The latter amendment was necessarily made in a form to meet the three different types of civil area in which a Spiritual Assembly can now exist: a municipality (incorporated village, town or city), a township, or a county. The township area is available when there are nine or more Bahá’ís resident in the same township but all resident outside of the incorporated villages, towns or cities in that township. In the same way, the county area is available when there are no civil township areas in the State but the counties are small enough to enable an Assembly to meet conveniently. In revising the By-Laws, each local Assembly must use the proper wording to fit its own case, defining its area accurately in terms of the civil unit selected. For example: . . . the locality included within the civil limits of the municipality of Chicago (New York, or whatever city or town it may be); or this other wording: . . . the locality included within the civil limits of the township of Cloverdale (or whatever name the township may have). No set of local By-Laws should refer to the three alternatives of municipality, township or county, but only to the one actually employed.

Unincorporated Assemblies are equally responsible for following the standard By-Laws of a local Spiritual Assembly, and such Assemblies should also note the revisions published above.

Similarly, the By-Laws of the National Spiritual Assembly have also been revised, to preserve uniformity with the definition of functions and areas given in the local By-Laws. The friends are advised that at the meeting held March 21, 22 and 23, 1941, the National Spiritual Assembly revised its By-Laws as follows:—

Art. VII. This has read: “Whenever in any locality of the United States and Canada, be it city, town or village, the number of Bahá’ís resident therein recognized by the National Spiritual Assembly exceeds nine . . . .” etc. Amended to read: “Whenever in any locality of the United States and Canada, be it municipality, township or county, the number of Bahá’ís resident therein recognized by the National Spiritual Assembly exceeds nine . . . .” etc.

Art. VII. Second paragraph amended to read: “When, however, the number of Bahá’ís in any authorized civil area is exactly nine, these may on April 21st of any year . . . .” etc.

Art. VII. Section 12. Amended to read: “The sphere of jurisdiction of a Local Spiritual Assembly, with respect to residential qualification of membership, and voting rights of a believer in any Bahá’í community, shall be the locality included within the civil limits of the municipality, township or county.” Delete the part of this section which read: “but Bahá’ís who reside in adjacent, outlying or suburban districts . . . .” etc. The second paragraph, beginning: “All differences of opinion concerning the sphere of jurisdiction . . . .” etc., remains unchanged.

Latin-American Assemblies

Three local Spiritual Assemblies now exist in Central and South America—at Mexico City, San José, Costa Rica, and Buenos Aires.

The addresses for correspondence are: Sr. Antonia Gonzales Mora, Secretary, Bucareli 65, Bajos 2, Mexico, D.F.; Sr. Salvador Tormo, Chairman, Sarando 140, 7th Piso, Buenos Aires, Argentine; Sr. Guido Contreras, Secretary, Box 99, San José, Costa Rica.

The Latin-Americans Among Us

Whereas the friends who are interested in setting out as pioneers in Latin-American countries address themselves to the Inter-America Committee, those who are interested in working with Latin-American minorities in this country are requested to communicate with the International School Committee.

We anticipate that Latin-American conferences may be launched in various localities under the auspices of the Local Spiritual Assembly, but we shall be pleased to provide data on Latin-American affairs for the use of such conferences.

Besides, those who are studying Spanish and are hopeful of being able to attend the Pine Valley School next year are invited to make themselves known so that we can coordinate the efforts of all the friends working for Latin-American activities within the orbit of the Cause in this country.

The brief reference to a book about Ecuador entitled “The Donkey Inside,” appearing in the June issue of Baha’i News, was condensed to save space and the full statement is now given:

Another example is the book by Ludwig Bemelmans.

The Donkey Inside, which was very widely read and considered to give a picture of the life and customs of the people in Ecuador, and which we think a most charming, original and interesting account of travel impressions of some of the South American West Coast countries . . . On the other hand the Ecuadorian has found it a most incorrect account of the country and is highly displeased by the American press comments referring to our neighbor’s countries as “comic opera republics.”

“It would be a good policy as well as good tact to take account in our printed utterance about our neighbors in the South.”—(Pan-American Forum)

It should also be a warning to Baha’i pioneers not to accept too readily impressions of tourists which are not always accurate from the point of view of the native of the country.

A Call for Original Tablets

There are numerous translations of Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Baha in the National Baha’i Archives which are not accompanied by the original Persian Tablets.

The Guardian has indicated that in the future no Tablets will be published of which the authenticated original is lacking. Thus many glorious texts may be sacrificed unless the holders of the original Tablets take steps to assure their preservation in the official Archives.

Wanted: Back Numbers of Baha’i News

Any believer, or Assembly, able to supply back numbers of Baha’i News No. 10, or No. 14, is requested to communicate with National Baha’i Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois.

The National Spiritual Assembly has authorized the Archives and History Committee to explain this important matter to the friends, with a plea that Tablets be turned over to the Committee. It is hoped that each Assembly will take the question up for discussion at a Nineteen-Day Feast.

The Guardian has said that the work of collecting and publishing the Tablets is one of the most important tasks of this generation. The hope is that most of the originals still being held privately can be received during the next few months. The Committee will make available the list of Tablets needed on request.

Send original Tablets by registered mail to Mrs. May T. Scheffler, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street, Evanston, Ill.

Archives and History Committee

The Baha’i World

The Baha’i World Committee for Vol. IX is earnestly soliciting brief accounts of the work of pioneers in foreign fields with the dates and names of countries and a photograph to accompany each. The value of these records cannot be over-estimated and those who have been privileged to serve in any such capacity will contribute to the happiness of the Guardian and render to the Cause a most valuable service by complying with this request at once.

The Committee is resorting to this means of reaching all pioneers of both past and present as a personal letter entails much extra labor and in many cases the addresses are not known.

Nellie S. French, Chairman

Library Committee

The Library Committee has a number of encouraging things to report since compiling the Annual Report.

The number of requests for books have been vastly increased and books have been presented to libraries which will reach many people, as State Libraries, State Library Commissions and Traveling Libraries. We hope to receive more requests for these types of libraries which supply books over large regions.

Also, we are happy to report that books were donated to the Service Libraries in the Seventh Corps Area through the efforts of Mrs. Alice Dudley: Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas; Fort Riley, Kansas; Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyoming; Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri; Jefferson Barracks, Missouri; Fort Crook, Nebraska and Fort Omaha, Nebraska. Mrs. Dudley received a letter from the Headquarters which stated: “The commanding general directs me to extend his appreciation of this generous contribution to the camp libraries. Following is a list of the posts and camps to which you might direct these books. All correspondence addressed to the commanding officer will reach the proper person.” A tactful approach is necessary in contacting these libraries, as, in most cases, the books must be approved by the Army Chaplains who are in charge of the libraries. The Library Committee hopes to contact many of the Forts during the coming year and present books to these important libraries.

Duncan McAlear, a member of this committee, has been given the opportunity of speaking at a luncheon of librarians from Southern Massachusetts on the “World Order of Baha’u’llah” during April. He is planning to present a number of copies of “Baha’u’llah and the New Era” at that time and will doubtless make many valuable contacts.

Miss Virgie Vail has presented over a hundred copies of “The Glorious Kingdom of the Father Foretold” leading college, university and divinity school libraries. She has also offered copies for distribution to libraries through the Regional Teaching Committees. Miss Vail also plans to present this book to Navy and Army Libraries and to the Inter-America Committee for distribution to libraries in South America.

Books were presented to eighty libraries since March 16th. These included ten theological school libraries and the Departments of Religion of ten colleges and universities.
In several cases, the heads of these departments stated that they would use the volumes in their Comparative Religion Courses. The Helena Assembly did outstanding work in contacting the School of Religion at Montana University. Rev. Baty, the head of this Department, not only accepted a complete set of books but also asked for pamphlets to distribute to his students. In his letter, he stated: "I teach a new course "Modern Religious Movements" in which some time can be spent on an analysis of the Baha'i Faith ... The last three weeks of the course will be spent in building an adequate religion for today. It is my expectation that all the world's religions will have something to contribute to such a faith."

A printed slip with tributes to the Faith is now being pasted on the flyleaf of each book presented to libraries. It is hoped that this slip will attract the attention of library patrons and inspire them to read our books.

The Library Committee is also planning to send copies of the pamphlet "Appreciations of the Baha'i Faith" to the leading libraries throughout the country.

Mrs. Stuart Saxe, Chairman

Study of Islam

The Study Outline Committee is at present preparing a study course on Islam, its history and its teachings, for the use of Baha'is. It is the hope of the committee members, in view of the fact that as long as two years ago the Guardian urged the American believers to study Islam, that the course may be completed by the end of this committee year, June or July, and ready for the believers by fall.

The Committee finds it needs the cooperation of fellow-believers in the gathering of material for the course:

1) If there are Baha'is who have received Tablets from 'Abdu'l-Baha, or have received letters from the Guardian on any phase of Islam will they share these with the rest of us by placing copies in the hands of the Study Outline Committee? If these have been published, perhaps the receivers can send us notations concerning book and page.

There was such a letter sent to Miss Rosenberg which 'Abdu'l-Baha refers to elsewhere. Does anyone know where a copy of this letter can be secured?

2) If there are believers who, in a position to be acquainted with Islam, wish to make any suggestions whatsoever to the Committee, these suggestions will be most gratefully received. They may be concerning bibliography, personal experiences in traveling or in teaching, or results of personal and class study.

3) In preparation of the new course it has been found wise to include in each lesson references to non-Baha'i sources; that is, to books by historians and Orientalists. As some of the most interesting and valuable books would be unavailable to most Baha'i communities it is necessary, therefore, to quote occasionally from these books. Space limits prevent any very voluminous quoting, however. Therefore, the Committee suggests that Baha'i communities begin to build up their own libraries of Islamic literature.

4) The Study Outline Committee itself is eager to build up a central collection of Islamic materials to which Baha'is throughout America could refer, and which right at the present would furnish a basis for preparation of the new course. Believers who find books that they are willing to pass on, please then notify the Committee concerning price and place where they may be obtained.

The entire course will be based on Baha'i literature references, of which there are many. For this use communities will need at least one copy of Mysterious Forces of Civilization, The Dawn-Breakers, Some Answered Questions, and A Traveler's Narrative; but of The Iqan, Baha'u'llah's Book of Certitude, there should be one copy for each student.

A few non-Baha'i books useful in the course will be: Edward Gibbon, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire; H. G. Wells, Outline of History; Ameer Ali, Spirit of Islam (this is very hard to get: published in England); Dwight W. Donaldson, The Shi'ite Religion (out of print); George Sale, The Koran (with "Preliminary Discourse" if possible. This is a large volume); Alfred Guillaume, The Traditions of Islam; Dr. Sprenger, Life of Mohammed (from original sources); Simon Ockley, History of the Saracens (from original sources); Sir John Chardin, Voyages, ii. (quite Persian); Sir Percy Sykes, Persia, and A History of Persia, also The Glory of the Sh'Iah World.; Stanley Lane-Poole, The Moors in Spain; Sir Thomas Arnold, The Caliphate, and The Preaching of Islam; Hyat-ul-Kuloob, trans. by the Rev. James Merrick (Book of Shi'ah tradition).

Note: Consult public libraries, especially for biographies of Muhammad.

Enrollments and Transfers

Twenty-three enrollments of isolated believers were reported in May, and twenty-two in June.

News of East and West

Through the courtesy of the Los Angeles Assembly we are able to share a most interesting account of teaching work by Sydney Sprague, who wants the friends to know what a demonstration of the power of prayer was disclosed in the recent enrollment of six believers by his local Assembly.

"Last December I was reading a copy of Baha'i News which told of the passing of May Maxwell in South America. She was my spiritual mother and brought me into the Faith forty years ago in Paris. I thought back of the time when I taught and lectured in France, England and Germany, in India and Burma, and I wished in my heart that I might teach and lecture in the Argentine where she passed away. But since my stroke I could scarcely phrase an intelligible sentence."

A cablegram was sent to the Guardian asking him to pray that Mr. and Mrs. Sprague be strengthened to serve the Cause, to which he replied: "Assure prayers success Cause."

Unexpectedly Mr. Sprague then heard from a friend whom he had not seen for a number of years, and this friend invited him to pay a visit to his ranch, where Mr. Sprague's health greatly improved. During that visit he taught and confirmed his friend and five others. Moreover this new believer, Mr. Shafir, has been planning to open a school for boys at Buenos Aires. He and his four boys are studying Spanish in order to prepare themselves to carry out this intention.

In January and February, the San Francisco Assembly presented a series of "Educational Evening" at 560 Sutter Street. The program lists nine topics of extreme interest which are reprinted here as suggestions for other Assemblies.

A territory of deep public interest is covered by this succession of subjects, which are so well suited to attract people of capacity to the Faith.

The Teaneck Assembly has inserted two pages on the Bahá'í Faith in a pamphlet issued by the local Board of Commerce under the title "Facts About the Township of Teaneck," in the nature of a handbook about the community. The Assembly feels that the cost of this insertion is well justified as a teaching expense, since a copy of the pamphlet is given to every property owner in the town.

The two pages were made up with a photograph of the Temple, a brief description of it, the nine texts of Bahá'u'lláh which will appear over the Temple doors, some quotations from the literature, and announcement of local meetings.

A reprint of a letter written by Mr. Ouskouli of Shanghai to the editor of North-China Daily News and published in its issue of March 9, 1941 under the title "World Crisis: Religion Is the Remedy," has been received. Mr. Ouskouli quotes from the different Holy Books and lists five points taken from the precepts of Bahá'u'lláh which should be adopted by responsible statement.

Two recent issues of The Rangoon Times have contained extensive Bahá'í articles. On March 7 this influential journal published one and a half columns on the Bahá'í world order. On April 3 it reprinted the Guardian's well known passage on the pattern of the future society.

From London has come the November number of the bulletin issued by the N.S.A. under the title "The New World Order." It is listed as Vol II, No. VIII, which indicates that the bulletin has been published regularly despite the difficult conditions. This number contains excerpts from words of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Guardian, an editorial on "The Definite Goal," and basic principles of the Faith.

The Bahá'í Magazine: herald of the South, the organ of the N.S.A. of Australia and New Zealand, also comes regularly every quarter, the most recent copy being dated January, 1941. The contents include: Editorial, by D. M. Dugdale, Esperanto text, "La Maturigo de la Homaro," Answered Questions, Christianity and the New World Order, Bahá'í Prayers, A Brief Statement of the Bahá'í Attitude to War, Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh, The Promulgation of Universal Peace, and 'Abdu'l-Bahá's words on Meditation.

The following material comes to us through the News Letter of the Haifa Assembly:

"It gives us great pleasure to report to you the translation of the gist of a letter addressed to the Guardian by Mr. David S. Toeg, a member of the Bahá'í Spiritual Assembly of Baghdad. The letter contains news of unusual interest for the friends throughout the world. It describes in detail a most remarkable and successful journey undertaken by Mr. Toeg from Baghdad to the Sar-Galu mountain for the purpose of locating the historical grotto in which Bahá'u'lláh lived in retirement between 1854 and 1856 upon His leaving Baghdad for Sulaymányih. The latter is a mountainous region about 170 miles northeast of Baghdad, inhabited mostly by Kurds.

"Mr. Toeg went from Baghdad to Kirkuk by rail, traveling all night, then from Kirkuk by car to the town of Sulaymáníyih in the province which bears that name, a trip which took two and a half hours; thence to a small village called Shadaláh, another two and a half hours' drive in an automobile. From here, two hours' ride on horseback through mountainous country took the author to Sar-Galu.

"At Sulaymáníyih, the help of a faithful guide was obtained through the kindness of one of the notables of the town, a personal friend of Mr. Toeg, who had learned with great interest of the purpose of his visit.

"In Shadaláh, the author was very well received by the Sheikh of the village to whom he explained the aim of his visit and conveyed Bahá'u'lláh's Message. The Sheikh was extremely kind and helpful.

"Leaving Shadaláh on horseback, Mr. Toeg and his guide reached the village of Sar-Galu, in the very heart of the Sar-Galu mountain. Here they were very kindly received in the home of the village chieftain and for six hours talked with the oldest inhabitants of the village, who had gathered there for the occasion, trying to learn if they had any knowledge of the location of Bahá'u'lláh's grotto. Among those present there was a man reputed to be 110 years old. Unfortunately, he was not very clear in his thinking, at that age; but he said that he did remember having seen a venerable old man in one of the four caves in that mountain—and he named the cave. 'I cannot recall now the name of that venerable personage,' he added; 'but I do remember that one day I heard people saying that a holy man had come to that cave. So I went with the crowd to have a look at him.' At the end of the meeting, a large party set out with Mr. Toeg, including the Sheikh or chieftain, and proceeded to the caves. Of the four caves in that mountain, one looked to have been man-made, but the other three are works of nature.

"As no reliable information could be obtained concerning the identity of Bahá'u'lláh's cave, Mr. Toeg photographed all the four caves.

These photographs properly marked and labeled are now in the possession of the Guardian.

"The inhabitants of the Sar-Galu region are of Kurdish descent. Mr. Toeg writes very highly of them. He found them very hospitable, warm-hearted and sincere. They greatly rejoiced when told that they were living on a holy mountain, since Baha'u'llah Himself had selected it for His residence for two years.

"Thanks to the Finnish translation of 'Baha'u'llah and the New Era,' the Baha'is of Finland are already known in the Sulaymaniyah region. Mr. Toeg hopes that ways and means may soon be found to bring the light of Baha'u'llah's Message into the hearts of those strong and sturdy people of that holy mountain."

From the Baha'i Quarterly of the N. S. A. of Australia and New Zealand we select this interesting report:

"Following the success of the Preliminary Summer School held in June, 1940, and previously reported, the First Baha'i Summer School was held in Easter week at Mr. and Miss Blundell's summer cottage, Denewood, and the adjoining cottage at Browns Bay.

"The school was formally opened on Thursday evening by Miss Blundell, in the absence of the Chairman, Mrs. Axford, through illness. Miss Blundell extended a warm welcome to the seven members present. The convener of the Summer School Committee, Miss Burns, read an article on "Spiritual Illumination." After the reading she expressed the special pleasure it was to have two isolated believers with them for the period of the School session—Mrs. Lane of Weymouth and Mrs. Parkin of Whangarei, 150 miles distant. Although the numbers were small, Miss Burns said, this must not be compared with the immeasurable value the school offered for study and fellowship with each other, especially those prevented by distance from close association with the community. Owing to Mrs. Axford's inability to fulfill her allotted part the program was rearranged, provision being made for a fresh chairman at each session, thus enhancing the interest and giving opportunity for what was to some initial experience in chairmanship.

"Thursday evening passages from the Teachings were read. Mr. H. K. Blundell was the chairman at Friday evening's session. The speaker, Mr. J. H. Bennett, read his most interesting and carefully compiled essay on the lives of five of the outstanding heroes in "The Dawn Breakers," Nabil's Narrative.

"Saturday: Mrs. Lane presided at the morning session and four consecutive articles entitled "The Future Religion" by Howard Hurlbut were read by four of the students. These articles explaining many Bible prophecies in the light of the Teachings proved an enlightening contribution. Two more visitors arrived during the day and in the evening J. M. Barrie's one-act plays, "The Twelve Pound Look" and "The Will" were read.

"Sunday: Mrs. Parkin opened the session with prayer and reading. Miss Blundell spoke on the subject of "Prayer and Meditation" in her customary beautiful and practically helpful manner. Two other members arrived for the afternoon meeting which was addressed by Mr. Garth Ballantyne. Mr. Ballantyne has been doing social work amongst boys for a number of years and was in residence at his summer cottage next door to Denewood with 20 boys. His account of his work, the methods employed and the results achieved proved intensely interesting. His voluntary service for the adolescent youth of his district is worthy of the highest praise. God will assuredly continue to bless it.

"The evening session was opened with prayer and appropriate readings. Mrs. I. Robertson who was unable to attend the school kindly prepared a fascinating lecture on National Music illustrated by gramophone records. Mr. and Mrs. B. Collins conducted this session.

"Monday: Six friends from Auckland arrived during the morning but had to return before the evening session. Mrs. Parkin, as chairman, welcomed the visitors and read a letter from Miss Leighton, another absentee. Prayers and reading preceded the speaker, Miss Blundell, whose subject was "The Dawnbreakers."

"The afternoon session was conducted by Miss Burns, the subject being Baha'i Administration. The Institutions of the New World Order, the basis of their structure, unity and consultation, were ably dealt with. Miss M. Borrows was chairman at the evening session which was opened by the reading of the Lord's Prayer of the Moslem and a Healing Prayer by Baha'u'llah. Miss F. deLisle was the speaker and her subject 'The History of Islam' was a fascinating miniature of this vast subject.

"The Committee owes a deep debt of gratitude to all who contributed to make the school the success it undoubtedly was—to Mrs. Dewing for selecting the prayers, to Mr. Blundell for meeting the bus and conveying the friends to the school in his car; to those who prepared the cottages for occupation and those who undertook house duties and cooking, and to Mr. and Miss Blundell for the free use of their cottage. The opportunity the school afforded for fellowship and spiritual refreshment was inestimable, the spiritual confirmations immeasurably great."

This Sacred Trust

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and Groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

In the July issue of Bahá'í News we considered the teaching task throughout North America to be accomplished during the three remaining years of the Seven Year Plan. Now let us turn to the other American peoples and republics of Central and South America. The teaching task there is even more varied and demanding, for the Guardian has called for the establishment of a definite group, a nucleus of believers, in each nation of Central and South America by 1944. “Would to God every State within American Republic and every Republic in American continent might ere termination (i.e., Bahá’í century) embrace the light (of the) Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and establish structural basis of His World Order,” the Guardian cabled on May 1, 1936, to the Annual Convention. “The promulgation of the Divine Plan, unveiled by our departed Master in the darkest days of one of the severest ordeals which humanity has ever experienced, is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to their unimaginably glorious Destiny,” he declared in his letter dated November 14, 1936. “The seven year plan which it has sponsored and with which its destiny is so closely interwoven, must at all costs be prosecuted with increasing force and added consecration.” Thus, on November 25, 1937, Shoghi Effendi sealed his explanation of the mission entrusted to the American Bahá’ís.

By 1939 the Inter-America teaching work had attained the stage of “progressive, systematic penetration” as was emphasized by the Guardian’s cablegram to the Convention held that year. “Upsurge (of) Bahá’u’lláh’s impelling Spirit can not, will not, be stemmed (nor) impeded. Methodical advance along (the) line traced (by) pen (of) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá irresistible... Though politically unsettled, religiously intolerant, socially backward (and) climatically inhospitable, these unexplored territories hold forth inestimable prizes (for) audacious adventurers (in the) path (of) Bahá’í service... Appeal all believers, white and Negro alike, (to) arise (and) assume rightful responsibilities.”

A NEW WORLD

Our teaching activity has reached the point where, to follow the development of current plans, the believers should have recourse to maps of North and South America. On such maps we can begin by noting the States and Provinces of North America still lacking an Assembly, and the republics of Central and South America where pioneer settlement is still open. In The Advent of Divine Justice, twenty republics are mentioned.

The National Assembly is happy to announce that one of the remaining areas, Peru, will soon receive Miss Eve Nicklin as its pioneer Bahá’í. Guatemala has a group but no resident American teacher. Honduras is in the same status. Venezuela has had pioneers but lacks an active teacher at present. Mrs. Eleanor Adler has accomplished much in Bolivia, but her obligation to return to the United States leaves the new group in need of experienced direction. Brazil, that immense empire, has a number of American workers, and an Assembly at Bahia was formed a year ago, but the field calls for more pioneers, just as more can be used at Panama.

This Inter-America teaching is not merely an enlargement of our teaching area—it stands for a new spiritual world to be won for Bahá’u’lláh. Deathless glory goes to every worker who contributes to such a glorious victory!

The Mandate Conferring by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Indeed, the more we contemplate the nature of this unique mission, the more we come to realize the fact that the Inter-America teaching field is a solemn responsibility laid upon the American Bahá'ís. The structural basis of Bahá'u'lláh's World Order must be formed by 1944, and in the whole world the only workers free to undertake the task are members of our own Bahá'í community. When the Báb arose in Persia, His mission attained its public influence only after the Letters of the Living had penetrated into the spiritual world created by their Lord. Similarly there are potent blessings and powers still latent in the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, awaiting the capacity of our community to make right use of such heavenly gifts, as evidenced by our sacrifice and heroism in settling the twenty republics of Latin America.

The work already done is miraculous. We have the memory of Martha Root's journey to South America; we have the infinite blessing of May Maxwell's martyrdom; we have a growing company of heroic souls laboring in the field; we have the services of a committee in constant touch with all teachers and groups, a committee whose experience and facilities are becoming each year more adapted to its challenging task; we have the cooperation of three active Spiritual Assemblies which represent Latin American believers; and we have, above all, the Revelation itself available in an increasing number of Spanish, Portuguese, French and other translations.

"I, for my part," the Guardian assured us in his letter of May 22, 1939, "am determined to reinforce the impulse that impels its members forward to meet their destiny. The Founders of their Faith survey from the Kingdom on high the range of their achievements, acclaim their progress, and are ever ready to speed their eventual triumph."

Faithfully yours,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

"Indeed, the essential prerequisites of admittance into the Bahá'í fold of Jews, Zoroastrians, Hindus, Buddhists, and the followers of other ancient faiths, as well as of agnostics and even atheists, is the whole-hearted and unqualified acceptance by them all of the Divine origin of both Islam and Christianity, of the Prophetic functions of both Muhammad and Jesus Christ, of the legitimacy of the institution of the Imamate, and of the primacy of St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles. Such are the central, the solid, the incontrovertible principles that constitute the bedrock of Bahá'í belief, which the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is proud to acknowledge, which its teachers proclaim, which its apologists defend, which its literature disseminates, which its summer schools expound, and which the rank and file of its followers attest by both word and deed.

"Nor should it be thought for a moment that the followers of Bahá'u'lláh either seek to degrade or even belittle the rank of the world's religious leaders, whether Christian, Muslim, or of any other denomination, should their conduct conform to their professions, and be worthy of the position they occupy."—Shoghi Effendi, in The Promised Day Is Come.

Call for Teachers

A little more than two years ago our hearts were stirred by an urgent and overwhelming call from our beloved Guardian—a call for "nine holy souls who, independently or as deputies, will promptly, fearlessly volunteer (to) forsake (their) homes, cast away (their) attachments (and) definitely settle (in) these territories . . ." What then occurred is history in our Cause and eternal glory to dauntless ones who, without any hesitation, responded to win for the American community these virgin States and Provinces. The Guardian had asked for nine pioneers. There were eighty-one who volunteered to go, whose blessed privilege it was to evoke in the Guardian's heart "feelings of overpowering gratitude (at) the response of so many pioneers to the call of teaching . . ."

Beloved friends, are we to say that those thrilling days are past, that opportunity comes no more to awaken and seize us? Or rather, are we not already overwhelmed by a new task, a hundred times greater and more challenging in its magnitude? Is not the prospect now before us, since the Guardian's cablegram to the Convention, charged with a weightier responsibility?

To your Committee, faced by the facts of an initial survey, the Guardian's two-fold assignment to the American believers seemed at first crushing and beyond our strength. With less than three years remaining, we are to establish Local Spiritual Assemblies in twenty-eight States and Provinces, which number includes two of the fourteen Assemblies recently disbanded and now to be promptly reinstated! Need we remind ourselves that the Faith first penetrated this continent over forty years ago, and yet the job is only half done!

This time success can be assured not alone by the ardent response of individual believers. Indeed we need such response desperately, for these States and Provinces must have additional teachers—teachers of every kind, pioneer, resident, circuit, and visiting—to assist the devoted friends already living there. We must gain a solid foothold and put down our roots. But after that, the Cause must be extended, numbers increased, believers confirmed, Assemblies trained and elected. If every State and Province is to have its delegate at the centennial Convention of 1944, then we must elect these Assemblies by 1943!

Such prodigious effort calls for heroic response from us all, not as individuals alone, but as an American community. Into this battle we must throw out every resource. "To launch the bark of the Faith, to implant its banner, is not enough," says Shoghi Effendi. "Support, ample, organized and unremitting, should be lent, designed to direct the course of that work and to lay an unassailable foundation for the fort destined to stand guard over that banner . . . This is my plea, my supreme entreaty." (April 17, 1939)

Beloved friends, let us pledge ourselves to the months ahead! Let us act with unity, prayer, and utmost endeavor, through the instruments of our national and regional committees, our local Spiritual Assemblies, the sacrifice of funds, the burning energies of believers everywhere. Under the leadership of the National Spiritual Assembly and the guidance of our beloved Guardian, we are summoned to surpass all our past and finest triumphs.

Your committee is anxiously and eagerly waiting to hear how it may assist you in this immensely urgent task.

Inter-America News

"They that have forsaken their country for the purpose of teaching Our Cause—these shall the Faithful Spirit strengthen through its power. A company of Our chosen angels shall go forth with them, as hidden by Him Who is the Almighty, the All-Wise. How great the blessedness that awaits them that hath attained the honor of serving the Almighty! By My Life! No act, however great, can compare with it, except such deeds as have been ordained by God, the All-Powerful, the Most Mighty. Such a service is, indeed, the prince of all goodly deeds, and the ornament of every goodly act. Thus hath it been ordained by Him Who is the Sovereign Revealer, the Ancient of Days."—Baha'u'llah, in The Gleanings, page 334.

Paraguay

The reports from Paraguay will bring great joy to the Baha'i community of North America. Miss Cheney writes: "Next week we open the class for deeper study of the Teachings in preparation for Baha'i membership. There are 15 in the adult class who have expressed their intention of taking this course. Will you help me pray that, if it is the will of Baha'u'llah, Paraguay may have an Assembly, one truly confirmed and well grounded in the Faith? It is a serious thing to take the name Baha'i in a new land, especially one that suffers from such turmoil as Paraguay. These people must be able to really live the life, to demonstrate the power of Baha'u'llah through their actions every day. If at last none can really do this, then I feel that the Cause will grow here by leaps and bounds, and that new members coming in later will have a bulwark upon which to lean.

"The Youth Group was born two weeks ago in the midst of our latest revolutionary attempt. The group is growing and the revolution seems over for the time being.

"Perhaps it is not altogether surprising that I lack physical strength after making a total change of hemisphere, food and surroundings, and living for four months in an intensely humid climate with an average temperature of 110° F., often creeping up to 120° F. in the afternoons. We have had only three or four days of cooler weather, though March and April are supposed to be the beginning of fall. The people say it has been an unusually hot season even for Paraguay, a land of torrid climate, for the most part low-lying and 1200 miles from the nearest sea breeze. There is so much humidity that, even with the sun's rays boiling down, furniture, my typewriter case and kid gloves locked away in a clothespress for protection, become moldy."

Another letter from Miss Cheney from which we also quote: "The young people have asked for classes in English as a service, since almost no one in this country can speak English. These classes proved so popular that there was a demand for adult classes also. At present, I have four English classes a week. Each lesson is built around a story concerning 'Abdu'l-Baha, or Baha'u'llah, or a Baha'i principle. I use Lydia Zamenhof's method of illustrating words with actions and objects, and after the class has recognized the meaning of each, then I tell the story, pointing to the words in turn, and they translate it into Spanish. In this way, some 20 people are getting a taste of the Baha'i Cause. Just how it will work out as a means of attracting them to further study, still remains to be seen, since it is quite a new experiment."

Share deep grief (of) bereaved community (at) passing (of) Elizabeth Greenleaf, beloved handmaid (of) Baha'u'llah. Her radiant spirit, staunch loyalty, noble character, effective teaching method (were) distinguishing features (of her) consecrated life. Praying abundant blessings (in) life beyond.

Shoghi Effendi

Cablegram received August 7, 1941

Chile

Mrs. Atwater writes from Chile: "We are madly studying the English Procedure. Our chairman, Dr. Leibenschein, is a master linguist. Our Group is so universal that he has to translate in four languages, Spanish, German, French and English. Many new people of capacity are being attracted now that we have a fine nucleus—of course it is the power of unity that attracts."

Mrs. Atwater reports having been invited to speak before several clubs and to contribute articles for a newspaper.

Montevideo

Mr. Wilfrid Barton writes enthusiastically of the progress of the Cause in Montevideo and of the interest of a number of influential people, which has opened the way for wide spread publicity. He reports that Uruguay is one of the most liberal countries in South America in regard to its attitude towards religion. Weekly classes are being held in his apartment.

Cuba

The Inter-America Committee has received with joy two new registration cards from Havana, and together with the Baha'i community welcomes Sra. Divina Pastora Gonzalez and Nadji S. Haim as new friends.

Haiti

A recent letter from Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell encloses a registration for Mr. Willis Lubin. We are happy to welcome Mr. Lubin into the Baha'i Cause.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell report that the classes being held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McBean are attracting more and more persons.

Bolivia

Mrs. Eleanor Adler writes that the opportunities to tell of the Cause in Bolivia are very great. She tells of an educator from the United States who mentioned Baha'u'llah and His teachings before an audience of several hundred persons. He is reading a number of the books and has evinced great interest. Mrs. Adler planned to sail from Lima, Peru on the sixteenth of July for the United States.
Remarks on Publicity by a Pioneer Teacher

During four years this servant was editor of a daily newspaper, and for three and a half years served as news service committee chairman of the Bahá’í group in Lima, Ohio. As a result of editorial work, I attained a wholesome respect for publicity and its power over the public mind, but as news service chairman and while doing pioneer teaching for three years in cities within reach of my home, I gained a new slant on this subject. More recently, during six months as a pioneer in Paraguay, additional angles of the publicity problem have come to my attention, and it has been suggested that I share my conclusions with other Bahá’ís.

When I came to South America the end of December, I found a new set of problems to be met. The Roman Catholic Church is powerful and jealous of the entrance of any other spiritual teaching. It no longer possesses the power to teach love and brotherhood and to maintain peace, but it has quite sufficient power to crush new movements, if its opposition is attracted. Also, many of the Latin American countries, even when ostensibly republics, are ruled actually by various dictatorships, whether the dictator is an individual, as in Brazil and the Argentine, or is the power of the local army, as in Paraguay. Such governments are incapable of understanding the new world order.

I found that in Rio publicity had been used, with the result that Bahá’í meetings were forbidden by the government, and later were permitted only on a very restricted basis in the form of friends dropping in for tea and discussing spiritual subjects. The substitution of the word “universal” in place of “international” had helped to clear up some of the problems there.

In Buenos Aires I found a strong, active group meeting in the apartment of Philip Sprague, a champion pioneer teacher, and growing through personal contacts. Later, when a public Bahá’í center was opened and publicity was used by this group, the government promptly suspended the meetings, and closed the center. After a short time, however, meetings were again permitted, pending obtaining a government license. Word arrived from Buenos Aires recently that this license has at last been granted.

I arrived in Asunción, Paraguay, during the aftermath of a particularly bad revolution, to discover that the people to whom I had letters of introduction from friends in other countries, were now political prisoners or exiles. When I called upon one, who was still available, he looked at me with tears in his eyes, and said quite frankly, “This is the strangest time in my life. I do not expect to live more than 24 hours. I know that God has sent you to me.” To people living in the comparative security of the United States, the social turmoil in a country such as this one, which has suffered from some 65 to 70 revolutions in its 128 years as a republic, is practically unimaginable.

A brief investigation showed that meetings of the Theosophical Society here had been suspended by government order, following the opening of a public meeting place and the use of publicity. All Bahá’í work in Paraguay has been done through prayers for guidance and personal contacts, one person sending me to another, until on January 28 classes opened in my pension, with 30 persons attending, representing some of the most prominent and highly regarded people of the city in educational, artistic and business fields. The members include the three most outstanding authors and poets of Paraguay, a noted portrait painter, a fine sculptor, three university professors and a former public minister of education, high school teachers, the owner of the principal commercial airline, a scientist, the general manager of the railroad, and other well known people. Five have asked for Bahá’í membership and a special class is being conducted for deeper study in preparation for such membership, with 15 attending.

During the first weeks there was one case of opposition, in which the local priest called upon the owner of the pension and protested against the display in my rooms of the picture of a "strange temple" and against a "new teaching" going out from her house. I had already taken care that Sra. Leonor de Morenigo, a woman of good family, who operates the pension, should be acquainted with the Bahá’í principles. She replied to this protest with spirit, "There is nothing in the Bahá’í Teachings that is contrary to the truth in Catholicism. They are beautiful and I believe they are true." It is my feeling that, as long as Bahá’í teaching is kept to the basis of friends coming to discuss spiritual subjects, and publicity and public meetings are avoided, there will be great protection, and opportunity for a group to grow strong enough to meet the problems which may arise later.

Based on experience and observation, it would be my advice to all pioneer teachers in North America and especially in South and Central America, to strictly avoid the use of publicity until after they have become well entrenched in the cities where they settle, have become acquainted with conditions there, and have the means of judging whether publicity will help or hurt their work. It is my belief that they will always find the method of personal contacts productive of far better results in the forming of new groups on both continents. Personal contacts attract people of high caliber and avoid wasting time with the idle curious and those who lack capacity. This method also avoids attracting unnecessary opposition.

In most of the cities of North America teaching began in little private groups in the homes of individual believers. In the United States the Faith has gradually evolved for some forty years. At first we had only the spiritual teachings, and it was quite recently that we were given Bahá’í administration and the new world order. It is scarcely reasonable to expect our Latin American brothers and sisters to assimilate in a moment all the things that we have required some forty years to learn.

The people of South America, who have spiritual capacity, are very sincere and warm-hearted. As they grow in understanding, they will make great contributions toward the growth of the Cause in the Americas. They have the hearts of poets, lovers and martyrs. But because of this very enthusiasm, this swiftness in being attracted, they need time to grow and very careful guidance in developing a strong foundation for their Faith, in order that they may not lose it, when the winds of trials assail them.

Bahá’í teachers, coming from the north into these southern countries among people whose civilization, whose life experience and ways of thought are totally different from our own, should make a careful study of their new environment and the people whom they are to teach and assist by the grace of God to find the Beloved of the worlds. Such teachers, if they have any pride in their native country, must forget this, and develop a deep appreciation and love for the people and the country, where Bahá’u’lláh has sent them. Because of the arrogance of the average North American in foreign lands, South Americans are always watching for some of this to appear in all of our people. Only profound humility and perfect love on our part, can disarm their fear and open a path to their hearts.

Programs should be formulated only after real study and observation of the people, their capacities and their needs. In a majority of Central and South American countries, the teaching of world order must be kept on a definitely universal plane, in order to avoid unnecessary misunderstandings. It is better to begin with spiritual subjects, and to use this angle in dealing with universal peace, the unity of mankind and the unity of all faiths under God.

The most important thing for a pioneer teacher to remember twenty-four hours per day, is the fact that in his own person. If teaching is done in that spirit, then whatever comes is good. The other three essential requisites for such a teacher are universal love, constant and gentle persistence and unfailing patience. He must love all with a pure spirit, and teach the friends how to love one another and appreciate the perfections in one another, even when they are people who are not naturally attracted to each other. He must be persistent and yet never push. He must be unfailing in his efforts, and yet never in too great a hurry in performing spiritual tasks. He must have wisdom and patience to listen as well as to speak. He must deal with the most personal and intimate problems of those whom he teaches. He must learn to accept everyone at the point where he now is, without judgment and without blame, and with perfect love assist that soul to grow toward God. Only the wisdom of Bahá'u'lláh is sufficient for this task, and His unfailing guidance always comes through prayer.

Regional Teaching Activities

Our Guardian has, in his challenging message to the 1941 Convention, disclosed a vast new phase of the teaching program for North America, which calls for a display of heroic persistence in these next three years surpassing all our former efforts. We dare not relax until a Spiritual Assembly has been assured for every State and Province. As “resolute upholders (of the) Divine Plan,” Shoghi Effendi tells us, we “will, indeed cannot but persist (in) ordained task (to) propagate flame, enlarge administrative limits, strike deeper roots (of the) world-encompassing, world-redeeming Faith (of) Bahá'u'lláh.”

Acting on this exhortation, many of the Regional Teaching Committees of the U. S. and Canada have been conducting conferences during June and July, in the South at Vogel Park, in the North at Vancouver and Montreal, in the East at the Green Acre Bahá'í School, and in the West at the Geyserville School, designed to focus the thoughts and energies of all the friends on their two-fold teaching mission.

“The responsibility of each member of the region in the completion of the Seven-Year Plan, and the establishment of an Assembly in three of the four Provinces of the region,” comprised the first part of the Conference held at Vancouver, B. C., early in June, followed by discussion of qualifications and training of teachers, purpose and policy of the Regional Committee, materials and teachers available, and methods of pioneering for the communities of that area. Mrs. Moscrop, Miss Cliff, Miss McKenna, Miss Wylie, Mrs. Liddell, and Mrs. China led the discussion on the various topics and Bruce Hogg spoke at a public meeting in the evening.

In Montreal there were 25 representatives attending the Conference from the Eastern Provinces. The program of the five-day session, June 29 to July 2, included discussion on “The Promised Day Is Come;” and the Bahá'í attitude towards the World: Morals and Character, Bahá'í Administration, Bahá'í attitude toward Christianity, Justice, and Post-War Reconstruction. Each believer attending was asked to prepare a fifteen-minute talk suggesting how to comply with the Guardian's wish for the fulfillment of the Seven-Year Plan. Picnics at the Salas' in St. Lambert and the Schopflochers' in Montreal were also a part of the program. Rowland Estall, pioneer from Winopeg, and Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala, just returned from Venezuela, assisted with the conference.

At the week's session of the Vogel Park Teaching Conference in Georgia, June 14-21, there were study courses in the morning on "Some Answered Questions" given by Mrs. H. Emogene Hoagg, and "The Master Key to Life" led by Mrs. Mabel Ives and Mrs. Terah Smith. At the friends on plans for giving the Teachings to the men in Camps.

Plans are under way for additional inter-community conference in August at Milwaukee; over the Labor Day holiday at Vernon, B. C., and Lake Chelan, Washington; and on September 6 at Foundation Hall, Wilmette.

Many successful picnics have also been arranged by Local Assemblies. At Springfield, Mass., the 15th Annual Bahá’í Picnic was held at Forest Park on June 15 with over sixty present. Wm. Kenneth Christian spoke on “The Promised Day Is Come.” At Syracuse the Upper New York picnic was held at Green Lake Park and talks were given by Mr. and Mrs. Christian and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ford. “Two new believers resulted.” An Inter-National Picnic was given at Queenston by the Toronto to Assembly to which fifty New York State and Ontario Bahá’ís and their friends came. Speakers during the afternoon were Mr. Fred Reis, chairman, Victor Davis, Amy Putnam, Burton Dezendorf, Mary Collison, Helen Inderled, and Doris McKay.

Santa Paula’s annual picnic sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Carpenter on June 25 drew a crowd of over eighty from Southern California, San Francisco and Berkeley. Speakers were Mrs. Sylvia King and Mrs. Marion Yazdi. Open house at the Carpenter’s climaxed a gala day.

A fruitful technique for attracting newcomers to the Faith has been devised and successfully applied by Mrs. Sylvia King in two inter-racial, inter-faith song fest at Fresno and Bakersfield, Calif., to commemorate respectively Naw-Ruz and the Declaration of the Báb. For each occasion Mrs. King, with the assistance of the Regional Committee and isolated believers, especially Mrs. Edna Tillyer, was able to enlist the voluntary cooperation of many community groups, resulting in programs rich and diverse in interest, in exceptional attendance (about 250 in Bakersfield), and almost no expense. Participating groups or representatives included the High School Mixed Chorus, Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Mennonite Brethren Church, Japanese Christian and Buddhist groups, Lighthouse Full Gospel Choir, A.M.E. Church, and the Chinese group. Under Bahá’í leadership and with a keynote Bahá’í speaker, the program “resulted in a great many people becoming interested in finding out more about the Cause, and in fact stirred the whole city... Because of the great success of the affair, all the local newspapers gave us wonderful publicity afterward.” Mrs. King has suggested the plan as especially adapted for Bahá’í fete days, when “Christians, Jews, Buddhists, Zoroastrians, Muhammadans and Hindus... may be gathered together to celebrate with beautiful and lofty music and with the Creative Word, and with prayer and spiritual greetings from leaders, the general theme of ‘The Oneness of Mankind’ and ‘The Fundamental Harmony of Religions’... Thus the Bahá’í Faith may be proclaimed to the assembled throngs... brought together by the love of God and the Message of Bahá’u’lláh.”

In these and a hundred other ways the Faith is moving forward at the present crucial hour. Happy indeed are the children of Bahá’u’lláh who, in the midst of confusion and sorrow, have found their constructive, eternally-unfolding work!

National Teaching Committee

"Not ours, puny mortals that we are, to attempt, at so critical a stage in the long and checkered history of mankind, to arrive at a precise and satisfactory understanding of the steps which must successively lead a bleeding humanity, wretchedly oblivious of its God, and careless of Bahá’u’lláh, from its calvary to its ultimate resurrection. Not ours, the living witnesses of the all-subduing potency of His Faith, to question, for a moment, and however dark the misery that enshrouds the world, the ability of Bahá'u'lláh to forge, with the hammer of His Will, and through the fire of tribulation, upon the anvil of this travelling age, and in the particular shape His mind has envisioned, these scattered and mutually destructive fragments into which a perverse world has fallen, into one single unit, solid and indivisible, able to execute His design for the children of men.

"Ours rather the duty, however confused the scene, however dismal the present outlook, however circum­scribed the resources we dispose of, to labor serenely, confidently and unremittingly to lend our share of assistance, in whichever way circumstances may enable us, to the operation of the forces which, as marshalled and directed by Bahá'u'lláh, are leading humanity out of the valley of misery and shame to the loftiest summits of power and glory.”

—SHOGNI EFFENDI, in The Promised Day Is Come.

Race Unity

The National Race Unity Committee concluded its public programs for the season as guests of the Cincinnati Assembly. The friends of this city held a dinner on March 29 at the Cincinnati Y.W.C.A., with a number of visiting guests as participants. The following evening a large, mixed group met at the Center to hear Mr. Louis Gregory speak on "The Races, One or Many," and Mrs. Dorothy Baker, on "The Bahá'í Peace Plan."

An unusual blessing was bestowed upon the Convention this year, during the period of consultation on racial unity, when, through the efforts of Mr. Clarence Niss of that Committee, thirty Oneida Indians of the Wisconsin area visited the Convention and were introduced on the floor. Mr. Eli Powlas, the first of their number to actually join the ranks of the faithful band of followers of Bahá'u'lláh, assisted in introducing these friends and making them feel at home. Mr. Niss conducted, for delegates coming from locations near reservations, a seminar on techniques of approach to the American Indian. The committee feels that a great beginning has been made in this field, and expresses the hope that those friends having helpful suggestions will write in often.

Work with the great Negro minority of America has also gone steadily forward. The Bahá'í Faith has been presented this year to nineteen Negro schools and colleges, as well as to a number of adult Negro organizations.

The Race Unity Committee deeply appreciates the noble and inspiring cooperation of the friends at large with these activities. Every Bahá'í is an unofficial member of such a committee. Already, numbers of the stalwart defenders of Bahá'u'lláh's invincible standard have arisen to accept the cordial invitation of their Guardian: 'Let any one who feels the urge among the participants in this crusade, which embraces all the races, all the republics, classes and denominations of the entire Western Hemisphere, arise, and, circumstances permitting, direct in particular the attention, and win eventually the unqualified adherence, of the Negro, the Indian, the Eskimo, and Jewish races to his Faith. No more laudable and meritorious service can be rendered the Cause of God, at the present hour, than a successful effort to enhance the diversity of the members of the American Bahá'í community by swelling the ranks of the Faith through the enrollment of the members of these races. A blending of these highly differentiated elements of the human race, harmoniously interwoven into the fabric of an all-embracing Bahá'í fraternity, and assimilated through the dynamic processes of a divinely appointed Administrative Order, and contributing each its share to the enrichment and glory of Bahá'í community life, is surely an achievement the contemplation of which must warm and thrill every Bahá'í heart.” (Advent of Divine Justice.)

—RACE UNITY COMMITTEE

World Order Magazine

The general make-up and plan of contents adopted last year has been continued in Volume VII, the friends having given such approval to the changes made in Vol. VI.

Believers not seeing the magazine regularly can judge of the variety of its contents from the articles published in the last three issues.

July, 1941: The Bahá'í Faith Offers; These Prophets and Chosen Ones, Bahá'u'lláh; Religion for Our Time, William Kenneth Christian; From a Panama Diary, V, Louise Caswell and Cora H. Oliver; The Báb, Grace Griffith Harris; Tests and Afflictions, Compilation; Study Outline on Reincarnation; With Our Readers.

August, 1941: Crime and the Treatment of Criminals, Chester F. Barnett; Song of the New World, Angela Morgan; Love and Unity, Compilation; The Kings of Earth, Shoghi Effendi (excerpts from The Promised Day Is Come); The Divine Way of Consultation, Alma Sothman; Living Religions and a World Faith, Book Review, Garreta Busey; The Báb, poem, Elizabeth Hackley; Study Outline on Muhammad, Prophet of God; With Our Readers.

September, 1941: A Scientific Approach to Religion, Howard Lux­moore Carpenter; The Crumbling of Religious Orthodoxy, Shoghi Effendi (excerpts from The Promised Day Is Come); Faith, Henry C. Beecher; Compensation, Virginia Moran Evans; What We Go Through, Julia Robinson; Abandon Not the Everlasting Beauty, Lorna Tasker; The Earth Is One, Opal Howell; How to Achieve Love and Unity, Compilation; Bahá'í Lessons; With Our Readers.

Of unusual interest to Bahá'ís is the article by Julia Robinson in the September number. It is a reprint of an address given by Miss Robinson at the Town Hall, San Francisco, in opening the 1940-1941 lecture series. In her remarks as chairman of the meeting, Miss Robinson outlined clearly and forcefully the Bahá'í principles as the basis of world order.

The Editorial Committee wishes to appeal to the friends for a greater flow of material suitable for use in the magazine. Besides accurate and well written expositions of Bahá’í truths, the magazine needs statements of personal experience reflecting growth in faith, poems, treatments of topics like Bahá’í Summer Schools, Bahá’í Assemblies and other institutions in the Cause, and interesting incidents in the teaching field.

Address the Committee at 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill.

Temple Teaching

In January, 1941 there were 289 visitors, or one visitor more than in January, 1940. These visitors were from nine states, and from Canada and Persia. The groups that attended in a body during January were:

- 14 colored girls from the Evanston Y.W.C.A.
- 28 members of the Young People’s Society, Oak Park Baptist Church.
- 29 soldiers from Fort Sheridan, Ill.
- 26 Girl Scouts, Evanston.

In February, 1941, there were 425 visitors from eleven states, and none from foreign countries. Large groups that attended in February were:

- 18 members Evanston Y.W.C.A.;
- 11 members Kappa Delta Sorority, Northwestern University Alumnae;
- 60 members of rural boards of education from Michigan attended institute at Northwestern University;
- 55 members of rural boards of education from Michigan attended institute at Northwestern University.

The Temple is open every day from 10:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. from May 1 to October. We can’t stress too much the fact that there always is an urgent and great need for guides during the summer. For those who wish to prepare themselves for this important teaching work, there is a class for guides in the Temple every Sunday from 11:00 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. This study class is open to everyone who feels the obligation or who may wish to do so, to study and qualify as a guide. In this class can be acquired information about the Temple and answers to questions often asked by visitors during actual guiding.

There is no better way to benefit oneself or promote the spread of the Teachings, than to guide in the Temple. Think what a fertile field this represents! Nearly 17,000 visitors came through the Temple voluntarily last year from all over the world. Prepare now to guide your share through the Temple in 1941.

Requests for Temple Models

The Bahá’í Exhibits Committee has received a number of requests for the loan of a Temple model. In order to supply models on a schedule which will permit the utmost use of each on a minimum cost for shipment, the Committee requests all believers who now have a Temple model on loan to report this at the earliest possible date. This request is directed to local Assemblies, groups, Regional Teaching Committees and pioneer teachers.

Kindly address your report to Carl Scheffler, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street, Evanston, Ill.

Youth Bulletin

The issue of June, 1941 was the second number in Volume VII. During its seven years of existence the Bulletin has been a powerful instrument in establishing the unity and understanding of Bahá’í youth in North America in action for the promotion of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

Gratitude and appreciation is due the contributors and the successive editors and business managers whose service has contributed to the development of such an interesting and helpful organ for the National Youth Committee and the many local youth groups.

The June number listed in its Contents the following titles: Bahá’í Youth Must Study, editorial; Book Review by Benjamin Kaufman of “The New World Order” by H. G. Wells; Faith Sustains Bahá’í Youth in England; Youth and the Bahá’í Summer Schools: Green Acre, by Joseph M. Noyes; Geyserville, by Adrienne Ellis; Louhelen, by Margaret Ruhe; Mondlingvo Por Mondordo, by Della C. Quinlan; San Francisco Youth Conference; With Young Bahá’ís in Central and South America; From Here and There; Important Notice Concerning The Bahá’í World, Vol. IX.

Publishing Committee

The Publishing Committee, acting on a recommendation approved by the National Assembly, has developed facilities to make up and sell two assortments of teaching literature as listed below. The Committee understands that there is a great demand for assortments and is pleased to be able to cooperate.

Assortment No. 1 includes five copies each of The World Religion, Bahá’í House of Worship, Destiny of America, Pattern for Future Society, Principles of the Bahá’í Faith, and one copy of Assurance of Immortality. Per assortment, $0.50.

Assortment No. 2 includes one each of seven titles as follows, Appreciations of the Bahá’í Faith, America’s Spiritual Mission, Bahá’í Prayers, The Image of God, Christians, Jews and Muhammadans, Radiant Acquiescence, Bahá’í Teachings on Universal Peace. Per assortment, $0.50.

 Records of Pioneer Teaching for the Bahá’í World

In collecting data regarding pioneer services in Central and South America, the Editorial Committee of The Bahá’í World, Vol. IX, found that several of the pioneers had done memorable service in other countries as well, and this led to a general invitation to all who had pioneered in foreign countries, as well as those who had served in the Latin-American field, to write brief accounts of those services.

A letter received from the Guardian restricts these narratives to the teaching work done since the initiation of the Seven Year Plan in the year 1937. Those records, however, which deal with the period before the Seven Year Plan was inaugurated, will be used later as “historical material for future use” to quote the Guardian’s own words. With the permission of the writers of these narratives of earlier date, all such material will be sent to the Archives Committee with the accompanying photographs.

Security

“In this marvelous cycle, the earth will be transformed and humanity arrayed in peace and beauty. Disputes, quarrels and murders will be replaced by harmony, truth and concord; among the nations, peoples, races and countries, love and amity will appear. Cooperation and union will be established and finally war will be entirely suppressed.”—Some Answered Questions.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá has told us that when we hear others speaking of war, we should think peace. How difficult it is to do that today when the discussion of war is on the tips of everyone we meet. However, let us protect our children from lengthy discussions of the subject and put the emphasis, more than ever, on the need of kindly relationships toward one another. Now of all times children must feel serene and secure. Child psychologists are preaching this need up and down the land. Even the youngest child (the babe in arms) can sense this feeling of unrest so prevalent today. In no home is there a greater opportunity to give children peace and tranquility than in a Bahá’í home. Here parents have the assurance of the Most Great Peace and they can look beyond these perilous days and know that Peace will come eventually when mankind is ready for this blessing.

It is as though you were walking down a long dark hall leading a little child. If you falter and are afraid then he too will stumble and be filled with your fears. However if you walk along calmly and unafraid knowing full well that the lighted room lies ahead, then the child, holding your hand, will trudge along confidently even though he knows not whither he is going.

How shall we maintain this calm in the midst of the storm all about us? There are many ways. Perhaps the most important is prayer, in conjunction always with complete faith in the promises of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and reliance upon Them. We must often turn to the Writings for help and inspiration and for the calm they bring to our lives which we in turn can transmit to our children. The child himself may have a part in this spiritual program. On the mechanical side of life it is necessary to continue the child’s daily program, keeping it as nearly as possible as it has always been regardless of how much our own routine of life may be interrupted. This is important to good mental health. Children soon get a feeling of insecurity when the routine habits of their young lives are broken. Let us preserve the security and integrity that children need at all times but which they particularly need during such times as these. So with our children, we shall: “Rely upon God, thy God and the Lord of thy Fathers. For the people are wandering in the paths of delusion, bereft of discernment to see God with their own eyes, or hear His Melody with their own ears. Thus have We found them as Thou also dost witness.”—Tablet of Ahmad.

Louhelen Summer Session Takes on Latin Emphasis

The Eighth International Conference of the New Education Fellowship, held at Ann Arbor this season, has provided an ideal opportunity for contact with Latin American and other international leaders of education. Through the efforts of Mrs. Annie Romer, Mrs. Orcella Rexford Gregory and others, a number of foreign visitors have attended classes and public meetings held at Louhelen.

Foreign visitors during the vacation session alone represented a number of countries, among them Austria, England, Belgium, Holland, Korea, Syria, Iraq, Iran, Central and South America, and the Philippines. On Thursday, July 19th, Professor Edeberio Torres, Director of the Technical Council of the Ministry of Public Instruction of Nicaragua, spoke on “Latin American Relations with the United States.” On Sunday, July 20th, Mr. Kh-I-Hashimi, head of the Normal Schools of Iraq, addressed the friends on “The New Education in a Changing World.” The following Sunday, Mr. Alberto C. Leao, Instructor in English at the University of Rio de Janeiro, spoke on “My Country, Brazil.” On August 3rd, an International Day was planned, with both Bahá’í speakers and guest speakers. Senora Ofelia Mendoza of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, spoke about our relation to Latin American problems and progress. Mr. Harry Whang and Mrs. Dorothy Baker introduced the Bahá’í Peace Plan. A brief word was added by Mr. Jon Faily of Teheran, and Mr. Habib Kurani, of the American University at Beirut. Piano selections of South American Folk Songs were rendered by Senora Ortiz Aulestria, Director of Educational Publications for the Minister of Education, Quito, Ecuador.

We should like to call the attention of the Bahá’ís to the following list of libraries, which includes 21 State Libraries, 3 Provincial Libraries and the Library of Parliament in Ottawa, Ontario. Any inquirers may contact their local libraries in these states and provinces and if books are not available, ask local librarians to send for the books available in the State Libraries: Alabama, Arizona, California, Florida, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia, Washington, Wyoming; Provincial Libraries of Quebec, British Columbia and Manitoba; Library of Parliament, Ottawa, Ontario. Books will be placed in the remaining states and provinces during the coming year. We should appreciate it if the friends will place requests for these books both in the states already supplied and in the remaining states and advise interested inquirers at their meetings to obtain books from these important libraries and State Library commissions.

The total number of books donated by this committee during the past three months is 392; these books were presented to 34 college and university libraries and to 115 public libraries. During this period the library work has increased vastly as can be seen through comparison with last year’s Annual Report with a total presentation of 482 volumes to 40 college and university libraries and 137 public libraries during the entire year.

Bahá’í World, Vol. 2 requested by Boston Public Library and Vols. 4, 5, 6 by Crozer Theological Seminary to complete their files.

The copies of Advent of Divine Justice were given to 4 Jewish libraries, 8 negro colleges and Branch libraries; 3 divinity schools and 1 public library (Boston).

The public libraries listed above included 47 Army Post libraries and 23 State libraries and 3 Provincial libraries; also the Library of Parliament in Canada. We hope to be able to place books in more of the state and provincial libraries during the coming year which will make our books available to many readers. The acceptance of books by the Library of Parliament will no doubt assist the Canadian believers in their local library presentations.

A complete set of pamphlets was given to the Chicago Public Library at their request; a subscription of the World Order magazine was donated to the Navy Y.M.C.A. Library at Bremerton, Washington; and 200 copies of Appreciations of the Bahá’í Faith have been mailed to 110 leading public libraries and 90 college and university libraries, including a number of theological seminaries.

Library Committee Activities

The aim of the National Library Committee has always been to place our books in the libraries where they would attract the greatest number of readers. With that aim in mind, books have been presented to a number of State Libraries, Provincial Libraries and various Library Commissions and Traveling Libraries.

Latin American Visitors at Louhelen School, August 3, 1941
Foundations of World Unity was sent to the University of Hawaii and to the Honolulu Public Library at the request of the Honolulu Spiritual Assembly.

A copy of Some Answered Questions (Spanish) was recently sent to the Head of the Foreign Language Department of Bradley College, Peoria, Illinois, to be used as required supplementary reading by students enrolled in the Spanish Courses.

The college and university libraries included 14 theological seminars and a number of Departments of Religion in various universities.

Several splendid tributes were received from Army and Navy Chaplains and officers as previously reported.

“The Promised Day” in Public Teaching

In response to inquiries, the National Assembly advises that the believers are free to make use of the Guardian’s letter entitled “The Promised Day Is Come” as a teaching medium, and the Assembly relies on their discretion in its use.

Indeed, the Guardian was requested to inform the National Assembly of his wishes, and on June 1 cabled as follows: “Approve selective public distribution according to judgment (of) National Assembly. Praying divine guidance.” The friends are requested to note that the Guardian wishes the NSA to employ a selective and not a general public distribution such as by radio or press.

"A Threefold Sense of Gratitude"

Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dear and valued co-workers:

As I survey the activities and accomplishments of the American believers in recent months, and recall their reaction to the urgent call for service, embodied in the Seven Year Plan, I feel overwhelmed by a threefold sense of gratitude and admiration which I feel prompted to place on record, but which I cannot adequately express. Future generations can alone appraise correctly the value of their present services and the Beloved, whose mandate they are so valiantly obeying, can alone befittingly reward them for the manner in which they are discharging their duties.

The virtual completion of a thirty year old enterprise, which was initiated in His days and blessed by His Hand, is the first and foremost accomplishment that must shed imperishable luster not only on the administrative annals of the Formative Age of the Faith, but on the entire record of the signal achievements performed in the course of the First Century of the Baha'i Era. The steady expansion and consolidation of the world mission, entrusted by that same Master, to their hands and set in operation after His passing, constitutes the second object of my undying gratitude to a community that has abundantly demonstrated its worthiness to shoulder the superhuman tasks with which it has been entrusted. The spirit with which that same community has faced and resisted the onslaught of the enemies of the Faith who, for various reasons and with ever-increasing subtlety and malice, have persistently striven to disrupt the administrative machinery of an Order, foreshadowed by the Babi, enunciated by Baha'u'llah, and established by 'Abdu'l-Baha, is yet another testimony to the unrivalled merits and the eminent position attained by its privileged members since the ascension of the Center of the Covenant.

The extinction of the influence precariously exerted by some of these enemies, the decline that has set in in the fortunes of others, the sincere repentance expressed by still others, and their subsequent reinstatement and effectual participation in the teaching and administrative activities of the Faith, constitute in themselves sufficient evidence of the unconquerable power and invincible spirit which animates those who stand identified with and loyally carry out the provisions and injunctions of the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Baha.

And now more particularly concerning the prime mover of this latest agitation, which, whatever its immediate consequences, will sooner or later come to be regarded as merely one more of those ugly and abortive attempts designed to undermine the foundation, and obscure the purpose, of the Administrative Order of the Faith of Baha'u'llah. Obscure in his origin, ambitious of leadership, untaught by the lesson of such as have erred before him, odious in the hopes he nurses, contemptible in the methods he pursues, shameless in his deliberate distortions of truths he has long since ceased to believe in, ludicrous in his present isolation and helplessness, wounded and exasperated by the downfall which his own folly has precipitated, he, the latest protagonist of a spurious cause, cannot but in the end be subjected, as remorselessly as his infamous predecessors, to the fate which they invariably have suffered.

Generated by the propelling and purifying forces of a mysterious Faith, born of delusion or malice, winning a fleeting notoriety derived from the precarious advantages of wealth, fame or fortune, these movements sponsored by deluded, self-seeking adventurers find themselves, sooner or later, ensnared in the machinations of their authors, are buried in shame, and sink eventually into complete oblivion.

The schism which their foolish leaders had contrived so sedulously to produce within the Faith, will soon, to their utter amazement, turn against them. The panicky reactions of the ranks of its followers, reinforces its indestructible unity, and proclaims anew to a world, skeptical or in different, the cohesive strength of the institutions of that Faith, the incorruptibility of its purposes and principles, and the recuperative powers inherent in its community life.

Were anyone to imagine or expect that a Cause, comprising within its orbit so vast a portion of the globe, so turbulent in its history, so challenging in its claims, so diversified in the elements it has assimilated into its administrative structure, should, at all times be immune to any divergence of opinon, or any defection on the part of its multitudinous followers, it would be sheer delusion, wholly unreasonable and unwarranted, even in the face of the unprecedented evidence of the miraculous power which its rise and progress have so powerfully exhibited. That such a secession, however, whether effected by those who apostatize their faith or preach heretical doctrines, should have failed, after the lapse of a century, to split in twain the entire body of the adherents of the Faith, or to create a grave, a permanent and irretrievable breach in its organic structure, is a fact too eloquent for even a casual observer
of the internal processes of its administrative order to either deny or ignore.

Therein, every loyal and intelligent upholder of Bahá'u'lláh's Incomparable Covenant—a Covenant designed by Him as the sole refuge against schism, disruption and anarchy — will readily recognize the hall-mark of His Faith, and will acclaim it as the supreme gift conferred by Him Who is the Lord of Revelation upon the present and future generations who are destined,
in this greatest of all Dispensations,
to flock, from every creed and religion, to the banner, and espouse
the Cause, of His Most Great Name.

Dear friends! Manifold, various,
and at times extremely perilous, have been the tragic crises which the blind hatred, the unfounded presumption, the incredible folly, the abject perfidy, the vaunting ambition, of the enemy have intermittently engendered within the pale of the Faith. From some of its most powerful and renowned votaries, at the hands of its once trusted and ablest propagators, champions, and administrators, from the ranks of its most revered and highly-placed trustees whether as companions, amanuenses or appointed lieutenants of the Herald of the Faith, of its Author, and of the Center of His Covenant, from even those who were numbered among the kindred of the Manifestation, not excluding the brother, the sons and daughters of Bahá'u'lláh, and the nominee of the Báb Himself, a Faith, of such tender age, and enshrining so priceless a promise, has sustained blows as dire and treacherous as any recorded in the world's religious history.

From the record of its tumultuous history, almost every page of which portrays a fresh crisis, is laden with the description of a new calamity, recounts the tale of a base betrayal, and is stained with the account of unspeakable atrocities, there emerges, clear and incontrovertible, the supreme truth that with every rise and progress have so powerfully exhibited. That such a secession, however, whether effected by those who apostatize their faith or preach heretical doctrines, should have failed, after the lapse of a century, to split in twain the entire body of the adherents of the Faith,
or to create a grave, a permanent
and irretrievable breach in its organic structure, is a fact too eloquent for even a casual observer
of the internal processes of its administrative order to either deny
or ignore.

Therein, every loyal and intelligent upholder of Bahá'u'lláh's Incomparable Covenant—a Covenant
designed by Him as the sole refuge against schism, disruption and anarchy — will readily recognize the
hall-mark of His Faith, and will acclaim it as the supreme gift conferred by Him Who is the Lord of Revelation upon the present and future generations who are destined,
in this greatest of all Dispensations,
to flock, from every creed and religion, to the banner, and espouse
the Cause, of His Most Great Name.

The resistless march of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, viewed in this light, and propelled by the stimulating influences which the unwisdom of its enemies and the force latent within itself, both engender, resolves itself into a series of rhythmic pulsations, precipitated, on the one hand, through the explosive outbursts of its foes, and the vibrations of Divine Power, on the other, which speed it, with ever-increasing momentum, along that predestined course traced for it by the Hand of the Almighty.

As opposition to the Faith, from whatever source it may spring, whatever form it may assume, however violent its outbursts, is admittedly the motive-power that galvanizes on the one hand, the souls of its valiant defenders, and taps for them, on the other, fresh springs of that Divine and inexhaustible Energy, we who are called upon to represent, defend, and promote its interests, should, far from regarding any manifestation of hostility as an evidence of the weakening of the pillars of the Faith, acclaim it as both a God-sent gift and a God-sent opportunity which, if we remain undaunted, we can utilize for the furtherance of His Faith and the routing and complete elimination of its adversaries.

The Heroic Age of the Faith, born in anguish, nursed in adversity, and terminating in trials as woeful as those that greeted its birth, has been succeeded by that Formative Period which is to witness the gradual crystallization of those creative energies which the Faith has released, and the consequent emergency of that World Order for which those forces were made to operate.

Fierce and relentless will be the opposition which this crystallization and emergence must provoke. The alarm it must and will awaken, the envy it will certainly arouse, the misrepresentations to which it will remorselessly be subjected, the setbacks it must, sooner or later sus-tain, the commotions to which it must eventually give rise, the fruits it must in the end garner, the blessings it must inevitably bestow and the glorious, the Golden Age, it must irresistibly usher in, are just beginning to be faintly perceived, and will, as the old order crumbles beneath the weight of so stupendous a Revelation, become increasingly apparent and arresting.
Not ours, dear friends, to attempt to survey the distant scene; ours rather the duty to face the trials of the present hour, to ponder the meaning, to discharge the obligations, to meet its challenge and utilize the opportunity it offers to the fullest extent of our ability and power.

Your true brother,

SHOGME.

August 12, 1941, Haifa, Palestine

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and groups of the Baha’is of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

In previous issues of Bahá’í News we have surveyed the tasks to be accomplished before 1944 and those definitely assigned to this Bahá’í year. Those tasks are not less than overwhelming, considered in the light of our human capacities and resources. But because they are steps in the Divine Plan, and not merely political or economic activities, their eventual accomplishment is fixed and certain. It is of the essence of the Divine Plan that the task and the power to perform it are two facets of the one same reality. Indeed, a Divine Plan is accomplished in the spiritual world before it is announced and proclaimed in the world of human personality.

Not one believer in this Cause is required to make personal sacrifices beyond his capacity, that is, in excess of his passionate desire to serve Bahá’u’lláh. We have no collective financial problem to solve, no problem of teaching work. The one single issue before us individually and collectively is the spiritual problem of how much we respond to the mysterious forces and powers offered us when we advance on His path. He has all knowledge and all wealth. This surrounding spirit of perfect accomplishment rushes to our aid when we have attained the station of true obedience. It will not confirm us in any ignorance, selfishness, ambition nor lack of union with the Bahá’í community.

These days are days of exalted mystery, for they are so imbued with omnipotent Power that the feeblest soul can exert mighty forces and the simple mind express profound wisdom.

Therefore the National Spiritual Assembly can but urge the friends to lay aside all hesitation and doubt in connection with the successful carrying out of the schedule of Bahá’í tasks. These tasks are signs and indications that a great company of souls have turned to God and seek to obey His will. They are not burdens nor obstacles to be avoided for the sake of passive ease, but proofs that a community of faithful souls has been raised up by the power of the Greatest Name.

What the Cause needs today is the spirit of the hero in every community, group and meeting. Our gatherings should reflect the fire of zeal which reveals the acceptance of the soul into the Kingdom. This zeal, this unconquerable conviction of success, combined with intelligent study of the tasks to be done, will create new standards and capacities. Having done what the Guardian wishes, we will turn to Him and appeal for more and harder tasks!

Who will raise this banner at the Nineteen Day Feasts, at the meetings of Assemblies and Committees? Who will give proof that his love for God has attracted God’s love for him? Who will assist in transforming the Seven Year Plan from a difficulty to the rarest of privileges?

Faithfully yours,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

“Darkness hath encompassed every land, 0 my God, and caused most of Thy servants to tremble. I beseech Thee, by Thy Most Great Name, to raise in every city a new creation that shall turn towards Thee, and shall remember Thee amidst Thy servants, and shall unburden by virtue of their utterances and wisdom the ensigns of Thy victory, and shall detach themselves from all created things.

"Potent art Thou to do Thy pleasure. No God is there but Thee, the Most Powerful, He whose help is employed by all men."—Bahá'u'lláh.

The Inter-America Committee has received with great joy an inspirational report from Mr. and Mrs. Rafi Mottahedeh, telling of their recent trip through Central and South America. We quote from their report some of the high lights.

Rio de Janeiro

"Rio is a large, beautiful city and could have as stirring a center as New York, if the right pioneers are sent there. The people are very liberal minded and there are many refugees eager and willing to listen to the Faith.

"One meeting was held at Leonora’s apartment and was attended by approximately twenty-five people; newspaper men, physicians, refugees; one couple who had heard of the Bahá’í Faith in Vienna and several charming people of capacity. They seemed to be deeply interested and were eager for more meetings. When we returned from São Paulo we had a meeting at the Hotel Gloria in our suite which was very well attended, and several seemed to catch the fire of the Faith.

A young newspaper reporter working for one of the most important papers in Rio said that he would like to be considered a Bahá’í. He had heard of the Faith from Jeanne Bolles. We know that he will be a help to whoever will come there as a pioneer."

Bahía

"Mr. Worley met us at the airport and he and his wife were extremely kind and cooperative. Our trip to this city was solely for the purpose of visiting the Bahá’ís.

"One man who can read knows Bahá’u’lláh and The New Era by heart, and his devotion and faith is beautiful to see. The leader of this small community is a Donna Antonia, an intelligent elderly lady. She lives in a hut with mud floors and does not even have the necessities of life. The sole decoration is a picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. We brought with us a Persian rug with the Greatest Name and Bahá’í poetry woven in it and we felt that the best place to put it was in Donna Antonia’s home. We held one meeting at her house which was attended by the Worleys, the Brazilian believers, and their neighbors. The friends of these Brazilian believers fully realize how necessary it is for them to be Bahá’ís, but have not yet reached the point of confirmation. One Indian man among them was very keen and during the period of question and answer said, ‘Christ did not mean this carnival of religion that the Church has made.’"

Mrs. Mottahedeh especially mentions a meeting which was held at the British Club in Bahía and attended by about ten people. One of the persons most interested was a prominent doctor who is planning to attend Johns Hopkins in Baltimore this winter. "He is a native Brazilian, highly regarded in Bahía and we feel that his confirmation will give a great impetus to the work in that city."

Buenos Aires, Argentina

"When we arrived at the airport there were about thirty people waiting to greet the passengers of the plane. About twenty-five of them were Bahá’ís who had come to meet us. Their excitement and ours was greater than we can describe to you." Mrs. Mottahedeh here tells of the wonderful spirit infusing this entire community, and the wonderful work done by Mr. Sprague on his recent trip to Buenos Aires. "Their kindness to us and their love was overpowering. — They have a very nice center and conduct meetings two or three times a week. They have a young people’s group which is very much alive.

"Mr. Torno, the chairman, has a country home at Ezeiza where the Bahá’ís and their friends gather almost every Sunday. This is really a sort of Bahá’í summer school and has some of the spirit of Green Acre. Its Sunday population varies from seventeen to seventy and everyone is welcome.

"We were thrilled to hear that the Buenos Aires believers are planning a new group in Patagonia. Mr. Torno is instructing a girl from Rio Negro in the Faith. She seems close to confirmation and will go back home to teach. They do, however, need a pioneer to go to that city to do the final work of confirmation.

"Another member of the Buenos Aires Local Assembly has gone to the north of Argentina to Corrientes and hopes to start a group there.

"The high point of our visit to Buenos Aires was the trip to Quilmes to visit the grave of Mrs. Maxwell. We covered the grave with flowers, then said prayers in Persian and English and Spanish. There were nine of us there."

Santiago, Chile

"Marcia Atwater has a group of about eleven, most of whom have been Bahá’ís for only two months. They are all souls of capacity and we feel that the groundwork has been done to establish the Cause firmly in Chile. . . . She receives much favorable publicity and all of the newspaper men that she comes in contact with, know of the Faith. She is working for one of the newspapers besides doing her Bahá’í work.

"We held several meetings at Marcia’s house and were able to give the Message to a small group. These meetings were well attended. We were able to give the Message to a young Austrian refugee woman who seems to have great capacity.

"When Marcia presented Bahá'í literature to some Government officials and told them the purpose for her visit and stay in Chile, she received encouragement to go on."

Peru

"We were delighted with this country and found it the most interesting of all the places we visited. Despite the fact that here too you could reiterate the details of the miseries the people endure. Here you find the living remnants of Inca civilization. These people have never lost the greatness of this ancient civilization which was given them. There are many intelligent, wide-awake Peruvians and we felt this country is a fertile field for the Faith. The climate in most places is equitable and the people are as progressive as they can be, considering their economic condition. Peru is a land of enchantment both from the scenic point of view, its great past and the latent power that you feel in the people. . . . The Indians have noble faces and many of them are very beautiful. Lima, their capital, has the air of a busy cosmopolitan city.

"We regret that our limited time prevented us from making contacts for the Faith although we did meet an English woman connected with the British legation who seemed ready. We are sending her literature."

Quito, Ecuador

Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh tell of their arrival in Ecuador and of their pioneer, Mr. John Stearns, taking them to meet the heads of an English cultural center. The three teachers are Ecuadorians and have started this center to promote better feeling between Britain and South America. "We invited two of these heads to meet at John Stearns' house at his suggestion. About nine people came to that meeting including the first Ecuadorian Bahá'í upon whose face his faith can be read. He is a young boy, intelligent and with an inquiring mind. His family approve of his being a Bahá'í and know the Teachings.

"We were supposed to leave the morning after this meeting, but the plane could not come over the mountains to Quito from Guayaquil, so we had to stay another day. We spent this day with Eduardo, the Ecuadorian Bahá'í, and John. That evening we held the first public Bahá'í meeting in Ecuador which was attended by about twenty-nine people who listened with great attention and who accepted with alacrity the Bahá'í principles. One of the heads of the school said you may count me the second Ecuadorian Bahá'í. His co-worker will follow him also, I think. We said to the group that if they thought these principles were good they should start a weekly study class; which suggestion was eagerly accepted."

Panama

"Mrs. Caswell met us at the plane and we were so happy to see her and to be in the Canal Zone.

"Mrs. Oliver was working, so we spent most of our time with Louise Caswell. Both of them are working hard there under difficult conditions. There is much color prejudice and much natural feeling on the part of the Panamanians. We feel that their work has progressed extremely well considering the difficulties at hand.

We held one meeting at the house of a Panamanian in the Canal Zone, which was attended by several young people as well as two colored teachers from La Boca School."

Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh then told of another meeting which was very well attended and of their visits to several other Bahá'ís throughout the Canal Zone. Also of the difficulties the Bahá'ís have in getting together for meetings, as the heat, transportation and the distances between their homes all contribute to the slowness of progress in the Teachings.

In closing, Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh say: "We feel that it was a great privilege for us to be able to make this tremendous journey and feel that it has contributed to our own development. We also hope that we will be able to pass on to the believers here the urgency for their support of the South American work at any sacrifice."

Miss Beatrice Irwin has written an interesting account of her trip to Rio. On the boat she says that she was able to give the Teachings to a group of thirty young Mormon Missionaries and has given two Bahá'í talks at the Gloria Hotel in Rio, since her arrival.

The Inter-America Committee has received the registration cards of two new believers from Cuba and one from Haiti. Each name added to the Bahá'í Community of North and South America gives great joy to all the Bahá'ís throughout the Western Hemisphere.

The inter-America Committee is very glad to report that Mr. Arthur Rotunno from the Yonkers Assembly expects to move to Bermuda and will remain there at least two years.

Cuba

Miss Josephine Kruka writes that she expects to return to Havana in the early part of October to resume her teaching of the Cause in that country. She asks that the prayers of the believers in this country go with her to Cuba and help establish a Bahá'í Assembly by April of 1942.

Costa Rica

John Eichenauer reports much splendid activity in Central America. He is at present in Costa Rica, and writes as follows: "These have been glorious days having Louise Caswell with us in San Jose! She has been very well received by the Community and has spoken at several meetings. It's been quite a reunion of pioneers... Last night several members of the Community gave Louise and me a farewell dinner here in Gayle Woolson's apartment. A delicious dinner, we were nine by coincidence. Tomorrow Gayle, Louise and I are going down to Puntarenas on a teaching trip to form a group there where the chairman is staying for a time. From there I will go to San Juan del Sur and up to Managua in time to meet Louise who will come back to Jose and take the plane next Wednesday for Managua... She plans to stay in Nicaragua about three days and I will try to take her also to meet the group and contacts in Masaya and Granada. Then she will go for several days to San Salvador where Clarence will show her around, arriving I judge around Saturday a week from the coming one. Then, as she has probably told you, several weeks in Guatemala and about the time she leaves Guatemala I will head north after finishing some teaching work in Nicaragua to Honduras where we plan to meet again. I plan to arrive a few days before her and notify them of her coming so as to have a nice crowd out to meet her and stay there in Tegucigalpa and surrounding territory as long as the Committee sees fit." John writes that his younger brother Marshall, a Bahá'í Youth, is planning to join him in Central America. He says: "It is my plan, may Bahá'u'lláh if He sees fit, confirm it, for us to go to Panama to pioneer and assist Louise and Cora and at the same time take jobs in the Canal Zone which Louise says are very plentiful."

Mrs. Amalia Ford who has been for some time in San Jose as a pioneer, is returning home for a well earned rest. She has done a great deal in the establishing of the first Bahá'í Assembly in Costa Rica.

Haiti

The Committee has received with great joy another registration card from Port au Prince, Haiti. The card has been forwarded by Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell.

Uruguay

Mr. Wilfrid Barton reports the registration of two splendid Bahá'ís of great capacity in Montevideo. The slow but steady growth of the Cause throughout South and Central America is a cause for deep joy in the hearts of all believers.

Mrs. Caswell and Mrs. Oliver have sent in the registration card of a new believer in the Canal Zone. The registration of this believer is a cause for great rejoicing as he is the leading Negro Educator of the Canal Zone. In view of the important place held by Panama as the crossroads of the world it is of estimable value that the Bahá'í Community present within itself a cross section of the human race.

From Quito Mr. John Stearns writes a short account of the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh. "Their arrival was virtually without any forewarning... the cable from Lima reached me after their plane was supposed to have. Despite this in a hasty way we gathered together an interested handful for a small meeting Sunday night, really the first of such held in Ecuador. Bahá'u'lláh saw fit to detain them a second night by making landing conditions impossible for their plane north Monday. Monday evening they again talked to a larger group, assembled by the process of uniting the meeting classes at the English Center to hear them. Among these were many whom I was anxious to have reached. My only regret and the only regret of the friends they left was that it was impossible on such short notice to assemble all the people who should have met and heard them. Anyway we now have a study group, and their visit was like a drink of fresh water to me personally. Their stopover was a big lift in Ecuador." An inspiring report on the work in Chile has been received from Mrs. Marcia Atwater, who is living in Santiago. She writes of the steady progress made by the group of six Bahá'ís in their studies of the Cause and the constantly growing circle of people who are being made aware of the Teachings. She enclosed a copy of the talk given in Spanish by her, at the University of Santiago. The talk attracted a great deal of favorable publicity and interest. Mrs. Atwater intends to remain in Chile indefinitely.

