts so decisively contributed to the consolidation and broadening of its foundations. . . . ”

In this same year we received Shoghi Effendi’s survey of the first hundred years of the Faith—God Passes By.

Then, as we met in our first peace-time Convention, we received the call to greater service in further unfolding of the Divine Plan.

“A twofold responsibility urgently calls the vanguard of the dawn-breakers of the West, champion-building of Bahá’u’lláh’s Order, torch-bearers of world civilization, executors of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s mandate, to arise and simultaneously bring to fruition the tasks already undertaken and launch fresh enterprises beyond the borders of the Western Hemisphere.”

“The first objective of the new Plan is consolidation of victories already won throughout the Americas, involving multiplication of Bahá’í centers, bolder proclamation of the Faith to the masses.”

“The second objective is completion of interior ornamentation of the holiest House of Worship in the Bahá’í world designed to coincide with the Fiftieth Anniversary of the inception of this historic enterprise.”

“The third objective is the formation of three National Assemblies, pillars of the Universal House of Justice, in the Dominion of Canada, Central and South America.”

“The fourth objective is the initiation of systematic teaching activity in war-torn, spiritually famished European continent . . . ”

“Upon the success of the second Seven Year Plan depends the launching after a respite of three brief years, of a yet more momentous third Seven Year Plan which, when consummated through the establishment of the structure of the administrative order in the remaining Sovereign State and chief dependencies of the entire globe must culminate in and be beautifully commemoratored through world-wide celebrations marking the Centennial of the formal Assumption by Bahá’u’lláh of the Prophetic Office associated by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá with Daniel’s prophecy and the World Triumph of the Bahá’í Revelation and signaling the termination of the initial Epoch in the evolution of the Plan whose mysterious, resistless processes must continue to shed ever-increasing lustre on succeeding generations of both the Formative and Golden Ages of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.”

Seventh Pioneer Flies to Lisbon

As this goes to press, December 22, Virginia Orbison is flying from Rio de Janeiro to Lisbon to teach the Baha'i Faith in Spain and Portugal. She is the seventh pioneer, apart from Mrs. Graebe, who is in charge of the office of the European Teaching Committee in Geneva, to leave for Europe under the second Seven Year Plan. Honor Kempton, who sailed November 29th on the Queen Elizabeth, arrived after a stormy passage, in England on her way to Luxembourg. With her was Isabel Locke, who is not under the European Teaching Committee, but plans to help with the work in England.

Miss Edna True, chairman of the ETC, returned to the United States November 27th. She reports that the European office of the Committee is now completely installed and functioning in Geneva, and that news from Mrs. Corbit in Norway, Miss van Sombeek and Mrs. Straub in Holland, and Mr. and Mrs. Anders Nielson, of Burbank, California, now established in Denmark, give thrilling indications that the European teaching project is definitely launched.

Mrs. Erna Mattson of the Montreal Baha'i Community is spending the winter in Zurich and has graciously consented to serve as the European Teaching Committee representative there.

The chairman conferred with friends, both in Paris and London, about the possibility of future cooperation between them and the European Teaching Committee and was deeply impressed by the great interest shown in this teaching project and by the warm and cordial spirit of helpfulness which was manifested everywhere.

Historic South American Conference

"The Baha'i's of South America grew up over night," writes Shirley Warde in her report on the all South American Baha'i conference held recently in Buenos Aires. "That is a statement meant literally and not figuratively," she continued. At the first session when the delegates gathered in the Center, it was a disorganized, somewhat disorderly group, fired with enthusiasm, but confused as to the issues before them, all wanting to talk at once, irrespective of procedure, and given to speech making and tributes. But in the space of twenty-four short hours the 'irresistible forces' promised by the Guardian for these days that are launching the Seven Year Plan, and perhaps released here by the reading of his momentous letter, 'God-given Mandate,' had penetrated to the core of every heart, and, through the operation of their mysterious power, welded the delegates, as the second day's session opened, into a united, efficient, consecrated and hard-working body.

"Although the conference sessions had been scheduled only for the mornings, leaving the afternoons free for committee meetings and any personal activities necessary, so great was the spirit animating the congress that, in the days following, the sessions were resumed in the afternoons and lasted until the delegates had only time to rush to the public meetings, often without their evening meal. Equally impressive with this sudden-born earnestness and dedication to the enormous tasks at hand, was the quick and eager shouldering of their own responsibilities on the part of the delegates. The needs of this vital hour were readily recognized and the representatives of the South American Assemblies set themselves to finding ways and means to meet these needs. The cablegram sent to the Guardian on the second day clearly stated their unified resolution. Because the delegates wished the North American believers present to be included..."

Nine Additional Pioneers

The present European project heralding the spiritual regeneration of the entire continent is the pivot on which hinges the success of the second Seven Year Plan... The dispatch of nine additional pioneers to facilitate the immediate formation of stable groups in the goal towns of the ten selected countries is imperative... A more liberal allocation of funds for the furtherance of the most vital objective is indispensable.

National Magazine Publishes Baha'i Statement

Pathfinder Magazine of Washington, D.C., has featured the Baha'i Faith on the religious page of its December 18 issue. Prepared by an editor of the magazine, the statement runs nearly half the page, and the text is illustrated with a photograph of 'Abdu'l-Baha and one of the Temple.

Pathfinder is an old established paper now having a circulation of a million and more copies. It is especially popular in the smaller cities and towns.

The Public Relations Committee supplied the literature from which the statement was compiled, and the interest of the editorial department was aroused by the publicity agency engaged by that Committee. Copies of the December 18 number have been mailed to local Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees.

In these countries, the delegates to the recent Latin American assembly held in Buenos Aires, worked tirelessly to strengthen the bonds between their countries and to establish a powerful spirit of unity in diversity. The delegates met to plan and organize the future activities for their countries, with the aim of creating a powerful spirit of unity in diversity.

Stuttgart Bahá'í Kindergarten

The Bahá'í Kindergarten in Nürnberg was the first to be established in Germany. The kindergarten was founded in 1946 by a group of Bahá'ís who were eager to provide a nurturing environment for the children of the community.

Attendance at the British Summer School was 110, thirty of whom were non-Bahá'í. The spirit of love and unity was so strong that all material and human shortcomings disappeared and the true expression of unity in diversity remained. Several nationalities, English, Irish, Scottish, French, Dutch, American, Persian, Egyptian, and German, were represented.

Two teaching bulletins are being distributed, "Contacts with Individuals and Groups" and "Rostrum Technique of Training Bahá'í Teachers."

Settlers Needed in North America

The settlement of pioneers in the West needed reinforcement to hold the assembly status continues to be most pressing, and the National Teaching Committee urges anyone free to enter this field of Bahá’í service to write the secretary, Mrs. Sarah S. Walrath, 4539 Beacon Street, Chicago 40, Illinois.

The National Teaching Committee, with the help of the Regional Committees and the Extension Teaching Committees of the larger Assemblies, has given concentrated attention to the assistance of the goal cities during the past month. It has provided circuit teachers, and, by issuing bulletins, has endeavored to encourage the friends in these places to hold fireside meetings. The bulletins are "Teaching Techniques Suggested in The Advent of Divine Justice," "Teaching Bulletin on Fireside Meetings," and "Suggestions for the Study of the Will and Testament of 'Abdu’l-Bahá."

The teaching circuit made by Mrs. Sara E. Witt, of Santa Monica, California, across the continent during September and October, was concluded by intensive work in Salt Lake City and Logan, Utah, and Boise, Idaho. At Logan, after a talk which was heard by several professors from a local college, Mrs. Witt was asked to speak to the students of the college on the history of the Faith and the Administrative Order. There were sixty-five students present, three or four professors, and some other visitors. Many interesting and pertinent questions were asked.

Mrs. Margery McCormick of Evanston, Illinois, made a circuit through the Carolinas and Georgia, stopping at Greensboro, N.C.; Greenville, Columbia, and North Augusta, S.C.; and Augusta and Atlanta, Ga. The believers in those places provided public meetings, fireside meetings, luncheons, and suppers to enable her to reach interested people. "Each hour of the day was filled with contacts," reports Mrs. McCormick.

In Ohio, Mrs. Ruth Moffett of Chicago conducted an intensive teaching campaign in Findlay, Toledo, Lakewood, and Urbana, leaving study groups in each of those places.

The Corvallis, Oregon group was greatly stimulated through the ETC conference held there in November and the public meeting at which Mrs. Hazel Mori of Seattle and Mr. John Shurcliff of Tacoma were the speakers. Forty-one persons were present, eight of whom came through publicity. The group is planning follow-up work for December and January.

Recommendations of the 1946 National Convention

That the National Spiritual Assembly continue to distribute the monthly record of contributions received from local Spiritual Assemblies.

Voted to approve this recommendation.

That all reports of National Committees be published in advance and given to delegates in time to study before the Convention, so they may have opportunity to consult on problems and help the National Spiritual Assembly.

Voted to ask the committees to give very brief summaries for advance publication on February 15 and their annual reports as of May 1.

That the National Spiritual Assembly concentrate on an educational program for administration.

Voted to record that the National Spiritual Assembly has already acted to provide a series of articles on administration for Bahá’í News and has also authorized the publication of a new study outline on that subject.

That the National Spiritual Assembly employ professional technicians for public relations, new book covers and improved appearance of Bahá’í News.

Voted to record that the public relations committee already has the services of professional public relations counsel and that a committee has been appointed to investigate technical improvement of Bahá’í News.

That delegates arrive the evening before the Convention to become acquainted with each other.

Voted to request the Chicago Assembly to assume responsibility for a simple informal reception without program to be held in Foundation Hall the evening preceding the opening of the convention, the purpose of the reception being to provide an informal social gathering for the believers who arrive early.

That the National Spiritual Assembly call State and Province conferences very soon to consider the Guardian’s message, in order to bring the rank and file into the work.

Voted to record that there is no permanent administrative body qualified to conduct state and province conferences other than the annual election of delegates. We have taken steps to urge the study locally and regionally.

That the National Spiritual Assembly make effort to bring Dr. Townsend to America to teach in the Summer Schools and country-side public meetings, either this summer or next.

Voted to record that the National Spiritual Assembly has this under consideration.

That the By-Laws include recog-

That one Youth be appointed on each Regional Teaching Committee.

Voted to record that this was not found to be entirely possible, but wherever possible it was done.

That Child Education work be included in the agenda of the 1947 Convention.

Voted that this Recommendation be approved.

That the National Spiritual Assembly establish a Bahá'í reference Library near the UNO and have contacts made with its members.

Voted to record that steps are being taken to establish a Bahá'í connection with the UNO.

That the American Bahá'ís should make clear to the world what the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh are on the subject of race unity; that a demonstration be made, comparable to that of the peace teachings in San Francisco.

Voted to record that this has been assigned as a project for the year to the Race Unity committee.

That the National Spiritual Assembly consult with the editor of West Englewood who wishes to submit a plan to place World Order magazine on newsstands.

Voted to record that this has been referred to the Publishing Committee and the conference has been held, although no report has been received as yet.

Public Meetings

1500, but by means of the publicity associated with them, the Faith was brought to the attention of many thousands more. Detailed accounts of the meetings can be found elsewhere in this issue of Bahá'í News.

The definite dates of meetings to be held in last year's Key Cities are: New Orleans, January 28th; Chicago, February 4th; and Atlanta, February 9th.

Excellent Publicity at Albuquerque

Albuquerque, reporting through the secretary of their Public Meeting Committee, Muriel Ives Barrow, states that no stone was left unturned in the way of publicity, that every member of the committee worked with whirlwind velocity, with particular mention made of the labors and accomplishments of the committee chairman, Edna Andrews, who did a monumental job with the newspapers in the face of very discouraging odds. Due to the increased demands for advertising space they were told no space had been available for six months, but in the face of these odds they succeeded in getting free publicity which in some instances was front-page. Showing further versatility, they had placards made and bought display space in the thirty busses for the four days prior to their meeting. Window cards were prominently displayed and as always, the placing of them enabled the Bahá'ís to speak of the message and give out programs.

Dr. Edris Rice-Wray was speaker for Albuquerque with Dr. E. Lenore Morris presiding as chairman. They made excellent use of her time with first a luncheon to which prominent people had been invited. A supper feast was arranged on Saturday where she spoke to the Bahá'ís on "The Responsibility and Privilege of Being a Bahá'í." A buffet supper was arranged for Sunday afternoon with invited guests. A radio interview on Sunday morning for a 15-minute period, the radio station permitting a spontaneous question and answer period.

Because of the conflict of election campaigns radio time was limited on the two stations. But time for spot announcements was given free on one station and on the other they had minute spots each day for a week preceding the meeting.

The day of the meeting, Albuquerque, noted for its sun and lack of blizzards, lay trapped in snow. Yet in spite of this handicap the telegraphed attendance numbered 125 twenty of whom were believers. The meeting was held in the hallroom of the Hilton hotel. The formally attired young women who acted as ushers added beauty to the scene. One notable point is that the ushers were also stationed in the hotel lobby, near the street entrance, to direct and escort the guests to the lecture room. One of the hotel guests in the lobby asked an usher what was happening. He said he had noticed the Negroes coming in and he would like to know what group of people had the courage to do such a fine thing in a place where prejudice was as tight as it is in Albuquerque.

The friends report that Dr. Rice-Wray's talk was very comprehensible and much appreciative comment about it was received; so in spite of the snow they feel the meeting had made the mark it was supposed to. Their follow-up work has been well planned and we feel that the evident unity of effort demonstrated by the Albuquerque Bahá'ís will bring rich results.

800 Attend Public Meeting in Urbana

Urbana's meeting on November 5th, was held in the University Auditorium, with Elsie Austin as speaker, Charles E. Zeleny, chairman, and Bruce Foote, radio artist as soloist. The audience numbered approximately 800.

Excellent publicity was obtained in the Daily Illini, (student newspaper of the University of Illinois), the Champaign News-Gazette, the Urbana Evening Courier and The Illinois Times. Sixty posters were placed on the University of Illinois bulletin boards in the various buildings and in the business houses of Champaign and Urbana. A temple model was attractively displayed in a local florist shop on the main street of the campus shopping district two weeks preceding the lecture. Posters of the lecture accompanied the display.

Radio time was secured over WDFX, the local Champaign News-Gazette station on the CBS network for three of the dramatic recordings supplied by the National Radio Committee, October 30th, 31st and November 4th, all at 6:30 P.M. Spot announcements, Sunday, November 3rd at 12:30 P.M. and Tuesday, November 5th at 5:20 P.M.

A Press Luncheon was held the noon of the lecture date with the editor of the Illinois Times and a reporter from the Daily Illini as guests.

The ushers at the public meeting were eleven young people of various races, representing students and local residents of Urbana and Champaign or students of the Bahá'í Faith.

A reception was held after the meeting at the Bahá'í Center, one half block from the Auditorium, to meet the speaker and get further information and literature. About 60 people visited the Center, many signing their names and giving their addresses in the guest book.

Comments from friends were "A very unusual program; we know that Miss Austin is the first Bahá'í speaker to give a lecture from the platform of the Auditorium, and we think that she is the first colored woman to speak from there." From Miss Austin herself: "I think the Urbana meeting was most successful from two standpoints. It demonstrated the publicity work even a small community can do when it tackles a really large teaching project. It also presented the Faith in a setting which distinguishes it from the 'isms' and protest movements which are so numerous today. I think it will become more and more important to stress this distinction."

The Urbana Baha'is themselves, felt it was a highly successful meeting and excellent opportunities for much intensive work in the succeeding months.

Binghamton Public Meeting
Pleases Audience

Binghamton's meeting, held November 10th at 4 p.m., at the Arlington Hotel, was preceded by a luncheon conference held in the private dining room of the Hotel, with reporters from the Binghamton Press and Binghamton Sun, Business Manager of the radio station WNBF, an announcer from WING, meeting the speaker, Mr. Matthew Bullock; the chairman, Mrs. Terah Smith; and the local Public Meeting Committee members.

They had excellent publicity including radio broadcasts. The eight recordings of the National Radio Committee were broadcast each day for the eight days preceding the lecture. They also had spot announcements over the two Binghamton stations and the speaker, Mr. Matthew Bullock, was interviewed over WINR on the day of the meeting.

The public meeting was attended by 175 persons, 40 of whom were Baha'is from Binghamton and the surrounding communities of Penn Yan, Syracuse, and Scranton. About one third were of the Negro race. Violin selections were presented by Mr. Ralph Wade of Endicott, N.Y., with Mrs. Mary Morse Wade at the piano. The friends report that the talk of the evening was very well received by an attentive audience who later expressed their pleasure at having had the opportunity of listening to such a forceful speaker. Friends gathered that evening at the home of one of the believers for a social evening with informal discussion as the feature. Interesting follow-up work has been planned by the Binghamton Bahá'ís.

Winnipeg Public Meeting
Exceeds All Expectations

"The Public Meeting or perhaps we should say the Public Campaign from November 23rd to 25th was successful beyond our expectations," reports Winnipeg, Canada. "The entire three days and the period before and after the week-end opened new doors to the Faith and introduced it to so many people that we can certainly say with assurance that the foundation of the Faith has been consolidated in Winnipeg and the masses have been reached." Dr. Edris Rice-Wray and Emeric Sala were the Winnipeg speakers.

The Public Meeting Committee of Winnipeg were hosts to seventeen at a luncheon conference on November 23rd. The guests included representatives from newspapers and radio stations. Also included among the guests was the vice-president of the Spanish-American Club, who is also in charge of a coast-to-coast CBC Program. She has become much interested in the Faith. At the close of the luncheon both Edris Rice-Wray and Emeric Sala spoke briefly. A barrage of questions followed, "wonderful questions, the kind you always wish people would ask," according to Dr. Rice-Wray.

The public meeting held on Sunday afternoon, November 24th, was attended by approximately 400 people. The program went very smoothly with excellent music, efficient stage handling, artistic flower arrangements, and competent ushering. Comments about the talks given by Dr. Rice-Wray and Emeric Sala were highly complimentary. While some members of the community feel disappointed that there were not twice as many people present at the public meeting, we believe it can truly be said that the Faith has really been 'proclaimed' for the first time in Winnipeg."

Sunday evening, November 24th, a fireside meeting was held for interested seekers, and a young Japanese-Canadian girl afterwards declared her intention of becoming a Bahá'í.

Monday, November 25th, Dr. Rice-Wray addressed about 40 students at the University of Manitoba on the subject "Science and World Order." A study group of about 25 students is now meeting regularly once a week at the University, and the LSA has appointed a special University Teaching Committee consisting of four student Bahá'ís with Ross Woodman as chairman. The Winnipeg Bahá'ís hope that every speaker who comes to Winnipeg in the future will be prepared to speak to this University Group.

Monday evening, Emeric Sala spoke to 40 Spanish students and members of the Spanish American Club on the subject "Latin America Tomorrow." He was introduced as a Bahá'í and was able to make only brief reference to the Faith but handled his subject with such excellence and subtlety that a large number of these people, who have never heard of the Faith before, were interested to know what it was all about. He spoke in both Spanish and English. After the meeting about 15 people adjourned to the home of one of the Club members where the conversation almost entirely revolved around the Bahá'í Faith. An opening at this Club can be made for any future visiting Bahá'í teacher who speaks Spanish.

The Winnipeg report expresses great appreciation for the efforts of Audrey Robarts who assisted them a week prior to the public meeting, and through her wide acquaintance was able to bring many prominent people to the public meeting and to introduce the Faith briefly to the wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Manitoba at a luncheon in Government House at which Mrs. Robarts was the guest of honor.

Radio activity included a series of 42 spot announcements over stations CJOB and CKRC which familiarized the listening public with the name Bahá'í, the various principles and advertised the public meeting.

"From both radio stations we had excellent cooperation and indeed the continuity writers became so interested that they themselves gave signal service in the excellent composition of their scripts," Edris Rice-Wray was interviewed by Mrs. Eve Henderson on the Women's Hour program. Emeric Sala was given a five-minute interview on CJOB.
Our pre-meeting publicity had been supplied to both daily papers and, in addition, copies of Emeric Sala’s book, ‘This Earth One Country’ had been donated to the book editors for review. The Winnipeg Free Press gave us one short article on the meeting in their Saturday paper including Emeric’s picture, and the book editor published a good review of his book in the same edition. The Free Press also gave us a good write-up in their Monday paper following the meeting. The Winnipeg Tribune did not give us any advance publicity but their reporter, who attended both the special luncheon and the public meeting, wrote an excellent article which was published in full in the Monday paper following the meeting.

“The most exciting publicity we received resulted from a series of articles on the Faith, written by Ross Woodman, which began about 10 days prior to the meeting and has appeared in two editions of the University paper The Manitoban.” Subsequent articles are yet to appear. As this paper is distributed free to 8000 students at the University of Manitoba there is hardly anyone at the University who has not now had an opportunity of learning something about the Faith. A very large number of the papers get into the homes of the students and are read by their parents. The editors of The Manitoban included an article on the public meeting in their last issue prior to the meeting with pictures of Edris Rice-Wray and Emeric Sala.

“The Winnipeg Bahá’í community recognizes this campaign both as a demonstration of capacity for cooperation amongst the local friends, and as a thrilling indication of the opportunities opening for the Faith in this city. It seemed as though we had only to think of a new door which might open for the Faith and it sprung wide at our touch.”

International Relief

The National Spiritual Assembly has voted that relief to Bahá’ís in war-devastated countries shall be handled by individuals in the American communities, rather than by organized local committees for international relief. This is to prevent an organized response from the American communities exceeding the Guardian’s directions.

From the friends in Austria comes news that packages from CARE have been received with much appreciation. The Bahá’ís in Stuttgart, Germany received packages from CARE on Labor Day and were most grateful.

The evidences so far indicate that this winter in Europe will be very severe. The Bahá’í friends there are praying the American believers through their generosity will help to alleviate the suffering. Food and warm clothing are still the most needed items.

Another name and address of a Bahá’í in Germany has been received: Miss Ursula Harte, Os-Kart 22, Grosshessen, Frankfort, a Main, Germany, A. Zone.

How to Contribute to the Fund

Dear Bahá’í Friends:

Your Treasurer would like to ask your cooperation in several matters.

No. 1. I would like to call to the attention of the believers the fact that, if accurate records of their contributions are to be kept, the Treasurer’s office must receive with each contribution an explanation as to whether it represents a contribution from a group, an Assembly, or an individual. Several Assemblies have complained during the last few months that on the list of Assemblies and groups that were supporting financially the Second Seven Year Plan their name did not appear. This may be due to the fact that there was no accompanying note with the contribution, or the contribution was received after our books were closed for the month. I might add that many contributions come in to the Treasurer’s office with just a name, no address, no indication as to whom it is to be credited. This means that the Treasurer’s office has to spend hours of time going through old receipts in an endeavor to trace back where the contribution came from. Please do not send cash. All checks should be made payable to the National Bahá’í Fund.

No. 2. Our Budget for the period May 1st to October 31st, 1946, was $125,000.00. Total contributions received was $127,818.53. This shows a balance of $2,818.53 in the black and for the first time this year we do not show a deficit in meeting our Budget.

This black figure is due to the fact that we had this month a contribution of $25,000.00 from one believer, and, as explained in previous reports to the friends, there have been since the first of this Bahá’í year several non-recurring legacies. Had it not been for this $25,000.00 contribution which was for the interior decoration of the Temple, we would be over $22,182.00 short of meeting our goal.

The Treasurer cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that if the work, as outlined by the Guardian for the Second Seven Year Plan, is to go forward as scheduled, contributions must come in to the National Fund in amounts commensurate with the demands of the fund.

Your National Assembly instructed the Treasurer this year to earmark $6,250.00 each month for the interior decoration of the Temple. This could not be done because sufficient money has not been available in the general Fund.

In the most recent communication from the Guardian there is the following sentence: “A more liberal allocation of funds for furtherance of the most vital objective is indispensable.”

Faithfully yours,

Philip G. Sprague, Treasurer

New Policy for Bahá’í News

The National Spiritual Assembly has outlined the new editorial policy for Bahá’í News as follows: “While Assemblies and Committees are expected to continue reporting their plans, policies and activities in detail for the information and records of the N.S.A., the National Assembly in publishing Bahá’í News for the American Bahá’í community is responsible for presenting these news after selection and condensation for the sake of general reader interest, and this responsibility is vested in the Editorial Committee of Bahá’í News.”

This means that Bahá’í News is no longer the medium for ‘reports,’ but an organ for the publication of news items selected from reports and other communications received from month to month.

The attention of the friends is called again to the deadlines for Bahá’í News material:

Local news—the 10th of each month.

Regional news—the 20th of each month.

Message from Shoghi Effendi

I recall with profound emotion, on the morrow of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's passing, the dramatic circumstances marking simultaneously the termination of the Heroic Age, and the commencement of the Formative Period, of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

I acclaim with thankfulness, joy and pride the American Bahá'í community's manifold, incomparable services rendered the Faith at home and across the seas in the course of this quarter century.

I hail with particular satisfaction the consummation of the twin major tasks spontaneously undertaken and brilliantly discharged by the same community in both the administrative and missionary fields, constituting the greatest contribution ever made to the progress of the Faith by any corporate body at any time, in any continent, since the inception of the administrative order.

Nursed during its infancy by 'Abdu'l-Bahá's special care and unfailing solicitude; invested at a later stage with spiritual primacy through the symbolic acts associated with His historic visit to the North American continent; summoned subsequently to the challenge through the revelation of the epoch-making Tablets of the Divine Plan; launched on its career according to the directives of and through the propelling force generated by these same Tablets; utilizing with skill, resourcefulness and tenacity, for the purpose of executing its mission, the manifold agencies evolving within the administrative order, in the erection of whose fabric it has assumed it preponderating a share; emerging triumphantly from the arduous twofold campaign undertaken simultaneously in the homeland and in Latin America; this community now finds itself launched in both hemispheres on a second, incomparably more glorious stage, of the systematic crusade designed to culminate, in the course of successive epochs, in the spiritual conquest of the entire planet.

The task of this stern hour is challenging, its scale of operation continually widening, the races and nations to be contacted highly diversified, the forces of resistance more firmly entrenched, yet the prizes destined for the valiant conquerors are inestimably precious and the outstanding Grace of the Lord of Hosts promised to the executors of His mandate is indescribably potent.

The present European project heralding the spiritual regeneration of the entire continent is the pivot on which hinges the success of the second Seven Year Plan. I appeal to the national representatives of the community, in conjunction with the European Teaching Committee, to focus attention upon its immediate requirements. The dispatch of nine additional pioneers to facilitate the immediate formation of stable groups in the goal towns of the ten selected countries is imperative. The selection of suitable literature, its prompt translation into the languages required, its publication and wide dissemination, is essential. The visit of an ever-swelling number of itinerant teachers designed to foster the development of the groups is urgently required. A more liberal allocation of funds for the furtherance of the most vital objective is indispensable.

I entreat the entire community to arise, while time remains, contribute generously, volunteer its services and accelerate its momentum, to assure the total success of the first, most momentous collective enterprise launched by the American Bahá'í community beyond the barriers of the Western Hemisphere. Cablegram received (signed) Shoghi Effendi December 3, 1946.

State and Province Conventions

The State and Province Conventions will be held on the uniform date of February 9 throughout the United States and Canada. The hour and place of the meeting has been determined by the Election Committees appointed for that purpose.

Individual Bahá'ís of voting age will receive blank ballots and necessary information before February 1.

A special agenda will be sent the various Election Committees in time to take to the meeting.

National Spiritual Assembly

Bahá'í Bridgehead in Europe

Beloved friends:

Each American believer may well stop to think over the profound meaning of the present stage in the evolution of the Divine Plan.

After years of voluntary teaching work by individuals, who accomplished notable results in many countries, the American Bahá'ís now collectively have a bridgehead in Europe — the Geneva office established by the European Teaching Committee in connection with the International Bahá'í Bureau.

This is our advance post in the seven year effort to raise up a Spiritual Assembly in each of the ten designated countries. It is our pledge to the spiritually hungering masses of the continent that Bahá'u'lláh has brought the way from strife to peace, and has revealed in His new Revelation the inmost reality of man. Whoever attains that reality within himself is raised above the field of mental and material conflict. He becomes supranational, supraracial and supradenominational.

Examine the ten countries on a map and you will see that they form the Western Division of Europe. In that area the seeds of unity and brotherhood can produce a harvest by 1953, but the workers needed are many. With what grave emphasis the Guardian states the case in the cablegram published in the present issue of Bahá'í News! These workers exist, else the appeal would not have been made. They are among our local communities, groups and isolated believers. When the hour of decision comes to each, he will be transformed and confirmed in the destiny he must fulfill.

The bridgehead has been established to prepare the way for the army — the army of the Lord of Hosts, as the Master called those who attain. Whether we actually march forward in the ranks of pioneers or not, we all support the work and supply the material needs. Time flies with accelerating speed. We must keep pace with destiny. Passive awareness of a plan of campaign is insufficient. The actual effort we make tells the size of our faith today.

The Assembly expresses deep appreciation of the response made by the Bahá'ís throughout the Southern States to the invitation to attend the teaching conference held December 8 in Foundation Hall. The results of that important meeting will be reported later. Meanwhile it is a privilege to list the names of the believers who signed the registry:

Those registered include in addition to the representatives sent by Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees of the designated States, members of the National Race Unity Committee, the National Teaching Committee, the National Assembly, and believers of the Temple area.

Twenty-five Years of the Guardianship

By Ruhiyyih Khânum

Twenty-five years ago the Bahá'í world was shaken by a great earthquake, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the Center of the Covenant, the greatest Mystery of God, had suddenly passed away, with no premonitory illness to prepare his friends and followers for this tragic shock. Stunned, the Bahá'ís of East and West tried to rally their faculties. We knew great tasks lay ahead of us; we believed in this new Faith and its Manifestation and in the World Order that He had come to establish, but we felt terribly alone and the responsibility for the future lay heavily upon our already grief-filled hearts. Where was the shepherd? The familiar voice, that had spoken with an authority vested in it by the Prophet of God Himself, was stilled. We had the teachings; like a wonderful laboratory, equipped for every purpose, they were there—our priceless treasure. But where was the alchemist who transmuted base metals into gold? Where was the listener who answered our questions and guided us in the use of all that great laboratory possessed?

Then came the reading of the Master's Will, and with an infinite sense of relief we realized that, though the seas of tribulation and separation had risen about us, 'Abdu'l-Bahá had not left us alone. He had given us the mighty Ark of His own Covenant which we could enter into in peace secure. With what grateful hearts we turned to the youthful figure that had suddenly been revealed to us in that Will as our priceless legacy, described by 'Abdu'l-Bahá as the fruit of the Twin Lote Trees, the pearl of the Twin Surging Seas, this new creation, vested with a unique function, the hereditary office of Interpreter and Protector of the Faith and life-head of the International House of Justice. In many ways the Will of the Master completes and supplements the Aqdas; in it 'Abdu'l-Bahá lays down in considerable detail the manner of election and function of the International House of Justice, its powers and jurisdiction. He also fills in a remarkable gap in that mighty book of laws and one which any intelligent commentator on that document must be immediately struck by. Baha'u'llah established in His Most Holy Book a very unique voluntary form of tax, a source of revenue, the great importance of which He adequately defines by giving it the exalted title of “The Right of God” (Huququ'lláh) but He never states to whom this revenue is payable, and in view of the fact that the revenues of the International House of Justice are clearly stipulated and this Huququ'lláh is not included among them, the question naturally occurs—what person or institution is to receive it? 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Will elucidates this riddle and fills in the conspicuous blank left by Baha'u'lláh.

It is also interesting to realize that the provisions of the Will and Testament were not only contemplated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá long prior to His ascension, but also carried out. The Will is comprised of three separate documents, written at different times and all sealed and signed by the Master. In perhaps the most dangerous and difficult years of His ministry in 'Akka, when Shoghi Effendi was only a young boy, he was already appointed as the Successor of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in the first Will. This decision was later reaffirmed in the second and third Will, and the provisions of the Will and Testament were later ratified by the National Assembly.

Twenty-five years have since been made, with a very early date, but from the depths of His bitter experience over a period of sixty years. He kept his precious secret carefully guarded, even from His intended successor, and it was not until after His ascension that we began to appreciate the perfection of the system God has, in this most great cycle, given to mankind; a system which has the hand of God constantly laid on it from above in the form of a divinely-guarded
Guardianship directly descended from and related to the two Founders of the Faith and, at the same time, exalts the role of Man to a new height in that the freely-elected members of the International House of Justice are, when functioning as a body, promised the inspiration and protection of God upon their deliberations and decisions.

Let us go back for a moment and recall what we were and what Shoghi Effendi was when he first assumed his function as Guardian. Those who remember the passing of the Master and the terrible blow it was to them, the intense unbearable grief it caused them, can best grasp what his feelings were. At that time he was twenty-four years of age, studying at Oxford University in England in order to better prepare himself to serve ‘Abdu’l-Baha as an interpreter, and to translate some of the Bahá’í literature into English, when news of the ascension reached him. Broken-hearted, so weak from suffering he had to be practically lifted from the train, he returned to Haifa. Then the second blow, as unexpected and in many ways more cruel than the first, fell upon him. The Will and Testament of His Grandfather was read to him and for the first time in his life he became apprized of the Master’s great and well-guarded secret: That he, Shoghi Effendi, the beloved eldest grandson, was His successor and First Guardian of the Cause of God. Saddled with this great weight, crushed by this great blow, he turned his eyes to the Bahá’í world. He beheld a widely diversified, loosely organized community, scattered in various parts of the globe, and with members in about twenty countries. These people, loyal, devoted and sincere though they were, were still, to a great extent, living in their parent religion’s house, so to speak; there were Christian Bahá’ís, Jewish Bahá’ís, Muslim Bahá’ís and so on. They believed in the Bahá’í Faith but were intimately connected with their former churches. Like fruit on a tree, they were a new crop but still stuck to the old branch. This was true East and West alike. That was the point to which the Faith had evolved at the time of the Master’s ascension.

We, on our part, beheld a young man of only twenty-four standing at the helm of the Cause and some of the friends felt impelled to advise him about what it would be wise for him to do next. It was then that we began to know not only the nature of our first Guardian but the nature of the entire Institution of Guardianship, for we quickly discovered that Shoghi Effendi was “unreachable.” Neither relatives, old Bahá’ís or new Bahá’ís, well-wishers or ill-wishers could sway his judgment or influence his decisions. We quickly came to realize that he was not only divine but had been endowed by God with just those characteristics needed to build up the Administrative Order, unite the believers in common endeavor, and coordinate their world-wide activities. Shoghi Effendi immediately began to display a genius for organization, for the analysis of problems, for reducing a situation to its component parts and then giving a just and wise solution. He acted vigorously, with unflinching determination and unbounded zeal. Those who were privileged to meet him were immediately captivated by his eager, frank and cordial attitude, by his consideration, his innate modesty, his spontaneous kindness and charm.

The wheels of the Cause which had momentarily stood still at the Master’s passing, began to revolve again and at a higher tempo than ever before. Our Father, so patient, so constantly forgiving, whom we had tired and perhaps worried far more than we dreamed of, was gone, and in His stead stood our “true brother,” young, determined to see we at last got down to accomplishing the tasks set us by Bahá’u’lláh and the Master, and not willing to lose any time at all.

With the reading of the Will and the establishment of the Guardianship, came quite naturally and organically a new phase in the development of the Faith. This was typified by one of the first acts of the Guardian: Shoghi Effendi never set foot in the Mosque, whereas ‘Abdu’l-Bahá had attended it until the last Friday of His life. What local people had suspected—that the Bahá’í Cause was really something quite different—became blatantly clear: that which it would have been almost impossible for the Master to do, namely, to sever the intimate bonds which had bound him for so long to the Arab community, particularly the Muslim community, of Palestine during many years when it was forbidden to even mention the name Bahá’í, the Guardian now did over-night and began to encourage the Bahá’ís to likewise do in different parts of the world.

There were two major tasks that the Guardian set himself to accomplish immediately after the Master’s passing: One was to steer the believers all over the world into working through the newly organized administrative channels, as indicated by Bahá’u’lláh and defined by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and the other was to see that year by year they became more emancipated from the bonds of the past, whether those bonds were close identification with their former religious doctrines and organizations, or the following of the outworn and corrupt patterns of conduct current in the society of their various nations and alien to the new standards of conduct laid down by the Manifestation of God for the world in this new age.

Between 1923 and 1934, the Guardian, aided by the devoted response of the various Bahá’í communities, succeeded in establishing six new National Spiritual Assemblies with all their attendant funds, committees and institutions. Whereas, in the lifetime of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, only Persia and America had possessed such bodies and these had, for the most part, functioned more as central Committees, coordinating somewhat the national affairs of the Cause and, in the United States, convening the annual Convention and taking preliminary steps for the erection of the Mashriqí’í Adhikár, these new National Assemblies, one for the British Isles, one for Germany and Iraq respectively, one for Egypt and the Sudan, and one for Australia and New Zealand, now emerged on a sound footing and began, under the constant and direct tutelage of the Guardian, to vigorously administer the affairs of their ever-growing communities.

What the Guardian possesses to an outstanding degree (and no doubt is divinely endowed with) is the vision of the Cause. That which might seem essential to us he would see as a purely secondary issue and what might appear in our eyes as a trivial matter might to him be the pivot of far greater decisions. He is the balance of the Cause; he weighs and classifies the problems, the requirements, the tasks of the hour, and keeps the entire Faith in every part of the world functioning as efficiently and as satisfactorily as our individual frailties and deficiencies will permit.

From the very beginning of his Ministry the Guardian began to correspond at length with the American National Spiritual Assembly as regards the handling of the affairs of the Cause of God in that country. These highly instructive letters were later published under the title of 'Bahá’í Administration' and formed the directive for all bodies administering the work of the Cause, whether in the East or in the West. He, in conjunction with this process of training us in how to function as a group and as individuals in a coordinated Bahá’í Society, also educated us in a concept of the Faith which was the logical conclusion to be drawn from not only statements made by the Bab and Bahá’u’lláh, but from the Tablets of the Divine Plan revealed for the American Bahá’ís by the master; namely, that whereas Persia cradled this new world religion in the 19th Century, North America was to cradle the Administrative Order which in turn would be the precursor of the new World Commonwealth. Patiently, untiringly, year after year, Shoghi Effendi has labored on the rearing of the Administrative Order, using the American Bahá’í Community as the arch-pattern to be followed by all other Bahá’í Communities. While the American believers struggled to learn what it really means to function as a member of an Order that has rules to be lived up to and not merely read about; while they tried to really submit their wills and conduct to the guidance of bodies conducting their affairs according to the will of the majority, the Guardian never for a moment lost sight of the purpose of his endless insistence on our following the Administrative Principles of our Faith; namely, to produce an instrument strong enough to enable us to fulfill one of the primary obligations of every believer—to teach the cause of God.

For sixteen years Shoghi Effendi never ceased to broaden our horizons and train us in Bahá’í Administration, whether local or National. After that, he suddenly opened a new door. He told us, so to speak, that we were now trained enough to use our laboriously erected Administrative System for a great joint effort, an effort to carry into effect the first stages of the Divine Plan. Prior to 1937 he had already been trying our metal to some extent, and disciplining us as good soldiers, through his repeated and successful appeals for the work of constructing our first Bahá’í Temple. This great enterprise we had ourselves inaugurated, encouraged by 'Abdu’l-Bahá, Who by His own hand, laid its dedication stone in 1912. But in spite of our good intentions, we had by 1921, only succeeded in producing something that resembled a subdued black oil tank, one story high, on the Temple grounds, and which looked so unprepossessing that the town authorities protested against it. Through the repeated appeals, the stimulation and encouragement of the Guardian and the sacrifice of the Bahá’ís, and after ten years during which we had been soundly berated for its appearance, we at last completed its superstructure and succeeded in silencing our critics. When the first Seven-Year Plan was given us in 1937 by the Guardian, in it was included, as one of our major tasks, the completing of the exterior ornamentation of the building which comprised the main story and steps, the rest having been laboriously carried out from 1931 to 1935.

In 1919, at the Annual Bahá’í Convention in New York, the Tablets revealed by 'Abdu’l-Bahá at a time when He was in great danger during the First World War and which have come to be known as the "Vehicles of the Divine Plan" and the "Spiritual Mandate," conferred by Him on the North American Community of Believers, were unveiled. We American Bahá’ís are all familiar with their remarkable and stirring contents. We were all immensely proud to receive them. No one, however, except Martha Root and a few other venturesome souls, felt moved to do anything drastic about carrying out the instructions contained in them prior to 1938-37. It was then that Shoghi Effendi's teaching inspiration and advice began to pour into the minds and hearts of the American Bahá’ís like an incoming tide. He called us to action. For eighteen years, we had basked happily and complacently in the praises and promises 'Abdu’l-Bahá had showered upon us in those Tablets, and in many other writings and statements. The Guardian, however, his fingers on our pulse, knew that we were now able to arise for pioneer work, and, through the instruments of the Administration he had so carefully assisted us in evolving, carry forward the frontiers of our achievements.

He was, thank God, not mistaken in the confidence and trust he reposed in us. He called and America responded. People from every walk of life, business men, stenographers, old ladies, young ladies, people with families, people often frail in health but iron in spirit, began to arise, and what may in future well be viewed as one of the greatest spiritual sagas of the American nation, began to take place. They were called pioneers, and into new cities, into the virgin States of the United States and the virgin Provinces of Canada—virgin as yet to Bahá’u’lláh’s light—these people began to move, at the cost of great personal sacrifice and inconvenience, inspired by nothing but faith and devotion and love for their fellowmen, they started to lay the foundations for new Bahá’í communities by establishing new Spiritual Assemblies as a result of their teaching activities.

Perhaps one of the most wonderful aspects of this first Seven-Year plan was the way the Bahá’ís responded to the Guardian's hope that centers would be established, 'ere its termination, in every single Latin-American Republic. The Guardian, always walking on before a few steps and then calling us over his shoulder to hurry up and follow, led us Seven Years down that mighty pioneer trail which wound over North America, into Alaska, down to Panama, all over Central and South America, across the Andes, and into the West Indies. And wherever his voice called, the Bahá’í followed. This first Seven-Year Plan is a very wonderful thing to contemplate. It was the first joint activity on a large scale, nationally organized and flowing into an international field, that the followers of Bahá’u’lláh had ever undertaken anywhere in the world. Truly formidable obstacles were overcome—obstacles of relatively small numbers of believers to draw upon; a community of very restricted financial means to back such activities (more especially so as the expensive work of completing the Temple ornamentation was steadily going on at the same time); a terrible, unprecedented World War, suddenly engulfing humanity with all its dangers, obligations and restrictions after only two and a half years of the Seven-Year Plan had run their course. But all these barriers were hurdled or thrown down, for we had a prize dear to our hearts just in view, and we were determined to win it. The prize was to succeed in accomplishing all that the Guardian asked of us by May 23, 1944, at which time we were to celebrate our first Bahá'í Centennial.

At the Centenary Convention the Bahá'ís met, radiant with such victories as these: having completed the contracts for the exterior ornamentation of the Temple eighteen months ahead of time; having established Spiritual Assemblies in every single state and province of North America—thus doubling the number in seven years and bringing it up to 138; having not only brought into being a nucleus of the Faith in every Latin American Republic but of having established already in most of them flourishing Spiritual Assemblies and of having the joy of seeing many delegates from these Central and South American countries present at this first great All-America Convention. Beneath the dome of their great Mother Temple of the West, now complete except for its interior ornamentation, they tasted the sweetness of the good pleasure of God, for priceless gifts were given them on that occasion by the Guardian: a beautifully framed copy of the portrait of the Báb and a lock of His hair. So precious and well guarded is this likeness of Him that even the House in Shiráz, one of the two centers of pilgrimage established by Bahá'u'lláh, does not possess a copy.

Nor should we forget for a moment, in counting our achievements and our blessings, the recent inauguration of the second Seven-Year Plan which has already been enthusiastically embarked upon by the American Bahá'ís and which, in addition to increasing the number of National Spiritual Assemblies by three—one to be formed in Canada in 1948, and one for Central and one for South America in 1950—is aimed at carrying the Faith to the European Continent, as part of an organized activity, for the first time.

The vision of the future which Shoghi Effendi has revealed to us in his recent communications, is simply stupendous. Beyond each goal stretches another goal, tapering off into an era when we know the Faith will be emancipated and come into its own in the eyes of the whole world. Not only do our teaching activities during the next seven years carry us all over Northern, Western and Southern Europe, but we are given the challenging task of completing, at long last, the interior of our Temple. And of thus setting it before the eyes of the men as the first and greatest Bahá'í House of Worship in the West.

While the American Bahá'ís have been absorbed in the two-fold task of learning to understand the purpose of the Bahá'í administration, the way it functions and the uses to which it could be put, and in embarking on the first stages of the Divine Plan, their co-workers in other parts of the world were not idle. The progress achieved in the United States was outstanding, but not unique. The work of the Cause went ahead at a rapid pace in other countries in which the Bahá'ís labored, but under far greater handicaps; in Persia, where the government is the traditional enemy of the Faith; in Egypt, where the Sunni religious doctors have consistently opposed us, cast us out of their ranks and incited the populace against us; in Iraq where the Bahá'í Community was small and the native people fanatical and reactionary; in Germany, where the Nazi regime originally frowned upon us from the hour of its rise to power until it finally officially banned the Faith in 1937, confiscated its literature and archives and in a number of cases tried or persecuted its followers; in England, where the believers were few and scattered in an intensely conservative land of strong traditions; in India, where the relatively large Bahá'í community struggled against the multiplicity of prejudices and creeds—in all these lands where National Assemblies, firmly founded and buttressed by active committees and national funds, watched over the interests of the believers and worked under the constant guidance of the Guardian, the affairs of the Cause, far from declining, prospered as never before. This was also true in Australasia, which in its freedom from traditional forms and its tolerance, most closely resembles conditions found in North America.

It is hard to know what achievements to cite, so many spring to mind as one casts one's eye over the scene: the emancipation of the Cause from Islâm in Egypt, formally and forcibly pronounced a non-Muhammadan independent faith by the ecclesiastical authorities there, which in its turn greatly strengthened the Bahá'í claim to official recognition as a new and independent world religion in other lands, including the United States; the tremendous increase of Bahá'í properties the world over, including not only six National Headquarters but innumerable local headquarters, meeting halls, guest houses and even burial grounds, stretching from Persia through India, Iraq, the Holy Land, Egypt, across the seas to North and South America, and back across the Pacific to Australia, but also including the purchase, in the land of Bahá'u'lláh's birth, of most of the sacred and historic sites associated with the rise of the Faith there, as well as an extensive and beautiful property destined to be the site of the future Bahá'í Temple in that country; the increase in the number of Bahá'í summer schools, well organized and operating in Germany, India, Persia, England, Egypt, Argentine, New Zealand, Australia and four states of North America—namely, Maine, Michigan, Colorado and California; the rise of Bahá'í young people the world over to positions of importance in the Cause, as teachers, writers, administrators and pioneers, with well organized activities which include the training of children and adolescents; the truly remarkable output of Bahá'í literature with titles published in the United States alone running well over fifty, with a Publishing Trust established in England which gets out many volumes not only for use in the British Isles but also for export to other Bahá'í communities; the prewar publishing activities of the German believers who were very active in translating literature from the English, and also in issuing works written by Bahá'í authors in their own language; the role which India—mother land of so many hundreds of tongues and dialects—has played in this field and which has obliged her to already print editions in about fourteen native languages; the issuance of Bahá'í literature in many other countries, such as Switzerland, Argentine, Egypt, and so on; and the important fact that our Bahá'í text book “Bahá'u'lláh and The New Era” has now been printed in about forty-five languages; the legal incorporation of over sixty-five national and local Bahá'í Assemblies in countries all over the world; and, first and foremost, the most impres...sive and significant accomplishment of all, that whereas in the days of 'Abdu'l-Bahá the Faith had only spread to about 20 countries, its message has now been taken to over 70, and in the majority of these an administrative foundation of the Cause has already been firmly laid.

No appraisal of the wonderful work achieved by the Bahá'ís the world over during this period would be complete without mention of what the Guardian himself, singlehanded, has done at the world center of the Faith in Palestine. Aside from his constant and very heavy correspondence, with not only national and local Assemblies but with groups and individuals as well, aside from his cables and directives addressed to the Bahá'ís in different parts of the world, aside from the books he writes and the Bahá'í literature he translates so painstakingly and beautifully, he has aided the believers financially in all of their major undertakings, in the East or the West. Whether it was to assist the Bahá'í refugees from Russia, or those who had suffered local persecution in Persia, or to help build the various national Administrative Headquar-...

As was to be expected, the very first charge came from the Covenant-breakers: Muhammad 'Ali, who had tried in vain to discredit 'Abdu'l-Bahá, disaffected the believers, corrupt certain writings of Bahá'u'lláh, and even had on more than one occasion sought to have the Master's life taken, revived his faded hopes when he beheld such a (as he thought) defenseless youth placed at the helm. His attack was disturbing, if somewhat ludicrous, for he chose to have one of his henchmen seize the sacred shrine of his father, Bahá'u'lláh, and rob the Bahá'í Keeper of the keys.

Distressing though the incident was, the case of the successor of 'Abdu'l-Bahá was so clear in the eyes of the British authorities, that in a short time he was obliged to return the keys to Shoghi Effendi's representative. This was the first, so to speak, crossing of swords with our appointed Guardian, and both the Bahá'ís and local observers, friend and foe alike, learned through it that we had an active and skilled Defender of the Faith!

In Egypt, a proud Armenian, blinded by vanity and ambition, waved his own little flag of rebellion and succeeded in drawing away from the Bahá'í community (at that time in the early stages of its own development) a number of his compatriots and other misguided souls. But the hand that waved the flag soon got tired, and became aware of the foolishness of trying to coax people out of such a water-tight ark as 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Covenant has proven itself to be. Gradually, over the years, those who after such a disillusioning and spiritually unhealthy experience, still possessed any vital spark of faith, returned to knock on the door they had left and were, whenever the sincerity of their intentions was proven, welcomed back into the now actively working and expanding Egyptian Bahá'í community.

An American woman, Mrs. Ruth White, suffering from a truly remarkable form of delusion—namely, that the Will and Testament of the Master is a forgery—spent a great deal of time, money and energy on exposing her views. The document in question, its handwriting, text and style, seals and history is so obviously protected from this accusation that her violent agitation had no effect on the body of the Bahá'ís, with the exception of a few simple souls in Germany. Most of these (who remained devoted to the Faith but confused on this point) have now expressed their deep remorse over these deluded and wasted years they spent outside the Bahá'í community, and have re-entered it in Germany and are among its most active workers.

In Persia Avaríh, at one time a very active Bahá'í teacher, developed what must seem to any sane person, a sort of spiritual hydrophobia. He not only attacked the Guardian exhaustively and fantastically in about ten volumes, but turned against both Bahá'u'lláh and the Master as well. His statements, unbalanced, compounded of such a high percentage of lies that even an intelligent and sincere enemy of the Faith would recognize them as such, have poured forth in the cheap press of Persia for practically decades. But the results have been very dishheartening from his standpoint, for he neither gathered unto himself a following, nor has he been able to disrupt the affairs of the large, devoted and loyal community of believers in Bahá'u'lláh's native land.

Ahmad Sohrab, a former secretary of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, largely thanks to the generous support given him by a deluded woman, has been able to expend all his gifts of perversion on his favorite theme—a prolonged and windy attack on the Administrative Order of the Faith as it exists at the head, and soundly organized Assemblies cooperating with him throughout the world in spreading Bahá'u'lláh's message and building up His divinely ordained institutions. He holds the honor of being undoubtedly the most mischievous of the trouble makers that the Cause has raised up during this quarter of a century. Yes, the Cause of God has raised him up! For what beauty does not produce envy, and what purity does not produce slander, and what goodness does not challenge the evil hidden in an envious heart? This man, who received as charity—as we all do—some drops of God's overflowing bounty, could have done much to assist the Bahá'ís in carrying out the wishes of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and the plans of Bahá'u'lláh. But ambition proved too strong. In our Faith we must submit to having our personal desires and plans integrated into the plans for the whole, for unity is our watchword and we are not only propagating a new Faith with its new principles, but are building a divinely laid down system into society, and this requires the discipline of the personal ego to some extent, and the integration of all members of the community into a coherent pattern. To this Ahmad Sohrab would not submit, for it did not allow him the personal prominence he craved. The hot wind of his slander has blown upon us for some time now, and though it troubled and disaffected a few hearts, to the vast majority of believers it proved an irritating stimulant, which not only made them cherish more dearly the Master's Will and its provisions, but spurred them on to greater endeavor.

We Bahá'ís are neither afraid to, nor ashamed of, mentioning the names of these prominent backsliders. On the contrary, they represent to us what a soldier's ribbons do to him: they are the campaigns we have successfully fought and every one of them is dear to our hearts. The storms they have loosed upon us have not only driven the roots of our Faith in Bahá'u'lláh's system deeper, but have demonstrated to us that, for the first time in history, a religion has been given to men which cannot be split up into sects, for the two Wills—those of Bahá'u'lláh and the Master—are so strongly constructed and so authentic beyond a shadow of a doubt, that it is impossible to divorce the body of the teachings from their provision.

The principle of successorship, endowed with the right of Divine interpretation, is the very hub of the Cause into which its Doctrines and Laws fit like the spokes of a wheel—tear out the hub and you have to throw away the whole thing. This is why our enemies have, for a hundred years, failed to establish anything outside the Faith which could thrive or prosper.

As we look back over these twenty-five years, it is with feelings of profound contentment. We Bahá'ís have matured greatly. The little tragedies, the hot discussions, the rocking of the boat by various enemies, seem all far behind us now. We have grown up in the Will. We have stood close to that tree which overshadowed all mankind, and come to realize how live and great it is, how dense its foliage, how heavy its yield of fruits—the tree of our first Guardian, our Shoghi Effendi. Where first we looked to him with affection and much pity for his youthfulness and the greatness of the task laid upon him, now we look to him eagerly, waiting each fresh counsel of his wise, and so well proven, leadership. With deep love and pride the Bahá’ís labor under his guidance, thanking God not only for this wonderful Divinely inspired institution of Guardianship, but also for this particular Guardian, who has steered the ship of the Cause through so many shoals and whose sure and patient hand is guiding it on to the great victories promised by Bahá’u’lláh for his Faith in this Century.

Shoghi Effendi’s services to the Cause of God are not yet known. How can they be? There is not yet the required perspective. Only gradually have we been grasping just Who and What the Bab and Bahá’u’lláh were; out of the mists of contemporary events they are now rising like giants on the horizon of Their Own Revelation. “God Passes By” has been the greatest single factor in our beginning to truly appreciate Their significance and station. But it is too early, and he is too close, for us to begin to properly evaluate our first Guardian. We can, however,—always remembering as he in his great modesty would wish us to—that he is guided by God, weigh up a little of what he has done. Let us begin with his presents to us, the dearest gifts he could make us, the translations: The Iqán, the Epistle to The Son of The Wolf, The Prayers and Meditations, The Gleanings, The Hidden Words, The Dawn-Breakers, and innumerable gems quoted in his own writings. What would our understanding of love and for the Cause be today without these glorious books? Then let us take his own works: The Bahá’í Administration, The wonderful World Order Letters, The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh, The Advent of Divine Justice, The Promised Day Is Come, the ten volumes of The Bahá’í World—child of his vision of the Cause and uniring perseverance and most valuable of all, God Passes By, that unique, exhaustive and marvellous review of the highlights of 100 years of Bahá’í history, in which every factor receives its due importance in relation to every other, a labor no one but the Guardian could ever be qualified to do. To the above must of course be added many important communications addressed to the Persian Bahá’ís in their own tongue.

Not one of our achievements during this quarter of a Century and briefly touched upon here, could have been made were it not for the untiring labor and patience of Shoghi Effendi. He has encouraged us when we were down-hearted, spurred us on when we decided to take a little inopportune rest, foreseen our needs and supplied us with the plans, the counsel, the passages from the writings, the answers to the questions, which we needed. How well we realize today what a sad state our Cause would have been in without him! So often we have seen his healing touch laid on dissections, on hurt feelings or wounded pride, always fertile sources of trouble in any community. So often his explanation and interpretation has made the way clear and once again gathered us in deep unity to serve our beloved Faith.

But we can be sure of one thing—all these services rendered us by the first Guardian have not been without cost. A loving and sensitive nature, openhearted and filled with a wonderful eagerness in his desire to serve the Master, and carry out his wishes, he has been assailed most viciously, most unjustly, most pitilessly by enemies both within and without. From the world, any righteous man expects little understanding and acclaim during his lifetime, but from those near in ties of friendship or of blood, he hopes for and expects to receive more. We might have thought that the great tidal waves of distress and calumny, the violent attacks, had subsided with the end of the Heroic Age of our Faith. But this evidently has not been the plan of God. Now we see our Guardian strong, wise, mature, stretching about us his iron arms to protect us in the sanctuary of the Divine Cause, but he himself is much scarred by the blows he has received these twenty-five years, more scarred than the Master surely ever dreamed he could be when he wrote “that no dust of despondency may stain his radiant nature,” indeed, snowed under sometimes with the problems this ever-expanding world Faith engenders in its forward march, and with the many cares and blows that have been his portion.

That which sustains the Guardian, now left so alone amidst his great responsibilities, is the work of the Cause. Good news is like the breath of life to him, and whenever some new goal is achieved, some problem solved, some new enterprise undertaken, his spirit is lightened, his mind freed for some new creative effort, his heart gladdened. So we see that just as we Bahá’ís the world over are his responsibility, given him by Almighty God, so is he our responsibility, likewise given us by Almighty God. Let us not take it lightly! In gratitude for both this mighty institution of Guardianship in which mankind has found a sure refuge in this new age, and in gratitude for this particular first Guardian, this Shoghi Effendi, let us resolve to rise to a truly higher plane of endeavor, and above all a higher plane of spiritual awareness, during these coming years. We must always remember that the only real limitations we suffer, are those within ourselves. Rallied closely about the center of the Cause, loving him and, in him, each other, we can, during the next quarter of a century double our record of achievement.

Every truth, every fact, has so many meanings and aspects. It may take a thousand years to correctly appraise the implications of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Will and Testament, but we—the first recipients of it—can, if we will, leave behind us the record of being the generation who made the greatest advances in understanding it and first helped release its wondrous powers upon the world, in history’s darkest years.

An Ever-Advancing Civilization

All men have been created to carry forward an ever-advancing civilization. The Almighty beareth Me witness: To act like the beasts of the field is unworthy of man. Those virtues that befit his dignity are forbearance, mercy, compassion and loving-kindness towards all the peoples and kindreds of the earth. Say: 0 friends! Drink your fill from this crystal stream that floweth through the heavenly grace of Him Who is the Lord of Names. Let others partake of its waters in My name, that the leaders of men in every land may fully recognize the purpose for which the Eternal Truth hath been revealed, and the reason for which they themselves have been created.
Discovering New Talent

The Regional Teaching Committee for Texas and Oklahoma has instituted a campaign for discovering the special talents of Baha'is in the region. It made a thorough canvas of its members, asking them if they could write, speak, open their homes to fireside groups, or if they belonged to clubs, etc. Some very worthwhile responses resulted from this. For instance Mrs. A. H. Rouse of Carrizo Springs, a school teacher, sent two well written manuscripts on “Education and Religion in the Public Schools,” one of which was forwarded to the National Reviewing Committee as it appeared in “The Texas Outlook,” published by the Texas State Teachers’ Association. Mrs. Rouse was then appointed Journalism Chairman of the Region. She will endeavor to place small inspirational columns in newspapers and magazines reaching the rural sections.

This is a long-range project which will be built on from year to year and will be helpful in utilizing every bit of Baha'i power which can be mustered for the Seven Year Plan.

O Son of Spirit!

My first counsel is this: Possess a pure, kindly and radiant heart, that thine may be a sovereignty ancient, impresshable and everlasting.

BAHÁ'Í NEWS

NO. 192 FEBRUARY, 1947

YEAR 103 BAHÁ'Í ERA

Four More Pioneers Leave for Europe

The European Teaching Committee is happy to report the imminent departure for Europe of the following pioneers: Miss Madeline Humbert of the New York community, to Brussels, Belgium, January 29; Mrs. Alice Dudley of the San Francisco community, to Stockholm, Sweden, February 19; Mr. and Mrs. Ugo Glachery of the New York community, to Rome, Italy, February 9. Miss Honor Kemp was requested by the Guardian to remain one month in England to assist with the British teaching campaign before taking up her post in Luxembourg. This Miss Kemp has done and she will be at her post in Luxembourg on February 1. The committee feels sure that all the believers will join them in their prayers for the success and confirmation of the arduous task these dedicated pioneers are undertaking.

Frequent letters are being received from Mrs. Graeffe reporting on the consolidation of the work of the Geneva office of the European Teaching Committee. The close cooperation between the E.T.C. office and the International Bahá’í Bureau under Mrs. Anne Lynch is proving of great benefit and value to the overall European teaching work.

Pioneers already in the field in Europe send us very encouraging reports concerning their work. Mrs. Corbit in Oslo, Norway, writes that her fireside groups are proceeding satisfactorily and she is especially happy that such a large percentage of those attending are young people.

In accordance with the Guardian’s directions, this committee is now in the process of preparing to send itinerant teachers to Europe to assist our pioneers. One of the first to go in this capacity will be Mrs. Marion Little of the New Orleans community. Mrs. Little is eminently qualified by reason of much teaching experience, together with an ability to speak French fluently, to undertake this important mission. Others equally well qualified will follow her in the near future.

If any of the believers have family, friends or acquaintances residing in any of the goal countries who they think would be good Bahá’í composers...

Panama Conference to Open

Word has arrived that delegates from Guatemala, Mexico, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Colon and the Dominican Republic are now arriving in the City of Panama for the first official conference of the northern Latin American countries, that are to elect the second National Spiritual Assembly of Latin America in April, 1961. It is hoped that delegates from the other islands of the West Indies will arrive when the conference opens on January 19th. Charles Mason Remey is the distinguished visitor from North America to the Conference.

The traveling pioneers are represented by Mrs. Marcia Steward, who is doing a special project in the Central American; Artemus Lamb, who is bringing the inspiration of the Buenos Aires conference from the south, and Mrs. Gayle Woolson, who comes from a trip to Caracas, Venezuela, where she will return after the conference and after a visit to Miss. Lotus Peterson of Duluth, Minn., who has just arrived in Maracaibo, Venezuela.

Miss Peterson’s arrival is one of those small and great miracles of Bahá’ulláh, which are constantly seen and experienced by the believers who have had courage to give up their all and to hurl themselves upon His mercy and guidance in full service to Him. Lotus arrived in Chicago recently en route to take her boat at New Orleans for Maracaibo. She found unexpectedly that there are a thousand and one red tape details which usually impede the ob-

Ten Groups Reach Assembly Status

In a cable sent June 12, 1946, the Guardian pleaded for the speedy conversion of thirty groups to Assembly status and added, “Devoutly hoping, fervently praying number Assemblies functioning North America reach seventy-five ere expiry second year second stage Divine Plan.” That means that thirty groups should be ready for Assembly status as soon as possible and forty by April 21st, 1948.

Of this number, ten groups are assured of Assembly status by April, 1947, owing to the diligent work of Regional Teaching Committees and the Extension Teaching Committees of various Assemblies. Thirty-eight groups hold promise, and on these the concentrated attention of the National Teaching Committee is being focused.

These groups, each having six or more members, are: West Haven, Conn.; Buffalo, New York; Montclair, Bergenfield, Englewood, Jersey City, and Red Bank, New Jersey; Columbia and North Augusta, South Carolina; Knoxville, Tennessee; San Antonio, Texas; Toledo, Findlay, Granger Township, Hinckley Township, Urbana, and Lakewood, Ohio; Kalamazoo and Dearborn Township, Michigan; Champaign, Park Ridge, Limestone Township, and Winnetka, Illinois; Green Bay, Shorewood, and Somers Township (Kenosha), Wis.

contribution: Glenfield, North Dakota; North Albuquerque, New Mexico; Inglewood, El Monte Township, Arcadia, Monrovia Township, Monrovia, Pasadena Township, Southgate, and San Mateo, California; Monroe, and Kirkland, Washington.

Seventeen Settlers Urgently Needed

Nine Assemblies need reinforcement by April 21st or they will revert to group status. In order to prevent this seventeen settlers are needed. If you are free to move to one of these goal cities, please write to Mrs. Sarah S. Walrath, secretary of the National Teaching Committee, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago.

The first objective mentioned in the Guardian’s outline of the Second Seven Year Plan to the 1946 Convention was “consolidation of victories already won throughout the Americas, involving multiplication of Baha’i centers, bolder proclamation of the Faith to the masses.” In order to hold on to the victories won under the first Seven Year Plan, these seventeen settlers must be found.

Berkeley Holds Successful Public Meetings

The Berkeley Baha’is have held a series of three public meetings in order to present to the thinking people of the town and the University the broad scope of the Baha’i Faith. The first two meetings were held three weeks apart with excellent audiences and great interest.

On September 23 the Patio Room of the Women’s City Club was packed to overflowing with 125 people. Marilyn Zahl played selections from Chopin. Exceptionally fine talks were given by Marzieh Gail on “Headlines Tomorrow” and by Leroy Iosas on “The Basis of World Order.” The meeting was publicized by a good newspaper article with a photograph; by posters at the Public Library, International House, Berkeley Women’s City Club, etc.; and by the sending of printed postcards to contacts and friends. The book exhibit, the youth ushers, and the attractive surroundings, as well as the 30 Baha’is who came from nearby cities, contributed to the success of the meeting. Almost every one of the 75 non-Baha’i attendees signed the guest book and took literature. Later these individuals received the invitation and program for the succeeding meeting.

The meeting of October 16 was held in the spacious lounge of the College Women’s Club. This program featured a beautiful short concert by Walter Oltziki, Baha’i artist of the Metropolitan and the San Francisco Opera Companies, accompanied by Fritz Berens, and outstanding talks by Sally Sanor on “The Cause of Stife” and by Arthur L. Bahl, Jr. on “The Baha’i Contribution to World Peace.” Attractive invitation-programs were mailed to the “key list” of University and town people, as well as to interested contacts. Of the 175 people who attended, 125 were non-Baha’is, including school superintendents, teachers, past presidents of the College Women’s Club, the editor who handles the Baha’i publicity for the Berkeley Daily Gazette, graduate and undergraduate students, etc. The response from every quarter continues to be most enthusiastic.

The report of the third meeting, a youth program held on November 24, National Youth Day, at International House, states that more than fifty young people attended.

To Reach the Goal

175 functioning LSA’s “are expired second year second stage Divine Plan.”

135 LSA’s now established North America.

40 LSA’s to be established by 1948.

38 Groups hold promise of LSA status.

10 Groups now assured of LSA status April.

9 LSA’s in need of reinforcement by April.

Notice to Assemblies

The Regional Teaching Committees, through the National Teaching Committee, have been requested to render assistance to the smaller communities in their efforts to increase their numbers and preserve their Assembly status. Assemblies of the smaller Baha’i communities are free to request this assistance.

In order to enable traveling believers to make contact with the Baha’is of cities visited, the local Assemblies are advised to register their permanent address of their meeting place and their schedule of meetings with the local Chamber of Commerce. A telephone listing using the name “Baha’i” is also very important if it can be arranged.

First Contacts With Japanese Bahá'ís

As soon as Michael Jamir, in the medical personnel of the U.S. Army, reached Japan in November, 1945, he began writing to friends in the U.S. for addresses of Japanese Bahá'ís. Following up these addresses he eventually met two Japanese Bahá'ís and had correspondence or news from three others. The first meeting was with Mr. H. S. Fujita. Mr. Fujita became a Bahá'í through Mrs. Corinne True when he came to this country as a student in 1905. Later he had the great experience of meeting 'Abdu'l-Bahá when he came to this country in 1912. In 1917 he accepted the invitation of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to go to Haifa. There he served 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi until, in 1936, on the advice of the Guardian, he left for his native land.

In May, 1946, Mr. Jamir visited Mr. Fujita at Yanai, where he found him working as interpreter at the railroad station. Here he comes in contact with many American, British, and New Zealand soldiers and nationals and makes use of frequent opportunities to spread the Bahá'í principles. His wish now is to go to a larger city where he can make his living and teach the Faith. "During the two days and night that I visited Mr. Fujita," writes Mr. Jamir, "I found him, at 61, youthful and vibrant in his work and enthusiastic in the Bahá'í Faith."

He brought out his address book... and we went over the names of his American Bahá'í friends to see what I could tell him about them and he wishes me to express his loving greetings to them."

From Yanai Mr. Jamir travelled to Kyoto to meet Mr. Torii, another Japanese Bahá'í. Mr. Torii has been a Bahá'í since 1918 and received two tablets from 'Abdu'l-Bahá. He is blind and teaches in the Kyotodai school for the blind. He invited Mr. Jamir to speak to the children of his class on the Bahá'í principles.

Increasing Growth in Latin America

Forty-nine new memberships have been received from Latin America in the past six weeks.

Word has just come from Medellin, Colombia, of the formation of a new Assembly, eight believers having been confirmed during the visit of Gayle Woolson in December. They have been studying for some time by correspondence and with the assistance of the one original Bahá'í, Sr. Francisco Restrepo. More are continuing to study. Six newspapers and the radio station collaborated in the series of outstanding meetings held there.

The group in Sucre, Bolivia, now has six members, Col. Arturo Cuel­lar, Yvonne de Cuellar, and Gwenne Sholtis are working there and expect to have a second Assembly for Bolivia before April. It is a university town, and many of the Bahá'ís students come from the university. Gwenne Sholtis has just returned to La Paz after a needed visit to the lowlands, where she helped Eve Nicklin with the new regional project in Callao, Peru. She reports that the Lima Community is growing wonderfully and is most active and happy under Eve's wise guidance.

Splendid news has come from Elena Marsella in Ciudad Trujillo. All six members of her study class signed up en masse as Bahá'ís, there being two adults and four declared youths. This gives Ciudad Trujillo fourteen adult members and four youths. Elena plans to accompany Dr. Malcolm King to Santiago, Dominican Republic, to start a regional project there. Dr. King will then go to visit the friends in Kingston, Jamaica, and help them to work out an extension project, before returning to Haiti.

The Bahá'í Community newly formed in Rio de Janeiro in April of this year, has sent in its 18th registration card. Great plans are under way for expansion of teaching in Brazil, where Leonora Armstrong first carried the Cause some 20 years ago. Fifteen members are reported in Bahia and a group of five in the new goal city of Sao Paulo.

Reports from Louise Baker show that she is carrying a teaching circuit of four towns and cities in Mexico, teaching newly organized groups in each one. Her headquarters is in Vera Cruz. Her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker, plan to visit Mexico City in February.

From Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, and Venezuela come reports of the showers of inspiration, new knowledge, and light disseminated by Mason Remey and Emeric and Rosemary Sala on their teaching trip through the West Indies and Venezuela. Emeric and Rosemary have now returned northward through the islands, and Mr. Remey will come northward after the Panama Conference through the Central Americas and Mexico, visiting the various Bahá'í communities en route.

From Panama Marcia Seward will return to her project in San José, Costa Rica, for the present, and Artemus Lamb will visit Cali and Quito, and Guayaquil, Ecuador, and Lima, Peru, on his way back to his region, which includes Chile, Argentina, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

Flora Hottes will leave Montevideo, Uruguay, early in February, visiting Buenos Aires; Asuncion, Paraguay; La Paz and Sucre, Bolivia; Lima and other points, on a trip back to the United States for rest and change after five years of constant service in Bolivia and Uruguay.

Mr. Torii acted as very able interpreter and the children listened eagerly. Mr. and Mrs. Torii spoke warmly of Miss Alexander, who had often been a guest in their homes.

Mr. Jamir had warm and enthusiastic letters from Mr. Tanaka and Mr. Inouye, both devoted Bahá'ís. Mr. Inouye would like to go to Tokyo to spread the Teachings, but military restrictions prevent this. He is doing his utmost to teach in Sapporo, Hokaido. He remembers Miss Root and her "gentle and full-of-love grace."

Mr. Tanaka, a Bahá'í of Honshu, called on Mr. Jamir and, finding him away, wrote him a letter. He has ten children; so Mr. Jamir included "The Bahá'í Child's ABC" with the literature he sent him.

Mrs. Yuri Furukawa, another Japanese Bahá'í, is now in Manchuria.

taining of permission to enter another country in any guise other than as a tourist with a 90 day permit. She sat down and prayed with all her heart. Within an hour she was on her way with all that she required. The key that unlocked the door was, of course, her complete readiness to serve fully, plus the prayer, plus the need of a Bahá'í in that city where regional work is now to begin.

Persian Visitors Break into News

Firuz Kazamzadah, Amin Banani and Shidan Fat'he Aazam, Persian Bahá'ís on vacation from the California universities in which they are enrolled, were Phoenix visitors for the Christmas holidays and gave invaluable teaching assistance to that community and to extension teaching work during their stay. Firuz was speaker at three meetings, one in Tucson, another in East Phoenix rural community, both of which attracted a large number of non-Bahá'ís, and in Phoenix at a gathering for which special invitations had been issued to members of a local inter-racial fellowship organization. In addition to the meetings, which included also a number of informal youth gatherings, interesting contacts were arranged with the Dean of Phoenix Junior College, with a leading news commentator of radio station KTAR, local outlet for NBC, and with the Arizona Republic and Arizona Times, two major Phoenix newspapers. At the office of the Times the young men were interviewed by Associate Editor Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger and Managing Editor Dave Brinegar with the gratifying result that the following day Mr. Brinegar's column "The Times in Arizona" was entirely devoted to an account of the Persian visitors and their intense interest in spreading the Bahá'í Faith, "as having as its basic belief the proposition that revelations of God are progressive and not final..."

Attention G.I. Students

The "G. I. Bill of Rights" allows an ex-service man to take his training in a foreign university. If you are contemplating taking advantage of this or would consider it, you could contribute to the European Teaching Campaign by selecting a university in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, or Italy. Will anyone interested in doing this get in touch with the chairman of the European Teaching Committee, Miss Edna True, 418 Forest Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois?

The Temple Teaches the World

Almost four thousand people visited the Bahá'í House of Worship in October and November of this year. 2932 came in October and 1056 in November. Although this record is lower, by 549, than that of the same time last year, the difference is in part accounted for by the fact that week-day guiding was discontinued November 9th this year, instead of going on until Thanksgiving, as it did in 1945. Week-day guiding is discontinued each year when the weather becomes so cold that the guides' health is endangered.

During October this year, visitors came from thirty-eight states, the District of Columbia, and many foreign countries. Seventeen groups came from the Canadian Provinces of Ontario, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, and Manitoba. Three visitors came from Sweden; two from Turkey, Denmark, France, and England; one each from Cuba, the Philippines, the Netherlands, Australia, Palestine, India, Peru, Chile, Brazil, Mexico, and the Virgin Islands.

In November the people came from thirty-one states and the District of Columbia, and nine groups came from the Canadian Provinces of Ontario, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, and Alberta. Four groups came from England, two from Sweden and Brazil, one from Denmark, and one from Chile.

During this two-month period, the following organizations were guided through the Temple: Home Bureau, Lake County, Illinois, 30; Austin North End Women's Club, Chicago, 75; Cub Girl Scouts, Evanston, 23; Young People, Bethany Evangelical Church, Chicago, 32; Boy Scouts, Chicago, 15; S. S. Children, Jewish Synagogue, Glencoe, 65; Chicago Women's Club, 14.

Some of the remarks written in the register were: Very educational; Amazingly beautiful; Unusually interesting; Magnificent; Very convincing; Unconvincing; Very interesting, and will be helpful in living for Jesus; Something to be investigated; Enlightening and inspirational; Unique.

From the wide variety of the organizations that come to the Temple, from the numerous and widely distant states and countries represented by the visitors, and from the appreciative remarks that have been written in the register, it is evident that...
Temple guiding is reaching the masses and the leaders alike over the whole world. If contact were made with these people by Baha'is in their various localities, some of them would most surely be grateful.
The Guides Committee would like to be notified by believers or Assemblies of those who have become interested in studying the Faith after making their first contact with it by visiting the Temple.

State Fair Exhibits Attract the Masses

The Bahá'ís of Phoenix, with the valued assistance of the Bahá'ís of East Phoenix, were sponsors of an exhibit at the Arizona State Fair held in Phoenix from November 8 to 17. It was estimated by the State Fair commission that the Fair attracted some 200,000 visitors, of which it can be assured that a large number viewed the exhibit. Approximately 4,000 people stopped at the booth and 2,000 received pamphlet literature. Almost one hundred left their names to be informed of meetings; many took questionnaire cards and already at an early date the response through this medium has been gratifying.

The exhibit occupied a space 10x10 feet and featured in addition to the Temple model an automatic projector showing color slides of the Temple and world maps designating with colored flags the countries where the Faith is represented. Over these large maps appeared the caption: "The earth is but one country and mankind its citizens." Bahá'

Over the entrance to the booth in large letters were the words, "The Bahá'í World Faith." Literature and books illustrative of the teachings were available to inquirers. Especially noteworthy was the interest of youth among the visitors. On the two weekends at the opening and close of the Fair the Bahá'í youth were in charge of the booth. Interest in the display was demonstrated not alone by visitors, but also by the Fair management, who expressed their enthusiasm for the effectiveness of the exhibit and their cordial assurance that a desirable space would be available to the Bahá'ís at the State Fair next year.

From the State Fair at Springfield, Illinois (see Bahá'í News for November) the Regional Committee of that area reports further results. A member of the Senate asked Miss Basterbrook to come and speak of the Bahá'í Peace Plan before that body, remarking: "Those boys ought to hear of this." A geometry teacher from Princeville said that his attention had first been attracted to the Bahá'í Temple by his pupils. He asked to be given further information about the Faith.

Hunger Slows Teaching in Germany

Letters from leading German Bahá'ís written in late November show that the low food rations were telling on their physical endurance to an alarming degree. It seemed then that the winter teaching campaign could not be carried out. To quote from the letter of an ardent worker for the Faith: "So many dear friends, Edith Horn, Annamarie Schweizer, Hede Schubert, Heidi Koller-Jaeger, Fred Kohler, Paul Schreher, and Hermann Grossmann are in such extremely bad condition of physical weakness that to travel and teach (the very hardest kind of labor) seemed impossible. "There seemed danger that all we had won for the Faith in previous months of hard work, must come to an end." Lists of German addresses are published elsewhere in this issue.
"While There Is Yet Time"

O ye that are lying as dead on the couch of heedlessness!

Ages have passed and your precious lives are well-nigh ended, yet not a single breath of purity hath reached Our court of holiness from you. Though immersed in the ocean of misbelief, yet with your lips ye profess the one true faith of God. Him whom I abhor ye have loved, and of My foe ye have made a friend. Notwithstanding, ye walk on my earth complacent and self-satisfied, heedless that My earth is weary of you and everything within it shunneth you. Were ye but to open your eyes, ye would, in truth, prefer a myriad readers. While there is yet time, return, and lose not thy chance.

Say: Glory be to Thee Who hast caused all the holy Ones to confess their helplessness before the manifold revelations of Thy might, and every Prophet to acknowledge his nothingness at the effulgence of Thy abiding glory. I beseech Thee, by Thy name that hath unlocked the gates of Heaven and filled with ecstasy the Concourse on high, to enable me to serve Thee, in this Day, and to strengthen me to observe that which Thou didst prescribe in Thy Book. Thou knowest, O my Lord what is in me; but I know not what is in Thee. Thou art the All-Knowing, the All-Informed. —Baha'u'llah

O moving form of dust!
I desire communion with thee, but thou wouldst put no trust in Me.
The sword of thy rebellion hath felled the tree of thy hope. At all times I am near unto thee, but thou art ever far from Me. Imperishable glory have I chosen for thee, yet boundless shame thou hast chosen for thyself.

While there is yet time, return, and lose not thy chance.

"Thrilled by Generous Response"

Cables from the Guardian

From its December meeting the National Spiritual Assembly cabled Shoghi Effendi as follows: "Your cables message (i.e., on page 8, January Bahá'í News) fires enthusiasm, strengthens resolution, expands vision. We acclaim the fateful journey and remarkable achievements of the Chairman of European Teaching Committee, the establishment of an office in Geneva, the noble initiation of task by pioneers in the field, the mature, dedicated response of Southern delegates to the race unity conference, and the Bahá'í article in Pathfinder Magazine with one million readers. Seizing the decisive hour."

The Guardian's reply, received December 19: "Delighted at achievement of Chairman of European Teaching Committee, response of Southern delegates to race conference, publication of article in Pathfinder Magazine. Praying still greater victories in all three continents."

The final current message from Haifa is the cablegram received January 20 in reply to our cabled report to him of the total contributions which had come in up to January 6 for the special Temple fund: "Thrilled by generous response of believers to Temple Fund. Deeply touched. Hail latest striking evidence of the magnificent spirit, unshakeable solidarity and unflinching resolve of American Bahá'í community. Deepest loving gratitude."

Baha'i Marriage

The National Spiritual Assembly is delighted to be able to give the friends the following material concerning Bahá'í marriage, which deepens our understanding and prevents formal crystallization of unauthorized views.

The question of how to conduct a Bahá'í marriage, and what Tablets are to be read, was referred to Shoghi Effendi last summer and his reply came under date of October 5, 1946:

"Bahá'í marriages should at present not be pressed into any kind of a uniform mold. What is absolutely essential is what Bahá'u'lláh stipulates in the Aqdas: the friends can add to this selected writings if they please—but the so-called 'Marriage Tablet' (revealed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá) is not a necessary part of every Bahá'í marriage. In 'The Bahá'í World' is a prayer for marriage incorporated in either the Arabic or Persian text: he suggests Marzieh Gail translate this, and it can be made available to the friends, so that they can use it if they wish to."

What Bahá'u'lláh stipulates in the Aqdas is to be found on page 272 of "Bahá'í World Faith" in the form of a quotation made by 'Abdu'l-Bahá: "The bridegroom must, before the bridesman and a few others, say 'Verily, we are content with the Will of God' and the bride must rejoin, 'Verily, we are satisfied with the Desire of God.'"

The prayer for marriages referred to by the Guardian has been translated by Mrs. Marzieh Gail from the Marriage Certificate used by the Assemblies in Persia. The signature "'Ayn-'Ayn" is a signature used by the Master for a certain period. Her translation follows.

"He Is the Bestower, the Bounteous!"

"Praise be to God, the Ancient, the Ever-Abiding, the Changeless, the Eternal! He Who hath testified in His Own Being that verily He is the One, the Single, the Untrammelled, the Exalted. We bear witness that verily there is no God but Him; acknowledging His oneness, confessing His singleness. He hath ever dwelt in unapproachable heights, in the summits of His loftiness, sanctified from the mention of aught save Himself, free from the description of aught but Himself.

"And when He desired to manifest grace and beneficence to men, and to set the world in order, He revealed observances and created laws; among them He established the law of marriage, made it as a fortress for well-being and salvation, and enjoined it upon us in that which was sent down out of the heaven of sanctity in His Most Holy Book. He saith, great is His glory: 'Marry, O people, that from you may appear he who will remember Me amongst My servants; this is one of My commandments unto you; obey it as an assistance to yourselves.'

"And we greet and salute those of the Bayán who became the people of Bahá, those who expended their efforts for the upraising of this luminous Faith, and whom the blame of the blamer did not withhold from God. Praise be to God, the Lord of the worlds!

"He is God! O peerless Lord! In Thine almighty wisdom Thou hast enjoined marriage upon the peoples, that the generations of men may succeed one another in this contingent world, and that ever, so long as the world shall last, they may busy themselves at the Threshold of Thy oneness with service and worship, with salutation, adoration and praise. 'I have not created spirits and men, but that they should worship Me.' Wherefore, wed Thou in the heaven of Thy mercy these two birds of the nest of Thy love, and make them the means of attracting perpetual grace; that from the union of these two seas of love a wave of tenderness may surge and cast the pearls of pure and goodly issue on the shore of life. 'He hath let loose the two seas, that they may meet each other: Between them is a barrier which they overpass not. Which then of the bounties of your Lord will ye deny? From each He bringeth up greater and lesser pearls.'

O Thou kind Lord! Make Thou this marriage to bring forth coral and pearls. Thou art verily the All-Powerful, the Most Great, the Ever-Forgiving!" (signed) 'Ayn-'Ayn (signed) 'Ayn-

National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved friends:

In this issue we publish the cablegram which the Guardian sent after learning the results of the effort made by the believers to offer special contributions during the period set aside for meditation and prayer, culminating in the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the Guardianship, January 6.

The total so received by the National Treasurer was $65,000. Placing this amount in the Temple Trustee construction fund produced a total of $103,000 available for completion of the interior as of January 6, nearly four months before the end of the first year of the new Seven Year Plan.

We may all feel an intense gratitude that so large a portion of the full cost of this vital project has already been received. It assures rapid prosecution of the task when the design and specifications are approved.

Under the schedule set up by the Temple Trustees, the studies and investigations initiated last spring are to be completed by the middle of March so that drawings and all necessary data may be transmitted to the Guardian in the hope that he may advise us of his approval and choice before the Convention.

The intention and hope is that a final drawing, approved by the Guardian, can be exhibited at the Convention, allowing all the friends to realize the beauty of the finished interior. Mr. Louis Bourgeois' original conception is being somewhat simplified as the Guardian directed.

The Trustees believe that actual work can begin this spring. A completed House of Worship will awaken wide interest in the Faith.

Last month's Bahá'í News presented to each Bahá'í the text of Ruḥíyyih Khánum's "Twenty-Five Years of the Guardianship." Nothing could be more inspiring and informative to the friends than her statement which in brief space summarized the meanings and events of the Bahá'í era since the Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. For the older believers it creates a pattern and framework for their personal experiences, activities and memories; for the new believers it offers a means of acquiring sound understanding and maturity as members of the Bahá'í community.

New Questionnaire Cards

The Bahá’í Questionnaire Committee's files carry many letters which we would like to share with all Bahá’ís, but as space will not permit, we will quote from just one received by the chairman: "I received your questionnaire literature and I am sure you are making a very practical application of a very successful plan that has been used by Advertising Research and Industrial Manufacturing establishments in getting a cross section of information worth having that could not be had in any other way. I believe you are the first man who has applied this very practical plan to a Universal Religious Message. I can vision a great good to humanity by the information that will result to it..."

During the first seven months of the use of the questionnaire cards, requests have come from all but five states of the United States—namely: Colorado, Louisiana, Nevada, South Dakota and Wyoming. We urge the friends and regional teaching committees in these states to start distributing them as they are proving invaluable for teaching contacts. Signed cards have been received from a total of 366 different cities, towns and villages as well as from Alaska, Philippine Islands, Hawaii, Canada, Haiti, and South America. We wish we could list every city heard from.

Three cards, numbers 2, 3 and 5 are now available for inter-changeable use. They can be ordered in a combination package containing 100 each for $3.00 postpaid. Also available now is a new folding questionnaire card (F4) of unlimited possibilities for spreading the Bahá’í Message. It features new, timely and challenging questions of interest to people in all walks of life, promising not only to carry the Bahá’í Message to thousands of selected individuals for the first time but to locate and determine the subject of greatest interest to these potential Bahá’ís.

Outstanding features of this F4 new folding questionnaire card are:

1. It will comb any chosen locality or community for Bahá’í seekers. It is an excellent advance agent to a selected mailing list, to be followed a few weeks later with an announcement of a Public Meeting in their city.

2. It carries these thought-provoking questions directly to the individual in his office or home, where he may read and check them at leisure.

3. It will impress the recipient of the broad scope of subjects embraced by the Bahá’í Revelation.

4. It bears an introductory personal message direct from the friend who signs it.

5. It lends itself to use by any or all believers who may volunteer to address and mail these cards during spare time.

This new questionnaire service provides a golden opportunity for each and everyone of the "rank and file" to do our part in helping to complete the new Seven Year Plan. These New Folding Questionnaires (F4) are now ready for shipment to Assemblies groups or individual believers anywhere. They are priced at $9.00 per thousand or $1.00 per hundred. Radio Script Writing at Green Acre

A course in the writing of radio scripts was given last summer at the Green Acre Bahá’í School under the instruction of Marguerite Sears. The class was in session for three weeks, from August 13 to August 30. Eighteen students began the course and seven completed it. They were: Helen Campbell, Margaret Mills, Jetty Straub, Rita van Sombeek, Rene Welsh, Martha Kavelin, and Genevieve Coy.

The following is quoted from Mrs. Sears’ report on the course. “In addition to covering the fundamentals of radio writing, the class took an active part in the study of radio production. Each member of the class wrote a 5-minute continuity script on the Bahá’í Faith. One 15-minute script was written. The class received practical experience in the writing of a script for actual broadcast. The script was on the history of Green Acre, from the days of the early Indians, through Sarah Farmer’s early experiments in World Unity Conferences, on down through the present Bahá’í School, with glimpses of its hopes for the future.

“The entire class took part in necessary research to uncover accurate historical information. Then various members of the class were assigned to write sections of the script. One student did an over-all
Letters from the Guardian

The Archives Committee earnestly suggests for the benefit of future generations that all believers having letters from the Guardian give very serious consideration to placing them in the National Bahá’í Archives as soon as possible. Though it may seem to some of the friends that the messages contained therein are personal to a large extent, it may well be evident in the future that the application of many of these messages is more general than we now realize. Certainly the national archives with its specially constructed vault is the safest place to preserve these precious documents, so many of which have been lost by fire, flood or after the death of the recipients. A photostat may be obtained from the committee for about 15 or 18 cents a letter.

Bahá’í Lecture in Maui

On November 27 the Maui Bahá’í Community sponsored a lecture on “Foundations for World Unity” at which Mrs. Mabel Van Valkenburg spoke at the Baldwin High School Auditorium. Nine hundred invitations were sent out to Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís on all the Islands. Eighty-three were present at the lecture. This was considered a good showing, as it is rather difficult for business men and women to leave their jobs and travel from one Island to the other. Excellent newspaper articles preceded and followed the lecture. This was the first of a series of lectures under the directorship of Mrs. E. Sabin, chairman of the Honolulu Bahá’í Assembly, introduced Mrs. Valkenburg. The Honolulu Advertiser quoted the speaker as saying, along with other fine quotations, “Who can say there is anything more important than world unity, anything more important than turning darkness into light, blood-thirstiness into kindness, torment into bliss, hardship into ease, and enmity and hatred into fellowship and love?”

News from “The Speck”

Because Tasmania is the smallest of the Australian states, mainlanders often speak of it as “The Speck.” It has a very live group of Bahá’ís in Hobart, the capital city, and some in other parts of the island. They “plan as much as possible,” writes Miss Gretta Lampril, secretary of the Hobart group, “for state wide publicity.” Excerpts from “Appreciations” have been inserted in four daily papers. “We are, as are all

International Relief Lists

Recent reports from Germany and Austria indicate that the health of the Baha'is in these countries is being seriously endangered by under-nourishment. American believers residing abroad confirm this and stress the necessity of greater aid by American believers. Among others, Manutchir Zabih, a Persian student in Germany, and John Eichenauer write of the hunger and cold facing the friends over there and appeal to us to aid more generously as our "sacred duty."

The quickest and most economical way to send a food package abroad is thru C.A.R.E., 50 Broad str., New York 4. They guarantee delivery, and every package is receipted which is returned to the sender.

Friends who themselves mail packages are asked to note this quotation from a letter from Germany:
"The long-lasting lack of sugar and fats in our food . . . produces everywhere very alarming and catastrophic effects."

Display in the window of the Wright-Wombly-Pitts Co. of High Point, North Carolina, which resulted in a request by the local newspaper for an interview with Mr. H. E. Broadhurst, a Baha'i of that city, and the publication of an article on the Faith and a picture of the Temple.
Books Placed in Ninety Libraries
Since its last report to the friends in Baha'i News, the Library Committee has placed books in ninety libraries. It is anxious to have these books actively circulated and asks the friends to check this library list closely and refer interested inquirers in these various cities to these libraries for further information.

One of our greatest drawbacks in trying to make library donations is that Baha'i literature and World Order magazine cannot secure favorable listing in certain standard reference works until public libraries include them in their reports of publications in frequent demand. Librarians often refuse our literature because it is not listed in these reference works consulted by them before acceptance of new books. It is most necessary that our books are used frequently and we should appreciate all efforts in bringing our literature to the attention of the public to create a demand and interest in it.

Books were placed in the Palmer and Valdez public libraries in Alaska and in ten Alaskan service libraries. Niels Poulson, Li. Col., Commanding Officer APO 986, wrote the following appreciative letter to the committee:“Your thoughtful contribution of a gift of a set of Baha'i books to this remote outpost is gratefully acknowledged. I am sure that these volumes will prove to be a source of enlightenment, solace and enjoyment to the men located here.”

A first donation (“Baha’ul-lah and the New Era”) has been made to each of the following libraries:

The following libraries accepted copies of “Baha'i Centenary, 1844-1944,” and “God Passes By”:
- Norfolk, Va.; Canton, O.; Montgomery, Ala.; Tampa, Fla.

Other public libraries given books were:
- Eliot, Me.; Western Springs, Ill.; Delmar, N.Y.; Petersburg, Va.; Hudson, N.Y.; Ashland, Ky.; Decatur, Ill.; Red Bank, N.J.; East Providence, R.I.; Portland, Me.; Knoxville, Tenn.

Middlesex University, Mass.; Howard University, Washington, D.C.; Rhode Island State College; Colby College, Maine, accepted books.

A Kit of Contacts, Publicity and Advertising Material
The Public Relations Committee has distributed a “Baha'i Public Relations Kit” to National Committees, Regional Teaching Committees and local Assemblies as an aid to their campaigns.

The kit marks the beginning of what will later become a handbook on public relations activities of Assemblies and committees, dealing with different aspects of contacts by distribution of literature, of local and national publicity, and of local and national advertising. It consists in this preliminary form of a statement of explanation, and a description of the material now available in the way of press releases and advertisements. Samples of nine different mailing pieces used by the Public Relations Committee and available are also included.

The Committee can provide only one kit per committee or Assembly, and hopes that the material will be kept for continuous reference. The kit has also been sent to the larger groups where Assemblies are to be established within two years.

New Publications
The Baha'i Publishing Committee is pleased to report two new titles.

The Renewal of Civilization, by David Hofman, a very interesting and helpful introductory work which the friends can enjoy for themselves and also use in spreading the Faith. An edition has been imported from England. Per copy, $1.50.

The Transformation of Human Society, A Baha'i Commentary on Current World Trends, From Writings of Shoghi Effendi. This is a 16-page pamphlet, letter head size, printed from typewritten copy by the planograph method. It was compiled by the Public Relations Committee to file with the Baha'i reference material in editorial offices, and to assist in making helpful contacts. Copies are made available through the Publishing Committee to use for study classes as well as local contacts work. Per copy, 25c.

Báhá'í's, possessed of a divine restlessness to be continually on the wing, for we realize our glorious opportunities and our equally glorious responsibilities in propagating the Cause."

Miss Lampill conducted a teaching campaign last summer in Brisbane, Queensland. She made many personal contacts with those she met in trams, at cafes, at clubs and in homes, had interviews with prominent citizens, and from all these contacts made up a mailing list for the public meetings she conducted. As a result of these contacts and meetings a study group of nine was formed. This campaign, she writes, "was a glorious adventure. Above all I feel humble and reverent before Him, the Founder of the Faith, whose guidance and grace enabled me to overcome all difficulties and experience each day manifestations of His supreme power."

Panama Conference

"The Panama Conference was a tremendous success. The pervading spirit of fellowship and consecration and the marvellous triumphs which we achieved, inebriated with joy the delegates and the Bahá’í of Panama and have left us in raptures," writes Julie Regal from Panama City concerning the first congress of the Northern Latin Americas held January 19th to 25th. The purpose of the Conference, like that of Buenos Aires for South America in November, was to build a new consciousness of unity among the friends of Central America, Mexico and the West Indies, to serve as a foundation for the National Spiritual Assembly to be elected in the northern area in April, 1951. The splendid report sent by Sra. Natalia Chávez of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, on the work and consultation of the delegates, including their recommendations for forwarding the Teachings, together with the fine over-all report of Mrs. Gayle Woolson, show that this objective was truly attained.

One of the high points of the congress was the inter-racial platform at the big public meeting in the Inter-American University. The first speaker was Dr. Tu Yuen-Tan, Minister of China to Panama; and those who followed included Sr. Jorge Corgas, an Indian from the San Blas Islands; Sr. Sidney A. Young, editor of the Panama Tribune and representative of the Negro race; Mr. Harold Sosted, Superintendent of Instruction of the Canal Zone schools; Sr. Isaza Calderón, professor at the University, and Mrs. Gayle Woolson, traveling pioneer. This combination of races was a proof of the power of the Faith, for in Panama there is as much racial prejudice as we find in our own southern states. Sr. Carlos Porras of Panama, formerly of Costa Rica, added to the pleasure of all with his beautiful songs. Next to the speakers' stand was an exquisite bust of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, made in honour of the occasion by Sr. Antonio del Villar of Caracas, Venezuela. Sr. del Villar, who knew the Master when he visited this country in 1912, has contributed the piece of sculpture to the Temple.

Many Volunteer for European Teaching

The most recent appeal of the Guardian to the American Bahá’í Community for an increase in the number of pioneers for Europe, has brought forth a magnificent response on the part of the believers. This response has been such that the E.T.C. will be able in the next few months to send abroad many new pioneers and settlers to reinforce those already in the field. This means that the number of teachers in each of the goal countries will be increased, and thus a strong nucleus will be set up everywhere to work toward the establishment of the "Spiritual Prizes" set forth in this second Seven Year Plan.

At the moment, arrangements for the departure abroad of this increased number of pioneers and settlers are being consummated, and the Committee will give names, places and definite dates in our next report. We wish to state that plans are also being made to send several wonderfully equipped itinerant teachers to the European field during this spring, summer and fall.

A great momentum has been set in motion; the response has been truly wonderful. Let us keep constantly in our minds and hearts the vital needs of this European Teaching Campaign as cherished by the Guardian, and do our utmost to ac-

Bahá’í Statement Submitted to United Nations

A statement entitled "A Bahá’í Declaration of Human Obligations and Rights" has been submitted by the National Spiritual Assembly to the Human Rights Commission of the Economic and Social Council of United Nations. This Commission, headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, is engaged in the preparation of a world bill of rights which the United Nations will sponsor and endeavor to have adopted by the governments of the participating nations.

A copy of the statement, and a press release concerning it prepared by the Public Relations Committee, has been sent to the local Assemblies, Regional Teaching Committees, and the national committees which conduct campaigns.

The release was also sent direct to newspapers and magazines.

Correspondence Teaching in Latin America

As a part of the Guardian’s plan to carry the Faith to the masses, correspondence teaching is being gradually expanded until it will include all nineteen countries of Latin America. It was first applied to Bahá’í teaching in Colombia by Ger­rard Slater a little more than two years ago. His efforts resulted within a year’s time in the formation of a second Assembly in Mogotes, a group in Contratación, two Bahá’ís in Cartagena, one in Medellín and interested responses from half a dozen or more other cities. He was then obliged to return to Canada before the work could be carried further. At the present time 1800 of each lesson of the series for new contracts are being distributed from Cuba to Chile, and more requests are coming in daily. Two hundred and forty-four Masonic lodges have been circularized in Cuba, Venezuela and Ecuador at their own request. Letters are now beginning to come in from some of these lodges asking that copies of the lessons be sent to every member for their study. Col. Arturo and Sra. Yvonne de Cúdar of La Paz, Bolivia, are writing a part of this series.