Mrs. Frances Stewart writes of her return to Utica, New York, after a trip of many months through Central America. Mrs. Stewart was able to make many contacts and formed study groups throughout this part of the American Continent. Enclosed was a Spanish translation of the Tablet of Ahmad. Mrs. Stewart is also assisting in the translation of the new Spanish prayer book.

Venezuela

Miss Priscilla Rhoads writes that she is able to include the Bahá'í ideals in her educational work. She is planning to remain in Caracas indefinitely and to quote from her letter: "I simply can not imagine myself living in New York again. Life here is so much pleasanter, the people are so 'simpatico' and after awhile I shall be accepted as a person and not an 'extraniero.'"

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Woods sailed from New Orleans on July 23rd, for Rio de Janeiro, where they intend to reside indefinitely. They will undoubtedly prove of great assistance in the teaching work already begun in that city.

Bolivia

Mrs. Eleanor Adler has returned from La Paz, Bolivia, having disembarked at New York, July 28th. She was welcomed by a member of the New York Community, Mrs. Helen Liehnors. In Bolivia, which first heard of the Cause in December, 1940, there are three Bahá'ís
North America Teaching

Weighted down though we all have been by the consciousness of the appalling task yet before us, in the prosecution of the Seven-Year Plan throughout North America, a task demanding not less than the creation of an organized Spiritual Assembly in every State and Province of this vast land, yet on the other hand we are thrilled and overjoyed by the evidences of our Guardian’s good favor and confidence in our ability to prosecute our chosen work. “The quality and magnitude of the work already achieved . . . are inexpressibly exhilarating and infinitely meritorious,” he has written us recently, and again, “The Plan itself . . . bids fair, in the fifth year of its operation, to exceed the highest expectations of those who have so courageously launched it.”

It is indeed well that we should feel some confidence and hope, in an hour when we are privileged to pour out new gifts of spirit and sacrifice to our “world redemptive Faith, for whose precious sake the world is undergoing such agonies” . . . We are, by the inconceivable grace of God, physicians to the peoples of this world. As such, our field is enormous and our spirits, too, surge with an enormous eagerness, a very restlessness of zest to conquer it!

From a hundred points the National and Regional Teaching Committees are flooded with proofs of the new life and vigor which stirs the friends, evidence surely of that promised “operation (of) spiritual forces” which Shoghi Effendi tells us is accelerating in proportion to the world’s travail. The following paragraphs are only a sample of those proofs, but enough, we believe, to carry to each of us the conviction of success.

Two of the virgin States have already yielded a fruit of enough believers to establish Spiritual Assemblies in April. The cities are Arlington, Virginia, and New Orleans, Louisiana, both testimonies to indefatigable Bahá’í service.

In Arkansas Mabel Ives and Reszi Sunshine are striving to accomplish the same goal, and recent figures show five believers in Hot Springs, three in Little Rock, with several other close friends for the Cause. These results have grown from two energetic campaigns in January and February, in which Howard Ives also wonderfully helped. One stimulating contact was Dr. Janet Miller, author of “Camel Bells of Baghdad,” who as a medical missionary spent a year in Persia, several times visiting the Tabriyat School.

A major project this Fall will be conducted by the Regional Committee to strengthen New Orleans in October, then to open Moline, Alabama, and probably Gulfport, Mississippi. The technique will include contacts and advance publicity by Marion Little, a public campaign by Mabel Ives, and carefully-planned follow-up using many of the Southern friends.

In Texas the Faith has taken root in several centers and is progressing steadily. San Antonio now counts eight Bahá’ís with a twice-weekly study group. Both here and in Dallas Kathryn Frankland is doing historic work. Our new Dallas Bahá’ís, Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey, sponsors a study class which Mrs. Frankland has twice visited, and this plan will doubtless continue in the Fall. Ruth and Leslie Hawthorn of Winterhaven have been rewarded with three recent registrations, including the first Mexican-American believer of Texas, the five of them scattered through Dimmit County which is larger than Rhode Island! In Corpus Christi our Regional secretary, Doris Corbin, is diligent in tying these and other efforts into a teaching program of ever-widening opportunity.

Still another virgin State is responding to the ceaseless efforts of Regional Committee and hard-working Bahá’ís: Rhode Island now boasts a group of five at Pawtucket, and four in Providence. In July Terah Smith arrived to reinforce, during the next weeks, their progress.

The Canadian friends, faced with the prodigious challenge of five virgin Provinces, have launched a nation-wide campaign which, through the medium of regional conferences in or near Montreal, Toronto, and Vancouver, has already enlisted the best thought and services of every available believer. During the next months the Maritimes will be bombarded with such teachers as Lorol Schoppflecher, Doris and Willard McKay, Rosemary and Emeric Sala, Amine and John DeMille, Ernest Harrison, Elizabeth Cowles, Grace Geary, not to mention the original pioneer of Nova Scotia, Beulah Proctor. It is hoped that Moncton will soon be reestablished as an Assembly, while Halifax and Prince Edward Island are more difficult goals. In Ottawa the Cause is stoutly represented by Winifred Harvey, while in Winnipeg Ernest Court carries on a group in the absence of Rowland Estall. Mr. Estall himself is busy from Coast to Coast, sharing his unique grasp of the Faith and its teaching necessities, "raised up," in the words of one friend, "to stimulate Canada to an enlarged service." After September he will concentrate especially in the Prairie Provinces which have recently gained a new pioneer in Lulu Barr, now living in Saskatoon. Plans are also under way to send another pioneer to Saskatchewan, while in Alberta Doris Skinner is pushing the work in Calgary and Edmonton, and looking eagerly to British Columbia for increasing aid.

The vitality of the Faith in far-off Alaska was tangibly displayed at the Geyserville School in the person of Janet Whitenack of Fairbanks, who has now returned to the North with her first experience of Bahá’í community life, and immeasurable affectionate greetings to warm our three pioneers of Anchorage. We have learned of two study groups in that outpost spot, with at least six students very close to active membership. "The spiritual conquest of Alaska is a much greater undertaking than I ever realized," Helen Gillis writes, "but it will be done." On that point we are none of us in doubt.

After two discouraging years in that difficult State, Nevada, Helen Griffin is at last gathering in her harvest. A group of six believers in Reno will join forces in September with Sylvia King, bent upon the addition of sufficient members to achieve their Assembly as soon as possible.

We are thrilled, also, to know that Ruth Moffett has undertaken new work in South Dakota, which she surveyed in June through flying visits to Sioux Falls, Rapid City, Deadwood, and Lead, giving two radio talks and several public lectures. At first, she writes, "I will confess that I did not consider it worthwhile to go up among the rattlesnakes, buffalo grass, and treeless distance . . . ." but through this survey she is now convinced of the opportunities for fruitful teaching, especially in Sioux Falls. Mrs. Moffett has also been devotedly at work in Iowa, a State to which Shoghi Effendi directed her efforts, with intensive campaigns during May and June in Waterloo, Cedar Rapids, Cedar Falls, and Independence. The heartfelt hope of the Guardian for Local Assemblies is yet to be fulfilled in both these States.

Orcella Rexford has just proved convincingly that pioneering in Latin America may also be done at home! While teaching at Louheilen, she made several visits to the International Conference of Progressive Education at Ann Arbor, to which the American government had brought as guests some thirty-two Latin American delegates. One carried an introduction from Elizabeth Cheney in Paraguay, while Senor Torres of Nicaragua was a Bahá’í who had assisted Frances Stewart. Several of the delegates accepted invitations to Louheilen, including a distinguished Honduran woman educator, awarded life membership in Phi Lambda Theta for her conference work. Other fascinating friends were made in Ann Arbor, whose coming to the School contributed richly, including a group of scholarship students from the Philippines and an eminent Philippine artist.

With only thirty months until our centennial Convention, we are all pressed to discover every talent and wisely administer every resource. Southern California, in an inter-communitv conference on August 3rd, has developed a valuable contribution to the problem of clarifying and coordinating the relationships of all agencies responsible for teaching. Some fifty believers, members of local teaching and extension committees, devoted an earnest session to a discussion among themselves and with representatives of the Regional and National Teaching Committees, of these relations and functions. Remarkable were the insight and enthusiasm gained by all who took part, and indeed the entire conference received the confirmation so abundantly promised us.

Surely, dear friends, the achievements of the past weeks are but a splendid foretaste of the bounties vouchsafed to our American community. "God's own Plan has been set in motion," our beloved Guardian assures us. "The powers of heaven and earth mysteriously assist in its execution." May not these words of the Master continue to lead us on to the last step of our chosen Path?

"The Kingdom of God is possessed of limitless potency. Audacious must be the army of life if the confirming aid of that Kingdom is to be repeatedly vouchsafed unto it. . . . Vast is the arena, and the time ripe to spur on the charger within it. Now is the time to reveal the force of one's strength, the stoutness of one's heart and the might of one's soul."

Baha'is in Army Camps

The National Youth Committee wishes to keep in touch with all believers who have been called under the draft. To carry out this plan, the Committee must have a complete list of such Baha'is. Kindly send name and present address (and previous address of Baha'i connection) to Miss Betty Scheffler, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street, Evanston, Ill.

Publishing Announcement

The World Moves On To Its Destiny, by Shoghi Effendi, a four-page leaflet reprinting excerpts from recent words of the Guardian, including passages from The Promised Day Is Come, explaining the spiritual significance of the present world-struggle. This leaflet is expected to be widely used for teaching work, and the National Assembly ordered a large edition. The leaflet folds to fit standard size envelopes. Sold in lots of 100 only. Price, 100 copies for $0.50.

Feast Day and Anniversary Calendar. This four-page, card-size pocket reference contains the list and the dates of the Baha'i Anniversaries, Festivals, Days of Fasting, Holy Days on which work should be suspended, dates of the Nineteen Day Feasts, and the Guardian's letter of explanation. For Assemblies, Groups and Regional Secretaries, 100 cards for $1.00 for resale at 2 cents each. Or 25 cards for 50 cents if the larger quantity can not be used.

Status of Virgin States and Provinces
As of September 15, 1941

This graph, very simply, measures the work we have to do by 1944. It gives us the "temperature" of every virgin State and Province, by showing the number of declared believers in each one's largest group. In some areas, you will see there are no groups but only one or two Bahá'ís. Yet our Guardian's goal is a Local Spiritual Assembly!

Briefly, a careful survey convinces us that supplementary pioneers are urgently required in these places: Alberta, Prince Edward Island, Vermont, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, North Carolina, Kentucky, Mississippi, Wyoming and Idaho.

A study of the graph reveals other areas which could and must be greatly strengthened by teachers—resident, circuit, or visiting. Only twenty-nine months remain!

"The field is indeed so immense, the period so critical, the Cause so great, the workers so few, the time so short, the privilege so priceless, that no follower of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, worthy to bear His Name, can afford a moment's hesitation."

Race Unity at Green Acre
Twenty years ago American friends, following the instructions of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, held the first convention for the solution of America's greatest problem, that of race. Green Acre, over a period of many years, has nobly responded to the ideal of human oneness. A bright feature of last summer's program was the Race-Unity conference held in August. It consisted of a succession of seven meetings over a period of three days, the entire record of which would make a readable and fascinating book. A more detailed report is being made for future use. Herein is but brief mention of some of its high spots.

Horace Holley as chairman, opened with a prayer; "Many a chilled heart has been set ablaze by the fire of Thy Love, etc." Loving welcome was voiced and a graphic picture was presented of the Master's visit to America, with its transforming ideals and wide range of human attraction.

Mrs. Harriet M. Kelsey served as musical director of the conference, utilizing the capacities of various instruments, contributing her own talents and that of her three children, Mary Louise, June and Carol and arranging for other numbers from Misses Lois Keller and Monevar Bechtold.

Miss Lorna B. Tasker, responding to the subject, "Racial Adjustment in Latin America," impressed much of spiritual value by bringing vividly to our attention the way our Latin American neighbors regard human values and are utterly free from racial prejudices as pertaining to Indians, Spaniards or Portuguese and Negroes.

Mrs. Annamarie Kunz Homond on "The Emergence of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh" shed light upon the growing feeling of human solidarity, illustrating the unknown talents of various groups and comparing mankind to a great chord in which many notes are needed to make a perfect blend.

Louis G. Gregory emphasized "The Racial Basis of the New Civilization," bringing to view what exploration, history, science and Divine Revelation have now proved of equal capacities in all races.

Miss Mary Jacobs, an American Indian, told of the kindness of the Indians to the Pilgrim Fathers, who would have left their new homes had it not been for such encouragement.

Roy Wilkins, Editor of the Crisis Magazine, spoke of "Hopeful Trends in Race Relations," presenting from the viewpoint of his broad horizon, both the realism and idealism of racial contacts. He paid a tribute to the Green Acre atmosphere.

Mrs. Mary Coristine, chairman, sounded a note of warning against old viewpoints and quoted the stirring Words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá on the "New cycle of human power."

Hermann Smith paid a tribute to the Chinese for their inventions, culture and contributions to human welfare.

Matthew W. Bullock related some unknown chapters of Negro history and expressed gratitude for his attraction to the Bahá'í Faith.

Mrs. Mary R. Swift read from the poems of the Negro poet, Dunbar, and one of the American addresses of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Carl Cartwright advocated the identification of oneness with each race and the abandonment of the thought of childhood amongst races.

Miss Jeannie Bolles mentioned the warmth of heart found among the South American people upon her late visit.

On Sunday morning, August 10th, the meeting especially planned to emphasize spiritual values, Mrs. S. E. G. Oglesby, chairman, read prayers and extracts from the Sacred Words. Mrs. Dorothy Baker gave a talk on "The Spiritual Bond of Unity," how it had created great past civilizations and today is transforming mankind. "If we turn our hearts to the Gift of the Holy Spirit, the 'little horned devil' of prejudice, separation and animosity may be overcome." She laid eloquent stress upon the blessedness attended with working for unity, as affecting not only the individual, but the world influence and spiritual station of America.

At the closing session Mrs. Ludmila Bechtold, chairman, impressed the importance of living true race relations, relying upon the power and guidance of Bahá'u'lláh. Matthew Bullock told of his own quest for truth and how delighted he now felt with the Bahá'í Teachings, almost moved to declare himself a believer. Curtis Kelsoy recommended ceaseless activity and firmness in the divine teachings. Mrs. Edith Inglis deplored the darkness of the past and hailed the great change in the world now taking place. Mrs. Hilbert Dahl gave the Bahá'í teachings on harmony in diversity. Mobry C. Oglesby advocated wisdom and moderation in teaching.

Horace Holley, in this clear vision of reality gave final expression, as quoted in part: "We have left the old world behind. We cannot return to the faith of our fathers. We must rise above the level of the past and build in our hearts a superconscious reservation of strength. There is a perfect judgment from a Higher Power and now we are called to be a part of the universal unity. Laws in future will regulate universal values. The cycle of separation is ended and now all may swim in the Great Ocean of Unity."

Warm thanks were expressed to all who gathered, some drawn from long distances, for their presence, prayers, talents, expressions, and heart responses to this universal theme. The Green Acre Program and National Race Unity Committees cooperated in this service.

Teaching Conference
Vogel Park Cleveland, Georgia
June 14-21, 1941

The high spiritual atmosphere, unexcelled instruction, and the joys of Bahá'í fellowship will linger long in the memories of those who attended the Special Bahá'í Teaching Conference held again this year at Vogel Park. A total of thirty-one persons were present, Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís, and nineteen remained throughout the week.

In addition to her scholarly classwork on Some Answered Questions, Mrs. Hoagg most generously shared with us one evening many of her most precious memories of the Master, of her visits to Akka and Haifa, and of the early days of the Faith in this country. Mrs. Ives's course was interrupted when she was called back to Mr. Ives, but Mrs. Terah C. Smith stepped into the breach, and gave us a wonderful series of lessons.

The younger people were most active, and spent hours together discussing many phases of the Teachings. Swimming, boating, driving, and picnicking together were our chief diversions, and all served to give us a greater appreciation of the joys of Bahá'í fellowship.

A note of greeting signed by all present was sent to the Guardian, and later a more detailed account telling him of our fine classes, our living arrangements, our sports, our picnics, and of the great beauty and serenity of Vogel Park and Lake Trabylita, named for an Indian princess.

At a meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly held in Atlanta, Ga., in November, 1940, the four secretaries of the Regional Teaching Committees in the South were asked to undertake the responsibility of conducting this Conference.

NELLIE J. ROCHE, Secretary

Preparation of Publicity
As the Cause becomes more widely known and publicized in this country in the press the greater will become the margin of error. Our experience has been that errors in newspapers concerning the Cause come through ignorance of the Cause and its principles rather than the malice of newspapermen.

First, our own copy must be prepared with great care, accuracy and simplicity. This Committee thought a short resume of what happens to "copy" after it leaves our hands would assist the friends to understand why some of our articles appear as they do.

Metropolitan papers have little room for anything besides "news." So far, our own activities have not grown to the point of becoming "news." Smaller papers, particularly small town weeklies do not use so large a proportion of their space for "spot-news," of war and national activities and welcome "feature" material.

Whatever the size of the paper, the copy for that paper must be edited. First, it must fit the space designated for it. If the space is too short for the original copy, the copy must be either rewritten or cut down to fit. On large papers, a re-write man rearranges this material. On small town papers, the editor often rewrites the articles. Whoever writes or cuts down the article is simply doing his job and does not intentionally misrepresent the material he handles. In most instances, since he does not know about the Cause or its principles, his manner of rewriting the facts will convey a meaning different than our own. Most editors do not like to print what they consider "editorial" matter. Statements of our principles and quotations from the Writings are considered editorial in relation to our activities which are considered news. So, often statements about the Faith, which we cherish above the news of our activities, do not appear in the paper.

After an article has been edited it must have a headline or heading written to fit a space. The heading must contain a certain number of letters in the words used for good spacing and must as well convey the meaning of the article. To the average newspaperman the word "cult" is a four letter word meaning "religion." Since we are being taught the more minute meanings of words, we cannot be careless of our words. The problem of the Newspaperman is different. He often relies upon certain words because of their number of letters to fit a line.

After an article has been edited it is turned over to a printer who sets it up in type. He too can make mistakes. Considering the number of the people who handle an article and the number of processes it goes through, it is remarkable that more mistakes do not appear in papers all the time.

If we are to continue to use the press as a teaching medium we will have to be willing to use patience, tolerance and understanding of the newspaper problem and of newspaper editors as human beings. If we have written our own copy with great accuracy and simplicity, we will have to leave the rest to Bahá'u'lláh. We can bring the errors to the attention of the editors with a friendly letter or personal call. However, if the editor does nothing about our correction, it is usually best to forget the incident.

Never start an argument or controversy with an editor. Never make a personal call to scold or reprimand him.

An actual attack on the Cause is a different matter and should be handled through national channels.

Bahá’í News Service

The Bahá’í News Service Committee has been authorized by the National Spiritual Assembly to compile a planographic sheet of newspaper clippings concerning Bahá’í books placed in public or private libraries and Bahá’í talks given over the radio.

This sheet has been planned as a teaching aid for the friends. We believe that there are many such clippings which the friends have not yet mailed in to this Committee for the Press Books and have been tucked away in personal or local files. May we ask the friends to help us by mailing to this Committee, immediately, any such clippings which would effectively serve this purpose.

Mrs. Virginia Camelon, Chairman

125 Fourth Street, Wilmette, Ill.

Library Committee

Library requests have been coming in very slowly during the summer months. Will the friends contact more libraries and help us to establish a splendid record this year?

Assembly Library Committees: Our records are scanty for the leading cities in which there are established Assemblies. In many cases, we have records of the Bahá’í books in the Main Library but very little data concerning branch libraries and other types of libraries to which books have been donated in the past. Will the Assembly Library Committees kindly assist us in bringing our records up-to-date? We should appreciate copies of your reports for our files. Have you made a complete library survey of your city? In how many branch libraries have Bahá’í books been placed? Have you presented books to other libraries—Women’s Clubs, Peace Organizations, Jewish Libraries, Y.M. and Y.W.C.A. Libraries etc.? We hope to be able to make a general report of your library activities later to the friends passing along suggestions, plans and methods of library contacts which you have used successfully. Address all correspondences to Mrs. Frances McComb, 88 Lafayette Avenue, Englewood, New Jersey of this committee who will try to bring our records up-to-date with your assistance during the year.

Regional Teaching Committees: Have you sent along requests for library books for the new communities in which you are now working? Are there Bahá’í books in the libraries in the cities where there are disbanded Assemblies? Have you considered presenting books to the outlying libraries of these cities to attract new people to the meetings? Will you kindly cooperate with Mrs. Carl Krug, Abbot Court So., Radburn, New Jersey of the Library Committee in presenting books to the Army Service libraries in your region? You will receive a letter from Mrs. Krug concerning this Army library project giving further details and we hope that books will be donated to at least a hundred of these libraries during the year with your aid.

Bahá’í Groups and Pioneers: The presentation of books to your public libraries is a basic teaching activity which will give you local publicity and bring people to your Fireside Meetings. Contact the National Library Committee for books after interviewing your local librarian. Offer Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era and Foundations of World Unity as a gift set. Other titles are available if the librarian is receptive or local teaching activities warrant the offer of other volumes.

Mrs. Stuart Sims, Chairman
To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and Groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

This communication is issued after an exchange of cablegrams with Shoghi Effendi on a most urgent situation which has arisen in connection with the completion of the Temple exterior. The matter is sufficiently urgent to justify the Assemblies in arranging for an immediate, special meeting with the community. It is imperative for the realization of our collective determination to live up to the Guardian's explicit appeals that all American Bahá'ís be informed of the latest developments, and that the local communities pray and act vigorously upon them without delay.

"Unhesitatingly advise insure completion by December (of) sixth and seventh faces. Urge contractor (to) redouble efforts during winter months (to) prepare two remaining faces to be placed as soon as weather permits next spring. Owing (to) international situation strict economy (in) administrative expenses and supreme sacrifice needed (to) complete nine faces by end (of) spring."

—Shoghi Effendi, in cablegram received October 14.

This clear and emphatic message was in reply to word cabled to him that work would have to cease by October 31, when five of the nine mainstory faces will be finished, on account of another revision in the estimate of cost. The contractor has informed the Temple Trustees that the cost of completing the work will be about $22,000 above the estimate made as late as the middle of August.

Temple Schedule

The schedule made by the Guardian calls for continuance of the work into December, until two more faces are completed, and this part of the work will cost $6,500, of which some $4,200 will be received by the Temple Trustees from the sale of land for the realignment of Sheridan Road. The balance, $2,300, is dependent on contributions from the believers between now and January 10, 1942.

The second part of the schedule means that work on the last two faces is to begin early next spring and be carried forward as rapidly as possible until finished. The cost for the work next spring is estimated at $13,500. Meanwhile, to take care of the extra cost of $10,000 on work done in August, September and part of October, plus costs incurred under the contract for the steps, an arrangement has been made with the contractor for a series of monthly payments from October 31, 1941 to December 31, 1942. This arrangement means that, in addition to what the Guardian wants done by December, the Trustees must be able to maintain monthly payments of between $1,000 and $1,500 for fourteen months.

Maintain Both Teaching and Temple Construction

In another cable received from the Guardian on this subject, he declared..."feel however absolute necessity (to) refrain (from) interruption (of) teaching work. Appropriations (for) National and Intercontinental teaching activities must remain undiminished. Otherwise repercussions (on) pioneer work (would be) deplorable."

Thus we perceive that both branches of the Seven Year Plan—the Temple and teaching activities—are to be maintained with all possible vigor. The end of Temple construction under the Seven Year Plan is now in sight. The costs have been increased to the estimated total of $67,000 since the middle of April, 1941, and this considerable expense would have put a stop to construction work of any ordinary type. Because we are raising Bahá'u'lláh's House of Worship, we are willing to sacrifice ourselves as evidence that we know and worship Him.

While, therefore, the National Spiritual Assembly is obligated to present facts and figures bearing upon
Tests of Devotion

What the Guardian calls for, that we must give in full measure, without stint or limitation. How much can we increase our capacity to serve during the few remaining years of the Seven Year Plan? These unexpected difficulties that come to us are but tests of our sincerity and devotion. They will be surmounted when, in a spirit of reverence and unity, we come together in our meeting of consultation and pray for assistance to do our share of the mighty work.

May we ask each Spiritual Assembly to report on the results of the meeting called to discuss this letter—not a financial report so much as a presentation of the spirit of the friends, and the degree of their resolve to meet the Guardian’s appeal.

Faithfully yours,

National Spiritual Assembly

Letters From the Guardian

Regarding the question whether it is necessary to obtain the consent of the parents of a non-Bahá’í participant in a marriage with a Bahá’í, as Bahá’u’lláh has stated that the consent of the parents of both parties is required in order to promote unity and avoid friction, and as the Aqdas does not specify any exceptions to this rule, the Guardian feels that under all circumstances the consent of the parents of both parties is required.

The Guardian approves the use of the form of report to be filled in by all Latin-American Assemblies. This form, however, should be closely considered by your Assembly, and need not be forwarded to him, as the final action in such matters rests with the N. S. A. This body should exercise the utmost patience, good will, care and vigilance in such delicate and vital matters, should stress the importance of the institution of the local Spiritual Assembly, should take into special consideration the Latin temperament and character, should exercise a general, though not too rigid, supervision over newly formed groups and Assemblies, and should, by every means in its power, maintain, nay, increase, the flow of pioneers and financial assistance to these countries, that constitute, in these critical years, the greatest trust delivered into the hands of the champions of the Bahá’í Faith in North America. He is delighted to learn that there is a possibility of one or more Spiritual Assemblies being formed in South America, besides those of Buenos Aires, Costa Rica and Bahia. There is no doubt that in this particular field the North American believers are exceeding the expectations of the Guardian when he conceived and formulated the Seven Year Plan. What he would urge at the present stage is to insure that an anchorage for the Faith be firmly laid in every Latin Republic. This need not involve the formation of an Assembly, but presupposes the formation of a group of resident believers, who will safeguard permanently and definitely the interests of the Faith during the critical years which lie ahead of the Continent of America.—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, August 12, 1941.

The paramount and urgent importance of the teaching work both in the North American continent and throughout Latin America cannot be over-emphasized. The attention of the entire company of the American believers should be focused on the requirements of this vast undertaking that has been so gloriously initiated, and which must be pursued, extended and consolidated by every means in their power. This is the National Assembly’s supreme objective, upon which must depend the success of the Seven Year Plan. I will pray that this goal may be attained and this great mission be nobly fulfilled.—To Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman, July 18, 1941.

It is such a pleasure to learn from your letter that the extremely generous donations of our dear and esteemed Bahá’í sisters, Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Morton, will enable the N. S. A. to concentrate its attention on the vital requirements of the inter-continental teaching campaign, which during the remaining years of the Seven Year Plan constitutes the predominating and decisive issue confronting the American believers. I feel certain that you will continue, as it has been your wont ever since its inception and long before it was initiated, to lend your outstanding assistance to the historic task entrusted by our Beloved to the American Bahá’í community. I will continue to pray for your precious health.—To Roy C. Wilhurs, Treasurer, August 13, 1941.

Canadian Bahá’í Fund

The Canadian Bahá’í Fund came into existence in October, 1940, made necessary by Foreign Exchange Board regulations restricting the sending of money out of the country. It was started by two contributions totalling Six Hundred Dollars and at the time of the last Convention had increased to about Nine Hundred Dollars.

At the time of the Convention the Assistant Treasurer, Mr. Schopflocher, presented a proposition to spend part of the money to propagate teaching in Canada. The pioneer from Winnipeg, who was present at the Convention, consented to act also as a teacher at large throughout Canada. Meanwhile other projects came up such as the pioneer work to settle Saskatchewan, so that in spite of regular contributions by the end of July the amount had dwindled to about Five Hundred and Fifty Dollars. Other projects came into operation such as teaching work in the East. To keep up the traveling teacher work until May, 1942, the pioneer work in Saskatchewan and teaching in the Eastern Provinces, an expenditure of about Three Hundred Dollars a month is called for, starting this month. After two months a monthly budget of One Hundred and Fifty to Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars will be necessary.

The Assistant Treasurer is glad to report that in consequence of the last letter released from the N.S.A., contributions have increased substantially by some Assemblies formerly somewhat delinquent. Only yesterday, September 6, a letter was received by an individual believer enclosing a check for Two Hundred Dollars to be followed by regular contributions of One Hundred Dollars a month. The letter is most encouraging as the Assistant-Treasurer feels that this contribution and the promise of more to come plus increased contributions from groups and Assemblies will insure the teaching program and fulfill the obligation of the Seven Year plan to establish the Faith in every Province of Canada.

In future regular monthly statements will be released and will be included with receipts issued by the Assistant Treasurer.

Inter-America News

“The disciples of Christ forgot themselves and all earthly things, forsook all their cares and belongings, purged themselves of self and passion and with absolute detachment scattered far and wide and engaged in calling the peoples of the world to the Divine Guidance, until at last they made the world another world, illuminated the surface of the earth and even to the last hour proved self-sacrificing in the pathway of that Beloved one of God.”

Guatemala

Mrs. Louise Caswell, who is traveling throughout Central America, has written enthusiastically regarding the Bahá’í work being done by the pioneers. She says, “It has been a rare privilege to visit these countries where the fires of God’s struggling Faith have been so recently kindled, and to watch the gentle, precious pioneers faithfully fanning the flames which are rising to unsuspected heights. Already there is the promise of a second Assembly in Costa Rica. Baha’u’llah’s banner is firmly planted in Nicaragua, a country which is a center of spiritual power. Salvador has already yielded more than enough Bahá’ís for an Assembly, believers who yearn for deeper knowledge and study regularly. In Guatemala the enthusiastic believers are scattered because of the lack of a pioneer teacher. For two weeks my room is their center where they can come for meetings. Last night we were ten in spite of the rain. Tonight others will come. I wish I could stay six months, but surely some one will come and enjoy the high privilege of teaching in Guatemala. If the Bahá’ís at home knew the joy that is here for them in these Republics of Central America they would drop everything and come to help the new brothers and sisters. The call of the newly-born Bahá’ís will reach the listening ears of some Bahá’í teachers who will be unable to resist the urgency and will rush here to gather the ripe harvest.”

“One August ninth at the Cristobal Y.M.C.A. an Ecuadorian evening was held. Among other things I gave a talk on Ecuador, quoting ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s words on American Indians, also mentioned a Bahá’í, John Stearns, who was pioneering there. A young man in the audience had been to Quito and knew John well so Cora and I were thrilled to hear the news of John and Quito.”

Costa Rica

Gayle Woolson has sent a brief report of the progress of the Cause in Costa Rica where there are now thirteen believers including herself. Thirteen of them live in San José, and formed an Assembly last April, 1941. She expressed great enthusiasm about the new work which they have started in another part of Costa Rica, and enclosed a report written by the Secretary of the Spiritual Assembly in San José, who writes as follows: “We were very, very happy to have been visited by John- ny Eichenauer from July 9 to September 5 and by Mrs. Louise Caswell from August 12 to September 10, and greatly appreciate the splendid cooperation they both gave us.”

“It is a great joy to be able to report to you the formation of a splendid Bahá’í study group in Puntarenus, one of the provinces of Costa Rica, and the registration of the first Bahá’í of that province. . . . The group is very enthusiastic and surprisingly eager, for such a young group, to be able to form a Spiritual Assembly in 1942. There are six others studying hard, preparing themselves to become declared Bahá’ís.”

Argentina

Mr. Tormo, Chairman of the Spiritual Assembly in Buenos Aires, writes of the painstaking care that some of the members of that Assembly are taking in making new translations. He also tells of extension work being done by their Assembly in the southern part of Argentina.

Nicaragua

It was formerly published in the Bahá’í News that Mr. Henry Wheelock was the first registered believer in Nicaragua. This should be corrected, as Senora Blanca Mejía registered first, after hearing the
If they do not arise others will be called in their stead and will seize the opportunity and gain the bounty. Bahá'u'lláh has testified that "They who have forsaken their country for the purpose of teaching Our Cause, these shall the Faithful Spirit strengthen through its power. By My Life! No act however great, can compare with it except such deeds as have been ordained by God, the All-Powerful, the Most Mighty. Such a service is indeed the prince of all goodly deeds and the ornament of every act."

The Inter-America Committee is prepared to furnish information and as much assistance financially as the sacrifices of the friends will justify but we cannot work without pioneers, and we cannot send pioneers without funds! We are at a complete standstill! Where are those lamps that are "lighted by the Fire of Thy love and ablaze with the flame which is ignited in the tree of Thy mercy"?

Any day we may learn that it is too late! We cannot know what obstacles will arise in our path which will plunge us into everlasting sorrow or wound us with the consciousness of failure! The pioneers are the Dawn-Breakers of the western hemisphere: "their assistance is the assistance of the Blessed Perfection; it is a sword which can never be dulled, a magazine which will always be full." Let them stand forth!

Temple Teaching

The latest report of the Temple Guides Committee presents some impressive figures. "Since July 1, 1932, records show that 130,907 visitors have made tours of the Bahá'í House of Worship. In August of this year, 4,027 visitors were shown through the building, representing 44 of the 48 states, the District of Columbia, and in addition visitors from Ottawa, Riverside, Toronto, Burlington and Niagara Falls, Ontario; Vancouver, B. C.; Buckinghamshire and Gloucestershire, England; Manila, P. I.; Montevideo; Panama; Puerto Rico; and Cuba."

The August registration compares with the 2,609 visitors who came in August, 1940. Among the guests were groups including 65 students.
from Northwestern University Summer School, 34 women from the First Christian Church of Waukegan, and 28 women from the Presbyterian Church of Waukegan, Illinois.

A class for prospective guides will be held in the Temple each Sunday beginning January 4, 1942, the hour now being set from one to three thirty p.m. All believers wishing to take part in this far-reaching and thrilling activity are invited to attend this class and enroll on January 4.

World Order Magazine

In its October issue the Bahá’í magazine presented the following: The Development of the Creative Individual, by Genevieve L. Coy; His Highness Christ Called All Men, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Tablet to South America; The Basic Principle of Truth—An excerpt from The Promised Day Is Come, by Shoghi Effendi; Youth Looks Ahead, by Horace Holley; Book review of The Social Role of the Man of Knowledge, by G. A. Shook; Study Outline On The Continuity of Revelation, prepared by Alice S. Cox from an outline made by Harry Jay; and With Our Readers, the department of editorial comment.

The November number contains: The White Silk Dress, by Marzieh Gail, on the great Bahá’í heroine and martyr, Tahirih; poems by Ella Louise Rowland and Blanche Young; Why I Am a Bahá’í, by Zerah Holden; The Real Life of Man, a hitherto unpublished public talk of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in America; Whom I Worship, a prayer revealed by Bahá’u’lláh; A Bahá’í Pioneer in Paraguay, by Elizabeth H. Cheney, the first of a series; and With Our Readers, the department conducted by Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick.

World Order Magazine, the business department reports, is arousing believers to a broader appreciation of its monthly array of instructive and stimulating articles reflecting the teachings of the Faith.

The steadily-increasing enrollment of new subscriptions from Bahá’ís, supplemented by subscription gifts to non-Bahá’í friends, gives evidence that the magazine is proving helpful for teaching work. One active worker last year sent in 51 gift subscriptions and has already renewed 26 of these gifts for a second year.

Our Opportunity

Since the Temple exterior is to be completed in 1942, the individual believer has only a limited time to make his contribution—his final contribution—to this great enterprise entrusted to the American Bahá’í community. The House of Worship will stand to future ages as the dawningplace of the Most Great Peace, the evidence of our faith and the sign of our worship in deeds not words. Such a glorious opportunity will not return to this generation.

Race Unity

Race Unity

On Saturday, September 27, an area gathering of Bahá’í friends met at Foundation Hall to discuss ways and means of reaching racial minorities and their leaders with the Bahá’í call to unity.

Mr. Eli Powlas announced the good news that he will be free from his former work for one year, during which he, together with his wife, will visit western and south western Indian communities for the purpose of spreading the Faith. Indian developments near Milwaukee resulted from such contacts, and with the aid of meetings and social events, have been carried steadily forward. Mr. Powlas attended in August the tenth annual American Indian Exposition, at Anadarko, Oklahoma. Delegates and visitors from more than fifty tribes were present, numbering in all approximately ten thousand. Bahá’í literature was given to many leaders. Mr. Powlas himself is the chief of the Milwaukee Council of Indians.

Work among the Negro minority will be carried forward this month by the visit of Mrs. Dorothy Baker to Kentucky and North Carolina, where she will address the student bodies of nineteen colleges, twelve of which are white groups, six Negro, and one Indian.

Discussion moved around the Good Neighbor policy and the need of more individual friendships with the Jews and understanding of their present-day problem. Mrs. Sarah Walrath reported attending a seminar conducted by the Quakers of New Hampshire, where eighty refugees from six European countries were guests. It was possible to entertain many of the Jewish friends, who responded not only to this friendly gesture but to the Bahá’í Teachings as well. Mrs. Corinne True quoted ‘Abdu’l-Fadl in his warning that it would be necessary to know the Prophets of Israel and their Teachings, in order to point out to the modern Jew the limitations in the old Christian philosophy concerning Bible fulfillment, and the wonderful consummation of God’s plan in the present day.

Race Unity Committee

Coordination of Race Unity With Other Committee Activities

1. Mr. Gregory has been asked to write an article based on the course he gave on Race Unity at Green Acre, with special emphasis upon the contribution of the Jewish people to the world in ancient and modern times. It is recommended that this article be used in the World Order Magazine and that extra copies be given to this committee for Jewish distribution and to Regional Committees and Assemblies on request.

2. Our surveys are at the disposal of individuals, groups, and committees who find themselves geographically located favorably to working with one or more of the American minorities.

3. We are aware of the need of coordination with the National Publicity Committee, and will make a special effort this year to tie up the winter’s activities with their timely news releases. Mr. Powlas and Mrs. Baker have especially been urged to send in not only news but pictures of notable minority groups and leaders whom they contact in their oncoming projects.

4. The Race Unity public meetings and group conferences should stimulate general teaching as well as special Race Unity work, and it is our intention to turn over all contacts, public and private, to Regional Committees and Assemblies, for follow up.

5. We suggest that the National Radio Committee be encouraged to make up fresh and timely little talks on such themes as ours, as well as on the other spiritual and social principles of the Faith, and send us notices when something especially adapted to our work is published.
Louhelen School
Winter Session

The Louhelen School Committee has planned a winter session to be held from December 26 to January 1, inclusive. The morning program will be devoted to deepening in the Bahá'í teachings through study, prayer and meditation, and the afternoons to discussion of some of the fundamental questions taken up in The Promised Day Is Come. Believers wishing to attend this session should apply as soon as possible to Mrs. L. W. Eggleston, Secretary, Louhelen Ranch, R.D., Davison, Mich.

Braille Transcription

The Committee on Braille Transcriptions wishes to correct the statement published in Bahá'í News for June, 1941, that the Red Cross charges $1.65 for a course of ten lessons in Braille transcribing. In a letter from “Service for the Blind,” American Red Cross, Washington, D.C., I am informed that there is no charge for this instruction. The only charge for a student is that of $2.75 for necessary equipment which includes manual, slate, stylus, and one hundred sheets of Braille paper and an eraser. If there is no local Red Cross Braille teacher, each lesson is sent (free of postage) to Washington, corrected and returned.

The local Red Cross Chapter must assume charge of the proofreading of the books transcribed by the student after completing the course and receiving the certificate of “Certified Braille Transcriber”; or, if the local Chapter is small, the individual may pay for his own proofreading—which, at three cents a page, would amount to $3.00 for a book of one hundred pages, with $0.50 extra for binding.

A book transcribed by a Red Cross certified Braille transcriber, proofread by a certified Red Cross proofreader, after binding may be offered to any Braille Circulating Library that the transcriber wishes, or will be placed in some Braille Library by the National Red Cross.

It takes 35 to 45 minutes to transcribe a page of Braille on the slate, and a certain degree of concentration is necessary.

Shoghi Effendi has always stressed the importance of the Braille work, and a believer who has international contact told me recently that many taking part in the great tragedy of war are becoming blind and deaf from the shattering of the nerves. What a bounty it is to be able to braille the Holy Writings for such souls, that their spiritual sight and hearing may be quickened.

Youth Activities for
The Bahá'í World, Vol. IX

Today Bahá'í youth are helping to mold Baha'u'llah's new world order. They are quietly but certainly making history. Shoghi Effendi desires a permanent record. Volumes of The Bahá'í World, appearing every two years, will tell the future how the new world order was established.

One small division in the ninth volume of The Bahá'í World will portray youth's part during the period April 21, 1940 to April 21, 1942. It is not known just when the Guardian will ask for the delivery of the manuscript, and therefore material must be gathered and written up now, though it will not cover the entire period. The international secretary for Bahá'í youth has received very little information from abroad. These troubled times call for a double responsibility from the Americas.

All readers of Bahá'í News who have any news, reports, articles, photographs (glossy print, if possible), helpful letters, newspaper clippings and editorials, which pertain to Bahá'í youth anywhere in the world, should send them immediately to Mrs. Annamarie Honnold, 902 S. Orme Street, Arlington, Va. It is thought that some individuals may have received letters containing valuable information on youth work during the above-mentioned period from friends abroad. This material is most important, and the cooperation of all Bahá'ís, not only the youth, is sought.

What are young people doing in the pioneer field? What do you hear from friends in distant lands, and in Central and South Americas? How are Bahá'í men facing the draft? What experiences are they having? What organizations are listening to Bahá'í youth speakers? How do the newspapers react? What are some new approaches and some outstanding achievements of our youth? Do you have any group pictures? These questions should receive many answers. And many others could be asked. Children are not to be forgotten.

Please help make this issue of The Bahá'í World informative and helpful. Information must be sent to the already-mentioned address now.

West Chester Assembly
Observes Anniversary

On September 14, 1941, along the historic Brandywine, a picnic was held at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis, to celebrate the first anniversary of the opening of the Bahá'í Center, by the West Chester Community of Bahá'ís.

The large gathering was comprised of thirty-one Bahá'ís and twenty-five non-Bahá'ís from New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del.; Clifton Heights, Pa.; and West Chess-ter; who were greatly impressed with the spirit of friendship and brotherhood.

The following speakers of the day were introduced by Mr. William Bowers, chairman; Mrs. Mary Belle Hammond, West Chester, Pa.; Mrs. Charles Hornung, West Chester, Pa.; Mr. Benjamin Shreiber, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Kalantar, Wilmington, Del.; and Mr. Butler, one of the colored friends from Philadelphia, Pa.; Miss Nancy Lee Bowers, one of our Bábí Youth, brought to a close the speaking part of our program by reading the Prayer for Unity.

International News

1. Australia and New Zealand

The N.S.A. teaching campaign has been uppermost in our thoughts during the last weeks and the friends in all centers have prayed earnestly for its success. The main effort was centered on Brisbane which no Bábí Teacher has visited since Father and Mother Dunn worked there some twenty years ago. They met with very little response at that time notwithstanding the great effort put forward. Miss Brooks, her sister Mrs. Hawthorne, Mrs. Moffitt and later Mrs. Routh made a frontal attack with nothing more than a few introductions from friends to people they thought might be interested in the message. As soon as they arrived in Brisbane unexpected doors opened and, reinforced by the prayers of the Guardian and friends, they went from victory to victory. After the classes and lectures several sought membership and an enthusiastic group was formed. The enormous distances, the scarcity of teachers and lack of adequate funds have been factors preventing much teaching work being undertaken in the past. This new group in Brisbane must be nurtured into the Faith and we believe that the means both in personnel and funds will be forthcoming for further follow-up work.

It was amply demonstrated during the campaign that the time is now for a concentration of effort on introducing the message to new districts. The Sydney Assembly is increasing its membership rapidly and we feel confident that both from here and Adelaide teachers will be raised up for the spreading of the glad tidings all over Australia.

Miss Brooks and Mrs. Routh, the two lecturers, desire the thanks and congratulations of all the friends for their fine work, also Mrs. Moffitt and Mrs. Hawthorne for their wonderful support and help in organizing the campaign. Surely Bahá'ulláh has blessed abundantly their selfless labors.

A Study Group has been formed in Brisbane, Queensland, and is now functioning with Chairman, Secretary and Treasurer, as a result of the teaching campaign in that city undertaken by Mrs. Moffitt, Mrs. Hawthorne and Miss Hilda Brooks, for one month, and Mrs. Moffitt and Mrs. Routh for another three weeks.

Ably organized by Mrs. Moffitt and Mrs. Hawthorne the work went with a swing from the first days. Contacts were made, invitations to lectures sent out and the lectures impressively advertised. In the first week the assistance and advice of Mr. O'Bryen Hoare, poet and teacher of public speaking, opened many doors. He had heard from a non-Bahá'í source that the Bahá'ís were in Brisbane and although unacquainted with them he 'phoned soon after their arrival and proffered his advice and assistance. In him the Bahá'ís found a good friend whose advice and introductions enabled them to make many contacts.

Miss Brooks was the lecturer. Her first lecture, "Bahá'ulláh and a New World Order," was given on the evening of May 12th, and was attended by sixty people. The lecture was most enthusiastically received and proved to be the prelude to a successful campaign. The press report of the lecture enhanced the prestige of the Bahá'ís, assisted in spreading the knowledge of the Teachings in Queensland and led to inquiries and requests for literature. This report was also broadcast over the air, and as a result an interview was requested by the Social Editor of "Queensland Country Life," a weekly publication which reaches the graziers and primary producers throughout Queensland. A report of this interview appeared later in that paper. The Social Editor arranged an interview for Miss Brooks with the Assistant Manager of The Queensland Primary Producers' Co-operative Association.

In addition to the advertised lectures Miss Brooks gave talks at meetings for inquiries and at social gatherings. A Study Group was quickly formed and by the end of the month three Brisbane men and one lady had spoken at Study Group meetings. At one Study Group meeting, Mr. Jim Heggie, a Bahá'í of Sydney who was in Brisbane for some days, delighted all with his fluent expressed viewpoints. Mr. Bedgood was elected Chairman of the Brisbane Study Group, Mr. Richards Secretary and Mrs. Donald Treasurer.

Many people visited Miss Brooks at her hotel for personal interviews, one of these being a representative of 4BK Broadcasting Station. Miss Brooks gave a lecture at the Theosophical Society's meeting after which there were many requests for literature. Bahá'í books were in great demand throughout the visit. Miss Brooks said, "Although we took a parcel of books with us we had to send for three more parcels."

Beginning June 2nd Mrs. Routh gave a series of lectures and talks all of which were cordially received. Whilst making new contacts Mrs. Routh and Mrs. Moffitt energetically followed up and consolidated the work done in the first month. The good attendances and interest were fully maintained and the Study Group placed on a firm footing. The two ladies were given a farewell social by the Study Group on the eve of their departure from Brisbane. On this occasion Mrs. Routh took 'Abdu'l-Bahá as the subject of her talk and so vividly did she portray His exemplary life her hearers were deeply moved.

The splendid organization and publicity work of Mrs. Moffitt and Mrs. Hawthorne in the first weeks contributed largely to the success of the campaign and the united prayers of the dear believers of Australia and New Zealand and the beloved Guardian at the Holy Shrines, assured the teachers of protection, guidance and success. They felt assisted every moment.

The election results have been delayed owing to a tie vote necessitating a second ballot for one member. This has caused the publication of the Quarterly to be later than usual. The full list is not yet to hand but the following are declared elected to the National Spiritual Assembly for 1941-42:

Miss Hilda Brooks, Mrs. Emily M. Axford, Mrs. Silver Jackman, Mrs. Charlotte Moffitt, Mr. Robert Brown, Mrs. O. J. Routh, Mr. O. A. Whitaker, Miss Ethel A. Blundell, (9th name not yet received).

2. British Isles

Summer School was held in Bradford from July 26th to August 4th, and was a great success. For a long while we searched for a suitable place in the country in which to hold it, but in vain; and, as a last resort, and in some doubt, we decided to have it in one of the big towns where there is a Bahá'í Center. There seemed to be difficulties in such a scheme, and we were afraid it would not be nearly so successful as in previous years, but these fears were unjustified. In spite of the fact that most of us lived in a hotel quite a walk away from the Bahá'í Center, which meant a great deal of coming and going through the town, and in spite of the fact that the Bradford friends did not, of course, live with us at all, but went to their own homes each night — in spite of all this, Summer School was all we hoped for and more, and was a truly wonderful experience for those who attended it.

During Summer School the following cable was sent to the Guardian:

"Summer School opens auspiciously public attracted friends happy. Hearts warmed your loving messages. Beg continual supplication divine assistance. Deepest love."

And just after Summer School closed the following reply was received:

Daily Inspiration for the Teaching Task

"Dearly-beloved friends! I can do no better, eager as I am to extend every one of you any assistance in my power that may enable you to discharge more effectively your divinely-appointed, continually multiplying duties, than to direct your special attention, at this decisive hour, to these immortal passages, gleaned in part from the great mass of Bahá'u'lláh's unpublished and untranslated writings. Whether in His revelation of the station and functions of His loved ones, or His eulogies of the greatness of His Cause, or His emphasis on the paramount importance of teaching, or the dangers which He foreshadows, the counsels He imparts, the warnings He utters, the vistas He discloses, and the assurances and promises He gives, these dynamic and typical examples of Bahá'u'lláh's sublime utterances, each having a direct bearing on the tasks which actually face or lie ahead of the American Bahá'í community, cannot fail to produce on the minds and hearts of any one of its members, who approaches them with befitting humility and detachment, such powerful reactions as to illuminate his entire being and intensify tremendously his daily exertions."—Shoghi Effendi, The Advent of Divine Justice, page 63.

Communications from the Guardian

This message was in reply to a cablegram sent to the Guardian by the National Assembly on October 28: "Proceeding completion sixth (and) seventh faces (by) December. All castings needed completion eighth (and) ninth faces (in) 1942 already finished and stored at Temple."

"Substitute 'shining' for 'striving' in detailed cable dated September 29." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

"Ruhí's sister married covenant-breaker Feyzi, whose mother joined and supported arch-enemy Muhammad Ali and whose father 'Abdu'l-Bahá denounced openly and repeatedly as His deadly enemy. Ruhí's family concurred. Inform all believers (that) all manner (of) communication (with) excommunicated family (is) forbidden." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

"(The) flagrant disloyalty (of) Ruhí's family compels me (to) disclose information so long (and) patiently withheld (from) American believers concerning his failure (to) obtain my approval (of) his second visit (to) America. His subsequent conduct regarding his marriage which I refrained from revealing (to) anyone except your Assembly, as well as Foad's departure (to) England without my knowledge, should now be made known (to) believers. Confident (of) unshakeable steadfastness (of) exemplary American Bahá'í Community." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

(Cablegram received November 10, 1941.)

To these messages the Assembly sent this cable on November 17: "Informing friends (of your) message (about) Ruhi's family. Assure complete obedience protection unity (of) sacred Faith."

On November 21, 1941, this reply was received:

"(My) confidence (in) immovable steadfastness (and) unstinted loyalty (of) American believers (is) reinforced." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

On November 17 also this cable was sent to Haifa: "Five faces complete, two more approaching completion. Planning concentrated, intensive campaign North America fulfilment (of) Seven Year Plan."

On November 22 came the following message for the believers:

"Heart thrilled (with) pride (at) message announcing (the) approaching completion (of the) ornamentation (of) seven faces (of) Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, proclaiming (an) intensification (of) North American teaching campaign, (and) revealing (the) adamantine resolution (of the) Temple builders (and) stalwart crusaders, in face (of the) perfidy, ingratitude (and) opposition (of the) enemies both within (and) without (the) Holy Faith. As (the) fury (and) destructiveness (of the) tremendous world ordeal attains (its) most intense pitch, so (the) Mission conferred twenty years ago by 'Abdu'l-Bahá's sacred Will on (the) worldwide, indivisible (and) incorruptible body (of) His followers unfolds its fullest potentialities. Securely abiding (and) confidently battling within (the) impregnable structure (which) that Will has divinely established, (the) dwellers (in the) ark (of the) divine Covenant (the) world over watch with awe, pride and delight (the) evidences (of the) mounting momentum (of the) eternal process (of) integration (and) disintegration hurrying (the) Faith along (its) predestined course. The royal adversary, personally responsible (for the) recrudescence (of) persecution closing all Bahá'í schools (in) Bahá'u'lláh's native land, (has) been humbled (to the) dust. (The) sufferings endured by (the) builders (of the) first Mashriqu'l-Adhkar (are) being avenged. (The) cornerstone (of the) National Administrative Headquarters (of the) Egyptian Bahá'í community (has been) ceremoniously laid. (The) spiritual competition galvanizing (the) organized followers (of) Bahá'u'lláh (in) East (and) West waxes keener as first Bahá'í century speeds to (its) close. (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani

Finally, under date of October 26, 1941, the Guardian wrote these words to the Treasurer of the National Spiritual Assembly:

"Conscious of the state of the National Fund, and realizing the urgency of the task facing its administrators, I have felt the urge to devote the offering of the American believers to the International Fund to the work which is now vitally facing and challenging the friends in the teaching field. Much as I appreciate the spirit prompting you and your fellow members to make this monthly contribution to the Cause at the World Center, I felt that it was my duty to communicate this offering while the Seven Year Plan is still operating, so that vital aspect of teaching upon which its success must ultimately depend. May the friends in view of the vastness of the field that stretches before them, and the potentialities of their labors within it, and of the glowing promise of future blessings which such a labor must yield, rise to still greater heights of self-sacrifice and evince nobler manifestations of solidarity in the face of the critical situation that so insistently demands their support."

The Spiritual Quarantine

Warnings have come to the American Bahá'ís from the Master and the Guardian in turn, at odd intervals over a long period of years, to avoid association with Covenant-breakers. Our latest instruction about this very grave matter comes by cablegram, a copy of which appears in this issue and names Ruhi Afnan and his family as now to be included in the list of bad eminence—persons, for the protection of the Cause, to be avoided.

That a scion of the Holy Family and a close relative of the Guardian should fall into such error and loss cannot be surprising to those aware of some happenings in past cycles. Those records, however fragmentary, afford ample proof that the real bond between the Holy Manifestations, their appointed successors and those whom they guide and teach, is spiritual rather than one after the flesh.

It is recorded that God had no respect for Cain, one of the sons of Adam. A son of Noah likewise became apostate. The brethren of Joseph, the Beloved of God, sold that holy One into exile and slavery. Aaron, the brother of Moses, misled by his wife, joined her in murmuring against his Lord whom he had long so faithfully served. Both were grievously punished and Aaron was forgiven and restored only after his repentant plea for mercy.

Perhaps few persons recall that Jesus Christ had four brothers after the flesh. Their brief mention in the Gospels implies that they were quite unaware of the station of their illustrious kinsman; while strangers, attracted by the power of His Word, attained high rank in the spread of Christianity. Subh-i-Azal, half-brother of Bahá'u'lláh, became the Evil Tree and center of death in opposing the Tree of Life. Mirza Musa, another brother, was loyal.

Christ prophesied:

"Many shall come from the North and the South, the East and the West and shall sit down in the Kingdom of God with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, while the children of the Kingdom shall be in darkness."

This prophecy was directly fulfilled in the lives of Mohammed Ali and Badî‘u’lláh, the two sons of Bahá’u’lláh who became the fallen branches, influenced by pride and greed and opposing ‘Abdu’l Bahá. High in birth, they were abased to the lowest depths.

And now our Guardian utters the word which means the spiritual quarantine of the excommunicated family of Ruhi Afnán. The Guardian has been extremely patient and long-suffering. In making this special requirement he but fulfills his sacred duty of Guardian to all the friends. He counts upon our discernment and loyalty. We on our part know that our faith in the Cause of God, divinely aided and confirmed, is far too precious a pearl for us to imperil by our disobedience to such commands. Not only is the Guardian’s right to direct us revealed by the highest authority, but for fully a score of years, with supreme wisdom, ardent devotion, proficient services and high courage, he has guided the ship of the Cause through troublous seas to the havens of victory after victory. Unitedly, heartily, devotedly, reverentially, we hear and heed his behest.

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and Groups of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

The Guardian’s cablegram of October 14, quoted in the November issue of Bahá’í News, conveys an instruction which calls for consultation and decision by each local Assembly and by each Committee, as well as by the National Assembly itself. "Owing to international situation strict economy in administrative expenses and supreme sacrifice needed to complete nine faces (of Temple) by end of spring." The word "needed" shows us clearly that without such economy and sacrifice, the objectives of the Seven Year Plan might not be attained.

Therefore we are under obligation to ponder this counsel in our hearts, discuss it in meetings, and do what lies in our power to realize economy in all the administrative activities.

Without a sound definition of all items coming under this heading of "administrative expenses" it would be difficult to adopt new measures without perhaps impairing a collective capacity to serve the essential aims of teaching and Temple construction to be achieved. It is not economy to cripple a community or Committee and prevent it from rendering its full measure of service. However, a Committee in drawing up its budget needs might check its items very carefully, to see if certain savings can be made without weakening the efforts to achieve the real aims. Perhaps the Committee records and minutes have become too detailed, in which case a simplification will be desirable. Often traveling expense can be saved by using teachers living in or near the area of activity.

Economy, in the true sense, is adapting means to ends and not sacrificing the ends to the means. Our objectives are vast and majestic. We cannot be niggardly in our plans to establish the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in twenty-one Latin American countries and in many North American States and Provinces. There has been nothing small and mean in the design of the House of Worship. However, if economy is not niggardliness, neither is it extravagance nor selfish materialism. The Cause has been served best by those who have sacrificed most, and this will always be true.

The increasing international difficulties require us to change our scale of living and working expense if we wish to continue serving the Cause.

There will be a great blessing for us to the degree that we all do our best to carry out the Guardian’s decisive instruction. The National Assembly has already made a beginning, and feels assured that all the friends will continue their efforts in the direction of sacrifice. May the entire American community achieve a higher standard in carrying out the Guardian's decisive instructions.

Faithfully yours,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

"O God! Be Thou their supporter and their helper, and in the wilderness, the mountain, the valley, the forests, the prairies and the seas be Thou their confidant—so that they may cry out through the power of the Kingdom and the Breath of the Holy Spirit! . . ."

The Inter-America Committee is deeply appreciative of the response which has been received to their circular letter with the selected readings for the Feast. Several Communities have written us, and one in particular is inquiring about the expense of deputizing a pioneer to some of the less distant posts now either left vacant by the necessary return of the teacher or not yet sufficiently provided with resident teachers. The vacancies now occurring are those of Bolivia, Guatemala, Honduras and Venezuela which is a difficult country being three thousand miles long, but very narrow; however we must sometime reach its most southern city, Magdalena, which is the most southern city in the world; and the Guardian has mentioned "The length and breadth of South America."

Publicity

Speaking of publicity we must not forget to mention the many interesting articles which have appeared in the press of other Republics of Central America which are due to the energy and wisdom of John Eichener. John has used great tact and has written all his valuable contributions in excellent Spanish.

Ecuador

News has been received from Mr. Hans Düry who is a new believer, acting now as Secretary of the group in Quito, that the group celebrated their first Nineteen Day Feast on October 16. Their happiness was reflected in the letter which came to the Committee.

Puerto Rico

This country has recently been added to the list of Latin American countries which come within the province of this committee. We are informed by the National Assembly that the teaching field there has recently been enriched by the presence of Mrs. Elia Guthrie, Mrs. Edith Marangella, Lucien McComb, Jr., and Mrs. Ayned McComb, so we shall expect great results from the forces gathered there.

Prospective Spiritual Assemblies

Several of the centers have now reached a membership which will enable them to organize on April 21, 1942, we trust. The growth and spread of the Cause in Latin America bears ample evidence of the bounty of Bahá'u'lláh which is bestowed upon those who pioneer.

Peru

Miss Eve Nicklin is now established in Lima, Peru, is becoming acquainted and writes of the beauty of the city and of her happiness in being there.

Chile

Our pioneer in Santiago, Mrs. Maria Atwater, has expressed her determination to remain indefinitely in Chile where she has met with wonderful success. She will extend her teaching also to Valparaíso and we hope elsewhere in time, as Chile is a very large country being three thousand miles long, but very narrow; however we must sometime reach its most southern city, Magdalena, which is the most southern city in the world; and the Guardian has mentioned "The length and breadth of South America."

Spanish Broadcast

It is with joy that we announce a Radio address which we hope will have occurred on November 26 at 6 p.m. over station KGEI in the Fairmont Hotel, San Francisco. Mrs. Amalia Ford, recently returned pioneer from Costa Rica, the speaker, will speak on the Cause and Costa Rica and all Latin American countries will be able to hear this address. In our monthly Bulletin we have informed the pioneers and groups and are asking all who may hear to write a word of appreciation to the Station; in this way we hope to secure further privileges.

Our Mail Bag

If the friends could see the amount of interesting letters which come to us day after day they would be convinced of the fact that Latin America is no longer a vague hope but a definite reality. And the mail which goes out from this Committee has marked us in our local postoffice which is doing a wholesale business in the matter of stamps. All letters, as well as our Bulletin, must be sent by air mail and we have learned to confine our communications to the limit of one air mail stamp by the use of very thin paper and carefully written text. We try to write frequently to all the pioneers and by means of the Bulletin to keep them... in touch with each other. Anyone wishing to learn the address of a pioneer may communicate with us and we shall be happy to inform him.

Visitors

Recently one of the former members of the Assembly in Costa Rica has arrived in California and is expecting to make his home here. He was met at the dock when his boat touched in Los Angeles harbor and shown Bahá’í courtesy by some of the friends. This and his cordial reception in San Francisco has made him very happy and has impressed the members of his family and the believers in San José who are realizing what Bahá’í unity means.

Teaching Activities in Canada

Of all the news which comes to the National Teaching Committee, the reports of the Canadian friends are most exhilarating. "The giant Canada is now awake and on his feet," writes Rosemary Sala. It is certain that the 1941 Convention marked the opening of a dynamic chapter in the fulfillment of the Divine Plan and its goal for Canada. The promises of the Master seem now to be visibly approaching: "... The believers of God must become self-sacrificing and like unto the candles of guidance become ignited in the Provinces of Canada. Should they show forth such a magnanimity, it is assured that they will obtain universal divine confirmations, the heavenly cohorts will reinforce them uninterruptedly, and a most great victory will be obtained."

With the coming of war and consequent limitations on travel, the Canadian Bahá’ís had perforce to organize their own summer teaching conferences. The following excerpts are drawn from reports by Regional Committees, the Toronto Assembly, and most liberally from Rowland Estall, who visited the three sessions in Montreal, Toronto, and Vernon, B.C.

1. Eastern Canada

The conference in Montreal, June 28th to July 2nd, the first summer session of its kind in Canada, received the Guardian’s recognition in a thrilling cable stating that he was overjoyed at first Canadian Summer Session and assuring those present of his deepest appreciation and fervent prayers.

Baha’i Temple Model, Central Feature of San Francisco Flower Show Held in Rotunda of San Francisco City Hall on August 27 and 28, 1941.

"In all, seventeen Bahá’ís and friends came to this historic Conference from out of town, in addition to the presence of the Montreal and St. Lambert believers. Four people came from Moncton, four from Hamilton, five from Toronto, two from Ottawa, one from Rouyn, and one from Winnipeg... Three non-Bahá’ís who attended this Conference... have since declared themselves believers, a striking evidence of the confirming spirit so markedly present throughout these five days..."

"The Regional Committee had assigned to the Salas the job of organizing the Conference, Emeric in charge of the program and Chairman of the Sessions, and Rosemary as hostess. Both did a wonderful job, with the result that, although they had very short notice, everything ran very smoothly..."

"The varied program provided daily talks and discussions based on the outline ‘Deepening the Spiritual Life’; study of the first part of ‘The Promised Day Is Come’ (led by Miss Winnifred Harvey); separate talks on ‘Bahá’í Administration’ (Siegfried Schopflocher, Ragnar Mattson, and Lou Boudler); ‘Bahá’í Attitude towards Christianity’ (Mrs. Agnes King); and ‘Post-War Reconstruction’ (John De Mille). Lorol Schopflocher contributed an account of her journeys to Central America and the British West Indies, and Emeric and Rosemary Sala gave us stories of their experiences in Venezuela and Columbia. A Teaching Forum, to which all contributed, was conducted daily by Rowland Estall. A Public Meeting at the Maxwell house drew about ten interested friends in addition to the thirty or more Bahá’ís present, and Emeric Sala and Rowland Estall spoke on ‘Post-War Objectives’, with Winnifred Harvey, Chairman.

"Sessions were held in the Maxwell house, at the Schopflochers and the Salas, interspersed with lighter moments of fellowship and recreation, and with the bountiful hospitality dispensed in these three Bahá’í homes. An all-day visit to the Laurentian Mountain cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Lou Boudler concluded an eventful Conference.

"Pervading the whole Session was the consciousness of a new spiritual adventure begun; the happiness of a new unity forged, a new strength created between hitherto scattered units of the Faith; the freshness of new discoveries made of fellow-believers from other places. The meetings opened in the Maxwell house, where so much of historic importance to the Cause in Canada has originated. The spirit evoked there stayed with us throughout the various sessions as we enlarged and deepened our knowledge of the Faith; as we consulted, and understood more clearly the nature of our present tasks, and prayed for guidance and strength to carry them out.”

It is not possible to detail here the wide-spread activities which so many of the Conference delegates have already undertaken, throughout Canada and especially in the Maritime Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island. Future reports will underscore that a new responsibility was implanted at this session, and that truly “all went away ... with a realization ... of the urgency for the speedy construction of the great Edifice of spiritual peace and social unity which the Bahá’í’s build in the midst of the debris of a tottering world.”

2. Ontario

The Toronto Spiritual Assembly “did a magnificent job” in arranging this region’s first Summer Conference, held August 3rd to 9th at Glen Lynden Farm, Rice Lake, under the general theme of “Our Colossal Responsibility.” Here too the delegates were blessed by a cablegram from Shoghi Effendi saying that he was pleased with the gathering. There were seventeen guests staying at Glen Lynden Farm for the Summer Conference. Twenty-nine guests attended lectures, seventeen guests staying at Glen Lynden Farm for the complete Conference. Present were Bahá’ís from Toronto and environs, Hamilton and Parry Sound, in Ontario; from St. Lambert, Rivière Beaudette and Rouyn in Quebec; and from Boston and Winnipeg.

“The locale chosen was ideal, a large farm fronting on the Lake ... The view was magnificent, looking out over green lawns, through white cedar and white pine trees to a green-gray, island-studded lake, extending to distant rolling hills beyond. It was a spot for inspiration.

The locale chosen was ideal, a large farm fronting on the Lake. The view was magnificent, looking out over green lawns, through white cedar and white pine trees to a green-gray, island-studded lake, extending to distant rolling hills beyond. It was a spot for inspiration.

“There were daily readings and meditations which began each day; a course in Applied Administration conducted by Harlan Ober, which drew long discussions on administrative ways and problems ... a daily Teaching Forum, conducted by Rowland Estall along the same lines as the one held in Montreal, but with special application to requirements of the Ontario Region which has no other Province to consider as a direct teaching responsibility; talks given by Rosemary Sala on “The Bahá’í Pioneer”, by Emeric Sala on “Post-War Reconstruction”, and by William Suter on “Bahá’í Attitude towards Christianity.” These were the scheduled sessions on the program.

Perhaps the words of John Robin, present at both the Montreal and Rice Lake sessions, most vividly epitomize their powerful benefits to the Seven-Year Plan. “I wouldn’t have missed either of those sessions for worlds, and that is the feeling of everyone who attended either or both of them. We got to know each other, and to realize the spirit of unity lives in all Bahá’í gatherings. We are different peoples as a result of those sessions and we pray that we may attain that station of heroism and sacrifice mentioned by the N.S.A.”

3. Western Canada

Vernon, B.C., was host from August 29th to 31st for the third of these Summer Conferences. In it “the Regional Committee essayed what was perhaps the most difficult Conference to organize. They undertook to combine the opportunity for study and consultation with an active program of public teaching in Vernon and Armstrong, two cities in the beautiful Okanagan Valley, some three hundred miles inland from the Coast. As in the case of the other two Canadian Conferences, cables were exchanged with the Guardian.”

“The Conference lasted two-and-a-half days. From 17 to 20 people participated in the various private sessions, and perhaps 15 to 20 others, residents of Vernon and Armstrong, attended one or more of the three public meetings. Visitors from other cities included two from Portland, Oregon; seven from Vancouver and West Vancouver; one from Calgary and two from Winnipeg.

“The Public Meetings, addressed by George Latimer and Rowland Estall, had been well advertised ... and excellent publicity obtained. A printed program had been sent out to 250 people. A window display on the main street in Vernon (at the Chamber of Commerce) had been arranged with a large framed picture of the Temple, and Bahá’í books and posters of the meetings.”

One memorable episode of the meetings occurred when a Canadian officer in the audience arose, “upheld the Bahá’í ideals and said the reason for the present troubled world conditions was that we had been too concerned in talking about Christianity rather than Christ. It developed that he had heard of the Cause in Palestine after the last war and had tried to see ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.” As a result of all this public activity, Austin Collin has reported that he has now “increased his study group to eleven people ... and that interest has grown so much that he could now guarantee an audience of 50 people for a public meeting ...”

“Austin Collin was Chairman of the Conference Sessions which, in addition to the Public Meetings, consisted of three periods of study of ‘The Promised One Comes,’ led by Mrs. Liddell, Mae McKenna and Evelyn Cliff, and an evening of consultation on Teaching.”

“Headquarters for the Conference was the Kalamalka Hotel in Vernon. The Vernon friends had generously decorated all our rooms with many-colored gladiolas and chrysanthemums, sign of the affluence with which nature has endowed this fertile valley in the heart of the Canadian Rockies. One felt that the seeds of the spirit were equally well planted in the hearts of the believers in these two cities, and would produce an abundant harvest for the Faith in time.”

And so was inaugurated this summer of 1941 a “new phase of Canadian teaching activity,” through three gatherings conspicuous in the words of Mr. Estall, for their initiative, inspiration, and action. Not large in numbers, they yet signified the unity of the Canadian friends in the historic duty conferred upon them by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. For Canada is on the march, and our fellows there are serving and sacrificing by a new measure. Might not they lead us all to a new and vigorous phase in our glorious mission?

“O ye believers of God! Do ye not look upon the smallness of your members and the multitudes of the nations... The plain is covered with pebbles, but precious stones are rare. One pearl is better than a thousand wildernesses of sand; especially this pearl of great price, which is endowed with divine blessing.”

Temple Construction Cost Increased

The reasons for increases in the estimated cost of completing the exterior decoration of the Temple main story are simple.

In the main story the contractor has found technical problems which did not arise in his work on the Temple dome, clerestory, gallery or pylons. The main story faces were designed by the architect with both vertical and horizontal curves. The process of fitting the castings to this type of surface involved unexpected delays in preparing the surfaces for the castings, and adapting the castings to their respective positions on the surfaces. To fit each casting, or completed unit, to the other castings in place or to be placed required much more working time on the part of the crew, and the cost increases have been for labor time and not for the purchase of material.

Finally, the casts which carry the nine texts are all different, since one text is not repeated nine times but a different wording appears over each of the nine entrances.

This is the first time in the contractor’s experience when the cost of applying the casts has been greater than the cost of making them.

What the Temple Trustees pay for is not the estimated cost but the actual cost, and this actual cost is checked by the Trustee’s supervising engineer each month and only the cost certified by the engineer is payable by the treasurer.

In the case of ordinary construction work the form of contract calls for a fixed cost estimate, and the contractor loses if this estimate is exceeded. In the case of the Bahá’í House of Worship that type of contract was employed for the construction of the superstructure, but the cost-plus contract is preferable for the exterior decoration as otherwise the contractor, to protect himself against unexpected costs, would have to make a maximum cost estimate, much larger than the present contractor has made.

Before the contracts for the gallery, pylons and main story sections were executed, the Trustees had the advice of a Technical Committee whose members included leading experts, and the selection of Mr. Earley as well as the form of contract and the system of cost accounting to be employed was all examined and recommended by that Committee, as was reported in Bahá’í News several years ago.

On the other side of the picture stand the very considerable savings which the Trustees have effected in connection with Temple construction work. One, the supervising engineer has given his services without fee. Two, the entire supply of quartz needed during the past three or four years was bought in advance at an extremely low figure. Three, the expert workmen needed for certain types of the work are classified for a wage scale much lower than would be the case if a new crew had to be hired. Four, the reinforcing steel needed for the steps was bought nearly a year ago, before war conditions produced higher costs and priorities.

In conclusion, the Temple Trustees are happy to report that all the precast units and all the materials needed to complete the last two faces next spring are finished and in storage, at the Temple, ready for operations as soon as weather permits. Moreover, if funds are available, the outside steps can also go forward rapidly in 1942, as the steel is on hand, the cement on order, the plans complete and much preliminary work accomplished.

To bring this divine Temple to completion, and give to the world this unique symbol of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh, the unity and sacrifice of the friends is now needed. The technical problems of construction, considered insuperable twenty years ago, have all been solved.

It is of more than passing interest to note that World Order, The Bahá’í Magazine, is steadily enrolling Public and University Libraries to its subscription list.

Bahá’í Assemblies, Groups and individuals, impressed by the value of the magazine for interesting non-Bahá’ís in the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh, as well as being a medium of progressive enlightenment and comfort for Bahá’í’s themselves, are donating gift subscriptions to one or more of their local libraries. One Southern Bahá’í Assembly, for example, has recently renewed its annual subscription gift to five local Public and University Libraries.

Green Acre News

The Green Acre School completed its 1941 session on August 31. How can one measure the effect of the nine weeks of teaching, learning, and living? Twenty-two regular, and as many incidental, instructors gave twenty approaches to a new society. Using as a basis the Divine Products of Baha’u’lLah’s inspired Pen, they gave the pattern for living today and tomorrow. Then teachers and students went forth intellectually and spiritually inspired to live the pattern. Perhaps it is that “living” which is the best measure. It is sometimes called “the spirit of Green Acre.”

The physical needs of man were not neglected. Mrs. Valentine and her able corps created the substance for three of each day’s most pleasant hours. There were plenty of opportunities for recreation. The waterfront was improved with a substantial float and a fireplace; boat rides in Portsmouth harbor, square dancing on Monday evenings, music by a resident group of musicians and by record, walks in the pines and on Monsalvat, picnics at the beaches were some of the things enjoyed by many; Mrs. Street, Spanish, taught the language and coached a play for Youth week.

A heart-warming sight was the Children’s Class under the pines. The nine or ten children of several ages living in the Inn gathered to hear and learn the teachings under the guidance of Mrs. Swift or Louis Gregory.

The facilities of the School were placed at the disposal of the Regional Teaching Committee. Besides using Bahai Hall for a Regional teaching meeting, they used many of the instructors as speakers at public meetings in New England cities.

Some arranged flowers in the rooms and halls; others served refreshing teas; there were many late lunches after the evening meetings.

There is another measure of education. It is the creation of a desire to learn. It may be that Mr. Ashton’s sale of four hundred dollars worth of books is a tangible indication of a creation of that desire!

Information for Radio Committee

The Radio Committee needs the cooperation of the friends in order to work out new plans for the extension of this important branch of public teaching activity.

Will the believers who have given radio talks, the Committees and local Assemblies who have conducted radio programs, kindly send in the following data:

- Date of talk; topic (this not imperative); call letter of broadcasting station, picture (if possible) of the station and whatever information you have about the size of the radio audience which the station claims to have for its programs. The photograph can be of the studio or the building in which it is located, whichever the station itself gives out for publicity purposes. With the photo should come word that the station permits the photo to be used.
- Kindly furnish this information at your early convenience. Address Mrs. Wendell E. Bacon, Secretary, Munson Mass.

This graph, very simply, measures the work we have to do by 1944. It gives us the “temperature” of every virgin State and Province, by showing the number of declared believers in each one’s largest group. In some areas, you will see, there are no groups but only one or two Bahá’ís. Yet our Guardian’s goal is a Local Spiritual Assembly!

Briefly, a careful survey convinces us that supplementary pioneers are urgently required in these places: Alberta, Prince Edward Island, Vermont, Kansas, North Dakota, South Dakota, North Carolina, Kentucky, Mississippi, Wyoming and Idaho.

A study of the graph reveals other areas which could and must be greatly strengthened by teachers—residents, circuit, or visiting.

Only twenty-nine months remain!

Race Unity at Green Acre

Twenty years ago American friends, following the instructions of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, held the first convention for the solution of America’s greatest problem, that of race. Green Acre, over a period of many years, has nobly responded to the ideal of human oneness. A bright feature of last summer’s program was the Race-Unity conference held in August. It consisted of a succession of seven meetings over a period of three days, the entire record of which would make a readable and fascinating book. A more detailed report is being made for future use. Herein is but brief mention of some of its high spots.

Horace Holley as chairman, opened with a prayer: “Many a chilled heart has been set ablaze by the fire of Thy Love, etc.” Loving welcome was voiced and a graphic picture was presented of the Master’s visit to America, with its transforming ideals and wide range of human attraction.

Misses Lois Keller and Monevar Bechtold served as musical director of the conference, utilizing the capacities of various instruments, contributing her own talents and that of her three children, Mary Louise, June and Carol and arranging for other numbers from Misses Lois Keller and Monevar Bechtold.

As of September 15, 1941

- Elmhurst, Wheelan Church, Evanston, Hope Lutheran Church, Chicago, Women’s Society, Carey Memorial Church, Wheaton, Great Lakes Naval Training Station (W.P.A. Education Tour), Grandmothers Club, Chicago, Lincolnwood Public School, Evanston, Tuskegee Institute.
- Visitors registered during this period from many parts of Canada and the United States, as well as foreign countries: Mexico, Japan, France, England, China, India, Australia, Nicaragua, Peru. In numbers affected, and by its direct association with the Bahá’í House of Worship, Temple guiding represents the most important inter-racial project maintained by the American believers. Fortunate are those who as guides have the privilege of contributing to this responsible and far-reaching activity.

Temple Teaching

The Temple Guide Committee reports the following figures showing number of visitors in recent months: April, 451; May, 1103; June, 1317; July, 2391; total, 5262. This represents a decline from the previous year, the result, it is said, of the lack of an adequate number of direction signs locating the entrance and making it clear that visitors are welcome.

Organizations and groups which sent a body of visitors included: North Park College, Bethel Sunday School, Baptist Union of Chicago, Howard Public School, Newcomers Club, Evanston, Women’s Society, Church of the Atonement, Chicago, Nit Wit Club, Evanston, Women’s Society, Epiphany Lutheran Church, Elmhurst, Methodist Church, Wheelan Church, Evanston, Hope Lutheran Church, Chicago, Women’s Society, Carey Memorial Church, Wheaton, Great Lakes Naval Training Station (W.P.A. Education Tour), Grandmothers Club, Chicago, Lincolnwood Public School, Evanston, Tuskegee Institute.

Visitors registered during this period from many parts of Canada and the United States, as well as foreign countries: Mexico, Japan, France, England, China, India, Australia, Nicaragua, Peru.

In numbers affected, and by its direct association with the Bahá’í House of Worship, Temple guiding represents the most important inter-racial project maintained by the American believers. Fortunate are those who as guides have the privilege of contributing to this responsible and far-reaching activity.

Race Unity at Green Acre

Twenty years ago American friends, following the instructions of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, held the first convention for the solution of America’s greatest problem, that of race. Green Acre, over a period of many years, has nobly responded to the ideal of human oneness. A bright feature of last summer’s program was the Race-Unity conference held in August. It consisted of a succession of seven meetings over a period of three days, the entire record of which would make a readable and fascinating book. A more detailed report is being made for future use. Herein is but brief mention of some of its high spots.

Horace Holley as chairman, opened with a prayer: “Many a chilled heart has been set ablaze by the fire of Thy Love, etc.” Loving welcome was voiced and a graphic picture was presented of the Master’s visit to America, with its transforming ideals and wide range of human attraction.

Mrs. Harriet M. Kelsey served as musical director of the conference, utilizing the capacities of various instruments, contributing her own talents and that of her three children, Mary Louise, June and Carol and arranging for other numbers from Misses Lois Keller and Monevar Bechtold.

Miss Lorna B. Tasker, responding to the subject, “Racial Adjustment in Latin America,” impressed much of spiritual value by bringing vividly to our attention the way our Latin American neighbors regard human values and are utterly free from racial prejudices as pertaining to Indians, Spaniards or Portuguese and Negroes.

Mrs. Annamarie Kunz Hornold on “The Emergence of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh” shed light upon the growing feeling of human solidarity, illustrating the unknown talents of various groups and comparing mankind to a great chord in which many notes are needed to make a perfect blend.

Louis G. Gregory emphasized “The Racial Basis of the New Civilization,” bringing to view what exploration, history, science and Di-
Communications From the Guardian

The following cablegram, received December 13, 1941, refers to a message cabled the Guardian by the National Assembly informing him that the sixth and seventh main-stories faces of the Temple had been completed:

"Extremely grateful (and) delighted (at) completion (of) two more faces (of) Temple. Owing developments advise deliberate (to) insure (that) nothing whatsoever prevents or delays (the) erection (of) last two faces (at the) earliest possible opportunity. Deepest love." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

The next communication is a cablegram, received on the same day, December 13, and reproduced elsewhere in this issue. On December 14 this message came:

"Kindly cable news (of the) safety (of the) Honolulu friends. Assure them (my) prayers." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

On December 10 a cablegram had been sent to the Honolulu Assembly expressing loving prayers and best wishes from the National Assembly. On December 14 the message from the Guardian was cabled and on December 20 the Honolulu Assembly replied: "Deepest loving gratitude (for) assurance (of the) Guardian's (and the) Assembly's prayers. Bahá'ís (of) Maui (and) Honolulu (are) safe." Thereupon the Guardian was cabled the news of their safety.

On January 1, 1942 this message arrived from Haifa:

"Faithless sister Mehrangiz (has) followed (the) example (of) Ruhi's sister. All ties (have been) severed. No consideration (of) family relationships can ever be allowed (to) interfere (with the) dictates (of) justice or (to) supersede supreme fidelity (to) Center (of) Bahá'u'lláh's Covenant. Inform believers." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

Two days later, January 3, a second message came on the same subject: "Parents strongly condemn Mehrangiz's action." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

In publishing these two messages from the Guardian, the National Assembly reminds the friends of the statement on "The Spiritual Quarantine" prepared for the December, 1941 issue of Bahá'í News in connection with the Guardian's two previous cablegrams reporting Covenant-breakers within the family.

From the January meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly three cablegrams were sent to the Guardian, as follows:

"American Bahá'ís will employ every possible occasion (to) demonstrate fidelity (to) Center (of) Bahá'u'lláh's Covenant." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.

The following excerpts are taken from a letter written by the Guardian through his secretary to the Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly on October 26, 1941:

"Bahá'u'lláh's call resounding in (our) hearts, (we are) praying (for) fitness (and) capacity (to) maintain sacred trust unimpaired through time (of) supreme spiritual trial until glorious light (of) God's ancient Promise floods this darkened earth. Confident (of) upsurge (of) devotion (and) service from rededicated community."

"Intensive teaching campaign inaugurated (with) seven projects (in) North America, race unity program (among) Southern colleges, new pioneer, Flora Hottes, for Bolivia. Collins' second annual gift five thousand (for) teaching work received. Extending direct assistance (to) inexperienced Assemblies; issuing special teaching number (of) Bahá'í News; planning (for) completion (of) Temple construction (in) 1942."

The final cablegram to share with the friends came January 8:

"Comforted (and) fortified (by) fervent messages testifying (to) solidarity (of) bonds (of) spiritual kinship uniting me (with) true upholders (of the) Covenant. (I) prize their loyalty, glory (in) their achievements, hail their resolve, invoke still greater blessings (upon) their superb exertions." (Signed) Shoghi Rabbani.
"He has recently cabled the National Assembly that he considers it of the utmost importance that the faces of the Temple be completed and placed in position on the main story with as much expedition as possible. This matter has aroused his grave concern, as the Guardian believes that in view of the relation of the U.S.A. to the international situation, the rising costs, labor shortage, etc., it may be both increasingly difficult and expensive to complete this work with every month that goes by. He, therefore, would urge you to impress on Mr. Earley—who, he realizes, is always eager to cooperate in such matters—the necessity of completing whatever ornamentation of the main story remains, during the winter months, so that at the earliest moment next spring, when the weather permits the work at the Temple itself to be resumed, the last faces may be placed in final position.

"Next to this in consideration should be the teaching work. Nothing must be permitted to hamper or slow down this apostolic campaign which the believers have undertaken. It represents the discharge of their moral duty towards their fellow men, that of permitting them, in these cataclysmic times, to hear the Message their Lord has prescribed for them to solve their problems and heal their ills. That of the necessity of completing the ornamentation of the main story, of the seven faces of the Temple rests on the National Assembly to take the necessary measures for the construction of the steps should be carefully considered, and thus insure the unimpeded progress of this vital aspect of the Seven Year Plan."

Note: The Temple work has been so planned that all work at the studio has been completed, and it is estimated that faces eight and nine, completing the main story ornamentation, can be completed in about five weeks as soon as weather permits.

America's Spiritual Mission

1. Excerpts From Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahà

O ye believers of God! Endeavor ye, so that you may take hold of every means in the promulgation of the religion of God and the diffusion of the fragrances of God. Strive ye that the Collective Center of the sacred religions—for the inculcation of which all the Prophets were manifested and which is no other than the spirit of the Divine Teachings—be spread in all parts of America, so that each one of you may shine forth from the horizon of Reality like unto the morning star, divine illumination may overcome the darkness of nature, and the world of humanity may become enlightened. This is the most great work!

You must become heavenly farmers and scatter pure seeds in the prepared soil. The harvest of every other seed is limited, but the bounty and the blessing of the seed of the Divine Teachings is unlimited. Throughout the coming centuries and cycles many harvests will be gathered.

At this time and at this period we must avail ourselves of this most great opportunity. We must not sit inactive for one moment; we must sever ourselves from cupidity, rest, tranquility, goods, property, life and attachment to material things. We must sacrifice everything to His Highness, the Possessor of Existence, so that the powers of the Kingdom may show greater penetration and the brilliant effulgence in this New Cycle may illumine the worlds of minds and ideals.

O ye friends of God! Exert ye with heart and soul, so that association, love, unity and agreement be obtained between the hearts, all the aims may be merged into one aim, all the songs become one song and the power of the Holy Spirit may become so overwhelmingly victorious as to overcome all the forces of the world of nature. Work! This is the great Work, should ye become assisted therein. Thus America may become the fulcrum of merciful susceptibilities, and the throne of the Kingdom of God be established upon earth with the greatest joy and majesty.

Prayer for Teaching

O Thou Incomparable God! O Thou Lord of the Kingdom! These souls are Thy heavenly army. Assist them and with the cohorts of the Supreme Concourse, make them victorious; so that each one of them may become like unto a regiment and conquer these countries through the love of God and the illumination of divine teachings

O God! Be Thou their supporter and their helper, and in the wilderness, the mountain, the valley, the forests, the prairies and the seas, be Thou their confidant—so that they may cry out through the power of the Kingdom and the breath of the Holy Spirit!

Verily Thou art the Powerful, the Mighty and the Omnipotent, and Thou art the Wise, the Hearing and the Seeing.

'Abudl-Bahà
To carry out in its entirety and to its final consummation this dual enterprise would shed on the closing years of this first century of the Baha'i Era a luster no less brilliant than the immortal deeds which have signalized its birth, in the heroic age of our Faith. To the American believers, the spiritual descendents of the heroes of God's Cause, I again address my plea to arise as one soul and to prosecute with unrelaxing resolve the high mission with which their immediate destiny is inextricably interwoven. The call has gone forth, the path is clear, the goal manifest and within their reach. Though their responsibilities be pressing and heavy and the obstacles formidable and manifold, yet the spirit of our invincible Faith will enable them to conquer if they arise unitedly and determinedly and persevered till the very end. (June 4, 1937)

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and groups of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:
The American followers of Bahá'u'lláh have entered that time when maximum disturbance and upheaval in the world without will be counterbalanced by the release of spiritual powers of surpassing potency in the world of spirit. Our faith, our knowledge, our training have all prepared us for achievement in this time when the illumination of the Kingdom is to be revealed on earth.

The Guardian's Message
Consider this mighty call from the Guardian of His Faith, coming to us on December 13, 1941 to rally our forces, unify our souls and afford us a great historic occasion for a reconsecration in service to the Cause.

"(The) most great convulsion envisaged by (the) Prophets from Isaiah to Bahá'u'lláh, catastrophic in violence, planetary in range, (is) assailing, at long last, (the) predominating nations of the Asiatic (and) American continents. (The) leading Power (of the) Western Hemisphere which, together with sister republics, Bahá'u'lláh's ringing call significantly summoned in His Most Holy Book, (the) object (of) 'Abdu'l-Bahá's tender solicitude (and) ardent prayers, (the) center of His hopes, (the) recipient (of) His promises (and the) beneficiary (of) His blessings, (has been) suddenly though not unexpectedly plunged (into the) crucible (of) world conflagration. Purged, tested, galvanized, coalescing with its sorely-tried sister nations (the) New World, (the) enviable parent of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, must assume through adversity its preponderating share (of) responsibility (to) lay down, once and for all, broad, worldwide, unassailable foundations (of) that discredited yet immortal System. Though (the) immediate future be dark, critical (and) fraught (with) anguish, (I feel it my bounden duty (to) appeal (in) this hour as never before (to the) Trustees of Bahá'u'lláh's priceless Revelation whether teachers or administrators, individuals or Assemblies, North (or) South, white (or) colored, young (or) old, (to) refuse at all costs (to) surrender (their) solemn spiritual responsibilities, refrain (from) relaxing (their) teaching efforts, determine never (to) slacken (their) sacred task (of) building (the) institutions whose progress destiny (has) indissolubly linked with (the) fortunes (of the) most disastrous, most challenging, most pregnant period (of) human history."

—SHOGHI RABBANI

The Sacred Task
It is for each community, each Assembly, each Committee and every individual Bahá'í to pray and meditate upon this message, since it is a supreme, a final call to the arena of spiritual vitality and dynamic action.

For the Guardian's call releases the power for the launching of a concentrated teaching effort throughout North America for the achievement of the tasks given us in the Seven Year Plan for accomplishment by Convention time, 1944.

These tasks are: To establish a local Spiritual Assembly in each American State and Canadian Province, and also in Alaska; To restore every local Assembly once existing but dissolved because the community fell below the requisite number of nine recognized adult Bahá'ís.

As of January 1, 1942, the unsettled States and Provinces are: Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Kansas, Texas, Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Nevada, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, and Alaska; Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia. With Alaska, a total of thirty States and Provinces.

As of the same date, the dissolved Assemblies are: Maywood and Oak Park, Illinois; Omaha, Nebraska; Toledo, and Findlay, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Moncton, New Brunswick; Glendale, Arizona; St. Lambert, Quebec; Alhambra, Burbank, Huntington Park and Santa Rosa, California; Colorado Springs and Denver, Colorado; Augusta, Georgia; Topeka, Kansas; Lansing, Michigan; Knoxville, Tennessee; Salt Lake City, Utah; Monroe, Washington; Eagle River, Wisconsin, during the past two years. Going farther back we have also Portsmouth, New Hampshire and Akron, Ohio. A total of twenty-four Assemblies to be restored.

The Great Progress Made

Though the task is immense, nevertheless our collective resources are ample if we make full use of them in an intense, unremitting and whole-hearted effort.

For example, in North America as of January 1, 1942 there are seventy local groups containing five or more Bahá'ís. The germ of spiritual growth already exists in most of the unsettled States and Provinces, as shown by the following list:

Tuskegee, Alabama; Glendale, Arizona; Hot Springs, Little Rock, Arkansas; Atascadero, Burbank, Verdugo City, Huntington Park, Lennox, Knightsen, Piedmont and South Gate, California; Armstrong, and West Vancouver. British Colum-
North America Teaching Map: Six Unsettled Canadian Provinces, and Territory of Alaska, January 1, 1942.

Our Instruments and Facilities

In addition to these seventy groups, all of which are potential communities with a local Spiritual Assembly, the American Bahá'ís are blessed with the developed administrative and teaching facilities which can combine, unify, direct and co-ordinate all the capacities of the entire Bahá'í community.

For example, the National Teaching Committee, with capacity and experience in planning important projects, the Regional Teaching Committees, working under the direction of the National Teaching Committee and carrying on intensive work in their twenty-three areas which together cover North America, the eighty-nine local Bahá'í communities with their Assemblies, the other National Committees, each of which has a function related more or less directly to teaching activity, and the large number of isolated believers, including the groups of less than five Bahá'ís.

Since this date of January 1, 1942 will be used for measuring progress throughout the remainder of the Seven Year Plan, we should examine the statistics of Bahá'í membership.

There are 89 local Assemblies, and 203 groups containing two or more believers.

Let us open our own hearts, and all the institutions of which we are a part, to the inflow of a powerful, a pure and a regenerating spirit, that the American Bahá’í community may accomplish even more than the Guardian requires.

Coordination of Facilities

All who become active in teaching have access to many important teaching aids and facilities, each supervised by a separate and independent National Committee, but all directed and coordinated by the National Spiritual Assembly.

The friends are urged to study anew the possibilities of help at their disposition on request. To refer to some of these:

Publishing Committee — teaching literature; Bahá’í News Service — press releases; Library Committee — book placement in public and university libraries; Radio Committee — prepared talks on many different subjects; Miscellaneous Materials Committee — for photographs, picture slides, etc.; Study Outline Committee — for study material distributed through the Publishing Committee; Bahá’í School Committees — for instruction in the fundamental Bahá’í teachings, and for practice in applying them; Race Unity Committee — for valuable material, bulletins, etc., and public meetings and conferences; Exhibits Committee — to create display material, and conduct exhibits at State Fairs. The Bahá’í Directory published a few months ago lists all the Committees and describes their functions.

Extension Teaching

The local Communities are urged to realize their great responsibility in contributing to the success of the Seven Year Plan. Their communities contain much more than half the Bahá’í population of North America. Therefore, each Assembly able to provide for Extension Teaching in addition to the local activities is requested to appoint a Committee for Extension Teaching as soon as possible. This Committee is to serve exclusively outside the civil area of the local community, cooperating with the Regional Teaching Committee in the great task of settling the areas with Assemblies, restoring the dissolved Assemblies and developing groups to the point of forming their own Assembly.

The Extension Teaching Committee will report to the Regional Committee, while the local Assembly will continue as hitherto to report to the National Spiritual Assembly concerning its local work. Extension teaching affords the local community the privilege of carrying on pioneer work.

The teaching part of the Seven Year Plan has many aspects. Will the believers give full attention to the important statements contributed by the National Teaching Committee to this issue of Bahá’í News.

"So precious an opportunity ... may never again recur. Now is the time, the appointed time, for the American believers ... to proclaim, through the agencies and channels of a specially designed Administrative Order, their capacity and readiness to rescue a fallen and sore-tried generation." (The Advent of Divine Justice)

Faithfully yours,

lective power. Could we not foresee this in the Guardian’s earliest instructions? “... They must not throughout these six remaining years allow themselves to be deflected from the course they are now steadily pursuing. “They must as time goes on evince a more burning enthusiasm, demonstrate a higher sense of solidarity, reveal greater depths of consecration to their task, and display a more unyielding determination to achieve its purpose.”

It is with these facts in mind, and in utmost soberness of heart, that the National Teaching Committee declare to the friends a condition of emergency, and at the same time proposes a plan to surmount it. Twenty-seven months remain. The outlines of the goal are clear. Our status is summarized in other columns of this issue. Our problem is evident from a simple comparison. We are confronted by the only possible choice. It is now the hour to gather and direct the force of the American community; to resolve that no other work shall absorb us except this work; to focus completely, whole-heartedly, unstintingly on the supreme objectives of the Seven-Year Plan. We shall not succeed with less. We are bound to succeed if we do.

The National Teaching Committee cannot visualize just what or how much each individual, Assembly, and Regional Committee can contribute in the next twenty-seven months. We bear, each one of us, a unique and essential relationship to the whole overwhelming task. The Committee can and will suggest, assist, and support the friends, and various proposals are outlined below. But in the long run we must each delve to discover in mind and heart the particular share we can carry, the relationship we shall bear to the Guardian’s vision and our own oft-repeated pledge. The primary matter is that we are all involved!

Beloved friends, while we measure the formidable difficulties ahead, we can never for a moment dissociate them from the marvels to which they lead. “The promulgation of the Divine Plan,” Shoghi Effendi has said, “is the key which Providence has placed in the hands of the American believers whereby to unlock the doors leading them to fulfill their unimaginably glorious destiny.” What we build now in the Seven-Year Plan is but the first dimension of that destiny, our generation’s chief endowment and merit. We have not chosen it, for God has chosen it; nor can we be free of its responsibility. But what we can do is to strive, in prayer and work, for that assurance which sustains our Guardian, who knows immediately and without trace of doubt that Bahá’u’lláh directs His Faith and intends for it complete and final victory.

“I am deeply conscious of the many obstacles that stand in the path of the American believers in their stupendous endeavor to attain their goal. I cannot, however, overlook... the mysterious power that resides in the united will and concerted action of all the members of that self-sacrificing community.”

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

The Twenty-Seven Month Teaching Program for North America

When the most important work is before our sight, we must let go the important ones... ‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Shoghi Effendi has set as the goal for teaching in North America under the Seven-Year Plan the establishment of a Spiritual Assembly in each State of the United States and each Province of Canada, and in the Territory of Alaska, as well as the re-establishment of the disbanded Assemblies.

Extreme emphasis is laid upon this aspect of the Plan at this time for the reason that the Temple construction has proceeded rapidly and definite plans are under way for the completion of the exterior ornamentation in 1942, while the teaching work in Central and South America has also proceeded ahead of schedule. In the United States and Canada, however, there remains but twenty-seven months for the accomplishment of a tremendous, an overwhelming task.

To envision this task as a whole is to realize its vital importance and to feel consecrated to its entire fulfillment within the allotted time, for the goal is nothing less than the erection of the administrative order of the Faith upon the whole foundation of areas and peoples in the two countries of destiny, the United States and Canada.

The 27-month program of teaching, briefly, is:

1. The establishment of a Spiritual Assembly in each of the 30 States and Provinces still without one.
2. And the re-establishment of the 24 disbanded Spiritual Assemblies.

The specific needs to accomplish this are:

1. 15 new pioneers.
2. Teachers, and more teachers:
   a. those who can remain for extended periods,
   b. those who can remain temporarily,
   c. those who can assist in teaching circuits.

Temple Model Exhibit Conducted at Thorton's Floral Co., Oakland, April, 1940.
3. Daily prayers for the success of our teaching program.
4. Continuous and liberal support of the Bahá’í Fund.

The following suggestions indicate the manner in which individuals, groups, and Assemblies can best assist in this tremendous and glorious task:

Individuals:
1. Focus all thoughts and prayers daily on the success of the Seven-Year Plan.
2. Orient all Bahá’í services to the remaining specific tasks of the plan.
3. Intensify teaching services a thousand fold—giving first consideration to the needs of the Seven-Year Plan.
4. Who will arise to fill the 15 important posts for which new pioneers are needed?
5. All teachers contact at once.
6. It is unable to go oneself—then deputize someone who can fill one of these posts.
7. Support the Bahá’í Fund freely.

Groups and Assemblies:
1. The Bahá’í Communities are the spiritual reservoirs of the Faith, and must provide the spiritual energy and dynamics to bring increasing vitality to the Campaign. They should lend support through prayers, encourage pioneers and teachers to arise, and increase support of the National Fund.
2. Extension work should be carried on in one of the virgin areas where accessible, or in restoring dissolved Assemblies, or raising up new groups, rather than in just a “new” city.
3. Train new teachers as rapidly as possible, so as to enable us to meet the ever-increasing demands for teachers.
4. Actively support Inter-Assembly Teaching Conferences to assist in arranging teaching circuits to cover virgin areas.
5. At Nineteen-Day Feasts encourage the friends to center their thoughts, prayers and deeds of devotion on the goals of the Seven Year Plan.

Regional Committees:
1. Regional Committees, in consultation with the National Teaching Committee, have developed definite plans to concentrate their efforts both on the points in the virgin areas where Spiritual Assemblies may be formed, and on the re-establishment of the disbanded Assemblies.
2. They will arrange regular and continuous teaching meetings in these areas.
3. They will cooperate closely with Assemblies in their Extension work in these virgin areas.
4. They will arrange Inter-Assembly Conferences, and cooperate in carrying out the teaching circuits.
5. They will assist all teachers and pioneers in their arduous tasks.

O ye beloved of God! Repose not yourselves on your couches, may be- stir yourselves as soon as ye recognize your Lord, the Creator, and hear of the things which have be-fallen Him, and hasten to His assistance. Unloose your tongues, and proclaim unceasingly His Cause. This shall be better for you than all the treasures of the past and of the future, if ye be of them that comprehend this truth.—BAHÁ’U’LLÁH

Inter-Assembly Circuit Teaching

The Assemblies of a given state or region may, in consultation, at any time, arrange a circuit for one or more traveling teachers, a practice followed by some for a number of years. Informally, it is the practice of some to relay information to other centers about the availability of teachers who may have agreed to serve them, so as to widen the scope of such services. Although Regional committees have no jurisdiction over Spiritual Assemblies, they may often aid them by disseminating information about the nearness and availability of teachers. The larger centers do not to the same extent need outside speakers as those of smaller or more recent development. But generally all of them, large or small, give a cordial welcome to visitors and find a use for any talents that may come to them in some meetings, public or fireside.

Traveling teachers should rigidly avoid interfering with the local affairs, the administration of which belongs to the local Spiritual Assembly. To whatever extent they allow themselves to be drawn into local problems or expressing partisan opinions, they weaken their influence and effectiveness as teachers. Should the local Spiritual Assembly of its own motion ask for consultation, advice or aid, it is another matter. Under such circumstances the traveling teacher may sometimes shed light on national and international problems or unfold the teachings which pertain to Bahá’í Administration, the application of which still rests with the Local Spiritual Assembly.

As the coming of a traveling teacher is usually a stimulus to the local teaching activity, moving the friends to unusual efforts in reaching and attracting people; also increasing the number of special meetings for reaching and contacting outside groups and individuals, key people and their followers; his stay should not be unduly prolonged, nor allowed to overtax the strength, endurance and teaching resources of a center, whether large or small. He should readily yield to the wishes of the local friends as to the tenure and utilization of his services.

Itinerant or traveling teachers as well as those who do resident or pioneer work, have been mentioned with appreciation in the letters of Shoghi Effendi. They may be the means by which, as channels, spiritual refreshment and energy may flow to the local centers; and they should, as far as possible, keep in motion. This type of teacher, among the Occidental Bahá’ís, had its highest exponent in the late Martha L. Root, whose ceaseless energy and devotion earned for her the title, Hand of the Cause. As the Cause expands and new centers are started and developed there will be a growing need for workers of this kind.

Believers are anxious to know what attitude and course of action they should take in view of the fact that their country is at war and the national energies are being concen-
The Guardian’s instructions are definite and illuminating. They show that the individual Bahá’ís can serve in non-combatant capacities and render aid in programs of civil defense concerned with aid to the injured, fire protection, etc. Bahá’ís are permitted to volunteer, as the Guardian explained to the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles in a letter reprinted here in January, 1940:

“There are many other avenues through which the believers can assist in times of war by enlisting in services of a non-combatant nature—services that do not involve the direct shedding of blood—such as ambulance work, anti-air raid precaution service, office and administrative works, and it is for such types of national service that they should volunteer.

“It is immaterial whether such activities would still expose them to dangers, either at home or in the front, since their desire is not to protect their lives, but to desist from any acts of wilful murder.”

The Bahá’í community itself, and its administrative bodies, the local Spiritual Assembly, committees, etc., are not to participate officially and collectively in such activities, but to confine their efforts to direct Bahá’í work and the discharge of the functions definitely assigned them in the teachings.

Shoghi Effendi has been clarifying fundamental issues for us over a period of years, and excerpts from statements relevant to present conditions are published elsewhere in this number of Bahá’í News. The believers, and especially the local Assemblies and the Regional Committees, are requested to familiarize themselves with these instructions and explanations.

The Guardian of the Most Great Peace

Words of Shoghi Effendi

Much suffering will still be required ere the contending nations, creeds, classes and races of mankind are fused in the crucible of universal affliction, and are forged by the fires of a fierce ordeal into one organic commonwealth, one vast, unified, and harmoniously functioning system.

... The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh is now visibly succeeding in demonstrating its claim and title to be regarded as a World Religion, destined to attain, in the fullness of time, the status of a world-embracing Commonwealth which would be at once the instrument and the guardian of the Most Great Peace announced by Its Author.

The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh has assimilated, by virtue of its creative, its regulative and ennobling energies, the varied races, nationalities, creeds and classes that have sought its shadow, and have pledged unwavering fealty to its cause. It has changed the hearts of its adherents, burned away their prejudices, stilled their passions, exalted their conceptions, ennobled their motives, coordinated their efforts, and transformed their outlook. While preserving their patriotism and safeguarding their lesser loyalties, it has made them lovers of mankind, and the determined upholders of its best and truest interests. ... Of such men and women it may be truly said that to them “every foreign land is a fatherland, and every fatherland a foreign land.” For their citizenship, it must be remembered, is in the Kingdom of Bahá’u’lláh.

Though loyal to their respective governments, though profoundly interested in anything that affects their security and welfare, though anxious to serve in whatever promotes their best interests, the Faith with which the followers of Bahá’u’lláh stand identified is one which they believe God has raised high above the storms, the divisions, and controversies of the political arena. Their Faith they conceive to be essentially non-political, supra-national in character, rigidly non-partisan, and entirely dissociated from nationalistic ambitions, pursuits, and purposes. Such a Faith knows no division of class or of party. It subordinates, without hesitation or equivocation, every particularistic interest, be it personal, regional, or national, to the paramount interests of humanity, firmly convinced that in a world of interdependent peoples and nations the advantage of the part is best to be reached by the advantage of the whole, and that no abiding benefit can be conferred upon the component parts if the general interests of the entity itself are ignored or neglected.

These directing and regulating principles of Bahá’í belief the upholders of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh feel bound, as their Administrative Order expands and consolidates itself, to assert and vigilantly apply. The exigencies of a slowly crystallizing Faith impose upon them a duty which they cannot shirk, a responsibility they cannot evade. (The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, pages 192, 196, 197)

The Community of the Most Great Name, the leaven that must leaven the lump, the chosen remnant that must survive the rolling up of the old, discredited, tottering order, and assist in the unfulfillment of a new one in its stead, is standing ready, alert, clear-visioned, and resolute. The American believers, standard-bearers of this world-wide community and torch-bearers of an as-yet unborn civilization, have girt up their loins, unfurled their banners and stepped into the arena of service. Their Plan has been formulated. Their forces are mobilized. They are steadfastly marching towards their goal. The hosts of the Abhá Kingdom are rushing forth, as promised, to direct their steps and reinforce their power. Through their initial victories they have provided the impulse that must now surge and, with relentless force, sweep over their sister-communities and eventually overpower the entire human race.

The generality of mankind, blind and enslaved, is wholly unaware of the healing power with which this community has been endowed, nor can it as yet suspect the role which this same community is destined to play in its redemption.

Fierce and manifold will be the assaults with which governments, races, classes and religions, jealous of its rising prestige and fearful of its consolidating strength, will seek to silence its voice and sap its foundations. Unmoved by the relative obscurity that surrounds it at the present time, and undaunted by the forces that will be arrayed against it in the future, this community, I cannot but feel confident, will, no matter how efficacious the agonies of a travelling age, pursue its destiny, undaunted in its course, undimmed in its serenity, unyielding in its resolve, unshaken in its convictions.

"The Spiritual Potencies"

On December 26, 1939, the Guardian addressed a general communication to the believers throughout the West which the National Spiritual Assembly issued in the form of a pamphlet entitled "The Spiritual Potencies of That Consecrated Spot."

This communication unveiled for us the profound mystery associated with the transfer of the sacred remains of Bahá'u'lláh, that pious and holy youth, who in the darkest days of Bahá'u'lláh's incarceration in the barracks of 'Akká entertained, on his death-bed, his Father to accept him as a ransom for those of His loved ones who yearned for, but were unable to attain, His presence, and the saintly mother of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, surnamed Navváb by Bahá'u'lláh, and the first recipient of the honored and familiar title of 'the Most Exalted Leaf,' separated in death above half a century, and forced to suffer the humiliation of an alien burial-ground, are now at long last reunited with the Greatest Holy Leaf with whom they had so abundantly shared the tribulations of one of the most distressing episodes of the Heroic Age of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh."...

... The conjunction of the resting-place of the Greatest Holy Leaf with those of her brother and mother incaulcably reinforces the spiritual potencies of that consecrated Spot which, under the wings of the Báb's overshadowing Sepulchre, and in the vicinity of the future Masjih-qu'l-Adhkár, which will be reared on its flank, is destined to evolve into the focal center of those world-shaking, world-embracing, world-directing administrative institutions, ordained by Bahá'u'lláh and anticipated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and which are to function in consonance with the principles that govern the twin institutions of the Guardianship and the Universal House of Justice. Then, and then only, will this momentous prophecy which illuminates the concluding passages of the Tablet of Carmel be fulfilled: 'Erelong will God set His Ark upon thee (Carmel), and will manifest the people of Bahá who have been mentioned in the Book of Names.'"
Inter-America News

The Inter-America Committee is extremely gratified at the very kind response of the friends to its appeal for pioneers and interest in this very important work and wishes to thank those Assemblies and groups who have so kindly written the Committee. Financial assistance through the regular channels has been assured in some cases, but the Committee still needs more volunteers.

Radio Broadcast

On November 26 at six P.M. a Radio broadcast from San Francisco over KGEI carried the Baha'i Message in Spanish over short-wave to the South and Central American Republics. Mrs. Amalia Ford was the speaker and we have just learned that the talk was picked up in Santiago, Chile, by our large group there where Mrs. Atwater has been doing such wonderful work, and that they were tremendously impressed to hear the name of Baha'u'llah vibrate over the ether. Although the broadcast was not very clear they are asking for others and we hope they will write to the Station and mention the reception of the talk.

Rio de Janeiro

News comes to us from Rio de Janeiro that Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wood are now well located and are very happy in their new home. It is not the policy of this Committee to give addresses in the News Letters but we will gladly supply them on request.

Santiago, Chile

Santiago, Chile is arranging to carry on extension work in Valparaíso where already they have several contacts. Mrs. Atwater has declared her intention of remaining in Chile for some time and she has taken into her apartment a young lady of great accomplishments who speaks beautiful Spanish, and together they are working out a teaching plan for other cities. Word has just come of the acceptance of the Faith by Sra. Lucha Garrido de Padilla, who is the wife of the former Consul representing Chile at Los Angeles. Sra. Padilla will make her home in Antofagasta, Chile, and will try to establish a study class there, and so the Cause is spreading.

Lima, Peru

Miss Eve Nicklin has opened a Nursing School in Lima, Peru and at the first session there were fourteen children. It is hoped that this may develop into a Kindergarten but as yet Miss Nicklin is known only as a student and not yet a teacher. She is studying Spanish at the lovely old University and is about to take up her residence in a private home.

Honduras

John Eichenauer is still maintaining his reputation for energetic teaching work and is now in Honduras. He has ingratiated himself with the Press of Central America and sends us many clippings. Lately he has had the opportunity of introducing the Faith into Rosario which is an important mining town where many American families are living; Rosario is also in Honduras.

Costa Rica

Costa Rica still forges ahead. The Spiritual Assembly of San José has accepted the responsibility of introducing the Faith into Puntarenas and we have received several registration cards from that city as well as others from San José. The growth is truly remarkable.

Guatemala

Guatemala does not write us often but recently we received a copy of a local magazine in which Words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá are printed in specially black type. We do not know to whom we are indebted for the courtesy of this complimentary copy.

Puerto Rico

We are happy to announce that four believers from New York have now taken up their residence in Puerto Rico where they expect to remain and assist Miss Jones and Mme. Disdier in teaching. The four are Mrs. Ella Guthrie, her daughter, Mrs. Edith Marangella, her daughter's son-in-law, Lucien McComb, Jr., and Mrs. Ayned McComb.

Ecuador

John Sterns writes of having secured a very comfortable apartment where he conducts his business and also has pleasant rooms for meetings and for the display of the Baha'i books. His health is very good and he and the two young men believers are working steadily in the teaching work.

Havana

Miss Josephine Kruka was delayed in leaving for Havana because of illness but by now should be established there for the winter. She has made some new friends and we expect good news soon.

San Salvador

Recently a registration card came from San Salvador signed by Señorita Clara Luz Montalvo. We congratulate Clarence Iverson, on this addition to the group and hope for more soon.

Translation

We understand that the Dispensary is now in process of being reviewed and we hope soon to have this wonderful book to place at the disposal of the friends. The translation into Spanish was made in Buenos Aires and is due to the kindly offices of Philip Sprague.

San Domingo

Miss Lentz in San Domingo has been restricted in teaching the Cause on account of the location of her work in Sosua. However, recently the doors have opened and Margaret Lentz is now in the capital city, radiant at the opportunity for wider service which has come to her after her long sacrifice and difficult labor.

Panama

Our two lovely teachers in Panama, Mrs. Caswell and Mrs. Oliver, are now established in a new apartment with all conveniences and they are very happy and particularly so because they have a suitable place for meetings and classes. Mrs. Caswell asks if it would be possible to secure a Baha'i rosary for someone who is very near to the acceptance of the Faith and uses the prayers and greatly desires a rosary. We are appealing in this way in case some of the friends may have one to contribute.

Mrs. Caswell urges that a member of this committee or one of the N.S.A. members make a trip to Central America to visit all the Republics.
We hope that conditions will permit such a visit.

Elizabeth Cheney

Miss Cheney writes from Lima, Ohio that rest and clean food are causing great improvement in her health and that after Christmas she will undergo some severe surgery which she hopes will completely restore her health. We ask the prayers of the friends for her as she is a very valued and important maid-servant whose services we need badly.

Enrollment Cards

The Committee has issued new registration cards which are printed on very thin paper so that they may be sent by air mail. We have suggested that all Centers keep a book as registry which those who accept the Faith may sign. This book will constitute a valuable addition to the archives of each country, while the enrollment cards themselves may be sent to us for filing.

Information for Pioneers

The committee has been filing all information received in reply to our Questionnaire asking for all particulars about the physical conditions of each of the Latin-American Republics. A great deal of valuable information has been received which will enable us to provide abundant data about the various posts to which our pioneers will go.

In Inter-America Bulletin for July, we printed the Spanish translation of that potent statement made by Mrs. Axford in the Australian and New Zealand Quarterly which bears the heading "We Cannot Take Sides" which the Guardian had commended so highly. We sent the Guardian a copy of this Bulletin and he expresses his great approval and thanks us for the promptness with which we acted in this matter and the speed with which he received our Bulletin. The Bahá’í Inter-America Bulletin is sent to all pioneers and centers in Latin-America and carries news of the progress of the Faith and messages of encouragement to our beloved pioneers and with this issue of Bahá’í News we wish them a very happy and prosperous New Year with every blessing.

Schedule of Meetings of National Assembly

The friends are informed that the schedule of meetings adopted by the National Spiritual Assembly and announced in Bahá’í News of May, 1941, has been revised. The dates of February 21, 22 and 23, and of April 3, 4 and 5, 1942, have been rescheduled, and in place of them a meeting will be held March 6, 7, 8 and 9.

This revised schedule reflects the increasing need for concentration of effort on the most important things, and for administrative economy.

The meeting date of April 29 is retained, and the Convention will be held April 30, and May 1, 2 and 3, in accordance with the original schedule.

Reproductions of the Guardian’s Cabled Appeal

The friends are informed that the National Assembly is arranging for the distribution of a card-size reprint of the Guardian’s cablegram received December 13, 1941, to each believer. Distribution will be made in the same way as Bahá’í News, in bulk to Assemblies and groups for the local believers, and direct to the isolated list. Since this message calls for reconsecration of every American Bahá’í, the National Assembly wants the friends to have a copy in a form suited to frequent reference.

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS

Committee on Assembly Development: Louis G. Gregory, Secretary, 421 Broadway, Cambridge, Mass. (After May, address is Eliot, Maine.) Mrs. Amelia Collins, Mrs. Dorothy Baker.

This new Committee will assist in the development of Assemblies by arranging for personal visits by members of the Committee or by selected teachers, in order to take up with the Assembly the essential matters on which its services to the Cause and the growth of the community depends, and help outline teaching plans, etc.

COMMITTEE ADDITIONS AND REVISIONS

Green Acre Bahá’í School: Change of address, Miss Marjorie Wheeler, Secretary, 59 Davidson Street, Worcester, Mass.

Temple Program: New members added. Miss Sophie Loeding, Secretary, 4318 Greenview Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Sarah Walrath, Mrs. Janet Lindstrom. Mrs. Clarence Ulrich unable to serve.

Regional Teaching Committee of California and Nevada: New member added, Mrs. Jessie Kemper. John Keith unable to serve.

ASSEMBLIES

Springfield, Ill. Change of address. Mrs. Gretchen Schultz, Secretary, 1626 So. 16th Street.

Detroit, Mich. Change of address. Mrs. Jessie B. Hall, Secretary, 2387 Woodstock Drive.

Rochester, New York. Change of address. Miss Christine McKay, Secretary, 1410 Highland Avenue.

Findlay, Ohio. Dissolved for lack of numbers.

Must, if Necessary, Hold the Fort Alone!

Cablegram from the Guardian

The immersion (of the) materially most powerful (and) spiritually most endowed nation in mankind's most critical (and) pregnant ordeal tests (the) spirit (and) challenges (the) audacity (of the) promoters (of the) Divine Plan. (The) privileges conferred (are) immeasurable. (The) time (at) their disposal (is) hourly shortening. (Their) responsibilities (are) commensurately mounting. Complete Temple Exterior in 1942

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

This communication will present to you the facts and schedules which enter into our great Temple construction project under the Seven Year Plan—completion of the exterior decoration and making the outside circular steps. As the Guardian has urgently advised, we must carry out all the unfinished work in 1942 as afterward it may be impossible on account of international conditions.

Our understanding and our determination, therefore, must (as far as the Temple is concerned) focus on the plan to complete the Temple exterior in 1942.

The Guardian's Instruction

"This matter has aroused his grave concern, as the Guardian believes that in view of the relation of the U. S. A. to the international situation, the rising costs, labor shortage, etc., it may be both increasingly difficult and expensive to complete this work with every month that goes by. He, therefore, would urge you to impress on Mr. Earley ... the necessity of completing whatever ornamentation of the main story remains, during the winter months, so that at the earliest moment next spring, when the weather permits the work at the Temple itself to be resumed, the last faces may be placed in final position." (October 26, 1941)

"Now that the construction of the steps of the Temple has had to be postponed and in view of the increasing gravity of the international situation, a special and pressing responsibility rests on the National Assembly to insure, with the aid of the contractor and through every other possible means, the completion of the nine faces of the edifice before the end of next spring. During the coming winter months the work at the studio should be (so) conducted that no delay whatever will be incurred when the time for the placing of the remaining faces arrives. During these same months, while the teaching work is being strenuously pursued, the most effective measures for the construction of the steps should be carefully considered, and thus insure the uninterrupted progress of this vital aspect of the Seven Year Plan." (October 26, 1941)

The Work to Be Done

Before winter weather interrupted the work of applying the finished units to the main story faces in December, 1941, seven of the nine faces had been completed, and the last two faces were partly done. In addition, the finished units for completing these last two faces were shipped to the Temple and are stored there for use this spring.

Besides the exterior ornamentation, there is the important matter of the steps. A good deal of the preliminary work on the steps was done in 1941, and the reinforcing steel was purchased.

Before we can regard the Temple exterior as fully completed, the dome and clerestory units should be carefully cleaned, so that the entire outer surface of the House of Worship may be uniformly white and free from discoloration. The dome and clerestory, it might be pointed out, were discolored by the dust storms which raged some eight or nine years ago, an unusual condition not likely to be repeated. The Temple Trustees have no estimate for the cost of cleaning, and therefore this item is not included in the schedule below. It should not, however, be more than a few hundred dollars.

Time and Cost Schedule

It is imperative to begin work as soon as weather permits, which means some time in April. The Temple Trustees must be able to authorize the contractor to proceed with the work on the last two faces and also with the work on the steps, and the Trustees must therefore be assured of sufficient funds.

The following schedule of costs includes estimates on the unfinished work, and likewise it lists the schedule of monthly payments which the Trustees and the contractor mutually agreed upon in October, 1941, when the Trustees were unexpectedly informed of another increase in the estimated cost of finishing the exterior ornamentation.

I. Estimated cost of completing faces eight and nine, mainstory ............... $7,800.00

Estimated cost for casting and placing the outside steps ..................... 21,800.00

Total payable ................... $29,600.00

II. Cost of completing sixth and seventh faces by December, 1941, 6,024.97

Total payable in 1942 from February 1 to December 1 $43,155.96

VII. Total needed from contributions of Baha'is ............... $38,555.96

A Glorious Victory

The completion of the relatively small amount of work still to be done on our magnificent House of Worship will be a glorious victory for the Cause of Baha'u'llah! We would be denying the meaning of the Master's loving assurances, we would be overlooking the significance of the Guardian's messages on the subject of the Temple over a period of many years, if we do not thrill at this prospect of bringing the construction work to an end this calendar year, and fail to concentrate our resolves upon this historic task.

To summarize: in order to complete the unfinished Temple work in 1942, the Trustees must be assured of some $5,500 per month during April, May, June, July, August and September, and of $1200 to $1500 monthly in October, November and December. Such a schedule is much less than the annual expenditure on Temple construction in recent years. The task is within our capacity. Let us accomplish it, and thereby succeed in raising a monument to Baha'u'llah's Most Great Peace in a time of conflict and suffering throughout the world. This will stimulate teaching and will release all energy and resources for accomplishing the teaching tasks of the Seven Year Plan.

Faithfully yours,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Organic Thrift

The awareness of our being an organism, every part of which draws life-sustenance from its center, should permeate our planning in the various fields of Baha'i service. All lines of work should continue; but at certain times, under supreme guidance, concentrated emphasis may make one goal far more important than others. Under the Seven Year Plan our present primal duty is clearly set by directions from Shoghi Effendi. The capacities of the friends as well as the state and needs of mankind are well known to the supreme guidance which inspires our efforts.

The attention of Assemblies, groups and Bahá’í schools is again called to the need of exercising a wise economy in the selection of teachers and workers, until the Seven Year Plan, which yet has but little more than two years to run, is brought to a victorious and joyful completion. Nobly and generously have the friends responded at every call, meriting unstinted praise for their zeal and sacrifices in the Path of God. The residuum of the task challenges our utmost endeavors—prayers, loving service, active teaching, sustained efforts, continued sacrifices, wise economy. What we give is vital; what we save, with success in view, no less so. In consideration of the latter, the various administrative bodies, such as Assemblies, committees, groups, schools, should improve the capacities of local workers as far as possible, so as to save the travel and living expenses of those who may come from a distance, in order to conserve more resources for the completion of the Seven Year Plan as a whole.

This of course is not to be a requirement to be enforced with rigidity. The flexibility and guidance of administration, its adaptability to serve varying conditions and needs are signs of its organic life. Coldness and rigidity express death. But the supreme value of completing, for service to humanity and obedience to God, the great plan in the time ordained, should keep us mindful of our first duty, one to be fulfilled not only by giving means, strength of will and devotion, but by the exercise of a wise frugality expressed in simple living and a wise and prudent selection of helpers.—NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Inter-America News

In a letter from the Guardian addressed to the pioneers in Costa Rica he congratulated them most heartily on such a wonderful and glorious achievement, and declared that future generations will exalt their labors, follow in their footsteps and derive inspiration from their pioneer activities.

Main Story Ornamentation No. 10, December 18, 1941. (Completion of Sixth and Seventh Main Story Faces)

These words of the Guardian will apply to each and every one of the pioneers who have gone into the foreign fields of service, they are an encouragement and a promise to all; but we must recognize that some fields are more easily cultivated than others. The Guardian has also said that the spiritual and intellectual nature of the Latin peoples should tend to make them profound and excellent Bahá’ís. The Guardian has the highest hopes for their future services to the Cause of God and the important contributions they will make to its unfoldment and establishment.

Costa Rica

The Costa Rica Assembly continues to send in registration cards and recently we have received a gift of native craftsmanship in the form of a lovely little mosaic box made of various native woods and a paper cutter made from coffee wood. These will add to our very interesting display of articles in the Inter-America booth at the next Convention.

Translation

The Committee is rejoiced at the news of the completion of the Spanish translation of the “Dispensation” which was made in Buenos Aires by Sr. Tormo and Sr. Ricci. It was brought to the United States by Sr. Ricci and has been reviewed by him and Mrs. Anduaga in New York so that it is now ready for publication. We are all indebted to Philip Sprague for his very generous assistance in this matter.

Havana

From Havana we learn that Miss Kruka is very encouraged by the number of new inquirers who have come to the meetings. She writes of a class of young people from the ages of ten to seventeen who are being taught the Cause together with English.

Uruguay

A long and interesting letter has come from Wilfrid Barton from Montevideo enclosing registration cards of two new believers and relating the interest of others. He mentions a move taken toward legal recognition which is required in Uruguay and seems to be meeting with success in that as well as other things.

Dominican Republic

Miss Lentz has returned to Trujillo and is definitely located there again. Her health is improving and she is not restricted in her teaching activities as she was in Sosúa.

Panama

Our anxiety about our pioneers in Ancon seems to be unfounded as they write that Mrs. Oliver's employment in the Laboratory of the Gorgas Hospital would probably necessitate her remaining there under any conditions and Mrs. Caswell would not leave unless required to do so by the Government in which case she will try to get permission to go to another of the Republics. They send us the registration card of the first resident of the Canal Zone upon which we congratulate them and await Mrs. Rudy's photograph for The Bahá’í World. We are collecting the photographs of the first believer in each of the Republics as they will make a valuable addition to the historical records of The Bahá’í World.

Honduras

A letter just received from John Eichenauer tells of his very interesting and successful extension work in Honduras. He writes: "On receipt of the Guardian's cable of December 13 as contained in the Bulletin of December which reached Honduras on January 1, a special meeting was called to read the cable and to pray for the success of the teaching work and the friends generally. At this meeting eleven people signed a note of greeting which I enclose herewith."

John's travels have taken him again to the mining town of Rosario and then to another mining center named Agua Fría. Later he visited the cities of Comayagua and Siguatepeque on the north coast of Honduras. He then made the acquaintance of the editors of two newspapers, Diario Comercial and El Norte of the city of San Pedro Sula and received recognition after which he visited La Lima, center of the United Fruit Company's holdings in Honduras. From La Lima he went to Tegucigalpa, Tela, and La Ceiba where he introduced the Faith to an official of the Standard Fruit Company and the American Vice Consul. En route back to Tegucigalpa he was to stop at Puerto Cortés.

The Inter-America Committee is deeply impressed with this remarkable report and feels that John is becoming thoroughly acquainted with Central America.

Chile

Such glowing accounts of the growth of the work in Chile come from Mrs. Atwater each month, and the wonderful part of it is the many ramifications of the teaching which have come about by those from Santiago who have either moved or been transferred to other cities in Chile. The receipt of the registration card of Señora Padilla is very encouraging. Señora Padilla is going to make her home in Antofagasta and her husband who was the former Consul in Los Angeles is very much interested in the Cause and has been very helpful. Beside this, Mrs. Atwater tells of a large piece of property which Sr. Herrera desires to give to the Cause as soon as the Spiritual Assembly may legally take possession of it and that the plan is to cultivate it and plant productive things there. The area of the land is about forty acres. Extension teaching work was to begin at once in Valparaiso. Also Mrs. Atwater tells of a very fine letter which they had received from John Eichenauer which rejoices both them and the committee as it is highly advisable that the pioneer communities should communicate with each other and thus lend encouragement.

Brazil

An interesting letter has been received from Beatrice Irwin telling of her many interesting contacts in South America. Miss Irwin's journey was undertaken in the interests of her profession but she utilized every moment and every opportunity to advance the knowledge of the Faith. Her lectures drew fine audiences and she was able to distribute Bahá’í literature to many important people among the intellectuals of Brazil both in Rio and Sao Paulo.

Bolivia

The Committee hopes very soon to be able to announce that a new pioneer has gone into the field of Bolivia where already Mrs. Adler has left three very ardent believers with whom we are in regular correspondence. But the need for pioneers is very great and it is of the utmost importance that we are to carry forward the work which the Guardian has indicated and which Abdu'l-Bahá so strongly enjoined upon us we must have other applicants. We do not intend to relax one moment in the pursuit of our objective unless we are definitely prevented by war conditions, and then it would not be from our desire but because as obedient servants to our Government, we must follow their decrees. We believe however that there will be no cessation to the forward march of the Faith notwithstanding international conditions.

Peru

We must not bring this report to a close without mentioning Miss Nicklin and the success which she is having in Lima, Peru. Although she has been located only a short time she has already established a Nursery School which is meeting with the greatest approval of the Peruvian mothers who are sending their little children to her. She is living in the family of some delightful refugees and is making many valuable acquaintances. The initiative which is manifest in the work of our pioneers is something truly remarkable and it fills our hearts with admiration and rejoicing.

This, the Most Fateful Hour in Their History

"A triple call, clear-voiced, insistent and inescapable, summons to the challenge all members of the American Bahá'í community, at this, the most fateful hour in their history. The first is the voice, distant and piteous, of those sister communities which now, alas, are fettered by the falling chains of religious orthodoxy and isolated through the cruel barriers set up by a rampant nationalism. The second is the plea, no less vehement and equally urgent, of those peoples and nations of the New World, whose vast and unexplored territories await to be warmed by the light and swept into the orbit of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. The third, more universal and stirring than either of the others, is the call of humanity itself crying out for deliverance at a time when the tide of mounting evils has destroyed its equilibrium and is now strangling its very life.

"These imperative calls of Bahá'í duty the American believers can immediately if only partially answer." . . .

"And yet, though their influence be at the present hour indecisive and their divinely-conferred authority unrecognized, the role they can play in both alleviating the hardships that affect their brethren and in alleviating the ills that torment mankind is none the less considerable and far-reaching. By the range and liberality of their contributions to mitigate the distress of the homeless, the exiled and the imprisoned; by the persistent, the wise and judicious intervention of their elected representatives through the authorities concerned; by a clear and convincing exposition, whenever circumstances are propitious, of the issues involved; by a vigorous defence of the rights and liberties denied; by an accurate and dignified presentation of the events that have transpired; by every manner of encouragement which their sympathies may suggest, or their means permit, or their consciences dictate, to succor the outcast and the impoverished; and above all by their tenacious adherence to, and wide proclamation of, those principles, laws, ideals, and institutions which their disabled fellow-believers are unable to affirm or publicly espouse; and lastly, by the energetic prosecution of those tasks which their oppressed fellow-workers are forbidden to initiate or conduct, the privileged community of the American Bahá'ís can play a conspicuous part in the great drama involving so large a company of their unemancipated brethren in the Asiatic, the European and African continents.

"Their duties towards mankind in general are no less distinct and vital. Their impotence to stem the tide of onrushing calamities, their seeming helplessness in face of those cataclysmic forces that are to convulse human society, do not in the least detract from the urgency of their unique mission, nor exonerate them from those weighty responsibilities which they alone can and must assume." . . .

"Though powerless to avert the impending contest the followers of Bahá'u'lláh can, by the spirit they evince and the efforts they exert to circumscribe its range, shorten its duration, allay its hardships, proclaim its salutary consequences, and demonstrate its necessary and vital role in the shaping of human destiny. Theirs is the duty to hold, aloft and undimmed, the torch of Divine Guidance, as the shades of night descend upon, and ultimately envelop the entire human race. Theirs is the function, amidst its tumults, perils and agonies, to witness to the vision, and proclaim the approach, of that re-created society, that Christ-promised Kingdom, that World Order whose generative impulse is the spirit of none other than Bahá'u'lláh Himself, whose domain is the entire planet, whose watchword is unity, whose animating power is the force of Justice, whose directive purpose is the reign of righteousness and truth, and whose supreme glory is the complete, the undisturbed, and everlasting felicity of the whole of human kind. By the sublimity and serenity of their faith, by the steadiness and clarity of their vision, the incorruptibility of their character, the rigor of their discipline, the sanctity of their morals, and the unique example of their community life, they can and indeed must in a world polluted with its incurable corruptions, paralyzed by its haunting fears, torn by its devastating hatreds, and languishing under the weight of its appalling miseries demonstrate the validity of their claim to be regarded as the sole repository of that grace upon whose operation must depend the complete deliverance, the fundamental reorganization and
The Race Unity College Project

The Race Unity Committee has sponsored, over a period of eighteen months, a project for reaching the colleges of bi-racial areas with introductory presentations of the Baha’i Faith. Louis Gregory, Lothar Schurz, and Mrs. Dorothy Baker assisted in initiating the project. Approximately sixteen thousand students have been reached at the present time. Mrs. Baker will add thirty new colleges, eighteen white groups and nine Negro schools, bringing the project to a total of well over sixty colleges and thirty thousand student hearers.

In the fall of 1941 the circuit included eleven white colleges, five colored, and two Indian. The theme of the lecture was the world as a single organism, motivated by a world faith. The Pattern for Future Society, by Shoghi Effendi, supplemented by The Image of God, was distributed throughout the schools, and a book will be presented to each library.

There were Baptist schools, Presbyterian schools, Methodist schools, and State colleges; colored schools, white schools, Indian schools; city schools and hill schools, and one was a large and beautiful Quaker college. Only one white man was to be found on the fall circuit who had ever heard of the Baha’i Faith. He was a student at the Quaker college, and had made the Baha’i Faith the subject of his term theme. Taking the pamphlet of Shoghi Effendi in his hands he said, “These writings are very great. Don’t you think you might compromise a little because of organizations like the Ku Klux Klan?” One of our companions replied: “The speaker has said that this Faith is the Kingdom of God. If this is true, you cannot compromise it or divide it.” The dean became thoughtful and then said, “This Faith may be worth dying for.”

Radio Exhibit for Convention

The National Radio Committee is planning an Exhibit for the Convention that all present may get an inclusive view of actual work done by all the Assemblies and Regional Committees of the United States and Canada, and their indomitable pioneers in far lands.

In order to make this exhibit a complete success, it will be necessary for each Assembly and every Regional Committee and every pioneer teacher to send in their information just as soon as possible to the Secretary of The National Radio Committee, Mrs. Wendell Bacon, Monson, Mass.

We shall need to have the call letters of each station used and their station folder giving the radius covered by each station, as we intend to show the actual coverage of each station broadcast on a large map of the United States and Canada, together with others reaching South America, and broadcasts also given in South America through the efforts of our pioneers, that no single broadcast may be left out. Please give us your full support in this Exhibit, so that this map may be a truly inclusive bird’s eye view of our work.

The Bahá’í World

Vol. VIII

The biennial international record whose contents are chosen and arranged by the Guardian has rapidly developed not only in its importance as the organ of the Bahá’í world commonwealth but also in the scope and variety of its contents.

The current issue, Volume VIII, covers the two-year period April 21, 1938 to April 20, 1940. It is the largest book yet to appear in the series, containing 1088 pages and 200 illustrations, including special frontispieces and also maps.

Only a few brief references can be made here to its impressive wealth of picture and of text. The Frontispieces are: The Purest Branch, Monuments of the Mother and Brother of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to Mt. Carmel, the passing of Munirih Khanum. Part Two, the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, with numerous selections and documents including newly incorporated Assemblies, the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, Bahá'í Calendar and Festivals, Youth Activities, References to the Faith, In Memoriam articles and photographs. Part Three, Bahá'í Directory, bibliography, with titles of publications printed in 43 different languages. Part Four, articles and reviews, music, poems, contents of all previous volumes, and maps.

The Guardian has said that The Bahá’í World is the best means by which the individual believer may keep abreast of the steady development of the Faith throughout the world. To pilgrims he has declared that it is one of the best mediums for teaching.

The price of the current volume, as reported in the Publishing Committee announcement, is actually less than the cost of each book.

It is hoped that plans can be made for placing a certain number of these books in important Libraries, giving review copies to newspapers and magazines, etc. Local Assemblies can assist greatly by arranging for the distribution of some copies in their city.

The friends will appreciate the unusual difficulties under which the Editorial Committee worked to secure the articles and illustrations from various parts of the world due to international conditions, and what a great proof and testimony of the power of the Cause has been created by the Guardian out of the material he has had available.

World Order Magazine

As we approach the Bahá’í new year, March 21, the business department of World Order (the Bahá’í Magazine) is hopeful that the event will be marked by a peak subscription enrollment bringing the magazine within sight of its goal, to become self-sustaining.

This would indeed be a glorious and inspiring accomplishment to the editorial department, contributing friends and Baha’is throughout the world.

Monthly visits of the magazine bring to its Baha’i subscribers an ever-broadening knowledge of Bahá’í teachings, most comforting to Bahá’is and enlightening to non-Bahá’is.

The yearly subscription rate continues at $1.50 for single individual subscriptions or, five or more yearly subscriptions, on one order may be enrolled at $1.25 each. Address: World Order Magazine, Subscription Department, 110 Linden avenue, Wilmette, Illinois.

Photographs—Ringstones

The Committee on Miscellaneous Materials, the appointment and function of which was announced two months ago, is pleased to make the following report:

Steel engravings of the “smiling” photograph of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá are again available in an edition of about 200 copies. When these are gone the Committee is uncertain when another edition can be struck from the plate, as this engraving requires use of a special quality paper the manufacture of which has been suspended.

Each engraving is mailed in a special wrapping to assure safe delivery. Per copy, postpaid, $1.75.

A few Bahá’í ringstones are also available, at two prices, $2.50 and $3.25 each, depending on size and quality of stone.

Address orders to H. E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill.

Winter Session Louhelen Bahá’í

The Winter Session at the Louhelen Bahá’í School, December 26, 1941 through January 1, 1942, demonstrated the integrating force of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. The believers who gathered there from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, New York, Maryland, and Michigan centered their energies upon the propagation of the Bahá’í teachings. The power of attraction when believers stand shoulder to shoulder is great. Seekers from Flint came to the school. Some arrived at breakfast and stayed through until bedtime. This was the first Winter Session that we were unable to house all who wished to stay at night.

At the after-breakfast devotions, the friends shared with each other treasures they had mined from Shoghi Effendi’s translations of the “Prayers and Meditations.” These led up to the forenoon focus upon the best ways of “Developing the Inner Life Through Prayer in Action,” with topics arranged by Mrs. Bertha H. Kirkpatrick and based on “Gleanings From The Writings of Bahá’u’lláh and the Prayers and Meditations.” The give and take of thought between Bahá’ís during these meetings further stimulated those who had come out to investigate the teachings.

This inspiration was augmented by the afternoon Forum, under the guidance of Mr. Frank Warner, who ably coordinated the developing thought surrounding the subject of “Bahá’í Understanding of World Conditions and Bahá’í Responsibilities.” The Promised Day Is Come and other letters of Shoghi Effendi, together with Foundations of World Unity, were the basis of study.

Twenty-six seekers gathered the opening night to hear the Bahá’í message from the lips of Mr. Warner. Speaking on the subject “Facing Facts Today,” on Tuesday, December 30, Mr. Warner spoke to the Flint Shrine at a luncheon meeting.

On Saturday afternoon, following the Forum, representatives from the Child Study Groups in nearby communities came to the school to hear Prof. Stanwood Cobb speak on “New Horizons for the Child.” Sunday afternoon found the group again devoting their time to a meeting oriented to the attraction of the public. More than fifty Bahá’ís and their friends heard Mr. Cobb, Miss Rafealita Hilarico from Manila, Sr. A. Leao from Rio de Janeiro, and Mr. Frank Warner speak on different aspects of the “Oneness of the World of Humanity.” The audience responded with keen and intelligent questions that were most stimulating.

Cars full of inquirers drove in for the informal evening meetings, and light refreshments were served. The first evening was devoted to a demonstration fireside group; the next night Dr. Cobb told some of his famous stories; then at another, Mr. Warner chatted with us about his trip through fourteen European countries and showed pictures taken in the Holy Land; music and book reviews took up a fourth after dark program; the Nineteen Day Feast of Honor was celebrated on the 30th; and on the 31st, we had an old time stunt party that was knit together with reminiscences and songs.

One of the winter session students brought out the thought that “here is a spirit of deep consecration, of firm resolve, of staunch fearlessness, and of level-headed balance that is most invigorating…” and to the truth of this expression of the theme of the Louhelen Bahá’í School, all present concurred. Throughout the seven days we spent together there was a warmth of companionship that gave us all an awareness of the protection of Bahá’u’lláh, and the ever-present guidance of our Guardian, whose prayers for us were answered in the opening of our minds and hearts, in the deepening of our sense of responsibility toward the spiritual democracy of which we are a part.

Green Acre

Special Notice

The friends are informed that the name “Green Acre Inn” was adopted for the building at Green Acre many years ago, before Green Acre became a Bahá’í institution, in fact even before Sarah J. Farmer initiated her great lecture seasons. Now that Green Acre is functioning as a Bahá’í School, the National Spiritual Assembly prefers to designate the property as “Green Acre Bahá’í School” dormitory, dining room, etc. There is also a legal reason involved, as Green Acre has recently been recognized by the Federal Treasury Department as a religious and educational institution not required to file the reports submitted by commercial hotels. Furthermore, by not conducting anything resembling a hotel or inn or public boarding house, the Green Acre Trustees will not become involved in litigation over claims for damages arising from accidents, etc.

The Bahá’í Schools are open not only to believers but to persons who wish to take the Bahá’í courses offered each season, but they are not public resorts of ordinary summer or winter vacation type.
Bahá'í Youth Bulletin

An issue of the Bahá'í Youth Bulletin is to appear early in February. Its contents include: Actions Today, by Ruhíyyih Khanum; Challenge and Opportunity, Winnifred Baker; The Guardian, Ruth Moffett; Teaching in the Colleges, Dorothy Baker; Youth in Paraguay, Elisabeth Cheney; Youth Notes; Symposium Outlines.

The subscription rate to Bahá'í Youth Bulletin is 40c per year, or four consecutive issues. Its function is to unify, coordinate and give expression to Bahá'í youth. The present number has special importance in supplying the material needed for the Youth Symposium which has become such an important annual affair.

Send subscriptions to Robert A. Gaines, Business Manager, Brighton, Mich. Send articles and news items to Editor, Bahá'í Youth Bulletin, 112 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

Inquiry About French Literature

The National Spiritual Assembly requests believers who have Bahá'í books and pamphlets in French to send the titles of each to the National Bahá'í Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill. There is need of French literature in connection with teaching activities in both North and South America, and when the available texts are known and listed, arrangements can be made to reproduce certain texts by the photo-offset process directly from the printed pamphlet or book. Kindly report only the titles of such texts as are in clear type and on clean paper, as old books do not reproduce well by this method.

Library Committee Activities

The total number of books donated by this committee during the past three months is 239; these books were donated to 78 libraries, including 44 public libraries, 6 college and university libraries, 2 state libraries, 1 provincial library in Canada, the American Unitarian Association, a Veterans' Hospital Library, 2 State Penitentiaries, and 20 army, naval and air-field libraries.

1. There is not much of interest to report for these past three months; however, it is encouraging to report the ready acceptance of our books by the various types of army libraries, including some Service Clubs. Camp Stronach, established for Conscientious Objectors, is the second important camp of this type to accept an ample supply of books. In Alaska, five libraries accepted books: Fort Richardson, 2 Naval Bases and 2 Army Defense Projects. The California and Nevada Regional Teaching Committee has been especially active in army placements.

2. Several Assembly Library or Teaching Committees have reported that they are surveying library needs in their cities and are planning to place a basic book in their Branch libraries and that they are bringing the collections up-to-date in the Main Libraries.

3. The Librarian of the South Carolina State Penitentiary wrote that several of the men had been inquiring about the Bahá'í Faith. After books had been sent to that library, Mr. Norris, the librarian, wrote the following interesting letter: "Your book 'Baha'u'llah and the New Era' arrived to-day and I wish to thank you for such a very interesting book, and I'm sure that the men here also wish to thank you. It is really one of the most interesting books I have ever been fortunate enough to read. Since reading the book I agree with Miss Helen Keller whole-heartedly, and I wish you and the Bahá'í Faith all the luck in the world in these troubled times." Our Committee seldom receives such a frank expression of appreciation from a librarian.

4. Miss Beryl Edgecombe of this committee has kindly supplied us with a copy of the American Library Association National Bulletin and the New York Library Directory which should be helpful in the library work and will assist us with library records and in determining the size and importance of public libraries to which books are sent.

Ellen Sims, Chairman

Braille Committee

The Bahá'í Committee on Braille Transcriptions wishes to express its appreciation of the remarkable achievement of Mrs. Bahiyyih Valentine of New York City in completing the Braille Course and receiving a Certificate as Certified Braille Transcriber from the National Red Cross.

Mrs. Valentine writes that she has attained the age of 86 years — she has indeed proved the promise of good found in Isaiah 40th chapter and last verse: — "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with
The administration of a local Assembly is its core. The local Assembly, and this plan has been adopted in view of the fact that authority and responsibility of records pertaining to local communities are properly preserved by the local Assembly, and this plan has been adopted in view of the fact that authority and responsibility of local Assembly will turn them over to the keeping of the records of all correspondence, etc.; the National Archives Committee to provide for press clippings, letterheads will each local Assembly kindly consider this explanation.

Local Assembly Letterheads

In Bahá’í Administration is a letter from the Guardian which instructed the National Spiritual Assembly concerning the correct title or designation it should use on its letterhead. The same instruction applies to the local Spiritual Assemblies in their field. As at present there is a wide variety of letterheads being used, the National Assembly wishes to point out that the title or designation of a local Assembly is its corporate name, and in this title all the words should be of the same size and style of type.

For example:

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’í's of Chicago

Or:

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’í's of Cloverdale Township

Before ordering a new supply of letterheads will each local Assembly kindly consider this explanation.

Records of Dissolved Assemblies

To assist in the preservation of the records of local Spiritual Assemblies, including Minutes, files of press clippings, programs, correspondence, etc., the National Spiritual Assembly has authorized the Archives Committee to provide for the keeping of the records of all dissolved Assemblies pending the restoration of the Assembly in each case. The believers who have in their personal custody the records of a dissolved Assembly are requested to send the records to the National Bahá’í Office, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill., and the National Assembly will turn them over to the Archives Committee for custody.

It is understood that all such records pertaining to local communities are properly preserved by the local Assembly, and this plan has been adopted in view of the fact that authority and responsibility of an administrative nature no longer exists when the status has been altered, temporarily, to that of a group. A group, as the Guardian advised us recently, is not an administrative body.

Enrollment of isolated believers reported during January, seventeen.

In Memoriam

Grant, O my Lord, that they who have ascended unto Thee may repair unto Him Who is the most exalted Companion, and abide beneath the shadow of the Tabernacle of Thy majesty and the Sanctuary of Thy glory. — Bahá’u’lláh.

The Bahá’í World Community

Each bulletin and each letter arriving from a Bahá’í Assembly in some distant land has in these days become a cherished token of His Grace in raising up one body of believers among mankind, an undivided body of incorruptible oneness, immune to onslaught of prejudice and of fear.

From current correspondence is gathered the intensely interesting notes and reports reproduced here for the readers of Bahá’í News.

1. From Haifa News Letter

The Summer School report of the Bahá’í youth of Iran has been received by the Guardian. The report describes the work of the school during the second summer of its existence. It is an outstanding example of fruitful and praiseworthy Bahá’í activities in Persia.

The Summer School was held in Hadji Abad, forty kilometres outside Tehran. The period of study was divided into five sessions of ten days each. The program included morning and afternoon classes. The morning classes studied regularly the History of Nabil—"The Dawn-Breakers," and "Some Answered Questions." These classes were primarily for Bahá’í students who were receiving their education in high institutions of learning and who were desirous to prepare themselves for serving the Cause in the near future. In the afternoons, the meetings were in the form of conferences conducted by Bahá’í lecturers and educators. They dealt with Bahá’í subjects in general. Not only were these conferences instructive as a medium of interchange of ideas, but they proved to be socially valuable occasions for all believers to come together as one body and foster the spirit of Bahá’í fellowship and communion among all those present. A number of discussion groups conducted by old believers were also held and were very enlightening and helpful.

The recreational side of the Summer School was not neglected. Mountain climbing and other outdoor sports and outdoor games were organized and enjoyed by many.

There was also a special program arranged for younger Bahá’ís between five and fifteen years of age. This included a Kindergarten attached to the School.
We have also received the annual report of the National Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Egypt. After referring to the unsettled world conditions and their effect on Egypt and the believers there, the report states that towards the middle of May, the Egyptian police confiscated from the press where they were being printed, the Arabic translations of Nabil's Narrative, "The Dawn-Breakers." After many efforts by the National Assembly, the confiscated copies were released on condition that this book should not be distributed in Egypt or sent out of the country. The Censorship Bureau of the Egyptian Ministry of the Interior has requested the Assembly to renew their guarantee every fifteen days that the said book will not be put in circulation. The secretary of the Assembly is faithfully carrying out this request. Meanwhile, the Assembly is continuing its efforts to remove the ban on this famous book of the Bahá'í Faith.

The Guardian has also received the minutes of the Eleventh Convention of the Bahá'ís of Iraq. We learn from these minutes that seventeen Bahá'í representatives met in Baghdad on the 24th of April, 1941. Reports on Bahá'í activities in Iraq were read and discussed. The Bahá'í situation in various Bahá'í centers in the country—specially the condition of Bahá'í Assemblies in those places—was fully reviewed with the representatives at the Congress and measures were recommended for further progress and development of Bahá'í organizations there. The convention considered specially the importance of having a Bahá'í Guest House in Baghdad and recommended to the incoming National Spiritual Assembly the building of such a House so that it could be used by the believers passing through Iraq instead of their having to board in hotels. It was noted with pleasure and satisfaction that the number of Bahá'í travelers passing from Iran or their way to the Holy Land had increased lately. It was also recommended that efforts must be redoubled to acquire a plot of land in Baghdad for the purpose of having a private and independent cemetery for the Bahá'ís there. Towards the end of the meeting, the members of the new National Bahá'í Assembly for the coming year were elected.

The Bahá'í Summer School of India and Burma was held this year in Lahore from 15th to the 22nd of October. Dyal Singh Public Library Lecture Hall which has seating arrangements for 80 persons was engaged for holding the classes. The morning sessions were devoted every day to the study of the Word of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. The evening sessions were open to the public and a course of 6 lectures on Comparative Religion were delivered with a parallel course on Bahá'í topics such as the true significance of the Day of Judgment, the New World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, God and His Manifestations, and the History and Teachings of the Bahá'í Faith. Lectures on Hinduism, Buddhism and religions of China and Japan were delivered by Prof. Pritam Singh. The Religion of Zoroastrianism was dealt with by Mr. Isfandiar Bakhhtiar and the Religion of Islam by Mr. Iml. The history and teachings of the Bahá'í Faith were taken up by Prof. Pritam Singh and Abbas Ali Butt.

Short appreciative notes on the Bahá'í Faith appeared in the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore and a note on Bahá'í Summer Schools appeared in the Tribune.

News letters published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'í of Iran contain encouraging news of the believers in that land. In recent issues, which we have received with pleasure we have read the following items which will be of interest to the Friends throughout the West.

The flow of eager Iranian pilgrims to and from Haifa has imparted a new life to the gatherings and activities of friends in this country. The spiritual refreshment so abundantly manifest in their faces, the life-giving messages of encouragement that they convey from our beloved Guardian and the glad- tidings that they bear to us of the divine order and regularity prevailing in the world's spiritual centre, combine to give us strength to bear the brunt of what remains in store for all in the near future.

A class of a new type was recently inaugurated in Tehran by the Central Teaching Committee. It consists of an outline of condensed data necessary for an average Bahá'í teacher who may tour inside Iran. Four months of intensive teaching are required for the study of this course. Those who pass the examinations are to travel to places to be designated by the National Spiritual Assembly.

Mr. Meyvan reports progress from Isphahan on the work which is being done in the new cemetery for the remains of the twin-brother martyrs of Isphahan, Sultan and Mahshib-ul-Shuhada, and of the late Mrs. Keith Ransom-Kehler.

2. From Bahá'í Journal, London

"Rejoice safety, admire dauntless courage, marvel unquenchable spirit English believers. Sharing joyful news noble perseverance with pilgrims arriving in increasing numbers from Near and Middle East. All praying continued safety, extension activities, sore tried exemplary servants Faith Bahá'u'lláh throughout British Isles. Urge persistent efforts utilize utmost limit priceless spiritual opportunities present hour."

Dear Friends:

Above is the cable which the Guardian sent to the Annual Convention, and it was in an atmosphere of joy and encouragement engendered by such an exhilarating message that the Convention began and continued. Over thirty believers, fourteen of them delegates, were present during all or some of the meetings, and the whole Convention was notable for its vitality and for the increasing unity among the friends. We can surely say this was the best one yet.

THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Vice-Chairman...Mr. A. Sugar
Secretary...Miss D. Cansdale
Assistant Secretary...Miss A. E. Baxter
Treasurer...Mr. A. Norton

Mrs. H. M. Balyuzi
Mrs. K. V. Brown
Mr. D. Hoffman
Mrs. C. Langdon-Davies
Mr. P. Wilkinson

During Convention, the following cable was sent to the Guardian:

"Convention radiant, record attendance, deeply grateful your message, resolves intensify teaching to achieve greatest effort yet made British Isles. Deepest love."
And two days after the end of Convention came the following reply:

"Exhilarated resolution intensity teaching, admiration heightened, praying redoubled fervour."

Surely nothing more can be said—it is deeds, not words, which are needed now.

The World Congress of Faiths held a series of lectures and discussions in London on "World Religions," each Faith being given one of the sessions. The Bahá'í session was the last one, and aroused interest and comment. Through this an excellent contact was made with the National Adult School Union.

It was unfortunately necessary to abandon the plans for Summer School. This was a great loss, as we had come to anticipate the vivid and rich experience which it offers, and it was also an important part of our Teaching. Two week-ends were arranged, one in Nottingham and one in Orpington, which were attended by friends from other parts of the country, and these helped, in a small way, to make up for the major loss. The N.S.A. has determined to try to hold Summer School for a week this year.

During the year an attempt was made to evacuate a number of Bahá'í children to America. The American friends, with characteristic generosity, offered hospitality to the children. It was unfortunate that after the work of the American N.S.A., which resulted in numbers of offers from the American believers, and after the work done on this side, the scheme should have fallen through, due to the difficulties faced by the Government. We wish, however, to record our gratitude to the American believers.

3. From Bahá'í Quarterly, Adelaide, South Australia

The Winter session of Yerrinbool Bahá'í School was held at "Bolton Place," Yerrinbool, N.S.W., 14th to 20th June, 1941.

Our Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, has set as objectives of our Summer Schools: "To deepen the knowledge of the Cause; to strengthen the Unity of the Cause; to teach the Cause and prepare teachers; to attract new souls; to arouse enthusiasm for continued study at home; to widen acquaintance and friendship; to gain knowledge of other problems and find light through consultation on our own; We think there was no one there who failed to inhale the fragrances that are diffused when sincere souls are gathered together in the name of Bahá'u'lláh or to feel the love that spreads from Unity in the love of God."

Owing to the cold and short days of winter, study sessions were held in the afternoons from 2 to 5 p.m.

The opening of the school commenced on June 14th when the number of souls present totalled 30, not counting the children of whom there were about nine. All present registered their names in the visitors' book.

Picnic lunch was held outside under the trees on the long table, and the sun was shining brilliantly, which added to the enjoyment of the feast. After lunch, all gathered under the erected marquee for the opening, when Mrs. Bolton took the chair in the absence of the Chairman. After welcoming all present and reading telegrams of greeting from those unable to be present, Mrs. Bolton called upon Mrs. Hyde Dunn for the opening prayer and talk. Mrs. Hyde Dunn's prayer and talk impressed very much all those present, and some very appropriate words were uttered.

The next speaker was Miss Margaret Rowling, whose subject was Bahá'í Administration. Miss Rowling very ably prefaced her reading from Bahá'í Procedure with an outline of the reason and wisdom for Administration being a necessary part of the Bahá'í Faith. She then read that portion dealing with Unity.

Mr. Cornwall read an article from the newspaper Sydney Morning Herald dated 14th June by Rhoda Astair entitled, "Reform and the Spirit," which had a bearing on the New World Order. A short discussion took place, and the meeting closed with prayer.

Following is the Roster of Devotional Meetings:

June 14th Unity—Mrs. Hyde Dunn
15th Justice—Mrs. Hyde Dunn
16th Power—Mr. Cornwall
17th Wisdom and Understanding—Miss Gilbert.
18th Charity—Mrs. Chalker

19th The need of a Divine Educator—Mrs. Bolton 20th Life after Death—Mrs. Bolton.

OFFICERS OF N. S. A.

The following have been elected for the current year:
Chairman: Mr. R. Brown
Vice-chairman: Mr. O. A. Whitaker
Secretary: Miss Hilda Brooks
Treasurer: Mrs. S. M. Jackman.

Dear friends and co-workers:

The war continues. The resultant strains and stresses become more tense and are reflected in the mental atmosphere of our daily lives. As Bahá'ís we must endeavour to counter this by an intensified effort to express complete unity and harmony in our own ranks. Such harmony is an essential background of all successful effort and its achievement a concrete example of the possibility of a unified world.

The hearts of the Melbourne Bahá'í Group were gladdened and refreshed by the visit of Miss Hilda Brooks and Mrs. Hawthorne during April and June. Two lectures were arranged. The first took the form of a reception for which the Gold Room was engaged at the "Victoria." Miss Brooks' address on "Bahá'u'lláh and the New World Order" aroused deep interest with requests for literature on the Teachings. Supper was served and a pleasant hour followed. The second lecture was arranged when Miss Brooks and Mrs. Hawthorne passed through Melbourne on their return from Brisbane. This was an advertised public meeting at which 40 stragglers were present. A well thought out address on "This New Age" was received with sympathetic attention by the audience. Quite a number stayed after the lecture to ask questions and request literature and further lectures. We feel greatly indebted to Miss Brooks and her very able helper, Mrs. Hawthorne, and extend our deep thanks to both.

The N.S.A. is grateful to the Melbourne friends for their co-operation and their tireless efforts to assist Miss Brooks in spreading the Glad Tidings in Melbourne.

Cablegram received March 14, 1942.

Dear and valued co-workers:

The entry of the United States of America into the war invests it with the character of a truly world-embracing crisis, designed to release world-shaking, world-shaping forces, which, as they operate, and mount in intensity, will throw down the barriers that hinder the emergence of that world community which the World Religion of Bahá'u'lláh has anticipated and can alone permanently establish. It marks a milestone on the road which must lead the peoples of the North American continent to the glorious destiny that awaits them. It confronts the American Bahá'í community, already so well advanced in the prosecution of their Seven Year Plan, with a challenge at once severe and inescapable. The exterior ornamentation of their consecrated Edifice has been providentially expedited to a point where its completion is now assured. The intercontinental and national teaching campaigns, that constitute the second and even more vital aspect of that plan, though progressing magnificently in the States, in Canada and throughout Latin America, are still far from having attained their consumation. The obstacles which the extension of the war to the Western Hemisphere has raised are, I am well aware, manifold and formidable. The heroic self-sacrifice exhibited by the North American Bahá'í community will, I am confident, surmount them. The Hand of Omnipotence, which has led so mighty a member of the human race to plunge into the turmoil of world disaster, that has provided thereby the means for the effective and decisive participation of so promising a nation in the immediate trials and the future reconstruction of human society, will not and cannot allow those who are directly, consciously and worthily promoting the highest interests of their nation and of the world, to fall short of the accomplishment of their God-given task. He will, more than ever before in their history, pour out His blessings upon them, if they refuse to allow the present circumstances, grievous though they are, to interfere with the full and uninterrupted execution of this initial undertaking in pursuance of their world mission. The coming two years must witness, fraught as they may well be with the greatest ordeal afflicting their countrymen, a manifestation of spiritual vitality and an output of heroic action, commensurate with the gravity and afflictions of the present hour, and worthy of the concluding years of the first Bahá’í century.

Shoghi Effendi, much as he deeply appreciates the donations of the N.S.A., representing as they do the contribution of the friends to the World Interests of the Faith, feels very strongly that from now on the N.S.A. should concentrate all their resources on the fulfillment of the Seven Year Plan, including any money they might, in their love and devotion, wish to send to him for the Faith here. Will you kindly convey to your fellow-National Assembly members both the expression of his deep gratitude for this latest contribution, and his wish that it be the last from them until the Plan is completed in triumph?

Tablet to the Americas

Regarding the efforts that have been made by Mr. Remey in connection with the Tablet supposed to have been revealed by Bahá’u’lláh to the Americas: the Guardian has already written Mr. Remey that no such Tablet was revealed. In the Aqdas, however, Bahá’u’lláh addresses the rulers and presidents of the American Republics. This has given rise to the misapprehension that He addressed a Tablet to them similar to His Epistles to some of the rulers in Europe.

Acceptance of Election

Concerning the question of refusal by certain believers to accept election to an administrative post: the Guardian strongly feels that criticism, opposition, or confusion do not provide sufficient grounds for either refusal or resignation. Only cases of physical or mental incapacity, which, by their very nature, are extremely rare, constitute valid reasons for such an act. The difficulties and tests involved in the acceptance of administrative posts, far from inducing the believers to dissociate themselves from the work of the Cause, should spur them on to greater exertions and to a more active participation in the privileged task of resolving the problems that confront the Bahá’í community. Only in cases where individual believers, without any valid reason, deliberately refuse the repeated exhortations, pleas, and warnings addressed to them by their Assemblies, should action be taken in removing them from the voting list. This is a measure designed to sustain the institutions of the Faith at the present time, and to insure that the abilities and talents of its, as yet, limited number of supporters are properly consecrated to its service. The believers, for the sake of the Cause, now in the period of its infancy, should accept their duties in a spirit of self-sacrifice, and should be animated by the desire to uphold the verdict of the electorate, and to lend their share of assistance, however difficult the circumstances, to the effective administration of the affairs of the Faith.

The same sanction should apply to those who persistently refuse to dissociate themselves from political and ecclesiastical activities. This is a general principle which is being maintained throughout the Bahá’í world, and the believers throughout the East are already aware of the absolute necessity of refusing any political or Moslem ecclesiastical office.

Formation of Assemblies in Villages

The Guardian approves the action taken by your Assembly recognizing villages as civil units suitable for the formation of local Assemblies in States where there are no townships, and the county unit is too large for united action by a Bahá’í community.

Assembly Members and Committee Appointments

Regarding the non-appointment of Assembly members to membership on national committees, the Guardian firmly believes that no such principle should be recognized. Those who are best fitted for the specific work assigned to the committees should be elected, irrespective of their membership on either national or local Assemblies. The greater the pressure on those who shoulder both committee and Assembly responsibilities, the greater the reward and the richer the blessings vouchsafed to those who willingly and gratefully sustain this double burden.

Concentration on Seven-Year Plan

In conclusion, the Guardian wishes to re-emphasize the necessity of concentrating during the remaining two years, and in spite of America’s entry into the war, all the resources of the Community on the final aspect of the Seven Year Plan, which can alone bring it to a successful consummation. The difficulties that have arisen should stimulate the friends to greater and still more heroic exertions on behalf of a Cause which they have served and are still serving with such exemplary tenacity, fidelity, vigor, courage and devotion.

Corrections in Cablegram

Received February 9, 1942

The cable company has corrected one sentence in the text of this cablegram received from Shoghi Effendi, and the friends are advised to note the following sentence which replaces the sentence as phrased in the February issue of Bahá’í News—

“The enviable North American Bahá’í community must, supported (by its) daughter Assemblies in the Western Hemisphere, hold the fort alone if necessary.”

Letters to Believers

With the Guardian’s consent, the two following excerpts from letters written by him to believers are shared with the friends.

“...and in spite of America’s entry into the war, all the resources of the Community on the final aspect of the Seven Year Plan, which can alone bring it to a successful consummation. The difficulties that have arisen should stimulate the friends to greater and still more heroic exertions on behalf of a Cause which they have served and are still serving with such exemplary tenacity, fidelity, vigor, courage and devotion.”

the responsibility of the believers to combat and uproot it with all their force, first by endeavoring to introduce into the Cause as many racial and minority groups as they can approach and teach, and second by stimulating close fellowship and intercourse between them and the rest of the community.

"It should be the paramount concern of your committee to foster this aim through every means available. Not only the colored people, who because of the increasing receptivity they are evincing to the Message truly deserve special attention, but all other minorities, whether racial or religious, such as Jews or Red Indians, all alike should be contacted and confirmed. The greater the receptivity of a particular class or group, the stronger should work the desire and determination of the believers to attract and teach its members. In a time when the whole world is steeped in prejudices of race, class and nation, the Bahá'ís, by upholding firmly and loyally this cardinal principle of their Faith, can best hope to vindicate its truth, and establish its right to bring order and peace out of the chaos and strife of this war-torn world." — From letter to Mrs. Dorothy Baker, Chairman, Race Unity Committee, February, 1941.

"A Challenge at Once Severe and Inescapable"

To the Spiritual Assemblies, Communities and groups of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

Beloved Friends:

The revered Guardian bids us measure our spiritual responsibility by the unit of the single hour. Each span of sixty minutes allotted to us brings its own unique opportunity and its challenge. To rise into this new and holier atmosphere of light we must leave personal preoccupations and treasures behind.