Col. Cúdar is also assisting with translating by preparing “God Passes By” for publication in Spanish. He has also translated “Foundations of World Unity” and about half of “Gleanings,” which will be published later. Sra. Josefiná Piá de Campos is now translating “The Divine Art of Living” for immediate publication. She also did the new translation of “Some Answered Questions” which is going to press in Buenos Aires. Sra. de Cúdar is making a six weeks’ teaching trip to Sucre, goal city of Bolivia, and Col. Cúdar is assisting her there for two weeks, while convalescing from a serious illness.

Sra. M. C. Claudet, member of the Assembly of Guayaquil, Ecuador, is planning to take the Faith to French East Africa, where she will settle in Marrueco Frances. Sra. Chávez will assist Evelyn Larson for a few days in Nicaragua en route homeward from a second visit to Panama for a needed operation. She will then undertake to teach a new goal city in Honduras.

Colombian Village Eager for the Faith

Artemus Lamb describes his fascinating experience as the first Bahá’í ever to visit the remote, mountain town of Mogotes, Colombia, whose delegate to the Buenos Aires Conference was the first member of their Community ever to see a Bahá’í other than the members of their own group. Artemus describes the feudal conditions under which they live and some of their sufferings as well as their spiritual hunger. He writes, “It is in reality a little feudal village living the life of the Middle Ages. We are giving public lectures in my room in the hotel. As there are only three chairs, all stand, but everyone seems to be happy and to want more. At their urgent, almost tearful request I have agreed to stay until Tuesday.

“This has been a most remarkable experience. I feel as if I have seen a vision of a new world. We have met many new people, some of them the ‘big shots’ of Mogotes. Sunday night a conference was given in the theater as a result with a great many attending. The talk was on the New Era and such an attentive audience I have never before witnessed. The next morning we had another meeting to take photographs and ten new people, most of them young men, insisted upon signing cards of entrance to the Cause. I frankly did not know what to do. The members of the Assembly obtained these signatures and they are going to meet this week and pass on them. Obviously, these people still need to learn many of the things that we require, but it is also obvious that they have been completely prepared to be Bahá’ís. They know without any persuasion that the Cause of Bahá’ulláh is the only possible answer, when it is merely presented to them. They say that with another pioneer there for a while they could have a community of two hundred, and while it seems fantastic, after what I have experienced, I believe it.”

Public Meeting at Baltimore

The Baltimore Public Meeting was held in the Rainbow Room of the Pythian Hall, on January 21st at 8 p.m. In spite of it being one of the coldest nights of the winter, the Baltimore friends report an attendance of 325.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers. Attractive displays were arranged with Temple pictures and literature. The speaker's fine compliment—"You are to be congratulated on the perfect coordination, the smooth production, and the perfect taste and surroundings in which it was held" express the result of the efforts of the Baltimore friends in a few words.

A four week radio program was used, on Sundays at 4:15 p.m., prior to the meeting. The transcriptions used were, "A New Interpretation of History," "Meet Mr. Justice," "Mr. Justice Returns," and "This is My Faith," over station WFBR. Spot announcements were also used.

Music was furnished by the Baltimore Fellowship Choir, an interracial group of soloists, singing the "Song of Peace" by Sibelius with solo numbers by two of its members. Further demonstrating "beauty in diversity" the ushers were composed of an interracial group.

Mr. and Mrs. Ugo Giachery, pioneers to Italy, sailing on the "Santoria" February 19, 1947, with a group of friends wishing them God-speed.

The public meeting on Monday evening was held at the Ladies Literary Club. A model of the Temple and literature display in the lobby, greeted the people coming to the meeting. Prominent people in the educational fields and all walks of life were present. The Governor, unable to attend, but mindful of his promise to do so, sent a delegate from his staff who said Mrs. Bishop...
New Braille Publications

In conformity with the theme of the whole public campaign of this year and with deep gratitude for the opportunities it conferred upon us, we are happy to advise the friends that the widely advertised booklets, World Order Through World Faith, and The World Faith of Bahá'ú'lláh. A Summary of Its Aims, Teachings, History and Administrative Order, are now available in braille grade 2, at the cost of $1.25 for the set.

We particularly call the attention of those undertaking publicity and teaching work to the increasing value of braille books for window displays, book exhibits, and informal Bahá'í gatherings; as well as to the fact that, as World Order Through World Faith has received and is receiving such nation-wide publicity, its presentation in braille is bound to be a matter of great public interest to both the sighted and the blind.

We have attempted to present this booklet in such a form as to make a most attractive and arresting display when shown with the ink-print copy.

Please send orders to Mrs. Amédée Gibson, 616 N. Oxford Avenue, Los Angeles 4, California.

A Bahá'í Talking Book is now being recorded in the studios of the American Foundation for the Blind, and should be available before the Convention.

This Talking Book presenting on the six sides of three records "World Order Through World Faith" and the "Summary," edition 1944, is to be offered to the twenty-seven libraries for the blind listed by The Library of Congress. Extra sets will be available for purchase by the friends.

Prayer Book in Braille. One hundred copies of Communion with God, in braille grade one and a half will be ready early in March. Due to the increasing demand for a prayer book in braille, we regret that it was not possible to have more copies of this prayer book printed in braille at this time.

Young Bahá'ís at Green Acre

The following account of the Youth Session at Green Acre comes to us from Harrison Langrell, one of the young Bahá'ís who was there:

"Hurry, Hurry, all Bahá'í Youth... meeting in the recreation hall right away!" That's how our vacation at Green Acre started last year. When Hormoz and Rusty had rounded us all up we were told that the Youth Week this year was to be run entirely by the Youth, and that in order to do this we must elect a Local Spiritual Assembly which would act as our governing body. Those of us who had come up for a vacation were in for a rude awakening, for from that time on we operated as a separate community from the older believers, and with the effort necessary for the operation of a community, together with the heavy class program cut out for us, our time for vacationing was cut to a minimum. However, this does not mean that we didn't have our fun. We did, and plenty of it. After the nightly meeting we had the rest of the night for dancing or whatever we wanted to do. The Youth Local Spiritual Assembly appointed a recreation committee to handle the recreation each night, and some of the programs planned were really wonderful. The two stunt nights, to which the entire school was invited, were howling successes, as well as the dances, trips to the beach and the flower picking expeditions in which some of the youth participated.

However, as was mentioned before, it was not all play by far. The day started at seven when one of the Youth had charge of devotions. Following this, breakfast. (It might be noted here that the Youth were always in the front of the chow line.

Star of the West

Believers who have copies of Star of the West please note that in volume three an error appears on page 2 in the caption under the photograph of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. This caption should read: "'Abdu'l-Bahá in Loring Park, Minneapolis, September 20, 1912."
at breakfast since they had devotions in the room where the line formed.) Then classes started. We had three classes each day, some of which were: Administration, Proofs of the Bahá'í Faith, Character and Personality, Interesting Angles of Bahá'í History, Questions and Answers, and then the nightly classes given by the Youth on the various religions of the world. The instructors gave their courses in such a manner that each individual got the most out of it, and since the courses were designed to appeal especially to the Youth, everyone thoroughly enjoyed each class.

"For the first week we had Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Simms as advisors, whose understanding and cooperation in all matters were sincerely appreciated by all. Mr. and Mrs. Clarance Lear acted as advisors the second week and I feel sure all the youth were appreciative of their kind consideration.

"Rustam Payman, nicknamed "the Boss" by the Youth, was a sort of youth representative to the school committee and his undying patience as well as his wonderful personality netted invaluable rewards in the smooth operation. His work was continued nobly by Jessica Perry the second week and none of the Youth minded the change of administration one little bit.

"The entire program was intense, active, and full of fun, and while those of us who came up for a vacation were surprised at first we will all agree that there could be no finer vacation than working for the Kingdom of God on earth. Each youth took back with him a clearer idea of the individual's part in the gigantic task before the world community today, as well as a little practical experience in the operation of the administrative order of Bahá'u'lláh. I feel safe in saying that the words of Jessica Perry express the feelings of each youth who attended what was without a doubt the best youth session at Green Acre, when she says, 'The unity and joy surpasses any experience most of us had known. Green Acre is more than a Summer School, it is an experience which affected each of our lives with a positive charge.'"

Classes for the younger children at Green Acre are now a well-established part of the program. School for children from three to fourteen opens every day, except Sunday, at the Arts and Crafts Studio, at 9:30 a.m., and continues until lunch time.

Last summer attendance was very good, particularly in the three-to-six and in the seven-to-eleven age-groups. The children had a short devotional period each morning, followed by a lesson from the Bahá'í teachings. Then came some handwork, and finally recreation, with the teacher still in charge. Recreation included walks in the woods, baseball, swimming, digging clay for modeling, singing, and other delightful activities.

There were two programs given by the children at the Arts and Crafts Studio—one at the end of July, the other at the end of August. A little play was given, prayers and "Hidden Words" were recited, and clay modeling, woodwork, painting, and drawing were exhibited.

A new feature added to the Green Acre School program this summer will be a 'Junior Youth Week,' for children from twelve to fifteen. The dates will be given on the program.
“Plead Ponder Afresh”

Cablegram from the Guardian

Acclaim with grateful heart evidences of steadily accelerating movement of pioneers, multiplication of conferences, consolidation of activities of national committees, progress in preliminaries of internal ornamentation of Temple, and formulation teaching policy southern states. Overwhelmed by tributes paid my own humble efforts by stalwart company whose championship of Faith of Bahá’u’lláh during last quarter century provided greatest support and solace enabling me to sustain the weight of cares and responsibilities of Guardianship. Impelled plead afresh to ponder responsibilities incurred in transatlantic field of service. Time is flying. First year of second Seven Year Plan is drawing to a close. Shadow of war’s tragic aftermath is deepening. Initial stage of colossal task undertaken in European continent still in balance. Urge stress for entire community extreme urgency to reinforce promptly, at whatever cost, however inadequate the instruments, the number of volunteers, both settlers and itinerant teachers, whom posterity will rightly recognize as vanguard of torch-bearers of Bahá’u’lláh’s resistless, world-redeeming order to despairing millions of diversified races, conflicting nationalities in darkest, most severely tested, spiritually-depleted continent of globe. Prayerfully awaiting response by all ranks of community to supreme call to fuller participation in glorious enterprise.

National Spiritual Assembly

The National Budget

At the beginning of this Bahá’í year, when plans were being made to set in motion the Guardian’s four objectives of the second Seven Year Plan, a budget of $250,000 was adopted. The definite allocation of funds to each project was decided, and the itemized budget published in the pamphlet which carried the details of the work to be accomplished this year.

The budget amounted to double the average budgets in recent years, calling for an increase in the average donation made by every Bahá’í.

Now the scope of the work laid down by the Guardian’s cable to the 1946 Convention, particularly in relation to the settlement of pioneers in the European countries, has been enlarged. To meet this intensified national effort, the annual budget will not only have to be met in full but a surplus of some $10,000 may be required. The enlarged schedule represents our duty to humanity, as only the Guardian can define it and put it into deeds. The National Assembly, therefore, appeals for a great response from now until the Convention begins. The special contributions to the Temple Fund made in honor of the Guardianship were a magnificent token of loving devotion.

The matter of housing still continues to be the most difficult problem. The Housing Committee will do its utmost to meet requests for accommodations in homes or hotels. Write the committee as soon as possible, state your needs clearly, and try and give the committee an alternative arrangement if the accommodations you wish cannot be supplied. Believers who receive accommodations are expected and urged to notify the committee if plans are changed and the accommodations are cancelled.

In Memoriam

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It besometh joy and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life. — Bahá’u’lláh

Glimpses of Bahá’í Life

From a Persian Pioneer

(Some months ago the following story was received from one of the young Persians pioneering in an Eastern country. “I have often thought,” she writes in an enclosed letter, “that our dear brothers and sisters in the West would be interested to know how the Message of Bahá’u’lláh is being taken to virgin territories in the East and to get some idea of pioneering work in these parts.” She asks that her name be withheld, as well as the name of the city mentioned, in order not to endanger the friends there.)

The sun had just set, and I was preparing the tea, which is so welcome after a day’s fasting, when I heard a knock on the front door. My husband does not usually knock, and I wondered who it could be. I asked who it was before opening the door (as is the custom here), and a stranger’s voice answered in an undertone, just loud enough for me to hear, that he had come from our friends in...

We had stopped all correspondence with these pioneers ever since we ourselves had been known as Bahá’ís here, for we knew what it would mean if they were discovered to be friends of ours; and, after a rumor had reached us that we were sus-
"Wholly for Thy Sake"

Praise be to Thee, O Lord my God! I beseech Thee by this Revelation whereby darkness hath been turned into light, through which the Frequented Fane hath been built, and the Written Tablet revealed, and the Outspread Roll uncovered, to send down upon me and upon them who are in my company that which will enable us to soar into the heav- ens of Thy transcendent glory, and will wash us from the stain of such doubts as have hindered the sus- picious from entering into the taber- nacle of Thy unity.

I am the one, O my Lord, who hath held fast the cord of Thy loving-kindness, and clung to the hem of Thy mercy and favors. Do Thou or-

I prayed over and over again, "Please, God don't let him ask any more questions." He seemed greatly surprised. "But surely," he said, "you must know them too. A . . . and M . . . and K . . .?" All that I knew of the merits of truthfulness rushed to my mind, yet I had not the courage to speak out the truth, for I knew that if this was not a friend, one word from me might cost the Bahá'í in . . . their lives.

He next told me that the friends in . . . had heard of the difficulties we had been confronted with and were very anxious about us, especially as they had not received any news from us for such a long time. I was only too eager to avoid any more questions and started to relate in full all that had happened here when people came to know of our Faith.

I was half through when I heard my husband open the front door. I went out to meet him and told him... in a few hurried words that some one had come from... who claimed to be a Bahá'í but I had not confessed that I knew anyone there. Our guest rose up as soon as my husband entered the room and embraced him so tenderly that I felt ashamed of having doubted his sincerity; yet my husband too, was in no hurry to disclose his friendship with anyone in... until he had asked our guest to introduce himself. (In the East people do not introduce themselves until asked to do so, and it is not polite to ask anyone to introduce himself immediately after greetings.) I did not have the slightest hope that knowing the name of this stranger would help us in any way to tell whether he was indeed a friend, and our joy can be imagined when my husband knew him as the son of an old Bahá'í who had settled in... in the days of the Ancient Beauty!

There was one amongst us, however, who had known the stranger as a friend from the very beginning. My two-year-old daughter had silently crept onto his lap almost immediately after his arrival and there she sat all this while, as happy as could be, playing with the golden threads that hung from his shoulder. Her little heart had known no doubt, and now, when we too at last had found in him a dear friend, I noticed through my tears of joy, that she was kissing the palm of his hand.

I was not slow in asking him to forgive me for all the precautions I had taken against him, but he assured me that, coming from... he realized only too well how necessary it was for us to be careful in speaking to strangers, if we wished the safety of our friends.

We had many questions to ask and he had a great deal to tell. The happiest news he brought was that the Guardian had sent a letter to the pioneers in... telling them that the time had come for them to start teaching our beloved Cause there, but of course with great wisdom. The hours thus passed with the first Bahá'í we had met for a long time, except our own little group, were the happiest we had known in years. We begged our friend to come again, but he said that the fact that we were known as Bahá'ís here, made it difficult for him to do so. Yet if he was lucky enough to get away from those who had accompanied him from...

he would come to see us once more when the call for the early morning prayers was raised.

It is past midnight already, and in a few more hours our friend may be coming.

Bahá'í Census

The following figures describe the make-up of the Bahá'í Community of the United States and Canada as of February 20, 1947.

1. Adult voting Bahá'ís of the United States 5,174
2. Adult voting Bahá'ís of Alaska, Hawaii, Canal Zone and Puerto Rico 97
3. American pioneers in Latin America 21
4. American pioneers in Europe 12
5. Adult voting Bahá'ís of Canada 270
6. Bahá'í youth 147

Total Bahá'í Community 5,720

Of the voting believers of the United States, 3,239 are members of communities; 843 are in groups; 871 are isolated; 221 are in transit (present address unknown).

Of the voting believers in Canada, 182 are in Communities; 42 are in groups; 46 are isolated.

Of Bahá'í youth, 79 are in Communities; 35 in groups; 33 isolated.

The largest number of believers in one state, California, is 885; the smallest number, 12, is in West Virginia.

There is less than one enrolled youth per local community in North America. While we are striving to increase the number of Assemblies, we should strive not less efficiently to create a much larger body of enrolled youth.

Deepening in the Cause

To deepen in the Cause means to read the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh and the Master so thoroughly as to be able to give it to others in its pure form. There are many who have some superficial idea of what the Cause stands for. They, therefore, present it together with all sorts of ideas that are their own. As the Cause is still in its early days we must be most careful lest we fall into this error and injure the Movement we so much adore. There is no limit to the study of the Cause. The more we read the Writings, the more truths we can find in Them, the more we will see that our previous notions were erroneous.

Correction

In our December issue we stated that the Guardian had sent 10,000 pounds to be devoted to relief, teaching work, expansion of literature and renting or purchasing of an adequate house for a National Hašírat'ul-Quds in Frankfurt, Germany. This statement was based on the cable sent by the Guardian to the German NSA just after its election. The exact statement about the money was, "Will transmit 10,000 pounds collected for national fund (for relief, teaching work etc.) as soon as possible. In all probability, the 10,000 pounds has not yet been transmitted on account of international political barriers.

Sacrifice and Growth in India

"Is it ought but the love of God that can cause a man to sell a flourishing business, wander for months without an income, draw on his limited resources to maintain a large family, be buffeted here and there, and finally transfer his home, at the NSA's request, from a locality famed as a health resort to one which for almost half the year has an unbearable climate?..."
A Word for Local News Reporters

The Bahá’í News Committee has been gratified to receive so many fine reports from local news reporters. A considerable amount of this material has been edited, but, much to our regret, even some of that has had to be omitted in the end because of lack of space. We ask that news reporters send in only the most important news, such as the most outstanding events, new or unusual teaching techniques and reactions of the public. Please bear in mind that we want news and not reports.

Houston World Fellowship Meetings

The Houston Bahá’ís report a successful series of World Fellowship meetings. “Our policy has been to interest as many people of different backgrounds as possible—and by asking a speaker from a minority group, it has been possible for us to increase our contacts—because invariably the speaker will bring a friend or two. The Bahá’í chairman speaks briefly on a point nearest the subject of the speaker.

“It may appear that this is not the time for indirect teachings. Yet, in Houston—with our particular community, it is helping us to get the name “Bahá’í” before the public. During January we received nine notices of our meetings in three different newspapers, and spot notices on the radio. There were twenty-four people who were inquirers that came to the meetings.

Some Bahá’í Marriages

Dr. Mary E. Coffin of Pittsburg and Mr. C. W. Ketcham of Miami were united in Bahá’í marriage at the Bahá’í Center, Miami, Florida, on December 19, 1946. The wedding was Miami’s first performed without civil observation and the many non-Bahá’ís attending found the ceremony decidedly impressive.

Mr. Reginald King and Martha Jane Ladson were married November 29 in the second Bahá’í wedding to take place in Boston under the new Massachusetts ruling.

Miss Elva Wilson of the Pawtucket group and Mr. Donald Lister were married Nov. 23.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Irving Frederic were married on September 7 in Toronto. After the church ceremony, necessary as Toronto has not yet obtained legal status for such ceremonies, a Bahá’í wedding took place in the Bahá’í Center.

Mrs. Dorothy Stotts of Lima and Frederick D. Hoffman of Brattleboro, Vt. were united in marriage at the Lima Bahá’í Center on January 18. David Wolf, chairman of the local Bahá’í Spiritual Assembly, read the service. The Bahá’í marriage tablet was read by Mrs. Marjorie Brown, Assembly secretary.

Dorothy Stotts and Frederick Hoffman at the time of their marriage in the Lima Bahá’í Center. With them are David Wolf and Mrs. Marjorie Brown, chairman and secretary of the Lima Assembly.

The first Bahá’í marriage to be solemnized under the new marriage amendment of the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was that of Miss Mary Corea of Woburn and Mr. John Neilson of Boston, Massachusetts, September 1. Mr. Charles Krug, chairman of the Boston Assembly, presided at the ceremony.

Funerals of Bahá’ís Interest Inquirers

The Los Angeles Bahá’í Journal tells of the passing of Mrs. Inga Illescas on November 1, 1946. The Bahá’í ceremony was of such a nature that some of the persons who attended the funeral who before were only curious, and others who were decidedly against the Faith, have become interested inquirers. The words Mrs. Illescas said to her husband on the morning of the day she departed are such as to inspire us all: “Octavi—all for the Cause—don’t mourn—don’t tarry—carry on the work—I from there—you from here—till we meet again.”

From Butte we learn of the passing, on Mr. Matthew Caldwell, one of the first Bahá’ís in Montana, on November 30, 1946. Mr. Caldwell had previously written down the services that he desired to have. This included a prayer for guidance for all his friends gathered on the occasion. He desired the nine pointed star in white flowers and no others. His ceremony was so beautiful that several service men and other non-Bahá’ís who had not heard of the Faith before were sufficiently impressed to call the chairman and ask about the Bahá’í Message.

Chicago Inter-Race Symposium

The Chicago Bahá’í Assembly sponsored a symposium on The Future of Race Relations, January 23, at their Center, 116 S. Michigan Ave. The speakers were John Yancy, a national representative of the C.I.O., Madeleine Morgan Stratton, well known authority in the field of public education, Russell E. Babcock, Director of Public Information and Education for the Mayor’s Commission on Human Relations, Dr. Homer S. Jack, Executive Secretary of the Chicago Council Against Racial and Religious Discrimination, and Horace Holley, Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada, an eminent authority in the field of the religions of the world and the high ideals expounded by them.

Growing Interest Shown in Winnetka

The Winnetka (Ill.) Group reports great success from a Bahá’í display and booth during the annual three hour reception for newcomers to this village of 14,000 population. The annual event which is sponsored by civic, club and educational groups held on Sunday, November 24th, in the village community house drew an attendance of a few thousand besides the hundred or more persons manning the exhibits. It is estimated that, while most visitors saw the Bahá’í display in passing, at least 10% stopped to read the Bahá’í posters and to view the two large photographs of the Bahá’í House of Worship. So many walked into the booth to ask questions on the Faith that for periods groups were kept waiting.

Notes from Local Reports

The Indianapolis Bahá'í Spiritual Assembly has planned a series of public lectures for fall and spring, which will take place on the second Sunday of each month. The Sunday following each meeting a follow-up gathering is held in the home of one of the Bahá'ís to which the visitors of the previous public meeting are invited. Classes for beginners and “for deepening in the Bahá'í Cause” are also being conducted. A youth program has been inaugurated with a party at which views of the Bahá'í House of Worship were shown to a decidedly interested group of eight youngsters, ranging from eight to sixteen years of age.

In Charlotte, North Carolina, Dorothy Baker gave an ad lib broadcast on New World Order points in October. This was really quite a departure in local radio station policy and the idea was not at first enthusiastically received by the owner, but afterwards brought fine comment from him. His wife too liked it and made it a point to call the station immediately to tell Mrs. Baker so. It is another real indication of the relationship of trust that has been established between the Bahá'ís as a group and the station. Beginning November 28 the Assembly has been sponsoring a series of nine firesides on topics from The Divine Art of Living.

The Houston Post of November 1 printed a four-inch notice about plans of the Bahá'ís for a work-shop for writing, speaking and radio. The friends of Houston have placed listings of their activities with both the Better Business Bureau and the Chamber of Commerce. They were able to get a listing with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company for an additional $2.50, plus tax, per month, obtained by one of the members releasing her contract with the telephone company in favor of the LSA and requesting an additional listing for herself. This was the only way in which the Houston LSA could get a listing, and they were most grateful for the permission to do this.

The Columbus Community was host to the Rainbow group of the Theosophical Society on November 12. Members of this group presented the history, goal and summary of their belief, and the Bahá'í chairman spoke on the Manifestation of this Day. A class for the study of the Fundamentals for Bahá'í Membership was held with four new applicants. In November again 50 Temple reprints were mailed out to artists and civic leaders of the city.

In Muskegon, Michigan, classes are being held once a month. In Little Rock, Arkansas, a forum on “Can the United Nations Organization Build a World Federation?” was conducted with Mr. Will G. Akers, prominent local attorney, and Mrs. Alvin Blum, Bahá'í, participating. Mr. Akers dealt with the legal and historical angle while Mrs. Blum approached the subject from a moral and spiritual viewpoint. The Boise Community was able to secure time for a regular radio program with the opening of a new station, KGEM. The use of the series of transcripts obtained through the National Radio Committee has been of invaluable assistance in providing program material, and the program director at the station spoke of it as “high quality material.”

Charleston was delighted with a response from the article on the Faith which appeared in the December 18 issue of the Pathfinder. (This article, which includes pictures of the Temple and of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, was prepared by one of its editors from material supplied by the Public Relations Committee.) A couple appeared at a Sunday Public Meeting, having seen the article. The woman said, “I cannot imagine anyone reading that article and not taking every step to investigate the Faith immediately.” Mind Digest has accepted an article on “Wise Be Your Choice” by Marian C. Lippitt. Several allusions to the Faith are contained therein. The article was reviewed and approved by the local Assembly.

Honolulu reports the Second Annual Summer Session of Bahá'ís of Honolulu which was held in August with as many as thirty-two at one session. The friends in this city would be most happy to receive copies of talks given on the mainland, which they feel would be of invaluable help to them for perusal and discussion. Their isolation on the Islands prevents their close contact with other Bahá'ís.

On January 12 the Bahá'ís of Greater Milwaukee gave a Bahá'í Radio Broadcast, the fourth appearance within fifteen months on the Inter-Faith Hour in which participants included more than twenty of the largest Protestant faiths, Catholics, Jews, Bahá'ís and the Salvation Army.

In Greensboro a series of meetings has been planned to which outside speakers are being invited. Mr. Victor Serunian was the first such speaker at the Bahá'í Center on January 17. He was born of Christian Armenian parents (his father is a Presbyterian minister), who had lived in Persia many years. He spoke on the culture and religion of modern Persia. He said, “In all the years that there have been Christian missionaries in Iran, probably not more than fifty Mohammedans have become Christians. Today there are more than a million Bahá'ís in Persia (in not much longer time)—there must be something in Bahá'í—if that many Mohammedans have become Bahá'ís!”

The Cleveland Spiritual Assembly enjoyed the unique pleasure of voting into membership at one meeting six applicants. Stepping stones leading to this happy accomplishment were the regular Public Lectures, the completion of a systematic course of study in a fireside study class which met weekly for ten weeks, and the inspiring fellowship with the local Bahá'ís.

On January 26, Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop spoke to a capacity audience of 180 persons in the Round-up Room of Hotel Adams in Phoenix. Recorded instrumental music accompanied the seating of the guests and provided a dignified prelude to the program. Mrs. Bishop spoke on “The Meaning of Crisis.” Memo cards were placed on all seats announcing the question-answer meeting to be held the following evening. Thirty-five inquirers attended, along with twenty Bahá'ís. For a week Mrs. Bishop did much teaching work, which included speaking to forty students in a class in International Relations at Phoenix Junior College. A study class was begun after her intensive work.

In Moncton meetings combining Esperanto lessons and Bahá'í fireside discussions have been held. Children's Classes have taken place after school on Friday afternoons. The youngsters purchased two pairs of new shoes from their weekly collections to be sent with a box of used children's clothing to the Philippines. Mr. and Mrs. Irving Geary spoke jointly at a meeting on "The Need for a Fresh Revelation." It was felt that their working as a team would enable them to make further valuable contributions to the Faith.

In Chicago we now have a Bahá'í University Fellowship Committee. Weekly meetings are held in Room 206, Swift Hall at the University of Chicago. This group has been formed around a nucleus of three Bahá'ís now at the University in response to a growing demand for an opportunity to learn more about the Bahá'í Faith.

In Santa Barbara, Mr. J. V. Matteson, retired architect's draftsman, has built himself a house, almost entirely with only his own two hands. This house is dedicated to the teaching work and the Assembly meets there. A newspaper clipping shows the Greatest Name above a charming fireplace.

Lima wants the friends to know that for the last two years during the summer months Sunday morning prayer services were held on the bank of a scenic lake in a beautiful local park. Each person attending read a prayer. Light breakfasts followed the services. These have proved so successful that the friends wanted to pass the idea along.

Los Angeles scheduled a training class for chairmen at public meetings, which must have proved most helpful.

Several Bahá'í children in Montreal, Canada, obtained special leave of absence from school on November 12 in order to observe the birthday of Bahá'u'lláh. As part of their commemoration the children prepared and presented small gifts personally to the Children's Memorial Hospital.

British Bahá'ís Summoned to Pioneer

"More believers must arise and, putting their trust in Bahá'u'lláh, do their duty to the Faith they believe in and love so dearly. The consummation of their present task will signalize the inauguration of a great epoch in the history of the Faith in their land. In the future we may well look back upon these present days and see that in them lay our greatest chance to build for the future and to call the people to the Faith while they were still deeply impressed with the tragedy and futility of war, and before they became too engulfed in post-war problems, or too bitterly disillusioned by trend of world affairs to even seek a solution."

With such words the Guardian summons the British Bahá'ís to pioneering, telling them that "the only hope for a stable world is in the spread of the Cause." Spurred by this challenge the call goes out in the January Bahá'í Journal (British) for more and more pioneers. Already, between January and December 1946 the total number of Bahá'ís in their goal towns has doubled. The Guardian now urges them to focus their attention, after the attainment of their present goal, which is the doubling of the number of Spiritual Assemblies in the British Isles, on Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Young Chinese Enthusiastic Over the Faith

Bernice Wood, who has been working in China under UNRRA, has interested several Young Chinese in the Faith. Seven were meeting together in Shanghai in August, and she has sent literature to interested people in Hangchou, Nanking and Hankou. Bernice writes, "Captain Chu and Lieutenant Chou have lots of enthusiasm and that's what it takes."

Bernice expects to return from China in the spring when UNRRA is over and will travel via the Middle East. Mrs. Hansen, Secretary of the Arlington, Va., Assembly, has sent us this news and has asked the NSA to give Bernice addresses of Bahá'ís in India, Iran, Iraq and Egypt and has suggested she ask for permission to visit Haifa on her return trip.

Brief Notes from Other Lands

In Germany an exceptionally fruitful, deeply spiritual Bahá'í youth gathering took place in December at Neckargemünd. 53 believers were present, representing twelve cities.

A Teaching Conference dedicated to the 25th anniversary of the Guardianship was held in Manchester, January 5. This was followed by an intensive four evenings’ teaching Seminar in Leeds.

Miss Marion Jack, pioneer in Sofia, Bulgaria, would like French and German translations of selections from the Bahá'í writings or articles on religious or philosophical topics to give to those whom she is attracting to the Faith. (There is no Bahá'í literature in Bulgarian available.) This is a suggestion for those who may be tied at home and yet desire to assist in field work. Miss Jack’s address is 25 Boulevard Tzar, Osvooboditch 25, Sofia, Bulgaria.

Mrs. Prudence George has come from Canada to assist in the teaching work in England. Miss Isabel Locke from California is to help in establishing a nucleus in Scotland. Both Mrs. George and Miss Locke have the Guardian’s approval of their visit.

The Bahá'í community at Hamburg, Germany, was re-established last summer. It has sixteen declared believers and is, so far, the only community in the British Zone.

The NSA of Iran has started a vast teaching campaign embracing the neighboring countries of Afghanistan, Baluchistan, Iraq and India.

Australia and New Zealand have issued their first youth bulletin. Write for it to Mr. Stanley Bolton, Bolton Place, Yerrinbool, NSW, Australia.

Copies of “God Passes By” with “Appreciations of the Bahá’í Faith” were sent to the Bishops and Archbishops of the Anglican Church in Australia, twelve of whom sent acknowledgments.

The Frankfurt, Germany, community was started by Edith Horn in 1935. It now numbers 35 declared believers. Edith Horn had lived many years in the U.S.A. when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá told her to return to Germany to work for the Faith. She is now 67 and suffers from gout and “from the coarse food,” but is still active in Bahá’í work. She writes, “Believe me, we are all very appreciative of what the American and Persian believers are doing for us. We are glad to have Bruce Davison with us as he has helped us a great deal.”

“The Handwriting Is On the Wall”

That the Seven-Year Plan is seriously imperiled is to be seen in the following letter from the National Treasurer:
Dear Bahá’í friends:
I want to draw your attention to several matters which are of vital importance to every believer and which cannot go by unnoticed if we are to continue at our present pace in the development of the Second Seven Year Plan.
During the special effort which the friends made from November 28th to January 6th, commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Guardianship, contributions were received amounting to $65,000.00. This represented $40,000.00 from the general body of the believers and a special contribution of one friend in the amount of $25,000.
This brought the Special earmarked Temple Trustees Account up to $103,000.00 on January 6th.
I should like to draw your attention to the fact that this Special Temple Trustees Account is a frozen account, which is earmarked especially for the interior decoration of the Temple and that current bills may not be paid out of this account, other than those associated with the architectural work.
A superb effort was made by the friends during this period from November 28th to January 6th. In a cable received by the National Spiritual Assembly from the Guardian he said “he was deeply touched and thrilled by the generous response of the believers to the Temple Fund.”
The alarming thing is that in the Weekly Report received by the National Spiritual Assembly from the Treasurer February 22nd, contributions for the month of February to that date totaled only $9,029.46. This included nearly $1,000.00 which we received from Persia and 'Iraq for relief, and also a special contribution of $1,000.00 received from one believer. Disbursements up to the 22nd of February were $27,032.48. In other words, expenditures have been over.

Ten More Pioneers for Europe

On March 12, five pioneers sailed from New York on the steamer “Veendam” for Holland. John Carré from the Los Angeles community, will reinforce the pioneers in Holland. Anita Joas and Sally Sanor of the San Francisco community, will go to Luxembourg, to work with Honor Kempton who is already established there. John and Eunice Shurecliff, with their small daughter Frances, eight months old, recently of the Tacoma community, will take up residence in Brussels, Belgium, to work with Madeline Humbert, who is already in Brussels. The Committee is indeed proud of these young pioneers who are starting out with such devotion to dedicate themselves to this new and most difficult enterprise, that of establishing the Faith in Europe.

On March 14, Mrs. Jennie Anderson, recently of the St. Louis community, sailed on the “Gripsholm” to reinforce Alice Dudley in the pioneer work in Sweden.
On the night of March 11, the New York Bahá’í community, gave a reception for all of these departing pioneers and all of the reports of this party indicate that there was a wonderful spirit there which expressed the warmest kind of bon voyage.

On March 26, Miss Elsa Steinmetz and her sister, Mrs. Fritzi Shaver, of the Sioux Falls community, and Miss Charlotte Stirratt, of the Houston community, will sail on the SS “Westerdam” for Europe. Miss Steinmetz and Mrs. Shaver will go to Berne, Switzerland, to begin the pioneer work where they will later be joined by Mrs. Anna Kunz of Urbana, Illinois. Miss Stirratt will go to Holland. With the three native Dutch Bahá’ís, reinforced by John Carré and Charlotte Stirratt.

United Nations Acknowledges Bahá’í Declaration of Human Obligations and Rights

Under date of March 20, 1947, the United Nations has written the National Spiritual Assembly as follows:
“I am directed to acknowledge your letter of February 28th, addressed to the Secretary-General. “A copy of ‘A Bahá’í Declaration of Human Obligations and Rights’ has been passed to the Division of
Notice to Convention Delegates

Since every delegate must be a resident of the state, province or electoral district he or she represents, change of residence outside the state, province or electoral district at any time between the date of election of delegates, February 9, and the opening of Convention, May 1, means loss of delegate status. The Bahá'í next highest in the election returns becomes delegate in his or her place. Up to April 1, when ballots are mailed out, residence of delegates can be checked in the National Office. Thereafter any delegate undergoing change of residence should report by air-mail or telegram, to give opportunity to place a ballot in the hands of the believer who attains delegate status.

The purpose of this compilation is to prepare believers to deal accurately with the many and varied questions asked by Temple visitors. Its sections include: History of the Cause, the Temple, Essential Teachings, Guiding Technique, Additional References for Deepening in the Faith, with questions often asked Guides and their answers. Mimeographed, $0.75.

Bahá'í Principles—a Course for the child of intermediate age, approved by Child Education Committee. It contains: suggestion for teachers, and class discussion material on each of twelve principles. A special feature is set of twelve full page, loose leaf illustrations of the principles, suitable for coloring. Mimeographed, 8½ by 11 inches. 19 pages with cover, plus twelve pictures. Per copy, $0.40.

Advertising Campaign Brings Inquiries from Other Lands

The Public Relations Committee reports that requests for literature are beginning to come from readers of American magazines who reside in other countries. South America, England, Holland and Turkey are so far represented in the list of countries where individuals have noted the offer of Bahá'í literature.

Handwriting on the Wall

$27,000.00 and we have received in contributions only about $8,000.00. You might ask, where has all this money gone? Well, here is part of the detail:

European Teaching Committee

Public Meetings . . . .over $5,000.00
Radio Committee . . . . 1,000.00
Paper for Germany

over $1,600.00

The Inter-America Committee had an unusually heavy withdrawal during February, and there were a number of additional expenses for new committees recently formed.

The National Spiritual Assembly will be meeting March 14, 15, 16 and 17. At this meeting many plans for the months ahead will be drawn up. If the funds continue to come in at the rate that we received them during February, the “handwriting on the wall”—no more pioneers to Europe, no more public meetings, no more radio transcriptions and broadcasts.

In other words, the program built up by the Guardian during this current year will be brought to a standstill, and the foundation of a permanent peaceful world imperilled. Faithfully

Traveling Teachers in North America

During the past few months fine reports have reached the National Teaching Committee of the work that is being done by groups in an effort to build up the local membership to nine. The Regional Committees are bending every effort to assist, and many Extension Teaching Committees are also lending their aid. Inter-regional circuits have provided teaching help from outside the region and various National Committees have likewise provided assistance in these teaching activities.

The New England Regional Committee reports one of its most successful meetings this year was planned and executed by the Greenwich, Conn., group. The meeting was held at the local YMCA early in December with Mr. Borah Kavelin and Mrs. Harry Ford the speakers on the subject “World Unity Through a Common Faith.” Fine newspaper publicity, three free spot announcements besides three paid spot announcements and a 15-minute broadcast using record No. 3 of the Bahá’í World Faith series, announcements mailed to a list of 500 persons, 40 posters and 5 newspaper advertisements marked the preparation for the meeting.

Mrs. Clarence Welch, the group correspondent, writes that “a minister of Greenwich, a very independent, fine man and greatly respected, offered to help us let the people know about the meeting. He had met ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as a boy in Tiberias, loves Him, and has great respect for the Bahá’ís. The meeting was a great success we felt. There were fifty-five people there, forty non-Bahá’ís,—more than we had ever hoped for.”

Late in January the group arranged a second meeting at which Mr. Emeric Sala of Montreal spoke on “Economic Security Through a World Faith,” which was equally well attended. To follow up on the interest that has been aroused the group is having regular Friday meetings in a smaller room of the YMCA. In this activity the group has also had the help of New York and New Jersey believers with an anonymous contribution of $200 toward the expenses.

The Buffalo, N.Y. group has had the reinforcement of Miss Margaret Mills of Waterloo, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Wooster of James-town, N.Y. The RTC held a Fellowship Supper in Buffalo on January 25th, and forty-two attended. In Albany, N.Y. a similar supper was planned and twenty-eight attended with the result that a study class was formed.

In New Jersey-Delaware & Eastern Penna. RTC has provided teaching help to a circuit during the past three months covering: Dumont, Englewood, Montclair, East Orange and Newark, New Jersey. To strengthen the Scranton Assembly a conference was planned to include a public meeting, at which an audience of forty-two is reported, and regular Sunday afternoon meetings are being held.

A Seminar was given by Mrs. Ruth Moffett in Toledo, O. from Jan 20th to February 6th to assist the efforts of the group. Mrs. Hazel McCurdy of Lima, O., is following up this effort by going up for meetings every other week, and Mrs. Lynette Storm will also have meetings in her home. The Lima community supported the work in Findley, and Mrs. Moffett reports that four inquirers are ready to declare themselves.

Mrs. Moffett is now in Columbus, S.C., endeavoring to get a nucleus of interested people organized to study the teachings; and in San Antonio, Texas, the RTC reports that Lt. Anselm Schurgast and Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Bishop have assisted with the meetings of this active group. A new enrolment is reported in the Dallas, Texas, group following the visit of Mrs. Loulie Mathews and Miss Ophelia Crum. The group at St. Joseph, Mo. has had the help of Mrs. Anna W. Howard of Independence, Mo. and Mrs. Olivia Kelsey of Kansas City in an effort to get a study class organized.

Following a circuit through the Southern States in January, Mr. Philip Marangella spent a few days in Knoxville, Tenn., where a meeting was arranged at a local hotel, and the following day Mr. Marangella addressed several hundred students at Knoxville College. In San Mateo, Calif. the group conducts a weekly study class and has elected officers and appointed committees to serve until the Spiritual Assembly is formed on April 21st, and the RTC reports that teaching activities are also going forward in the Fresno and Carmel groups.

The Logan, Utah group has had most unusual success with its public meetings this year. During a recent visit by Mrs. Mary Collison of Geyersville, Calif. in February Mr. Leslie Hawthorn, the group correspondent, reports, she spoke before forty students of the political economy class at the Utah State Agricultural College on the “Bahá’í Peace Plan,” and at the LDS Institute students studying Mormon doctrines listened attentively to the Bahá’í idea of immortality, salvation, God, and the nature and progress of the soul. The public meeting was announced in the local “News Round Up” and the transcription “A New Interpretation of History” was broadcast. An audience of twenty-eight persons heard Mrs. Collison speak on “The Challenge of this New Age,” and many intimate fireside meetings were also formed, one of which was a supper for seven Persian students—all Moslems.

Mrs. Collison’s circuit also included visits to Reno, Nevada; Boise, Idaho; and Salt Lake City, Utah and a fireside meeting was also arranged in Ogden, Utah. In writing of her trip Mrs. Collison commented that during her stay in Logan she spoke to 141 persons, and that “one couple drove 65 miles to the meetings which they had seen advertised in the newspaper.”

Duluth, St. Paul, and Minneapolis, Minn., Fargo, N.D. and Sioux Falls, S.D., the latter he reports had the largest meeting, with forty in attendance, despite the fact that two members of the community, Miss Elsa Steinmetz and Mrs. Fritz Shaver, were making preparations to leave for Europe shortly. Efforts are now being made to replace these pioneers so that Sioux Falls need not revert to group status on April 21st. Mrs. Nellie Fenton, formerly of Mansfield, O., plans to move to Sioux Falls and it is hoped that other settlers will be available.

Mr. Philip Marangella of McLean, Virginia, made a circuit in January through the Southern States covering Greensboro, N.C., Greenville, S. C., Augusta, Ga., Birmingham, Ala., New Orleans, La., and Knoxville, Tenn., and in cooperation with the Public Meetings Committee arrangements were made to have Mr. Ober make stop-overs in the goal cities of the South enroute to Miami, Birmingham and Nashville where meetings were scheduled.

Many stop-overs have been made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Bishop of Pasadena, Calif., on their way to the Southeastern states where they plan to settle in a city favorable to the needs of the new Plan. Reports of well attended meetings have been received from Phoenix, Arizona, San Antonio, and Houston, Texas.

Mr. Charles Mason Remey of Washington, D.C., on his way home from Central America visited New Orleans, La., Jackson, Miss., Birmingham, Ala., Memphis, Tenn., and Louisville, Ky., early in March and Mrs. Louise Mathews and Miss Ophelia Crum enroute to New York from New Orleans plan to stop over in Birmingham, Atlanta, Greenville, and other points along their route.

Reports from Regional Committees in the South indicate that visiting Bahá’ís have provided fine teaching help in the various centers during the winter months. The National Teaching Committee is now endeavoring to arrange for stop-overs with teachers who are planning to attend the Convention.

New Assemblies and Groups in Latin America

Activity is mounting to a crescendo on the part of the pioneers, the native Latin American teachers, and the believers in general in the sixteen goal cities of the Central and South American areas, as all unite to bring to consummation as many as possible of the new spiritual Assemblies planned for this year, in order to help broaden the basis of representation for the two National Assemblies to be elected as a part of the Guardian’s second seven-year plan. There is high activity also among the twenty new groups that have come into being this year, some of which hope to attain Assembly status within the next twelve months. A total of forty-three new Bahá’ís has been reported in Latin America this month.

The native Assemblies are taking an important part in this work. For instance, the Assembly in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, has just given an intensive teaching course to their recording secretary, Sr. Hipolito Laboriel, and supplied him with literature, and he is spending his vacation teaching in Trujillo, Honduras. Sra. Natalia Chávez, corresponding secretary of the same Assembly, will continue this work for an additional month upon her return from Panama. The Assembly of Valparaiso, Chile, sent Sra. Rosy Vodanovic to Viña del Mar to present radio programs and teach in that city, where a group is now forming. San Salvador has been doing extension teaching in Santa Ana.

The Assembly of Guayaquil, Ecuador, as well as the local believers, have been of great assistance to Hascle Cornbleth in Quito, where a group of eleven registered believers expect to elect their Assembly April 20th. Col. Arturo and Sra. Yvonne Ciellar of La Paz have been combining with Gwennet Sholtis and Flore Hotte, the latter now visiting in Bolivia, to bring to completion the Assembly of Sucre, their goal city, and work has also been begun in Cochabamba. Mr. and Mrs. Antronik Neworkian of the Buenos Aires Assembly are the nucleus about which the new community in La Plata, Argentina, is forming. Two new believers are reported there this month. The Assembly of Lima, Peru, is collaborating with Eve Nicklin in the teaching in Callao, where a group of five is trying to grow to Assembly status. The Assembly of Panama City is assisting Mrs. Louise Caswell and James Facey in Caion, where a group of six and a number of others studying are reported.

Miss Louise Baker of Lima, Ohio, who has been pioneering in Mexico, has sent in six memberships for Puebla and six for Coatepec. These goal cities are trying for Assembly status this year. Mrs. Dorothy Baker has just returned from Mexico, where she visited the new communities in these two cities and also the one in Mexico City, her stay coinciding with that of Charles Mason Remey in the capital. Mexico City has also sent in six new memberships, making a total increase for Mexico of eighteen memberships this month.

Gayle Woolson has been visiting in Caracas and Maracay, Venezuela. Maracay has been opened as the goal city of that country and a group of 15 is studying there, one of them being the master of the Masons. Yolanda de Stronach, former chairman of the Assembly in Caracas, who is teaching at a school in nearby Turmero, will visit the group once a week and assist them. Mrs. Sheila Rice-Wray, who left February 25th to pioneer in Latin America, has been working with Miss Jean Silver in Cienfuegos, Cuba’s goal city. She is now leaving for brief visits in Ciudad Trujillo and San Juan, will visit Caracas for a few days, and will then settle in Maracay for two months to help in teaching the student group there.

Columbia has reported two new communities ready to elect their Assemblies: Cali and Medellin, with memberships of nineteen and nine respectively, while Contratación with seven is hoping to make the required nine also. There are three smaller groups as well as the two established Assemblies. Miss Elena Marsella of Ciudad Trujillo is en route to Santiago, Dominican Republic, to follow up the many contacts which she and Dr. Malcolm King made in that city during a recent regional trip. She will help later in Sánchez, which has a small group of four. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Miessler are working hard in Sao Paulo, Brazil, to bring their group of six to Assembly status. They report that 52 persons have attended their classes.
Convention Attendance
Limited to Baha'is

The Annual Convention, year by year, deals with plans and issues of far-reaching, worldwide import requiring the utmost concentration by delegates and members of the NSA. In view of this fact, the believers are requested not to bring with them, or invite attendance by, non-Baha'is or even interested and prospective believers. The policy adopted by the NSA is that only delegates and accredited believers may attend the consultative sessions of the Convention.

The Public Bahá'í Congress to be held Sunday evening, May 4, welcomes attendance by all. This is our means of contact with non-Baha'is.*

Unity Feast: July 5. In order to enable the largest possible number of the Bahá'ís to participate in this joyful event, the Unity Feast will be held on the middle Sunday of the school session, July 6th. All who are interested in seeing the school and the Bahá'ís in action are cordially invited to attend.

Program: In accordance with the Guardian’s message to the Geyserville school last year, a large part of the program will be devoted to the needs and activities of the Seven Year Plan. The workshop method which proved so successful during the third week last year will be employed throughout the entire 1947 session. There will be provision also for lectures, round table discussions, public meetings, study classes and various other activities, all of which will be announced in detail at an early date. Further announcements will also include information about the children’s program.

Reservations: Because of the limited housing facilities, reservations will be accepted on the first come first served basis, and no accommodations can be assured if made later than June 10. Reservations which will include meals served on the campus should be made through Mr. Alfred Zahl, Secretary of the Maintenance Committee, 826 W. Grant Place, San Mateo, California. The rates will be announced at an early date.

Important: Please give wide circulation to the above announcements. The necessity for early reservations should be stressed so that the Maintenance Committee will be able to provide the best possible accommodations and make adequate plans for meals.

GEYSERVILLE SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Temerity Ranch

The first summer school session for the Central American area is planned for the last week in November in Vera Cruz, Mexico. Temerity Ranch at Colorado Springs will be operated for the first time this year directly by the National Spiritual Assembly as a school to prepare pioneers for Latin America and Europe. The Latin American session is planned for the last week in June and will cover techniques in presenting the Cause to the masses, Latin American cultures and psychologies, experiences in the fields of radio, publicity, conferences, study groups and administrative problems. Applications to attend should be sent to the Inter-America Committee, Miss Elizabeth H. Cheney, secretary, 4500 Magnolia Ave., Chicago 40, III. The number of students that can be accommodated is limited, so that applications should be sent as early as possible, in order to avoid possible disappointment.

Study Aids

Response to the Study Aid on the Administrative Order has been good, and the Committee has requested Assembly secretaries to let us know the extent to which this study has been undertaken in the various communities so that a complete report may be made at the Convention. Have you started a study class in your community? This is one very good way to help the Guardian in the wider sharing of the responsibilities which he has now placed on our shoulders.

Words of the Guardian

Each and every believer, un-daunted by the uncertainties, the perils and the financial stringency afflicting the nation, must arise and insure, to the full measure of his or her capacity, that continuous and abundant flow of funds into the national Treasury, on which the successful prosecution of the Plan must chiefly depend.

He wishes you particularly to impress the believers with the necessity of maintaining the flow of their contributions to the Temple, and also to stress the importance of the institution of the National Bahá’í Fund which, in these early days of the administrative development of the Faith, is the indispensable medium for the growth and expansion of the Movement. Contributions to this fund constitute, in addition, a practical and effective way whereby every believer can test the measure and character of his faith, and to prove in deeds the intensity of his devotion and attachment to the Cause.

We must be like the fountain or spring that is continually emptying itself of all that it has and is continually being refilled from an invisible source. To be continually giving out for the good of our fellows undeterred by the fear of poverty and reliant on the unfailing bounty of the Source of all wealth and all good—this is the secret of right living.

—Shoghi Effendi From Bahá’í Administration.

National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved friends:

The Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh is the spiritual world of light, of truth, of justice and of love. Therein exists no shadow of doubt, no ambiguity, no furtive gloom beneath which superstition can flourish and scatter its evil seeds to the wind. Therein exists no love which is not just, and no justice which is not loving. Man’s assurance, his security and his life and welfare stand upon the foundation laid in that heavenly world.

In these days of strife and confusion, the loyalty of every Bahá’í is directed to the realities found in the Revelation. The virtue of toleration is not for believers a license to mingle error with truth, but the confidence that the erring soul can eventually abandon whatever is not confirmed by the Manifestation of God. Affection which makes no distinction in a person’s service or disservice to the Faith is something other than true love. It contains the alloy of fear or self-pity which can destroy love if not remedied.

The world at the time of the renewal of religion is full of pseudo-mystical and pseudo-scientific practices. These are not merely fallacious and impotent to do good—they are harmful in that they foster the taste for adulteration and substitute, and introduce into the Bahá’í community elements making for disunity since they enter not by Revelation but by human insistence.

Consider such practices as spirit-ism, palm-reading, numerology, dietary fadism, astrology and the substitution of “direct guidance” for the collective consciousness of an authoritative Bahá’í institution and for the authenticity of the Bahá’í teachings. We must be clear about these matters. Nothing which cannot be authenticated in the teachings should be incorporated as Bahá’í teaching in public, fireside or other presentations of the Faith. They have no claim to philosophy or science of social value unless they are confirmed in the Sacred Writings. Community consultation will enable us to discriminate and protect the precincts of truth from sacrilege.

European Survey

Because of the difficulty of getting exact and definite information about believers and Bahá’í literature in the different countries included in the European teaching project, the European Teaching Committee felt that a personal survey would be of great benefit to them in the launching of this campaign. It was therefore decided that Mrs. Etty Graeffe, who had been placed in charge of the European Teaching Committee office in Geneva, and the Committee Chairman, Miss Edna M. True, should visit as many of the goal countries as possible on their way to Geneva, Switzerland.

Mrs. Graeffe arrived in Norway with the pioneer to that country, Mrs. Solveig Corbit, on September 17. She joined Miss True in Holland on October 8.

The following report is their survey.

Because of its historical import, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to share it with the friends through publication in Bahá’í News.

Norway

A. Pioneer: Mrs. Solveig Corbit.

B. Bahá’ís: 1. Miss Johanna Schubarth, who has carried on her self-less service to the Cause through all the war years, devoting most of her time and often her very limited funds to translations and pub-
The cornerstone of the religion of God is the acquisition of the Divine perfections and the sharing in his manifold bestowals. The essential purpose of Faith and belief is to ennoble the inner being of man with the outpourings of grace from on high. If this be not attained, it is indeed deprivation itself. It is the torment of infernal fire.

Wherefore it is incumbent upon allBahá‘ís to ponder this very delicate and vital matter in their hearts, that, unlike other religions, they may not content themselves with the noise, the clamor, the hollowness of religious doctrine. Nay, rather, they should exemplify in every aspect of their lives those attributes and virtues that are born of God and should arise to distinguish themselves by their godly behavior. They should justify their claim to be Bahá‘ís by deeds and not by name. He is a true Bahá‘í who strives by day and by night to progress and advance along the path of human endeavor, whose most cherished desire is so to live and act as to enrich and illuminate the world, whose source of inspiration is the essence of Divine virtue, whose aim in life is so to conduct himself as to be the cause of infinite progress. Only when he attains unto such perfect gifts can it be said of him that he is a true Bahá‘í—'ANúmero-Bahá‘í-

(This library will gladly accept English Bahá‘í Books.) In the Kungl. Biblioteket—New Era (Swedish), Iqán (Swedish), two copies of the European Teaching Pamphlet.

D. Contacts: Many excellent non-Bahá‘í contacts were made and developed by Mrs. Graefee and are now being followed by Mrs. Corbit and Miss Schubarth. These contacts were made through a public meeting before the Esperantists and in a fireside gathering at Miss Schubarth’s.

Sweden
Mrs. Graefee visited Stockholm from September 24 to October 2.
A. Pioneer: Post not yet filled.
B. Bahá‘ís: The only Bahá‘í Mrs. Graefee found in Stockholm was Mr. Gustav Sundquist. He is a devoted, faithful soul who is greatly in need of assistance in promoting the Faith in Sweden.

C. Literature: 1. Published: New Era, Iqán, What is the Bahá‘í Movement?, Special European Teaching pamphlet. 2. Translated but not pub-

D. Contacts: Mrs. Graefee spoke to about thirty people at the Esperanto Club and was interviewed publicly at an Esperanto rally where there were about seventy people present. She also submitted material for write-ups in three of the Swedish papers.

Denmark
Mrs. Graefee spent October 3 in Copenhagen and October 5 and 6 with Johanna Hoeg in Jerslev.
A. Pioneers: Mr. and Mrs. Anders Nielsen arrived in Copenhagen October 16.
B. Bahá‘ís: Mrs. Johanna Sorensen Hoeg, a well grounded, intelligent Bahá‘í who has served the Cause in Denmark faithfully through the war years.

D. Contacts: Mrs. Graeffe made contacts with some Esperantists in Copenhagen. She particularly mentioned Miss Maghrete Noll, a prominent elderly Theosophist devoted to Martha Root. Miss Noll and a picture of the Temple and one of ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá in her room.

Holland

Miss True arrived in Holland on October 4 and was joined by Mrs. Graeffe in Rotterdam on October 8.

A. Pioneers: The two pioneers, Rita Van Sombeek and Jetty Straub, arrived with the European Teaching Committee—Chairman on October 4.

B. Bahá’ís: Arnold van Ogtrop, resident of Bussum, was the only Bahá’í we could find in Holland. He is a young, deeply devoted believer, who had recently returned from the summer school in England, where he had enjoyed an inspiring course on Administration under Marion Hoffman. Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True consulted with the two pioneers and Mr. van Ogtrop during the afternoon and evening of October 8 on general conditions in Holland and on the plans for promoting the teaching work.

C. Literature: The two pioneers and Mr. van Ogtrop have a variety of English Bahá’í books. The two pioneers are devoting ten to twelve hours a day to a new translation of the New Era. They are using their supply of special European Teaching Pamphlets for free distribution.

Belgium

Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True were in Brussels from October 9 to midnight of October 11. There are no Bahá’ís in Brussels. All of their time was spent on non-Bahá’í contacts: Mrs. Graeffe, with members of her family, and Miss True with fellow-passengers on her steamer from the United States to Holland. As result of these visits there seem to be at least five ready for the pioneer to Belgium to begin her teaching work.

Switzerland

Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True arrived in Geneva on October 12. Their first objective was to find a new location for the International Bureau and to set up as an adjunct to this, the European office of the European Teaching Committee.

A. Geneva: After an intensive survey during October 14, 15, 16, which brought them into consultation with the best sources of information, it was decided unanimously by Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True, to take a furnished apartment at 6 Cours des Saints. This apartment is one of the most desirable sections of Geneva. It has six rooms which will be used as follows: an office for the International Bureau; an office for the European Teaching Committee; a work room containing the mimeograph machine for both offices; a bedroom each for Mrs. Lynch and Mrs. Graeffe and a very attractive salon large enough for gatherings of from fifty to sixty people. The apartment is on the first floor and attractive metal name plates have been placed at the street entrance and above the bell of the entrance door to the apartment. Arrangements were made for the tele­graphic code name of “Bahá’í” to be used by both offices.

During the survey for proper location Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True contacted the following key people:

Mr. Guillaume Fatio, called the “first citizen of Geneva,” the one who is responsible for the first League of Nations being set up in Geneva, and considered the most important person in international affairs there.

Mr. H. Blanc, secretary of the Geneva University.

Mr. Laszlo Hamori, head of the Quaker Bureau and Secretary General of the Federation des Organization Internationales.

Mr. Brasier, publisher of a paper devoted to “Peace,” who apparently knows everyone in Geneva and will be of great assistance in future publicity and contacts.

Bahá’ís in Geneva: Besides Mrs. Graeffe and Mrs. Lynch, the Bahá’ís in Geneva consist of Miss Alice Semle, daughter of Herr Semle, Chairman of the Swiss group in Zurich. Two Persian students in the University recently arrived from Persia.

B. Zurich: Mrs. Graeffe and Miss True spent the week-end of November 2 in Zurich, celebrating the Feast of Power with the friends there.

Bahá’ís: Mme. Vautier, a cultured elderly English woman, widow of a native Swiss, very understanding and sympathetic and largely responsible for having held this group together during the war.

Mr. Leo Bernhard, faithful, devoted believer eighty years old, printer by trade, takes care of publicity, active and courageous.

Mr. Leuthold, old school gentleman, very poor, engraver, who became a Bahá’í through Mr. Bernhard. He is acting secretary of this group. (The above three are the only ones who live in Zurich)

Mr. Semle, Mrs. Semle, his wife, a former Christian Scientist, and definitely the most active and capable of the friends of this group. Mr. Semle is of German extraction.

Fritz Semle, twenty-one year old son of Herr Semle, a very awakened, radiant young man. Would be excellent for starting Youth work.

Alice Semle, now studying in Geneva, the daughter of Herr Semle, very loyal and courageous, well aware of her lack of knowledge of the Faith.

Herr Spiess, an upright, deeply devoted Bahá’í, about forty years old, who works for Mr. Semle.

Mr. and Mrs. Frischmann, Hungarian refugees. Mrs. Frischmann’s sister, Frau Lappinger, was the principal Bahá’í in Vienna.

The four Semles and Mr. Spiess all live at Walfhalden, two and a half hours distance from Zurich by auto.

In addition to the above Mrs. Ragnar Mattson of Montreal, Canada, is spending the winter in Zurich, and has graciously offered her services to the European Teaching Committee. As she is fluent in German and is an exceptionally well informed Bahá’í, she will undoubtedly be of great assistance to the European Teaching work and will be able to carry on there until the pioneer for Switzerland, Mrs. Anna Kunz, arrives. Mrs. Mattson and Mme. Vautier have already started weekly fireside groups in Zurich. When special speakers can be furnished public meetings will be arranged with proper publicity.

Non-Bahá’í contacts: Mrs. Graefte, Mrs. Mattson and Miss True had dinner and spent the evening of November 3 with Dr. Karl Wilczynski, a prominent journalist in Zurich, and his nephew, Sammy Schmitt, a deeply and sincerely spiritual soul, a young man in his twenties, who has recently published an outstanding book on his war experiences. Dr. Wilczynski seemed very attracted to the Faith and will undoubtedly be very cooperative in regard to any publicity the Zurich friends may need.

Sammy Schmitt is the better prospect for becoming a Bahá’í and would be a tremendous asset in Bahá’í Youth work, should he embrace the Cause.

Princess Wittelsbach of Bavaria, a charming, intellectually minded lady of about forty, and her cousin, Countess Reglevich of Austria, a younger woman, bread minded, but very sceptical, joined the group Sunday evening.

Dr. Wilczynski and his nephew were contacted at the express request of Mr. Alexander of Paris. The two ladies were friends of Dr. Wilczynski.

Literature Published: New Era (German), Dispensation (German), Guardian’s letters up to 1336 (one), Set of bound copies of “Sonnen der Wahrheit,” Small supply of pamphlet “Dem Neuen Zeitalter Entgegen,” Pamphlet “Die Neue Weltordnung.”

Italy

From Zurich Miss True proceeded to Italy, visiting Milan and Florence, November 4 through 8. In Milan, the only Bahá’í at present is Hedara Hayim, a Turk who was brought into the Faith in Sofia by Marion Jack. He is a devoted, well grounded believer, but unable to spread the Faith because of being an alien refugee and still under constant observation.

There are no Bahá’ís at present in Florence. Generale Piole Casselli and his daughter Mary, whom Mrs. French has been attracting to the Bahá’í Faith through correspondence, live at Serravalle about 150 kilometers from Florence. Miss True visited this family and found them reading the Italian Esslemont and eager to know more about the Faith. The General is, she feels, a Bahá’í in his heart, and his daughter is deeply attracted. They are excellent prospects and will be great assets should they become believers.

There are two others who have heard of the Cause—Mr. and Mrs. Giorgio Abetti, living at Arcetri, near Florence. Their son is at present attending the University of Chicago.

France

Miss True was in Paris from November 11 to November 16. As France is not one of the countries under the European Teaching Committee, only her consultation in regard to publications was reported.

The French New Era has been revised and corrected according to the last edition brought out in the United States and is now ready for final review by experts before being published.

In the Paris community there are two journalists and publishers—M. Pierre Marie and M. Albrecht Alexander. Both men are being asked to do the investigating in regard to the printing, etc., and seem especially fitted to review the quality of any translation, assist with publishing and to write certain types of articles such as those on the New World Order.

“Dispensation,” “Gleanings” and “Portals to Freedom” have been translated and are ready to publish.

The San Francisco Peace Program has been translated and recently published, and is a very attractive and effective piece of literature. A supply of these is to be sent to the European Teaching Committee Geneva office to be mailed out to a carefully compiled list of key people in the international field there.

The friends in Paris showed great interest in the European Teaching work and offered their full assistance and cooperation. They hope that the European Teaching Committee traveling teachers and pioneers will plan to visit them whenever possible and they will appreciate our letting them know of any such visitors in order that they can utilize these contacts to the fullest in their own teaching efforts and publicity.

England

Miss True spent the period from November 16 to 22 in England and was accorded every courtesy by the British National Spiritual Assembly. Sunday morning, November 17, was devoted to consultation with eight members of the National Spiritual Assembly regarding ways and means of fullest possible coordination and cooperation between the British teaching effort and the European Teaching Committee projects. The British National Spiritual Assembly hopes that the European Teaching Committee will utilize its summer school as a possible international congress to which some of the pioneers and residents of the different countries could come, participating in the program and exchanging experiences and teaching methods. The British National Spiritual Assembly would like to have from our National Spiritual Assembly a copy of Ruhiyyih Khanum’s tribute to the Guardianship. They also hope that our itinerant teachers and pioneers will visit England en route to European posts. The afternoon of November 17 was devoted to consultation with the British Publishing Trust. Again all possible help and cooperation were offered to the European Teaching Committee and the possibility of our publications in all languages being handled by them was thoroughly discussed. The British Publishing Trust is to submit estimates on the printing of the French New Era to be compared to those secured by the Paris friends.

A set of recent publications brought out by the British Publishing Trust was presented to the European Teaching Committee. Among the publications contemplated are the Iqán, the section from “Some Answered Questions” entitled “Some Christian Subjects,” “Procedure” and “Divine Wisdom.”

Dr. Townsend’s Work

The 1946 Convention wished the National Assembly to invite Dr. George Townsend, the internationally known Bahá’í author, to visit America and carry out a special teaching program for us.
The matter was referred to the Guardian, as an international Bahá’í action, and the Assembly has been informed that Dr. Townshend is much needed where he is in order to carry on his own work.

Ten More Pioneers
we will immediately have a nucleus of five Bahá’ís toward the first Spiritual Assembly in Holland. Several other pioneers are in the process of procuring their passports and transportation and the Committee hopes to get them into their respective fields in the very near future.

This report demonstrates the wonderful response on the part of the believers to the urgent call of the Guardian and the Committee asks the Bahá’ís to join them in their prayers for the success and the protection of these courageous and self-sacrificing souls.

American Bahá’í
Goes to Haifa
At the express invitation of Ruhiyih Khanum, Miss Gladys Anderson, who has been a pioneer in the Brattleboro community, has gone to Haifa to spend some time in the Guardian’s household. After years of separation from the Shrines, the Bahá’í World Center and the Guardian, this invitation links us once again with the object of Bahá’í devotion and pilgrimage.

Two Successful Meetings in New York City
The Pan-America Committee of New York City gave another in a series of evenings devoted to bringing the Message to the Spanish-speaking people of New York on January 10. The guest entertainer at this meeting held at the Center was Miss Margarita Madrigal, author, lecturer and guitarist. This was a return engagement by popular request, as Miss Madrigal presented a very successful program nearly three years ago. A capacity audience filled the Center owing to advertisements in the Spanish press and invitations broadcast over two local Spanish-speaking radio stations.

On February 6 the New York City Bahá’í Community held the second in a series of three public meetings at the Henry Hudson Hotel. The Bahá’í communities of Metropolitan New York combined their efforts to stimulate attendance. Miss Hilda Yen of the United Nations Secretariat gave a most excellent talk on the timely subject of the present United Nations as compared to the Bahá’í Peace Plan. The piano selections rendered by Mr. Bruce Wendell, concert pianist, were thoroughly appreciated by the music lovers in the audience. Mr. Robert W. McLaughlin, Jr., proved an efficient chairman. Over 300 persons attended and 40 cards requesting information regarding future meetings were returned to the ushers.

Dumont Bahá’ís Hold
Brotherhood Meeting
The Bahá’ís of Dumont, New Jersey held a “Brotherhood Meeting” in keeping with the spirit of Brotherhood Week on February 26 at the Masonic Hall in the heart of Dumont. The speakers were Rabbi Nathan H. Wadler, Spiritual Leader, Bergenfield-Dumont Jewish Community Center; Rev. B. DeFrees Brien, Vicar, St. Luke’s Episcopal Chapel; and Rustam Payman, Secretary, New York Bahá’í Assembly. William DeForge of Teaneck was the chairman.

Music was provided by the “Dumont Mothersingers,” a group of about sixteen ladies, who heard the Message for almost the first time. Present were 30 Bahá’ís and 23 non-Bahá’ís, the largest number yet at a meeting for the public in Dumont. Good publicity was obtained both before and after the meeting in two papers. (The “Times-Review” of February 20 carried the picture of the New Jersey delegates—three columns wide.)

Books for Green Acre
The buildings of Green Acre have been made more practical, comfortable, and attractive by the many, always appreciated, gifts of the friends. Now the Program Committee wishes to make known that the Library is greatly in need of books. Recent books on world problems, philosophy and psychology. Modern books on economics. Books dealing with problems of social welfare, science and writing. Books of standard fiction and stories, history and children’s books.

If you can supply any, the Committee will gladly pay the postage. They should be sent to Mr. Emanuel Reimer, c/o The Green Acre Bahá’í School, Eliot, Maine.

Youth Day Programs
Reports have been received of two International Bahá’í Youth Day programs held on February 23, one in Philadelphia and one in San Francisco. In the former city the local Bahá’í Youth Committee sponsored a symposium on the subject of “Education for a World Commonwealth.” The topics and speakers were as follows: 1. “A School in Switzerland”—Jules Rind (non-Bahá’í), News Commentator of WPEN. 2. “Youth Looks Ahead”—William Sears, Jr., President of the 6th Grade Class, Bala School. 3. “Universal Aspect”—Haroun Shamaí, President of Middle East Club of International House. 4. “Education, the Bahá’í Viewpoint”—Edith Segen, chairman of the Philadelphia Bahá’í Youth Committee. Henry Tellerman, youthful member of the Local Spiritual Assembly, served as chairman. Many non-Bahá’í friends from the International House and the radio station attended this successful meeting.

In San Francisco the Youth Group presented a fine program to an inter-racial and international audience. Four nationalities, five races and a number of religious backgrounds, among them Mohammedan and Zoroastrian, were represented. The music, contralto solos by Mrs. Barletra Jordan, a Bahá’í youth from Portland, Oregon, accompanied at the piano by Miss Marilyn Zahl of San Mateo, was excellent. The talks, one given by a youth of sixteen, one by a Bahá’í of just three months standing and a third by a young woman who was to leave in February for her pioneer post in Luxembourg were well presented and well received. The audience of 61 people included 16 non-Bahá’ís, several of whom have indicated a real desire to investigate the Faith more deeply.

German Bahá’í Youth
A highly successful youth conference was held Feb. 1 in Stuttgart with 200 in attendance.

Ilsarose Heyd is one of three young Bahá’ís in Hamburg. She writes charmingly, in English, of their weekly Bahá’í meetings held with the older Bahá’ís, of reading and talking with her father, chairman of the Hamburg Bahá’í Assembly and of how eager the three girls were to attend the German Bahá’í Youth Conference held at Heidelberg during the Christmas holidays. Only one of them could go, as suitable clothes for three were lacking. The lot fell on Helga, and Ilsarose and Renate "waited feverishly at home" for news from Heidelberg. Later Ilsarose wrote of meeting with Helga one evening to hear about the conference and their "dear young friends..." Though they had no light except a dim candle" and had to keep warm with tea they stayed until eleven. "We read in 'The Hidden Words' again and again and exchanged our thoughts about these wonderful Words... Oh, we've had a feeling of deep, deep thankfulness, knowing Bahá'u'lláh's Rule."

Ilsarose and Renate would like to correspond with some young American Bahá'ís. Their address is, Ilsarose and Renate Heyd, Hamburg 39, Glindweg 24, Germany, British Zone.

The three young Hamburg Bahá'ís walked to the Summer School in Esslingen. It took them four weeks.

New Developments in Packages for Europe

C.A.R.E. advertises a new, improved food package containing 21 pounds (40,953 calories). One who has sent many packages to Europe writes that this is the best package she can find in any agency. C.A.R.E. also advertises a blanket package. Address: C.A.R.E., 50 Broad Street, New York, N. Y.

Non-commercial printed matter may now be sent German civilians as gift. Label it "Gift Package." 4 pounds, 6 ounces allowed in one package.

Local Items

In February Charleston inaugurated a series of four meetings dedicated purely to those interested in investigating The Bahá'í World Faith. The following phases were to be investigated on successive dates: "Its Identity with and Distinction from Other Religions;" "Its History and Aims;" "Its Proofs of Authority;" and "Its Individual Offering to You."

In August permission was obtained to place literature in the Union Station Depot and in the Greyhound Bus Station.

A branch of the Vancouver Public Library recently accepted Bahá'í books and gave permission to the Bahá'ís to put copies of "World Order" magazine in the magazine tray.

The Montreal Public Meeting was held on February 5th, in the Church of the Messiah. "Standing in the pulpit of the beautiful church that was designed by Sutherland Maxwell and where 'Abdu'l-Bahá spoke on September 1, 1912, Horace Holley gave a lecture that was filled with power and dignity. The chairman, Rosemary Sala, created an atmosphere of quiet charm. The ushers were four young women wearing their Easter European native dress. Prelude organ music of meditative selections was provided by the well known church organist, Phillips Motley. The audience, although small in comparison to those reported in other centers, numbered about 150 and was representative of many nationalities, and could be called a fine cross section of this cosmopolitan city."

In addition to the publicity obtained through the mailing of 5,000 programs, the masses were further reached, before and after the meeting, through newspaper publicity as a result of the press luncheon conference and a subsequent personal interview by press reporters with Mr. Holley. Montreal feels that the services of a paid newspaper man did much in assisting them with the press and radio.

The Vancouver Bahá'ís have started a special collection to send at least one parcel through C.A.R.E. each month to believers in Germany and Austria.

Managers of the radio station frankly stated, in rejecting the Bahá'ís offer to be the Bahá'ís on the air, that they could not afford to antagonize the Catholic church of Quebec. The only radio publicity the friends were able to obtain, was a series of 15 spot announcements over CKVL, a new station. However, the regular 11 p.m. news report of Montreal's two major radio stations broadcast a story that was phoned to them the night before the lecture, by their paid newspaper man. This news item was picked up by Reuters, which requested that they be supplied with additional material for broadcasting for England.

Space will not permit us to enumerate the varied activities of the friends who worked so efficiently in putting on Montreal's Public Meeting and its subsequent follow-up work, but we believe it can be said, in the few words of their speaker, Mr. Holley, that "they have a very capable group of workers."

The month of March has been heavily scheduled with Public Meetings—Miami on the 7th, Birmingham the 16th, Nashville the 18th, Cleveland the 27th, Pittsburgh and San Francisco on the 29th.

The reports of last year Key Cities, who have held like meetings this year, are not all in. A request for these reports has gone forth and these meetings will be reported in their entirety in our annual report.

They are listed as follows:

Meetings already held were in Washington, D.C., Boston, New York City, New Orleans, Toronto, Atlanta, Portland and Chicago. Meetings yet to be held are Los Angeles, March 21st and Detroit on the 27th.

The Bahá'ís of Kenosha, Wisconsin, though not included in the panel of Key City meetings, are joining in this effort to present the Cause to the masses by sponsoring a like meeting at the Elks Club House on March 25th, using the Key City theme, "World Order Through World Faith," with Dr. Edris Rice-Wray as speaker and follow-up teacher.

The Atlanta Community greatly enjoyed the visit of Miss Elsie Austin, who had been invited to be the principal speaker at the Phyllis Wheatley Y.W.C.A. Annual dinner, which was attended by over 500 persons. Miss Austin gave a very uplifting and inspiring talk on the subject "One World Under God" to a mixed audience.

First European Believer Under the Seven Year Plan

On April 18, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Marangella sailed for Italy where they will go to Rome to join Mr. and Mrs. Ugo Giachery, to further the work in that city. On April 25, Miss Dagmar Dole, who has been serving as pioneer in Alaska, sailed with Mrs. Elinor Gregory of the San Diego Community, on the Drottingholm. Miss Dole goes to Denmark to work with Mr. and Mrs. Anders Nielsen in Copenhagen and Mrs. Gregory goes to Oslo, Norway, to reinforce our pioneer there, Mrs. Solveig Corbit.

On March 15, the European Teaching Committee received the joyful news that the first native believer under this new Seven Year Plan, had declared himself. He is Signor Augusto Salvetti of Italy. Signor Salvetti heard of the Faith from a Persian believer while he was a prisoner of war in India. After returning to his native Italy, Signor Salvetti corresponded with the European Teaching Committee in Geneva. Since he was living in one of our “goal” countries, Mrs. Graefte put him in touch with our pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Ugo Giachery. After some wonderful personal interviews with the Giacherys, Signor Salvetti became confirmed and when signing his application card wrote to Mr. Giachery the following:

“My heart had an upsurge when I started to speak with you. The holiness of your principles, the wisdom of your words, the beauty of Baha'u'llah's teachings, were expressed by you with words so simple, but so beautiful and touching, that I had the sensation that a light from heaven had touched me.” These wonderful words of Signor Salvetti give us a glimpse of what the Bahá’í Faith will bring to the suffering peoples of Europe and they make us further understand the Guardian’s statement that now is the time to bring the Message of Baha'u'llah to this distressed continent.

The Committee is assured that before very long they will be able to report similar news from our other goal countries, as all of our Pioneers are writing that there are some individuals who are very close to the Faith in each country.

On the Eve of the Election in Latin America

As this article goes to press, pioneers are working feverishly in 12 of Latin America’s 37 goal cities, striving to bring them to Assembly status before election night; Assembly status based upon fully instructed, deeply confirmed and truly devoted Bahá’ís. The 19 cities are those which have been chosen by the friends out of Latin America’s 37 groups, as the most likely to attain sufficient numbers for an Assembly within the first two years of the beloved Guardian’s second Seven Year plan. Of the 37 groups 22 are new this year and indicate the fervor with which the native believers and teachers have united with the North American pioneers in striving to greatly extend the basis of Bahá’í representation in preparation for the election of their two National Assemblies four years from now.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Miessler, assisted by Dr. Thomas Sanchez de Egas, report that they feel assured of their nine in Sao Paulo, which would give Brazil a third Assembly. They write that they have met some of the most delightful scientific and artistic people, as well as business men, in that thriving metropolis, and that some of these will be included in their new Assembly. Among their students is the author of the new grand opera based upon the life history of the Jewish people. He has asked permission to write an opera based upon some of the early episodes of the Bahá’í Faith.

Gayle Woolson reports from Colombia that Cali, with an adult membership of 29 and 2 youths, will elect its first Assembly, and that Medellin is striving to do the same. Cartagena and Contratacement are runners-up, while three other groups are showing growth. Cali will make the third Colombian Assembly. It includes among its members scientific and business people of importance.

Hasle Cornbleth sends word from Quito that this first Ecuadorian group founded by John Stearns, has now grown to the point where it expects to elect its Assembly and become the second organized community in that country.

Louise Baker in Mexico is praying that Puebla may reach Assembly strength in time to organize as a complete community. During the seven months that she has been teaching in Puebla and Coatepec, six believers have been confirmed in Coatepec and 6 new members have come in, in Puebla. There is one mother Assembly in Mexico City. The Coatepec group centers about a young teacher, Sra. Victoria Mendi dez, whose body is paralyzed, but whose mind and spirit are so awake and active, that she quickly recognized Bahá'u'lláh, and helped to draw others together to study. The class meets at her bedside, since Sra. Victoria cannot go elsewhere to be with them.

With seven believers almost ready and two more assured within a short time, Louise Caswell and James Facey are striving to bring through Colón, goal city of Panama. An immense amount of fine work has been done here under some unusual difficulties.

Gwenne Shollis is laboring confidently and prayerfully in Sucre. This group has contributed members to four other Bolivian cities and has now brought its own membership back up to 6. It is striving to confirm at least three more of its students.

Eve Nicklin and the Assembly of Lima, Peru, are working against time in Callao. They have a foundation of 5 members and have built up a large class of students. Eve reported that 100 attended their last public meeting. They are trying out the plan of visiting the various lodges, especially the workmen's lodges, and offering a speaker on any cultural topic which may be selected by the lodge. This topic is then presented from the Bahá'í point of view, without being a direct Bahá'í talk. At the close, the members are invited to come to the Bahá'í Center to hear the "real stuff."

Jean Silver has sent in her first four membership cards from Cienfuegos, Cuba. No one in that city had ever heard of the Faith prior to the first visit Jean made accompanied by Josephine Kruka last summer. One of the four is a man of much capacity, a former clergyman of the Liberal Catholic church.

Six are assured for Argentina's new goal city of La Plata, Shirley Warde writes us. Mary and Antorik Kevorkian are helping there, under conditions which are very difficult. A group is also growing in Rosario.

Marcia Steward reports 10 new Bahá'ís in Costa Rica and sends us a description of an interesting correspondence campaign carried on there by the teaching committee of San José including Sr. Gerardo Vega, Sr. Oscar Castro and herself. Their method was to run a 2 by 5 advertisement in the principal papers of some of the larger cities, stating frankly: "We are seeking people of good will to organize a Center of Study and Teaching founded on the following principles": following with the 12 Bahá'í principles, then continuing: "This movement already has affiliated groups established in all the major countries of the world, which function by means of the collective consultation of all their members. Without obligation, you may ask for literature and every kind of information by writing to Post Office Box 854, San José, Costa Rica."

Forty-five replies came in. Each letter of inquiry was answered individually, enclosing two pamphlets, one dealing with the Bahá'í peace plan, and the other a general pamphlet. When a second letter came, pains were taken to answer all questions individually, and the inquirer was asked if he would like to establish a study class and receive Bahá'í books. Then, writes Marcia, "When he has again replied, we send them the books, 'The New Era', 'Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá' and 'Some Answered Questions'. After he has acknowledged and studied these, we send the Bahá'í Administration. When, as in all the cases to date, he becomes more and more interested and has established his group of friends, we send him the 'Dispensation'. If he can take this, then we send him the 'Will and Testament' with a detailed letter explaining clearly its importance. Then we send him a registration card. When he has returned this signed, as has for example Sr. Noé Cordero of Barba de Heredia, we shall send him credentials, authorized by our teaching committee, to form a group. The case of Sr. Cordero is a proof of the efficacy of this system. We went to see him and he is marvelous." Quepos, which is fast approaching Assembly strength, Limón, Turrialba and San Carlos, as well as Barba de Heredia, were first organized in this way.

Artemus Lamb is completing his survey of the 10 new groups in southern Chile and plans to return to the United States in time to assist at the Latin American session at Colorado Springs International School scheduled for June 18th to 27th inclusive.

The Inter-America Committee asks that all those planning to attend the Latin American session at the International school, will please notify the Committee secretary, Miss Elisabeth H. Cheney, 4500 Magnolia Ave., Chicago 40, Ill., since accommodations are limited to 24 students and the Committee is anxious that all those deeply interested should have an opportunity to take the practical pioneering course.

Bahá'í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Bahá'í Community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 18, 1925, the Guardian wrote: "The News Letter which you have lately inherited fulfills a very vital function... I would urge you to enlarge its scope... that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise... "It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá'í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause."

Bahá'í News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada by the Bahá'í News Editorial Committee: Garetta Busey, chairman, John Ashton, Alice Simmons Cox, Marzieh Ghail, Doris Helley, Anasma Elana Reynolds, Eleanor Swenson Hutchens, Mabel Hyde Paine, Margaret Sweged. Editorial office: Miss Garetta Busey, 503 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois.

International

School Opens

Two practical pioneering courses will be given this year at the International Bahá’í School at Colorado Springs. The school has been placed by Mrs. Loulie Matthews under the direct supervision of the National Spiritual Assembly, and will be used especially to help prepare those, who wish to teach in Latin America or Europe. The Latin American session will be given June 18 to 27 inclusive, the European session from July 1st to 10th inclusive.

Mornings will be devoted to deepening in the Faith, including a study of “Dispensation” and “Advent of Divine Justice,” and some of the more personal teachings such as prayer, moral attitudes, personal problems, etc. Four sheets of quotations useful for different types of addresses, will be prepared by the students, so that they may have readily available in brief and exact form excerpts from the direct Word usable for six diverse topics. These will be prepared in both English and Spanish during the first session. Mrs. Matthews will have charge of the morning classes.

Afternoons from 2:30 to 5:00 p.m. will be devoted to a practical workshop during the Latin American session, in which students will have an opportunity to practise teaching, the audience representing the various types of backgrounds found in the 22 countries now being opened to the Cause. They will learn the Latin American psychologies and customs, how to approach these people with understanding and obtain their cooperation, how to open up cities and how to deepen and stabilize communities already established. Those assisting the students will include Artemus Lamb, who has now visited and taught in 8 Latin American countries, and Elisabeth H. Cheney, who has visited and taught in 14 countries. An effort will be made to help those interested to prepare themselves for actual service in the 12 countries which urgently need pioneers.

Five evenings will be devoted to public meetings, including a musical and two lectures in the town and two Latin American evenings at the school, when Artemus and Elisabeth will describe some of the unique experiences which come the way of the pioneer. Five evenings will be left open for relaxation and for study.

The European Teaching Committee has announced that their session will follow approximately the same type of curriculum, their afternoon session teachers to be announced a little later.

Those desiring to attend either session, are requested to please write as quickly as possible to Miss Elisabeth H. Cheney, 4500 Magnolia Ave., Chicago 40, Ill., for the Latin American session, June 18 to 27, or to Miss Edna True, 418 Forest Ave., Wilmette, Ill., for the European session, July 1 to 10.

Geyersville — The 1947 Program

The Geyersville Bahá’í School session will extend over six weeks this year—June 23 to August 2. Each course is planned for a two weeks’ period, and each will be repeated with such variation as is desirable and practical for the students who plan to remain longer than two weeks.

In accordance with the expressed wish of the Guardian and the National Spiritual Assembly, the needs of the Seven Year Plan and the training of Bahá’í teachers and workers have been kept clearly in mind by the committee in developing the program, and in order to enable every student to engage in intensive research and training in an area of the Faith of special interest to him, the following courses or “workshops” are being offered:

A. Research in the Spiritual Teachings of the Faith. A course for those... who wish to gain a deeper and more practical knowledge of Bahá'í teachings on the spiritual life of man.

B. The Planning and Delivery of Bahá'í Talks. This workshop will provide opportunity for the enrollees to gain new knowledge and skills for presenting the teachings of the Faith.

C. Building the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. The objective of this course is to enable each student to gain a deeper appreciation of his place in the greatest spiritual conquest of the ages. It will include a study of the origin and early beginnings of the Divine Plan, the unfoldment of America's spiritual mission during the past fifty years, and a review of the spread of the Faith throughout the world, with special consideration to the needs of the current Seven Year Plan.

D. Effective Teaching Methods. This workshop will consist of study, discussion and demonstrations of individual and group teaching techniques, and the application of these techniques to at least one public meeting in each two weeks' period. The use of current teaching materials will be emphasized and demonstrated.

E. Fundamental Teachings of the Bahá'í Faith. A course designed for non-Bahá'ís attending the Summer School, for the purpose of assisting them to develop a clear understanding of the tenets of the Faith.

F. Laboratory on Bahá'í Administration. This daily afternoon session will offer opportunity for the Bahá'ís to discuss the principles of Bahá'í administration and procedure and their application to numerous activities such as Bahá'í elections, committee meetings, and general problems which arise from time to time in Bahá'í communities.

Each student will enroll in two courses of his choice, within each of which he may select one or more subjects, projects or problems on which to concentrate his major attention for the two weeks' period. In addition to individual study and research, each course or workshop will include a number of lectures and much group discussion. General assemblies and demonstrations will be held from time to time in order that the entire student body may benefit from the work and study of all the groups.

The Children's Program. Organized classes for children will be conducted during the period, July 7 to 20, only. There will be five groupings, each with its special program, as follows:

- Junior Youth—12 to 15 years
- High Intermediate—10 to 12 years
- Low Intermediate—9 to 10 years
- Primary—6 to 8 years
- Pre-school—children under six years

On Sundays the school will hold "open house" with programs and demonstrations planned to interest visiting Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís. The evenings will be devoted to recreation, entertainment and cultural activities.

There will be no separate program for youth members, but young people will be included in all courses and activities and may, if they wish, undertake certain projects of special interest to themselves.

(Attendance at some of the classes will be possible).

Adult Study at Green Acre

The past two summers at the Green Acre Summer School have been characterized by a marked increase in the amount of study carried on by adult students. Much of this work had been done in the Research Seminar, a course which continues throughout the season. The School has been fortunate in having as leader of this course Professor Glenn Shook, whose many-sided interests and knowledge make him particularly valuable in guiding research on a variety of topics.

Each student in the course chooses a topic on which he wishes to do research, and for five sessions each week he pursues this study in the library. This time will be given to individual conferences with Professor Shook, to reading, and to the organization of the results of study. On Saturday mornings all the students meet as a group, and two or three report on their findings. Professor and Mrs. Shook serve coffee and cookies at the beginning of this Saturday conference, and this adds to the social atmosphere of the sharing of the results of research.

Some students work in the Seminar for only a week or two, and complete a comparatively simple piece of research in a limited area. Others may work for five or six weeks in a complex area, and pursue studies which are of graduate college level. The research completed during the summer of 1946 included work on the following topics: The Life of Buddha (to assist in teaching the Bahá'í Faith to Buddhists); The Influence of Religion on Civilization (resulting in a 17-page typed report); an article for a non-Bahá'í magazine on "The Marriage of Religion and Science"; a course of study for Bahá'í children, arranged for three age groups; The Bahá'í Teachings on Social Justice; A Study of the Bahá'í Writings about Prayer.

Three other Workshop classes offer students the opportunity to do intensive study on some aspect of the work. Those in the Workshop in Effective Speech prepare material on a great variety of topics. for the talks they give in the course. Students in the Workshop in Administration look up on points on which there may have been some question in their discussions and demonstrations. Gathering material to use in radio scripts sends members of a third Workshop to use the Bahá'í and non-Bahá'í books in the library.

During the summer of 1947 two other Workshops will be added to the program:— (1) a course in Public Relations, which will include arranging for, and presenting, public Bahá'í programs in nearby towns; (2) a Workshop for teachers in Bahá'í children's classes, which will provide opportunity to observe and do practice teaching in the Green Acre Children's School, as well as a study of principles of child psychology and education.

National Public Meeting Campaign

Miami

The Miami Public Meeting was held in the Y M C A, Friday March 7th at 8:30 p.m. The attendance is reported as between 120 to 125. Being in the deep south, the friends were well pleased to see a representation of both races. The Program Committee mailed out 550 invitations.

"The House Committee responsible for decoration of the hall, did a beautiful job. On the right of the stage was the Temple Model framed in palms. On the left of the stage, on top of the piano, was a plaque with the Greatest Name, surrounded by pink begonias. On the center wall of the platform, was a gold leaf plaque with the Statue of Liberty in bas-relief, and above this in the shape of an arc, were the flags of all Nations, surrounded by palms. The palms were donated by T. R. Baumgartner, an isolated believer of North Miami Beach. A stranger in the audience asked 'Who was the Florist responsible for the lovely decorations?' Usherettes, representing the variegated garden of humanity, were selected from the Inter-racial Youth Group. Each was dressed formally and wore a wrist corsage."

A book display of various Bahá'í books also included the Bible, the Qur'an, and the Light of Asia, which is a good idea for all Bahá'ís to adopt in book displays.

A half hour of preludial piano music preceded the lecture with a vocal solo before and after the address. A buffet luncheon for Press and Radio Representatives was held at the Center on March 7th, but they were conspicuous by their absence. In spite of this and a curtailment of publicity because of paper shortage, five papers carried from three to five ads apiece, over a period of one week, preceding the meeting. Three hundred window posters were distributed throughout the City, and two displays of the picture of the Temple were obtained in local shops.

Radio time was bought over WQAM on Sunday March 2nd at 1:45 p.m., at which time the radio transcription "A New Interpretation of History" was used. Three spot announcements were also made from this station, WQAM of Miami. Time was also bought from WKAT at Miami Beach for two evening programs and the transcriptions used were, "Meet Mr. Justice" and "World Language." The station WKAT then offered the friends a 15 minute free program and Mr. Ober spoke on "An Answer to the Atomic Bomb." This script was supplied the friends by the National Public Meetings Committee.

Harlan Ober’s talk "World Order Through World Faith," was very well received by his audience, as was shown by the willingness of so many people to remain for further informal discussion. After the address, the chairman announced that anyone wearing a pink flower, was a Bahá'í delegated to answer questions to the enquirer. This was to replace an Open Forum, so as to make individual contacts. A good idea that we can all copy.

With the Miami, Birmingham and Nashville meetings an attempt was made for better coordinated effort between the work of the National Teaching and the Public Meetings committees, which we hope was the harbinger of greater coordinated effort in future work.

Birmingham

The Birmingham Public Meeting was preceded by a luncheon on March 13th, in the Tutwiler Hotel, attended by fifteen leading representatives of the Press and Radio. The chairman, Mr. John Inglis, introduced the speaker, Harlan Ober, and stated the purpose of the luncheon conference. Mr. Ober spoke briefly and very much to the point, and as a result many intelligent and interesting questions were asked. Two young men, one a radio announcer and the other a reporter, lingered long after the luncheon was over to ask more about the Faith. The result was excellent publicity the next day with a full half-column write-up on Mr. Ober's speech. The Birmingham friends feel that the luncheon conference was very successful.

On Friday, March 14th, Mr. Ober spoke to the gentlemen of the Civitan Club, 125 leading business and pro-

The Guardian’s Message to the Thirty-Ninth Annual Bahá’í Convention

My heart is filled with delight, wonder, pride and gratitude in contemplation of the peace-time exploits, in both hemispheres, of the world community of the followers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, triumphantly emerging from the crucible of global war and moving irresistibly into the second epoch of the Formative Age of the Bahá’í Dispensation.

The opening years of the second century of the Bahá’í Era, synchronizing with concluding stage of the memorable quarter-century clapsed since the termination of the Heroic Age of the Faith, have been distinguished by a compelling demonstration by the entire body of believers, headed by the valorous American Bahá’í community, of solidarity, resolve and self-sacrifice as well as by a magnificent record of systematic, worldwide achievements.

The three years since the celebration of the Centenary have been characterized by a simultaneous process of internal consolidation and steady enlargement of the orbit of a fast-evolving administrative order.

These years witnessed, first, the astounding resurgence of war-devastated Bahá’í community of Central Europe, the rehabilitation of the communities in Southeast Asia, the Pacific Islands and the Far East; second, the inauguration of a new Seven Year Plan by the American Bahá’í community destined to culminate with the Centenary of the Birth of Bahá’u’lláh’s Prophetic Mission, aiming at the formation of three National Assemblies in Latin America and the Dominion of Canada, at completion of the holiest House of Worship in the Bahá’í world, and at the erection of the structure of the administrative order in ten sovereign States of the European continent; and third, the formulation by the British, the Indian and the Persian National Assemblies of Six Year, Four and One-Half Year, and Forty-Five Month Plans respectively, culminating with the Centenary of the Báb’s Martyrdom and pledged to establish nineteen Spiritual Assemblies in the British Isles, double the number of Assemblies in the Indian sub-continent; establish ninety-five new centers of the Faith in Persia, convert the groups in Bahrain, Mecca and Kabul into Assemblies and plant the banner of the Faith in the Arabian territories of Yemen, Oman, Ahsa and Kuwaiit.

Moreover, the number of countries opened to the onsweping Faith, and the number of languages in which its literature has been translated and printed, is now raised to eighty-three and forty-seven, respectively. Four additional countries are in process of enrollment. Translations into fifteen other languages are being undertaken. No less than seventeen thousand pounds have accumulated for the international relief of war-afflicted Bahá’í communities of East and West. The Bahá’í endowments on the North American continent have now passed the two million dollar mark. The value of the endowments recently acquired at the World Center of the Faith, dedicated to the Shrines, are estimated at thirty-five thousand pounds. Bahá’í literature has been disseminated as far north as Upernavik, Greenland, above the Arctic circle. The Bahá’í message has been broadcast by radio as far South as Magellan. A large area of land dedicated to the Mashíquí’l Adhkár of Persia has increased by almost a quarter-million square metres. The number of localities in the Antipodes where Bahá’ís reside has been raised to thirty-five spread over Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania. Twenty-seven Assemblies are functioning in Latin America. In over a hundred localities Bahá’ís are resident in Central and South America, almost double the localities at opening of the first Seven Year Plan. Historic Latin American conferences have been held in Buenos Aires and Panama. Summer Schools are established in Argentina and Chile. Land has been offered in Chile for site of the first Mashíquí’l Adhkár of Latin America. Additional Assemblies have been incorporated in Paraguay and Colombia. Seven others are in process of incorporation. A notable impetus has been lent this world-redeeming Message through the concerted measures devised by the American National Assembly designed to proclaim the Faith to the masses through public conferences, press and radio.

Such remarkable multiplication of dynamic institutions, such thrilling deployment of world-regenerating forces, North, South, East and West, endow the preeminent goal of second Seven Year Plan in Europe with extraordinary urgency and peculiar significance. I am impelled to appeal to all American believers possessing independent means to arise and supplement the course of the second year of the second Seven Year Plan through personal participation or appointment of deputies, the superb exertions of the heroic vanguard of the hosts destined, through successive decades, to achieve the spiritual conquest of the continent unconquered by Isám, rightly regarded as the mother of Christendom, the fountainhead of American culture, the mainspring of western civilization, and the recipient of the unique honor of two successive visits to its shores by the Center of Bahá’u’lláh’s Covenant.

National Spiritual Assembly

The New Assemblies
Beloved friends:

The formation of new Spiritual Assemblies in North America on April 21, 1947 and April 21, 1948 is a sacred mission laid upon every believer, and a tremendous responsibility assigned to the National and Regional Teaching Committees.

To arrive at a total of 175 Assemblies by election time, 1948, the American believers must attain a powerful surging movement concentrating the forces entrusted to every soul and the well-directed facilities of every administrative body. It has been estimated that seventeen Assemblies might be formed this year, counting the restoration of some Assemblies which had lost their status. Two or three of these will form part of the Canadian Bahá’í community which in another year will hold its own annual convention and elect its own National Spiritual Assembly. Since the formation of a national Bahá’í community is among our greatest achievements, on account of its importance as one of the electoral bodies which will create the first Universal House of Justice, the year 1948 will mark one of the great dates signaling the progress of the present Seven Year Plan.

Let us ponder for a moment what a local Spiritual Assembly means to a new Baha'i community.

It is a foundation stone on which the House of Justice must find secure support. It is the God-given agency for unification of believers in an organic social body, successor to priests and preachers of former dispensations. It is the magnet which alone can attract into active demonstration the new qualities conferred by the Holy Spirit for realizing the oneness of mankind. It is the vehicle by which personal opinion can be transmuted into authoritative decision, and personal feeling flower into the glory of justice.

No wonder that every local Assembly, especially in its formative years, seems to be plunged into an ocean of trials and tribulations. The responsibility of its members often seems too heavy to be borne or too complicated to be fulfilled. Problems involving teaching policy, family unhappiness, mental aberration, financial budgets, committee personnel and functions, internal strain and external pressure — the catalog of tests is far from brief, but the effect is a mighty blessing for all who survive.

Why should it be simple and easy? The path trodden by Assembly members is the path leading upward through new spiritual realms, where the reins of option are held by a higher Power.

The Master, and later the Guardian, showered most ardent love and affection upon the new and inexperienced Assemblies. Perhaps some of the members of these newly formed bodies would like to stand in the light and warmth of that paradise. If so, let them read the Tablets published on pages 400 to 410 of Baha'i World Faith; and then turn to the letters written by the Guardian to America during the first two or three years following the Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Baha.