"The Hand of Omnipotence ... will not and cannot allow those who are directly, consciously and worthily promoting the highest interests of their nation and of the world, to fall short of the accomplishment of their God-given task."

How can we grasp, and utilize, an occasion for service to the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh whose immensity is so far beyond our limited powers?

Obedience to a spiritual command implies, first, a turning of the whole being to the command, then a complete readiness to permit the command to use our lives for its perfect consummation. We need not lament that we are not wiser, stronger, more learned, younger or having more liberty of action. For that lament is in itself a distraction from the command. All we can give is what we have and are at the moment the command comes.

If the power behind the command were not greater than we, it would not be a spiritual summons. That power knows us better than we know ourselves. It simply asks for obedience—not for reasons why we are unable to obey conveniently until some later time. The spiritual power has but one criterion, whether the individual believer wills to obey or interposes the veil of self-will which would bar the spirit out.

For the institution likewise, the command brings supreme challenge and test. Does our Assembly, our Committee, our fireside group, our Nineteen Day Feast concentrate all its forces upon response to the command to teach; or do we allow ourselves to be diverted by secondary matters which blind us to the Divine command that we establish His Cause throughout North, Central and South America?

The teaching work has become our first concern. "The exterior ornamentation of their consecrated Edifice has been providentially expedited to a point where its completion is now assured." The value of each institution will be estimated in these days by its capacity to contribute to the intercontinental teaching campaign. The administrative elements of consultation, authority, function—all today must bear fruit in the spreading of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in the North, in the South, in the East and in the West.

Great and mighty tasks have been done in the history of the Cause in America, but the past has been the making of the tools and the acquirement of capacity to use them, for the Victory which is to crown the conclusion of the first Century of the Bahá'í Era in 1944.

May we all become more mindful of the teachings and the sacred nature of consultation and unity for service to Bahá'u'lláh. "He will, more than ever before in their history, pour out His blessings upon them, if they refuse to allow the present circumstances, grievous though they are, to interfere with the full and uninterrupted execution of this initial undertaking in pursuance of their world mission."

Faithfully yours,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Annual Convention Announcements

Dates of Convention sessions: Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, April 30, May 1, 2 and 3, 1942, to be held in Foundation Hall, Bahá’í House of Worship, Wilmette.

Public meeting, Wednesday evening, April 29. Plans are under way for a Race Unity dinner and public program in Chicago, Wednesday evening, April 29, conducted by the National Race Unity Committee and the Chicago Assembly jointly at the request of the National Spiritual Assembly. Tickets to the dinner are $1.50, and orders should be sent at once to Mrs. H. E. Walthr, Secretary, 4639 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

Convention Committee: Edna True, General Chairman; Mrs. Carl Hannen, Chairman of Housing and Hospitality Committee, 112 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.; John Haggard, Chairman of Information Bureau; Mrs. Harriet Hilpert, Mrs. May Scheffler, Committee on dining arrangements.

Ridvan Feast, Friday evening, May 1, after dinner. Program by Milwaukee Assembly; Refreshments by Chicago Assembly.

Morning devotional period, conducted by Waukegan Assembly.

Convention photograph, early Saturday afternoon, May 2.

Public meeting in Foundation Hall of the Temple, Sunday, 3:30 p.m. May 3.

Believers wishing rooms in Wilmette should make reservations through the Housing and Hospitality Committee. The Committee will also secure rooms at a hotel in Evanston for those who prefer these accommodations. Believers who make their own hotel reservation can select any available hotel they prefer, among them being: North Shore Hotel, Hotel Evanston, Orrington Hotel, The Homestead, and the Georgian.

Convention theme: "The Unfinished Tasks of the Seven Year Plan"—

a. Unoccupied States and Provinces of North America.
b. Restoration of Dissolved Spiritual Assemblies.
c. Latin American Countries Without Pioneers or Groups.
d. Completion of Temple Construction.

For presentation of reports, plans and projects for the coming year in relation to these tasks, as well as general discussion, a session has been assigned to the National Teaching Committee, the Inter-America Committee, the Committee on Assembly Development and the Temple Trustees respectively.

The general subject of "Our Facilities for Accomplishing These Tasks" is assigned in the Agenda to three consecutive sessions, with reference to the functions and activities of the following Committees: Race Unity, Bahá’í Schools, Publicity, Radio, Contacts, Library, Exhibits, Child Education, Youth, and World Order Magazine.

A printed Agenda will be sent each delegate with a blank ballot about April 1.

Canadian Bahá’í Fund

Since its inception in October, 1940, a total of $2,875.03 was received. On January 31, 1942, there was a bank balance of $653.44, with two outstanding checks amounting to $150.00, leaving a net balance of $503.44 on hand. During this period, five pioneer teachers were maintained in the Middle West and Maritime Provinces. A great deal of work has been accomplished by these devoted and sacrificing friends; a great deal remains to be done to fulfill our obligations to establish an assembly in every Province of the Dominion before April, 1944. There are excellent prospects that before long a few of the remaining Provinces will be settled but some of the other Assemblies are working and need strengthening and the help and assistance of outside teachers is indicated in order not only to keep alive these Assemblies but to insure their strength and endurance.

In order to attain our goal, a constant flow of funds is necessary and we are confident that the sacrifice and devotion of the believers will not fail in answer to the repeated appeals made by our beloved Guardian and the reward of happiness promised for us who have proven and are proving their sacrifice and devotion is so great as to dazzle our greatest imagination.

The writer wishes to express his gratitude and satisfaction and would like to refer to a letter received lately from one of the largest contributors to the Fund which stated that ever since he contributed, his business is prospering and the more he contributes the more his business is increasing.

SIEGFRIED SCHOPFLOCHER,
Assistant Treasurer

How to Send Contributions

In sending contributions to the National Fund, the friends are advised to use checks or postal orders and not to send cash. A number of letters have been received inquiring about contributions sent by believers which have failed to arrive at the Treasurer's Office. Lost postal orders or checks can be replaced, but if cash disappears in transmission it is difficult to recover.

Notice About Status of Believers Absent from Their Community for Civil Defense or Draft Service

The important question has arisen whether to transfer to the isolated list the believers who leave their community temporarily in connection with civil defense or military duty. The National Assembly has adopted the principle that such believers should not be transferred, but listed as voting members temporarily absent, where the intention is to return and permanent residence has not been established elsewhere. Their local Assembly is urged to keep in close touch with these friends and see that their copy of Bahá’í News is forwarded.

Village Unit a Recognized Civil Area

Shoghi Effendi has approved, in a letter published in this number of Bahá’í News, an action of the National Spiritual Assembly taken in August, 1941, in order to meet a situation reported by a Regional Teaching Committee.

The question was, whether to approve the formation of a Spiritual Assembly in an unincorporated village located in a State which has no townships, and in a county too large to serve as area for one local Spiritual Assembly.

The National Assembly, recognizing the need for clarification of this important matter in localities having conditions not met by any previous definition of areas of local jurisdiction, recorded the following view:

“Voted to adopt the principle that in the matter of Assembly areas in a county which is too large to be a Bahá'í administrative unit, and which county contains no townships, in such cases the National Spiritual Assembly will recognize a permanent unincorporated civil community having definite geographical boundaries as an area suitable for the establishment of a Spiritual Assembly.”

The action was then referred to the Guardian and approved by him.

This means, in brief, that nine or more Bahá'ís living in an unincorporated village can form a local Spiritual Assembly, provided the village has a definite area for establishing the fact of residence, and provided the county has no township which could serve as an Assembly area for believers residing outside any incorporated town or city in the township.

Inter-America News

The whole Bahá'í world should be very gratified at the reports of our pioneers in the Latin-American field. We may, with security, expect to see the organization of Spiritual Assemblies in several of the countries on April 21. Clarence Iverson has sent us several new registration cards and assures us that San Salvador now has the required number for organization. Clarence also reports that he was recently invited to be the announcer of a Salvadorian Radio program which went to 62 stations over CBS.

John Eichenauer will remain in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, until after the organization of a Spiritual Assembly in that country when he will proceed to Guatemala to take up the teaching work there. These two young men have made a very estimable reputation in Central America and we find them becoming valuable factors in the life of the countries apart from their actual teaching efforts.

Chile

Mrs. Atwater sends the most cheering news from Chile. Several of those who have accepted the Faith in Santiago have removed to other cities and are planning to establish study classes there. Mrs. Atwater has been at her post for some time over a year and she has returned home for a change but will make arrangement to go back. Work is now going on in Valparaiso and the Assembly in Santiago will organize on April 21.

Brazil

As mails are very slow we do not hear regularly from the cities on the east coast, but a recent letter from Mrs. Leonora HolsappleArmstrong offers to any pioneer to Brazil the use of her apartment in Rio or of part of her house in Bahia. We are so greatly in need of pioneers in that huge country and with the Guardian’s words still ringing in our ears to do everything to facilitate the teaching work in Central and South America we are earnestly appealing to the friends to give this subject their prayerful consideration.

New Spanish Translation

Very recently the manuscript of the Spanish translation of the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh was received. The work of translating was done in Buenos Aires by Dr. Tormo and Sr. Ricci with some assistance of Miss Lillian McRae. After that was completed the manuscript was brought to this country where Sr. Ricci and Sra. Arias of New York reviewed it together. We are assured of the excellence of the translation, and hope that it will soon be in print. (The book is now on the press.)

Radio Broadcasts

We are reminded by Mrs. Sylvia King that she has arranged two Spanish broadcasts which are the first which have occurred and that Mrs. Amalia Ford and she were the speakers. Word has been received from Chile and also from Brazil that they were picked up and although not very plain, furnished great joy to the listeners among the Bahá'ís when they heard for the first time the name of Bahá'u'lláh spoken over the air.

Publicity
San José (Costa Rica), Havana and Santiago have recently had fine publicity about the Cause and there is scarcely a month passes that we do not receive word that John Eicheneuer has written an article for some Central American paper; and also Buenos Aires has done her share of bringing the Cause before the reading public. To all centers recently we have sent copies of the planograph of the Temple hoping that this may awaken interest and can be used in the news.

Havana
Miss Josephine Kruka writes from Havana that the Center is used every day for meetings of one kind or another and that she has a class for children which is quite remarkable as they are learning English and at the same time learning about the Cause, that they are very enthusiastic and as we have seen a photograph of the group we are assured of the radiance of their faces. Miss Rhoads loves it, but she finds it so lovely and we know that Miss Louise Caswell, P. O. Box 1256, Canal Zone.

Appeal for Pioneers
The Inter-America Committee begs the friends to consider the fact that in all the vast continent of South America we have only about ten teachers, yet the Guardian has so stressed the work of Inter-Continental teaching that he has contributed towards its success! Our pioneer teachers have done and are doing yeoman service, but we must have assistance. We seek young people and particularly request that even if it is not possible to go into the field at once that any intention to go be made known to us and that it be borne in mind that in Brazil where the greatest need seems to be, only Portuguese is spoken. We are assured of financial assistance from the National Fund and there is work for those who are prepared and are resourceful.

Appeal for Pioneers

Bolivia
Arrangements have been made to send Miss Flora E. Hottes as a pioneer to Bolivia and we understand that she will depart about April 2 on her important mission.

Venezuela
The matter of Venezuela is still concerning us and we are hoping to hear of some one who will take up this work. This country is said to be so lovely and we know that Miss Rhoads loves it, but she finds it difficult to introduce the Faith and we feel that we would like to assist her by sending someone who has a profession by which he would be able to support himself.

Opening in Panama
Word has come that a new believer in Panama has a photograph studio which he offers to a pioneer wishing to settle in that country, one who can conduct the business. This seems to be an opportunity for some American Bahá'í to enter the pioneer field under conditions enabling him to become self-supporting. For details, write the established pioneer teachers, Mrs. Cora Oliver and Mrs. Louise Caswell, P. O. Box 1256, Canal Zone.

Publishing Committee

Announcement is made of two new Study Outlines which offer a helpful group approach to study and discussion of subjects of fundamental Bahá'í importance.

Introduction to the Study of the Qur'án, prepared by Study Outline Committee. This 25-page outline enables a group to take up the study of the Qur'án, knowledge of which is so important for Bahá'ís. It includes: The Guardian's words on how to study the Qur'án, Explanation of Qur'anic symbols, and 10 Lessons preceded by a Plan of Study which explains that certain general and important topics of the Qur'án have been selected as subjects for the 10 lessons, which may be studied by individual believers or made the basis of group discussion. References are to the Rodwell translation of the Qur'án. Price per copy, $0.35.

The Kitáb-i-Áḏán, Bahá'u'lláh's Book of Ceriture, prepared by Horace Holley. This outline carries the student through the work which the Guardian described as "this book of unsurpassed preceminence among the writings of the Author of the Bahá'í Revelation," not by dealing with the book consecutively but considering it as a number of fundamental subjects: The Path of Faith, Prophecy and Symbol, God in Manifestation, The Presence of God, The Return. Each subject indexed with sub-subjects and their references in the text. 6 pages. Per copy, $0.20. Send orders for these and other books and pamphlets to Bahá'í Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

World Order
With the publishing of the March 1942 issue, World Order Magazine completes its seventh yearly volume, and subscribers can now send in their 12 copies dating from April, 1941, to and including March, 1942 for binding. Bound copies of Vol. VII, dating from April 1941-March 1942 are obtainable at $2.00 per copy, postage prepaid to any address in the United States, American possessions, Canada, or wherever postal service is available. Subscribers who wish their own copies bound, can mail them to World Order, 110 Linden Ave., Wilmette, Illinois, and have them bound for $1.20, return postage included. Missing copies are supplied at 15¢ each.

The new volume is bound in dark green pebbled fabricoid, head and foot band, gold letter stamping on back-strip, uniform in style and finish with previous volumes.

Complete index of titles and name of authors covering all articles in this volume, appears in the March, 1942 issue and illustrates the wide scope of the many all-important features reflecting the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh and of lasting value to all believers of the Bahá'í Faith.

Address Business Manager, World Order Magazine, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

National Press Book
The American press is responding to the increased activities of the American Bahá'í Community in their Seven Year Plan. The Press Books of 1941-1942 as of February 15th this year carry clippings from 30 states and provinces of the United States and Canada as well as from Alaska, Hawaii, Costa Rica, Cuba, Nicaragua, Argentina, China and India. The English, Spanish, German and Finnish languages are represented.

Four factors predominate in local news items about which long and short articles have been written. These include Convention activities, Regional Teaching Conferences, Summer School Sessions and Temple progress.

The Press Books close March 31 this year to be prepared for the Convention. Many publicity clippings will be mailed in on or before that date which we will report later as the Press Books grow.

In May last year our friend Dave Hoff of the Associated Press asked for material on the Temple for a special article to be released through their special feature department. In November the Associated Press released Mr. Hoff’s well-written article with a picture of the Temple which was timely last May. Since November 16 we have received in clipping form this article from eleven different papers. In many cases the local editors had changed the wording. The article appeared in Birmingham, Alabama; New Haven, Conn.; Springfield, Ill.; Rochester, N.Y.; Portsmouth, N.H.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Allentown, Pa.; Omaha, Neb.; Indianapolis, Ind.; San Francisco, Cal.; and New York City in a German language paper.

The Chicago metropolitan papers are taking an increased interest in the Temple as it nears completion. During last Convention all four papers carried good articles on the meetings and personnel. In June, one paper carried a short story on the nine texts over the entrances. In September the Tribune carried a long article in its Sunday metropolitan section. In October this same paper carried material on the Temple twice in the “Line ‘O Type” column on the editorial page. The first quarter column was given to this at one time, later a poem written by an outsider appeared in this column. At present three papers have special material and pictures for releases of their own later in the year.

In Illinois new towns appear on the index sheet as a result of the Regional Teaching Committee. These include, Lake Forest, Skokie, Glenview and Moline. Morton, Illinois published material on Bahá’í meeting through efforts of Hazel Foster of Peoria. Dixon, carried picture of the Temple with an article through a Bahá’í friend of the editor, Mrs. Hopper of Port Chester, N.Y. The friends of Oak Park, Urbana and Peoria have been successful in their publicity efforts. Mrs. Matthisen has been successful in many types of publicity in the Antioch paper; announcements of radio talks, Bahá’í prayers published without comment, Library book gift, Temple activities and meetings. The Waukegan friends have been very successful in using a great deal of publicity in two papers for every meeting.

In Indiana both the Fort Wayne and South Bend groups have reported notices of meetings in clippings. The Indianapolis friends found a Race Unity Conference a successful medium for publicity.

In Iowa, the Davenport papers carried a number of articles on the activities of the Regional Committee there.

From Wisconsin, our Press Books have pages of publicity from Milwaukee and Racine. The Racine friends have been unique in their consistent success in having notices, articles and pictures published.

Michigan state reports material from the papers of Ann Arbor, Detroit, Grosse Pointe, Flint, Davison, Grand Haven, Grand Rapids, Muskegon and Ludington. New this year is the report of an Inter-Community conference in the Hart Journal. Also new is the clipping from the Houghton Mining Gazette resulting from Miss Josephine Krucka’s work. The numerous activities at the Louhelen School as well as many inter-Community Conferences are reflected throughout the Bahá’í publicity of the state. Mrs. Bertha Kirkpatrick, alone in Olivet, has sent us clippings on the Cause. One unusual article on the Bahá’í attitude toward war appeared in Grose Pointe.

The Canadian friends found their Western Canadian Regional meeting of August 23 lucrative in publicity. The papers of Vernon, B. C. Armstrong and Enderby replied to their efforts; The Calgary Herald and Winnipeg reported this Conference as well as other activities of Rowland Estall. The Edmonton papers reported Bahá’í work of Emeric Sala in that city. The Vancouver paper reported the Bahá’í marriage of Ann Wylie and Roland McGee.

This report will be continued monthly to include all the publicity which has come to the files of the Bahá’í News Service Committee. We sincerely hope that the friends will send all their material in, as it will be invaluable in the future as archives material when history is rewritten.

Library Committee
The Library Committee would like to make it clearly understood by the friends that books cannot be sent out to libraries unless the requests received by us are accompanied by written evidence that the books will be received and used in the libraries. Will the friends kindly cooperate with us in this matter to prevent any return of book shipments to the Publishing Committee? Always make certain that the librarian knows that the books will be sent as gifts, that they will be shipped from the Publishing Committee and will not come directly from the Library Committee and that our books are primarily religious publications of the Bahá’í Faith and not merely tracts on world unity and universal peace.

Bahá’í World, Volume 7, is no longer available for free distribution to libraries. Again, may we list the books which are on our donation list to prevent offering other titles to librarians with subsequent delays and cross-correspondence: Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era, Foundations of World Unity, World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, Some Answered Questions, Advent of Divine Justice, Promise of All Ages, and The Promised Day Is Come.

Address for correspondence: Mrs. S. H. Sims, Chairman, Box 116, Avon, N. J.

Notice
During the changing of the editorial office for World Order magazine from Wilmette to Peoria in December a memorandum bearing the name of the author of a manuscript was lost. Will the writer who contributed “The Synthesis” make his name known to Mrs. Alice S. Cox, 1100 West Gift Ave., Peoria, Ill. He will then receive delayed acknowledgment of his manuscript.

Bahá’í News Service
Announcement
The friends are requested to send to Bahá’í News Service all the clippings which are intended for the permanent publicity record of the current year. The Committee wishes to complete two Press Books by Convention time, and as several weeks are needed for this work the clippings should be sent as soon as possible. Kindly address them to Bahá’í News Service, % Virginia Russell, 2622 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

Bahá’í Youth Bulletin
Bahá’í Youth, dated February, 1942, is Vol. VII, No. 4 of the bulletin issued by the National Youth Committee through its editorial member.
The contents include: Actions Today, Ruhiyih Khanum; Challenge and Opportunity, Winifred Louise Baker; The Guardian, Ruth Moffett; Teaching in the Colleges, Dorothy Baker; Youth in Paraguay, Elizabeth Cheney; Youth Notes; Symposium Outlines.

Subscriptions, 40 cents a year, ten cents a copy, received by Robert A. Gaines, Brighton, Mich.
Alaska Pioneer Receives
Eskimo Teaching Post

The National Teaching Committee has received a letter from the Secretary of the Alaska Regional Teaching Committee which reports a most interesting situation, and the news is shared with the friends.

"Janet Whitenack has actually received a temporary probational appointment with the Office of Indian Affairs to teach at Tululakson the Kuskokwim River, about 80 miles east of Bethel. It is near Akiak and is a 100% Eskimo community — no whites at all and no liquor.

"Janet writes 'I cannot tell you just how it affects me, but I feel that my destiny is there, and that I shall make that my life work. I'll be entirely on my own, and will be nurse, doctor, etc. as well as teacher. The responsibility is tremendous but I am praying for guidance and help. If I am satisfactory, apparently I can stay there indefinitely. . . will be able to build the lives of about 100 Eskimos, with practically no interference from any other whites.' . . . Janet was very frank with the Supervisors and spoke of the Cause. They had heard of the Bahá’í Faith but knew nothing about it.

"Janet will write and tell you more particulars. We talked over long distance today and she said it was extraordinary, the interview with the Supervisors of the Office of Indian Affairs, (The Office of Indian Affairs covers the whole Territory of Alaska — both Indian and Eskimos.) A month or so ago I had an interesting talk with Mr. Hirst, who is the chief supervisor of the whole of Alaska. Doctor Ruth Gruber arranged for us to meet. We talked of Janet and of her splendid qualities and of her desire to serve with the Eskimos. He was impressed and said he would do what he could. No doubt he approved the appointment. Dr. Gruber is in Alaska for one year — appointed by Mr. Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Department of the Interior. She is presumably writing a book on Alaska and possibly working on the possibility of evacuees colonizing there later on. She is an exceptionally fine person and is already deeply interested in the Bahá’í teachings. So you see she was partly instrumental in bringing about this great happening.

"Great pleasure in saying that we had an overflow audience so large that it is estimated that between seventy-five and one hundred people were turned away, despite the fact that both the library and the hall were crammed full and all of the Bahá’ís were asked to stand and give their seats to the guests. A rough count showed the audience present to be between three hundred seventy-five and four hundred people.

After the formal presentation of the program, everyone inspected the exhibits of Inca Art, including pottery, silver, Peruvian dolls and a comprehensive display of photographs showing the ancient art of the Inca Kingdom and scenes of present-day Peru and Ecuador.

Three ads were inserted in the best Spanish newspaper of New York, "La Prensa," and this paper also gave us three very nice write-ups. Everyone was unanimous in saying that this evening was one of the finest of its type that we have had in New York.

The Inca Evening is to be followed by a Mexican Evening on March 26 at which time it will be announced that those who have been attending these various Latin American programs and are interested in knowing more about the Bahá’í faith can attend a special weekly study class which will be given in both Spanish and English.
As a suggestion to other Centers attempting this variety of program, we would like to say that the success has been due to the building up of a good mailing list, proper advertising, and careful preparation so that each of these affairs is a finished professional job. These Assemblies will find that the travel bureaus are very helpful in offering material for such evenings, and that in many cities where there are consulates, help can be obtained from this agency also.

MILDRED R. MOTTAKEDH, Chairman

Temple Guides Committee

The following report presents the activities of this Committee for the months of September, October, November and December, 1941:

The following are statistics on visitors to the Temple for the last four months of 1941:

- In September the total number of visitors was 2,630, which was greater than any number that previously visited in September. These came from 39 states, the District of Columbia, Winnipeg and Manitoba, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Uruguay, Straits Settlements, Monterey and Mexico City, Mexico, the Philippines and Puerto Rico. Included among the September visitors were the following organizations, each of which attended as a group:
  - 22 members Women's Society, Lutheran Church, Waukegan, III.
  - 40 members Chicago Ass'n of the Blind.
  - 12 students National College of Education, Evanston, III.
  - 51 members Women's Society, 1st M. E. Church, Waukegan, III.

- In October, in spite of the heavy rains, the total number of visitors was 1,782. These came from 33 states and from Jamaica, British West Indies, and Mexico. Attending in a group were these organizations:
  - 28 students National College of Education, Evanston, III.
  - 12 public school pupils, Western Springs, III.
  - 109 members Art Institute, Chicago.
  - 20 soldiers, Fort Sheridan, III.
  - 20 Zeta Tau Alpha Alumni, Chicago Area.
  - 57 Senior Class, College of Civil Engineering, Univ. of Illinois.
  - 40 delegates to U. S. Postmasters' Convention, Evanston, III.

- In November there were 847 from 22 states, the District of Columbia, Windsor and Winnipeg, Canada, Vienna, Austria, and Manila, P. I. Organizations visiting were:
  - 39 youth Union Church, Kenilworth, Ill.
  - 21 youth Congregation Israel, Glencoe, Ill.
  - 13 members Unitarian Church, Hinsdale, Ill.

- In December there were 427—a large number for this cold month. They came from 14 states, District of Columbia, Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada, and from Brussels, Belgium. The only organization visiting was:
  - 9 members Class in History of Religion, College of Naperville, Naperville, Ill.

The number of Sunday visitors in September and October was much greater than in previous years, the larger attendance numbers including, per Sunday, 490, 488, 383, 294, 378, and 218 as examples.

Messages From the Guardian

1. To the 1942 Convention

Last phase (of) Seven Year Plan so auspiciously begun, so vigorously prosecuted, (is) opening. (The) first Bahá’í Century (is) fast running out. (The) agonies (of a) travelling age (are) culminating. (The) Báb’s stirring, unique injunction, directing (the) peoples (of the) West (to) leave their cities (to) insure (the) triumph (of the) Divine Cause (was) recorded (a) century age (in) the Qayyúmi-Asmá’i Bahá’u’lláh’s significant summons calling upon all (the) Presidents (of the) Republics (of the) western hemisphere (to) champion (the) Cause (of) Justice (was) issued seventy years ago (in) His Most Holy Book. (The) broad outlines (of) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s matchless design, conceived twenty-five years ago (for the) benefit (of the) North American believers, (was) transmitted (to) posterity (in the) Tablets (of the) Divine Plan. (The) Seven Year Enterprise, regarded (as the) initial stage (in) the execution (of a) World Mission, (has been) already launched. (The) gigantic Temple undertaking, constituting (the) major obligation (of) this enterprise, (has been) virtually consummated. (The) vast Intercontinental Teaching Campaign (is) visibly yielding first fruits (in) every Republic (of) Latin America. Upon (the) crucial year ahead hinge (the) fortunes (of this) historic crusade. From Alaska to Chile, (the) Americas (are) astir (with the) leavening influences (of the) rising Order (of the) newborn Revelation. (The) great Republic (of the) West (is) inescapably swept (into the) swelling tide (of the) world tribulations, presaging (the) assumption (of a) preponderating share (in the) establishment (of the) anticipated Lesser Peace. Invisible hosts (are) marshalled, eager (to) rush forth (and) crown every effort, however humble, however belated, exerted (to) speed (the) unfinished tasks. Again (I) renew plea (for) closer communion (with the) Spirit (of) Bahá’u’lláh, (for) more passionate resolve, (for) more abundant flow (of) material resources, (and for) wider dispersion, intenser concentration, by (a) still greater number (of) pioneers, settlers (and) itinerant teachers (to) insure for (the) Plan (a) termination commensurate (with and) wondrous as (the) exploits marking (the) opening decade (of) first Bahá’í Century. Myself deprived (of) personal participation (in the) task allotted (to the) prosecutors (of the) epoch-making Plan, (I am) impelled (to) deputize five members (of the) American Bahá’í community (to) help fulfill (in) my behalf whatsoever pioneer field (is) most vital (to) its urgent requirements. Pledging (five thousand dollars (for) accomplishment (of) this purpose.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Cablegram received April 26, 1942.

2. To the National Spiritual Assembly

Rejoice (in the) formation (of the) new Assemblies. Extend cordial welcome. Praying still greater success. Urge concentration (on) potential Assemblies, particularly (in) States (and) Provinces where none exist.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Cablegram received April 30, 1942.

Welcome renewed determination reflected (by) Assembly. Praying befitting discharge (of its) solemn, urgent responsibilities. Love.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Cablegram received May 5, 1942
First copy (of The) Bahá’í World received. Deepest loving appreciation (to) all contributors (for this) magnificent production.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Cablegram received May 12, 1942.

3. To Officers of the N. S. A.

He also hopes that the National Assembly, aided by the Teaching and Inter-America Committees, will strengthen the work of the pioneers and exert their utmost endeavor that they not only remain at their posts, but that new ones go out to strengthen and reinforce the work.

It is hard to conceive of a time which will demand greater dedication and sacrifice, endurance and courage, than the period at present ahead of the American Bahá'ís. All those noble traits of dedication and eagerness to devote all their energy to promoting the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh, which they have increasingly demonstrated these past years, must now rise to meet the challenge of the ordeal which they now, in common with the vast majority of their fellowmen, must support and pass through.

(From letter dated December 21, 1941, written through his secretary, to Allen B. McDaniel)

The prosecution and completion of the task to which the American believers have pledged themselves must be insured, despite and in the very midst of the ordeal which they are now facing. The greater the anguish which this ordeal must entail, the more formidable the obstacles it will raise, the more meritorious their achievement, and the greater the spiritual power which their enterprises must and will exert in the future. I will pray that their efforts will be crowned with success that will cause the whole Bahá'í world to marvel.

It does indeed seem strange that people who have seen literally prophecy after prophecy fulfilled, and all that the Bahá'ís were led to anticipate, come to pass, still remain veiled from the reality of the Faith and spiritually lethargic. How deeply they will rue their lost opportunity when once their eyes become open!

Shoghi Effendi hopes that the N. S. A. and Teaching Committee are meeting with a wider response to the call for pioneers and teachers. The American believers have carried on with such enthusiasm and devotion, and established such a record, that now all the Bahá'ís of the world over have the impression that they can do almost anything! They must exceed their own past records for speed and accomplishment in order to triumph in the Seven Year Plan.

The Spirit of the Convention

The Divine Cause moves majestically onward, enlightening darkened horizons; diffusing its fragrances over vast regions; raising with full faith and confidence, the Call of God; pointing the Way.

Whenever two or more Bahá'ís meet there are signs of eternal fellowship. But especially significant of spiritual attraction and power are these annual gatherings which draw together remote regions of the Earth into harmonious and loving brotherhood, through their chosen representatives. Such was the Thirty-Fourth Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada, which had both the seen and unseen Favor of God. The place was the foundation hall of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, Dawning Place of the Mentions of God, and the time overlapped the end of the Ridván period, the great Festival which commemorates the Declaration of Bahá'u'lláh, a period of supreme happiness throughout the Bahá'í world.

Contact with influential people outside of the orbit of the Faith brings to light their increasing respect and reverence for the Bahá'í. The quiet, unobtrusive dignity, large-heartedness and sincerity of the friends, their patience and steadfastness through the period of derision and scorn, the marvelous beauty unfolded with the progress of Temple construction, have all been factors in this changed attitude in the greater Chicago area.

A National Broadcast June 14

The National Radio Committee informs the friends that Mrs. Lethia C. Fleming of the Cleveland Bahá'í community is to be the guest speaker on the Wings Over Jordan program Sunday morning, June 14. Her subject is “Beauty and Harmony in Diversity” from one of 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s talks.

This program is given over the CBS stations throughout the country. The hour differs from East to West, but the central time is 9:30 a.m.

This important occasion will not only be of great interest to believers but an excellent opportunity to bring the Bahá'í message to the attention of friends. The Committee suggests that Bahá'ís write appreciative letters to the station after the talk.

Race Unity Banquet

A prelude to the Convention was the Race Unity Banquet the evening before, held in the Chicago Woman's Club and seating about two hundred and seventy-five among the most talented people of Chicago and its environs. It was sponsored by the National Spiritual Assembly, with its program and arrangements worked out jointly by the National Race Unity committee and Chicago Assembly. Mrs. Dorothy K. Baker, Chairman of the National Race Unity Committee, presided and following the pleasing repast, introduced about a score of speakers for short addresses. The chairman herself voiced hearty welcome to all, extending the warm greetings of the National body which had delegated two of its members to attend, in view of its own enforced absence. The scene of the banquet was one of harmony and beauty in diversity. Two American Indians, one of whom spoke in English and the other in his native tongue; a Chinese; a local American journalist who formerly worked in Japan; an Esperantist who spoke in the tongue that seeks world service; two very prominent colored editors, who gave unqualified approval to Bahá'í ideals and working plans; a Latin American representative; three Persians of rank and various Bahá'í speakers, whose golden glow of heavenly teachings inspired all, were among the high lights of this beautiful setting. Besides all this, a rich musical program presented by a variety of artists from many groups, augmented the pleasure of entertainment and instruction. Although this banquet is now an annual event, this particular effort seemed to mark the spring tide of such noble endeavors serving the world of humanity.

The Convention Begins

The Convention's first and successive days were enriched by the early morning prayers and readings, selections especially made for their beauty and creative power. A spiritual atmosphere is the best incentive to work.

Allen B. McDaniel, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, calling the convention to order, expressed in feeling terms the blessed privilege of being identified with service in this the ninety-ninth year of the Bahá'í era, now begun. Elation was expressed over the completion of five years of the Seven Year Plan and confidence that the western heirs of the Dawn-Breakers would overcome the tears and ordeals which the future may bring and, through Divine Favor, pave the way for the coming of the Most Great Peace.

The convention organized with the election of George O. Latimer as chairman and Horace Holley, secretary. The first roll-call showed a majority of the delegates present, with about two-thirds answering later calls.

The secretary read the Guardian's cablegram to the Convention, which is reprinted in this issue of Bahá'í News.

The Convention, after due consideration, cabled the Guardian as follows: "Delegates, friends grateful, overjoyed your soul-stirring message and bounty bestowed, example set for American Bahá'í community. With hearts overflowing with love (we) long to lighten your burden. Resolved rededicate ourselves (with) intense concentration (on the) accomplishment (of the) goal. Supplicating your prayers."

The world currents and influence of the convention may be illustrated in part by inspiring and beautiful greetings received by wire or cable from Allentown, Pa.; La Paz, Bolivia; Rutland, Vt.; San Francisco, Calif.; San José, Costa Rica; Laramie, Wyoming; Anchorage, Alaska; Pentwater, Mich.; Beverly, Mass.; East Orange, N. J.; Birmingham, Ala.; Honolulu, H. I.; Denver, Colo.; Seattle, Wash.; Plainville and Wrentham, Mass.; Westmount, Montreal, Canada.

Early on the first day, the passing of Mr. Ben Taylor of Cincinnati, one of the oldest Bahá'ís in service, was announced and the convention paused in silence while prayers for the departed were read.

National Secretary Reports

The National secretary presented his supplementary annual report, setting forth various activities not previously mentioned.

The approach of the Contacts Committee to a thousand prominent Americans, through letters and excerpts from the Sacred Writings; the Race Unity Banquet under National Auspices; the availability to the friends of photostat copies of the Wills of Bahá'u'lláh and of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, at small cost; the formation of new Assemblies and restoration of others; the organization of five new centers in Latin America; the increasing effectiveness of regional committees among isolated believers and the service rendered by the Bulletin; the activities of the Race Unity Committee in carrying the message to seventy Colleges; Bahá'í schools and their expanding curricula; the activities of the Radio and Children's committees; the various messages from the Guardian, the belief, relayed from the Orient and gaining ground in that area, "that American Bahá'ís can accomplish anything;" the burial of two famous Bahá'ís, Mirzâ Abul Fazl and Lua M. Getsinger, in a Bahá'í cemetery in Egypt, and assurance that the grace and bounty of the Holy Spirit descends to pure hearts, were the features of this luminous report.

The National Treasurer

Next came the National Treasurer, with an exhortation not to lean upon the past, but to be alive to the duty of today and the joy of sacrifice. One hundred percent of cooperation would make all things possible. While the Treasurer's homily continued in this strain, with expression of regret that the annual budget was still thousands short — his faithful assistant, who was stationed at a favored spot, brought him the joyful news that during the brief session of the convention the budget deficit had not only been made up, but receipts now put the annual budget a thousand or more dollars over the top! Thus the tears of the Treasurer were turned into laughter, in which the delegates heartily joined. The convention registers outpourings in ways more than one!

National Teaching

This was especially a teaching convention and the National Teaching Committee, a body noted for great devotion and efficiency, had its interesting and thrilling time of demonstration. They gave a graphic picture of the vast field of action, supported by names of workers and statistics, showing the victories of the past five years and the need of more intensive and sustained efforts during the residuum of two, during which the completion of the Seven Year Plan as outlined by the Guardian, puts a responsibility upon every soul. The destiny of mankind is affected by these efforts, since only the Divine Relief can assuage universal suffering. The call of the Guardian some years ago for nine souls to volunteer brought a response from eighty-one. Now there is an urgent call for sixteen to do pioneer service, the yet unfinished task. Who will hear and heed this call?

This report precipitated a prolonged discussion in which many futile suggestions of methods and approach, wisdom, sacrifice, the eloquence of deeds above words, prayerfulness, service, harmony, intense concentration, etc. received warm and earnest mention. Some of those willing to fill the needed quota were found present. So the appeal is heard and the work progresses.

The convention gave a cordial welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Habib Sabet and their two children, visitors from Iran. Another distinguished visitor was Senor Pedro Espinoza, of the Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City who is most enthusiastic over the spread of the teachings in that great country, which already has a good teaching unit.

Inter America Teaching

This great arm of service made an inspiring report of the teaching work in various Latin American countries, all of which requires tact, wisdom and perseverance. Mention was made of many brave souls, who are overcoming unusual difficulties and are attracting by Divine Favor, the hearts.

The matter of obtaining passports, visas, transportation is not easy at such a time of upheaval. It is the duty of every believer to support this great campaign. A wealth of the Creative Words, bearing upon teaching gave many quotations. The freedom of South Americans from racial prejudice is in their favor in accepting the teachings. The Inter America School plays a noble part in training teachers. Mr. and Mrs. Rafi Y. Mottahedeh gave an interesting account of their flying trip to South America for teaching.

The Temple

The Temple supervising engineer, Mr. McDaniel, whose gratuitous and faithful services have been a bounty to the friends over so long a period of years, spoke happily of the dream-reality now become a physical fact. The epic of transformation, from the ugliness of the undressed foundation to the temple's present loveliness, struck a poetic vein. The work of completing the two remaining faces, to go forward simultaneously with that on the two miles of steps started May 18. The former will be completed in about two months, the latter by November. The steps will be of the same material as the rest of the Temple.

The designs for interior decoration, purchased years ago from Mrs. Bourgeois, are now with the Guardian. The inscriptions over the doors will eventually become visible so as to be read at a reasonable distance. How great is the victory that temple construction should go forward during the years of world-wide depression and amidst the greatest upheaval known to mankind. On Mr. McDaniel's suggestion a word of loving appreciation was sent Mr. John A. Earley, with prayers for his early recovery.

Annual Election

At the time appointed, and following Bahá'í procedure, the election was held for the new National Spiritual Assembly. This resulted, by report of the tellers in the re-election of the former body. The tellers who spent several hours in counting the ballots were voted the thanks of the convention. The new national body was later announced by Mr. Holley, organized as follows: Allen B. McDaniel, chairman; George O. Latimer, vice-chairman; Horace Holley, secretary; Louis G. Gregory, recording secretary; Roy C. Wilhel, treasurer; Siegfried Schopf, assistant treasurer; Dorothy K. Baker, Leroy Loeas and Amelia E. Collins.

The Southern Field

The cooperative services of the Race Unity and Southern Regional Committees was an interesting phase of the convention story. Brave pioneers and itinerant teachers in their efforts to spread the teachings in a region largely fundamentalist in religion and reactionary in race-relations are meeting with notable successes. Slow but quite marked progress is made. The first definite instructions of the Guardian about the work in the South, to wit, that teachers in that region should consult with the minority group, find out from them who are the liberals among the majority, and then proceed with teaching, is fraught with divine wisdom and if followed would greatly facilitate the progress of the cause. The world is now in a state of rapid change and those who are just and are genuinely interested in human welfare are obviously the most likely to be attracted by the Great Message.

The chairman of the Race Unity Committee spoke of her committee's purpose, under instructions of the Guardian, to reach as many minority groups as possible. We are not to let old traditions guide us; nor let discredited ideas and leadership swerve us from service. Strike out into new paths and pursue new ideals under the Supreme Guidance of Bahá'u'lláh.

Firmness in the Covenant

The most important task of teaching firmness in the Covenant and avoiding association with Covenant-breakers, was assigned Albert R. Windust, chairman of the Spiritual Assembly and veteran Bahá'í of Chicago. His was one of the ablest elucidations of the subject ever made on such an occasion, replete with illustrations and authorities quoted. Covenant-breakers, animated by pride and disobedience, attack the principle of Prophetic succession and direct their bitter hatred against the appointed Center or Guardian of the Cause. Quoting the memorable words of the Master:

"They are indeed counted as dead. And the dead disintegrate and spread infection."  "He that sits with leper catches leprosy."

In the region of Chicago there is a man who for perhaps forty years has carried on a one-man propaganda, trying to show that Subhi Ezel, the apostate half-brother, and not Bahá'u'lláh, was the rightful successor of the Bahá! Behold how obstinacy and absurdity march together in this strange and impossible mind! Other Covenant-breakers, professing loyalty, attacked the Master. Others in the same way, because he has balked their greed and corruption, now attack our Guardian, although pretending loyalty to the Master. Can the beetle love the rose or the bat the sunshine? Even the density and obstinacy of such souls have an effect the least suspected by themselves. Their futile efforts to destroy the Cause focus a searchlight upon their own motives which results in greater faith and higher attainments among united, loving and loyal friends.

Various Committees

The Radio committee reported broadcasts over a wide area which made use of one hundred and sixty-six stations. A planograph was distributed which equips workers to obtain a favorable hearing from broadcast station program directors.

The Publicity committee reported upon plans for press notices and appeals. The convention recommended the use of a publicity expert to aid this work.

The Contacts committee has a record of approaches by letter to many prominent people. It is not too much to hope that at no distant day, many very clever people will be drawn into the Faith.

The Archives and History Committee gave explanation of the Sacred relics displayed on the walls.

The Exhibits Committee offered the Temple itself as the greatest exhibit. Two beautiful pictures of it, made by Carl Scheffler, adorned the walls. In the corridors were impressive exhibits of practically all the various committees, with many pictures, charts and explanations.

The Study Outline Committee reported, among various labors, an outline for the study of Islam. Now available to the friends.

The various school committees, Green Acre, Geyersville, Louhelen and International unfolded the expanding curricula of their scientific and spiritual training.

The Child Education Committee reported progress in that fascinating field of work.

The chairman whose genial spirit both guided and entertained the delegates, brought its business sessions to its close by a prayer read by Mrs. Sarah Walrath.

Prior to this however, the Assembly Development Committee had a hearing which was improved to impress the progress of the Cause which would be very rapid through a full functioning and active administration, as a stimulus, guide and guard in each and every center. A strong, virile, Spiritual Assembly makes a live, active community.

El Ridván

This greatest of all Baha’i festivals was observed on Friday evening of the convention. It was arranged by the Spiritual Assembly of Milwaukee, whose chairman presided. First came the reading of Tablets of Baha’u’llah addressed to Kings, Statesmen and important personages of the world. Then came an address by Mr. Habib Sabet, visitor from Iran, whose quaint humor and powers of description drew a vivid contrast yet oneness of spirit between East and West. Miss Elsie Austin presented the Baha’i teachings in language of such originality, spirituality and charm as to attract all hearts.

Ali-Kuli Khan, N. D. was at his best, giving with rare eloquence a spiritual and philosophical explanation of the meaning of Ridván. The Baha’i friends were very inspired and happy, a state that was shared by the visiting friends.

Public Teaching Meeting

Carl Scheffler was happy as chairman. Mrs. Loulie A. Matthews presented “The House we live in.” That house, she said, is your identity. It must be in order and lighted by faith. As with the individual so must it be with the nation and the world. She then related the stories of the Bab and Baha’u’llah and their successive calls to mankind. A bright future for America is indicated and all were invited to enter the Divine Cause as the Realm of Life.

Mr. Ali M. Yazdi, third generation Baha’i, spoke on “The Challenge of the Times.” He said in part: We become aware of values by losses. Now, while mankind suffers, is the time to do good work. We must build real harmony out of the false unity created by wars, a new world designed for peace. This means one world neighborhood and the coordination of all human endeavors. Baha’u’llah has revealed to us the plan. Life will become a noble and exciting adventure under His New World Order. To live in this day is a privilege from God. We witness the birth of an age for which men have longed.

Summary

The convention is now a bright memory. But it is certain that its influence lives and grows. The bounties from the Abha Kingdom descended in such abundance as to inspire gratitude and reverence in hearts. Those who witnessed the difficulties of the past year may well marvel at the victory’s magnitude, due to the secret forces of Celestial Strength. Divine Promises give the assurance of greater victories.

May we not cherish the hope that the love, loyalty and approved activities of the American friends may be as a magnet, divinely charged, to attract ere long, the presence in our midst of our well-beloved Guardian? His coming at some time is indicated. At such a time as he deigns to make the journey, the Temple of God, in its transcendent beauty, will welcome him. A thousand and homes will offer him service. Thousands of hearts gladdened by his presence, will overflow with love. Ten thousand times ten thousand minds will be enlightened by his mature wisdom.

LOUIS G. GREGORY, Convention Reporter

The Sixth Year of the Seven Year Plan

Beloved Friends:
The Guardian has inaugurated the last phase of the Seven Year Plan by his cablegram of April 26 addressed to the Convention. The delegates and Bahá’í friends present at the Convention felt themselves inspired and renewed by the experience of dedication to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. As from a throbbing heart, the potent impulse generated in that experience has been communicated throughout the American Bahá’í community—to the Assemblies, to the believers, to the local and National Committees.

It is for us now to direct this holy and passionate zeal into definite undertakings for the fulfillment of the Seven Year Plan. We have but two years in which to make our individual and collective effort and reveal the degree of our longing to serve His Cause.

Important projects are already under way, for both the Inter-America and National Teaching Committees held continuous consultation with volunteer teachers and pioneers during the Convention period, and the incoming National Spiritual Assembly acted at once on the recommendations prepared by these two Committees.

In its successive messages to the friends in Bahá’í News, the National Spiritual Assembly will concentrate on the vital needs and steps of progress in the teaching work and in the Temple construction, and report the condition of the National Fund in relation to the current annual budget.

Annual Budget

1. Teaching, including North and South America and providing for all Committees related to teaching work or teaching facilities $50,000

2. Temple construction, to provide all necessary funds for completion of main story exter- ornal ornamentation, for the surrounding steps, and for payment of balance due on work done in 1941 40,000

3. Administrative expense, including all Committees not financed from the budget for teaching, the Convention, Bahá’í News, etc. 20,000

4. Maintenance of Bahá’í Trustee properties, including insurance, taxes, repairs and caretaking 20,000

5. Repayment of balance due on loan incurred in 1940 for Temple construction 14,000

6. Reserve for contingent items 6,000

TOTAL $150,000

In announcing this budget, the National Spiritual Assembly must again emphasize the basic importance of the National Fund as the “life blood” of our unified Bahá’í activity, and the symbol of our sacrifice to the common goal. The individual believer is urged to ponder his own responsibility, and the local Assembly is requested to present the needs of the Fund at meetings of community consultation.

Temple Construction

On Monday, May 18, work was resumed at the House of Worship. The plan is to complete the last two main story faces and the steps by November, 1942, thus exemplifying the Guardian’s words in his Convention message: “The gigantic Temple undertaking, constituting the major obligation of this enterprise, has been virtually consummated.”

Photographs illustrating the progress of the work will be published as frequently as possible in Bahá’í News. All the materials, including the carved castings, are in readiness, and the final responsibility of the Bahá’í community in this historic undertaking is to meet the construction expense set forth in the budget. For details, consult the article in Bahá’í News for February, 1942.

North America Teaching

Last January the friends were given in Bahá’í News two maps showing the unsettled States and Provinces of North America. Twenty-three States, six Provinces, and the Territory of Alaska were listed. Now, from reports of local elections held April 21, it becomes possible to remove from that list the following areas: Louisiana, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia. But New Mexico has since been placed on the occupied list.

This leaves twenty States, three Provinces and Alaska to settle with a Spiritual Assembly by 1944.

In January there were twenty-four dissolved Assemblies to be restored. The recent elections restored the Assemblies of Moncton and St. Lambert, Canada, Lansing, Michigan, and Salt Lake City, Utah, but transferred Brookline, Massachusetts, to the number of Assemblies gone out of existence. All the election reports are not yet received, but the full and final Assembly roll for 1942-1943 will be published next month.

Latin America Teaching

As stated elsewhere in this issue, seven new cities and one existing Assembly reported this year, and reports are awaited from two other Assemblies, making a total of ten local Spiritual Assemblies.

This comes to us as impressive evidence of the spiritual power which the devotion of the pioneers and the energy and planning of the Committee has released in the Inter-Continental teaching field.

Plans are under way to settle pioneer teachers in Venezuela, Columbia and Brazil, while Dr. Malcolm King of Milwaukee has arisen to volunteer to settle in Jamaica two years for teaching activity. A detailed survey of current work will be reported next month.

“Again I Renew Pleas”

The Guardian’s message identifies each of us with the full success of the teaching work. “Invisible hosts are marshalled, eager to rush forth and crown every effort, however humble, however belated, exerted to speed the unfinished tasks. Again I renew pleas for closer communion with the Spirit of Bahá’u’lláh, for more passionate resolve, for more abundant flow of material resources, and for wider dispersion, intenser concentration, by a still greater number of pioneers, settlers and itinerant teachers to insure for the Plan a termination commensurate with and wondrous as the exploits marking the opening decade of the first Bahá’í Century.’ ”

The all-loving Father, Bahá’u’lláh, offers His children the supreme heavenly Gift—the privilege of sacrificing themselves for the Cause of God. We will search the whole world over and find nothing in palaces, universities, factories or legislatures to compare with the blessing bestowed upon the Bahá’ís. Pure intention, heroism, spiritual knowledge—every form of capacity any believer may possess in any degree—are in these days to be fulfilled, assuring to the faithful servants an eternal blessing.

Centering our firm vision upon the radiant goal, assured of success, rejuvenated in spirit, may we redouble our effort to accomplish definite tasks in this, “the crucial year ahead” upon which “hinge the fortunes” of the Divine Plan.

National Spiritual Assembly

Annual Election

The election held Friday, May 1, 1942, resulted in the following vote for members of the National Spiritual Assembly:

Horace Holley, 131; Louis G. Gregory, 125; Roy C. Wilhelm, 115; Mrs. Dorothy Baker, 112; Allen B. McDaniel, 110; Siegfried Schopflocher, 100; George O. Latimer, 98; Leroy Icas, 85; Mrs. Amelia E. Collins, 84.

These members organized by the election of the following officers:

Allen B. McDaniel, Chairman; George O. Latimer, Vice Chairman; Horace Holley, Secretary; Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer; Louis G. Gregory, Recording Secretary; Siegfried Schopflocher, Assistant Treasurer.

Newly-Established and Restored Assemblies

The result of teaching efforts made last year has been gratifying in the number of new Assemblies established and former Assemblies restored to the roll.

This adds fourteen Assemblies to the number of established Bahá’í Communities, and from the unoccupied areas it removes the following States and Provinces: New Orleans, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia.

The Bahá’ís of Snohomish County, Washington, also formed an Assembly, but the recognition of such a large area for a local Assembly has raised an important administrative principle which has been referred to the Guardian. If the Guardian directs the National Assembly to accept this county community, the number of new Assemblies elected on April 21, 1942, will be eleven instead of ten.

Latin-American Assemblies

The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh has made remarkable progress and achieved signal victories in Central and South America in the fourth year of the Seven Year Plan.

It is a great privilege to announce that election reports have been received from eight cities.

These reports have made it possible to recognize the Spiritual Assemblies now existing in the following cities:

Montevideo, Uruguay; Tegucigalpa, Honduras; Port au Prince, Haiti; Havana, Cuba; Puntarenas, Costa Rica; San Salvador, El Salvador; Mexico, D. F.; and Puebla, Pue., Mexico. To these eight Assemblies may doubtless be added the two Assemblies existing last year—Buenos Aires, Argentina, and San Jose, Costa Rica—whose current election reports have not yet been received.

The Assembly of Puntarenas was developed by teachers from San Jose, and the Assembly of Puebla by Sr. Pedro Espinosa of Mexico City, showing how much can be expected of the new friends in Latin America as their numbers increase and they are supplied with comprehensive selections from the teachings in their native tongue.

The Crucial Year Ahead

Already the sixth year of our Plan is rushing on its way. Almost three months have vanished from the “crucial year ahead” on which, Shoghi Effendi has cabled, “hinge (the) fortunes (of this) historic crusade.” Those who attended the Convention have now returned to their home communities, bearing the sober news of immense teaching requirements, the recognition of which implanted in every delegate an urgent resolve to “speed (the) unfinished tasks.”

The nature of these tasks was clearly defined during the Convention sessions. In North America we learned of the formation in April, 1942, of eleven Spiritual Assemblies, seven in virgin territories, thereby bringing the total of remaining virgin States and Provinces to twenty-four. Included were three disbanded Assemblies, leaving twenty-three yet to be re-established. To complete this gigantic work the National Teaching Committee asked for six... in the Convention sessions, seeking and finding beneath the dome of our wondrous Temple a fresh spirit with which to conquer the obstacles ahead, can never doubt that victory awaits us in 1944, if we but take the steps that lead to victory. Is not the path to be found in these words of our Guardian: “Invisible hosts (are) marshalled, eager (to) rush forth (and) crown every effort, however humble, however belated, exerted (to) speed (the) unfinished tasks.”

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

Inter-America News

Publicity

The Cause is receiving the most gratifying publicity in the publications of both Central and South America, and many clippings are coming in which we are preserving as an historical record. These clippings show the wisdom and tact with which our pioneers are using and evidence, by the amount of space involved, the willingness of the Press to present our purpose and carefully composed articles telling of the work of the pioneers.

Recently an article appeared in a magazine in Havana, and while not entirely correct, it was intended to be friendly and interested. John Stearns has sent us some copies of the Voice of Ecuador in which his article appeared in both Spanish and English, whereupon we promptly subscribed for the Magazine feeling that our interest might be helpful in fostering continental unity.

Cuba

A most enthusiastic letter has recently been received from Josephine Kruka telling of the celebration of Youth Day in the Baha'í Center in Havana which has resulted in the formation of a study class of young people who are very eager to learn of the Faith. Before Youth Day Miss Kruka had already established a small class for young people of from ten to seventeen years which was meeting with the greatest success.

San Domingo

Margaret Lentz also observed Youth Day with a party which was attended by a large group of young students, some of whom are living in the same house where she is, and this, too, will result in a study class. She was really overwhelmed by the reception which they gave to her suggestions and the appreciation of her hospitality.

Puerto Rico

San Juan is certainly blest since now it has six American pioneers residing there. Beside Rouhiyyih Jones and Mrs. Katherine Disdier, Mrs. Guthrie, Mrs. Manangella and Mr. and Mrs. McComb have taken up their residence in San Juan and are assisting in the activities of the community in Red Cross work and social welfare. This is a splendid way to become acquainted and to demonstrate the Baha'i love for humanity and willingness to be of assistance wherever possible.

Chile

Mrs. Marcia Atwater arrived in California on March 13 from Santiago by plane since her health had suffered somewhat from the change of climate. Mrs. Atwater is radiant about the growth of the Faith in Chile and the unity which is coming about in the country itself which is subject for comment everywhere there. She will return in a short time and will remain indefinitely there where now the work is extending to Valparaiso as well as Antofagasta and other cities. A great deal of publicity has been given to the Faith and some of the foremost writers and educators have evidenced their interest in most gratifying statements. Mrs. Atwater has brought quantities of clippings as well as many fine translations of the Baha'i Writings in Spanish. There are now four native Chileans pioneering in various parts of the country.

Argentina

A letter from the chairman of the Assembly of Buenos Aires has written for fifty registration blanks as they wish to make a new list of membership. We are not sure whether this means that there are now fifty members, but the number looks very promising and the zeal of the friends there is wonderful.

Panama

Our two pioneers in Ancon have now realized their hearts' desire since recently they have been reinforced by the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hamilton who are going to reside in Cristobal and thus they can meet and study together even though they are not in the same city.

Venezuela

Priscilla Rhoads writes that there are openings for young people in Caracas if they have some profession. She says that all the work is done by young people and we are very eager to see other pioneers there at once. After the Guardian’s last cable we are confidently expecting applications to come in!

Costa Rica

There are now two beautiful magazines of the highest order whose columns are open to the Faith. Alma Tica magazine has for months been bringing out articles accompanied by photographs of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the Temple and the first Spiritual Assembly in Costa Rica; but now the Repertorio Americano of Sr. Joaquín García Monje, which is a leading literary publication with wide circulation, will print articles in both Spanish and English on the Cause and Mrs. Woolson will write for it. Alma Tica Magazine is edited by Señora de LaFrank who is a member of the Spiritual Assembly and in no other publication that we know has the Cause been so beautifully presented.

Due to the extension work which has been done by the San José believers themselves there is to be a second Spiritual Assembly in Costa Rica in the city of Puntarenas. This certainly is cause for rejoicing. The friends in San José hope that the beautiful magazines may find interest among the believers in this country. Since they are published in Spanish and English, this committee will be glad to furnish particulars.

Honduras

The 21st of April has seen the formation of a Spiritual Assembly in Tegucigalpa where John Eichenauer is now working. John sends “miles” of newspaper clippings from various parts of the Republic and recently the arrival of John’s brother Marshall who, he says, is there on a visit, has been the occasion of another burst of newspaper publicity which is something splendid. John has visited many of the towns in Honduras and success attends him everywhere.

San Salvador

Clarence Iverson writes that he has recently officiated at the dedication of a new organ in one of the churches and that the priest has asked him to teach music. He says the priest knows he is a Bahá’í but that “he doesn’t seem to mind.”

Bolivia

Mrs. Adler, who returned from Bolivia last August, left three ardent believers in La Paz and Flora Hottes, who went there some weeks ago as the latest of our pioneers, will surely augment the number. She is a librarian by profession and will try to introduce some work for children’s books there.

Literature

We are advised by the National Assembly that a copy of The Bahá’í World, vol. VIII, has been sent to the largest Public Library in each of the Latin American countries. We are also to distribute copies in Spanish of the Obligatory Prayers, and the “Basis of Bahá’í Community.” The Spanish translation of the “Dispensation” is now with the Publishing Committee and is awaited with great eagerness. We are grieved that we cannot produce the French and Portuguese translations also at this time.

Copies of our State Department’s certification of the Declaration of Trust and By-Laws have been sent to our pioneers as a further evidence of their credentials in case of need.

We sincerely regret that space does not permit us to write more fully of all the fine reports we receive but the friends are assured of the wonderful growth of the Faith in the field we represent.

Schedule of Meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly
All meetings during the current year will be held at the Hazíratu'l-Quds, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois. On account of the increasing difficulty of the problem of transportation, and for the sake of economy in travel expense as well as the time of the members, the schedule adopted calls for longer meetings, with a slightly larger interval between meetings.

The current schedule, it will be noted, contains five more days of business sessions than would be provided if the Assembly met for two days at monthly intervals. For most of the members, the schedule adopted calls for longer meetings, with a slightly larger interval between meetings.

May 2, 3, 4; June 12, 13, 14, 15; July 17, 18, 19, 20; September 11, 12, 13, 14; November 12, 13, 14, 15; January 8, 9, 10, 11, 1943; March 5, 6, 7, 8; April 27, 28.

Bulletins for Believers Subject to the Draft
Local Assemblies have received copies of two special bulletins, issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the information of the Bahá'ís who wish to apply for noncombatant service in connection with their draft questionnaire.

The first bulletin was dated March 21, 1942. In April, 1942 a second bulletin was distributed informing believers how to proceed with an appeal in the event that the local draft board denied them the status of noncombatant.

Each bulletin has also been sent to individual believers asking for copies, and a copy has also been filed with the Regional Teaching Committees to advise them in meeting questions from isolated friends.

In June, 1942, two more bulletins are being distributed, which deal with a change in the form of the draft questionnaire bringing the matter up to date for Bahá'ís of the United States.

The special committee has also drafted a bulletin for Canadian believers which will be distributed as soon as possible. The bulletins previously issued have not dealt with the subject in relation to Canadian statute and practice since that country has not had a compulsory draft.

To sum up: Assemblies in the United States have access to four bulletins and should study these in order to assist members of their community. These three bulletins will be sent to any isolated believer subject to the draft. In a brief time a special Canadian bulletin will be distributed to Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees of that country. Isolated believers of Canada subject to the draft will receive a copy on request.

Bahá'í Status for Believer in Military Service
From the Regional Teaching Committee of New England we have this excerpt from a letter written by Ashley King, now serving in the medical detachment at Lovell General Hospital, Fort Devens.

"Recently they decided to include our religion on the little identification tags we wear around our necks: 'P' for Protestant, 'C' for Catholic, 'J' for Jewish. They were somewhat at a loss what to do in my case. They kept suggesting that 'Bahá'ísm' must be an offshoot of one of the other three Faiths, but I insisted that it was independent but embraced them all, so finally they had the full word 'Bahá'í' printed on my tags . . . ."

Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá
Subject to any changes found necessary, the Committee has prepared the following program for the Annual Souvenir of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to be held at Evergreen Cabin, West Englewood, N. J., Saturday, June 27, the thirtieth annual gathering of Bahá'ís to commemorate the Unity Feast and address given by the Master in 1912.
2:30 p.m. to 3:20 p.m., Symphony orchestra; solos by Walter Olitski of the Metropolitan Opera Company.
3:30 to 4:30 the meeting: Theme—The Promised Day Is Come. Readings from the Master’s talk by the chairman, Philip Sprague. Address of welcome, Roy C. Wilhelm. Speakers to be announced.
4:45 to 5:00 p.m. Prayer meeting in the grove conducted by Mrs. Maud Gaudreaux.
5:15 p.m. Refreshments served at Evergreen Cabin.

1943 Convention
The next Annual Convention has been scheduled for the four-day period of April 29, 30, May 1 and 2, 1943.

Teaching Bulletin, “A World Faith”
The friends are reminded that the public teaching bulletin, formerly entitled A New World Order, now called A World Faith, is obtained from the National Bahá’í Office and not from the Publishing Committee. These leaflets are furnished at the rate of 50 for 50c, 100 for $1.00, etc. Make check or postal order payable to National Bahá’í Fund.

Cases of Mental Illness
In view of the fact that delegates raised at the Convention the question of how local Assemblies are to deal with believers who appear to suffer some degree of mental illness, the National Assembly wishes to advise the friends that this matter was referred to the Guardian some years ago.
His instruction, contained in a letter dated May 30, 1936, makes it clear that expert medical opinion is to be obtained, and that prayer alone is not sufficient.
"Regarding persons whose condition has not been defined by the civil authorities after medical diagnosis, the Assembly on the spot must investigate every case that arises and, after consultation with experts, deliver its verdict. Such a verdict, however, should, in important cases, be preceded by consultation with the N.S.A. No doubt, the power of prayer is very great, yet consultation with experts is enjoined by Bahá’u’lláh. Should these experts believe that an abnormal case exists, the withholding of voting rights is justified."

Temple Model Display at Phoenix
From Mrs. Miriam Bugby we have this interesting report:
"The first week the Model was flat in the window with the flowers around and we thought much more attractive than on the pedestal but we could not very well ask her to change it for the picture. However the picture is quite good.
"On Wednesday before the Youth meeting on Feb. 22nd, Adrienne talked over the radio, the announcer over K.P.H.O. introduced her: 'Miss Adrienne Ellis, Chairman of the Bahá’í Youth Group of Phoenix, will speak on The Architecture and Significance of the Bahá’í Temple which is being erected in Wilmette, Illinois, and dedicated to the promulgation of Universal religion and Universal Peace.'
"Her talk was lovely and the announcement at close was: 'A Model of this beautiful Temple is on display at 838 North Central Avenue.'
"Then he announced the Youth meeting by saying: 'The Bahá’í Youth of Phoenix will observe International Bahá’í Youth Day by presenting a Symposium on The Ideals of Bahá’í Youth on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 22nd, at 3 o’clock at the Young Women’s Christian Association club room. The public is cordially invited to attend.'
"They were very nice at K.P.H.O. and we were grateful for time on the air."

“The Prosecution of the World Mission”

A Letter from Shoghi Effendi

Dearly Beloved Co-Workers:

Viewed in the perspective of Bahá’í history, the Seven Year Plan, associated with the closing years of the First Bahá’í Century, will come to be regarded as the mightiest instrument yet forged, designed to enable the trustees of a firmly established, steadily evolving Administrative Order to complete the initial stage in the prosecution of the world mission confidently entrusted by the Center of the Covenant to His chosen disciples. The Divine Plan, thus set in operation, may be said to have derived its inspiration from, and been dimly foreshadowed in, the injunction so significantly addressed by Bahá’u’lláh to the Chief Magistrates of the American continent. It was prompted by the contact established by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Himself, in the course of His historic journey, with the entire body of His followers throughout the United States and Canada. It was conceived, soon after that contact was established, in the midst of what was then held to be one of the most devastating crises in human history. It underwent a period of incubation, after His ascension, while the machinery of a divinely appointed Administrative Order was being laboriously devised and its processes set in motion. Its initial operations were providentially made to synchronize with the final years of a century that witnessed the birth and rise of a Faith of which it is the direct consequence. The opening stage in its execution has been faced by, and will survive, the severe challenge of a crisis of still greater magnitude than that which baptized its birth. The conclusion of the first phase of its tremendous and irresistible unfoldment is now approaching. The hopes and aspirations of a multitude of believers, in both the East and the West, young and old, whether free or suppressed, hang on its triumphant consummation. The Temple itself, that fair incarnation of the soul of an unconquerable Faith, and the first fruit of the Plan now set in motion, stands in its silent beauty, ready to reinforce the strenuous endeavors of its prosecutors. Towering in grandeur and resplendent in its majesty it calls aloud incessantly for a greater, a far greater number of pioneers who, both at home and in foreign fields, will scatter to sow the Divine seeds and gather the harvest into its gates. The Author of the Plan Himself, looking down from His retreats above, and surveying the prodigious labors of His defeatless disciples, voices, with even greater insistence, the same call. The time in which to respond to it is relentlessly shortening. Let men of action seize their chance ere the swiftly passing days place it irretrievably beyond their reach.

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 1 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period May 4—June 30, 1942

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to present to the entire Bahá’í community of North America a definite and a continuous picture of the plans and activities undertaken this year for completing the unfinished task of the Seven Year Plan. There need be no time spent on appeals or explanations. Our spirits, our strength, our resources, are pledged to action and to action alone.

1. Recognition has been extended to 101 local Assemblies, with a possibility that the question involving the area of another Assembly can be settled in favor of its continuance, thus giving us 102 Spiritual Assemblies as the basis of the Administrative Order in the United States and Canada.

2. The National and Regional Committee appointments have been made for the year beginning July 1, 1942, and the list is published, with addressers for correspondence, in Bahá’í News for July. Each Committee list is accompanied by a brief description of its function, for the guidance of its members and the information of the believers. Our National and Regional Committees are instruments for activity of increasing scope and variety. Let us learn better how they can assist.

3. At the May and June meetings, the National Spiritual Assembly acted upon a great number of projects submitted by the National Teaching and Inter-America Committees. Not all such projects can be reported definitely at the time they are approved, because some are contingent upon later conditions, and many activities now contributing to the success of the Seven Year Plan are the result of projects initiated some months ago. Still more are being carried out by Regional Committees and by the Extension Committees of local Assemblies without need of specific approval.

4. The following teaching projects approved since the Convention, however, can be presented as a progress report, with fuller details in the form of news items later on:

- Eastern Canada Regional Teaching project for Ottawa; Mrs. Doris McKay, teaching in Prince Edward Island; Teaching Conference for Southern areas at Vogel Park; Mrs. Beulah Proctor, teaching in Halifax; Mrs. Annie Romer, teaching in Iowa; Mrs. Margaret Ellis, teaching in Jackson and Greenwood, Miss.; Mrs. Margarette Bruegger, teaching in the Dakota area; Mrs. Ruth Moffett, project in the Kansas-Missouri region; Wm. Kenneth Christian, teaching in Iowa; Mrs. Loulie Mathews and Mrs. Helen Bishop in Oregon.

5. Inter-America teaching projects have been planned and all possible preliminary steps taken for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Jamaica, Colombia, Venezuela, Nicaragua, Chile; and continued teaching activities arranged for Havana and San Domingo.

6. In order to stimulate the teaching activities with a powerful spiritual reinforcement, the National Assembly has authorized the publication of three special pamphlets as soon as possible. One to be a compilation of words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá; one to contain words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá; the third to include selections from the writings of the Guardian. The plan is to print a large quantity and make the cost low enough to free these compilations for widespread teaching use. Titles and price to be announced.

7. A special committee consisting of Mrs. Loulie Mathews and Mrs. Helen Bishop has made a general compilation of the Bahá’í Writings to be translated into Spanish for Inter-America teaching use. This project was initiated by the National Assembly in order to provide, in Spanish, a one-volume selection giving students and believers in Latin American countries access to the Teachings in their majesty and power. The translating work has begun. It is hoped that this work can appear before the end of 1942.

8. The exterior ornamentation of the main story faces of the House of Worship has been completed except for a few hours of work which are to be done at times when it will not interfere with the rapid progress of the work on the steps. One of the last two scaffolds can be taken down shortly, but the scaffolding with the hoist must remain in place until the steps are finished. The friends will go back over their files of Bahá’í News and trace the successive contracts under which the dome, clerestory, gallery, pylons and main story ornamentation have been completed, and to these contracts add those made necessary for grading the grounds and providing tunnels and areaways, they will be overjoyed at the contemplation of a tremendous task now complete except for the steps. May our joy be transmitted into increased determination to teach the Cause.

As of June 19, the total of the additional funds needed to finish the Temple construction work in the Seven Year Plan is estimated to be $25,757.53. This sum must come into the National Fund at the rate of about $5,000.00 per month from June 15 to October 15, that there may be no interruption this calendar year.

Any interruption of the contract this summer and early fall will mean a complete suspension for an indefinite period, probably a number of years, too late for the Seven Year Plan.

9. The resolutions voted by the Convention have been respectfully considered by the National Assembly, and definite decision made on each one. The record of the resolutions and the subsequent action is to be presented to the believers in Bahá’í News for August as the July number is taken up with the list of committees and other current items.

10. A summary of current financial items. From May 1 to June 30, the National Fund received $16,131.47. Contributions came in from 78 Assemblies, 70 groups and 79 isolated believers, in June. Expenditures included: for Temple construction, $7,232.95; National and Regional Teaching, $2,185.00; Inter-America Teaching, $1,263.53; Deputizations, $2,927.00; The Bahá’í World, Vol. VIII, $1,124.00.
With the inspired help of the “chosen disciples” of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, each progress report will present more and more record of action and accomplishment. From time to time the work of National Committees other than Teaching and Inter-America will be featured.

National Spiritual Assembly

Letters from the Guardian

The following excerpts are taken from a letter written by Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, to Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer, on May 15, 1942.

“The Convention response, as well as all the recent news from the U. S. A., have greatly encouraged him. He feels the strong, purposeful determination of the believers as well as of their representatives, to see the Plan through to complete victory. In view of his own burdens and cares, this greatly cheers him.

“He hopes that every available agency of the administration will be used to insure the speedy fulfilment of this year’s teaching requirements and that everything will be done to encourage new pioneers to volunteer and go forth while there is yet time. As he already pointed out in his Convention cable, this year is the year. The major part of the work must be gotten under way now, so that before 1944 it will have yielded its fruit; otherwise it will be too late.”

With the Guardian’s permission, this excerpt is published from letter written to Mrs. Marie Hopper on November 21, 1941.

“I wish to add a few words to what has been written on my behalf and stress afresh the vital importance of increasing by every means in our power the number of pioneers who for however short a period are able to help in promoting the establishment of the Faith in South America. The utmost encouragement, moral and material, should be extended to those heroic workers who are willing in these days of uncertainty and turmoil to travel to or settle in those regions. You will, I am sure, with your co-workers, strain every nerve to stimulate the friends and facilitate their journey and reinforce their endeavors in such a vital sphere of Bahá’í activity.”

Similarly, the National Assembly is permitted to share with the friends these excerpts from a letter written to Mrs. Marie Hopper on October 26, 1933.

“Perhaps the reason why you have not accomplished so much in the field of teaching is the extent you have looked upon your own weaknesses and inabilities to spread the Message. Bahá’u’lláh and the Master have both urged us repeatedly to disregard our own handicaps and lay our whole reliance upon God. He will come to our aid if we only arise and become an active channel for God’s Grace.

“Do you think it is the teachers who make converts and change human hearts? No, surely not. They are only pure souls who take the first steps and then let the spirit of Bahá’u’lláh move and make use of them. If any one of them should even for a second think, or consider his achievements as due to his own capacities, his work is ended and his fall starts. This is the fact why so many competent souls have, after wonderful services, suddenly found themselves utterly impotent and perhaps thrown aside by the spirit of the Cause as useless souls. The criterion is the extent to which we are ready to have the will of God work through us.”

Letters written to Mrs. Amelia Collins on October 5, 1941, and February 3, 1942.

“Mrs. Greenleaf’s passing deprives the friends of yet another veteran and outstanding teacher. The Guardian hopes and prays that among the younger Bahá’ís many will train themselves to follow her example and profit by the methods she used so successfully in spreading the Cause. Deep knowledge of the teachings, profound human sympathy, a heart which mirrored the Master’s love, and a winning sweetness and friendliness were hers. She will indeed be greatly missed.”

“His thoughts are increasingly turned to the American believers as the end of the First Bahá’í Century approaches, as he feels so strongly the tremendous, worldwide importance which their success involves. They are not merely struggling for the furtherance of the Cause in their native land, but for the achievement of parts of a Divine plan which involves the progress and happiness of all men. Their individual and collective responsibility is, therefore, very great, very precious, and presents them with an opportunity to serve mankind which they may never again have because mankind’s life may never again pass through such critical years. His ardent prayers continually surround them.”

With the Guardian’s consent also are published these excerpts from letters written to Mrs. Amelia Collins on October 5, 1941, and February 3, 1942.

Committee's appeal, at the recent Annual Convention, for pioneers in the Latin-America teaching field. The immediate and enthusiastic response of the friends to the appeal brought very interesting news of the little school for children which continues to work so successfully. She also tells of some very heartening and encouraging results from some former work and contacts which she had thought had been in vain.

Inter-America News

The Inter-America Committee was greatly heartened and deeply touched by the immediate and enthusiastic response of the friends to the Committee's appeal, at the recent Annual Convention, for pioneers in the Latin-America teaching field. Each offer was most gratefully received and has been very carefully considered by the Inter-America Committee and the National Spiritual Assembly. The Committee's only regret is that it has not been possible so far to accept the valued services of all who so selflessly offered themselves in this tremendously important phase of the Seven Year Plan. Because of the increasing difficulties in obtaining passports and the necessary visas, and even in procuring transportation during the international crisis, the outcome of the efforts now being concentrated on the vital Inter-America work is still uncertain, but the Committee hopes, in the next Bahá'í News, to be able to give some definite report to the friends on the posts being filled at this time and on the pioneer chosen for each post.

Bolivia

Recent letters from Flora M. Hottes mention her increasing happiness in her work, the new acquaintances she is making, her progress in Spanish, and report a beautiful contribution to the Temple Fund from one of the Bahá'ís of La Paz, Sra. Yvonne de Cuellar. As the first contribution from a Bolivian, this is truly an historic event.

Ecuador

The Committee is delighted to receive an enthusiastic letter from Hans Dore, secretary of the group in Quito, reporting the activities of the friends there and enclosing some excellent snapshots.

Guatemala

The believers will be glad to hear that John Eichenauer is now well established in Guatemala City and plans to remain there until an Assembly is formed in this important Republic.

Peru

Reports from Eve Nicklin in Lima bring very interesting news of her little school for children which continues to work so successfully. She also tells of some very heartening and encouraging results from some former work and contacts which she had thought had been in vain.

Library Committee

The Library Committee is planning to present copies of The Bahá'í World, Volume VIII, to some of the leading college and university libraries throughout the country. However, we cannot furnish copies to the main public libraries in some of the large cities as we have in the past. Several of the Gift Departments of leading libraries have expressed the desire to receive copies of new publications as released to keep their collections up-to-date. It would seem important to place a copy of this volume in such libraries as the Main Library in Boston, Chicago, New York, San Francisco, etc. Such a gift would have to be made through local Assemblies. Any Assemblies making such a gift of this important volume might drop a card to the national library committee for our files.

Race Unity Banquet

The Convention Race Unity Banquet this year inspired a new sense of fellowship. Like the International Nights of New York, the banquet sought to produce, under Bahá'í auspices, a unity in diversity of gifts. There was the varied music of Beatrice Hammett, Walter Deppe, Dorothy Rice, Robert McFerrin and Walter Olitzki. There were represented six languages; among them the Esperanto greeting of Mrs. Etty Greffe, the Indian prayer of Mr. Ass Hill, and the musical flow of Persian as spoken by Mr. Habib Sabet and interpreted by Marzieh Gail. The brief talks of Albert Windust, Marian Steffes, Ali-Kuli Khan and Mrs. Stuart W. French imbued the meeting with Bahá’í spirit and gave background to a number of guest speakers, each of whom represented a racial or national group of importance.

The banquet is typical of what every community can do. The oneness of mankind, our watchword and uncompromised standard, is graphically taught by such efforts of the friends. These gatherings are prototypes of the new society. They are the proof that a new race is slowly growing up.

The Third Latin-American Session

The International School Committee announced a program of great interest for the sessions of its third season at Temerity Ranch, Pine Valley, Colorado Springs, the property dedicated by Mrs. Loulie Mathews to the Cause.

July 1, public meeting at Halfway House, Colorado Springs, a Round Table discussion by Mrs. W. M. LaFarge, Mrs. R. D. Little and Max Greeven.

July 2, at the School, talk on Appreciation of Art by Percey Hagerman and showing of paintings of the Renaissance by Mrs. LaFarge.

July 3, at the School, Symposium on The Rhythm of Creation by Mrs. R. D. Little, Mark Tobey and Velma Vetter.

July 5, at the School, lecture by Raphael Lillywhite on The Influence and Evolution of Art.

July 6, at Fine Arts Center, Colorado Springs, talks by Mrs. Gladys Wells and Mrs. W. M. LaFarge on Bringing Spanish American Appreciation to our children.

July 7, at Fine Arts Center, readings on Prophecies for This Day from All Religions and all Ages, and Summary, Pattern for Future Society, by Mrs. E. R. Mathews.

National Press Book

The awakening of Latin America reports itself in the few but excellent articles on the Bahá’í News Service in recent months. The magazine, Alma Tica from Costa Rica, carried long articles on the Bahá’í activities there in its September, October and December issues with pictures of ‘Abdül-Bahá, the Temple and the friends. The papers, LaRaran and Dienario de Costa Rica, published articles on the activities of John Eichenhauer. A paper of Managua, Nicaragua, also carried an article on John’s work. Just after last year’s Press Books closed we received copies of the Argentine magazine, Aquí Esta, for January, 1941, which printed a lengthy article on Bahá’í activities in connection with Philip Sprague’s visit. The Havana Post of Cuba reported the work of Mrs. H. Emogene Hoagg.

The North China Daily News of Shanghai, China, is represented again this year with four long articles on the Faith. Mrs. Margaret Atwater of Miami, Florida, sent Bahá’í material to this paper. The Rangoon Times of Burma also carried a long article which has come to our files.

In October the friends of Honolulu dedicated their new Center before Hawaii became active in the theater of war. A number of clippings report their dedication service and other activities including the donation of books to the Public Library. The Fairbanks, Alaska, News-Miner carried several articles on the School at Geyserville and Janet Whitenack’s trip to the States. Their articles included many details of the Faith.

From Washington state we have a long article in the Chelan Valley Mirror reporting the successful Northwest Regional Teaching Conference. The Spokesman-Review of Spokane carried a very good survey of the four Bahá’í schools.

The California friends have had unusually consistent success with the medium of publicity. The activities of the Geyserville School are reported in many papers in and near Geyserville as well as farther south. The Geyserville Press carries full pages of ads and the detailed program of classes and meetings. The merchants welcome the Bahá’ís in their advertisements.

The Berkeley Gazette reported many local Bahá’í activities. The Burlingame paper carried the Temple picture. The Sacramento Union reported Geyserville activities. The Pasadena Star-News consistently carries Mrs. Stuart W. French’s fine articles under the heading of “Loom of Reality”. The San Francisco Chronicle and the News both carried long and short articles on the local and Geyserville activities, printing pictures of ‘Abdul-Bahá and the Temple. The Mission Merchant’s News carried a picture of the Temp-
The State of Colorado is represented by clippings from the Denver Post reporting our International School activities and the Colorado Springs Gazette and Telegraph printing fine material not only on the personnel and activities of the School but also local Bahá’í meetings.

Regional Teaching Bulletins

The National Spiritual Assembly is impressed by the increasing usefulness of the bulletins which a number of Regional Teaching Committees have been distributing. They can more and more render important service by unifying the teaching efforts of groups and isolated friends. In order to set a standard to which all the Regional Committees can conform in preparing and distributing such bulletins in future, the National Assembly has adopted the following principle:—
1. Size — not over four 8½ by 11-inch pages a month, or eight pages of half that size. 2. Contents — the essential feature of these bulletins is the presentation of Regional plans and Regional activities. Anything further is duplication of National bulletins or News, but excerpts from plans reported by the National Teaching Committee or the National Spiritual Assembly might be permitted, with some excerpts from the Bahá’í teachings, the Guardian’s messages, etc. 3. Distribution — to groups and isolated believers in the region; to Extension Teaching Committees in the region; to the National Teaching Committee; and eleven copies to the National Spiritual Assembly for the Guardian, the members, and the permanent files.

Teaching Project at San Jose

The San Francisco Assembly Extension Teaching committee in conjunction with the Regional Teaching committee of California planned an "all out" teaching campaign for the city of San Jose, California, for October, 1941.

It was their plan to utilize all the teaching facilities which had been developed by the various National committees, and to synchronize these activities into a workable and impressive method of introducing the Faith into a new city.

The plan worked out included the following activities:
1. Publicity in Newspapers.
2. Sending out of invitations to build up the public gatherings.
3. Exhibit of Bahá’í Temple model.
4. Placing of Literature in the Public Library.
5. Radio broadcast.
6. Assemblies, groups and Isolated Bahá’ís holding Fireside meetings.
7. Public Meetings.
8. Distribution of Free Literature.
9. Follow-up study class.

The Committee surveyed the entire situation very carefully in advance, and worked out in detail, just how and when each element of the project was to be carried forward.

The Public Library was visited, and when it was found appropriate Bahá’í books were not available, arrangements were made to place books in the Library. Books were also placed in the Hospitality House, which had been established in the heart of San Jose, for army and navy men.

A survey was also made of the newspapers in San Jose, as well as the surrounding area. Contacts were made with Editors of Newspapers, to be sure that the notices of activities would be published. Releases concerning the public meetings were sent to 11 local papers; while releases were sent to an additional 21 newspapers in Northern California as well as 2 newspapers in Nevada, of the Radio Broadcast. Of the 32 papers to whom releases were sent, 17 printed the notices. In addition to this, the Floral company using the Bahá’í Temple Model, as a part of their exhibit at the County Fair, also sent releases to newspapers, some of which mentioned the Temple and the Faith.

The efforts to have the Temple Model exhibited finally met with the request of one of the most important Floral companies of San Jose for permission to use the model, as the center of a booth they had planned at the Santa Clara County Fair to be held in San Jose, at the time of our Teaching Campaign. The Fair is attended by all the people of San Jose and the surrounding area. The Exhibit arranged by the Floral Company, in conjunction with the Bahá’ís, prominently portrayed the Temple on a most attractive pedestal with a prayer altar before it; all imbedded in a bower of beautiful white flowers. The theme of the exhibit was "United Prayer for the Peace of All Nations". This exhibit took the Blue Ribbon for the best theme.

The radio talk was arranged for 7:30 p.m., October 28, over station KQW, two days before the first of the public meetings. The subject of the Bahá’í talk, "After this War", was for 15 minutes. KQW is one of the large stations of the coast, and therefore the talk could be heard from Arizona to Oregon, and inland through Nevada. Letters were sent in advance to all Isolated Believers, Groups and Assemblies, notifying them of the Broadcast, and encouraging them to hold Fireside Gatherings, making the subject matter of the Broadcast the theme of their discussion at the Fireside Gatherings. There were 16 Fireside Gatherings, in 15 cities and towns. These cities extend from Phoenix, Arizona to Reno, Nevada to centers throughout Northern California. Thus it will be seen how a Bahá’í talk on a Radio station, can be made a teaching medium for all our groups and Isolated Believers, who are normally deprived of outside teaching help because of their location, etc. One interesting aftermath of the Radio project was the "Fan Mail" which was received by the radio station. There were about 75 who wrote in asking for further data, or expressing appreciation for the broadcast.

The public meetings were held in a Hall of the Civic Center. Invitations had been sent to some 700 selected people in San Jose and surrounding area; including educators, business people, those interested in Universal matters as well as students of the State College. The theme of the campaign was "Security for a Failing World".

Follow-up meetings were announced, and study class arranged. The class is now in progress, and it is confidently expected a number of people will become Baha'is as a result of this program.

The opportunities for publicizing the Faith, as well as carrying forward active direct teaching, through the excellent facilities the National Assembly has been making available through their various committees, go far beyond the average thought when a plan is worked out for coordination and synchronization of these facilities into a general program of activity.

The time is short, and we must make coordinate use of each and every facility made available to us, so as to insure reaching the goal set by Shoghi Effendi for the Seven Year Plan.

REGIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE
By: Sylvia Ioas

Supplement to Annual Report of the National Spiritual Assembly 1941-42

A few words are offered in order to bring the report up to the end of the current Baha'i year.

Realizing the extreme importance of the Guardian's The Promised Day Is Come, the Assembly turned to the Contacts Committee for assistance in the compilation of a list of one thousand persons outside our Baha'i ranks in the United States and Canada, to whom complimentary copies of this work might be sent. The Contacts Committee responded with a list representative of all regions, and we need not doubt but that spiritual influences and outcomes resulted from this direct mode of teaching.

Similarly the Assembly has continued its distribution of the public teaching bulletin, now entitled A World Faith, to a public list of about two thousand persons. Through other channels such as the Contacts and Regional Committees, local Assemblies and a few individual believers, several thousand more copies are placed in the hands of potential Baha'is. Years ago the Guardian urged us to concentrate on a few persons of capacity as part of the general teaching effort, and one method of doing so is to make use of this brief reprint of words of Baha'u'llah, utterances of 'Abdu'l-Baha, and writings of the Guardian.

The National Assembly has found it impossible to maintain its teaching program during the past two years consisting of a schedule of public meetings and regional conferences in different cities, and this has been a matter of regret, but the press of business and the increasing difficulty of the times has made it necessary to concentrate its meetings upon its own agenda of work. However, the decision to recognize the Race Unity banquet which the Chicago Assembly has held for years on the evening preceding the Convention, and consider this a national activity conducted jointly by the Chicago Assembly and the National Race Unity Committee, has resulted in a most gratifying extension of the Convention period to include a second public meeting.

To contribute to the influence of the Cause in Latin America, the Assembly has donated a copy of The Baha'i World (Vol. VIII) to eighteen leading Public Libraries in the various countries as well as to the Library of the Pan American Union in Washington.

It will be of profound interest to the friends to note that local Assemblies and also individual believers may now obtain a photostatic copy of the Will and Testament of Baha'u'llah, and of the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Baha, reproduced from certified copies sent us by the Guardian in the form of photographs of hand written originals. How can any human being realize the privilege of being able to draw near to and behold for himself such documents of universal meaning and divine power? It is by Their authority that we serve the Cause, and under Their protection that the communities and institutions of a World Faith survive world chaos in order to lay the basis of the Most Great Peace!

The formation of new Assemblies represents the harvest of all teaching and administrative effort during the year. Although the returns are not yet complete, nevertheless the list of new Assemblies and of those which have been restored is most impressive.

In North America the newly established Assemblies so far reported are: New Orleans, Halifax, Houston, East Orange, Winnipeg, Ann Arbor, Shorewood, Arlington, Englewood, Beverly. Assemblies restored are: St. Lambert, Moncton, Salt Lake City, Lansing.

From Latin America comes fervent greeting from newly-formed Assemblies in Port au Prince, Haiti; San Salvador, El Salvador; Havana, Cuba; Tegucigalpa, Honduras; Puebla, Mexico; Puntarenas, Costa Rica; Montevideo, Uruguay. As a small dial may show a reading of the power of a mighty current, so these reports from our sister Republics are an indication of how rapid has become the flow of the spiritual force in these days of destiny for the friends of God. A new Assembly may be outwardly weak and inexperienced, lacking facilities for public teaching work, but inwardly it is a drop in the ocean of the new World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, and a pillar in the advent of divine Justice on earth.

But the number of Assemblies alone is not a full measure of growth in the American community. Individual initiative and community or committee resourcefulness also disclose the degree of development. Glancing back over the whole field of activity of the year we discern clear signs that the power to live and to spread the Faith has been greatly augmented.

Among these signs are: the use of the regional conference as a source of unity and power for increased teaching by groups and isolated friends; the regional bulletin, a direct communication to groups and isolated believers; the Race Unity Committee's presentation of the Message to more than sixty colleges; the preparation of new types of Temple display by the Exhibits Committee and of colored slides for illustrated lectures by Edwin Mattoon; the extension of Bahá'í Summer School activity to winter and spring sessions; the publication of unpublished Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in World Order Magazine; the Radio Committee's more concentrated method of presenting Bahá'í material to broadcasting stations; the beginning of a Memorial of 'Abdu'l-Bahá at Evergreen Cabin, under a new National Committee; the Child Education Committee's attractive hand-lettered prayer book for children and youth; the development of Latin American programs by some of the larger Assemblies; the step taken by the Temple Program Committee in emphasizing the national character of the Temple public meetings by means of a new type of printed announcement.

Writing to Mr. McDaniel on December 21, 1941, the Guardian declared: "The prosecution and completion of the task to which the American believers have pledged themselves must be insured, despite and in the very midst of the ordeal which they are now facing. The greater the anguish which this ordeal must entail, the more formidable the obstacles it will raise, the more meritorious their achievement, and the greater the spiritual power which their enterprises must and will exert in the future. I will pray that their efforts will be crowned with success that will cause the whole Bahá'í world to marvel."

To Mr. Wilhelm, through his secretary, the Guardian wrote on February 28, 1942: "Shoghi Effendi hopes that the N.S.A. and Teaching Committees are meeting with a wider response to the call for pioneers and teachers. The American believers have carried on with such enthusiasm and devotion, and established such a record, that now all the Bahá'ís the world over have the impression that they can do almost anything! They must exceed their own past records for speed and accomplishment in order to triumph in the Seven Year Plan."

On April 25, after cabling Shoghi Effendi that the amount of the Abul-Fadl Memorial Fund had been cabled to the National Assembly of Egypt, he sent this reply: "Deeply appreciate your efforts. Abul-Fadl has been buried (in the) Bahá'í cemetery."

This brings us to the great message cabled to the Convention as received April 25. Copies have been made for delegates and Bahá'í guests. Comment is not made here that the National Assembly has been the channel through which the message could be conveyed to the Convention itself. No doubt its effect will be so profound that the character of the coming Bahá'í year will be reflected in the pure mirror of the Guardian's sacrificial participation in the pioneer teaching work.

By Shoghi Effendi's wisdom we have this year learned that it has been destined for America to be immersed in the world disturbances in order to have a preponderant share in the achievement of the Lesser Peace. We have learned that the part played by the Bahá'ís will affect the future of the American Republics. We have learned that divine assistance comes to every worker through whatever obstacles of difficulty and hardship may exist. As the light of the sun is transmitted through space as energy, to be transmitted into heat and light when it meets the atmosphere of the earth, so the Holy Spirit penetrates all substances and resistances exerted by human conditions, revealing itself as grace and mercy wherever it encounters the pure heart of faith. Not in spite of difficulties but on account of them does His work proceed. If we can but learn the deeper mystery of faith, the tasks of the coming year can all be done.

Corrections

Immediate opportunity is taken to correct three errors which were inadvertently overlooked in proofreading the pages of Bahá'í News for June, 1942.

Page 1, in date of issue. Instead of "Year 98" it should be "Year 99."

Page 4, lines 14 and 15 of first column. Instead of "many futile suggestions" it should be "many fertile suggestions."

Page 7, second column, lines 4 and 5. Instead of "New Orleans" in the list of unoccupied States and Provinces, it should be "Louisiana."

Letters from the Guardian

The Guardian has already acknowledged the receipt, by cable, of the 100 photographs of the Temple, some of which were sent him air mail, and he has distributed a considerable number already amongst the believers of the Near East, and he feels sure so impressive a photograph of the exterior ornamentation will greatly stimulate the friends in their various activities in the service of the Cause.

He has been informed by the Bahá'ís in Egypt of the receipt of the sum cabled by your Assembly to them for its Memorial to Mirzá 'Abú'l-Faḍl, and he deeply appreciates your prompt response to his request in this connection. The remains of that illustrious teacher have already been ceremoniously transferred to the new Bahá'í cemetery allocated by the Egyptian government to the Cairo Bahá'ís. The believers in other centers in Egypt are now negotiating with the authorities concerned for similar cemeteries to be established in their respective localities. The Guardian is sending you under separate cover a photograph of the ceremony in connection with the reinterment of Mirzá 'Abú'l-Faḍl's remains, for publication in Bahá'í News.

Regarding the question of inserting the names of the translators of Bahá’í sacred writings: the Guardian feels there is no objection to this. As to the manner in which the names of the translators should appear in a book such as “Bahá’í Scriptures” he prefers to leave this matter to the discretion of your Assembly.

The Guardian is cabling you today acknowledging the receipt of 96 copies of The Bahá’í World to date. He has already started distributing them to eminent sympathizers and friends of the Cause in various countries, who, he feels, cannot but be deeply impressed by the steady expansion of the institutions of the Faith in both the East and the West, as witnessed by this book. For such a publication to be brought out and distributed far and wide in time of war is in itself a remarkable testimony to the irresistible march of the Faith and the vitality of its indomitable spirit. He would suggest that three copies of this valuable biennial be sent to every National Spiritual Assembly. The copies for Persia should be sent through the N.S.A. of Iraq.

Shoghi Effendi has been greatly heartened and cheered by the news of the splendid Convention held this year and its complete consecration to the unfinished tasks of the Seven Year Plan. The character of its sessions, the expansion of its subsidiary activities, the spirit which animated its deliberations and the number of delegates and friends that participated in its proceedings, are a befitting commencement for a year that must witness unprecedented victories in the national and international teaching fields, as well as the consummation of the thirty-year enterprise of the Temple of Bahá’u’lláh.

The newly elected National Assembly must, in the course of this crucial year, keep in the closest possible touch with the two major teaching committees on whom the prosecution of the twin teaching enterprises of the American believers directly devolves. In conjunction with them, the National representatives of the American Bahá’í community must, by every means in their power, ensure an unprecedented increase in the number of pioneers and visiting teachers, both at home and in foreign fields, for this constitutes the bedrock on which the structure of these enterprises can alone rise and be firmly established. The Guardian’s contribution of five thousand dollars to finance five pioneers, is designed to provide an incentive to those who are in a position to either provide the material means or to arise themselves in person for the furtherance of pioneer activity in virgin territories.

In large rural areas such as exist in the State of Washington, recognized voting districts may be considered as units for the formation of Spiritual Assemblies. The National Assembly, the Guardian feels, may follow in such cases the election district divisions. The application of this principle he leaves to your Assembly.

Haifa, May 26, 1942

He was happy to hear that the work on the Temple is going to be carried out without delay, and that at last we are in sight of our goal and have every assurance of its speedy accomplishment.

He feels that all concerned should exert their utmost endeavor to assure that the remaining faces and the circular staircase will be finished this year. This will not only free Bahá’í funds for the now all-important teaching work, but act as a tremendous advertisement of the Faith and its principles.

No channel should be left unexplored in the endeavor to exploit to the full the teaching and publicity value of our first western House of Worship. It has been so long in the building that the friends themselves scarcely aware that their hour of triumph is at hand! Both they and the public at large should be stimulated into a fresh realization of what they have achieved. It is the tangible evidence of the power of the American Bahá’í Community, few in numbers, but mighty in the spirit they draw from their Faith.

(The Guardian’s postscript) Dear and valued co-worker: The completion of the Temple should, and I feel confident will, release tremendous and unprecedented forces of spiritual energy destined to be wholly consecrated to the teaching tasks now confronting the American believers. The concentrated, the sustained, and undivided attention of the individual believers and all Bahá’í agencies, local, regional, as well as national, should be directed to the attainment of this supreme, this shining goal. The increase in the number of pioneers, of every class, race, age and outlook is the vital need of the present hour. May the Beloved bless richly and continually this mighty and glorious endeavor.

(Signed) Shoghi Effendi.

Let Men of Action
Seize Their Chance

Twenty-one months remain in which we, the followers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in the United States and Canada, can fulfill our spiritual opportunities of the Seven Year Plan. The Temple, resplendent in its radiant beauty, is nearing completion and is a glorious challenge to us believers individually and collectively to arise for renewed efforts and for greater sacrifice and service to settle the virgin areas in each and every state and province of the United States and Canada.

Functioning in some 100 organized Bahá’í communities, and as groups or isolated believers throughout this broad land, each and every believer has a part to play in achieving this important phase of the world mission entrusted by the Master to His disciples in the western hemisphere. To play his part every believer must strain every effort and concentrate every resource of time and energy and capacity on the task of teaching.

In our Assembly life and group activities let us remember that the administrative order is a means to the achievement of our goal, and not an opportunity for the clash of personalities, a form of contentious dissension, or an arena for the display of human ambitions and personal advancement. Our Assembly and group meetings, the Unity Feasts and Committee meetings, are the collective means provided for us to work together toward our spiritual objective. Only as each individual in due humility and with severance submerges the self in harmonious and unified group activity can progress be made and results achieved. Our beloved Master while referring to the establishment of the local Assembly in this country, declared that its members should associate “like a flock of doves” with unity and devotion.

The Guardian in his recent letter has issued a clarion call for believers to “scatter to sow the Divine seeds and gather the harvest.” The days of these remaining twenty-one months are swiftly and relentlessly passing. Soon it will be too late, unless we arise as one great soul in many bodies to do our Master’s work. “Let men of action seize their chance ere the swiftly passing days place it irretrievably beyond their reach.”

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Enrollment of Bahá’í Youth

The procedure under which a person of from 15 to 20 years of age is accepted and registered as a Bahá’í youth seems to require a little explanation. It is based upon the principle that the youth, while accepting the Cause, does not assert his or her qualifications for voting membership as does the adult applicant but asserts the intention of applying for membership when he or she reaches the age of 21 years.

The Bahá’í youth, therefore, does not automatically become a member of the community when reaching the age of 21, but to become an adult voting member the youth fulfills his or her intention by applying for membership in the usual way. Where the youth lives in an organized community, he or she appears before the local Assembly. Where isolated, the youth signs a new form of Youth Registration card and transmits it through the Regional Teaching Committee to the National Office. This new form of card is being printed, and copies when ready will be sent to the Regional Secretaries.

Request to Committees

1. The National Spiritual Assembly requests each National Committee to report its definite recommendations and also to provide news items, but to discontinue the practice of sending copies of minutes of Committee meetings. Committees are urged to study their functions and their possibility of service continually, and to recommend such activities and projects as each Committee feels will enable it to render the utmost service to the Cause. What the National Assembly seeks is concentration upon capacity to work and elimination of unnecessary detail and routine in this crucial time.

2. Wherever a Committee budget is voted or an activity permitted, the Committee carrying out the activity is requested to follow the activity through to a conclusion, and then make a report on the results; and in general Committees are requested to render an accounting of the activities each conducts with the specific approval of the NSA.

Youth Activity

Local Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees are requested to encourage youth activity. News of youth is wanted for publication in Bahá’í News. No appointment of a National Youth Committee has been made this year but the Committee will be resumed when the National Assembly has sufficient information about local and Regional groups, their needs, and trends in this important field. Youth groups are urged to study the Guardian’s references to their ideals and work in Advent of Divine Justice, in the first edition of Bahá’í Procedure and elsewhere as far as possible.

1942 Convention

Resolutions and Recommendations, With Action Taken by the National Spiritual Assembly

1. That Assemblies endeavor to do pioneer work outside their community, carefully budget their funds, train new teachers, plan public lectures and select a place in which to establish the Faith.

The NSA is happy to record the fact that the general teaching programs in operation for a number of years have included this important item for local Assemblies.

2. That the Convention request the incoming National Spiritual Assembly to set up machinery in connection with the proper committees, which would expedite matters of emergency.

The National Assembly cannot delegate its own authority and function.

3. That the NSA urge each newly elected Assembly to read and study Bahá’í Procedure.

This recommendation is brought to the attention of the friends.

4. That believers who are troublemakers in their local community should not be appointed as members of National committees.
Memorial Gathering

The Temple Program Committee has announced that on August 16, at five p.m., a memorial meeting will be conducted in Temple Foundation Hall, in order to associate the American believers with Bahá'ís of other countries in mourning the passing of a distinguished Egyptian believer, Ábdul Jálil Béy Saád. This meeting is held at the request of Shoghi Effendi as cabled to the National Spiritual Assembly on June 28.

In appointing the National Committees, the effort of the Assembly is to include only the believers who appear to be qualified by capacity and who fully conform to the principles of consultation.

5. That the NSA appoint Regional Race Unity Committees.

The race unity work is highly specialized. Every believer is expected to remember that this is a cardinal principle of his teaching effort.

6. That a list of Race Unity references be published in Bahá'í News. Lists of race unity references have already been published in Bahá'í News and also made available by the Race Unity Committee in bulletins. See Bahá'í News for January, February and April, 1940, and elsewhere in the present issue.

7. That a press representative be engaged. (To work out Temple publicity when the construction work has been completed.)

Whenever technical experience is required, the Assembly will make suitable connections with professional press experts, but the organic function of preparing Bahá'í material can only be done by an experienced Bahá'í Committee. The Assembly has already appointed a special committee in its own body to deal with the press in important matters which cannot be referred to a committee in the usual way.

8. That a compilation of Teachings and Bahá'í principles be made, concerned with the subject of world development after the war, and that copies be made available to local Assemblies for distribution to representative persons in their locality.

The Assembly realizes the need for such a compilation and has the matter under advisement.

9. That the Convention go on record as endorsing a project to index the principal Bahá'í books of reference by subject or topic, the mechanics to be worked out and arranged in the immediate future.

The matter of indexing Bahá'í books is indeed important at this time, and the Assembly is taking steps to appoint a committee to complete the indexing work going on over a number of years.

10. That in preparing the Agenda for the 1943 Convention, the NSA consider the introduction of an all Committee chairman to the Convention body on the opening day in order to facilitate the work which the Committee might accomplish by consultation with the believers during the Convention.

This matter will be considered when the Assembly prepares the Agenda for the next Convention.

11. That the NSA appoint a National committee of artists to pass upon photographs of 'Abdu'l-Bahá for reproduction and use by the believers.

The Assembly would like to mention the fact that it inquired of the Guardian some years ago which of the photographs of 'Abdu'l-Bahá should be preferred for general use among the friends. In reply he wrote, through his secretary, as follows: "In connection with the selection of particular photographs of 'Abdu'l-Bahá for circulation among the friends, the Guardian strongly feels that no definite ruling should be laid down establishing the superiority or distinction of any particular photograph. The friends should be left quite free to use their individual independent judgment in this matter."—May 15, 1940.

12. That the NSA request the Inter-America Committee to write Assemblies, groups and pioneers in Central and South America to convey the love and greeting of the Convention delegates, and their wishes for success in the teaching work.

The Assembly will prepare a paragraph to be distributed by the Inter-America Committee in its Bulletin in order to give effect to this recommendation.

13. That (a) the delegates recommend that the NSA appoint the major committees now and not July 1, on account of the emergency conditions; (b) that the National Assembly ask the local Assemblies to appoint their committees now and start them working at once; (c) that committees be appointed on the basis of ability and expert action and that committee members be discharged who do not carry on the work; (d) that 3 advisers be appointed by the NSA to coordinate and intensify the work of the major National committees.

A. The NSA points out that the Committee term of office has been definitely established as from July 1 to June 30 of each year and each Committee is expected to continue its full functions up to the end of its term of office. B. The same principle applies here as in A above. C. The Assembly hopes that it will never be called upon to discharge a Bahá'í committee member for failure to serve the Cause. D. As stated in a previous paragraph above, the Assembly cannot delegate its own authority but must exercise it as a body of nine members.

In reporting these Convention recommendations, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to express its gratitude for the spiritual height attained by this Convention, the ardor of the delegates and their clear determination to make possible a complete response to the Guardian's appeal for a successful consummation of the Seven Year Plan.

National and Regional Teaching Activities

Ever since the Convention, which opened the sixth and "crucial year" of our Seven Year Plan, the American community has experienced in the teaching field the impetus of that "tremendous and irresistible unfoldment" which is hurrying the Plan to "its triumphant consummation." Stirred to a well-nigh unbearable impatience by the Guardian's heart-moving words, and affected by the calls to teaching which he tells us are flowing from the Temple and our beloved Master, it is small wonder that our efforts everywhere are finding a new momentum and earning a rapidly-consolidating success.

Already since Convention some twenty-one pioneers and resident teachers have entered the field, or will do so by September, and many others are working out their plans with the Committee. Yet these are only the vanguard of that greater, "far greater number of pioneers" whom the Plan requires to "sow the Divine seeds and gather the harvest into its gates.’ May the early news which is outlined here awaken an army of believers to the wondrous victories which await them in twenty-four States and Provinces still unconquered by the Faith!

Some of the most impregnable Provinces of Canada are soon to feel the redoubled efforts of Bahá’í pioneers. Evelyn Cliff of Vancouver has secured a teaching transfer to Calgary, Alberta; accompanied by Anne McGee, a member of the Vancouver youth group, these two will greatly strengthen Doris Skinner’s persistent work. Sylvia King will also concentrate on this center in October. The newly-formed Winnipeg Assembly, still further increased in numbers from May to July through a nine-lesson course on “The Power of Reconstruction,” is extending its interest to Regina, Saskatchewan. A Winnipeg believer, Ernest Court, will spend four months in that city, and frequent assistance will be sent him by his home community. The Maritime Provinces, which include the virgin Prince Edward Island, will be visited by Harlan Ober in August, to supplement Doris and Willard McKay. The key city of Ottawa, where Winnifred Harvey has already attracted a large circle of friends, will be further developed by the help of Helen Gidden, who is moving from Toronto. Four Summer Conferences are scheduled throughout Canada in August, in Riding Mountain National Park, Manitoba; Rice Lake, Ontario; Quebec; and New Brunswick. May these gatherings open the doors for Prince Edward Island, the two other virgin Provinces, and the whole of this Dominion of great destiny!

Pioneers and Regional Committee of New England are concentrating on study classes in New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont. Mrs. Harry Ford at Portsmouth and Mr. and Mrs. Ober in Rutland and Providence have assisted their work. A campaign to re-establish the Assembly of Brookline is planned for Ruth Moffett, and the Teaching Committee is anticipating the valued help of Dorothy Baker for Vermont and Rhode Island in the near future.

The Southern States are the focus of almost unbelievable confirmations. Greensboro, N. C., was opened to the Faith by Ruth Moffett in March and April, through a series of lectures inaugurated during “the worst blizzard of the year.” Lectures in colleges, a Temple display, radio broadcasts every other day for a month on Station WGBG, all contributed to develop a study group of seventeen with three believers. Muriel Stilson of Yonkers will move to Greensboro to continue this work. In October two outstanding Bahá’í youth, Eva Lee Flack of Los Angeles and Adrienne Ellis of Phoenix, are planning to settle in Asheville, N. C., the former home of Miss Flack. Many Bahá’í contacts were made in Durham, N. C., in June by Joy Earl, who spoke to eighty teachers attending the “Workshop.” Mrs. Earl also spoke with students and faculty of Fiske University, Nashville, and Tennessee State Teachers College, where she addressed 500 teachers at summer session.

The Group in Jackson, Miss., is preparing for Assembly status next spring with the aid of Margaret Ellis of Covington, La. Intensive teaching is going forward in Birmingham, Ala., where Virginia Camelon is spending several months to supplement the resident pioneers. A teaching circuit is bringing regular assistance to Arkansas, including Ruth Cornell, Dorothy Logeln, Pearl Berk, and Esther Klein, while Reszi Sunshine is remaining this summer to cooperate with the circuit and strengthen the work.

Now that Texas has an Assembly, Kathryn Frankland is moving to Albuquerque, N. M., where the Assembly must be re-established. Other plans for the South this year include teaching campaigns in Louisville, Ky., Huntington, W. Va., Delaware, and Knoxville, Tenn.

The Faith’s momentum in the South may be measured by the report from the Teaching Conference at Cheaha Park, Alabama, that forty-nine participated, “twice as many as had ever attended Vogel Park conferences.” “Our general theme for study was ‘Some Steps Toward Permanent Peace’; the first part, ‘The Divine Plan,’ was given by Mrs. Moffett, and the second part, ‘Building the Consciousness for the New Day,’ was presented by Miss Virginia Camelon . . . At Cheaha we were on the mountain top. . . . Twice we had prayers at the Tower. . . . which marks the highest spot in Alabama. It is also higher than any other place in Georgia, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, or Florida.”

Our Regional Committee assures us that Iowa will form its first Assembly next April, as teaching has been steadily carried on by Annie Romer in Waterloo, Cedar Rapids, and Davenport for some months. Great impetus was given the Bahá’ís of St. Louis, Mo., and Topeka, Kan., after Convention by the visit of Ruth Moffett, whose lectures resulted in new study classes and the enrollment of three believers in and around Topeka.

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Winnipeg, newly established April 21, 1942.
States. Ruth Westgate and Mildred Hiatt of San Francisco have just moved to Denver, Colo., and Artemus Lamb also plans to live there, thus centering the Regional Committee in this area. Both disbanded Assemblies of Denver and Colorado Springs were much stimulated by contact with Mark Tobey this summer, and Mr. Tobey reports that Colorado Springs now has enough believers to re-organize. Laramie, Wyo., has received many visiting teachers of late, and Valeria Thornton and her mother, Mollie Young, have established residence there. In Boise, Idaho, an extended teaching campaign was conducted this spring by Alta Krueger of Portland, yielding three new believers and a study class. Two Bahá’í youth of San Francisco, Farrukh Iaas and Sally Sanor, have become resident pioneers in Boise, bringing the Group to six members; they will be assisted for several months by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Munson. Supplementary teaching has been added in Reno, Nevada, where Eleanor Adler will stay for three months. In California the disbanded Santa Rosa Assembly has attracted four resident teachers, Mr. and Mrs. William Sears, and Roan Carter and Ella Duffield of Los Angeles.

Although Alaska is surrounded by difficulty, Honor Kempton reports that the Faith is forging ahead and two friends have recently enrolled. Miss Kempton, who had to come “Outside” for medical aid, hopes to return to Anchorage in the Fall.

Dear friends, confronted by these examples of devotion to the goals of our Seven Year Plan, how can we resist the incessant call to join them at the front lines of our expanding, conquering Faith? Of this call and the priceless opportunities it spreads before us, the Guardian himself reminds us: “The time in which to respond to it is relentlessly shortening. Let men of action seize their chance ere the swiftly passing days place it irrevocably beyond their reach.”

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

Inter-America News

Peru

Letters from Miss Nicklin are evidence of her happiness and success in her work in Lima. Beside her little school which is now very comfortably located, she is teaching in the finest hospital in Peru, in Bea Vista. Her class in English consists of 22 nurses. It is a French Catholic Hospital and provides many interesting contacts but the work of establishing a study group has still not been successful. Her income in the various activities brings in a good living and she feels that there is more work there than she can undertake. Peru would therefore be a good opening if it were possible now to secure passports. This, however, is becoming more and more difficult as the flood of travel, especially since the airways are the only means, is tremendous and therefore permission is rarely granted except to those who are assured of employment before going.

Guatemala

Johnny Eichnauer is now located in Guatemala City, has a fine position with the Pan American Airways Construction Co. and has also been appointed Prof. of English in the Government Orphan Institution, which appointment came to him from the Governor himself. John has a “way with him” which procures for him the cordial relations with people of prominence and especially with the Press. There is a fine study group in Guatemala, large enough now to form an Assembly and by April 21st will no doubt be a record breaker.

Nicaragua

Mathew Kaszab has been given permission to return home for rest and change. His future plans are uncertain, but he has had a strenuous time in Nicaragua where he has served faithfully and well.

Cuba

Miss Kruka has sent some very interesting photographs and one especially is noteworthy; it shows the Perez family, the first Bahá’í family in Cuba, of which Perfecto Perez is the first believer to have accepted the Faith in Cuba. The history of the family is very interesting. The grandfather was a very spiritual man and because of his unusual powers he was accused of witchcraft and put in prison. While a prisoner he was offered a cup of poison with which to end his life but he told the authorities that his faith was such that he was sure if he took the poison he would not die. He drank it and sank to his knees in prayer, was spared and thus was released from prison and never troubled again. The young brother of Perfecto is the greatest assistance to Miss Kruka in teaching the children in her Bahá’í class.

Honduras

The new Spiritual Assembly is functioning splendidly and we learn of a new registrant. Also Sra. Maria Teresa Tuells is leaving for Mexico City and another member of the Spiritual Assembly has been elected to fill her place.

Ecuador

News from Quito is always brief, but always very reassuring. The two companions of John Stearns are working with him in furthering the Faith.

Venezuela

Miss Priscilla Rhoads has been quite ill, but we have heard indirectly that she is much better. We are hoping soon to send another pioneer to Caracas to help her, but here again we shall not be certain until we receive favorable report upon the passport.

Haiti

After the successful formation of a Spiritual Assembly the Blackwells have offered to remain until the community is enlarged and strengthened.

San Domingo

Miss Lentz has employment in Trujillo and is working on translations for the committee during the time that her Bahá’í students are enjoying their vacation from the University.

Jamaica

Dr. Malcolm King of Milwaukee is returning to his native home in Jamaica to reside permanently. He proposes to devote his time to teaching the Faith.

Bolivia

Radiant letters from Miss Hottes. She has found a truly Bahá’í welcome among the friends whom Mrs. Adler left in La Paz and they are earnestly studying and teaching all the time.

Salvador

Clarence Iverson is enjoying having his mother with him and he is working steadily for the promotion of the Faith and has a fine position.

Costa Rica

The two Assemblies in Costa Rica, at San José and Puntarenas, and the two in Mexico, Mexico City and Puebla, are thus far in the lead towards a National Spiritual Assembly. But the knowledge of the Cause is widely spread in the Argentine and in Chile and if we can strengthen the Centers in all of the Republics we shall certainly attain the goal of a Spiritual Assembly in each of the countries by the expiration of the Seven Year Plan. This is our goal. This must succeed. We must not disappoint the Guardian for only he can tell how serious the consequences would be if we were to fail.

Uruguay

An enthusiastic letter from Mr. Barton states that there are now thirteen registered members in Montevideo. They have almost completed the translation of the thirty-six lessons on the Foundations of World Unity which when completed and reviewed will, we hope, be found approved and recommended for publication. Mr. Barton tells of three of their members who have embarked upon the translation of the “Dawn-Breakers” with immense enthusiasm. This is indeed a gigantic task which will greatly increase the knowledge of the Faith and the growth of the translators.

Spanish Translations

Our authorized translator, Mrs. Clotilde Arias of New York, now has in hand the compilation made by Mrs. Mathews and Mrs. Bishop of excerpts from all the Writings which will provide for our Spanish believers a book much the same as our Scriptures was for us in the beginning.

Committee List

ADDITIONS AND REVISIONS

Reviewing: Mrs. Marion Mills added.

Baha’i News Service: Clarence Niss appointed Chairman.

Inter-America: Mrs. Octavio Illiescas unable to serve.

Regional Teaching Committees: Ontario—George Spendlove added. California and Nevada—Virginia O'Brien unable to serve on account of plans to go as pioneer teacher to Chile. Dr. Clyde Longyear added. New England—Mrs. Harlan Ober added. North and South Carolina, Georgia—correction in spelling of name of Mrs. Mary Ann Lefler. New York—Mr. and Mrs. Roland Hughes and John Woolston added. Mrs. Marguerite Firooz and R. C. Collison unable to serve. New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania—Mrs. Jean Sharpless, Mrs. Ethel Crane and Mrs. Harriet Kelsey added.

Publishing Announcement

Selected Writings of Baha’u’llah, Selected Writings of ‘Abdu’l-Baha, Selected Writings of Shoghi Effendi: a compilation of the fundamental Baha’i teachings in the form of three pamphlets sold only in the set of three and not by the individual pamphlet. 48 pages each, bound in strong paper covers. Price for the set of three pamphlets, postpaid, $3.25.

Study Outline, Muhammad and the Founding of Islam, prepared by Study Outline Committee. This is a mimeographed booklet containing 53 pages. The Outline is based on Bahá’í literature. There are five sections and an Introduction which explains how the Outline is to be used and giving titles of the essential Bahá’í books needed for reference. References are also to the Qur’an. This Outline follows and supplements the Outline on Introduction to the Qur’an announced a few months ago, and the two together offer American believers a thorough grounding in Islam, Muhammad and the Founding of Islam, per copy, $2.60.

Honolulu Bahá'ís Dedicate New Center
On October 20, 1941, the Anniversary of the Birth of the Báb, the Herald and Inaugurator of the Bahá'í Dispensation, the Honolulu Bahá'í Center was dedicated.

After the prayer of, “God testifieth that there is none other God but Him...” from Prayers and Meditations, offered by the chairman, the ceremony of embedding a box containing important data on the history of the Bahá'í Cause in the Hawaiian Islands took place.

The chairman then welcomed all present and gave a special message to the children of the Bahá'í Children's Classes and their parents (the parents are not Bahá'ís) and then dedicated simple impressive words the Honolulu Bahá'í Center to the service of God and Mankind.

Our deeply appreciated messages and greetings from our Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, our National Spiritual Assembly as well as greetings from the Assemblies of San Francisco and Maui were then read. It was a great joy to us to know that these Friends were united with us in our prayers that God would accept and bless our dedication in the service of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

Miss Agnes B. Alexander, who forty years ago was the first to bring the Bahá'í Message to the Hawaiian Islands, read a dedicatory prayer from Prayers and Meditations by Bahá'u'lláh.

Mr. A. Y. Seto as guest speaker from San Francisco, prefaced his address by a tribute to the early Christian missionaries to the Islands. “A new missionary work is needed, now,” he said, “needed for the education of the people toward a new way of living and thinking to prevent future wars, a new way that will lead to World Unity and Cooperation.”

Mr. Seto spoke of the Báb, the Herald and Inaugurator of the Faith, and explained the Bahá'í understanding of the oneness of Humanity and the oneness of all the Prophets of God.

The Program ended with a prayer by Mrs. S. A. Baldwin, who represented the Maui Bahá'í Assembly and Community.

A social hour with refreshments served in the library concluded our happy ceremony.

Tenth Theosophical Fraternization Convention
An invitation was given the National Spiritual Assembly to provide a Bahá'í speaker for the program of the Symposium concluding the sessions of the Tenth Theosophical Fraternization Convention at Toronto.
F. St. George Spendlove was requested to represent the Bahá'ís, and reports received indicate a public meeting of considerable interest. The Symposium session, held Sunday evening, May 31 at the Roof Garden of Royal York Hotel, included the representatives of Buddhism and of Theosophy as well as Bahá'ís.

The pages of Proclamation of Universal Peace record the many occasions on which the Master spoke as guests of Theosophists.

Latin-American Assemblies
Last month there were listed eight Assemblies whose election had been reported from Central and South America. Since then reports have been received from the Spiritual Assemblies of San Jose, Costa Rica, and Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic.

A fervent welcome, and loving best wishes, is extended to these stalwart new co-workers by the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.

In Memoriam
Grant, O my Lord, that they who have ascended unto Thee may repair unto Him Who is the most exalted Companion, and abide beneath the shadow of the Tabernacle of Thy Majesty and the Sanctuary of Thy Glory.— Bahá'u'lláh.

“An Intensification of Bahá’í Activity”

Dearly-beloved co-workers:

I am thrilled with admiration as I contemplate, at this advanced stage in the unfoldment of the Seven-Year Plan, the vastness of the field already covered by the pioneer activities of its stalwart and valiant prosecutors. The heights of heroic self-sacrifice to which they have attained, the depths of faith and devotion they have plumbed in the course of their ceaseless exertions are no less noteworthy than the immensity of the task they have already performed. An effort so prodigious, a mission so sublime, a solidarity so truly remarkable, an achievement which in its scope and quality stands unparalleled in American Bahá’í history, provide a befitting climax to the century old record of magnificent accomplishments associated with the rise and progress of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Such a glorious century, so unique in the annals of mankind’s spiritual history, is, however, not yet completed. The gigantic enterprises which the American believers are pledged to consummate are as yet but partially concluded. The remaining two years must witness an intensification of Bahá’í activity, throughout the entire Western Hemisphere on such a scale as to eclipse the splendor of all past achievements, and worthy crown this initial phase in the progressive evolution of the Divine Plan. An unprecedented multiplication in the number of pioneer teachers and settlers; an unexampled flow of material resources for their maintenance and the extension of their labors; a still wider dissemination of Bahá’í literature, to aid and support them in their presentation of the Faith to Latin American peoples; an immediate increase in the number of groups and Assemblies in the States and provinces of North America; an increased awareness on the part of all believers, whether in the North or in the South, whether newly enrolled or of old standing in the Faith, that every one of them shares, vitally and directly and without any exception, in the responsibility for the successful prosecution of the Plan; a still firmer resolution not to allow a world-convulsing conflict, with its attendant miseries, perils, dislocations, and anxieties, to deflect them from their course or distract their attention; these are the crying needs of this critical, this challenging, this swiftly passing hour; to exploit its possibilities, to meet its challenge, to grasp its implications, is the manifest, the inescapable and urgent duty of every member of the Bahá’í communities now laboring so assiduously in the Western Hemisphere.

May the cumulative effect of their concentrated and sustained labors shed further lustre on the concluding years of this, the first century of the Bahá’í Era.

Pioneers to Retain Their Posts

He is fervently praying that the new pioneers, who have volunteered to teach in Colombia, Venezuela, Chile and Nicaragua, will be able to complete the necessary arrangements for their voyage to South America, and will be enabled, without interruption or delay, to consolidate and extend the range of the activities inaugurated in those countries. Every effort should be made to increase the number of such pioneers, to facilitate their departure, to insure their settlement in virgin territories, to keep in close and constant touch with them, and to reinforce their activities through visiting teachers, adequate financial assistance, and constant moral encouragement. The Guardian wishes to urge them, and those who have preceded them, to retain their posts at all costs, to face the obstacles in their path with courage, faith and confidence in the future outcome of their work. The National Assembly, on the other hand, must do everything in their power to enable these self-sacrificing workers to continue their pioneer services, and to discourage their return until the results of their labors are so substantial as to insure the continuity of the Bahá’í Community after their departure. This is their greatest responsibility, their immediate task, and the most meritorious service they can render the Cause, at this juncture, in the American Continent.

Excerpt from letter written by Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, August 15, 1942, to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Pioneer Activity of Utmost Importance

He considers that at present pioneer activity is of the utmost importance and that the NSA should do everything in their power to insure that those who have gone to Central and South America, as well as those who are going there, remain there and consolidate their work—otherwise all the efforts and all the money, sacrificed by the believers for this effort, will have been spent practically in vain. The same applies to a lesser degree to the work in the United States and Canada. Whereas in these parts the difficulties of pioneer settlement for the purpose of teaching the Faith are not so great, the work still remaining to be done is tremendous. The Guardian feels that the paramount need is to get the people to settle in the virgin territories as quickly as possible, and that if too much emphasis is laid on the highest possible requirements for pioneers, the work may risk remaining unaccomplished. The believers have future years in which to improve on the groundwork done at present, but they only have about two years left to do this all-important groundwork in. Speed should be your motto.—Excerpt from letter written by Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary, August 15, 1942, to the National Spiritual Assembly through the Treasurer.

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 3 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period July 1-Aug. 31, 1942

The National Spiritual Assembly continues its series of reports of plans and activities aimed at completing the unfinished tasks of the Seven Year Plan.

11. The Inter-America teaching effort increases in intensity and scope. Passports have been issued to Ruth Shook for Colombia, to Virginia Orbison for Chile, and to Gwenne D. Sholtis for Venezuela. Each of these pioneers is prepared to settle in the country and strive for the establishment of a Spiritual Assembly. There has been much delay in obtaining airplane reservations, due to serious restrictions imposed on civilian travel. The final report is that Miss Sholtis left New Orleans by boat for Canal Zone on August 25 with the intention of flying from Canal Zone to La Guaira. Miss Shook has been waiting at Brownsville, Texas, for plane reservation. Early in September she left for Guatemala City by rail, hoping to take a local plane to Colombia. Miss Orbison flew to Mexico City on August 20 and took train from there to Guatemala City, hoping to find local plane reservations available for the remainder of the journey. The National Spiritual Assembly approved a project for pioneer settlement by Mrs. Eleanor Adler for Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, but necessary papers have not been obtained.

12. Plans for construction of the Memorial to May Maxwell at Quilmes Cemetery, Buenos Aires, have proceeded rapidly since the Convention. With the invaluable cooperation of Salvador Torno of the Spiritual Assembly in that city, a block of Carrera marble has been selected and purchased. With the marble assured, the greatest obstacle in the way of the project has been removed. Now we are fortunate in having the placing and execution of the contract supervised by a representative of the National Spiritual Assembly, Mrs. Amelia E. Collins, in consultation with Mr. Torno and Wilfrid E. Barton. Mrs. Collins has had three reservations taken away since July 25, due to priorities for passage, and now will proceed by boat from New Orleans September 24 for Valparaiso, Chile, from where she can obtain passage to Buenos Aires.

13. The exterior ornamentation of the Temple has been completed. All work on the nine faces of the main story was finished in July. Work on the steps is well under way, and we have the contractor’s assurance that the steps will be done this calendar year. Progress photographs reproduced in Bahá’í News from month to month will enable the friends to follow the course of this, the concluding construction work on the Temple called for under the Seven Year Plan.

14. The National Spiritual Assembly has approved a number of recommendations and projects submitted by the Race Unity Committee. These include: effort to establish editorial columns in newspapers and periodicals published by minority groups in order to promote the subject of the oneness of mankind; reprint of Louis Gregory’s article entitled Bahá’í To Jew in World Order Magazine in an edition of 2,000 copies; intensive follow-up work by Louis Gregory and Elsie Austin in Negro colleges in the South; race-relations talks by Mr. Gregory in white colleges of the South; visits to Indian and white colleges by Mrs. Baker in the Southwest; monthly one-page letters on race unity work addressed to local Assemblies; a Race Unity Conference to be held at Green Acre. A compilation on Race Unity, made by Mrs. Alice S. Cox and Mrs. Maye Harvey Gilt, part from Bahá’í sources and part from non-Bahá’í scientific and sociological sources, has been referred to the Reviewing Committee.

15. The drive for accomplishment of the teaching tasks in North America gains great momentum with each passing month. The following projects have been started, or approved for immediate action, since those listed in paragraph 4 of the report in Bahá’í News for July:—Nellie Roche, Regional Secretary, follow-up work in Birmingham; intensive teaching campaign in Saskatchewan and Alberta; Mrs. Eleanor Adler, teaching work in Reno, Nevada; Lulu Barr, continued teaching work in Saskatchewan; Mrs. Ruth Cornell, teaching work in Hot Springs for two months; Ruth Westgate and Mrs. Mildred Hiatt, settlement in Denver; Mrs. Ruth Moffett, additional work in Greensboro, S. C.; Mrs. Clara Rainboth, work with groups in Washington; Muriel Warnick, teaching in Edmonton; Mrs. Marcia Atwater, teaching in Edmonton; Regional Teaching project in Wilmington, Del.; Ridgewood, N. J.; Regional Teaching project for Denver; Mrs. Kathryn Frankland, settlement in Albuquerque; Mrs. Loroi Jackson, settlement in Lead, S. D.; Mrs. Charlotte Grover, settlement in Lead, S. D.; Mrs. Sara Ellen Peake, settlement in Louisville, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walters, settlement in Albuquerque; Mrs. Mable Ives, teaching in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Omaha, Neb.; Mrs. Ruth Moffett, teaching in Wilmington, Del.

16. An inter-regional radio campaign has been approved, under which stations will be selected in various parts of the country for a series of five or six talks. A monthly budget has been appropriated. The purpose is to reinforce the present teaching activities of Assemblies, Regional Committees, groups and National Committees by providing an additional public presentation of the Faith. Definite plans will be reported to all concerned. The first series was arranged over WUIT, Chicago, and includes six five-minute talks at 1:20 P.M. Sundays beginning September 13. Mrs. Nina Matthisen, member of the National Radio Committee, worked out all the detailed arrangements of this program.

17. A summary of current financial items. From May 1 to August 31, the National Fund received $30,671.15. In August donations arrived from 75 Assemblies, 77 groups and 91 isolated believers, to the amount of $8,681.53. August expenditures included: Temple construction, $5,000.00; National and Regional Teaching, $800.00; Inter-America Teaching, $1,196.07; Administrative expense, $1,024.55; Temple maintenance, $600.25; Green Acre maintenance, $133.35.

The Call to Pioneer

The call to pioneer, to “scatter to sow the Divine seeds,” has summoned American believers throughout the course of the Seven Year Plan. In fact, it has claimed us since the earliest days of our mission under the Divine Plan. But with Convention, 1942, this call became an insistent challenge, pressed home continuously by the Guardian’s emphatic words. “Immediate unprecedented multiplication (of) pioneers imperative,” he cabled. “Nothing short (of) prompt, wide, systematic, sustained dispersion can properly safeguard (the) fruits (of) past labors (and) sacrifices....” “The time in which to respond to it is relentlessly shortening. Let men of action seize their chance ere the swiftly passing days place it irretrievably beyond their reach.”

Although many believers have felt the impact of this call and have hastened to carry our beloved Faith to distant places, the vast majority of us are still to be found at home. Disturbed though we may be by the Guardian’s ceaseless pleas, we have not as yet visualized our personal role in this mighty effort, nor imagined ourselves capable of any heroic endeavor. Yet Shoghi Effendi is asking for “a greater, a far greater number of pioneers.”

To the Teaching Committee it appears that the present need is for a new type of worker. In every State and Province the preliminary steps have been accomplished. Resident pioneers have settled and in some localities groups are now established. The call today is not so much for public speakers, not even for teachers of long experience, but rather for believers of faith and dedication. Baha’i families are wanted who will move to new homes to strengthen the “pioneer front.” Believers are needed who will carry on study classes, reflect through their lives the light and warmth of the Faith in darkened communities, who by their very presence will widen the basis and stimulate the activities of newly-formed Baha’i centers. These are assignments which every Baha’i can undertake. All are wanted. “The increase in the number of pioneers, of every class, race, age and outlook is the vital need of the present hour,” the Guardian writes. Our paramount need is for such believers who, by settling in virgin States and Provinces, will constitute the strong second line in the army of Baha’ullah’s “dauntless defenders.”

It is the Committee’s deepest belief that now is the time when we must respond to the Guardian’s call. Now is the “crucial year” on which “hinge the fortunes (of this) historic crusade.” Now is the year when the foundations must be laid for Spiritual Assemblies in twenty-three virgin areas. Beloved friends, the call today is for action. The call is for pioneers.

National Teaching Committee
The friends in Montevideo are diligently working on the translation of the Dawn-Breakers. They have already completed the translation of the Thirty-six lessons which should give them a wonderful knowledge of the Cause.

When all our prospective pioneers are settled and the visiting teachers have passed through the different centers and held public meetings, then we shall expect very great results. We have still ten groups to bring to the point of becoming Assemblies before the expiration of the Seven Year Plan. This must be our goal and our constant prayer.

The Dispensation of Baha'u'llah in Spanish

The appearance of this fundamental exposition of the Faith by the Guardian in a Spanish edition symbolizes the power we attain through Baha'i consultation, since this important work was made possible by the combined effort of many.

The original translation was made by Miss Lillian MacRae in Buenos Aires, and then reviewed by a Committee consisting of Salvador Tomo, Miss MacRae, and Sr. Ricci and Sr. Barrows, all members of the Spiritual Assembly of Buenos Aires. This Committee revised the translation.

The translation was then brought to New York by Sr. Ricci and was again gone over to put in final form by Sr. Ricci and Sra. Anduaga, after which the Guardian's words were printed for use in the Inter-America field. Incidentally, the cost of translation was met by a special donation from Philip Sprague.

Race Unity Conference

The Race Unity conference at Green Acre had five meetings over a period of three days. Two of these meetings, the second and last, were conducted as forums for general discussion, in addition to formal addresses. It was held under the joint auspices of the Race Unity and Green Acre Program Committees.

The chairman of the various meetings in order were, Horace Holley, Miss Lorna B. Tasker, All-Kuli Khan, N. D., Matthew W. Bullock and Harlan F. Ober. These devoted workers held their meetings to a high plane of dignity, movement, courtesy, scientific illumination and spirituality. Presentation of the prayers and teachings, with a universal outlook for all races and nations, and the leading part to be played by America in the guidance of the nations to world harmony and peace, brought a stimulus, sustained interest and cheerful atmosphere to the entire conference. There was a good attendance despite the difficulties of travel.

Mrs. Dorothy K. Baker made three scheduled addresses, her subjects being: "Achievements of Minority Groups," "The Cause and Cure of Prejudices," and "Sharing Civilization." Among many principles of reality, she advocated a better adjustment between nations, races and classes, universal education, the diffusion of spiritual as well as scientific knowledge and a far more universal outlook for all mankind.

Another feature of the program was the address of Miss Mabel I. Jenkins on "Two Great American Poets." These were, Phillis Wheatley, black slave girl who was a contemporary of George Washington and won praise from him for her poetry, and from other illustrious people at home and abroad. She was called the poet laureate of Greater Boston, in her day. The second poet mentioned was James Weldon Johnson, author of "God's Trombones" and "The Negro National Anthem." Readings from their lines and something of their life stories were of deep interest and great value.

Various phases of freedom as advocated by men of genius were examined in the light of the Baha'i Teachings by Louis G. Gregory. Among other speakers were Mrs. Doris McKay of Moncton, Canada, who told of the enlargement of her outlook and interests to include all races, by the illumination of the Baha'i Teachings, and what happiness this brought her. Mrs. Ethel Hunt of Washington D. C. spoke for the Jewish minority. A voice of universality and good will was that of Mrs. Jane Kelly, of Birmingham, Ala., a new Baha'i from the deep South and one greatly pleased with Green Acre, where all races, nationalities and faiths are drawn together.

An interesting phase of forum discussion was on the best names for minorities. Much of interest and value from the standpoint of approaches, customs and usages, past and current, with scientific and spiritual significances in a rapidly changing and evolving world, occupied the attention of the conference. The deep earnestness of the workers and the spiritual harmony which prevailed and the genuine sociability of all present were most impressive as among the signs of the New Day when freedom, peace and happiness are to be the heritage of all mankind through Divine Providence which brings the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh.

Letters of regret came from Dr. Leslie Pinckney Hill, Editor Roy Wilkins, Dean W. M. Menchan, Dr. W. N. DeBerry, Prof. R. Augustus Lawson, Dr. Edward F. Gein, who were prevented from attendance only for what seemed the most cogent reasons. These are all distinguished leaders among the largest minority group. They are prospects for another year.

The music of the conference was rendered by Mrs. Eula Fritz of Schenectady, N. Y., and Miss Mon­aver Bechtold of Brooklyn, adding much to the joy of the gatherings.

"If ye meet the abased or the down-trodden, turn not away disdainfully from them, for the King of Glory watcheth over them and surroundeth them with such tenderness as none can fathom except them that have suffered their wishes and desires to be merged in the Will of your Lord, the Gracious, the All-Wise." (Gleanings, P. 314.)

Appeal for Bahá'í Students

A letter has been received from Miss Margaret Lentz, pioneer teacher in Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, urging young believers to consider enrollment as students in the University of Santo Domingo. For those able to do so, the information is reported that the entrance requirements include a high school degree, but the chief difficulty would be in obtaining transportation. Living expenses would be about $50.00 a month, in addition to the university fees.

The address of the University Registration Office is Rodolfo Beneti Burgos, Director del Registro Uni­versitario, Trujillo City, Dominican Republic.

Temple Slides for Illustrated Lectures

The National Spiritual Assembly has recently approved the preparation by the National Archives and History Committee of a set of 46 (size 2x2 inch) slides for still projection, showing the historical background, the progress of construction, and various details in the exterior ornamentation of the Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette.

These slides will be available in October, and they will be supplied in the form of a roll or positive, 35 mm. film strip containing 36 black and white transparencies or separate views, to be cut apart and mounted between glass covers by the user, together with 10 natural color transparencies ready for mounting.

For projection of the slides after mounting, an S.V.E., Eastman, or Argus kodaslide type projector is recommended, the light strength used (from 100 to 300 Watts) depending upon the size of the audience.

For mounting the transparencies, "S.V.E. slide binders", which may be had in local photo shops, are at 50c per dozen, are suggested.

The cost of the black and white film strip (36 views) is $1.50, and of the color transparencies (10 views), the cost is $2.50. Either group A or B of the color slides (5 views each) may be had for $1.35. A check or money order for the total amount plus 25c to cover postage and insurance should accompany each order.

Orders may be placed by local Assemblies, Extension Teaching Committees, or teachers in the field through the Temple Library and Sales Committee, Mr. Harry E. Walrath, Chairman, 4639 Beacon St., Chicago, Ill.

Publishing Announcements

Bahá'í Writings—Prayers revealed by Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and Excerpts from Bahá'í Writings: this very attractive new compilation is intended particularly for the new friend and the seeker who requires spiritual food. The prayers and other selections have been carefully chosen for their appeal and help to those who have not yet accepted the Faith. An exquisite gift. Bound in red leather with gold title, 56 pages, four by six and a quarter inches in size, $1.00. Bound in red paper, $0.50.

Believers who have ordered copies of the Qur'an are advised that the American firm handling this work by importing copies from England has been out of stock though a fresh supply was ordered some months ago. They expect that their order will arrive by the next ship, and the Publishing Committee will fill all outstanding orders as soon as possible. (This refers to the Rodwell translation, recommended by the Guardian. Price per copy, $1.00)

Address orders and inquiries to Bahá’í Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

World Order Magazine

The steady day-by-day enrollment of new and renewal subscriptions brings to the business office many appreciative letters. One active teacher writes: "Save me a complete series of the Star of the West, they contain so much splendid, inspiring and impressive teaching material."

The magazine today, as World Order, continues this mission of spiritual reinforcement, knowledge and guidance.

Leading articles in recent months:
- April, Charter for World Peace, by Alice Simmons Cox; May, Unchallengeable Victory, by Maye Harvey Gitt; June, The Souvenir of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, by Shirley Warde; July, Bahá’u’lláh as Protector, by Mabel Hyde Paine; August, A Calendar for a World Faith, by Horace Holley; September, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Call for Firmness in the Covenant.

The business office shares with the friends this significant incident: on the very day that the newspapers reported the bombardment and invasion of Burma, the office received a cable from a New York bank that they had received instructions from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma to pay for seventy yearly subscriptions to the magazine.

Subscriptions, $1.50 a year. Address Publication Office, World Order Magazine, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Call

The American Bahá’í community was profoundly stirred by the Master’s Tablet calling to firmness in the Covenant, His last and final exhortation addressed to the American friends. The text was translated and certified by Shoghi Effendi in January, 1922, after the Ascension, and this Tablet came to America at about the same time as the text of the Will and Testament.

This great Call has been made available to the new believers by reprint in the September number of World Order Magazine, accompanied by a brief compilation of relevant passages.

Temple Guiding

From January to August, 1942, there were 10,423 visitors guided through the Temple, only about 200 less than in the same period of 1941, which is a remarkable showing in view of the limitations on transportation this year.

In May, 1942, visitors came from 33 states, the District of Columbia, the Province of Ontario, Canada, Cuba, Brazil and Bolivia; in June, from 42 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Bulgaria, Bolivia, Colombia, Mexico and India; in July, from 34 states, the District of Columbia, the Provinces of Saskatchewan, British Columbia, and Alberta, Canada, Brazil, Bolivia, India, Germany, Afghanistan, Turkey and Korea; in August, from 38 states, the District of Columbia, the Provinces of Manitoba and Ontario, Canada, Costa Rica, India and China.

There have been more guides to help in this work in 1942, due partly to the assistance of six from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, five from Waukegan, Illinois, and one each from Winston, Wisconsin, Kenosha, Wisconsin, and Batavia, Illinois. These guides have spent considerable time and money in traveling to do this work. They say they consider guiding in the Temple a privilege and a joy and feel sustained all the next week. Some of the guides from Chicago spend four hours traveling to and from the Temple each day they come and some guide one or two days each week. The radiance of their beautiful spirits shines in their faces.

More with such a spirit will be needed soon, for the National Spiritual Assembly, as well as some of the contractors and periodicals, will publicize this Temple when the outside is finished late this year. Guide classes will be started during the first part of October, at whatever times and places are most convenient for those interested in attending. In order to cover the material in the course it will be necessary for classes to meet every week until May 1. Please notify a member of the Guides Committee if you wish to join a class. The Chairman’s address is 1229 Cleveland St., Wilmette, III. The telephone is Wilmette 5039.

A booklet covering the portion of the Guide Course dealing with the Temple itself — its architecture, symbolism, history, materials and construction, and other information has been approved by the Reviewing Committee and can be ordered through the Bahá’í Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Ave., Wilmette, III. This should be useful to those displaying the model or wishing to give a lecture on the Temple. (The Publishing Committee will announce this course when the edition is ready).

Many people all over the country who are now Bahá’ís first learned of the Faith through coming to the Temple. About 17,000 a year are given the message there. From forty to eighty people come each week day, and hundreds on Sundays and holidays. It should be remembered that this is perhaps the only place in the world where the Bahá’í teachings can be presented every day to so many voluntary and willing listeners. In these chaotic times when it is so necessary that mankind know about the solution Bahá’u’lláh has given them for the problems of the world, we can do teaching work in the Temple on a large scale. The Guardian has said guides must have a sound knowledge of the Teachings and know all the facts about the Temple. We hope more Bahá’ís in the Chicago area will prepare for this work by enrolling in the classes in October.

Assemblies and Groups wishing to organize Guide Classes may obtain study outlines from the Guides Committee.

Revision of Bulletin on Change in Draft Questionnaire

With reference to the Bulletin entitled "Change in Draft Questionnaire Affecting Bahá’ís Subject to Selective Service," issued by the NSA in May, 1942, this Bulletin is being reprinted with one alteration.
suggested by the Selective Service Advisory Committee.

"I wish to apply for noncombatant service in accordance with the provisions of Section 5(g) of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, and of Local Board Release 51."

In the revised text, the sentence quoted above is preceded by the words: "If and when I am classified as available for service." The alteration has been made in order to make it clear that the believer is stating his attitude about noncombatant service after he has been called up, and is not volunteering his services in a noncombatant capacity.

In this connection, it might be well to call attention to paragraph 363 under Section XXV, entitled "Procedure on Claims of Conscientious Objectors." This paragraph is in Vol. III of the Selective Service Regulations, and reads as follows:

"A registrant who claims to be a conscientious objector shall offer information in substantiation of his claim on a special form (Form 47) which when filed shall become a part of his questionnaire. The local board, upon request, shall furnish any person claiming to be a conscientious objector, a copy of such special form (Form 47). In the case of any registrant who claims to be a conscientious objector, the local board shall proceed in the ordinary course to classify him upon all other grounds of deferment and shall investigate and pass upon his claim as a conscientious objector only if, after physical examination, but for such claim he would have been placed in Class I-A, Class I-B, Class I-D, or Class I-E. The procedure for appeal from a decision of the local board on a claim for conscientious objection is provided for in paragraph 375."

Hospitality Extended to Latin American Visitors

The members of the Inter-America Committee are finding many ways to extend hospitality to visitors from South and Central America, who are passing through Southern California.

Recently thirty-five young men from the different countries of Central and South America, who are in this district in order to study the different branches of aviation, were extended the hospitality of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolcott, of Los Angeles Bahá'í community, and were met and entertained there.

The evening proved to be a tremendous success as a gesture of friendship and a tactful way of showing our Bahá'í interest and desire to further friendly relations with South America. Mrs. Helen Bishop gave a little address of welcome in Spanish and read from the words of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, the Bahá'í attitude towards strangers, expressing our eagerness to foster friendly relations.

Mr. Wolcott, the host, has been very active in meeting these young men and entertaining them both individually and collectively in his home since this occasion.

The evening was spent in dancing and singing and many opportunities were afforded to explain the Bahá'í attitude toward members of other nations and other systems of thought.

As an example of the universality of the meeting, one of the Committee members had in her car a Venezuelan, a Brazilian, a Panamanian and two Guatemalans, and the exchange of Spanish and English was highly amusing and contributed to the festival spirit of the evening.

Enrollments and Transfers

Hereafter, the National Spiritual Assembly will publish enrollments of new believers, and transfers of believers, as separate items, and Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees in their reports are requested to keep the same distinction.

Isolated believers enrolled in July, 1942, nine. Enrolled in August, eleven.

In Memoriam

Bahá’í Calendar

Anniversaries: Birth of the Báb, October 28; Birth of Bahá’u’lláh, November 12; Day of the Covenant, November 26; Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, November 28.

Meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly, November 12, 13, 14, 15, at Wilmette.

Annual Reports—Concluded
April, 1941—April, 1942
Reginal Teaching Committee for California and Nevada

This Committee has tried earnestly to carry out the many exhortations and injunctions of the Guardian for the Seven Year Plan. The Regional Committee’s part in this plan is to assist isolated Bahá’í and Bahá’í groups with their teaching efforts, the re-establishing of disbanded Assemblies, and the establishment of the Faith in new cities outside the areas in which Local Spiritual Assemblies are carrying on extension work. It is to exercise initiative in the areas outside the jurisdiction of local Assemblies, and coordinate Inter-Community Conferences. In accepting these responsibilities, this Committee has sponsored and performed the following activities:

Firesides and Public Meetings

Regular firesides were held at Inglewood, Huntington Park, Alhambra, Riverside, and Santa Rosa, Burbank and Claremont, California; also Reno and Las Vegas, Nevada. The attendance was small, numbering about two or twenty-five. Sporadic firesides were held at Santa Barbara, Monrovia, Ojai, Arcadia, Fresno, Bakersfield, Knightsen, Long Beach, Santa Maria, and Healdsburg, with an average attendance of around twenty.

Public meetings were given in Fresno, Bakersfield, Lower Lake, Healdsburg, Santa Rosa, Pacific Grove, Reno, Las Vegas, Alhambra and Burbank. All of these were small also, with an average audience of about twenty, but as high as eighty-five.

This committee wishes to express its gratitude to the following friends for their generous contribution of time and services as speakers and teachers at the above meetings: Valeria Thornton, Sara Kenny, Sarah Witt, Eleanor Adler, Helen Bishop, Willard Hatch, Marion Holley, Leroy Ioas, Sylvia King, Shirley Warde, Dagmar Dole, Mary Gail, Mr. Sabot of Persia, Charlotte Linfoot, Robert Gulick, Margaret Sears, and Mrs. Amelia Collins.

Attendance became so poor at firesides and public meetings that constant effort was devoted toward evolving new ways and means of attracting the public. Some of these methods are described hereafter in this report.

Youth “Flying Squadron”

This proved to be one of the most stimulating of the many ideas presented. The Youth Group of the San Francisco Bay area offered to send out monthly a flying squadron on week-end trips to points within the area for the purpose of presenting public symposiums on the Cause. This was immediately accepted and a schedule worked out covering Santa Rosa, Reno, Sacramento, Pacific Grove, Fresno, Modesto, and Pacific Grove again in the order named. Through the combined efforts of the Youth Group, parents, Isolated Believers, and Regional Teaching Committee, meeting places, audiences, sleeping accommodations and transportation were arranged for, and the trips made with most successful results. Both the inquirers and believers were most inspired by the splendid talks and sincere enthusiasm of the youth. Those participating were: Anita Ioas, Fernuk Ioas, Sally Sanor, Frances Nowlin, Barbara Rutledge, Jack Patoh, Margaret Rutledge, and Alex Holcombe.

This committee hopes that it will be so blessed as to always be able to have such a project under way.

Unity Festivals

This method of spreading the name, spirit, and foundation principles of the Cause was found to be particularly effective in those cities having several different racial groups such as are found on the Pacific Coast.

The anniversary of the Declaration of the Báb was celebrated in this manner in Bakersfield, in the beautiful Palm Room of the Bakersfield Motel given for the occasion by the management. The Chinese, Japanese Christian, Japanese Buddhist, Mexican, Negro Baptist, A.M.E. Church, and Mennonite groups participated, each contributing music or dancing or both, and in addition many individuals and the splendid High School Mixed Chorus. Edna Tillyer was Chairman and chief promoter of the evening, and Sylvia King, Valeria Thornton, and Artemus Lamb gave brief Bahá’í messages. About two hundred and fifty attended, of whom only ten were Bahá’ís so it can be seen that this proved to be a most successful way to spread the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. The affair attracted much attention among the citizens of Bakersfield and was much played up in the local press. This idea was originally obtained from Sylvia King last year when Naw-Rúz was celebrated in such a manner in Fresno.

Club Solicitation

An attempt was made to interest the various service and social clubs in using Bahá’í speakers on their platforms. Attractive brochures were made up on four of the outstanding Bahá’í speakers and distributed by mail to the clubs. In many cases these were followed up by additional letters or by telephone or personal calls and attention directed to future dates and places at which the speakers could be heard. Also, at the Women’s Club in Beverly Hills, in Southern California the local Assemblies assisted the Regional Teaching Committee in arranging an audition of the speakers being publicised by holding a public meeting, Mrs. Stuart French and Mrs. Shirley Warde were the speakers, to which were invited the Program Chairmen of the clubs and at which these speakers talked. About two hundred and fifty clubs were circularized and of these eight have so far used one or more of our speakers. Of course, all of those contacted were made acquainted with the word “Bahá’í and many were given the message.

Radio

A detailed radio report has been furnished to the Radio Committee. In brief, however, Bahá’í talks were given over nine different stations under the complete or partial supervision of the Regional Teaching Committee, most of which were presented by the studios as sustaining time. In some cases a known audience was built up by notifying the believers and friends in the area ahead of time, but in most instances this was impossible because of the shortness of the notice given by the station. This is the chief disadvantage of using sustaining time. This committee is particularly indebted to Edna Tillyer, and Marion Yazdi in this phase of teaching and also to Kenneth Christian, and Marzieh Gail.

Literature

A personal survey was made (by Artemus Lamb) of all the Public Libraries in the whole region from Geyserville south to the border. Bahá’í books were placed in all the most likely towns. Fifteen of such Libraries as well as those of two colleges accepted Bahá’í literature for the first time and additional books were added to the Libraries of eight more towns. At the request of the National Library Committee all the Army and Navy Camps in the region were contacted and Bahá’í books accepted in nineteen of them. This committee greatly appreciates the splendid cooperation of the Library Committee and the Publishing Committee in this work. One conscientious objectors’ camp received a set of books at the request of an “inmate”.

In addition, World Order Magazine subscriptions were presented to two public and three college libraries. Also, at the suggestion, and with the generous help of, the Publishing Committee, World Order Magazines were placed on sale in magazine stores in some cities. So far the circulation has been chiefly limited to Bahá’ís but we believe that it is well worth while to continue this experiment, as long as the dealers will consent to receive the magazine, as a very inexpensive but dignified way of keeping the Cause before the public. Upon the arrangement of Mrs. Leroy Ioas with the Librarian, books were sent to the San Mateo County Library.

Newspaper Publicity

No particular projects pertaining to this very fertile field were undertaken although where possible articles announcing and following-up all possible events were submitted to the newspapers. Two isolated believers, Edna Tillyer and Estelle Wacaser, gained splendid publicity by writing regular columns for their local papers. This would seem to be a teaching phase worthy of further investigation and efforts. Many inches have been obtained as a result of the public meetings held.

Teaching Conferences

Only one teaching conference was sponsored by the Regional Teaching Committee itself, and this was so successful that more are being planned. In this one held in Alhambra in Southern California, the local Assemblies of Los Angeles, Beverly Hills, Glendale, and Pasadena, gave generous and valuable assistance. The program consisted of a morning conference devoted particularly to the isolated believers and their activities, buffet lunch, and afternoon public meeting. Leroy Ioas gave a stirring talk to open the morning session and acted as the final court of appeals for all knotty problems. Ralph Brown and Helen Bishop gave the talks in the afternoon and Edward Bode presided. About one hundred and fifty attended in the morning and approximately two hundred and fifty in the afternoon. The spirit of enthusiasm and unity was very marked and more are being looked forward to, as the Guardian asks the believers to persevere in holding such meetings.

In such a report it is impossible to describe in detail the worthy efforts made by the believers and teachers in many places. A few outstanding ones may be mentioned:

Fresno

The Naw-Rúz meeting held in Fresno by Mrs. Delia Brandin, a new believer. This meeting was not as large, nor did it include as many participants as last year, on account of the war. A banquet, with Mrs. Valeria Thornton of Beverly Hills and Mrs. Edna Tillyer of Bakersfield as speakers succeeded in interesting about seventy-five people. “Friendship rather than form seemed to be the order of the whole evening.”

Ojai

Mr. Sabet with Virginia Orbison as interpreter spoke to the Community Art Center of Ojai in March. About eighty-five people listened, asked questions and had tea. More Bahá’í speakers were asked for also literature. This meeting was held by the efforts and financial assistance of Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. M. Carter of Santa Paula.

Inter-America Friendship Meeting

An Inter-America Friendship meeting held on April 12, just before Pan-American Day, at the Brazilian Room near Berkeley, had as participants and speakers the Mayor of Berkeley, Mr. F. Gaines; Latin American musicians; Consuls; a speaker in the person of the Honorable Fernando Bereckemeyer, Consul General of Peru; Marzieh Gail... read a passage from 'Abdu'l-Bahá on Sympathy Towards Strangers.

The meeting was financed by Mrs. E. R. Mathews. Over twenty-five inches of publicity was obtained, and over a hundred people attended. Seventy-eight were non-Bahá'ís. It was probably the largest meeting north of Fresno ever sponsored by the Regional Teaching Committee. Mayor Gaines of Berkeley remarked that the Bahá'ís were to be congratulated for sponsoring such an admirable program.

Burbank Meetings

As part of the Regional's activity in re-establishing disbanded Assemblies, a series of five public meetings were held on Sunday evenings in Burbank during March. The speakers were Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop, who spoke twice. Mr. Habib Sabet, Persian visitor (with Marzieh Gail as interpreter), Mrs. Shirley Warde, Miss Virginia Orbison, and Mrs. Valeria Thornton.

The attendance was from twenty-five to fifty persons. The Temple model was displayed in the hall for two weeks where about five hundred persons saw it, and could read the literature. It was later displayed in the Police Officers' League street window. Fairly good newspaper publicity was obtained in Burbank and Glendale.

Santa Rosa

During the month of March, Mrs. G. A. Finks of Los Angeles made a stay in Santa Rosa for the purpose of trying to re-establish the Spiritual Assembly there. It was a very difficult task valiantly essayed, as many special problems are involved. Mrs. Finks succeeded in many new contacts, and some of her experiences were remarkable.

Las Vegas

Mrs. Sarah Witt was sent by the National Teaching Committee for regional teaching in Las Vegas. Many valuable contacts were made, and the Regional Committee hopes that this will be followed up by another teacher soon.

Work progressing on the dome of the Hazíratu'l-Quds of the N.S.A. of the Bahá'ís of Persia at Tihran.

Reno

Through the courageous efforts of the pioneer in Reno, Helen Griffing, and assisting traveling teachers, there are now seven believers in Reno.

Regional Bulletin

As transportation has become increasingly difficult, a Regional bulletin called Bahá'í Pioneering was started for the purpose of keeping the isolated believers and groups informed of the activities of the Cause in our region, and in stimulating them and giving them ideas for teaching, and for carrying out their duties for the Cause. This bulletin was started in January and appears (almost) monthly. About one hundred and forty copies are mailed.

Regional Changes

In January, Mr. Artemus Lamb resigned as Secretary, after having performed prodigious work in traveling throughout the region, and in directing the affairs of this Committee. Virginia Orbison was appointed to succeed Mr. Lamb for the rest of the term.

Mrs. James Crouchley and Mr. Charles Bishop were appointed to succeed Mrs. Isabel Thompson and Mr. John Keith.

While no new Assemblies have been established in this Region during the year, still, we know that multitudes of persons have heard of the Cause, have declared interest, and many are studying earnestly. A few have signed cards. While the task set to us by the Guardian seems nearly impossible surely we shall be aided in accomplishing all that is expected. In so doing, we shall ourselves grow in efficiency, good will, and harmony, putting aside all issues but the one all-important issue of carrying out the will of the Guardian, who says "... American believers must unanimously pledge themselves to subordinate every activity, canalize every resource, exert every ounce of effort to insure befitting discharge of their supreme one responsibility to carry the light of the Faith..."

Message From the Guardian

Fate (of) Seven Year Plan (is) perilously hanging (in the) balance. (This) pivotal year, born amidst high hopes (of) unprecedented upsurge (of) the unbreakable spirit (of) the American Bahá’í community, (is) already half spent. Obstacles, engendered by steadily-deepening, world-convulsing conflict, (are) hourly increasing. (I am) moved (to) plead afresh (for) immediate multiplication (of) pioneers in teaching field, North, South, (on a) scale far surpassing anything hitherto contemplated. (The) present tempo (of) teaching activities (is) clearly insufficient (to) insure definitive, all-embracing victory. (I am) impelled by extreme gravity (of this) swiftly-passing hour (to) address (an) appeal (to) individuals, groups (and) Assemblies, (to) embrace (an) irrevocable resolution, gird themselves (for) superhuman effort, and deputize pioneers (at) whatever cost, however inadequate (their) qualifications, for immediate settlement (of) areas needing assistance. Strictest economy (in) all administrative departments henceforth imperative. Still more abundant flow (of) resources (to the) National Fund, involving still nobler self-sacrifice, (is) demanded. Definite removal (of) every restriction, (the) extension (of) every facility, (for) encouragement (of) prospective settlers, (is) urged. (The) adversaries (of) the Faith (are) jealously vigilant. (The) sister communities (are) watching (in) anxious suspense (to) behold befitting consummation (of) America’s epoch-making achievements. Swift action, boldly conceived, unanimously supported, systematically conducted, can alone retrieve present situation. (The) time (is) too short, conditions too critical, need too great, opportunity too precious, issues at stake too momentous, to justify slightest complacency, allow least relaxation (in) the stupendous exertions required (to) seal (the) triumph (of) the greatest collective enterprise launched during (the) fifty years (of) American Bahá’í history. Prayerfully, longingly awaiting decisive answer, at this late hour, (to my) supremely urgent call.

“Heroism Is Needed”

These, indeed, are the days when heroism is needed on the part of the believers. Self-sacrifice, courage, indomitable hope and confidence are the characteristics they should show forth, because these very attributes cannot but fix the attention of the public and lead them to inquire what, in a world so hopelessly chaotic and bewildered, leads these people to be so assured, so confident, so full of devotion? Increasingly, as time goes by, the characteristics of the Bahá’ís will be that which captures the attention of their fellow-citizens. They must show their aloofness from the hatreds and recriminations which are tearing at the hearts of humanity, and demonstrate by deed and word their profound belief in the future peaceful unification of the entire human race. — Shoghi Effendi, in letter written through his secretary to Willard P. Hatch on October 26, 1941. This excerpt is published with the Guardian’s consent.

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 3 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period Sept. 1 - Oct. 31, 1942

The message from the Guardian which precedes this progress report places the teaching activities on a basis of spiritual obligation which can but intensify the zeal and quicken the conscience of every true believer. Our collective undertaking becomes nothing short of a mighty crusade in which the American Bahá’í community is thrown against the spiritual ignorance, the social
A Statement on the Master’s Will and Testament

This issue of Bahá’í News contains an insert published in connection with the distribution of the text of the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The insert consists of a statement prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly to assist new believers to grasp the meaning of the Will. The insert, if removed from the issue, can be used as a separate pamphlet.

letin recently sent to all the friends. Every believer can now examine the list of unsettled states and provinces and determine, not whether to help, but how — by settlement, by traveling teaching, or by contribution to the National Fund so that others may go. The projects approved since our last progress report, item 15, in October Bahá’í News, are:— Adrienne Ellis and Eva Lee Flack, settlement in Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. Marcia S. Atwater, follow-up teaching in western Canada; Evelyn Cliff, Anne McGee, settlement in Calgary; Mrs. Mabel Ives, intensive teaching in Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Sara Ellen Peake, settlement in Louisville; Orelia Rexford, intensive teaching in Omaha and in Colorado Springs; Mrs. Valeria Thornton, intensive teaching in Laramie, Wyo.; Nellie S. Roche, Regional Secretary, follow-up teaching in Birmingham, Ala., and Knoxville, Tenn.

22. To September 30 from May 1, the National Fund received $38,601.54. The September contributions amounted to $7,930.49. Seventy-four Assemblies contributed in September, sixty-four groups contributed, and seventy-six isolated believers sent donations to the Fund. September payments included: Temple construction, $12,752.46; Temple maintenance, $1,289.70; Administration, $1,214.58; National Teaching, $1,253.50; Regional Teaching, $687.00; Inter-America teaching, $992.76.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Arise with every power to assist the Covenant of God and serve His vineyard. Be confident that a confirmation will be granted unto you and a success on His part is given unto you. Verily, He shall support you by the angels of His holiness and reinforce you with the breaths of the Spirit that ye may mount the Ark of Safety, set forth the evident signs, impart the spirit of life, declare the essence of His commands and precepts, guide the sheep who are straying from the fold in all directions, and give the blessings. Ye have to use every effort in your power and strive earnestly and wisely in this new century. By God, verify the Lord of Hosts is your support, the angels of heaven your assistance, the Holy Spirit your companion and the Center of the Covenant your helper. Be not idle, but active, and fear not. Look unto those who have been in the former ages — how they have resisted all nations and suffered all persecutions and afflictions, and how their stars shone, their attacks proved successful, their teachings established, their regions expanded, their hearts gladdened, their ideas cleared and their motives effective. Ye are now in a great station and noble rank and ye shall find yourselves in evident success and prosperity, the like of which the eye of existence never saw in former ages.

El-Bahá and salutations be upon every one who is firm in the Covenant, free from dissension, sanctified from deceits and steadfast in the path — Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá page 162.

War Department Approves Bahá’í Symbol

A letter written by the Quartermaster General, War Department, Washington, August 14, 1942, to the National Spiritual Assembly, through its Chairman, is reprinted in Bahá’í News for the information of the friends. This letter, written in reply to application made by the National Spiritual Assembly, approves the use of the Bahá’í symbol (the Greatest Name) on stones marking the graves of believers killed in the war and buried in military cemeteries or private cemeteries.

“Mr. A. B. McDaniel
1000 Chandler Building, Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. McDaniel:

Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of August 4th, requesting authority for the use of the Baha'i symbol on the stones which will mark the graves of the followers of the faith of Baha'u'llah, who may be killed in this war and buried in military cemeteries or private cemeteries.

The authorized design for the Government headstones of the general type is the Latin Cross for those of Christian Faith and the Star of David for those of the Hebrew Faith. However, if the emblem of the Baha'i is desired on any Government headstone to be placed in a Military Cemetery or a Private Cemetery and information to that effect is furnished at the time the decedent is interred in the case of a National Cemetery or when application is made for a headstone in the case of a Private Cemetery, the space for the emblem on the Government stone will be left blank in order that such emblem may be placed thereon at private expense.

For the Quartermaster General,

Very truly yours,

Colonel, Q. M. Corps,
Assistant.
lecture series by Mrs. Ruth Moffett in September. An average of 16 non-Baha'is attended the series which resulted in the organization of a study class.

The Baha'i Group in Providence, R. I., has recently enrolled another new member. Mrs. J. R. Bolles and Miss Jeanne Bolles addressed public meetings in both Providence and Pawtucket in October.

Following her work in the New England region in September, Mrs. Moffett spent October in Wilmington, Del., giving an average of two lectures daily. In response to the call for additional Baha'i settlers for Wilmington, Cynthia Powell of New York City has moved to that city and will be joined November 1st by Dorothy Champ also of New York City.

Our pioneers in West Virginia will have the assistance of Virginia Camelon for the next two months. Public meetings, fireside meetings, college contacts and radio programs are being planned in both Huntington and Charleston.

On October 15 Mrs. Mabel Ives began a two month's teaching program in Louisville, Ky. This city has a group of five Baha'is, including Mrs. Sara Ellen Peake of New York City who moved to Louisville to assist Mrs. Olivia Kelsey in the preliminary work for Mrs. Ives' program.

Although it was necessary for Muriel Stilson to leave Greensboro, North Carolina, due to ill health, prior to her departure three new believers were added to the Baha'i group there. The addition of Eva Flack and Adrienne Ellis of Los Angeles the middle of October brings the number of Baha'is in Greensboro up to seven.