Imbued with that new spirit, the Assembly can begin its historic mission with mature faith and radiant vision, knowing that every test is a blessing, every trial a sign of the nearness of the Holy Spirit.

The names of the new Assemblies will be published as soon as election reports are available.

Treasurer's Report

In the last Baha'i News your Treasurer brought to your attention the fact that during the month of February we spent almost three times more than we took into the National Fund during that month.

Disbursements up to March 29th totalled $13,400.12 and receipts from March 1st to March 29th totalled $18,409.12. This means that we spent $2,008.98 more than we received.

Glorified art Thou, O my Lord! Thou beholdest my tribulations and all that hath befallen me at the hands of such of Thy servants as keep company with me, who have disbelieved in Thy most resplendent signs, and turned back from Thy most effulgent Beauty. I swear by Thy glory! Such are the troubles that vex me, that no pen in the entire creation can either reckon or describe them.

I implore Thee, O Thou Who are the King of names and the Creator of earth and heaven, so to assist me by Thy strengthening grace that nothing whatsoever will have the power to hinder me from remembering Thee, or celebrating Thy praise, or to keep me back from observing what thou hast prescribed unto me in Thy Tablets, that I may so arise to serve Thee that with bared head I will hasten forth from my habitation, cry out Thy name amidst Thy creatures, and proclaim Thy virtues among Thy servants. Having accomplished what Thou hast decreed, and delivered the thing Thou hast written down, the wicked doers among Thy people would, then, compass me about and would do with me in Thy path as would please them.

In the love I bear to Thee, O my Lord, my heart longeth for Thee with a longing such as no heart hath known. Here am I with my body between Thy hands, and my spirit before Thy face. Do with them as it may please Thee, for the exaltation of Thy word and the revelation of what hath been enshrined within the treasuries of Thy knowledge.

Potent art Thou to do what Thou willest, and able to ordain what Thou pleasest.

Prayers and Meditations, p. 242

Miss Charlotte Stirrett, Mrs. Fritzi Shaver, and Miss Elsa Steinmetz, sailing on the Westerdam, March 26, 1947
Much of the money which comes into the Fund is earmarked, particularly for the interior decoration of the Temple and these earmarked funds are not available to the Treasurer for general expenses.

On April 1st we had twenty-one pioneers in the European field. Transportation expenses for these pioneers are expensive and, due to conditions beyond their control and ours, employment is not open to them. In fact, guarantees have had to be given that they will not become charges of the government under which they will live. By the first of May, twenty-five pioneers will be in the European field, and the Guardian has cabled the National Spiritual Assembly that ten more are to leave during the next six months.

All that your Treasurer can do is to bring these matters to your attention. If the work is to go forward at its present rate, more money will have to come into the general Fund.

Faithfully,

PHILIP G. SPRAGUE, Treasurer

National Bahá’í Records

The membership Bahá’í list maintained by the National Spiritual Assembly is the most important record in the files of the National Office. This list has grown and developed throughout the years, and the work involved in making the necessary additions and revisions has become a matter of daily routine.

In mailing out to individual believers their personal copy of "A God-Given Mandate" the National Assembly learned that much information concerning changes of address and other data had not been supplied. The need of a permanent master alphabetical list, and several lists classifying the names under different arrangements, became apparent, and action has been taken, with the efficient and devoted assistance of Mr. Clarence Niss, to set up a permanent organization of the membership records.

The constant vigilance and cooperation of local Assemblies, group correspondents, Regional Teaching Committees, and individual Bahá’ís is indispensable, as the records of the National Office can only reflect changes and developments of the Bahá’í community duly reported from day to day. An urgent and loving appeal is made at this time for action on the part of all concerned, to report each and every change of membership, as follows: new enrollments by local Assemblies, new enrollments by Regional Teaching Committees, changes of residence either within the city or from one city to another, changes of name, as by marriage or court authority, deaths, withdrawals from the Bahá’í community, etc. Since every Bahá’í of twenty-one years and more is now a voter at the state elections, and every enrolled Bahá’í youth receives his or her personal copy of Bahá’í News and whatever else may be issued from the National Office, it is apparent that the National Spiritual Assembly has a deep spiritual as well as legal responsibility to maintain a full and accurate membership list of American Bahá’ís. Please help the members in their effort to strive for the utmost degree of perfection in these unique records.

From time to time some local Assembly inquires what to do in the case of the names of believers who remain inactive, not attending meetings, not taking part in Bahá’í elections, nor contributing to the fund, nor joining the Bahá’í community for the celebration of the great Anniversaries of the Faith, nor associating with the Bahá’ís even outside the regular meetings. Since this question is very important, the National Assembly has consulted about it and offers the following simple statement of principle in the hope that it will guide the Assemblies and also the Regional Teaching Committees whenever they are called upon to compile the membership list of their city or area.

1. Inactivity alone is not a cause for removing a believer from the Bahá’í membership list. Removal can be done only when the believer himself withdraws from the Faith or is removed from the list of voting members by formal administrative action.

2. There is a twilight zone of inactivity where the believer gives no evidence of faith in Bahá’u’lláh but does not serve notice of abandonment of the Cause. This twilight zone is the greatest challenge to the Assemblies themselves. The inactivity of a few believers can only continue year after year because the Assembly is equally inactive as far as such believers are concerned. The National Spiritual Assembly wishes this twilight zone of passivity and inaction to be illuminated by the full light of ardent fellowship from the Assembly. Let special committees be appointed, or individual representatives selected, to make direct and friendly contact with all inactive Bahá’ís, urge them to take part in the Bahá’í work, offer help and assistance if they are in difficulty, and if the effort proves fruitless, to ask such Bahá’ís whether they themselves wish to be retained on the membership list. When the reply definitely indicates abandonment of the Faith and desire not to be regarded as a Bahá’í, the matter is to be reported to the National Assembly for final action.

Whenever the contact cannot be made personally by local Assembly members, a letter should be written by the Assembly to the inactive believer, requesting him or her to advise the Assembly whether he wishes to be retained on the membership list. All replies indicating abandonment are to be reported to the National Assembly, and if there is no reply within thirty days the Assembly is to report the case to the National Assembly for decision.

National Public Meetings

Further men being present. They proved to be a most receptive audience.

At 4:00 p.m. Sunday, March 16th, the Public Meeting was held in the main studio of station WTBN, a beautiful auditorium that had once been a ballroom. The Birmingham friends, armed with the knowledge that a beautiful setting means very much in the south and their own desire to present the Cause, "the most beautiful thing in the world today" in a setting commensurate with its beauty and dignity, decorated the front of the room with smilax, ferns, palms and tall vases of peach gladioli. Two large pictures of the Temple were displayed amidst the greenery, with the words "BAHÁ’Í WORLD FAITH" in block letters along the white railing directly behind the speaker.

Mrs. Cora Dyer was chairman, and the following will be of special interest to those who know the race and prejudice of the south: "The musicians were especially well received and we had almost held our breath on this one point alone, for they were both colored! One lady remarked on Mrs. Dyer's addressing them as 'Mrs.' as that is unheard of in this part of the country, but Mrs. Dyer, as is usual with her, gave a most fitting and gracious response, and the lady left feeling very much enlightened over her experience. She said it was the first time in all her years of life in the South that she had attended a meeting where both races participated! Many remarks were made on the beauty and dignity of the meeting."

Harlan Ober's presentation of the subject "World Order Through World Faith" the friends feel was masterfully done. The first half hour of the program was recorded and rebroadcast that evening at 6:30.

Outstanding were the radio broadcasts achieved by the Birmingham Baha'i's. The recorded transcriptions issued by the National Radio Committee were broadcast March 8th, 9th, 12th, 15th, 16th, 15th and 16th. An interview with Mr. Ober was broadcast at 13:30 p.m. the day of the Public Meeting, and the first half hour of the Public Meeting program was broadcast at 6:30 that evening.

While the friends were rather discouraged that their audience only numbered around seventy people, still a vast unseen audience was reached by their many broadcasts. They state that the eight recordings broadcast brought glowing reports from listeners. "They are the most wonderful presentation of the Faith we have heard. They are so entertaining and present the Message so painlessly, to the heedless ones in our midst." Congratulations and appreciation to all the Birmingham friends who worked so ceaselessly to make their meeting a success!

Nashville

The Nashville Public meeting was held at the YMHA on March 23rd with Harlan Ober as speaker. Taking advantage of the fact that Mr. Ober was able to be with them for the Naw-Ruz Feast, the friends arranged for their Naw-Ruz Feast at the International Student Center at Fisk University, with Mr. Ober as speaker. There were about fifty present, mostly students, white and colored, one a young woman from Algiers. Many in the group were highly orthodox, and so the discussion was quite lively at times.

Preliminary work for their Public Meeting consisted in mailing out 500 of the printed invitations, which elicited much praise for their beauty and dignity. They were displayed on the bulletin boards of most of the chief schools of Nashville. The secretary received one letter of inquiry from this source.

One hundred very attractive posters containing a large picture of the Baha'i House of Worship, were distributed in the uptown area, and in several suburban shopping districts. These brought very favorable comments. Effort made to obtain radio time was unsuccessful.

Marion Little, of New Orleans, president as chairman. The music was provided by Burney Morris, vocalist, with Claire Jones at the piano. The Nashville friends report that Mr. Morris had made Baha'i contacts while in the army, which guided him in his musical selections. In their titles one can read the message to God: "The Pilgrim's Song by Tschaikowsky, "By a Lonely Forest Pathway" by Griffes and, after the talk, "My Journey's End" by Foster.

About seventy-five attended the Public Meeting, with white, Negro and Jewish people present. Mr. Ober gave a most excellent presentation of his subject to a highly appreciative and attentive audience. Many intelligent and earnest questions were asked by the audience after the close of the meeting.

The National Public Meetings Committee feels that Nashville is an outstanding evidence of how in this day when one arises to herald the Kingdom of God, a magnetic power is produced which attracts the rays of confirmation to the one who is sincere, and makes him victorious." In the beginning they felt they just couldn't put on a Public Meeting because of a lack of workers familiar with this type of work—but they did, and admirably. One hundred and twenty-five people and more, now know something about the Baha'i Faith through their efforts.

To Marion Little, who assisted them in every way, they feel greatly indebted; also to Hart Friedland of Atlanta, Georgia, who came over and nobly assisted them; last but not least, to Nellie Roche, who as chairman of the local public meetings committee, carried the heaviest part of the load by reason of her mature experience, and to her assistants who served at the Naw-Ruz Feast, arranged book and photograph displays and helped to design posters — a grateful "thanks" goes forth from this committee.

Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Public Meeting was held Saturday evening, March 29th, in the Auditorium of the Stephen Foster Memorial on the University of Pittsburgh Campus.

The lecture by Kenneth Christian on the theme of "World Order Through World Faith" was attentively listened to by an audience of 150 people. Musical selections opened and closed the meeting.

"Publicity for the meeting was de-
Annual Reports

This year there are two forms of Annual Reports from National Committees:

Condensed reports sent to Convention delegates early in April, and the full reports which should be brought up to April 30 and sent to the National Spiritual Assembly for publication in printed form for distribution to all believers.

Local Assemblies are reminded that Annual Reports are requested of their community activities, covering the year April 21, 1946—April 20, 1947.

World Faith” was ably given by Dr. Edris Rice-Wray, with Albert Windust of Chicago presiding as chairman. Music was furnished by George Tozzi, baritone with the Chicago Theater of the Air. Inclement weather, with slippery streets, tested the earnestness of Kenosha people in their search for this truth, but about 100 people, including the Baha’is from surrounding communities, attended this meeting. Well planned follow-up lectures were arranged and advertised.

Truly, the Kenosha Baha’is have arisen courageously to do their part in bringing the Cause to the masses, and they feel “it is the beginning of a new spiritual growth in Kenosha.”

Reinforcement of Weaker Assemblies

The reinforcement and strengthening of the weaker Assemblies has been the focus of the attention of the National and Regional Teaching Committees during the months of March and April to insure the maintenance of the Assemblies on April 21st. Despite these efforts it appears that four or five Assemblies may have to revert to group status because the loss of members through transfer has been too large to warrant replacements. Five of the “spiritual prizes,” however, that were endangered, have been held intact through the settlement of believers to replace those who have transferred to other countries and communities.

These settlers are: Mrs. Robbie Wilson, who moved to Little Rock; Mr. Frank Ashton, who moved to Laramie; Mrs. Pearl Bagge and Mrs. Vera Esinhart, who have settled in Sioux Falls; Mr. Robert Imagine, who has transferred to Reno; Miss Carol Nunn and Mr. and Mrs. Pennington Lewis, to Providence, R.I.

Owing to the great effort that has been put forth to strengthen and reinforce the smaller Assemblies, the National Teaching Committee feels that not more than four or five will revert to group status; and with the hope for increase in new Assemblies on April 21st it is expected that there will be one hundred fifty Assemblies in North America as the second year of the Second Seven Year Plan opens with twenty-five new Assemblies to be won by 1948 to achieve the Guardian’s goal of one hundred seventy-five.

Response to Request for The Guardian’s Letters

The Archives and History Committee wishes to express their deep appreciation of the response which the friends have made to the committee’s request for letters of the Guardian to be placed in the National Archives. There have been about 230 letters received this year, a large proportion being those sent since the request made at the time of the Anniversary of the Guardianship.

World Fellowship in Anchorage

The Anchorage Assembly sponsored a World Fellowship Dinner at the log-cabin USO on December 6. Although this event came during a very cold spell, with the temperature between 20° and 30° below zero, nearly 60 people attended. Among them were representatives of the following minority groups: Negro, American-Japanese, Alaskan Native, Mexican; natives of Ireland, Scotland and England were also present. Mrs. Frances Wells served as chairman. Short talks were given by Mrs. Eloise Hirt and Loyd Cleaves of the USO staff; Father Warren Penn of the local Episcopal Church; Major David Hamilton, who is in charge of a Negro squadron in Alaska; Corp. Arnold Simmel, refugee from Germany; Mr. Zelmar Lawrence, Negro representative; and Miss Dagmar Dole, Chairman of the Anchorage Baha’i Assembly. Mrs. Wells asked... for volunteers to form a committee to arrange similar world fellowship dinners and it was gratifying to note that four members of the audience (three non-Bahá'ís) signified their intention of joining this committee. The program was concluded with the reading by Mrs. Helen Robinson of the Prayer of All Nations, which had been printed and distributed at each place at the table.

Six Bahá'ís attended the Jewish Feast of Hanukkah, which was held on December 18 at the USO. The public was invited to this Feast, but aside from USO staff members and one other, the Bahá'ís were the only non-Jews in attendance.

The Anchorage Bahá'ís are proud that Donna Robinson, the first Alaskan Bahá'í Youth, is setting a worthy example in the community by her friendliness toward youth of minority races. She entertained an Eskimo in her home on Christmas Eve, and was invited for Christmas dinner to the home of the only Japanese family there.

Anniversary of the Guardianship in New York

The celebration of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the Guardianship on January 6 in New York was beautiful—dignified and at the same time happy—one of the most outstanding events ever held in the City of the Covenant. It was planned by Rafi Mottahedeh, assisted by an able committee. Special invitations were sent to each believer, so that attendance was exceptionally good. The hall was decorated with looped garlands of greens. A large copy of The Greatest Name, done in Persia, hung over the platform with beautiful spring flowers on a table beneath it. On each side of the platform tall crystal floor chandeliers with crystal hurricane shades held lighted candles. The edge of the platform was garlanded with greens. At the door each believer was given a boutonniere to wear. The program consisted of beautiful music by Bruce Wendell, followed by readings from “The Will and Testament” of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá and from the Guardian’s Letters; singing of the Twenty-Fourth and Twenty-third Psalms by Walter Olitzki, set to music by Safa Kinney; and readings woven together by short narrations by Helen Campbell, some of which were quoted from Ruhíyyih Khanúm’s article, “Twenty-five Years of Guardianship.” Every individual present signed an illuminated letter to the Guardian from the Community done on a parchment scroll. A cablegram was sent to the Guardian, photographs were taken, and dainty refreshments were served.

In Memoriam

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life.— Bahá'u'lláh

News from Australia

On November 28th, 1946, the marriage of Miss Hilda Brooks to Mr. Ewart Thomas was celebrated at Adelaide, South Australia. Bahá'ís from the world over will join the Australian friends in thanking Mrs. Thomas for the outstanding service she has given to the Cause and in praying that she may continue this service with the loving help of her husband, who has been a devoted follower of Bahá'u'lláh for many years.

The Australian Bahá'ís quarterly, “Herald of the South,” corresponding to our “World Order” magazine, is seeking more subscribers. It is a valuable teaching medium, frequently having features which will interest inquirers. A subscription may be secured by writing to the Treasurer, N.S.A., Hazírat'ul Quds, 2 Lang Road, Centennial Park, Paddington, Sydney, N.S.W., Australia, enclosing international money order for 5 shillings. their subscription, write that the Australian publications with their "love and enthusiasm for the Cause, so beautifully and amply radiated are continual sources of our happiness."

European Relief

The German friends are in great need of clothing, particularly underwear and stockings. Dresses and coats, of light weight now, and heavier for fall and winter, would also be acceptable. See April Bahá’í News for a description of the new CARE packages.

We need to remember that, although our international relief fund sent 200 CARE packages these will not last long.

Food and clothing can now be safely sent to Hungary. A believer of long standing in Budapest wrote February 7: "Our home was completely destroyed, the whole district where we lived is a heap of ruins... Our Bahá’í community has dwindled to nine members. All of us are in a very bad situation... No Bahá’í literature and no relief has reached us as yet... All of us are in need of clothing and shoes. Is it not possible to send food to our small community?" Address Mrs. Renee Szanto-Felbermann, Hidökluti ut. 31/a, Budapest II.

Marion Jack Teaching in Bulgaria

A Bulgarian Bahá’í who visited Sofia last December found Miss Marion Jack, known to her nearer friends as "Jackie," living "in a very small room without any comfort. She has to do everything for herself." She still teaches the Cause, holding three gatherings a week, one for English speaking, one for French speaking and one for those who speak only Bulgarian. Any friends of Miss Jack who would like to give something for her comfort may send their small contributions to Mrs. Etty Graeffe, 6, Cours des Bastions, Geneva, Switzerland or, as the Geneva News Exchange suggests, to Miss Edna True, 418 Forest Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois, who will forward them to Mrs. Graeffe.

Wilmette Letter: 1947

MANCHEE GAEL, Convention Reporter

We aimed at Chicago and missed. The bottom had fallen out of the ceiling. They sent us to Moline and we slept on the ground in the darkened plane. Toward dawn we aimed at Chicago again; the brownish rocks in the white lake below us were skyscraper tops; we circled five times and missed. We went to South Bend. Then it was morning; we aimed at Chicago; we were sick, and ten hours late. We made it. At last we saw the last of the tinfoil mainliner from San Francisco.

Wilmette. The Temple comes through the trees and everything changes; you have a quicker heartbeat and sudden knowledge of mourning doves and warm air in the branches. I had already had one spring in San Francisco—now here was another.

You are ashamed, somehow, to enter the Temple, but you do, because it does not let you go. Everything new was business-like. I filled out a registration card and got my badge: blue ribbon for delegates, red for visitors; my name and address were typed on a card and slipped into a frame on the badge. (I noticed afterward that people were annoyed if you read their badges.)

Foundation Hall was full. George Latimer (Oregon) was speaking over a microphone, on Baha’i trusteeships. He said that when you elect the NSA you are also voting for trustees of six different legal bodies: of the Temple, Green Acre, and Wilhelm, Bosch, Wilson and Mathews properties. He praised the Geyserville Maintenance Committee for its hard work. He told us the Baltimore LSA gave $2,000 to the Green Acre Maintenance Committee, and that the Temple trustees had received a gift endowment from Amelia Collins (Arizona)—a building and property near the Temple. Estimated at $45,500.

THE INVASION OF EUROPE
Pioneers stood out in the audience. Edna True told us 10 more settlers will complete the quota (35) for this year. Besides, itinerants will leave: Mildred Mottahedeh (So. New York); Marion Little; Mason Remcy. And further volunteers. Books are a must: ETC spreads them in nine languages. You can help in three ways: volunteer to support yourself or a deputy over there; give more to the NSA Fund; build a strong home front. New European believers are pitifully grateful: "A light from heaven had touched me," wrote an Italian... Someone wanted to know if an LSA could support a pioneer as its project. Consensus: if it's done in addition to, not instead of, your NSA contribution.... Relief for Europe came up: Keep on sending packages—the sky is the limit, Philip Sprague (So. New York) said.... Don't burden the pioneers with requests for letters, Archie Tichenor (New Jersey) said. They're busy. Be satisfied with round robins.... Archie photographs departing pioneers; asked at one sailing why he snapped these unknowns, instead of some available maharajahs, Archie replied: "Maharajahs are made by history; these people are making history."

THE BIG MEETINGS
Nina Mathiesen told us how to put on a big public meeting: you start three months in advance with "prayer squads"; get a mailing list from each believer; rent a dignified, accessible hall; hire a public relations counsel; mail out questionnaire cards; get glossies of the Temple; visit editors, radio stations; invite the press to meet your speaker at lunch; hire the best music (Los Angeles secured 32 members of a university glee club); arrange Temple and book displays. Your chairman must be good in an emergency; he and the speaker must be emotionally stable. Choose simple readings; explain the names “Baha’u’llah” and “Baha’i”; avoid too many names; avoid being too universal, as people want to know: ‘What's this for me?’ Plan your follow-up before you plan your meeting. Horace Holley (No. Illinois): Have the audience write their questions, give them to the ushers. Bohor Kavelin (So. New York): Get a non-Baha’i “name” speaker to attract a large audience; (New York City will feature Ruth Bryan Owen). John Inglis (Alabama): It cost $500 to reach 75 people in Birmingham, but publicity, study classes, resulted. Consensus: Two years of big meetings haven't reached many additional people. Some people would not have been reached through publicity and advertising that is corollary to paid, has many actual enrollments. Two years of big meetings haven't brought in many actual enrollments—have placed us before the public and trained us.

One long-suffering delegate said of small communities: I'll travel hundreds of miles to address them, but at least they could guarantee me some non-Baha’i listeners. (Amen). BAHA’I RADIO IS POPULAR

You can send in for any of 13 professionally-written-and-acted recordings on the Faith. They’re dramatic style and the stations like them. 104 LSA’s—about 40 more last year—reported radio programs; Mildred Mottaheh reported the Committee's tackling the problem of home recordings for first time. They desperately need a National Radio Office, full-time. Cost: $15,000 a year. There were 776 Bahá’ís broadcasts this year, only 52 in 1944.

OUR PUBLIC RELATIONS

A man from Korea, two from Holland, one from Istanbul, are among those who made special stopovers at the Temple after seeing our publicity, Horace Holley (No. Illinois) said. Some two million readers have been reached through publicity and advertising this year—learned the name “Baha’i” and built up favorable associations to it. Free publicity is corollary to paid, has reached many additional people.

WHAT PEOPLE ARE SAYING

The Convention isn’t only what happens on Convention floor. Between sessions, you meet the believers. Here are some of the things they are saying: Carol Hautz: “The Germans have the teachers; it's up to us to keep the teachers alive.” . . . Peggy True (Michigan): The whole convention is thrilled with how things are moving. But we want to balance the budget. We’re in the red. We have to evaluate each committee with relation to the budget . . . We need more teachers . . . People want to know: What will this faith do for me? They aren’t thinking about the atomic bomb or world peace—they feel that’s out of their hands. Carol Hautz: We wrote to every family in Whitefish Bay—3,000 families, 9,000 people—and sent each one a letter, pamphlet on principles, and questionnaire card. One town got the questionnaire card printed in the newspaper: readers could cut it out and mail it . . . Sara Kenny (So. California): I never felt such an impetus in the Cause before; I was never so aware of the “waiting servants,” the people of prepared consciousness . . . Fannie Jupnik (Wisconsin) on the NAS’s Declaration of Human Rights: It shows that man is primarily a spiritual being, and has both rights and responsibilities based on this fact . . . Allan Raynor of Toronto: We’ve got to have glossaries; terms like Sadratu’l-Muntahá are familiar to us, but non-Baha’is get impatient . . . Winifred Harvey, young Ottawa career woman in employment and payroll statistics: Voting on the basis of character and ability will be incorporated into the mores so that it will be a sin to cast a vote for any other motive. This is a new addition to morality; it was never revealed before, so that Baha’is are not fully trained in it, non-Baha’is not aware of it at all . . . Jameson Bond of Toronto: The Layman’s Movement for a Christian World had a “prayer vigil” at Paris Conference, prays for labor-management meetings, wants recognition of God in public schools . . . Marie Fingerlin showed me some Sioux Falls advertising: $5 ads are headed “Baha’i World Faith,” have quote from Teachings, address, phone of Community; they are popular . . . Mark Tobey (Washington, from floor): The LSA’s don’t spend enough time on their subjective side. If man always takes his consciousness and throws it out on the objective world, he may be quite efficient but he can’t open to the spiritual world. I’m tired of communities that have no beauty, no atmosphere, but a great deal of activity.

DECORATING THE INNER TEMPLE

Our outer Temple structure is now raised; the inner ornamentation is beginning. Perhaps our inner lives are about to develop, like the inner life of the Temple.

“You have come to this Convention at a crucial moment . . . at the perfect moment,” the Convention Chairman (Dorothy Baker, Ohio) said. We learned from Paul Haney that the two groups had been put to work on Temple plans. Exports had been hired at remarkably low cost. One man who probably gets $100 a day contributed his entire services for $400. Total work on plans cost about $6,334; an engineer told me $25,000 would not have been excessive. The two plans have become familiar to us as the McDaniel and the Reed plans. (Allen McDaniels, was supervising engineer of Temple construction 1929-43) . . . Some highlights: Reed plan would have elim-

Louhelen a capella choir singing at the Ridyán Feast during the Annual Convention in the House of Worship, May 2, 1947.
inared perforated dome, for technical reasons; McDaniel plan had seats on one level, capacity 1668 persons. Reed plan offered a bowl arrangement—sloping, banked seats. A national acoustics authority offers a satisfactory, although not a perfect, solution to sound problems... Both plans were submitted to the Guardian, and his answering letter was placed in our hands. Every believer should read it; the work concerns all of us, and we are literally building for the ages. (The letter will be in the "Annual Reports—Messages from the Guardian.")

Delegates felt as if the Guardian had been in the Temple, his instructions are so definite: The work is to cost not more than $550,000; the McDaniel plan is favored (perforated dome, etc.) with Reed incorporations if feasible. There will be no elevator in the Temple; Foundation Hall will remain as it is—some day a National Administrative Headquarters will fulfill its purpose. Devotional part of Feasts will be held in auditorium (upstairs); the rest downstairs. No permanent reading desk—this "savors of a pulpit"; a portable one may be used...

Other discussion highlights: Original Bourgeois design will be modified, just as the Master instructed the size be modified. The Guardian favors elimination of the original eight upper rooms. Center seats in auditorium will face East. A 6-months study of lighting has already been undertaken.

“European Teaching Lies Close to the Hearts..." Now that a number of pioneers to the European field have reached their destinations, the European Teaching Committee is receiving notice that Bahá’í groups are being formed in the several countries. Thus the Administrative Order is being set up, and the systematic basis for the European campaign is being laid in conformity with the Guardian’s express wishes. Surely this nucleus of devoted workers will prove a magnet in every country to draw to them the power and the confirmations which will enable them to establish an Assembly in the near future.

On May 9th, Mrs. Elinor Hollbough of the Glendale California Community sailed on the "Drottningholm" to join the Anders Nielsens and Dagmar Dole in Copenhagen, Denmark. Mr. Mason Remey is making his final preparations to go to Europe (about May 25th) as our first itinerant teacher. Mr. Remey plans to visit every one of our "goal" countries during this trip, and we know that this visit will be of the greatest assistance to the work everywhere.

Mrs. Mildred Mottehedeh left for Europe directly after the Convention, and through her U.N. connections will be able to open up a great number of valuable and interesting contacts for our pioneers.

We are delighted to report that the second native Italian believer is now enrolled. He is Rudolfo, the brother of Sr. Augusto Salvetti, our first Italian believer. These two brothers are aflame with the Faith, and the Maringellas report that they are interesting many of their relatives and friends.

Through consultation at the Convention and through conferences with the different friends attending the Convention, the E.T.C. is cognizant of the fact that the European teaching campaign lies close to the hearts of all the North American believers. This is a great source of gratitude and re-inforcement to the committee. The task of furthering this teaching work and of maintaining the pioneers in the field is going to be a prodigious one during the coming year, and the Committee will need the co-operation and the prayers of the entire Bahá’í Community.

SPECIAL NOTICE
Green Acre Bahá’í School opens June 23rd and closes Sept. 6, 1947. To stimulate early attendance a special 10% discount will be allowed on all WEEKLY RATES from June 23rd to July 15th. This discount does not apply to daily or week end rates. The management would appreciate early reservations.
Mrs. Flora Valentine, Manager
National Spiritual Assembly

"TO HOLD OPEN THE DOORS . . ."

Beloved Friends:

The National Spiritual Assembly has sent a letter of greeting and announcement of plans and policies to every individual member of the American Bahá’í community. The aim of that message was to contribute to the spiritual solidarity and resolve of the entire Bahá’í body at the beginning of the second year of the second Seven Year Plan.

The tasks allotted to us need the full awareness and conscientious effort of all. We are all alike, the trustees designated by the Master for the fulfillment of the Divine Plan.

Among the principal points to note this year are:

1. The National Budget calls for a total income through contributions of $300,000.00, an increase of $50,000 over the Budget adopted last year. Two projects alone call for funds equal to the entire Budget—Temple interior ornamentation and European teaching, whose combined appropriations are $150,000.00.

2. The National Assembly is withdrawing as rapidly as possible its members from work on National Committees, in order to maintain the Assembly as an administrative rather than executive body, develop its own collective capacity and preserve clear vision for the whole area of Bahá’í activity in North America.

3. National Committee functions have in several cases been redefined as opportunity for better coordination of the work became apparent.

4. As far as possible, National Committee appointments have been made on the basis of service on only one Committee.

5. The NSA has adopted a schedule of monthly meetings, as published on another page. In addition, consultation will be provided to National Committees between the monthly meetings, thus making for a more continuous contact with the different phases of the national work and better coordination of effort.

6. The national campaign in North America includes the formation of a National Spiritual Assembly in Canada in 1948; the formation of a total of 175 local Assemblies in the United States and Canada by April 21, 1948; the beginning of work on the Temple interior this calendar year; and a bolder proclamation of the Faith to the masses.

7. Thirty-five pioneers are to be maintained in Europe, requiring the dispatch of eight or nine new workers during the next few months.

8. Continuance of intensive work in Central and South America, where two National Assemblies are to be formed in 1951.

The pamphlet issued last year on the four objectives of the Seven Year Plan continues to be a source of information on the main features of our work.

The world around us is losing heart. The way ahead seems overshadowed to the non-believer. The momentum of the negative forces is accelerated.

This is the mission of faith in Bahá’u’lláh: to create assurance, reveal the light of the Sun of Truth, unveil the mysteries of the inner life, and hold open the doors to the unification of mankind by the new world order of Bahá’u’lláh.

The Convention accepted the responsibility of this crucial year. It generated the power to galvanize the whole community: As we individually strive to serve, the unmeasurable resources of the Kingdom will come to our aid.

Devotedly, your fellow-workers,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Excerpts from "Geneva Exchange"

Austria: The Bahá’í Spiritual Assembly of Vienna has been reconstituted . . . and are in close touch with the Geneva Bureau. They are translating “Bahá’í Procedure” . . . have an active children’s group, ages ranging from 7 to 20.

Czechoslovakia: “The Czech Friends of the Bahá’í Cause” gathered for the Naw-Rúz celebration . . . sent greetings over twelve signatures. A newly declared believer in Prague has held the Fast.

France: The Paris friends have asked for close communication with the Geneva Bureau and hope that it will be possible to route some of the French-speaking pioneers and itinerant teachers through France. . . . The matter will be brought up for consultation at the Swiss Bahá’í Convention in Zurich.

Poland: Another request for two New Eras in Polish for the Warsaw University has been met.

Turkey: From Iskenderun (formerly Alexandretta) a believer who had in the past been in touch with the Geneva Bureau has written again. French literature is needed there.

Yugoslavia: A letter from Heidelberg, Germany, requested that a "New Era" be sent to a German prisoner of war in Yugoslavia...
The book reached him quickly and he has written asking for a study book in Esperanto in order to give a course in his camp...

India: There are seventy-one Bahá'í centers in this country. Their 18th Annual Convention was held April 27 to May 1.

Switzerland: Our two pioneers, Elsa Steinmetz and Fritzi Shaver, are at their posts in Berne...
The community now has five members...

Loving Bahá'í greetings to the friends in all lands...

NOTE: The British, according to their physicians, are now in danger of loss of health through inadequate diet. For British Bahá'í addresses, see "BAHÁ'Í NEWS" for November, 1946, p. 15.

made. One delegate suggested ramps instead of stairs, another asked about construction materials, another about colors, another advised study of latest techniques used in UN installations, another recommended consultation with Bahá'í artists...

This work will now begin. We must finish it by 1953—50th anniversary of inception of the Temple project. This means an extra $100,000 to the National fund every year for six years. We can do it.

SOMETHING NEW IS ADDED

Many of us never experienced real mass consultation before. Promptness was new. So was frankness without hard feelings. Consultation was assembly-line in the good sense: we felt like producers. We had the kind of consultation the Guardian describes: "dispassionate, anxious, and cordial." There were 3 reasons for this: excellent agenda; expert chairmanship; more maturity. (We suggest importing this convention type of consultation into 19-day Feasts: why not a timed agenda, distributed in advance?)

MAKE YOUR COMMUNITY GROW

Charlotte Linfoot (No. Calif.): Our publicity attracts the masses: What have we to show them? They must find us strong, vigorous. LSA must judge itself in relation to whole world community; know, use its local talent; appoint only necessary committee, check on them; learn how to use the 19-day Feast...

Mildred Mottahedeh (So. New York): Bahá'ís having mutual financial dealings might work through the LSA, thus avoid future disaffection...

Charles Krug (Mass.): I defy an Assembly to get into trouble if they will read Promulgation I, 69...

Charles read a letter from the Guardian regarding some trouble which had occurred that we should forget the past; that the more people dwell on differences, shortcomings, failures the more discouraged, negative they become; it is better to get busy on constructive plans...

Larry Hautz (Wisconsin): At present a few are worked to death, others not used.

We need a national census to screen out abilities, talents...

Marvin Newport (No. Illinois): Train prospective believers carefully, or you harm the community...

Allah Kalantar (New Jersey): Listen to people without prejudice; don't say "He is old—he is young, etc." but "What is he saying?"

Rafi Mottahedeh (So. New York): Start a community project e.g., help a minority group—the purpose being not to teach but to live the life...

Charles Payman (So. New York): We need strong LSA's with full attendance...

Rustam Payman (So. New York): We need a coordinating committee made up of all committee chairmen...

Rafi Mottahedeh (So. New York): Don't neglect those who fail to attend meetings; give them special care...

Emeric Sala (Quebec): Start a community project e.g., help a minority group—the purpose being...

Philip Sprague (So. New York): Our problems reflect lack of knowledge of the Teachings; the Word of the Manifestation is identical with the power of the Manifestation...

Terah Smith (No. New York) on fund contributions: Dwell on the theme "He is the All Bountiful." Learn the law of giving. The world has tried to establish an economics on the principle of scarcity...

Annie Remer (So. Carolina): How conspicuous we are in new areas. People point us out, say "That's a Bahá'í. I don't know what it is...."

Joseph Noyes (No. New York): We need time-economy. LSA could consolidate its work...

Florence Reeb (Ohio): We meet after every large meeting, to evaluate its strong, weak points.

YOUTH ON THE MARCH

Under the clarified youth status, said Charles Ioas (Chairman, Youth) every youth of fifteen or more is a member of the Community. Bahá'ís youth have contacted other organizations in schools; helped with large scale meetings in universities (700 people at University of Illinois); are doing regional circuit, national and international work; have their vacation-intensives to contribute. Principal speakers at Youth Banquet, Georgian Hotel, Evanston, during Annual Convention. Left to right Annamarie Malloch, Henry Jarvis who plans to return to Heidelberg, Germany where he served as a captain in the U. S. Army; Louise Baker recently returned from pioneer work in Puebla and Coatepec, Mexico; and Stanley Bolton just lately from Sydney, Australia who served as chairman of the banquet.
Twenty-nine new students came to hear Emeric Sala in the Bahá'í Center in the new goal city of Cienfuegos, Cuba. The picture shows Emeric and his wife, Rosemary, center, with Jean Silver, pioneer, just behind them, surrounded by some of the students of the Faith as they came out of the Center during the Salas' visit there in January.

About Bahá'í Children

Child training was never discussed with such fervor before. Annamarie Mattoon of Wilmette recommended the Brattleboro, Vt. plan for children's meetings: a child prays; 2 or 3 principles are read to children from "A Bahá'í Child's ABC," and they discuss the reading; art work; closing prayer; refreshments. They also collect a fund for NSA. She suggested using children in Bahá'í activities: to open door, serve guests, pray—but don't force them. A children's meeting could be held to coincide with the regional meeting. More literature coming soon. Delegates' suggestions: Train your children as Bahá'ís; make them proud they're Bahá'ís; if there's one child in a community, have a child's class; if children can't come to class, send class to them; parents' education is the real problem; Louhelen summer school holds Bahá'í Parents' Conferences with leading educators.

Neighbors to the South

Louise Baker brought the first contribution from the Mexican provinces to our fund: A gold piece one of the new Mexican believers received as a child from her mother . . . Emeric Sala and Dr. Malcolm King reported Latin America has been growing faster than we, might surpass us. Octavio Illescas believes "Latin America will burn with the joy of the Bahá'í Faith." Sr. Carlos Vergara, early Mexican believer, Chairman Mexico City LSA, greeted us. A Brazilian assistant consul and a Bogotá believer, were among those invited to platform by spokesman Elizabeth Cheney, (pioneer, Paraguay). Edwin Mattoon, Wilmette, told us visual aids are widely used in teaching there; we were shown about 35 slides of Latin-American believers, conferences. Latin America wants pioneers—especially men.

BAHÁ’I NEWS

“Consultation Is of Vital Importance”

“In this Cause, consultation is of vital importance; but spiritual conference and not mere voicing of personal views is intended. . . . The purpose is to emphasize the statement that consultation must have for its object the investigation of truth. He who expresses an opinion should not voice it as correct and right but set it forth as a contribution to the consensus of opinion; for the light of reality becomes apparent when two opinions coincide. . . . Man should weigh his opinions with the utmost sincerity, calmness and composure. Before expressing his own views he should carefully consider the views already advanced by others. If he finds that a previously expressed opinion is more true and worthy, he should accept it immediately and not willingly hold to an opinion of his own. . . . Therefore true consultation is spiritual conference in the attitude and atmosphere of love. Members must love each other in the spirit of fellowship in order that good results be forthcoming. Love and fellowship are the foundation.”

NEW IDEA AT THE TEMPLE

A projector, turntables and screen have been installed in Foundation Hall. Every half hour, visitors will be shown a 15-minute illustrated talk here: slides showing Temple’s growth, meaning, with music, professional voice-recording. We hope this feature will be made available for sale to communities: it’s new, appealing.

VOTING WAS EASY

There seemed less tension, more ease, at this voting than ever before. The balloting became one phase of many activities, instead of the star event.

BAHÁ’I SCHOOLS

After Marguerite Sears spoke for Green Acre—where Eliot mothers gladly send their non-Bahá’í children to junior classes, youth have a four weeks session, adults praise the intellectual fare—I wondered how the other spokesman could compete; they did well, however: Louheilen (W. Foster) has separate sessions for juniors (16-14 years) and seniors (15-22 years), besides Parents’ Conference and general sessions; famed for new ideas, new talent, this School is now working on a complete Bahá’í curriculum for all. (The Egglestons have just given the School and immediate land, about 9½ acres, to the Faith). The International School (Ophelia Crum) trains pioneers for Europe, Latin America. Geyserville (Arthur Dahl) in the California vineyards, stresses workshop techniques. When Canada was asked to report on its school, John Robarts, Toronto, said, Which one? We have five, adding he didn’t wish to seem competitive, but all are outstanding. One, newly given to the Faith, is in the Laurentian Mountains, north of Montreal . . . .

Encouraged to add to the agenda, delegates suggested about 15 more topics. Among these: National fund; European relief; race unity; policy-statement on Communism; state conventions; religious instruction in public schools; universal script; wire recorders; county fairs; national talent census; action with State Boards of Education regarding Bahá’í holidays.

HAVE YOU INDEPENDENT MEANS?

Saturday morning we studied prayerfully the Guardian’s Convention cable. The Guardian asks for pioneering or deputizing in Europe by “all American believers possessing independent means . . . .” Most persons decided they had independent means, whatever their financial condition. Mamie Seto (No. Calif.) said: We are not limited by our independent means. We are limited by our love. A believer made a large contribution; people said, he has much money; I said no, he has much love . . . . Non-contributing Assemblies were frequently mentioned; these, it seems, are not always the same Assemblies; to many, it was incredible that any LSA would neglect its National contribution.

TEACHING BY AIR

William Sears emceed some of the National radio shows for us. These include twenty spot announcements, present the Cause in striking new ways, allow tieups with local activities, are available on loan from the National Radio Committee.

THE BIG MEETINGS AGAIN

It costs about $600 to $1000 to present a large public meeting. Re-budgeting of activities was stressed. Other topics discussed: Teaching by mailing out literature (Peggy True); value of public relations counsel (William C. Henning); request that NSA ask neighboring restaurants to remove racial barriers during Convention.

THE HOLY PORTRAIT OF THE Báb

When a special meeting, the NSA voted to permit viewing of the Báb's Portrait. One reason: This is the last Convention the Canadian Baha'ís will share with us... Viewing the holy Portrait went forward with dignity and silence. A prayer was read by Pari Zia-Walizadeh; Rustam Payman chanted in Persian; Edwin Mattoon quietly directed us as to procedure. The Portrait was unwrapped from a white silk cloth with large blue-purple designs; it was set between vases of white and pink flowers; we saw again, as at the Centenary, the gold frame, the green mat with rays of gold light through it, the slight, seated figure of the Báb; His grave eyes looked at each of us as we paused briefly before it. (You thought for a moment of the sun flashing on Him and His band of heroes, riding through Persia in the morning of the Cause and heard the battle music in the air). Only for Baha'is, the viewing took about 35 minutes.

AMONG THE PIONEERS

I chatted with some pioneers: Bob and Margot Miessler leave for Sao Paulo; Amelia Bowman for Scandinavia; the Alvin Blums for New Zealand with their baby daughter. Jean Gates (Colorado) has confirmed several Chinese officers, college students, leaves for China this fall, plans to open a Baha'i cooperative in Hong Kong; Robert Imagire (Nevada) leaves at the Guardian's direction for Japan. Dr. Malcolm King, just back from Haiti, Domini ca, Jamaica, showed me a letter from Elena Marsella, Boston pioneer to Dominica; excerpt: "I never felt things so completely out of my hands. All I did was talk, and people just flowed to me."

MAGIC, 1947 MODEL

John Allen of Burlingame, California, presented a Police Wire Recorder to the Temple. Sunday the machine introduced itself: "I am a wire recorder... to record all the business of the beloved Faith of Baha'u'llah..." George True explained revolutionary uses of the hair-thin wire: it reproduces sound accurately and permanently; records meetings; keeps historical records; is erasable; can be used by public speakers to rehearse. (My guess: it will make all permanently guarded in our speech). We understand it recorded No. California delegate Ali Yazdi's Ridvan address; Esther Wilson's Louhelen a capella Baha'i Choir, also featured on Ridvan program; the public Temple talk given Sunday evening by William Sears.

GOODBYE TO CANADA

Meanwhile 26 Canadians met at the Hazratu'l-Quds, cabled the Guardian, appointed a secretary, Laura Davis, previewed their first Convention. It looks as if the United States will be in for strong spiritual competition from both Latin America and Canada.

SEND MORE PACKAGES

Henry Jarvis left Germany two months ago. He told us: The German friends, out of touch for ten years, want personal contact with believers everywhere — especially the U.S. and Canada, because they're interested in Baha'i Administration as developed here. Keep on sending packages. A gift, small here, looks big there. They need strength to teach.

TOWARD THE CLOSE

Sunday we had more reports, comments; they went fast, because we were moving along on the dot. Examples: Beatrice Ashton, for Study Aids: Every community that is growing is a community that is studying... Kenneth Christian (Michigan), on Pamphlet Literature: We need both intellectual and popular material. Pamphlets must be simple, attractive, cheap. Temple visitors are given a pearl-gray pamphlet, containing Temple picture suitable for framing. This new pamphlet has been written for readability, using formula of Rudolph Flesch in "The Art of Plain Talk."... College Speakers Bureau: This agency makes college contacts for speakers... Ross Woodman (instructor, University of Manitoba) on work at his University: 7,000 students aware of the Faith; thriving Baha'i group; goal: permanent campus Baha'i Office... Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick (Michigan) on World Order Magazine: It has 2,500 subscribers. Conensus: direct the Magazine toward the general public... Edwin Mattoon, on National Archives: The Guardian has said certain Tablets, Relics, are the American believers' "most precious possessions." We have no writings of the Báb; 7 Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh; about 2,000 of the Master, 1,000 of the Guardian. Send these precious belongings to the Archives; otherwise they may be destroyed, or lost by non-Bahá’í relatives. They are carefully indexed, photostated ... Voted: Request NSA to find the gold trowel with which the Master first broke Temple earth ... Adopted: A Convention resolution for release to press, on behalf of 898 Bahá’ís registered at Convention ... Library Committee: Keep the books circulating; keep them up-to-date; include Bahá’í World and World Order Magazine. Questionnaire Committee — Nina Matthisen: We now know what interests people most (themselves); public response gratifying; their money donations invariably returned, with thanks; use the F4 card, and forthcoming youth card; they’ve good advance agents for public meetings. Of Ward (Chairman) and Sylvia Calhoon: “Literature is carried out of their house literally in bushel baskets.” ... Amédee Gibson (So. Calif.) on Service to the Blind: Reach the blind through the sighted. For each blind individual she has contacted hundreds of sighted. Embossed Temple picture, talking book, prayer book, etc., already or soon available ... David Earl: World Language Committee will help you study Esperanto, meet Esperantists, translate your Esperanto correspondence to and from abroad. Include an Esperanto letter in your relief package. Take no sides on any proposed world language ... Visual Education: Marion Longyear (So. Calif.) described Visual Aids and their present wide use in teaching the Faith, urged Summer Schools develop photographers, script writers, machine operators. Excellent graphics by Arthur Patterson demonstrated ... John Clifford (Oregon) introduced proposed world script: “Ispo”—short for “International Steno-Pigailaphy.” ... Recommended to NSA Present Bahá’í Teachings to Education Boards as material to be taught in public schools; ask that Bahá’í pupils be excused from school for religious study ... Race relations were ably presented. The South had such spokesmen as A. Louise Taylor (Georgia) and Olive Alexander (Florida). On April 29 the Ku Klux Klan broke up an interracial Bahá’í meeting in Atlanta. Louise Taylor: Negroes have no guarantee of safety. When an invasion occurs, it’s too late to get help. We must obtain pre-guarantees, develop the local status, prestige of the Faith ... Olive Alexander: Mix with other progressive groups; be united, sure of yourselves, before you act ... Elsie Austin: We must formally protest such actions to the authorities; mixed religious groups are meeting in the South today; Bahá’í meeting places must be carefully selected; “plant where the flower can grow.” It’s not enough to have a few members of other races on Administrative bodies: we need overall programming; a long-range viewing of these things not as a race but as a human problem ... It was recommended to discontinue the Race Unity Committee.

The National Treasurer — who makes our hopes realities—reminded us again that in addition to national contributions of $250,000 (as of last year) we must provide an extra $100,000 this year, to decorate the interior of the Temple ... “He is the All-Bountiful.”

THE SUMMING UP

Even with expert management, there was not enough time. The activities are too rich and varied, the problems too complex, even for four streamlined days. Here were the main features: The European, North and South American teaching campaigns; inception of Temple decoration; the farewell to Canada; nature consultation; widespread use of modern mechanical and visual teaching techniques. Transcending all, the fact that this is the 25th anniversary of the Guardianship, and that we saw the Portrait of the Báb.

AFTER WORD

That’s how the Convention looked to me. I know there were as many Conventions there as there were people, and that much was said and done, ever so valuable, which I have not reported. It’s always a big, confusing experience to see the Convention—you catch what you can of it.

That last night we walked round and round the top steps. Each time around we’d walk right into the moon; way to the south, Chicago stained the sky winecolored. The Temple glistened in the cold moonlight. It kept drawing us round and round again. I kept thinking of all the generations who will circumambulate this “Place of the Mention of God” long after we are gone; and of an old Negro folk song that goes: “Meetin’ at the Buildin’ soon be over, soon be over, soon be over . . .”

Dumont, N. J.
A highlight of the teaching efforts was the public presentation of the Bahá’í Faith at the Parent-Teachers Association open meeting at the Washington School. At this time the Cause was for the first time presented in Dumont publicly under non-Bahá’í auspices. The Bahá’ís had sent a form letter to different local organizations, offering free speakers on timely subjects. As a result Allah K. Kalantar was invited to speak on "Brotherhood" from the Bahá’í point of view, with a Rabbi, a local Lutheran minister and a

Youth Weeks at Green Acre

The Green Acre Youth Committee has been diligently working all spring, trying to arrange four weeks of study, play and fellowship for this summer. We have been fortunate in securing such excellent teachers as Mrs. Marguerite Sears, Dr. Genevieve Coy, Mr. Borah Kavelin, Mrs. Ellen Sims: we have arranged interesting courses: "God Passes By," "Blueprint for Unity," "Self-Improvement," "Workshop in Teaching," and many others; we've made plans for fun-producing extra-curricular activities — dances, weiner roasts, ocean swimming, stunt night, etc. Now the success of the four weeks is up to the Youth themselves.

We would like to encourage Youth from all over the country to come to Green Acre this summer. We want to know the Youth from Chicago, from Georgia, from California, from Texas, as well as the ones from Maine, New Jersey and Maryland. We want to work and play together and to truly put into practice the principles of "living together" that our wonderful Faith teaches us.

Come for one or for all four of the Youth weeks this summer. The dates are: July 6-12, July 13-19, Aug. 17-23, Aug. 24-30.

A Junior’s Book of Religion

Have you and your children read "A Junior’s Book of Religion" written by Marguerite True and approved by the Child Education Committee?

Mrs. True has divided the booklet into three parts. Part I tells of the prophets from Adam through Bahá’u’lláh. In Part II there is a description of the World of Tomorrow under the headings "The New Laws for the Nations" and the "Laws for the People of the World." In Part III fundamental questions which children ask about the Faith are answered.

The book, which costs twenty cents (20c), may be ordered from the Bahá’í Publications at 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois.
musical program and heard Mr. Anthony Y. Seto, chairman of the San Francisco Baha'i Assembly give the talk of the evening. Mr. Seto praised the Cosmos Club for its outstanding effort in the promotion of good-will and understanding between the races and outlined the Baha'i belief whom were several college professors and served by the friends. The program included readings from the Writings, prayers and excerpts from articles on the subject of Naw-Ruz, the Baha'i calendar, etc. The full attendance numbered 56, including 30 non-Baha'is. The invited guests, amongst whom were several college professors and their wives, teachers from other local schools and others prominent in education, expressed appreciation for a most wonderful evening.

Boise, Idaho

As always, Naw-Ruz was a most happy celebration in Baha'i communities throughout the land. In Boise, Idaho this special event was held in the Recreation Lounges of the Boise Junior College. A delightful buffet supper was prepared and served by the friends. The program included readings from the Writings, prayers and excerpts from articles on the subject of Naw-Ruz, the Baha'i calendar, etc. The full attendance numbered 56, including 30 non-Baha'is. The invited guests, amongst whom were several college professors and their wives, teachers from other local schools and others prominent in education, expressed appreciation for a most wonderful evening.

Honolulu

The Honolulu Baha'is celebrated Naw-Ruz at the Baha'i Center with a most beautifully planned affair. Decorations consisted of potted palms, rare ferns and flowers. Huge bouquets of 'cup-of-gold' filled the air with exotic scent and emphasized the idea of spring and the New Year. In back of the table was placed a plaque of chartreuse on which the Greatest Name was outlined in fresh miniature lavender daisies. A stand with a candelabrum containing seven candles, was placed to the right of the speaker, and during the reading of 'Abdu'l-Baha's "Seven Lights of Unity" the electric lights were dimmed. As the meaning of the seven candles was read, each of the candles was in turn lighted. The program included talks and music and refreshments were served at tables set out on the lawn. The Center was filled to capacity, with many extra chairs added to accommodate the unusual number attending.

Charlottetown, P.E.I.

From Charlottetown, P.E.I. comes a long newspaper article on "Why a New Religion?" placed in the Public Forum column of the "Charlottetown Guardian." This column is open to the discussion by correspondents of questions of interest.

Greensboro, N.C.

Twenty-four people attended the Regional Teaching Conference held in Greensboro, N.C. on April 5-6. The theme of the conference was "Answering the Guardian's Call." Each speaker from within the re-selected prayers and readings beautifully presented. Annie Roman in reviewing the "God-Given Mandate" opened with the stirring words spoken by Siyyid Kasim to Mullá Husayn as he bade him go forth on his quest, "I declare you equal to the task." Space does not permit us to report all details, but we wish to share a few of the highlights with our readers. "The Individual's Role" in the Guardian's Plan was discussed. Mrs. Margaret Ruhe pointed out that each Baha'i should evaluate his own assets and talents, and make sure that he is using and developing every possible skill for the good of the Faith. Helen Bishop spoke about prayer and stated that "we show the degree of our attachment to the Faith by our use of prayers." She continued, "If we love God, we mention Him; we cannot help it. We pray because love of God is in us; prayer shows our degree of attachment to God. When we pray, we become instruments of God's purpose. Through prayer the inner hearing is quickened."

Katherine McPhee stated that we can aid the world objectives by contributing to the National Fund. She quoted the following words of Shoghi Effendi: "We must be like the fountain or spring that is continually emptying itself of all that it has and is continually being refilled from an invisible source." Mr. Paul Haney in speaking of the Guardian's guidance said, "The Guardian walks a step ahead of us in all our Baha'i service."

There was an excellent spirit of fellowship and unity throughout the conference. The hospitality of the Greensboro friends was great. Margaret Ruhe, chairman of the Regional Teaching Committee of Ga., S.C. and N.C., closes her report by saying, "There is something electric when Baha'is come together and all of us felt impelled to re dedicate ourselves to the great work that is ours."

Butte, Montana

Classes have been held for teaching each Tuesday evening, on Wednesdays for Procedure and Administration, Thursdays, open forums are held, and on Fridays a prayer meeting.

Public meetings have been held each month all year. Three outside speakers have visited and also Baha'i speakers from within the region. Forty-five new contacts have shown definite interest during this time. During the year, two new believers were welcomed.

Evanston, Ill.

A talk on "The Baha'i Faith" by Carl Scheffler was presented as one of six talks in an interest group on Comparative Religions at the First Presbyterian Church in Evanston, Illinois. On other evenings guest teachers spoke about the Jews, the Quakers, the Unitarians, the Hindus and the Presbyterians.

On April 10th, the Evanston Baha'i Community conducted a public forum at Northwestern University in the chapel of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. Those taking part were: Miss Betty Pace of World Republic, Inc., a national-wide student movement for world government Continued on page 14

Mr. Harlan Scheffler was chairman of the program and music was supplied by Miss Mary Elizabeth Moore, soprano and Bahá’í student. Refreshments were served at the close of the program.

There were about 150 present, many of them Northwestern students and a beautiful atmosphere prevailed throughout the evening. Although a great many more invitations were sent out than the number attending, it was felt to be of considerable value since the programs were sent so as to reach the 10,000 persons on the campus and they carried excerpts from the Teachings. It was gratifying to receive a letter of congratulation and best wishes from one of the most prominent faculty members and department heads at the University. The meeting received widespread publicity and the Evans­ton believers feel that it was an excellent fore-runner for many more such occasions on the campus.

Berkeley, Calif.

The Bahá’ís of Berkeley entertained friends and neighboring Bahá’ís at the Naw-Rúz Feast on the evening of March 28 at the Y.M.C.A. Hospitality House. One hundred and eighty were in attendance. The program was arranged to interest Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís alike.

Dr. Eugene Staley, executive director of the San Francisco Area division of the American Institute of Peace Relations, spoke on “Report from Lake Success.” Dr. Staley had just returned from Lake Success, where he had assisted in the drafting of the United Nations’ report on economic reconstruction in Asia and the Far East. Mrs. Marzieh Gail presented the Bahá’í teachings in an excellent talk entitled, “New Day.” Arthur L. Dahl, Jr., who acted as chairman, showed clearly the relationship between the efforts of the United Nations and the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh.

Miss Elsie Austin was received with great enthusiasm as the guest speaker at a special luncheon of the Interalational Relations group of the University of California Y.W.C.A. on March 28. The luncheon was arranged by Mrs. E. T. Grether, wife of the Dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of California; and Miss Sally Eastfield, chairman of the student group. Present were seventy-five students, as well as sponsors of the Y.W.C.A., wives of well-known pro­fessors, and leading citizens.

Miss Austin in speaking on “Peace—an Adventure in Human Relations,” referred to the Bahá’í Faith only once at the beginning of her talk when she said her remarks would be based on the principles of the Bahá’í Faith. Her talk was followed by long applause, and immediately both students and adults took up the word “Bahá’í” and asked directly and eagerly for more and more information. The Berkeley Bahá’ís who were present appreciated the abundant goodwill for the Faith which had been aroused.

Latin America Has Arisen With a Will

Latin America, cooperating with the pioneers, has arisen with a will to fulfill the beloved Guardian’s new Seven Year Plan, according to the results which have been coming in by cable and letter. Eleven goal cities reported assembly status. These include Vina del Mar, Chile; Sao Paulo, Brazil; Sucre, Bolivia; Quito, Ecuador; Cali, Medellín, Cartagena and Contratación, Colombia; Puebla and Coatepec, Mexico, and Quépos, Costa Rica.

Mexico is the first Latin American country to report two new assemblies in one year and Colombia is the first to report four new ones. Colombia now leads in number of assemblies with a total of six, while Brazil and Mexico are tied with three each. Bolivia, Ecuador and Costa Rica have two each, while the fifteen remaining countries have one assembly each. The general activity is shown by the fact that forty new groups were formed during the first year of the new Seven Year Plan. Eight of these are included among the new assemblies and seven more are approaching assembly strength. Every assembly has attempted to adopt a goal city as its extension teaching project. During the year a total of 224 new believers have been reported in Latin America, making an increase in the total number of believers of approximately fifty.

The Guardian has now announced that he will begin to send a “Haifa letter” to the leading centers of each Latin country, thus linking them directly with him. The Convention had the joy of greeting Sr. Carlos Vergara, his charming wife and family of Mexico City, accompanied by a new believer from that city, Sr. Fritz Aguilar of Lima, Peru; Sr. Alvaro Lievano of Bogotá, Colombia; Sr. Pedro De LaCruz, formerly of Puerto Rico; Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala and Mr. Charles Mason Remey, who recently returned from visits to Latin America; Miss Louise Baker, just returned from Mexico after working with the friends in the formation of the two new assemblies there; Sr. Octavio Illescas, just back from a visit to Havana and Cienfuegos, Cuba, and Dr. Malcolm King, just returned after spending a year in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Dr. King also helped in the establishment of regional work in the Dominican Republic and Jamaica.

New plans are going into effect this year to enable the Latin American friends who have attained maturity in the Faith, to take over to an increasing extent, the responsibility for and direction of teaching in their various countries, for the experiences of the past year have shown that they are now ready for this. International teaching committees are being formed, one for South America and one for the northern zone, including Mexico, Central America and the West Indies. As in the case of national committees in the United States, a quorum will be established of members within easy reach of one another, so that consultation can be readily held. All but one member of each of these committees, are native Latin Americans. The South American Teaching Committee will include Sra. Esteban Canale, chairman; Mr. Artemus Lamb, secretary; Sr. Hugo Agabert, Sra. Betty Rowe and Sra. Rosi Vodanovic. Inter-regional teachers and special consultants for this committee are Mrs. Gayle Woolson, Mrs. Gwenne Sholtis and Mrs. Shirley Warde. The Central American Teaching Committee will include Sr. Jose Antonio Bonilla, chairman; Mrs. Marcia Steward, secretary; Sra. Natalia Chavez, Sr. Gerardo Vega and Sr. Oscar Castro. Inter-national teachers and consultants include Sra. Chavez, Mrs. Sheila Rice-Wray and Sr. Octavio Illescas. The panel of all Latin American teachers, recently approved by the National Spiritual Assembly, will be used in connection with projects in the various countries.

Regional Committees, each one confined within its own country, will cooperate with the international committees and also with the assemblies in connection with their extension teaching work. To stimulate new and also mature communities, experienced teachers will be exchanged between neighboring countries from time to time. Plans are being made to try out the novel correspondence teaching plan. worked out in San Jose, Costa Rica, in other countries, and also to perfect and extend the general correspondence teaching work for new contacts and friendly groups.

All of those interested in teaching or pioneering in either North or South America, are invited to send in their applications for the Latin American session, June 18 to 27th inclusive, at the Bahá'í International School, Colorado Springs. There will be a deepening course and also teaching practice for all students, with stress on applied psychology and finding the most attractive methods of presenting the Faith, so that new contacts may come to comprehend its true significance with as much help and as few obstacles as possible, and so that the desire of every sincere Bahá'í to share his great gift with his world, may be more readily fulfilled. These principles will be applicable to teaching in either the north or the south.

It is not obligatory in any way for students at the Latin American session of the International School to volunteer for pioneer service. We can teach our Latin American friends here at home through contacting Pan-American organizations and being kind and hospitable to Latin friends from the various countries. In many large cities and especially in the southwest, Latin Americans will be found, who will be eager to learn, if we know how to approach them. Our exchange of teaching methods and experience will also be helpful in contacting and teaching our northern friends. Those free and willing to volunteer as pioneers to Latin America, will, of course, be extremely welcome, for there are still twelve countries without a single pioneer settler. Only ten are receiving pioneer help at the present time.

Some Bahá'í Marriages
A Bahá'í marriage was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sigfried John-son at 175 First St., Batavia, Illinois on Sunday, April 13, after a civil ceremony had united the former Miss Carol Nunn and Mr. Gus Tunkin. The young couple will make their future home in Providence, Rhode Island.

On Saturday, Feb. 22, a Bahá'í marriage service was read for Mr. Rouholah Zargarpur of Teheran, Iran, and Miss Alice Schneider of Chicago at the bride's home.

Friday evening, March 21, at the Chi­cago Bahá'í Center, the wedding of Mr. Edwin Koyl of Chicago and Miss Marion Elizabeth Clark of Independence, Mo. and lately of Chicago, took place with a Bahá'í marriage service.

Elena Marsella's study class in Ciudad Trujillo, including the entire Rodriguez family, pictured above, enrolled as Bahá'ís a short time after the visit to that city of Emeric and Rosemary Sela in Jan. 1947. Elena wrote: "The one at the left with the buttons is me." A large group of eager hearts are awaiting Elena's return to Santiago in the Dominican Republic. Sheila Rice-Wray of Chicago has just arrived there to help her.
Two National Public Meetings Attract Large Audiences

San Francisco, Calif.

The San Francisco Public Meeting was held in the auditorium of the California Club the evening of March 26th, 1947, with Elsie Austin, chairman. Although a heavy rain fell throughout the day and there were several major attractions taking place the same night, there was an attendance of about 370 people, including many of the Negro race.

Two days before the meeting, Miss Austin was interviewed by representatives of the press at a luncheon which lasted almost two hours, during which time members of the various newspapers asked many pertinent questions concerning the aims and objectives of the Bahá’í Faith. The day before the meeting Miss Austin was interviewed over the air by Anne Holden on her popular program. Advertisements appeared in three of our daily newspapers, with articles appearing well in advance of the meeting and continuing through the week of the meeting.

The talk of the evening, "World Order Through World Faith" was well received by an attentive audience, many of whom later expressed their pleasure at having the opportunity of listening to such a clear, practical and thought-provoking address.

Colorful posters were placed in various districts of the city, on bulletin boards, in churches and windows of business establishments. In mailing their invitations entirely new organizations and groups were contacted. Their report states: "Many indeed were the complimentary remarks heard about the very beautiful invitations used on this occasion, many declaring that they were the most beautiful they had ever seen."

Cleveland, Ohio

The Cleveland Public Meeting was held on March 27th in the Crystal Ball Room of the Tudor Arms Hotel. Dorothy Baker was the speaker with Lawrence LeRocque presiding as chairman. The estimated attendance at this meeting was 600 with about two-thirds white and the other third colored. About 100 people stayed to ask questions at the close of the meeting, 40 of whom were men. These people were given a special invitation to attend the local fireside groups.

The Cleveland friends feel that their very successful meeting was due in part to the efforts of a professional publicity agent whom they engaged and who secured very fine free publicity for them. A fifteen minute radio talk was given over station WHK by Mrs. Baker. In the five days Mrs. Baker was in Cleveland, she spoke at twelve separate meetings. In these additional meetings about 600 more people heard of the Cause.

"It is our fervent prayer," state the Cleveland friends, "that very tangible results will be forthcoming. The Cleveland Bahá’ís probably profited the most from the ennobling experience of uniting their individual efforts with those of other devoted Bahá’ís in this world-wide crusade of spreading the sacred teaching of Bahá’u’lláh. We are all very grateful for the opportunity which the nationally sponsored Public Meeting brought to our doors."

The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour

A Letter from the Guardian
Under date of June 5, 1947, the Guardian has addressed a communication of vital import to the Bahá'ís of North and South America, and to the American Bahá'ís serving the Faith in Europe. It has been printed as a 36-page booklet, and a copy mailed direct to all the individual believers.

Last year the new Seven Year Plan was inaugurated and given force by Shoghi Effendi's letter "A God-Given Mandate." Now the actual working out of the Plan in relation to the four major objectives is illuminated for us by this latest creative expression of the Guardian's vision. To the individual Bahá'í it brings the bounty of new courage and understanding; to the Committee it supplies directives; to the community and group it offers a blessed occasion for the rededication to the work of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

Excerpts from the Guardian's Letter

The Bahá'í World Commonwealth

"During this Formative Age of the Faith, and in the course of present and succeeding epochs, the last and crowning stage in the erection of the framework of the Administrative Order of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh—the election of the Universal House of Justice—will have been completed, the Kitáb-i-Aqdas, the Mother-Book of His Revelation, will have been codified and its laws promulgated, the Lesser Peace will have been established, the unity of mankind will have been achieved and its maturity attained, the Plan conceived by 'Abdu'l-Bahá will have been executed, the emancipation of the Faith from the fetters of religious orthodoxy will have been effected, and its independent religious status will have been universally recognized, whilst in the course of the Golden Age, destined to consummate the Dispensation itself, the Barner of the Most Great Peace, promised by its Author, will have been unfurled, the World Bahá'í Commonwealth will have emerged in the plentitude of its power and splendor, and the birth and efflorescence of a world civilization, the child of that Peace, will have conferred its inestimable blessings upon all mankind."

A Rededication to the Tasks

"The fourfold objective, which the prosecutors of the Plan, in the present early stage of its development, are now pursuing, and which is designed to stimulate the dual process initiated during the opening phase of the Formative Age of the Faith, must be strenuously and unalteringly pursued. The second year of the Seven Year Plan must witness, on all fronts, on the part of young and old alike, rich and poor, colored and white, neophyte and veteran, a rededication to the tasks undertaken and an intensification of effort for their furtherance wholly unparalleled in the annals of American Bahá'í history. In every state of the United States, in every province of the Dominion of Canada, in every republic of Central and South America, in each of the ten selected sovereign states of the European continent, the ever-swelling legions of Bahá'u'lláh's steadily advancing army, obeying the Mandate of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, launched on the second stage of their world-wide crusade, deriving fresh courage from the exploits that have given them. Mason Remey left by plane on May 29 to visit the pioneers in every one of our ten countries and enthusiastic accounts have already arrived about his stay in Norway and Sweden. Eva Mae Barrow from Cleveland, sailed on June 10 to spend her Summer holiday working with the pioneers in Berne, Luxembourg and Brussels. The Bishop Browns who are to be in Sweden on official business, will assist the pioneers in Stockholm and Copenhagen. On June 18, Marion Little (see picture) from the New Orleans Community, sailed on the S.S. America, to spend from six months to a year in Europe, making substantial visits to all of the Centers in the European field.

In spite of the difficult shipping conditions, reservations have been made for the remaining seven which the Committee hopes to have in the field to meet the Guardian's desire for thirty-five pioneer teachers in Europe by October 1.

European Relief

In the May issue of the News, it was stated that 200 CARE packages had been sent to Europe. Word comes from the European Relief Committee of the New York Community that since December of last year, 680 such packages have been sent, of which 610 went to Germany. Many more communities and individuals throughout the country have sent packages of both clothing and food and we now know that the receipt of these gifts has greatly bolstered the morale of the friends in other lands.

Bahá’í Receives National Recognition

One of our Bahá’ís received a signal honor this spring, mention of which is made in columnist John Temple Graves department of The Birmingham Post (Alabama), which follows in its entirety. “Robert Durr, editor of the Birmingham Weekly Review (for Negroes), will receive from President Truman in Washington this week the Wendell L. Willkie Honorary Mention Award for Negro Journalism. This is an honor indeed, and all of us who know and like Editor Durr must be happy not only that he has won it but in terms that give him the good will of both races at home. That is a test of successful Negro journalism in the Deep South.” Dated February 24, 1947.

distincted the opening phase of the present stage of their enterprise, must strain every nerve to scale loftier heights of heroism, and deploy, over a wider range, their divinely sustained forces, as their present Plan unfolds and moves towards a climax.”

The Community Must Arise

“Invested, among its sister communities in East and West, with the primacy conferred upon it by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Divine Plan; armed with the mandatory provisions of His momentous Tablets; equipped with the agencies of a quarter century old Administrative Order, whose fabric it has reared and consolidated; encouraged by the marvelous success achieved by its daughter communities throughout the Americas, a success which has sealed the triumph of the first stage of that Plan; launched on a campaign of vaster dimensions, of superior merit, of weightier potentialities, than any it has hitherto initiated, a campaign destined to multiply its spiritual progeny in distant lands and amidst divers races, the community of the Most Great Name in the North American continent must arise, as it has never before in its history, and demonstrate anew its capacity to perform such deeds as are worthy of its high calling. Its members, the executors of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Plan, the champion-builders of Bahá’u’lláh’s embryonic Order, the torchbearers of a world-girdling civilization, must, in the years immediately ahead, bestrim themselves, and, as bidden by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, ‘increase’ their exertions ‘a thousand-fold’, lay bare further vistas in the range of their ‘future achievements’ and of their ‘unspeakably glorious’ mission, and hasten the day when, as prophesied by Him, their community will ‘find itself securely established upon the throne of an everlasting dominion’, when ‘the whole earth’ will be stirred and shaken by the results of its ‘achievements’ and ‘resound with the praises of its majesty and greatness’, when America will ‘evolve into a center from which waves of spiritual power will emanate, and the throne of the Kingdom of God will, in the plenitude of its majesty and glory be firmly established.”

That Great Republic, Undivided and Undefeatable

“Many and divers are the setbacks and reverses which this nation, exulted so highly by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and occupying at present so unique a position among its fellow nations, must, alas, suffer. The road leading to its destiny is long, thorny and tortuous. The impact of various forces upon the structure and polity of that nation will be tremendous. Tribulations, on a scale unprecedented in its history, and calculated to purge its institutions, to purify the hearts of its people, to fuse its constituent elements, and to weld into one entity with its sister nations in both hemispheres, are inevitable.

Dinner in honor of Mrs. Marion M. Little (extreme right) in New Orleans, prior to her departure, June 18th, for Europe as an itinerant teacher.
‘In one of the most remarkable Tablets revealed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, passages of which have already been quoted on previous occasions, written in the evening of His life, soon after the termination of the first world war, He anticipates, in succinct and ominous sentences, the successive ebullitions which must afflict humanity, and whose full force the American nation must, if her destiny is to be accomplished, inevitably experience. ‘The ills from which the world now suffers,’ He wrote, ‘will multiply; the gloom which envelops it will deepen. The Balkans will remain discontented. Its restlessmess will increase. The vanquished powers will continue to agitate. They will resort to every measure that may rekindle the flame of war. Movements, newly-born and world-wide in their range, will exert their utmost effort for the advancement of their designs. The Movement of the Left will acquire great importance. Its influence will spread.’

‘The agitation in the Balkan Peninsula; the feverish activity in which Germany and Italy played a disastrous role, culminating in the outbreak of the second world war; the rise of the Fascist and Nazi movements, which spread their ramifications to distant parts of the globe; the spread of communism, which as a result of the victory of Soviet Russia in that same war, has been greatly accelerated—all these happenings, some unequivocally, others in veiled language, have been forecast in this Tablet, the full force of whose implications are as yet undisclosed, and which, we may well anticipate, the American nation, as yet insufficiently schooled by adversity, must sooner or later experience.

‘Whatever the Hand of a beneficent and inscrutable Destiny has reserved for this youthful, this virile, this spiritually blessed and enviable nation, however severe the storms which may buffet it in the days to come in either hemisphere, however sweeping the changes which the impact of cataclysmic forces from without, and the stirrings of a Divine embryonic Order from within, will effect in its structure and life, we may, confident in the words uttered by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, feel assured that that great Republic—the shell that enshrines so precious a member of the world community of followers of His Father—will continue to evolve, undivided and unfeated, until the sum total of its contribution to the birth, the rise and the fruition of that world civilization, the child of the Most Great Peace and hall-mark of the Golden Age of the Dispensation of Bahá’ulláh will have been made, and its last task discharged.’

Latin American Administration Develops

Latin American Bahá’ís are moving definitely toward the goal of two National Assemblies by 1953. Central America and South America have now each its own National Teaching Committee and each country in these areas has its own Regional Teaching Committee located in a single city. For the first time the Latin friends will be directing things for themselves with only one North American pioneer on each National Teaching Committee, serving as its secretary and, in most cases, none at all of the North Americans on the regional committees. Pioneers, both North American and Latin American, are voluntarily giving up the authority and special prerogatives which they have had in the past in order that Latin American administration may take hold of these matters and develop to the point where it can continue uninterrupted when the National Spiritual Assemblies are elected. It is a transition year of great importance in the accomplishment of the Guardian’s objectives.

Central America

Marcia Steward is serving as secretary of the Central American Teaching Committee with headquarters at San José, Costa Rica. This committee is planning a Spanish news bulletin for Central America, Mexico and the islands. This will contain news, suggestions for teaching and a special article on some phase of the Teachings written by one of the better known Bahá’ís of the area. Sr. Guillermo Arias has been appointed secretary of the new bulletin committee in San Jose.

The Central America Teaching Committee plans to use the new correspondence teaching plan tried out successfully in Costa Rica last year wherever there are believers able to write good letters in answer to questions about the Faith. Difficult questions will be referred to the National Teaching Committee at San José. (For details of this correspondence plan see Bahá’í News for May, 1947, page 2.)

South America

Artemus Lamb has recently been to Chicago to consult with the Inter-America Committee about the plans of the South American Teaching Committee. These plans include an experiment in a city where a strong local assembly is already established. This assembly would put on a week’s series of public meetings presented by the Latin friends themselves and coordinated with radio and press publicity and visual displays such as posters, pictures of the Temple and displays of Bahá’í books in store windows. Prior to opening the series of meetings the chosen community will have intensive study of how to carry through adequate classes for those who become interested during the public meetings. The purpose of the experiment is to show the assemblies that they are capable of carrying on public teaching with a proper follow-through resulting in community activity and the addition of new members.

The South American Spanish bulletin plans to carry an article about the Teachings to stimulate knowledge and activity as well as news.

A Week of “Teacher Training”

The National Teaching Committee felt that the inspiring spirit of the convention was carried over into the Teacher Training Techniques Course held under their direction in Chicago from May 5th through May 9th. Forty-seven Regional Teaching Committee members, representing twenty-five states remained over for these classes. The sessions were also open to any Bahá’í interested in unique teaching techniques and attendance at each session averaged approximately forty-seven.

The various sessions were conducted by teachers qualified in their particular field. The first session was devoted to the study of the “God-Given Mandate” by Mrs. Florence Reeb. Mrs. Reeb has been teaching this course for the past year and emphasized the need for careful analytical study and discussion of the Mandate in every community.

Mr. Leroy Ios has presented the very important subject of Fireside Teaching. Mr. Ios pointed out that the fundamental point around which the success of this next year is going to revolve is going to be the Fireside meeting. He emphasized the

A Teaching Year

Beloved friends:

This is a teaching year. The American Bahá'ís, confronting the second year of the new Seven Year Plan, are called upon to teach through all our institutions, in all our communities, and by all our believers. Of first importance is the generation of the spirit of progress and achievement, a determination seizing upon us all, like one light igniting many candles. Next come plans and programs, to unify and coordinate the common effort. Finally we must apply rigorous tests of actual accomplishment to measure from time to time the product of our effort.

To assist the general effort, the National Spiritual Assembly has adopted certain policies and outlined certain tasks.

1. In a letter to every believer in June, the NSA requested each Bahá'í to accept the Master's challenge to confirm one soul each year, and resolve to bring in at least one new Bahá'í before April 21, 1948. "It is known and clear," 'Abdu'l-Bahá wrote many years ago, "that today the unseen divine assistance encompasseth those who deliver the Message. And if the work of delivering the Message be neglected, the assistance shall be entirely cut off . . . If every one of the friends were to establish relations of friendship and right dealings with one of the negligent souls, associate and live with him with perfect kindness, and meanwhile through good conduct and moral behavior lead him to divine instruction, to heavenly advice and teachings, he would gradually arouse that negligent person and would change his ignorance into knowledge . . . If by this method every one of the friends of God were to try to lead one soul to the right path, the number of believers would be doubled every year."

The mighty assurance revealed by Bahá'u'lláh: "Whosoever quickeneth one soul in this Cause is like unto one quickening all the servants and the Lord shall bring him forth in the day of resurrection into the Rídvan of oneness, adorned with the Mantle of Himself, the protector, the mighty, the generous!"

2. The smaller and less experienced Assemblies have been informed that the National Teaching Committee has been authorized to assist them in their teaching work, and to provide them with all possible assistance this year.

3. The larger Assemblies have received a letter urging them to accept the challenge of this teaching year by developing one group to Assembly status before April 21, 1948. Likewise the Assemblies and groups have been informed of the teaching call directed to individual Bahá'ís, and each Assembly and group has been urged to dedicate its collective effort to the great mission of attracting, teaching and confirming individuals, so that its number of members can be doubled.

4. The Guardian last year cabled that the National Teaching Committee was to establish new Assemblies to the number needed to produce a total of one hundred seventy-five local Spiritual Assemblies by April 21, 1948. This is a tremendous task and one requiring effort all along the line. In support of this task the National Assembly is holding special conferences with many Committees and coordinating as much as possible their services for the development of full capacity in areas where the greatest number of potential Assemblies are located. The policy adopted has been recorded as follows—"that in the consolidation of the Bahá'í community throughout the United States this year, coordinated campaigns will be conducted, combining public meetings, circuits, fireside meetings, publicity, radio broadcasts and other teaching aids."

5. A national Teaching Theme will soon be announced which can be developed through a series of four public meetings by National Committees and local Assemblies.

The Guardian's inspiring letter of June 5, announced in a special statement, focuses our attention upon the work to be done: "Ours . . . the task to cast our eyes upon, and bend our energies to meet, the challenging requirements of the present hour. Labors of an urgent and sacred character, claim insistently our undivided attention during the coming years of this new epoch which we have entered. . . . It is a Second Seven Year Plan . . . now entering its second year, and must, as it operates in three continents, be productive of results outshining any as yet achieved since the Divine Plan itself was set in motion during the concluding years of the first Bahá'í century."

National Spiritual Assembly

Schedule of NSA Meetings

The current schedule of meetings has been revised by addition of an extra day to the June meeting. The August meeting dates are to be from 9:00 a.m., August 2 to noon of Tuesday, August 5.

Organization Meeting of Local Assembly

Difficulties have arisen in a number of Assemblies this year concerning the proper application of Article VII of the By-laws of a local Spiritual Assembly. "... The officers shall be elected by a majority vote of the entire membership of the Assembly taken by secret ballot."

The problem is whether an election of officers can be held if only one or more members of the newly elected Assembly are absent from the city, ill or otherwise unavailable in person.

The interpretation given this By-law by the National Spiritual Assembly is that it requires opportunity to be given to all nine members to vote, and any absent member can vote by mail or telegram. Such a ballot makes the member constructively present at the organization meeting.

Were the provision to be taken literally as meaning that all nine members must be personally present before the Assembly can organize, it would open up the possibility of a delay of weeks or even months under certain circumstances before the Assembly could start its work. It would even enable one member to prevent the Assembly from being organized merely by staying away from the meeting. Balancing the rights of the individual member with the power and responsibility of the institution, the NSA declares that the member must be notified and given due right to vote for the officers, but that the Assembly must after this opportunity has been given proceed with the discharge of its duties. An absent member who does not vote after having the opportunity to do so may not invalidate the election by the others. His reason for not voting should be explained after he returns.
Our Measure of Speed
Dear Bahá'í friends:

Your Treasurer has been trying to bring to your attention each month the status of the Bahá'í Fund and the problems with which we are faced in our effort to support the four objectives of the Second Seven Year Plan.

In a letter dated May 9th from Haifa and signed by our Guardian in which he emphasized the need for speed in carrying out the initial steps required before work on the Temple can begin, he made a very significant statement and one which I think we all should ponder with great seriousness. He said "as all kinds of unforeseen complications may arise before the interior is completed, the sooner the first contracts are placed and work actually started, the better." Those of us who were associated with the Faith during the first Seven Year Plan realize that had it not been for the frequent admonitions of the Guardian from time to time we would never have been able to have completed the exterior of the Temple before the Centenary.

A word of warning comes to us at this time which carries with it the significance of the times which are ahead.

Receipts during the month of May amounted to $16,896.98. Our Budget calls for $25,000 per month, which means that we fell short in our contribution by $8,101.02.

As was brought out at the Convention much of the monies which are in the Bahá'í Fund at this time are earmarked and can be used only for specific purposes. In spite of the contributions given at the Convention which amounted to over $5,000.00 we are still using earmarked funds to the extent of $3,954.98, as of the report to the N.S.A. of week ending June 6, 1947.

The time is not far off when the Temple construction will actually begin. Funds must be put aside each month out of the general contributions to take care of the interior decoration, the European work, the National Teaching Committee work and the Inter-America work, which are still going forward. Pioneers have to be supported, their checks have to go out regularly.

Your Treasurer would like to emphasize again that the speed with which the Second Seven Year Plan goes forward is measured by our ability to support financially the four objectives.

Faithfully

PHILIP G. SPRAGUE, Treasurer

New Assemblies
As of April 21, 1947, the following new local Spiritual Assemblies have been established:
- California — Carmel, Inglewood, Monrovia, San Mateo, Illinois — Champaign, Limestone Township,
- New Jersey — Montclair (restored), Red Bank,
- New Mexico — North Albuquerque,
- Washington — Monroe (restored),
- British Columbia — Vernon,
- Ontario — Scarboro.

Expulsion of Two Bahá'ís
The National Assembly informs the believers that the Guardian has expelled from the Bahá'í community Dr. Abdullah Baher of New York with his mother Touty Baher who has recently left New York after a stay during which time she did not present credentials nor affiliate with the local community. The Guardian’s cable stated that they had "flagrantly disobeyed instructions."

In that same message the Guardian advised the NSA:— "Owing arrival of disloyal so-called Bahá'ís your Assembly’s control of credentials should be strictly exercised, otherwise corruptive influences will spread and injure the magnificent services being achieved by the American Bahá’í community.”

. . The Key That Unlocketh the Hearts . .

Say: This is the Day when every ear must needs be attentive to His voice. Hearken ye to the call of this wronged One, and magnify ye the name of the one true God, and adorn yourselves with the ornament of His remembrance, and illumine your hearts with the light of His love. This is the key that unlocketh the hearts of men, the burnish that shall cleanse the souls of all beings. He that is careless of what hath poured out from the finger of the Will of God liveth in manifest error. Amity and rectitude of conduct, rather than dissension and mischief, are the marks of true faith.

· Proclaim unto men what He, Who speaketh the truth and is the Bearer of the Trust of God, hath bidden thee observe. My glory be with thee. O thou that callest upon My name, whose eyes are directed towards My court, and whose tongue uttereth the praise of thy Lord, the Beneficient.

Letters from the Guardian

To Individuals

The following excerpts from letters written by the Guardian to individual believers are published with the Guardian's consent.

Use of Allâh-u-Abhâ

The use of “Allâh-u-Abhâ” in the East is, generally speaking, confined to a greeting. It is not said at the end of prayers and the Guardian feels that the less it is used freely in public by the Bahá'ís in the West (before strangers) the better, as it gives a very peculiar impression of us, and makes us seem like some strange Oriental sect.

Obligatory Prayers

As obligatory prayers require either genuflection or ablution and orienting toward Bahá, they cannot truly be said by one person for a group of people without it being in effect a form of congregational prayer, so he thinks it better to avoid it.

Peace Predictions

It is far too early to make any predictions about peace of any sort, judging by the ebullitions of the world's affairs these days! ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, in His Tablets, connects the prophecy of Daniel (587) with the proclamation and spread of the Cause. Other references regarding this date must be considered as hearsay.” —To Robert L. Gulick, July 3, 1946.

Future Guardians

“Future Guardians ... cannot 'abrogate' the interpretations of former Guardians, as this would imply not only lack of guidance but mistakes in making them; however, they can elaborate and elucidate former interpretations, and can certainly abrogate some former ruling laid down as a temporary necessity by a former Guardian.” —To Emérica Sala, February 19, 1947.

Anchorage, Alaska

The Public Meetings on Wednesday evening at the Anchorage Hotel were as follows for the month of May:

May 7—Vern Huffman reviewed “This Earth, One Country” by Emérica Sala.

May 14—Capt. S. A. Pelle—“The Need for the Bahá’í Faith”.

May 21—Betty Becker—“The Anniversary of the Báb”.

May 28—Capt. S. A. Pelle—“Science and Religion”.

To the National Spiritual Assembly

Assistance to Philippine Bahá'ís

He is not in favor, as he already wrote you, of sending the Philippine friends any other assistance than food parcels and some Bahá'í literature, and he does not want money forwarded to them, as the American believers have already a very heavy program to carry out, in connection with their present Seven Year Plan, and can not afford to dissipate their resources.—Shoghi Effendi, through his Secretary, May 9, 1947.

Warning About Orientals

As to your question as to what races should be regarded as coming under the heading of “Orientals” in connection with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s warnings: there is no doubt He was primarily thinking of the Near Eastern races of Islamic extraction, who have every reason to look upon the Faith either with contempt as a mere heresy within, or sect of Islam, or with hatred as a potential threat to the supremacy of their religion. Likewise, it is these Near Eastern races, particularly the Persian, who have been most persistently exposed to the propaganda and bad example of the Covenant-breakers, old and new, and from whose ranks these very Covenant-breakers have sprung. These circumstances, combined with the fact that, like his Prophetic Fore­bears, Bahá’u’lláh appeared amongst the people most in need of enlightenment—and hence at their lowest ebb morally—are the reasons for not only ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s and his own (i.e., the Guardian’s) repeated warnings concerning Orientals, but also for the conduct, so often demonstrated, unfortunately, by these same Orientals, and which amply justifies our attitude of great precaution and wariness concerning receiving them in the Palace.
our midst and believing their declarations to be sincere. Shoghi Effendi also feels that the Moslems of India should likewise be included in this category, owing to their respective religious and racial background.

If any credentials your Assembly receives, issued by other National Assemblies, are ambiguous in tone, you should write the body in question and request them to clarify the matter, and be more specific in the future. At present the Guardian does not want to introduce any set international form of credentials.—Shoghi Effendi, through His Secretary, May 9, 1947.

Note: The National Spiritual Assembly is issuing to local Assemblies, and to National Committees and Regional Teaching Committees, a bulletin on the reception of Orientals. The principle to be understood by all the friends is that every Oriental must have credentials before his Baha'i status can be recognized; and that credentials of believers from other countries are to be transmitted to the NSA. When accepted, new credentials are issued to those believers by the NSA, for their use while in America.

Baha'i Association with United Nations

He feels the friends should bear in mind that he is encouraging Baha'is' association with the United Nations to give the Cause due publicity as an agency working for and firmly believing in the unification of the human family and permanent peace, and not because he believes that we are present in a position to shape or influence directly the course of human affairs! Also, he feels this association will afford the believers an opportunity of contacting prominent and progressive-minded people from different countries and calling the Faith and its principles to their attention. We should associate ourselves in every way with all movements of UN which are in accordance with our principles and objectives; but we should not seek to take the initiative or . . . focus a glare of publicity and public attention on a very wide scale, upon ourselves which might prove very detrimental to our interests. He considered, for instance, the “Baha'i Declaration of Human Obligations and Rights” appropriate and believes this type of action to be wise and suitable.—Shoghi Effendi, through his Secretary, May 9, 1947.

Note: Baha'i association with United Nations is maintained by the National Spiritual Assembly through an appointed special committee.

The Importance of Direct Baha'i Activity

He cannot urge upon you all sufficiently, and through you the American believers, the importance of Baha'is realizing that direct, concentrated and efficiently carried out Baha'i work is not only their supreme duty but the best way they can serve the interests of humanity and hasten the day when at least the Lesser Peace will become a reality. We must always bear in mind that Baha'u'llah's Order is the sovereign remedy, and all other measures, inaugurated by the United Nations or various governments, are in the nature of palliatives, however sound and progressive they may be. We must concentrate on perfecting our characters as individual Baha'is and on maturing our still embryonic, and as yet imperfectly understood Divine Plan; and on building a tightly-knit, world-wide Baha'i community. We are relatively few in numbers, and have such a precious, unique and responsible task to carry out we must concentrate our full forces upon it. — Shoghi Effendi, through his Secretary, May 9, 1947.

Begin Temple Work this Year

The way the European teaching work is forging ahead and the number of pioneers being sent (and already settled abroad) greatly encourages him. It now remains for your Assembly to forge ahead with equal speed in carrying out the initial steps required before work on the Temple in situ can be begun. As all kinds of unforeseen complications may arise before the interior is completed, the sooner the first contracts are placed and work actually started, the better. As you know, he is very anxious to have work actually begun on the site this year, and he urges you to press the matter as much as possible.—Shoghi Effendi, through his Secretary, May 9, 1947.

Two Sisters Pioneer

The departure of two pioneers served as occasion for good Baha'i publicity in Peoria, Ill., papers and on the radio.

Miss Elinor Gregory, recently of San Diego, sailed in April for Scandinavia. She is a Baha'i pioneer to Oslo, Norway. About two months before this, her sister, Mrs. Lorraine Wright, arrived in Japan where she will pioneer. Since Japan is not in the Seven Year Plan, Mrs. Wright is not an “official” pioneer, but went to join her husband. Both sisters received the Baha'i teachings in Peoria, and both have been active in teaching the Faith.

A good story headed “Baha'i Pioneer Goes to Japan” was in Peoria papers and the same day Mrs. Wright was interviewed on the radio.

Even greater publicity came with Miss Gregory’s departure, for she too came to Peoria, her old home, before leaving for Norway. Peoria papers carried several stories concerning a Baha’i Community party held in her honor. Station WMMJ broadcast on its “Personality Parade” the story of Elinor’s teaching mission through the question and answer method with a wind-up by Elinor giving a splendid survey of the Faith. Our correspondent says: “Baha'i hearts in Peoria go with these sisters around the globe. It is as if part of our community had expanded to reach Japan and Norway.”
Canada Prepares the Way

The main work of the past year has been the planning and carrying out of teaching circuits. Willard McKay visited sixteen Bahá’í Communities, and spoke to more than thirty audiences ranging from small groups to more than one hundred people. McKay did wonderful work in meeting with the Bahá’ís themselves, encouraging them, and stimulating them through stressing the great need for pioneers.

John A. Roberts made two trips to the Eastern Coast, speaking to Halifax, Moncton and Charlottetown on the first visit and to Moncton and Charlottetown on the second. Emeric Sala made a Western tour, addressing large audiences in Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria, with an aggregate audience of more than 1,000 people attending 21 meetings.

Others who have done inter-regional work are: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop of Pasadena, Cal. who visited Vernon, Victoria and Vancouver, B.C.; Rowland Estall to Victoria and Vancouver; Doris Richardson, who attended the Maritime Summer School as visiting teacher; Harlan Ober and Elizabeth Ober who held meetings in the various Maritime communities; Audrey Robarts who visited Winnipeg, and assisted in contact work for the Public Meeting there; Duncan McAlear who spoke in the Maritime cities; Dorothy Baker, who gave several seminars in Montreal en route; Harry Ford, of Little Falls, N.Y. who addressed audiences in Hamilton and Toronto last November, and again, with Bahijiyih Ford, attending a Regional Conference in Montreal; Mrs. Robert Lee Moffett of Chicago, who has just given an Educational Seminar in Moncton, with meetings in Montreal and Toronto; Laura R. Davis who spoke in the Bahá’í Centre of Montreal.

Four bulletins have been mailed to our entire Canadian membership, telling of our plans and achievements, and urging all Canadian Bahá’ís to greater efforts in all teaching fields.

The first Nationally owned Summer School is a gift from Quebec Bahá’ís, and is situated at Beauval, Quebec, a beautiful spot in the Laurentian Mountains, fifty miles north of Montreal.

Summer Schools held during the past year have been under the direction of the Regional Teaching Committees, and are reported under their headings.

The Maritime Regional Committee is assisting the three Eastern Assemblies. Regional work, as such, is not yet developed. Each of these Assemblies has an ambitious extension project. Halifax is working in Dartmouth; Moncton has undertaken the opening up of Saint John; and Charlottetown is working toward an Assembly in Vernon, P.E.I. The Summer School was held at Keppock Beach, P.E.I. with visitors from each of the three Maritime Provinces. Doris Richardson of Toronto was the visiting teacher.

Radio has been used in Charlottetown, Moncton and Halifax. Firesides are flourishing, children’s classes in Moncton are well attended. New members have been enrolled but are in Assembly areas. An interesting Bulletin has been published by this committee.

Quebec Regional Teaching Committee. Here too the work has largely been in giving assistance to Assemblies within the Region. Regular meetings have been held, and two very fine conferences have been held. A successful dinner was arranged at the Montreal Centre when the Bahá’ís were hosts to many interested friends. Four bulletins have been issued giving news of activities and plans to all within the region. Assistance was given for the public meeting in Montreal. The committee is also working in conjunction with the Montreal Assembly in an extension project of great importance, that of opening up the city of Quebec to the Faith. This is both important and difficult as Quebec lies in the heart of French Catholic Canada.

Ontario Regional Teaching Committee has met regularly, and has sponsored a number of projects. Ottawa, the capital of Canada, was visited monthly for public meetings, and a Fireside maintained by the Ottawa friends. In Forest Hill Village a Discussion Group and Fireside have been conducted. In Brampton Sunday Evening Firesides have been held regularly. Scarboro has been very active, holding a large Fireside every Saturday evening, a study class every Monday evening.

Feasts have been held in the community and used as a means of attraction to those interested in the Faith. A Regional member, F. St. G. Spendlove, has held a class in advanced teaching at the Toronto Centre every Tuesday evening, and many from Toronto and vicinity have attended. The radio project, a series of 26 broadcasts over station CHUM each Sunday morning, was initiated by the Toronto L.S.A. and was assisted, both financially and by members taking part in the program, by Hamilton L.S.A. and the Regional Teaching Committee. Two Teaching Conferences were held at the Toronto centre under regional arrangement, and the Guardian’s “Mandate” was carefully studied, as well as consultation taking place on teaching and pioneering. Other methods such as pamphlet distribution and fireside work were discussed at length. Two teaching bulletins have been issued. An International Picnic was held at Queenston Heights Park, Niagara, where some of our American friends met with many Canadians. The sixth Summer School was held at Rice Lake with Mrs. Marzieh Gull, and Mrs. Harriet Pettibone as Teachers. Emeric and Rosemary Sala, and Robert Gulick taking a number of valuable sessions. Ottawa meetings have been addressed by F. St. G. Spendlove, Doris Richardson, Craig Weaver, John Roberts, Laura Davis, all of Toronto, and by Albert Rakovsky of Montreal. Many Toronto speakers have taken meetings in Hamilton during the year.
Conduct of Bahá’í Marriage Service in the Hazíratú’l-Quds

The National Assembly has decided that Bahá’í marriage ceremonies are not to be conducted in the Hazíratú’l-Quds, for the simple reason that the performance of a legal Bahá’í marriage is a function of the incorporated local Assembly and therefore should be conducted under the direct auspices of the local Assembly. The facilities of the National Office, moreover, are required for national Bahá’í matters.

Believers not resident in a city having a local Assembly qualified to conduct a legal marriage service may apply to any local Assembly which has been authorized to conduct the service by the civil authorities.

Anniversary of The Martyrdom of The Báb

July 9 (at about noon)
(Work should be suspended this day if possible)

News from Many Lands

India and Burma: A cablegram from Shoghi Effendi to the NSA of India and Burma urged united action in taking immediate steps for the purchase of a building in Delhi for a national Hazíratú’l-Quds. Shoghi Effendi sent 1000 pounds as his contribution for “this vital urgent need of the Faith in this present hour.” The Guardian says that the hour has struck when the Indian and Burmese community must take a great stride forward.

Bahá’ís in disturbed areas have not been harmed. We quote from the India and Burma News Bulletin: “During the recent riot, life and property of all were in danger but it is a miracle that we all were saved through a mutual understanding of our street community; otherwise we all would have met with the same fate as our other fellow citizens.”

Iran: This 45 month (October, 1946- July, 1950) plan calls for 62 reestablished spiritual assemblies and 95 new centers in different parts of Persia. The plan also includes definite aims in Arabia, Afghanistan, India, Iraq and Beluchistan. Not less than 45 families will leave Tihrayn to help establish new centers.

Italy, Florence: Teresina Gasperi Campagni has written to Mrs. Bolles in response with Mr. Giachery and Mr. Marangella, both of whom are now in Italy. She also expressed deep gratitude for the many packages she had received from Bahá’ís in America and other countries and wished this gratitude to be expressed in the Bahá’ís News, although she has written to each one.

Bulgaria, Sofia: Miss Marion Jack writes, “Work for the Cause goes on quietly, but surely; the only possible way under present circumstances. . . . All our printed Bulgarian matter was destroyed when one of our best and dearest Bahá’ís was crushed beneath her home. It is not possible to replace those precious Esslemonts just now, but here’s hoping! I have made it my business to make little compilations in note and copy books in English and French and as it is a joy to make these copies I can easily afford to let them linger among those who express interest in the Cause. . . . One dear dame comes once a week to read God Passes By or Gleanings, both of which she thoroughly enjoys.”