The teaching work in Birmingham, Ala., started by Mrs. Mabel Ives early in the year has gone forward steadily since May under the leadership of Virginia Camelon and Gertrude Gewertz. In September the activities were greatly accelerated as the result of the visit of Mrs. Dorothy Baker who gave two public lectures with an attendance of 50 and 70, respectively. Winston Evans made many prior contacts with key people and secured outstanding publicity in newspaper columns that are read widely throughout the South. Mrs. Joy Earl spent a week in Birmingham in October assisting with the follow-up work among the Negro contacts. She addressed a number of women's groups and started a study class of ten key Negro leaders.

In Jackson, Miss., where a year ago there were no Baha'is, there is now a group of eight. Mrs. Margett Ellis of Covington, La., who has spent several weeks in Jackson from time to time, has now settled there for a four months' period. Two public meetings held in conjunction with the Regional Teaching Conference on October 3 and 4, resulted in excellent newspaper publicity which stressed the fact that the conference was attended by Baha'is from five states.

Following her work in Denver, Colo., Orcella Relford conducted a campaign in Omaha, Nebraska in early October. Her three Baha'i lectures were attended by 125, 75 and 50 people respectively. The follow-up work is going forward under the leadership of Mrs. Florence Holinger of Chicago who conducts two classes daily. The afternoon meetings are attended by seven to ten students and the evening attendance averages 25. To further stimulate the work there, the Regional Teaching Committee for that area will hold a teaching Conference and public meeting in Omaha, November 8.

The enrollment of fourteen new Baha'is in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, during Mrs. Mabel Ives' visit there in September, brought to fruition the teaching work carried on by Mrs. Annie Romer and circuit teachers since last fall. Thus Iowa is assured of at least one Assembly next April.

New Mexico is another unsettled State that has acquired enough Baha'is to re-establish the Assembly in Albuquerque next April. This was made possible by the response to calls for pioneers by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walters of Brooklyn, N. Y. A Regional Teaching Conference scheduled for that city for October 18 featured as the guest speaker, Mrs. Dorothy Baker, who is visiting colleges in the Southwest.

Colorado is still another State that will no longer be listed as a pioneer area next year. The two disbanded Assemblies in Colorado Springs and Denver have now increased their membership beyond the required nine, and flourishing study classes are under way in both cities.

Mrs. Valeria Thornton, who moved to Laramie from California in July, has reported at length on a very successful Inter-Racial Musical which brought the Baha'i Faith to the attention of many leading citizens of that city. Appropriate follow-up is being carried on through fireside meetings. A study class of twelve meets weekly and in October the group welcomed Mrs. Clair Gillespie of River Forest, Illinois, who answered the call for Baha'i settlers. Commenting on her arrival Mrs. Thornton writes: "One can already feel the power that comes with the addition of another Baha'i."

The recent enrollment of another new member in Boise, Idaho, brings that Baha'i group up to seven. Farukh Ios and Sally Sanor, the young California pioneers who settled there in July, report that a strong study is held weekly. Twenty-six attended an informal meeting addressed by Leroy Ios in Boise in September.

Lead, S. D., has also received two new Baha'i settlers,—Mrs. Charlotte Grover of Glendale, Calif., and Mrs. Lorrol Jackson of Butte, Montana. Although this addition brings the Baha'i group membership to eight, there is a possibility that the number may be reduced owing to the impending transfer of four members to other parts of the country.

In North Dakota a Baha'i group of 9 adults and 4 youth has been formed in the Muhammadan community of Glenfield through the efforts of Mrs. Marguerite Bruegger, our Fargo pioneer. This young group is to be given further teaching assistance by Mrs. J. Stapleton, and Miss Dahiya Abas, of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Alice Dudley of Detroit has moved to Fargo to assist with the establishment of an Assembly there. With the assistance of the Regional Teaching Committee Mrs. Bruegger will conduct a series of 13 radio broadcasts beginning in November.

The five members of the group in Reno, Nevada, have had the assistance of Mrs. Eleanor Adler since the middle of July. Several fine inter-racial meetings have resulted in fine publicity for the Faith.

After four months of medical care and rest in California, Honor Kempston has returned to Anchorage, Alaska, being one of only two women who were able to secure passage. By an odd coincidence her companion was found to be an acquaintance.
made this summer who is going to Anchorage to live.

Although these brief sketches are indicative of the confirmations which attend the teaching efforts of our pioneers the task is still far from being accomplished. Of the 24 pioneer states and provinces only three at this point have promise of Assemblies by next April! The need is for more and more Bahá’í settlers.

"The gigantic enterprises which the American believers are pledged to consummate are as yet but partially concluded, the remaining two years, must witness an intensification of Bahá’í activity... on such a scale as to eclipse the splendor of all past achievements..."

NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

Inter-America News

"Be not concerned with the smallness of your numbers, neither be oppressed by the multitude of an unbelieving world... Exert yourselves; your mission is unspeakably glorious. Should success crown your enterprise America will surely evolve into a center from which waves of spiritual power will emanate, and the throne of the Kingdom of God will, in the plenitude of its majesty and glory, be firmly established." (The Advent of Divine Justice, p. 52.)

Argentina

Such glorious work is going on in Argentina and Sr. Tormo writes of study groups in three other cities which are being taught by the visiting friends from Buenos Aires. The friends are looking forward with great eagerness to the proposed visits of Mrs. Collins and Mr. Sprague.

Bolivia

Miss Hottes writes that she has not suffered from the great altitude of La Paz and that she is working constantly and with the assistance of Mme. de Cuellar and three other confirmed believers they foresee a great future for the work there. They are longing to establish a school for teachers and hope to open up a line of well chosen publicity which has not been attempted before.

Brazil

Mrs. Leonora Holsappie Armstrong is finally, we hope, to see the consummation of her hopes for the arrival of a resident teacher in Bahia for plans are underway for such a teacher, and possibly for two teachers beside Mr. Sprague, who plans to spend some time in Bahia which was especially mentioned with significance by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

Costa Rica

We have not heard recently from the two Assemblies in Costa Rica except word which has come from Miss Orbison who stopped in San José en route to her destination in Chile. We know however that the friends are very active and very devoted due to the teaching efforts of Mrs. Gayle Woolson whose work speaks for itself.

Chile

Miss Virginia Orbison, after much delay due to being many times "off-boarded" from the planes which were to have carried her but were required for army transports, arrived at Santiago de Chile late in September. She has been especially fortunate in her connections which will open many avenues and permit her to carry on the beautiful work begun by Mrs. Marcia Atwater who also hopes to return to Chile in the near future.

Cuba

Miss Josephine Kruka has been in Washington for a much needed rest but is eager to return to Havana where she has left a group of children who are our pride and joy; besides there is a splendid Assembly in Havana where they have a center of their own and are strictly observing all Feasts and holding classes.

Colombia

Our newly appointed pioneer for Colombia, Miss Ruth Shook, after a week of waiting for her plane reservations to be made good, finally decided to proceed by rail to Mexico City and from there she proceeded via Guatemala and San Salvador. Great courage and great perseverance is being displayed by these intrepid pioneers of which Miss Gwenne Dorothy Sholtis is also one.

Dominican Republic

Miss Lentz is again pleading for some young university students to join her and assist her with the splendid group which she has brought together from the ancient university of Trujillo. We hope it is not too late to get exchange students into the Republic, but if it is there are other young people who should be thinking of this opportunity.

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’í of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, newly established April 21, 1942.
Ecuador
Three young men are now working with John Stearns and eagerly awaiting the arrival of visiting teachers who will put the finishing touches to their splendid endeavors. We confidently expect great results from this corner of the world.

Guatemala
John Eichnauer and his brother Marshall are now located in Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, where they are employed by the Pan American Airways Construction Co. No one of all our pioneers has had the amount of splendid newspaper publicity that John has had for the Cause. All his articles have been written in Spanish and translations sent to the committee and we are impressed with the good judgment which John has used in publicizing the Cause.

Honduras
News has come to us that Sr. Tany Viana, who was the first to accept the Faith in Honduras, is not only teaching the Faith but has organized a class in Esperanto which is very commendable.

Mexico
The two Spiritual Assemblies in Mexico, i.e., Mexico City and Puebla, are doing splendid work. Bulletins or news letters are sent to all believers every nineteen days announcing the various classes and urging the friends to bring their acquaintances and take up some of the subjects which are being taught preparatory to uniting with the Cause.

Nicaragua
At last reports Mathew Kaszab was about to return home for a visit but he has been requested to remain if possible in view of the Guardian's urgent appeal. Mr. Kaszab's teaching work has been extending rapidly in recent months.

Haiti
Very encouraging news has come from Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell and at last they have been able to acquire some more French books. These have been very much needed and they are now asking for French translations of the Dispensation and the Will and Testament.

Peru
In Lima where Miss Nicklin is working she is having great success with her little school and her class at the hospital but the interest in the Cause is slow and she is longing for assistance. She has recently moved to a new address but will shortly have a post box which she will be able to use and will send us the number if anyone wishes to write her.

Panama
Panama is having all the visitors. They are happily on the path of all pioneers whether they travel by steamer or by plane, but they are still urging us to send them some permanent residents to bring their membership up to the nine required.

Puerto Rico
The friends in San Juan have entered unhesitatingly into the life of the country and are making friends and gaining the confidence of the people which is a sure way of progress.

San Salvador
Clarence Iverson writes that his organ programs are to be broadcast each Sunday morning and we are inquiring the wave length hoping to be able to tune in. He sends a fine photograph of the Spiritual Assembly and says his mother is still with him and in good health.

Uruguay
Wilfrid Barton always sends interesting reports of the teaching and translating work which is being done in Montevideo and makes us long to visit that lovely city and know these zealous friends.

Venezuela
Miss Priscilla Rhoads has been quite ill but we are happy to know that she has recovered and has anticipated the arrival of Miss Gwennie Dorothy Sholtis who arrived in Caracas late in September. Miss Sholtis gave up her plane reservation because of the many delays and travelled by steamer to Panama braving the perils of the Gulf of Mexico, but she arrived safely in Panama having made some very interesting contacts on the steamer despite the terrific storm which they went through. These two pioneers in Venezuela should be making good returns in the near future judging from their zeal and devotion.

Jamaica
Although not within the category of the Latin American Republics Jamaica is to have a resident teacher in Dr. Malcolm King who is returning to his native land to teach the Cause and has promised to keep the Inter-America Committee informed of the progress of his work there.

Announcement by Child Education Committee
To Groups and Isolated Believers: The Committee on Child Education has been working for some time formulating a plan for the education of Bahá’í children in accordance with the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. We have the beginning of such a plan.

Now we need to know our children. Your part in helping to set up this plan for universal education is to send us the information about them. Please send this speedily.

This is a child census. It is important that it be complete.

For each child up to and including fifteen years we need to know:
- Child’s name
- Child’s age
- Date of birth
- Parent’s name
- Address

Whatever other information will be helpful, grade in school, interests, etc. may be added.

Please send to the Committee within a few days.

Radio Teaching Activities
A most successful series of weekly radio broadcasts is being sponsored by the Baltimore Community in that city over station WBFR on Sunday afternoons at 5 o'clock.

After earnest consideration of teaching plans, the radio was chosen as the best means for bringing the Cause to public attention, and a sum of money was given by one of the believers for that purpose. In cooperation with the National Radio Committee which supplied the scripts, the series was started on August 9 and the final talk will be given on November 8.
Intensive preparatory work was done, not only in the city, but in all the surrounding towns and cities, by the Baltimore friends and the Regional Teaching Committee for that area. Ten-minute talks were prepared under the general title "The Future We Face" and the radio announcer at the end of every talk gives briefly the Bahá’í principles, as well as the subject for the following week. As requested by the national committee to anyone giving radio talks, copies of the script are offered at the close of every broadcast. This is most important, and already the Baltimore friends have reaped the results by getting in contact with several new people who have written to the station for the talks. New classes are being formed with these people for further study.

Before the series was arranged, very interesting meetings were held with station officials. The salesman took two of the believers in charge of radio arrangements to meet the program manager, who in turn became interested. Finally when the series was arranged, these two believers were asked to meet with eight men of the station’s planning board who asked questions about the Faith for an hour and a half. The Bahá’í attitude toward war, the colored race, and what was meant by “world executive” and “international force” were among the questions asked by this planning board before the series was accepted.

A different speaker almost every week has added to the publicity value of the series, and fifteen newspapers in and near Baltimore have carried both paid publicity and news articles about the series each week.

A complete report will be given on this effort when the series is finished, so that the experience and value of the work may be shared with all the friends.

The friends will be interested in reading the November issue of Survey Graphic when it comes from the press, for it will be special number called "Color" and will consist of more than one hundred pages on the serious race situation throughout the world. Such writers as Edward C. Carter, Elmer Carter, Edwin R. Embree, Lester Granger, Syud Husain, Charles S. Johnson, A. Phillip Randolph, Walter White, Lin Yutang and Sterling Brown will discuss aspects of the problem. The edition is to be specially edited by the well-known Negro scholar, Alain Locke, whose books on this same subject have given him a recognized place as an authority. Have you seen his recent book, "When Peoples Meet?"

Indians of South America, by Paul Radin. Doubleday, Doran and Company.

Latin America, by Preston James. Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Co.

All three books are highly valuable in gaining an understanding of the Indians of the western hemisphere.

The Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá
Charter of a Divine Civilization

The American Bahá’í community today includes a generation of new believers who entered the Cause after the Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in 1921. It is the privilege and duty of the older Bahá’ís to assist these friends to understand what poignant and heart-shaking experiences stirred the Bahá’í community during the fateful years when the inviolable power of the Covenant was being established throughout the West.

To realize the meaning and appreciate the blessing of His Will and Testament, it is essential to enter into the spirit of those years and retrace the Master’s steps as He demonstrated His authority as Interpreter and Exemplar of Bahá’u’lláh’s Faith. For the truths, the directions, the prayers, the appeals and the interpretations which constitute the text of the Master’s Will were given forth to the friends in embryonic form during His life and mission on earth. In Tablet and address, in deed and action, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá instructed and trained His faithful believers in the spiritual mysteries of unity, sacrifice, authority, devotion, knowledge, worship and administrative action which come to their climax and fulfilment in the text of His Will. The problems, the issues, the burdens which befall the Bahá’ís now, individually and collectively, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá encountered in their most forceful and grievous form, and the Victory won by the Center of Bahá’u’lláh’s Covenant became the victory of every true Bahá’í. For example: ‘Abdu’l-Bahá exemplified the perfection of love and service to others, whether friend or foe, but when the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh was assailed from within by treacherous and implacable enemies claiming to be believers, the Master by His own decisive action expelled these traitors from the Cause and declared that association with them was forbidden to Bahá’ís.

The Cause of Bahá’u’lláh has advanced by certain definite stages and eras, each characterized by a new blessing and distinguished by a new text. First, after the martyrdom of the Báb, there came the supreme blessing and gift, the Manifestation of Bahá’u’lláh, but not all the followers of the Báb, nor even of Bahá’u’lláh’s own household, could spiritually recognize and accept Bahá’u’lláh’s divine Power. The Cause was therefore purged of its impurity, and the principle of unity was confirmed. Then Bahá’u’lláh passed on, in 1921, leaving His Testament appointing ‘Abdul-Bahá, and again tumult and confusion seemed to arise and threaten the Cause like the waves of a stormy sea. But this outward tumult and confusion served merely to separate true believer from secret foe. Once more the Bahá’í community, strengthened and purified, met a divinely-ordained test and ordeal and by the experience became better prepared to serve the Faith. The evidence of a divine Faith is its power not only to remain steadfast under the onslaught of hostile parties outside the Cause, but also to purify itself from the insidious whisperer of doubt who works within. Bahá’u’lláh bestowed upon the Master a unique authority and a unique mission. The Master alone could understand that mission and exercise that power. From 1892 to 1921, He stood as the sacred Center of the Bahá’í community of East and West, its inspiration, its teacher, its defender, its guide and its leader. ‘Abdul-Bahá was in Himself the “Shield of His Covenant.” ‘Abdul-Bahá “guarded the Temple of His Cause.” ‘Abdul-Bahá led the “Hosts of His Testament” who “preserved the Sanctuary of His Most Beneficial Law.”

In former Dispensations, the spiritual intention of the Founder of religion has not fully penetrated the body of His followers. They have substituted human devices and expedients for the universality of Revelation. But between Bahá’u’lláh and the worldwide body of His followers, ‘Abdul-Bahá has stood steadfast, preserving the Faith and, in His Will and Testament, assuring its preservation to the end of the Bahá’í cycle.

The Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá since 1921 has been the power and authority which determine the faith of the individual believer and the spiritual integrity of the Bahá’í community, whether of town, city or nation, in the East or in the West. Through the Will and Testament, as through a pure channel, the Spirit of Bahá’u’lláh flows forth to all parts of the world, developing those institutions which are to maintain the Most Great Peace, and transform a world of darkness into a world of light. Divine Guidance comes to the world through this channel. Those who deny the Will and Testament deprive themselves of connection with Bahá’u’lláh, and isolate themselves from the Community of the Greatest Name.

Turning to the text of the Will, we find that it was revealed in three different parts or sections. Each was revealed at a different time. All were signed or sealed by the Master, and the text was written in His own hand.

As we ponder this tremendous document, we find in the text the development of certain themes.

Subjects of the Will and Testament

1. Appointment of Shoghi Effendi as Guardian of the Bahá’í Faith, sole interpreter, after ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, of the Bahá’í Writings, and chairman of the Universal House of Justice; the Guardian to appoint Hands of the Cause; and provision for succession of the Guardianship through the period ended by the coming of the next Manifestation.

2. Method of election of the Universal House of Justice; its functions.

3. Sacred obligation to teach the Cause; the greatest gift of God is teaching.

4. The Bahá’í attitude of obedience to civil government.

5. Consort with all peoples, kindreds and religions in love and fellowship.

6. Explanation of the stations of the Báb and Bahá’u’lláh.

7. A fixed money offering to be made to God through the Guardian.

8. The greatest of all things is the protection of the True Faith of God; the sin of Covenant-breaking (disobedience to `Abdu'l-Bahá); Mirzá Yahyá's rebellion against Bahá'u'lláh; sedition of Muhammad-Áli after the Master's appointment as Center of the Covenant.

9. The members of the Holy Family, the Hands of the Cause and the beloved of the Lord must obey and turn into Shoghi Effendi. Disobedience to the Guardian is denial of Bahá'u'lláh. It is incumbent upon the believers to take the greatest care of Shoghi Effendi. To none is given the right of asserting a personal opinion in relation to the Master's commands. All must turn to the Center of the Cause, Shoghi Effendi, and to the House of Justice.

There is a mysterious potency in the Word which Bahá'u'lláh explains in "The Kitáb-i-Iqán": "Meditate profoundly, that the secret of things unseen may be revealed unto you, that you may inhale the sweetness of a spiritual and imperishable fragrance, and that you may acknowledge the truth that from time immemorial even unto eternity the Almighty hath tried, and will continue to try, His servants, so that light may be dispensed from darkness, truth from falsehood, right from wrong, guidance from error, happiness from misery and roses from thorns."

This general truth throws a clear light on those portions of the Master's Will which deal with Covenant-breakers, and particularly with the disobedience and hostility of Muhammad-Áli. 'Abdu'l-Bahá's own half-brother, Bahá'u'lláh, in the "Kitáb-i-Iqán," declares that members of the Holy Family are to be respected by the believers. Concerning Muhammad-Áli, who was younger than `Abdu'l-Bahá, Bahá'u'lláh stated that the Lesser Branch was to be after the Greater Branch, and He further declared: "God's Will and Testament enjoin upon the Branches, the Twigs, and the Kinsfolk, one and all, to gaze unto the Most Great Branch" (i.e., `Abdu'l-Bahá). Therefore, when the Master ascended, Muhammad-Áli, a the eldest surviving brother, would have been head of the Holy Family and possessed of great influence in the Cause has not the Master's Will testified to Muhammad-Áli's disobedience to Bahá'u'lláh's command. Muhammad-Áli by his own action was cut off from the Holy Tree; and as the Master's Will records: "We wronged them not, but they have wronged themselves."

Here, in brief, is the reason why 'Abdu'l-Bahá in His Testament presented the case of the Covenant-breakers so emphatically:—He assured that the believers throughout the world would turn to Shoghi Effendi as the true Center of the Cause, and not to Muhammad-Áli, the self-revealed rebel against the Manifestation. By grasping this principle, and realizing that faith is no more pretense of universal tolerance but full obedience to divine laws and commands, the believers today have no difficulty in discerning the disobedience and the rebellion of all who now, or at any later time, repudiate the Guardian and flout the Bahá'í Administrative Order while claiming to be Bahá'ís.

'Abdu'l-Bahá was made by Bahá'u'lláh the touchstone distinguishing believer from non-believer, friend from enemy. His Will and Testament create a continuance of the self-revealed rebel against the Manifestation, every class and every creed, every race, every nation, every class and every creed will find that its real relationship to God and to mankind has been made conditional upon its acceptance of this Will, the Testament of `Abdu'l-Bahá, moreover, makes our faith dependent not only upon acceptance of the world order of Bahá'u'lláh but likewise upon our activity and sacrifice in teaching the Cause. We have a spiritual life to live and not merely a set of principles to approve.

The Master's blessed love for the Bahá'ís, consummated in the Will He left them on His departure, summons each believer to translate his belief into sacrifice and deeds. Our predecessors in service, the Persian Bahá'ís, demonstrated their faith in suffering martyrdom for the beloved. Now that the American believers have been given the sublime mission of spreading the Faith far and wide throughout the world, we must anticipate the need for spiritual heroism in meeting whatever obstacle or challenge confronts us on the path. Whoever demonstrates his faith against opposition, test and hardship will receive a mighty reinforcement from Bahá'u'lláh. Such a believer is made a new being, immersed in a sea of light and life. His doubts and fears are consumed, and his innate capacity and true self transcend his former self, as the tree transcends the seed!

For twenty years the Guardian has been carrying out the provisions of the Master's Will and Testament, administering the affairs of the Cause, developing its nascent institutions, and expounding the meanings of the Will to the believers throughout the world. The new friends are advised to study and ponder the Guardian's general statement on the Cause entitled "The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh," published both as a pamphlet and as a chapter in the book, "The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh." Therein He explains with utmost clarity the station of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and the Master's conveyance of authority to the Guardianship and the Administrative Order of the Cause.

The following excerpts from words of Shoghi Effendi present us with the essential truth on which our understanding of the Will is to be based.

"'Abdu'l-Bahá, Who incarnates an institution for which we can find no parallel whatever in any of the world's recognized religious systems, may be said to have closed the age to which He Himself belonged and opened the one in which we are now laboring. His Will and Testament should thus be regarded as the perpetual, the indissoluble link which the mind of Him Who is the mystery of God has conceived and brought into being. We are, then, faced with the necessity of choosing between the three ages that constitute the component parts of the Bahá'í Dispensation.

"The creative energies released by the Law of Bahá'u'lláh, permeating and evolving within the mind of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, have, by their very impact and close interaction, given birth to an Instrument which may be viewed as the Charter of the New World Order which is at once the glory and the promise of this most great Dispensation ... Bahá'u'lláh's inscrutable purpose, we must ever bear in mind, has been so thoroughly infused into the conduct of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and their motives have been so closely welded together, that the mere attempt to dissociate the teachings of the former from any system which the ideal Exemplar of those same teachings has established would amount to a repudiation of one of the most sacred and basic truths of the Faith." (The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, pages 143, 144)

SUPPLEMENTARY READINGS

1. References to 'Abdu'l-Bahá in the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh

When the ocean of My presence hath ebbed and the Book of My Revelation is ended, turn your faces toward Him Whom God hath purposed, Who hath branched from this Ancient Root. And again, when the Mystic Dove will have winged its flight from its Sanctuary of Praise and sought its far-off goal, its hidden habitation, refer ye whatsoever ye understand not in the Book to Him Who hath branched from this mighty Stock.—The Kitáb-i-Áqdas

It is incumbent upon the Aghásn, the Afrá and My kindred to turn, one and all, their faces towards the Most Mighty Branch. Consider that which We have revealed in Our Most Holy Book: "When the ocean of My presence hath ebbed and the Book of My Revelation is ended, turn your faces toward Him Whom God hath purposed, Who hath branched from this Ancient Root." The object of this sacred verse is none other except the Most Mighty Branch ('Abdu'l-Bahá). Thus have We graciously revealed unto you our potent Will, and I am verily the Gracious, the All-Powerful.—The Kitáb-i-Ahd.

There hath branched from the Sadratú'l-Muntahá this sacred and glorious Being, this Branch of Holiness; well is it with him that hath sought His shelter and abideth beneath His shadow. Verily the Limb of the Law of God hath sprung forth from this Root which God hath firmly implanted in the Ground of His Will, and Whose Branch hath been so uplifted as to encompass the whole of creation. Magnified be He, therefore, for this sublime, this blessed, this mighty, this exalted Handiwork! ... A Word hath, as a token of Our grace, gone forth from the Most Great Tablet—a Word which God hath adorned with the ornament of His own Self, and made it sovereign over the earth and all that is therein, and a sign of His greatness and power among its people ... Render thanks unto God, O people, for His appearance; for verily He is the most great Favor unto you, the most perfect Bounty upon you; and through Him every mouldering bone is quickened. Whoso turneth towards Him hath turned towards God, and whoso turneth away from Him hath turned away from My Beauty, hath repudiated My Proof, and transgressed against Me. He is the Trust of God amongst you, His charge within you, His manifestation unto you and His appearance among His favored servants ... We have sent Him down in the form of a human temple. Blest and sanctified be God Who createth the form of a human temple. Blest and sanctified be God Who createth...—The Tablet of the Branch.

2. The Covenant: Words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá

Inasmuch as great differences and divergences of denominational belief had arisen throughout the past, every man with a new idea attributing it to God, His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh desired that there should not be any ground or reason for disagreement among the Bahá'ís. Therefore with His own Pen He wrote the Book of His Covenant, addressing His relations and all people of the world, saying: "Verily, I have appointed One who is the Center of My Covenant. All must obey Him; all must turn to Him; He is the expounder of My Book and He is informed of My purpose. All must turn to Him. Whosoever He says is correct, for verily He knoweth the texts of My Book. Other than He, no one doth know My Book." The purpose of this statement is that there should never be discord and disagreement among the Bahá'ís but that they should always be united and agreed. ... Therefore whosoever obeys the Center of the Covenant appointed by Bahá'u'lláh has obeyed Bahá'u'lláh, and whosoever disobeys Him has disobeyed Bahá'u'lláh. Beware! beware! lest any one should speak from the authority of his own thoughts or create a new thing out of himself. ... His Holiness Bahá'u'lláh shuns such souls.

3. The Will and Testament: Words of Shoghi Effendi

On one hand the remarkable revelations of the Beloved's Will and Testament, so amazing in all its aspects, so emphatic in its injunctions, have challenged and perplexed the keenest minds, whilst the ever-increasing confusion of the world, threatened as never before with disruptive forces, fierce rivalries, fresh commotions and grave disorder, has well-nigh overwhelmed the heart and damped the zeal of even the most enthusiastic believer in the destiny of mankind.

And yet, how often we seem to forget the clear and repeated warnings of our beloved Master, who, in particular during the concluding years of His mission on earth, laid stress on the "severe mental tests" that would inevitably sweep over His loved ones of the West—tests that would purge, purify and prepare them for their noble mission in life. (Bahá'í Administration, 43, 44.)

Humanity, torn with dissension and burning with hate, is crying at this hour for a fuller measure of that love which is born of God, that love which in the last resort will prove the one solvent of its most incalculable difficulties and problems. Is it not incumbent upon us, whose hearts are aglow with love for Him, to make still greater effort, to manifest that love in all its purity and power in our dealings with our fellow-men? May our love of our beloved Master, so ardent, so disinterested in all its aspects, find its true expression in love for our fellow-brethren and sisters in the faith as well as for all mankind. I assure you, dear friends, that progress in such matters as these is limitless and infinite, and that upon the extent of our achievements along this line will ultimately depend the success of our mission in life. (Bahá'í Administration, 52)
Enduring, Momentous Victory

A Message From the Guardian

Acclaim with grateful heart, on twenty-first Anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Ascension, the glorious emergence of the firmly-welded, incorruptible American Bahá’í community from severest crisis since His passing which the blindness of the breakers of Bahá'u'lláh's and 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Covenant has, amidst His kindred, and in the City of the Covenant, recently tragically precipitated. Posterity will unhesitatingly recognize so spontaneous, shining, stirring demonstration of fidelity rendered alike to the Lord of the Covenant and to its Center as a victory more enduring, more momentous, than any triumphs, however notable, which the standard-bearers of the Administrative Order, the champion builders of the Temple, the stalwart executors of the Divine Plan have achieved or may yet achieve in the closing years of the expiring First Bahá’í Century. Nursed since birth in the lap of the unfailing solicitude of the Center of the Covenant, torch-bearer of the Divine Order recognized as child of that Covenant, vanguard of that host destined to diffuse the Light of that same Covenant over the face of the entire globe, American Bahá’í community is now assuming rightful place at the forefront of the world-wide, loyal, unbreachable spiritual army of Bahá'u'lláh preparing, both in the East and West, to launch still greater campaigns, scale loftier heights, at the dawning of the Second Bahá’í Century.

November 30, 1942

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 4 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period November 1-30, 1942

Last month we published the Guardian’s message of October 3, and the responses made by the friends up to the time of the meeting of the National Assembly held November 12, 13, 14 and 15 were so impressive that a message was sent to Shoghi Effendi as follows:

"Your teaching appeal producing most widespread, fervent, sacrificial response ever made by American believers. Thoroughly convinced that spiritual condition has been created for complete eventual success of Seven Year Plan. Entire community stirred to depths, moving forward with ever-increasing impetus. Hearts filled with reverence and gratitude for your unfailing guidance. This upsurge is the testimony of America’s devotion to beloved Guardian."

23. Forty-three Assemblies had responded, besides some groups and individuals. A total of forty-nine pioneers and settlers was listed as ready to undertake a mission, and many others were reported as volunteering for weekend or occasional activity. This correspondence revealed extraordinary effort to contribute for deputizing in addition to regular donations to the National Fund.

On November 10 the National Teaching Committee reported data covering its immense undertakings since the Convention period. Up to October 20, twenty-two believers had been settled in unoccupied areas. From then to November 10, four additional settlers were sent out, another four were to proceed at once, making thirty pioneer settlements in all. In addition, the National Teaching Committee received twenty applications from Convention time to October 20, and twenty-nine applications from then to November 13, or a total of forty-nine applications over and above the thirty settlers sent out.

These records all combine to present a clear picture of a powerful spiritual community rapidly arousing to consciousness of its capacity when consecrated to the mighty task.

Now let us mark well the Guardian’s message of November 30, received after he had learned of this upsurge of teaching spirit—the message preceding this progress report. These words have such profound meaning that we can ponder them over and over, for they connect our collective activities of this hour with the victory over negative forces which have assailed the Cause both in America and in Haifa itself. Shoghi Effendi acclaims the response of the friends to his appeal as a victory greater than any the American believers have or will achieve in these closing years of the First Bahá’í Century. Fidelity has been rendered to Bahá'u'lláh, the Lord of the Covenant, and to ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, its Center.

The privilege of association in such a triumph can only express itself in acts and deeds.

24. Mrs. Amelia E. Collins has been completing the details in connection with the work of constructing the Memorial to May Maxwell in Buenos Aires, and is devoting herself to teaching and contacts in that city and with other Assemblies.
and groups on her return. Philip Sprague, volunteering to serve in the Inter-America field, has also been active in Buenos Aires, after meeting the friends and pioneer teachers in Panama, Quito, Lima and Santiago. Mrs. Enos M. Barton has proceeded to Montevideo, making as many stops as possible en route. Winifred Baker has obtained passport and reservations for Colombia.

25. A new National Committee has been appointed, the Baha’i College Foundation, with the function of sending out teachers who can present the Message to college faculties and undergraduates, with a view to ultimately establishing organized Baha’i facilities at colleges and universities. The great population of teachers and students is one to which the Message must be given with all possible effort, as it is stirred to the depths and uncertain of the future.

26. The Temple construction work has proceeded rapidly in recent weeks and the Trustees have been assured that the steps will be completed by December 31. To commemorate the end of construction of the exterior ornamentation called for in the Seven Year Plan, the National Assembly will issue in December an illustrated pamphlet entitled “The Baha’i Temple, House of Worship of a World Faith.” This presents the history of the enterprise, technical details of construction, and the significance of the Mashriqul-Adhkar. The Baha’i News Service Committee is working on a special press campaign which will bring the finished building to the attention of technical and trade papers as well as the daily press.

27. From May 1 to October 30 the National Fund received $49,784.94. The October contributions amounted to $11,183.30. Seventy-nine assemblies sent contributions, eighty-four contributed, and donations came from 104 isolated friends. October expenditures amounted to $13,753.61, including $8,761.50 for Temple construction, $1,097.01 Temple Maintenance, $1,220.00 National and Regional Teaching, $1,291.46 Inter-America teaching, $488.30 for other Committee budgets, and $1,125.38 for administration.

Concentration of Resources

In order to effect all possible economy in administrative expense, for the concentration of resources on teaching and Temple construction, the National Spiritual Assembly has voted to reduce the size of Baha’i News for the present to four pages. The editor has been directed to go over and edit such reports as are too long to fit into the new arrangement.

The Annual Reports issued prior to the Convention are also to be cut to about half the length of the 1942 edition, which means briefer statements by the National Committees, and the digesting of Regional teaching reports by the National Teaching Committee and their presentation in its annual report.

Regional Teaching Committees are requested to restrict their bulletins to one sheet.

The Guardian’s direction that administrative economy be exercised immediately applies to local Assemblies as well as to the National body. The NSA is taking steps to effect all possible economy and expects that each local Assembly will do the same.

The Guardian’s Request

In a letter dated November 14, 1923, (page 45, third edition of Baha’i Administration) Shoghi Effendi gave utterance to an earnest request that all the believers offer prayer on his behalf. The exact words are reprinted here, so that the friends who wish to quote the request may follow the Guardian’s own phraseology:

“I cherish the hope that from now on, the Beloved may bestow upon me all the strength and vigor that will enable me to pursue over a long and unbroken period of strenuous labor the supreme task of achieving, in collaboration with the friends in every land, the speedy triumph of the Cause of Baha’u’llah. This is the prayer I earnestly request all my fellow-brethren and sisters in the Faith to offer on my behalf.”

Spiritual Prerequisites

In The Advent of Divine Justice, the Guardian lays down the spiritual prerequisites of success upon which depend the outcome of all our Baha’i activities. “This rectitude of conduct, honesty, fair-mindedness, reliability, and trustworthiness, must distinguish every phase of the life of the Baha’i community,” he states on page 19.

Speaking of teachers in this Cause, Baha’u’llah revealed the following: “They whose hearts are turned towards Him Who is the Object of the adoration of the entire creation must needs, in this Day, pass beyond and be sanctified from all created things, visible and invisible. If they arise to teach My Cause, they must let the breath of Him Who is the Unconstrained stir them and must spread it abroad on the earth with high resolve, with minds that are completely detached from and independent of all things, and with souls that are sanctified from the world and its vanities.”

In keeping with these truths, the National Spiritual Assembly feels that it is of paramount importance, especially in these crucial days, to keep all Baha’i teaching activity severed from even the appearance of confusing the teacher as such with any financial interest or material gain in the teacher’s relations with those who are primarily seeking spiritual knowledge and instruction.

The practice of a trade, craft or profession is obligatory in this Revelation, and its normal exercise is part of the average life. It is not any person’s daily work which might involve the Cause in criticism, but the association of personal interest with the sacred responsibility of sharing the Message.

Inter-America News

During the past few weeks we have seen Miss Shook favorably established in Bogotá, Colombia, where already she has made a place for herself among the American and English communities and has been assured of the interest which her profession will arouse. She is now expecting Miss Winifred Baker to join her and the Committee is happy to mention the very fine qualifications which Miss Baker has to offer for pioneer service.

This brings us to the point of emphasizing the need for thorough study of Spanish or Portuguese for those who may be intending to enter this field. A letter from Philip Sprague urges that more attention be paid to this study. Philip, by the way, is a flaming torch, for wherever he goes he displays such tact and such loving helpfulness that we receive the most glowing reports of his work.

Miss Virginia Orbison who is now well settled in Santiago, Chile, is exuberant over the visit of Mrs. Collins who, she says, has deeply impressed the people and has spoken with such authority that the Administrative Order is beginning to assume the great importance which it is destined to awaken when it is clearly understood and put into practice.

Mr. Sprague visited Colombia, Ecuador, Panama, Peru and Chile at last reports, and Mrs. Collins was in Buenos Aires attending to the details of the memorial to Mrs. Maxwell. When these two pioneer teachers return they will bring to us the great wave of loving unity which is steadily growing in South America.

Regarding Central America there are now four Spiritual Assemblies but we still have to see the organization of Guatemala and Nicaragua, both of which will receive our immediate attention for there are certainly enough students of the Faith in those countries to bring about the formation of Spiritual Assemblies this year.

Miss Gwenne Sholtis is settling into Venezuela but feels somewhat the lack of Spanish which she is now devoting much time to. We could use a pioneer in Venezuela who knows Spanish and could assist as we have at this time no registered believers there.

Miss Margaret Lentz is still urging us to send some young people who could enter the University in Trujillo and associate with the students many of whom have become interested in the teachings. Could not some young person volunteer for this lovely service?

It is becoming increasingly evident that we are to have the assistance of certain local believers in several of the Republics to pioneer either in their own countries or in others where little work has been done. If all goes well we hope to see Mr. Barton and Sr. Torno go together to Asuncion, Paraguay, where Elizabeth Cheney has left such fine budding plants and so many who are truly devoted to the Faith, this plan however is dependent upon many sanctions.

Mrs. Amédée Gibson of the Los Angeles Community is doing a beautiful service for the friends in Haiti. Mrs. Gibson is French and is making typed copies of various of the Writings and binding them with her own hands. These examples of her work and devotion are very gratefully received by the Committee and forwarded to the Spiritual Assembly of Port-au-Prince.

Race Unity

Reports From the Assemblies

Constructive reports on the Race Unity work are coming in from many of the Assemblies. We regret that there is not space to share all of them with you, but a few excerpts are listed below.

San Francisco — "Our most recent attempt, a Chinese evening, was the most successful in bringing out an audience. Fifty-nine invitations sent to Fellowship and Teaching Committee contacts included a notice of the Friday evening public meeting, an illustrated Temple lecture, as well as the Chinese evening on Saturday night. . .As a result there were fifty-eight people present for the Chinese program, eighteen of them non-Baha'is and five children. There were five Chinese, five Negroes and two Mexican."

Peoria — "Last night at Feast, we had a large table of books and magazines on the Race situation, and a talk given by one of our mem-members who had just visited in Memphis at Henderson College."

Philadelphia — "Last year we entertained at our Center a group of very progressive Negro college boys and girls known as the 'West Phil. Civic Club'. We hope to meet with this group again in the near future."

Urbana — "Our bit of race unity work lately has been a twelve-minute broadcast on the subject, "The Question of Prejudice," a talk written by Mrs. Alta Gaines. It was so well liked by some of the Negro audience that we have had and granted five requests for copies of the talk. The Illinois Times, Danville, Ill., printed it all on the front page of the paper."

Englewood — "We expect to have many Bahá'í evenings and days of a social nature this fall and winter for through these affairs a friendship and closeness is developed that brings the members of our community closer together."

Phoenix — "We have read with great interest the appearance in Bahá'í News of "An Up-to-date Bibliography" and will certainly make use of this in our study of the races and hope to have some interesting reports to make to the National Committee before long."

Milwaukee — "We are in touch with Indian, Mexican, Negro and Jewish groups and are continuing this work to the best of our ability and time, including musical and international nights."

Arlington — "The local Negro library has gladly accepted Bahá'í books. We hope at a later date to be able to report a program of activity with this minority race."

East Orange — "While we do not have a Race Unity Committee at the present time, we hope to be able to form one at an early date. We also expect to cooperate with the Newark, Bloomfield and Montclair Assemblies in giving a Race Unity Meeting in the very near future."

Ann Arbor — "Carver Center, a Negro Community house which recently has been established in Ypsilanti, had a program of music and poetry yesterday which was attended by several Ann Arbor Bahá'ís. Catherine Faily, isolated believer in Ypsilanti, was largely responsible for the program. We have contributed work, books, time and money for the development of this Negro community center in Ypsilanti, and occasionally we have had our Bahá'í Feasts at Dunbar, the Negro community center in Ann Arbor."

Los Angeles — "In fact, the race unity question, as far as regards the colored race, as an obstacle in the Bahá'í Community work of the official committees, does not seem to exist here. There are about a dozen colored members in the local Bahá'í Community, and almost all of them are active in serving the Faith in some manner. They have appeared on programs, both as chairmen and as speakers. And with credit to themselves."

Chicago — "Our plan is to take advantage of present-day publicity relative to international racial unity and have made contacts for speakers such as: Mr. Benjamin Ojike, Nigeria, Africa — B. A. Oxford, Eng. B. Sc. Ohio State, Ph. D. Chicago. Mr. C. Y. Hu, Soo Chung, Prov. China — B. Sc. Nanking Univ., China, M. Sc. Univ. of Cal. Mr. Tson, Chinking, China — B. S. Ass. Univ., S. W. China, M. Sc. Chicago. Miss M. Garay, Chilí, S. A. — B. A. Chicago, M. Soc. Sc. Chicago. These speakers have been contacted and are awaiting dates. This is our start, I hope, that with the help of our committee, to present a fine program this year."

Many more replies have been received, and excerpts from them will be published later."

Exhibits Committee
The Committee on Bahá'í Exhibits advises the friends that production of the Temple cutouts and displays has been delayed due to inability of the manufacturer to obtain stock of cardboard. The display which was to have been sent to Regional and National Teaching Committees last month will be delivered later, but the date is uncertain.

Publishing Announcements
The Bahá'í Temple, House of Worship of a World Faith, illustrated pamphlet issued by the National Spiritual Assembly to mark the completion of the exterior ornamentation this winter. 32 pages and paper cover, 7½ by 10 inches. It provides information of importance to believers and is suitable for use as general teaching literature. Sold in lots of ten for $1.00.

Information About the Bahá'í House of Worship. 24 mimeographed pages, size 8½ by 11 inches. This makes generally available the information compiled by the Temple Guides Committee for its guide study classes: data and facts about the architect, architecture, grounds, history of building, materials and methods of construction, symbolism of the design, principles of Bahá'í worship, etc. Most helpful for teachers and exhibitors of the Temple model. Per copy, $0.25.

New editions of Spanish leaflets: Principios de la Fe Bahá'í, per copy, $0.05; El Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, brief statement about the Temple. Per copy, $0.05.

The friends are informed that the compilation entitled Bahá'í Writings was a donation to the Cause and receipts from sales go to the Temple Fund.

Kindly send orders well in advance, to offset delays in transportation beyond our control. Address: Bahá'í Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

The Bahá'í World
Will all who find references to our Faith in non-Bahá'í books or magazines which are not already listed in Bahá'í Bibliography of The Bahá'í World, volume VIII, please send such references to Mrs. Bertha H. Kirkpatrick, Olivet, Michigan. Information should include name of book, author and publisher and page on which reference occurs. If reference is in a magazine, name of magazine, month or week and year of issue and author of article with page should be given.

Meeting of National Spiritual Assembly, January 8, 9, 10, 11, 1943, at Wilmette.
This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 5 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period December 1-31, 1942

28. This number of Baha'i News presents a photograph of a completed side of the House of Worship. At the time of this writing, there remains but a week before the exterior ornamentation of the Temple is finished and all the hoists, scaffolding and other operating material, including the shed, and also the debris, are cleared away.

We stand at a great, a long-awaited, an inspiring hour in the history of the American Baha'i community. Though the interior is still to be designed before the sacred edifice can be employed for its entire spiritual purpose, and that consumption lies in the Second Baha'i Century, nevertheless we have collectively fulfilled the sacred trust given us by the blessed Master Himself, defined clearly for us by the Guardian in the Seven Year Plan.

What the power of unity and devotion can accomplish has been demonstrated, first to ourselves, and then to the world. "Whoever arises for the service of this building," was the Master's assurance to the few hundred Bahá'ís of North America some thirty-five years ago, "shall be assisted with a great power from His Supreme Kingdom and upon him spiritual and heavenly blessings shall descend...." And again: "The Mas'úriqul-Adhkár is the most important matter and the greatest divine institution." The building of this House of Worship for Bahá'u'lláh united the believers, concentrated their efforts, led them through the early stages of administrative order, and welded them into a great body imbued with organic qualities of a Baha'i community.

At present, the House of Worship is significant from its contribution to the teaching work. In the teaching phase of the Plan we have a mighty task which, for this era of the Cause, corresponds to the vital importance of the Temple in previous years. In establishing Baha'i communities in the unsettled areas of North America, and a nucleus in the remaining countries of Central and South America, we will be required, and enabled, to manifest new and higher spiritual virtues and powers. Faith does not await the development of capacity before it begins its work, for nothing develops in inaction. Faith is assurance that the capacity will be given if we sincerely and whole-heartedly plunge into the work. As the Master declared: "It is known and clear that today the unseen divine assistance encompasseth those who deliver the Message. And if the work of delivering the Message be neglected, the assistance shall be entirely cut off, for it is impossible that the friends of God could receive assistance unless they be engaged in delivering the Message."

We may understand the Guardian's message of November 30 as signaling the birth of the era dedicated wholly to teaching effort. The results are assured, but we must raise the new spiritual edifice stone by stone, and press the work without interruption, so that the spiritual task may not stand uncompleted when the First Century ends.

29. In the Inter-America field there are two important new pioneer projects under way. Winnifred Baker, of Lima, Ohio, started forth on Saturday, December 26, as another pioneer for Colombia, where she will be associated with Ruth Shook in carrying on the teaching. Jean Silver, after a change of plan became necessary, has applied for passport to settle in Rosario, the second largest city of Argentine. The hope is that she may be able to begin her journey to this post early in January.

30. Recent teaching projects initiated in North America through the National Teaching Committee include: Mrs. Margaret Ellis, Jackson, Miss., three months; Mrs. Ruth Cornell, Hot Springs, Ark., for two months; Mrs. Marguerite Bruegger, Fargo, N. D., for two months; Virginia Camelot, West Virginia, two months; Mrs. Florence Holsinger, Omaha, Neb., one month. Other projects not previously reported include: Mrs. Marcia Atwater, Edmonton, Alberta, seven weeks; Sylvia King, Regina, Sask., three months; Harlan Ober, meetings in Prince Edward Island; Dorothy Champ, settlement in Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. Ruth Moffett, Wilming­ton, Del., one month, Greensboro, N. C., and Augusta, Ga., one month; Mrs. Clair Gillespie, settlement in Laramie, Wyoming; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Walters, settlement in Albuquerque, N. M.

31. Mrs. Dorothy Baker has recently visited a large number of colleges in the Southwest, in continuance of the special race unity project initiated last year. Details will be published when the final report is received. Louis G. Gregory has been teaching in a number of Southern colleges in November and December, and a more detailed report of this work will also be made available.

32. The Library and Sales Committee is rendering an important service by concentrating the distribution of Baha'i material, not handled by the Publishing Committee, in one central agency. This Committee fills cash orders received, and has no budget for placing any free material. At present, through the Chairman, Harry E. Walrath, the Committee can fill orders for Bahá'í ringstones, photographs of the Master and of the Temple, Temple slides for illustrated lectures, and the new Temple display announced in this issue of Baha'i News.

33. From May 1 to November 30, 1942, the National Fund received $61,149.29. The November contributions equalled $11,364.35. Seventy-four Assemblies sent contributions, eighty-five groups donated, and 113 isolated believers made donations. November expenditures amounted to

Baha'i News

$17,263.99, of which $9,982.99 went to Temple construction, $762.16 to Temple maintenance, $1,350.83 to Green Acre maintenance, $1,278.00 to National Teaching, $1,100.00 to Regional Teaching, $1,191.00 to Inter-America Teaching, and $1,051.71 to administration. The completion of Temple construction will bring to an end the incurrence of further construction costs, but monthly payments must be made beginning January in the amount of $3,000.00 per month for six months in order to pay Temple obligations already incurred. The steps contract has exceeded the contractor's estimate by about $20,000.00, and it is this unexpected excess which we must refund in 1943.

Preferred Mileage for Local Chairmen and Secretaries

The Office of Price Administration, Washington, D. C., has just written its final decision in the matter of the application made by the National Spiritual Assembly for extra gasoline rationing for Chairmen and Secretaries of Local Assemblies, and for all members of the Regional Teaching Committees. As stated in its letter cited below, the government bureau considers that the local officers qualify, but not the Regional Committee members.

The letter, dated December 21, 1942, and addressed to Mr. A. B. McDaniel, states:

"Upon a review of the facts presented by representatives of the Baha'i Faith, we conclude that the chairmen and secretaries of the Local Spiritual Assemblies of the Baha'is may be eligible for preferred mileage under the provisions of Section 7706 (k), Mileage Rationing: Gasoline Regulations (Ration Order No. 5c), to meet the religious needs of the localities they regularly serve. These officers conduct the religious meetings of the community, or congregation, perform funeral services, are authorized in three states to perform the marriage service, and in general perform religious services similar to those rendered by ministers of other religious sects or churches.

"Members of Regional Committees, however, are ineligible under the Preferred Mileage Section of the Gasoline Regulations since these officers serve isolated individuals or unorganized groups who are members of the Faith and clearly are not regularly serving a congregation as required under Section 7706 (k)."

Convention Notice

During December, each local Assembly received a form entitled "Application for Participation in Annual Baha'i Convention of 1943". This is to be filled out and returned to the National Office by February 1. Assemblies are requested not to overlook this customary procedure, as otherwise the Convention call would be delayed.

Action on the Pioneer Front

Beloved Friends:

The summons of the Guardian to "swift action, boldly conceived, unanimously supported, systematically conducted," has called from the American believers an instant, far-reaching response. Our Baha'i Community is at last on the march. Now in the last months our energies are being coordinated, and the goals of the Seven Year Plan have become, at this late date, our single objective.

Action on the pioneer front is the core of our great endeavor. Without pioneers, those "celestial warriors" of whom the Master spoke, no victories in the virgin States and Provinces can be conclusively won. What, then, are the prospects of pioneers and settlers, among all who have heard the Guardian's call?

Let us bear in mind that the virgin field, as distinct from disbanding Assemblies, required eighty-one settlers. Now, since receipt of Shoghi Effendi's cablegram about November 1st, the following actions can be reported:

Settlers already established .....8
Settlers now planning to go .....12
Settlers transferring residence a short distance to aid the Plan. 13

Total 33

Of these 33 settlers, only 21 will be established in virgin States and Provinces. The remaining 12 will assist disbanding Assemblies. Thus we are still 60 settlers short of achieving our paramount goal!

On the other hand, the Teaching Committee is in correspondence with some 50 additional believers who have answered the Guardian's summons, and many will surely be added to the pioneer rolls. Besides all these, the Regional Committees will receive the names of 28 volunteers for traveling and circuit teaching.

What has been accomplished in the past six weeks bids fair to eclipse our efforts of the preceding six months. Between Convention and November 1st the American Community sent out 24 pioneers and settlers, 23 of whom were established in virgin territories and 1 in a disbanding Assembly. Throughout that same period, approximately 15 teachers were actively engaged in public campaigns and follow-up study classes in areas of the Seven Year Plan. Already we can confidently report that Local Assemblies will be organized in Iowa, North Carolina, Idaho, New Mexico, Colorado, and New Hampshire; and there seems reasonable assurance of success in seven other Virgin States.

Thus, the "crucial year" has awakened our collective strength as never before. We have carried our Faith into action at numerous strategic points. The way is clear to final victory. But we dare not falter nor relax. Success must be added to success, the obstacles which are "hourly increasing" must be firmly and fully met, the "stupendous exertions required" must be freely and passionately expended. In this way and in this way alone, can we "seal (the) triumph (of the) greatest collective enterprise launched during fifty years (of) American Baha'i history."

Beloved friends, the call is for pioneers! The time is critically, imperatively short! The "Guardian's Summons to Teaching" has not yet received our complete reply. Let us hear from you in the next few days or weeks, that your name, too, may be written on the glorious pioneer roll.

-NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

A New Kind of Settlement

Elsewhere in this issue the Teaching Committee has reported thirteen settlers who are answering the Guardian's summons to teaching by moving short distances, establishing residence within the limits of one or another of the cities which represent the goals of the Seven Year Plan. The cities receiving such assistance are Boise, Idaho; Reno, Nevada; Colorado Springs, Colorado; Burbank, Huntington Park, and Alhambra, California.

Here we have a kind of settlement which is of immense value to our teaching goals, yet which is possible to many believers who cannot hope to move a longer distance. These settlers did not have to give up their positions and responsibilities. What they did was to move their homes from some area of no direct significance, to a nearby point located within the pattern of the Seven Year Plan.

Throughout the United States and Canada there must be dozens of believers who have in their grasp a similar opportunity. The needs and the times are calling these friends to a decision. The very circumstances of the War are urging upon them a speedy action, as the difficulties of housing and transportation daily close in upon them. And how great is their responsibility to act, when viewed in relation to the selfless sacrifices of those who are uprooting all the conditions of their lives, to move to some distant pioneer front.

It may be that these very believers, who hold in their hands such a precious opportunity to advance the Plan, are holding as well the key to victory or loss for the American Community. We do not have resources to waste. And the time for action in every phase of the Plan is now. In the words of Shoghi Effendi, "Speed must be your motto."

It is our heartfelt hope that all of the friends will give this matter their most urgent attention, by studying again the cities listed in "The Guardian's Summons to Teaching." Then, if it lies within your power, we urge that you decide to move, and move at once, to one of the cities of a Virgin State or disbanded Assembly.

Inter-America News

Costa Rica

Costa Rica maintains the lead in Press work for we have recently received from Mrs. Gayle Woolson an article from "Repertorio Americano" entitled "El Templo de la Luz y Profecia" which appeared in October's issue, and another article "La Luz del Oriente" with a photograph of 'Abdu'l-Bahá—from "El Libano" of San José. These articles are written in Spanish and are evidence of the excellent work which Mrs. Woolson is doing. She is surely to be congratulated. Honduras too is full of life and Sr. Viana has established beside a class in Esperanto, a class for young people which he writes us is flourishing. We have been informed of seven new registrations in Tegucigalpa during the last few weeks.

Ecuador

We point to Quito with a glow of pride. John Stearns, who is a member of the Quito Symphony Orchestra, is now sponsoring a Radio program under the auspices of his Kandy Kitchen. His programs present lovely classical music and, besides, readings from the Teachings! These broadcasts come over short wave (32.05 meters, 9355 kc.) Monday evenings at 8:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. We are assured that they can be picked up all over South America and occasionally Spain, and that we might be able to receive them here. If anyone gets them we would appreciate hearing from them. L. Gonzales, the first Bahá'í of Ecuador, is the speaker on this program.

Dominican Republic

Miss Lentz writes that she is just about to celebrate her third anniversary as a resident of Trujillo. She has worked very hard and very steadily and recently has been rewarded by the acceptance of a distinguished young man. She is still expecting some believer, a youth, to go there and assist her with the young university students who are coming to her reunions.

Colombia

Miss Ruth Shook has taken an apartment in Bogotá and is furnishing it so that she may have a place... where she can carry on her Bahá'í activities. Mrs. Barton has also just visited her and reports that Miss Shook has made ever so many friends and is very much beloved.

Venezuela

Miss Sholtis has sent in her first registration card of a beautiful young actress who, she says, is radiant. Miss Sholtis' health has been restored and she is energetically working.

In recounting the work of the various Republics the friends will miss a statement about Paraguay. This country and one or two other spots are our gravest concern. Something must be done to continue the work which Elizabeth Cheney has so splendidly established there in Asunción and this is a call for pioneers. May Bahá'u'lláh send us someone for Paraguay and for Nicaragua and Guatemala, and Guayaquil, Ecuador. There are positions in Panama, there is an opening in Guayaquil, and then think of San Domingo! Shall we not gladden and surprise the Guardian?

—Nellie S. French, Secretary

Temple Display, Temple Slides, Temple Photograph

The fragile and expensive Temple model has been replaced by the Exhibits Committee, which has prepared a reproduction of a painting of the Temple on linen, measuring 30 by 30 inches, mounted like a wall map with wood at top and bottom, ready to hang on any flat surface. The face of the picture has been given a special cellulose finish for extra protection. This Temple display, which rolls up when transported, will be exceedingly useful to local Assemblies as well as individual believers. It can be obtained for $5.00 from the Temple Library and Sales Committee, H. E. Walrath, Chairman, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill.

The two sets of Temple slides recently announced will be ready during January, and all orders on hand will be filled during the month. There are 36 black and white slides, measuring 2 by 2 inches, and ten color slides of the same size. The cost for both sets, postpaid, is $4.25, and orders are to be sent to the Temple Library and Sales Committee as above. All the material needed to prepare a lecture to accompany the slides can be obtained in the new study course entitled “Information About the Bahá'í House of Worship,” sold by the Publishing Committee at 25c per copy.

A photograph showing the completed House of Worship, measuring 7½ by 9½ inches, can also be obtained from Mr. H. E. Walrath at 40c each, postpaid. This picture is suitable for framing, or can be used in making a halftone plate for publicity, for illustrating local programs, announcements, etc.

Temple Guiding

Despite restriction on transportation, the Bahá'í House of Worship continues to be a magnet that attracts thousands of visitors annually. The total number of visitors for the first ten months of 1942 was 11,852, a decrease of only 2,416 over the same period of 1941. This difference would be greatly reduced had we not discontinued guiding this year about September 15, four weeks earlier than in former years, due to the exceptional coldness of the weather.

From January through June this year there has been an increase in the number of visitors each month over like months of 1941, the decrease setting in since June. Visitors have come this year from all the States, as well as from Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Alaska, six provinces of Canada; Cuba, Mexico, Brazil, Bolivia, Costa Rica, Colombia, Bulgaria, Germany, England, Turkey, Iraq, India, Afghanistan, Korea and China.

The Guides Committee again appeals to communities in the Temple area to cooperate in supplying guides or guide material, and potential guides are again urged to attend the Temple class for guides which meets in the Temple every Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m. The Teacher is Mr. Edwin Mattoon. Lesson sheets will be furnished upon request.

Each year nearly 17,000 people have come to the Temple from all parts of the United States and the world. It is incumbent upon all Bahá'ís, who are not actually engaged in teaching work that keeps them away, to participate and do their share in this important phase of Bahá'í teaching. Nor is it merely an obligation. It is a privilege all should share.

Messages from the Guardian

Just informed by mail of the magnificent response made by American believers in recent teaching appeal. Convey to pioneers of the newly launched sacrificial campaign assurance of my inexpressible gratitude. The area of the unfinished tasks is visibly diminishing as Bahá’í century speeds to close. Urge every hesitant believer, however unprepared and inexperienced, audaciously to arise, determinedly to press forward, nobly persevere to reinforce the ranks of the trailbreakers of the Formative Age now unitedly arisen to seal the triumph of the initial undertaking marking the opening phase of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Divine Plan.—January 6, 1943.

The immortal Lu, mother-teacher of the American Bahá’í Community, herald of the dawn of the Day of the Covenant, has been ceremoniously and reverently transferred by Egyptian brethren representing the local Bahá’í communities to the immediate vicinity of the grave of far-famed ‘Abdu’l-Fa‘lî, in the newly established Bahá’í cemetery in Cairo. The Ismá‘ílîyyih believers together with Assembly delegates of Egypt have held an inaugural ceremony at the second Bahá’í cemetery allocated by the Egyptian authorities. The sacred rights of the persecuted, expelled community, repeatedly denied legitimate burial, are now vindicated. The progressive emancipation of the Faith of Bahá’ulláh from the traditional shackles of religious orthodoxy is increasingly evident and humbly, gratefully recognized by followers of the Faith the world over. —January 7, 1943.

Heart aglow with pride, love, gratitude for superb achievement of completion of exterior of the House of Worship, Mother Temple of the West. Bahá’ulláh’s high behest, enshrined in His Most Holy Book, has been brilliantly executed. The thirty-five year old enterprise, initiated on same day that the Báb’s sacred remains were transferred to Mount Carmel, has been triumphantly consummated. The unique Edifice, singled out for consecration by the hands of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, has been nobly reared. The Greatest Holy Leaf’s last ardent wish has been befittingly fulfilled. The Concourse on high is jubilant. Myself bow head in joyous, reverent recognition of prodigious accomplishment which deserves to rank among the outstanding enterprises launched in the Heroic Age and the most signal victory won since the inception of the Formative Period of the Bahá’í Dispensation. —January 18, 1943.

Assure relatives of Mathew Kaszab of my heartfelt condolences and profound sympathy for the loss of this heroic pioneer. His services are unforgettable and abundantly rewarded. Loving prayers.—January 19, 1943.

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 6 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period January 1-31, 1943

34. An event of unique importance throughout the Bahá’í world is the construction of the Memorial to May Maxwell at Quilmes Cemetery, in the suburbs of Buenos Aires. After a block of Carrera marble was purchased, and a number of prominent sculptors consulted by representatives of the Spiritual Assembly of Buenos Aires, Mrs. Amelia E. Collins made a special journey there to represent the National Spiritual Assembly in making final arrangements, selecting the sculptor, and placing the contract. Mrs. Collins has fulfilled this mission, and the work is now proceeding. The dedication of the Memorial by the Bahá’ís of Buenos Aires and other Latin American cities is planned for March 21.

35. Between January 22 and 25, twelve Area Conferences were held in order to concentrate energy upon the importance of increasing the number of pioneers and settlers going forth to the key cities where Assemblies are to be formed. The meetings were held in the following cities: New York, Boston, Montreal, Washington, Cincinnati, Chicago, Toronto, Vancouver, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Milwaukee. At ten of these gatherings a member of the National Spiritual Assembly presented the urgent teaching needs, and at all the meetings a National or Regional Teaching Committee representative explained the definite requirements of the key cities and handled questions raised by volunteers. The movement of the American Community in the direction of service established by the Guardian gathers momentum with each passing day.

36. The Bahá’í News Service Committee has carried out a very extensive program of publicity releases to announce the completion of the Temple exterior. A letter, an article, a photo or offer of cut or mat, and a copy of the New Temple pamphlet, was sent out to 500 daily papers and technical journals. 500 Temple pamphlets have been given the Temple Guides Committee for special distribution in 1943. The Race Unity Committee has sent 175 of the pamphlets to its list of papers representing minority groups, while about 100 copies have been mailed out to Negro leaders. The Contacts Committee has developed a list of 1000 persons of capacity and influence, and a complimentary pamphlet is being sent to each of these. Pioneer teachers in both North and South America have been given a copy, while a sample copy was mailed to local Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees. Finally, a shipment has been made to the National Spiritual Assemblies as well as to the Guardian.

37. At the January meeting, approval was given to a number of projects submitted by the National Teaching Committee: Mrs. Mable Ives, Louisville, Ky; Mrs. Virginia Camelon, Charleston, W. Va; Mrs.
World Significance of Temple Completion

Since the news of the completion of the exterior ornamentation spread out into various parts of the Baha'i world, five National Spiritual Assemblies have sent special messages to the American Baha'is.

"British believers thrilled by heroic achievement of Temple, grateful for inspiring example." — Dorothy Canedale, Secretary.

"Egyptian believers heartily congratulate American believers on magnificent blessed historic achievement of completion of first Temple in the Western World." — Dr. Mohammed Saleh, Chairman.

"Heartily congratulate completion of exterior of edifice of Baha'i House of Worship the foremost historic achievement of emblem of universal peace and oneness of mankind." — Abbasally Butt, Secretary (India).

"With cheerful hearts full of love of beloved American Baha'is, on behalf of the Baha'is of Iran and ourselves sincerely, humbly convey to the representatives of the American Baha'i community and friends Abba' congratulations on completion of thirty-five-year-old enterprise, the first Maghriqul-Aqajkar of the West, consummation of task ranking among the outstanding achievements of the First Baha'i Century, and with complete submission supplicate His Holiness Baha'ullah to continue to shower His blessings on those marvelous supporters of the beloved Cause." — Rouhani, Secretary.

"Australian believers delighted at the announcement of completion of the exterior of the edifice of first Baha'i Temple of the Western World. Heartiest congratulations to the American believers for their wonderful achievement." — Hilda Brooks, Secretary.

The following message also has come: "New Zealand friends rejoice in completion of Temple." — Dulcie Burns, Secretary, Auckland.

World Order Magazine

The October, November and December issues contain Albert R. Windust's series of compilations on The Covenant. This material goes to the heart of the Message, and has value for permanent reference.

The October number included The Purpose of Affliction, Elizabeth Hackley; In Haifa, poem, Polly McClenenn; Independent Investigation of Truth, William Kenneth Christian; Education for Armageddon, Garret Busey; The Repudiation of Materialism, Robert Louis Koehl; The Timeless Land, Book Review, Arthur Dahl.

In November the contents, in addition to the Windust compilation, were: The World Is Made Flesh, Mary Hammond; On Carmel's Aged Slopes, poem, William Kenneth Christian; The Baha'i Community, A Divine Creation, Chester F. Barnett; A Divine Policy, Horace Holley; Love and Justice, Henry C. Beecher.

December contents include: Cycles of Civilization, J. M. Haggard; The Covenant, Part III, Albert Windust, This Challenging Hour, Charles S. Krug; Creation and Revelation, Editorial, Bertha Hyde Kirkpatrick; The Baha'i Community, — Community Not Church, — William Kenneth Christian; and the regular department, With Our Readers.

Binghamton — "Our first project under our teaching plans for this year was a visit by Mrs. Zenobia Dorsey of Scranton, Pa., and Miss Alice Higginbotham...Binghamton has just had to wake up to the race problem this summer when a large number of Negro troops was sent here to do guard duty...We asked for ways in which to be of service, and gave magazines and games for the rooms. We were able to serve by giving sandwiches for a dance which was planned. A committee from the Assembly had an interview with the Commanding Officer and explained the wisdom of the central location for activities. On October first we are moving the Bahá’í Center back to the downtown district, and hope for more ways to be of service there."

New Haven — "We have many friends among the Negro race here. Two of that race are members of our community. These friends have been made by personal calls at the homes; by attending meetings from time to time to which we are invited, such as annual tea given by the Phyliss Wheatley Home for colored girls; parties given by a Neighborhood Reading Club at Christmas time or one attended recently to honor the President of the National Federation of Colored Woman’s Clubs, Mrs. A. B. DeMent, who had not heard about the Faith and was very glad to receive literature. Also at the affair we met two young men both graduates of Fisk University who had heard about the Faith through Bahá’í teachers who had lectured there. One of these young men is blind and he will receive Bahá’í books in Braille very soon. We have a long list of these Negro friends who receive information about and invitations to all our open meetings, to which quite a few respond."

Sacramento — "An Interracial U.S.O. has been started in Sacramento. I understand it is the first interracial one in the country but Mr. Ben Ellison, its director, incidentally a Negro and a Bahá’í, hopes that later additional ones will be started all over the country. Mr. Ellison is a gifted, talented man and is an adept at putting on interesting programs for the service men of all races. He was transferred to our community from Pasadena and we looked him up immediately. Our group is cooperating with him, sponsoring a canteen night once a month. Various other groups from churches and clubs, white, colored, Chinese, Filipino, Mexican, etc., also have canteen nights, each taking one night a month. Mr. Ellison asked if it might not be a good idea to have a table with Bahá’í pamphlets."

New Orleans — "Up to the present time we have had no group activities in this connection. However, a few of our members are in contact with some colored people who seem interested in the principles of the Faith and we are planning to direct our efforts towards forming a study group among these people where one or more of our members will aid in their study until such time as they are ready to become believers and attend the Feasts. Bahá’í books have been placed in libraries of some of the colored universities and this practice will be continued and followed up."

Stimulating letters have also come from Santa Barbara, Cal.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Cleveland, Ohio; Washington, D. C.; Madison, Wis.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Winnipeg, Canada; Dayton, Ohio; Teaneck, N. J.; Greenwood, Miss.; Racine, Wis.; Kansas City, Mo.; Springfield, Ill.; Ypsilanti, Mich.; South Bend, Ind.; Boston, Mass.; Vancouver, Canada; Detroit, Mich.

Inter-America News

The members of the Inter-America Committee are deeply grieved to announce the passing of Mathew Kas zab, that faithful and energetic pioneer in the service of Bahá’u’lláh. No details have as yet reached us beyond the fact that Mathew was enroute home and reached the end of his earthly journey in Brownsville, Texas. Mathew’s service was fraught with many trials and much suffering and the welcome which must have been his as he ascended to the Abhá Kingdom must have been such as is accorded to a martyr in the Faith! Nicaragua will have been quickened by his presence and the believers whom he has left there will ever keep his memory alive.

Many plans are developing as a result of the suggestions of Mr. Sprague and Mrs. Collins who are now back from their long journeys. We are rejoiced to report that Miss Eisenberg has volunteered to go to Paraguay for a sojourn of three months or longer.

The photograph of Srta. Leonora Marin, the first registered believer in Venezuela, has reached us. Congratulations to this beautiful young woman and to her teacher, Miss Shollis.

Miss Kruka has returned to Havana and Miss Hottes to her post in Bolivia while we learn that Mrs. Marcia Atwater is now again in her beloved Chile after a difficult journey down the west coast of South America.
We are in receipt of some beautiful publicity arranged by Mrs. Leonora Armstrong in Portuguese in Recife, Brazil. Mrs. Armstrong's unremitting labors for the Faith in Brazil and other countries in S. America over a long period of time are of the utmost importance and place her in the forefront of Latin American pioneers. She has left no avenue of service untried and spared no effort however difficult to awaken the people of that vast country of Brazil.

Dr. Malcolm King writes from Jamaica of the splendid work he is doing. He is not satisfied with results, but experience has taught us that he has succeeded far beyond the usual results of a pioneer in so short a time. The pioneers find that in every case they must make haste slowly. Congratulations and loving greetings to all.

NELLIE S. FRENCH, Secretary

Braille Transcriptions

The Committee on Braille Transcriptions urges that those Assemblies who have not already done so, fill in and return the questionnaires sent them as the committee would like to have as complete a record as possible of the needs in the communities for this type of Bahá’í work. Please address replies to Miss Ella C. Quant, 1689 Glenwood Blvd., Schenectady, N.Y.

Library

During the three months ended December 16, 1942, the Library Committee placed 97 books in 41 different Libraries, including seven Public, five State, six Army, two Conscientious Objection camps, one College, eight Peace Organizations and fourteen State Prison Libraries. The latest news regarding Army Libraries is the acceptance of ten sets of books by the Headquarters of the Seventh Corps Area to cover the additional libraries opened in that region since the previous Bahá’í donation.

Among the encouraging letters received the following excerpts are shared with the friends:

"Dr. R. B. von Klein, Chancellor, is very much interested in peace and will be interested, I know, in reading your publications" — Los Angeles Library of World Affairs. "We shall be very glad indeed to receive these publications which represent the Bahá’í views on International Relations and World Peace. This is a subject in which the Hoover Library is vitally interested and we shall welcome the contributions of the Bahá’í Faith." — Hoover Peace Library. "It is a real pleasure to add this inspiring, important and attractive book to our collection." — Tuskegee Institute. "Prisoners as a general rule are interested in comparative religions. Your donations will be placed in circulation immediately upon arrival." — Alabama State Prison.

Temple Display

In addition to the map-type of Temple display announced in Bahá’í News for January, the Exhibits Committee has now received delivery of a smaller Temple display with folding easel back for use in window displays or where the illustration is to be placed on a table or other flat surface. The intention was to make this display a cut-out, so that the Temple would show in silhouette, but this proved to be unfeasible. The new Temple display measures 18¼ʺ by 17½ʺ. It is a photographic enlargement of a painting of the House of Worship on linen with heavy board backing and easel, packed in a carton for convenient mailing or other transportation. The price is $3.50 each, postpaid. Send order to Temple Library and Sales Committee, H. E. Walrath, Chairman, 4839 Beacon Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Messages From the Guardian

1. To the N.S.A.

Dear and valued co-workers:

The recent response of the American friends to my appeal for pioneers to go forth and settle in virgin territories and places where the need is greatest has raised a load from my heart, and mightily reinforced the hopes and expectations which their past achievements have aroused within me. We stand at the threshold of the last year of the first Bahá’í century. The unfinished tasks, however much they have been reduced, are still formidable. The Temple is as yet unfinished. The initiation of a nation-wide publicity campaign, intelligently directed and energetically pursued, utilizing to the full all the advantages gained in recent years in so many fields of Bahá’í activity still remain to be undertaken. Measures for a befitting celebration of the centennial anniversary of the Faith must be carefully considered and duly executed. The aims and purposes of our beloved Cause, the achievements of its heroes, martyrs, teachers, pioneers and administrators, the unity of its followers, the character of the institutions they have reared, should, one and all, be ably presented, widely broadcast, carefully explained in publications, through the radio and the press. There is no time to lose. A great responsibility rests on the elected representatives of the most envied community in the Bahá’í world, whose advantages are unique, whose capacities are incomparable, whose vision, courage, tenacity, resolution and loyalty are exemplary; which has amply demonstrated its worthiness to be the recipients of the countless favors showered upon it by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and of the specific bounty conferred upon the rulers and presidents of the continent of which it is a part by no one less than Bahá’u’lláh Himself, in His Most Holy Book. To His “Apostles,” as testified by the Center of His Covenant, I direct my fervent plea that they establish, beyond the shadow of a doubt, in these concluding months of the first Bahá’í century, their indisputable right to be designated by so exalted a title, and vindicate their ability to execute the mission with which that title has invested them.

Your true brother,

Smooch

January 8, 1943

The following passages were written by the Guardian through his Secretary, in the same communication of January 8:

The Guardian approves the using of the words of the Bahá’í marriage service by the believers in communities which have not acquired legal capacity to conduct a marriage ceremony, provided it does not become an established rule, to be rigidly carried out by the Bahá’ís.

At the present time, when he is weighed down with his own cares and problems, the determination and devotion, loyalty and enthusiasm manifested by the American believers greatly helps and sustains him. He is praying for unprecedented victories to crown their labors, and he feels certain that, in these remaining months, before the Century draws to a close, your Assembly, as well as the believers, will rise to such heights of service as shall befittingly crown their past labors and bring the century to a successful consummation.

The following excerpt is from a letter written by the Guardian, through his secretary, on January 30, 1943:

He does not feel that the Bahá’í News letter, published monthly for the information of the Bahá’ís, should be reduced in size, as it is read with deep interest by the believers everywhere, and the information it contains of the activities of the friends is a great stimulus to the work everywhere.

The re-establishment of disbanded Spiritual Assemblies in States and Provinces already possessing an Assembly forms no part of the Seven Year Plan. Concentrate attention and resources on virgin territories.—February 8, 1943.

2. To Individual Believers

The following excerpts are from letters written by the Guardian through his secretary to individual believers, and are reprinted with the Guardian’s consent.

“The Cause, although it embraces with equal esteem people of all ages, has a special message and mission for the youth of your generation. It is their charter for their future, their hope, their guarantee of better days to come. Therefore the Guardian is especially happy that the young Bahá’ís are active in the pioneer work.”

“The formation of your first Spiritual Assembly in Honduras was a source of great joy to him, and he hopes that you will do all in your power to strengthen it and help it to function smoothly. It is the nucleus of all community life, and requires often adjustment and sacrifice from all concerned, until they learn how to function according to the higher laws of Bahá’u’lláh.

“The Guardian found the publicity you had received very sympathetic in tone. If the South Americans have the courtesy, kindness, and warmth expressed in these papers, as well as the deep capacity for faith and steadfastness, so characteristic of the Latins, they should indeed make wonderful Bahá’ís.

“The Guardian would advise you to be very careful about associating with Orientals and preferably avoid them. They are sometimes connected with Covenant-breakers, whether they know it or not, such as one of those whom you mention in your letter, who is the son-in-law of a well-known Covenant-breaker here."—To John Eichenauer, Jr., June 16, 1942.

"Regarding the whole manner of teaching the Faith in the South: the Guardian feels that, although the greatest consideration should be shown the feelings of white people in the South whom we are teaching, under no circumstances should we discriminate in their favor, consider them more valuable to the Cause than their Negro fellow-southerners, or single them out to be taught the Message first. To pursue such a policy, however necessary and even desirable it may superficially seem, would be to compromise the true spirit of our Faith, which permits us to make no such distinctions in offerings its tenets to the world. The Negro and white races should be offered, simultaneously, on a basis of equality, the Message of Bahá'u'lláh. Rich or poor, known or unknown, should be permitted to hear of this Holy Faith in this, humanity's greatest hour of need.

"This does not mean that we should go against the laws of the state, pursue a radical course which will stir up trouble, and cause misunderstanding. On the contrary, the Guardian feels that, where no other course is open, the two races should be taught separately until they are fully conscious of the implications of being a Bahá'í, and then be confirmed and admitted to voting membership. Once, however, this has happened, they cannot shun each other's company, and feel the Cause to be like other Faiths in the South, with separate white and black compartments.

"Even in places where the two races can meet together in the South, he feels it would be, in certain cases, preferable to teach them separately until they are fully confirmed and then bring them together.

"'Abdu'l-Bahá Himself set the perfect example to the American believers in this matter—as in every other. He was tactful, but the essence of courage, and showed no favoritism to the white people as opposed to their dark-skinned compatriots. No matter how sincere and devoted the white believers of the South may be, there is no reason why they should be the ones to decide who and how the Negro Southerner shall hear of the Cause of God; both must be taught by whoever rises to spread the Message in those parts."—To Mrs. Mabel Ives, July 5, 1942.

"Now that they (the American believers) have erected the administrative machinery of the Cause they must put it to its real use—serving only as an instrument to facilitate the flow of the spirit of the Faith out into the world. Just as the muscles enable the body to carry out the will of the individual, all Assemblies and Committees must enable the believers to carry forth the Message of God to the waiting public, the love of Bahá'u'lláh, and the healing laws and principles of the Faith to all men."—To Eleanor Keffer, July 6, 1942.

"Deep as are family ties, we must always remember that the spiritual ties are far deeper; they are everlasting and survive death, whereas physical ties, unless supported by spiritual bonds, are confined to this life. You should do all in your power, through prayer and example, to open the eyes of your family to the Bahá'í Faith, but do not grieve too much over their actions. Turn to your Bahá'í brothers and sisters who are living with you in the light of the Kingdom.

"Indeed, the believers have not yet fully learned to draw on each other's strength and consolation in time of need. The Cause of God is endowed with tremendous powers, and the reason the believers do not gain more from it is because they have not learned to draw fully on these mighty forces of love and strength and harmony generated by the Faith."—To Roan Orloff, received July 31, 1942.

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 7 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the period February 1-28, 1943

40. The reports of membership in the local communities received from the local Assemblies in connection with the Annual Convention provide an occasion for presenting important statistical information concerning the American Bahá'í Community. The following data may be compared with the figures presented in the bulletin entitled "Teaching in North America" published as an insert in Bahá'í News of January, 1942. To simplify the statistics, they are presented in several classifications, as follows:

A. As of the end of February, 1943, there are 98 Spiritual Assemblies in the United States and Canada with communities qualified for representation in the Thirty-Fifth Annual Convention.

B. The entire membership reported by these 98 Assemblies is 2662, representing the adult, voting Bahá'ís.

C. The number of isolated Bahá'ís—believers not associated by residence with other believers, and therefore not part of even a small group—is 984.

D. The total number of believers who at the end of February were members of local groups of various sizes is 932.

E. The total number of groups (from two believers up) is 220.

F. To show the make-up of groups from the point of view of their relative numbers, we have the following data:

Number of groups with minimum of two believers, 67; with three believers, 46; with four believers, 27; with five believers, 24; with six believers, 17; with seven believers, 13; with eight believers, 12.

G. The number of groups with nine or more Bahá'ís, thus qualified to form an Assembly on April 1, is 14. These groups are located as follows: Portsmouth, N. H., Brookline, Mass., Akron, Ohio, Wilmington, Del., Louisville, Ky., Pittsburgh, Pa., Maywood, Ill., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Green Bay, Wisc., Colorado Springs and Denver, Colo., Albuquerque, N. M., Burbank and Huntington Park, Calif.

H. The point of teaching concentration is in the key or goal cities, the cities where an Assembly is to be formed before the end of the Seven Year Plan so that there may be at least one Assembly in every State and Province of North America. The following list shows the present status of these vitally important groups:

The known membership list of the American Baha’i Community as of the end of February, 1943, including members of communities, groups and isolated believers, totals 4,578.

41. In the Inter-America field, it is hoped that new Assemblies can be formed this year in Guatemala, Chile, Ecuador and Panama, and the existing ten Assemblies can be continued, making a total of thirteen Assemblies.

42. The National Spiritual Assembly has been working for some time on a new general compilation of Bahá’í Writings to replace the compilation entitled “Bahá’í Scriptures” which appeared about twenty years ago. The Bahá’í Literature in English has been greatly extended by the Guardian’s series of translations, and today a clear distinction is made between authoritative Tablets and the written notes made by pilgrims. The new work, now on the press, includes five chapters or general subjects selected from Writings of Bahá’u’lláh, and four chapters or subjects from Writings of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. The intention has been to produce a representative selection of Bahá’í Literature in one volume, and by placing a large order, to be able to offer the book at a low cost. This notice reports an action taken and is not an announcement of the book. When ready, it will be announced by the Publishing Committee in the usual way.

43. From May 1, 1942, to February 28, 1943, contributions were made to the National Fund in a total of $91,159.48, on the annual budget of $159,000.00. The sum of $7,412.49 was received in February, from 72 Assemblies, 69 groups and 108 isolated believers. The expense in February was $16,843.74, including $10,359.75 for Temple construction and on Temple loan, $1519 for teaching in North America, $465.85 for Inter-America teaching, $1422.92 for administration, $1369.49 for teaching literature, including the illustrated Temple pamphlet, Temple maintenance, $817.08, Green Acre maintenance, $116.40, and on Committee budgets, $333.71.

North America Teaching

As this report is written only two months remain in our “pivotal” and “crucial” year, while fourteen months away stands the “fateful milestone.” It is important now to record the progress we have won in 1942-43, more particularly in the past few months, and to ask ourselves whether the speed now gained is matching the speed of this swiftly-vanishing century.

The National Teaching Committee, in January, felt keenly the inadequacy of momentum in the teaching service of the friends. It therefore recommended to the National Assembly a new attack on five fronts of action, to bring to a maximum the upsurge of settlements called for by Shoghi Effendi. As a result, and surely through the power released with the completion of the Temple, the broad program of settlement and teaching for which the Guardian asked, is now unreasonably developing. Today it seems clear that we have passed the turning-point in the Seven-Year Plan. Nevertheless, if the goals are to be achieved, this momentum we have gained must be steadily continued.