Germany: Word comes that “due to the wonderful help of our beloved friends in Persia and the United States we all are getting better again. . . . We even begin to increase a little (Continued on page 10) in weight... We are all conscious that the strength... means for us a high responsibility to dedicate this strength wholly to our work in His Holy Vineyard." Translation of books and pamphlets into German is going on. The Guardian urges especially the translation of God Passes By and this is being done.

The number of declared Bahá'ís has greatly increased in Germany during the past year. When the Faith was officially re-established in May, 1946, there were four local spiritual assemblies in Germany. A year later the number of assemblies has increased to 11, including the Local Spiritual Assembly of Vienna. In March the Youth Committee published the first issue of the Bahá'í Jugendbrief (Bahá'í Youth Letter). There are now eight Bahá'í Youth groups which meet often at regional meetings.

Wanted — Temple Guides

This year the National Spiritual Assembly has combined three committees into one—the Temple Program, Temple Guides and Temple Teaching—to be known as the TEMPLE TEACHING COMMITTEE.

This is a call to Bahá'ís far and near to help in the Guide work, as guide, host or hostess. Increasingly we all realize that the Temple Guide work is our outstanding way of reaching people from all parts of the world. Thus, it becomes the glorious task of the Temple guides to take the casually interested visitors and curiosity seekers and ignite in their hearts the fire of search during their tour of the Temple.

This year we have the added feature of the new temple slides, to aid us in our work and make it more exciting. This does not mean that less guides will be needed on the days the film-strip is used—on the contrary more will be needed, for the personal contact is very important and must be maintained.

Our Beloved Guardian is calling for a total of 175 Assemblies by election time of 1948. Those who take part in the guide work at the Temple are doing their part in that sacred mission.

May we suggest that you immediately drop a card to the chairman of the Guide department of this committee, Mrs. Harriet Hilpert, 924 Judson Ave., Evanston, Illinois—and reserve your day or hours of guiding.

A Letter from Shanghai, China

Dear Friends:

I have felt for a long time I should take a few minutes and write you regarding our group here in Shanghai—always the Bahá'í News carries news items about other communities and we would like our friends all over the world to know about us too.

Up until the arrival, a few months ago, of three boys in the Chinese Air Force who just returned from the States and who became Bahá'ís while training in Denver, we were unable to make much progress due to the lack of any Chinese in our group. Now, however, with the enthusiastic help of these boys, we are beginning to make some headway. On May 23rd we had a very nice evening; true, with only one guest, but he since has spread the word among some of his friends and despite the many present day handicaps in money-mad, disunited Shanghai, we are more encouraged now than at any time since the war and we are looking forward with great hope and plans for the future.

Much credit for the progress of the Faith in China must go to Mrs. Gates of Denver who herself is planning to come here in December. Through her untiring efforts and devotion to the Cause, these boys have returned here fired with the kind of enthusiasm it takes to be successful.

At the present time there are eight of us, Mr. Ouskouli, Mr. and Mrs. S. Suleimani, Mr. Touty (Iranians), Lt. Jimmy Chow, Lt. Wang Lee, Capt. Chu and myself. We hope soon it will be more.

We are now receiving the Bahá'í News quite regularly and appreciate it very much.

Sincerely yours,

Bernice Wood

National Appointment Tendered to Boston Bahá’ís

Mr. Matthew W. Bullock, who has been Chairman of the Massachusetts Parole Board, has recently been elected to the National Probation Association Board in recognition of his services and capacity. Mr. Bullock is a member of the Spiritual Assembly of Boston.
Sunshine Teaching — The Regional Teaching Committee of Southern California and Arizona illustrates a newly stressed technique for summertime teaching, through picnics and outdoor gatherings at various points in the region. This is at the home of Mrs. K. W. Steinhauser, Escondido, California. The group is about equally composed of Baha'is and interested friends.

Sunshine Teaching

Once again nature is providing a perfect setting for presenting the Message of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Vacation time — summer — rather than being a time to let down and relax in our teaching efforts, is the ideal time to tell our friends about the Faith. People want to get away from the routine, the usual, the grind of work and home. Everyone longs to get out into the sunshine and open air. Inviting our friends to a planned picnic, garden party, weiner roast or dawn worship out of doors is a natural thing to do. Having a few of the beautiful passages from the Teachings read and giving a short, simple and sincere talk about the Faith, then, becomes a summertime name for "Fireside Teaching," and activities of this nature have already begun:

In the Southern California and Arizona Region, a new impetus has been given to the teaching work through picnic gatherings promoted in various points in the area, and scaled to strengthen and encourage the local believers, and to interest their friends in the Teachings, while establishing ties of fellowship and friendship. So far, two have been held in Oceanside; one in Escondido (see picture); one in Southgate. Dates are arranged for San Diego and for Rainbow Valley. Those held so far have been attended by approximately forty. The general pattern of these meetings has been: Bahá'í prayers, luncheon (with all guests bringing their own, coffee or other drink provided by the hosts), a short talk by a Bahá'í on some phase of the Teachings, and then general informal discussion among the group. Even the friends of the participating Bahá'ís have clapped for further meetings, and have offered the hospitality of their grounds. Bahá'ís and friends together vote for the location of the forthcoming meetings.

The Miami, Florida, community held a garden party during the Feast of Ridván. It was a lovely sunny afternoon and there were about forty-five present, including Bahá'ís, youth, children and non-Baha'i guests. The Bahá'ís from Ft. Lauderdale were also present. One of the youth opened the meeting with a prayer, then a short explanation of the Ridván Feast was given, especially emphasizing the Holy Days. A youth next read an account of the Ridván from "The Chosen Highway" and another read "The Seven Candles of Unity." Games and a supper concluded the celebration.

Ruth Bryan Owen Speaks for Bahá'ís

The New York Bahá'ís have been taking advantage of the proximity of the United Nations by securing speakers from that organization to speak on a Bahá'í platform along the principles of the Bahá'í Faith. At the same time, the chairman gives a brief presentation of the Faith. The meetings have been very successful and, it is felt, of great value in acquainting the public with the striking parallels between our Faith and the highest political organization for world government.

On April 9th, Mr. Gerald L. Carnes, Liaison Officer between the Department of Public Information of the U.N. and the United National Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) spoke at the Bahá'í Center on the educational aims of UNESCO. There was a brief discussion period following his talk. Approximately 150 people attended.

On May 8th was held the third and last in a series of public meetings to be given at the Henry Hudson Hotel. The speaker was Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, author, lecturer, former Minister to Denmark, and daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan. Her topic was "The Force of Public Opinion" and her eloquence stimulated the audience to frequent spontaneous applause. The attendance was estimated at 450.

On May 25th, Mr. Raoul Aglon, author, lecturer, and now Official Adviser to the Secretary General of the U.N. spoke on "Ethical Principles of the United Nations." About 125 people attended.

Gifts of Equipment

The National Assembly has received a projector from Mr. Clarence Niss for use in connection with audio-visual or visual presentations in Temple Foundation Hall. Mr. Niss has also equipped the National Office with valuable equipment for maintaining its lists on address stencils and for addressing envelopes.

Baha'i News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Baha'i Community. The first issue appeared in December, 1925.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: "The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function...I would urge you to enlarge its scope...that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise.

"It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Baha'i activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in uplifting and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause."

Baha'i News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Baha'i News Editorial Committee: Roberta Christian, Chairman; Bertha Kirkpatrick, Gordon Fraser. Editorial office: 1101 West Genesee St., Lansing, Mich.

Please report changes of address to which Baha'i News is to be sent and other matters pertaining to its distribution to the Baha'i National Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

Radio Script Writing

At Green Acre

Burt Lowell Johnson, instructor in Radio Script Writing at Syracuse University will teach a course in this subject at Green Acre during Workshop Session, July 7 through August 16. This is an opportunity to learn how to do this vital work from an expert, and the friends are urged to take advantage of it.

Baha'i Around the World

News comes from our "Baha'i Service for the Blind" that the pioneers to New Zealand and to China have taken Baha'i literature in Braille with them. This means that, counting the United States, thirteen countries now have our Baha'i publications.

Decision Nears on Temple Construction

The three meetings of the Temple Trustees held since the Convention have recorded exceedingly important steps taken in the great project of completing the interior ornamentation of the “holiest House of Worship ever to be constructed in the Bahá’í world.”

The Bahá’ís who attended the Convention will recall that the Guardian had examined two studies and treatments of the modification of the Bourgeois design, and expressed his preference for Allen B. McDaniel’s sketches, with certain further modifications.

After consultation with experts it became apparent that the bowl seating arrangement could not be included within the financial limitation definitely set, and a seating arrangement prepared by Mr. Clarence Ulrich was adopted. Mr. McDaniel was commissioned to prepare an interior design embodying the Guardian’s directives as understood by the Trustees after consultation.

A Temple Construction Committee was appointed consisting of Paul E. Honey, Chairman, Mrs. Amelia E. Collin, Earsly Edna M. True, and Mr. Philip G. Sprague, for study and recommendation on technical, architectural and financial elements involved in placing contracts for the work.

A Temple Technical Committee was also appointed with the following members: Mr. Allen B. McDaniel, Mr. Robert McLaughlin, Mr. Edwin Eardley.

Both these committees combined in a meeting at Washington which examined the final design and prepared recommendations on selection of an architect, supervision of construction, costs, etc.

At the July meeting the Trustees recorded approval and acceptance of Mr. McDaniel’s revised plans as the final modification of the Bourgeois design. This action was taken with conscientious and prayerful regard to the three vital factors of architectural excellence, cost of production, and the time required for the construction work. The Temple Trustees realize that the completed interior will be even more important than the exterior, for it will be the scene of the meetings of sacred worship for which the Temple was conceived.

At the July meeting also the qualifications of a number of architectural firms were considered, and it is confidently expected that next month the Trustees can report the placing of contracts for working drawings and specifications, and arrangements for starting the actual construction work this year.

One word must be added. The progress of the Temple work from now on will call for the expenditure of some $90,000 a year for six years on an average. This in turn requires an average monthly donation for this project alone of between $7,000 and $8,000. At no lesser sacrifice may we deserve the supreme privilege of raising Bahá’u’lláh’s Temple in the heart of the Western Hemisphere at such a crucial hour in the history of mankind.

Assemblies Accept Challenge

Nineteen Local Assemblies have notified the National Office of their acceptance of the challenge issued by the NSA to establish another Local Assembly before April 21, 1948. In the order of response, the Assemblies are: Chicago, Philadelphia, West Chester, St. Paul, Detroit, New York City, Lima, Urbana, Los Angeles, Eliot, Teaneck, Boston, Milwaukee, Evanston, Long Beach, Baltimore, Peoria, Columbus, Pasadena.

In a letter to Local Assemblies having twenty or more enrolled believers, the National Assembly wrote: “In the light of these “challenging requirements” (set forth by the Guardian), the National Assembly asks you to accept a great challenge: no less than responsibility for bringing one group to Assembly status before April 21, 1948. By that date there must be 175 local Assemblies; and without the determined action of our stronger Assemblies this goal cannot be obtained! Prayerful consideration is called for.”
European Enrollments Now Five

The ETC shares with the Friends the news of the declaration of three more believers in Europe. There are now five souls who have arisen, in the course of a few months, from the ranks of a sorely stricken continent, to accept the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Many fine reports are coming from Europe of the public meetings, teas and firesides which have been arranged for the first of the itinerant teachers who are assisting in Europe this summer, Mason Remey and Mildred Motahedeh. The surprisingly large attendance at these meetings shows the broad scope of contact work being done by our pioneers.

The Committee is happy that it is possible for the chairman, Miss Edna True, to make a trip to Europe at this time. She will visit each of the European pioneer posts. Thus she will be able to give first hand aid to the pioneers, will survey the results of the teaching efforts of the first year and bring back valuable information to the committee on which future plans may be built. She will strengthen the efforts of the European teaching office and see in what manner our European teaching representative can assist in the plans now being made by the Swiss believers for their first summer school to be held in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1948.

Shoghi Effendi has given permission to hold a European Teaching Conference in the late spring of 1948. The ETC has tentatively planned that it be held May 22nd to 26th, 1948. The chairman will review this with the pioneers, so that plans for, and location of, the Conference can be determined.

On this trip Miss True will be accompanied by her mother and Dr. Katherine True. Mrs. True and Katherine will visit Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and Switzerland while Miss Edna True will make her circuit of the pioneer outposts. The Trues will sail on July 23rd on the S. S. "Noordam."

Sailing on July 25th, on the "Stavangerfjord," will be the 29th European pioneer, Mrs. Anna Kunz, member of the Urbana Community, who will visit the Scandinavian countries en route to her post in Berne, Switzerland. On this same ship will be Mrs. Beatrice Ashton of the Winnetka group, who will assist as itinerant teacher in the Scandinavian countries, Switzerland and possibly Germany. She will be abroad until September 23rd.

The committee hopes the believers will send in names and addresses of contacts which they may have in any of the ten goal countries and continue to pray for the success of the European phase of the Second Seven Year Plan.

You Are Earnestly Requested Not to Read the Following IF

You are fully satisfied with the NEWS as it now is.

If, however, you think the publication shows room for improvement we suggest that

1. You read the NEWS carefully each issue and
2. Let us know exactly how you would improve it and
3. Send us glossy photographs and news items (no returns, please!) for possible use.

Be as frank as you wish—we welcome criticism and ask only one favor: make it helpful.

You see, the NEWS has two jobs on its hands: we have to deliver to you all communications from the Guardian and the National Spiritual Assembly. We bring you these without changing them in any way. They are vital, and generally speaking you can find them only in the NEWS—because we are the only published medium of communication between the National Spiritual Assembly and yourselves.

Our other job is to let you know what your fellow believers are doing, and to tell them about you. This is where you come in. We can use criticisms, suggestions, news items, photographs, teaching ideas. We should like to hear from minorities and majorities, young and old, isolated Bahá'ís and communities—anyone who reads the NEWS.

As a matter of fact, if you care to discuss the NEWS at the next 19-Day Feast and let us know the results, we would be delighted.

Yours ever,

Kiwanis Magazine Reports Faith

An article about the Bahá'í Faith entitled "The Willkie of Baghdad" appeared on page 8 of the June 1947 issue of Kiwanis Magazine, which is published by the well-known international service organization.

The article which is illustrated with three photographs begins, "The atomic bomb has sealed a new state of world affairs. Sink or swim, we have to stay together. The United Nations, however infantile it may appear at the moment, is our only hope. Whether it is built more on the weakness of fear or the strength of common principle remains to be seen. But at least we have a new faith—that we must become citizens of the world first of all, citizens of a particular nation second.

"But is this a new faith? Well, a man of whom few of us have read was teaching it and trying to be heard by heads of governments nearly a century ago. He believed so passionately in world unity, world government and world citizenship that he made them his religion, or rather, he believed them because they were the essence of his faith..."

The appearance of this unsolicited article is another evidence of the rapidly growing public interest in the Faith.
Messages from the Guardian

“Unprecedented Blessings”

Rejoice evidences continued vigorous activity. Renew plea to have the independent status for believers possessing independent means volunteer European pioneeers and also itinerant teachers. Eagerly awaiting response Convention Message. Praying placing Temple contract before termination current year. Ardently supplicating unprecedented blessings manifold meritorious services. Deepest love.

SHOGHII EFFENDI through his secretary, July 7, 1947

Cremation

He feels that, in view of what 'Abdu'l-Bahá has said against cremation, the believers should be strongly urged, as an act of faith, to make provisions against their remains being cremated. Bahá'u'lláh has laid down as a law, in the Aqdas, the manner of Bahá'í burial, and it is so beautiful, befitting and dignified, that no believer should deprive himself of it.

SHOGHII EFFENDI through his secretary, July 7, 1947

Nine Holy Days

He wishes also to stress the fact that, according to our Bahá'í laws, work is forbidden on our 9 Holy Days. Believers who have independent businesses or shops should refrain from working on these days. Those who are in government employ should, on religious grounds, make an effort to be excused from work; all believers, whoever their employers, should do likewise. If the government, or other employers refuse to grant them these days off, they are not required to forfeit their employment, but they should make every effort to have the independent status of their Faith recognized and their right to hold their own religious Holy Days acknowledged.

The statement regarding Orientals he considers very well selected, and feels that it will be an added protection to the believers, especially those newly enrolled in the Faith.

Freedom of Appointment

The following statement was written to the N.S.A. by the Guardian through his secretary in a letter dated June 15, 1947:

“In going over the Minutes of your recent N.S.A. meeting he noticed that you had decided to try as far as possible to eliminate N.S.A. members from the national committees. Although he fully realizes your reasons for taking this decision, he feels it infringes on one of the fundamental principles of our administrative order which is freedom of choice—freedom of voters to elect anyone they please to local or national bodies, and freedom of the members of these bodies to appoint any Bahá'í, who seems best qualified for the work, to function on committees.

“The first consideration must always be the person best qualified for a job, and National Assembly members should in such matters not be either discriminated against, or in favor of, because of the position they occupy on the national body.”

New Believer Translates “Hidden Words”

The secretary of the Seattle, Washington, Assembly writes that a new believer there, Mr. Per Hallsten, has just translated “Hidden Words” into beautiful Swedish. They believe that this translation has been sent to Sweden for printing. Thus, individual believers everywhere, “new” and “old” serve the Faith, each according to his own ability or talent, and “The Word” envelopes the world.

“The Year 1335”

On page 38 of the Guardian’s letter (“The Challenging Requirements . . .”) the friends will note with interest his brief reference to the prophecy of Daniel: “It must reach the end of the first epoch in its evolution with the fulfillment of the prophecy mentioned by Daniel in the last chapter of His Book, related to the year 1335, and associated by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá with the world triumph of His Father.”

The words of Daniel are: “Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand, three hundred and fifty and thirty days!” (Some Answered Questions, p. 52)

The Master’s interpretation in Some Answered Questions states that “The beginning of his lunar reckoning is from the day of the proclamation of the prophethood of Muhammad in the country of Hijaz; and that was three years after His mission; because in the beginning the prophethood of Muhammad was kept secret . . . And Bahá’u’lláh in the year 1290 from the proclamation of the mission of Muhammad caused His Manifestation to be known.”

The year 1290 by lunar reckoning is therefore the year 1963 A.D.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá in other connections has used solar reckoning; and the general understanding of the believers has been that the year “1335” corresponds to 1957 A.D.

Let us recall that the Guardian, in the last paragraph of “The Goal of a New World Order” (The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, page 48) identifies the year 1963, the one hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of Bahá’u’lláh with the condition of public recognition and widespread Bahá’í influence.

“... that He may hasten the approach of the realization of that Wondrous Vision which constitutes the brightest emanation of His Mind and the fairest fruit of the fairest civilization the world has yet seen.

Might not the hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh mark the inauguration of so vast an era in human history?”

Again, we have the Guardian’s statement to an American believer recently published in Bahá’í News: “It is far too early to make any predictions about peace of any sort, judging by the ebullitions of the world’s affairs these days!” ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, in His Tablets, connects the

These Challenging Requirements

Dear Bahá‘í Friends:

The attention of the friends is directed by the National Spiritual Assembly to a number of passages in the Guardian’s message dated June 5. First, the reference to the American Bahá‘í community found on pages 28 and 29 of the booklet edition. How can a believer over-emphasize this remarkable statement: “In every state of the United States, in every province of the Dominion of Canada, in every republic of Latin America, in each of the ten European countries to which its inescapable responsibilities are insistently calling it, this community, so blessed in the past, so promising at present, so dazzling in its future destiny, must, if it would guard its priceless birthright and enhance its heritage, forge ahead with equal zeal, with unrelaxing vigilance, with indomitable courage, with tireless energy, until the present stage of its mission is triumphantly concluded.”

Here is a divine blessing such as the Old Testament recorded for the Jewish people—a mission which under the divine will must needs be fulfilled. A divine blessing brings with it guidance and energy, but these gifts are matched by the responsibility laid upon the community and its individual members. It becomes essential that we spur ourselves onward to the goal, and not merely accept passively the impetus furnished by other workers. A spiritual bounty is a task, not an assured income enabling us to live without effort.

Let us ponder frequently these words from the message:

“Its Capacity to Perform”

“Invested, among its sister communities in East and West, with the primacy conferred upon it by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Divine Plan; armed with the mandatory provision of His momentous Gifts; equipped with the agencies of a quarter-century-old Administrative Order, whose fabric it has reared and consolidated; encouraged by the marvelous success achieved by its daugther communities throughout the Americas, a success which has sealed the triumph of the first stage of that Plan; launched on a campaign of vaster dimensions, of superior merit, of weightier potentialities, than any it has hitherto initiated, a campaign destined to multiply its spiritual progeneyy in distant lands and amidst divers races, the community of the Most Great Name in the North American continent must arise, as it has never before in its history, and demonstrate anew its capacity to perform such deeds as are worthy of its high calling. Its members, the executors of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Plan, the champions of Bahá’, u’lláh’s embryonic Order, the torch-bearers of a world-girdling civilization, must, in the years immediately ahead, bestir themselves, and, as bidden by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, ‘increase their exertions a thousandfold’, lay bare further vistas in the ‘range’ of their ‘future achievements’ and of their ‘unspeakably glorious’ mission, and hasten the day when, as prophesied by His forerunner, their communities will finally and securely established upon the throne of an everlasting dominion, when the ‘whole earth’ will be stirred and shaken by the results of their ‘achievements’ and ‘resound with the praises of majesty and greatness’, when America will ‘evolve into a center from which waves of spiritual power will emanate, and the throne of the Kingdom of God will, in the plenitude of its majesty and glory, be firmly established.”

Another passage is the one on pages 23 and 24 which directs the European pioneers how to deliver the message. This direction applies also to each of us in North America. It reinforces our response to the Master’s challenge that we each conform our soul to the right attitude and the successful method: “How To Teach”

“They must be neither provocative nor supine, neither fanatical nor excessively liberal, in their exposition of the fundamental and distinguishing features of their Faith. They must be either wary or bold, they must act swiftly or mark time, they must use the direct or indirect method, they must be challenging or conciliatory, in strict accordance with the spiritual receptivity of the soul with whom they come in contact, whether he be a nobleman or a commoner, a northerner or a southerner, a layman or a priest, a capitalist or a socialist, a statesman or a prince, an artisan or a beggar. In their presentation of the Message of Baha’ulláh they must neither hesitate nor falter. They must be neither contempluous of the poor nor timid before the great. In their exposition of its verities they must neither overstress nor whittle down the truth which they champion, whether their hearer belong to royalty, or be a prince of the church; or a politician, or a tradesman, or a man of the street. To all alike, high or low, rich or poor, they must proffer, with open hands, ‘a radiant heat, with an eloquent tongue, with infinite patience, with uncompromising loyalty, with great wisdom, with unshakable courage the Cup of Salvation...’”

Of special import to local Assemblies is the Guardian’s passage on local incorporation and local endowments found on pages 7 and 8. Here the Guardian clearly gives urgent priority to the National Fund over local projects throughout the new Seven Year Plan. The National Assembly admires and appreciates the zeal with which local Assemblies might now initiate the collection of funds for local purposes in the field of teaching, publicity and headquarters space and equipment. But the Temple as it will be completed by 1953 is the first endowment of every American Bahá‘í. Nothing can exceed in scope the needs of Temple completion. There is a vital and necessary program of activity for every local community to maintain, but projects which need capital funds are depriving the National Fund of resources should be deferred. Bahá‘ís have perfect right to provide bequests to their local Assemblies for the creation of endowments. The point stressed here does not question that right, but makes a distinction between bequests and the diversion of current income by a local Assembly for local activities to a degree which removes the community support from the National Fund. The four great goals of the Seven Year Plan are goals set for every believer, and the local Assembly can do much to strengthen the connection between the community and the Guardian’s plan for America. As Shoghi Effendi says:

“The Process of Incorporation”

“The process of incorporation of properly functioning spiritual assemblies must be simultaneously and vigorously carried out. The forty-five assemblies now incorporated are the first fruits of an enterprise of great significance, which must rapidly develop in the days to come, as an essential preliminary to the establishment, and the extension of the scope, of Bahá‘í local endowments, as soon as the financial obligations incurred in connection with the completion of the Temple have been discharged.”

AUGUST, 1947
God Loveth Those Who Work in Groups

O ye friends of God! Today is the day of union and this age is the age of harmony in the world of existence. "Verily, God loveth those who are working in His path in groups, for they are a solid foundation." Consider ye that he says "in groups," united and bound together, supporting one another.

"To work," mentioned in this holy verse, does not mean, in this greatest age, to perform it with swords, spears, shafts and arrows, but rather with sincere intentions, good designs, useful advice, divine moralities, beautiful actions, spiritual qualities, educating the public, guiding the souls of mankind, diffusing spiritual fragrances, explaining divine illustrations, showing convincing proofs and doing charitable deeds. When the holy souls, through the angelic power, will arise to show forth these celestial characteristics, establishing a band of harmony, each of these souls shall be regarded as one thousand persons and the waves of this greatest ocean shall be considered as the army of the hosts of the Supreme Concourse.

What a great blessing it is when the torrents, streams, currents, tides, and drops are all gathered in one place! They will form a great ocean and the real harmony shall overcome and reign in such a manner that all rules, laws, distinctions and differences of the imaginations of these souls shall disappear and vanish like little drops and shall be submerged in the ocean of spiritual unity. By the Ancient Beauty, in this case and condition, the blessings of the great ocean will overflow and canals shall become as spacious as an endless ocean and each drop shall become as a boundless sea!

O ye friends of God! Strive to attain to this high and sublime station and show forth such a brightness in these days that its radiance may appear from the eternal horizons. This is the real foundation of the Cause of God; this is the essence of the divine doctrine; this is the cause of the revelation of the heavenly Scriptures; this is the means of the appearance of the Sun of the divine world; this is the way of the establishment of God upon the bodily throne.

'ABDU'L-BAHÁ

In Memoriam

Death proffereth unto every confident believer the cup that is life indeed. It bestoweth joy and is the bearer of gladness. It conferreth the gift of everlasting life. Miss Minnie D. Moore, Huntsville, Ala., June 13, 1947.

Correction: In the annual Schedule of N.S.A. meetings, page 12 of the June issue of Bahá’í News, the meetings of July 3, 4, 5, 6, 1947 were omitted.

prophecy of Daniel (1957) with the proclamation and spread of the Cause. Other references to this date must be considered as hearsay."

In God Passes By the Guardian associates the year 1935 with the Centenary of Bahá'u'lláh's mystical experience: "The year 1935 ushers in the blissful culmination of the words of Daniel: Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the end of the one thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."

Dr. Esslemont, as one notes in Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, page 303, received the impression at Haifa during the first months of the Year 1947-1948 that 1957 is the date foretold by Daniel. This is interesting in the light of many Assemblies' overemphasis on local needs today.

On page 7 he states "The forty-five Assemblies now incorporated are the first fruits of an enterprise of great significance, which must rapidly develop in the days to come as an essential preliminary for the establishment and the extension of the scope of Bahá'í local endowments, as soon as the financial obligations incurred in connection with the completion of the Temple have been discharged." He lays emphasis again upon the fact that our local activities must be partially subordinated to the needs of the Four Objectives and particularly the completion of the Temple. This is interesting in the light of many Assemblies' overemphasis on local needs today.

If the friends could translate the sentence "supporting the National Fund" to "supporting the Four Objectives of the second Seven Year Plan," I think we would develop a new attitude towards the National Fund; because certainly the degree to which we support the National Fund measures the progress which we are able to make towards the achievement of the Four Objectives of the second Seven Year Plan.

Our Budget set up this year by the National Spiritual Assembly was $25,000.00 a month, or $300,000.00 for this year. During the month of May and June we received only $37,000.00, which means that we were $13,000.00 short of meeting our requirements.

During July the Treasurer's Weekly Report to the N.S.A. showed contributions of $8,619.21 and disbursements for the same period of $11,605.46; and also showed an overdraft of earmarked funds of $5,780.45. Which means that in order to keep activities of the Faith going we had to draw upon earmarked funds to this extent, with the permission of the donors.

With the Guardian emphasizing the need for starting the inner ornamentation of the Temple before the end of this Bahá'í year, this picture looms up as a serious one. Because just as soon as building activities are started the demands on the Fund will be very great and it would be a great pity if the work, during this second Seven Year Plan, on the Temple had to be brought to a stop or delayed because of lack of funds to complete the project.

Supporting the Four Objectives

Dear Bahá'í friends:

By this time every declared believer in the United States has received the Guardian's most recent letter "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour."

In this wonderful document he has outlined every phase of our Bahá'í activity for the balance of the second Seven Year Plan, even to the point of our attitude towards local endowments.

International School Marks Latin American Progress

Three of the pioneers who attended the first Latin American session at the new Bahá'í International School in Colorado Springs, are leaving to perform projects in various Latin American countries. Charles Loas of Chicago left at once to visit Mexico City, then to assist the two new Mexican Assemblies in Puebla and Coatepec in their study and practice of administration, and later to visit Vera Cruz, where he will teach a new group and also lay the groundwork for the first Central American Bahá'í Summer School session, which will be held in that city December 5 to 10.

Miss R. Katharine Meyer of Washington is preparing to leave for Caracas, Venezuela, where she will assist the friends of that city and also the recently established student group in the nearby city of Maracay. Miss Mary Louise Kelsey of West Englewood, N.J., is leaving this month for Buenos Aires, Argentina, where she will aid the over-burdened Bahá'í Publishing Committee. Miss Kelsey will visit San Juan, Puerto Rico, and Bahia, Brazil, en route to her post, while Miss Meyer will do travel teaching down through the West Indies, visiting especially the new goal cities in Cienfuegos, Cuba; Santiago, Dominican Republic, and Spanish Town, Jamaica, en route to her objective.

Artemus Lamb, one of the teachers at the session, is doing travel teaching down through Central and South America as he returns to his post in Santiago, Chile. The International School is the gift of Mrs. Loulie Matthews of Colorado Springs. Mr. and Mrs. Matthews have turned over their beautiful summer home for the school sessions, which are conducted under the auspices of the National Spiritual Assembly.

The teaching classes were conducted under the direction of the practice assembly elected by the students, and programs were put on in dramatic form by the students themselves, the imaginary locale being Santiago, Chile. In this way they obtained actual practice in Latin American teaching. The practice assembly voted to recommend to the school committee and the National Spiritual Assembly that the school be made a Bahá’í Normal School, equipped to prepare teachers for service anywhere on the planet; a place where teachers from all countries can exchange experience and become enriched thereby; a place where the notable exponents of the culture of every nation will be invited to visit and to share this culture with the Bahá’ís.

Pioneering by native Latin American teachers in other Latin countries is getting under way. Sra. Natalia Chávez of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, has recently gone to Guatemala City, where she is assisting in the consolidation of that Community, and where she will help the friends in establishing their first goal city. Sra. Yvonne de Cuéllar of La Paz, Bolivia, will assist Gwenne Sholtis in opening up Cochabamba and Potosí to the Faith this year. Sr. Emilio Barros and Sr. Salvador Tormo and his wife, Adela, of Buenos Aires, are helping Shirley Warde in teaching the new student group in Rosario.

Marcia Steward is visiting and helping in the consolidation of the new Costa Rican assembly in Quépos, and the further instruction of several new groups formed in that country through use of the new correspondence teaching plan.

Gayle Woolson is visiting Medellín, Cartagena, Barranquilla, Bucaramanga and Mogotes, Colombia. Barranquilla and Bucaramanga are goal cities for this year. The regional teaching committee headed by Dr. Saul Hernández of Bogotá, hopes to reach its goal of eight assemblies by April, 1948. Colombia now has six assemblies. Colombia is also planning the first Bahá’í Conference and School Session for the northern countries of South America, to be held in Bogotá in December during the Pan-American Conference in that city. Measures are being concerted to draw the attention of all Pan-American delegates to the Bahá’í Faith.

Sunshine Teaching Continues

The Charleston, West Virginia community says, “With warm weather descending, it was decided to substitute picnics Saturday evenings for the social gatherings. The first, held on June 14th, was a great success, with nine Bahá’ís and twelve non-Bahá’ís attending.”

In New England, the Springfield, Mass., community held its annual meeting and picnic at the Skate House on Porter Lake, June 22nd. This was an all-day affair, the friends supplying their own picnic lunches. In Norwich, Conn., the annual picnic was held July 13th. A picnic lunch was served at noon and a Bahá’í speaker presented afterward. In spite of an all-day downpour of rain on June 8th, the Greenwich, Conn., picnic took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Welsh. Friends from New York, New Jersey and New England attended so that there were 50 present. Rustam Payman of New York City was the speaker in the afternoon and several informal talks followed the planned program. Many non-Bahá’ís heard the talks and enjoyed the Bahá’í fellowship.

X. Europe

1. The ten countries must evolve into strongholds from which the Faith can be diffused into neighboring territories.

2. The nuclei and new groups must be reinforced by more pioneers and visits of traveling teachers, and by development of the teaching work the pioneers must start among the native populations.

3. Local Assemblies composed of settlers from abroad are artificial and temporary.

4. The 25 pioneers already in the field are to be reinforced this year by as many additional pioneers as possible, particularly by those of independent means who can go themselves or send appointed deputies.

5. Translate, publish and disseminate leaflets, pamphlets or books in the nine selected languages.

6. Distribute literature to the public free on certain occasions and present it to leaders of public thought and to the numerous libraries.

7. Make immediate contact with the press and other agencies.

8. Use every opportunity to state the aims and teachings when attacked by its enemies.

9. Associate the Faith, but not affiliate it, with progressive, non-political, non-ecclesiastical institutions, social, educational or charitable.

10. Attend congresses and conferences, use contacts with colleges and universities, to spread the teachings.

11. If personally able, pioneers should attend either the British or German Summer School and make such connections as will help them do their work and also set up other summer schools under the auspices of the European Teaching Committee, to prepare the way for the schools that will be founded by the future assemblies in the ten countries.

12. Welcome and utilize any assistance which the British and German National Assemblies, and their committees, especially their Publishing Committees can extend, until the institutions to be founded in these countries can conduct their affairs independently.

14. Reinforce contact with each other through the European Office of the European Teaching Committee, by conferences on their plans, problems and activities, and concert measures for spread of the Faith in Europe, and prepare for the future formation of regional National Spiritual Assemblies which will precede the establishment of independent separate National Spiritual Assemblies.

15. Begin to establish administrative headquarters for the communities and future Assemblies in the various capital cities, through rental of suitable quarters, leading later to a national Hazíratul-Quds in each country.

16. In addition to the Assembly to be formed in each country, groups, even though small and weak, should be started in other cities.

17. The basic condition for successful teaching is for the pioneers to adapt the fundamental teachings to the cultural and religious backgrounds, ideologies and temperament of the different races and nations.

18. Pioneers must neither antagonize people nor compromise essential Bahá'í principles; they must be neither provocative nor supine, fanatic nor too liberal; they are to be direct or indirect in accordance with the receptivity of the person contacted; they must neither overstress nor whittle down the Bahá'í truths.

News From Other Lands

From Czechoslovakia. The following message to American friends was signed by nine believers in Prague: "Loving Baha'i greetings from Czech friends of the Holy teachings from their celebration of the Feast of Naw-Ruz, 194." Correspondence may be addressed to Vuk Echtner, Prague, Nusle II, 739, Czechoslovakia.

Hungary. News comes slowly but in April some relief packages had reached believers in Budapest and requests were being acted upon. "We had a beautiful Naw-Ruz meeting with four interested guests" writes Renee Szanto-Felbermann (Hidieg-Kutri-up 31/a, Budapest II).

Poland. Requests continue coming for literature and information on the Faith from people who have seen the Baha'i Esperanto bulletin.

Morocco. Madame Marie Claudet, former member of the Baha'i Assembly of Guayaquil (Ecuador) was reported in May to be on route to join her parents in French Morocco where she expected to pioneer for the Faith.

Switzerland. On Sunday, April 27, in the heart of the Bidvan season, all the Baha'is of Switzerland met together in Zurich. Among the 18 friends gathered around the conference table, Persia, England, Germany, Austria, Hungary, and the United States were represented.

Mr. Robert Gulick, of Berkeley, California, arrived in Geneva April 25th. His visit was in connection with the international trade conference going on at the United Nations Palace. From there he flew to Cairo, at the time the National Baha'i Convention of Egypt was gathered there. He expected to be back in Geneva in June after visiting Iran.

Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh was in Geneva from May 18 to 22. She was the first traveling teacher to visit European pioneers under the auspices of the United Nations' Committee. Since she is also the secretary of the Speakers' Research Committee for the United Nations, Mrs. Mottahedeh was able to make valuable contacts at the UNO. From Geneva she flew to Germany and also Austria.

Austria. Baha'is in Vienna were expecting a reply from the American military authorities concerning their application for permission to carry on Spiritual activities. They feel that their Children's work is very worthwhile.

From German Baha'i Youth Bulletin

Germany. A most interesting official report of Baha'i Youth activities in Germany gives us the following: The first great boom in youth work was in the first months of 1946. Young friends who were disillusioned and striving for better human relations joined the Baha'i Youth and are now studying and working for the Cause. There are now about 120 members in eight groups. The main activity is in the United States zone and Hamburg in the British Zone with promise of work in the French Zone. They have weekly meetings for study and discussion and arrange small parties for visiting cultural performances or other outings. Several groups may spend a Sunday together.

The first Youth Summer School ever held in Germany was the great turning point of last year as it was of outstanding importance in promoting unity among the youth and spurring them to deepen in the Faith. Some of the Youth Groups had been formed in places where there was no Assembly to take care of their needs and direct them. Therefore the National Youth Committee was formed and entrusted with the planning, execution and direction of measures which make for more efficient cooperation and coordination of youth activities throughout Germany.

Lack of literature prompted the friends to prepare and distribute a 93 page compilation of excerpts on Baha'i history and teachings. Further compilations are being made. Another feature is the Baha'i Youth Letter, issued quarterly with a circulation of 100 copies. On the International Symposium Day a representative of Baha'i Youth gave a broadcast of seven minutes on the origin, aims and development of the Faith. The lack of literature handicaps the work greatly. Youth activities are also hindered by lack of printing paper and difficulty in obtaining printing licenses.

Correction. We are sorry that in our January Baha'i News there was an overstatement of the progress of the Faith in Nurnberg. Herr Fred Kohler, secretary of the NSA of Germany, writes: "The National Spiritual Assembly has to date (May 8, 1947) not found it possible to regard the interested individuals as believers, as the requirements have not been met. It is hoped, however, that there will soon be a larger group or even an assembly in Nurnberg."

From India and Burma News Letter:

The NSA of India and Burma expected to move its headquarters from Poona to Delhi, the capital of India, during the month of May. They would occupy temporary quarters until they could find a suitable building to purchase. The Guardian has contributed £1000 towards the purchase of a permanent Quds.

Youth are reported active and enthusiastic in these countries. They have a National Youth Bulletin and have held their first National Youth Conference. In two or three cases a young believer has accompanied a veteran Bahá'í on a teaching tour.

Seven new assemblies were reported in April with the probability of two more.

The success of their summer school in India made the NSA determine to have a winter school also. In carrying out this plan many difficulties were encountered due to strikes going on in the community where it was held. Twenty-one students in addition to local Bahá'ís attended.

The Kolhapur Assembly arranged for the friends to go over to the Polish Refugee Camp on the outskirts of the city. Permission was given to speak to the inmates on the Cause. Two talks were given and translated into Polish which were so well received that the speakers were asked to speak a second time. The Bahá'ís gave gifts to the children and sick patients in the camp. A Polish translation of the New Era was placed in the camp library.

From India and Burma
Annual Report:

The annual report of the NSA of India and Burma reveals great activity and growth in those countries. In reading it one realizes what a great burden the many languages add to spreading the Faith. We quote: "India is a land of contrasts and disparities. If language be the basis of demarcating the limits of a country, India is not one but at least 33 countries. The task of our institution whose sole object is to make people realize the fact of the unity of mankind, is therefore, not an easy one. The difference does not exist only in language but the climates of the different provinces of this country differ greatly and with the climate the disparities in ideas and thoughts loom out and keep these parts apart from each other." Dr. Esslemont's book has already been translated and printed in thirteen languages besides English with translations in six other languages on the press. English is understood by the educated classes all over India.

The Burmese Bahá'ís suffered greatly during the war. The NSA appointed two Bahá'ís to visit Bahá'í centers in Burma and find out conditions and needs. "As a result the distressed Bahá'ís have been taken care of, their wants supplied, those who were out of occupation for lack of means reinstated in business." Steps were taken to repair damaged headquarters and to reestablish teaching work. A further bit from the report helps us to understand some of the difficulties which our Burmese friends are meeting: "The friends in Mandalay are engaged in wresting from the illegal occupants a property belonging to the Cause and in getting the supplementary passages of the New Era translated into Burmese and the entire book revised." The Guardian sent word that "He was particularly happy to see how active the beloved Burmese friends are."

“How Do We Train Our Children the Bahá’í Way?”

This question, in one way or another, has been repeatedly asked of the Child Education Committee by Bahá’í parents. Since present day psychologists tend to differ from the Bahá’í teachings in many aspects of their child training programs, the Committee referred the problem to Dr. Stanwood Cobb, eminent director of the Chevy Chase Country School, and long a Bahá’í educator.

Dr. Cobb’s qualified answer is as follows:

“In regard to any conflict between modern psychology and Bahá’í ideals or ideas, the modern psychology should be completely disregarded. It is based on an almost blasphemously false premise, that the child has no soul. How and why should we harmonize with such a pagan ideology? Insist at every turn upon what you here are: modern psychology and Bahá’í soul. How and why should we believe to be best for the child as a Bahá’í.

“The trouble is, we lack Bahá’í scientists and psychologists—but we must not hesitate to use what vision we have, even as lay thinkers, and insist on giving the child what we, as Bahá’ís, think it needs.

“Some of the things we try to do here are:

1. To surround the child with love, so that if not already expressive and radiant, it becomes so. The vibrations from the Bahá’í Kingdom enable Bahá’ís to stimulate children with the most wonderful love that has ever come to earth. Christian love can’t equal it. So this is a great opportunity for Bahá’ís.

“2. To establish an atmosphere of peace and security. We do not here permit children to ‘fight it out’, to learn by the give and take of aggression—as some nursery schools do. We try to anticipate all troubles and frictions and prevent any manifestation of quarrelsomeness . . .

“We believe here that while children should as much as possible be given choices, and be treated with courtesy which we expect from others, there are plenty of occasions when they must obey without discussion, delay, or quarrelsomeness. We insist on a sweet obedience, when needed.”

Character building is the greatest need of our training today. Shoghi Effendi, in a reply to Mrs. Ruth Moffett (March 12, 1944), writes: “. . . Prayer is only one factor in this (character building); they must learn to live up to the ethical teachings of the Faith . . . Once young people become convinced of the existence of the soul they should not need much convincing that material training and material progress are not sufficient. The soul needs training and help also.”

CRISIS

The American Believers must face the fact that the national fund is dangerously low. The monthly budget set for general expenses and the Temple construction is $25,000 each month. The NSA has a total deficit of $40,000 since the convention.

Unless this condition is remedied, drastic effects upon our efforts toward the goals of the Second Seven Year plan will result!

Pioneers so desperately needed for the work in Europe and Latin America must be recalled!

The important work of promulgation to the masses so emphasized by our Guardian must be suspended!

Funds for radio, national program, public relations and other vital service committees which have so broadened interest and information on the Faith must be curtailed!

The first Temple contract has been let. Tight market conditions for both labor and materials will not admit of any delay or tardiness in construction. The work of the Temple must go forward on schedule.

Our Guardian has set before us a stirring challenge. By Assembly and Individual response we have assured him of our readiness to achieve the victories desired. Talks and promises are not enough for this. Only well rounded and sustained action and support can accomplish the task. First things must come first.

In an age of dunning solicitation, raffles and benefits which bribe contribution by the promise of self-enrichment, our Faith has initiated and held to a standard of maturity in its emphasis upon financial support. It does not separate the devotion of contribution from the devotion of prayer. Both have the same dignity and the same obligation.

WHAT IS THE MEASURE OF YOUR DEVOTION?

Message Sent to World Esperanto Congress

The following message was cabled to the World Esperanto Congress while meeting in the city of Berne, Switzerland, July 28 to August 1, 1947:

"American Bahá'ís send cordial greeting, devoted best wishes, (to) Thirty-second World Congress; sharing your conviction (that) supreme goal (of) world unity calls for one auxiliary international language and script to provide unrestricted communication for union (and) cooperation (of) all nations (and) peoples. Our prayers appeal (to the) Divine Father (for) help (and) guidance (for) your important deliberations."

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

First Bahá'í Endowment in 'Akká

The National Spiritual Assembly has received from the Guardian the certificate of registration of a piece of property located in 'Akká consisting of a shop and land, donated to the Faith by an old and devoted believer of 'Akká, Mr. Qazim Toza. The registration has been entered by Shoghi Effendi in the name of the Palestine Branch of the American National Spiritual Assembly. This endowment is of historic significance inasmuch as it represents the first Bahá'í endowment in that city so intimately associated with the exile and imprisonment of Bahá'u'lláh.

The believers will recall how the Guardian established the Palestine Branch of the NSA a number of years ago as a religious body having legal status in Palestine and capable of holding title to religious property. The first properties transferred to the Palestine Branch were those areas on Mount Carmel purchased by American Bahá'ís in order to protect the Shrine of the Báb.
First Temple Contract Signed by Trustees

At 12 o'clock noon, August 4, the Temple Trustees signed the first contract for construction of the Temple interior. Meeting in the spacious living room of the Fellowship House at Green Acre, the Trustees opened the active phase leading to construction work.

Mr. Alfred P. Shaw of Chicago is the architect selected to carry forward the remaining stage of Temple construction. Mr. Shaw has been responsible for the architectural work on many widely-known buildings in Chicago, including the Field Building, the Museum of Science and Industry, and the Merchandise Mart.

In the months following the Annual Convention, the Temple Trustees’ Construction Committee made a very thorough investigation of architectural firms in the Chicago area. The members were especially interested in the record of work done and the quality of specialized technical personnel able to carry forward the theme of the Bourgeois design into the finished interior. They investigated more than a dozen individual architects and architectural firms, and their survey resulted in the choice of Mr. Shaw.

Negotiations with Mr. Shaw were initiated early in July, and a formal contract with Mr. Shaw and his firm for architectural services was presented to the Trustees at the August meeting. This contract has been reviewed by specialized legal counsel, as well as by the Baha’i Technical Advisory Board consisting of Mr. Allen B. McDaniel, Mr. Robert McLaughlin and Mr. Edwin Eardley. Upon recommendation by the Trustees’ Construction Committee and the Technical Board, the Trustees signed the contract with Mr. Shaw on August 4. He and his associates are now engaged in the preparation of working drawings and plans and specifications for the Temple interior construction work.

Preliminary Studies Completed

As announced in the August Baha’i News, the Temple Trustees in July approved the revised plans for the interior submitted by Mr. Allen B. McDaniel. The treatment of the interior embodied in his plans followed the specific instructions of the Guardian. This approval marked the end of preliminary studies of modification of the original Bourgeois design.

Mr. Bourgeois, before his death, completed small-scale drawings of his concept of the interior ornamentation, but did not complete working drawings and full-scale renderings. Mr. McDaniel modified these designs and adapted them to the Baha’i form of worship to be used in the Temple. With the approval of Mr. McDaniel’s modification, the Trustees faced the problem of securing the services of a Chicago architect qualified to assume responsibility for seeing the project through to completion.

Forward to Construction

The next step is the preparation of detailed drawings and specifications, and the full-scale drawings necessary for the letting of contracts and the start of actual construction work in the interior. Mr. Shaw and his associates have started this.

The Trustees hope that preliminary contracts for the new stairway system, required by the modified plans, can be let before the end of the current calendar year. The working drawings for the completed interior will be ready early in 1948, at which time contracts for the interior ornamentation can be placed.

The contract with Mr. Shaw provides that final architectural and engineering decisions are to be made jointly by the architect and the Baha’i Technical Advisory Board, subject to subsequent confirmation by the Temple Trustees. This insures that the project will be carried out strictly in accordance with the wishes of the Guardian and within the spirit of the original Bourgeois design.

A panel of Baha’i experts in specialized fields, such as color, lighting, etc., has been set up. The Technical Advisory Board will seek the opinions of those Baha’is who are qualified by training and experience to offer helpful ideas in connection with carrying out the Temple project.

These Are Historic Days

The few early believers who caught the vision of the Temple as a symbol of the coming Kingdom of God have given us a heritage of sacrifice and patient devotion. To them ‘Abdu’l-Baha wrote: “When the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár is accomplished, when the lights are emanating therefrom, the righteous ones are presenting themselves therein, the prayers are performed with supplication towards the

More Assemblies Accept Challenge

Relationship of Bahá’í Faith to Palestine

Shoghi Effendi Makes Statement to United Nations Special Committee on Palestine
(Note: The Guardian has sent to the National Spiritual Assembly a copy of a communication he addressed to the Chairman of United Nations Special Committee on Palestine, meeting in Jerusalem, in reply to the latter's request for an expression of the religious interests of the Bahá’ís in Palestine. The text of the Guardian’s letter is reproduced in Bahá’í News for the information of the believers.)

Mr. Justice Emil Sandstrom,
Chairman,
United Nations Special Committee on Palestine.

Sir:

Your kind letter of July 9th reached me and I wish to thank you for affording me the opportunity of presenting to you and your esteemed colleagues a statement of the relationship which the Bahá’í Faith has to Palestine and our attitude towards any future changes in the status of this sacred and much disputed land.

I am enclosing with this letter, for your information, a brief sketch of the history, aims and significance of the Bahá’í Faith, as well as a small pamphlet setting forth its views towards the present state of the world and the lines on which we hope and believe it must and will develop.

The position of the Bahá’ís in this country is in a certain measure unique: whereas Jerusalem is the spiritual center of Christendom it is not the administrative center of either the Church of Rome or any other Christian denomination. Likewise although it is regarded by Moslems as the spot where one of its most sacred shrines is situated, the Holy Sites of the Muhammadan Faith, and the center of its pilgrimages, are to be found in Arabia, not in Palestine. The Jews alone offer somewhat of a parallel to the attachment which the Bahá’ís have for this country inasmuch as Jerusalem holds the remains of their Holy Temple and was the seat of both the religious and political institutions associated with their past history. But even their case differs in one respect from that of the Bahá’ís, for it is in the soil of Palestine that the three central Figures of our religion are buried, and it is not only the center of Bahá’í pilgrimages from all over the world but also the permanent seat of our Administrative Order, of which I have the honor to be the Head.

The Bahá’í Faith is entirely non-political and we neither take sides in the present tragic dispute going on over the future of the Holy Land and its peoples nor have we any statement to make or advice to give as to what the nature of the political future of this country should be. Our aim is the establishment of universal peace in this world and our desire to see justice prevail in every domain of human society, including the domain of politics. As many of the adherents of our Faith are of Jewish and Moslem extraction we have no prejudice towards either of these groups and are most anxious to reconcile them for their mutual benefit and for the good of the country.

What does concern us, however, in any decisions made affecting the future of Palestine, is that the fact be recognized by whoever exercises sovereignty over Haifa and Acre, that within this area exists the spiritual and administrative center of a world Faith, and that the independence of that Faith, its right to manage its international affairs from this source, the right of Bahá’ís from any and every country of the globe to visit it as pilgrims (enjoying the same privilege in this respect as Jews, Moslems and Christians do in regard to visiting Jerusalem), be acknowledged and permanently safeguarded. The Guardian’s statement on the Faith will appear in an early issue of World Order Magazine, and reprints of it will be made available through the Publishing Committee.

The Sepulchre of the Bab on Mt. Carmel, the Tomb of ‘Abdul-Bahá in that same spot, the Pilgrim Hostel for oriental Bahá’ís in its vicinity, the large gardens and terraces which surround these places, all of which are open to visits by the public of all denominations, the Pilgrim Hostel for western Bahá’ís at the foot of Mt. Carmel, the residence of the Head of the Community, various houses and gardens in Acre and its vicinity associated with Báb’s incarceration in that city, His Holy Tomb at Bahji, near Acre, with His Mansion which is now preserved as a historic site and a museum (both likewise accessible to the public of all denominations), as well as holdings in the plain of Acre—all these comprise the bulk of Bahá’í properties in the Holy Land. It should also be noted that practically all of these properties have been exempted from both Government and Municipal taxes owing to their religious nature. Some of these extensive holdings are the property of the Palestine Branch of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States and Canada, incorporated as a religious society according to the laws of the country. In future various other Bahá’í National Assemblies will hold, through their Palestine Branches, part of the International Endowments of the Faith in the Holy Land.

In view of the above information I would request you and the members of your Committee to take into consideration the safeguarding of Bahá’í rights in any recommendation which you may make to the United Nations concerning the future of Palestine.

May I take this opportunity of assuring you of my deep appreciation of the spirit in which you and your colleagues have conducted your investigations into the troubled conditions of this Sacred Land. I trust and pray that the outcome of your deliberations will produce an equitable and speedy solution of the very thorny problems which have arisen in Palestine.

Yours faithfully,

(Signed) SHOGHI RABBANI

National Bahá’í Program

Beloved friends:

Step by step there has developed for the American believers this year the policies and plans needed for a sound National teaching effort. First, each individual Bahá’í received an appeal to do his utmost to confirm one new believer before April 21, 1948. Second, the groups were urged to create the spiritual conditions of growth and to realize their responsibility in striving to attain Assembly status next April. Third, the smaller communities were encouraged to double their membership during the year. The help of the Regional Teaching Committees has been offered them. Fourth, the larger communities were challenged to adopt one or more nearby groups and help bring it or them to Assembly status.

Fifth, the Guardian’s powerful communication, “The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour” was printed and circulated to all the friends.

Sixth, the National Assembly selected a theme and four subjects explaining it as the basis of the national campaign. Local Assemblies conducting their own series of meetings are free to employ the theme in their meetings, their publicity and their advertising work. “World Faith for World Freedom” is the general theme. The four subjects suggested for a series of four public meetings are: “The Search for Faith,” “The Search for Freedom,” “Credo for a World Community,” and “Bahá’í—A World Program.”

Seventh, the NSA has held conferences with each of the several national committees directly concerned in a coordinated national teaching campaign, and also has conducted joint conferences with them together. Out of these discussions has been welded a new conception of how several national committees can work together for a common purpose under the general supervision of the NSA. What has been the cause of this particular evolution of method?

—The Guardian’s call for a total of 175 local Spiritual Assemblies in North America by April 21, 1947. This call came last year. It produced a great intensification of effort along the teaching lines followed in the past, but the result indicated that the Guardian’s goal would not be attained through the effort of any one national committee alone.

For example—there were 138 Assemblies listed in the Bahá’í Directory dated July, 1946, and 142 (with one doubtful) in the Directory dated July, 1947—a net gain of only four or five Assemblies in half the allotted time. The Guardian’s call means that 32 or 33 new Assemblies must be elected on April 21, 1948.

Eighth, the key to a more powerful, a more broadly conceived and a more continuous attack on the problem of bringing 32 or more groups to Assembly status between September, 1947 and April, 1948, was found in the conception of a general designation for a coordinated campaign which would not indicate that any one committee was conducting the campaign when actually four committees might be involved. The National Assembly therefore adopts the title “National Bahá’í Program” and wishes it used in connection with all the coordinated work entered into this particular campaign. This designation can only be employed by committees specifically empowered by the National Spiritual Assembly. The committees so empowered, those participating in the coordinated public campaign, are: National Teaching Committee, Visual Education Committee, Radio Program Committee, and Public Relations Committee.

The Campaign

The teaching campaign which this year is known as “National Bahá’í Program” is based on intensive and progressive work in three areas which include the largest number of large groups: Southern California, Illinois-Wisconsin, and New Jersey-Connecticut.

In each of these three areas four towns have been selected because in them are groups which with the right kind of help can be brought to Assembly status this year. Subject to some correction, the towns are: California—Inglewood, Burbank; Illinois—Park Ridge, Winnetka, La Grange; Wisconsin—Shorewood; New Jersey—Englewood, Jersey City, Newark; Connecticut-Westport.

The teaching method combines advance publicity and advertising; advance radio announcements and programs; public display material—all aimed at creating interest in two (Continued on page 6)
"The Secret of Right Living"

Dear friends:

The Báb said: "You are the bearers of the Name of God in this Day." From the time He uttered those words to the Letters of the Living, many men and women have walked the path of sacrifice as the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh has been unfolded and spread throughout the world.

Looking back through the years we can see the inspiring and flaming heritage which has come to us through the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. It is a heritage of service and love and sacrifice. The men and women who have responded to the call of God have lived by faith, trusting in Bahá'u'lláh to guide and sustain them. Through unity and faith, the humble have become spiritually mighty, and the few have been able to erect the structure of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The Guardian has reminded us: "We must be like the fountain or spring that is continually emptying itself of all that it has and is continually being refilled from an invisible source. To be continually giving out for the good of our fellows undeterred by the fear of poverty and reliant on the unfailing bounty of the source of all wealth and all good. This is the secret of right living."

Can we hesitate when confusion and chaos increase around us? Can we not sacrifice physical luxuries in order to give spiritual necessities to the people of the world?

The National Fund is our constant way of advancing the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. From the farm, from the factory, from the office, from the home—wherever we are and however we work—through the National Fund we serve the four immediate objectives of our Faith.

1. Completing the interior of our Temple—the first contract has been signed and work will soon be starting.

2. Creating three new National Spiritual Assemblies—the Canadian friends will elect their NSA next spring. Our teaching assistance to our Latin American brethren goes forward steadily as they strengthen the foundations for their National Assemblies.

3. Creating centers in ten European countries — enrollments of European believers are beginning to come in. Our pioneers there face tremendous problems in a continent whose civilization is shattered. We must continually assist them in their heroic efforts.

4. Proclamation and consolidation of the Faith in this country—a National Bahá'í Campaign is being worked out to be started this fall.

These four objectives you and I support with every contribution we send to the National Fund. But receipts for the first three months since Convention have been almost $25,000 short of our goal for that period. We, who have been called "the bearers of the Name of God in this Day," cannot slacken in our strides forward. Let us show the measure of our faith!

It costs $1,500 a year to maintain a pioneer in Europe, plus transportation which is between $275 and $325, according to available accommodations. But these pioneers represent us. They go with our prayers and labor in our stead, in a spiritually sick and devastated continent.

One of our assemblies recently reviewed its obligations to the Faith and determined that its contributions to the National Fund this year must equal and exceed that of last year. This is a small assembly, the members of which far surpassed their usual contributions in celebration of the Anniversary of the Guardianship. Yet the members reckoned what the minimum must be each month if before next Convention they are to surpass their contributions of last year. Such planning and such steady resolve will enable us to meet our larger budget of this year... What will the response of your Assembly be? What will your personal response be?

Faithfully yours,

Philip Sprague, Treas.
National Bahá’í Program

The work of the participating committees—National Teaching Committee, Visual Education, Radio and Public Relations Committees is not restricted to the operation of the Public Bahá’í Campaign described above. Each has its separate and distinct functions over and above those which enter into the coordinated effort. But the objective of 175 Assemblies this year is one of our weighty tasks under the new Seven Year Plan. Whatever can be done by any individual, group, community or committee to help attain the great goal will be a blessed work meriting the gratitude of all American Bahá’ís.

Why 175 Assemblies? Because no lesser number will create here in North America the strength needed to achieve the full purpose of the Divine Plan by 1953 in South America, in Europe and in completion of Temples interior. The formation of new Assemblies is therefore of crucial importance.

Nineteen New Believers in Europe

(Notes from European Teaching Committee)

We share the good news that there are nineteen new confirmed believers in Europe. These are in Italy, Sweden, Spain, Denmark, Holland and Belgium. Four more pioneers sail August 27: Mildred Elmer of Baltimore to Berne, Switzerland; Doris Lohse of Washington, D.C. to Belgium; David Reed Blackmer of Syracuse, N.Y. to Luxemburg; and Valeria Lamb Nichols of Los Angeles to assist in six of the goal countries.

In addition many itinerant teachers have been assisting in teaching. Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh spoke in eight of the goal cities; her business also took her to England, France, Germany and Austria where she was able to serve the believers. Mr. Charles Mason Remey not only assisted the pioneers in the goal countries but made many trips to outlying points to visit isolated believers and those who had previous knowledge of the Faith. Mrs. Eva Mae Barrow spent two months in Europe assisting in several goal countries. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Brown while on a business trip to Sweden visited the Scandinavian countries and greatly assisted the pioneers there. Mrs. Marion Littel who expects to be in Europe six months to a year has already aided three of our goal cities.

Anna Kuns sailed for Berne, Switzerland, on July 22, 1947 via Norway, to pioneer.
ies mimeographed. Personal teaching continues in several instances and work with the interested people in Bussum continues.

Two groups heard Mr. Remy, one at a private home and the other over the dinner table with excellent contacts at both occasions.

A letter from one friend tells how much he desires to learn enough of the Faith to become a Bahá’í in order to teach the beloved Truth to all who will listen. Another letter from one who was leaving for the Dutch East Indies says that he wishes to keep in touch with Bahá’ís wherever he goes.

Sweden: "We had a fireside in my home the evening that the Mottahedehs arrived. Thirteen arrived including a man from South Africa who had heard of the Cause three years ago. He was so impressed that when he called me later to thank me for the evening he said it was the most wonderful evening he had spent in Sweden and he could not find words to express his feelings. He is reading and wishes to buy books to read to his family. He took names of Bahá’ís in Pretoria, South Africa, where he expects to return.

"Mrs. Anderson had a fine fireside with eighteen or nineteen present. A young reporter who interviewed Mrs. Mottahedeh and me became interested in the Faith and asked for literature and invitations to meetings.

"We have had a wonderful Bahá’í meeting at the Esperanto Club. We are invited to put on another program this fall when the club resumes activities again."

Among those present at a tea given in honor of one of our pioneers in Stockholm were a young lawyer who had visited the shrines in Haifa and a woman who had heard about the Faith about twenty years ago, probably from Martha Root. A talk was given and literature distributed at this tea.

Again we quote: "I received a call from Bishop Brown just after I had finished reading The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour. I was so stirred by the Guardian’s Message that when the phone rang and a voice said Alláh-u-Abhá I could hardly speak."

Three firesides were arranged for the Browns for three different groups. Among the many present were a woman who had heard of the Cause through Sir Francis Younghusband and another who said she would invite people to her home in the autumn to hear about the Faith. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and Mr. Buffa of South Africa had heard of the Faith years ago.

"We were all extremely happy over the firesides, especially since I had gotten them up on the spur of the moment. The physical exhaustion of cleaning the house, cooking for over forty people and writing and telephoning to over fifty people was a small price to pay for the interest shown in the Faith."

Norway: Mrs. Wang, the Chinese secretary at the Chinese embassy, is very eager to learn about the Bahá’í Faith so that she can teach the Bahá’í message to her people when she goes back to China. Mrs. Wang took literature in French because Mr. Wang was educated in Paris and Brussels and knows French well.

Luxembourg: A fireside of young people was held at the home of Honor Kempton one evening when Johnny Eichenauer, Ted Weiss and the Davidsons drove to Luxembourg from Germany. Fourteen in all were present. Johnny spoke of the friends in Germany and the Bahá’í work they are doing. He spoke simply but so sincerely, touched on his work in Central America, then told of the privileges and responsibilities of being a Bahá’í. Bruce Davidson quietly told the group that he wanted to feel when he passed on that he had helped toward building a better world and that the only way to accomplish this goal was through the Bahá’í Faith. Ted also spoke with utter sincerity. It showed the difference between those boys with a "Cause" in their lives and those that had no aim. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson also spoke a few words.

Mr. Remy’s visit followed directly after that of this group from Germany. Fruitful contacts were made at a tea at the American Legion and the next day at luncheon a gentleman from New York became vitally interested in the Faith.

Rome: "Miss Del Buono is June’s (Marangella) Italian teacher, a woman of fine background and culture, with excellent connections and contacts among whom she has already started to propagate the Faith. . Her courage and fortitude in adversity, her vitality and brilliant mind, together with her gentleness of spirit, combine to make her worthy of the distinction as the first new believer in Rome."

Denmark: An informal social gathering arranged for Mrs. Little resulted (of course) in a real Bahá’í discussion. A good piece of publicity prominently placed in one of the Copenhagen papers proved of great service in opening the subject for conversation even though the interview was somewhat inaccurate. The Nielsens helped greatly in clarifying points in Danish.

Mrs. Little writes: "I am delighted with Denmark and I feel that things will soon begin to happen there, with our seasoned pioneers at the wheel."

Switzerland: Mrs. Eva Mae Barrow writes that in Berne she had ‘entrée’ into the University because she was collecting catalogues for the Institute of International Education. Dr. Marie Renfer, in charge of the library showed great interest in the Faith. Our pioneers ran an ad in the paper indicating that Mrs. Barrow would answer questions about the Faith at her hotel at certain hours. Nine persons called and all wanted literature and stayed the full time. It appeared that many read the advertisement with interest.

Mrs. Barrow also tells of talking with twenty-eight persons on the steamer about the Faith. Many were given very detailed information. Some took what they called "lessons" lasting an hour and a half daily in the last few days. One group of nine in a class heard about the Administration and asked penetrating questions.

England: Mrs. Little visited six goal cities in England and writes that she is thrilled at the work and accomplishments of the British Isles. Under such difficult conditions they are forging ahead. There is evidence everywhere of spiritual rebirth. "Amid the ruins of the cities the spring winds have sown seeds. To me it seemed a symbol of what is happening to the spirit of its people."
We Can Learn from Latin America

The march of native pioneers in Latin America continues with the going soon of Sr. Esteban Canales Leyton of Valparaiso, Chile, to Ecuador, where he will assist in the further consolidation and growth of the assemblies in Guayaquil and Quito, and help them to establish a new goal city for this year. Sr. Canales will work with the Ecuadorian Regional Committee in the new city to be chosen. He also plans to visit Lima, Peru; La Paz, Bolivia, and two cities in northern Chile, where interested groups are forming. Sr. Canales has already assisted with the formation of three Chilean assemblies, those of Punta Arenas, Valparaiso and Vina del Mar. He is chairman of the South American Teaching Committee.

Additional native teachers being placed upon the panel for national and international work under the direction of their committees, include Sr. Alberto Lovatón of Lima, Peru; Antronik Kevorkian of LaPlata, Argentina; Sr. Toni Fillon of Loncoche and Sr. Carlos Bulling Petersen of Vina del Mar, Chile.

Sr. Natalia Chávez of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, has been richly rewarded in Guatemala, where her teaching has greatly assisted in the consolidation and growth of the mother assembly in Guatemala City, and in the establishment of a group of students in the new goal city of Chichicastenango. Natalia has found that a question and answer type of program is helpful. She bases the lesson to be given upon a series of questions relating to a particular topic. Then from the Báb's books, she writes the answers on slips of paper, assigning one slip to each student. The teacher asks the questions and each student reads his answer as his turn comes. Then the class discusses the answer. In this way everyone takes part and interest is materially increased.

Sr. José Antonio Bonilla of Managua, Nicaragua, well known in his country as the author of a number of books and articles, has been appointed as the new chairman of the Central American Teaching Committee, serving the northern Latin American countries, where the Cause has been established. Sr. Natalia Chávez will serve this committee as general secretary of correspondence, and Marcia Steward is executive secretary-treasurer of the committee.

A mass of wonderful publicity has just been received from Gayle Woolson, who received an ovation in Bucaramanga, Colombia, where the newspapers published 15 articles during her week's visit, and two papers offered to publish any articles she might send them at any time. The radio also broadcast material on the Báb's Faith. The Masonic Lodge opened its doors for a public meeting and voted to have all its members study the Faith by correspondence, when no teacher is present, and directly whenever a teacher can be sent. Public talks were arranged in the Municipal Library, the Club Campesino and the Club Unión. Two Bábí-study groups were formed, one of which is in charge of two of the most prominent men of the city, Dr. Gustavo Wilches and Sr. Christian Clausen.

Srta. Leonor Porras of Bogotá dedicated her 20-day vacation to assisting Gayle in Bucaramanga, San Gil and Mogotes. In San Gil the Lions and Rotary Clubs entertained the two girls and put on a joint public meeting for them. Both clubs voted to study the Faith by correspondence and 122 individuals in the two cities registered for the correspondence course. The Bucaramanga students are hopeful of being able to organize an assembly by April.

Gayle has been working with the new assembly in Medellín, the group in Barranquilla and the new assembly in Cartagena. She will leave September first for Venezuela, where she will assist the Caracas Community and then work in cooperation with the Venezuelan Regional Committee, in Maracay, Valencia and Barquisimeto. Sr. Fernando D'Leon and his wife, active Bahá'ís of Barranquilla, are transferring to Caracas, where they will be of much help to that community. Miss R. Katharine Meyer of Washington will join Gayle in Caracas after her trip down through the West Indies.

Marcia Steward is going to Nicaragua, where she will work with the friends for a while as they get the correspondence campaign under way. Mrs. Louise Carroll of Colon, Panama, has gone to Guatemala, where she is helping in the goal city of Chichicas tenango. She will go next to El Salvador and assist their re-regional in choosing and getting work under way in a goal city. Mrs. Cora Oliver and Mrs. Mabel Snyder of Panama City plan to spend their vacations assisting the various communities in the West Indies. Mrs. Snyder will give most of her time to Haiti, since she speaks French, and Cora will put the emphasis on Jamaica to help bring Spanish Town to assembly status and consolidate the work there.

Astorus Lamb has just completed a teaching trip which included the Central Americas, stopping for consultation with the northern Teaching Committee in San José, Costa Rica. From there he is visiting and consulting with the Regional Committees of Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia en route to Santiago, Chile. He will leave the end of this month for Punta Arenas, visiting en route the various Chilean groups in the south.

Charles Ioas of Chicago is expected home in September after spending his vacation teaching in Puebla, Coatepec and Veracruz, Mexico. Miss Evelyn Larson of Chicago, who has been pioneering in Central America for the past two years, is now visiting in Mexico en route home-ward, where she expects to teach in the Chicago schools for a year before setting out again.

Miss Flora Hottes of Urbana, Ill., has returned after pioneering in Bolivia and Uruguay for the past five years. She is assisting the Inter-America Committee as a member and will help to review some of the new translations prior to their publication in Buenos Aires.

Preliminary Announcement
First National Bahá'í Convention of Canadian Bahá'ís
The present National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada has the function of convening the first Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Canada and of conducting the election of the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Dominion.
In order to enable the Canadian believers to arrange their affairs so as to assure a full attendance, it has been voted that the dates of the Convention will be April 24 and 25, 1948, and the city chosen will be Montreal, the city visited by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 1912 and the place where the Faith was first established in the Dominion.

Once the Canadian NSA has been elected, it will become an independent administrative body acting directly under the Guardian, and will conduct the affairs of the Faith in Canada thereafter, including the selection of time and place for the Annual Convention.

Teaching Assistance for Smaller Communities
There are many Assemblies at present in Bahá'í communities ranging in number from nine to twenty, and the National Assembly has requested the Regional Teaching Committees to give assistance. This assistance is along teaching lines, for example in providing out-of-town believers for public meetings, etc. This relationship does not affect the administrative authority of the Assembly in its area of jurisdiction, but offers it the benefit of help frequently much needed for growth and even continued existence.

Our task in bringing the number of local Assemblies up to 175 this year would be much easier if every Assembly once established had survived. Due to death, removal of members to other cities and other reasons the dissolution of quite a number of Assemblies over a period of ten years or so has affected the number of Assemblies now in being.

The NSA urges the smaller Assemblies to request help, and not to continue depending on their own resources where the accustomed methods have not brought in new members. The spirit of growth is here, but we must spread our sails aloft if we are to catch the favoring breeze.

4,000,000 Readers See Bahá’í Ads

One year ago this month a Bahá’í advertisement appeared in Newsweek magazine. It was the modest beginning of a nation-wide campaign to publicize the challenging truths of the Faith. Reported the advertising journal Tide at that time:

"Although other religions have taken similar steps in the past, perhaps none has expressed so succinctly its reason for so doing. Last week's announcement simply read: 'The promotion of any general truth or spiritual ideal can and should command the best available professional experience and skill for the employment of the great modern mediums of public influence.'"

As the first year's campaign comes to a close, Bahá’ís across the country can well be encouraged by the results. Letters and cards have been received by Bahá’í Public Relations from every state in the union, as well as from eight nations of the world. Thousands of pieces of literature have been sent in reply to these requests. This includes the regular mailing of the familiar "World Religion" bulletin. Persons from all walks of life have responded, including businessmen, editors, government officials, soldiers, housewives, church leaders, etc.

Through the mediums of Newsweek, World Report, and United Nations World, the Bahá’í message reaches a total readership of nearly 4,000,000 of the nation's most discriminating and influential readers every other month.

A large photo of the House of Worship was used by the Portland Concrete Association in an advertisement appearing in August 25 issue of Time. This carried the word "Bahá’í!" to many additional thousands of readers.

The current advertising schedule is as follows:

Newsweek
September 15
United Nations World
October 1
World Report
October 14

A series of trade paper advertisements is placed monthly in Editor & Publisher, Broadcasting, Publishers' Auxiliary and Canadian Weekly Editor, in order to influence those people in best positions to influence others.

Local assemblies and groups can tie in with the national advertising — as some already have. This is an opportunity to take advantage of the publicity which has been given. The Public Relations committee will make available, at a small cost, mats designed to help carry on local advertising programs. Space is allotted for the name, address and telephone number of the local assemblies. In all cases of advertising and publicity, use the name of the local assembly or group and not the general name, "Bahá’í Public Relations." This latter practice results in a confusion of local advertising with the national campaign.
Anchorage, Alaska

This month the Anchorage Bahá’í Assembly voted to incorporate so that it could receive title to five acres of land being given to it in Homer, and to be ready to accept further responsibilities in the future.

Another Alaskan “first” was recorded this month when Lea and Howard J. Brown became the first Alaska couple to become Bahá’ís at the same time. They have two small children and have a business in Anchorage so are permanent residents. Their membership gives great added strength to the Anchorage Community.

The minister of the Church of Christ church here inquired of several local Bahá’ís about the Teachings, and made an appointment to discuss the Bahá’í Faith. He then invited us to his church to see pictures on Palestine.

Advertisements are now being placed in the Classified Columns giving the Bahá’í Principles and “Appreciations of the Bahá’í Faith” by well-known people.

Libraries Receive Bahá’í Books

Since the Annual Report, Bahá’í books have been donated to the following libraries:

Public Libraries

California: El Monte; Illinois: Danville; Maine: Portland; Missouri: Independence; Lees Summit; Oak Grove. College and University Libraries

California: Pomona College; District of Columbia: American University; Florida: Southern University; Illinois: James Millikin University; Kentucky: Louisville University; Pennsylvania: Bucknell University; Texas: University of Houston.

Books were also donated to the Urban League Library in Gary, Indiana.

Will the friends try to get the above donations into circulation?

Will the Assemblies, especially in the very large cities of the country, try to give a copy of Bahá’í World, Volume IX, to their Main Public Libraries? This book is not being given by our committee. Therefore, the responsibility to get this important volume in large libraries lies with the Assemblies.

Open Letter to Spiritual Assemblies, Groups and Individual Believers from The Bahá’í World

How often you have been faced with this question: “What are you Bahá’ís doing about all this?”

The Bahá’í World is the answer to this question. It gives in a concise, well-organized and interesting manner a picture of the manifold and widespread activities of the Cause throughout the world. It also includes timely discussions of the important issues of the period in the light of the Bahá’í Teachings, as well as a direct statement of our aims and purposes. In one volume it presents a record of what we stand for, and what we are doing.

Volume X of The Bahá’í World is being printed and will soon be out. Material for Volume XI is now being collected from practically every country of the globe. Here is an opportunity to join efforts with us and to take part in building up this world-organ of our Faith by contributing news items, stories, articles, photographs. Specifically we need:

Reports of important activities and significant developments.
Brief stories about new centers, headquarters, etc.
Human interest stories encountered or experienced in the course of teaching the Cause.

Articles on current problems from the Bahá’í point of view.
Photographs of general Bahá’í interest (institutions, events, groups in action, etc.) or to illustrate an article. Good, clear photographs that tell a story and show dash and imagination.

New ideas and suggestions to make The Bahá’í World more interesting and more effective as a teaching medium.

All material must be for the period beginning April 1946, and should be in the hands of The Bahá’í World Committee not later than Nov. 15 of this year, earlier if possible.

The Guardian attaches great importance to The Bahá’í World, and has urged our Committee “to make the responsible Bahá’í bodies, and the believers, more Bahá’í World conscious!”

Remember The Bahá’í World

The world-organ of our Faith.

International School — 1947

The first Sessions of the International School under the National Spiritual Assembly were crowned with success. The school was directed by Bahjiyih Ford with her husband, Harry, as business manager. The morning class was directed by Loulie Mathews, studying "The Advent of Divine Justice," and for the second Session "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh." Artemus Lamb and Elizabeth Cheney took charge of the Latin-American teaching, including a work-shop of Bahá'í Procedure and using the remarkable slides brought from South America by Mr. Lamb to show the progress of the Faith and the remote localities to which it had penetrated. On a 19-Day Feast Miss Cheney showed pictures of the gardens of the Holy Land. The second Session, from July 1st to July 10th, was devoted to European teaching under the direction of Mary Keene Sprague. In a class of twelve, four wrote the European Teaching Committee to volunteer for European pioneering, Valeria Nichols sailing August 27th, Jean Gates leaving for China in the Autumn under the direction of the Guardian and Nancy Gates sailing for Sweden on October 3rd. On Regional Day, when the Bahá'ís of three states gather to spend a day together, we had a Bahá'í wedding. The bride, a professional musician, graduated from Juilliard School of Music this June, and has been a believer for a number of years; while the bridegroom, Jack Terry of Los Angeles, entered the faith during the Session. The bride had as a guard of honor several Chinese aviators, all interested in the Bahá'í teachings and hoping to carry the Faith to China when they return.

The marriage ceremony was read by Loulie Mathews. In the evening Bahjiyih Ford told stories of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to America. Four Bahá'í talks were given in Colorado Springs and two musicals. Our program was announced over the radio twice daily, the morning and evening papers carried splendid advertisements of all our activities. We had the great pleasure of receiving into the Faith a brilliant woman student whose talents and accomplishments will be henceforth devoted to this Cause.

Resolutions of the 1947 Convention

The list of recommendations and other votes passed by the delegates this year, as recorded iconographically by three Bahá'ís, included some matters pertaining to the Convention itself, on which no later action by the National Spiritual Assembly was required. The Assembly has acted on the definite recommendations, as follows:

1. That the Convention Chairman make a resume of the teaching points she brought out in the opening session of the Convention for the information of all delegates.

2. That relief assistance be set up under the European Teaching Committee in the ten countries under its supervision.

3. That a study be made of the seating and lighting facilities adopted by UN headquarters for their possible value in connection with the completion of the Temple interior.

4. That time be arranged at future Conventions for a joint meeting of the members of the Summer School committees.

5. That the Summer School Committees be invited to meet with the NSA at some convenient period during the year.

6. That funds be so allocated to the NTC as to assist them in the best possible manner in the special campaigns outlined by the Committee.

Voted to refer this resolution to the Temple Construction Committee of the Temple Trustees, which is engaged in making a thorough study of these technical matters for the Temple.

Voted to approve this recommendation and direct the Convention Planning Committee to include in their agenda a conference of summer school committee members with one representative of the NSA.

Voted to refer this convention resolution to the Guardian and inquire whether the American believers should be given opportunity to assist the European pioneers in their work by shipments of food and clothing.

This action was taken after review of the Guardian's instructions and the method of operation of the International Fund.
7. That additional powers be granted to the NTC to give them authority to carry forward the teaching campaigns with more coordination and efficiency.

Voted to record the fact that a coordinated campaign under the title “National Baha’i Program” has been arranged, and the NSA has held meetings with representatives of the participating committees.

8. That arrangements be made prior to the 1948 Convention to approach hotels of the Temple area in an effort to obtain special Convention room prices, with breakfast wherever possible.

Voted to record the view of the NSA that under present hotel and housing limitations, the proposed plan is not feasible.

9. That because of the universal character of the Faith an effort be made to induce hotels and restaurants in the Temple area to extend their hospitality to Baha’is of all nations and races attending the Convention.

Voted to approve this recommendation and inform the friends that the NSA is taking all possible steps in this direction.

Voted to refer this matter to the Public Relations Committee for investigation and report.

11. That a correspondence teaching course be issued for use in North America.

Voted to refer this recommendation to the NTC for an advisory opinion.

12. That the National Public meetings be placed under the National Teaching Committee.

Voted to record the fact that this was done in coordinating the work of a number of committees after the convention.

13. That in accordance with the resolution presented by the Race Unity Committee, the Race Unity Committee to be discontinued.

Voted to record the fact that for the sake of better coordination the Race Unity function has been vested in the NTC; moreover, one of the four public themes adopted for the National Baha’i Program this year, entitled “Credo—for A World Communitv,“ emphasizes the Race Unity theme.

14. That heads of public school education be approached for the purpose of placing in their hands for school use some usable portions of the Baha’i writings.

Voted to explain to the friends that the professional ethics controlling the public school system prevents the use of religious doctrines in public schools.

15. That request be made for observance of Baha’i holy days by all Baha’i students in the public schools.

Voted to record the fact that the NSA sent a representative to the United States office of Education in Washington and the information was obtained that religious holidays are determined locally although in some cases there are set regulations which apply to all local schools in the state. The Guardian is being consulted as to the procedure to follow in carrying out this convention resolution.

16. That World Order Magazine Editorial Committee be advised to lay emphasis on the interests of the non-Baha’i reader.

Voted to record the fact, first, that the present committee has been encouraged to use the right type of non-Baha’i contribution, and second, that Baha’i contributors are requested to prepare their material for the non-Baha’i reader, and third, that general newspaper circulation is not yet possible.

17. That the Convention adopt this statement expressing the Baha’i attitude on the current social problem:

“Spiritual and social crisis has overtaken the world. This condition results from failure to respond to the needs of a new era. The focal point of evolution divinely ordained in this age is recognition of the oneness of mankind and creation of a world order based upon the common citizenship and equal rights of all peoples. World citizenship calls for the abandonment of all barriers arbitrarily dividing humanity, whether social, racial, economic, political or sectarian. These barriers are the illusions and superstitions blinding men to the light of truth given to the world by Baha’u’llah for human guidance today.”

Voted to record the fact that this resolution was included by the Public Relations Committee in a press release reporting Convention activities.

One of the North American teaching periods brought out a number of constructive suggestions from the delegates at our recent convention. A brief resume, as requested, follows.

Public Programming
1. Professional assistance for advance radio and newspaper publicity.
2. The use of speakers, Baha’i and non-Baha’i, with publicity value.
3. Maintaining balance through strong chairmanship.
4. Recognition of the wide variety of minds and temperaments in selection of material.
5. World Order topics, with due recognition of needed emotional values.
6. A theme for the year, for coordinated use by committees and assemblies.

Classes
1. Constant reference to the Word, as the basis of study.
2. Avoidance of undue repetition in study selection.
3. Constant student participation in (1) reading well selected passages, (2) discussion and analysis, (3) assignment of lesson presentation if feasible, (4) telling of applications of the lesson material in daily life or in the current events of the world.
4. Supplementary activities outside of class.
5. Friendly calls when advisable, and occasional giving of lessons in the homes (as in the case of illness, etc.)
6. Ample training for life in a Baha’i community before entrance.

Teaching Attitudes
1. Honoring the views of others.
2. Finding the points of agreement when possible.
3. Keeping fluid and cultivating the practice of listening.
4. A relaxed spirit, as intensity is often unwelcome. (Baha’i stories often relieve tension and lift the spirit).
5. Avoidance of argument.
6. Inner prayerfulness, as God is more aware of needs than the teacher.
7. The spirit of love and graciousness at all times.
Milestones at Louhelen

Until this summer Louhelen Bahá’í School had been a Bahá’í National Institution held in privately owned buildings on privately owned grounds. Our other Bahá’í schools in the United States started in the same way. Just as the names of Miss Sarah Farmer; the Bosches, the Mathews, will always be connected with Green Acre, Geyserville and Temerity Ranch, respectively, so the Eggleston name will always be connected with Louhelen.

This year the buildings, except the home, and nine and a half acres of land have been legally transferred to the trusteeship of the NSA by Lou and Helen Eggleston. A milestone has been reached. From the beginning this transfer has been the purpose of the Egglestons.

Some of us who were there remember the happy beginning in August, 1931, when about twenty friends, mostly Bahá’ís, came to the farm at the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Eggleston to deepen in the teachings and to let others know about them. The modest plan for a nine day school had been endorsed by Shoghi Effendi and the NSA. It was a real school from the beginning with teachers and students. Mabel and Howard Ives and Grace and Harlan Ober were there as teachers. Dorothy Baker and Fanny Knobloch did much to make that first session a success as did many others. All the classes were held on the cabin porch in the glen. In Harlan Ober’s class we learned about the social and economic phases of the Bahá’í teachings. Howard Ives dwelt upon the more purely spiritual teachings, especially the Hidden Words. Mabel Ives drilled us in the public presentation of the Faith. This writer will remember being called on to give briefly the logical or scientific proofs of the existence of God! There were informal and intimate hours when Grace Ober and Dorothy and Fanny told us some of their memories of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and their own experiences in teaching the Faith. Efforts were made to reach the public. One clergyman from a nearby community came daily to Harlan’s class. We found later that his parishioners did not approve. One friend came from Tennessee and a group from near Pittsburgh, but most were from nearer places. Some were there for only a day or two or just for one talk. All told, about ninety souls shared in the bounties of those nine days.

By the next summer the school was a definite Bahá’í institution under the direction of a program committee appointed by the NSA and in more ample accommodations provided by Mr. and Mrs. Eggleston. Year by year saw additional buildings to accommodate the increasing number of students. Barns were made into dormitories and assembly rooms. One barn that did not adapt itself to remodeling was conveniently blown down in a tornado. Then the boards and timbers were reassembled into a comfortable assembly room and dormitories. Dining porches were added and the kitchen enlarged; washrooms and cottages were built. For a number of years the school was known as The Central States Bahá’í School. But no Bahá’í institution can be limited to a region and like other schools, Louhelen has drawn students from all over the country and from Latin American countries so the name was changed.

1932 was outstanding for all Bahá’ís for it saw the publication of The Dawn-Breakers and we dipped into it at the school, but both preparation time and time at the school were too short to do more. Yet this does make 1932 at the school stand out in memory. of the Dawn-Breaker heroes.

1934 marks, too, the first separate youth session. The young people insisted that they would learn more and grow faster if they had real responsibility. Were they right? At any rate youth sessions at Louhelen increased rapidly in numbers during the next few years, drawing students from a wide area.

In 1935 the first course of lessons on Islam was given by Stanwood Cobb. In making this plan the committee was following the suggestion of the Guardian whose counsel was sought each year before the committee planned the program.

The large number of young people attending their sessions (90 in 1936 and 90 in 1937) seemed to necessitate a change. So 1938 stands out with two innovations: two youth sessions and the change of one of the general adult sessions into a laboratory session. This name, meaning a session of real work and practice, was suggested by Marion Holley (now Mrs. David Hofman) the summer before when she had had charge of a course and when some of the committee had consulted with her on how to carry out more fully the wishes of the Guardian that we should continually strive to raise the standards of the school and to help people to deepen in the Faith. The first Laboratory session was truly a work session. Mrs. Emogene Hoagg's course demanded deep study and research into the meaning of the "Three Worlds;" Kenneth Christian helped students to work out Baha'i definitions. Marguerite Reimer (now Mrs. Wm. Sears) organized and directed field work in neighboring towns and cities.

Then came 1939, the summer when the library building was ready for use. How happy and proud we all were! Gifts from Mrs. Millie Collins and Mrs. Dorothy Graf, gifts of labor and materials from Lou and George Eggleston and other loving gifts made the building possible. Gifts of books came pouring in, too, both Baha'i and general, so that now more shelf room is needed. The fact that this building could be heated as could also Pullman Lodge, made a winter session possible, the second highlight of 1939.

The next marked innovation was in 1945 when the Midsummer Week developed definitely into a session aimed to attract non-Baha'is, especially parents and educators, as well as young Baha'i parents. It is carried on under Baha'i leadership. Educators from over the state are invited to give talks on child development and teachings.

We have spoken largely of the outer changes at Louhelen, the development of the plant, increase in classes, sessions and attendance; for these can be seen and measured. None of us can measure or estimate the power of spiritual forces which have already radiated from this or any Baha'i institution. We think of the group of Filipino students who were there two days one summer; of the professors and educators from Latin American and Near East countries who came from an international meeting of educators at Ann Arbor; of the many public meetings and picnics which have attracted people from surrounding communities; of the Flint Baha'i community which was started by teachers from Louhelen; of the men's clubs and other groups which have been addressed by speakers from Louhelen; of lives that have been changed through acceptance of the Faith; of real knowledge gained and inspiration to study and teach that has come each summer to those present at the school; of the satisfying experiences of living together as one family regardless of race or nationality.

While the transfer of ownership of property is a milestone in Louhelen history it does not mean any sudden change in plan and policy. Those attending classes this summer have felt the same friendly atmosphere, the same incentive to deepen in the teachings and to teach that the coming together at Louhelen and all Baha'i schools always gives. The Eggleston home and the Egglestones are there, the campus and buildings and the "swimming hole" are there. Perhaps most of all the students and teachers are there, for after all it is their cooperation and spirit which make the school. This cooperation will continue and the school will constantly grow until it fulfills the hope expressed by Shoghi Effendi that it and other Baha'i schools "will become powerful and well-established organizations that will train innumerable men and women to go out into the world and spread the Message of Baha'u'llah.

A believer in Poland expresses gratitude for the New Era in Polish and begs for the continuation of the Bahá’í bulletin in Esperanto.

A German prisoner of war in Egypt writes that it is not permitted to send literature there from the United States but asks for printed matter from the Geneva Bureau in English or Esperanto or French or Italian or any language. "We need a textbook, too, or a course in Esperanto. All this would keep us from stagnation in the Egyptian desert and would be a link with the throbbing pulse of the cultural and spiritual life in the world. My thoughts and feelings are with you and your friends."

Mr. Mason Remey has visited England and Ireland, Oslo and Stockholm and Copenhagen and at last account was on his way to other countries and expects to remain in Europe six countries. Mrs. Marion Little is visiting months.

Geneva and Zurich, Switzerland, both report meetings with traveling teachers from England, America and Persia. A new Persian Bahá’í student, Mr. C. G. Ghaznavi, is spending his summer in Geneva before entering the University of Zurich next October. Mr. Robert Gulick’s official position gives him opportunity to meet various key people in the international world at Geneva.

Australia

The Australian NSA publishes a Bahá’í Quarterly or News Letter and a Bahá’í Quarterly magazine, The Herald of the South. The latest issue of the News Quarterly reports the election of the new NSA, the progress and development of the administrative order during the twenty-five years of the Guardianship and the determination to go forward both in teaching and in further development of administration. "In gratitude for both this mighty institution of the Guardianship in which mankind has found a sure refuge in this new age, and in gratitude for this particular first Guardian, this Shoghi Effendi, let us rise to a truly higher plane of endeavor, and above all to a higher plane of spiritual awareness, during these coming years."

India and Burma

The NSA of India and Burma, carrying out instructions of the Guardian, has effected a deal for their National Administrative Headquarters in New Delhi, the capital of India. It is a two story structure set amidst some three acres of beautiful grounds, in one of the most exclusive quarters of the capital. About half of the payment was made in cash and the remainder must be made promptly. The Guardian has written that "great confirmations" will come when the purchase is completed.

At present the NSA is in temporary headquarters in New Delhi and headquarters of the various committees are being moved there as rapidly as possible.

O ye people of the world! The virtue of this Most Great Manifestation is that we have effaced from the Book whatever was the cause of difference, corruption and discord, and recorded therein that which leads to unity, harmony and accord. Joy unto those who practice!

National Publicity Under Way on Temple Interior

The most widespread and intensive publicity plan yet undertaken by American Bahá'ís has been initiated by the Public Relations Committee in a national press and magazine campaign devoted to the design for the Temple interior recently approved by the Temple Trustees under the Guardian's authorization.

The campaign is based upon the two sketch views of the interior design which have been reproduced as inserts to this issue of Bahá'í News, and announces the early beginning of work to complete the House of Worship.

After a careful and expert survey of the press and magazine field, the committee adopted a mailing list for its releases and illustrations totaling 1,482 different publications and news agencies. This number includes: daily papers in towns with 25,000 or more population; dailies in towns with a population between 10,000 and 25,000; dailies in towns of less than 10,000 population; race and foreign language papers; architectural and builders magazines; news and general magazines; religious magazines; magazines devoted to education; and encyclopedias and books of reference.

These publications have been divided into two classes — those which make their own halftone illustrations or mats from photographs supplied, and those which can only use mats furnished them. The mailing, therefore, consists of two different sets of material. The magazines and better-equipped papers receive a mimeographed release stating the basic facts concerning the interior design and the building plans, with paragraphs explaining the general aims of the Faith, a photograph of the Temple as it now stands, with completed superstructure and exterior ornamentation, a photograph of the sketch of the central domed auditorium, and a photograph of the sketch of one of the arched alcoves or bays. To each of these photographs is attached a separate piece of copy describing the picture, from which captions and comments can be prepared for each illustration selected for use. To the smaller papers is sent a mailing consisting of the mimeographed general release already mentioned and a mat combining the sketch of the auditorium with a picture of the building. The mat carries a caption or comment announcing the selection of the interior design and the building plans.

In planning this material, the committee aimed at the accomplishment of three purposes: to tell the editors the story of the Temple, backed by three pictures of unusual beauty and impressiveness; to provide material for a feature article filling up to a full newspaper page or several magazine pages; to provide material for a minimum story using one or two pictures with brief comment.

The campaign, however, is not limited to the 1,482 papers and magazines classified above. If the budget allows, another mailing is to go to 4,000 weekly newspapers. This supplementary list would not receive photographs or mats but a photo-offset announcement carrying text and illustrations with an offer to send mats or photographs on request. This method has proven to be both effective and inexpensive.

For the Bahá'ís themselves, the committee has planned to mail more than 400 copies of the general release.

Special Supplement

Sketches of Temple Interior

The National Assembly has authorized the Bahá’í News Editorial Committee to include in this issue a special supplement for the friends. This supplement consists of halftone reproductions of two sketch renderings of views of the Temple interior visualized from the modified Bourgeois design recently approved by the Temple Trustees.

By making these reproductions separate inserts on good quality paper the friends have these new Temple views in a form suitable for framing or preserving in some manner. They afford us glimpses into that longed-for completed interior wherein services of Bahá’í worship can at last be held in a House of Worship destined to become one of the most renowned and influential structures in the world.

Bahá’í Pilgrimage

In the course of the spring and summer of this year, Robert L. Gulick, Jr. visited our co-workers in England, France, Spain, Switzerland, Egypt, Iraq and Iran. He celebrated the Feast of Ridván in Paris and on the 9th of Ridván addressed the friends at the Haṣíratu’l-Ḡuds in Cairo. He was in Spain on June 24th when the first two believers enrolled in that land. He made the pilgrimage both to the House of Bahá’u’lláh in Baghádád and to the House of the Báb in Shiráz; he was the first Bahá’í from the west to be present in the Holy House in Shiráz on the anniversary of the Báb’s Declaration, May 22nd. From Cairo, he had telephone conversations with Rúḥíyyih Khánum before and after traveling to Persia.

With Oriental believers, he placed flowers on the tomb of the “immortal Lu’a” and Mirzá Abú’l-Fadl in Cairo and on the grave of Keith Ransom-Kehler in “far-away Isfahán.” In Baghádád, friends guided him to what was the Garden of Ridván and they crossed the Tigris River and paused at the old mosque which has not been changed in the eighty-four years that have elapsed since Bahá’u’lláh used to rest there; it was in these hallowed precincts that the Blessed Beauty composed the Hidden Words. Mr. Gulick gave lectures on three continents before audiences ranging in size up to 3,000 persons.

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Persia has written (3 Núr, 104) as follows about Mr. Gulick’s visit to the birthplace of our Faith:

“His account of the spiritual services of the trusted American friends, of the advance of the Cause of God in that spacious land, of the fact that the beloved of God are exhilarated with the breaths of the Spirit, overwhelmed us all in a sea of real joy. . . .”

In a very large gathering, composed of great number of Tíbríz Bahá’ís and held in the main auditorium of the National Headquarters, he delighted the eager believers of Tíbríz with good news of the Faith. Afterward, he went on a journey to Shiráz, in order to make his pilgrimage to the Holy House, meeting the friends in Isfahán, Najafábád, Dih-Šíld, and Abádíh . . . . In truth, the radiance and spiritually of this honored person affected everyone, and all have asked and continue to ask on behalf of this illustrious soul, Divine confirmations in ever-increasing measure from the holy presence of the powerful Lord, may our lives be a sacrifice to His grace. “It is our hope that in future the eyes of the Bahá’ís of Persia will continue to be brightened with looking on the comely faces of the well-loved believers from the West.”

The following is Mr. Gulick’s own account of his visit to Shiráz:

Cradle of a World Faith

Americans are inclined to picture most of Persia as a desert. This is a most inadequate conception, as a good deal of the empty space is merely dry land that requires only water for abundant production. But greater by far is the need for that Water of Life which was brought to humanity in Shiráz.

It was my inestimable bounty to be the first pilgrim from the West to enter the new Mecca, the Blessed House of the Báb, on the anniversary of His inauguration of the new faith which holds out to mankind the promise of a peaceful world of freedom, justice, and happiness. I have often visited the beautiful Bahá’í Temple in Illinois and it has been my privilege to be in the precincts of the Holy House of Bahá’u’lláh in Baghdád, not to mention Kázimayn and other shrines of Islam and such Christian cathedrals as Notre Dame de Paris. But in the Holy House in Shiráz, I found a spiritual atmosphere more exalted than I had experienced elsewhere. Even persons of other faiths and of no religion comment on their feeling that the Declaration Chamber is in reality an “upper room.” The French ambassador on the occasion of his visit to the House gave vent to similar sentiments.

The way to the House, past bazaars and through winding, noisome alleys, was anything but promising. Inside the portal, however, was another world. The Persian friends and I performed our ablutions with water from the same well that the Báb had used. It is virtually unchanged and the water is cold and refreshing. Next to it is the sour orange tree planted by the Báb and nearby is a small pool bordered by flowers. The pilgrims remove their shoes before entering this tiny courtyard. The crossing of each threshold, the ascending of each step, is an occasion for prayer and demonstrations of devotion. After placing our lips and our foreheads on the steps leading into the House, we entered a chamber on the main floor and Hadrát-i-Afnán, the third cousin of the Báb, poured rosewater into our hands so that we might anoint our heads before climbing the eight steps leading to the floor above. I do not care to introduce interpretations but it interested me to note that the Báb’s Declaration inaugurated the eighth of the world’s established religions.

The friends asked me to chant in Persian and Arabic and I felt highly honored to participate in the praying in such a wondrously holy spot. In my prayers, I remembered many friends in various part of the world and also the National Spiritual Assemblies of Persia and America.

I also thought of that model American teacher, Martha Root, who touched her forehead to the sacred Threshold and wept and wept. That such a great Cause, that a Messenger of God, should have come from such a small House filled her heart with sadness. The House seemed to me to be a gem, just the right size. In the future when vast multitudes make the pilgrimage to this place, it will not be possible for the friends to enter the House.

Finally, we assembled in the room where the glorious Youth of 25 years had bidden His friend, Mullá Husayn, to enter—a hundred and three years ago. Rare tablets were framed and placed on the walls. A magnificent rug, donated by Shoghi Effendi at the time of the Centenary, covered the floor. The room has five windows which face the garden. We turned toward the corner near the first window where a lamp marked the place where the Báb sat as He gave the glad-tidings of the birth of a wondrous, world-embracing Cause. He had truly prophesied at that immortal time: “This night, this very hour will in the days to come, be celebrated as one of the greatest and most significant of festivals.”

Later, we went to the house of Hadrát-i-Afnán and he showed us relics of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. There were garments worn by the Báb when He went to Mecca; we were surprised to see how small that precious Being must have been, although He was of about the average height of the Shirázis of that day, and that very smallness enhanced our appreciation of His grandeur. We saw a ring on which the Greatest Name was cut and we learned that it had been worn by Bahá’u’lláh. Space does not permit

This World Freedom

Beloved friends:

As national committees, regional committees, and communities throughout the world join in a grand public campaign on the theme of World Faith for World Freedom, it would be well for us to bear in mind the words of the 9th World Power to Bahá'ís everywhere: “There is no compulsion in religion. Verily, the way of Bahá ‘u’lláh is the straight path, nor maintain an empire's economy, nor re-apply an extinct religion, nor seize from us by a world of distraction without or a world of distraction within.

Our responsibility is to conduct a campaign on the theme of World Faith for World Freedom which will be as great as our will and our intention. Its renewal is as close to us as the words of the nearest open Bahá’í book.

Therefore from every local Bahá’í community there should come evidences of great undertakings and continuous spiritual achievement. Others are enchaincd by fears, oppressed by problems and burdened by cares. But Bahá’ís may we demonstrate what freedom God has given us—freedom to abandon a dead past, freedom to live and act in the new Dispensation! The greater our faith, the clearer we see that societies perish because they come to deal with imaginary forces, immersed in shadows who forsok the Light.

Great events are upon us—let us be great of soul so that the event can be made to reflect the Bahá’í Faith to masses who lose hope and direction.

Abiding Gratitude

Message from the Guardian

Greatly welcome evidences of a notable expansion of activities and increased intensification of efforts for publicity. I urge believers and local Assemblies to redouble their efforts in support of vital National Fund. Praying ardently for realization of your highest hopes. Appreciate action (for preservation of) Keith’s grave. Do not advise you transmit further funds to Persia for the grave. I appeal to North American believers to exert their utmost to ensure the formation of required number of Assemblies by next April. Further sacrifices demanded, rich reward assured. May entire body of American believers arise to fulfill their glorious destiny. Abiding gratitude, deepest love.

Baha’i Greeting to Annual Congress Esperanto Association of North America

Through the kindness of Miss Roan Orloff, chairman of the World Language Committee serving last year, the message written by the National Spiritual Assembly to the Annual Congress, Esperanto Association of North America, was delivered in person. She has reported that the Baha’i greeting was well received.

"On behalf of the members of the Baha’i Faith throughout North America we send a cordial greeting and best wishes to the Esperantists assembled in their Annual Congress. It is our hope that your sessions will bring a great reinforcement to the movement for a World Language the outcome of which is so vital to the attainment of World Peace and that ultimate World Civilization which has today become the radiant and visible goal of human evolution."

"Language, that divine instrument for the mutual association of human beings in the world of truth and law, has too long been a king in exile, an innocent being condemned to participation of races, classes, nations and creeds in their struggles for victory over the other."

"Baha’is share your longing that language may soon be freed from those fetters and manifest its destiny as unifier of all whose minds and hearts recognize the oneness of God. Baha’is are grateful to you for your unique service to the common goal."

To the list of Local Spiritual Assemblies already published, the National Assembly is happy to add the following: Phoenix, Minneapolis, Berkeley, Oakland, Seattle, Washington, D. C., Flint. About 40 Assemblies have now pledged their help in bringing at least one group to Assembly status by April, 1948. Their concentrated effort is sorely needed to assure success in meeting the goal of a total of 175 Assemblies this year.

Statement to United Nations Commission on Women’s Rights

The National Spiritual Assembly, through its United Nations Committee, has submitted a statement on the Baha’i conception of the rights of women to a UN Commission compiling material for a world code. The text is reproduced in World Order Magazine, October issue.
An Appeal From World Order Magazine

One of the expressed wishes of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá during His American tour in 1912 was that the magazine then entitled, STAR OF THE WEST, the first issue of which had been published March 21, 1910, should be maintained... How well that expressed wish has been observed is evidenced by WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE, the present-day title under which the magazine is known after 37 years of uninterrupted publication.

Reflecting the history, activities and development of the Bahá’í Faith, WORLD ORDER MAGAZINE has become a powerful teaching medium in addition to its interest stimulating appeal to Bahá’í Believers.

A few months ago, the continuous increasing cost of printing the magazine made it necessary to increase the yearly subscription rate, and commencing with the April 1947 issue the price was advanced from $1.50 to $2.00 yearly. Before the May 1947 issue was published our printers imposed a further increase to be immediately effective... We are seeking by every means available to avoid making a further increase in the subscription rate and this is a CALL FOR HELP from our Bahá’í Friends.

1,000 new subscriptions at the present yearly rate of $2.00 will insure the magazine being on a self-supporting basis... CAN THIS BE ACCOMPLISHED... YES! - If only 1,000 of our present subscribers will each donate one GIFT subscription, the problem will be solved... A years subscription to a friend may mean a NEW BELIEVER, or there are 1,000 PUBLIC and UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES where a years subscription may result in arousing considerable interest in THE BAHÁ’Í FAITH. If your own local Library is already receiving the magazine, each $2.00 donated to THE WORLD ORDER LIBRARY SUBSCRIPTION FUND will record a years subscription to a library not on present on our list, with the name and address of donator given to the selected library.

Shíráz is famed for nightingales, roses, lovers—and poets to write about them. Some Bahá'ís who operate a bus service placed a vehicle at our disposal and we first went to the tomb of Hájí, a poet who was greater than 'Umar Kháyyám but one who lacked a Fitzgerald. On another occasion, we visited the grave of Sa'dí, perhaps even more admired by the Persians than Hájí, and we noticed with interest that some of the inscriptions on the walls surrounding the tomb were verses from theblind Bahá’í poet, Shúri’dih, whose own grave is in another room not far distant.

Much could be related about our departure from the Tibrán Airport and the many friends who came to bid us au revoir. Of interest was the comment of a wealthy non-Bahá’í who was going on the same plane: see how much love these Bahá’ís show toward each other; nobody cares very much whether we go or stay. It was exciting to see the friends of Isfahán rushing to the plane during the brief stop in that delightful city; they brought flowers and candy, especially gaz for which the place is famous, and also books to meet the requirements of their co-workers.

One of my most thrilling experiences in Iran was an appearance before an assemblage of 340 Bahá’í children in Shíráz. I urged them to store up in their minds those verbal treasures which are to be discovered in the Hidden Words and other Bahá’í books and I referred to the tablet revealed by the Master when Shoghi Effendi, as a small boy, told Him of a dream in which he saw the Báb. I was followed on the program by Jínábi-Samandari, an extremely capable and devoted believer, who on the spot—without advance warning as to what I would speak about—described the circumstances of the dream of that marvelous figure who is now our guardian, produced the text of the tablet, and also quoted the affirmative words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to an American woman who had inquired as to whether the Guardian had yet been born.

In the footsteps of Martha Root, we also visited Persepolis, Takht-e-Jamshid, that enduring testimonial of Iran’s past greatness. Sixty years ago the Master described various articles at Persepolis; the discoveries occurred a half-century afterward. A few miles from there is Takht-i-Távús, a holy place of the Zoroastrians where are to be found inscriptions in Pahlavi and Latin. Shíráz fills the receptive soul with wonderment. Yes, the skies are bluer and the stars much brighter than in California, and there is an air of peace and repose. In that blessed city we acquired—even if only for the time being—some of the priceless possessions of the people of Paradise and we sensed in a measure the experience of the gate of the Gate of God: “Methinks I was in a place of which it could be truly said: ‘Therein no toil shall reach us’; ‘No vain discourse shall they hear there-in, nor any falsehood, but only the cry, Peace! Peace!’’”

Albuquerque Sponsors Conference

The gales of God seemed to blow with unusual and terrific force stirring up the dust of the ages in the great desert plateau of New Mexico. That was the night of the inception of the plan sponsored by the North Albuquerque Assembly, in which a majority of the believers of the entire region joined in an effort to carry the beloved Faith to the masses in accord with the Guardian’s Seven Year Plan. Those who had braved the stinging sand of the whirling dust storm, after full and free discussion, voted unanimously to have a Bahá’í Conference to begin July 4th. It was then the night of July 1st. There was no place, no money, and there had been no previous arrangements. Bahá'u'lláh, however, opened doors in an amazing way. Through a non-Bahá’í friend, the Girl Reserve Camp, 7000 feet high in the Sandia mountains, accommodating 40 to 50 overnight guests, was obtained; with the opportunity to purchase supplies through their office: It was a well-equipped camp that would put to shame similar camps costing $150 to $200 per week. It was arranged to be used by the Bahá'ís and their friends for 10 days at the low rental of $15.00!

Courses were given on: “The Advent of Divine Justice,” “Fundamentals,” “ Bahá’í Keys to Bible Prophecy,” and “The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour.”

The Dawn-Breakers, p. 61.

The Dawn-Breakers, p. 62.
Commemoration of the Anniversary of the Martyrdom of the Báb and the Feast of Kilimat were particularly beautiful. Cooperative voluntary help served in shifts, taking care of meals and household chores.

The climax of the Conference was an Interracial Program and Dinner given in Albuquerque on July 26th. Seventy attended including 2 Chinese, 7 Indians, 9 Negros, 2 Jews and the remainder Whites, some with Spanish background. Four speakers, an Indian, a Negro, a Jew, and the Conference director, Ruth Moffett, made this, many said, one of the finest and most successful Bahá'í programs ever given in the state of New Mexico.

The results were amazing for so short a period and with so little preparation. This experiment of the North Albuquerque Assembly shows what a small community can accomplish when it calls in its Bahá'í brothers and works together day by day. There was a unifying of all those in attendance when it calls in its Bahá'í brothers and serves God in this great Day.

Are You A Nurse?

If you are a graduate nurse, there is a splendid opportunity for you to pioneer in Alaska. There is an Alaska Native Service whose function it is to look after the health and welfare of the Natives and who employ nurses. These nurses are required to live among the natives and are furnished living quarters and other necessities. Thus a pioneer, in such a position, would have the chance to serve native Alaskans in a very practical way, combining in one effort a physical and a spiritual service. If you are interested, write either to the National Teaching Committee in care of Mrs. Margery McCormick, 924 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill., or to Mrs. Frances Wells, Box 45, Anchorage, Alaska.

Youth Registration

The friends are requested to bear in mind the fact that every Bahá'í youth, on becoming twenty-one years of age, whether isolated, a member of a group or member of an organized community, is expected to see that he or she is definitely listed as a voting Bahá'í.

In the National Office, and also in the records of local Assemblies and of Regional Teaching Committees, Bahá'í youth are classified as such and do not appear on the list of voting Bahá'ís until their classification is changed.

The friends are also reminded that when confirmed as a Bahá'í, the youth of between fifteen and twenty-one years of age should sign the Youth Registration enrollment card which is transmitted to the National Office, whereupon the name and address are duly recorded.

It is very important to have a complete record of Bahá'í youth, including their changes of address in the city or transfer to another city. The National Office needs the information, and all youth data received is reported to the National Youth Committee.

Winter Session at Louhelen

The Louhelen Program Committee is making plans for a winter session December 26 through January 1, with a special Youth Day December 28. Subjects of the two courses are: Inner Strength to Meet Today's Challenge and What Do You Know about the Bahá'í Faith? Rates Dormitory, $2 per day per person, Single room, $3 per day per person. This session is open to youth and adults alike. (Plans are subject to approval by the NSA.)

Plans for Congresses

This year the National Teaching Committees of the two great zones in Latin America, the northern and the southern, in consultation with the Inter-America Teaching Committee decided that hereafter the meeting places of the annual Congresses should be awarded on a merit basis. The accessibility of the place to a majority of assemblies must also be taken into account. It was agreed, too, that the Congresses should be followed by sessions of the first international Baha’i schools. This plan was approved by the National Spiritual Assembly and by the Guardian.

Among the northern Latin American (the six Central American countries, Mexico and the West Indies) Mexico and Coast Rica had shown the greatest advances. Mexico has gained two new assemblies and Costa Rica has initiated and tested a new type of teaching by intensive correspondence. (For details of this plan see Baha’i News, May, 1947, page 2.) This resulted in the new assembly of Quepos, now a community of sixteen active members and five new small groups. The choice for the congress has gone to Mexico and it will be held in Vera Cruz, a beautiful city by the sea and one of the two goal cities for Mexico this year.

Of the South American countries, it was recognized that Columbia, Chile and Brazil had made the greatest advances. Colombia led with four new assemblies, making a total of six in all, plus four new groups. Great advances have been made in carrying the Faith to large, organized groups such as the Masons, Lions and Rotarian clubs, Cultural Centers and Theosophical Societies. The Masons added especially in the organizing of public meetings and helped, individually, to form the new Baha’i communities. Colombia had clearly won the honor of the next Congress, but was so remote in point of travel and expense from a majority of the other South American Assemblies, that it was reluctantly passed by.

Chile came second with one new assembly and ten small groups. Chile has four assemblies in all, the second largest number in a single South American country. Santiago and Valparaiso are easily accessible to a majority of the South American communities and Santiago was finally chosen for this year by the South American Teaching committee and this choice was confirmed. The Congresses and Bahá’i schools will probably be held in January and the exact date will be announced later.

Intensive Teaching Campaign Initiated

Charles Ions of Chicago has returned from Mexico after spending his summer vacation assisting the new assemblies in Pueblo and Coatepec and making preliminary preparations for the coming Congress. The Regional Teaching Committee of Mexico gives highest praise for this brilliant young pioneer.

Octavio Flores of Clovis, California, leaves early in October for Mexico. It will be his task to give deep confirming classes in “The Reality of the Divine Manifestation” for the strengthening of the new communities in Pueblo and Coatepec, to carry through the group in Vera Cruz to confirmation, complete preparations for the Congress, and, if possible, remain as special representative of the Inter-America Committee at the Congress, and teach a deepening class during the International School session.

Campaigns are under way in Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua. Panama is carrying the Faith to Santiago, Panama, as a new goal city, now that an assembly is assured in Colon. Mrs. Viva Lismore writes that she loves the people and finds the Brazilians very open to the Cause. Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Miessler report twenty-two eager new students in Sao Paulo. Ten are now studying “The Dispensation.” Mr. and Mrs. Bode report Rio Janeiro as being very open to the Cause. Special Bahá’í meetings were synchronized with the holding of the Pan American Conference near that city.

Colombia plans a three country regional conference when the Pan American conference meets in Bogotá in January. Venezuelan and Ecuadorian Bahá’ís are being invited to participate with representatives from the six Colombia Assemblies and various groups.

The incorporation of the Panama City Spiritual Assembly makes the second Central American country to have an assembly incorporated. Panama is the fourth country in Latin America where an assembly has Mildred Mottahedeh
Visits Ten European Countries
(A condensation of Mrs. Mottahedeh’s report)

In England I visited a small fireside group at the home of the Balyuzis. The English friends are working very hard and making good progress on their Six Year Plan. Still much remains to be done. The fewness of their numbers and the time consuming business of getting the bare necessities of life have made the going slow but the pace is steadily accelerating and success seems sure and close. All over the British Isles the work proceeds through the sacrifice of the friends.

In France I met with many of the friends individually and then spoke to them as a group at a reception they gave for me. The Paris friends were pleased and amazed to hear about the Convention. They had not realized the manifold activities of the Faith in the United States. The Guardian has given them a Five Year Plan but the only beginning they are making is to publish new translations of the Guardian’s letters in French. They are somewhat at a loss as to how to begin their work due to the fewness of their numbers and the advanced age of many in their group.

The progress of the work in Germany is phenomenal under the present difficult conditions. It was actually received its decree of incorporation. Several other assemblies have their applications pending.

The Radio Committee has translated into Spanish the script now used with special slides in the Temple, and is making disc presentations of this script for use with the pictures throughout Latin America.

All these plans for spreading the Faith in Latin America are being initiated or approved by the National Teaching Committees of the two zones. All members of these committees with the exception of one secretary, are native Latin Americans. These committees, too, will have direct charge of the annual Congresses and International Schools. In this way the Latin Americans are taking up the reins of their own Bahá’í Administration in preparation for the fulfillment of the Guardian’s second Seven Year Plan.

heartening to see the warmth of their affection for the believers of other countries. Like a phoenix, the Faith is rising from the ruins and starvation of Germany.

A Nineteen Day Feast was held in Vienna and it was their first meeting with a Bahá’í from another country in ten years. The Vienna group has lost over three-fourths of their number during the war because of the extermination of the Jewish Bahá’ís. Their plight is indeed sad. Only thirteen are left of a group that formerly numbered more than sixty. Hunger is their constant companion and if it were not for their faith and the food sent to them, their condition would be even more desperate. Both in Austria and Germany, food, clothing, and Bahá’í literature are essential for the progress of their work and for life itself.

In Switzerland two meetings were held at the International Bureau in Geneva and contacts were made with university teachers and artists in Zurich. The friends in Switzerland are ceaselessly striving to establish new assemblies and good progress is being made.

In Sweden five meetings were held. The pioneers in Stockholm have numerous contacts and seem to be able to produce a really interested audience of thirty or more at a few hours notice. Through the letter of introduction from the United Nations an opportunity was afforded to meet the Chief of Foreign Affairs of the Swedish government and a newspaper story followed. After it appeared several persons wrote and telephoned. All the contacts were turned over to the pioneers.

The pioneers in Copenhagen were newly established but their few contacts were all good prospects for the Faith. At a small tea party held at the apartment of Dagmar Dole and Eleanor Hollibaugh, our guests amazed us by their readiness to accept the Faith. It was as though they were awaiting the moment of the arrival of the Good Tidings.

In Holland meetings were held in Rotterdam and Amsterdam. A conference with officials of various organizations in the Hague was a result of the United Nations connection and served to open new doors for the friends in Holland. Holland was one of the most interesting of the ten countries I visited. The plea of the audience is for spiritual talks. The Dutch people have a highly evolved culture, little religious or race prejudice, and a deep interest in spiritual matters.

Two meetings were held in Luxembourg. The pioneers are well liked and widely respected and the spirit they evince has been felt by all whom they have contacted.

At a public meeting in Brussels the question and answer period showed that many of those present were really interested. Belgium has special problems. Part of the country speaks French and the other part a form of Dutch. There is one Bahá’í in the Dutch speaking area. Belgium is one of the few prosperous countries in present day Europe and the gloom of economic problems does not press heavily upon them. The people in Brussels seem very cosmopolitan and the friends hope that it will prove the fertile soil that will bring an assembly in one or two years.

The American friends would be happy indeed if they could see for themselves the devotion and progress of the pioneers in the goal countries. Their open loving hearts have made it easy for them to adapt themselves to their new homes and to be received by the people. They are truly citizens of the world and this lack of national prejudice has been a cause for wonder among the Europeans. As the Guardian reminds us, they are the redemption of Europe.

Non-Bahá’í Books
Referring to the Faith

The NSA would like to ask the friends to send in to the National Archives Committee the title, publication date and publisher, of non-Bahá’í books which contain anything like an extensive reference to the Faith, whether favorable or non-favorable. The purpose is to enable the Assembly to develop a complete National Bahá’í Library, so that all such references will be available when needed—in meeting attacks, etc.
News From Other Lands

Geneva Bureau News Exchange

Baha'is in Hamburg in the British Zone in Germany experienced hardships in getting meetings and teaching work started. An attempt was made in 1945 but with no post, no trains in the evening it became too difficult. When the Baha'i heard of progress in Southern Germany they got in touch with the friends there at the Nineteen Day Feasts. Their own regular weekly meetings began with the Unity Feast September 8, 1946. It has been impossible to find all who belonged to the community previously. There are now seventeen. During the severe winter there were great hardships. It was not always possible to get a heated room for meetings, often they sat in the dark, nevertheless there were always at least ten present and the three young people did not miss a meeting. Now there is an ever larger number at the public lectures on the first Sunday of each month. The friends are doing much translation from English pamphlets. One friend is compiling a Baha'i Lexicon which will be a reference book giving information on suggestions that concern the Baha'i Faith. It is not expected that this will be completed before several years, but an abridged form will be issued as soon as possible.

Three Baha'i Summer Schools were held in Germany, one for youth, followed by two for adults.

Remarkable spiritual power was evident at the annual convention of the Baha'is of India and Burma.

"The afternoon session of the 30th of April witnessed such moving scenes of love and unity and sacrifice as will never be forgotten by those present." The matter of the National Haziratu'l-Quds furnished an outlet for expressing this love in sacrifice. A large sum of money was necessary to make the first payment on the building and site which it had been decided to purchase. "One Assembly offered to bear the total cost of the next convention and later accepted the suggestion to divert this sum to the National Haziratu'l-Quds fund." Many other gifts were made. "Children brought in their gifts to be sold and dedicated to the National Headquarters Fund. So intense was the enthusiasm and love and unity that animated the delegates that a three hour session almost doubled itself without the friends being aware of it or yet prepared to leave!"

The NSA of Iran announces the plan to publish "Baha'i News and Reviews" in English and the first copy dated April, 1947, has been received. It tells of cruel persecutions and martyrdoms in 1943-4 which accompanied the launching of their teaching plan, and of renewal of plans in 1946. The new Plan covers a period of 45 months and ends July 9th, 1950, the 100th anniversary of the martyrdom of the Bab. It has definite goals as to number of new assemblies, reinstatement of old ones and other aims. In Tehran alone 262 teaching meetings have been organized and work is going on all over the country. Reports indicate that 192 new believers have been registered.

At the time of writing the Baha'is of Switzerland were earnestly preparing for the 32nd World Esperanto Congress held in Berne the last of July. An imposing exhibit of Baha'i literature, large Temple posters, etc., was being arranged and a special Baha'i session being planned.

Italy

(Condensation of a letter from Rome by Ugo Gianferri)

After weeks of search yesterday afternoon we had a most wonderful Baha'i meeting with Signora Verena Venturini, who had known of the Cause from her sister and had had two talks with Mary Hanford Ford; two talks on the Baha'i Faith which she had never forgotten. That was in 1910! Her sister Mrs. Max Schobermet abstract-Baha'i in 1912 and asked Him to pray for her sister Verena and her husband, at the time very ill. The Master said that He would pray for them. Shortly after Signor Venturini passed away and the two sisters went to America and lived for a while in Berkeley, California, where they met many of the old believers. Later Verena and her daughter returned to Italy. During the war her home was occupied by the German army. Once when speaking to one of the officers, an interpreter, she said that the Baha'i Faith was dear to her heart. Immediately he said, "I too know of the Baha'i religion." After that he greeted her with "Allah-u'Abha."

We had some wonderful hours together for she had not seen or heard from any Baha'i for many years. Signora Venturini is now a declared believer, firm in her faith and will do her utmost for our Cause.

Anchorage, Alaska

A special meeting of the Anchorage Community was held for consultation on the Guardian's latest message, "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour."

Special consultation was also held on how to reach the Eskimos in accordance with the Guardian's instructions. Recommendations were made to the Alaska Regional Teaching Committee to forward.

Incorporation of the Anchorage Assembly has been started.

The weekly radio talks and newspaper advertising continue. "Readers," or statements about the Baha'i Faith in the news columns, are now being used, as well as news comments on the public meetings.

Public meetings were held during August.

Hawaii

The Maui radio station K. M. V. I. opened their new station on March 16, 1947. The Maui Baha'is have a recording of six Baha'i prayers. This radio station opens each morning's broadcast with a prayer from various churches on this Island. On the morning of June 5, 1947, through the program director's own planning, the station opened with a Baha'i prayer. We Baha'is felt this significant, as it was a day for our Nineteen Day Feast. A Baha'i prayer is used at 6:00 A.M. two and three mornings a month over this station.

The Maui Baha'is have sponsored a thirteen week radio program, presenting the transcriptions sent us by the National Radio Committee. We have also been able to announce our regular monthly public lectures over this station. Whenever we have our lectures, we are also given publicity by the Maui Drug Co., at 9:40 P. M. on Thursdays, the owner, Mr. Carl Nato has offered to do this for us. Our lectures are also announced over K. G. U. in Honolulu, on their fifteen-minute weekly broadcasts. The Maui Baha'is have sent $5.00 every month for the past four years to help with the Honolulu Baha'i radio expense, as well.

Mr. Richard Mawson, the manager of the Maui radio station, has made some very favorable comments about the transcription material. Our weekly radio broadcast on
K. M. V. I. costs us $11.40 for fifteen minutes. It has been interesting to note the favorable comments of the people, in regard to these transcriptions. As soon as the radio committee have more transcriptions available, we intend to sponsor another series given over the Maui station by Mrs. Mabel Van Valkenburg. Her topics will be, "Beauty and Harmony in Diversity," and "The Law of Love."

(These selections from Martha Root's diaries and letters have been prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Ford of Little Falls, N.Y., and are to be continued.)

The Baha'i world is in its first year of a Second intensive Seven Year Plan to carry the Faith of Baha'u'llah to the people of all countries. As we study the task, make our plans, and send the first teachers abroad, we turn in our minds and hearts to the archetype of a Bahá'í itinerant teacher, Martha Root.

She it is who traveled continuously for twenty years, four times around the globe, teaching, ever teaching. Tens of thousands heard her call, from royalty to peasants. Embarking with unswerving resolve and a spirit of sublime detachment, she went her way across the earth. Age, ill health, meager resources, extremes of climate or great dangers, did not restrain her efforts.

Dear, indomitable Martha, with her seventeen suitcases containing all her belongings, struggling forward, writing, lecturing, denying herself every comfort, even adequate food and rest. Physically small, frail of body, plain of feature, unassuming in her appearance, with none of the talents the world thinks one must have for greatness; she had the courage of a lion, the strength and "staying powers" of a Gibralter, a will which defied and won over all obstacles, and a love that warmed hearts as the spring sun melts March snows. She became a spiritually dynamic and saintly woman who rendered manifold services to humanity. How gloriously she attained her goal of spreading the Bahá'í Faith!

The example of her life never leaves us; she is a continuing inspiration. In the task ahead of us, we need her guidance. What does she say to us?

From South American 1919 (Shipboard Going Down)

After real illness...I did not try to solve the problem of giving the Message for two days, my vivid thought was that I of all people was least fitted to meet such a group. I was not well, did not dance or play cards, nor was I an enthusiastic sportswoman. Still, reading the Creative Word, every line that seemed to spring up from the pages was a path for me to follow: "Let not conventionality cause you to seem cold and unsympathetic when you meet strange people from other countries. — Be kind to the strangers — help them to feel at home — ask if you may render them any service; try to make their lives a little happier. Let those who meet you know without your proclaiming the fact that you are indeed a Bahá'í."

Again, "If we are true Bahá'ís speech is not needed. Our actions will help on the world, will spread civilization, will help the progress of science and cause the arts to develop. — It is not through lip service that the Elect of God have attained to Holiness, but by patient lives of active service they have brought the Light into the World."

Serving everybody and praying for more capacity to serve intelligently and lovingly, I received my first opportunity. All the men had given money to buy prizes for sports. I took the best small article of my apparel, did it up as nearly as I could in the artistic fashion in which the Japanese present a gift and took it to the sports committee to be used as a prize. (It was the only woman's gift). I explained that I did not know much about sports, but to join in the "family party" I was going to go in for all except the heavy weight contests.

The next day being the first Sunday at sea I asked the Captain's permission to speak in the evening on the Bahá'í Cause. The purser put up a large notice on the bulletin board. No person aboard had ever heard of the Bahá'í Movement. The men of the sports committee were the first ones to enter the music room; they helped to make the meeting popular. The Captain, purser and several officers came to the talk. The ship pitched so that I had to hold on to a pillar with one hand while speaking. After the talk of over an hour, the purser made a little speech of thanks. Then after dismissal a Bishop took the floor and spoke against the Bahá'í Cause. Not that he had ever heard of it before but he said one could never be a Christian and believe in these other religions too. I replied to him point by point and from that evening we have been friendly, his very arguments against the Movement later made friends for it.

The Bahá’í Community

Beloved friends:

A brief manual has been published on the nature and functioning of the basic Bahá’í institutions, with statements on the stations of the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh, ‘Abdu'l-Bahá and the Guardianship, and expressions of the Bahá’í attitude and policy with respect to association with non-Bahá’í organizations.

This reference book replaces the compilations on Bahá’í procedure issued on two occasions during the past ten years. The present work, entitled The Bahá’í Community has been approved by the Guardian in its form and scope. Its distinctive character consists in its concentration on presentation of the nature of the permanent institutions of the Faith and its omission of secondary matters subject to more or less frequent change. The intention has been to give the new believers throughout North America, South America and Europe an outline of the Guardian's attitude and policy with respect to association with non-Bahá’í organizations.

When any organism has become developed, its right to exist depends upon its capacity to fulfil its special purpose. The Bahá’í Community was evolved by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá with infinite love and patience, and trained by Shoghi Effendi to carry out a unique world mission. Bahá’ís are neither passive worshippers of an unknown God or radical revolutionists imprisoned within the cage of materialism. Their faith and their action operate as one harmonious scheme of spiritual and social reality.

From the Bahá’í point of view, modern civilization consists of powerful but defective organisms, unfinished patterns of existence and institutions which have outlived their historic purpose. Because these organisms command immense energies they give the semblance of usefulness and progressive development. The energies of humanity, as Bahá’í know, can never be consummated through a wholesome community, since the operative organisms are fatally defective and misuse the energies they control.

In the Bahá’í Community the individual is neither exploited nor suppressed. His organic rights coincide with the best interests of the community, and the best interests of the community offer the individual his true consummation of experience in this world. The Bahá’í Community orchestrates the special aptitudes and training of its individual members, because the Bahá’í Community alone has been given the orchestral score and theme revealed by the Divine Musician.

Our theme, our task, is the Divine Plan, which by its very nature is a work of unity like a great symphony. Blessed is he who has learned today not merely to play the instrument entrusted to his spirit, but to play it in harmony with the orchestra of the will of God! Blessed is he whose personal emotion is enhanced by, and not in conflict with, the movement of the whole Bahá’í Community as it progresses in the path of the Divine Plan!

The mystery which interpenetrates the institutions and organic gatherings of the Bahá’í Community is profound. It is neither mysticism nor effort nor knowledge alone, but a blend of these three elements within the protection of the Holy Spirit. We may attain glimpses of this mystery by pondering those Tablets the Master revealed over a long period to American Assemblies and believers as He removed the veil between us and the promised Kingdom. Many of these Tablets were gathered together in chapter nine of Bahá’í World Faith, arrayed in an order showing the gradual unfoldment of the Bahá’í society, from the quickening of the individual spirit to the formation of the House of Justice. Knowing the whole purpose in advance, the Master revealed it part by part as the Bahá’ís made progress in truth and in love.

"O ye cohorts of God! Today in the present world each community is wandering in a wilderness, moving in accord with some passion and desire, and running to and fro in pursuance of its own imagination. Among the Communities of the world, this Community of the 'Most Great Name' is free from every thought, keeping aloof from every project and scheme, arising with the purest designs and institutions, and striving with the utmost hope to live in accordance with the divine teachings . . ." And again: "By heavenly armies those souls are intended who are entirely freed from the human world, transferred into celestial spirits and have become blessed angels. Such souls are the rays of the Sun of Truth who will illumine all the continents."

When the Guardian summons us to meet the urgent requirements of the present hour, he endows us with our collective aim and inspires in us the attributes and possibilities which the Master assured to every true believer reborn in the Day of Bahá'u'lláh.

"NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
27 Native European Believers

The chairman of the E.T.C. who returned from Europe on Oct. 3 has brought a heartening and inspiring report on the progress being made by the valiant pioneers in the E.T.C. goal cities. From Norway to Sweden, Denmark and Holland; thru Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland and to Italy and Spain—there now extends an unbroken chain of strong groups of enthusiastic and dedicated pioneers who have initiated and are coordinating this teaching project in a most impressive way. Everywhere regular weekly Firesides are being held as well as similarly frequent classes for the pioneers and group members themselves with special emphasis being given to the study of Administration. The pioneers are exploiting every possible means for publicity and contacts with unusual initiative and foresight. Public meetings are being given whenever an opportunity is offered. For these suitable rooms in hotels or clubs where the public can meet on neutral grounds, are being used. The Chairman was greatly heartened, encouraged and inspired by the miraculous progress which has been made in the European teaching project since she reported her first survey of the field less than ten months ago. Many of the pioneers have been at their posts only five or six months and yet she found in each goal city well-organized groups with definite plans and projects for the promotion of their vital tasks and giving every indication that the work is going forward with vigor and real promise.

The newly declared believers now number 27 and in at least two of the goal cities there are enough native believers to guarantee the formation of a Spiritual Assembly on next April 21.

The E.T.C. wishes to gratefully acknowledge the invaluable assistance rendered by the itinerant teachers who visited the different goal cities during the summer months. These include Mildred Mottahedeh, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Brown, Mason Remey, Marion Little, Eva Mae Barrow, Beatrice Ashton, Mrs. Corinne True; and Dr. Katherine K. True. Mrs. Little has remained to continue her unique and outstanding contribution to this teaching project.

With the departure of Amelia Bowman and Nancy Gates on the “Gripsholm” Oct. 3, within a year 30 pioneers and nine itinerant teachers
News from Other Lands

The need is still great in Germany and other European countries. We are told on good authority that only Sweden and Switzerland have sufficient food for their people. The following bits from letters show the sincere gratitude and joy for gifts: "Your wonderful gift parcels came to us and I wish you can see the faces of the friends as I divided your parcels. Oh and oh! And they put on the stockings and shoes and the dresses and they go home with them from their sisters in America! I thank you especially for the literature and our youth will help translate... And we thank you for the nourishment—I give to a sick child and to the Assembly which is weekly in my house, for 'Abdu'l-Bahá said to me, 'You cannot give the Holy Teachings to a hungry man.'"

Addresses of German believers were given in the February Bahá’í News. The address of CARE was also given there. Another reliable agency is American Committee for the Relief of German Needy, 220 East 23rd St. New York 10, N.Y. They have several different food packages and reach all German zones and Austria.

A happy occasion for German Bahá’ís was the wedding of Johnny Eichenauer and Gisela Walcker. Mrs. Graefee, the mother of Etty Graefee, the mother of Etty Graefee, who is present and wrote: "The hall was beautifully decorated with laurel and flowers. In the middle was the table with nine candlelights, all surrounded with flowers. The bride was in white satin and Johnny in uniform... After the beautiful service all went back to the bride's home and about seventy guests had supper and afterwards coffee and cake. The young people danced afterwards and sang... It was such a ray of sunshine for all present, and Johnny had provided so much that everybody was charmed."

From the Geneva Bureau News Exchange

Austria

Sixty were present at an evening reception given by a prominent Vienna artist who had arranged that the first part of the program should be a Bahá’í talk by Dr. Erdman. Musical selections followed. The Bahá’ís were guests at this reception and it was the means of winning several friends for our beloved Cause.

The passing of one of the oldest of Vienna believers, Frau Julia Schwartz, is recorded with great sorrow. The funeral was the first Bahá’í funeral service in Vienna. "In the presence of a large number of non-Bahá’ís we read Bahá’u’lláh’s prayer for the departed, with its wonderful refrain of the Greatest Name and the words repeated by the whole congregation.”

Poland

There are nine people in Poland who are studying the Bahá’í Faith through correspondence; all but one are using Esperanto. One of these is he who offered to hide Lydia Zamo­enhof in his house just before she was sent to the extermination camp. He quoted her last words to him at that time: "Do not think of putting yourself in danger; I know that I must die, but I feel it my duty to stay with my people. God grant that out of our sufferings a better world may emerge. I believe in God, I am a Bahá’í and will die a Bahá’í. Everything is in His Hands.”

German P.O.W. in France

Reinhold Leidinger still in a French prison camp uses every opportunity to speak of the Faith. His mother writes: "His former camp chaplain just returned from captivity is interested in the Faith which he had often discussed with Reinhold. 'You have in me a warm friend of the Bahá’í religion,' he said.”

It was probably also through Reinhold’s influence that a young German Cultural Officer in France wrote to the Geneva Bureau asking for Dr. Esselmont’s book that he might use it in instructing his fellow prisoners.

Latin American Congress and School

The second annual Congress and the first International School sessions of the 12 Caribbean countries will take place in Mexico City, January 8th through the 18th. The Congress will open with a reception the evening of the 8th and will continue through four days highlighted by a public meeting on the evening of the 11th. Guests from the United States who plan to be present include Mrs. Louie Mathews of Colorado Springs and Mr. Octavio Illescas who is contributing his services for a special teaching project. Mrs. Mathews will represent the Inter-America Committee at the Congress.

The International Bahá’í School will open on the morning of January 13th and close with a public meeting the evening of the 18th. Mr. Illescas will conduct a class for spiritual deepening under the subject “The Reality of the Divine Manifestation.” Classes in “Bahá’í Administration,” “How to Teach” stressing bridges of understanding and approach to the Catholics, the Masons and other groups, and “The Influence of Islam on Latin America via Spain,” are being planned. Teachers will include Sra. Chávez and Mrs. Marcia Steward.

The National Teaching Committee of the Caribbean countries has recognized the financial crisis being faced by the believers in the United States and has opened a drive to establish a national fund to which all 12 countries will contribute. The first use of this fund will be to help with expenses of the Congress and School. It is hoped it may be possible to offer scholarships or partial assistance to delegates especially capable of both contributing to and benefiting by the Congress and School.

Mrs. Gayle Woolson was warmly received in Cartagena, Colombia. She spoke at the Rotary Club dinner, addressed the Masonic Lodge and the Lions Club sponsored a Bahá’í radio program. She was also invited to speak daily over the radio. Sr. Ernesto Flores, chairman of the Spiritual Assembly of Cartagena, reports that some of the finest people in the city are members of the Bahá’í community.

Mrs. Cora Oliver of Panama stopped in Cuba on her way to Jamaica where she plans to spend about seven weeks in teaching and helping to open up a new goal city, since Spanish Town has already reached assembly status.

Miss Katherine Meyer, on her way to Venezuela, stopped in Haiti, the Dominican Republic and spent about a month in Puerto Rico.

Mrs. Amelia Bates, her husband and family and Mrs. Vivian McBean are working for the Faith in Haiti. Mrs. Sheila Rice-Wray, who is teaching at the Cultural Institute in Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, is making Bahá’í contacts, teaching a Bahá’í class and writes with appreciation of the steadfastness and spiritual quality of the Bahá’í friends there.

In the goal city of Santiago, Panama, 500 teachers and students in the Normal School heard talks about the Faith given in the school auditorium by Sr. Angel Beauchamp and Miss Julie Regal.

Brazil

Mrs. Helen Shearer, a temporary pioneer in Brazil is reported as doing splendid work for the Faith. A group of five are studying regularly and three fine homes are open for meetings in Santos, the big port city. Half a dozen more persons are interested and have expressed a desire to study. One enthusiastic student is the manager of the principle hotel. A group of students has also been established in Campinas through Mrs. Shearer’s efforts.

Some Answered Questions is now coming off the press in Rio. Mrs. Leonora Armstrong translated it into Portuguese. She is now reviewing the new translation into Portuguese of excerpts from God Passes By.

Fine publicity is being given the Faith in Colombia, Argentina and El Salvador. A two page article on the Faith was published in Raza, a magazine similar to Life with general circulation throughout Colombia. It includes pictures of the Temple and of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Numerous newspaper clippings from other places in Colombia have also been sent in.

A fine two page interview on the Faith with Shirley Warde is published in Estampa, an Argentine magazine for women and the home, and publicity clippings are coming in from Rosario, Argentina’s goal city.

In Santa Ana, goal city of El Salvador, fine articles about the Faith have been published through the efforts of Mrs. Louise Caswell who has established a study class of fine young people in that city.

News from Japan

Miss Agnes Alexander writes that she has been corresponding with the friends in Japan and gives news of them and of Robert Imagire. She also sends copies of letters from two Japanese believers.

Mr. Tokujirō Torii, who is blind, wrote: “Thank God, your heavenly presents, two packages reached me safely. Opening the sugar sack, Mrs. Torii doubted her eyes; at first she could not know what the white thing was and she tasted it, how sweet it was! We have never seen so much sugar for a long time. Thank you so much for your hearty kindness. We will share it among Bahá’í friends to make them happy . . .”

Mr. S. Fujita, who is well known among several American believers, wrote: “. . . It is wonderful to think we are permitted to communicate with you all freely from now on. . . . I am anticipating to hear from you often, also you may inform the friends. I have started a Bahá’í Center here at Yanai. I need your prayer and support. The living condition is very hard at present—everything so sky high and scarce. Please give my warm greeting to all friends . . .” Fujita’s address is: Mr. S. Fujita, P. O. Box 26, Yanai, Yamaguchi Ken, Japan.

The good news of Robert Imagire, who is in Japan by the wish of the Guardian, is that he now has a permanent job. He works at an art job in the Mitsubushi Shoji Building, which is the very heart of Tokyo. His letter says “. . . You may know that the Bahá’í noonday prayer ascends from the heart of Japan . . .”

"It's the Little Things That Count!"

Little stitches make lovely cloth. Little pennies make great wealth. Little "things" can build a Temple. Old newspapers sell for fifty cents a hundred pounds. Discarded magazines sell for sixty cents. Corrugated paper and rags net one dollar for one hundred pounds. Grocery stores and such pay good money to get rid of these things. If each Baha'i would sell these items our Temple Fund would not have a deficit.

All of us possess clothing we no longer wear, and furniture we no longer use. How about inserting an "ad" in the local newspaper? Let's build our Temple!

There's always a demand for "baby sitters". Nice money too!

No need to drain the pay-check. LET'S BUILD OUR TEMPLE with "THE LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT"!

For thousands of years the human race has been at war. It is enough. Now let mankind for a time at least, consort in amity and peace. Enmity and hatred have ruled. Let the world for a period, exercise love.

Excerpts from the letters and diaries of Marsha Root (Cont'd from last month)

Sailing out of Seattle, Washington, Mar. 23, 1923, on the steamship "Kaga Maru".

"China! China! China! Chinaward the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh must march!”

Words of 'Abdu’l-Bahá.

Mar. 29. Mrs. Ocean does not mollycoddle her travelers or play “I am better than thou” favorites. After people come innocently aboard the Kaga Maru, the much lauded Mrs. Ocean (who calls herself “Pacific,” what a misnomer!) begins and shakes them hard in a four day roughness of weather. In no uncertain terms she commands, “Let your heads and stomachs learn to adjust themselves or croak! Do not whine to me! ADJUST! I tell you, ADJUST!”

And behold it comes to pass after four days of stubbornness the most un-governable head and stomach begin to sit up and take notice that they were CONQUERED. Then Mrs. Ocean takes a breathing spell herself and for one day folds her ample waves upon her still more ample breast.

During the four days a few things happen. The Japanese stewardess, polite and smiling, brings tea in a dainty white and blue teapot, and she is thoughtful enough to cut off a little layer from the half grapefruit end so that it will stand steady on the plate.

Do I learn Japanese? Yes, I learn a few words each day. I sit beside the Captain and he teaches me. I also learn that the Japanese people are very good and kind. I can eat rice with chopsticks. The Captain taught me. He does not use chopsticks but he says it is well to learn the customs of all countries.

April 3. Mrs. Ocean evidently didn’t like what I wrote about her the other day, for after the one day of being civil and calm, she has raged continuously, culminating in a howling four-day storm. She was so angry she tore the side of my ship railing near my cabin.

The Japanese stewardess, polite and smiling, brings tea in a dainty white and blue teapot, and she is thoughtful enough to cut off a little layer from the half grapefruit end so that it will stand steady on the plate.

Do I learn Japanese? Yes, I learn a few words each day. I sit beside the Captain and he teaches me. I also learn that the Japanese people are very good and kind. I can eat rice with chopsticks. The Captain taught me. He does not use chopsticks but he says it is well to learn the customs of all countries.

The inner, spiritual journey has been something quite different. I have had the blessed leisure to read carefully 'Abdu’l-Bahá’s addresses in America, in Paris and London. (The Captain had a special light put into my cabin so that I could read.) It has been marvelous to study again how 'Abdu’l-Bahá spoke: His love, His simplicity; His clearness; His penetration and Vision. He said “When you speak, speak as I spoke when in this country, speak on the Principles.” “The Promulgation of Universal Peace” is a text book which, if followed, would make a thousand teachers in the United States in one year. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá also said: "The principles of the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh should be carefully studied, one by one until they are realized by heart and mind—so will you become strong followers of the Light, truly spiritual, heavenly soldiers of God, acquiring and spreading true civilization.”

There has been time on this voyage to think what hard journeys 'Abdu’l-Bahá and Bahá’u’lláh endured—and how 'Abdu’l-Bahá waited for forty years to bring the Light to us in America—how He longed to go to China—how in England, Paris and the United States He taught us just how to attract souls through the universal principles. He came and went, “The few days passed away but their import shall be remembered by God’s friends in all ages in all lands.”

Everyone who ever met Him loved Him so! He sent back such messages of love: "Though I go away, I shall always be present with you." What a wonderful Friend to come! If He was ill He did not speak of it. Today as the storm is still beating fiercely and another chill sends me back again to bed, I am just wishing that on the Kaga Maru and in China I could live even a little as 'Abdu’l-Bahá lived. He said: "Take courage! God never forsakes His children who strive and work and pray!”
April 7. Am very well, very happy and we are gradually nearing Yokohama. The weather continues bad, snow and huge icicles today. We are nearly three days late, but very thankful to come safely. I feel most sorry for the Japanese crew, they have only about ten hours in their homes, then they go on. Mrs. Ocean has not treated them very courteously—she could profit with study of “Manners” from the Japanese.

It has been too pitching to balance the lantern for our stereopticon slides, but the Captain thinks that by tomorrow night we can have our Baha’i party.

I forgot to tell you my compliment. The night the flood poured into my room and about 8 A.M. when the cabin boy had everything dried and my bed and room in beautiful order, I thanked him in Japanese. He replied smiling: “Every day, every time, your Japanese language improving itself.” He never heard of Coué either! Honesty, though, compels me to add that my Japanese language is monosyllabic. Everybody laughs at it, I do too—but it helps to make us friends. Jenabe Fazel’s trying at once to speak English pleased us, you know it did.

What has impressed me most on this trip is this: my cabin was underneath the bridge. Day and night, in sunshine ? ? ? or in the most great storm, always, always was heard the tread of the man walking up and down WATCHING. There was an intelligence that was directing the man at the bridge and every other movement of this ship. Had it not been for the Captain we should have been engulfed in mountain waves and lost.

So in our spiritual lives, always the Cohorts of angels are on the lookout bridge watching ahead of us. The Divine Intelligence of all the universe is bringing us safely into the Life Eternal. This is a voluntary journey we are taking. No one is forced “to be born again” and travel the mystic way of the spirit. Be he who has arisen and embarked will sail safely into the harbor of Heaven. Then the accidents of chill, of pain, of any hardship will seem as nothing. There one will only remember the fragrant heavenly qualities of the earth plane — qualities found in others and developed in one’s self. These qualities are a knowledge of God, radiant acquiescence, patience, wisdom, faithfulness, love. These are all we take with us into the world of Light. But he who has traveled with the Holy Spirit, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá says: “Can in his turn educate others in the same spirit.”

In closing I wish to say again: my friends I love you! I pray for you constantly! You are all going to China—it is not just one going! And I shall be with you, in spirit, in your work.

P.S. The lantern slide entertainment was a wonderful success. Mrs. Ocean calmed down on the afternoon of April 8th. The engineer set up the lantern and ran the slides. The Captain and I stood on the stage. He has read the blue booklet carefully and most of “Divine Philosophy.” So he explained the Baha’i Cause first and he interpreted as I spoke. The talk lasted one hour and everybody cheered the pictures. There are thirty-five boys and girls in the Third Class and I’m sure they will never forget who ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is. More than one hundred were present, almost everyone came except the man at the bridge and the sleeping babies...

I realized how significant these slides are for foreign countries. The Oriental people love pictures, and with slides I could make them understand the life of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and Bahá’u’lláh.

You think it is a miracle that in Bible times the sea could divide and people pass across—well, it was just like Providence that this stormy sea became calm for just one night for truly there has been no other night that the lantern would have stayed on the table steady enough to have a picture talk. By midnight the storm had begun again and the people were again ill, but that evening EVERYONE had a happy time. All came dressed in their best as if it were a festival. It was the only gathering we had during the voyage. Members of the crew were all permitted to come.

From China. Shanghai 1924

There is no end to China! When I finish I shall have carried the Message to nineteen of the important cities of China. My part is only to raise the Call in China and write back to you the opportunities here. I know of no country in the world where the people are so READY and where the opportunities are so vast. Through becoming friends with the Chinese at home (Continued on page 8) you can prepare souls who can come back and do marvelous work here. It is a favor and bounty of God to have the privilege to do anything for China.

If any of you took those trips, you would be just as likely to be ill as I. I have not spent the money to go first class and to stay in steam-heated, expensive foreign hotels. I have gone as economically as possible, for I have very far to go! It was the worst season of the year to go to central China but none of us ever stop for weather. All are ill sometimes and nothing matters if in time we are well, we have faithfully sowed the seeds for a divine civilization.

I should like to take a position in Hong Kong and earn the money to buy my ticket to Australia, and I shall try to get a position as nurse for children or companion to someone traveling to Australia and try to earn the passage in that way. Also, I wish to remain long enough in Hong Kong, Kowloon, and Canton to do some good Bahá’í work. Then I shall feel I have done what ‘Abdu’l-Bahá wished, and when you come over you will find some beautiful friends. How you will love these people!

Unity of Effort

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes gratefully to express its very deep appreciation of the prompt and heartening responses which are coming from so many of the believers during these days of financial crisis. Even from the pioneers serving so selflessly in the field have been received requests to curtail their living budgets. These communications carry evidence of fresh dedication and of greater willingness to sacrifice toward fulfilling the “Challenging Requirements” of this critical hour.

It is only through our complete unity of effort—in the continued and greater sacrifice of every believer—that the spiritual and material resources will be found to achieve the vital and urgent tasks entrusted to us by our Guardian. Not through curtailing our activities, but rather by increasing our capacities to serve and to give shall we succeed in attaining the goals which have been set.

Let us remember that in planning the regularity of our contributions the Nineteen-Day Feast and not the calendar month should be considered.

The Guardian, in a cable to the National Spiritual Assembly on September 10, said: “I urge the believers and local Assemblies to double their efforts in support of the vital National Fund... Further sacrifices are demanded; rich rewards are assured. May the entire body of the American believers arise to fulfill their glorious destiny. Abiding gratitude; deepest love.” (signed) Smooch

The Home Front

(Because of space limitations, and the flood of exciting news from our pioneer fields, "The Home Front" is too often neglected in these pages. However, each month your editors have discussed ways and means of getting "local" news into the News Letter. We decided to try gleaning some highlights from the many interesting items which come into the editorial office. We regret the physical impossibility of printing all of your news and will try our best to be fair in our selections. We are very grateful for your cooperation, and hope that the absence of your news will not discourage you from continuing to submit it.)

GREENSBORO, N. C.

An inter-regional conference met August 31st and Sept. 1st at "Marastone," a mountain retreat 12 miles from Asheville, N. C. The keynote of the conference was "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour" and a letter of rededication to our tasks was sent to the Guardian. Fifteen adults and 3 youth attended. A youth group was formed as a nucleus of what the South hopes to attain for the youth.

MICHIGAN STATE FAIR

Free space for a large booth and exhibit was obtained at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit. About 75,000 people at least saw the booth and the large printed quotations from the Bahá'í writings, 5,750 copies of literature were distributed, 3,000 invitations to the next large public meeting in Detroit were given out, 750 people stopped and asked questions and showed some degree of interest beyond mere curiosity and 49 people gave their names and addresses to be notified of future meetings.

ELMHURST, ILL.

Elmhurst has been maintaining a varied and active program. Excellent publicity, both free and paid for, has been obtained, so that questions as to the nature of the Bahá'í Faith are becoming common. On a Sunday in August, the members of this community took their "interested" friends on a "pilgrimage" to the Temple and served a picnic lunch in a nearby park on Lake Michigan. The whole group took a guided tour through the Temple and had such a thoroughly pleasant day that they were reluctant to go home.

In September, contact was made with the local Kiwanis Club (through the article which appeared in their magazine) and an invitation to speak at their luncheon meeting was accepted. One of the members was the editor of a local paper, and a fine write-up of the talk appeared, describing the Temple and stating the principles.

SPokane, WASHINGTON

The believers in Spokane are trying a new method of attracting contacts. Their experience has proven to them that real attraction to the Faith more often than not is through individuals and so they have started a series of meetings beginning with purely social gatherings, at which real friendliness and hospitality are emphasized. The first of these parties was held at the Center. It was a "Hard Luck" party and the invitations said to come and "bring a friend." The Center was packed and the guests thoroughly enjoyed a program of stunts and games. It was clearly demonstrated that the wearing of amusing costumes and the hilarity of the program soon made friends of former strangers. If, after attending some of the parties, no desire to investigate the Faith is shown, these people are not invited again.

The first test of this method of attracting people came when a believer came from out of town to speak informally at a fireside meeting. Four of the people who had been party guests were so interested in his presentation of the Faith that they have been asking questions ever since.

Also, this community finds that an unusual heading for newspaper publicity is likely to catch the eye of an editor and thus get into the paper. The account of the Hard Luck Party, for instance, appeared under the heading "30-Year Old Costumes Worn."

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A very successful picnic was held in Philadelphia, with 65 people attending, many of whom were not Bahá'ís. In the evening, movies highlighted the gathering with a film of a 22,000 mile trip through the East by a famous explorer.

On Sept. 23rd almost all of the believers gathered to read together "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour." Members of the teaching committee shared in reading aloud and all attending brought their own copies. There was a determined seriousness in this single project for the evening as the letter was read from beginning to end.

On the morning of that same day, the Children's Class was begun for the year, with five children of local Bahá'ís. In addition to the lesson, they rehearsed songs which they will sing at the Center on Bahá'u'lláh's birthday and they also made drawings for that occasion.

The Township of Upper Darby was chosen as a goal for a new assembly by next April. The whole Philadelphia community has constituted itself a "prayer squad" using the Báb's prayer for the removal of difficulties at least three times daily. So far, in this goal town, a meeting place has been secured and the good will of a local editor established.

NEW YORK STATE

A weekend teaching conference held in Geneva and sponsored by the Upper New York Regional Teaching Committee was attended by believers from New York City, Rochester, Binghamton, Syracuse, Niagara Falls, Hamburg, Waterloo, Seneca Town, Pen Yan, Jamestown, Victor and Brighton.

On Friday afternoon, a Community club heard a talk on "A New Focus in History" at the home of two of the Bahá'ís who are members of the Club. Saturday night a group of 45 young people were entertained at a corn roast by Miss Nancy Gates, who has since left to pioneer in Sweden. Sunday afternoon a public meeting was attended by over 80 people. Following the meeting a large group gathered at a Bahá'í home and over cups of tea heard Miss Cora Oliver, pioneer in Panama, talk of her experiences. Monday evening, the Pen Yan group and their friends heard a talk on "The You in the United Nations." It was a full weekend!

WILMINGTON, DEL.

A public meeting recently attracted many people and it was felt to be the most successful ever held in Wilmington. A team of speakers discussed the practical and the spiritual aspects of the Bahá'í Faith as related to peace and justice for all the world.
World Esperanto Congress

The first post-war World Esperanto Congress was held in Berne, Switzerland, July 26-August 2nd. Greeting telegrams and letters were sent to the Congress by the Guardian, National and Local Spiritual Assemblies and were read at the opening session. An outstanding and impressive Baha'í exhibit drew the attention of hundreds who passed it daily. One table of this exhibit was devoted to 49 translations of Dr. Esslemont's book, each marked with the name of its language. Again and again visitors praised this beautiful exhibit and took home with them pamphlets. Over 500 pamphlets were given out personally. Nine Baha'ís were present representing 9 countries.

The special Baha'í session was well received and in spite of great heat and an unfavorable hour was attended by 35 persons of 13 nationalities. Mr. Vuk Echtner of Prague gave a brilliant talk, "Does a Universal Language Guarantee World Peace?" The discussion which followed was lively and lasted over an hour.

The crowning event of the happy week was when one of the Czech delegates who had been studying with Vuk Echtner for a year declared her acceptance of the Faith. She said: "I have accepted the Teachings long ago and recognized their beauty and necessity, but I had never met any Baha'ís except Vuk. Now I have seen that they are all as kind and warmhearted as he from whichever country they come. I am convinced of the power of this glorious Faith and am happy to belong to the great loving family of Baha'ís."

A total of 9 newspaper stories and 3 radio listings were obtained without cost. Two sets of individual letters, one to a list of 100, another to a list of 160, were mailed a week in advance and posters were placed in prominent windows about town. Slides of the House of Worship were shown at two fireside meetings which followed the public meeting, and a youth fireside, an adult fireside and a study class are working faithfully toward the goal of "double the number."

BUTTE, MONTANA

Enthusiasm is high in Montana. A conference was held in Helena recently and about 7 of the believers from Butte were able to attend. The report of the conference states "It was a marvelous conference and...the greatest thing that has happened to Montana. These people have never met many outside Baha'ís."

The Butte program committee has initiated a new policy of using non-Baha'i friends on their programs for music, prayers, readings, etc. The friends are hard at work sending invitations to meetings to "everyone in the telephone book." Their report says... "We are still in the B's... but when we finish, everyone will have at least heard the word!"

The Masonic Male Chorus sang for one of the meetings, and then stayed to hear the speaker! For one meeting, a large window display was arranged in a local gift shop. A photographer reported that it took him over a half hour to get the picture because people kept gathering around it so much that he had to drive them away. One night one of the believers kept track of the time and watched the window, and in 15 minutes, 30 people had stopped to look at it and read its various placards and signs.

The report ends with the expressed belief that at last they have "smashed Butte wide open" and the happy report of 3 new declarations of faith, and 2 more friends who have indicated their readiness to declare themselves.

Canada's First Baha'i School

Among the rolling Laurentian hills in Canada, the first Canadian Baha'i Summer School was born. Forty-five people attended the session, with most of the friends staying from one to several days. Sleeping accommodations were limited to 24.

Each day began with communal devotion periods. Those who rose earlier, repeated the Dawn prayer, with the rays of the rising sun greeting them. Most of the study courses were held outside under the trees. A panel discussion, "In Search of Maturity," was supplemented by reference material which could be used for further study at home. This panel was conducted by Adeline Lohse and Rosemary and Emeric Sala. Ross Woodman, stopping on his cross-Canada lecture tour, presented a course on "Religion and Society."

Music formed an integral part of each day. A tour of the property showed the great possibilities for future development. The sense of ownership—the feeling that this ground was Bahá’í property—brought forth many suggestions and ideas.

The farm work was novel and unfamiliar to the city folk. The early morning milking of cow and goats; “Jo” the rooster, with his cockiness when the pullets laid their first eggs—all proved of great interest to the community. Haying on such hilly ground was precarious, but as a community project, several loads were put into the barn. An old shed was torn down. The outside of the house was given a new trim by willing hands wielding paint brushes.

An excellent cuisine was provided by the cook, who spoke no English, but who knew the way to the hearts.

The evening workshops were informative and enjoyable. A practice L.S.A. was formed at the beginning of the week. The election of the Assembly was new to those who had lived only in small groups. There were discussions on administration, radio, publicity, visual aids to teaching, firesides, etc. One evening, the community developed an outline for a fifteen-minute radio talk for Ross Woodman to give in the Maritimes. Everyone contributed to this outline.

Out under the trees for late sessions around a campfire there were many happy hours of discussion, singing and fellowship. Some of these evenings ended with the chanting of prayers with a choral background. One session was devoted to “The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour.” The arrangement of the program was especially suited to the Farm at this stage of development. It was most effective in creating a joyous spirit of unity culminating in a broader spiritual growth. Laughter accompanying work and play, balanced the seriousness with which everyone attended the study courses.

Two winter sessions are planned, the schedules of which, and information about which are here given:

First Winter Session: Dec. 25 to Jan 4 (11 days)
Second Winter Session: Feb. 22 to 28, 1948 (7 days)

When making your reservations please indicate the subjects on which you could participate or lead in panel discussions.

Rates for Winter Sessions: $3.50 per day, or $21.00 per week, or $33.00 for the eleven day session, including meals.

Recreation: Skiing, Ski Instruction, Snowshowing and Horseback Riding.

“We Will Wait for You”

At 4:20 p.m. the tingle of the telephone was heard resounding through the lower floor of the Bahá’í House of Worship.

“What time do you close?” was the query on the other end of the line.

“We will close in ten minutes,” was the reply.

“Oh!” was the disappointed rejoinder. “I am in Evanston and want to see the Bahá’í House of Worship, but I must see it tonight as I am leaving town. Will you wait if I take a cab right out?”

So, the Bahá’í, after a full day of guiding at the Temple, replied, “Yes, we will wait for you.”

In less than ten minutes the cab drew up to the entrance and not one, but six young men from India got out, one of them having been the spokesman for the crowd.

How tragic if we had had to turn these boys away! But many times we do have to refuse visitors admittance as there are not enough Bahá’ís acting as guides to keep the Temple open as long as it should be.

What a fine way to spread the message, for not only from India do they come, but from all parts of the world.

Wouldn’t you like to be a guide at the Bahá’í House of Worship and give the message to many people daily?

So Great the Glory

“Say: So great is the glory of the Cause of God that even the blind can perceive it, how much more they whose sight is sharp, whose vision is pure.”

—BAHÁ’U’LLÁH

Nancy Gates, pioneer to Denmark: Antonio Boca, who sailed to visit his family in the Balearic Islands; and Amelia Bowman, pioneer to Sweden.
Radio Script Writing

Courses in Radio script writing are available at nearly every university in the country, the Radio Committee reports. Bahá’ís interested in radio writing should investigate such courses. In applying for entrance to classes of this nature, it is a good idea to submit samples of your writing, whether the sample scripts have or have not been broadcast.

All Bahá’ís who served in the armed forces have these university classes open to them under the GI Bill of Rights. For those who are interested, there is an excellent text book entitled “Handbook of Radio Broadcasting” published by McGraw-Hill.

Contract Awarded for New Temple Interior Stairway

The Temple Trustees have awarded a contract to the George A. Fuller Construction Company for building a new stairway system inside the Temple. The stairway is required by the modified interior design. The contract was signed last week in November, and the Trustees hope that actual construction work will get under way this month.

The Fuller Company estimates that the cost of this installation will be approximately $4500, plus the contractor’s fee of 7%, which is much lower than the average fee for this type of job. Competitive bids were sought for this work, and the next figure to the estimate submitted by the George A. Fuller Company was an estimate of $5500, plus contractor’s fee.

The proposal of the Fuller Company was accepted by the Temple Trustees on the joint recommendation of Shaw, Metz and Dollo, the architects for the Temple, and the Baha’i Technical Advisory Board, after approval of the architect’s plans by the Technical Board.

The new stairway system, which will replace the present stairs on the west side of the building, will be enclosed, and will extend from the basement to the main floor of the building, on the east side of the structure. These stairs will be back of the proposed location of the reader’s stand.

Elimination of the present stairway system is necessary to make the ninth alcove available for seating, in accordance with the plans approved by the Guardian for unifying the main auditorium space in the completed interior. The present stairway will be left in place while the interior ornamentation work is being done, but will be removed before the completion of this work.

It is estimated that approximately two months’ construction time will be required for the erection of the new stairway system. Mr. Shaw, the architect, and the Baha’i Technical Board jointly recommended that this project be completed before work starts on the interior ornamentation. The Trustees hope to be able to let the first contract for the interior ornamental work sometime in the spring of 1948. The beginning of this work will depend upon the time required by the architect to complete the necessary detailed working drawings.

“The second year of the second Seven Year Plan must witness, on all fronts, on the part of young and old alike, rich and poor, colored and white, neophyte and veteran, a rededication to the tasks undertaken. The utmost effort by the National Teaching Committee and its auxiliary Regional Teaching Committees, aimed at raising the number of spiritual assemblies in the North American continent to no less than one hundred and seventy-five, ere the expiry of the current year, should be exerted”

SHOGHIL EFFENDI

This is the midpoint of our Baha’i Year in the second year of the Second Seven Year Plan. Let us stop and analyze what we have accomplished—every community of twenty or more—your project of a new community—every individual Baha’i—your goal of bringing one person into the Baha’i Faith. There are only six months left.

THE NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE.
Baha’i Marriage

There is no objection to performing a Baha’i marriage for two non-Baha’is, if they desire to have our simple ceremony. This, on the contrary, is yet another way of demonstrating our liberality.

Baha’u’llah has clearly stated the consent of all living parents is required for a Baha’i marriage. This applies whether the parents are Baha’is or non-Baha’is, divorced for years, or not. This great law He has laid down to strengthen the social fabric, to knit closer the ties of the home, to place a certain gratitude and respect in the hearts of children for those who have given them life and sent their souls out on the eternal journey towards their Creator. We Baha’is must realize that in present-day society the exact opposite process is taking place: young people care less and less for their parents’ wishes, divorce is considered a natural right, and obtained on the flimsiest and most unwarrantable and shabby pretexts. People separated from each other, especially if one of them has had full custody of the children, are only too willing to belittle the importance of the partner in marriage also responsible as a parent for bringing those children into this world. The Baha’is must, through rigid adherence to the Baha’i laws and teachings, combat those corrosive forces which are so rapidly destroying home life and the beauty of family relationships, and tearing down the moral structure of society.

Long Healing Prayer

The long Healing Prayer translated by Dr. Khan and his daughter is authentic. As it is one which, when rendered into English, loses much of its rich imagery, he does not feel it is suitable at present for inclusion in a prayer book, as non-Baha’is might find it rather strange —Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, in letter to the NSA dated October 25, 1947.

Relief to European Pioneers

If any of the European pioneers are really in need of relief parcels for their personal use, there is certainly no objection to sending them some. However, he certainly would not send relief for those whom they are teaching or contacting, as this would seem in the nature of either a reward or an enticement for those attracted to the Faith. —Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, in letter to the NSA dated October 25, 1947.

*This statement from Hafis was written in response to the question raised at the last National Conference as to whether relief packages should be sent to the European pioneers for distribution to needy non-believers in their vicinity.

-message from the Guardian
Responsibilities of Bahá’í Children

Regarding children: at fifteen a Bahá’í is of age as far as keeping the laws of the Aqdas is concerned—prayer, fasting, etc. But children under fifteen should certainly observe the Bahá’í Holy Days, and not go to school, if this can be arranged, on these nine days.—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, in letter to NSA dated October 25, 1947.

Status of Local Assemblies

A spiritual Assembly can only exist where there are nine or more adult declared Bahá’ís in a specific area, who hold a proper election or constitute themselves an Assembly properly. There is nothing vague about it, and no departure can be made from the accepted procedure.—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, in letter to NSA dated October 25, 1947.

Reference to Year 1335

In the August issue of Bahá’í News there is a statement about the year 1335 and a reference to “God Passes By” in which it gives the impression that in that book the Guardian associates the fulfillment of Daniel’s prophecy with one hundred years after Bahá’u’lláh’s mystic experience. He wishes me to point out that this is inaccurate as on page 151 of “God Passes By,” in the reference to His Declaration, the Guardian clearly states that with this declaration the “hundred lunar years” had commenced. The mystic experience of Bahá’u’lláh was in the Síyáh Chál and has nothing to do with Daniel’s prophecy.

This statement of the Guardian is itself based on extracts from two of the Master’s Tablets which are published in “The Passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.” —Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, in letter to NSA dated October 25, 1947.

Bahá’í Infallibility, Voting, and Chastity

The following excerpts from the Guardian’s letter to John Bernard Corne dated October 19, 1947 are published with Shoghi Effendi’s explicit approval.

Regarding your questions: There are only two institutions which are infallible, one is the guardianship, the other the International House of Justice. What the Master desired to protect the friends against was continual bickering and opinionatedness. A believer can ask the Assembly why they made a certain decision and politely request them to reconsider. But then he must leave it at that, and not go on disrupting local affairs through insisting on his own views. This applies to an Assembly member as well. We all have a right to our opinions, we are bound to think differently; but a Bahá’í must accept the majority decision of his Assembly, realizing that acceptance and harmony—even if a mistake has been made—are the really important things, and when we serve the Cause properly, in the Bahá’í way, God will right any wrongs done in the end.

Bahá’ís are not required to vote on an Assembly against their consciences. It is better if they submit to the majority view and make it unanimous. But they are not forced to. What they must do, however, is to abide by the majority decision, as this is what becomes effective. They must not go around undermining the Assembly by saying they disagreed with the majority. In other words, they must put the Cause first and not their own opinions.

He, (an S. A. member) can ask the Assembly to reconsider a matter, but he has no right to force them or create inharmony because they won’t change. Unanimous votes are preferable, but certainly cannot be forced upon Assembly members by artificial methods such as are used by other societies.

What Bahá’u’lláh means by chastity certainly does not include the kissing that goes on in modern society. It is detrimental to the morals of young people, and often leads them to go too far, or arouses appetites which they cannot perhaps at the time satisfy legitimately through marriage, and the suppression of which is a strain on them.

The Bahá’í standard is very high, more particularly when compared with the thoroughly rotten morals of the present world. But this standard of ours will produce healthier, happier, nobler people, and induce stabler marriages.

Overjoyed Recent Victories

Overjoyed at recent victories, achievements... Praying for continual extension in range of magnificent accomplishments by divinely-guided, much beloved, highly admired American Bahá’í community.—Cable from the Guardian, November 15, 1947.

Teaching Obligations in North America

Beloved friends:

Refer back to your copy of Bahá’í News dated July, 1946, issued during the early, planning months of the second Seven Year Plan. You will find listed sixty-three groups in the United States and Canada which as of then had each five or more declared Bahá’ís.

Since to form an Assembly there must be nine or more believers, we need a minimum of 567 declared Bahá’ís to produce sixty-three new local Spiritual Assemblies.

The list of sixty-three groups gives the number of Bahá’ís in each group as of the time the data was compiled in the National Office. Counting up the total number of the Bahá’ís who were members of those groups we can make this interesting table:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>TABLE I</th>
<th>63 Assemblies, Bahá’ís needed</th>
<th>567</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>63 groups, July 1946, total members</td>
<td>398</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>169</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total new enrollments required</td>
<td>169</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

With this background of fact, ponder again the Guardian’s deeply significant call for a total of 175 Assemblies in North America by April 21, 1948.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TABLE II</th>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Total Assemblies by 1948</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total listed, Bahá’í News, July 1947</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Assemblies to form this year</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

To set up a margin of safety allowing for dissolution of weak Assemblies, we can strive for 40 new Assemblies instead of 32. Looking at Table I again, it becomes evident that to form 40 Assemblies out of the 63 groups, new enrollments must be achieved to the number of about 120 in 40 towns, or three or four per group.

With this background of fact, ponder again the Guardian's deeply significant call for a total of 175 Assemblies in North America by April 21, 1948.

To set up a margin of safety allowing for dissolution of weak Assemblies, we can strive for 40 new Assemblies instead of 32. Looking at Table I again, it becomes evident that to form 40 Assemblies out of the 63 groups, new enrollments must be achieved to the number of about 120 in 40 towns, or three or four per group.
This gives us something to take hold of and examine in terms of planned action. It brings the task down from the stratosphere of sentiment to the level of our daily lives. What plans have been developed and put into operation to accomplish this specific task?

1. An appeal from the NSA to the groups to redouble their teaching efforts and lay the spiritual foundation of unity essential to our great aim.

2. An appeal from the NSA to local Assemblies to sponsor one or more groups and extend special teaching aid in order to bring the group up to Assembly status. Thirty-six Assemblies or more have accepted this challenge.

3. A "National Baha'i Program" evolved under which the National Teaching Committee conducts public meetings and discussions in selected group cities, with publicity material and help from a number of participating committees, including Radio, Visual Education, and Public Relations. The idea is to concentrate all available energy upon the following process:

A. Publicize the city, attract attention.
B. Create an audience.
C. Develop a group for discussion.
D. From those interested form a study class.
E. Confirm and enroll.

In addition, to arouse a more intense zeal for spreading the Faith, and regenerate the forces of the Baha'i community, the National Assembly has appealed to Assemblies to try and double the size of the community this year, and to individual believers, each to confirm at least one new soul.

This year is decisive in the evolution of the Baha'i community as it is in the history of the world. Let us serve the Faith. If anyone feels he does not know how to serve, let him serve and learn how by serving.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Letters from the Guardian

The National Spiritual Assembly urgently requests that all National Committees go through their files and send to the National Archives for preservation any original letters from the Guardian which they may have. The secretary of this Committee is: Mrs. Gertrude Struven, 714 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill.

December, 1947

Are YOU Teaching?

An analysis of the current seven Year Plan clearly indicated that its success depends upon a greatly increased Baha'i membership. The confirmation and training of these souls, once we have found them, becomes the work largely of individual Bahá'ís.

The achievement of the other goals calling for the multiplication of Assemblies and groups demands the actual enrollment of many new and active workers. Thus these two tasks are but parts of one major goal—to increase the army of Bahá'u'lláh and broaden the base of His Administrative Order.

In the past we have relied upon a relatively few Bahá'ís to carry forward the local and national teaching programs, but now the task has become so large that each of us is face to face with his individual responsibility for promoting the Faith.

Why are so many of us still inactive in the teaching field? This question is the concern of every thoughtful Bahá'í. The answers most frequently given are: I do not have the courage or the experience to make new contacts. "I lack the necessary knowledge of the Teachings, or training as a speaker or a teacher." And so we wait. For what?

None but the Bahá'ís can establish the Faith or do our work. The very needs of humanity today at home and abroad are presenting us with opportunities that are straining the teaching personnel of the National Teaching Committee, the Regional Committees and Local Assemblies. We have reached a crisis. Whether we succeed or fail in achieving the tasks to which we have set our hands depends squarely upon the degree to which each of us assumes our full responsibility. Lack of education and experience is no longer a valid excuse for inactivity. In His Will and Testament, 'Abdu'l-Bahá says: "all the friends and loved ones, one and all!" must teach "His Cause and promote His Faith." And in GLEANINGS, Bahá'u'lláh says: "The understanding of His Words and comprehension of the Utterances of the Birds of Heaven are in no wise dependent upon human learning. They depend solely upon purity of heart, chastity of soul and freedom of spirit." The writings abound in promises of Divine assistance if we but make the effort. The first step in preparing ourselves for service to the Faith, therefore, is to adopt a positive attitude, to say and believe "I can."

It is the belief of the Study Aids Committee that there are tremendous potentials for service in even the present Bahá'í membership and that they can be developed through study and training programs. Local Spiritual Assemblies and Bahá'í groups have a responsibility for providing classes for the believers and encouraging individual study, and yet a survey conducted by the Study Aids Committee last year among 138 Assemblies revealed that only 25 (less than one in five) communities had classes of any kind for Bahá'ís. If this is truly representative of the country, then it is obvious that vast resources for workers in the Faith are not being explored. It is exceedingly important that Local Assemblies and groups give this matter their immediate attention and that every individual Bahá'í, no matter how old or young or how isolated, should begin at once to study with a purpose. Every effort should also be made by all of the friends to attend the Bahá'í summer schools where intensive instruction and training in study and teaching methods are available.

In succeeding issues of Bahá'í News the Study Aids Committee will review for the friends the numerous resources at their command for individual and group study and will also suggest methods for acquiring habits of study and experience in teaching. The Committee is very eager to be of utmost service and herewith invites individuals, Assemblies and groups to call upon it for suggestions, materials and assistance with study problems. It is grateful for the material and suggestions that it has already received from the friends and will welcome copies of study outlines, materials and reports of study classes and training techniques that have been used successfully by any individual group or community. Address communications to Study Aids Committee, Miss Charlotte Lenfoot, Sec'y, 156 Nova Drive, Piedmont, Calif.

European Work Advances

The European Teaching Committee rejoices to report the new believer in Rome, Signor Fernando Morosi. The first declared Bahá’í in Brussels under the second Seven Year Plan, Madame Lea Nys, is already a very valuable and active member of the group.

The whole European teaching project seems to have taken on a new impetus and momentum and from each of the Centers are coming heartening reports of the wonderful progress of the work. The Committee members are impressed by the number of those attending study classes regularly and by the unusual contacts which are miraculously opening for the pioneers. Much of this new development, the Committee feels, is due to the assistance given by the itinerant teachers and by the widespread interest in the Faith which they developed during their stays in the different goal cities. Henry Jarvis and Marion Little are still continuing in the field. Henry has been concentrating on the three Scandinavian goal cities. In each of these Centers he has contributed invaluably by helping with the newly interested believers, by his excellent public talks and through his many meetings with new contacts. Marion Little has just finished her stay in Luxembourg and after a visit to Brussels plans to join the group in Rome.

I remembered that Paul Van de Brook was to come at two o’clock and meet Jean. So I showed him the clock and pointed to the hour of two and asked him if he could come back. He understood and left. At two o’clock exactly he returned and Paul came in a few moments later. I told Paul the story and Paul went in and spoke to him. His story is interesting. He lives in the Moselle Valley on the border of Germany. He is a Catholic but has no faith or interest in the ritual, dogma of the Church or any liking for the Priests. He was told recently that at 21 Rue Elisabeth Luxembourg-Ville there were people speaking of an honest religion and that he could not wait for anything until he had heard of it. He has been seeking for just such a religion and on reading the Revelation of St. John knew that this was the time for it to appear—according to the prophecies. He asked very humbly if there was a system in the religion because he was a working man—he worked “with his hands and was simple.” It was quite thrilling to hear Paul tell him that this religion was for all—the highest and the lowest, the working man and the King. His face lighted up and he expressed his pleasure volubly. His wife, he explained, felt just as he did and he knew she would be overjoyed to know what he had found and they would read the book together. He asked Paul to ask me “how he could join.” So we told him that he would have to study the teachings and creative word of Baha’u’llah and to read of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, of the Guardian and of the Bab. All of which he was eager to do. He will return tomorrow night and bring his wife with him. Will ask Miss Hipp to come and interpret because she speaks good German and also English and it will be an experience for her. As far as I can make out Madam Greich was visiting the Moselle Valley last month and she must have spoken of the Faith to someone at that time and he in turn passed it on to this man. How strange that my little landlady should be an instrument for Baha’u’llah. Will let you know how it progresses.

This experience makes me think of the early days of the Christians when the word passed around by mouth “end they came seeking.”
“Co-Workers and Associates”

The Guardian has named the Latin American friends "co-workers and associates" of the "prosecutors of the Divine Plan." This title is given to them in "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour."

That the Latin friends have done something to deserve this honor is shown by the rapid growth of the Faith in the 22 countries served by the Inter-America Committee in South American, Central America, Mexico and the West Indies. In April, 1944, there were 14 assemblies and 13 groups in these sister Americas. In April, 1946, during the two-year interim between the first and Second Year Plans, this number had grown to 27 assemblies and 9 groups. In April, 1947, at the close of the first year of the Second Seven Year Plan, assemblies had increased to 37 and there are now reported 51 groups throughout the Latin Americas.

Sincere hearts of all classes have caught the fire of the love of God through the Message of Bahá'u'lláh, and have responded to His call. A judge of the supreme court, professors in the universities, many teachers, business men, newspaper and radio men, writers, actors, musicians, artists, physicians, attorneys and simpler folk are included in the ranks of the Bahá'ís in these countries.

Many of the Bahá'í friends are very poor, for most of the Latin American countries have been suffering from increasingly severe economic crises and the great majority of the people live below the poverty line. Their sincerity, however, is demonstrated in a little story sent by Sheila Rice-Wray from Ciudad Trujillo. Sheila had been explaining the importance of the national fund which the friends are trying to establish to help with teaching projects. One very poor man, the father of an all-Bahá'í family of five, drew out of his pocket all of the little that he had and placed it in the fund. He went home that night not knowing where the next meal for his family would come from. A day or two later he came to see Sheila and told her that now he had better work. His family would be able to eat and he could also give something to the fund. Out of such faith and sacrifice a new spiritual order can be built in the world.

Procedure on Bahá'í Photographs

As there are many uses for Bahá'í photographs, the National Assembly has adopted a simple method of coordination:

1. Pictures which are sent to Bahá'í News are to be turned over to the National Office after the halftone cuts are made, unless the sender wishes its return.

2. The Bahá'í World Editorial Committee is to notify the National Office once a month of the subjects of the pictures they have received for publication.

3. The National Office, from all available information, will compile a list of pictures each month and send copies of the list to Bahá'í News Editorial Committee, The Bahá'í World Editorial Committee, Public Relations Committee, and Visual Education Committee.

Chile is pleading for new pioneer teachers to help them with the task of adequately teaching some ten new groups scattered along the tremendous length of the Chilean seaboard. In Colombia and Venezuela Rotary and Lions' Clubs open their doors to Bahá'í teachers and some of them are studying the Faith at their meetings. A typical letter has just come in from the grand master of the Masonic lodge in La Guaira, Venezuela, thanking the committee for pamphlets and correspondence articles furnished, and stating that all members of the lodge are studying these and are deeply interested. The latest issue of "Estrella," Masonic magazine in Latin America, has just come in carrying a Bahá'í article by Gayle Woolson.

Louise Caswell is en route to Panama to initiate a correspondence teaching campaign in that country after spending the past three months in El Salvador where she established an active study group in Santa Ana and assisted the Regional Teaching Committee in opening a correspondence teaching campaign.
News from Other Lands

AUSTRALIA. Encouraged by the Guardian the NSA of Australia and New Zealand are inaugurating a six-year plan to terminate, like the seven-year plan in the United States, in 1953. The plan will include, as at present outlined, the development of groups into assemblies in Brisbane, Melbourne, Hobart, Perth and Port Adelaide. The local assembly of Adelaide has decided on twelve goal towns in South Australia. The Sydney and Hobart friends have also named goal towns. The NSA has appointed an “Employment for Settlers” committee to help would-be settlers find employment in goal towns. The national headquarters is in Sydney. The Annual report shows 181 voting members in Australia and New Zealand and tells of activity in the way of radio talks, public lectures, use of slides, press publicity, spreading literature in libraries, youth groups, fireside and study groups. The friends are planning a summer school for the first eleven days of January.

In his letter to the Australian and New Zealand NSA urging this plan the Guardian writes: “I fully realize how small are your numbers, how circumscribed are your means, how vast the distances that separate the centers already established. But I firmly believe that the initiation of a Plan to remedy the very deficiencies from which the infant Administrative Order is now suffering, and a firm resolve to carry out its provisions, as well as a sustained effort to make the necessary sacrifices for its consumption, will set in motion forces of such magnitude, and draw upon both communities blessings of such potency, as shall excite the wonder of the believers themselves, and cause their Faith to enter an era of unprecedented expansion and marvelous and fruitful development.”

Our prayers join those of our friends in these far-away countries for the glorious success of their Six-Year Plan.

PERSEA. The June issue of the Persian “Baha’i News and Reviews,” now published in English, tells of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Tihran Spiritual Assembly covering five days, May 1-5. We quote from the “News”:

“The community was divided into five groups and on each day one of the groups was invited to take part in the celebration. Sponsored by the Tihran Spiritual Assembly five glorious meetings were held during the evenings in the newly built auditorium at the National Bahá’í Headquarters. Apart from their historic aspect, the meetings were so glorious, so solemn, so spectacular in their simplicity that Tihran can hardly remember to have witnessed anything of its kind. The main floor of the auditorium was packed to capacity with many standing. A conservative estimate puts the average number present at each meeting at no less than 2000.” The program each evening consisted of addresses and music, both vocal and instrumental.

The paper contains an interesting account of Robert Gulick’s visit to Tihran and other Persian cities. (See our October issue for Mr. Gulick’s own account of this visit). He was received most enthusiastically at a meeting in the National Headquarters arranged in his honor and at which he spoke through an interpreter to an audience of over 2000. “Every single foot of sitting or standing space on the main floor of the auditorium and in the surrounding galleries was filled.” There was “a terrific burst of cheer and acclamation” when the western brother stepped upon the platform.

A fine report of the valuable work of their Relief Commission shows that from March 22 to May 22, $1000 was sent by the Persian NSA to the United States NSA for relief work in Germany, besides $5000 specially contributed by the Persian friends. Also 671 parcels of food and other necessities were sent directly to friends in 14 different European countries.

The following letter from an eleven year old boy in Germany to a Persian boy of the same age is typical of the gratitude expressed in the many letters received by the Persian donors: “My dear young brother of the East: You are so very kind and generous indeed. I must have been very lucky to receive your lovely gift of cloth which you had spared from yourself. It did not only serve my needs so well but proved a veritable bridge connecting East and West so strongly that no earthly power can ever undermine this union. I will be thinking of you each night when I go to bed praying that God may help me to follow in your steps. I shall tell other German children all about this so that . . . it may banish every trace of hatred from their hearts and give way to peace and love instead. . . . We are not disheartened on account of the present hardships and deprivations. These serve to bring us bright hopes for the future.”

The Shah of Iran, his majesty Pahalvi, is presenting a medal to the two graduates of the University of Tihran who have had the highest scholastic averages. Both are Baha’is. Miss Soraj Shadai majored in foreign languages, and Mr. Kiamar Eshadi received his degree in Architectural Engineering.

Annual Reports

In view of the great expense involved in printing the 1946-1947 Annual Reports for free distribution to individual believers, the National Assembly has adopted the following plan:—To send complimentary copies to the Guardian, the various NSA’s, National and Regional Committees of North America, local Assemblies and groups. Those desiring an individual copy may order it from the National Office at 25c each, post-paid.

Baha’i Talking Book

We are happy to share with the friends the good news of the successful distribution of the Baha’i Talking Book, WORLD ORDER THROUGH WORLD FAITH.

Through the co-operation of the American Foundation for the Blind, the September issue of “Talking Book Topics” gave to the blind, who have a talking book machine, full details regarding release and forthcoming distribution. In many instances, inquiries were received before distribution could take place.

This Talking Book, mentioned in Baha’i News of August 1947, is now available to the blind in the United States and its Territories through the facilities of the Distributing Libraries for the blind listed by the Library of Congress, Canada, it may be obtained from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, in Toronto.
The Home Front

AUGUSTA, GA. A chaplain at Oliver General Hospital in this city regularly broadcasts—and identifies—Bahá'í prayers from the hospital radio station. The friends here have also placed literature in the bus and train stations. One of the friends is complying with the request of a breakfast club by sending postcards with cheery greetings to various hospitals and children's homes, using the Temple postcards. Attention is directed to the beauty of the Temple and the hope that they will see it some time is expressed.

The Regional Bulletin of Georgia carried a "Question Box" on the last page, where one question pertaining to the Faith is printed together with pertinent quotations from the Teachings. Perhaps a regional bulletin is a more appropriate place for such a feature than the BAHÁ'Í NEWS as has been suggested.

HOUSTON, TEXAS—A professor at the University of Houston assigned "The Bahá'í Faith" among others appearing in the book They Have Found a Faith by Marcus Bach, to one of his students for her term theme paper. The student looked up the secretary of the regional teaching committee and did the research work at her home. In a manner of reciprocity, this student appealed that the University of Houston stock Bahá'í reference books in its library, and a request for them was obtained for our National Library Committee, which will place the books promptly in this new, large and richly endowed southern university.

MAYWOOD, ILL. The Maywood Bahá'ís are 100 percent subscribed to World Order magazine, and have presented three gift subscriptions to their public library and two hospitals.

YONKERS, N.Y. A Fellowship meeting at the Yonkers Y.W.C.A. held recently was attended by about 40 people. As non-Bahá'í guest speaker, Colonel Douglas R. Crier, President of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People attracted many negro listeners. Miss Dorothy Champ, a Bahá'í from New York City, spoke, and the meeting resulted in the making of several excellent contacts.

DAYTON, OHIO. The Dayton Community, like so many others, found summer "Sunshine Teaching" a grand way to reach seekers. On Labor Day, a picnic was held at the home of the McCoys in Waynesville, Ohio. The McCoys left the Dayton community several years ago . . . bought a farm, and have since been actively engaged in spreading the Teachings in this small farming community. Years of patient labor with apparent indifference by the people there are now slowly beginning to bear fruit. With this picnic and sunshine teaching medium, 39 people were gathered, 11 of whom were not Bahá'ís—as many seekers as a whole year of public meetings had attracted . . . A second informal gathering was held on October 26th with 5 inquirers present, all showing considerable interest. The McCoys are now planning, with the nucleus of these seekers to hold a study and discussion class every other Sunday evening . . . The Dayton assembly will assist, as the Wayne Township Group hopes to become an Assembly by next April.

SIOUX FALLS, S.DAK. An extremely successful Children's Class is flowering here. There are nine children attending, ranging in age from 5½ to 9 years. They are divided into two groups for comfort in teaching and enjoyment. . . Classes meet every Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and music is stressed throughout the class. Both groups gather together in the beginning, for memorized prayers. This is followed by singing and sometimes selection of appropriate and simple symphony music on records. The children are taught to appreciate lovely music as part of their regular work in the class.

At present the study outline "To Live the Life" is being used; some of the children have colored notebooks with pictures of flowers pasted on the outside cover. A Bahá'í Child's ABC is used, and at present the children are preparing a program which will be given for their parents and friends.

Five of these children have Moslem parents, and three are Christians, the ninth being the child of Bahá'ís.

The report received states "the children are all so enthusiastic, and love it." And this report closes with the words:"... no special talents, but all are working hard and it is surprising what comes forth."

FAIR EXHIBITS. We find it impossible to include all the reports from everywhere about the splendid exhibits which have been held at County and State Fairs this year. Neither can we estimate hundreds of thousands of people who have thus first seen the word "Bahá'í" and received some knowledge, at least of its meaning. Many reports were accompanied by lovely pictures which limitations of space prohibited using. Regretfully, we must be content with mentioning just a few of the places from which we received thrilling reports of these exhibits: Kitsap County Fair, Bremerton, Washington; Mineral County Fair, Long Island, N.Y.; Snohomish County Fair, Monroe, Washington; County of Maui, Territory of Hawaii; and many others. And we all realize and appreciate the long hours of faithful service rendered by the countless friends who served at these booths answering questions and giving out literature.

Criterion for Achievement

"The first condition is firmness in the Covenant of God . . .

The second condition: Fellowship and love amongst the believers . . .

The third condition: Teachers must continually travel to all parts of the continent, nay, rather, to all parts of the world, but they must travel like 'Abdu'l-Bahá, who journeyed throughout the cities of America. He was sanctified and free from every attachment and in the utmost severance . . .

The aim is this: The intention of the teacher must be pure, his heart independent, his spirit attracted, his thought at peace, his resolution firm, his magnanimity exalted and in the love of God a shining torch.

Should he become as such, his sanctified breath will even effect the rock; otherwise there will be no result whatsoever . . ."

'Abdu'l-Bahá
CHARLESTON, W. VA. Mrs. Ethel Stephens of Newport News spent a few days in Charleston in October. She addressed the student body at the West Virginia State College on the subject, "Education at the Adult Level for the New Age." Moving pictures, in color, of her biracial children's project in Newport News were shown at a fireside gathering and at the Bahá'í Center at a public meeting; and the newspaper writeups of these activities resulted in an invitation to speak and show the pictures at a meeting of the Charleston and Kanawha County Women's Federated Clubs (Negro). It offered a splendid introduction of the Faith to this organization.

Charleston has instituted a weekly "BAHÁ'I INFORMATION PLEASE" Hour in a sort of game form using "True" or "False" statements prepared from material in BAHÁ'U'LLAH AND THE NEW ERA: The questions, in card form, are given by Bahá'ís in succession and voted on as to their truth or falsity by the guests, are interspersed with questions addressed to Bahá'ís by their guests as to what Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá said on various subjects: with the actual quotations, also taken from the book, to check the Bahá'ís' answers. The result is to concentrate thoughtful attention of non-Bahá'ís on each statement of the text. The method is proving so popular and successful as a means of teaching that the material is being offered to the National Study Aids Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. An interesting story comes from the friends in Indianapolis: "... We had a civil engineer from northern India who attended our public meeting in the afternoon and spent a pleasant evening" with several Bahá'ís in a friend's home. He had been forced to stop off in this city because of illness, while touring in the United States with the Indian Embassy in the interest of Public Works. Two of the Bahá'ís heard of him and visited him in the hospital. They recited healing prayers for him and invited him to visit after he was better. While in the Bahá'í home he glanced through a volume of THE BAHÁ'Í WORLD and noted that of the twelve cities in his district, ten had Bahá'í communities. Before leaving, he remarked significantly that he had been brought up in a religious environment, having been a Moslem, but "While in college, got away from it..." "How strange and remarkable that I should take sick in this city and learn about religion in a new light through the Bahá'ís."

FALLSINGTON, PENNA. "More Guests Than Teacups" titled an amusing story sent in. A Regional Committee meeting was taking place recently, and the members were attending in the giving of a tea to attract new people. Before the tea, the deliberations of the Regional Committee were very discouraging because efforts for teaching had apparently been thwarted at every turn. A prayer for guidance and success for the planned tea was made at the close of the meeting and the members enjoyed a brief recess. Soon after the time set for the tea, guests began to come and now the hostess began to wonder how she was going to meet the tea cup shortage. Soon they began to come and now the committee members enjoyed a brief recess. Soon after the time set for the tea, guests began to come and now the hostess began to wonder how she was going to meet the tea cup shortage. There were 8 committee members there. Twenty-two guests in all and only 15 teacups! The problem was solved by confiscating the cups of the committee guests and not asking them if they would like a second cup! The wonderful spirit of cordiality and interest in the presentation of the Cause was beyond the fondest hopes of the Bahá'ís... The wonder of the success of this tea in such a small town (only 200 population) and the wording of the telephone invitations given by the hostess might be tried elsewhere. She said, in effect, that she was having a Committee Meeting, and was giving a tea in the afternoon so that these friends might have the opportunity "to meet some of the worthwhile people of Fallsington. We do hope you can come..." Who could resist such an invitation?

Baha'i News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada as the official letter of the Bahá'í Community. The first issue appeared in December, 1954. Baha'i News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá'í News Editorial Committee: Mrs. Roberta Christian, chairman, Mrs. Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick, Mr. Gordon A. Fraser, Editorial editors; Mrs. Roberta Christian, 1901 West Genessee St., Lansing, Mich. Please report changes of address to which Bahá'í News is to be sent and other matters pertaining to its distribution to the Bahá'í National Office, 538 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

Goal Cities

All our teaching efforts should be concentrated on confirming new believers and establishing new assemblies to reach our goal of 175 assemblies by next April.

Dear friends:

Because our national and international Bahá'í activities have become so pressing, and the time factor has paramount importance, the N.S.A. has decided to present to the community a summary of the actions taken during the first half of the current year. The following record is based on the Minutes and does not include Committee reports which have been made available in bulletins or through Bahá'í News.

This is the second year of the second Seven Year Plan, the four objectives of which were defined at the 1948 Convention and general plans for their attainment adopted last year. The situation now is no longer discussion of aims but more and more intense effort to speed the work already outlined.

1. The members elected to the National Spiritual Assembly at the 1947 Convention were the same persons who served last year, and they organized with a continuance of the same officers. The schedule of meetings adopted called for sixteen meetings, with a total of forty-one days in session. For handling the presentation of correspondence and reports at the successive meetings the items are classified and various classifications assigned to different members. Each attends the meeting prepared with a digest of the matters requiring consultation, action or information.

2. In appointing Committees and defining their functions, effort was made to distribute the memberships more widely and to effect greater concentration upon the task of forming new Assemblies.

3. A budget of $300,000 was adopted in order to sustain and further develop the work of Temple construction, European teaching, Latin American teaching, Assembly development in North America and general advertising and publicity. (Bahá'í News, June, page 13).

4. The publication of messages from the Guardian — cables, postscripts and longer communications — has been effected with all possible speed. Shoghi Effendi's complete analysis of the activities and methods to pursue in presenting the new Seven Year Plan came in the letter published under title of "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour", and a copy mailed to every individual believer.

Here is the list of the successive messages we have received from Haifa so far this year: Convention Message, Bahá'í News, May, page 6. Three cables as published, June, page 1; excerpts from letter expelling a Persian believer resident in New York, July, page 5; excerpts from letters written through his secretary, July, pages 6 and 7; cable, and excerpts from letters, August, page 3; text of letter written to UN Special Committee on Palestine, September, page 3; cablegram dated September 10, October, page 4.

5. The Guardian's statement on the Faith, prepared for the UN Committee, appeared in October issue of World Order, and the N.S.A. authorized a pamphlet edition through the Publishing Committee. The volume reprinting letters and cables received from 1932 to 1946, prepared last year was not received from the press until recently. A revised and simplified work on procedure, also compiled before the Convention, has now appeared under title "The Bahá'í Community", consisting for the most part of passages from the Guardian's writings. Another pamphlet authorized was the concluding passages of "Challenging Requirements" pertaining to American destiny.

ATTENTION

Urgent message from the Guardian to all believers. Special insert this issue.

"In Recognition of Preeminent Services"

A Message from the Guardian

Highly gratified at unceasing, compelling evidences of exalted spirit of Bahá'í stewardship animating American Bahá'í Community, as attested by the alacrity of its national representatives in executing the first Temple contract, their promptitude in extending effective assistance to their Persian brethren, their vigilance in safeguarding integrity of the Faith in the City of the Covenant, and their vigor in prosecuting the national campaign of publicity. In recognition of preeminent services continually enriching the record of achievements associated with preeminent community of the Bahá'í world, I am arranging transfer of extensive, valuable property acquired in precincts of Shrines on Mount Carmel to name of Palestine Branch of American Assembly. Happy announce completion of plans and specifications for erection of arcade surrounding the Báb's Sepulchre, constituting first step in process destined to culminate in construction of the Dome anticipated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá and marking consummation of enterprise initiated by Him fifty years ago according to instructions given Him by Bahá'u'lláh.

Shoghi
and outline the major plans for this year. On June 27 the "Challenging Requirements" was mailed with a covering letter in which the N.S.A. appealed to each believer to try and confirm one new soul this year. On June 30 a letter went to the Assemblies in smaller communities appealing for concentration of their full force on teaching work. A letter was sent to Assemblies in larger communities on the same day asking them to accept the challenge of bringing one group to Assembly status by April 21st. A letter also went to groups on June 30 pointing out their vital importance in the campaign. On August 28 the N.S.A. addressed all Assemblies urging prayerful consideration of the condition of the National Fund. On September 16 a bulletin on "The National Teaching Campaign" was mailed pointing in the hope of the united effort for the year, four subjects for meetings, and references to the teachings on these topics. On the same day another bulletin went to the larger communities reporting that thirty-three Assemblies had agreed to work with a group, and explaining the general method to use in this extension teaching work.

7. Turning to the successive letters prepared by the N.S.A. for publication in Bahá'í News we find exposition of these subjects: May - the great task of attaining 175 local Assemblies by April 21, 1948; June—eight principal points to note in national policy this year; July—a summary of the five aspects of teaching effort; August—references to a number of passing in the Guardian's message dated June 5; September—The "National Bahá'í Program", the term designating the coordinated teaching campaign aimed at developing new Assemblies; October—"the blessed spiritual freedom possessed by believers to serve the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

8. The Temple construction plans have been reported in detail from month to month in Bahá'í News. The chief points are—selection of architect, steps in preparation of working drawings, and placing of first contract for work.