The five-point program was inaugurated by the calling of National Area Conferences, January 22-25, by the National Assembly in the twelve most densely-populated Bahá’í centers. No longer could the American Community be satisfied with the efforts of a relatively few settlers, a few Assemblies, or Teaching Committees. The Area Conferences opened the chapter of joint effort on a national scale; they gave a first-hand view of needs to the believers everywhere; they pointed out the road to unqualified victory. That road, in the latest words of Shoghi Effendi, is for “every hesitant believer, however unprepared and inexperienced, audaciously to arise ... to reinforce the ranks of the trailblazers of the Formative Age.”

Although complete results of the Conferences are not yet available, we know that at least forty volunteers for settlement have stepped forward. We know that, instead of needing 83 additional Bahá’ís in goal-cities of the Plan, on February 15th we lack but 55! We are assured that on April 21 Spiritual Assemblies will be elected in at least eight of the twenty-five virgin States and...

Provinces, and that eight other groups are nearing their goal. True-ly, "the area of the unfinished tasks is visibly diminishing."

The essential, however, is to maintain this unbeatable momentum.
Four other fronts of action are indispensable to our national program.

First, settlers and believers in virgin areas must stabilize their residence. From October through January we had to record twelve losses of registered Baha’is in goal-cities, through moving alone. It is certain that the responsibility of all those on the pioneer front is very great.
What they do to uphold the Plan may be a telling factor in the final score.

Secondly, teaching must be intensified in virgin States and Provinces.
The National Teaching Committee is now working out circuit plans which will send vital teaching assistance to new groups everywhere, fortifying the efforts of our settlers and pioneers.

Thirdly, isolated believers, especially those living near goal-cities, have a wonderful chance to advance the Plan by transferring their residence to these key places. This is one of the most important types of settlement under the Plan.

Finally, the backbone of our program, its central drive, must be to multiply unceasingly the ranks of our settlers until victory is assured. Our goal is not only to reduce the unfinished tasks, but to eliminate them altogether. We are publishing with this report a Pioneer Roll of Honor, listing the names of all those friends who have moved into virgin areas and disbanded Assemblies since last Convention. It will be seen that several Baha’I communities have contributed magnificently to the pioneer ranks this year, while others have not as yet seized their historic and priceless opportunities.
The hours are rushing by in which, as communities and individually, we can earn the bounties promised by Baha’u’llah.

The National Teaching Committee feels the friends may face the future months with confidence, for they are now demonstrating their ability to fulfill the Seven-Year Plan to its last requirement. Nothing must interfere with our new-found momentum!

Let us also record that not only in the direct tasks of the Plan has our all-important teaching work been carried forward. The subsidiary effort to reestablish disbanded Assemblies is likewise meeting with success.
Regional and Extension Com-mittes have been most diligent; between to secure these cities; until now it seems certain that six or seven Assemblies will reorganize on April 21. While we now know from Shoghi Effendi that the reestablishment of these Assemblies forms no part of the Seven-Year Plan, yet we recognize that this work, too, must surely be accomplished. What achievement could be more thrilling than to complete it in the first Baha’I Century?

Beloved friends, let us hold closely to these words of the Guardian:
"To his apostles, as testified by the Center of His Covenant, I direct may fervent plan that they establish beyond the shadow of a doubt,in these concluding months of the first Baha’I Century, their indisputable right to be designated by so exalted a title, and vindicate their ability to execute the mission with which that title has invested them."

We regret that through an oversight we have failed heretofore to mention that they now have established themselves with the Government which enables them to carry on their work legally and with full Government permission. This is indeed a great accomplishment. One of the members of the Spiritual Assembly, conscious of the need for further pioneer teaching in some of the other Republics since the passing of Mathew Kaszab all Nicaragua as yet unorganized, has volunteered to render services under the direction of this Committee.

Ecuador
John Stearns writes that he now has “only one to go” which means that they now have eight members and we are confident that the ninth as required for the formation of an Assembly will soon be enrolled. John’s Radio Programs are continuing and we are hoping to assist in providing suitable material for his splendid programs.

Bolivia
Flora M. Hottes has returned to La Paz after a month’s sojourn with Miss Eve Nicklin in Lima, Peru. She writes enthusiastically of her visit and of the contacts made both in Peru and Bolivia.

Argentina
Buenos Aires also has a Radio connection which is presenting the Teachings in a most effective manner and we have only splendid news regarding the spread of the Faith there.

Paraguay
We hope very soon to announce the settlement of a pioneer teacher in Asuncion. Ever since Elizabeth Cheney was obliged to leave Paraguay we have hoped for someone to go there to assist those lovely souls who have responded to the call of Bahá’u’lláh and now our hopes seem to be realized.

Venezuela
We marvel at the initiative displayed by our pioneers among whom Miss Sholtis shines brilliantly. She now has taken rooms in the center of the city and is teaching both the Cause and English.

Lack of space deprives us of mentioning further details about the other countries but we are none the less conscious of the outstanding efforts of our faithful pioneers in every center.

Two Shall Appear, A Religious-Historical Drama in Five Acts, by Olivia Kelsey. This dramatic presentation of the early days of the Faith, approved by the Reviewing Committee a few years ago, has recently been published, and the Publishing Committee can fill orders at the rate of $0.75 per copy. The author’s Foreword states that the “principal source of data is The Dawn-Breakers by the Persian historian, Nabil.”

Among the Colleges

The College project opened this year with a fall trip through the Southwest, during which Dorothy Baker visited twenty-seven new schools. Four of these were Negro, four Indian, and the remaining number, white. Books were left in all School libraries, and pamphlets by Shoghi Effendi distributed to all students. In ninety or more Colleges, over a period of two years, Mrs. Baker has yet to see a single Bahá’í pamphlet on the School grounds or in any condition of discard. Classroom visits following the Chapel talks revealed the fact that young people are definitely interested in Shoghi Effendi. One youth, at the close of a discussion period, came forward and said, "Where does the Guardian live? I am to be inducted next week. Perhaps I shall go to Africa and be able to cross over to Haifa! Perhaps I shall see the Guardian of the new Civilization before you do!"

One College represented a very interesting religious minority, the Latter Day Saints. Here the students took copious notes in Chapel, and the Dean himself mentioned having heard 'Abdu'l-Bahá speak in Washington in 1912. "I have wondered," he said, "where you Bahá'ís have been, and why you have not long ago visited the Colleges."

Another unique institution to hear the message of the Guardian was the Spanish-American Normal College at El Rito, N. M. These students speak Spanish and English equally well, and supply teachers to all of that mountainous region. They were fiery, ardent young people, who felt keenly the Guardian's view of America's spiritual leadership. One young woman said, "After the war we might be able to travel, as you do, and go about in Southern countries, speaking these things in Spanish!"

There are no amusements, not even moving pictures, in the vicinity of these young Latins, surrounded as they are by jagged peaks that look for all the world like giant ice-palaces. Some day a teacher will remain there and build great Bahá'ís.

At Pine Bluff, Ark., on the campus of the State Negro University, the members of the faculty came forward at the close of Chapel, and talked for almost an hour, losing entirely, it afterward appeared, their lunch period. The Bahá'í principles interested them not at all, but they were held by the thought that a spiritual commonwealth had been born, indivisible in its nature, and committed to a unified racial life in its essential pattern; that it could never be rent apart religiously, and that its unique organism, under the Guardian, was already an actual, living, breathing civilization, slowly growing up. This was no hollow promise, but a tested Reality.

The second stage of the College project fell into the hands of Louis G. Gregory, who made a follow-up tour of Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama, late in the fall of 1942, and in the winter toured West Virginia, Virginia, and North Carolina. To the Negro Colleges he took the message of the spiritual importance of the coming of Bahá'u'lláh, and to the white Colleges he gave the Bahá'í teachings on race relations. The friendly reactions of the white Schools, in the light of existing prejudices, are of deep interest to us. Salem College, of West Virginia, writes: "The students were well pleased, and invited him to return. I want to thank you for sending him to us." In the heart of Mississippi, where race feeling runs so high as to make such a subject well-nigh impossible, the students waited in long rows in the hall, to shake his hand and wish him well. It was their first adventure in receiving a colored speaker, and only their second experience with the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

This follow-up stage of extending the teachings to College will take the form of annual platforms, in order that the highly transient student body of America may have the fresh impact of the Faith each year. Unfortunately the lowered draft age will curtail temporarily this phase of the work.

The third stage of College development will move around the effort to establish permanent study groups in many of the Colleges. Mrs. Joy Earl, working under the Race Unity Committee, has this winter made a start in a few of the Schools. Particular success greeted her in Miles College, of Birmingham, and North Carolina University, at Durham, where members of the faculty are already making a close study of the Faith.

The intensive phase can be greatly assisted by resident students who watch for opportunities to bring speakers. We have recently heard from Jack Fatooh at Berkeley, that it may be soon possible to display the Temple and bring a talk to the campus that will deal with the new architecture.

The College Foundation Committee is happy to hear from the friends in Colleges everywhere.

Mrs. Dorothy Basset, Chairman

National Youth Committee

This year young Bahá'ís throughout the world will meet on March 7 to celebrate the eighth annual World Bahá'í Youth Day. The challenging theme, "World Unity Is Our Goal," has been selected from the Guardian's letter, "The Unfoldment of World Civilization." In spite of war and other unfavorable conditions, Bahá'í youth feel that this is one of their most significant opportunities to demonstrate to the rest of the world the unity and vitality of their Faith.

Regional Teaching Committees and Local Spiritual Assemblies are urged to respond to the questionnaires sent out by the National Youth Committee in October regarding youth activities and Bahá'í men in service. Failure to answer is depriving both youth and service men of the youth bulletin and correspondence.

The National Youth Committee feels that contact with our Bahá'í men in service is extremely important. The Committee attempts to put these service men in touch with the nearest Bahá'í group or Assembly, and it is hoped that a warm hospi-
Volume 8, Numbers 1 and 2, of the bulletin, Bahá’í Youth, have been published and mailed throughout the country. Youth who have not yet received their copies should ask for them from their Local Spiritual Assembly or Regional Teaching Committee.

MARIE MILLER, Chairman

French Book Needed

The National Spiritual Assembly is in need of a copy of the book by the late M. Hippolyte Dreyfus and will greatly appreciate the gift of a copy by any believer who owns the book in its Second Edition. It is the French and not the English translation of the book which is sought.

Application for Classification in Class IV-D of Selective Service

A notice has already appeared in Bahá’í News reporting that local Chairmen and Secretaries are eligible for preferred mileage. The procedure for these officers to follow is to apply to their local rationing board for B or C gasoline books, presenting credentials to show their status as officer of the local Spiritual Assembly, and pointing out that recognition has been given by the National OPA Office in Washington and that a certified list of all local Assembly officers is on file in that Office.

The National Spiritual Assembly has also applied to the Selective Service System for recognition as an independent religious faith, the official representatives of which, rendering the services discharged by ministers, should receive allocation to Class IV-D under the draft. The Bahá’í petition has been placed on file for reference in case questions are raised by State draft boards in connection with applications received by local boards from individual believers for the IV-D classification.

The procedure is for the individual believer qualifying as discharging a ministerial function in the Bahá’í community to file a special petition with his local draft board, when called into the service, for allocation to Class IV-D, and explain that the National Office of the Selective Service System has the necessary information on file. It has not been made clear whether such petitions from Regional Teaching Committee members, in addition to petitions from local Assembly Chairmen and Secretaries, will be approved, for unlike the OPA Office, the Office of the Selective Service System has not definitely accepted a certified list of Bahá’í representatives but will pass upon each case on its own merits.

Bahá’í Directory

Last month it was reported that Mrs. DeMille was unable to serve as member of the Contacts Committee. This was due to change of residence, but the Committee has assigned her a new area for correspondence and her work as member of the Contacts Committee is being continued.

Enrollments and Transfers

Enrollment of new believers reported by local Assemblies:

- Detroit, three.
- Phoenix, four and one youth.
- Winnetka, two.
- Milwaukee, three.
- Honolulu, one.
- St. Paul, one.
- Jacksonville, two.
- Spokane, two.
- Oakland, one.
- Vancouver, one.
- Seattle, four.
- Madison, one and one youth.
- Springfield, Mass., two.
- Miami, two.
- Los Angeles, one.
- Rochester, one.
- Wilmette, two.
- Helena, one.
- Kansas City, one.

Enrollments by transfer reported by local Assemblies:

- Chicago, five.
- Winnipeg, two.
- Philadelphia, two.
- Los Angeles, four.
- Flint, one.
- Binghamton, one.
- Beverly, one. Seattle, four. Wilmette, one. Jersey City, one.

In December, fourteen enrollment cards were received from adults in regional areas; in January, the same number of enrollments were recorded. Fourteen enrollments were likewise received in February.

Baha'i Calendar

Nineteen Day Feasts: Lohness, March 2; Splendor, March 21; Glory, April 9; Beauty, April 28.

Period of the Fast: Nineteen days beginning March 2.

Feast of Naw-Ruz: March 21.

Feast of Rídvan: April 21—May 2.

Meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly: March 5, 6, 7, 8. At Wilmette. April 28. At Wilmette.

Thirty-Fifth Annual Convention: April 29 and 30, May 1 and 2. Temple Foundation Hall.

Incorporated Assemblies

The incorporated Assemblies are requested to proceed with effort to obtain civil recognition of their right to conduct legal marriage ceremonies, a matter which was brought to the attention of local Assemblies in a bulletin last summer. If an Assembly is unable to obtain the necessary authority, it is requested to obtain a copy of the State statutes dealing with the subject and forward it to the Legal Committee which will endeavor to advise the Assembly how to proceed.

The recognition of this legal right of a local Assembly to perform a marriage service is an important step in the development of the Baha'i community as an independent religious body.

Literature for Men in Service

Literature can be obtained by men in service for reading tables of camps and training schools. Where permission is obtained from the chaplain or other officer in charge, a copy of Baha'u'llah and the New Era, Temple pamphlet, and Appreciations of the Baha'i Faith will be supplied without cost on application to the National Teaching Committee. As the Library Committee also has a special project for military and naval stations, the believer is requested to check the Baha'i literature already in the Camp Library before ordering in order to avoid duplication of material.

In cases where Baha'i men in service find requests for literature arising from talks they have been able to give, copies of A Pattern for Future Society will be sent free on request made through the National Teaching Committee.

New Believers

Local Assemblies are informed that whenever they report the names and addresses of newly enrolled believers, the National Assembly now sends each of such believers a letter of spiritual greeting and welcome, together with a copy of the Master's Will and Testament.

Believers in Key Areas

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to make a special appeal to all believers who live near one of the key cities where Assemblies are to be formed under the requirements of the Seven Year Plan. The appeal is to make every effort to transfer their residence to that town or city and thus make a direct contribution to the vital teaching objective established by the Guardian in North America. The list of these cities was printed in the bulletin entitled "The Guardian's Summons to Teaching" issued in October, 1942.

It is the conviction of the Assembly that a good number of believers will find it possible to adjust their affairs so as to establish residence where voting believers are most urgently needed.
Messages From the Guardian

The report that the New History literature includes a Tablet of the Master urging civil disobedience regarding war, is another indication of the gross misrepresentations of the Faith by that Society, whose publications are deliberately and maliciously aimed at undermining the loyalty of the believers, at creating confusion among them, and causing internal disruption. (Through his Secretary, January 8, 1943)

Highly approve memorandum regarding special Anniversary publication. Advise your Assembly undertake preparation immediately. Praying Divine Guidance that the gathering on May 20, 1944, can now begin to visualize the focal point of all our deepest hopes and most ardent efforts in their culmination one hundred years after the most glorious and blessed hour when the Báb declared His Mission to our world. More than obedience to law and command, the Bahá’ís of East and West make their lives an expression of fervent gratitude to God and devotion to His Manifestation.

In connection with the above he wishes me to add that the actual Celebration gathering, commemorative of that glorious occasion when the blessed Báb declared His spiritual Mission to the world in 1844 should take place exactly two hours and 11 minutes after sunset on May 22, in the Temple—naturally other Bahá’í Centers all over the continent of America must hold their special Commemorative meeting at the same time. The delegates and friends must hold their special Commemorative meeting at that time. The date of the Convention must be fixed by your Assembly in such a manner that the gathering on May 22, 1944, will fall approximately in the middle of the Convention period.

It is certainly a wonderful occasion to look forward to! (Through his Secretary, February 27, 1943)

Overjoyed at the multiplying evidences of the extraordinary progress of the manifold activities of the consecrated American Bahá’í Community. Please, afresh, on eve of the last remaining year of the first Bahá’í Century strain every nerve and concentrate all resources to insure further immediate increase in the number of pioneer settlers in the virgin areas. Call is urgent, hour crucial, golden opportunities slipping away. No sacrifice too great to achieve the consummation of the hopes embodied in the Seven Year Plan. I direct my special appeal to the large, flourishing communities promptly and effectually to cast their weight in the scales to stimulate the dispersion vitally required to achieve the final victory. I am praying the watchful Master to speed the valiant stewards of the Covenant along the path leading to the shining goal.

Received March 15, 1943

This Crucial Year

Progress Report No. 8 Issued by the National Spiritual Assembly for the Period March 1-31, 1943

44. Plans for the celebration of the Bahá’í Centenary in America are in active motion, with the approval of the Guardian. His message approving the memorandum of plans submitted to him after the January meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly was received on March 1, and is shared with the friends in this issue of Bahá’í News. Later in March came another message from Haifa amplifying the first, and this also is reprinted in these pages. We can now begin to visualize the focal point of all our deepest hopes and most ardent efforts in their culmination one hundred years after the most glorious and blessed hour when the Báb declared His Mission to our world. More than obedience to law and command, the Bahá’ís of East and West make their lives an expression of fervent gratitude to God and devotion to His Manifestation.

In addition to the commemorative meeting to be held at the House of Worship, local gatherings will be conducted in all Bahá’í centers. The local Assemblies are urged to prepare for that great occasion, as for example in recording the history of the Faith in their own city, appointing a Committee to develop the program, etc.

45. The Bahá’í School Programs for the 1943 season have been completed, and each School will issue its own announcement. The National Spiritual Assembly hopes that the School announcements will receive the special attention of all the friends this year. Local Assemblies can cooperate by providing for discussion of School programs at the Nineteen Days Feast, and Regional Committees can present the School plans in their bulletins for the information of groups and isolated believers. Every believer who can attend a School session this year is urged to notify the School Committee as early as possible and make a definite reservation. Those in charge of housing and food arrangements face great difficulty on account of the emergency conditions, and they require and deserve the utmost consideration so that each School may render a great, an unparalleled service to the Cause. The Green Acre Program includes study courses from July 12 to September 3. At Geyserville the session will extend from July 4 to July 18. The sessions of Louhelen School include a Laboratory Session, July 1 to 12, Junior Youth Session, July 14 to August 3, Midsummer Session, July 23 to August 3, General Session, August 5 to 12, and Youth Session, August 14 to 20.

46. A Committee has been formed within the membership of the National Spiritual Assembly to carry out plans for publicity and contacts of a special type. This Committee will bring the Bahá’í Peace Plan to the attention of organizations and outstanding leaders; it will prepare a number of statements about the fundamental nature and aims of the Faith which local Assemblies and active teachers can use as press releases; it will concern itself with preparation of material to meet attacks and misrepresentations aimed against the Cause; and it will issue a general statement about the Faith which can be used in books of public reference. The friends can assist greatly by sending to the National Office names and addresses of leaders in the field of post-war peace plans, and information about post-war plans as published or as adopted by responsible organizations.

47. The National Spiritual Assembly has created a Committee on Pamphlet Literature to gather and recommend for publication the text for a new series of pamphlets which can contribute to the teaching and promotion of the Cause, including the re-issue of pamphlets now out of print. Three or four subjects have already been selected and these will be brought out during the spring of 1943. The policy has been adopted that the National Assembly can and should assist by providing free literature to Assemblies which have no available public teachers or lecturers, so that contacts by the individual believers can be stimulated.

48. An important compilation on the subject of race unity, prepared by Mrs. Maye Harvey Gift and Mrs. Alice Simmons Cox, and sponsored by the Race Unity Committee, has been approved for early publication. Its title is “The Coming Race Unity.” The compilers have accomplished something new in the field by combining the Bahá’í teachings on the subject with excerpts from current race unity writings of scientists and social philosophers. The book is also equipped with bibliography and other reference material of great value. American believers will be able to render an important service to the victory of the Bahá’í principle of the oneness of mankind by assisting in the wide distribution of this text. Part of the edition is to be given to the Race Unity Committee for donation to leaders of opinion, active organizations, and the press.

49. Plans have been approved by which Miss Jean Silver will go forth as pioneer teacher to Cuba, and Miss Etta Mae Lawrence is to proceed to Buenos Aires, where a business position has been assured. Thus two more devoted American workers enter the field of Inter-America teaching in order to assure the victory of the Divine Plan. From Puerto Rico comes the glad tidings that the Bahá’í group in the city of San Juan is already large enough to form a Spiritual Assembly on April 21. It is interesting to note that an Assembly in Puerto Rico, like an Assembly in the Hawaiian Islands, has the status of active membership in the Bahá’í community of North America and will be represented at future Conventions.

50. At the March meeting of the National Assembly, approval was given to a large number of teaching projects developed by the National Teaching Committee. These projects included the following teachers and locations: Jean Hendrie, Omega; Clare Gillespie, Laramie; Muriel Stilson, Sioux Falls; Elsa Steinmetz, Sioux Falls; Flora Valentine, Portsmouth; Mr. and Mrs. William Doull, Providence; Frances L. Wells, San Bernardino; Rose Steinburg, Columbus; Lauretta Voelz, Regina; Mary Bode, Reno; Adeline Lohse, North Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Stone, Brattleboro; W. J. Christie, Novel; Anne MacNally, Providence; Fleury Martini, Little Rock; Ruth Cornell, Little Rock; Margaret Ellis, Jackson; Ruth Moffett, Augusta; Virginia Camelon, Charleston; Kathryn Frankland, Albuquerque; Mable Ives, Albuquerque.

Thirty-Fifth Annual Convention

In view of the emergency travel condition this year, which has led to the cancellation of many national Conventions, it seems desirable to emphasize the fact that a Bahá’í Convention combines two functions — that of general consultation on the activities of the Faith, and that of electing the members of the National Spiritual Assembly. The Guardian many years ago provided for any emergency condition that might make it impossible for the body of the delegates to convene by directing the absent delegates to cast their vote by mail. For while the annual consultation can be suspended, the election must be conducted each year.

In calling the Convention this year, the National Spiritual Assembly has discharged its responsibility in meeting the obligation to provide for the annual election. As for the other important function, of consultation, discussion and recommendation, this depends on the ability of individual delegates to attend the Convention in person, and the delegates and friends will naturally adhere fully to whatever regulations the government may issue controlling travel.

The informal suggestion is made that the friends gather locally for consultation on the Convention subjects where representatives are unable to attend the National gathering this year. Indeed, no effort can be spared if we are to grasp the full meaning of the spiritual tasks which the American community has been called upon to achieve by May, 1944.

Suggestions sent by mail will be given full consideration, and in order to concentrate the attention and prayers of the absent delegates on specific matters of current Bahá’í importance, a simple Agenda has been prepared, a copy of which follows. It has been decided to omit the usual Bahá’í exhibits this year.

Pan American Day

Expressions of good will and appreciation are to be broadcast on April 14 to all South and Central American countries on this special Latin American Day. These tributes are being voiced by various important organizations through the instrumentality of the Pan American Union. The Inter-America Committee forwarded to the National Assembly the following tribute prepared by Charles Wolcott which will be part of the Inter-National Broadcast on Pan American Day:

"On this day, the twelfth anniversary commemorating the birth of political, economic and spiritual unity of the 21 Republics of the American continent, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada sends sincere greetings to Latin America with the earnest hope that the Continental solidarity and understanding so far achieved will become the cornerstone of a universal and enduring peace, and create power to assist, with the hands of justice, the broken-hearted, and crush the great oppressors with the forces of divine truth."

(Signed) American Bahá'ís

Mathew Kaszab

In loving memory of our departed pioneer teacher the following tribute in the form of a burial stone is being prepared through the initiative and generous donation of Mrs. Loulie Mathews, to be set up at his last resting place in Brownsville, Texas:

Pioneer Bahá'í Teacher in Nicaragua
"His services are unforgettable"

Shoghi Effendi

Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, has achieved its required number and in terse and eloquent terms John Stearns writes: "Please send more registration cards." There is a wealth of joyous satisfaction in those few words.

Venezuela

Miss Sholtis has sent another sheaf of clippings from Spanish publications in Caracas. One is headed "Notes on the Spiritual Mission of Gwenne Dorothy Sholtis" and the other: "The Greatest Event of History." This is a truly wonderful accomplishment, evidence of the devoted services of Miss Sholtis.

Costa Rica

From San José we have received another issue of the Alma Tica magazine which contains a long article written on the Faith and illustrated, by Mrs. Gayle Woolson. San José also is supplying a pioneer teacher now to go to Nicaragua to pick up the threads left by Mathew and we hope soon to see them woven into a Spiritual Assembly.

Argentina

Buenos Aires is soon to welcome a new pioneer from New York as Miss Etta Mae Lawrence is to leave very soon to assist in the work of the young people in the Buenos Aires Community. Our loving prayers go with her on this glorious mission.

Cuba

A request came from the secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of Havana for some Bahá'í literature in Chinese and fortunately we were able to supply a copy of Some Answered Questions. The book reached Havana safely and was very gratefully accepted by the Chinese gentleman for whom it was intended and he is sharing the contents with his friends.

Colombia

We take this opportunity to congratulate Miss Ruth Shook who was recently married and is now living in Bogotá and although letters are very rare due to censorship we know that she is very well and happy and is carrying on her teaching of the Faith. We know that she has married a man from this country but we have not yet learned her married name. Loving greetings to all.

NEILIE S. FRENCH, Secretary

Bahá'ís Subject to the Draft

The Selective Service Advisory Committee has informed us that there has been a change in the Army Regulations which affects those who, like Bahá'ís, apply for, or now have, the noncombatant status. To qualify for admission to Officers Candidate School, this regulation now applies: “Applicants classified as conscientious objectors, or claiming such objection, are eligible only if they refuse by affidavit their objection.” That is, if they abandon their noncombatant status.

To meet this development and clarify the matter for Baha’is, the National Assembly adopted the following statement:

“The National Assembly records its understanding of the Guardian’s instructions concerning the duty of Baha’is in time of war as obligating each believer called under the draft to apply for noncombatant status, in which status he gives full obedience to the military authority of his country; that this obligation does not mean he is a conscientious objector who refuses obedience to military authority, but on the other hand it makes incumbent upon the Baha’i to apply for and maintain the noncombatant status without regard to its consequences upon his personal safety, his convenience, the type of activity he must discharge or the rank to which he may be assigned.”

The purpose is to emphasize the fundamental principle that up to the extent of his personal will, the individual Baha’i is noncombatant but if he is required by the military authority to be a combatant he will obey. Where there is no compulsion upon him, he will not abandon the noncombatant status.

It is unfortunate that the phrase “conscientious objector” is employed in the army and draft regulations in two different ways, applying to the complete pacifist and also to the Baha’i who is not a pacifist. Assemblies and Regional Committees can assist the friends by clarifying the Baha’i attitude wherever it is not yet known.

A new bulletin entitled “Statement of Baha’i Position on Military Service for Use by Believers in Presenting Claims for Noncombatant Duty Under U. S. Draft Law” has been prepared, and copies have been sent to local Assemblies and to Regional Teaching Committees. A copy will be sent to believers subject to the draft, on request. It directs the Baha’i how to make correct application for Classification in Class I-A-O. Baha’is do not apply for classification in Class IV-E which is reserved for pacifists. This bulletin also states that the War Department has made a new ruling which provides that individuals who obtain a noncombatant status can be assigned only to the Medical Corps.

Since this bulletin was prepared, the Baha’i Selective Service Advisory Committee has received a letter from the Adjutant General stating that “Army regulations are now being amended to permit qualified soldiers in this classification (noncombatant) to appeal for admission to the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School.” This makes it clear that drafted Baha’is can apply for admission to this Officer Candidate School, though other schools for training Officers are not open now to men in the noncombatant classification.

Annual Committee Reports

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes the National Committees hereafter to cover in their Annual Reports the twelve-month period, March 1 to February 28, which coincides with the fiscal period represented by the Treasurer’s Annual Report. The period of the Committee term of office, July 1 to June 30, is unsuitable for these Reports since Annual Reports are printed and circulated prior to the Convention.

Annual Reports of Local Assemblies

The local Assemblies are reminded of the desire of the NSA that each Assembly prepare and submit an annual report of its activities and those of the local community. These reports can cover the period, April 21-April 20, coinciding with the Assembly term of office.

The Assembly Reports received during the past two years have been very much appreciated.

Committee List

Pamphlet Literature—a new Committee appointed at the March, 1943 meeting. George O. Latimer, Secretary, 1927 N. E. 40th Avenue, Portland, Oregon, and Mrs. Dorothy Baker.

Geyserville School—Mrs. Sarah Kenny and Ray Brackett added. Anita Ioas and Mrs. Marguerite Sears unable to serve.

Regional Teaching Committees—Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi, Esther Klein added. Roberta Wilson unable to serve. Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, Mrs. Sarah Eason unable to serve.

Publishing Announcements

The friends are reminded of the facilities which are available for the study of Islam. There are two study outlines, as follows:

Introduction to the Study of the Qur’an, per copy, 35c.

Muhammad and the Founding of Islam, per copy, 60c.

A limited supply of the Rodwell translation of the Qur’an is also on hand, at $1.00 per copy. This book is obtained from England, and shipments are slow and irregular.

Address orders to Baha’i Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

Membership Status of Absent Believers

A believer who is absent from his community retains his voting membership provided he has the intention of resuming residence, but if he is a member of the Spiritual Assembly and his absence is indefinite, his membership on the Assembly is to be replaced so that the Assembly will have the services of nine members able to meet. To obtain recognition, new Assemblies must have nine resident members able to meet regularly.
Publication of Letters
From the Guardian
For a number of years the National Spiritual Assembly has published in Bahá’í News only such excerpts from letters written by the Guardian to individuals as the Guardian has specifically permitted. The NSA feels that the same principle applies to the publication of the Guardian’s letters to individuals in local and regional newsletters.

Wills Naming the NSA As Beneficiary
Believers wishing to provide a bequest for Bahá’í use will find a form of bequest on page 21 of the revised edition of Bahá’í Procedure. The believers who draw up wills naming the National Assembly as beneficiary are requested to send a copy to the National Office for the records.

The Guardian’s Answers to Questions
With the Guardian’s consent, the following explanations made by him to questions submitted by the late Francis A. Kelsey are published for the information of the friends.

1. Regarding the passage beginning with the words “Knowledge consists of twenty-seven letters...” this should not be interpreted literally. It only indicates the relative greatness of superiority of the new Revelation.

2. The fundamentals of all Divinely-instituted religions cannot be rigidly classified. No definite or exhaustive list of them can be set up, as we have no means of ascertaining that what we consider to be those fundamentals are common to all such religions.

3. The declaration of the Bab took place on May 22nd after sunset, and as the Baha’i day starts and ends with sunset, the feast of the Declaration is celebrated on May 23rd and not the 22nd.

4. Regarding the date of the birth of Jesus Christ: ‘Abdu’l-Baha’s statement on the subject should be considered by the Baha’is as the standard, and as the basis of their calculation.

5. There is disagreement among Oriental scholars relative to the exact date of the birth of Muhammad. You should refer to authorities on the subject such as Sale, whose translation of the Qur’an has become almost classical.

6. Baha’u’llah was born at dawn.

7. The Bab was born before dawn.

8. ‘Abdu’l-Baha has given no explanation regarding the 500,000 years period of the Baha’i cycle. Individual believers are free to work out for themselves the explanation they desire, so long as they do not impose their views on others.

9. Inherited characteristics of the soul are not innate, while the inherent ones are innate and not acquired. The inherent characteristics of the soul derive from man’s own nature.

10. There is no authority for the statement which is alleged to have been said by ‘Abdu’l-Baha to the effect that cancer is a spiritual disease. The saying is quite unauthoritative, and should not be circulated.

11. Jesus’ name has never been confounded with that of Joshua. The two have always been considered as quite distinct.

12. Yes, the Guardian considers “astrology,” which is a pseudo-science, as for the most part “nonsensical,” as it is mostly made up of superstitious beliefs and practices.

13. There is no objection in principle to an Assembly being re-elected, whether in toto or in part, provided the members are considered to be well-qualified for that post. It is individual merit that counts. Novelty, or the mere act of renewal of elections, are purely secondary considerations. Changes in Assembly membership would be welcome so far as they do not prejudice the quality of such membership. Once Assembly elections are over, the results should be conscientiously and unquestionably accepted by the entire body of the believers, not necessarily because they represent the Voice of Truth or the Will of Baha’u’llah, but for the supreme purpose of maintaining unity and harmony in the Community. Besides, the acceptance of majority vote is the only effective and practical way of settling dead-locks in elections. No other solution is indeed possible.

14. ‘Abdu’l-Baha gives no reason whatever why Friday has been chosen as the day of rest in the Baha’i calendar. He just affirms it.

15. The belief according to which Judah represents the Jews, and Israel the Chosen People, is erroneous.

16. The Teachings throw no light on the question as to what became of the ten tribes of Israel or whether they were absorbed into some other nation or not.

17. Also no reference is to be found in the Baha’i Teachings regarding the pyramid of Cheops, and as to its being considered a monument of prophecy.

18. This statement which ‘Abdu’l-Baha is alleged to have made is absolutely unauthoritative and should be disregarded. (Question was: ‘Abdu’l-Baha is alleged to have said that Baha’u’llah was the seventh in order of the Universal Manifestations; that Jesus was the sixth, that Melchisedek was the fifth and that the four prior to them are unknown.)

19. The separation of sheep from the goats is purely figurative, i.e., the faithful from the unfaithful.

The Baha’i World Community

1. News From Iran

The flow of eager Iranian pilgrims to and from Haifa has imparted a new life to the gatherings and activities of friends in this country. The spiritual refreshment so abundantly manifest in their faces, the life-giving messages of encouragement that they convey from our beloved Guardian and the glad-tidings that they bear to us of the divine order and regularity prevailing in the world's spiritual center, combine to give us strength to bear the brunt of what remains in store for all in the near future. Every believer is moved beyond himself to rise to still higher display of energy and devotion in the path of service. Some of the messages brought by the pilgrims who recently returned may be summarized as follows:—

1. Contributions are asked from all friends in Iran towards the funds of the Ḥażīratu'l-Quḍā in Damascus.

2. Further warning was conveyed to friends not to meddle with politics of any kind and not to take part in every controversy as to which of the belligerent Powers is to be blamed for the war.

3. A copy of Finnish translation of Dr. Esselmont's Book published at Helsinki during the recent war and bombardment there, was presented by the Guardian to the Bahá’í Library of Tihrán.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s belief is the oneness of the world of humanity; all people are the Lord’s flock and the Lord is the kind shepherd of all. We bear no grudge against any religion; we invite all to the oneness of mankind. But all must drink from the source of Bahá’u’lláh’s teachings so that strife, struggle and dissension may vanish from among men. All people are like unto different birds which must gather around the spring of Bahá’u’lláh’s teachings.”

5. Bahá’ís are encouraged again most vehemently by the Guardian to forsake country and home and to emigrate into neighboring countries with a view to settling down and creating Bahá’í centers there. Balúchistán, Afghanistan, Kurdistan, Ahsa (country of Sháhíz Ahmad Aḥsá’í, the Herald of the Báb’s Cause), Yaman, and Hijáz were especially mentioned. The example of Bahá’í friends in America was often cited by the Beloved Guardian. They were able through migration to win over to the Cause vast realms and cities. A number of young Bahá’ís have accordingly volunteered to emigrate to these countries and thus to fulfill one of the expressed wishes of the Guardian. The restrictions over the departure from the country of all Iranians are numerous and often almost unsurmountable, but efforts are being made to cope with them.

Panibh-Chulih is a village of some fifty households near Sarí, in Mazindaran. On Saturday, the 26th of Mīhr 1320 (18th October 1941), at about the hour of midnight, an armed band entered the house of Darvīsh Ibrāhīm Māddah Akbarī, a well-known believer of that place. They awoke Alikhan, the servant, who was sleeping at the door and inquired as to where Yaquīb, the eldest son of the household, was. The faithful servant, seeing this strange and armed crew, introduced himself as Yaquīb. One of the visitors, however, who knew Yaquīb, broke forth angrily "What? You are not Yaquīb!", and called out loudly, "Yaquīb! Yaquīb! Come forth! Guests have arrived!" Roused by this disturbance, Yaquīb stirred forth and welcomed the visitors, and they called for tea. Yaquīb straightway returned to the room and took up the samovar to prepare tea. Yusuf, his younger brother, wished to issue forth from the room to fetch water, but his exit was barred by the intruders who forbade him egress. When asked the cause, the ruffianly crew refrained from giving any reply but surrounded him and, in a body, forced him to re-enter the room. Yusuf, finding it beyond his power to resist 20 armed men, submitted, and resigned himself to his fate. Several of these ruffians then gained entrance into the room and, having satisfied themselves from a thorough search that it contained no weapons of defence, kicked the samovar into a corner and ordered all the inmates to seat themselves against the wall, face to face with the intruders.

There were eight members in the family, as follows:—

1. Darvīsh Ibrāhīm Māddah Akbarī, the father, aged about 62 years
2. Yaquīb Akbar, Māddah’s son, aged about 40 years
3. Yusuf Akbar, Māddah’s son, aged about 24 years
4. Nargis Kānum, Māddah’s daughter, aged about 30 years
5. Surūr Kānum, Māddah’s daughter, aged about 18 years
6. Zīa, Māddah’s son, aged about 20 years
7. Shīyīdīn Kānum, Māddah’s wife, aged about 60 years
8. Shīmsī Kānum, wife of Yusuf, aged about 18 years

These hapless ones sat down as hidden by their persecutors, and Yusuf, who stood up and requested them to take whatever they pleased of their property but spare their lives or, at least, allow their womenfolk a safe exit, was the first to be dispatched with three gunshots. The second volley was directed towards the eldest son, Yaquīb. Next, a bullet aimed at Nargis’ head blew her brain to bits. The lamp had by now gone out and the room was filled with smoke, so Māddah, the father, rose in his place; he thus sustained injuries only on his hands and legs. The murderers abstained from killing Shīyīdīn Kānum, the mother, as she was a siyyid. Shīmsī Kānum, who was beside her husband, received a bullet in her leg and swooned, but Surūr and Zīa hid behind a pile of cotton in a corner of the room and hence escaped any harm.

2. Nāyīn from ʿIrāq

The students of the Bahá’í Summer School in Baghdad have been extremely delighted and honored by the receipt of the blessed telegram which our Beloved Guardian has addressed to them in reply to the telegram they sent to him at the opening of the Summer School.

Our beloved Guardian has attached great importance to the question of the Bahá’í Summer School in ʿIrāq, and has impressed upon the N.S.A. the necessity of supervising the organization and working of this Bahá’í Educational Institution, on the same lines as those adopted by the Spiritual Assembly of The United States and Canada, based on instructions issued to them by the Guardian, in this connection.

The Guardian’s message was a source of a great encouragement to the youths of Baghdad, and their sincere efforts to raise the standard of this Bahá’í Institution in its second year of existence, whether from educational or other point of view, have certainly been crowned with success.

There is no doubt that this Institution, which is of considerable importance to the Bahá’í World, is at present in its infancy, and its development and advancement to maturity will only depend upon the care and attention given to it by the believers, so that in course of time, these Summer Schools will turn into Bahá’í colleges, from which will graduate torch-bearers of divine guidance, and messengers of love and peace to all humanity.

The subjects which our beloved Guardian has advised our Spiritual Assembly to teach at the Summer School have added an important matter to this year’s program, and have given some increased beauty and attractiveness, which had their best impression on the students.

Below is the program of this year’s Summer School, together with the names of the lecturers:

History of the Bahá’í Cause, Adib R. Baghdadi.

Bahá’í Administration and Justice, Nurru’d din Abbas.

Outstanding Events in the First Bahá’í Century, Munir Wakil.

The Future of the Bahá’í Cause, Aziz Sabur.

The Laws and Comments Thereon, Jamil Najji.

Society Under the Bahá’í Teachings, Hassan Safa’.

3. News From Haifa

We have learned from Iran that complying with the explicit request of the Guardian, the bodies of the two famous Bahá’í martyrs, known universally in the Bahá’í world as “the King of Martyrs” and “the Beloved of Martyrs,” as well as the remains of the renowned Bahá’í teacher, Mrs. Keith Ransom-Kehler, have been transferred from their original burial place to the new Bahá’í cemetery of Isfahan. The transfer took place on the 27th of September, 1941, in the presence of eight members of the Spiritual Assembly of Isfahan, a representative of the Bahá’í National Assembly and a Bahá’í mason. An official report describing in detail the procedure of the transfer and the exact position of the new tombs has been signed by the above-mentioned believers and sent to the Guardian in Haifa.

One of the evil spirits who has tried for years to injure the Bahá’í Faith in Persia is known under the pseudonym of “Ayati,” his real name being “Aváreh.” He, at first, associated himself with the Cause and was, indeed, at one time, a Bahá’í lecturer and teacher. But his unstable character, coupled with a proud and rebellious nature, could not withstand the spiritual tests and trials that confronted him. The inner flimsy fabric of his soul collapsed. The outward mask of pretended loyalty and faithfulness to the Faith slipped down from his face revealing the concealed mockery of sham behind it. He stubbornly put forward his own views about the Cause and his own interpretation of its Teachings. His waywardness increased day by day until it was turned into an open rebellion—a rebellion bristling with intense hatred and enmity not only towards the Faith itself, but towards the very person of its Founders. This naturally brought about his downfall and separation from the Bahá’í Community.

Thereafter, for many years and with tireless energy inspired by a consuming hatred, he engaged himself with heart and soul in various seditious activities with the avowed intention of maiming and crippling the Faith in Persia. Among those activities was the publication of a periodical called “The Saltcellar.”

Using his venomous pen, he ridiculed and vilified the Bahá’í Teachings in prose and verse. He filled his “Saltcellar” with foul calumnies and malicious slanders against the Founders of the Bahá’í Faith.

But seldom do such characters escape divine retribution on this earth. The state of ignominy and disgrace of “Ayati” is revealed by his own pen in the following note (translated from the Persian) which appeared in the newspaper called “The Weekly Star”—published in Tiran—Vol. V. No. 1272 and dated Friday, 12 Esfand, 1320 (March 6, 1942).

“It has taken me a long time to render you homage and fealty and to express to you in writing the enthusiasm which was awakened in my heart by the kindling of your Star’s light. But, believe me, for a person like Ayati who has reached senility, with the infirmities of old age upon him, and who is the subject of ignominy from all sides—instead of receiving relief and assistance—life is indeed a sorrowful burden for him. For after five years during which the publication of his magazine called the ‘Saltcellar’ was suspended, because of the crooked policy of the former régime, there was much hope and expectations run high during this new period concerning freedom of speech and freedom of the press. But it seems that I am ill-fated for as soon as I took up my pen and published two numbers of the ‘Saltcellar,’ then all of a sudden the third number which was still unfinished, was confiscated at the printing press, by the orders of the governor of Yazd.”

1. To the Convention

An All-America Centennial Convention

I desire to announce to the elected representatives of the valiant, blessed, triumphant American Bahá'í Community assembled beneath the dome of the recently completed Mother Temple of the West on the occasion of the Convention inaugurating the hundredth year of the first Bahá'í Century, the momentous decision to convene, in May, 1944, an All-America Centennial Convention comprising delegates to be separately elected by each State and Province in the North American continent, and to which every Republic of Latin America may send one representative. All groups, all isolated believers, as well as all local communities already possessing Assemblies, will henceforth share in the election of Convention delegates. The multiplication of Bahá'í Centers and the remarkable increase in the number of groups and isolated believers, prompt my decision. The historic occasion of next year's festivities, commemorating as it does the One Hundredth Anniversary of the birth of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and the Fiftieth Anniversary of its establishment in the Western Hemisphere, and celebrating the completion of the exterior ornamentation of the first House of Worship in the Western World, imperatively demand it. Details of the project have already been mailed. I congratulate the best-beloved American believers, I share their joy and wish them Godspeed, confident of still greater victories as they forge ahead in the course of the second Bahá'í Century along the path leading them to their high destiny. I hope to forward, in time for the solemn thanksgiving service to be held in the auditorium of the Temple on the evening of May twenty-second, at the hour of His epoch-making Declaration, a sacred portrait of the Bab, the only copy ever sent out from the Holy Land, to be unveiled at the dedication ceremony and to repose for all time, together with Bahá'u'lláh's blessed hair, beneath the dome of the Holy Edifice within the heart of the North American continent.

To Seal the Triumph

The eleventh hour for the Seven Year Plan has struck. The last twelve months of the first Bahá'í Century are opening. The exterior ornamentation of the mightiest structure yet reared to the glory of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh has been con­summated a year ahead of schedule. The Republics of Central and South America, originally expected each to establish no more than a single nucleus of resident believers already boast in the formation of ten Spiritual Assemblies. The hopes centering on the major tasks of the Plan have been amply fulfilled, nay, exceeded. Neither the convulsions of world catastrophic conflict from without nor the severity of the tests engendered by the Covenant-breakers from within have proved able to divert the American Bahá'í community from its chosen course or dim its radiant faith or deflect its high purpose. The one remaining task confronting it in the virgin areas of the North American continent demands one last, supreme effort to harness all available resources to achieve total victory. The hour requires all ranks of the faithful unitedly to arise, widely disperse, speedily settle, tirelessly persevere, unstintingly sacrifice and deservedly win the immortal prize to seal the triumph of the initial stage of the Plan bequeathed to the American believers by 'Abdu'l-Bahá a quarter century ago.

2. To the National Spiritual Assembly

Dear and valued co-workers:

The completion of the exterior ornamentation of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár in Wilmette, the most hallowed Temple ever to be erected by the followers of Bahá'u'lláh, and the crowning glory of the first Bahá'í century, is an event of unique and transcendental significance. Neither the first Mashriqu'l-Adhkár of the Bahá'í world, reared in the city of Iqiqábád, nor any House of Worship to be raised in succeeding centuries, can claim to possess the vast, the immeasurable potentialities with which this Mother Temple of the West, established in the very heart of so enviable a continent, and whose foundationstone has been laid by the hand of the Center of the Covenant Himself, has been endowed. Conceived forty years ago by that little band of far-sighted and resolute disciples of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, members of the first Bahá'í community established in the Western Hemisphere; blessed and fostered by a vigilant Master Who directed its course from the hour of its inception to the last days of His life; supported by the spontaneous contributions of Bahá'ís poured in from the five continents of the globe, this noble, this mighty, this magnificent enterprise deserves to rank among the immortal epics, that have adorned the annals of the Apostolic Age of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

The debt of gratitude owed by the entire Bahá'í world to its champion-builders is indeed immeasurable. The admiration which this brilliant exploit has evoked in the breasts of countless followers of the Faith in East and West knows no bounds. The creative energies its completion must unleash are incalculable. The role it is destined to play in hastening the emergence of the world order of Bahá'u'lláh, now stirring in the womb of this waking age, cannot as yet be fathomed. We stand too close to so majestic, so lofty, so radiant, so symbolic a monument raised so heroically to the glory of the Most Great Name, at so critical a stage in human history, and at so significant a spot in a continent so richly endowed, to be able to visualize the future glories which the consummation of this institution, this harbinger of an as yet unborn civilization, must in the fulness of time disclose to the eyes of all mankind.

That so laborious, so meritorious an undertaking has been completed a year before its appointed time is a further cause for rejoicing and gratitude, and an added testimony to the vision, the resourcefulness, and enterprising spirit of the American believers.

No need, however, to dwell at length on their past achievements, remarkable and exemplary though they have been, nor is this the time to expatiate on the superb spirit which has characterized their stewardship in the service of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. Tasks of extreme urgency, of great magnitude, of the utmost significance await them in this concluding year of the first Bahá'í century, and at this hour of great peril, of stress and trial for all mankind. The sacred — the pressing, the inescapable teaching responsibilities assumed under the Seven Year Plan must be resolutely faced as befits those whose record has shed so brilliant a light on the annals of the first Bahá'í century. The consolidation of each and every nucleus formed so painstakingly in every republic of Central and South America, the formation of a Bahá'í Assembly in every virgin State and Province in the North American Continent, call for undivided attention, for further heroism, for a concerted, a persistent, a herculean effort on the part of the stalwart builders of that bounteous Edifice which posterity will recognize as the greatest shrine in the Western world.

Nor must the elaborate preparations in connection with the forthcoming celebration of the centenary of our glorious Faith be overlooked or neglected, if we would befittingly consummate this first, this most fecund, century of the Bahá'í era. An unprecedented, a carefully conceived, efficiently co-ordinated, nation-wide campaign, aiming at the proclamation of the Message of Bahá'u'lláh, through speeches, articles in the press, and radio broadcasts, should be promptly initiated and vigorously prosecuted. The universality of the Faith, its aims and purposes, episodes in its dramatic history, testimonials to its transforming power, and the character and distinguishing features of its World Order should be emphasized and explained to the general public, and particularly to eminent friends and leaders sympathetic to its cause, who should be approached and invited to participate in the celebrations. Lectures, conferences, banquets, special publications should, to whatever extent is practicable and according to the resources at the disposal of the believers, proclaim the character of this joyous Festival. An all-America Convention, at which representatives of Bahá'í centers in every Republic in Central and South America will be invited to participate, and to which, for the first time, all isolated believers, all groups, and all communities already possessing local Spiritual Assemblies will have the right to appoint delegates and to share in the election of the National Spiritual Assembly, will, moreover, have to be held to commemorate this epoch-making event. A dedication ceremony, in consonance with the solemnity of the occasion, and held beneath the dome of the Mashriq 'l-Adhkár, on the very day and at the very hour of the Báb's historic Declaration, followed by a public session, consecrated to the memory of both the Báb and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, should constitute the leading features of this historic Convention.

For it should be borne in mind that in the year 1944 we celebrate not only the termination of the first century of the Bahá'í Era, but also the centenary of the birth of the Bahá'í Dispensation, of the inception of the Bahá'í cycle, and of the birth of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and commemorate as well the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the Bahá'í Faith in the Western world.

No effort, nor any sacrifice can be deemed too great to insure the decisive, the brilliant success of the celebrations which this historic year, of such manifold significance, must witness. He Who in the past, has in diverse ways and on so many occasions, graciously and unfailingly guided, blessed and sustained the members of this privileged community will, no doubt, continue to aid and inspire them to carry on a victorious conclusion the unfinished tasks which still confront them, and will enable them to crown their labors in a manner that will befit their high destiny. The Teaching Work Concerning the teaching work in North, Central and South America, the Guardian has already advised your Assembly that the reconstitution of the disbanded Assemblies in the States and Provinces where a Spiritual Assembly already exists does not form an objective of the Seven Year Plan. The friends should concentrate on their goal which is to have at least one Assembly in every State and Province before May of 1944, and at least one permanent resident believer in every Republic in Central and South America. In view of this, special attention should be paid to those Latin Republics where the situation, from the Bahá'í viewpoint of establishing the Faith, is precarious. Every encouragement should be given to those volunteers who express a wish to settle in virgin areas. Nor should there be any delay in arranging for their settlement — whatever their qualifications they should, during these crucial remaining months of the first Bahá'í century, be sent out to the places most urgently requiring attention. Through further urgent appeals for pioneers, through a series of area conferences, through special teaching circuits for the key cities; through constant reminders that the time is getting short; that all volunteers will be acceptable, and will be speedily dispatched to the centers in most need, the success of the Seven Year Plan must be assured and the magnificent undertaking launched by the American Bahá'ís carried to a glorious consummation. (From the Guardian, through his secretary, March 28, 1943).

Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly
Beloved coworkers and friends:

In accordance with the law of the Bahá'í Dispensation, the local Spiritual Assemblies in all parts of our world community were renewed on April 21 during the days of Ridván consecrated by the Declaration of Bahá'u'lláh. Under the successive impulses of the Holy Spirit, which will never fail the faithful followers of Bahá'u'lláh, these potent and responsible Bahá'í institutions are annually given new life and new opportunity through the choice and decision of the friends.

Moreover, under that same divine law, the annual national gathering of the representatives of all the local communities has been held in the Foundation Hall of the completed Temple structure. Our activities, our plans and our policies, illumined by the light of guidance from the Guardian, have been lifted up into the heaven of consultation, transmuted into expressions of unity and cooperation, and vitalized by the creative will which moves us steadily forward to our spiritual goal.

From that gathering, where the energies of achievement were generated, the spirit has penetrated to all the communities of America.

Now it is for us to reflect this spirit and fulfill our devotion in the completion of that mission entrusted to us as the most important work of the Cause in the fateful concluding years of the first Bahá'í Century. The Bahá'í year 100 calls for most intense effort, most radiant faith, most loyal cooperation. In return it offers us blessings and privileges beyond our realization.

Our first duty is to extend loving welcome and congratulation to the twenty-nine Spiritual Assemblies added to the American Bahá'í community on April 21. In them we see the assurance of victory, and in them we receive a great and surpassing reinforcement of our collective power.

The friends are asked to pray for the confirmation of these new Assemblies in their Bahá'í service, that they may possess unassailable strength and steadfastness, and grow continuously in their fulfillment of their high mission. To assist them in the exercise of their new duties and responsibilities, Bahá'í Procedure has been compiled and published, and the new Assembly members will find useful direction in those passages appearing on pages 29 to 44 and 108 to 115 of the revised, 1942 edition. The local By-Laws are binding upon all Assemblies whether or not legally incorporated.

The incoming National Spiritual Assembly has before it many constructive suggestions from the Convention and also from national committees. At the next meeting the main outlines of the work will be laid down for the year. In the Guardian's two Convention messages, and in a letter received from him since the Convention, we have the great objectives of our Bahá'í effort clearly defined.

The steady flow of contributions to the National Fund throughout the year will give each important activity the reinforcement it needs for successful completion within the allotted time. The local Spiritual Assembly can not over-emphasize this principle in consultation with the believers at the Nineteen Day Feasts. These are the successive occasions provided us for consultation and unity of spirit for national as well as local undertakings. Let us make these gatherings so radiant and inspiring that no believer will be willing to remain absent if physically able to attend.

The believers serving in groups, and the isolated friends, can now arise for redoubled activity in gratitude for the blessing accorded them by the Guardian in his new plan basing the Convention and the National Spiritual Assembly upon the universal franchise of Bahá'ís.

We have reached a great and decisive hour in the history of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. In our sacred union the vile and insidious attacks of the avowed enemies and Covenant-breakers produce no result. With the institutions, the experience, the devotion and enthusiasm developed by the American believers we can establish a great spiritual foundation on which can arise for the whole world to behold the Bahá'í observance in May, 1944, of the Declaration of His Holiness the Bab.

Devotedly your coworkers, National Spiritual Assembly

Annual Election

The election held Friday, April 30, resulted in the following vote for members of the National Spiritual Assembly:

Horace Holley, 129; Louis G. Gregory, 124; Dorothy Baker, 120; Roy C. Wilhelm, 110; Allen B. McDaniel, 108; Amelia E. Collins, 106; LeRoy Iova 101; George O. Latimer, 89; Siegfried Schopflocher, 85.
These members met in the evening of April 30 and organized by the election of the following officers:

George O. Latimer, Chairman; Allen B. McDaniel, Vice Chairman; Horace Holley, Secretary; Louis G. Gregory, Recording Secretary; Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer; Siegfried Schopfocker, Assistant Treasurer.

Schedule of Meetings

The National Spiritual Assembly has adopted a schedule of meetings which decreases the necessary travel of its members, but provides thirty full days of consultation—two more days than last year.

1943:
- May 2, 3, 4
- June 21, 22, 23, 24, 25
- September 16, 17, 18, 19, 20
- December 3, 4, 5, 6, 7

1944:
- February 4, 5, 6, 7, 8
- April 4, 5, 6, 7, 8
- May 19, 20
- Convention May 21, 22, 23, 24

New and Restored Assemblies

Formed April 21, 1943

Brattleboro, Vermont; Portsmouth, New Hampshire; Brookline, Massachusetts; Providence, Rhode Island; Red Bank, New Jersey; Wilmington, Delaware; Chevy Chase, Bethesda, Maryland; Charleston, West Virginia; Greensboro, North Carolina; Delaware, West Virginia and North Carolina are newly occupied States in this area.

New and Restored Assemblies which have been formed in unoccupied States and Provinces, or the former Assemblies which have been restored. More reports will doubtless come in, but up to the present date the communities brought into the World Order of Baha'u'llah include:

1. New England: Brattleboro, Vermont; Portsmouth, New Hampshire; Brookline, Massachusetts; Providence, Rhode Island. The three unoccupied States in this region have been won for the Seven Year Plan.

2. Atlantic Coast: Red Bank, New Jersey; Wilmington, Delaware; Chevy Chase, Maryland; Charleston, West Virginia; Greensboro, North Carolina. Delaware, West Virginia and North Carolina are newly occupied States in this area.

3. South Central: Louisville, Kentucky; Birmingham, Alabama; Jackson, Mississippi; Little Rock, Arkansas. These Assemblies account for four more unoccupied States.

4. Central and Western: Fort Wayne, Indiana; Maywood, Illinois; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Topeka, Kansas; Denver, Colorado; Colorado Springs, Colorado; Albuquerque, New Mexico; Laramie, Wyoming; Boise, Idaho; Reno, Nevada. The six newly occupied States in this great region represent a most important victory won by the pioneers, the Regional Teaching Committees and the National Teaching Committee.

5. Pacific Coast: Alhambra, California; Burbank, California; Burlingame, California; Huntington Park, California. In this State three former Assemblies have been restored.

6. Canada: Edmonton, Alberta. This Assembly removes one of the Provinces of Canada from the unoccupied list.

A year ago we reported that twenty States, three Provinces and the Territory of Alaska had to be settled by 1944. Now of these, sixteen States and one Province have unfurled the banner of the Most Great Peace.

The continent of North America, dear friends, is swiftly being prepared for its magnificent destiny. A Bahá'í community has been arising in these thirty-five years marked by the Annual Conventions which must not only exemplify the application of the Bahá'í Revelation to the lives of a great company of believers, but also develop power and force to roll back the onslaughts of those who are offended and threatened by the establishment of justice and unity in the world.

Under the dome of the beloved Temple we can realize as never before the gathering of this deep, calm and invincible power of faith. We can pledge ourselves to a fuller unity and a more active and constant cooperation. We can extend loving welcome and spiritual congratulation to all these new communities; and we can resolve that during the seventh and last year of the Plan the remaining tasks will be fully done.

Our hearts can go forth, moreover, to the increasing company of Bahá’í coworkers in the other American Republics. For the multitudes of souls in those lands we are as trustees and agents of this World Faith. Through our sacrificial effort they are to be given the divine blessing of truth and freed from the darkess of superstition and ignorance.

In them lie talents, capacities and facilities which when confirmed in service will double and treble the powers we can now bring to the Cause. In their spiritual youth our enthusiasm can be renewed, as by our experience their efforts can be directed into the right paths. Enviable is the Bahá’í record of achievement on the part of the pioneers from North America, the groups and communities of native Bahá’ís formed in previous years, and the Inter-America Committee which has carried one of the greatest responsibilities assigned us under the Seven Year Plan.

No farther away in spirit, but inaccessible to us by travel and personal contact, are the Bahá’í com-communities of the British Isles, Europe,

North and South Africa, Palestine,
Iran and ‘Irán, India and Burma,
Australia and New Zealand, China and the Far East. Though much delayed, bulletins, news letters and other communications arrive from many centers in other lands, and the reality of a world faith exists unimpaired. Perhaps a notable part of the mission given our Bahá’í community will be achieved as result of the unprecedented scattering of American youth to the ends of the earth under the pressure of military operations. For hundreds of years the world came to these shores, to form a new race. Now their descendants return, and this dispersal is no doubt a significant aspect of the Divine Plan beyond our present knowledge and outside our control.

In ‘Iran, the birthplace of Bahá’u’lábá’s Dispensation, a great American establishment is being developed. Above and within these human arrangements are the spiritual forces working for the assured goal and result made known to us in the Bahá’í Writings. If we do our part, we shall find the means to spiritual victory already prepared.

This, the Thirty-Fifth Annual Convention, gathers in the Foundation
Hall of a House of Worship completed at last in its superstructure and exterior ornamentation. No words are needed to release in our hearts the flood of gratitude and joy at having been endowed with the blessing of participation in the construction of this Temple of the World Faith. But we can resolve as we depart to share with other believers the radiance of this gathering, the inspiration that arises whenever a national meeting of Bahá’ís takes place.

There are, unquestionably, certain things still to be done in and around the Temple before it is entirely ready for the honor of the Bahá’í Centenary next year, and these final details are dependent upon the resources available in addition to what will be needed for the teaching work.

The Foundation Hall is in need of renovation if not enlargement; and the grounds will not provide a suitable setting for the House of Worship until at least some simple and preliminary landscape gardening work is done.

As for the coming year, its special achievements will be along the lines which the Guardian in his messages to the Convention has laid down.
But our concern and our resolve ere the sixth year pass into history might well be that the time has come for the American Bahá’ís to undertake the employment of larger public facilities as channels through which the Message may pour in greater volume to the public. How much longer is the daily voice of the radio to tell of everything else on earth except the Cause of God?

What of the press, the encyclopedias, the text books, the works of modern history, the magazines? The conquest of these public facilities challenges us to a supreme height of teaching effort between now and May 23, 1944. Our unoccupied States and Provinces are not geographical units alone—they are also of the order of social and mental realms awaiting the coming of pioneers and settlers who can use these public facilities in His Name and for His purpose.

Appreciation of Services of Convention Committee and Helpers

The annual gathering of the American believers is made possible by a vast amount of work done by the Committee and by other believers who volunteer to assist. The arrangements carried out this year were so efficient and contributed so much to the comfort of the friends and the success of the meetings that the delegates, the visitors and the members of the NSA have all made grateful acknowledgment.

The Committee members who served this year were: General Chairman, Edna True; Chairman of Housing Committee, Mrs. Mineola Hannen; Chairman of Meals Committee, Mrs. Harriet Hilpert; Chairman of Information Committee, John Haggard; Chairman of Devotions Committee, Mrs. Helen Hammond; Chairman of Ridvan Feast Committee, Mrs. Sarah Walrath; Chairman of Ridvan Feast Program Committee, Mrs. Corinne True.

With the kind cooperation of the local Ration Board, good, wholesome meals could be served at the close of each session by the efficient Food Committee under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Hilpert, ably assisted by Wyatt Cooper as chef, and by other workers including Effie Lundberg, Mrs. Ettie Graefe, Mrs. Sarah Walrath, Sophie Loeding, Mrs. Gertrude Henning, Mrs. Florence Gibson, Mrs. Mary Haggard, Mrs. Margaret Newman, Dr. Katherine True, Mrs. Helena O'Grady, Mrs. Doris Holley, Helen Hicks.

Inter-America News

The Baha'is of North America have participated in the radio program of Salutations to the people of Latin America through the broadcasting of the following message:

TO THE PEOPLE OF LATIN AMERICA
% PAN AMERICAN UNION
WASHINGTON, D.C.

"On this day (April 14) the twelfth anniversary commemorating the birth of the political, economic and spiritual unity of the twenty-one Republics of the American continent, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States and Canada sends sincere greetings to Latin America with the earnest hope that the continental solidarity and understanding so far achieved will become the cornerstone of a universal and enduring peace, and create power to assist with the hands of justice, the broken-hearted, and crush the great oppressors with the forces of divine truth."

—American Baha'is

First Baha'i Youth Symposium, Havana, Cuba, arranged by Miss Josephine Kraka.

Jamaica

We have recently received from Dr. King a beautiful Jamaican flag which will be displayed with those of the Latin American Republics, since Jamaica for the present comes within the stewardship of the Inter-America Committee. Dr. King is working assiduously and has has some very fine publicity.

Youth Symposium

The most encouraging reports are coming in about the observance of the Youth Symposium in Latin America. No doubt the National Youth Committee will have much to report about this, but it is also very gratifying to us that with the use of our address list they were able to reach the various centers in time and to have had word back. Great credit is due to Wilfrid Barton who immediately offered to translate some of the important passages from the Guardian's letters and send them to the different countries for use on that day. Now that this effort has been initiated we are sure that in all future years this splendid work will go on binding the young people closer and closer together.

Bolivia

Miss Hottes is a wonderful letter writer and keeps us informed of many interesting contacts that she is making. Recently a young woman whose father is a Protestant minister to the Aymara Indians has become interested in the Cause and very much touched by the beauty of the Baha'i prayers. She has asked permission to translate some of them into the Aymara language so that she may give them to the Indians. Miss Hottes had showed her the words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá about the Indians and she is urging her father to look into the Cause. We recall that Mrs. Adler when in La Paz had interested a native Indian woman and sent us a beautiful photograph of her.

Haiti

Miss Lentz has been visiting the Blackwells and having a much needed vacation from her strenuous work in San Domingo. There is quite a large group in Port-au-Prince and they have been taught with what French literature could be procured. Mrs. Amedée Gibson of Los Angeles has made some very valuable typed copies of the Writings and they have been deeply appreciated.

Costa Rica

Always on the alert, San José writes that now they have interested a group in another city of Costa Rica and they are beginning a study class there; the city is in the Province of Alajuela. Mrs. Woolson writes that recently a group of thirteen from San José went there to hold a meeting and to visit with the ones who are interested. Alma Tica Magazine continues to publish exhaustive articles on the Faith written in Spanish by Mrs. Woolson, who is now very proficient.

Ecuador

Hans Döry, Secretary of Quito group, has sent in a wonderful report of the progress of the Faith in Ecuador. There are nine believers in Quito but unfortunately one of them does not reach the age of twenty-one until July of this year. There are two believers in Guayaquil and one in the city of Ambato. John Stearns' Radio program now will send forth a program purely Baha'i and we shall watch with keen interest this courageous undertaking.

Panama

A fine example of cooperation is shown in the plan of Sr. Ulloa of Costa Rica who is going to Panama to assist the two pioneers there.

As space is limited we must confine our report to few notes but the friends will be interested to know that we recently had a call from John Eichenauer, Jr., who has been inducted into the service and is hoping to be assigned to the Medical Corps.

Next month, God willing, we shall be able to announce the organization of several new Spiritual Assemblies. We hear that Bahia, Brazil, can now reach the age of nine is now complete.

4. WESTERN CANADA REGIONAL CONFERENCE
Rowland Estall, Regional Secretary, announces plans for a Summer Conference, combining intensive educational program with conference and a vocational atmosphere, to be held in Moose Mountain Provincial Park, Saskatchewan, July 18-24. Accommodations will be in the Chalet, single or double rooms or cabins. A week's stay will cost from $8.00 to $10.00 per person, with meals at reasonable rates additional.

For reservations and further details, address Rowland Estall, Secretary, P.O. Box 121, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

On Sunday, May 30, the Memorial to May Maxwell will be dedicated by the Bahá'ís of Buenos Aires at Quilmes Cemetery in behalf of all the believers of North and South America. Illustrations of the completed monument are on their way and when received will be reproduced in Bahá'í News. On May 30 may all of us set aside time for prayer and meditation that we may be associated in spirit with the gathering called to honor one whose martyrdom has been a sacrifice consecrating the Inter-America teaching work.

In Memorium
"I testify, O my Lord, that Thou hast enjoined upon men to honor their guest, and he that hath ascended unto Thee hath verily reached Thee and attained Thy Presence. Deal with him then according to Thy grace and bounty!"—Abdu'l-Bahá.
Mrs. Emma L. Hinman, New Haven.
Mrs. Lela D. Kos, Chicago.
Mr. Louis Farrell, Sherbrooke, Quebec.

The Bab's Address to Letters of the Living
"O my beloved friends! You are the bearers of the name of God in this Day. You have been chosen as the repositories of His mystery. It behooves each one of you to manifest the attributes of God, and to exemplify by your deeds and words the signs of His righteousness, His power and glory. The very members of your body must bear witness to the loftiness of your purpose, the integrity of your life, the reality of your faith, and the exalted character of your devotion. For verily I say, this is the Day spoken of by God in His Book . . . Such must be the purity of your character and the degree of your renunciation, that the people of the earth may through you recognize and be drawn closer to the heavenly Father Who is the Source of purity and grace." The Annual Report of the Contacts Committee, 1942-1943, in connection with the activities of Mrs. George R. True stated "no record." The Committee wishes to change this to read that approximately 385 letters were mailed by Mrs. True as member of the Contacts Committee.
Sealing the Triumph of the First Stage of the Divine Plan

MESSAGE FROM SHOGHI EFFENDI

Successive reports, proclaiming the American believers' brilliant feat, the completion of the exterior ornamentation of the Temple, their historic exploits in the spiritual conquest of every Republic of Latin America, as well as their impending victory to be won through the establishment of the structural basis of the Baha’i administrative order in the virgin States and Provinces of North America, are thrilling the Eastern communities of the Baha’i world with delight, with admiration and with wonder.

Ninety-five Persian families, emulating the example of the American trail-blazers of the Faith of Baha’u’llah, have recently forsaken their homes and followed in the footsteps of pioneers already departed from Persia yesterday evening to hoist its banner in the adjoining territories of Afghanistan, Baluchistan, Sulamaniyyih, Hejaz and Bahrayn Island.

Local Assemblies have been founded in Kashmir Valley in the extreme north and in Madras Presidency in the extreme south, as well as in Haydarabad, the leading stronghold of Muslim orthodoxy in India.

The National Baha’i Administrative Headquarters of the Egyptian believers are nearing completion. A similar institution is in process of establishment in India’s capital city, Delhi. A Guest House, adjunct to the newly built Administrative Headquarters of the Baha’is of Iraq, has been constructed.

Baha’i communities of East and West are arising in the fourth year of the devastating conflict in the full strength of their undistructible solidarity, resolved to write, through immortal deeds, further glorious pages in the last Chapter of the first Baha’i Century.

I appeal to the standard-bearers of Baha’u’llah’s ever-advancing army to safeguard the spiritual prizes already won and maintain every outpost of the Faith established in the southern hemisphere. I entreat them to exert still more magnificent efforts to discharge befittingly the one remaining responsibility in the North American continent.

I am praying for the achievement of a resounding total victory in all the Americas, thereby sealing the triumph of the first stage in the Divine Plan for whose execution the entire machinery of the Administrative Order was for no less than sixteen years patiently and laboriously erected.

SHOGHI RABBIAN
Received May 27, 1943.

Regarding the passages in the “Promulgation of Universal Peace”, the word “income” should be changed to “need” until such time as the text of the Master’s address in the original is found and verified. This particular address, however, is not available at present. The second passage is obviously a mistake and should read: “If his production exceeds he will pay a tax.”

As already stated in a previous communication, the observance of the centenary of our Faith should be held in May, 1944, at which time the annual Convention should also take place; the friends should gather in the auditorium of the Temple on the 22nd of May, two hours and eleven minutes after sunset, which is the exact time of the Bab’s Declaration. On that occasion they should also celebrate the completion of the exterior ornamentation of their Temple. This meeting, so historic in nature, will thus be both a dedication ceremony of the House of Worship, as well as a celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Faith. While gathered in the auditorium no addresses should be delivered, but appropriate selections from the revealed writings should be read, whether prayers, meditations, Tablets, the addresses of the Master or selections from the Bible or the Qur’ân. Passages from the writings of the Bab should be a special feature of the readings selected for this occasion. Singing, whether by soloists or choirs, should form part of the program. The utmost care should be taken to insure that the standard of the vocal music should befit that solemn occasion. The Guardian approves the selection of some of the psalms of David as an evidence of the universality of the Faith which should be amply demonstrated on that occasion. In order to consummate that historic celebration on that day the Guardian suggests that a meeting should be held in the Foundation Hall immediately following the dedication ceremony in the auditorium, at which addresses should be delivered, and non-Baha’is be invited to take part. The program for such a meeting should be elaborate and carefully prepared, and every effort should be made to have men of capacity and eminence as well as well-known Baha’i speakers participate. The agenda of this meeting is left to the discretion of your Assembly, but the Guardian advises you, in view of its importance, to seek the suggestions of the believers before making your final decision. Any new features the friends or the Assembly may wish to add would be most welcomed by the Guardian, who feels that the significance of the Faith, its universality, its world-wide influence, its indestructible unity, its moving history, its world order, its first House of Worship, in the Western World, and its attitude to other Faiths should be clearly and eloquently set forth and explained.
In honor of this unique occasion the Guardian hopes to send a copy of the portrait of the Báb and some of His relics to be displayed for the first time to the assembled believers in the auditorium of the Temple on that memorable evening, after which they should be placed in a safe spot within the Temple together with the Hair of Bahá'u'lláh previously presented to the American believers. Under no circumstances should the portrait of the Báb be left exposed or hung on the wall of the Temple, nor should any copy of it be made. Only on very rare occasions should it be displayed, and whenever shown should be in no other place except the Foundation Hall of the Temple. Its display in the auditorium is permitted only for this occasion. No such portrait is to be found anywhere in the Bahá'í world — with the exception of Haifa — nor is the Guardian contemplating sending any copy at present to any other Bahá'í community. This indicates the importance he attaches to the Temple in America, which he feels is a befitting edifice to enshrine it. The utmost vigilance should be exercised that no copy be made of it in the future, or any attempts be made to reproduce it in any way.

This celebration, on the 22nd of May, 1944, is one feature of the festivities commemorating that historic event. The Convention period, during which these festivities are to be held, should be extended to at least a full week, during which the greatest publicity should be given to the events that are being commemorated. A banquet, at which distinguished friends, sympathizers and admirers of the Cause should be invited to be present, should be held in a befitting setting in the city of Chicago where the Cause was first established in America. In this connection, the Guardian would like to point out that that first center was, as affirmed by Dr. Khayrullah himself, established by him in 1894. Hence, it is justifiable to consider the establishment of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in the continent of America to have begun in 1894. The American believers will, therefore, be celebrating in May, 1944, at once the hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the Faith, the completion of the exterior ornamentation of the Temple, and the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the Bahá'í Faith in the Western hemisphere and, indeed, in the entire Western world. To this marvelous coincidence adequate recognition should be given during the dedication ceremony in the form of thanksgiving prayers, in the meetings held in the Foundation Hall of the Temple, at the sessions of the Convention, through the press, and over the radio.

As to this particular Convention itself, the Guardian feels that the Bahá'ís in Central and South America should be invited to participate and to send, if possible, one representative from each country. These representatives would have the right to deliberate and participate in all the discussions of the Convention, only, naturally, for that year. They would not, however, exercise the right to elect the National Assembly which will be restricted to the delegates from the United States and Canada. In a sense the Convention will represent the entire community of the followers of Bahá'u'lláh throughout the Americas, gathered to celebrate, in the newly completed Temple, the centenary of their Faith, and commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of its inception in the Western Hemisphere.

As the number of local Spiritual Assemblies in North America is steadily increasing, and will soon reach a point when it will be impracticable to apportion the 171 delegates among them, and as the number of delegates should not at present be further increased, the Guardian considers it advisable to introduce a new basis for election on the occasion of this historic Convention. This new principle will enable all Bahá'ís, whether belonging to communities that have an Assembly or to groups, and even all isolated believers, to participate in the election of delegates for the national Convention. Such a step has become necessary in view of the fact, that the number of the Bahá'ís in localities where there are only groups or isolated believers has increased to such an extent as to constitute more than half of the total number of believers living in localities where there is a Spiritual Assembly. All the Bahá'ís will participate, through this new method, in the election of the national delegates — a step that will greatly increase the electorate, and broaden the basis of Bahá'í representation. The unit will, henceforth, have to be regarded as the State or Province, rather than the locality in which the believers reside. In other words, the hundred and seventy-one delegates will have to be apportioned among the States of the U.S.A. and the Provinces of Canada, in direct proportion to the number of believers residing in each one of them. The Bahá'ís in each State and Province must either through correspondence or, preferably, by coming together whenever feasible, elect from among all the believers in that State or Province, the number of delegates allocated to them by the National Spiritual Assembly. In those States where there are numerous local Bahá'í communities it may be found advisable to divide each one of them into districts, allocating to each district a portion of the delegates assigned to that State, and in direct proportion to the number of believers living within the specified district. It is for the National Assembly to consider the most efficient methods whereby all the American believers will henceforth be able to participate in the election of their delegates. This method will promote Bahá'í solidarity in every State and Province, and, by bringing together the believers, enable them to function more efficiently and harmoniously, and promote the work of the Cause that lies ahead. No more befitting occasion could be found on which to initiate this measure than when the Bahá'í representatives of North, Central and South America are gathered to celebrate such historic events in the annals of the Cause.

In connection with these celebrations the Guardian would advise your Assembly to consider the following suggestions:
1. Baha’is unable to participate in the festivities in Chicago and Wilmette should be urged to observe befittingly these anniversaries in their respective localities. Articles in the press, radio broadcasts, invitations to well-known friends and admirers of the Cause, the showing of the Master’s film, the playing of the record of His voice, banquets, exhibitions of the Temple models, etc., should characterize these festivities.

2. The special attention of the friends and visitors, during this celebration should be directed to the fact that the event marks also the hundredth anniversary of the birth of ‘Abdu’l-Baha. This should be emphasized in the addresses delivered in the special anniversary publication, the souvenir pamphlets, the articles for the press and the radio broadcasts.

3. A special anniversary publication should be issued under the supervision of the National Spiritual Assembly and following the general lines indicated in the memorandum submitted by them to the Guardian.

4. The preparation of a smaller souvenir pamphlet, adorned by the Paris photograph of the Master and an artistic reproduction of the Temple, containing a brief outline of the salient events of the first Baha’i century, and prefaced by a short statement of the aims and purposes of the Faith, attractively bound and to be presented to the distinguished guests participating in these celebrations.

5. Special instructions to the Baha’is of Central and South America to celebrate the occasion and to gather at the exact time of the Bab’s Declaration, and to give as wide a publicity to the event as their resources permit.

6. The appointment of a special committee as soon as possible to insure the carrying out of the necessary measures, under the close supervision of the National Assembly, for the proper execution of these plans.

7. An effort should be made to give publicity to this event and its celebration through national radio broadcasts, and, if feasible, to broadcast the ceremony from the auditorium of the Temple.

Memorial to May Ellis Maxwell, Quilmes Cemetery, Buenos Aires, Argentina, dedicated May 30, 1943.

The Guardian hopes to send a color film of the Holy Shrines and gardens in ‘Akká and Haifa to be shown to the friends at the Convention and circulated amongst the various centers.

In conclusion, he wishes to assure you, one and all, of his special prayers for the success of the mighty efforts which he is sure you will exert to insure the triumph of the Seven Year Plan, as well as the glorious celebrations which must consummate the first Baha’i century.

Words of the Bab Addressed to Quddus

"The days of your companionship with Me are drawing to a close. The hour of separation has struck, a separation which no reunion will follow except in the Kingdom of God, in the presence of the King of Glory. In this world of dust, no more than nine fleeting months of association with Me have been allotted to you. On the shores of the Great Beyond, however, in the realm of immortality, joy of eternal reunion awaits us. The hand of destiny will ere long plunge you into an ocean of tribulation for His sake. I, too, will follow you; I too will be immersed beneath its depths. Rejoice with exceeding gladness, for you have been chosen as the standard-bearer of the host of affliction, and are standing in the vanguard of the noble army that will suffer martyrdom in His name. In the streets of Shiraz, indignities will be heaped upon you, and the severest injuries will afflict your body. You will survive the ignominious behavior of your foes, and will attain the presence of Him who is the one object of our adoration and love. In His presence you will forget all the harm and disgrace that shall have bepalpen you. The hosts of the Unseen will hasten forth to assist you, and will proclaim to all the world your heroism and glory. Yours will be the ineffable joy of quaffing the cup of martyrdom for His sake. I, too, shall tread the path of sacrifice, and will join you in the realm of eternity."

The Thirty-Fifth Annual Convention

The Bahá’í annual Convention, answering its thirty-fifth call, assembled in the Temple foundation at Wilmette, III., Thursday, April 29.
During its three-day session ninety-nine of its accredited delegates, a wide margin over a majority, answered the roll. Visiting friends came in such numbers as to fill all seats throughout the time. The Impression of a sea of humanity, each wave surging with divine harmony, love and spiritual illumination, is one to be cherished. Most of these friends came from nearby centers.
But it was also noticeable that regions as remote from each other as the two oceans, Canada and the deep South, were drawn together during this Ríḍván festival. Red, white and black as to ethnic stocks;
Jew, Catholic, Protestant, Moslem, as to religious background; wealth and poverty as to economic values; prestige and obscurity as to social preferment; each and all entered the majestic and wondrous Temple of God and found fellowship under the Banner of Bahá’u’lláh.

Allen B. McDaniel, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, called the Convention to order, voicing in golden phrases the praises of God, whose mighty confirmations assembled us. Radiant faces were significant of a universal faith, calling together the workers for a new world order. In contrast to a world filled with confusion, fear and chaos, hope, love, faith and courage were evident. The Master’s dedication of this Temple site thirty-one years ago was feelingly mentioned.
And now, under the guidance of our revered Guardian, we have completed the sixth year of the Seven Year Plan. Let us be ever mindful of his exhortation to draw near to Bahá’u’lláh that He may draw near to us.

The Convention organized with the election of Philip Sprague of New York as chairman and Horace Holley as secretary. The chairman mod-cess took hold, stressing the need of improvement as we move fordward to the desired goal.

The first order was the reading of two telegrams from the Guardian. They were also spread in writing among the delegates. Shoghi Effendi showers his loving encour-gagement upon the American friends, indicating a high station and in fortune even greater triumphs for this community. Raising the standard of justice, he points out that isolation is no longer a condition of the American friends. Therefore, in order that all the friends may exercise the right to vote, a new apportionment is provided in which each state or province is the unit and all the qualified friends therein may vote for Convention delegates.
These most important messages were elsewhere printed in full in the last issue. As a great sign of bounty, the likeness of His Holiness, the Báb, is to be sent to America as a most precious relic for the Temple archives. Also plans are unfolded for the Centennial Convention next year, which promises to be a glorious, ePOCH-making gathering.

The Convention in reply, sent the following message to the Guardian:
"Hearts overflowing (at the) mag-titude (of the) new vision (of) complete Western participation. Reverent appreciation (for the) anticipated gift (of the) portrait (of the) Holy Báb. (We) pledge (the) utmost exertion (of the) American Bahá’í community toward total victory (of the) Centennial celebration. (We) supplicate (our) beloved Guardian’s continuous prayers (for the) consummation (of the) divinely appointed task. Loving devotion."

The National secretary presented his annual supplementary report covering such matters as could not be included in his general report.
The Faith gained two hundred and twenty-four new members during the current year; emphasis upon educating, calling to mind the duty of each Bahá’í to bring one person per year, at least, into acceptance of the Faith; the enviable record of achievement in Canada; bulletins and new teaching pamphlets, foreign publications; contacts with Iran; progress and completion of Temple construction; foundation hall renovation; landscape gardening; increasing channels of publicity; such as calendars, radio, press; pioneer settlers in virgin territories; twenty-eight new centers, etc., convey a summary of this report.