9. Great progress has been made in the Latin-American and European teaching fields, as reported by the Committees directing these important projects of the Seven Year Plan. In Latin America the work is being done in an increasing extent by the Assemblies now existing in all countries, and by Regional and National Teaching Committees supervised by the Inter-America Committee. In Europe the branch office of the European Teaching Committee has been well organized, Miss True, Chairman of the Committee, has made a visit to the various centers, and enrollment of new believers is proceeding very rapidly.

10. Authorization has been given the Public Relations Committee to maintain its advertising campaign in several magazines and in trade papers, and to develop its publicity and its mailings of the public teaching bulletin, as well as conduct a special campaign on the Temple interior plans. These activities have been reported from time to time.

11. The National Teaching Committee by October 30 had conducted the plans and methods for groups in the Southern California and Illinois-Wisconsin areas. This campaign represents the most determined effort yet made to organize the teaching methods needed for producing study and fireside meetings in towns having groups of five to seven or eight believers. The results have been very encouraging.

12. More frequent conferences with responsible Committees have been held, including conferences held during the interval between N.S.A. meetings. These latter conferences were for clarification of points requiring decision and for coordinating the plans and methods of the Committees participating in the National Bahá'í Program.

13. Intensive study has been made of the needs of certain national Committees for office space and working facilities in the Temple area. The caretaker's cottage at 112 Linden Avenue is to be made available for Committee officers and meetings as soon as Mr. Stewart can move his family into new quarters being provided across Linden Avenue. By Convention time, 1948, more or less permanent facilities will have been arranged for the European Teaching, Inter-America Teaching, National Teaching and Public Relations Committees and the various offices of the N.S.A. This step reflects the great increase in the work during recent years.

14. The N.S.A. has set up a number of temporary special Committees of its own body to make study and recommendations on various matters, and this system has greatly increased the Assembly's power to consult effectively and to act promptly, as preliminary work is done in between meetings.

15. The decision to the Davison School property, except for their family residence, have been transferred to Bahá'í Trustees Mr. and Mrs. Eggleston, a truly munificent endowment both of property and facilities for the conduct of one of the leading Bahá'í Schools. This transfer created a new legal body, "Eggleston Trustees for the Benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly of the U.S. and Canada" operating under the trust deed these devoted believers executed, and similar in function to the trusteeships already established for the Temple, Green Acre, and others property at Englewood, Geyer ville School, the Wilson house at Malvern, Mass., and the International School in Colorado. Preliminary steps have been taken to purchase the Eggleston residence, so that the school property and facilities may be operated as an organic unit. The believers can be exceedingly grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Eggleston for their donation.

16. In the Bahá'í Directory inserted in Bahá'í News for July, the friends noted some changes in national Committee functions, all aimed at a better coordination of activity and more concentration of resources.

17. At the Guardian's request, the following information was carried in May 22: There are 136 Assemblies, 212 groups and 906 isolated believers in Canada. Later he was informed, that there were 45 incorporated Assemblies in the United States.

18. Under date of June 4 a bulletin was issued for the permanent records of the local Assemblies on the subject of the "Reception and enrollment of Orientals."

19. Bahá'í greeting was sent to the International Esperanto Congress at Berne, Switzerland, and to the National Congress of the Esperanto Association of North America.

20. The steps to be taken for the formation of a National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Canada have been studied and outlined, and preliminary actions taken. The Province elections to be held February 1, 1948 will choose nineteen delegates to represent the believers of Canada at the First Annual Convention.

21. A statement on the Bahá'í teachings concerning the status of women. was submitted to United Nations Commission on the Status of Women in August. The text of this statement was published in World Order Magazine for October.

22. Through the kindness of Mrs. J. C. Davenport the Assembly has received a framed picture of the Parliament of Religion held at Chicago in 1893, and a copy of the two-volume record of the proceedings of the Parliament at which the Bahá’í Faith was mentioned publicly for the first time in America. The picture has been photographed and prints sent to the Guardian.

23. On receipt of two renderings of details of the modified Temple interior design which had been prepared under Mr. Allen B. McDaniel’s supervision for publicity purposes, action was taken to have reproductions made and inserted in Bahá’í News for every believer.

24. The Bahá’í Declaration of Human Obligations and Rights submitted to United Nations in February having been ratified and endorsed by all other existing National Spiritual Assemblies, a new edition has been prepared through the Public Relations Committees with a note of such ratification. As far as is known this makes the declaration the first public international Bahá’í document. The constitution and by-laws of the National Spiritual Assembly and the by-laws of a local Assembly were the first documents of an international character to be prepared and adopted by Bahá’ís.

From the records it would appear that the first international document to emanate from the members of the Bahá’í community was the constitution and by-laws of the National Spiritual Assembly, since adopted by the other NSA’s; and the by-laws of a local Assembly have also become a world document. The Bahá’í Declaration appears to be the first international document of the community directed to a public agency.

25. The Temple Program Committee has been authorized to conduct a weekly Children’s Hour on Sunday afternoon.

26. The resolutions and suggestions made at the 1947 Convention, and a record of the NSA actions taken after consulting on them, have been published in Bahá’í News.

27. An NSA representative called at the U. S. Office of Education in Washington and reported that from information received it appears that religious holidays are determined locally, though in some states there are set regulations applying to all public schools in the state.

28. The smaller Assemblies have been advised to request aid of the Regional Teaching Committees for the further development of their teaching work.

29. The Guardian has given his consent to the use of his letter to the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine for publicity purposes, and the text of his general statement on the Faith accompanying that letter has been published in World Order. Its publication in pamphlet form was ordered.

30. An experienced believer, Mrs. Cynthia Olson, was requested to prepare a questionnaire which could be sent to every American believer in order to provide the NSA with data about the kinds of training, experience and talents and capacities available in the community.

31. The Radio Committee has been authorized to prepare a brochure for the information of Assemblies, groups and isolated believers.

32. At the urgent request of the NSA of Persia, representations have been made to the State Department and to the American Ambassador in Tihran, appealing for their assistance to protect the grave of Keith Ransom-Kehler in Isfahán, the Persian civil authorities having adopted plans for constructing a new bridge which if carried out would run a highroad directly through the site of the memorial.

33. A firm of certified accountants have examined the NSA financial records and assisted the treasurer’s office in setting up a new and better system of accounts.

34. A committee has been appointed to recommend a form of plaque to be placed in Temple Foundation commemorating the Master’s visit to the site on May 1, 1912.

35. The European Teaching Committee has taken new offices at 37 Qual Wilson, Geneva, in the Geneva International Center, considered to be an ideal location.

36. An NSA representative was appointed to supervise the enrollment of a group of American Indians who had been attracted and taught by Mrs. Stevison on their reservation near Omaha. These new friends not only signed the enrollment cards but sent a joint letter to the Guardian asserting their faith. The importance of this teaching work is made plain by the Master in the Tablets of the Divine Plan.

38. A number of statements of policy have been adopted for publication in Bahá’í News: that marriage services will not be conducted at the National Office; that in the consolidation of the Bahá’í community this year co-ordinated campaigns will be conducted, combining public meetings, circuits, fireside meetings, radio broadcasts and other teaching aids; on election of officers by local Assemblies; that a local Assembly should not incur an obligation of political activity or economic liability involved by joining community projects aiming at legislative enactments; on local Bahá’í endowments; that the NSA does not approve the holding of dinners or other entertainments for the purpose of raising funds from non-Bahá’ís; that a Bahá’í youth of less than twenty-one years of age is not qualified to serve as group correspondent (group secretary) as this is an administrative post.
Januarv, 1948

New European Believers

It is with heartfelt gratitude that the European Teaching Committee announces six more declared believers since the last issue of Baha’i News, making 33 now in all of the European goal countries. The new members of the world-wide Baha’i community are:

Copenhagen:
Miss May Marit Vestby, Mr. Palle Benemann Bischoff

Rome:
Signor and Signora Fernando Morosi, Signorina Elisabetta Cofman, Signora Marianna Del Buono-Ved- Gasterini.

Already the joy and bounty of being a part of an ever-widening Baha’i community has been experienced by one of the new Danish believers in his recent visit to Stockholm. The Correspondent of the Stockholm group reporting on their celebration of the Feast of Questions on December 12, writes: “Palle Bischoff, visitor from Copenhagen and a recent Baha’i, made the occasion a very happy one. Palle expressed his joy in becoming a Baha’i and to be able to visit Baha’is in other communities in his travels.”

This issue also announces the opening of the last of the E.T.C. goal countries. Valeria Nichols is already at this post and will be reinforced in January by Louise Baker.

The valiant pioneers are being greatly assisted by the invaluable services of Marion Little and Henry Jarvis who are serving, so effectively, as itinerant pioneers. Marion has been recently in Luxembourg, Amsterdam and Brussels while Henry has been devoting his efforts to the Scandinavian groups. However, he is, at present, visiting in Amsterdam.

The Committee is very grateful, indeed, to report the forthcoming visit to all of our pioneer posts of Dorothy Baker, who leaves by plane from New York on January 12. Public meetings, special Firesides and social occasions, as well as openings in Universities are being arranged for her by the pioneers and the Committee feels confident that the results from this strenuous undertaking by Mrs. Baker will be very rich, indeed.

Translations and publications in the nine different languages involved present one of the major tasks in the European teaching work but encouraging progress is being made in these undertakings. “Baha’u’llah and the New Era” already exists in all of the different tongues. Soon the “Will and Testament” “Dispensation,” the special introductory pamphlet and the new “Baha’i Community” will be completed in every language. In most of the Centers, selections of the Prayers and “Hidden Words” have been brought out in an attractive mimeographed form pending the printing of these in larger volumes.

Baha’i Public Relations

The Faith reaped good coverage last month on the pages of the national press. Biggest Baha’i news: To all newspapers using AP’s Wide World service went a four-picture spread on “The Temple of World Religion,” including both interior and exterior views. Already has appeared in such major papers as the Cleveland “Plain Dealer” (in Sunday rotogravure, 427,077 readers), the St. Louis “Globe-Democrat” (across top of page two, 344,914), and the Toledo “Blade” (featured in “Peach” section, popular news-photo supplement, 174,789). Other publicity developments: Release on Temple interior construction has now reached an audience across the country in more than 50 newspapers and magazines. Clippings from assembly-cities include: Chicago, Wilmette Evanston, New York City, Glendale, Calif.; Milwaukee, Wis., Alhambra and Los Angeles, Calif.; Racine, Wis.; West Chester, Pa.; Elmhurst, Ill.; Brattleboro, Vt.; Buffalo, N. Y. If your city is not listed, write PR for a discussion of your problem. Coming up: (1) A revised booklet on how to do Baha’i publicity is scheduled for a late January release. (2) New copy for national ad campaign will appear in February 17 “World Report.” Because of growing demand for local ad tie-in, mats and cards will again be made available this month at cost. Assemblies and groups will be notified. (3) Annual press book for the Guardian is now in preparation. (So that Shoghi Effendi and the NSA may have a complete story on the proclamation of the Faith, all Baha’is are requested to please send clippings and references about the Faith to PR as soon as possible after publication.) Notes of interest: From the “National Geographic” last month came an interesting reference to the Faith. Wrote Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of Cincinnati’s Hebrew Union college, “... exquisite Baha’i gardens in Haifa.” Also of note: “A World Religion?” by Dane Rudhyar in January’s “Horoscope” magazine.

At this time when the European teaching project is entering into reality a new phase, the Committee wishes to voice its very deep admiration and humble appreciation of the tireless, selfless and devoted efforts of its valiant and dedicated pioneers.

For Economy in Distribution of Bahá’i News

Each year the local Assemblies in reporting their annual election give the number of copies of Bahá’i News needed for the community. To make for due and justifiable economy, the Assemblies are requested to make a survey and advise the NSA of the number now needed, as in many cases where there are two or more believers in a family, one copy might suffice. If the present supply is the minimum which can serve, the Assembly need submit no report. The aim should be to give thoughtful consideration to whatever economies can be effected without decreasing the capacity of the community to serve.

Moreover, the Assembly is expected to make every possible effort to distribute Bahá’i News to the entire membership and not confine distribution to those who attend the next Nineteen Day Feast. Regard the News as a link which connects the believer with the Bahá’í activities of the world community; a link which becomes all the more important when illness or other condition produces infrequent local attendance. If necessary, mail the copies. A minimum of one per family is desired.

Representation at Public Conferences and Conventions

The National Assembly has come to realize that in certain cases it might be desirable to have Bahá'í representation at public conferences and conventions sponsored by a non-Bahá'í body which fosters principles conforming to Bahá'í teachings and has a non-political and non-radical character. Steps have therefore been taken to provide for action covering representation at such conferences in various parts of the country.

In future, when the National Assembly is informed that a non-Bahá'í conference is to be held, authority exists to request a local Assembly or some well qualified individual Bahá'í to represent the NSA by attendance and participation. This attendance and participation, however, is not to be considered as affiliation with the organization nor does it commit the Bahá'í community to any specific program or policy adopted at the conference.

The purpose of Bahá'í representation would be in part to provide an observer to report on the proceedings, to make contacts, to explain the Bahá'í teaching and attitude, to correct any erroneous and misleading references to the Faith, and to make recommendations to the NSA on future participation.

Opportunity for Education in Foreign Lands

The NSA has been informed that under the terms of the Fulbright Scholarship Act of Congress, certain funds are set aside for subsidizing American students for education in a number of countries including Italy, Netherlands, Belgium, and Denmark. Grants are made under specified conditions; for example, preference will be given to veterans of the armed forces. The first group of students may go abroad at the start of the 1948-1949 school year.

For definite information, apply to Department of State, Attention: Division of International Exchange of Persons, Washington 25, D.C. If there are American believers who can qualify, the Fulbright Scholarship Act will assist them to serve the Faith in another country under very favorable circumstances.

"Australia. Perth, July 1924

The ocean trip from Hongkong to Melbourne, twenty-three days, not very good, was ill and the weather was very stormy . . . All troubles were left on the ship and the most wonderful welcome awaited me in Australia—can never express it. Dozens of bouquets of beautiful flowers and fruits and gifts and the Melbourne Bahá'ís entertained me as if—well as if I were like the Dunns. New souls in Perth invited me west and sent the money for my carfare! I came from Melbourne to Perth, five day railway trip as soon as I had rested two days in Melbourne and met the friends. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn are in Perth . . . Such a welcome! It is heaven. My room filled with the most exquisite bouquets, fifteen friends brought them, a bottle of perfume, an exquisite rosary necklace . . . I have the parlor in a beautiful home. Reporters came, friends came. At night Clara Dunn massaged my back and they do everything for my health. Such wonderful souls in Australia. It seems like a miracle all Mr. and Mrs. Dunn have accomplished. No need to ask what kind of teachers they are . . . one only needs to look at their confirmed radiant Bahá'í children . . . The days are filled to the brim, speaking, writing, it is one big intensive campaign just as in America . . . Isn't it heaven to be able to serve the Cause of God!

On board ship to South Africa. Nov. 1924.

One has much time to think on board this ship . . . After a cracker would stay on my stomach I bolstered up my pillows and read four books on South Africa . . . I am loaning Bahá'í books around. The Bishop and the hypnotist are such strong reincarnationists . . . I have looked over their books and I have a splendid compilation on the Bahá'í viewpoint of reincarnation, we have spent hours discussing it, it has taught me a lot. I do not believe in arguing or criticising, but it is very important for every Bahá'í teacher to know his subject WELL . . .

Sometimes I am sad that I do not pray more and study more (I get so busy), and am ashamed of the mistakes I am always making, but today I feel wonderfully happy. It is so glorious that a Manifestation has come with the WORD that is going to bring the Most Great Peace and a new divine civilization . . . I couldn't imagine a happier life than being a disciple in this Day of God . . . the confirmations pour down, the doors open and the souls of the whole world are ready!

South Africa.

I arrived in Capetown on the eighth of December and remained there in the same house with Fanny Knoblock until the tenth of January . . . I gave over thirty lectures, four were broadcast . . . There is a wonderful spirit in Capetown.

Reached Johannesburg, in the Transvaal, on the twelfth of January. This is the center of South Africa. Every door opened . . . have spoken twice a day, sometimes three times . . . The newspapers always give good write ups. Four have been broadcast. A bare recital of lectures does not give you much idea of the beautiful souls touched, but Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdùl-Bahá did everything and it was a constant astonishment to see how wonderfully it all worked out—people seemed just waiting to hear! Each day letters come from the "listeners-In" after the lecture broadcasts. One has just come now thanking me in the name of the "Voortrekkers" (farmers) of South Africa . . . The altitude in Johannesburg was so high, it was so difficult to breathe that after a lecture I used to sit for two hours, too tired to move. I thought I was passing out one night and I prayed to live till I took the Bahá'í Message to every country.

Durban. Shall I tell you the bitter with the sweet? Some one wrote an awful article against the Bahá'í Cause, just as I arrived. It came out in the leading paper. It made me sick. But I decided to ignore it, not to mention it for maybe not everybody read it. You see it really did not make any difference, for all the press are my friends and Durban has opened every door! . . . Also a man wrote the American Consul and enclosed a letter urging me to speak in his home. I went the first evening. The man is insane. There were nine fine people in his house and the nine were much interested, so good came of it . . . I do not allow myself to be afraid of anyone.

I leave here on the sixth of February. The boat stops nineteen places. I shall reach Port Said, stop over one boat, and then go to Haifa.

Going up the Red Sea towards Port Said. March 1925

This wonderful and very hot voyage up the East Coast of Africa is drawing to a close. It has been possible to give the message in several cities where it has never been heard before. It has been such a great opportunity in every way. There are six hundred people on this ship now . . . Although I am in the third class, fifteen people in the first class (all important people including the wife of the chief justice of South Africa) have called on me and invited me to the first class—today five came over to hear about the Bahá’í Faith . . . It has been arranged that I am to speak tomorrow afternoon, on the deck to both the first and third class passengers — it took courage to ask the Captain to lecture to his first class people, but he was lovely and arranged it immediately . . . In Zanzibar I took the booklets to the Sultan of Zanzibar and also to Sir Aga Khan, a descendant of Mohammed . . . I have been very busy in the different ports and the days between were few. I have studied Esperanto and made considerable progress.

Ten years ago this month I moved heaven and earth and could not get from Port Said to Haifa. Now ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, my mother and father, have passed to the Kingdom of Light, and I, a pilgrim, feel I am going “home” in going there. It will be so sweet to see the Greatest Holy Leaf and the Holy Family and so glorious to confer with Shoghi Effendi. It will be joy and health and inspiration for the years still ahead.

England. London 1926.

It has rained every day since I came to London and always we carry the umbrella. I was amused when Claudia Coles assured me this is London’s dry season. I wonder what the other seasons can be, but I liked London immensely. When the English get these teachings they will take them to China and other lands with the same calibre, stick-to-it-iveness and efficiency with which they have taken Christianity.”

Correction — Paris

As many of the friends who have been Bahá’ís for some time will remember, the Paris community is believed to be the oldest Bahá’í group on the continent of Europe. It was established over fifty years ago and has functioned uninterruptedly ever since. Despite the fact that the group has lost several members through bombing, deportation, and privations the meetings were never interrupted even through the perilous days of the invasion. The Guardian has written to them praising their steadfastness.

Literature published in France on the Faith has been placed by the Paris friends in State and Municipal Libraries and in Universities. It has also been sent to hundreds of people who are considered leaders in thought and welfare.

With regard to the teaching plan which the Guardian gave them in a letter dated February 25th, the Paris friends have already succeeded in enrolling new believers in Lyons and they feel that it is probable that the Lyons assembly will be re-established there by the coming April.

In referring to the publication of French Bahá’í literature, I stated that they were beginning new publications of the Guardian’s letters. In stating this, it was not my intention to convey the idea that these were the first publications. Those of us who have seen previous publications of French Bahá’í literature have realized the efforts of the Paris friends in this regard. The pioneers who are in countries where French is spoken have been greatly indebted to the Paris friends for the tremendous strides that have been made in translation and publications of Bahá’í literature in that language.

In completing this brief survey of the work of the Paris Bahá’ís, I should like to say that many of the American Bahá’ís who have done outstanding work for the Faith in this country were confirmed in Paris.

Error in Bahá’í Pamphlet

The believers are requested to note that there is a typographical error in the recently issued pamphlet “The Bahá’í Community.” A line has been omitted on page 38. Under “Election of Convention Delegates,” after “wishes to stress the” the following words should be added: “importance of reminding the believers that they should make every”.

Have you decided to prepare yourself for more effective participation in the Seven Year Plan? Let the history and teachings of your own Faith be your first objective. Do you know them thoroughly? Are there blank spots in your knowledge?

Although the 10-lesson study course is only "An Introduction to the Bahá’í Teachings" (15c), the questions in this and other general courses will help you to diagnose your own knowledge, find its weak points, and to decide your first study project. Get out that old "Bahá’í Study Course" (50c) of 36 lessons and use its questions to test yourself on a more inclusive and detailed basis. Try the true-false tests and the multiple-choice tests following the "Study Outline on the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh." (15c). It’s fun and you needn’t divulge your "marks" to anyone. We almost invariably give "Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era," our textbook of the Faith, to any inquirer interested enough to read more than a pamphlet. But do you know all the information that is in it? Look through the "Course of Study Based on Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era" (25c) and find out. Perhaps you studied "Fundamentals of Bahá’í Membership" (20c) before coming a Bahá’í, but we do forget facts, though we may grow in understanding. This outline will test your knowledge of Bahá’í Administration as none of the above courses will.

These general outlines are designed for classes of inquirers or new believers and you may think it a waste of time to use them merely to measure your knowledge. We challenge you, however, to do as suggested without looking up many, many references to verify or add to your store of information. If you find yourself lazy about the various aspects of administration, "An Aid to the Study of the Administrative Order of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh" (15c) draws together many sources and shows the relationship of each detail to the whole.

If history is your weak spot, "God Passes By" with its study outline (10c) is the answer. It "combines and correlates exposition of the Teachings, summary of the historical events, presentation of the Persons of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh and 'Abdu’l-Bahá in their spiritual significance, and statements on their principle Tablets and Works."

"Essential Verities of the Bahá’í Faith" (35c) brings additional references to the Bahá’í Principles — still our most recent bridge to the public — and familiarizes us with 'Abdu’l-Bahá’s matchless technique in approaching the American public of 35 years ago.

Since world events demand increased understanding of the Guardian’s letters, "Study Outlines and Aids for World Order Letters of Shoghi Effendi" (50c) will be found especially helpful to Bahá’í students. They simplify and clarify the mass of timely information and interpretation contained in the letters as well as making suggestions for the most effective use of the outline. Another approach to the same source material is made in "The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh — A Study Outline" (10c) which follows six major themes through all of the Guardian’s letters published under this title.

The basic spiritual truths of our Faith can be mastered with the aid of study outlines for "The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh" (15c) and "The Kitáb-i-Iqán" (20c). The first emphasizes primarily the spiritual station of the Báb, of Bahá’u’lláh, and of 'Abdu’l-Bahá, and the authority and goal of the Bahá’í administrative order. The second reveals this preeminent book of Bahá’u’lláh as the key to progressive revelation and the study of comparative religion.

Although the general courses first referred to were intended for group study, most of the study aids can be adapted to individual, or group study, or used as classified references. They should be found in every Bahá’í library — community or personal.

Next month we will share with you some study suggestions that have been found helpful. In the meantime, let’s begin to study systematically and regularly. If you are not thoroughly acquainted with "The Advent of Divine Justice," read it over again ("Study Outline and Aids for the Advent of Divine Justice," 35c) that the vision of the world-embracing campaign in which you have enlisted may keep you steadfast in your purpose. Incidentally, it contains excellent teaching suggestions and methods.

—Study Aids Committee

Suggested Daily Readings

February

In connection with the readings outlined for February we suggest that each one read again the letter from the National Spiritual Assembly to the Bahá’í Community on page one of the November issue of Bahá’í News. The letter says in part: "The mystery which interpenetrates the institutions and organic gatherings of the Bahá’í Community is profound ... We may attain glimpses of this mystery by pondering those Tablets the Master revealed over a long period to the American Assemblies. ... Many of these Tablets were gathered together in chapter nine of Bahá’í World Faith." This is why the readings this month are taken from chapter nine of Bahá’í World Faith.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. On Sunday evening November 9th, 1947, Mr. Lawrence Hautz of the Milwaukee Bahá'í Assembly was a guest speaker at an organization of young people at Hennepin Avenue Methodist Church in our city. This organization "The University of Life" is the oldest Interdenominational Sunday Church program in the United States. Its registration to date has reached nearly 700 members.

Mr. Hautz spoke before the class of "Why Different Religions." This group consists of a membership of eighty students ranging from 18 to 35 years of age. Each Sunday they spend becoming better acquainted with other religions and denominations. Mr. Hautz' lecture before this group was very interesting and well received by the students, as was shown by the great interest in his lecture. The fact is that they kept him so late answering their questions that the group finally had to be asked to leave the church, and it was interesting to note that they kept answering their questions all the way up the stairs and out of the church.

We feel that this lecture by Mr. Hautz before this young student group is one of the outstanding Bahá'í events which has taken place in our city in a long period of time. The interest of this group is further indicated by the fact that they have made another request for a Bahá'í speaker for their February meeting.

BREWER, MAINE. Practically isolated from Bahá'í teachers or contacts, a believer here, herself a Bahá'í only a little more than a year, has taught a class from seven to ten people a year with the resulting enrollment of four.

FLINT, MICH. The International Institute of Flint was host to twenty Bahá'í youth and friends, Dec. 7th, for a discussion on "Public Speaking Techniques" led by Paul Pettit. Sample talks were given for critical analysis. Highlight was the talk given by a colored non-Bahá'í boy on racial oneness. Plans were crystallized for the next meeting Dec. 28th during winter session at Louhelen School.

The night before, 35 young people enjoyed a fellowship evening of games, music, and dancing in a Bahá'í home. By their own inquiry, a group formed upstairs around the fireplace to learn about the Bahá'í teaching on marriage and other specific subjects. Two out of town Bahá'í girls, overnight guests of a member of the community, attracted the hostess's disinterested son so much that he inquired about local youth meetings and Louhelen Winter Session to study. News items appeared in two local papers and the adult Bahá'ís cooperated splendidly with rooms and meals.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA. Needless to say, November was a very busy month for the Anchorage Bahá'ís. In addition to the regular radio broadcasts and newspaper publicity and public meetings, the Special Anniversaries were observed as follows:

Sun., Nov. 23rd—International Bahá'í Youth Day, in the Music Room of the Anchorage Hotel. Verne Stout showed the 35 mm. slides of the Temple and Capt. S. A. Pelle gave a short inspiring talk to the Youth.

Wed., Nov. 12th — Bahá'u'lláh's Birthday, in the Music Room of the Anchorage Hotel. Capt. S. A. Pelle talked on the Bahá'í Teachings, and Betty Becker on Bahá'u'lláh. There were 25 present and the guests included a Negro soldier and two Eskimo ladies.

Wed., Nov. 26th—Day of the Covenant, in the Music Room of the Anchorage Hotel. Evelyn Huffman was chairman for the evening, and Verne Stout spoke on the Bahá'í Faith, and Frances Wells on 'Abdu'l-Bahá's visit to the United States in 1912."

Fri., Nov. 29th—Ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá was observed at 1:00 a.m. by six of the believers at the home of Robbie and Helen Robinson. A recording of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's voice was heard.

As two of the above special meetings took place on the regular Wednesday evening public meeting night, they constituted the public meetings on those dates. The other two regularly scheduled meetings were as follows:

Wed., Nov. 5th—Capt. S. A. Pelle, "Education in the New Age."

Two new study classes continued in November: Tuesday afternoon and Friday evenings. The latter will be a public speaking class as well as a study class in the Bahá'í Teachings.

The Bahá'ís were also instrumental in two recent meetings of the Friendsships Unlimited Club at the USO. Capt. Pelle showed movies on Latin America, and Capt. Fowler (non-Bahá'í) at another meeting showed colored slides of India, China, the Near East, and the Alcan Highway to Alaska.

Bahá'í News

Bahá'í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-let-ter of the Bahá'í Community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924. Bahá'í News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá'í News Editorial Committee: Mrs. Roberta Christian, chairman, Mrs. Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick, Mr. Gordon A. Fraser, Editorial office: Mrs. Roberta Christian, 1001 West Genesee st., Lansing, Mich.

Please report changes of address to which Bahá'í News is to be sent and other matters pertaining to its distribution to the Bahá'í National Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

Latin America

This month of January is of great importance to Bahá'ís of Latin America, and therefore to all of us. Two congresses followed by two international school sessions are being held, the one in Mexico City for the Caribbean area; the other in Santiago, Chile, for South American believers. Among the teachers and lecturers at Mexico City are Marzieh Gall, Marcia Steward, Sra. Natalia de Chávez, Sr. Illescas and Sr. Castro. The congresses, like our convention, furnish opportunity for discussion, suggested plans, getting acquainted and uniting the hearts. Each one closes with a public meeting.

The schools give time for intensive study and deepening in the teachings. Courses include such subjects as: Bahá'í Bridges to Catholicism, Rosacruceanism, Masonry, etc.; laboratory practice in phases of Bahá'í Administration: Prayer as a motive power. The range of subjects and careful plans for these congresses and schools as well as actual achievements makes us ask—are our Latin American friends outstripping us in North America? Wonderful news has come from Venezuela. Two goal cities seem to have their assemblies assured for this year, one in Barquisimeto and one in Maracaibo. There are also two newly organized study groups in Venezuela. Gayle Woolson writes that the receptivity of Venezuela is very great and that the intelligent people of almost any city are ready to organize study groups if they have help in doing so. The accounts of radio programs, newspaper articles with photographs, invitations to address clubs and lodges, and great confirmations of the hearts which have greeted Gayle on her two and a half months trip through Venezuela, read like a pioneer's dream of bliss, but all these are real, every one. Gayle reports that Miss Katherine Meyer of Washington, who joined her in Maracay, is "wonderful" and well adapted to carry on the work in Venezuela.

Another cause of rejoicing is the going forth on their first pioneer journey of Dr. Edris Rice-Wray of Glenview, Illinois, and Miss Margaret Swengel of Wilmette. They will sail January 9th from New York for Puerto Rico, where Edris will serve as director of the T.B. Hospital in Guayama, second largest city of the island, and Margaret hopes for an appointment at the University. Both will live for the time being in the lovely apartment of Sra. Maria Teresa Martin de Lopez, which serves as the Bahá'í center in San Juan and is within driving distance of the centers that Edris will serve.

Mrs. Amelia Pumpeley Bates reports that the Bahá'í community in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, has its own center and that an enthusiastic group is studying the Faith.

Sr. Oscar Castro of San José, Costa Rica, has joined the march of native teachers. He is helping at the Congress and School in Mexico City and will then begin a three months' project assisting in the development of the Cause in Nicaragua through direct teaching and correspondence teaching.

helping the Community of Guatemala City to grow and reorganize and to incorporate the Faith in that country. She has also established a group in the goal city in that country. In El Salvador she has helped continue the work started by Louise Caswell.

Artemus Lamb reports his first contact with the Masons. He was invited by the Masons of Osorno, Chile, to speak at their lodge dinner on the Baha’i Faith. He writes: "It was a most tremendous event, with such interest as I have never witnessed. In the concluding talk of the chairman he was so moved his hands were shaking." The Rotary Club helped in forming a group in Osorno and in Valdivia. The correspondence teaching plan is being used successfully in Chile.

In Peru, too, people are learning of the teachings through correspondence. A high school teacher has interested a group in Oxapampa, while another high school teacher writes that he is "avidly reading" all he receives about the Faith and sharing with his friends. Others in Colombia and Ecuador express eagerness to know more through correspondence and literature.

The National Teaching Committee of South America has begun its publishing functions with the printing of three pamphlets at Santiago: "The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour," the revised edition of "Will and Testament" and the guide to administration which will be published shortly. A little later "God Passes By" will be published.

Bolivia has the honor of being the third country in South America to attain incorporation of the Faith and Venezuela is the fourth. Applications are pending in Chile and Peru. Panama has the honor of being the second to attain incorporation in Central America and Guatemala the third.

New Display Kits Ready

The first Kits of display aids we have prepared for help in setting up community displays, have been sent to the Baha’i Sales Committee, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, 40, Illinois, through whom they will be sold and distributed.

These first units are packaged separately, for convenience and economy of handling, but we hope you will use both of them. They are listed as Community Kit No. 1, and Map Kit No. 1.

Community Kit No. 1 contains the following items:
- 1 folding tripod lucite easel 12½ inches high
- 1 folding tripod lucite easel 8 inches high
- 3 lucite card holders
- 3 printed cards, describing literature
- 1 small photo of sample display

Map Kit No. 1 has the following contents:
- 1 Global Map, in color, 24 inches square
- 1 Instruction sheet for mounting Map
- 1 Printed banner to use across the Map—Baha’i WORLD FAITH
- The price of these two kits, combined, is $8.50, postpaid.

These Kits are intended to furnish basic display fixtures for arranging small window, counter and table displays. Additional "props," as you will see by the picture enclosed with the Kit, are books or pamphlets either available among the believers in a community or can be bought from the Baha’i Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois. The Braille literature may be purchased from Mrs. Amedee Gibson, Baha’i Service for the Blind, 616 North Oxford Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.

Although the picture necessarily includes the use of books relating to the types of Baha’i literature described on the printed cards, it is not suggested that all these items be used in one display.

A variety of attractive small displays may be set up using different arrangements of books, pamphlets, and literature texts, you may work out locally.

A series of small displays, appearing frequently, are successful promotional aids. They may be planned around one theme or topic, and tied in, by choice of literature and placards, to whatever local press publicity is also being carried out.

We shall welcome your suggestions regarding additional items for later Kits. Please send photographs of displays using these Kit materials, which may be shared with other communities, to the Visual Education Committee, Mrs. Marion Longyear, Sec., 456 Bedford Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

"Deeply Concerned at Critical Stage of Task"

The Guardian's Last Minute Appeal

I am deeply concerned at critical stage of task confronting North American Teaching Committee, constituting at this juncture the paramount objective of present Plan. Owing to urgent, overriding importance of Committee's responsibility and to swiftly approaching time limit fixed for attainment of the goal of one hundred seventy-five Assemblies, emergency measures carefully, promptly devised by national representatives of the community and wholeheartedly supported by entire mass of the believers of the North American continent, designed to safeguard the existing Assemblies and rapidly multiply their number, are imperative. The placing of further contract for Temple, the reinforcement of basis of forthcoming Canadian National Spiritual Assembly, the additional consolidation of the institutions of the Faith in Latin America, the wider proclamation of its message to the masses, even the multiplication of pioneers in the European field, should be unhesitatingly subordinated to demands of the one disconcerting aspect of an otherwise successfully conducted Plan. I address this last minute appeal to every single member of the community, the champion warriors in the army of Bahá'u'lláh, which since launching the Plan formulated by the Center of His Covenant never succumbed to defeat nor was thwarted in its purpose, to arise resolutely, volunteer instantly to fill the gap in the main defenses of the home front and register total victory ere the termination of the second year of the Second Seven Year Plan. Fervently praying instantaneous, decisive response.

Cablegram received January 10, 1948.

(signed) SHOGHI

The Gap in the Main Defenses

Beloved friends:

The Guardian's unprecedented appeal is in your hands. Let it enter your mind and heart, for issues greater than we can comprehend have impelled the Guardian to direct it to us. How are we as individual Bahá'ís to "arise resolutely" and "volunteer instantly to fill the gap in the main defenses"?

Here are the definite ways in which we can respond, and it is a matter of individual conscience and individual devotion which way is chosen.

1. Increase our personal contribution to the National Fund in January, February, March and April.

2. Volunteer for full time or part time teaching work under the direction of the National Teaching Committee. There is urgent need of more teachers who can go to a selected city and work there during a campaign period, or go there on briefer projects, or make regular weekly or monthly weekend visits. If this is your way to respond—report immediately to Mrs. Margery McCormick, Secretary of NTC, 924 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill.; or to Mrs. Laura Davis, Secretary of Canadian NTC, 44 Chestnut Park Road, Toronto, Ont. (See list of cities on other side). In reporting, explain exactly what you are in a position to do both as regards time, distance you can go, what part of the expense you can meet, and your experience in fireside teaching and public talks.

3. Volunteer to go to some goal city and settle there long enough to assure retention of Assembly status. The formation of a new Assembly on April 21 is not actually consummated unless the community has nine or more members assured thereafter. The same applies in reinforcing a small community whose numbers have become depleted through moving away, death, etc. Here too it is essential for the Teaching Committees to know whether you can be self-sustaining or can settle if temporary financial help is given. Report at once to the U.S. or Canadian Teaching Committee, at address given above. (See list of cities on other side).

4. There are weighty responsibilities also in relation to the groups and small communities needing emergency help. Every type of teaching campaign, large or small, must rest upon the firm basis of unity and cooperation among the friends. New friends are attracted and held only as they encounter evidences of the Spirit. Consultation, not personality, is to adopt teaching plans and select the local teacher best fitted for the work. Wholehearted cooperation can alone assure success for the work, whether the teacher is local or one sent by the NTC.
5. There should be a weekly study class in every community and group, large or small. Continuous discussion of the teachings can make every believer an effective teacher for one kind of work or another. We have a twofold obligation to study: to become a better Bahá’í; to become an instrument for the spread of the Faith of Bahá’u'lláh.

6. All Assemblies and more than fifty groups in the U. S. and Canada have already received the Guardian’s cable and this NSA message in mimeographed form. Emergency conferences, immediate and frequent, should gather the friends together for facing the challenge and finding the way to meet it.

List of Cities

Here are the depleted Assemblies needing help to maintain their status beyond April 21, and the groups where Assemblies are to be formed. The number after each Assembly shows how many new believers must be enrolled or settlers transferred; after each group the number shows how many are there now.

National Spiritual Assembly
Cablegram from Guardian
Received Feb. 1, 1948

The gravity of the emergency facing the North American believers is unprecedented since the initiation of the Divine Plan and unparalleled in the history of the American Bahá'í community since 'Abdu'l-Bahá's passing. No obstacle is insuperable, no sacrifice too great for attainment of supremely important objective. The eyes of her sister communities in every continent of the globe and of her daughter communities of Latin America, handicapped by a variety of adverse circumstances, are fixed upon the community of followers of Bahá'u'lláh in North American continent who are enjoying the blessings of internal peace, adequate resources, administrative experience and organizing ability for their Divinely-appointed mission, expecting them to arise and avert the reverse which would mar the splendor of their record of unexampled stewardship. I am moved to plead, at this eleventh hour, that the rank and file of the community, particularly the members resident in long-established leading strongholds of the Faith—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington—issue forth unhesitatingly, determinedly, sacrifice every interest, assume positions in the forefront of the struggle and emulate in the course of the first decade of second Bahá'í Century, opening years of the second epoch of Formative Age of the Faith, exploits of their spiritual progenitors the dawn-breakers of the Heroic Age which immortalized the dawn of the first Bahá'í Century. The immediate fortunes of the Plan are precariously hanging in the balance. The three month's interval is swiftly running out. My heart aches at contemplation of the possibility of failure of the stalwart community to rise to the heights of the occasion. I refuse to believe that its members, invested with unique Apostolic Mission of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, will shrink from meeting the most challenging requirement of the present hour.

Shoghi
Arise Resolutely, Volunteer Instantly

Beloved friends:

Through many channels the Guardian’s cablegram of January 10 has been conveyed to your mind and heart—by the letter sent to Assemblies and Regional Committees January 12, by the insert added to the January Bahá’í News, by the consultation conducted at the State and Provincial Conventions on February 1, and perhaps also by special meetings of your local community or group.

The message has been delivered to the front door of your conscious spirit. Now it remains for you to determine whether the door has been opened from within and the message received and accepted as an ambas­sador sent you from the Head of the Bahá’í World Faith.

What does the Guardian’s ambassador say? That there is a critical stage in our teaching task; that emergency measures must be promptly and vigorously undertaken; that these must be supported by the entire mass of the believers, to safeguard the existing Assemblies and rapidly multiply their number; that further extension of other tasks must be subordinated; that Shoghi Effendi addresses you a last-minute appeal to arise resolutely and volunteer instantly to fill the gap.

If we make no response it means that we have barred the door and denied entrance to this messenger from the Holy Land. For if the messenger is admitted into the home we find that he brings in one hand a tremendous obligation but in the other hand a supreme blessing. This is a mystery of the spiritual life, but it must be experienced each for himself; that the thing to do and the power to do it are the two aspects of divine command. Crisis does not mean defeat but new growth. We are challenged to seize this precious opportunity to live more deeply in the realm of victory.

Can we realize the mandate given America to spread the Faith internationally and not see that the American community must be continually enlarged.

“So precious an opportunity, so rare a conjunction of favorable circumstances,” the Guardian cried out to us nearly ten years ago in The Advent of Divine Justice, “may never again recur. Now is the time, the appointed time, for the American believers, the vanguard of the hosts of the Most Great Name, to proclaim . . . their capacity and readiness to rescue a fallen and sorely tried generation . . .”

“Those who participate” he continued, “must know the history and teachings of the Faith, study its literature, assimilate its laws and principles, ponder its admonitions, tenets and purposes, commit to memory certain exhortations and prayers, know the essentials of administration, and keep up with its current affairs and developments.

In order to serve now on the deeper levels, each believer is asked to regard the period of the Fast, March 2 to March 20, as a blessed privilege for study as well as prayer. Set aside some one book for daily reading and meditation, whether the Gleanings, Divine Art of Living, Foundations of World Unity, or Dispensation. Devote a certain time day after day until the coals are fanned into intense flame.

In the realm of immediate action, the teaching needs are summarized as follows:

1. The goal to attain by April 21, 1948 is 175 local Assemblies in the United States and Canada.
2. That means 32 more Assemblies than were elected last year.
3. But of the 143 Assemblies elected last year at least 16 need settlers or new believers before April 21 or they will revert to group status.
4. There are thus 48 different cities calling for settlers and intensive teaching work. About 150 settlers, less the number of new believers enrolled before April 21, must be placed.
5. If you can move and settle in one of the 48 cities, notify the National Teaching Committee, or notify the Committee of your readiness to go out as a teacher for weekends, for circuits, or for periods up to two and three months.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Prayer for Building the Temple

“O Lord, make these holy souls who have arisen to build this Temple the dawning points of light and the manifestors of Thy signs. Make each a leading cornerstone in this great edifice, a pillar of its pillars, for Thou art the Helper, the Supporter, the Rewarder! These souls have arisen to serve Thee well, and have begun their servitude. Confirm, aid and encourage each by the promise of Thy divine favors and make them of the elect. Verily, Thou art the Mighty, the Powerful, the Able, the Giver, the Shining, the Hearer and the Seer!”

“O God! O God! I implore Thee with throbbing heart and streaming tears, to aid each one who endeavors for the erection of the House of the Lord, the building wherein Thy Name is mentioned every morn and eve. Send down Thy benediction on whomsoever endeavors for the up­rising of this Edifice among the sects and religions, and confirm him in every good deed of mankind; open the doors of riches and wealth unto him and make him an inheritor of the treasures of the kingdom which perisheth not; make him the sign of giving among the peoples and re­inforce him by the sea of Thy generosity and bounty, which is surging with the waves of grace and favor. Verily, Thou art the Generous, the Merciful and the Bountiful!”

Star of the West, Vol. V, p. 68.

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to publish this prayer revealed by the Master and commend its use by the friends. The Temple Prayer carries a two-fold blessing: first, in invoking divine assistance for the completion of the Sacred Edifice; and, second, in its assurance of blessings for those who assist in this work.

Extension Teaching Reports

Action has been taken by the NSA to feature the subject of extension teaching by local Assemblies in the Annual Report prepared by the NSA. Each Assembly carrying on teaching work to develop a group to Assembly status is urged to see that a comprehensive report covering this work is sent to the National Office by April 1, or that regular progress reports are submitted up to that date.

Identification of Bahá’í Group Photographs

The National Spiritual Assembly is informed that photographs of American Bahá’í communities, groups, School sessions, etc., as published in Bahá’í News from time to time, are not accepted as Bahá’í photographs by Oriental non-Bahá’ís to whom the pictures are shown if they have no evidence of Bahá’í identification.

Therefore the friends are requested to make clear the Bahá’í nature of group photographs by including a picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the Temple or a symbol of the Greatest Name.

Study With A Purpose

"You must come into the knowledge of the divine manifestations and their teachings through proofs and evidences. You must unfold the mysteries of the supreme kingdom and become capable of discovering the inner realities of things. Then shall you be the manifestations of the mercy of God, and true believers, firm and steadfast in the Cause of God."—Abdu'l-Bahá.

Every Bahá’í has a sincere desire to know and understand the literature of our Faith, but few of us make study of it a regular habit, either because we do not feel that we are of the student type or because we do not know where to begin in the wealth of material available to us.

The following are a few suggestions that will be helpful in acquiring study habits.

1. Read and study with a purpose. Every Bahá’í devotes some time each day to the reading of the Holy Utterances. But instead of desultory readings, or in addition to it, select some aspect of the Faith or some subject about which you would like to be well informed. Reference to the article of the Study Aids Committee in January Bahá’í News will help you to choose an outline that may suit your immediate purpose.

In your reading at other times on other subjects you will frequently come across references that can be incorporated in the outline. Make a note of them for use when you come to that topic in the outline you have chosen.

Another method is to select a subject of special interest—the immortality of the soul, evolution, prayer, education, universal peace, or any subject which you have always wanted to study thoroughly. Look up all the references you can find in the various study outlines, in Bahá’í World Faith and the other Writings, in Bahá’í World and Bahá’í World Order Magazine. List them for your future use and if possible prepare a compilation of the most significant passages.

2. Concentrate on your chosen subject. Do not be tempted to pursue another subject that may attract your attention while you are looking up references. There is nothing wrong about this, of course, but if you want to study effectively you must confine the selection of your material to that which is useful to the subject on which you are working at the moment. Notes can be made of these interesting references or ideas for use and study at some other time. They may even suggest your next subject for intensive study.

Do not worry if you have trouble in concentrating. Everyone has this problem. The human mind is seldom capable of focusing on a given idea for more than a few seconds at a time, and so it becomes necessary to bring it back repeatedly to the central idea or theme. The more interesting the subject chosen, the easier it will be to concentrate on it. Therefore, until good habits of study have been developed, it is well to avoid subjects that are involved or too abstruse and to work on a few that are well defined. Here again the study outlines will help.

3. Other minor factors conducive to concentration are: a regular study period, daily if at all possible, with a minimum of external distraction; a satisfactory degree of physical comfort; having at hand before you begin all the books and other materials you will need so that your study period will not be interrupted by looking for another book or a pencil. Apply the methods you have found most effective in concentrating on other types of work or study. Bend all your efforts on increasing your own knowledge and disregard the other things for the time being. The idea of teaching lest your mind become concerned about the teaching problems involved.

4. Persevere. Remember that learning progresses, not steadily, but by degrees. You will find that you will progress quite easily to a certain point and then you will meet with difficulty and your interest will wane. But if you will persevere your understanding will suddenly clear and you will enjoy a sense of exhilaration and achievement.

5. Do not worry about what you consider a poor memory. It is only the habit of "remembering" that has not become well-established. Instead, strive to become thoroughly steeped in the subject and you will soon find yourself remembering exact words, phrases and sentences from the Writings which you will use in your discussions with other people.

6. Make constant use of your notebook. Often when you are traveling on a bus or street car, when you are eating alone, or when you are at work, etc., you may come across interesting references or ideas. You should jot them down at once and incorporate them in your study.

7. Write yourself a letter. This is a good way to test your understanding of the subject you are studying. Pretend that a non-Bahá’í friend has asked you a question related to your subject. Write the answer as you would give it in a letter. Put it away and read it a few days later to see whether you have anything to add or whether there are some points that should be clarified. This and other types of writing help to make the knowledge your own.

Follow some such plan as this consistently for a month or two and you will find that you have acquired a "certainty of knowledge" that is stimulating and gratifying.

"Praise be to God. You have heard the call of the kingdom. Day and night you must strive that you may attain to the significances of the heavenly kingdom, perceive the signs of divinity, acquire certainty of knowledge and realize that this world has a creator, a vivifier, a provider, and architect..."—Abdu'l-Bahá.

STUDY AIDS COMMITTEE

Bahá’í Vocational Survey

In order to compile the many different types of talent, training and experience possessed by members of the American Bahá’í community, the NSA has mailed a special survey form or questionnaire to every individual believer.

The friends are requested to take immediate action in filling the form out as fully as the facts indicate in each case and return it to the National Office.

The larger local communities might have need for similar data, and the local Assembly can use this form if it wishes as a basis for producing a local survey.

The data received will be compiled and indexed for reference. The aim is to provide the NSA with knowledge of the different types of capacity needed for service on national committees.
Decisions Must Be Made

It was at Green Acre during a session of the National Spiritual Assembly and one of the believers had just come back from Europe. She told us of the friends in several of the goal countries, of their sacrifices, their frugal meals and of their stunting to make ends meet; of their victories already won and of the problems ahead in each country. Then she spoke of Germany and of Austria, of difficulties among the friends, of the loss of lives of the believers, particularly in Austria, and of the handful left.

Suddenly I was struck with the tremendous weight the Guardian must be carrying and I felt that I had never had a problem, no, not in relation to his, for his problem is the whole world.

As we travel forward under the impetus of his, our Guardian's encouragement, I wonder if we stop for a split second to ponder how much of the weight we lift from his shoulders each day.

We know almost his only happiness lies in our victories for the Faith. We also know how he follows us all along the path of achievement and how at every step he encourages us and makes the impossible seem within grasp.

There in Haifa he toils from seven in the morning until two hours after midnight; he, who in the sight of God is the most precious being on earth, he who is the center of His Cause today, the one toward whom the Master said we should all turn.

Have we individually and collectively, as believers in this great Faith, done our share? Have we shouldered our portion of the weight which must rest so heavily on his precious shoulders? Have we guarded and protected our Guardian, this precious trust given to us, that "no dust of despondency shall mar his radiant nature"?

We have as believers just one life to live. All that pertains to life, our success, our contacts, our trips, our travels, should be to one end—service to His Faith. For this is all that is real, all we leave behind.

We are at the crossroads today—decisions must be made and made promptly. Budgets will have to be supported and teaching plans carried forward or we shall be forced to retrench.

Your support is the answer to these decisions. Eight months of this Baha'i year (Dec. 31, 1947) has brought into the Fund $146,818.55; $53,181.45 short of our goal. Contributions from January 1 to 17 have been $7,247.34.

Faithfully,

Philip G. Sesma, Treasurer

"The Life-Blood of These Nascent Institutions"

As the activities of the American Baha'i community expand, and its worldwide prestige correspondingly increases, the institution of the National Fund, the bedrock on which all other institutions must necessarily rest and be established, acquires added importance, and should be increasingly supported by the entire body of the believers, both in their individual capacities, and through their collective efforts, whether organized as groups or as local Assemblies. The supply of funds, in support of the National Treasury, constitutes, at the present time, the life-blood of these nascent institutions you are laboring to erect. Its importance cannot, surely, be overestimated. Untold blessings shall no doubt crown every effort directed to that end.

Shoghi Effendi
"First declared believer Luxembourg. Letter following." (Signed) Luxembourg Group.

The above cable, received December 21, 1947, brought the heart-warming news of another historical "first," this time, in Luxembourg where the valiant pioneers have been working with unusual consecration, unity and harmony. Miss Suzette Hipp is the new member and the group Correspondent wrote of her: "She is strong in her faith, steadfast and selfless." On the day Suzette declared her Faith, another of those who have been attending the study classes remarked to her: "You don't look the same anymore." This is typical of the beautiful testimonies the European Teaching Committee are constantly receiving, of the immediate and inspiring effect which the Teachings are having upon those who accept the Bahá'í Faith. The foundation of Bahá'u'lláh's Cause is, indeed, being laid on "an unassailable basis."

World has just been received of the declaration of Inga Ester Margareta Hokinson in Stockholm. We particularly rejoice over this new Bahá'í as she is the wife of Sigvard Hokinson, the second Bahá'í to declare himself in the Stockholm group, who first heard of the Faith from Martha Root in 1934.

The Committee also rejoices to report the third declared Bahá'í in Copenhagen — Gerhard Harry Andersen, a young medical student of 23 who, at his own request, has been attending study classes at least three times a week for the past two months.

Louise Baker, the latest pioneer, sailed on the Holland-America Liner "Nieuw Amsterdam," Tuesday, January 13 and plans to be at her post with Valeria Nichols about January 22. The last itinerant teacher to leave is Dorothy Baker who embarked on her historic journey by plane from New York, Monday, January 12. Mrs Baker will visit all of the goal countries and the pioneers are busy making plans for Public Meetings, informal Teas and Firesides and for Radio and Press publicity. Marion Little arrived in Rome on December 31 and Henry Jarvis returned to Stockholm at the Committee's request. Once again John Carré is back in Amsterdam and will now divide his time between Belgium and Holland.

Madeline Humbert, who has just completed about a year's service in the European teaching field, sailed for home on December 21, 1947. The European Teaching Committee wishes to record its heartfelt gratitude and appreciation of Madeleine's historic services as the First pioneer to Belgium. The Committee also regrets to report the return of Eduardo Gonzales from the European Teaching field. Eduardo intends to continue his pioneer services in Venezuela.

International Relief

The National Spiritual Assembly has worked out a plan whereby the friends can fulfill their desire to help the Bahá'ís in the needy countries of Europe, including Great Britain, within the limits of the Guardian's instructions. The primary objective of all Bahá'ís is teaching, and one cannot do a great deal of active teaching work when physically exhausted through lack of food or lack of warm clothing and shoes. The objective of our International Relief, therefore, is to help Bahá'ís during the present post-war emergency, in order that they may pursue their active teaching of the Faith. This objective is accomplished through two channels: (1) The sending of packages of food and clothing by individual Bahá'ís, Assemblies or groups and (2) the sending of CARE packages. Except as individual orders may be placed with CARE, the ordering of these packages is done by the National Spiritual Assembly at the explicit direction of the Guardian, who notifies our NSA when to do so and to what extent funds are being transferred for this purpose from the International Fund.

The sending of packages by individual Bahá'ís, Assemblies or Bahá'í groups is our means of expressing loving encouragement directly to our fellow Bahá'ís who are present and living under difficult circumstances. In order that there may be fair distribution of these packages, the following plan has been approved by the National Spiritual Assembly. When any of the friends or an Assembly or Bahá'í group wishes to send clothing or food to Bahá'ís abroad, please follow these steps:

1. Write to the International Relief Representative (a postal 'card will do) and state: (a) number of packages you wish to send, (b) nature of contents, whether children's clothing (approximate age of child), man's or woman's clothing, shoes, food, or both food and clothing, and (c) the choice of country if you have a preference. The National Spiritual Assembly's International Relief Representative is Mrs. Beatrice Ashton, Box 302, Winnetka, Illinois.

2. Prepare your package and hold it until you receive promptly from the International Relief Representative a correct address (or addresses) for your package (or packages).
With this information will come to you a postal for reply.

3. Mail this reply postal for return to the International Relief Representative when you mail your package to the address sent you, writing on the postal (a) name of person to whom your package is addressed (or persons if more than one package), (b) name of sender (individual, Assembly or group) and (c) date of mailing package.

4. Mail a note to the person or persons to whom your package is addressed, stating that you have that day sent a Baha'i gift parcel.

Instructions and customs tags for mailing packages may be obtained at your local Post Office. All packages should be securely tied and clearly addressed, and marked “Unsolicited Gift Parcel.” Strong, corrugated cartons should be used and the contents (no breakables, no cigarettes) should be solidly packed. As soon as possible the National Spiritual Assembly will issue a Bulletin on International Relief, giving lists of Baha'i addresses and general packaging and mailing instructions.

The National Spiritual Assembly approves the appointment of relief committees by the Local Spiritual Assembly to collect food and clothing and prepare the packages properly for mailing. Only used clothing that is clean and wearable should be sent. Duty is charged the person receiving a package, on any new garments in the package, declared or undclared. The needy countries are particularly Germany, Austria, France and Great Britain.

The friends are reminded of the Guardian’s instructions (Bahá’í News, Dec. 1947, p. 2, col. 3) that we are not to send relief to contacts, “as this would seem in the nature of either a reward or an enticement for those attracted to the Faith,” but that relief may be sent to a pioneer who is in need, for personal use.

Our National Spiritual Assembly has shipped 25 sacks of flour (100 lbs. each) to the NSA of England and the NSA of Germany and Austria.

A list of Baha’i children in the needy countries of Europe is being prepared. Notice will appear in a future issue of Bahá’í News as soon as copies are available for distribution.
Latin American Congresses Meet

Two highpoints in the hemispheric news this month are the gathering of delegates to two Latin American Bahá'í Congresses. Delegates from the Caribbean countries met at Mexico City, and the South American Congress was held at Santiago, Chile. Mrs. Marzieh Gail and Mrs. Loulie Matthews were among those present from the United States to assist in the program. (Next month's NEWS will carry a fuller report of the Congresses.)

Mrs. Loulie Matthews, of Colorado Springs, founder of the International Bahá'í School and member of the Inter-America Committee, gave the official message on behalf of the Committee at the Mexico City Congress and stayed for the inauguration of the first International School of the Caribbean countries, the sessions of which followed immediately after the Congress. She was accompanied by two of the Colorado Springs friends and plans to do travel teaching en route home.

A whirlwind of problems and difficulties had to be met and solved in the two Congress cities by the National Teaching Committees of the two great areas, whose members were in charge of all arrangements. The problems were compensated for, however, by the enthusiasm and cooperation of all the friends. "A most heavenly spirit of unity and cooperation has arrived, praise be to God!" wrote Artemus Lamb from Santiago. He is secretary of the South American Teaching Committee and Marcia Steward is executive secretary of the Committee of the Caribbean countries. Other officials of the South American Committee include Sr. Esteban Canales, chairman; Sra. Betty Rowe, assistant secretary; and Sra. Rosi Vodanovic, treasurer. Additional officers of the Caribbean countries committee include Sr. José Antonio Benilla of Nicaragua, chairman; and Sra. Natalia Chávez of Honduras, treasurer and general secretary. All members of both committees with the exception of the two secretaries, are native believers.

One of the great accomplishments of this year is the gradual development of the two National Teaching Committees and their arms, the Regionals, in each country. At first each national committee was just an embryo of the future, a small inexperienced committee functioning in San José, Costa Rica, in the north, and Santiago, Chile, in the south. Gradually the influence of the Caribbean committee began to spread up through the Central Americas. The work was consolidated in the existing communities, the friends became trained and stabilized, meeting their problems fearlessly and justly, working to develop native teachers of capacity, to start nuclei in new goal cities, and to bring a spirit of unity and cooperation that would join all of the countries in harmonious effort for the growth of the beloved Faith. This influence has now spread to the six Central Americas and stepped across into the great republic of the north, Mexico. Through the Congress, the Committee hopes to reach out its arms to the islands of the West Indies and to help to stimulate and coordinate their activities in a harmonious, over-all plan, the objective of which is to fulfill the Guardian's seven year Plan in Latin America.

At the same time, the National Committee in Santiago began to reach out to the neighboring countries of Peru, Bolivia, Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay, and now to reach northward into the great country of Brazil and the ancient Bolivar countries of Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador. Through the Congress and school and teaching trips following these, it is the hope of the South American Committee to establish in that vast continent a harmonious, over-all plan of activity.

New native teachers who have been developed in South America include Sra. Leonor Porras and Sra. Inés Sarmineto of Bogotá, Colombia; Sr. Estéban Canales and Sr. Carlos Bulling of Valparaíso, Sra. Rosi Vodanovic of Santiago, and Sr. Toni Fillon of Lonconia, all of Chile, and Sr. Alberto Lovetón of Lima, Peru. New native teachers in the Caribbean countries include Sr. José Antonio Bonilla of Managua, Nicaragua; Sr. Oscar Castro of San José, Costa Rica; Sra. María Francisca Rivera and Sra. Natalia de Chávez of Tegucigalpa, Honduras; Sr. Carlos Vergara of Mexico City and Sra. Viva Lismore of Havana, Cuba.

Four months ago Gayle Woolson went to Venezuela for an intensive teaching trip. "I am simply thrilled and amazed at Venezuela," she wrote. "All the doors in all the cities seem open to the Message. The general spirit of the Venezuelans is broad and free of fanaticism, and they seem eager and waiting to hear of the Teachings. . . . Every city seems ready to form a study group."

During the trip, she visited nine cities, seven of them for the first time, and two that had been visited very briefly last January and where study groups had been formed at that time. These two cities, Maracay and Barquisimeto, became confirmed, one with nine registered members and the other with ten, besides classes of new students. In the other seven cities organized classes were formed of from 15 to 22 members, who promised to study hard to prepare themselves for assembly status later on. These nine cities are crying for further teachers to help them. The many other cities of this country are ready to arise and march in the spiritual vanguard of Bahá'u'lláh, if only they can be reached and taught.

Katharine Meyer, new pioneer to Venezuela, and the Regional Committee of that country will do all that is humanly possible for the new communities and groups.

Magnificent publicity was given Miss Woolson in each city as the "Ambassador of the Bahá'í Faith" and the "Bearer of the Bahá'í Message of Universal Peace and Brotherhood." Masonic Lodges, Lions and Rotary Clubs sponsored large public meetings. The Masonic Lodges publicly invited, through the newspapers and by word of mouth, leading people to hear the Message of Bahá'u'lláh. Governors of states, educators, writers, professional men, artists and business men were among the enthusiastic friends and voluntary students.

BAHA'I
A WORLD FAITH

The human heart has been ordained to live in a divinely-created world of love and truth. Entrance to that heavenly world is not by death of the body but by re-direction of the powers of the soul. Each man can attain peace and assurance as he turns to the revealed Word.

"God's purpose in sending His Prophets," the Baha'i sacred writings affirm, "is to liberate the children of men from the darkness of ignorance and guide them to the light of true understanding."

"The second is to insure the peace and tranquility of mankind, and provide all the means by which they can be established."

Litterature sent free on request.

BAHA'I PUBLIC RELATIONS
536 Sheridan Road • Wilmette, Illinois

For community publicity programs this month, the second in the series of reprints of current national advertising (see cut), first to appear in "U.S. News-World Report" February 20, is now available. Offered at cost are postcards, 1c and newspaper mats, 12c. Same copy will also appear in "Newsweek" on March 12 and in April's "United Nations World."

The number of communities now using this opportunity to tie-in locally to the publicity prestige gained through the national campaign is now over 60, with 8,000 cards and mats distributed last month. Each mat has space for community name, address and telephone number.

Use of the ads, as part of a planned local campaign, aids to bring the Faith to the attention of those who would be influential friends, those who would on occasion say a good word for the Faith and lend their facilities for general publicity. In this way more people become acquainted with the Faith and acquire a sense of respect for the Faith through confidence in its aims and a gradual understanding of its teachings.

In Jerusalem, Palestine, last month the newspaper carried the story on the interior construction work in the Temple. From a series of releases distributed during the past two years, more than 1,000 newspaper clippings have been received. Add "Business Week" (Jan. 10, 1948) to the list of those magazines in which the Portland Cement Association's ad featuring the Baha'i Temple—"Beauty to the top of its gleaming white dome"—has appeared.

To each assembly and group now tottering but who must stay on the Baha'i map, PR last month sent a kit of materials to be used in the local campaign. It will be followed this month by a "ABC" bulletin on "Baha'i Public Relations."

The Home Front

PHILADELPHIA, PA. The week of November 16th, 1947 in Philadelphia was known as "EDUCATION WEEK," an invitation was extended to Jessie E. Revell to speak at the GEORGE R. SMITH PUBLIC SCHOOL at 15th & Wharton Streets.

An assembly of 35 children ranging from six to eight years sat on the floor of the assembly room for this special program. After a song by the whole assembly, a short recitation by one pupil, a song by another, Miss Revell was called upon to talk to the children. She began by telling them that they looked to her like a lovely garden of beautiful flowers, then she described a garden with different kinds of flowers and related the children to a human flower, garden of GOD, different in color, some black, some white, others yellow and red etc. but each one beautiful and because each one was beautiful it made the whole garden beautiful.

She emphasized that the deeds of children were like the perfume of the flowers, showing how everybody loves flowers with sweet perfume and if our deeds are kind and loving, and if we are peacemakers, then everybody will love us. At this point she spoke to the children a magnet—how it picked things up and these things were drawn close to the magnet, showing that we, too, could attract people to us by our kind actions, by our obedience to our parents and teachers, by being gentle in our conduct and speech.

Another object shown to the children was a lily bulb (not at all attractive); and also a picture of a beautiful lily. Miss Revell explained that the bulb has in it all the things to make a beautiful lily but it has to grow beautifully day by day to bring out the lily. In each one of us are the things to make us beautiful and each day if we practice good deeds, we will develop beautifully (like the lily). We practice our lessons in order to know them, so we must practice good deeds, we must be kind and gentle so that we may be beautiful flowers in GOD'S garden.

Miss Revell was invited by the Principal, Dr. George Lyle, to return to that school when he would like her to speak to the older children.

NEW YORK, CONNECTICUT and ONTARIO. At the suggestion of the Regional Teaching Committee of upper New York State and Connecticut, in collaboration with the Ontario R.T.C. a joint Teaching Conference was arranged for the friends at Niagara Falls, New York on Saturday and Sunday, October 11th and 12th.

On Saturday evening a public meeting was held at the Unitarian church in Niagara Falls under the chairmanship of Mrs. Terah Smith of Binghamton, New York with Mr. George Goodman of Hartford, Connecticut and Mr. John Roberts of Toronto as the speakers whose topics were "The Search for Faith" and "Bahá’í—A World Program," respectively. Their excellent presentation of these subjects was so interesting that the Bahá’í literature table was well patronized and many discussion groups tarried long after the formal program was concluded.

Sunday noon, the Teaching Conference for Bahá’ís only, convened at a Bahá’í home in Youngstown, N.Y. Blest with warm and beautiful autumn weather the friends were able to make full use of the outdoor terrace and spacious grounds during the lunch hour.

Following refreshments the friends turned to God in prayer and devoted their time to the Theme of the Conference—"The Teaching Plan of 1947-48." Speakers from both sides of the invisible border took part in the agenda prepared by the National Teaching Committee. Ways and means to "redouble" our efforts in accordance with the Guardian’s plea were prayerfully and carefully considered and many helpful ideas and suggestions given such as:

1. "Each one teach one."
2. Teas—which could be a simple verbal invitation to one or more. Or—by written invitation worded "To introduce the Bahá’í Writings" and sent to special groups, culminating in a Fireside Group eventually.
3. Familiarize the locality with the Principles and verities of the Faith effectively and inexpensively by the following suggestion: Pay for space weekly in the local newspaper for a direct quote from the Bahá’í Writings to be used in conjunction with a picture of the Bahá’í House of Worship reduced to the size of one inch, since a picture attracts attention.
4. Increased contribution to the general fund through sacrifice. In discussing the individual believer’s role, the "controlling principle" of Bahá’í conduct, as set forth by the Guardian, was quoted:

"A chaste and holy life must be made the controlling principle in the behavior and conduct of all Bahá’ís."

Advent of Divine Justice, page 25.

Music and prayer concluded this memorable Conference, which coincided with the Canadian Thanksgiving Day and Columbus Day.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. For five days, Monday through Friday, Nov. 10-14, inclusive, 9:45 to 10:00 a.m., National Bahá’í transcriptions were broadcast over radio station KIMO of Independence, Mo. In telephoning people on the mailing list to listen to the broadcast these interesting developments took place: One woman who answered a questionnaire ad in the newspaper about a year ago said she would like to read a book. A New Era was given her. One who formerly attended classes several years ago said she was on a PTA committee, and this committee, on Dec. 1st and continuing throughout the year, is arranging to have literature and magazines of all churches in independence in the high school and available as reading material for the students, and that she would like to have the Bahá’í Faith represented. A selection of pamphlets was given her, and a copy of the November number of the World Order Magazine was also included. Another said she had read the New Era which had been given her sometime ago and would like to read another book—Three persons at the radio station, the Chief Announcer, the Program Director, and the Assistant Program Director, have requested literature from one of the Assembly members who has a daily program at the station—they asked for the literature without solicitation—and one is reading a book. The Program Director was so well pleased with the quality of the transcriptions and the favorable comment he has received that he has scheduled five more of the transcriptions.

As a result of our first call, we have at this writing received one hundred and sixty of the desired number, and we are so happy to note that several letters accompanying the gifts and donations give assurance of further orders with promise of 100% of their local Assembly enrollment. All this is stimulating to our hopes that one thousand new subscriptions may be realized.

With renewed thanks to the friends who have already responded we trust this report will result in materially reducing the number still required to complete the full one thousand new subscriptions we need. A $2.00 subscription for a friend may mean a new Bahá’í or if your local library is already receiving the magazine, each $2.00 donated to the WORLD ORDER LIBRARY SUBSCRIPTION FUND means the recording of a new subscription to another library, name and address of the donor being mailed to the librarian.

Address all gift subscriptions or Library Fund donations to WORLD ORDER, 100 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois. Make checks payable to World Order Magazine.
Clasification of Materials for Preservation in National and Local Baha'i Archives

This classification has been made in order to clarify the nature of the material to be preserved in the Archives, with a suitable distinction between that which should be sent to the National Archives and that which should enter into the Archives established by a local Spiritual Assembly.

I. Tablets and relics of Baha'u'llah and the Bab, whether original Tablets or photostatic reproductions. This material is essentially National in character.

II. Tablets and relics of 'Abdu'l-Baha. The Tablets should be original, signed Tablets, or authentic reproductions such as photostatic copies. Tablets should be accompanied by original translation if possible. All original Tablets should be preserved in the National Archives. Photostats of Tablets revealed to the Spiritual Assembly, or to individual believers, might well be placed in the local Archives. As regards the nature of relics, the Guardian has given the following explanation:

"The general principle should be that any object used by Him in person should be preserved for posterity, whether in the local or National Archives. It is the duty and responsibility of the Baha'i Assemblies to ascertain carefully whether such objects are genuine or not, and to exercise the utmost care and caution in the matter."

III. Letters of Shoghi Effendi. These are of three different classes—those written to the N.S.A. and the entire American Community; those written to local Assemblies; and those written to individual believers. Original letters to local Assemblies are for the most part not confidential and can be preserved in the National Archives, with photostats in the local Archives. Letters to individual believers can be sent to the National Archives and photostats obtained for the recipient and for the local Archives.

IV. National events and activities. Such events as 'Abdu'l-Baha's American journey, the founding of the Temple, early historical records of the Star of the West, Baha'i Publishing Committee, Green Acro, Geyserville, Tenerity, and Louhelen Ranch and other activities of more than local importance constitute an impressive aspect of Baha'i history, and all original documents and records should be turned over to the N.S.A. if not already done, for its examination and subsequent deposit in the National Archives.

V. Local records and activities. Records and documents pertaining to such activities are of two classes: the Minutes and correspondence of the Spiritual Assembly, which are preserved by the Assembly itself, and non-administrative material of historical interest and importance, such as programs, newspaper clippings, Historical Record Cards, etc. It is recommended that each Spiritual Assembly also provide a bound book in which its Archives Committee can keep a record of enrollments of new believers and also deaths or removals from the community.

VI. Baha'i publications: A complete file of all publications, such as books, pamphlets, and magazines, news letters, etc., of official Baha'i character is being developed in the National Archives, and the cooperation of the friends is requested to make this complete. Out-of-print Baha'i books and pamphlets will be appreciated.

VII. Individual records and papers. Families in possession of the papers belonging to such prominent workers as those named in "America and the Most Great Peace" will appreciate that such records are part of the history of the Cause and might well be turned over to the Archives and History Committee. Other personal records might similarly be turned over to the local Archives Committee.

Assembly members of Caracas, Venezuela, one of latest communities to be incorporated in Latin America.
Beloved friends:

In this issue of Bahá’í News we read the text of the Guardian’s third message since January 12 on the urgency of the teaching work in North America.

Shoghi Effendi makes us realize that the formation of one hundred seventy-five Assemblies in the United States and Canada this year is no artificial scheme and no wishful hope, but an essential part of a divine, a mandatory, plan.

When an engineer has the task of constructing a bridge across a wide river, he has to calculate the number of piers required to give it full support. From pier to pier the work advances. Not until the strength of the completed part is completely assured can he carry the structure forward toward the distant shore.

Greatest of All Engineers — ‘Abdu’l-Bahá!

‘Abdu’l-Bahá, witness to the first stages of that desperate destruction by which a doomed age tears down the structure of its own evil habitation, prophetic witness to its continuance in more revolution and more war,—‘Abdu’l-Bahá had to design a bridge that could rest upon foundations deeper and firmer than the power of nations, swing its arches high above the raging torrent of creedsal hatred and economic cruelty, and convey the life of this world from the past cycle to the new age.

The Tablets we call the “Divine Plan” or “America’s Spiritual Mission” are the designs and specifications of that bridge. No soul ever raised up on earth in any former Dispensation had so fateful a task. A world in process of self-destruction, like a witless drunkard sleeping in a house his own hand has set aflame, a handful of workers who could be induced to dig a few holes or care a few parts, or try and interest a few more workers to help—and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Believers in many countries striving to serve, without clear realization of their own tottering world, the supernatural mysteries of a heavenly realm—and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

The first pier of this world-saving Plan was the Maqrib’ul-Adhkár. The second pier was an American Bahá’í community, unified, alert, a well of strength. The third pier was the establishment of Bahá’í communities throughout Latin-America. The fourth pier has been thrown out to western Europe—a land of desolation, devoid of faith as well as of physical means to life. Beyond, glimpsed in the half-light of imagination, other piers to be constructed in the future, that the bridge of security may serve all peoples and all lands.

Now warning comes! The second pier has not been sufficiently reinforced! Concentrate on this section of the Divine Plan—or jeopardize those sections which thrust from it farther out across the deep abyss! Thus may be grasped the significance of the one hundred seventy-five Assemblies to be formed April 21, this year. They represent what the Divine Plan needs for its fulfillment. Our effort and our sacrifice in this or that American town between now and April 21 contributes to a world mission. The Master cries to us through the Guardian to rush our forces to that point where the bridge is too weak. How weak? At the meeting of the National Assembly in February the members were informed that seventy-two individuals can bring the task to full completion—seventy-two, either as newly confirmed believers in designated towns, or Bahá’í settlers who go to these towns to live because they have heard the call!

Some can settle. Some can teach. All can contribute to the spiritual and to the material treasury.

What Is the Spiritual Treasure?

Bahá’u’lláh defines it: “O people of God! Be not occupied with your-Grasping frankly with the problems and basic needs of the Cause in an atmosphere of enthusiastic study and self-preparation to help fill those needs, was the keynote of the South American Congress and International School sessions which recently closed in Santiago, according to reports just received. Each delegate regarded himself as a potential pioneer, and took account not only of what others should be assisted to do, but also of what he, himself, could contribute toward fulfilling the Guardian’s plan, as outlined in his cable to the Congress: “Advise Congress concentrate effective means ensure extension, consolidation foundations forthcoming National Assembly. Stop. Urge redouble effort teaching activity, stimulate pioneer work initiated native believers. Praying signal success. Deepest love. Shoghi.”

“La Colonia Bahá’í,” a beautiful home completely equipped with furnishings and two servants and reminiscent of the International School at Colorado Springs, provided a place where the delegates could live and work together as a spiritual family. During the school sessions the delegates studied the spiritual requisites for teaching as outlined by the Guardian in the “Advent of Divine Justice,” fundamental facts of the Faith such as its history, the stations of its principal figures and the Administrative Order. Each session was in charge of a different instructor, each delegate having his turn as a teacher and questioning the class as to their basic knowledge. Afternoon sessions were conducted on the laboratory plan, the students presenting a model feast, election, assembly meeting, interviews seeking publicity, and a public meeting. Two actual public meetings were promoted with great success in spite of the mid-summer vacation season: a reception at Colonia Bahá’í attended by forty of those prominent in the educational, artistic and newspaper life of the Chilean capital, and a public lecture given by Hugo Arteaga Beitia of Valparaiso in the large hall at the University of Santiago.

Results of the sessions were felt to be an increasing maturity and capacity to work, noted both in the delegates and the host community; a deeper understanding and cooperation with all of the Americas, including North America; the capacity for harmony in the midst of vigorous and frank discussion, which cleared up many points of teaching that had not been very clear to some; a firm determination to establish effective local and national funds in spite of the great economic difficulties; a growing sense of the urgent necessity for constant study, individually and in organized classes; a deep feeling of spiritual unity to be expressed in active service, especially in the teaching field. Official delegates attending included Sra. Yvonne de Cuellar, Bolivia; Athos Costas, Argentina; Gambetta Roldán, Uruguay; Centurión Miranda, Paraguay; Dr. Carlos Saul Hernández, Colombia; Sra. Mercedes Sánchez, Peru; Mrs. Margot Worley, Brazil, and Carlos Bulling, Chile. International visitors were Miss Eve Nicklin of Peru, two friends who accompanied Mrs. Worley from Bahía, Brazil; Oscar Aguirre of Buenos Aires and Miss Janice Ewing of Oak Park, III. Teachers in the school were the delegates themselves, Miss Nicklin and Artemus Lamb. A highlight of the closing session was the announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage on May 8th in Chicago of Miss Janice Ewing and Artemus Lamb.

Twenty-three approved native teachers are now working under the direction of the National Teaching Committees of Central and South America. All of these have passed the test of capacity for doing regional work at home or in other countries. Some are school teachers who dedicate their vacations to doing special projects. Others are friends who can dedicate two or three months to helping other countries. Eduardo González of Guayaquil, Ecuador, returned from Spain after helping to establish the new community in Madrid, is now assisting the two new communities in Venezuela to prepare for the elections, and also making teaching visits to the seven other organized study groups of that country.

Six new believers have sent in their registration cards from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, and seven from Bucaramanga, Colombia. Fifty-one cards have been received recently from the various countries. National funds have been established under the care of the two Delegates and international visitors to the second annual Congress of the Caribbean countries participated not only in the Congress but also in the first International Baha’i Summer School sessions recently held in Mexico City. Mrs. Loulie Matthews of Colorado Springs, (seated center) represented the Inter-America Committee. Mrs. Martich Galil of San Francisco, (standing at left) and Octavio Illescas of California (at right of Mrs. Matthews) taught courses in the school. Mrs. Marcia Steward (seated extreme right) and other members of the National Teaching Committee were in charge of the Congress and school.

The second annual Congress of the Caribbean countries is helping with national teaching committees. A report just received from the Central American committee, shows that a total of $727.50 has been contributed by ten countries in that area, a good beginning considering that a great majority of the people live below the poverty line.

Elena Marsella reports that she has just returned from Santiago, goal city of the Dominican Republic, where she found the entire city in mourning over the death in an airplane crash of their baseball team and other prominent persons. She said it seemed as if half the city came to ask her about immortality and finally she had to thin out the numbers by announcing that she could give time only to those prepared for serious study in order to become Baha’is. Native teachers from Ciudad Trujillo, Elena and Sheila Rice-Wray will continue the work with occasional week-end visits.

Sheila has returned from San Juan Puerto Rico, where she helped Dr. Edris Rice-Wray and Margaret Swenglie to get settled and meet the friends. A public meeting is being planned there.

Special goal city drives are being made by the Regionals with the help of Carlos Bulling in Quilpue and Puerto Montt, Chile; with Esteban Canales in Ambato, Ecuador; with Oscar Castro in Santa Ana, El Salvador; Gwennie Sholtis in Cochabamba, Bolivia; Louise Caswell in Santiago, Panama; Helen Shearer in Santos, Brazil; Jean Silver in Cienfuegos, Cuba; Natalia de Chávez in Jalapa, Mexico; Gayle Woolson in Barranquilla and Bucaramanga, Colombia.

Marcia Steward has returned to Central America after a short rest at home in Pasadena following the strenuous work of the Mexico City congress. Hascle Cornbleth has returned to the United States after two years in Ecuador and Panama and is helping with national teaching here. Julie Regal will come to Chicago in April after five years in Panama, and will serve as secretary of the Inter-America Committee next year.

(Ed. Note: "To give you a faint idea of economic conditions in Latin America. In Ecuador a high school teacher earns $25.00 per month. A university professor earns $35.00 to $50.00 per month. They have to support families on this and the cost of living is approximately the same as in the United States!")

Radio Transcriptions

Important Notice

The National Radio Committee is compelled to issue this special appeal to all the local Assemblies and groups where radio transcriptions have been sent on loan for local use.

Please note these two important points:

1. The transcriptions have been sent out with specific instructions that they are to be returned to the National Radio Committee as soon as they are broadcast. Due to the failure on the part of many communities and groups to abide by the terms on which the transcriptions are lent, the Committee has exhausted its available supply (50 copies of each program) and therefore cannot supply them to meet new requests.

2. Under the terms of the Committee’s arrangement with the American Federation of Radio Artists, none of these transcriptions can be played twice at the same station. It is therefore entirely unjustifiable for any committee to hang on to a set of transcriptions in the hope that sometime later they might be used again.

Remember: our services are public property which we operate in trust for the whole community. Our conditions imposed in meeting requests are reasonable. The services of all national Baha’i committees can expand only as fast as the friends learn that they have an obligation to return a loan.

Kenosha Has A Birthday

The 50th anniversary celebration of the founding of the Kenosha Assembly of Baha’is was held at the community center at 5912-22nd Avenue, Kenosha, Wisconsin, on the evening of December 17, 1947.

A large number of Baha’is had gathered for the occasion and enjoyed the reminiscences of the experiences of this, one of the earliest Baha’i communities formed in the Western World. Guests included friends from neighboring communities and several former members of the community who now reside elsewhere.

The program was divided into three parts, representing the “Past, Present and Future,” symbolized by three candles placed on the festive board. Interesting and responsive remarks were made covering the Past by Louis Voelz, the Assembly Secretary, largely consisting of reading from the archives or history of the Assembly, and bringing out the fact that the Baha’i Faith was pioneered in Kenosha in 1897 by Byron Lane, and that since that year the Faith has continued to function in Kenosha. The portion representing the Present was covered by Jessie Halberstadt, and finally the Future was ably discussed by Horace Holley of Wilmette, our National Secretary.

A telegram of congratulations from the National Spiritual Assembly was read, and a copy of a cablegram which the National Spiritual Assembly had sent to Shoghi Effendi concerning the celebration was also read by Horace Holley.

Special recognition, with floral tributes, was given several of the older members of the community, some of whom were with the original group fifty years ago.

After the program a social hour was enjoyed, refreshments were served, with a huge specially decorated golden cake in the center of the birthday table, and thus this impressive celebration, which will long remain in our memory, was concluded.

Louhelen School Needs Supplies

In order to help out on expenses, the Dayton Community recently held a linen shower with good results for the benefit of the Louhelen School. Perhaps other communities and groups would like to hold similar showers for the school. The need is for single-size sheets, pillow cases, towels and washcloths.

—Louhelen School Maintenance Committee

Several days later the following congratulatory cablegram was received by the community from the Guardian.

"We Must Be Like The Fountain ..."

"We must be like the fountain or spring that is continually emptying itself of all that it has and is continually being refilled from an invisible source. To be continually giving out for the good of our fellows undeterred by fear of poverty and reliant on the unfailing bounty of the Source of all wealth and all good — this is the secret of right living.

Convention Attendance

The believers are requested not to bring to the Convention any non-Bahá'ís, no matter how close to the Faith they may be. Only delegates and recognized enrolled believers will be admitted to the Convention session.

Delegates to the Annual Convention deal with issues and plans of far-reaching importance. The utmost concentration is required. This is the reason for limiting attendance at the sessions to Bahá'ís only.

The Baha'i Congress and the Naw-Ruz Feast are open to attendance by interested friends.

Have You Returned Your Questionnaire?

Last month each believer received a special survey form sent out from the National Office. This detailed questionnaire is an effort to discover the talents and experience possessed by members of the American Bahá'í community. Before Convention the N.S.A. would like this material filed to assist the incoming Assembly in its national committee appointments.

Please fill out, at once, your copy of the questionnaire and mail it to the National Office.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
Birth of the Báb celebrated in Anchorage, Alaska, Oct. 19, 1947. Indicated by arrows are the hosts, the Robinsons.

The Home Front

Anchorage, Alaska: A gratifying piece of publicity on the ornamentation program for the Temple was secured in the Anchorage (Weekly) News for Dec. 13. A cut of the Temple exterior was used, and a news story based on the releases furnished them by the local publicity chairman. It is believed that this was the first time a feature news story has been published in Alaska on the Temple. Routine paid advertisements giving selections from the Teachings and weekly news items on the public meetings continued in the Anchorage Daily Times.

Flint, Michigan: The “World Day of Prayer” on Feb. 13 served as a point of contact with radio stations and the response was interesting. Four different stations were contacted. One station used the Prayer for All Nations at 6:55 A.M. This same prayer was incorporated by another station into one of its regular feature programs. A third station promised to work the prayer in somet ime during that day. Each of the stations was given a copy of the prayer, the Chicago Tribune picture of the Temple, the leaflet, “The World Faith of Bahá’u’lláh,” and “A Pattern for Future Society.” Thus the friends in Flint successfully “tied in” and took advantage of a current event to introduce the Faith to the local radio stations.

Minneapolis, Minn.: In the fall of 1947, the Bahá’í Community of Minneapolis received a request from the University of Life, of the Hennepin Avenue Methodist Church, for a Bahá’í speaker for Sunday evening, Nov. 9. The University of Life is the oldest international Sunday evening church program in the United States and its 700 members are divided into 17 different study groups. The group asking for a Bahá’í speaker was made up of University students and young business people, enrolled under the subject “Why Different Religions?” with Neil Swanson a Philosophy Instructor at the University of Minnesota, as their leader. The Minneapolis Bahá’ís sent an SOS to Lawrence Hautz of Milwaukee and he gave a talk to this group that is still remembered in this city of stately people. The Bahá’ís were especially thrilled because, even in the entertainment world, Minneapolis is considered a city of frozen people, sitting on their hands. It has been said that if anyone could “go over” in Minneapolis, they were “made” professionally.

In a few weeks, a call was received for another Bahá’í speaker for the high school group of the University of Life. This time, the local Spiritual Assembly met and decided that it was high time for them to stand on their own feet and not run for help every time the occasion arose to propagate the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. It was decided that the chairman, Mrs. Helen Frink, should prepare a talk to be given before this youth group on Feb. 1. Four days later, a request was received for her to give two talks at Central High School and four personal interviews. These appointments were met. On Feb. 16, Mrs. Frink gave her talk on Progressive Revelation to the Senior and Sophomore classes at Central High School. The students begged their teacher to permit her to pass out the little blue cards containing the Bahá’í Principles but she could not permit this, as religious literature may not be distributed in a public school. They countered with, “Well, if she leaves them on the table, couldn’t we just help ourselves when she isn’t looking?” The teacher again had to refuse, but she told them that they could leave their names and addresses with Mrs. Frink and she would mail them copies. Never in the collective history of the Bahá’í Community of Minneapolis, with all the sincere effort and hard work put into it, had they ever received so much beautiful publicity through the spoken word of youth. The report received states “The Bahá’ís learned from their experience that the wilderness of teaching, which they had so feared to enter, was, through the efforts of one friend and one member, made into an arena of beauty and joy, and that Heaven, on this plane, has no back doors!”

Atlanta, Ga.: Following are the highlights of Mrs. Marzieh Gall’s five-day visit in Atlanta, on her return trip for the Caribbean Bahá’í Conference in Mexico City and travels, toward New York:

2. Dinner following the Church service, 30 people attended. Marzieh answered questions for 30 minutes.
3. Sunday night, Jan. 25, at the Bahá’í Center, “Persia As I Saw It.” 29 persons attending, several non-Bahá’ís present.
4. Monday, Jan. 26, 2 p.m.—Radio Interview, 7 minutes, Station WCON.
5. Monday, Jan. 26, 8 p.m.—Fire-side at the Ruhe home, 10 present.
6. Tuesday, Jan. 27, 1 p.m.—Luncheon with Liberal Club at YWCA, approximately 30 attended, with good response.
7. Marzieh then went to Atlanta University with Dr. Domas of the Unitarian Church and met several of the faculty of the School of Social Administration.
8. Afternoon Tea—at the Athletic Club upon invitation of Mrs. John Rockwood who is interested and studying the Faith.
9. Tuesday, Jan. 27th, 8 p.m. at the Bahai Center. "Faith for Freedom," 26 persons present. Many questions asked and lively discussion followed.

Also Tuesday night late visit with several Bahais to home of Dr. Domas for contact purposes.

10. Wednesday, Jan. 28, 12 noon. Lecture before 25 students in Comparative Religious Class at Agnes Scott College. Response was lively and prolonged.

11. Wednesday, Jan. 28, 8 p.m. — Bahai' Center, "Heralds of World Peace," 25 present. A Baha'i brought 5 young non-Baha'i high school students from Conyers, to hear this lecture. Good response.

12. Thursday, Jan. 29, 6 p.m. — Dinner with and Lecture before Pre-Theological Students Club at Emory University, many questions asked.

13. Thursday, Jan. 29th, 8 p.m. at the Bahai' Center, intimate talk with Baha'is about our Beloved Guardian, with one near-Bahai' present.

14. Friday, Jan. 30th 7 p.m. Mrs. Gail spoke at the Annual Dinner of the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA before 356 persons, both white and colored, on the subject "The Spirit of Change."

Peoria, Ill.: Peoria has a group of people from various religious groups who meet together from time to time to discuss ways of bringing about greater religious unity and harmony. Many members of the Bahai' community have attended from time to time with the result that the local churches are beginning to recognize the believers as followers of an independent religion. Recently a plan was developed to hold a series of radio programs on "What I Believe." A Baha'i was asked to meet with a representative of the Jewish, Catholic and Protestant groups at the local radio station; a plan was devised to have a thirty-minute program of questions and answers for thirteen consecutive Sundays, to begin on Jan. 26 and omitting Easter Sunday. There are to be four Catholic, two Jewish, and six Protestant programs and one Bahai'. The number of programs allowed each one was decided on the report of a religious survey of the city which gave the number of declared believers of each group. Naturally, since we had the least, we are happy indeed to have been given the one time on the air. The date for the Bahai' program was fixed at Feb. 8.

Texas: We quote directly from the regional bulletin for Texas (called "Bahai' Newsletter"). "On Friday" evening, Jan. 9, the SAN ANTONIO group presented Mr. Leroy Ioas at a public meeting in the East Wing of the Municipal Auditorium. Over 30 people attended and the response and attitude were good. Wednesday, Jan. 21, the first in a series of follow-up Bahai' classes was instigated by Miss Faruhk Ioas.

On Monday, Jan. 12, Mr. Ioas spoke before a meeting consisting of over 50 people at the Agricultural Hall in DALLAS. This is being followed up by Miss Ioas at weekly meetings on Tuesday evenings in the Jefferson hotel in Dallas. Miss Ioas will make this tour weekly for two months ending and headquartering in HOUSTON for the Sunday public meetings. Her spare time is well taken up in small special study classes, one on Fridays and one in CHANNELVIEW, just outside of Houston. These are small groups of business women or married couples living outside the immediate area, new inquirers into the Faith. A class in Administration for the believers may be conducted if there is enough demand. This is a rigid program for Faruhk Ioas, and all of the Bahai's are most thankful to her."

Bahá'í Temple, which have been received by Public Relations as a result of releases prepared by the committee. Thousands of inches of free publicity were gained by the Faith during the past year. More important, however, than the amount of publicity received and the monetary value in terms of paid space, is the fact that gradually, through a consistent public relations program, more accurate interpretation of the Faith and favorable impressions are being made.

Bahá'í Public Relations

For use by local communities and groups Public Relations last month released a new series of five newspaper advertisements. Layouts and suggestions on how to use the material are included. Although prepared initially as a contribution to the present urgent campaign, the ads are suitable for use in an As-ssembly's regularly planned and continuous effort to create publicity for and interest in the Faith. Another series will be available soon.

Also available for community use is a series of 12 advertisements used throughout the year in the trade press. These insertions, placed on a monthly basis, told the step-by-step story of the Faith to those in a position to mold public opinions—the editor, feature writer, commentator, and radio announcer. The ads,

Children’s Stories Now Ready

The Child Education Committee wishes to announce that it is begining to issue story sheets for use with children, Bahá’í stories will be told in such a way as to be comprehensible to children. These will be issued frequently and will be mailed out on request free of charge. Write to Mrs. Sylvia Parmelee, Secretary, 4700 47th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. if you desire to receive copies.

The Guardian has written that it will be permissible to collect stories for children (about the Master) but we must realize that such stories are in the class of pilgrim's notes and may not be the actual words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, for instance. Eventually, it is hoped that these stories will be published in book form.

We invite your cooperation. If you know a good Bahá’í story and can give us its source, won’t you please send it in? It might concern the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the Guardian, martyrs, pioneers, teachers or it might be just an illustration of Bahá’í action. Your help will be much appreciated. Please send your stories to our secretary, name and address mentioned above.

Be sure to state the source.

CHILD EDUCATION COMMITTEE
Bahá'í Workshop Produces Results

The Radio Script Writing Workshop at Green Acre last summer served as a chance for Bahá'ís to learn something about radio writing, and developed several unexpected but immensely valuable sidelines.

The original plan was to give Bahá'ís instruction in radio writing-dramatic scripts, spot announcements, and documentary scripts, and also the chance to participate in actual production on the air over the local station WHEB in Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

The course was given in two week units, put on three broadcasts during the summer; a documentary-interview script on the purpose and activities of Green Acre, written cooperatively by the group; a biographical drama on Sarah Farmer presented the week of Miss Farmer's birthday with the Radio class participating as actors and a presentation of one of the series of twelve platters put out by the Bahá'í National Radio Committee.

This much alone would have been valuable, but much more came out of the group as the logical result of the discussion in class. It developed that many of the participants were members of local Radio Committees, and were anxious to learn more about radio, so that their approach to their local stations would be more intelligent and more effective. Radio contacts thus became an important part of the course, and the problems of radio production more understandable.

Add to all this the fact that Mr. Johnson instructor in the Radio Workshop at Syracuse University, and leader of the group, recently declared himself, and is working hard in the Syracuse community, and another non-Bahá'í member of the group became a Bahá'í at the end of the summer, and has been active with the National Radio Committee of the U.S., and it becomes apparent that the Bahá'í values were not forgotten. All in all the Workshop proved to be a sparkplug for increased activity in the radio field, and as one of the members of the group expressed it: "Good fun as well."

European Enrollments Increase

The thrilling and heartening news which the European Teaching Committee has to share with the Bahá'í friends, who are so valiantly supporting the European teaching project, is that of eight newly declared believers since our last report to them in Bahá'í News. These include another promising young member, a medical student in Copenhagen, Mr. Gerhard Anderson; the historic first four in Norway, Mrs. Inga Schonberg, Mr. Arne Tharaldsen; one in Italy, Signor Luigi Peveri; and another promising young member, Mr. Arne Tharaldsen; who was confirmed in the Faith in Rome but who is ardently working for the Cause in his home village Stora, in the Province of Fiorenza and two more in the Stockholm group, Miss Tora Persson and Eskil Lijungberg. This brings the total number of newly declared believers in all of our goal countries under the second Seven Year Plan to 43.

From Scandinavia, Holland and Belgium have come enthusiastic accounts of Dorothy Baker's visit to our Centers in these countries. Through the openings which our valiant pioneers made with outstanding clubs, Mrs. Baker was able to speak to audiences of from 75 to 199 persons as well as in firesides and more intimate meetings. She has been most enthusiastically received in each place; has created many promising contacts with which the pioneers are now busily engaged, in effective follow-up. The publicity accorded her by the press has also been very impressive. Most of all she has brought great encouragement and inspiration to our pioneers. It is through the visits of these itinerant teachers that the pioneers feel themselves once more in close touch with the Bahá'ís at home and are strengthened and resuscitated by the spirit that flows to them. The Committee rejoices that Dorothy Baker was present at the historic occasion in Oslo when four of a group who had been studying the Faith declared themselves and again in Stockholm when the last two new believers became members of that group.

Marion Little continues her invaluable work in Italy. After February 9 she visited Florence and Naples before proceeding to Switzerland to meet Dorothy Baker for a brief journey together to Paris and Lyon, France.

It is with deepest regret that the Committee reports the contemplated return to the United States of Henry Jarvis in February and Marion Little on March 20. The assistance which they have given to the European teaching project cannot be measured and the priceless contribution which they have made will continue to bear rich results long after their retirement from the European field.

"The World Is Being Prepared..."

During the last two years Charles Mason Remey, one of our earliest American believers, has visited Bahá'í communities and groups throughout Latin America and Europe. A few notes culled from his account written for the Bahá'í World help us to realize the eager devotion of pioneers and believers in these countries and the great physical difficulties and deprivation under which Bahá'í teaching is carried on in Europe. And yet he says: "Bahá'í work moves quickly in these days." We select particularly items about the countries which are not included in the European teaching plan for ten countries:

"In Dublin I was with the pioneer teachers at the first public meeting held in Ireland at which there was a good attendance and fine response on the part of the people. The Irish, who in the past played so important a part in the early spread of Christianity in Europe, now give promise (Continued on page 11)"

Excerpts from the letters and diaries of Martha Root

(Cont'd from last month)

March, 1948

Bulgaria, Plovdiv, Nov. 24, 1927

Am sending this letter so that it will surely reach you by Christmas Day. I shall be praying for you specially on the Holy Holidays and sending deep love to you. I shall be in Athens then. I do not know one soul in Greece, but God will be with me and He will be with you, and in spirit we shall be together! God bless you, my precious dear ones, and give you happiness and courage and inner peace to meet everything in this life and in the next! . . . In Bucharest, the great privilege was mine to visit her Majesty Queen Marie in her summer palace, "Pelesh", in Sinaia . . . It was all so beautiful! The Queen is so charming, so bright, so intuitive, and with such a comprehensive grasp of these great Teachings! She is a confirmed Bahá'í! and she studies the teachings.

I came to Bulgaria, October seventeenth, stopped in Rousse, the fourth largest city in Bulgaria, and on the Danube River. It is the frontier city just across from Rumania. I had stopped there three hours two years ago. This time I visited three of the largest educational institutions and talked with the Directors. One fine young Esperantist who works in a bank in Rousse said, "I am interested in the Bahá'í Cause, have been interested for two years; I want always to work for it, and please keep me in touch with any news about it." I try as much as possible to link the youth of one country with those of another . . . my visit to a country I hope, is only the beginning of spiritual events, the youth themselves are the ones who will carry it far, far!

Nov. 28.

Yesterday six of us went to Stanimaka for the day, went with two horses and a carriage, three hours ride. It was the first time an American had ever lectured in Stanimaka. The one hundred Esperantists are all very young. They arranged a big lecture on the Bahá'í Cause, the hall was so crowded, all stood that could get into the hall or listen outside and many, many went away. It was a tremendous success. They seemed very interested. The young girls brought me flowers and when we left in the evening, the Esperantists walked with us more than two miles, we all walked together and the carriage trailed empty behind.

I start for Constantinople now in two hours, only took the Turkish visa for one week . . . My work in the Balkan countries and in central Europe is so urgent, I cannot work much in Turkey until some year later. Constantinople is not much out of my way en route to Greece. Also, I shall pass through Adrianople. It gives me a thrill to think of going to the cities where Bahá'u'lláh was exiled and I long to meet the friends ih Constantinople. How much Bahá'u'lláh endured to give us these Teachings! And I see the New Day breaking! I see that the new divine civilization will bring again a great progress to all mankind. It is very blessed for us all to live in this day, to know and to serve — and courageously to go forward amidst difficulties and illness, for life is not easy for anyone. It was not easy for Bahá'u'lláh and His family, for those early believers, nor is it easy for you. "All suffer and yet no less bear up," and they are the radiant ones with shining eyes and when they speak one sees the Truth in their lives and actions! "And when they have passed, it seemed like the passing of the greatest man!" That is the way you live, each one of you to whom I send this letter of love.

Turkey, Constantinople, 1928

I have visited some of the Professors of Stamboul University, interviewed them about religion and have written it. Then I went to Angora, the Capital, for four days. I had an interview with the Minister of Foreign Affairs. He is certainly a great man. With him, too, I spoke about religion . . . I met the Directors of the press for Turkey, met the heads of Education, the heads of two libraries in Angora and some fine people from the Embassies. The Turks have given me a cordial invitation to return for October twenty-ninth, the greatest day in Turkey, for this is the anniversary date of the founding of their Republic on October twenty-ninth, nineteen twenty-four.

I shall go a few days earlier and be a guest at two or three events and I have an invitation for the grand ball on October twenty-ninth, when I expect to meet the President of Turkey and the Prime Minister as well as others...

I shall have, taken third class trains in Turkey... You see I meet the highest and the humblest Turk... I have tried to make a careful study of Turkey and meet some of the molders of this new Turkey, for this country has infinite possibilities...

I am so sorry when my correspondence goes unanswered, but you see I am obliged to CONCENTRATE on my task and when once I begin there is never any place to stop until I leave one city and go on to the next and do my writing before I announce my arrival.

Czechoslovakia. Praha, Jan. 22, 1933.

Dear Friends: Do you feel as I do, that in teaching the Bahá’í Cause you are learning the most of anyone? Do you feel as I do, how often selfishness and “little” annoyances spring up and stare into your very soul reminding you how much there is to learn, really to become perfect? Also, do you sometimes catch the cosmic through glimpses, the high lights of the celestial and vision what life could be if we really were “all-conscious” all the time? Also do you think as I do, how much you wish to read and study MUCH MORE, but you read a little, pray a little, meditate a little, and most of the twenty-four hours submerge yourself in service? Is it not better to run with your torch to light the soul torches of all? And in doing that, the Words of Christ come true: “He that loses his life, shall save it.” In SERVICE to others, the soul draws near to God, does hear the Divine Guidance, does dream dreams, does see visions. Lastly, do you find, as I do, that when you have gone to the limit of human strength and the body says, “This is the last straw and it is going to break my back!” something so important comes into the horizon that, for the sake of humanity, you feel it should be carried, and you pick it up and bring it forward to its goal—and in doing this, Bahá’u’lláh gives a spiritual strength, a superhuman help, that brings you safely and with peace and thankfulness in your heart? How true the words that life, after all, is a one way street we are passing down, all we do, we must do it now for we come back this way...

I came to Praha early in May, arranged with Mrs. F. M.---- to translate Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era into Czech. One thousand copies came from the press December first. In the bookstore windows they are placarded “Something new”...

The Czechs have vision, Jan Hus did not die in vain: few nations in Europe are more liberal in thinking, more openminded, more seeking than this one. Blessed indeed are the Bahá’í teachers who can work in Czechoslovakia.

I wish I could go to fifty cities and towns in Czechoslovakia and speak in the English Clubs, the Sokol Clubs, and in their schools; for the word comes from different cities asking about the Bahá’í Movement.

I shall come again to this country, if it is possible—but to get the book (Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era) out in Hungarian, Rumanian, Serbian, Greek is also very important for the teachers who will come after. It is so much easier to work, and more rapid progress can be made when one has literature in the language of the country. When one sees the world outlook at this moment, it seems all the more necessary to get the books out, for in the time of cataclysm people will have the Teachings!

Beloved friends:

When this issue of Bahá'í News is mailed to the believers the Convention will be near at hand, marking the end of another Bahá'í year and the beginning of another administrative year for the American Bahá'ís.

The Convention for the first time will be made up only of Bahá'ís of the United States. The Convention of the Bahá'ís of Canada, composed of nineteen delegates assigned to the various Provinces, is to be held April 24 and 25 at the Maxwell home in Montreal. At that time a National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Canada will be established, forming one more pillar to support the future House of Justice. The National Spiritual Assemblies at present existing represent the believers of Persia, Iraq, Egypt and the Sudan, India, Pakistan and Burma, Australia and New Zealand, the British Isles, Germany and Austria, and the United States and Canada. Canada will have the ninth National Bahá'í community.

The establishment of this new community marks one definite achievement of the second Seven Year Plan. Before 1953 National bodies are to exist in South America and in Central America. As soon as possible thereafter there will be a National Assembly of Western Europe; and Austria, and through the Spiritual Assembly of Paris, to the members of their communities.

Glowing reports have continued to flow in from Luxembourg, Switzerland, Italy, Spain and Portugal as our latest itinerant teacher, Dorothy Baker, has pursued her way through the European Teaching goal countries. The repercussions of her heartening visits to our pioneers will continue long after her departure from the Continent and her contribution to the teaching project, as a whole, is genuinely and deeply appreciated.

Last, but certainly not least, is our news of seven newly declared believers, bringing the total in the goal countries to 50.

and eventually each independent nation of South and Central America and also of Europe will form its own administrative structure.

This development constitutes the fruit of all Bahá'í activity, for the enlargement of the area brought within the world order of Bahá'u'lláh marks the spiritual conquest of the chaos in which mankind has plunged. Not by spiritualized personalities alone, but by faithful Bahá'ís united in the administrative order over which the Guardian and the House of Justice are to preside, the essential purpose of the Faith is fulfilled. The termination of anarchy and rebellion, the use of force and violence for partisan ends — all the causes of human suffering and social disturbance — calls for the operation in human life of those unique functions vested in the House of Justice. Through no other agency can the revealed teachings and principles be transmuted into the law and order on which humanity depends. Here we Bahá'ís stand.

Turn now to our tremendous project, completion of the Temple interior. This year marked the beginning of actual construction work, as last year marked the setting up of a construction fund exceeding $100,000. By now it should be $200,000, but the funds have not been made available.

The inspiration and guidance of all administrative work is given us through our worship of the One True God. Until the Temple interior is completed we will not have unitedly developed the facilities for public worship in the Name of Bahá'u'lláh. Therefore this task is a sacred opportunity the fulfillment of which nothing can be permitted to delay. The call of the Kingdom will resound through all the Americas with extraordinary power when not only Bahá'ís but the general public gather for worship in the Mashriqul-Adhkar. There at last will the Oneness of God be demonstrated, when the Words of all the Prophets are read.

New Slidefilm Released

The Visual Education Committee announces the release, for sale and distribution, of the new slidefilm "THE GOAL IS WORLD ORDER." This provides a 30 minute program, presenting 65 pictures, in black and white, with accompanying narration.

This visual teaching aid has been produced in two forms, and orders will be filled by the Bahá'í Sales Committee, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, 40, Illinois. The prices are as follows:

Slide set—(2x2 slides)—$4.00 per set, including narration
Filmstrip—(Single frame)—$3.00 including narration

THE GOAL IS WORLD ORDER was designed to bring to the Bahá'í teaching support the visual evidence of the world-wide scope of the Faith, and highlights of its expansion during the first twenty-five years of the Guardianship of Shoghi Effendi.

Trial runs of this slidefilm have shown its effective use for large meetings, as well as for the home meetings and discussion groups for which it was primarily planned.

Included with the narration are some "projection hints," for helping to put on a smooth-running performance, and also some suggestions and pamphlet material for the preparation of the Chairman's introduction, and the discussion following the showing of the film.

With the cooperation of the Los Angeles Bahá'í Assembly, the Visual Education Committee gave a short training course, at the Los Angeles Bahá'í Center, for the development of "projection teams." These teams include one person who operates the projector; and another who carries out the functions of Chairman, and Narrator. Through this brief training course new talents were discovered, and new teaching resources were made available.

The Visual Education Committee will welcome suggestions or questions about the use of THE GOAL IS WORLD ORDER.

Volunteers Wanted

The Study Aids Committee needs the help of at least 20 Bahá'ís for looking up Bahá'í references for use in connection with the preparation of new study outlines and courses. Here is a wonderful opportunity for service for isolated Bahá'ís or others whose circumstances do not permit them to take an active part in teaching. If interested write to: Charlotte M. Linfoot, 156 Nova Drive, Piedmont 10, California.

Around The Bahá'í World

BRITISH ISLES: Working under great difficulties the English believers are making great Bahá'í history. Recent reports show that "... 12½ percent of the British community has arisen to pioneer in this Initial Phase of our Six Year Plan! That is one in every eight of the believers you meet in these Islands is one of those devoted souls who have 'taken up their beds and walked' ... At the end of the Plan, an inactive believer, already a contradiction in terms, will be as extinct as the dodo."

IRAN: The house of the Imám-Jum'ih in Isfahan is now Bahá'í property. This is the house where the Bab stayed for 40 days during His sojourn in Isfahan. (See Downbreakers, pp. 199-201). The house is recognized as one of the finest in all Persia as to construction, interior decoration and ornamentation. The National Assembly has organized a Four-Year Plan for the progress of Bahá'í women in that country. Objectives: (1) To organize study classes in 22 centers for the training of Bahá'í women teachers who will be "well acquainted with the history of the Faith, its teachings and its administration." (2) To aid in the elimination of illiteracy. (3) To provide lectures and conferences on health and hygiene. (4) To give special attention to the education of Bahá'í girls. The Persian believers are in the midst of a 45-Month Plan started in November 1946. In several areas local goals have been completely accomplished. Some idea of the work of the Faith can be gained by a few statistics regarding Bahá'í Committees in Tehran: A year ago, the Tehran Assembly needed 24 committees to take care of the social, economic and religious problems of the community. Its Teaching Committee (which had 10 sub-committees for different parts of the city) organized between 75 and 85 weekly meetings, used 65 teachers, had audiences of as many as 300 seekers. The Youth Committee held 168 meetings during the year.

EGYPT: The believers here are struggling to gain certain legal rights as Bahá'ís. Plans are being made to protect the property of the Hazírat'u'l-Quds.

ETHIOPIA: The war scattered the small community in Addis Ababa. Pioneer Sabri Effendi Elias has reported enrollment of new believers. A Bahá'í booklet has been printed there in an edition of 1,000 copies.

INDIA, PAKISTAN, and BURMA: Disturbances in this troubled country have forced the dissolution of three assemblies. Looting mobs in Delhi stuck down an aged believer. The NSA is moving to rehabilitate the homeless.

AUSTRALIA and NEW ZEALAND: The believers in this vast area "down under" also have a teaching Plan to end in 1953. Their goal is 31 groups and 7 additional spiritual assemblies. Fewness of numbers and vast distances make this a challenging goal. The Guardian cabled in response to their stated goal: "Overjoyed glorious news... Deepest admiration exemplary spirit..." Settlers have already started to move.

APRIL, 1948
BAHÁ'Í NEWS

What Is Teaching?

“We have a two-fold obligation to study: to become a better Bahá'í; to become an instrument for the spread of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.”

(N.S.A., Insert, Bahá'í News, January 1948.)

These two obligations are interdependent. A well-informed Bahá'í is an active Bahá'í, and an active Bahá'í constantly strives to deepen his knowledge in order to increase his capacity for service.

Before becoming a Bahá'í one is required to possess certain fundamental knowledge of the history, principles and teachings of the Faith, but if his study ceases at that time his growth as a Bahá'í never really begins. Enrollment in the Bahá'í Faith may be likened to graduation from a school of medicine. The act of receiving the degree does not make the individual a successful physician. It only signifies that he has acquired the necessary background of knowledge which he must now begin to expand through further study and practice. So also a Bahá'í becomes an effective instrument for teaching and service only after he has made his knowledge of the teachings completely his own through study, practice and sharing.

In the preceding articles in this series the Study Aids Committee has suggested materials and methods for the study of the teachings. We now offer a few suggestions for using and sharing the knowledge that has been acquired.

The statement by the N.S.A. referred to above, includes this sentence: “Continuous discussion of the teachings can make every believer an effective teacher for one kind of work or another.” It is admittedly much easier to discuss the Faith with another Bahá'í than with a non-Bahá'í—nd this should be done whenever possible, in conversation, through correspondence, in study classes and at summer schools, for the exchange of viewpoints and explanations helps to clarify the understanding. But if the discussion of the teachings is limited to Bahá'ís only, the Faith will not spread. Never to mention the glorious Message of Bahá'u'lláh outside the Bahá'í family is like hoarding precious jewels and denying all others the joy of beholding their beauty.

Therefore, the first step in sharing and thereby deepening one's knowledge of the Faith, is to talk about it on every possible occasion. Have you ever noticed how easy it is to tell someone about a new book you have read, or about a new recipe, a poem or a great heroic figure you have discovered? It is just as easy to speak of the Bahá'í teachings and books, and when you do, your listeners will respond to your personal enthusiasm and sincerity. See how many ways you can find to introduce the subject you have been studying into your conversations, directly or indirectly. Do not anticipate objections, arguments or difficult questions for they may not come up at all. If they do, you will be surprised to find how easily you can answer them. If you cannot give the answers at the moment, do not let one failure in this respect defeat you. Make those questions a challenge for further study. Another opportunity will present itself for you to try again.

Above all, remember the glorious promises of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá that Divine assistance will be showered upon anyone who makes the effort to promote the Faith.

Make a practice of collecting non-Bahá'í articles and news items with some bearing on Bahá'í subjects that interest you and look up the Bahá'í references, interpretations and viewpoints concerning them. Share and discuss these non-Bahá'í articles with other people and give them your Bahá'í viewpoint.

Take advantage of every opportunity to refer to the Bahá'í Faith in letters to friends and acquaintances. Use short Bahá'í quotations; give the Bahá'í viewpoint concerning subjects of mutual interest, and whenever possible enclose a pamphlet with marked passages, or send a World Order Magazine to stimulate reading of Bahá'í materials.

After a few attempts along these lines, you will find that you have developed a surprising amount of self-confidence and ability to present your Bahá'í knowledge with ease. And thus your teaching service has begun—as simply as that! For what is teaching but imparting knowledge? The most that any Bahá'í can hope to do is to share the results of his own efforts with others and to lead them to the point where they will of their own volition begin their own “independent investigation of the truth.”

Study Aids Committee
Mrs. Ruth Moffett, Bahá’ís and friends at Louisville, Ky., during the “Seminar” Mrs. Moffett conducted there.

Bahá’í Seminar Bears Rich Fruitage

Our beloved Guardian in his heart-stirring appeals is calling us all to “forge ahead with equal zeal, with unremitting vigilance, with indomitable courage, with tireless energy until the present stage of our mission is triumphantly concluded.” The National Teaching Committee, to fulfill the Guardian’s instructions, sent Mrs. Ruth Moffett on one of the most difficult assignments, to Louisville, Kentucky. There were few active local Bahá’ís, and few people even interested. The three pioneers and the non-residents had struggled loyally amid disheartening conditions. Perhaps the recent progress in Louisville may be of encouragement to many others.

Remembering ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s instructions to “Lay your plans with spiritual strategy,” Mrs. Moffett and the friends began the work with fervent prayer and laying the necessary plans for the Educational Seminar at the Brown Hotel. A brief summary shows that Mrs. Moffett gave 63 lectures, 54 classes, 36 interviews and conferences, 18 luncheons and teas, and 13 book reviews. She reviewed such books as “Human Destiny” by Le Comte du Nouy, “The Prophet” by Kahlil Gibran for whom ‘Abdu’l-Bahá sat for a portrait, and others that tie into our Teachings. She gave lectures to nine non-Bahá’í organizations including the University of Louisville, and several Kiwanis Club dinners.

She also spoke in the Negro WMCA to a group of Negro educators and students. Mr. Jackson, editor of The Defender, presided. Fifteen from the class at the Brown Hotel attended and all were served tea at little tables together, the first experience of the kind for most of those present, and Mr. Jackson said, “Mrs. Moffett, you will never know what you have done not only for Louisville tonight, but for the entire State of Kentucky. You demonstrate these noble Teachings.” A radio broadcast was also given over WGRC, on the Distinguished Guest Hour, and she spoke in several Womans Clubs and the Unity Center.

An unusual Art Exhibit was held for four days during the Seminar, exhibiting excellent paintings by some of the artists who attended the lectures. Mrs. Moffett spoke on the “Fundamentals of Art” and “Art and the New Age” with words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, which attracted some of the artists to begin studying our Faith. An attractive Bahá’í Book Display on World Order was arranged at the entrance of the Public Library for 10 days.

The amazing results in Louisville as the fruitage of the six weeks Seminar of daily, prayerful, consecutive, intensive work, is that seven people became confirmed and registered Bahá’ís. One Bahá’í from the suburbs took her residence in the city. These in addition to the 3 stalwart pioneers gives Louisville a LSA plus a few over for a community. This included 17-year-old Joseph Vital, the only Bahá’í youth in the State of Kentucky. Mrs. Moffett then arranged a Study Course Program for each Wednesday evening until July 1, with a different leader for each lesson—24 in all, and each one is eager to make his lesson the very best. All realize that these remarkable results in only six weeks from Jan. 9 to Feb. 18, are due to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, the ardent prayers, the vast ocean of love and energy poured into the Seminar.

More Abundant Contributions
"I cannot, however, overlook, much as I sympathize with them in their financial tribulations and anxieties, the mysterious power that resides in the united will and concerted action of all the members of that self-sacrificing community—a community which, since the passing of 'Abdu'l-Baha, has put an impetus to the advancement of the Cause out of all proportion to its numerical strength, its youthfulness, and experience of the powers latent in this sacred Faith. . . . Still more abundant flow of resources (to the) National Fund, involving still nobler self-sacrifice, (is) demanded. . . . Public Relations in Action

Bahá'í advertising has two primary objectives: to inform the people about the Faith and to influence them favorably through an understanding of its principles. Basically designed to obtain long-run results rather than immediate effects, the advertising is used to gradually build up an interest in the Bahá'í Faith. The momentum of such a program cannot be turned off and on at will. Each month, therefore, in an unbroken continuity the Bahá'í message reaches the public through three national circulation magazines—Newsweek, U. S. News-World Report and United Nations World—to a combined readership of more than 4,000,000 persons.

What national Bahá'í advertising does is to bring the Faith to people in your town where you could not reach through any local channels. Therefore, Public Relations is already doing part of your local teaching work. To make these people interested enough to attend your meetings, plan your local campaigns along constructive publicity lines.

Much of the success of any local campaign depends on how the Assembly takes advantage of Public Relations and other national programs and materials.

The Bahá'í Public Relations committee wants to help you carry on your local campaign. For this purpose, PR Bulletin No. 4 is specially prepared to help you with plans, aids and suggestions. If your Assembly or group does not have a copy, write to Public Relations.

Trade Paper Schedule

Each month we talk to the editor, the columnist, the feature writer, the radio commentator and others interested in the newspaper and radio fields—men who are in an influential position to mold public opinion. During the past year a series of twelve ads were written specially for readers of these various magazines—Editor & Publisher, Broadcasting, Canadian Weekly Editor, and Publishers’ Auxiliary. Reprints of these ads in booklet form are available. Be sure your local newspaper editor and radio station program manager has a copy. For a supply, write Public Relations.

In the Bahá'í teachings last month the Brattleboro (Vt.) Reformer saw great possibilities. Responsible for the paper's editorial: a publicity release based on the NSA statement on human rights to the United Nations. Proclaimed the Reformer about the Bahá'í World Faith: "The fact that groups in all nations are working toward a common spiritual and social platform to break down the barriers of nationality, race and religion is good news, even if it is not conducive to flashy headlines."

A United Press staff correspondent prepared a feature about the Bahá'í new year which was released over the nationwide press facilities of the UP. We Bahá'ís cannot expect any non-Bahá'í to attain the accuracy about the Faith which we strive for in our own presentations. However, when non-Bahá'í agencies press or radio, go out of their way to feature the Cause, we should appreciate the value of their good will and not try to press the editor to change some minor point if the spirit of the story is favorable. Any really serious misstatements, however, should be reported to Public Relations.

A full-page picture of the Temple served as the February cover for the American Concrete Institute's News Letter. Inside the magazine was an illustrated readable story about the interior designs of the Temple. From a story in the travel magazine "Where" comes this sample paragraph: "Unforgettably beautiful by day or night, it is well worth seeing." Bahá'í students attending American university at Beirut, Syria, were mentioned in stories appearing in widely-respected New York Times and the Readers' Digest. Interest which most people have in how the other half of the world lives is one on which Bahá'í publicity committees can capitalize. All the flavor and romance of travel can be woven into a story of some phase of Bahá'í teachings and life. From Anchorage, Alaska, recently came just such a clipping. A newspaper feature was built around a letter from a former resident now a Bahá'í pioneer in Denmark. Clippings from the Temple interior release continue to cross our desk from all parts of the nation. A staff writer of the Lansing (Mich.) State Journal wrote: "Tourists threading their way along Highway 42 enroute to or from Chicago, pause in wonder at—one of the architectural landmarks of the world."
Teaching Campaign Nears Climax

The NTC reports a steady national response to the three historic appeals from the Guardian. In all parts of the country settlers are moving into goal towns and cities, and believers are seeking all possible opportunities to teach and confirm new souls, in a united, sacrificial effort to meet the goal of 175 assemblies by April 21.

A careful national survey on March 10 revealed the status of the national effort as follows:

- Goal for April 21 - 175 assemblies
- LSA's in Canada - 13
- LSA's in the U.S. - 130
- Total: 143

Hopeful goals - 42

Among the offers for assistance in the North American teaching field is an interesting one from a European Bahá'í, Mr. Harry Anderson of Denmark. Mr. Anderson plans to come to the United States to study medicine, and he will make a national effort as follows:

- Filling our 175 assemblies, the work in the North American teaching field is an interesting one from a European Bahá'í, Mr. Harry Anderson of Denmark. Mr. Anderson plans to come to the United States to study medicine, and he will make a national effort as follows:

The Home Front

Charleston, W. V. Mrs. Margery McCormick gave Charleston nearly three weeks of inspiration and teaching help during January, in a deeply appreciated public campaign under the NTC.

Public appearances included the first meeting on Jan. 18 (subject, "The World Safe for Humanity"); two subsequent Sunday meetings, one using colored slide photos to illustrate progressive Revelation and "comparative religion" in a practical way, under the title "Palestine, the Holy Land of Many Faiths;" a five-minute impromptu speech which, following a panel discussion at a meeting of the NAACP, had an electrifying effect on the audience; a fifteen-minute talk at a luncheon meeting of the Women's Hadassah Society (Jewish); and many small informal meetings at the Center.

Radio stations combined to furnish excellent publicity: in addition to a paid broadcast of "A New Interpretation of History," each of five stations made elaborate announcements of Mrs. McCormick's public talks under their Community News programs. Then as a result, one of these requested a fifteen-minute interview. Another station broadcast two seven-minute interviews with her at the instigation of the Jewish Rabbi who had spoken on the panel at the NAACP meeting.

It is earnestly hoped that the results of this campaign may come to fruition speedily enough to achieve the desired goal in Charleston.

Seattle, Wash. The Calendar of Public Meetings in this city carries a splendid notice of an unusual series of discussion meetings. The theme has been "Holy Books of the Bahá'í Faith." The book under discussion for January is "Some Answered Questions" and each week the discussion is guided by a different believer. Several chapters are discussed at each meeting and the titles of the discussions are very appealing. These meetings are held on Friday evenings and are in addition to the regular public lecture meetings.

Los Angeles, Calif.: Another splendid local news letter or bulletin is the Bahá'í Journal published monthly by the Spiritual Assembly of this city. A recent program of public meetings includes the following titles: Divine Revelation, Springboard for Social Action; For What Are We Seeking? Assurance in a World of Turmoil; Prayer in a World Religion; Religion: Spiritual Highway for a New Age; The Penetration of the Word of God and Individual Assurance in a New World. Their Reading Room is open to the public daily from 2 to 4 p.m.; they advertise an "Inquirer's Class," an "Espiranto Class" and a Youth Meeting weekly. Many Firesides operate and an interesting recent activity is a weekly gathering of some of the friends to read together from "The Dawn-Breakers."
Latin America Is Helping

Latin America is helping to answer the Guardian's call for 175 assemblies in the United States by April 21 through a 9-point program of cooperation, presented by the Inter-America Committee to the North American Teaching Committee. Some of these points include asking two Latin American teachers, Miss Flora Hottes and Hascle Cornbleth, to serve under the northern committee during the emergency, asking 12 families and individuals, who have volunteered and been accepted for Latin American pioneering, to place themselves at the service of the N.T.C. as North American pioneers for at least a year; asking the N.S.A. to recommend to the International School in Colorado Springs that the Latin American session June 18th to 28th be made an all-Americas session, where Bahá'í teachers may obtain normal school training applicable anywhere in this hemisphere, including the special Latin American techniques, and suggestions regarding how to adapt these to North American teaching; also including a voluntary $2,000 cut in the budget of the I.A.C., which the members hope to be able to increase before the end of the year, so that these savings will be available for the North American work.

Highlights of the Latin American work have just been brought to this country by Miss Janice Ewing of Oak Park, III., who became a Bahá'í in Santiago, Chile, and who has returned to Oak Park to prepare for her wedding to Artemus Lamb of Santiago, which will be celebrated in Oak Park May 8th. Janice gave us some clues to the miracles which enabled the Santiago Congress and Summer School to be such a huge success. She said, "Artemus did not know what could be done to take care of the delegates and visitors who were coming. He saw in the ads a large, beautiful home for rent in the best section of Santiago. It seemed impossible that such a place could be obtained for the use of a crowd of strangers, but he sat down and prayed. Then he went to see the owner and she handed him the keys at once.

"But," said Artemus, "there will be about 35 people staying there. Will that be all right?"

"Oh, yes," agreed the owner, "and in that case I'll just leave all the furnishings and the silver and dishes, and wouldn't you like the two servants too?"

"That is how 'La Colonia Bahá'í' was discovered. Then Artemus wanted a window to display information about the Faith," Janice continued. "He walked up and down the best part of the main shopping street and he saw a beautiful window, the finest in town, right in the heart of the shopping district. He asked a friend about it. 'Yes,' said the man, "the owner sometimes rents the window, but never for more than three days and it is very expensive.' So Artemus sat down and prayed and then he went to see the owner and told him about the Faith and the Congress. The owner offered him the window free of charge for a week.

"After the school sessions, when Artemus took back the keys to the beautiful house, he told the owner how he had become engaged to be married during this time," Janice said. "We had been wondering where we could find an apartment in Santiago, for these are even scarcer than in Chicago. "Oh," said the owner, "wouldn't you like one of my apartments for yourself and your bride? I don't have one vacant but I'll ask for one and have it ready at the right time. My family and I have noticed how the Bahá'ís have behaved during this month that they have used our house. We are interested and would like to study your Faith."

Janice told the Inter-America Committee about her visit to Ezeiza Summer School in Argentina, where the new dormitory has just been completed and where 35 students gathered to study this year. She was entertained by Edris Rice-Wray's and Margaret Swenogle's class of 45 university boys in Puerto Rico, and said that the girls are planning to have a second assembly in Rio Piedras by April 20.

Highlights have come from Esteban Canales of Santiago, chairman of the South American National Teaching Committee. His first stop was in Antofagasta, on the border of Chile en route to Bolivia, where Sra. Yvonne de Cuéllar de La Paz joined him to help with the teaching. Esteban reports that the head of radio station "El Los", which is heard in both Bolivia and Chile, became deeply interested and offered himself as a student and his station as a point for disseminating knowledge of the Faith.

In La Paz 80 people came to hear Esteban speak on the Faith and 40 participated in a reception for him. His itinerary includes Sucre and Cochabamba, Bolivia; Lima, Peru; Guayaquil, Quito and Ambato, Ecuador.

The thrilling news has just come that incorporation of the Faith has been granted in Lima, Peru, and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where wonderful work is being done by devoted Edward and Mary Bode. Eve Nicklin, Lima, Peru Bahá'í community is happy over recent incorporation of their assembly, but sorry to see Miss Eve Nicklin, pioneer, leave for Punta Arenas, Magallanes, Chile. She is standing second from left.
Colorado Springs. Inter-America Committee, who gave the opening address of the Congress; Marcia Steward, Sra. Natalia de Chávez, Carlos Vergara and Oscar Castro of the National Teaching Committee, who were in charge of all arrangements. Official teachers at the school included Octavio Illescas, Marzieh Gail, Natalia de Chávez, Oscar Castro, Harold B. Murray and Sra. Mary Luz Guinchard.

A Five-Year Plan for carrying out the objectives of the Guardian’s plan was presented by the delegate from Haiti and will be shown by Mrs. Matthews at the Convention. Constructive plans were made for the multiplication of assemblies, consolidation of existing assemblies, incorporation of the Faith in each country as speedily as possible, establishment of national and local funds, (10 countries contributed toward the expenses of the Congress), establishment of Bahá’í summer schools, organization of regional and national conferences, and making a special effort to carry the Teachings to the indigenes of each country.

1948 Summer School Programs

International School
The International School Sessions are open to all believers for normal school training, whether the believers teach in the Americas or other countries. The courses are designed to deepen the understanding of the Faith and to perfect the teaching technique and to enable students to give Bahá’í answers to questions asked. The school will be open June 15th to 28th for a Latin-American Session, followed by a European Session from July 1st to July 10th. It is hoped that the friends will avail themselves of this opportunity and write promptly for reservations since the number is limited to twenty-five for each session. For reservations, address Miss O. B. Crum, sec., P. O. Box 1064, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Gevserville
The Geyserville Bahá’í School session will extend over six weeks again this year — June 20 to August 1. The following courses are being offered:

A. BAHÁ’Í ADMINISTRATION. This class is planned as a workshop. “The Bahá’í Community” will be its text, and its membership will be limited to Bahá’ís.

B. BAHÁ’Í WAY OF LIFE. A class also for Bahá’ís only, will deal with the obligations of Bahá’í life and will study such subjects as the development of spiritual qualities, personal conduct, the individual in the Bahá’í community and the individual in the non-Bahá’í community. It is planned for lecture and directed discussion in class time with assigned research work for outside preparation.

C. BAHÁ’Í HISTORY. An open discussion course with outside reading to be assigned. God Passes By will be the main text.

D. RESEARCH IN THE SPIRITUAL TEACHINGS OF THE FAITH. This course, which proved so popular last year, will be re-offered with some variation in material. Its special value is for those who wish to gain a deeper and more practical knowledge of Bahá’u’lláh’s teachings on the spiritual life of man. For the second and third school periods an advanced course of a similar nature will be given. Students who wish to register for it must have previously taken the primary course.

E. FUNDAMENTAL TEACHINGS OF THE BAHÁ’Í FAITH. A course designed for non-Bahá’ís for the purpose of assisting them to develop a clear understanding of the tenets of the Faith.

F. ISLAM. A combined lecture and discussion course on the history and influence, spiritual and material, of the Muhammadan Faith.

G. THE PLANNING AND DELIVERY OF BAHÁ’Í TALKS. A workshop course planned to give each student as much practice as possible in speaking before a group. Special emphasis is placed on the specific knowledge needed by Bahá’í chairmen and speakers.

H. PROGRESSIVE RELIGION. A new course, planned as lecture and workshop, to study the prophetic religions, their history and basic teachings, covering the relatedness of the various systems and tracing the development of practices and doctrines of today.

I. EFFECTIVE TEACHING METHODS. This workshop will consist of study, discussion and demonstration of individual and group teaching techniques as applied to class, fireside, round table and discussion groups.

Each student will be expected to enroll in at least two courses. There will be as many as can be taken in any two-week period. General assemblies and demonstrations will be held over the two-week ends for the benefit of guests and so the entire student body may profit from the work and study of all the groups.

THE CHILDREN’S PROGRAM. Organized classes for children will be conducted during the four weeks from June 20 to July 18. There will be five groupings, each with its special program, as follows:

Junior Youth — 12 to 15 years
High Intermediate — 10 to 12 years
Low Intermediate — 9 to 10 years
Primary — 6 to 8 years
Pre-school — children under six years.

There will be no separate program for youth. Young people will choose among the courses outlined and will be included in all of the school activities.

In addition to Sunday “open house” programs and demonstrations there will be planned evening recreation, entertainment and cultural activities. The Unity Feast will be held Sunday, July 4, so friends coming for the second session, as well as those about to leave after the first session, will be able to attend.

Rates this year include room and three meals a day. Bedding and linen will be furnished tenants of Bosch Hall. The rates will be, Collins Dormitory, upstairs, adults — $10.50, under 14 — $10.25, downstairs, adults (2 to a room) — $24.50, under 14 — (1 or more on cots, with parents) $8.75, Bosch Hall, men and boys only, adults — $17.50, under 14 — $10.50. Meals for off-campus students, 3 a day, by the week, $14. Transient meals, breakfast, $6, lunch, $6, dinner, $1.20.

The National Assembly has authorized the Geyserville School Committee to charge a registration fee of $1 for each student over the age of three for each period of from four to fourteen days spent at the School. This fee will be used to pay for paper and mimeographing of syllabi for the use of the students and for working material for the children’s program. Any excess will be applied on administrative expense. This registration fee will be in addition to the above rates for board and room.

Make your reservations as soon as possible through Mr. Al Zahl, 326 W. Grant Place, San Mateo, California.

San Francisco, Calif.: An interesting story reached us in regard to a means of approach to the Mayor of this city. Mrs. Else Waldman of New York City was visiting in San Francisco. One of her hobbies is hand-painting neckties. The manager of the hotel where she was stopping mentioned the fact that the Mayor was very interested in hand-painted neckties, and Mrs. Waldman immediately went to see him as a painter of ties. She was most graciously received, and in the course of her business with him found opportunity to tell him something of the Faith. His response was most cordial and she was able to leave with him a few pieces of literature which she "happened to have with her!

Chicago, Ill.: The believers of this city manage to consistently maintain 30 regular weekly Firesides in addition to their regularly scheduled public meetings. They maintain a Reading Room, open to the public every day from noon to 4 p.m. except Sundays, and issue a monthly magazine which is outstanding in its content and spirit. Their public meeting subjects for January are most interesting. The "Baha'i Youth Program" is offering the following: THE GOAL OF THE NEW WORLD ORDER; A WORLD GOVERNOR; THE MEANING OF FREEDOM; THE ESSENCE OF FAITH AND THE DIVINE ART OF LIVING. The "Baha'i Fellowship Group" is presenting CIVILIZATION, MATERIAL AND SPIRITUAL CHANGING IDEAS; RELIGION; THE CRADLE OF CIVILIZATION; THE MEANING OF TRUE PRAYER; and BAHÁ'I PATTERN FOR FUTURE SOCIETY.

Cleveland, Ohio: On Friday Dec. 5, 1947, the Cleveland friends presented a lecture by Mr. William Sears of Philadelphia. The lecture room was well filled and an estimated 70 people heard the talk entitled "The New World Community." On Sunday, Jan. 4, Mrs. Ruth Maffett of Chicago spoke on "The Promised Day is Come" to an audience of about 60.

Other public meetings already planned will be reported later. The Cleveland Bahá'ís, however, are gratified with the continuing success of their regular Sunday morning public meetings which they have been sponsoring for about 18 months. The response of the public has been especially satisfying because in addition to the regular paid advertisement announcing the subject each week, the quotations from the writings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá included have served to attract many inquirers. At least three papers always run a comment on the subject which serves to tie up the particular lecture topic with the basic teachings of the Faith.

First Convention Cable
I am moved to share with assembled delegates of the fortieth American Baha’i Convention the following facts and figures testifying to the present status of the World Faith of Baha’u’llah and disclosing the marvelous acceleration in the double process of the extension of its range and the consolidation of the institutions of its administrative order in the Eastern and Western Hemispheres in the course of the first four years of the second Baha’i Century.

The number of countries opened to the Faith total ninety-one. Baha’i literature is translated and printed in fifty-one languages. Representatives of thirty-one races are enrolled in the Baha’i World Community. Eighty-eight Assemblies, national and local, are incorporated. The number of localities where Baha’is have established residence has been raised to over thirty in Australasia, to over forty in Germany and Austria, over sixty in the Dominion of Canada, over eighty in the Indian subcontinent and Burma; over one hundred in Latin America, over seven hundred in Persia and to over twelve hundred in the United States of America.

The value of international Baha’i endowments in the Holy Land and the Jordan Valley is estimated at over six hundred thousand pounds. National Baha’i endowments on the

Brilliant Achievements
Transcending Fondest Hopes
(Second Convention Cable)

Joyfully acclaim brilliant achievements transcending fondest hopes and setting the seal of complete victory on the stupendous labors undertaken by American Baha’i Community in the second year of the second Seven Year Plan. The constitution of the National Spiritual Assembly of Canada, the heroic feat of raising almost two hundred the number of Spiritual Assemblies in the North American continent, the marvelous expansion of the daughter communities in Latin America, the successful conclusion of the preliminary phase of the interior ornamentation of the Mashriqu’-Adhkar, and the crowning exploit of the formation of no less than seven Assemblies in the newly opened transcontinental field, endow with everlasting fame the second epoch of the Formative Age, immeasurably enrich the annals of the opening decade of the second Baha’i Century, and constitute a landmark in the unfoldment of the second stage of the execution of ‘Abdu’l-Baha’s Plan. The primacy of the American Baha’i community is reasserted, fully vindicated and completely safeguarded. Recent successive victories proclaim the undiminished strength and exemplary valor of the rank and file of the community whether administrators, teachers or pioneers in three continents regarded as the latest links in the chain of uninterrupted achievements performed by its members in the council and teaching field for over a quarter of a century. I recall on this joyous occasion with pride, emotion, thankfulness, the resplendent record of stewardship of this dearly-loved, richly-endowed unflinchingly resolute community whose administrators have assumed the preponderating share in perfecting the machinery of the administrative order, whose elected representatives have raised the edifice and completed the exterior ornamentation of the Mother Temple of the West, whose trail-blazers opened an overwhelming majority of the ninety-one countries now included within the pale of the Faith, whose pioneers established flourishing communities in twenty republics of Latin America, whose benefactors extended in ample measure assistance in various ways to their sorely pressed brethren in distant fields, whose members scattered themselves to thirteen hundred centers in every state of the American Union, every Province of the Dominion of Canada, whose firmest champion succeeded in winning Royalty’s allegiance to the Message of Baha’u’llah, whose heroes and martyrs laid down their lives in its service in fields as remote as Honolulu, Buenos Aires, Sidney, Isfahan, whose vanguard pushed its outposts to the antipodes on the farthest verge of the South American continent, to the vicinity of the Arctic Circle, to the northern, southern, and western fringes of the European continent, whose ambassadors are now convening, on the soil of one the newly won territories, its historic first Conference designed to consolidate the newly won prizes, whose spokesmen are securing recognition of the institutions of Baha’u’llah’s rising world order in the United Nations. Appeal to members of the community so privileged, so loved, so valorous, endowed with such potentialities to unite and press forward however afflicting the trials their countrymen may yet experience, however grievous the tribulations the land of their heart’s desire may yet suffer, however oppressive an anxiety the temporary severance of external communications with the World Center of their Faith may engender, however onerous the tasks still to be accomplished until every single obligation under the present Plan is honorably fulfilled, enabling them to launch in its appointed time the third crusade destined to bring glorious confirmation to the first epoch in the evolution of their divinely appointed World Mission, fulfill the prophecy uttered by Daniel over twenty centuries ago, contribute the major share of the world triumph of the Faith of Baha’u’llah envisaged by the Center of His Covenant, and hasten the opening of the Golden Age of the Baha’i Dispensation.

Around the Baha’i World

IRAN. Within a two-month period last year, more than 731 relief packages were sent to Germany and other European countries. More than 50 families from Tehran have settled in goal communities . . . . A works of art exhibition was recently arranged by the Baha’i youth at the National Baha’i Center . . . Among recent Baha’i visitors to Iran was Khanum Zaki el Kurdi of Egypt, “ . . . one of the outstanding Baha’i women of the East.”

ETHIOPIA. A spiritual assembly has been re-established here in Addis Ababa.

AUSTRIA. Baha’i youth of Vienna held a symposium on January 25.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA. The magazine New Orient has published a long article on the Faith.

POLAND. A regular Baha’i study group has been started in Warsaw.

GERMANY. The friends have been able to secure a building in Frankfurt, which, upon restoration, will serve as a National Headquarters.

In October a teaching conference was held with representatives from all the communities of western Germany and Berlin . . . . In November a meeting at the University of Heidelberg had an attendance of 150 . . . . In Stuttgart, the Birthday of Baha’u’llah was celebrated in the Kammer theater with about 500 present . . . . In several cities the Faith has attracted sufficient attention to be the subject of sermons by the orthodox clergy . . . . All the centers report steady and increasing activity, despite the many difficulties that hampers the Germany community.

INDIA, PAKISTAN, AND BURMA.
The believers in this vast subcontinental face many difficulties in the transition being experienced in the political life of the country. The National Haziratu’l-Quds has been requisitioned by the government . . . . The conditions of riot and turmoil have caused the death of several believers, and others are missing. Three assemblies have had to be dissolved. Several stocks of Baha’i books were also lost . . . . The spirit of the Indian believers has not been impaired. They continue without censure in their teaching Plan, “Time, energy, riches, life itself, if need be—all the wealth that Baha’u’llah has blessed us with are His and are freely given in His service.”

Rejoicing in Europe

Naw-Ruz this year brought special rejoicing in the European Baha’i Centers and was the occasion for a number of new dedications of faith, bringing the total number of declared believers now in the ten goal countries, to 75, with some in every one of the goal cities. The letters telling of the various Naw-Ruz Feasts being celebrated for the first time in these capitol cities are most inspiring and touching. In Oslo for instance, ten Baha’is and fifteen guests were present and a lovely buffet supper preceded the spiritual program and a very wonderful spirit of fellowship and unity marked the whole occasion.

From the Stockholm friends has come a copy of their first letter from the Guardian, a paragraph of which the Committee wishes to share with all the friends:

“Now you are witnessing the first stirrings of our Baha’i Cause in your country. The shoot is small and tender but it will grow to become a mighty tree and cast its blessed shade over Sweden. To the degree to which you unhesitatingly and lovingly watch over it, will it grow and thrive. The very breath of life for this Faith is the love and unity which prevails amongst its followers; and for the protection of the Cause each one must be willing to sacrifice personal feelings and opinions to the good of the community.”

The Committee is deeply grateful to report the following results from the April 21 elections:

8 SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLIES ELECTED!

This veritable miracle has been accomplished under the inspiring and wise leadership of the Guardian and through the selfless sacrificial efforts of our valiant pioneers.

World Youth Day

A recent issue of the Baha’i Youth Bulletin carries interesting reports of observances of Baha’i World Youth Day from the following places: Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Oliveret, Boise, Kenosha, Urbana, Miami, Kansas City, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Syracuse, and Baghdad.
First Convention Cable—Cont’d.

North American continent are valued at over two million dollars. The area of land dedicated to the Mashriqu’l-Adhkär in Persia is approximately four million square meters. The value of the national Haziratu’l-Quds in the capitals of India and Persia respectively is six hundred thousand rupees and fifty thousand pounds. The area of land dedicated to the first Mashriqu’l-Adhkär in South America is ninety thousand square meters. The number of pieces of Baha’i literature sold and distributed in the course of one year in North America is over eighty thousand pieces. The record of the number of visitors to the Mashriqu’l-Adhkär in America in one year is over seventeen thousand and the total number of visitors since its erection is over one quarter of a million. The number of States in the American Union formally recognizing Baha’i marriage certificates is now eight. The number of National Assemblies functioning in the Baha’i world is raised to nine through the formation of the first Canadian National Assembly, to be shortly reinforced through the constitution of two additional Assemblies in South and Central America and the West Indies.

The second seven-year, the six-year, the four and one-half year, the six-year, the three-year, the five-year and forty-five month plans, respectively launched by the American, British, Indian, Australasian, Iraqui, Canadian, and Persian National Spiritual Assemblies, some culminating at the first Centennial of the birth of Bab’s Martyrdom, are aiming at the establishment of three National Assemblies in Canada, and Latin America, the completion of the interior ornamentation of the Mother Temple of the West, the formation of Spiritual Assemblies in ten sovereign States of the European continent, the constitution of nineteen Assemblies in the British Isles, doubling the number of Assemblies in India, Pakistan and Burma, the reconstitution of the dissolved Assemblies and the establishment of ninety-five new centers in Persia, the conversion of groups in Bahrein, the Hijaz and Afghanistan into Assemblies, the formation of administrative nuclei in the Arabian territories of Yemen, Oman Hasa and Koweit; the formation of thirty-one groups and seven Assemblies in Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania; the multiplication of centers in the provinces of Iraq, including the district of Shattu’l-Arab; the incorporation of the Canadian National Assembly; doubling the number of Assemblies and raising to one hundred the centers in the Dominion of Canada; the constitution of nuclei in Newfoundland and Greenland and the participation of Eskimos and Red Indians in the local institutions of the administrative order.

Plans and specifications have been prepared, and preliminary measures taken, to place contracts for the arcade of the Bab’s Sepulchre. Historic International Baha’i congresses held in South and Central America and an inter-European Teaching Conference projected for Geneva paving the way for future World Baha’i Congress. Recognition extended to the Faith by United Nations as international non-governmental body, enabling appointment of accredited representatives to United Nations conferences, is heralding world recognition for a universal proclamation of the Faith of Bab’s Ullah.

Guardian’s Cable to Canadian Convention

Hearts uplifted in thanksgiving to Bab’s Ullah for the epoch-making event of the coming of age of the dearly beloved Canadian Bahai Community, the formation of the first national Convention in the City of Montreal and the forthcoming election of Canada’s National Assembly constituting the ninth pillar of the institution of the universal House of Justice. I acknowledge with reverent gratitude and deepest joy the marvelous influence of the operation of the initial stage in ‘Abdu’l-Bab’s Divine Plan enabling the northern-most community of the followers of the Faith on the American continent to pass the stage of infancy and attain the status, and to assume the functions, of an independent existence within the World Bahai Community. I recall on this auspicious occasion with profound emotion the heroic services to the mother community of May Maxwell whose life and death forged unbreakable links binding the body of the Canadian believers to the sister communities of the United States and Latin America. I am moved to appeal to assembled delegates to arise in conjunction with the first Canadian National Assembly, as a token of gratitude for the manifold blessings of Divine Providence, to initiate in the hour of the birth of their national activities a Five Year Plan designed to associate them, formally and systematically and independently, with their sister community of the United States, in the common task of the prosecution of their world-encompassing mission. The fulfillment of this collective task confronting the rapidly maturing community necessitates the incorporation of the Canadian National Assembly, the establishment of national Baha’i endowments, doubling the number of local Assemblies throughout the Dominion and raising to one hundred the total number of localities where Baha’is reside throughout the Provinces, the constitution of a group of Assemblies and the formation of a nucleus of the Faith in the Territory of Greenland, singled out for special mention by the Author of the Divine Plan, and the participation of Eskimos and Red Indians in membership to share administrative privileges in local institutions of the Faith in Canada. I fondly hope and ardently pray that the commemoration of the first Centenary of the Birth of Bab’s Ullah’s prophetic mission will witness the triumphant consummation of the first historic plan launched by the Canadian Bahai community in a land whose future greatness and glory, both materially and spiritually, the Center of Bab’s Ullah’s Covenant twice emphatically proclaimed in His immortal Tablets.

Our Sources of Guidance and Inspiration

The Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh provides His followers with two sources of guidance and inspiration: one, in the unparalleled Sacred Literature of the Faith, embracing the whole realm of Divine Revelation from the beginning of the Adamic cycle to this Day of God.

The other, participation in the Holy Feasts and Anniversaries, where the Master assures us He is present in Spirit.

There is no doubt whatever but that the Feasts and Anniversaries have power to guide and inspire the soul of the faithful. This is a Faith for the unification of the peoples of the world, and not for the perfection and exaltation of individual souls to the peaks of solitary grandeur. Therefore the urgency to attend is great, even though no law compels us to do so. Where hunger exists, it is not necessary to have laws compelling us to partake of life-sustaining food.

Let us cherish our attendance at these Bahá'í gatherings, and do all we can to make them radiant and joyous. Non-Bahá'ís may attend Anniversaries but not Nineteen-Day Feasts.

In addition to those gatherings listed in the Bahá'í calendar, the local community can hold an occasional Feast with a special program adapted to non-Bahá'ís. Dinner unions are conducive to fellowship, and fellowship creates interest in the Teachings.

While the Nineteen-Day Feast is particularized for the local community, since it includes consultation and discussion of current Bahá'í activities and local plans, there is no reason why adjoining groups and communities may not for special occasions jointly hold a Bahá'í Annversary and enjoy it together. But the most effective way to stimulate group development is for the group to assume responsibility for observing the Bahá'í calendar, rather than merge itself in the nearest community when Feasts and Anniversaries are held.

Marriage Notices

Because Bahá'í marriages are sometimes reported to Bahá'í News, the N.S.A. has approved the policy that the News may report marriages without stories.

Letters from the Guardian to Individual Bahá'ís

The National Spiritual Assembly has adopted the policy that individual believers who receive letters from the Guardian, and who wish these considered for publication in Bahá'í News, are to submit either the original signed letter or a photocopy. Without this verification of the Guardian's messages the N.S.A. will not consider them.

In general the believers are reminded that all general letters, bulletins, reports, compilations, study material, etc., which are circulated as Bahá'í material, should carry evidence of an authorized and responsible source — the name of the Assembly or Committee which has prepared, or assumed responsibility for, the material. Lacking such signature, the material can only be considered an anonymous communication. The communication should also be dated whenever possible.

—National Spiritual Assembly

From the Guardian

(Excerpt from a letter to Marzieh Gail dated Dec. 15, 1947)

"...Regarding your question: The Devotional part of the 19 Day Feast means the reading of Prayers by Bahá'u'lláh and the Master. If, after this, there is a period of reading the teachings, his (the Guardian's) writings may be included, but this does not form part of the devotional aspect of the meeting.

"Attendance at 19 Day Feasts is not obligatory but very important, and every believer should consider it a duty and privilege to be present on such occasions.

"If the N.S.A. should wish to publish the above in Bahá'í News it may do so. He leaves such matters to the discretion of that body.

"He wishes the Bahá'ís to press for recognition of their right to observe their own Holy Days, and to observe them whenever possible in strict accordance with our teachings."

—National Spiritual Assembly

Misrepresentation of the Faith

A recent book, entitled "Religion in the Twentieth Century", includes a chapter by Ahmad Sohrab called "The Bahá'í Cause". This chapter gives a sketchy account of the Faith, including mention of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Will and Testament and the appointment of Shoghi Effendi as Guardian. The account ends with a discussion of the origin of the New History Society, written so as to give the impression that it is a well-established world-wide movement.

This chapter is a good example of the deceit which marks the attacks on the Faith by Sohrab. A reader would get no idea of the social teachings of the Faith and Bahá'u'lláh's plan of world order, or the significance of Bahá'u'lláh's Covenant and the function of Guardianship, or the extent of the Faith throughout the world. Sohrab ignored basic truths and facts in the effort to exalt himself.

The Guardian has described him as an avowed enemy of the Faith. "Obscure in his origin, ambitious of leadership, untaught by the lessons of such as have erred before him, odious in the hopes he nurses, contemptible in the methods he pursues, shameless in his deliberate distortions of truths he has long ceased to believe in...he...cannot but in the end be subjected, as remorselessly as his infamous predecessors, to the fate which they invariably have suffered." (Messages to America, p. 49)

—National Spiritual Assembly

Needed at Green Acre

The Junior School of Green Acre is greatly in need of all kinds of children's equipment: from dolls, their clothes and furniture and blocks, for the three-year-olds; to a printing press, (there might be a Bahá'í printer who has an old hand press about to be thrown out, that the children could work with,) for the older children; and all kinds of books for all ages. Could the Bahá'ís comb their attics for the fun and occupation of the children at Green Acre?

And wouldn't some Assemblies, even groups, like to give a shower for sports equipment; baseball and other sporting equipment; playthings for the water; any games of all kinds! They would love you dearly for it.
Goals for this Bahá’í Year

1. To achieve a minimum of fifteen believers in every community.

2. Every American Bahá’í to give prayerful consideration to the Master’s teaching challenge which calls upon each member to confirm at least one soul a year.

3. To make up the deficit in the National Budget for 1947-1948, representing the amount not accrued for Temple construction, by adding this amount to whatever budget is adopted for 1948-1949.

4. Steady progress in fulfilment of the tasks listed in “Challenging Requirements.”

5. Deepening the spiritual life of the individual believer by fuller awareness of the basic principle of the Covenant, and its fulfilment in the Guardianship and the institutions of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

Contributions Are Voluntary

“In connection with the institution of the National Fund and the budgetary system set forth in the minutes of the National Spiritual Assembly, I feel urged to remind you of the necessity of ever bearing in mind the cardinal principle that all contributions to the Fund are to be purely and strictly voluntary in character. It should be made clear and evident to everyone that any form of compulsion, however slight and indirect; strikes at the very root principle underly ing the formation of the Fund ever since its inception. While appeals of a general character, care fully worded and moving and dignified in tone are welcome under all circumstances, it should be left entirely to the discretion of every conscientious believer to decide upon the nature, the amount, and purpose of his or her contribution for the propagation of the Cause.”

Quiz on Fireside Teaching

How well do you understand the fireside method of teaching? Here is a true-false test on the subject. Read each statement carefully and opposite each one mark either “true” or “false” according to your opinion as to whether it is a correct or an incorrect statement. After you have checked all the statements turn to page 5 to see how many you have marked accurately.

1. Experience has proved that the informal fireside meeting in the home is the most effective teaching method.
2. A fireside requires a speaker.
3. Local Bahá’ís should be invited to any fireside in the community.
4. One non-Bahá’í is sufficient for a fireside meeting.
5. The best fireside meetings are those with the most people present.
6. Mrs. X. casually invited a neighbor in to listen to a radio discussion on world government and then they exchanged ideas on the subject. Mrs. X. never mentioned the word “Bahá’í” so it was not a fireside meeting.
7. It is not desirable to have more Bahá’ís than non-Bahá’ís at a fireside meeting.
8. Refreshments help to make a successful fireside meeting.
9. Current events should never be discussed at a fireside meeting.
10. A heated argument gives life to a fireside discussion.
11. Magazine articles, radio talks, or home movies that can be related to the Faith are good materials on which to base fireside discussions.
12. As soon as refreshments are served, all serious discussion should be dropped in favor of light conversations.
13. A sense of humor and hearty laughter adds to the most serious discussions.

Pioneer

Sweden, Stockholm, July 29, 1934

When we feel it is the last straw, Bahá’u’lláh blesses some effort which proves glorious beyond anything we could dream. The blowing of the Breaths of the Holy Spirit do not depend upon our poor physical bodies, thank God, but on Bahá’u’lláh’s bounty . . . I came through the gates of this station in Stockholm, so tired, so ill, so almost discouraged, not knowing where I was going to stay, but Bahá’u’lláh helped me and I did get settled and my room is just a little, a very little, like my room at home, and He has helped me to get started . . .

Iceland, 1933

On July seventh, I started to Iceland and spent one month in Reykajavik, the capital. It was so heavenly, so much interest there, and the pure, bracing air, the bounty of Bahá’u’lláh helped me to get stronger.

Finland, 1933

Two months were spent in Helsinfors. There are great opportunities in Finland . . . I hope some Bahá’í teachers can go there and to all Scandinavian countries . . . and also to the Baltic states. Too long they have been neglected. These sons of the north possess the vitality of the magnetic Arctic. They are deliberate, determined, they are pioneers and can become valiant blazers of the trail of the Bahá’í Cause in the West . . .

Lithuania, Kaunas, 1934

Here are people who will study the Teachings. Perhaps the part of a Bahá’í teacher is only to point the way to Truth, to books, to contacts . . . I tell you that the Bahá’í culture of the north may be a rose that blooms later, but when it does bloom it will be fresh, fragrant, exquisite. The flowers of the north possess a freshness all their own!

Czechoslovakia, Nov. 26, 1935

As I travel to these countries, I try to make friends, teach the few who are interested, to try to get them books to study, try to get them into contact with Bahá’ís in other parts of the world, try to get Bahá’ís in other countries interested in them. Also I try to get publicity about the Bahá’í Cause into the newspapers, over the radio, and to the peace workers, the Esperantists, the modern religious organizations; and sometimes I have the bounty to speak of the Teachings to rulers, statesmen, educators and heads of the press.

How do I do it? Every breath, almost, is a prayer to be a “channel” so that Bahá’u’lláh can do His work. The secret is: be ready when your opportunity comes! If I do not read the Holy Writings, if I do not pray much, in two or three days I see the difference, the work is not so good. "Work in the spirit of service is worship" I know, but the spirit must be nourished constantly. Sometimes I fail, but I KNOW the way to interest people in the Bahá’í Teachings is through love and deeds rather than through too much information . . . They themselves will ask fully when they are really attracted. It is very difficult to be a worthy Bahá’í.

Also, dear brothers and sisters, it is possible to teach the Bahá’í Cause even in illness and in hard difficulties. If we do it then, the Bounty of Bahá’u’lláh is very tremendous . . . so in every time of our lives, we can be a help if we keep our hand in God’s hand, and keep looking only to Him.

United States, West Coast, May 1937

(Sentences from a talk on Teaching)

If I have been a Bahá’í teacher, I have had many examples to follow from the West. I got my inspiration to teach from studying the Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh to the Mulas and the Kings and from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Tablets.

It is the countries who accept these Teachings and arise for the great peace ideal which will establish the divine civilization. Rulers statesmen and educators are more and more promulgating the Cause.

If you want to give the Message to anyone, love them, and if you love them they will listen and they will study the Teachings and become confirmed. If we sow the seeds, Bahá’u’lláh will do the rest.

We should make an event of giving the Message. We forget that they are receiving it for the first time and therefore we should make an occasion of it. It has been said that we live in moments, not in years. When we meet in San Francisco tonight this is one of the great moments of life. I used to pray that I could give the Teachings to one person each day, and afterwards I prayed that I might give them to millions.

If you cannot go on a teaching mission, make a compilation and prepare things for others. The Teachings on immortal life are very interesting to people. It is well to be prepared to fill in for any emergency.

Try to meet as many groups as you can as the time will come when people will come into the Cause in groups. A thousand teachers will go up and down Europe according to the statement of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to Mrs. Gregory. There is no place for the training of teachers like our country.

Japan, Tokyo, 1937

For years I had wished to meet Dr. Tocchiko Kagawa, one of the bright spiritual lights in Easter Asia, a Christian. I did have the bounty to meet him. He said he had heard of the Bahá’í Teachings when he was a student but had no books. I gave him Gleanings, Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era and others. He said what he knew of the Bahá’í Faith he liked. Read his book “Christ and Japan,” and it will help you to understand the SOUL of Japan, this country that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá said would “turn ablaze.” I wish every one of you who read my letter would promise his or her own heart that he will do something, ONE deed at least, to help get these Bahá’í Teachings to Japan! You can send a “torch” to Japan...letters (“‘Abdu’l-Bahá said that letters are half a meeting), books, prayers, even if you cannot go in person.

Kobe.

After three days in Tokyo I came here to Kobe. Here I met Dr. D. Inouye, the Buddhist priest who is a devoted Bahá’í and who translated Bahá’í into Japanese.

As I sailed out from Japan (after sending out from the ship one last article to those Japanese papers) I thought of the great Buddha in Japan, and said to a thousand hands, and I prayed Bahá’u’lláh to join your thousands with mine to help Agnes Alexander and the Japanese Bahá’ís in establishing the New World Order in Japan. Shoghi Effendi has sent them such brave and tender instructions. Every country knows our Guardian never lets them go, he is helping every country...Trues, deepest love to you, each one, and happiness in all your work. Our happiest moments are when we can bring to others these Bahá’í Teachings which have given us the best we know. Just to have the strength, the opportunity to do anything at all is the greatest blessing. “Appreciate the value of the time for these great days are swiftly passing.”

India, Poona, Feb., 1938

Poona is a Bahá’í paradise and one of the high spiritual lights in India. The first morning, Feb. 5, we had a beautiful program of welcome in the Bahá’í Hall in the National Hotel. The pupils from the Bahá’í school marched to the Hall...The entire stay was so WELL arranged that even New York and Táhirih would say “Bravo!”

I think this plan could with profit be carried out in other cities: At seven P.M. that first day, the President of the Local Spiritual Assembly gave a tea in the Bahá’í Hall for the twenty-four journalists of India. I had prepared my speech, (the resume) to journalists very carefully and made carbon copies. I spoke on Journalism and the Cause and then read to them my interview and distributed it to them. Questions were asked and answered, and some of the journalists came each day afterwards and were very interested. (If it had been a big reception we could not have spoken intimately of journalism and the Cause and what Bahá’í said about the press.)

The SECRET of the very wonderful Bahá’í work in Poona is mobilized UNITY for service! The Holy Spirit is with them, attracted by their unity. The Bahá’í world over the five continents has been gripped at times by Poona’s work. In traveling over India three times as I have, I have met a number of fine people who said that they first heard of the teachings when staying for a few days in the National Hotel of Poona. I must give the tribute to Poona because since 1915, when I first met them, I feel they are “living the life” up there. To be continued

The assembly is shown seated in front and some of the community members standing behind them. Rio is the center of publishing in Portuguese. Members of the assembly include Mrs. Leonora Halapple Armstrong, first of the pioneers to Brazil, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Bode, who have done noble service in helping to build the community. The three are shown seated in the center, Edward in the middle, Leonora right and Mary Bode left.

New Day Dawns in Latin Work

A new day is dawning in the Latin American work. This year the native National Teaching Committees of the two great areas are taking over the task of planning and directing all of the teaching projects; planning in such a way as to make the native contributions to the fund and the diminishing funds being contributed by the National Spiritual Assembly, go as far as possible toward providing improved literature, the necessary teachers for the hundreds of cities which should be reached, the new radio recordings for the many radio stations ready and willing to contribute their part toward building a new world order, the perfecting of existing summer schools and the addition of new ones, arrangements and programs for the important annual congresses, fore-runners of the conventions, when the independent National Spiritual Assemblies will be elected; arrangements for public meetings at key points, regional projects and publicity work of all types.

Santiago, Chile, will continue to be the seat of the executive committee of the South American Teaching Committee, while Mexico City will become the center of the National Teaching Committee for the 12 Caribbean countries. Each executive committee will have one corresponding member carefully chosen in each of the countries of the area served. During the past year, while these committees and their regional arms in each country have been becoming trained and ready to operate fully, the Inter-America Committee has been gradually retiring itself from the post of directing all Latin activities, and choosing the place of a cooperating agency, so that the native genius of the southern countries may have full sway, as they learn to use their capacity in a Bahá'í way.

A new race of teachers is arising: devoted men and women, most of them young; women who dare to go alone from city to city in spite of the age old tradition requiring heavy chaperonage of every woman, binding her to her parents' home and then to her husband's house until she passes from this world. One of the great women of this new age is Sra. Natalia Chávez of Tegucigalpa, Honduras. Julie Regal of Panama City joined her recently in Mexico to carry on another step the task of reinspiring and deepening communities and teaching new cities there, while Natalia went on to help Guatemala.

Julie wrote of her: "Natalia Chávez has done a wonderful work here in Puebla, Coatepec and Jalapa, reviving the community in Puebla, which for lack of a pioneer had ceased all activity, animating the believers, attracting friends, explaining clearly, tactfully and appealingly the Bahá'í Teachings (and also everywhere, diplomatically but effectively, stressing that the Bahá'í Cause is not rich, but advances on the sacrifice of its supporters.) She stimulates the friends everywhere to do their part in contributing to the fund, and not to expect the U. S. believers to do everything, while they themselves merely accept the help. She works indefatigably, sacrificing her comfort. She demonstrates her zeal in actions, not just in words. All the friends greatly love her and hold her in high esteem."

Another unusual Latin woman, who has recently set out as a pioneer, is the well-known Chilean sculptress and artist, Sra. Lucha G. de Padilla, wife of the former consul general of Chile to the United States. Highly educated, delicately bred, deeply devoted to the Faith, this lady of high Chilean society has dared to break with ancient restrictions and has undertaken a mission in Costa Rica.

Success is crowning the efforts of another new native pioneer, Oscar Castro, who graduated recently from the University of Costa Rica and set out to serve his Lord in Santa Ana, goal city of El Salvador. After various sufferings, violent tests and fervent prayers, he found a brilliant and fine young man, Jose Cordoba, who became confirmed, and set forth enthusiastically to help. Together they interested the noted professor and intellectual, Dr. Alfredo Betancourt, and Oscar found himself called upon to address a public meeting at the university, attended by professors, students, intellectuals and a variety of representative people of the city. He described "The New World Order of Bahá’u’lláh and this was so enthusiastically received that a study class developed out of it, and he has been invited to address the normal school
A View of Pioneering

By Dorothy K. Baker

Pioneering is ecstasy and tears: bad food, cold rooms, dark pensions, and periods of fruitless waiting; yearning souls, sudden illumination, an outreaching public and new conviction of the "power that is far beyond the ken of men and of angels." Europe is frustrated and often skeptical, living in fear and believing in nothing. But Europe is groping too, and in search of a soul, and the part of her that finds it will go to almost any length to keep it. The new believers are the eyes of Europe; they alone can look ahead. To them the Cause is the difference between everything and nothing. Even and other schools of the city. When he was to be transferred to a city in another country, Dr. Betancourt went to the regional chairman to describe the important work that Oscar is doing and to ask that he be allowed to remain long enough to complete it.

Sometimes we do not realize how far our voices may reach, if we remember always to speak of the Cause lovingly and devotedly. This is demonstrated in one of the many Latin American high lights which have just reached us. Six years ago in Venezuela Gwenne Sholtis spoke to a Hungarian gentleman in the consulate about the Faith. Out of this a contact has come in another corner of the world, in the form of a very touching letter from a young Hungarian medical student in Budapest. He describes how he went through the long agony of European war, first as a child, when his parents were killed, then as a youth in a labor camp. His first contact with the Faith was when all in the camp were slowly dying of starvation after seven days without any food, following upon prolonged starvation diet. An attorney, known as a Bahá'í, who was gentle and not brutalized like the rest, gave the youth half a carrot that he had saved, the only bit of food that he had. His second contact was when he recently met the Hungarian to whom Gwenne had spoken in Venezuela. He hastened to write to Gwenne, hungry to find a new faith, something in which he can believe. He wrote Gwenne that he plans to serve Bahá'u'lláh through his profession when he receives his degree as a doctor two years from now.
Boeck, except for one large downtown meeting, the stage center for peace leaders and the many friends and contacts of the Baha'is. On the last evening the little parlor overflowed into the hall. A tender note was struck by a Dominican priest, recently disrobed for the sake of his conscience. He sat in the farthest row back. A pioneer who had given him a book some months before, recognized him and spoke to him. "What do you think now?" she asked. He lowered his head for a moment and then replied with unaffected simplicity: "I have found the truth." A hero had found Baha'u'llah.

The little duchy of Luxembourg, fine in type, rich in worldly things, perceptive in spirit, waits upon a friendlier time to express itself publicly. It believes in peace, and a group of Federalists made a vital impression upon the public with five headlined newspaper accounts of its meeting, although no direct mention was made of the Faith. The pioneers here are masters of courage and discretion rightly blended, and work entirely through individual contact and firesides.

Switzerland has the thrilling advantage of three working centers with two possible assemblies soon. This land, summer host to a world Guardian, and couched in peace for many generations, offers a background of free thought and sturdy living. Geneva with its bureau and Persian student life; Zurich in its effort to form, in however small a way, following upon one of the largest public meetings sponsored in all Europe, a systematic class for new study; and Bern with its highly successful series of sponsored meetings, and truly impressive response in actual students, all give glorious promise.

A day in Rome was long to be remembered, with a beautifully appointed tea for 95 rare and high-minded friends, and a dinner for the pioneers and new believers of Rome, Naples and Florence. The most outstanding power to attract the highly intellectual was evidenced in Italy! And here especially the exquisite effect of the very recent visit of Marion Little was gratefully remembered.

I cannot refrain, in closing, from mention of France, and a brief but glorious visit to Britain. Through the courtesy of the Paris assembly a delightful meeting was held with the friends of that city, and two frater­ nal days in Lyon were arranged, in company with Marion Little and a brilliant youth of Luxembourg. Here the high­ spirited work of Lucienne Migette has done much to make an assembly probable, and the mother assembly in Paris plans visits of instruction and deepening. In Dublin, Edinburgh, Leeds, Manchester and London, and throughout the two extraordinary days of the Bi­ rmingham, A1-Britain Conference, January 17-18, a wonderful acceleration was manifest on the part of our British brothers.

The Home Front

RIVERSIDE, ILLINOIS. The Baha'is living in Cicero, Berwyn, Riverside, Hollywood, Brookfield, Lagrange, and Western Springs conducted a teaching campaign centering in Riverside. Three public lectures on Feb. 5, 12, and 19, covering the subject "Baha'i Faith and its Teachings concerning Universal Peace and World Order" were given by Mr. Leroy Ios, in the Riverside Public Library. The public was notified by 700 mailed invitations, newspaper write-ups, paid advertisements, and placards in all the towns. Response to the talks was excellent so discussion meetings were continued in the same building through March. Also, social gatherings of attraction were held afterward to continue the interest of the contacts, with special attention in some, for the young people.

COLUMBIA, S.C. Radio, films, and personal interview marked the points of a weekend trip to Columbia, by Mrs. Margaret Kunz Ruhe of Atlanta. The radio broadcast over WKIX on Friday, March 12, at 7 p.m. made use of the Interview prepared by the National Radio Committee and came off well. Mrs. Annie Romer had arranged a Film Forum to be held at the Chamber of Commerce at 7:30 p.m. The stirring film, "One World or None" was followed by Margaret's talk, "A United World." Question period afterward was lively and the spirit fine.

On Saturday morning, Margaret and Mrs. Romer had a visit with Dr. Ward of the University of South Carolina, in which they were able to make references to the Faith. Margaret reports that Mrs. Romer's contact technique has opened many doors in Columbia. That evening, at the home of a seeker, Mrs. McKim, there was a warm response to the talk entitled "Renewal of Religion." Quoting the report, "I am beginning to understand a little more about the why and wherefore of the Guardian's plan. By going out and doing even a little, one's inner resources are enhanced and developed. The Baha'is themselves will be transformed inwardly as they meet the challenge before them. A new race of men is being created in us, the Baha'is of this day. How wise and knowing is our Guardian . . . ."

NILES, AND ROSEVILLE, MICH. 'Abdu'l-Baha's ceaseless service and encouragement of all humanitarian and cultural activity is our constant reminder that this is the key to our teaching effort — "An ounce of deeds is worth a ton of words." Niles is demonstrating this. Their newly established school for children collected food for the Friendship Train and stepped in with practical help when a baby arrived in one of their homes. Roseville's oldest member, Mrs. Katherine Page, has become an outstanding influence in her community which calls upon her for speakers, guidance in literature, and admires her as an artist. This has been invaluable in combating prejudice against the Faith.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. On Thursday, March 19, three Bahá'ís answered the invitation of the Lincoln Society of Brown University to attend their Coffee Hour and speak of the Bahá'í Faith. They found there a lively interest in every aspect of the Teachings, as about forty students took part in the discussion. With the close of the meeting they were extended an invitation to come again.

PERRYSBURG, N.Y. The Young Adult Fellowship group of the Methodist Church in Cattaraugus, numbering thirty-six, met on Naw-Rúz day to hear a presentation of the Bahá'í Faith by Dr. James M. Shaney of Perrysburg. The meeting was advertised locally in the newspaper and by a novel use of poetry on postal cards. A favorable follow-up article appeared later in the newspaper. Question and answer period was the most interesting to the group, and the minister accepted a copy of the "New Era" to read. In addition to this meeting, Dr. Shaney has been giving fireside chats in neighboring Gowanda, N.Y.

HONOLULU, T.H. (The following illustrates the power of united prayer.) In Honolulu a few Bahá'ís joined at the time of the daily noon prayer to repeat prayers for the removal of difficulties surrounding a Bahá'í friend. After the noon prayer, the "Remover of Difficulties" was repeated, then 'Abdu'l-Baha's prayer which begins, "Oh my God, unite the hearts of Thy servants . . . .," followed by the Tablet of Ahmad.

On the ninth day at the hour of noon, the friend who was in difficulty received a telephone call from the causer of the circumstances, promising a solution.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA. Always of interest is the forward stride in the life of a community and of the Faith, when incorporation is attained. This time it is Anchorage which this February completed and filed its Articles of Incorporation and approved the By-Laws. Publicity for the Faith was gained when the Anchorage Daily Times ran it as a front page article.

A unique aspect of their Intercalary Party was that in place of exchanging gifts, a special contribution of $217.64 was made to the National Fund.

Another novel feature in the teaching work of this community is the Sunday morning waffle breakfast firesides by Betty Becker.

CARRIZO SPRINGS, TEXAS. We congratulate Mrs. Alvin Rouse of Carrizo Springs for getting two splendid Bahá’í articles into rural journals. The title, “Heralds of Unity” in Farm Talk magazine and in February, Texas Curricular. Mrs. Rouse took the occasion of Lincoln’s birthday and the theme and tied the freeing of the slaves in this country with the same period in which Bahá’u’lláh, on the other side of the globe was releasing a new world program.

CONVENTION — 1948
The Divine Plan Unfolds

Convention Report—1948
by Annieomer

"America will lead all nations spiritually," said 'Abdu'l-Bahá, when in this country America was not a world leader then; she has had world leadership thrust upon her in these recent tumultuous times. Although materialistic, and a young country, she is in the first place in the non-Bahá'í world. In His Message to the Fortieth Convention the Guardian says: "The primacy of the American Bahá'ís is reasserted, fully vindicated and completely safeguarded." The American Bahá'í Community is in the first place. To lead the world today is a task almost blinding in its impact on political leaders who will establish the Lesser Peace; it is stunning in its implications to the Bahá'ís who will, through the power of Bahá'u'lláh, the love and inspiration of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the leadership of the Guardian create the Most Great Peace and a world civilization.

On the morning of April 29, 1948 the sun shone brightly, and the new green of the trees symbolized the New World in the making. At 9:30 the Bahá'ís, and this year only Bahá'ís, came from the four corners of the land, and a few from other countries, to consult together, hear reports of work done and carry away the inspiration always found in the Temple at Wilmette.

Great masses of red roses greeted the friends, bringing the scene in Baghdad close and the Message of the Ridván. The idea of the Proclamation of Bahá'u'lláh to the world ran through the Convention like a golden thread.

The Chairman, Mrs. Dorothy Baker, opened the Convention at 9:30 by asking—"What is the magic of this time?" In answering this she said that some of it was in the number 40. She referred to Moses and the 40 years in the wilderness, the 40 days Christ spent in prayer on the mountain-top and Muhammad's 40 days of preparation. The Báb, she stated, received the Letters of the Living for 40 days while the Blessed Beauty suffered for 40 years. In this Fortieth Convention, she continued, "May God assist us to make this the hour of a new birth, for it is the Time. In Europe, on my recent trip, so many asked me: "How long will this obscurity last? Will you hurry?" Mrs. Baker closed by asking: "May we make the keynote of this Convention that we arise to carry the Cause of God out of our own obscurity into the Light of God, for the true aim of the Convention is the conversion of the world."

On a table was a globe of the world; across the globe were the words: THE BAHA'I FAITH. That was the most important thing before the eyes of those present; Gradually the Divine Plan of 'Abdu'l-Bahá appeared beside the globe as reports came in from the Committees. The Guardian's two cables were read. The knowledge that no letters could be sent to Haifa and no cables sent or received after May 15 made them doubly precious. Hearts were sad and souls filled with awe at the thought of the suffering in the world and an almost crushing sense of responsibility. These people knew that they, and they alone, because they were Bahá'ís, had the secret of the new World Order Plan, in its entirety, and the nearness to the source of power.

One of the twinkling remarks interspersed by the Chairman, voiced a thought often found in many minds. She said she could not see why some people coupled inefficiency with spirituality. Some one said quickly: "The Guardian does not." It was notable, from the start, that no inefficiency marked this meeting. The Bahá'ís who are envied by so many believe in far-away places, because they live near the Temple, had worked very hard to oil the machinery. Every detail had been thought of. The Chairman of Arrangements, Mr. Larry Hautz, gave each one a beautiful souvenir hand-book containing a picture of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and full directions. Mr. Hautz's frequent explanations never failed to bring a response, for he had added the sense of humor to the idea of law and order.

The Fortieth Convention was historic. Some highlights were:

The triumph of surpassing the goal set by the Guardian of having 175 Assemblies in the United States and Canada. The National Teaching Committee, which had been the main base, in connection with the National Spiritual Assembly, from which information and inspiration flowed, announced that the number was 184.

The Chairman, Dr. Katharine True, reported that it was literally a 'breathless' victory. Dr. True showed clearly that the inspiration brought to the friends by the three cables received from the Guardian proved the power which aided the workers to make the result possible. These cables came at a dark hour when victory seemed remote. "Had every believer responded earlier, and to his fullest extent," the Chairman said, "the last minute crisis might not have been so acute." She stressed, as did the entire Convention, 'How can we do better in the future, for the TIME IS VERY SHORT.' Dr. True said that much was done by traffic control at the last moment, routing believers from one place to another, and while heartfelt appreciation is due the settlers who made this historic victory possible, the slogan taken away for the coming year should be NEW BELIEVERS.

A second goal, toward which all eyes had been turned with hope, was described by Mr. John Robarts, who was introduced by the new name of

Convention Message to Guardian

At this fortieth convention of the Bahá'ís of United States, assembled delegates and visitors unitedly express our grateful thanks, your loving approval our efforts. Appreciation of your guiding hand in discharging effectively our divinely appointed task, can never be adequately expressed.

We approach our ask in this third year of Second Seven Year Plan with great humility and pledge anew intensive effort to rise above all conditions and endeavor to fulfill goal set for American Believers. Our hearts grieved over any external severance, however temporary, from world center, yet very conscious of strong spiritual ties with Beloved Guardian.

Our hearts are turned toward you offering humble prayers. Supplicate your prayers for courage, strength to serve Beloved Faith.

Baha'i Convention Answer:

Cablegram received May 2, 1948

Deeply touched by your message welcome pledged by assembled delegates ardently praying fulfillment deepest hopes.

(Signed) Shoghi
Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Canada." With enthusiasm and assurance Mr. Robarts said: "We have accepted the challenge of our 5-year Plan sent by the Guardian, we are going at it NOW and we KNOW it can be done." He spoke of the good judgment of the Guardian in marrying a Canadian and of the inspiring letter received from Ruhiyyih Khanum, in whose childhood home the Convention was held. Canada, Mr. Robarts reminded those present, was the ninth pillar in the forthcoming International House of Justice. The Canadian representative expressed the thanks of his people for all the help received from the United States, through teachers and settlers, and hoped that many would continue to visit them. The very practical help in funds was also feelingly acknowledged. Mr. George Latimer added a sparkling account of the joyful first Canadian Convention, quoting from his letter from the Guardian's wife, describing the dinner tendered all present by Mr. Maxwell and Ruhiyyih Khanum; also citing the fact that in the public meeting held in the auditorium of a High School, the speakers, Miss Elsie Austin and Mr. Ross Woodman held the audience for two hours. It seemed that the enthusiasm of the Convention flowed into the public meeting as it did in the one held during the Convention at Wilmette. Mr. Latimer's closing remark caused those present to think—and seriously. He said that while the meeting, compared with that in the United States was small, only 112 being present, 13 of whom were delegates, he felt about as great a potential there as in the large meeting in Wilmette.

The dramatic story of the newest chapter in expansion was told by Miss Edna True, Chairman of the European Committee. The figures given of 80 newly declared believers and 6 spiritual assemblies in 7 of the goal countries were one shining highlight of the meeting. Miss True spoke of the 35 valiant pioneers, of the several traveling teachers and the two itinerant pioneers. The amazing things which happened, Miss True said, demonstrated vividly the power in the Divine Plan. Doors opened publicity was obtained and the field seemed ready. It had been prepared through suffering. This condition was stressed by Mrs. Little, who spent several months in Europe. In her brief account of her visit she mentioned the number of people of capacity who had become interested, the glory a Bahá'í felt in giving these sad people the assurance of new life and said that the Italian New Era was sent to 400 libraries in Italy with a good letter. Nearly all, Mrs. Little stated, replied and only three adversely.

A point brought out dramatically by Mrs. Philip Sprague, of the European Committee, was the glowing dedication and joy found in some of the letters from the new believers in Europe. She showed four, one from Rome, Florence, Luxembourg, and Stockholm. Besides emphasizing the fact that all such new believers add immensely to the reservoir of spiritual power in the Cause, with their fresh new light, they bring the countries and people of other lands very close.

A brilliant light was the description given by Mr. Leroy Ioas of the plans for the first European Conference to be held in Switzerland from May 22 to 26. Mr. Ioas gave a graphic picture of the meetings to be held in Geneva, with a trip to Berne, with emphasis on the commemoration of the Declaration of the Báb. He reported that about 80 Bahá'ís would be present, including all of the pioneers, some of the new believers, and friends from non-goal countries, such as Germany, France and England. His announcement that the beloved pioneer, Marion Jack, would be the guest of honor, delighted all present. The cable regarding her came vividly to all minds. It stated: "Great station of Marion Jack example for pioneers in America and Europe." An incident which illustrates this worker's courage and tenacity was that when Miss Jack, who for many years taught the Faith in Bulgaria, was threatened by the dangers of war, the Guardian gave her three choices: They were: to return to America, to go to Haifa, or to remain at her post. She remained at her post.

The reports of this historic Convention will be awaited with great eagerness, for Mr. Ioas filled all hearts with a bit of envy that they could not be present.

A little story told by one of the delegates points up the swiftness or slowness of the work in the Faith. It was of watching a pigeon walk slowly up the long steps of the Cathedral on Fifth Avenue, in New York. "When," as the speaker said,"He could so easily have flown." It seemed to those present, as the reports were given of goals reached that some of the workers were learning to fly.

As always, the report of the Inter-America Committee was most colorful and specific. The fine record of new believers and gain in membership will be found in other places in the News Letters and reports. But some very striking evidences of development were shown. Several members of the Committee spoke on different phases of the work, showing the extent to which consolidation and organization has gone forward. The two Conventions, one in Mexico City and the other in Santiago were described so vividly that all sensed the rapid way in which the Latin Americans are taking over responsibility. The definite statement was made that the original pioneers no longer dominate the scene, and that many signs of maturity are evident. In many ways the cooperation of the public was stressed. The dramatic story told by Mrs. Matthews illustrated the contrast between the North and the South. No one will forget her account of how one Latin friend received the Message. She spoke of the mass production idea in the North and the individualism in the South, also of the cultured minds and the fire found in so many people. The account of the interest and cooperation found in the Masonic Lodges was inspiring, as was the success of the Correspondence Courses. The first Indian Assembly in South America was described. Miss Cheney closed a thrilling report with a beautiful movie which not only brought Latin America into the room but raised the hope that there may soon be more picture stories in the Faith.
And so four highlights flashed forth: 194 assemblies in North America, Goals reached in Europe and the first European Conference, Organization and Consolidation advancing rapidly in Latin America, and the Ninth Pillar of the future International House of Justice, the Canadian National Assembly formed. The Faith of Baha'u'llah was marching forward out of obscurity—and very rapidly.

Mr. Holley told a story which will remain long in the minds of those present. He said that while in a very interesting section of the country, the Smokies, a government scientist told a group of people that during the ice age these mountains were raised above the level of the ice and they preserved the grasses, herbs, shrubs and trees, which later, with the recession of the ice, were spread across the continent. They were the seed bed. Mr. Holley said that in this spiritual ice age when people are inert and unable to live in a spiritual realm the Bahá'í Community is the seed bed of the new Continent of Mankind. The Convention showed the sprouting, growing and maturing.

What was the real core of everything at the Convention — all discussions? It was teaching. From the Library, Literature, Publicity, Public Relations, World Order Magazine and Radio Committees came reports of ways to reach people through words; the appeal through the eyes was described graphically by Dr. Ruhe and shown by Mrs. Longyear through the movie — "The Goal is World Order." Others told of the work with children, with youth and the blind. Several very attractive exhibits were shown, notably those of Public Relations, Visual Aids, Work for the Blind and the detailed plan shown by Mr. Niss for keeping better records in the Bahá'í communities. This spelled the word efficiency. In everything there was a spirit of maturity, courtesy and earnestness which augured well for the future. Perhaps because the words of the Guardian and the spirit of 'Abdu'l-Bahá vibrated through every session, there was a sense of unity. To some it seemed that there was much less talk of unity and much more of it than ever before.

One historic landmark was the brief report given by Mrs. Collins of the formation of the first Indian Assembly in the United States. She quoted the words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá on the great importance of this task; also read a letter from the Guardian expressing his great joy at this achievement. Very interesting was the statement Mrs. Collins said the Guardian made to her that if any believer undertook to teach a minority group they were first to convince themselves that they could walk all the way with the one they were teaching. He also said that it had not been done in the past. Minimizing her own share in the work with these Indian Bahá'ís, Mrs. Collins closed with the words: "Our beloved Mary Stevenson who has brought about this victory is going all the way."

The interesting experiment of the workshop technique proved most challenging and the Convention moved to request the NSA to have all of the summaries given in the Convention, including the fine ones presented by the Convention Chairman, sent to every Bahá'í. Of course the Guardian's cables, and all other information will be made available to every believer.

The room was filled with the large number present at every meeting. A major thrill, as always, was in seeing old friends; perhaps a greater one was in meeting so many new ones. Perhaps greatest when one met a Bahá'í worker to whom the Message had been given several years ago with, to all intents and purposes, poor results. This happened over and over again. So seeds are to be planted, and in God's time many sprout.

And of the Temple, what shall be said? Much information will be sent to the friends during the coming month. The interior decorations, which was pictured vividly during the Thursday evening session, has been shown to the world through the fine work of the Public Relations Committee. The Treasurer, who really made giving attractive, pierced every heart when he said: "We may look back in five or six years and say: 'Our opportunity to put something in that Temple, which will last eternally in the sight of God, has been lost."

Deep in every soul was the resolve to "Give to the Most Holy Temple and if possible guide in the Most Holy Temple." A lovely movie was shown in the fine report of the Temple Program Committee. The fact that the Temple is a very great teacher was proved by the record of the thousands who come to it — an audience ready to be taught.

The idea of spending one's vacation guiding was voiced. The Summer School Committee had also had the same thought. Surely many will come to the Temple this summer, for where in all the world could more inspiration be found? Mr. Haney, and his fellow-speakers described the great beauty of the completed Temple, when the inside is clothed with color and loveliness. Every dollar spent in bringing this picture to reality will be greatly blessed. And when the goal of completing the Temple is reached a mighty impulse will be felt in the entire world. Such is the promise of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

An Oriental note was struck when Mr. Yamamoto was introduced and Mrs. Franklyn told a little of his story. She spoke of his becoming a Bahá'í many years ago in Honolulu, and of his 12 children, nine of whom she taught in a Bahá'í class in California. The sincere devotion of Mr. Yamamoto and his son inspired every one as did the story told by the beloved teacher, Miss Alexander, who worked so many years in Japan.

During the Convention a note of warning was struck by the Secretary, Mr. Holley, which should not be forgotten in the joy of victory. He spoke of the bitter attack which the friends will be called upon to meet in the future and said the lines are forming now. Since we are aware of this, Mr. Holley said he felt in his heart that we should win the battle in the immediate future. His hope, he declared, was that some knowledge of the Faith could be given to millions years before we can reach out and make the personal contact, so that in the hours of great decision there will be friends of Bahá'u'lláh. There are two tasks in the Plan, he concluded, giving the Faith to the masses, and confirming believers, and they should go forward together, step by step, to ultimate victory.

At the Ridván Feast on Saturday evening the children stole the show. The Forum, given by them and their teacher, Mrs. Gaylord Barnett, together with the lovely singing of Mr. Olitzky and the beautiful string music would have pleased 'Abdu'l-Bahá. It cheered the large number present. The splendid program centered around the Ridván proclamation of Bahá'u'lláh made dramatic by Mrs. Gall, and the New World of Peace described in the Words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Mr. Windust, as Chairman, added much to the happy time. For this wonderful story the dark world waits. In the Bahá’í Temple it was Ridvan and the New Creation had appeared.

The Public Meeting on Sunday night showed to old and new believers alike, the response of the non-Bahá’í world. It was a fine meeting, featuring a talk by Miss Elsie Austin which brought almost all of the very large crowd of people present to the platform to ask questions and greet the speaker. Beautiful music given by a harpist and a pianist added a wonderful touch and created an inspiring atmosphere. A fitting climax to a wonderful convention.

One highlight which stands out sharply was the significant report given by Mrs. Mottahedeh regarding our relation to the United Nations. She described the setup of the U.N. and how similar it is, in some ways, to our National Committees. Other points stressed by her were the number of idealists found among U.N. representatives, the many who know about the Bahá’í Faith and the Guardian, and the spirit of collaboration in this Bahá’í work by Hilda Yen, and a clear statement of our position with regard to this world organization.

The news of the U.N. Conference to be held in Geneva, May 17 to 22, at which the Bahá’ís are sending five people, will be awaited as it is an historic event in our world. It marks the recognition of the Bahá’í Faith in a new way, which will be described more fully in other reports.

Every one resolved to watch eagerly for the news and to follow Mrs. Mottahedeh and her associates, who attend this meeting, with their prayers.

Everyone received a thank you as the historic and lovely Convention closed at 4:30 p.m. Sunday, May 2. The Chairman thanked the friends and the delegates thanked the Chairman and the Secretary. A sincere vote of appreciation was tendered to all who made the meetings so successful including those who helped with housing, meals, registration, badges, ushering, the Ridvan Feast and the Public Meeting. Also to everyone who served, in any way, thanks were given and appreciation felt.

There was a lack of personality seen in the Convention, and it seemed that for the crucial time, the greatness of the task, and the state of the world blotted out all littleness and personal feelings. Much of this, too, was no doubt due to the Devotional periods, when the soul-searching Words of Bahá’u’lláh, the Master and the Guardian, created an atmosphere of spiritual awareness which carried through the entire session. Most notable was this spirit at the election period, bringing home to many the complete departure in this New World from old methods. Prayer, silence, guidance. These three make it possible to know and do the will of God.

As the friends from far and near left the Temple for their homes they sensed the bombs falling on Haifa and the agony of the world. But they had seen a picture of a New World unfolding, and they knew how it was to be created. They felt the terrific speed, they thrilled to the great power surging through the entire Cause; and the words of the suffering people of Europe, voiced by the Chairman, rang in their ears — "Hurry, hurry." And with bowed heads, and hearts turned wholly to Bahá’u’lláh, with the Covenant graven on their souls, and the Guardian’s Messages held tightly in their grasp, they whispered, as one voice, — "We will."

Bahá’í Participation in World Conference of Religion

The National Spiritual Assembly has accepted an invitation issued by the Church Peace Union to send a delegate and an alternate to the "World Conference of Religion for Moral and Spiritual Support of the United Nations" to be held at Town Hall, New York City, June 16, 17 and 18, 1948.

A report will be published in Bahá’í News after the Conference with all the interesting information made available by the believers chosen to represent the Faith.

Concerning Fireside Meetings

The National Assembly, judging by letters and reports received in recent months, feels that there are some misunderstandings about the aim and the conduct of intimate fireside teaching meetings which can be readily cleared away and thus release more potential teaching energy for effective service to the Faith.

What the Assembly has in mind is the need for some simple definition of the nature of the home meeting started by one or more members of a family in order to awaken interest in the teachings among their neighbors and personal friends.

Such a meeting is a direct response to the universal command that every believer teach the Cause. It is also one of the very best methods for bringing new people into the community. As such its value depends almost entirely upon two factors: first, control of the attendance and the program by the host or hostess; and second, continuity and development in the teaching and discussion.

The National Assembly wants this type of intimate gathering safeguarded. Experience from all over the country shows that the intention cannot be carried out if the other Bahá’ís look upon such a fireside as an open "party" or "community teaching meeting" and come and go as they feel inclined, join in the discussion and in general adopt the meeting as their own.

Believers should not attend a home fireside meeting unless they are specifically invited by the host or hostess. More than charity is involved, important though courtesy and respect for this Faith. What is involved are the rights of the non-Bahá’í guests to receive the Message, enter into study and discussion, and when prepared, declare their faith.

The home fireside conducted for a few non-Bahá’í friends and neighbors is not subject to administrative control. The Assembly has no grounds for exerting its authority but on the contrary should uphold the right of every Bahá’í to gather his own friends together in the hope of confirming them. Assembly authority does not apply until there are applications for enrollment, unless the Assembly has fair reason to believe that erroneous and harmful teachings are being given out as "Bahá’í".

—National Spiritual Assembly
Beloved friends:

This Bahá’í year opened with the Guardian’s acclamation of victory in his message to the Convention: “Joyfully acclaim brilliant achievements transcending fondest hopes and setting the seal of complete victory on the stupendous labors undertaken by the American Bahá’í Community in the second year of the second Seven Year Plan.”

What is the meaning of this victory for us? That we have acquired greater capacity to serve the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh — that we are more deeply aware that the Faith itself offers the very essence of power to achieve, and all we do is to open ourselves to its penetration.

When unity of faith is combined with unity of action, the condition needed for extraordinary progress has been attained. To contribute to that condition, the National Spiritual Assembly has planned its policies, its committee functions, its annual budget and definite goals in order to meet the Guardian’s expectation and prayer: “Appeal to members of the Community . . . to unitedly press forward . . . until every single obligation under the present Plan is honorably fulfilled.”

1. Consolidation of the Community

With the formation of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Canada, we now constitute the Bahá’í Community of the United States. In this Community there are now 176 local Spiritual Assemblies. Our first goal is the safeguarding of these communities, so that not one single Assembly need be dissolved by April 21, 1949. Nor can we spare a single one of the older Assemblies where the community is still small and near the danger point.

With the same vigor and intensity with which we brought about the formation of 49 new Assemblies last year, we must now work with all the smaller communities until each has attained a membership of at least 15 Bahá’ís. This calls for consecrated effort by individual believers who can carry on circuit or weekend or even occasional teaching, by extension committees of every Assembly able to offer assistance in its area, by the Regional Teaching Committees, and by the National Teaching Committees, which bear the ultimate responsibility.

2. Four Areas of the Divine Plan

In order to develop a more flexible and localized direction of the consolidation activity, the National Spiritual Assembly has appointed a National Teaching Committee for each of the four areas to which the Master, more than 80 years ago, directed one of the Tablets of the Divine Plan. The Assembly feels that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s definition of the country in terms of these four areas has a profound spiritual meaning.

The system of Regional Teaching Committees remains, but each RTC now operates under the Area Teaching Committee. Each ATC has, for its area, the same power and functions as have been exercised by the NTC in previous years.

All the new and all the smaller communities are requested to look to the Regional Teaching Committee for assistance. The NSA wants each of these communities to conduct a regular study class for all the local Bahá’ís. This is the strong foundation of unity and efficiency. The NSA also wants each to take advantage of every Area, Regional and National facility for public teaching programs, that the Faith may be proclaimed with vigor and the Bahá’í teachings made a part of the spiritual life of the city, town or village.

3. Proclamation of the Message

For the more effective conduct of planned, cooperative public teaching campaigns, the NSA has appointed a new National Committee, the National Programming Committee, endowed with important functions. It is to gather together all available teaching materials, aids, methods and plans, recommend new materials as needed, develop campaign-type teaching plans for both large and small communities, carry out teaching plans in designated centers, and assist the other communities by providing bulletins clearly explaining how each community can conduct an improved teaching program.

The new policy has also been adopted that hereafter the various teaching materials — like displays, recordings, transcriptions, slides, films, and exhibits — so much needed and desired for proclamation teaching work, will be made available at cost price through the Sales Committee. Any local Assembly or National or Area Committee can purchase such material from its own budget or resources.

Under this arrangement the Committee which develops the material is not charged with the cost of manufacturing it in quantity. The production costs are met by a turnover fund assigned to the Sales Committee. Each item so charged becomes self-liquidating through sales. In this way the costs are eventually distributed over the entire community on the basis of use rather than of production.

This principle is important in that it does not charge such teaching materials to the Annual Budget, which has, through the budgets given national committees, in the past assumed up to $10,000 for cost of teaching material given or lent for use without equivalent return through sales.

The NSA confidently expects that this arrangement will stimulate the "creative planning" committees to even greater achievement in originating new ideas, by making them independent of the task of production and distribution.

Under "Proclamation" comes also the national advertising and publicity schedules of Public Relations Committee, details of which the committee will announce from time to time.

4. The Annual Budget

The Budget adopted for current activities amounts to $285,000 divided into these classifications: Temple construction, $100,000; National Committees, $91,975; Operation of Trustees properties, $17,500; Schools, $1,000; International, $5,600; Administration, including Baha'i News and The Baha'i World, $35,500; Special items, including repairs needed in the Temple structure, $21,800; and a Reserve of $11,825.

In line with the high sense of responsibility manifested by the Convention in its recommendation, the amount of the deficit in our Temple construction item in last year's Budget is added to this year's Budget. This deficit is $59,000, which makes our measure of Baha'i sacrifice this year the goal of $354,000.

5. Unity the Essential Baha'i Quality

But all our plans and activities, all our contributions of effort and money, will fail in their real purpose unless we all attain the condition of unity among ourselves. Let us exalt the spirit of disunity forever from Baha'i gatherings and councils throughout the land. Let us remove this cancer from the body of the Faith. Let us give way to the Holy Spirit, that Light from on high which shines so brilliantly in the polished mirror of a united community.

In the Spirit is joy, healing, power, capacity and guidance, when we open our hearts to its Presence. Whatever this year may bring forth, may it find us worthy of that "prerogative" which the Guardian has referred.

On Declaring a Vacancy in Assembly Membership

Years ago we had the direction from the Guardian that Assembly members unable to attend meetings because of illness or absence from the city were to be replaced. In a few cases of obvious need, this principle can very readily be applied. For example, if an Assembly member during the year establishes his permanent residence elsewhere, a vacancy is declared; and the same rule of reason applies if a member becomes physically incapacitated to the point where he simply can no longer render service.

The difficulty has been to apply the principle where the inability to attend is temporary. Is there a definite time limit after which the member automatically loses his membership status in the Assembly?

The National Assembly is very happy to cite words from a recent letter written by the Guardian through his secretary to an American Baha'i clarifying this very point.

"... it is establishing a dangerous precedent to allow Assemblies to put a time limit on non-attendance of their members at meetings of the S. A., beyond which that person is automatically dropped from the Assembly and a vacancy declared... There should be no time limit fixed by Assemblies beyond which a person is dropped. Every case of prolonged absence from the sessions of the Assembly should be considered separately by that Assembly, and if the person is seen to not want to attend meetings, or to be held away from them indefinitely because of illness or travel, then a vacancy could legitimately be declared and a new member be elected."

British Baha'i Youth Bulletin

The NSA of the British Isles has announced the publication of a Youth Bulletin as a quarterly appearing in March, June, September and December, and distributed on a paid subscription basis.

American believers wishing to subscribe should send a postal order for an amount equivalent to three shillings, six pence, to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the British Isles, 168A Old Brompton Road, London, S. W. 5, England.
The flower-scented house gleamed, from the pink spirea on the piano top beside the Temple model, (a farewell gift from Ruhíyyih Khánum to her mother-community at the time of her marriage) the roses beside the Master’s picture, the daffodils and narcissi in the halls, to the sweet-peas in the bedroom where the Master once slept. Everywhere there was an air of expectancy.

Friday evening was “open house” in the Maxwell house, our Convention headquarters. Singly, or in little groups, the friends arrived with shining faces to be met with glad cries of welcome. Haifa drew a little closer with the coming of the aunt and cousin of our beloved Ruhíyyih Khánum, awakening memories of the occasions when May Maxwell herself was our hostess. A babble of voices and laughter had arisen by the time the refreshments were served. Color slides were being shown to the very interested youth as some of us left to meet a group of Ontario friends, at the station. In greeting these twenty-odd Bahá’ís, we thought of how many such groups would cross-over our country, forming arteries through which the love of God would flow anew.

Saturday morning, April 24, we gathered for devotions. The thirteen delegates sitting in front, the hundred visitors overflowling into the dining-room, study and stairs, were made one unit by a system of microphones. While waiting for the momentous opening words, these two days appear as a pellet of time into which is compressed the history of forty-eight years of Bahá’í life in Canada, from the time the seed was first brought by May Maxwell to this moment when that seed would become the ninth pillar of the future Universal House of Justice. Sitting in this mellow blue and golden room, past, present, future fuse, the phrase “no beginning and no end” becomes real to us. For two days, less than a tick of eternity, with time sense lost, we are one with Bahá’u’lláh’s first messenger to Canada; we rejoice with her over the first Canadian to accept the Faith, Martha McBean, her husband’s cousin; we share in the thrilling days of preparation for the Master’s visit; we sit in the very room where He spoke, perhaps the very chair He sat on; we see Him stride in flowing robes up and down the street before the white doorway, while the interested, awed, and curious drive by slowly in their carriages. Into a pellet of thought, rush memories, of the many years of struggling, patient, ecstatic effort until today the largest group of Bahá’ís ever to congregate in this country open, on this sunny morning, Canada’s first National Convention.

Devotions ended, the roll call of the delegates took place. Flood, and the three thousand miles, prevented the six far-western delegates from attending. Dorothy Baker, for the last time acting as chairman of our joint N.S.A. opened the Convention and conducted the election of our Convention officers. She had come with four other members of the N.S.A. of the United States (how strangely worn that title appears!) to hand over to the Canadian N.S.A. the trust shared for so long.

Our Convention chairman, John Roberts, and secretary, Laura Davis, took their places. The Guardian’s cable was read, and a copy given to those present. We have all read by now the Five Year Plan which the Guardian outlined for us with the specific goals which he has measured to our capacity. As Mrs. Baker spoke on these eight goals, we could sense the friends planning summer holidays near Indian reservations, to Newfoundland or Greenland; inwardly resolving to accomplish these tasks well before 1953.

The letter from Ruhíyyih Khánum was masterly. How it made our hearts swell with joy to realize her great services to the Cause, her position in the Holy Family, and our link with her, the physical symbol of the unity of the east and west! We could feel how she, on her part, rejoiced with us in our greater opportunity to fulfill the promises of the Master for Canada. Messages of reply were sent to both our beloved Guardian and Ruhíyyih Khánum.

It had been with some trepidation that the large auditorium of the Montreal High School had been engaged for the public Congress on Saturday night, a night not too favorable for lectures. Though the location was central, timing was against us. It was the night of a great Jewish festival, and an exhibition by Canada’s world champion skater! However through the unexcelled publicity arranged by the Montreal friends, over

Canadian Bahá’í Convention — 1948

The flower-scented house gleamed, from the pink spirea on the piano top beside the Temple model, (a farewell gift from Ruhíyyih Khánum to her mother-community at the time of her marriage) the roses beside the Master’s picture, the daffodils and narcissi in the halls, to the sweet-peas in the bedroom where the Master once slept. Everywhere there was an air of expectancy.

Friday evening was "open house" in the Maxwell house, our Convention headquarters. Singly, or in little groups, the friends arrived with shining faces to be met with glad cries of welcome. Haifa drew a little closer with the coming of the aunt and cousin of our beloved Ruhíyyih Khánum, awakening memories of the occasions when May Maxwell herself was our hostess. A babble of voices and laughter had arisen by the time the refreshments were served. Color slides were being shown to the very interested youth as some of us left to meet a group of Ontario friends, at the station. In greeting these twenty-odd Bahá’ís, we thought of how many such groups would cross-over our country, forming arteries through which the love of God would flow anew.

Saturday morning, April 24, we gathered for devotions. The thirteen delegates sitting in front, the hundred visitors overflowing into the dining-room, study and stairs, were made one unit by a system of microphones. While waiting for the momentous opening words, these two days appear as a pellet of time into which is compressed the history of forty-eight years of Bahá’í life in Canada, from the time the seed was first brought by May Maxwell to this moment when that seed would become the ninth pillar of the future Universal House of Justice. Sitting in this mellow blue and golden room, past, present, future fuse. The phrase "no beginning and no end" becomes real to us. For two days, less than a tick of eternity, with time sense lost, we are one with Bahá’u’lláh’s first messenger to Canada; we rejoice with her over the first Canadian to accept the Faith, Martha McBean, her husband’s cousin; we share in the thrilling days of preparation for the Master’s visit; we sit in the very room where He spoke, perhaps the very chair He sat on; we see Him stride in flowing robes up and down the street before the white doorway, while the interested, awed, and curious drive by slowly in their carriages. Into a pellet of thought, rush memories, of the many years of struggling, patient, ecstatic effort until today the largest group of Bahá’ís ever to congregate in this country open, on this sunny morning, Canada’s first National Convention.

Devotions ended, the roll call of the delegates took place. Flood, and the three thousand miles, prevented the six far-western delegates from attending. Dorothy Baker, for the last time acting as chairman of our joint N.S.A. opened the Convention and conducted the election of our Convention officers. She had come with four other members of the N.S.A. of the United States (how strangely worn that title appears!) to hand over to the Canadian N.S.A. the trust shared for so long.

Our Convention chairman, John Roberts, and secretary, Laura Davis, took their places. The Guardian’s cable was read, and a copy given to those present. We have all read by now the Five Year Plan which the Guardian outlined for us with the specific goals which he has measured to our capacity. As Mrs. Baker spoke on these eight goals, we could sense the friends planning summer holidays near Indian reservations, to Newfoundland or Greenland; inwardly resolving to accomplish these tasks well before 1953.

The letter from Ruhíyyih Khánum was masterly. How it made our hearts swell with joy to realize her great services to the Cause, her position in the Holy Family, and our link with her, the physical symbol of the unity of the east and west! We could feel how she, on her part, rejoiced with us in our greater opportunity to fulfill the promises of the Master for Canada. Messages of reply were sent to both our beloved Guardian and Ruhíyyih Khánum.

It had been with some trepidation that the large auditorium of the Montreal High School had been engaged for the public Congress on Saturday night, a night not too favorable for lectures. Though the location was central, timing was against us. It was the night of a great Jewish festival, and an exhibition by Canada’s world champion skater! However through the unexcelled publicity arranged by the Montreal friends, over five hundred attended, the largest audience of any Bahá’í meeting since the Master’s visit to Canada.

The music linked the audience together, putting us into a reflective mood, giving us time to look at the mixed gathering of French and English, Negro and Jew, rich and poor, to examine our programmes and the notices of future Bahá’í meetings; to admire the flowers and remember the donor, an absent American friend, and to follow the music. I found myself sitting behind an old school friend whom she hadn’t met for years. On chatting together it was learned that the schoolmate’s husband had heard of the Cause ten years ago from an American Bahá’í in the Gobi desert. He had been deeply interested and was also present that night.

There was the usual pause and rustle when the music ended until the chairman, with easy and friendly dignity, made the audience and speakers one. As Elsie Austin moved to the microphone, her green velvet dress catching the light, one felt the admiration and interest she created. She gave a simple yet graphic account of her work, more than her words the spirit of faith out of which they were born.

Our National Assembly took place on the land. This city, and beyond it, throughout the worlducher and this momentous moment of Canada’s spiritual coming of age would never be matched.

During the presentation of the Temple progress report, the tellers returned. Dear as is the Temple to us our restlessness forced the chairman to ask for the election results. Here was the pivot point of the whole Convention. It was as if we were to see a child suddenly become a man, or a bud a flower, in the recurring of the nine names of Canada’s first National Spiritual Assembly. Our first act after the great announcement was to say a prayer in the name of our beloved Baha’u’llah who had been the chosen instrument to set in motion in this country the mighty forces of the Cause of Baha’u’llah.

The closing moments passed quickly in the discussion of teaching problems. A few of the Bahá’í youth present were asked to report on their activities. The Convention welcomed their bright accent, the excited interest that exuded from all of them. One young man, a Bahá’í of only a few weeks, was asked what he thought of the Convention. His unusually beaming face grew very serious as he replied, “I think I might have missed this!” Tributes were made to the magnificent work of the Montreal community in organizing the many details of the Convention; to the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States for all that they have taught us. Listening to the five members present as they clarified points of national importance, we realized how grateful we should be for all that we have learned and received from them. The first gift to the Canadian Bahá’ís was a cheque for fifteen hundred dollars from this sister community!

The last act of the chairman was to invite all the friends to a buffet supper in the Maxwell home as guests of Ruhiiyyih Khanum and Mr. Maxwell. It was almost as if we were in Haifa, we felt so close in spirit.

The full tide of joy was reached at the Ridvan Feast, arranged by the Canadian Bahá’ís. Among the readers was one who had met the Master as a Bahá’í in 1912; another a relative of the Maxwells, and a young pioneer. We thought as we listened to Bahá’u’llah’s message, en-joined to us to read the word of God with melodious voice. Our hundred hearts felt like birds, and this great Cause the tree from which we sang out our thanksgiving as the Master’s Tablet and Prayer for Canada was read in the room whose walls still seemed to store and treasure the sound of His voice.

Who among those present can recapture the words spoken by Dorothy Baker? Europe became part of our world, as indeed it is, the valiant friends in England, Scandinavia, Switzerland, Italy, Portugal, the sleeping lad of France, the catacombs of Spain, and above all the hearts arising out of the pain of that continent in response to the thrill of the Greatest Name. It was on this occasion, possibly the greatest event taking place at that moment on this planet. It was a solemn moment in which our delegates, representing six provinces, and the visitors, from seven provinces and eight states, shared. Indeed the visitors by their courtesy and attentiveness had a vital part in the success of the Convention. At this time our regret at the absence of the western delegates was deepest. Though they had all sent their ballots, and a perfect score was cast, this actual breathless moment of Canada’s spiritual coming of age would never be matched.

Temple Design Approved
Generous Support Urged by the Guardian

This important message from Shoghi Effendi combines statements conveyed to the National Assembly in two telegrams, dated May 4th and May 6th respectively:

“Temple drawings received. Approve design. Urge proceed without delay to place Temple contracts. I appeal to entire body of believers to arise and generously support the National Fund in hour of greatest need, to insure uninterrupted progress in the ornamentation of the House of Worship, as foretold by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, is already conferring such benefits upon the community.

“Praying for magnificent victories in third year of second Seven Year Plan.”

Growth in Latin America

Convention reports showed steady and comparatively rapid growth of the Cause in Latin America. There is a total of 47 Spiritual Assemblies, 11 of them new this year: 44 groups and 257 new Bahá'í pioneers, representing a growth in all-over membership of about 50 percent. The 11th assembly to join the march of general incorporation of the Faith throughout Latin America, reported receiving its decree during convention. This was Havana, Cuba.

The other seven assemblies which incorporated this year, were La Paz, Bolivia; Lima, Peru; Caracas, Venezuela; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Santiago, Chile; Panama City, Panama; and Guatemala City. Two assemblies attained their decrees the year before: Asunción, Paraguay, and Bogotá, Colombia. San José, Costa Rica, was the first assembly to incorporate, receiving its decree in 1942. Four additional assemblies are now in process of incorporating. An interesting phase of such incorporations in Latin America is that the first incorporation granted gives the Faith legal recognition by the government anywhere in that country and additional assemblies in each country can register under the one incorporation and partake of its benefits.

Latin America has also attained its first Spiritual Assembly in a city of the indigenes, Chichicastenango, ancient capital of Guatemala.

National Youth work will get under way in the 22 countries this year for the first time, being headed in this country by Charles Ioas and John Eichenauer, collaborating with native National Youth committees in the two great areas.

Twenty-six approved native teachers, 19 of them new this year, have arisen to supplement the efforts of the dwindling ranks of the North American pioneers, who still serve only eight of the 22 countries. The requirement that all resident teachers earn their own living, has placed a great sacrifice upon the shoulders of those North Americans who have continued in spite of the very difficult economic conditions, so difficult in many instances that our North Americans cannot comprehend it without going through these experiences personally. In many countries, a well-trained secretary can do very well, but no other profession seems to fit into the Latin picture at present. Those who are good secretaries, have great and interesting opportunities, and are extremely important to the development of the Cause. The Inter-America Committee strongly urges those who can qualify in this respect, to volunteer to help during these three years, which are so crucial in the proper formation of strong and stable National Spiritual Assemblies in April, 1951.

Social service to the Island Republic of Haiti by the growing Bahá’í Community in Port-au-Prince, was described to the Inter-America Committee by Mr. Pumpey. The Bahá’ís have established the first medical clinic where sympathetic, efficient and helpful service is available to the poor people of the island, he said. It is a large, white-washed bamboo hut. Behind natural curtains of blossoming vines are the white operating tables. Simple cots serve those who must rest in the clinic for a time. Clients are seated on long benches on the porch of the little, tropical-country house. The white uniforms of the doctors and nurses, who are giving their time without charge, their earnest and intent faces; the patient faces of those who wait, the crude but effective equipment, against the background of tropical verdure and flowers, makes an unforgettable picture, he said. Those who can do so, pay the cost of medicines used. Eleven new members have recently been accepted by the Port-au-Prince Community, some of them outstanding people of the island. The Assembly is in process of incorporating the Faith in Haiti.

European Conference Planned

The glorious news of 80 newly declared believers spread through all of the goal countries as well as the historic announcement of the formation of eight Spiritual Assemblies in 10 of the goal cities was transmitted to the Guardian and the following inspiring cable received from him:

Hearts flooded with joy remarkable victory exceeding fondest expectations stop. Convey heartfelt congratulations, assurance, admiration, loving gratitude, prayers newly formed Assemblies. Supplicating Bahá’u’lláh enable both pioneers, native believers unitedly achieve still greater triumphs stop. Eagerly await photographs newly constituted Assemblies adorn walls Bahá’u’lláh’s Mansion adjoining Most Holy Tomb Bahjí.

Shoghi Effendi

The plans for the European Teaching Conference in Geneva have been completed. It will begin on May 22 with an afternoon opening session followed by a Unity dinner and the Commemoration of the Declaration of the Báb. During the following four days there will be consultation on Administration, Will and Testament, besides all other matters specifically concerning this teaching campaign. On Monday evening there is to be a public meeting in Geneva with an address in French and in English and on Wednesday night, a public meeting in Bern, our Swiss goal city, with a talk in English and in German. Through the special contributions from Bahá’í friends it has been made possible for the Committee to invite all of the pioneers as well as one newly declared believer from each country to attend the Conference. Four members of the Committee, Mary Sprague, Leroy Ioas, Sylvia Ioas and Edna True, will be present and visitors from the communities of Great Britain and Paris with a probable total attendance of 75.

Public Relations

Public relations begins and ends with human relations. It has been described as "living right and getting credit for it." Others call it "good manners." And it has been defined, simply, as relations with the public.

Whatever the definition, sound Bahá’í public relations has a fundamental function of carrying to leaders and to the public the story of the Faith, what it means and what it means to them. This involves every public contact of every Bahá’í. It means that Bahá’í public relations is an all-encompassing activity within the Faith, not limited to a few.

The importance of an enlarged program of action for the public proclamation of the Teachings has been stressed repeatedly by the Guardian. In the recent "Challenging Requirements," Shoghi Effendi, under "proclamation," directed the NSA to "amplify public relations programs." It is this program that the Public Relations committee is developing.

Clarifying its role in Bahá’í public relations, the Committee points out that it conceives of its programs as one which (1) prepares for continuous enlargement of direct teaching work by other committees, turning up the soil and sowing seeds, and (2) provides a continuous follow-up of interest and literature for persons who have never heard of the Faith, or who have visited the Temple or attended some meeting but have no contact with Bahá’ís.

Its aim is to bring the Faith to the attention of thousands who have never heard of it, make free literature available, and continue the process of deepening their interest by regular mailings of the Bulletin. When evidence of interest is found, the name is turned over to the appropriate body for its list of prospects. The Public Relations committee stops at the boundary where "proclamation" ends and "consolidation" begins.

Here is some of the evidence attesting to the growth and effectiveness of our public relations:

Members of the Sunday Evening Forum of the First Congregational church in Oak Park, Ill., recently listened to an assuring definition of the work of the Bahá’í Faith. Said Dr. Bayard Dodge, president of American College at Beirut, Syria, in answer to a question as to what (Continued on page 12)

Our Children: Science or Religion?

Scientists working in the field of human relationships are making significant contributions to the understanding of how children grow and develop in our culture. Through observation over long periods of time they are learning at which stages in the child’s development the various physical, mental, social skills and behavior characteristics develop. A noteworthy example are the studies made by Dr. Arnold Gesell at the Yale Clinic of Child Development. These and similar studies give us understanding of the mechanism of emotional and social growth and from these we can learn what it is reasonable to expect of a child of a given age.

Specialists in child care today do not give us many hard and fixed rules for bringing up children. They have learned that individual variations in parents, children and family situations are too great to permit the formulating of many rules of thumb for specific situations. Rather they seek to show parents and educators that it is the way in which a thing is taught, the spirit behind the teaching, which registers most with the child. Basically the only way to teach children character is by the example of our own lives. They respond to our attitudes, our beliefs which are shown by our daily (often unconscious) actions. Insofar as we make of our beliefs a set of creeds and rituals to which we give lip service alone, just this will get across to our children. Insofar as we believe in a living God Who teaches through His Prophets, our children will grasp and reflect this.

The importance of religious faith and positive moral convictions for laying a foundation for the healthy development of children is recognized by many psychologists, psychiatrists, and educators today.

"Children do not need parents who dutifully send them to church, or methodically instruct them in their duty; they need parents who themselves hold strong and passionate moral convictions... The important thing is that children should grow up with parents who believe that there are some ways of life which for us today are better than others and that these ways are worth defending with every ounce of our strength."

"A Child's spiritual education begins as soon as he becomes aware that his parents feel intensely concerning these distinctions" (distinctions between good and bad ways of living).

"Parents need to be free and alive enough themselves so that they can do things actively with their children... have good times... work and play together... and love each other without dependence. If the way is clear for these things and if parents are able at the same time to confront their sons and daughters with their own mature standards in living, children will learn, not all at once, perhaps, but gradually as they develop, and with many backslidings. Sound and responsible character in children does not come because they have been caught young and trained that way, but because they have been enabled of their own free wills, to give up their early egoistic and primitive wishes through affectionate contacts with parents who themselves love and practice civilized living."

"Among all my patients in the second half of life... that is to say, over thirty-five... there has not been one whose problem in the last resort was not that of finding a religious outlook on life. It is safe to say that every one of them fell ill because he had lost that which the living religions of every age have given to their followers, and none of them has been really healed who did not regain his religious outlook."

The Bahá’í Faith gives security in the knowledge of a loving God, plus a realistic understanding of the conditions of the world and the basis on which its conflicts may ultimately be resolved. This faith and assurance we can give our children. And the inestimable value to our children of having such faith and standards is readily acknowledged by many psychologists and educators. There is however much that we can learn from the scientists about human behavior, the developmental patterns of children and work out for ourselves the best ways in specific instances, to aid them to grow into really mature, self-reliant people.

As indicated in two of the basic principles of the Bahá’í Faith: "investigation of truth" and "the unity of science and religion," we can pro-part Bahá’ís were taking in the Palestinian dilemma: “Bahá’ís are working to spread a religion that will unite all the peoples of the world.”

To “Questions and Answers,” a syndicated feature appearing in such papers as the Boston “Traveler” and the Niagara Falls “Gazette,” a reader queried: “‘What is the membership of the Bahá’í Faith and how many churches has it in the U.S.?’ The answer: ‘The Bahá’í Faith is composed of followers of Bahá’u’lláh, a Persian prophet (1817-1892). The Faith has neither clergy nor churches nor ritualistic worship, but each community constructs its own Mashriqu‘l-Adhkar, or house of worship, for prayer, meditation and reading of the Sacred Scriptures.’”

Another widely-circulated cartoon-feature, entitled “‘They’ll Never Die,’” showed a sketch of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and a brief description of the Faith. “His father, Bahá’u’lláh, a gentleman of great wealth, was exiled by the Persian government for preaching the doctrine of human equality and brotherhood!”

From Puerto Rico comes an interesting newspaper story along with a picture of the Temple: “In the heart of the North American continent considered by many to be the most beautiful building in America, the Temple of Wilmette rises like a ray of hope for a world darkened by a cloud of hatred and religious and national suspicion. Those responsible for this Temple are the Bahá’ís who comprise a community that extends through 80 countries of the world. They are people of every nationality, race, class, religion, who found this precious gem of understanding and cooperation between the countries which will be a substitute for the antagonisms, prejudices, and lack of confidence that are destroying the fundamentals of a world society.”

Last fall a leading Boston paper used the name of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as an answer to a cross-word puzzle query. Now comes the Saturday Review of Literature’s double-crostic puzzle-question: Persian Bahá’í leader knighted by England in 1920 for his services.

"The Mashriqu'l-Adhkár is the most important matter and the greatest divine Institute... To have it (the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár) built is most important. Some material things have spiritual effect, and the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár is a thing that will have great effect upon the spirits of the people. Not only does the building of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár have an effect upon those who build it, but upon the whole world."

—Abdu'l-Bahá

"Vie ye with each other in the service of God and of His Cause."

—Bahá'u'lláh

1. A few days after the convention the National Assembly received a cable from the Guardian approving the Temple interior design. He asked the immediate placing of contracts. He urged us all to "generously support the National Fund in its hour of greatest need."

2. The Guardian's appeal emphasizes the Convention recommendation that the deficit in the National Budget for last year be added, as a special goal, to the Budget for the current year.

3. The National Assembly adopted this Convention recommendation. The deficit in meeting last year's budget was $69,226.35. This is the goal for our special sacrificial effort.

4. For most of us, this deficit goal of $69,226.35 can be met through sacrificial contributions of our savings or other capital assets. This is a challenge requiring contributions from sources which will not impair our ability to meet the heavy demands of the National Budget for the current year. Our desire to answer the Guardian's call will fail if we do not achieve the current budget as well as eliminate the deficit.

5. Each month in Bahá'í News the National Treasurer will report the progress in reducing the deficit. Contributions may be labelled "Special Deficit Fund." They may be sent direct to the National Treasurer, 112 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois. Or they may be forwarded through Local Assemblies or Groups.

6. In working out the current budget, the National Assembly made drastic reductions in the budgets of the major national committees. Many worthwhile projects have been postponed or eliminated. The operating budget represents a great curtailment of many vital national activities. Now, Temple construction must go forward without interruption.

7. A special item of $20,000 in the current budget is for essential repairs to the Temple structure. Broken glass in the dome must be replaced. The decks of the main story and first gallery must be repaired to eliminate present leakage. These repairs were deferable as long as no ornamentation was placed in the interior auditorium. But with interior construction starting, leakage would now cause rapid deterioration of the ornamentation. This would mean high replacement costs later on.

We know our Faith has grown and expanded through sacrifice. We know that thousands of Bahá'í martyrs saw their homes plundered and gave their lives—in praise and joy at the opportunity to show their faith.

We have seen waves of pioneers leave comfort and security to proclaim the Faith of God in other lands. We have seen bands of settlers face hardships cheerfully to consolidate the Faith in this country.

The entire human race awaits redemption. People live in confusion and agony of spirit. The Temple is the symbol of their salvation. Through our sacrifice the coming of Bahá'u'lláh can be clearly demonstrated. Through our sacrifice our love for God becomes a living reality.

European Bahá'ís Hold First Teaching Conference

"Share the joy and elation of the attendants at the first historic European Teaching Conference on the Continental, regarded as the fairest fruit of the momentous enterprise signaling the second stage in the evolution of the Divine

In this foregoing quotation from his cable-greeting to the historic first European Teaching Conference, the Guardian clearly foretold the spiritual blessing and bounty which was shared by all those participating in this Conference. Ninety-two Bahá'ís from seventeen countries gathered in Geneva, Switzerland, on May 22 for the series of consultations which were planned for the following four days. All of the pioneers with one exception and at least one newly declared believer from each of the goal countries but Spain, four members of the European Teaching Committee and Bahá'í representatives from England, Scotland, France, Australia, Germany and Austria, participated in mature and thrilling constructive consultation on all matters pertaining to the strengthening and promotion of the Faith on the European Continent and in the British Isles. Very special study was made of the Divine Plan, Administration, Will & Testament and Covenant as well as the important matters of teaching methods and techniques, translations, publications and publicity.

Throughout the sessions a unifying welding spirit of Bahá'í love and fellowship pervaded the atmosphere and a new conception of the greatness of the Cause, of its power to draw together and unite the different peoples of the world, inspired all of those present to renewed dedication and devotion to their high mission of establishing the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in these new fields. So great were the confirmations which descended upon those assembled here that five non-Bahá'ís who had been studying the Faith asked to declare themselves at this time.

The two public meetings, one in Geneva at which addresses were given in French and in English and the other in Bern with talks in German and English, were most successful with excellent attendance. On the last day of the Conference, Wednesday, May 26, the representatives traveling in three chartered motorcoaches enjoyed a beautiful scenic drive from Geneva to Bern which gave them an opportunity to partake of the true spirit of Bahá'í sociability and fellowship and to share with each other their many confirming and thrilling experiences.

The Commemoration of the Declaration of the Báb which was celebrated on the first night, May 22, of the Conference, was an outstanding occasion; at the close of which the Báb's prayer, the Remover of Difficulties was repeated in all languages of the ten goal countries. To those who had experienced both occasions, this first historic European Teaching Conference could only be compared in its dynamic spiritual atmosphere to the Centenary of the Faith in 1944. It was truly an unforgettable, priceless experience.

"Distinguished Disciple of 'Abdu'l-Bahá"

Greatly deplore passing of distinguished disciple of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, firm pillar of the American Bahá'í community, George Latimer. His outstanding services during closing years of the Heroic, and first epoch of the Formative Ages of the Faith, are imperishable. Assure bereaved, dearly loved, much admired mother my profound sympathy and fervent prayers for the progress of his soul.

Community Development

A Letter from the National Assembly

Beloved friends:

At the core of our Baha’i understanding, and of the resolve of our hearts, let us hold to the ideal of community development. The development of local and national Baha’i communities throughout the world stands as the central theme of the Formative Age of the Baha’i Dispensration. The Faith of Baha’u’llah will not be fulfilled in the spread of books nor even in the multiplication of believers, but in the creation of an ordered society, local, national and world.

The term “community development” covers many steps in this great process, but the process is one and the goal should be kept clearly in sight.

For example, the first step is the formation of a group of nine or more adult Baha’is in one civil area. The second step is the election or formation by joint declaration of a Spiritual Assembly. The third step is study and training in the principles and methods of Baha’i administration. The fourth step is the unfoldment of those powers, capacities and responsibilities with which Baha’u’llah has entrusted the community of the Greatest Name. This step may be divided into many stages, some of them far beyond our present vision.

Two essential attainments are within our grasp, and indeed within our duty and obligation at this time.

1. The development of the sense of kinship in the local community, making of believers the members of one spiritual family and one social organism. Here there is mutual respect, trust, affection and the sharing of community joys and sorrows. Here there is regard for one another’s welfare, a swift flow of sympathy, and the proffer of what help, when needed, lies within the power of the community to supply. Here there is willingness to understand and appreciate the diverse types of character and temperament which necessarily exist in the Baha’i community because it represents “mankind in miniature.” Until this development has taken place there is no proper foundation for effective teaching work.

2. The development of a unified teaching effort, on a scale commensurate with the size and experience of the community. A unified effort grows out of the consultation of all, and employs all available gifts and talents, each in its most effective place. A unified effort can be expressed through many different Baha’i agencies, employ different methods and materials, and seek to influence the public on different levels; but remains a unified effort because there is unity of understanding throughout. Every committee, no matter how difficult, pressing or specialized its work, draws upon the common store of unified understanding and seeks to return its own particular gift to the common store.

Nothing less than a mature, conscious, developed community can cope with the difficulties of this particular age. Baha’u’llah knew the prevailing disease, and He provided the remedy. Therefore the aim of our spiritual knowledge, our love for the friends, our ability to work for the Cause, must be to strengthen the community and help in the unfoldment of its marvelous powers.

Many people feel that the modern family in great measure fails to implant the sense of security and the habit of cooperation which enable souls to come to sound maturity. Therefore the Baha’is are to supply the element which has become lacking, and learn how to maintain the spirit and wisdom needed to guide the immature, the untrained, encourage the weak, heal the sick, educate the ignorant, and raise up the broken-hearted.

Many feel that current education misses the central core of personality, the realization of a divine purpose in life. Therefore the Baha’is conduct schools for world religion, to quicken the heart and raise the understanding from the darkness in which it lies.

The instances are many. The purpose is to illustrate the vital role of the Baha’i community as the nucleus and pattern of the new society. We can cultivate our own highest possibilities by accepting the divine trust laid upon us: to do all we can to help our community grow in unity, in wisdom and in power.

—National Spiritual Assembly

International Relief

Because of the difficult conditions in the needy countries of Europe (particularly Germany, France and England), all Baha’is are asked to cooperate fully with the plan of the National Spiritual Assembly for international relief as published in Baha’i News for February, 1948, pages 6-7. According to this plan the friends are asked to obtain addresses for sending individual packages or CARE orders from the International Relief Representative. The friends are asked not to go by the lists published in earlier issues of Baha’i News or to use addresses which may be sent to them from other sources.

Adherence to this plan is necessary in order to follow the instructions of the Guardian that relief be sent only to declared and steadfast Baha’is. The responsible Spiritual Assemblies of the needy countries are cooperating fully with this plan, but they report to us that packages are being received by persons who are no longer Baha’is or whose claim to be Baha’is is not supported by registration. Because Baha’i status may change, addresses change, people die, for these and other reasons, it is necessary to repeat this specific request that the friends use addresses obtained only from the International Relief Representative. These addresses are kept constantly up to date by contact with the responsible Spiritual Assemblies, to include new Baha’i groups or communities also.

Moreover, when food and clothing are so scarce, hard feelings are engendered if one locality appears to be favored because a very active Baha’i community in the United States may send chiefly to that address. As in all Baha’i activity, “justice is loved above all”, and we can express our universal love through a fair distribution of the help we are able to give to those temporarily going through difficult conditions.

The Guardian is constantly urging all Baha’is, in whatever part of the world they may be living, to function according to the Administrative Order, which has for its purpose the development of unity and harmonious cooperation among all the peoples of the world. It is the channel, the divine pattern, for activity and contact between the different countries through the responsible Spiritual Assemblies. These Assemblies in the needy countries can help their Bahá'ís to understand and follow this pattern, the Administrative Order, if we Bahá'ís in the United States follow it ourselves. We have had the benefit of nine years of guidance and instruction from the Guardian through his letters, which the Bahá'ís in France and Germany, for example, have missed during the war years. It is our responsibility, therefore, to set an example of activity through the Administrative Order. This does not mean that personal letters should not be sent to friends. That is another form of expressing "loving encouragement." But for the sending of relief packages and CARE orders, the friends are urged to follow the plan of the National Spiritual Assembly as worked out on the Guardian's instructions. Thus the responsible Spiritual Assemblies of the needy countries will also be aided in their task of education and assistance.

The friends are asked also to refer to the National Spiritual Assembly of the U.S. or its International Relief Representative letters which may be received from persons claiming to be Bahá'ís or from individual Bahá'ís or communities or groups, asking for help or sending addresses. Some of these letters, which have been referred by the friends, have been found, on being forwarded to the respective Spiritual Assembly, to come from persons known to be against the Cause or to be non-Bahá'ís. For the protection of the Cause, therefore, it is thus obvious that the pattern of the Administrative Order should be followed in all our activities.

Guardian’s Cable to the European Teaching Conference, Geneva, Switzerland — May 22-26

Share the joy and elation of the attendants at the first historic Bahá'í Teaching Conference on the European Continent, regarded as the fairest fruit of the momentous enterprise signifying the second stage in the evolution of the Divine Plan. Overjoyed at the manifold signs of the rapid progress evidenced by the formation of eight Assemblies in seven goal countries, in the notable increase in the number of new believers, in the remarkable activity displayed by itinerant teachers and the meritorious endeavor systematically exerted by the organizers and participants of the newly launched European campaign in the opening years of the Second Seven Year Plan. Appeal to the newly constituted Assemblies to preserve, at whatever cost, the integrity of the prizes gloriously won, to consolidate the institutions recently established, to simultaneously initiate extension work designed to form nuclei destined to reinforce the administrative structure of the Faith in the respective countries. Urge the groups in the three remaining goal countries to ensure Assembly status ere the termination of the current year. Entreat every individual and all agencies associated in the conduct of the divinely sustained, majestically unfolding, tremendously challenging crusade, whether administrators at home or abroad, visitors or settlers, itinerant teachers, newly enrolled believers to intensify their concerted efforts to win wider fields, to give added momentum to still more conspicuous victories. Unstayed by the aggravation of the crisis in the tragically disturbed continent, undeterred by the obstacles and pitfalls encountered in a thorny path, sensible to the growing hunger of disillusioned, fear-stricken, spiritually famished multitudes, constantly aware of the subtlety of the mission entrusted, in this critical propitious hour, to their care, inspired by the example of the Author of the Divine Plan, who, in no less a critical hour in the fortunes of the European continent, notwithstanding His age and illness, twice visited its shores and labored tirelessly for the illumination of its peoples, let them hold aloft, amidst the tumult of the disorders of a tottering civilization, the torch of divine guidance, tramp resolutely ahead to the appointed stage in the evolution of the Divine Plan.

GERMANY

To attend a late afternoon meeting the Dziobeck Family must leave their home, in Maidenbach 31 miles northwest of Frankfurt, at 9 A.M. They take one train to Wiesbaden where, after a long wait, they get the train for Frankfurt, and streetcar for the meeting. They have to leave the meetings a little early to make connections returning home, which at that involves an hour walk through the woods at midnight.

Bahá’ís were months learning Mr. and Mrs. Dziobeck, after the Friday night meetings, sat from 9:00 P.M. till 7:00 A.M. in Frankfurt’s railroad station just sitting and waiting. The round trip cost 150 Reichs marks, (an average German salary for one month) if you can get a ticket on the overtaxed railroad system. On one occasion Heyd waited seven hours in the Hamburg railroad station just to buy his ticket. Heyd has never been able to get a sleeper ticket.

An exhausting trip, which no one envies, is Gunther Heyd’s monthly train jaunt to the Stuttgart NSA meetings. The 450 miles require two days, and usually one night in the Frankfurt railroad station just sitting and waiting. The round trip cost 150 Reichs marks, (an average German salary for one month) if you can get a ticket on the overtaxed railroad system. On one occasion Heyd waited seven hours in the Hamburg railroad station just to buy his ticket. Heyd has never been able to get a sleeper ticket.

Mrs. Schenk starts at 8:30 A.M., walking the first mile, then catches, respectively: a bus, streetcar, train to Frankfurt and another train to Zeppelinheim for a weekly afternoon Bahá’í fireside team. Mrs. Kohl-Schmit makes a similar trip, minus the bus ride, from Darmstadt and Mrs. Bommersheim the same from Bad Nauheim for the same tea. Often trains are so packed with passengers that a person cannot stand with full weight on both feet.

Austalia

The eleventh session of the Yerrinbool Bahá’í Summer School was held Jan. 1 to 11, 1948. . . All those attending felt that there had been increased activity and consolidation in the progress of the school. The mornings began with devotions, and these were followed by two sessions, one on “The Rising World Commonwealth” and another on “The Book of Certitude.” Afternoons were open and round table discussions were held on subjects of interest. In the evenings, a series of lectures on “Nine Great Religions of the World” was given. On Saturday evening, Jan. 3, a social was held with over 50 present, both believers and non-Bahá’ís. The session was closed with the playing of the records of the Devotional service held at the Bahá’í Temple in Wilmette.

Great Britain

(Quoted from a letter to the N.S.A. of the United States from the National Teaching Committee of Great Britain) “. . . Mrs. Baker’s visit meant something very special to our national community . . . appreciation is not confined to the Committee but is warmly felt up and down the land. . . . Great as was the value of her teaching work, however, by far her most remarkable and permanent contribution grew out of the providential opportunity for her to participate in our Annual Teaching Conference. This Conference is one of the three rallying points of the national community during the year, and for the past three years has marked a significant turning point in the affairs of the Cause. In a sense, Mrs. Baker’s presence and contributions were a pivot for the whole proceedings of the Conference. . . . A reception was attended by 58 people, including 50 non-Bahá’ís, while the attendance at the Teaching Conference was the highest on record, averaging about 75 believers. You will realize that this is more than a third of our national community, every Assembly and goal town being represented. Thus it is apparent that the beneficent influence of Mrs. Baker’s work has gone out to all parts of Britain. . . Her work will long be remembered, and we feel sure that she has done much to knit even closer the bonds of Bahá’í fellowship which unite our two national communities . . .

during the Centenary in 1944, commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of the Báb. "That the school affords both an opportunity for spreading the Faith among non-Bahá'ís and deepening the knowledge of Bahá'ís in their own Faith was recognized by all those present."...

"We have been caught in a tangle of negative tasks this year. To our losses already reported, we have to add these: The Jammu Assembly has been dissolved as the friends were forced to leave the town; of these friends, four, of whom two were accompanied by their families, joined a convoy which was attacked and they have been heard of no more; a consignment of copies of the New Era recently printed in Oriya, has been lost in transit to Delhi from the Press in Orissa where they were reprinted. We have further discovered that among the material lost at the capital during the recent riots were two or three manuscripts of translation of Bahá'í books that had consumed months of labor, also much of the N.S.A.'s past records the publishing committee's books of account, and the bulk of Bahá'í literature that had been recently imported from America. This mounting tide of reverses should not unman us or deflect us from our purpose. They should rather inspire us to redouble our efforts to achieve our goals in the pioneering and teaching fields. Of some life is demanded in this glorious adventure, of others, possessions, of others, may be less. But whatever it may be love holds back nothing from the beloved. Time, energy, riches, life itself, if need be—all the wealth Bahá'u'lláh has blessed us with are His and are freely given in His service. He is a true Bahá'í says 'Abdu'l-Bahá, 'who lays down his life that others may prosper and succeed.' This is the standard set by our Master. It is for each individual Bahá'í to endeavor daily to measure up to it."

The University of Wisconsin Bahá'í Youth Group has recently been recognized as a religious group on the campus. As such it is now able to participate in all campus religious activities and privileges. Also, it is being admitted to the University Religious Council, a body which plans and coordinates the activities of the various religious groups in the council.

The Bahá'í Youth have been holding bi-weekly meetings at the University Memorial Union, usually beginning with a short talk, which serves to stimulate a discussion afterward. The attendance of interested friends has been encouraging especially among the older graduate students.

Since the regional bulletin made the suggestion that mothers of young children, who were isolated Bahá'ís, form an association by letter regarding Bahá'í training for their children and share problems in this respect, three mothers responded, generally benefiting by the group consultation.

About 35 people gathered for the Feast of Ridván in the garden of a Bahá'í home. Held as an open feast, the audience was entertained by violin selections from a new believer who has been blind from childhood. An interesting part was taken in the feast by the Bahá'í children. As an older youth announced each of the Bahá'í principles, a child stepped up with a placard illustrating it and then told a short story for emphasis.

Sayles Hall of Brown University was the scene of a Bahá'í symposium, March 31 on the topic, "Moving Toward a United World," with 350 attending. Dr. Charles F. Towne spoke from the educational standpoint, Mr. Howard C. Olsen from the humanitarian, and Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh the spiritual, with Mr. Matthew Bullock acting as moderator.

On April 6, 30 students of the Clarence Skinner Fellowship of Tufts Theological School gathered to hear a talk on the Bahá'í Faith by Firuz Kazemzadeh. After his half hour address they asked questions for an hour. The important point is that this group had written Mr. Charles Krug, ASKING for a Bahá'í discussion. Firuz also filled a speaking engagement on April 25, before the Young People’s Fellowship of the Washington St. Baptist church, as part of a program of getting better acquainted with other religious groups.

Anchorage, Alaska

Public recognition was given to the Bahá'í efforts against racial discrimination in Anchorage at the organization meeting of the Anchorage Youth Council. With various committees reporting on youth conditions, the chairman of the Committee on Youth in Minority Groups reported, "We have found that the Friendships Unlimited group and the Bahá'í Faith are actively working against race discrimination in Anchorage." This was particularly significant since the Bahá'í Faith was never mentioned by the Bahá'í member of the committee, Janet Stout.

(Ed. note: This is the last installment of a series of excerpts from the letters and diaries of Martha Root, compiled by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ford. It is suggested that the various installments now be gathered together and read in their full continuity, for a fuller grasp and appreciation of the indomitable spirit of this valiant pioneer and the flow of inspiration to be gleaned by such a reading.)

Karachi. (August) How can I put in one short letter the report of four months more "spiritual skylarking"! (Sura to Bombay, Ajmer then Indore). April fourteenth I arrived in Indore to take part in the All Faiths Convention... One man had a paper on the need of a great universal religion, and explained what it ought to inculcate. A great Hindu professor arose and said: 'The Bahá’í Faith we have been hearing so much about in this Convention is a universal religion and it inculcates all your suggestions and more The Bahá’í Faith is READY, why not accept it for a universal religion?”... It is remarkable how many religious conventions are being held in different parts of India, and the N. S. A. of India, and Burma is invited to send, and does send Bahá’í speakers to every one of them. The N. S. A. is very efficient and very, very spiritual; the members work almost beyond human endurance and they are as united as one soul in nine bodies...

Lahore. (October) Since I wrote you from Karachi, I wish to tell you that the three thousand copies of my book “Táhirih the Pure, Iran’s Greatest Woman” which I published in Karachi, have been sent out over the world... I have already heard from more than twenty countries about this book...

No Bahá’í teachers have ever toured the Northwest Frontier Provinces of India, and the N.S.A. was very eager to have these cities opened to the Bahá’í Religion. Really this trip has been historic in the fact that so much of this vast country has been toured, even including Colombo, Ceylon to the south and Kashmir to the north, and all Burma to the east... It was extraordinary the way we met prepared souls, for we went as strangers, and only stayed two days in each place... but we hope these visits are only the beginning of further work down through the ages—"Where the acorn falls, the oak tree grows.”

Bahá’í Youth class in Sioux Falls, Sd. Dakota.
... A great scholar, Prof. M.H.H. of the Royal Asiatic Society Library of Calcutta, a leading Orientalist of the world, has written about Tahirih. Perhaps he is one of the first great Indian scholars to write about the Faith. He said that he had first met the fine Iranian Baha’i teacher, Ibn Asdaq, who came to India about 1902 or ’03. “He was so charming, so spiritual, so cultured,” said Prof. H., “and we read the figan together in Persian.” This very sentence throws an illuminating light to us today, on the qualities that a Baha’i teacher should possess. We must all be teachers today, and the great scholars of this and the coming generation will be quickened or left unawakened perhaps, by the way we present the Cause to them...

I was so touched: a Baha’i had gone from Calcutta nearly two years ago to spread the Faith. He was very poor and lived on seven rupees (less than three dollars) a month. Baha’i friends had given him a present of money to buy a bullock and a cart to help him earn his living. The bullock and cart were stolen from him, and for several days he had no food; then Mr. P. found him; but later this most devoted self-sacrificing Baha’i whom everyone who knew him praised, took the plague and passed on in Madras, a month before we arrived. ... To me that Baha’i was as great as the widow with her mite (in the New Testament) for he gave his ALL! Because of his self-sacrifice, Baha’u’llah will OPEN the doors of Madras to the Baha’i Faith!

(December) ... Like you I am very sick at heart about the war clouds, but I have bought my ticket third class as far as Australia, and even if war comes, I expect to go forward with my plan...

On ship from Perth to Adelaide, Australia, Jan. 26, 1939

My back was very, very lame, and it is still hurting a little. My back would not be WELL even if I did not do one thing about it, and I thank God I can work a little longer. I am HAPPY in the work because I see how it helps many souls. Whatever our troubles are, they are as nothing compared to the world troubles; all we can do is pray as hard as we can to help make a better world. How thankful I am that I can work. I shall concentrate to do the utmost possible in Australia and New Zealand until early May.

Adelaide, Jan. 29. We have consulted and made plans for the work in Australia. They have nearly seventy lectures arranged for, and nearly twenty broadcasts under consideration. Of course I submit the radio manuscripts for the Directors to see...

Melbourne, Feb. 10. Last night, I broadcast "Tahmas, Iran's Greatest Woman" at 9:45. It was a state broadcast, the greatest here, and at least 500,000 people listened in. The Director said: "It is a perfect broadcast!" (It is my favorite broadcast. ... This is thrilling, gripping, it moves me until it seems to be Tahmas speaking her own self to the modern world.) ... The nine o'clock hour is the best hour of all on their programmes... Tomorrow afternoon from two to six o'clock in my hotel I am giving an "at home" to the people... who wish to come and meet me and ask me questions. The invitation is in the newspapers, (for everyone in the city) and was given out at the luncheon... the Hotel Manager gives me the reception room free (the fee is generally nine shillings) and he said: "I see you do everything for humanity, you do not do anything for yourself, I will give you the room." The temperature is 108 degrees F., I shall have plenty of ice water and glasses (I have to pay for the ice water) and some biscuits. Mr. Baktian of Kansas gave them to me, but—shall not serve tea. It would be too expensive—and they are coming not for food, but to ask questions, it is all right. (P.S. Later the Spiritual Assembly telephoned me and said they wished to serve tea at the party and they are going to do it. We expect a large party.)

Tenderest love to you all

Today I received a cablegram from our beloved Guardian from Haifa: "Grieve illness, fervently, lovingly, praying. Shoghi." I was so thrilled and happy to receive it. I am making every effort to get better, but I have suffered so much... I try to endure the pain and I pray to Bahá'u'lláh to hold my hand and help me to bend every nerve to try and get better. I trust Him and I know that He will walk with me to the end. I pray that even this illness in the mystery of God will bear good fruit, that this crisis will be an impulse forward to promote the Cause of God.

(September) I am so near the shore of eternity... I thank you each and everyone for all that you will do to help me, and I thank you for your love. I do not speak, so late tonight, of the glorious side of life after death. We shall all walk together arm in arm, you and I; and in the mystery of God, the Bahá'ís will confer together, understand each other... I am glad to go through this terrible agony; for if it came it must have come for a purpose... If our love for one another has been deepened, if this servant has been able to witness for her Lord, if the ties between India, Australia, New Zealand and the Hawaiian Islands is strengthened, then I have not come in vain. Everything has been successful... Such are our lives...

World Order Magazine

With justifiable hopes of passing the half-way mark in our call for help to procure 1,000 additional subscribers to World Order, before the end of June, we extend our heartfelt thanks to the many friends through whose efforts and generosity this task has been accomplished. Up to May 1st a total of 425 additional enrollments have been received.

The numerous letters with subscription gifts to friends and for library donations, are especially gratifying and reflect the sentiments of the contributors, who realize that in these days of world re-making, a World Order subscription gift to a friend may mean a new Bahá'í enrollment or that a subscription donated to a Public Library may enlighten many of the Library readers to the real value of the Bahá'í Teachings.

Subscription rate to World Order is $2.00 yearly. Address orders to World Order Magazine, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois with name and address of new subscriber, or if you wish to donate one or more new subscriptions to libraries, address order to World Order Library Fund and if desired we will select placement and notify the Librarian that the subscription is donated by you.

Latin America Moves Toward Independence

The two National Teaching Committees of Latin America, one for South America and one for the Caribbean Area, are getting underway with their year's projected work, aiming at increasing the local Assemblies in their territories and developing their national administration so that it will be able to continue independently of the guidance and assistance of their brothers in the United States, through the Inter-America Committee, upon the establishment of their own National Spiritual Assemblies in 1951.

The Chairman of the South American NTC, Esteban Canales, of Valparaiso, Chile, is devoting several months to a teaching trip that has already taken him to Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, and will carry him on through Colombia, Venezuela, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay and Argentina. Through him, the National Committee will thus obtain a comprehensive picture of the Bahá'í communities spread over that vast continent and thus be greatly enabled to more wisely plan and coordinate Bahá'í activities in all of these countries.

The Secretary of the Caribbean NTC, Natalia Chavez, is going to Mexico City for the first meeting of that Committee this year, having terminated her brief vacation with her family in Honduras, where, also, she made teaching trips to the new Bahá'í Assemblies in the towns of San Pedro Sula and Taulabe. In San Pedro Sula the Cause has caught the interest of the business and professional people. In Taulabe, where as yet there are no hotels or electric lights, the entire town has been attracted to it. These two Assemblies were formed last April as a result of the teaching work done there shortly before, during her vacation, by Maria Francisca Rivera, of the Tegucigalpa community.

Meanwhile, our pioneer Lucha de Padilla is proceeding to her post in San Jose, Costa Rica, making stops in all the Central American countries en route.

From Buenos Aires comes word that a large quantity of books have been shipped from there to Santiago, Chile, where henceforth the Spanish Publishing Committee will be located, and that all books still in Buenos Aires will be shipped out soon.

The town of Cordoba, near Buenos Aires, has given a warm welcome to the Bahá'í Message. Shirley Warde and Salvador Tormo have spoken at several large meetings and secured fine newspaper publicity there. The new Assembly of Cordoba, organized last April with 11 members, now numbers 13.

Helen Shearer, who just returned to this country after 11 months in Brazil, and who was responsible for the formation of the Santos Assembly last spring, has been a visitor in Chicago and at Inter-America Committee meetings. She has given us valuable suggestions for preparing pamphlets especially designed to appeal to the Latin Americans.

Our stalwart pioneer, Eve Nicklin, at the request of the National Teaching Committee of South America, and of the Guardian, has gone to Punta Arenas, at the tip of Chile, to strengthen that community. Here in this city, the closest to the South Pole, Eve has gathered a class of 20 English students, and in her free time arranges Bahá'í programs and publicity, and otherwise serves the Cause.

Sheila Rice-Wray, in Ciudad Trujillo, the Dominican Republic, describes how she was able to interest some people in the Faith: "One day I prayed to find some more people to tell about the faith," writes Sheila. "That night I collapsed in class, and two of my students called a taxi, brought me home, got medicine, fixed me all up, and then sat down to hear all about the Faith."

The Panama City community are thrilled with their new and attractive Center. After two years' searching for a place, they finally found one that was for them in every way ideal.

A year-old Assembly in war-torn Costa Rica has set a shining example of true Bahá'í devotion. In the little town of Quepos, as soon as meetings were permitted, the believers gathered together and decided, as their first act, to collect $10 and send it to their National Treasurer. For this small and poor community, this was a large sum and real sacrifice.

Perfection and Complete Mercy

Humanity is not perfect. There are imperfections in every human being and you will always become unhappy if you look toward the people themselves. But if you look toward God you will love them and be kind to them, for the world of God is the world of perfection and complete mercy.

A Resumé of Some Key Thoughts on Teaching Recorded at 1948 Convention

1. Emphasis on deepening our own consciousness by regular study. Comprehension and conviction by this means.
2. Special study on the Covenant and the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.
3. Goal for the individual of confirming one new believer this year.
4. Teaching individually by word of mouth and by pamphlet distribution, and with daily follow-up.
5. Area meetings for the public, so located that several communities can take part.
6. Goal for the Regionals of a minimum of fifteen members in every community.
7. Goal of Regionals to bring further groups to assembly status; a second assembly where possible in virgin areas.
8. Encouragement of firesides for enquirers, by as many believers as possible, and not to be dependent upon attendance of other community members.
9. Association with liberal groups for contact purposes (Example, Great Book Club).
10. Teacher training in communities and schools.
11. Daily prayer for unity within our own groups.
12. Attitudes of encouragement in communities, releasing all to make contact and teaching efforts with audacity and enthusiasm.
14. Study of Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, p. 390, for directive in teaching a fireside.
15. Use of seminars or series, rather than single presentations alone.
16. Psychology of teaching:
   (a) Begin with special interest of enquirer.
   (b) Sympathetic recognition of backgrounds, and care not to sound dogmatic.
   (c) Avoidance of arguments.
   (d) Emphasis on life rather than theory.
   (e) Care not to give too much at first, but attractive development of a usable branch of the Teachings to inspire them to further investigation (use of stories and illustrations rather than heavy material).
   (f) Hospitality as an aid.
   (g) Necessity of flame and the spirit of love.
   (h) Confirmation dependent upon the spirit of love.
   (i) Further study immediately arranged following confirmation and registration.
   (j) Development of a universal sense and spirit.
17. Further coordination of programming needed nationally.
18. Training of teachers should meet the expanding need.
19. Use of the visual and radio facilities as well as the literature.
20. A faster start, with no summer lull.
21. Immediate regional conferences with the believers at large.
22. Continuance of all extension work done by assemblies.
23. Periodic national information on progress.
24. Immediate publication of goals chosen by Regionals.
25. Emphasis on attaining spiritual prerequisites of success.
26. Itinerant teachers for groups and smaller assemblies.
27. Courses on good chairmanship as well as on teaching.
28. Giving the Word as a source of courage.

Public Relations Launches Campaign on Religious Education

Last month, against the backdrop of the recent Supreme Court decision which brought to a climax the struggle between the churches and schools, the Public Relations committee unwrapped its new national campaign on the theme of Religious Education for a Peaceful Society. By far the most widespread plan the committee has attempted, it marked the start of an advertising drive, using the theme which opened the door of the Bahá’í Teachings that “the prophets are the real educators of humanity.” Variations of the theme will be presented, such as “what men must know about religion in order to survive” and “what men seek in religion.” It combines in one brief and complete phrase three concepts of vital public importance—religion, education and peace.

The campaign went into action early in June when the theme was announced to the press and radio through their trade papers, “Editor & Publisher” and “Publishers’ Auxiliary.” “Bahá’ís recognize,” the ad ran, “that the gap between education in the factual sense, and denominational incultation of religious doc-
The first public ad in the campaign appeared in the “Saturday Review of Literature,” whose readers had this salient reminder: “Religion as blind tradition and separate sect has come to an end. The Baha’i definition of faith is conscious knowledge.” The ad further cited the three most urgent needs of human personality today: “Recovery of the basic purpose of life through a clarified understanding of God’s relationship to man and man’s relationship to God... Opportunity to participate in a powerful world-wide affirmation of human unity which uproots prejudices of race, class and creed... conviction that the pattern of a world society has been created to release the forces of mind and conscience for the victory of peace on earth.” Advertisements in “Newsweek” and “United Nations World,” told the “Education in Religion” theme in another way.

The advertising series, backed by a publicity and direct mail campaign, continues July 17 in “Saturday Review of Literature” and in the August 9 “Newsweek.” Explaining that the main point about an ailing society is the number and diversity of its sectarian creeds, the copy cites: “Division of faith in God prevent the people from attaining the moral unity needed to generate power enough to uproot the real causes of disease.”

A new public teaching pamphlet has been prepared on the general theme. This will be available to communities. A compilation, “What modern man must know about religion,” prepared by the committee to bring together Baha’i teachings on the theme has been approved by the NSA and will be released by the Publishing Committee as a Baha’i study aid.

Scheduled for general release in early fall, the public relations campaign will utilize every means of publicity available. Local assemblies and groups, through their publicity chairmen, will receive full information about the campaign plan by August 1. Inquiries should be addressed to the secretary, Baha’i Public Relations, 112 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

JULY

It behoveth the people of Bahá to die to the world and all that is therein, to be so detached from all earthly things that the inmates of Paradise may inhale from their garment the sweet smelling savor of sanctity, that all the peoples of the earth may recognize in their faces the brightness of the All-Merciful, and through them may be spread abroad the signs and tokens of God, the Almighty, the All-Wise..."
The Love That Shows Itself in Deeds

A Letter from the Guardian

The recognition given your Assembly (as representative of the other National Spiritual Assemblies) by United Nations as a non-governmental body entitled to send representatives to various U. N. conferences, marks an important step forward in the struggle of our beloved Faith to receive, in the eyes of the world, its just due, and be recognized as an independent World Religion. Indeed, this step should have a favorable reaction on the progress of the Cause everywhere, especially in those parts of the world where it is still persecuted, belittled, or scorned, particularly in the East.

In these days, when his mind has been so preoccupied with the grave problems and difficulties, he is indeed weighed down with various problems and difficulties. He is indeed carrying, and brought him moments of pride and happiness, when his heart was weighted down with various problems and difficulties. He is indeed grateful for this active support, this love that shows itself in deeds that rise to meet and overcome every obstacle!--Written by the Guardian, through his secretary, in a letter to the NSA dated May 18, 1948.

ELECTION RESULT

Leroy Ioas was elected to the National Spiritual Assembly to fill the vacancy caused by the passing of George Latimer.

Where the Budget Stands

The annual budget as reported amounts to $283,000, plus deficit of $59,000 carried over from the Temple construction fund of last year. Total budget, $342,000.

In May and June the Temple construction fund received $24,906.09, and the income of the National Fund was for that period $27,766.63. Total income, $52,672.72.

If we divide the total budget, $354,000, into twelve, to set up a standard for the average monthly income, we get the figure of $29,500. For the two months, May and June, the rate of income should be $59,000, about $6,400 more than was actually received.

These figures are most encouraging, but July and August are invariably the months of lowest income. Will the friends overcome this annual temporary irresponsibility?

NSA

A Call for Unity and Sacrifice

A printed letter has been mailed to every American Baha'i home address. It is a call for unity and sacrifice during the third year of the Seven Year Plan. The National Spiritual Assembly requests local Assemblies to refer to the letter at a Nineteen Day Feast, and Regional Committees to emphasize its importance in their conferences and other contacts with groups and isolated believers.

Public Interest in Faith Increasing

The Baha'i Faith in North America entered a new era of increasing public influence with the Centenary celebrated in 1944. The community of believers finds itself immersed in an ocean of spiritual power which moves mysteriously and irresistibly whenever a sincere effort to spread the teachings is made.

Every Baha'i is concerned with public relations, because every Baha'i in himself as in his local and national community draws upon that vast reservoir of force. Its waves are set in motion by whatever is done in the name of the Faith. The time has come, therefore, to undertake larger and larger public campaigns and learn more and more consciously how to make right use of the instruments by which spiritual influence can be exerted on a great scale.

For the promotion of the Faith of Baha'u'llah all these instruments were developed—press, radio, motion picture, whatever acts upon the minds and hearts of human beings. But they will not fulfill their mission until the Baha'i community itself is fully prepared. Step by step, with boldness yet with wisdom, with enthusiasm yet with patience, we have received the call from the Guardian to begin the exertion of public influence as never before.

Technical training and experience are needed along with knowledge of the teachings and desire to serve. The association of active workers along public relations lines throughout the entire community is one of the first requisites. The exchange of ideas, experiences and methods can develop rapidly a collective capacity to produce results not even dreamed of a few years ago. The public is ready for the Baha'i message. That is the sign and the challenge to concentrate energy on constructive work.

The national public relations program has begun to make lines of force reaching into almost every
The friends must, at all times, bear in mind that they are, in a way, like soldiers under attack. The world is at present in an exceedingly dark condition spiritually; hatred and prejudice of every sort are literally tearing it to pieces. We, on the other hand, are the custodians of the opposite forces, the forces of love, of unity, of peace and integration, and we must continually be on our guard, whether as individuals or as an Assembly or Community, lest through us these destructive, negative forces enter into our midst. In other words, we must beware lest the darkness of society become reflected in our acts and attitudes, perhaps all unconsciously. Love for each other, the deep sense that we are a new organism, the dawn-breakers of a New World Order, must constantly animate our Baha'i lives, and we must pray to be protected from the contamination of society which is so diseased with prejudice. — To the Spiritual Assembly of Atlanta, February 5, 1947, through his secretary.

Significance of the Remains of the Prophets

There is no special physical significance in the remains of the Prophets or relics of Their Persons. But there is a profound spiritual significance in the sense that Their dust was the physical mirror of the greatness of God. In other words we know God through His Prophets, Who have bodies; these bodies were the physical mirror of the greatness of God. In other words we know God through His Prophets, Who have bodies; these bodies were the physical mirror of the greatness of God. In other words we know God through His Prophets, Who have bodies; these bodies were the physical mirror of the greatness of God. In other words we know God through His Prophets, Who have bodies; these bodies were the physical mirror of the greatness of God. In other words we know God through His Prophets, Who have bodies; these bodies were the physical mirror of the greatness of God.

Esslemont Book

Not to Be Revised

A number of believers have expressed the view to the NSA that “Baha'u'llah and the New Era” should be revised, so as to relate its exposition more directly to the conditions existing today. The book in its original form was written some twenty-five years ago.

This question was addressed to the Guardian and in his letter of May 18, 1948, written through his secretary, the Guardian answered:

“R. does not consider that Baha'u'llah and the New Era should be revised at present, but should be continued in its present form.”

Excerpts from Letters of the Guardian to Assemblies and Individual Believers

“Custodians of Love”

The friends must, at all times, bear in mind that they are, in a way, like soldiers under attack. The world is at present in an exceedingly dark condition spiritually; hatred and prejudice of every sort are literally tearing it to pieces. We, on the other hand, are the custodians of the opposite forces, the forces of love, of unity, of peace and integration, and we must continually be on our guard, whether as individuals or as an Assembly or Community, lest through us these destructive, negative forces enter into our midst. In other words, we must beware lest the darkness of society become reflected in our acts and attitudes, perhaps all unconsciously. Love for each other, the deep sense that we are a new organism, the dawn-breakers of a New World Order, must constantly animate our Baha'i lives, and we must pray to be protected from the contamination of society which is so diseased with prejudice. — To the Spiritual Assembly of Atlanta, February 5, 1947, through his secretary.
Lifting the Burden of Misery from Mankind

Regarding the question you raised: In the first place every believer is free to follow the dictates of his own conscience as regards the manner in which to spend his own money. Secondly, we must always bear in mind that there are so few Bahá'ís in the world, relative to the world's population, and so many people in need, that even if all of us gave all we had, it would not alleviate more than an infinitesimal amount of suffering. This does not mean we must not help the needy, we should; but our contributions to the Faith are the surest way of lifting once and for all the burden of hunger and misery from mankind, for it is only through the System of Bahá'u'lláh—Divine in origin—that the world can be gotten on its feet, and want, fear, hunger, war, etc., be eliminated. Non-Bahá'ís cannot contribute to our work or do it for us; so really our first obligation is to support our own teaching work, as this will lead to the healing of the nations.—To John E. Falk, December 8, 1947, through his secretary.

The Crimson Book

Unfortunately it would seem that the knowledge “which could largely eliminate fear” has not been disclosed or identified by Bahá'u'lláh, so we do not know what it is.

However, what Bahá'u'lláh did not elaborate but what He meant by the “world” recorded in the Crimson Book was the power of the Covenant. The “Crimson Book” refers to the Book of His Covenant, and the reference above means the power for unity which the Covenant possesses and radiates. On page 238 of “God Passes By” you will find the cross-reference to the “Crimson Book” and the “Epistle to the Son of the Wolf.”—To Charles S. Krug, January 5, 1948, through his secretary.

Attendance at Nineteen Day Feasts

Attendance at Nineteen Day Feasts is not obligatory but very important, and every believer should consider it a duty and a privilege to be present on such occasions.—To Mrs. Marziah Gail, December 15, 1947, through his secretary.

The Undertow of Materialism

People are so marredly lacking in spirituality these days that the Bahá'ís should consciously guard themselves against being caught in what one might call the undertow of materialism and atheism, sweeping the world these days. Skepticism, cynicism, disbelief, immorality and hard-heartedness are rife, and as the friends are those who stand for the antithesis of all things they should beware lest the atmosphere of the present world affects without their being conscious of it.

The Guardian agrees with you that a higher standard would be required before World Order could attract people of marked intellectual capacity; but he feels that the friends should make a greater effort to see that it gets supplied with better material; they should raise the standard of the present publication.—To Dr. Glenn L. Shook, November 19, 1945, through his secretary.

Answers to Questions

Note: The following answers were written by the Guardian through his secretary to Dr. Glenn L. Shook in a letter dated November 19, 1945.

1. & 2. The supreme Tribunal is an aspect of a world Superstate; the exact nature of its relationship to that state we cannot at present foresee.

3. Supreme Tribunal is the correct translation; it will be a contributing factor in establishing the Lesser Peace.

4. There is no statement in the teachings indicating that the Lesser Peace will definitely be established by 1957 or 1963.

5. The Most Great Covenant is different from the Everlasting Covenant.

6. No Bahá'u'lláh did not bring a complete system of economics to the world.

7. Profit-sharing is recommended as a solution to one form of economic problems.

8. There is nothing in the teachings against some kind of capitalism: its present form, though, would require adjustments to be made.

9. Islam attained a very high spiritual state, but western scholars are prone to judging it by Christian standards. One cannot call one world Faith superior to another, as they all come from God; they are progressive, each suited to certain needs of the times.

10. Of course, Man divides; only the Power which comes from God can unite.

11. & 12. The Seven Lights of Unity will not necessarily come in the order given. A product of the second may well be universal culture.

13. “Insaf” should be thought of as fairness.

14. Through meditation doors of deeper knowledge and inspiration may be opened. Naturally, if one meditates as a Bahá'í he is connected with the Source; if a man believing in God meditates he is turning in to the power and mercy of God; but we cannot say that any inspiration which a person not knowing Bahá'u'lláh, or not believing in God, receives is merely from his own ego. Meditation is very important, and the Guardian sees no reason why the friends should not be taught to meditate, but they should guard against superstitions or foolish ideas creeping into it.

15. In quoting prayers any part may be used, but should be quoted as it is, however short.

16. The Manifestos no doubt had some consciousness of Their station, but what the nature of that consciousness was we do not know.

17. Those who have never had any opportunity of hearing of the Faith but who lived good lives will no doubt be treated with the greatest love and mercy in the next world, and reap their full reward.

18. There is no objection to using Ruhí's book on mysticism.

19. We believe that Christ only was conceived immaculately. His brothers and sisters would have been born in the natural way and conceived naturally.

20. Both Caliphathe and Imamate mean successorship. Either term could be used.

21. Shoghi Effendi has always made it quite clear that, in the future, the teachings may be retranslated, if the need arises.

22. There is nothing in the teachings against swimming and dancing; mankind will become nobler, this we know; if that will include or eliminate such pastimes we do not know at present.
Beloved friends:

In the Bahá’í World Faith there is no room for mere passive acceptance of principle and truth. The believer today can not take over the attitude of the followers of ancient religions and merely by changing the name of his religion become a true Bahá’í.

The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh establishes new standards of achievement for the individual and for the community. It creates movement in society in the direction of definite goals. It drives forward ahead of the darkness and the ruin which has overtaken the unfaith of the past.

Time is of the essence. We first become conscious of this pressure for action when the Guardian set up the first Seven Year Plan — an allotted time for a measurable task. The second Seven Year Plan renews and intensifies our collective responsibility to advance, to attain, to succeed in a definite mission.

Let us apply this standard of active faith to one of the great objectives of the teaching work in the United States this year: the development of every small community to the number of fifteen adult, declared Bahá’ís. No community can take that vital step of progress by mere repetition of calendar programs. There must be an intense drive behind our Bahá’í activities and plans, the overcoming of inertia, the enkindlement of souls, the concentration of will.

Consultation is more than discussion and exchange of views. Consultation is becoming ignited from the flame of a common purpose. The most illiterate, inexperienced and humble of believers in a community may be the one who first becomes aflame and communicates the holy fire to his fellow believers.

Enthusiasm and conviction precede agreement on any specific teaching plan. They are its wings, its power of life and the cause of its success. A Bahá’í community can and must blend the force of emotion with clarity of vision and sound judgment. This blending of all available spiritual resources is true unity. When that degree of harmony is attained, every individual can share the capacity of all his fellows. The experience is mutual, not selfish.

The world around us despairs because individuals do not find this fulfillment of spiritual fellowship. Alone the individual feels lost and frustrated, or his capacity hardens into accomplishment for himself or for his own particular group. When a Bahá’í community learns how to fuse the souls into an all-embracing unity it will attract. Teaching needs this spiritual communion to bring enlightenment to the seeker.

It is because the element of time has become so vital that the National Spiritual Assembly wishes the Regional Teaching Committees and the Extension Teaching Committees to assist the smaller communities this year. In no part of the national community can we afford to crystallize around the negative attitude of passive acceptance. There are so many weeks, days and hours at our command. The acceptance of help involves no lessening of the authority vested in the local Assembly. On the contrary — authority is actually fulfilled when we learn how to take advantage of every opportunity to grow.

Crystallization can also overtake us in larger communities. There is no point at which Bahá’ís can stop and say they have done their work. The larger community must also set a standard of progress for itself this year, and with all its resources drive forward from power to power.

Faithfully yours,

—National Spiritual Assembly

Temple Construction Progress Report

Rapid progress has been made in carrying forward the successive steps necessary to bring the Temple interior project to the point of letting contracts for the placing of the ornamentation.

On May 28, the Temple Trustees awarded a contract to the George A. Fuller Company, who will act as general contractors for the interior work, and will be responsible for providing all the labor and materials for the completion of the interior of the Temple, as called for in the plans and specifications prepared by the architects.

The Fuller Company was the contractor for the erection of the superstructure of the Temple, which was completed in 1930 and 1931, and this organization was again chosen for the current phase of construction because of its familiarity with the Temple structure, and also because of the very favorable contract terms offered to the Trustees.

Mr. Shaw, the architect, and his associates, are currently engaged in completing the working drawings, specifications, and architectural details, and it is now expected that actual construction work on the nine vertical piers supporting the dome will begin in the early Fall.

Meanwhile, the necessary repair work on the decks of the main story and first gallery is being carried out under a sub-contract negotiated by the Fuller Company in consultation with the architect, and with the Temple Maintenance Committee.

Arrangements for the work of modeling the details of the ornamentation have been made, and this very important phase of the project is now under way at the New York studios of Rochette and Parzini, noted sculptors and modelers. The architect and the members of the Bahá’í Technical Advisory Board are supervising this work very closely, and have informed the Trustees that they are very pleased with the manner in which the flowing motifs of the Bourgeois ornamentation are being retained in the simplified design approved by the Guardian.

Photographs of the simplified interior design and the detailed section models will be published in a subsequent issue of BAHÁ’Í NEWS.

Renewed Enthusiasm in Europe

From the many letters that are coming to the European Teaching Committee from the pioneers in all the goal countries it is evident that they have resumed their teaching work following the Geneva Conference with renewed enthusiasm and dedication. All of the pioneers have a thorough understanding of the immediate goals before them and are planning their teaching work and that of consolidating the newly formed Assemblies efficiently and systematically. At the last National Convention in Wilmette the Chairman of the European Teaching Committee announced that there were 81 Bahá’ís enrolled in the goal countries of Europe. The Cause is moving forward steadily and the latest count shows that there are now 102. The wonderful thing about the new Bahá’ís of Europe is their mature understanding of the great significance of the Faith and their capacity to be active workers.

It seems that Dan Cupid has played his part in this European Project and has been especially active in Bern, Switzerland. Here in Bern, on June 11, Louise Baker one of our pioneers to Portugal and formerly of Lima, Ohio, and Hubert Matthias of Lisbon, Portugal, were married. Anna Kunz and Fritz Shaver read the Service. During the first week of July there was another Bahá’í wedding held in Bern; this time both the bride and bridegroom were native Swiss, newly declared Bahá’ís, Mrs. Olga Spreng and Mr. Friedrich Schär. This marriage service was read by Anna Kunz and Elsa Steinmetz. Some of the Bern pioneer’s closest contacts were invited to these weddings and were deeply impressed by the Bahá’í Service. In Brussels, Belgium, our pioneer, John Carré was married to Georgine Jacobs, a native of Brussels and a newly declared believer.

All of those who attended the recent Geneva Conference have expressed in detail their deep gratitude to the entire community of the Bahá’ís of the United States for their generous support and their continued interest in the European aspect of the second Seven Year Plan.

There is to be an International Congress of the United World Federalists in Luxembourg this September and the N.S.A. has been invited by the Secretary General of the World Federalists to send a representative of the Bahá’í Faith to participate as an Observer in this Congress. This invitation was gladly accepted as it will give the Bahá’í Faith added prestige in Europe and also will give our Observer and the Luxembourg pioneers the wonderful chance to make contacts.

EUROPEAN TEACHING COMMITTEE

Through a willing spirit and the coordination of many hands, the Geyserville Bahá’í School has made great strides forward in the past three years. Building, ground improvements, and varied alterations are all a part of this intensive work. The job is more commendable since it is necessary for most of the friends to travel some 150 miles round trip from the general San Francisco area, consequently using up their ends.

Facilities created by these efforts are children's classrooms, a cafeteria, dormitory for men and boys, grading of property and leveling to provide parking space. For many years the "Geyserville Press" has given publicity space to the Bahá’í School and its activities, and the following quote comes from this source:

"The most outstanding addition is the new building to house the children's school. It is a one-story building, 24 x 56 feet, standing to the north and west of the main buildings. It has a solid concrete foundation and floor, is painted white and has a gentle sloping green roof. It is divided into three large classrooms with separate entrances, each room equipped with large work tables and benches, book shelves, and a piano in the large central room. They are being used at present to accommodate the primary, intermediate and the junior youth groups. A long gravel porch continues across the entire eastern side of the building and it is planned to surface this at some future time with concrete and to cover it with a sloping roof."

Bosch Hall for men and boys was created by remodelling the old prune house, installing lighting, and furnishing with beds and other equipment. The cafeteria arose from the conversion of a garage and storage building to this purpose. It was completely equipped with stoves, refrigerator, cooking utensils, sinks and plumbing, water heater, and freezer unit.

The grading operations involved the hauling of 200 cubic yards of gravel to give a sizeable parking lot and a children's playground. A donation of $125 was received for play equipment. Adjacent to the Administration Building which also saw major improvements, is the new concrete floored patio, surrounded with bamboo plantings, and equipped with metal furniture, making a pleasant spot for relaxing and entertaining drop-in visitors. The 22 acre campus requires extensive ground maintenance and beyond removing weeds and cutting grass there has been planting of flowers, shrubs, ivy, verbena, and fig trees both for beauty and erosion control.

The carpentry, machinery, plumbing, and painting work was done in many cases by persons from quite unrelated professions. The school Maintenance Committee and other Bahá’ís have performed these labors, effecting the saving of large sums, and a great deal of equipment and materials were also donated.
Around the Bahá’í World

INDIA, PAKISTAN AND BURMA
Charles Mason Remey was asked by the N.S.A. of India, Pakistan and Burma to design the tomb of the well-known and beloved Bahá’í, Siyyid Musta’lil Roumi. Having received his drawings, their secretaries enthusiastically replied, “Beautiful as the design looks on paper, we can visualize how appealing it will be to the eye when it is ultimately built, as elaborately designed by you. It will be a song in stone.”

Pleased with the prompt response by two Indian believers to his appeal for the establishment of an outpost of the Faith in Ceylon, the Guardian has asked for volunteers to go to Siam and Indonesia. This will bring the number of countries opened to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh near one hundred. In his cable the Guardian said that the act of hastening this glorious consummation carries with it an inestimable reward.

To fulfill the aims of their four and one-half year plan, the Indian Bahá’ís must form 19 assemblies per year in the remaining two years. This is to be done in a land where care of the dispersed and dispossessed is an item on the National Budget and pioneer teachers stay at work near their families in spite of “lack of living accommodations and other difficulties.”

From the Geneva Bureau News Exchange:

AUSTRIA
Mr. Chr. Eberndorfer, Spallerhof-Siedlung, Waldinger Str. 7, Linz, Austria, an isolated believer, wishes to correspond with Bahá’í youth of other countries in English and/or German.

GERMANY
Two hundred believers from all parts of Germany attended the Eighteenth National Convention of the Bahá’ís of Germany and Austria on April 30 - May 2, 1948. The public session of the Convention was attended by over 400 people, though it was unadvertised. Over 5 million people in and around Frankfurt heard the Bahá’í Message when the Frankfurt radio station broadcast a program about the Bahá’í Youth and their activities. “Plans for a summer school encountered serious obstacles due to the economic situation, but finally an arrangement was made with Quaker Relief, who provide throughout the summer fortnightly and weekly camps with all equipment.”

Bruce Davison and his German bride, Charlotte, who were married in Frankfurt on May 19, attended the European Conference in Geneva on their wedding trip.

GREAT BRITAIN
“All Goals Achieved. Initial Phase of Six-Year Plan Completed.” is the thrilling “Stop Press” announcement on the cover of the latest Bahá’í Journal.

An animated and successful Regional Youth Conference, and the formation of several more local Youth committees, are visible signs of the steady advance and marked consolidation of Bahá’í Youth activities throughout the British Isles.

IRAN
In spite of renewed persecutions, homes plundered and set on fire, severe injuries inflicted on a number of friends, library books burned, and other acts of aggression, the Bahá’ís of Iran press steadily forward since the 45-month Plan was put into operation, 11 new Faith groups, 17 new Bahá’í Centers and 27 new Assemblies have been established. Perhaps these achievements can be explained by the following quotation from their “Bahá’í News and Review”’s “These tests and perplexities, grievous as they are, provoke in our minds the thought that pain and suffering constitute an outstanding factor in the evolution of the Divine Cause.”

CANADA (From Canadian Bahá’í News)
Of the nine non-Bahá’ís present at the winter session of the Laurentian Bahá’í school, five have joined the Faith. Encouraged by this record, and in order to foster the unity of the Canadian Bahá’í community and to help in the achievement of the tasks outlined for them in the Guardian’s Convention cable, several interesting summer school sessions have been planned for this season:

At the Laurentian Bahá’í School at Beaulac, Quebec, the session will be from July 31 to August 6. Dr. Ali Kuli Khan will guide in “The Deeper Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh.” Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh will speak on “How to Appeal to Our Fellowmen.” There will be a workshop on Effective Speech and on Community Problems. Further information may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Carl Lohne, 336 Ridgewood Avenue, Apt. 17, Montreal, Canada.

The Franklin Camp Summer Conference, at Georgian Bay, Ontario, will be held from August 7 to August 14. Subjects of study will be “The Foundation and Structure of World Civilization,” led by Mr. Harlan Ober. Mrs. Elizabeth Ober will guide a course on “The Reality of Man” based on the Bahá’í book of the same name. “Practical Teaching Suggestions” will be led by Miss Parti Walrath. Mr. Craig Weaver, 10 Miles Road, Minico, Ontario, Canada, is in charge of reservations for this session.

For information concerning the British Columbia Summer Conference at Vernon, B. C., Sept. 2 to Sept. 6, write to Mrs. Priscilla Waugh, 1852 Holland Avenue, RFD No. 3, Victoria, B.C.

Seriously and prayerfully considering the Master’s Teaching Challenge, for each Bahá’í to confirm at least one soul a year, the Canadian Bahá’ís are providing for themselves opportunities for spiritual growth and more effective teaching, through collective study and discussion.

On recommendation of the delegates at the first Canadian Bahá’í Convention, the N.S.A. of Canada has appointed a special teaching committee for Greenland and Newfoundland.

POLAND
Enquiries continue to come to the Warsaw group from all parts of the country. Special use has been made of copies of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in the Polish Foundation.

PALESTINE
At a time when the Holy Land is in the throes of a great tragedy, when law and order have almost completely broken down and peace and security are non-existent, the Bahá’í World is no doubt, anxiously following the news of Palestine with its heart and mind turned towards our Beloved Guardian and the Holy Shrines at “Bahijeh” near Acre and on Mount Carmel, at Haifa. Our Beloved Guardian, we are happy to report, is in the best of health.

Palestine is going now perhaps through its gravest and most decisive hour since the year 70 A.D. In that year as students of history recall, following a period of dreadful anarchy and chaos after the death of the Roman procurator Herod Agrippa, Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus amidst scenes of great horror and bloodshed. Are we living today in one of the really great, creative and divine moments of history? Are we witnessing the first stages of "the battle of that great day of God Almighty"? "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem," lamented Christ, "thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!

"Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

"For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." (Matt. 23:-37-39)

In the light of the present events in Palestine, it will be of great interest to the believers to recall what "Abdul Baha said (in 1914) about "Akka (Acre) and Haifa":

"In the future the distance between 'Akka and Haifa will be built up, and the two cities will join and clasp hands, becoming the two terminal sections of one mighty metropolis. As I look now over this scene, I see so clearly that it will become one of the first emporiums of the world. This great semi-circular bay will be transformed into the finest harbour, wherein the ships of all nations will seek shelter and refuge. The great vessels of all peoples will come to this port, bringing on their decks thousands and thousands of men and women from every part of the globe. The mountain and the plain will be dotted with the most modern buildings and palaces. Industries will be established and various institutions of philanthropic nature will be founded. The flowers of civilization and culture from all nations will be brought here to blend their fragrances together and blaze the way for the brotherhood of man. Wonderful gardens, orchards, groves and parks will be laid out on all sides. . . . Mount Carmel itself, from top to bottom, will be submerged in a sea of lights. A person standing on the summit of Mount Carmel, and the passengers and steamers coming to it, will look upon the most sublime and majestic spectacle of the whole world.

"From every part of the mountain the symphony of 'Ya Bahá'u'lláh Abha' will be raised, and before the daybreak soul-entrancing music accompanied by melodic voices will be uplifted towards the throne of the Almighty.

"Indeed, God's ways are mysterious and unsearchable. What outward relation exists between Shiraz and Tihran, Baghdad and Constantinople, Adrianople and Akka and Haifa God worked patiently, step by step, through these various cities, according to His own definite and eternal Plan, so that the prophecies might be fulfilled. This golden thread of promise concerning the Messianic Millennium runs through the Bible, and it was so destined that God in His own good time would cause its appearance. Not even a single word will be left meaningless and unfulfilled." (Esslemont-Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, PP. 212-213).

Tri-State Conference of Bahá'í Youth

The Bahá'í Youth of Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan held a conference at Muskegon State Park overlooking Lake Michigan on July 10 and 11, 1945. This occasion was for non-Bahá'ís as well as Bahá'ís, and was the first of its kind ever to take place. There were three delegates from each state who led the discussion and presentation of assigned topics.

After a swim in the lake, the first meeting was held on Saturday afternoon in the council circle—a delightful wooded spot. Paul Pettit, general chairman of the conference gave an opening speech welcoming everyone to the camp and outlining the purposes of this first inter-state conference.

PURPOSES

1. Consult on problem of promulgating teachings of Bahá'í Faith.
2. Provide opportunity for Youth to organize and conduct meetings, and gain experience in Bahá'í procedure.
3. Provide situation for exchanging ideas on youth work at home.
4. A chance to meet members of the National Youth Committee.
5. Provide a good time for all—very important in the light of personal contacts regarding new-comers to the Bahá'í Faith.

Mention was also made at this point of the responsibilities of the youth as Bahá'ís.

The delegates were then introduced and Illinois presented their topic of teaching. This was done by putting on a "mock fireside." An atheist and an avid churchgoer asked pertinent questions which were very effectively answered by Larry Cramer representing the Bahá'í viewpoint.

There followed a question period which continued after dinner. Then all adjourned to the beach for a moonlight swim.

The following day was opened with devotions led by the Michigan delegates, and after breakfast a wire from Horace Holley urging all youth at the conference to make outstanding contributions to the teaching work this year, was read. The Wisconsin youth, led by Farhang Javid gave a report of Bahá'í activities in colleges.

Special mention should also be accorded to Larry Hautz for making a special trip from Milwaukee to Muskegon to talk to the Baha'is about the National Youth Committee and plans for the future; and also for the two huge boxes of cookies that were eaten to the last crumb.

After another swim and an early supper the conference broke up. The whole affair was voted a huge success. The non-Baha'is there were very much impressed by the fire and zeal of the young people. They enjoyed themselves immensely and made many new friends amongst the Baha'is. They will not be likely to forget such a week-end, and expressed a desire for more and more literature.

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO

Word comes from Dr. Edris Rice Wray that San Juan’s fine community is unique in her experience, in that its youth outnumber the adult members, 16 of the former and 11 of the latter. Though her job as medical supervisor of a district in Public Health Dept. places her in Arecibo, 50 miles away, she manages visits weekends or oftener to San Juan. Margaret Swengel assists greatly in the work and they have two other goal towns for assemblies.

BUTTE, MONTANA

At a special fireside at the home of an interested seeker, Mr. Harold Hunt gave a talk to the gathering, which later enjoyed the unusual musical treat of Safta Kinney’s “American Anthem”. This remarkable composition has been presented to the President of the United States on behalf of Mr. Kinney for the American people, by Mr. Hunt.

HONOLULU, HAWAII

Both the Public Library and that of the University of Hawaii are well stocked with Bahá’í books which are frequently used, according to the librarian of the Honolulu Assembly, showing that the younger generation is being attracted. Due no doubt to this foundation interest, the Bahá’ís have been called on several times to give talks to student groups.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA

The first baby born of Bahá’í parents in Alaska was Dorothy Whitenack Stout, to Verne and Janet Stout, the event occurring on May 11.

LANSING, MICH.

Regular weekly newspaper ads have produced most interesting results in this State Capitol. There have been a total of at least 25 telephone inquiries about the Faith since January, only two of which were negative. Of these, all have been sent literature, several have been personally contacted, one person has ordered five books, another asked for literature to give to friends and two have paid two visits for personal talk.

The ads are two column inches and carry a bold-face heading “BAHÁ’Í WORLD FAITH.” Underneath is a short one- or two-sentence quotation from the Teachings, either verbatim or simplified. One twelve-week period carried the twelve principles re-worded as challenging statements. Care is exercised in the choosing of the quotations or the preparation of the statements so that each time the reader is presented with a really “new” idea, one that cannot produce the thought “But that is taught in any church.” The last line of the ad is the street address of the local meeting place and the telephone number.

This is the ad which produced three telephone calls the next day: “The Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh have the same basic principles as Christianity, but they fit the maturity of the world and the needs of our time.”

MUSKEGON, MICH.

This Community was asked to conduct a Bahá’í marriage service recently for two people, neither of whom are believers. A newspaper story of the wedding carried the word “Bahá’í” in the headline.

MIAMI, FLA.

The friends of Miami took advantage of the birthday of the chairman of their Spiritual Assembly to have a social get-together with their interested friends. Everyone having a birthday in May was given a small cake topped by one lighted candle and each one told of some outstanding experience in his or her life. Games were played and there were several musical selections and songs in which all took part. A friend from Havana, Cuba, was there and some out-of-town Bahá’ís, making a total of about 30 who greatly enjoyed this special occasion.

At their observance of the Martyrdom of the Báb, which they held at noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Eisenberg, there were 14 present including representatives of the Chinese, Jew, Negro and Gentile “races.”
"The Shield That Defendeth His Cause . . ."

"Every discerning eye can, in this Day, perceive the dawning light of God's Revelation, and every attentive ear can recognize the Voice that was heard from the Burning Bush. Such is the rushing of the waters of Divine mercy, that He Who is the Day Spring of the signs of God and the Revealer of the evidences of His glory is without veil or concealment associating and conversing with the peoples of the earth and its kindreds. How numerous are those who, with hearts intent upon malice, have sought Our Presence, and departed from it loyal and loving friends! The portals of grace are wide open before the face of all men. In Our outward dealings with them We have treated alike the righteous and the sinner, that perchance the evil-doer may attain the limitless ocean of Divine forgiveness. Our Name "the Concealer" hath shed such a light upon men that the froward hath imagined himself to be numbered with the pious. No man that seeketh Us will We ever disappoint, neither shall he that hath set his face towards Us be denied access unto Our court . . ."

"O friends! Help ye the one true God, exalted be His glory, by your goodly deeds, by such conduct and character as shall be acceptable in His sight. He that seeketh to be a helper of God in this Day, let him close his eyes to whatever he may possess, and open them to the things of God. Let him cease to occupy himself with that which profiteth him, and concern himself with that which shall exalt the all-compelling name of the Almighty. He should cleanse his heart from all evil passions and corrupt desires, for the fear of God is the weapon that can render him victorious, the primary instrument whereby he can achieve his purpose.

"The fear of God is the shield that defendeth His Cause, the buckler that enableth His people to attain a victory. It is a standard that no man can abase, a force that no power can rival. By its aid, and by the leave of Him Who is the Lord of Hosts, they that have drawn nigh unto God have been able to subdue and conquer the citadels of the hearts of men."

Itinerant Teacher

The following excerpts from a letter from Mr. Charles Mason Remey give some idea of the life of a traveling teacher abroad:

". . . On landing in England, I made a tour of nine assemblies in that country, Scotland and Wales. During these past four years there has been a strong pioneer movement in the British Isles. Pioneers have gone out from London and other places with the result that many new people are coming into the Faith—a number of them are energetic young people, so the Faith is much on the increase.

"In Geneva, we delegates appointed by the NSA attended the U.N. conferences on Human Rights . . ."

"I spent the month of June in Paris attending the meetings of the Bahá'ís and finishing up the designs of the Bahá'í House of Worship to be built on Mt. Carmel. Several months ago Shoghi Effendi wrote asking me to do this work and the drawings are now completed. These designs were exhibited in Paris at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts as a thesis upon which the French government gave me a diploma in Architecture. Until now it has been impossible to send the design to Shoghi Effendi but this I hope to do as soon as the upset conditions in Palestine permit. (Ed. note: Mr. Remey has also designed a tomb at the request of the NSA of India, Pakistan and Burma. See Around the Bahá'í World in this issue.)

"Recently I've been again in Geneva for a meeting of the friends there and now I am in Germany spending a few days with the friends here in Frankfurt, later to go to Stuttgart, Heidelberg and Esslingen as requested by our NSA. This will include the Summer School sessions in Esslingen where the friends from various outlying towns will assemble. After that, Vienna, Austria, then Italy and Switzerland again. Then to France and the sessions of the Summer School in England before sailing for home early in September . . ."
Latin America Session at Temerity

The Latin America session at Temerity Ranch, from June 18 to 28, provided a wonderful course of instruction for those in attendance. An intensive study of Some Answered Questions was delightfully conducted by Mrs. Loulie Mathews. Mrs. Gayle Woolson, home from South America on a three-month vacation, gave an excellent course on Public Teaching in Latin America.

This session was also significant for the several splendid occasions which it provided for mentioning the Faith to non-Bahá’í audiences. Gayle spoke at the Colorado Springs YWCA on “Bozgota During the Uprising,” after which, Flora Hottes showed beautiful colored slides of Bolivia, where she had pioneered. Gayle also spoke before the Rotarians and Lions clubs of that city with marked effect.

In Latin America itself, the two National Teaching Committees, one for Central and one for South America, are earnestly making plans for their forthcoming annual Congress, to be held the third week of January, 1949.

Esteban Canales, Chairman of the NTC of South America, has arrived in Ecuador, having visited the Bahá’í communities of Bolivia and Peru, on his long journey from Chile to all the countries of South America. He has given us a most beautiful and touching picture of the Lima, Peru, community and of the heroic work done there by Eve Nicklin, their pioneer, who left them a few months ago to strengthen the community of Punta Arenas, at the tip of Chile. Wrote Esteban: “The work which Eve accomplished here is marvellous. She used great wisdom in imparting the Teachings; she taught by her example...The Bahá’ís of Lima, who are mostly youths, are very sincere, capable, and conscientious. Now that their pioneer has left them, they have awakened, they have seen the marvelous work done by her, and they have arisen to assume their responsibilities. They are like children who had lived at their mother’s expense, but when she left them, they arose to meet the challenging situation with full courage and zeal, and each endeavor to improve himself so that he can better serve the Faith.”

Another vital Bahá’í community which numbers many youths is the one of San Juan, Puerto Rico. It has been growing rapidly, and recently reached the point where it outgrew the Center, the home of Sra. Martin, because the neighbors in the aristocratic neighborhood could not understand the purpose of the Bahá’í meetings and objected to them. For the present, therefore, they are looking for a new Center.

August, 1948
Dear and Valued Co-workers:

The response of the American Bahá'í Community to the urgent call to arise and remedy a critical situation has been such as to excite my highest admiration and exceed the hopes of all those who had waited with anxious hearts for this dangerous corner to be turned at such an important stage in the prosecution of the Second Seven Year Plan.

The rapidity with which the challenge has been met, the strenuous efforts which have been systematically exerted, the zeal and devotion which have been so abundantly demonstrated, the resolution and self-sacrifice which have been so strikingly displayed by the members of a community, burdened with such mighty responsibilities and intent on maintaining its lead among its sister communities in East and West, confer great lustre on this latest episode in the history of the prosecution of the Divine Plan. I am moved to offer its high-minded and valiant members my heartfelt congratulations on so conspicuous a victory, and on the preservation of an unblemished record of achievements in the service of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

The formation of the Canadian National Assembly, the conclusion of the preliminary steps for the completion of the interior ornamentation of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, the rapid multiplication and consolidation of the institutions of the Faith throughout Latin America, the steady expansion of the activities aiming at the proclamation of the Faith to the masses, the recognition secured, on behalf of the national institutions of a world community, from the United Nations Organization, above all the phenomenal success achieved through the constitution of no less than eight spiritual Assemblies in seven of the goal countries selected as targets for the transatlantic operation of the Plan, now crowned by the holding of the first teaching conference on the Continent of Europe—all these have served to immortalize the second year of the second Seven Year Plan and round out the mighty feat accomplished throughout the states and provinces of the North American Continent—the base from which the operation of a divinely impelled and constantly expanding Plan are being conducted.

Emboldened by the enduring and momentous successes won, on so many fronts, in such distant fields, among such a diversity of peoples, and in the face of such formidable obstacles, by a community now launched, in both Hemispheres, on its world-enfacing mission, I direct my appeal to the entire membership of this God-chosen community, to its associates and daughter communities in the Dominion of Canada, in Central and South America, and in the Continent of Europe, to proclaim, in the course of this current year, to their sister communities in East and West and by deeds no less resplendent than those of the past, their inflexible resolve to prosecute unremittingly the Plan entrusted to their care, and emblazon on their shields the emblems of new victories in its service.

The placing, with care and promptitude, the successive contracts, designed to ensure the uninterrupted progress of the interior ornamentation of the Temple, at a time when the international situation is fraught with so many complications and perils; the acceleration of the two-fold process designed to preserve the status of the present Assemblies throughout the States of the Union and multiply their number; the constant broadening of the bases on which the projected Latin American National Assemblies are to be securely founded; the steady expansion of the work initiated to give wider publicity to the Faith in the North American Continent and in circles associated with the United Nations; and, last but not least, the constitution of firmly established Assemblies in each of the remaining goal countries in Europe and the simultaneous initiation, in the countries already provided with such Assemblies, of measures aiming at the formation of several nuclei calculated to reinforce the structural basis of an infant administrative Order—these stand out as the primary and inescapable duties which the members of your Assembly—the mainspring of the multitudinous activities carried on in your homeland, in the Latin American field, and on the European front—must in this third year of the Second Seven Year Plan, befittingly discharge.

That the launching of one of these fundamental activities to be conducted by your Assembly during the present year—the commencement of the interior ornamentation of the Mother Temple of the West—should have so closely synchronized with the placing of the first two contracts for the completion of the Sepulchre of the Báb, as contemplated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, is indeed a phenomenon of singular significance. This conjunction of two events of historic importance, linking, in a peculiar degree, the most sacred House of Worship in the American continent with the most hallowed Shrine on the slopes of Mount Carmel, brings vividly to mind the no less remarkable coincidence marking the simultaneous holding, on a Naw-Rúz Day, of the first convention of the American Bahá'í Community and the entombment by the Center of Bahá'u'lláh's Covenant of the remains of the Báb in the newly constructed vault of His Shrine. The simultaneous arrival of those remains in the fortress city of 'Akká and of the first pilgrims from the continent of America; the subsequent association of the founder of the American Bahá'í community with 'Abdu'l-Bahá in the laying of the cornerstone of the Báb's Mausoleum on Mount Carmel; the holding of the Centenary of His Declaration beneath the dome of the recently constructed Mashriqu'l-Adhkar at Wilmette, on which solemn occasion His blessed portrait was unveiled, on western soil, to the eyes of His followers; and the unique distinction now conferred on a member of the North American Bahá'í community of designing the dome, envisaged by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, as the final and essential embellishment of the Bab's Sepulchre—all these have served to associate the Herald of our Faith and His resting-place with the fortunes of a community which has so nobly responded to His summons addressed to the “peoples of the West” in His Qayyum u'l-Asmā.

“This Sublime Shrine has remained unbuilt . . . .” ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, looking at the Shrine from the steps of His House on an August day in 1915, remarked to some of His companions, at a time when the Bab’s remains had already been placed by Him in the Vault of one of the six chambers He had already constructed for that purpose. “God willing, it will be accomplished. We have carried its construction to this stage.”

The initiation in these days of extreme peril in the Holy Land of so great and holy an enterprise founded by Baha’u’llah Himself whilst still a Prisoner in ‘Akká and commenced by ‘Abdu'l-Baha during the darkest and most perilous days of His Ministry, recalls to our minds furthermore, the construction of the superstructure of the Temple in Wilmette during one of the severest financial crises that has afflicted the United States of America, and the completion of its exterior ornamentation during the dark days of the last World War. Indeed, the tragic and moving story of the transfer of the Bab’s mutilated body from place to place ever since His Martyrdom in Tabriz, its fifty-year concealment in Persia; its perilous and secret journey by way of Tihrán, Isfahán, Kirmánsháh, Baghdad, Damascus, Beirut and ‘Akká to the Mountain of God, its ultimate resting-place; its concealment for a further period of ten years in the Holy Land itself; the vexatious and long-drawn out negotiations for the purchase of the site chosen by Baha’u’llah Himself for its entombment; the threats of ‘Abdu'l-Hamid, the Turkish tyrant, the accusations levelled against its Trustee, the plots devised, and the inspection made, by the scheming members of the notorious Turkish Commission of Inquiry; the perils to which the blood-thirsty Jamal Pâshá exposed it; the machinations of the Arch-breaker of Baha’u’llah’s Covenant, of His brother and of His son, respectively, aiming at the frustration of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá’s design, at the prevention of the sale of land within the precincts of the Shrine itself, and the multiplication of the measures taken for the preservation and consolidation of the properties purchased in its vicinity and dedicated to it—all these are to be regarded as successive stages in the history of the almost hundred year long process destined to culminate in the consummation of Baha’u’llah’s irresistible Purpose of erecting a lasting and befitting memorial to His Divine Herald and Co-Founder of His Faith.

As the Mission entrusted by ‘Abdu'l-Bahá to the followers of His Faith in the North American Continent gathers momentum, unfolds its potentialities, and raises to new heights of heroism and renown its valiant prosecutors, events of still greater significance will, no doubt, transpire, which will serve to enhance the value of the work which the prosecutors of the Plan are carrying out, to widen their vision, to reinforce their exertions, to sustain their spirit, to ennable their heritage, to noise abroad their fame, to facilitate their assumption of the unique functions distinguishing their stewardship to the Faith, and to hasten the advent of the day, which shall witness, in the Golden Age that is still unborn, their “elevation to the throne of an everlasting dominion,” the day whereon “the whole earth” will “resound with the praises” of their “majesty and greatness.”