Two object lessons were presented making vivid and picturesque the recital of the plan. The first was a chart containing a single line divided into three sections running in different directions. The first part was a slant downward from the begining upward, indicating the slow increase of pioneer teaching. Then, strange to say, the second part of the line was a slant downward though not as far as the level of starting. Then, under the strong impetus of the Guardian’s appeal, so greatly did pioneers respond that this index line shot upward, almost in a perpendicular direction. A far more impressive object lesson was the presence in the Convention of about twenty-eight friends who have engaged in pioneering and settlement work. These heroic souls were invited to stand before the convention. The committee chairman extolled their merits, to the approval of all the friends.

Of the virgin teaching areas there remain but seven to be settled and in these a start has already begun.
Eighteen such areas have been settled during the past year and twenty-nine have been settled during the past six years. The progress of the past year synchronized with the completion of the Temple ornamentation, releasing great spiritual confirmations. The pioneers have

Announcement of
New Bahá’í Book
The long-awaited one-volume selection of Bahá’í Writings is now in publication, replacing the former Bahá’í Scriptures. The new book contains 465 pages, including Index, and its Contents include excerpts from fifteen different Bahá’í books, pamphlets or magazines.
The title is Bahá’í World Faith. Of its nine Chapters, five are Words of Bahá’u’lláh, four the Words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Printed on thin paper, bound in facsimile. The low cost, $1.50 per copy, results from having ordered an edition of 10,000 copies at one printing. Delivery promised by July 15. Assemblies should place large orders now — every believer will desire a copy.
made great sacrifices. In one case, a temperature of 50 degrees below zero was encountered in Canada.

The momentum acquired by the teaching effort bids fair to bring to a successful conclusion the Seven-Year Plan, for which but a year remains. But in the meantime there should be no relaxation of effort in any of the various lines of service.

Inter-America Teaching

The report of this second great arm of teaching was presented by its Committee Secretary, Mrs. Nellie S. French. Mexico City has done a fine work in spreading the teachings to five groups in various sections of the country. Ten Spiritual Assemblies were organized in Latin America during the past year. Recent obstacles and dangers could not escape notice. One of the friends, Mrs. Collins, had her plans for a journey upset three times by forces not under control. But at length she set out under difficulties and had a successful trip. Returning, the situation seemed so difficult under new trials, that she made these words of Bahá'u'lláh a prayer:

"Put your whole trust and confidence in God, Who hath created you and seek ye His help in all your affairs. Succor come from Him alone. He succoreth whom He will with the hosts of the heavens and of the earth."—(Promised Day Is Come, Page 22)

All difficulties melted away.

Philip Sprague related some of his teaching experiences in South America. Mrs. H. Emogene Hoagg mentioned the Cuban work and Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Blackwell, just returned from Haiti, were successful there in organizing a Spiritual Assembly, with the son of a former Haitian President as its chairman, and with a community of fourteen. They gave an interesting account of Haitian customs.

More literature is needed for Latin America and a compilation prepared by Mesdames Loulie A. Matthews and Helen Bishop will soon be available. Miss Roan Orloff, Boston delegate, has recently completed the translation of the Dawn-Breakers into Esperanto, a service which will greatly facilitate knowledge of the Faith in foreign lands. The bulky manuscript was turned over to the National Spiritual Assembly during the Convention period.

The Election

The Convention in accordance with its legal requirements balloted for the new National Spiritual Assembly, on Friday of the sessions and following prayers and readings. The tellers reported those elected for the ensuing year as follows: Horace Holley, Louis G. Gregory, Dorothy K. Baker, Roy C. Wilhelm, Allen B. McDaniel, Amelia E. Collins, Leroy Ioa, George O. Latimer, Siegfried Schopflocher. Later the new body reported the following organization: George O. Latimer, chairman; Allen B. McDaniel, vice-chairman; Horace Holley, secretary; Louis G. Gregory, recording secretary; Roy C. Wilhelm, treasurer; Siegfried Schopflocher, assistant treasurer.

Spiritual Greetings

Friends in various cities sent loving messages: Alberquerque, New Mexico; Honolulu, H. I.; British Columbia; Louden County, Va.; Charleston, W. Va.; Spokane, Wash.; Chicago; Philadelphia; Denver, Colo.; Laramie, Wyo.; Syracuse, N. Y.; Rockford, Ill. The spirit of all these beautiful messages is conveyed by one from San Jose, Costa Rica, in Spanish, with its English translation as follows: "The Bahá'í Committee of San Jose, Porto Rico, convey to all their brothers who united in our glorious Temple, fraternal greetings and our best wishes for the continued success and happiness of all. May the resolutions taken at the Convention be luminous torches which will enkindle greater faith in all the hearts of our brothers who are scattered throughout the world, and awaken spiritual unfoldment in all those who have not yet learned of the light and truth so beautifully expounded in the Bahá'í Teachings. May this sincere and loving fraternal greeting assure you that this community has worked arduously and that the fruit gathered is the best offering we can present to adorn those halls toward which all our spirits are directed."

(Signed) "Bahá'í Group of San Jose, '22 de Abril de 1943' Costa Rica."

Youth and Education

Three Bahá'í Schools, Green Acre, Louhelen and Geyserville made known their interesting schedules for the summer's work. An unusual number of young people attended the Convention, soon discovering each other, arranged a conference and luncheon, formulated plans and had an interesting hearing before the Convention. The National Assembly delegated two of their more youthful members to confer with them so as to relate their ideas and activities to the National Youth Committee, an administrative step.

Publicity
This committee advised against a beggarly attitude in contacting the press. Better, give the true impression that here is something of value. Convey the international scope of the Faith. Offer specific news of current happenings, such as to the Race Unity banquet. Make it a habit to present to the public the right thing at the right time and in the right quantity. This committee has made nine news releases and they have been received and published by the press. Some success has also been obtained in foreign publicity. This committee through Clarence Niss, offers to serve any who will ask for information.

Race Unity and College Circuits
These two committees have functioned during the past year with pleasing results, finding an astonishing readiness to hear the Bahá’í Plan of World Unity with its related principle of the oneness of mankind. The avidity with which Bahá’í literature is received and read in cultural circles is impressive. The heroic souls who are upholding this principle with courage and wisdom, especially in the South, are worthy of the highest admiration and praise. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in one of His Tablets mentions “The Art of Manipulation and the Inflexibility of Will.” His attitude toward races during His American tour has been pointed out by the Guardian as a model for each and all to follow. Timidity and fear conceal the merits of the Cause. Firm adherence to its principles and ideals, with kindness and good-will to all, disclose divine values and serve as channels of confirmation and victory. Bahá’ís can lead a crucified humanity to the way of relief.

Mrs. Dorothy Baker gave a fascinating recital of her college work and of the sweet humility and readiness which met the teachings everywhere. Clarence Niss told of service to the press of minority groups with Bahá’í Editorials and of the warm appreciation they met. Eli W. Powell spoke for the American Indians. It was also brought out that both white and colored colleges of the South, as elsewhere, are now ready to receive Bahá’í speakers of both races. Shall we now hesitate or doubt the increasing capacity of mankind for the Program of God?

Radio
Mrs. Bacon of the Radio Committee suggested the establishment of a sending station in the Temple itself. This the committee achieved temporarily, by successful plans for Allan B. McDaniels to give a radio address from the Temple and on the Temple. This happy delivery described the symbolism, the outward beauty and the spiritual significance of the structure.

The committee further recommended that regular broadcasts about the Temple and Teachings would be a good investment for Bahá’í funds. A brilliant address by William B. Sears, Bahá’í, and radio expert, added much to the instruction and entertainment of the friends.

Contacts
This committee reported over nine hundred letters with literature sent authors, educators, editors, etc. Replies came from many notables. Friends are invited to cooperate by sending names of good prospects for advanced thought.

World Order Magazine
This Magazine Committee explained their wish to do a two-fold service. Help the Bahá’ís in teaching the Faith and to make contacts with new people. The back cover always contains a very comprehensive statement. The various numbers express much planning ahead. Cooperation is asked; also wide-awake contributions.

Braille
Miss Ella C. Quant of the Braille Committee, made an earnest plea for the blind, especially those deprived of sight in later life. During the past year twenty-two people have been brought closer to Bahá’u’lláh by Braille study. Some of the Boston friends, who are active in this humane service are now in close touch with Perkins Institute of that city. Sometimes the loss of the eyesight makes the insight keener and more penetrating. The true vision is of reality.

Bahá’í Centennial Celebration
The hundredth anniversary of the Bahá’í Faith gives promise of being a brilliant and elaborate celebration. The Convention will be in session a week. Prominent people, both within and without the Faith, will make addresses. As illustrating the universal nature of the Faith readings will be made from the Bible and Qurán as well as the Teachings. Every phase of Bahá’í activity and every institution of the Faith will have its history and work set forth briefly in a Centennial booklet. A motion to invite Shoghi Effendi to be present on this occasion was heartily, unanimously and enthusiastically carried.

El Ridvan
This great Feast was celebrated on Saturday evening of the Convention with a record attendance. The readings selected were Tablets of Bahá’u’lláh, followed by explanatory Tablets of ‘Abdül-Bahá and letters of Shoghi Effendi. Mrs. Corrine True was chairman. She is one of the very few people, if not the only one, who has attended all of the thirty-five annual Conventions. Although well in the evening of life one seeing her radiance and hearing her eloquent expressions might think her still in the meridian of life. This Feast is always a very happy occasion alike to friends and visitors.

The chairman at the Sunday Teaching Congress was Mrs. Amelia E. Collins. The speakers, who were heard to good advantage, were Mrs. A. Y. Seto and Leroy Ioas, both of San Francisco, California. This meeting was a very successful one. The subjects were: Birth of a World Faith and Development of a World Order.

Summary
The Convention took a new and sustained flight in the direction of perfect harmony, cooperation and peace. Its spiritual atmosphere was made possible by prayerfulness and loving kindness. There was joyfulness over the notable victory won, yet a solemnness in the view of greater responsibilities and works ahead.

The friends seemed alert and well trained in guarding the sacred edioffice of the Faith from the machinations of Covenant breakers. Nor could any breath from the Nether world becloud its radiance or mar that loyalty which is its own stronghold and security.

The unity of the Convention greatly quickened the dispatch of business. For the first time within memory, the last session closed much earlier than the time set by the agenda, due to the meeting of minds with hearts united. 'Abdu'l-Baha once described true consultation as a line connecting Earth with Heaven. At one end of the line is the Supreme Concourse; at the other, the gathering of the friends. The Faith is an ever unfolding vision of reality. Greater things seem in store for the American friends than minds can now conceive. We are blessed beyond our dreams and happier, far happier than we know. But the joy of a community depends upon its capacity, developed by Divine Favor, to make joyful mankind. In the process of growth there are tears as well as laughter.

Letter From the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Coworkers and Friends:

The American Baha'is community has been profoundly stirred by the significance of the Centenary of the Faith to be celebrated next May. That we are now in the Centennial Year and our opportunity to serve under the Seven Year Plan is now in its final phase is a source of renewed determination to every believer. Since the Convention the friends have been awaiting the announcement of plans and activities worthy of our unique destiny.

This announcement the National Spiritual Assembly is now privileged to make. A nationwide teaching plan, coordinated, intensive and continuous, has been adopted, and in the promotion of this plan each Assembly and group is called upon to hold one public meeting with addresses keyed to the subject. The friends are requested to note the list of Committees appointed, each with its phases of publicity, public meeting, and study classes arranged for those interested, release our best efforts and prepare the way for the Centennial, the supreme experience of this generation of Baha'is.

The friends are requested to note the list of Committees appointed, each with its own defined area of function, as published in Bahá'í News for July. We should be familiar with the services set up to assist us with material, programs or information.

May we all, dear friends, strive to learn the divine art of unified action this year, and confirm our zeal and devotion with the joy of association with all other believers. Out of... this unity of hearts will come the power to establish His teaching and His law in this darkened world.

The Eleventh Hour

The sixth year of the Seven Year Plan carried the American Community to a height of achievement which Shoghi Effendi himself has acclaimed a "magnificent victory". Through the widespread devotion and efforts of the friends,—through pioneers, settlers, traveling teachers, and concentrated activities of Committees—the Faith swept forward into eighteen virgin States and Provinces. The tremendous events of the "crucial year" turned the tide in our North American teaching campaign. We no longer struggle against possible defeat. The long-sought goals are in sight. Although "the eleventh hour for the Seven Year Plan has struck," there is hope and confidence in "total victory".

Let us for a moment survey the accomplishments of the sixth year of the Plan, as they are thrillingly disclosed at Convention:

In the first five years—9 virgin States and Provinces were won.
In the sixth year—18 virgin States and Provinces were won.
In the first five years—29 new Assemblies were gained in North America.
In the sixth year—29 new Assemblies were organized in North America.

From Convention, 1942, to Convention 1943, the pioneers and settlers who answered the Guardian's call were 105. Of these 96 moved to virgin areas, and 19 to disbandied Assemblies. One-fourth of the total number (25) moved to new homes between March 15, 1943, and Convention time; in this issue their names are added to the Pioneer Roll of Honor which was published in the Annual Report.

Here in these striking facts, the American Community may find just cause for gratitude and pride. But figures do not tell the real story, no, nor the hundreds of stories which underlie this work. Only those at the forefront of effort can know the fears and joys of the pioneer front. Perhaps these words from two settlers will speak more tellingly.

"Next to being a pioneer, being a settler is a tremendous bounty. How

VIRGIN STATES AND PROVINCES

Since the accompanying article on "The Eleventh Hour" was prepared, the National Teaching Committee has become increasingly concerned by the lack of volunteers for the pioneer front. As outlined in the article, there are still seven virgin States and Provinces, needing thirty pioneers and settlers to assure the formation of Local Spiritual Assemblies.

The offers to settle, since Convention, have been alarmingly few. Two months have already passed in this seventh year. We must not forget that plans for settlement, in such a difficult period, often require much time to complete, especially for Alaska and the two Canadian Provinces. As "standard-bearers of Bahá'u'lláh's ever-advancing army," we American Bahá'ís cannot afford to let the least delay in discharging our "one remaining responsibility." Our object is total victory; we can insure it only through an immediate and wide-spread response to the Guardian's call.

The Teaching Committee urges all those whose hope is to uphold an active share in the Seven-Year Plan, to volunteer at once for settlement in one of these virgin areas. Write or telegraph Miss Charlotte Linfoot, Secretary, 156 Nova Drive, Piedmont, California.

Remember—this is our eleventh hour! The Guardian has cabled that our task "demands one last, supreme effort to harness all available resources to achieve total victory."

-NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

I pray that those who are hesitating will see the light and answer the call. Daily we have the assurance that 'God will assist those who arise to serve,' and how wonderful that assurance is for it's proven every day, both spiritually and materially. It's the most tremendous bounty for one does so very little and receives so much."

"I wish you could convey to those volunteers who turn back my most earnest prayer that they remain steadfast in spite of all difficulties, for sometimes the desired results only come at the eleventh hour. We cannot fail our Guardian's call, the very success of our beloved Cause hinges in the balance. One person, failing in his duties may be the one to spell its failure or one person alone and unassisted, suffering adversities, by holding on until the very end may be the very one to bring the success so anxiously awaited by our beloved Guardian. Let each one feel that the success of the Cause rests upon his shoulders alone."

Now the sixth year of the Plan has passed and the months allotted to us by Bahá'u'lláh are swiftly vanishing. The Guardian has cabled that "The one remaining task... demands one last, supreme effort to harness all available resources to achieve total victory."

The first and imperative demand is to complete the settlement of seven virgin areas. The following list shows these remaining areas and the number of settlers needed in each:

The second demand, as critical as the first, is to consolidate and insure the work in areas already won. Fifteen of the eighteen Assemblies organized in 1943 have less than twelve members, while eleven have only nine members. We need a margin of safety; we must be certain of victory—no matter what comes. Here are several essential ways to achieve this:

1) The Faith counts upon pioneers and settlers who have moved to these areas to hold firmly to their posts. There is a solemn responsibility undertaken at the call of the Guardian. Each of them must see his job through to the end, working to deepen and extend the knowledge of the Faith, for our objective is no less than the permanent and solid foundation of Spiritual Assemblies, the bedrock of the unfolding Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

2) Additional settlers are needed to strengthen these many new Assemblies. Here is an opportunity which every believer is qualified to accept. A vast field of progress awaits the friends, where the work of teaching and consolidating the Faith calls for many hands. What else can these words of the Guardian signify? "The hour requires all ranks of the faithful to arise, widely disperse, speedily settle, tirelessly persevere. . . ."

3) Traveling and circuit teachers, and friends who can visit and assist in making contacts, will greatly stimulate and enliven the new communities.

It is urgent that every believer immediately determine how he can best respond to the Guardian’s most recent plea, "for further heroism, for a concerted, a persistent, a herculean effort." The National Teaching Committee and the Regional Teaching Committees eagerly await offers of teaching assistance in accordance with the needs outlined above. May the glimpse of approaching victory quicken and renew our hopes. May the momentum of our onrushing Faith accelerate with the needs outlined above. May the needs of South and Central America. This list does not include the Assembly formed in Puerto Rico, as that is classified with the Assemblies of the United States and Canada.

Latin American Assemblies

Up to May 27, 1943, the National Spiritual Assembly had received notice of the election of a local Spiritual Assembly in the following cities of South and Central America. This list does not include the Assembly formed in Puerto Rico, as that is classified with the Assemblies of the United States and Canada.

Buenos Aires, Argentina.
San Jose, Costa Rica.
Punatarena, Costa Rica.
Mexico, D. F.
San Salvador, El Salvador.
Havana, Cuba.
Port au Prince, Haiti.
Tegucigalpa, Honduras.
Guatemala City, Guatemala.
Santiago de Chile.

Inter-America News

The eagerly awaited record of the formation of new Assemblies in Latin America is not entirely complete but we are able now to report that Santiago, Chile, Guatemala City, and Puerto Rico (San Juan) have reached that goal and we feel confident that Bahia, Brazil will have been re-established. But on the other hand we have had to drop back because at last reports sent from Montevideo they lacked one member, and Puebla, Mexico also was minus its quota; but on the whole we are very happy to announce that we now have thirteen Spiritual Assemblies and there are several other places where we may confidently expect to have an Assembly by next year. The committee is busily engaged in trying to compile a correct list of believers, but we find this very difficult as reports list certain names for which we have no cards and we have several cards which do not agree with the lists received to date.

Disbanded Assemblies

Mrs. Dorothy Scotts ...... Huntington Park, California ... Lima, Ohio
Mrs. Nancy M. Smith ...... Huntington Park, California ... Long Beach, Calif.
Mrs. Lilian Morris ...... Huntington Park, California ... Gardena, Calif.

Mrs. Rowan Carter is now helping with the teaching work in Fargo, North Dakota.

Cuba

Our two faithful pioneers, Miss Kruka and Miss Silver are making every stroke count. They write that 38 persons signed their Ridvan Feast list and there was great enthusiasm and many desired to attend classes. Of course the Youth group in Havana holds the record for attendance, accomplishment and activity. The members of this group are younger than most youth groups as will be seen from their photographs. Miss Silver is now teaching both adults and children and sharing the days with Miss Kruka.
Puerto Rico

We quote from the report recently received from Mrs. Ayne McComb secretary of the newly established Spiritual Assembly as follows: "Constant opportunities open for us to give out literature. It is marvelous how the divine message is spreading throughout the Island without a studied effort on our part. . . . The Faith has reached people in the cities of Carolina, Guaynabo, Rio Piedras, Arecibo, Aguadilla, Cabo Rojo, Mayaguez, San German, Ponce, Caguas, Juncos and Rio Grande. . . . One readily understands then why this Island has been termed "Where the Americas Meet".

Colombia

Mrs. Ruth Shook has returned from Bogotá for a visit but will be at her post again in the fall and in the meantime Miss Winnie Lou Baker is living in Bogotá and is employed there.

Panama

Several new names are being added to the list in Ancon and our pioneers there are also meeting men in the armed forces who are attending meetings. Miss Gwene Dorothy Sholtis is now in Panama awaiting news of transfer to some other post. She did wonderful work in Venezuela but has left Priscilla Rhoads to carry on in Caracas as Gwene is needed elsewhere. She has learned Spanish very well and we must capitalize on this knowledge to use her services in less developed regions.

Chile

Gloving reports come in from Santiago and photographs of the Youth Group which constituted the attendance at the Youth Symposium confirm our highest hopes. An interesting event occurred also in connection with the visit of Vice-President Wallace to Chile as one of the native believers was appointed by the Chilean Government to attend him personally during his entire sojourn. Mrs. Atwater is writing for the Chilean press and we have recently received a lengthy clipping which is the beginning of a series of articles which she is to write in Spanish, being assisted for the present by eminent writers whom she has met and interested, Sra. Yvonne de Cuellar who resides in La Paz, Bolivia, and was our first believer there has been sojourning in Santiago and enjoying the meetings. The joyousness with which Miss Virginia Orbison writes of the teaching activities in Santiago leaves no doubt of the penetration of the spirit there.

Jamaica

We received, in time for the Convention, a small Jamaican flag from Dr. King and no doubt he was wishing he might have accompanied it and been at the Convention also. This flag and the beautiful set of those from all the South and Central American Republics were intended for ornamentation of the Inter-America booth but since no booths were constructed because of war conditions, the flags were displayed as a loving tribute to our friends in far away lands.

Haiti

It was a great surprise and pleasure to greet Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Blackwell who arrived at the Temple during the course of our session. They both look very well and gave a verbal report of the work in Port-au-Prince as well as delivering the greetings of the faithful community there. The home of Mr. and Mrs. McBean is the center for meetings and we are told that Mrs. McBean devotes herself to making things comfortable for the friends and to supplying delicious refreshments for the Feasts in true Bahá’í style.

News from Mrs. Barton from Montevideo informs us that she will attend the unveiling of the monument to Mrs. Maxwell in Buenos Aires on May 30, and will then return home by way of the west coast.

The Guardian mentions in a recent letter the "vital and ever-increasing importance" of this Inter-America work and urges us to concentrate at all costs our attention and energies on maintaining the centers already established in Latin America so that a nucleus of two native believers may be found in each of those Republics by 1944.

We beg the continued assistance of the friends that the means to fulfill these obligations may be forthcoming.

Inter-America Youth Activities

". . . . Train these children with divine exhortations. From their childhood instill in their hearts the love of God so that they may manifest in their lives the fear of God and have confidence in the bestowals of God. Teach them to free themselves from human imperfections and to acquire the divine perfections latent in the heart of man. . . . Know ye the value of these children, for they are all my children." ('Abdu’l-Bahá in Promulgation of Universal Peace.)

The Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs Washington, D. C. has issued a book on "Children of Other Americas". We suggest this since more and more the Inter-America Committee is hearing of the work being done by our pioneers for children in Central and South America. A compilation suitable for translation might be very valuable.

MEXICO CITY reports that on several occasions the Bahá’í Community there has held special entertainments for children, not only children of the Bahá’í families, but especially under-privileged children who have been made very happy by stories and little gifts and the friends have felt amply repaid and will continue this work.

HAVANA is perhaps the most outstanding center for the work with children and we are always proud and happy to hold them up as an example of what can be done. Correspondence with our two pioneers there might assist others to know how to win the interest and cooperation of the children whose parents are not associated with the believers and who might be won themselves through the medium of their little ones.

SAN SALVADOR writes of a school for the under-privileged children in their city. We are eager for more information about this and hope to hear more particulars from Clarence Iverson.

BAHÍA, BRAZIL —— Well do we remember the little home which Leonora Holsapple had established in Bahía. Thirteen little girls were residents of this home which, under supervision, they conducted themselves, attending to all the household duties as well as being taught the principles of the Faith. These little girls recited a Bahá’í prayer for us which Leonora had translated into Portuguese. These children must now be grown and we rejoice in the effect which this training must have had on their lives and those with whom they are associated.

PERU—Miss Nicklin has also been teaching children in her kindergarten class who, although not specifically Bahá’í, cannot fail to absorb the wonderful plan for a better world from her loving training.

Due to our eagerness to fulfill our obligations to the Seven Year Plan certain changes and adjustments are being made to reinforce some centers and enable us to make use of our pioneers who have already acquired a knowledge of Spanish, for the time is too short and the work too difficult to permit us to depend now on as many new pioneers as we would have liked to see in the field. By next month we shall have some further announcements to make but we hope that those who may be considering the Latin American field will not forsake the study of Spanish and Portuguese as the need will be very great after the war, with the beginning of the second century of Bahá’í Era.

In addition to increasing monthly enrollment of individual new World Order subscribers for the coming Baha’i year, the editorial and business staffs hope that a substantial number of new subscriptions may be recorded for Organizations, University, College and Public Libraries.

Reflecting, as it does, the vital prophecies and teachings of Baha’u’llah, World Order Magazine is destined to experience growing popularity with library readers in search of enlightenment on the subject of world federation, unity of mankind and “The Most Great Peace” as foretold by Baha’u’llah nearly a century ago.

A powerful contributing factor towards attaining the much desired increase in library subscriptions for World Order lies in securing listings for the magazine in a publication called “Reader’s Guide to Periodical Literature.” This pub-
Photographs for the Bahá'í World

Material is now being collected for the Bahá'í World, Volume X. Will all who have photographs illustrating (1) summer school activities, (2) pageants, (3) exhibitions, (4) activities of traveling teachers or any other events or institutions of the Cause within the two year period March 21, 1942-March 29, 1944, please send them in with name and date of each.

On Solicitation of Funds

The new friends are reminded of the protection afforded to Bahá'ís in relation to their expenditure of funds for Bahá'í purposes. The only authorized agencies of the Cause receiving donations for Bahá'í use are the Treasurers of National and local Assemblies. If conditions arise in which the question is one of meeting individual cases of need and distress, believers should make sure that any appeals for personal help actually come from Bahá'ís and not from persons claiming membership in the Faith for a material motive. Every traveling believer should have proper credentials. As for solicitation of funds for purposes which non-Bahá'ís claim are for similar ends as those of the Cause, such claims have no real foundation. Only the Bahá'í community can achieve the goals established in the Bahá'í teachings.

The End of Religious Schism

The sign of spiritual weakness in religion, marking the end of its ethical influence, has always been the appearance of schism—the division of the religious community into two or more independent bodies, each claiming equal authority and right. The history of the great religions makes it clear that such irretrievable breaks in the unity of faith do not occur until the faith has developed forms and practices outside and beyond the sacred text on which the religion is based.

Religious schism, that is, becomes possible only where there is honest ground for difference of opinion concerning vital truths, or justifiable conflict concerning the application of authority and power. Among the conditions which in the past have made for schism among followers of a Prophet are: the rise and undue development of a professional clergy; the substitution of attitudes toward the church for the fundamental revealed attitudes to God; the materialization of worship and its transformation from an inner spiritual experience into a form of economic exploitation; the seizure of power and authority by a class and the division of the community into privileged and unprivileged parties; the use of religious influence for the establishment of political policies; cruelty and immorality on the part of the professed leaders of the church; and unbridled personal ambition.

In the Bahá'í Faith we have religion established on a new and firm basis which eliminates the conditions which make schism possible or inevitable. Bahá'u'lláh has extended the power of divine truth and will from the realm of pure worship or general truth into the realm of social action. He created the office of Interpreter in the person of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and made obedience to 'Abdu'l-Bahá equivalent to obedience to Himself. He provided for the expression of His Faith in human action by creating social institutions endowed with authority in relation to actions but specifically deprived of power to alter, amend or add to the sacred text or introduce any new forms of worship. Aside from these institutions and such persons as, like 'Abdu'l-Bahá, were given unique power, the community of believers is composed of persons who are forever equal in their degree. No individual Bahá'í as such can ever claim authority over another.

In providing the truths, principles and institutions necessary for a World Faith, Bahá'u'lláh closed the door forever to any schismatic movement. No Bahá'í can ever pose as the apostle of freedom or the hero of justice in this religious community. The relation of the individual to mankind has been permanently defined, and no disturbance of an emotional nature or eruption of private conscience can produce the equivalent to those universal laws which Bahá'u'lláh Himself revealed.

The world's schismatic is prevented from operating in any area of darkness where the observer could be unable to distinguish between truth and falsehood, integrity and dishonor. The Bahá'í Faith has no realm of uncertainty and confusion where the schemer can lurk undetected, and no field of action where the rebel can foment disunity without involving the application of a final authority which every Bahá'í unequivalently recognizes and obeys.

The student who wishes to trace this truth throughout its historic Bahá'í pattern can turn to the writings of Bahá'u'lláh in which He condemns the schismatic and deniers in His mission; and can turn to the
The Bahá’í World Community

News of the activities of the Bahá’ís in India is very encouraging and reflects great loyalty and devotion to the Cause of God. The following excerpts are quoted from a letter addressed to the Guardian by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma and dated May 25, 1942.

"As regards the progress of the Six-Year Plan two new Assemblies were elected on the 21 of April—in Hyderabad (Deccan) and in Kotah. In addition to Mr. Saroosh F. Yagangi and Mrs. Firuz Saroosh, who have settled in Bangalore, Mr. Isfandiar F. Yagangi from Poona and Mr. Rustam M. Sherafi from Bombay have gone with their families and settled in Panjgani. The two families have formed a group there and they hold meetings to which they invite others also.

"Dr. M. E. Lukmani has gone to Sholapur and has opened a homeopathic dispensary there. Attached to the dispensary he has a Bahá’í library where he invites people and holds talks with them.

"Dr. M. Jan from Calcutta has migrated from Calcutta and settled in Chapra, a town in Bihar. He has started a homeopathic dispensary and teaches the Divine Faith to the people.

"Messrs. Mihirban Jamshed and Shah Bahram Mazkoori have gone from Karachi to Multan for settlement. They have opened a business there and attached to it they have a Bahá’í library where they invite people and give them the Message of Bahá’u’lláh.

"We have a very wide and, we hope, an effective teaching scheme for next year. Mr. Ilmi is to be temporarily relieved of his editor’s duties and he may visit the places where new Assemblies and groups have been formed so that he may help them in consolidating and teaching the Faith in their respective localities.

"Mr. Abdullah Fazil who has gathered a group of educated Europeans and Indians around him in Bangalore may go to Kashmir and then to Punjab and Lucknow.

"Mr. Samadani may go on tour in Punjab, Sind and other places. Mr. Abul ‘Abbas Risiti may stay at Lahore where he will try to evolve the group into a spiritual Assembly. He will also visit the Mofassil towns in the Punjab.

"We hope these proposals will be approved and these teachers will soon start on their respective missions.

"We have also received with pleasure the Bahá’í News Letter of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma, dated April, 1942. The following is a gist of its contents:

The program of the Symposium was suggested and prepared by the National Youth Committee and consisted of the following items:
1. Seventh Bahá’í Youth Day on February 22, 1942.

The following two telegrams were exchanged between the National Youth Committee and the Guardian:
"Bahá’í Youth offer love and devotion and held a symposium symposium supplicate prayers confirmation."

"Assure Bahá’í Youth deepest appreciation praying success symposium aim to persevere."

As an example of unity in diversity it is interesting to note that Bahá’í addresses were delivered in no less than five different languages. Here is an illustration:

A talk on "The Most Great Peace" was delivered in Gujarati, "The New World Order" in Persian, "Universal Peace" in Urdu, "Renewal of Religion" in Bengali and "An Economic Solution" in English.

The leading local papers in Bombay, Karachi and Poona published notices about the Symposium and appreciative notes and comments about the Bahá’í Faith. The Bombay Sentinel wrote about a column under the headline "Follow Bahá’u’lláh—Avert War" and the "Sunday Standard" (of Bombay) gave a summary of the speeches under the heading "The Bahá’í Idea."

Annual Reports of Local Assemblies

A number of the local Assemblies have sent in brief but general surveys of their community activities during the year ended April 21, and excerpts from these will be issued in Bahá’í News through successive months.

Assemblies which have not yet made their annual report are requested to submit one at their early convenience.

COLUMBUS, OHIO

The Assembly sponsored 7 public meetings. Among the guests were Mrs. Bolles, Miss Bolles and Mrs. Powell, who returned from the Convention: later Prince Nwafor Orizu of Nigeria, Mrs. Della C. Quinlan of New York and Dayton, Mr. Schurgast of Cincinnati, O. The 3 other public meetings were held in homes of believers and local friends took part in the program.

The Teaching Committee was responsible for open meetings during the Intercalary Days, when each day a meeting was held. Those days were looked forward to by the believers each year bringing a closer unity among the friends and a deeper understanding of the Teachings. A regular weekly study class was held, mostly attended by believers only. While a followup class was held, also an Administration class, but because of lack of attendance was discontinued. A Sunday-morning-prayer-meeting was held during last summer and fall, and those attending expressed their spiritual as well as material refreshments they had received from the gatherings. For several months a public-speaking class was held under the guidance and assistance of the Regional Teaching Committee's secretary. This class was most stimulating and students regretted that each meeting had a closing time.

KENOSHA, WISCONSIN

Every Sunday evening our public service is held in Bahá'í Hall and an out-of-town speaker, when available, gives the address.

- Occasionally mid-week lectures are held when we can secure some prominent out-of-town Bahá'í teacher. A series of five talks (one each week) brought many visitors to our Hall.

Our Extension Teaching Committee sponsored a series of Temple talks with slides in nearby towns, namely: Salem, Union Grove, Lake Geneva and Burlington. Racine Assembly cooperated in this and Mr. Ed Struven gave the talks.

A very inspiring Sunrise Prayer meeting was enjoyed by all present, on the shores of Lake Michigan, after which breakfast was served while the sun was coming up.

Our annual picnic was held at Brown's Lake, near Burlington and many were in attendance.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA

The Teaching Committee held weekly meetings during the early part of the summer and began a formal series of study classes in October, commencing with a public meeting in the Marlborough Hotel. The latter was attended by about 30 people and about 12 people came at various times to the continuing weekly study course held in 203 Paris Building. The Assembly undertook the rental of this room as a central location easily accessible during the winter months. In addition to a steady attendance of our own members an average of four non-Bahá'ís came to this study class consistently. This group gave opportunity to all the Bahá'ís to take part in preparation and presentation of material in the class.

The Youth Group, beginning with an informal fireside group at the home of Mrs. Jean Johnston, evolved into a study class in Bahá'í Principles and is now undertaking a special research along Race Unity lines. A public symposium, planned to coincide with the Annual Bahá'í Youth Day throughout the World, was held in room 203 Paris Building and was attended by 23 people including the Bahá'ís. This group has attracted upwards of 15 young people. Most of them are making a sympathetic and practical approach to Bahá'í principles.

The Children's Committee began a weekly class activity which has been consistently attended by three and four children at the home of Miss Stella Pollexfen.

The Race Unity Committee made preliminary contacts with the Canadian Unity Council which may be of value in developing race unity work next year.

The community strengthened its connection with larger fields of Bahá'í work outside the community by the participation of eight of its members in the Summer Conference at Clear Lake last summer, arranged by the Regional Teaching Committee for Manitoba and Saskatchewan. It also undertook financial support for the Regina Teaching Project of Mrs. Ruby China. During the year we welcomed Anne McGee and Evelyn Cliff of Vancouver, Ruby China of West Vancouver, Lauretta Voelz of Kenosha, Wis., and Lulu Barr of Saskatoon, all of whom paid us brief visits and contributed their share to our knowledge of and connection with other Bahá'í communities.

HELENA, MONTANA

There was no Radio broadcast this year. The Local Radio Company are not permitted to sell time to Religious Organizations and we refused any time of the “Religious hour” conducted by the Ministerial Association.

Good newspaper publicity has been had during the year; about thirty news and publicity items were given us in both the local newspapers.

Two new members were gained this year; our methods in increasing the community apparently are slow, but those that have been added are of capacity and firmness.

Two youths have declared their intention to become Bahá'ís upon reaching the necessary age.

Many contacts have been made with the Negro and Chinese people of Helena, and literature has been given them, but no fruits have appeared.

PORTLAND, OREGON

All the public meetings were held at Hall 210A, Studio Building, 919 S.W. Taylor Street. A series of printed programs was prepared and distributed. The local Bahá'í speakers who took part in one or more programs were Levi Munson, Lucien B. Nash, Dr. Henry Dale, George Latimer, Curtia Taylor, Alice Roberts, Rachel Porter, Dr. Chester Easter, Florence Campbell, Solvig Corbit and Ella and Lillie Meissner. Visiting speakers were Mr. Leroy Ioas of San Francisco, Mark Toboy of Seattle, Mrs. Ruth Stephenson and Dr. Harry Taylor, who gave several fine lectures during the year.

Due to the severe storm in January several meetings had to be given up.

Several special meetings were held during the year. A social gathering to interest new friends was held at the Easter home on May 21st, with as many guests as believers and Mark Toboy gave a fine talk on “Oneness”. The friends enjoyed an evening at the Stephenson home as their guests and a special meeting was arranged at the Young home to meet Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Kelsey of West Englewood, New Jersey. Mr. Kelsey showed his colored pictures of Haifa and the Temple and moving pictures of the various Trustee properties were also shown and a delightful evening was passed.

The community was host to a meeting of the Regional Teaching Committee of Washington and Oregon at the Feast of September 5, 1942 held in the Young home. In the absence of Leroy Ioas, George Latimer of the National Teaching Committee, led the interesting discussion on our local and national teaching problems. Visiting believers to this conference were: Marjorie Taylor of Tacoma, Mr. and Mrs. Wilks and their daughter, Myrtle Campbell, Hazel Stauter and Mrs. Clifton of Seattle, Lorrol Luther of Everett, Mrs. Ethel Edell of Pasadena and Mr. and Mrs. John Clifters of Corvallis. Alta Krueger, a member of the RTC took an active part in the discussion. Levi Munson is the other member from our community on this Committee and has attended meetings in Seattle. The Latimer family attended the Fall Conference of the RTC of British Columbia and Alberta in Chilliwack and reported on the activities of this group. The need for more group and fire-side teaching meetings and a larger attendance to our public meetings appear to be the need for the coming year.
VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA

Special emphasis having been placed in the past year, both by the Guardian and the National Spiritual Assembly, for the need of pioneers in other areas, we are happy to report the following members of this community answered this urgent call. Miss Eve Cliff obtained an exchange of school for one year and journeyed to Calgary. Mrs. Anne McGee also resigned her position here and left for Calgary. Mrs. Moscrop returned to Regina and way points. Her stay helped to keep the Faith in the minds of the contacts she had made previously. Miss Muriel Warnicker spent several months in Edmonton and presented the Baha'i Faith to many people. During her visit she was ably assisted by Mrs. Marcia Atwater, and their work is now showing great results. Mr. Cliff Gardner, who was a member of this Community for a time and who later left for Chilliwack, returned to Vancouver for his marriage which was held under the auspices of the Baha'is, and then left to pioneer in Calgary also. This exodus to Calgary we anticipate will bring forth great results.

A Conference held in Chilliwack was attended by several Vancouver members and their friends, also visitors from Portland, Vernon, Calgary and Armstrong. This Conference was extremely invigorating.

During the year we were privileged to receive visits from Mrs. Marcia Atwater who met the Baha'is on her trip to Edmonton and spoke at a semi-public meeting on her return. We were intensely interested to hear of her work in Chile and Edmonton. Mr. and Mrs. Latimer and Mr. George Latimer paid us one of their valuable visits after attending the Conference at Chilliwack. A public meeting was arranged and Mr. George Latimer gave one of his enlightening talks. Miss Doris Skinner of Calgary also visited Vancouver after the Chilliwack Conference. She attended the Public Meeting and also spoke at other meetings while here.

Two other visitors were entertained from Portland during the summer of 1942. Mr. Rowland Estall of Winnipeg paid us a short visit and gave us an interesting insight into the valuable work being done by the friends in Winnipeg. He also stressed the need for pioneers for Regina and Mrs. China of West Vancouver has recently answered this call.

The Teaching Committee arranged most interesting programs during the year and weekly meetings are still being carried on. A most interesting evening was spent when a large number of members met the Hon: Dr. Shih, Chinese Consul General to Canada, when he, as guest speaker, gave an interesting talk on the religions of China. He expressed his great interest in the gathering and stated he would be happy to meet with us again. A book was presented to him as a token of appreciation for his kindness in speaking to the Group. Another evening was well attended by Baha'is and friends when Mrs. Steeves gave a talk on Russia which brought forth some interesting lights showing the changes which have taken place in that vast country. In addition to this two members carried on Fireside Groups in their homes.

An Esperanto class, held in the Baha'i Room, has been sponsored by this Assembly, and as well as learning this International Language it is felt many contacts may be attracted to the Cause of Baha'u'llah through this medium. Some students have already attended some weekly meetings and others are asking questions and reading literature.

Messages From the Guardian

“Inform believers that local Assemblies may be formed as soon as nine or more believers are available without postponing the election until April, in order to speed and stimulate the teaching work in the last year of the first century.”

Received June 24, 1943

The next message is in reply to a question addressed to Shoghi Effendi inquiring whether members of local Assemblies desiring to pioneer may resign from their administrative post. “I approve resignation provided the Assembly is not dissolved.”

Received June 25, 1943

“I greatly rejoice in the vigorous manifold measures undertaken to insure the success of the forthcoming Celebration. Though physically absent I will participate in spirit in the rejoicing and thanksgiving for the signal victories of the American Bahá’í community crowning the first Bahá’í Century.”

Received July 2, 1943

On August 2 a brief message came stating that “Bahá’í National Headquarters have been established in Delhi.”

“The American believers’ seven year enterprise consecrated to the service of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, deriving direct inspiration from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Divine Plan, launched on the eve of the world catastrhonic conflict, recognized as the greatest collective undertaking in the annals of the first Bahá’í Century, is rapidly culminating. Their sister communities of Persia, British Isles, Egypt, Irã, India, Syria, Australia and New Zealand marvel at the scale of the prodigious labors of the American Bahá’í community, grateful for rejoicing at the accumulating evidences of its incomparable victories and are galvanized into action, inspired to emulate its example. The multiplication of Bahá’í centers in recent years in both East and West, the erection of administrative headquarters, the purchase of historic sites, the settlement of virgin areas, the migration into neighboring territories are all directly attributable to the potent impulse communicated through the superb action initiated and executed by the American adherents of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. The initial stages of the momentous plan have been brilliantly executed. The most formidable obstacles impeding its progress have been courageously faced and progressively swept away. Its first fruits, exemplified by the completion of the exterior ornamentation of the Temple and the formation of a nucleus of the Faith in every Republic of Latin America, have been triumphant gathered. The pivotal year marking the turning point of its fortunes has been immortalized by the unparalleled exploit of the formation of twenty-eight Assemblies in the States and Provinces of the North American continent. The range of its unfinished tasks is swiftly diminishing. Total victory is within sight but the six remaining virgin areas of Alaska, Saskatchewan, Prince Edward Island, South Carolina, North Dakota and South Dakota, as well as the inadequately reinforced Republics of Nicaragua, San Domingo, Paraguay, Bolivia, Venezuela and Peru still demand the concentrated and sustained attention of the National representatives of the American Bahá’í community, the speedy assistance of the National Teaching and Inter-America Committees, and the systematic support of all subsidiary agencies both regional and local. The goal cities and the far-off Republics are calling for fresh recruits to complete the pioneer roll of honor. Veteran believers, however brilliant their record, neo-phyes, however limited their experience, are alike summoned as the final hour approaches to rush forth in a last supreme effort to bridge the remaining gaps in the spiritual front extending the entire length of the Western Hemisphere. I am ardently supplicating fresh outpourings of the sustaining grace of the Lord of Hosts to enable His stalwart warriors befittingly to consummate the crowning crusade of the first century of the Bahá’í Era.”

Letter From the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Co-workers and Friends:

We enter now the decisive part of this portentous Bahá’í year when our collective efforts for the Cause are to be fulfilled in the celebration of the Centenary of the Declaration of the Báb. We are acting as a united body in the carrying out of a teaching plan embracing the entire community of North America, and calling for the concentration of our full resources of mind and heart.

The theme of the oneness of mankind—race unity—demands our devoted attention and endeavor throughout September and October, the fundamental teaching of the Faith, its most challenging principle, its swift healing antidote for the ills of a divided world.

Two aspects of the new teaching plan merit careful consideration; first, the importance of the opportunity offered for far more effective public teaching work than we have ever had before. It is the time to improve our methods and attain a truly impressive standard of public presentation. Not only the local Assemblies but also the National Committees are fully involved, since it is the Committees which are responsible for the development of new and more extensive teaching material.

Second, the significance of the theme itself, not only in the light of the revealed Teachings but also in relation to the ominous manifestations of inter-racial bitterness which at present suggest the approach of a crucial stage in the ordered life of the nation. As was pointed out during the course of the Bahá’í Race Unity Conference held at Green Acre this summer, the matter of race relations in America has become a world issue. The peoples look to North America for proofs of justice, esteem and spiritual fellowship among the races. When such proofs are forthcoming, the peoples will have a basis for hope in the development of true peace. Therefore our Bahá’í understanding and energetic effort in the promotion of the principle of the oneness of mankind represents a direct and indirect contribution to world justice and peace possessing incalculable possibility.

In “The Advent of Divine Justice” Shoghi Effendi calls race unity “the most vital and challenging issue confronting the Bahá’í community at the present stage of its evolution.” Continuing he declares: “The ceaseless exertions which this issue of paramount importance calls for, the sacrifices it must impose, the care and vigilance it demands, the moral courage and fortitude it requires, the tact and sympathy it necessitates, invest this problem, which the American believers are still far from having satisfactorily resolved, with an urgency and importance that can not be over-estimated. White and Negro, high and low, young and old, whether newly converted to the Faith or not, all who stand identified with it must participate in, and lend their assistance, each according to his or her capacity, experience, and opportunities, to the common task of fulfilling the instructions, realizing the hopes, and following the example, of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

“Freedom from racial prejudice, in any of its forms, should, at such a time as this when an increasingly large section of the human race is falling a victim to its devastating ferocity, be adopted as the watchword of the entire body of the American believers, in whichever state they reside, in whatever circles they move, whatever their age, traditions, tastes, and habits. It should be consistently demonstrated in every phase of their activity and life, whether in the Bahá’í community or outside it, in public or in private, formally as well as informally, individually as well as in their official capacity as organized groups, committees and Assemblies.”

May every Assembly, group and individual believer find the wisest and most effective manner to serve this most urgent call in relation to the conditions existing in their own locality and their own personal lives. May Bahá’u’lláh accept us and use us as instruments for the expression of His will!

Devotedly your co-workers,
NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Convention Resolutions

The National Spiritual Assembly reports on actions taken after consultation on the various Resolutions duly voted by the Annual Convention of 1943.

1. No action taken on the recommendation that believers be appointed to give full time to the promotion of Green Acre.

2. The recommendation that a National Committee be appointed to design Bahá’í cards for Bahá’í occasions was referred to the Publishing Committee.

3. It is recorded that the recommendation that the Radio Committee be requested to report the cost of a nation-wide radio talk was incorporated into the matters which the Radio Committee has been requested to consider.

4. It is recorded that the National Assembly has already acted on the matter of adopting a plan for National radio talks this year.

5. Mr. Allen B. McDaniel has been requested to give the Radio Committee a copy of his radio address on the Temple as delivered during the Convention period, that copies may be made available for use by other believers.

6. It is recorded that action has been taken on the recommendation that a bulletin be prepared containing information about radio teaching.

7. Action has been taken on the recommendation that the text of all new pamphlets on the subject of Peace and other subjects of general public interest and importance be printed in World Order Magazine.

8. A special Committee has been requested to submit plans for the improvement of Temple Foundation Hall, in accordance with the recommendation that the Hall be done over for the Centenary meetings next year.

9. A special Committee has been appointed to submit plans on ways and means for the exhibition and preservation of the sacred relics in the Archives, as recommended by the Convention.

10. No action was taken on the resolution recommending that a Bahá’í meeting place be established at all Army camps.

11. No action was taken on the recommendation that the grove at West Englewood, where the Master held the Unity Feast in 1912, be turned into a public park. This grove is part of the property held by National Bahá’í Trustees, and the Guardian has designated this property as the site of a future Memorial to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s American visit.

12. Concerning the recommendation that all believers be provided with an identification card, it was voted by the National Spiritual Assembly, in working out details for the 1944 Convention, to include a method for establishing the Bahá’í status of the delegates and Bahá’í guests for attendance at the business sessions of the Convention.

Pioneer Teachers and Administrative Responsibility

A believer who wishes to volunteer for pioneer teaching work, but has certain responsibilities in the Bahá’í community, can carry out his or her intention after taking steps to satisfy such responsibilities.

If a member of a local Spiritual Assembly, the believer is permitted to resign under an instruction from the Guardian, recently received, with the condition that the resignation does not dissolve the Assembly. This means that the Assembly can accept and act upon a resignation made by one of its members in order to be free to leave the city for a teaching post elsewhere.

If the believer is a member of a National Committee, he or she is to submit the resignation in writing to the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly, who is authorized to advise the believer that the resignation will be accepted at the next meeting of the NSA.

To Achieve Our Goals

Beloved Friends:

The hopes of the Guardian for an early conclusion of the Seven Year Plan are now clear before us. By permitting the election of Spiritual Assemblies, as soon as nine believers can be found in a community, he has thrown open the doors. It is anticipated that the believers of Fargo, N. D. and Anchorage, Alaska, will soon have availed themselves of this thrilling opportunity, and that the friends in the six remaining virgin Provinces and States will quickly follow in their path.

Which of these six shall be the first to organize? Which shall be the last? How quickly can all the goals be reached? These are the challenging questions which the Guardian’s action has raised. These are the questions which every believer must be revolving in his mind and heart at this critical hour. For the time to share in these historic tasks is rapidly passing. Only those who hasten to the goal cities will be able to participate in their completion, and only those who determine to settle in the next few weeks will be forever remembered among the pioneers of the Seven Year Plan.

Now that the National Assembly has unfolded the prospect of a vast nation-wide public teaching campaign, the importance of a speedy conclusion of the Plan is evident to us all. Only when Assemblies have been safely elected in each of the remaining areas can the American Bahá’í Community, with a clear heart, expend its undiminished energies in this campaign to crown the hundredth year with total victory.

For these reasons the National Teaching Committee is calling upon the friends to provide all the necessary moves at the earliest date, they can never exceed the magnificent deeds of souls like Mabel Ives, those who have dedicated their lives to the triumph of the Seven Year Plan. The singleness of Mrs. Ives to the fulfillment of the Guardian’s hopes for North America will be remembered in years to come. Her achievements in numerous virgin States and Provinces are yet to be recounted. Throughout the entire course of the first six years of the Plan she gave her energies, her time, and her spirit. It is surely significant that her passing should have been in Oklahoma City, the first of the Assemblies to be pioneered and organized under the Plan. Not until the last hour did her labors cease. She was an example to us all.

Beloved friends, a statement of the needs of the six remaining States and Provinces accompanies this article. It should be noted that Halifax, Nova Scotia has been added since our last report, having reverted to group status. These long-sought goals can and must be reached by September.

Meanwhile, a great and continuing need is for circuit teachers to strengthen and aid our newly-won Assemblies. Fifteen of the Assemblies formed in the sixth and seventh years have eleven or less believers.

With these facts in mind, which of us can escape the urgency of the Guardian’s call? “I appeal to the standard-bearers of Bahá’u’lláh’s ever-advancing army to safeguard the spiritual prizes already won. . . I entreat them to exert still more magnificent efforts to discharge befittingly the one remaining responsibility in the North American continent.”

All offers to settle or teach should be sent at once to Miss Charlotte Linfoot, Secretary, National Teaching Committee, 156 Nova Drive, Piedmont, California.

Bahá’í Publications

Peace: A Divine Creation, a pamphlet compiled to meet the need for the Bahá’í attitude on peace and future world order. Contains selections from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, with the Guardian’s statement on world order. Ten copies for $1.00.

The World Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, four-page folder summarizing the aims, teachings, history and administrative order of the Faith prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly. For general teaching and publicity use. A suitable enclosure with programs and announcements distributed by mail, and adapted for contact work. 100 copies for $2.00.

Teaching Literature

In connection with the function of the Committee on Pamphlet Literature, the National Spiritual Assembly has approved the following plan for the distribution of teaching literature to the smaller communities without cost.

1. The following pamphlets are now available, and new titles will be announced from time to time: The Manifestation, The Laboratory of Life, Principles of the Bahá’í Faith, World Religion, Three Spiritual Truths. Further information about the contents of these pamphlets can be found in the Bahá’í Catalog.

2. A quantity of one or more of the pamphlets, up to a value of $5.00, will be sent on request to Assemblies of communities having not over 25 members.

3. To obtain a supply of the literature for teaching use, the local Assembly is to apply directly to the National Office, and the Publishing Committee will be authorized to ship the pamphlets and charge the cost to a special budget of $2,500 which has been established for that purpose.

4. The purpose of these grants of free literature is to assist the smaller communities to augment their teaching effort. The pamphlets can be used in connection with public or fireside meetings, and for distribution by individual believers to personal contacts.

The Báb Reveals His Commentary

“It was still early in the afternoon when the Báb requested Háji Mírzá Siyyid ‘Ali to bring His pen-case and some paper. He then started to reveal His commentary on the Suríh of Kawsar. How am I to describe this scene of inexpressible majesty? Verses streamed from His pen with a rapidity that was truly astounding. The incredible swiftness of His writing, the soft and gentle murmur of His voice, and the stupendous force of His style, amazed and bewildered me. He continued in this manner until the approach of sunset. He did not pause until the entire commentary of the Suríh was completed. He then laid down His pen and asked for tea. Soon after, He began to read it aloud in my presence. My heart leaped madly as I heard Him pour out, in accents of unutterable sweetness, those treasures enshrined in that sublime commentary. I was so entranced by its beauty that three times over I was on the verge of fainting. He sought to revive my failing strength with a few drops of rose water which He caused to be sprinkled on my face. This restored my vigor and enabled me to follow His reading to the end.”—The Dawn-Breakers, 175-176.

Inter-America News

Guatemala

The members of the newly formed Spiritual Assembly of Guatemala are enthusiastically carrying out their new responsibilities, and we pray that their united efforts for the progress of the Cause will attract bountiful spiritual confirmations. Delightful letters have come from Sr. Batres, Secretary of the Assembly, and Clarence Iverson, of San Salvador, who with his mother visited in Guatemala City for several days.

Mr. Iverson took with him his collection of slides of the Bahá’í Temple, which he presented for the pleasure of the local friends. Other opportunities to show the Temple slides were given, through the courtesy of the Theosophical Lodge on one occasion, and to a group of North Americans now living in Guatemala City on another, with much enjoyment of these pictures of the first American Bahá’í House of Worship evidenced by those attending these meetings.

Honduras

The activity of the Bahá’ís in Honduras is a truly inspiring joy to us all. Sr. Santos Domínguez has contributed a valuable booklet, entitled “Primer Centenario,” to the growing supply of Bahá’í literature in Spanish. Sr. Domínguez has incorporated in this booklet the history of the development of the Cause in Honduras, together with a statement of the Teachings translated from our own literature. Another enterprise initiated in Tegucigalpa is a monthly Bulletin issued by Sr. Viana to be sent to all the believers as a means of keeping them in touch with the activities of the Cause. Sr. Viana writes that the “Primer Centenario” has been forwarded to many friends interested in the Faith throughout Honduras. Photographs of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, together with grateful appreciations from the Committee were sent to both of these devoted servants of Bahá’u’lláh.

New Assemblies

The Spiritual Assembly of Santiago, Chile, is now functioning very well. With this objective achieved, the National Spiritual Assembly has approved a project to send Miss Virginia Orbison to carry on the work in Asuncion, Paraguay. Miss Orbison writes us that she has been meeting many new people recently in Santiago, and that Mrs. Atwater has been able to enlarge the teaching scope through radio broadcasts. These are splendid foundations upon which the new Assembly can build their teaching work.

John Stearns was elated to report the confirmation of a new believer, Mrs. Huber, in Quito, Ecuador. The long-coveted goal of a Spiritual Assembly there is now accomplished and our congratulations and loving greetings are joyously sent to the Quito friends.

Panama

A severe attack of asthma necessitated our dear Miss Sholtis' return from Venezuela. After a period of treatment in Panama failed to relieve her sufficiently to return to her post she followed the advice of physicians and was accompanied by Mrs. Louise Caswell on the trip home. We are happy to report that Miss Sholtis is now greatly improved and is recuperating at the home of her sister in Cicero, Illinois. She left a number of people in Caracas deeply interested in the Cause, and one believer, a beautiful young girl who, in the course of her Bahá'í study is radiant at being able to name the months of the Bahá'í Calendar in three languages—her native Spanish, English, and Persian!

Mrs. Caswell's aid to Gwennie Sholtis has provided us with the unexpected pleasure of having a first hand account of the teaching work being done in Panama. Mrs. Cora Oliver and Mrs. Caswell share an attractive apartment which is also the local Bahá'í Center. Meetings are held twice a week, providing one evening in which the Teachings are given in Spanish, the other conducted in English. All of the registered believers do not live in one area and thus there is no Assembly yet, but Mrs. Caswell tells us that she and Mrs. Oliver are very hopeful that shortly there will be additional registrations to make the establishment of an Assembly possible. During Mrs. Caswell's brief visit here we received the good news that Miss Julia Regal has obtained a position in Panama and will soon join the group there.

Salvador

A stimulating report of the school in San Salvador comes from Clarence Iverson, who describes it as both a "Bahá'í school and a philanthropic institution." This school is for boys who lacked the means to complete their education, fills this need and combines with it the teaching of the Bahá'í Principles. The following courses are now being given: "Bahá'í Culture; English; shorthand; Radio Telegraphy; Arithmetic, First Aid (Salvador Red Cross) and Grammar."

No charges are made for the classes, but a charge of a few cents per month is made to defray the expenses of the hall, chairs, lights and similar upkeep.

Jamaica

Dr. Malcolm King continues to have the excellent support of the press in Kingston, and in addition to a personal interview on the Bahá'í Faith, was graciously given space in three issues of the Jamaica Daily Gleaner. He mentioned the selection of "The Bahá'í Pattern for Future Society" as the topic for one of these articles.

The Committee is grateful to receive from the National Spiritual Assembly the French translation of the "World Economy of Bahá'u'lláh" which will be of great teaching assistance in the areas where literature in French is required.

INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

Bahá'í Bibliography

Will Bahá'ís please be on the lookout for references to our Faith by non-Bahá'ís in non-Bahá'í books and magazines and report the same to Bertha H. Kirkpatrick, Olivet, Mich. The title, publisher and date of publication should be included and the page on which reference is found. Such references are for use in Bahá'í Bibliography in Volume X.
Race Unity Committee Offers
New Compilation

The theme assigned for the first of the series of four public meetings for the year is Race Unity, "the Watchword" of American Bahá’ís. Our own racial solidarity and our approach to the coming racial solidarity of the whole world is a challenge to every Bahá’í committee and group to look first at its own defenses and having made doubly certain that they are sincere and strong, to offer the very essence of that strength to the public.

This Centennial year is a time of ringing triumph, a time to point to a world commonwealth that brooks no compromise with the old divisions, but stands its ground firmly, a living, growing thing, completely whole in its growing, proving by its own single-heartedness its right to lead the world to peace.

Second only to teaching unity by community example comes the opportunity to offer speakers, and to ourselves be voices on this great subject. The new compilation will be of the greatest assistance here. Arranged by Mrs. Alice Cox and Mrs. Mae Harvey Gift, the Race Unity Committee last year submitted it for publication. It is now in published form under the title "Race and Man." Every community and group is urged to provide this reading now, and many of the friends will surely wish to individually own copies. It contains a mine of references, both Bahá’í and general, on the subject of Race Unity and without a doubt all libraries, schools, social workers, and public minded people would be happy to receive them. It offers a fine contact with minority leaders of every description in your city. The Race Unity Committee would deeply appreciate hearing from the groups and Assemblies who have successfully placed copies of the compilation.

Appeal for Inter-America
Pioneers

The Inter-America Committee must have assistance in the teaching field in Latin America. There are four countries which have not yet reached the goal set for the Seven Year Plan. These are Peru, Venezuela, Colombia and San Domingo. The requirements are two native believers. This committee can only entertain applications made exclusively for Inter-America teaching work. No application can be considered for a stay of less than one year. We would particularly desire one of our men teachers for Paraguay, someone who could remain there. There are a number of people interested but we need a permanent resident. Please address at once the secretary of the committee.

MRS. NELLIE S. FRENCH,
786 Chester Ave.,
San Marino, 9, Calif.

Child Education

During the past year the Committee on Child Education attempted to gather a census of the children of Bahá’ís. We are happy to report our findings. We have divided the children into four age-groups: Pre-school; five to eight years, inclusive; nine to twelve years, inclusive; and thirteen to fifteen years. There are now registered in these groups the following numbers of children:

- Pre-school .......................... 53
- 5-8 yrs. .......................... 87
- 9-12 yrs. .......................... 88
- 13-15 yrs. .......................... 76
- Total ................................ 304

These figures, of course, will be constantly changing, but we feel that they are of very great present interest as they clearly indicate the need for educational material suitable to the requirements of children under fifteen.

We wish to thank all the friends who cooperated so wonderfully during the past year and made this census possible.

The committee has several requests to make. First, will all of you who have ideas for books or lesson plans for children please get them down on paper and send them to this committee? We should like to have many manuscripts from which to select a few to recommend for publication these coming months. Please keep in mind the age grouping and aim your work at one of these groups. Some working ideas we have considered are: a child's history of the Cause, the story of the Temple, stories from the Dawn-Breakers, etc. We are sure that we shall be flooded with perfectly splendid material!

Second, material and data are required for inclusion in the next volume of Bahá’í World, such as reports of activities, pictures of children's groups and classes, etc. Please send anything you have of this nature to Mrs. David S. Ruhe, 840 Cherry St., N. W., Atlanta, Georgia.

Third, we hope that the friends will continue in the fine cooperative spirit and help us to keep our census file up to date by reporting new arrivals, changes of address, etc. to this committee.

Our primary objective this year is to produce at least one book for children, and we are now hard at work on a book for children in the five to eight year group, and pray that it may be published before the great Centennial celebration in 1944.

Seven Valleys and Four Valleys

The friends are advised that the National Spiritual Assembly has received word from the Guardian which explains that the Seven Valleys and the Four Valleys revealed by Bahá’ulláh are separate Tablets, and not a continuity of one Tablet. His words are: "The 'Seven Valleys' and the 'Four Valleys' should be regarded as independent Tablets, as they were revealed to different people."

A Card Record of Believers' Qualifications

The National Spiritual Assembly would like to suggest that local Assemblies consider the possibility of preparing a set of reference cards, one for each member of the community, listing their qualifications and experience in relation to different types of Bahá’í activity. Any As-
Election of Local Assemblies

The attention of the believers is called to that message from the Guardian received June 24 which states that local Assemblies may be formed this year as soon as nine or more believers are available, waiting until April 21, 1944.

Regional Committees on request will be given copies of the bulletin outlining the method of forming a new Assembly and of the Assembly Roll form so that the qualified groups can report their election and obtain the recognition of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Suggestions Requested Concerning Centenary Program

In the Guardian’s letter outlining the meeting to be held in Temple Foundation Hall on the evening of May 22, 1944, he instructs that the believers be asked to submit their suggestions regarding the nature of the program. Members of local communities are to submit their ideas through the local Assembly. Other believers can address their suggestions to the Bahá’í Centenary Committee. It is hoped that many helpful ideas will be received.

New Basis of Annual Election

The Guardian’s instruction concerning the election of delegates to the 1944 Convention as representatives of States and Provinces rather than local communities has been receiving careful study by the National Spiritual Assembly. Certain specific points have been referred back to the Guardian for further elucidation in order to prepare the way for calling for the election of delegates next Spring.

Suggestions From Contacts Committee

1. The Contacts Committee offers its service to those in virgin areas and small communities. If they will send to this Committee a list of the outstanding civic and humanitarian leaders, doctors, lawyers, engineers and educators, such persons will be contacted, and thus pave the way for further contact by traveling teachers and regionally-selected people of capacity.

2. It may be well to repeat a thought emphasized at the Convention; which is, that when one has in mind the contacting of a Government official, unless one has an ordinary direct personal relationship with such person, he should write the National Contacts Committee, submitting this name and address. The Contacts Committee will in turn write the National Spiritual Assembly, as a special committee has been appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly, of its own body, to make certain special public contacts to bring the Bahá’í Peace Message to influential groups and public figures.

Greeting From Youth Committee of Persia

Dear Beloved Friends,

With hearts overflowing with joy and ecstasy, the entire Bahá'í youths in Persia rejoice at the news of the glorious consummation of the beloved Temple Edifice which is the concrete expression representing the fundamental principle of the unity of mankind.

Words are inadequate indeed to convey to you the extent of our abounding love and admiration for this magnificent achievement or to attempt to describe, however brief, the brilliant efforts and abundant sacrifices manifested by the American friends over a period of 30 critical years for the successful conclusion of this collective enterprise.

The cumulative effect of this delightful news has permeated our hearts with the abiding consciousness of the crying need for a higher standard of devotion and courage required to insure a signal victory in the teaching field in the face of overwhelming obstacles and uncertainties.

On occasion of the Ridván Feast, 1943, we take this opportunity to extend loving greetings to all the Bahá'í youths and beloved friends in the United States and Canada, to the valiant American pioneers who have set such a sublime example of devotion and sacrifice and to the growing multitude of the ardent believers throughout Latin America.

On this blessed occasion culminating in the termination of the first Bahá'í Century, we join you to turn our hearts to the Abhá Kingdom imploiring to confer upon us spiritual wisdom and insight in order to prove worthy to promote the sacred interests of His Cause and to deliver His Message of salvation to a suffering humanity.

With loving Bahá'í greetings,

NATIONAL YOUTH COMMITTEE, PERSIA.
The Few Remaining Months of this Century

Message from Shoghi Effendi

Dearly-beloved co-workers:

The latest evidences of the magnificent success that has marked the activities of the members of the American Bahá’í community have been such as to excite the brightest hopes for the victorious consummation of the collective undertaking they have so courageously launched and have so vigorously prosecuted in recent years. As the first Bahá’í Century approaches its end, the magnitude and quality of their achievements acquire added significance and shed increasing luster on its annals. The proceedings of the recently held annual Convention; the formation of twenty-eight Assemblies in the course of the year that has just elapsed; the splendid progress achieved in the Latin-American field of Bahá’í activity; the superb spirit evinced by the pioneers holding their lonely posts in widely scattered areas throughout the Americas; the exemplary attitude shown by the entire body of the faithful towards the machinations of those who have so sedulously striven to disrupt the Faith and pervert its purpose—these have, to a marked degree, intensified the admiration of the Bahá’í communities for those who are contributing so outstanding a share to the enlargement of the limits, and the enhancement of the prestige, of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. The preparations which the American believers are undertaking for the celebration of the Centenary of the Faith must be such as to crown with immortal glory the fifty-year long record of their stewardship in the service of that Faith. Such a celebration must, in its scope and magnificence, fully compensate for the disabilities which hinder so many Bahá’í communities in Europe and elsewhere, and even in Bahá’u’lláh’s native land, from paying a befitting tribute to their beloved Faith at so glorious an hour in its history. The few remaining months of this century must witness a concentration of effort, a scale of achievement, a spirit of heroism that will outshine even the most daring exploits that have already immortalized the Seven Year Plan and covered with glory its valiant protagonists. The plea I addressed to them, at this late hour, will, I am sure, meet with a response no less remarkable than their past reactions to the appeals I have felt impelled to make to them ever since the inception of the Plan. He Who, at every stage of their collective enterprise, has so abundantly blessed them, will, no doubt, continue to vouchsafe the blessings until the seal of unqualified victory is set upon their epoch-making task.

Haifa, August 8, 1943.

The following excerpts are also published from that portion of the same letter written through his Secretary:

"Regarding the status of believers resident in British territories of the West Indies: the Guardian feels that in view of their proximity to the U. S. A. they should be regarded as centers under the supervision of the American Bahá’í National Assembly. They are not included as objectives of the Seven Year Plan which comprises only the sovereign republics of Central and South America."

"The Guardian has recently, in a detailed cable, urged that special attention be directed, during these remaining months of the first Bahá’í Century, to the strengthening of the centers requiring assistance in the Latin Republics as well as in the virgin areas of the North American continent, in order to assure the establishment of a permanent center in each of these Republics and the formation of a Spiritual Assembly in each remaining virgin area. Through further appeals for more pioneers at this eleventh hour; through further self-sacrifice aiming at the provision of ampler funds for the dispatch of these pioneers and other teaching purposes, the few unfinished tasks of the Plan must be speedily accomplished in order to insure the total success of the forthcoming Centenary Celebrations. During these remaining months the Guardian will, as he has already assured you in that cable, pray with redoubled fervor for the complete success of this vast undertaking, this organized crusade, the like of which has never been launched during the entire course of one hundred years of Bahá’í History."

The following message was received October 5:

My heart is overflowing with joyous gratitude at the magnificent advance made in numerous spheres of Bahá’í activity. The formation of an Assembly in the few remaining areas of the North American continent, the consolidation of the foundations of the newly-established Assemblies, and the preservation of the status of the Bahá’í centers in all Republics of Latin America, imperatively demand vigilant care, concentrated attention and further self-sacrifice from the vanguard of the valiant army of Bahá’u’lláh. The beloved Faith is surging forward on all fronts. Its undefeatable, stalwart supporters, both teachers and administrators, are steeling themselves for noble tasks, braving acute dangers, sweeping away formidable obstacles, capturing new heights, founding mighty institutions, winning fresh recruits and confounding the schemes of insidious enemies. The American Bahá’í community must, and will at whatever cost, despite the pressure of events and the desolating war, maintain among its sister communities the exalted standard of stewardship incontestable set during the concluding years of the first Bahá'í Century. The confident spirit, unaltering resolution animating its members, their tenacious valor, elevated loyalty, nobleness of spirit and mighty prowess, will, ere the expiry of the century, crown with complete victory the monumental enterprises undertaken during the course of the fifty years of its existence.

Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Co-workers and Friends:

The nationwide, coordinated teaching campaign arranged for local Bahá'í communities during this year of the Bahá'í Centenary has been inaugurated. The theme of race unity announced for the period of September and October has been presented to the public with vigor and clarity in cities throughout North America. Now as we are on the eve of the second period, November-December, when religious unity will be upheld by all the Bahá'ís, it is essential that any misunderstanding about the nature of this effort be removed, so that the entire community of believers may concentrate upon achieving their mission of preparing the public for the Centenary of our Faith in May, 1944.

Each local Assembly, or group, is to participate in the nationwide campaign in accordance with its capacity and the nature of the local condition. This is not a teaching plan which operates for the local community by effort from outside. What the National Assembly endeavors to accomplish is to place effective teaching material in your hands, and to assist in the following ways: First, by sponsoring a series of radio talks in three cities where the stations broadcast over wide areas: New York, Chicago, and San Francisco; second, by authorizing the National Teaching Committee to provide circuit teachers as possible for the smaller communities; third, by donating teaching literature up to $5.00 per community where there are not over twenty-five believers; and fourth, by sending out for each of the four themes a Portfolio of Teaching Material related to the subject. It is clear that the supreme opportunity afforded the friends is to center their efforts in constructive teaching work which is local in action but national in importance and purpose. From time to time suggestions will be made in order to help improve the methods of action.

The programs adopted by some of the Assemblies for the race unity theme have already been reported, and examples will be given here representing how the teaching is being planned by both large and small communities.

The San Francisco Assembly conducted a Symposium on Racial Foundations for World Order in the Gold Ball Room of the Palace Hotel on September 24. The Chairman of the meeting was Leroy Iboa, the speakers participating were Dr. Rudolph I. Coffee, President, Temple of Religion; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Department of Social Sciences, Hon. Robert W. Kenny, Attorney General, and Mrs. Dorothy Baker, member of the National Spiritual Assembly and Chairman of the National Bahá'í Race Unity Committee. Some seven hundred and fifty persons attended this meeting, making it one of the largest Bahá'í meetings yet held in America. The testimony paid the Faith by the well known and influential non-Bahá'í speakers was a great service to the Cause and emphasized the exposition of the Bahá'í teachings on race delivered so eloquently by Dorothy Baker.

In Pittsburgh, likewise, the theme of race unity was presented through a program combining speakers from within and outside the Cause. This meeting was held September 28 in the Social Room of Stephen Foster Memorial. Walter S. Buchanan presided; Mrs. F. B. Chalfant of the Pittsburgh Board of Public Education described the Inter-racial Good Will Program of the Public Schools in Springfield, Mass.; and Mrs. Marguerite Ullrich presented the Bahá'í teachings. Discussion and informal and friendly conversation followed the talks, members of the audience signed their desire to attend a study class; and a photograph of the gathering was taken by the Negro paper, "The Pittsburgh Courier." The Pittsburgh community, it will be noted, is among the dissolved Assemblies which have recently regained Assembly status.

The Wilmette believers after analysis of their local teaching problem decided that since no public meeting could be arranged comparable to those conducted in the House of Worship by the National Temple Program Committee it would be more effective to take the teachings directly into the homes of the people. An arrangement was accordingly made with the local paper, "Wilmette Life", to purchase a column of space four times during the year, for presentation of each of the four is a simplified course which can be conducted by any believer or used by any fireside group, requiring only two reference books—Selected Writings of Bahá'u'lláh, of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and of Shoghi Effendi (set of three pamphlets sold at one price) and Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, by J. E. Esslemont. The Outline, the three pamphlets of Selected Writings, and the Esslemont book, bound in paper, at the special price of $0.75. All of these but with the Esslemont book bound in fabrikoid, $1.00. The separate prices are: Study Outline, $0.15; three pamphlets of Selected Writings, $0.25; Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, paper bound, $0.50; Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, fabrikoid, $0.75.

Pamphlet literature series. The Pamphlet Literature Committee has developed two new pamphlets and recommends the reprint of another, making an initial offering of three pamphlets to be used in the extensive teaching work this year. All the pamphlets in this series are to be 3½ by 5½ inches in size, suitable for mailing in ordinary envelopes and can be obtained at the uniform price quoted below.

Religion and the New Age, Dr. George Townshend, 100 copies for $2.00.

Victory of the Spirit, Dorothy Baker. 100 copies for $2.00. (This text appeared in World Order Magazine for October with the title "The Path to God.")

The Bahá'í Principle of Civilization, Horace Holley. 100 copies for $2.00.

Race Unity

Our nation-wide teaching campaign, centering this fall on Race Unity, first of the four themes of the year, brings to light a surprising degree of willingness on the part of the American public to cooperate with the Bahá'í platforms everywhere. An example of this may be seen in the project of San Francisco where a Bahá'í chairman and speaker were assisted by the leading Negro social worker of the city, a well-loved Rabbi, head of the Temple of Religion and known throughout the country, and the Attorney General of the state of California. Over seven hundred attended the meeting. Reports from Los Angeles, Phoenix, Albuquerque, Denver, Colorado Springs, and other cities, bring news of equally distinguished collaborators.

Milwaukee Youth are continuing a most interesting experiment in Race Unity. They have recently concluded a second inter-racial fellowship night at the Y. M. C. A., entertaining some thirty Japanese and twenty Chinese friends. This was followed by "A Persian Night," a playlet enacted at the Bahá'í Center. At a recent Milwaukee Feast, a profound consciousness of the dawning unity between continents and races was born when Blue Mountain, an Inca Indian visitor, first Indian believer of South America, stepped forward to meet Mrs. Marian Steffes, Oneida, first registered North American Indian believer.

Good news comes to us of contacts among the Indians of the Chicago area. Through the efforts of Mrs. Mary Stevison of that city, successive meetings have been held at 1651 Junquil Terrace, to entertain the Indian friends in small, intimate groups. At intervals, Mrs. Stevison has taken these friends to the Bahá'í House of Worship to hear the Sunday afternoon speakers and to have the privilege of the guided tours through the Temple. This joyous occasion has always been followed by tea and informal lessons by a variety of Bahá'í speakers at her home. An increasing number of young Indian women are showing interest in the Faith through these sustained efforts.

Miss Janet Whitenack, who spent a year at Tulaksaak, Alaska, an all-Eskimo community, was invited, upon her departure, to address the little village on the subject of her Faith. As far as we are informed, this historic event constitutes the first group approach to the northern race with whom we are so little acquainted. The Committee feels that Miss Whitenack is to be heartily congratulated, and hopes that she will be enabled to return to them at some future time for further friendly contact. Mrs. Kathryn Frankland of Albuquerque reports the confirmation of a brilliant young Eskimo friend, Melba Call, first of the Eskimos to accept full membership in the World Order of Bahá'uláh.

Oneness of Humanity Keynote of Green Acre Conclave

The following account is substantially as appearing in the Portsmouth, N. H., Herald of August 17, 1842:

The outstanding event for the week at Green Acre was the Race Unity conference with four sessions during three days. This conference was fortunate in having as its opening chairman and keynote speaker Harlan F. Ober of Beverly, Mass., one who has rendered outstanding services to the Faith both in the Orient and Occident. He set forth the purposes of the conference with emphasis upon the oneness of humanity and true fellowship among all races, drawing a word picture of a future world order in which all inharmonies of thought would end. Bahá'ís can carry their optimism through this great upheaval, for through Divine Revelation they have faith in the ultimate outcome. Teachers should be ready to address great audiences in future.

Miss Lorna B. Tasker reviewed the life of the world famous Negro scientist, the late George W. Carver, showing his great contribution to national and world culture, relating many incidents of his career, correlating the ideals which governed his life with the principles of the new age as proclaimed by Bahá'uláh as the real cause of his greatness. In answer to inquiry, it was stated that over a period of twenty-five years Dr. Carver had met in succession seven Bahá'í workers and teachers, was much attracted by the spirit of the faith and with a clear vision saw its value.

At the second session Horace Holley, chairman, spoke on Race and the New Psychology. This address was a treasure trove from the mines of science, religion and philosophy. It clearly proved the widening horizon of men's minds as influenced by the great Spirit poured upon mankind by Bahá'uláh. Hesmat Ala'i Irani stated that race adjustment had now ceased to be only a local affair and has become a world matter of absorbing interest. Not what men say, but what they actually do about it is now of the utmost importance to win confidence.

Mme. Ali-Kuli Khan related interesting stories of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and His loving, wise and generous attitude toward all races during His American tour. Other speakers at this session were Dr. T. E., A. Macurdy of Boston, Rev. J. N. Samuelson, Belboder of Dayton, Ohio, and Louis Caution of Cambridge, Mass., color-ed friends, who praised the spirit of the conference and the beauty of Green Acre.

The third session's consultation centered around Race and Spiritual Renewal. Dr. Glenn A. Shook as chairman, briefly reviewed the new book entitled Race: Science and Politics, quoting a passage to show how shallow has been the foundation of race prejudice during centuries and ages. The author, Ruth Benedict, has been a deep student of racial groups over a long period of time and her conclusions harmonize with the Bahá'í teachings. Mrs. Mary Alice McClennen, a young Bahá'í teacher of unusual promise, spoke on the laboratory nature of Green Acre service, where visitors may see the ideals of the new age day by day applied to all races. The Holy Spirit confirms those who walk in the path. Another contribution came from Rev. Dr. E. Eliot Dur­rant, pastor of a large colored church in Harlem, N. Y., and a frequent visitor at Green Acre. Mrs. Louise A. M. Gregory sang Negro spirituals.

Miss Mabel I. Jenkins of Kittery read extracts from the works of two Negro poets and told of her race contacts during a visit to Hampton Institute, Va., where she formerly was a teacher. Her services to Green Acre cover a long period as she was a close friend of Miss Sarah J. Farmer, the founder. Another speaker was Miss N. Grace Bissell, Bahá'í pioneer teacher at Rutland, Vt.

At the final session Louis G. Gregory, chairman, made an address on Race and the New Sociology. Mention was made of sociology as a new science which has sprung up in this day and how its students study groups, caused and motivated by such influences as education, economics, government, religion and race. But the Supreme Sociologist, Bahá'uláh, bestows the mysterious Power which can fuse all into harmony and productive strength.

Mrs. Doris Holley emphasized the need of present opportunities, observing that it is far easier to approach and understand those near at hand, even though of a different race, when they share the same language, laws, customs and civilization, than to fellowship with those at a great distance.

John A. Robarts of Toronto voiced the Spirit of Unity, quoting from the farewell address of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to His American friends delivered on ship board. Miss Maud Mickel, pioneer teacher, related interesting stories of racial contacts and improved conditions in race relations.
during her stay in South Carolina, as showing an unmistakable trend. She was able to aid both groups.

Maj. Gertrude Atkinson presented Historical Aspects of Race, showing how during the ages suffering has always preceded the progress of races and other groups. That the whole world is now suffering is significant of better things to follow. Mrs. Lorraine H. Welsh of Pt. Huron, N.Y., drew attention to the fact that Negro history is now being taught in many schools of both races, an innovation which can but increase the appreciation of races for each other.

This conference, an annual event, brings the record attendance for the season at Green Acre. Warm appreciation and praise were expressed to all who had lent their presence or had taken part, and suggestions for each and all to continue the work with bright minds and loving hearts brought the conference to a happy end, a period foreshadowing a bright future for those who know and do the divine good pleasure.

Notes from the Teaching Front

The Guardian has told us that the significance of our teaching work in North America lies in "the establishment of the structural basis of the Bahá‘í administrative order." As news flows in from every part of the continent, proclaiming the progress of the Seven Year Plan, we are thrilled to note how deep and wide are the foundations being laid. Evidences are many that the Faith is rising on a basis of enduring strength.

One of the first acts of the newly-formed Spiritual Assembly of Denver was to participate in an Inter-Faith Conference held June 13th at Grace Community Church, under the sponsorship of the Inter-Faith Commission of the Denver Council of Churches. This conference, attended by over three hundred, heard discussions on the theme, "Religion, the Conscience of Humanity," presented by members of the Hindu, Jewish, Buddhist, Christian, Islamic, and Bahá‘í religions. Each speaker outlined "the origin, history, and basic teachings of his faith with the aim of finding points of agreement rather than of difference." During the question period, we are told, the majority of questions were asked of Valeria Thornton, the Bahá‘í speaker. Conference chairman was Dr. Conrad Rheiner, Pastor of the Universalist Church of Denver, but the idea was originated and much of the organization carried out by Artemus Lamb, member of the Denver Bahá‘í Assembly. The reason expressed by the Bahá‘ís for holding such a conference was the world crisis calling for "understanding and tolerance between all the peoples and religions of the world." According to Mr. Lamb, "the result seems to be much publicity for the Faith, the direct giving of the Message, the public recognition of the Faith as the newest of the world's great religions, and the beginning of a movement in Denver towards the study of the various religions of the world." Before disbanding the conference voted to sponsor a two-day institute of the same Faiths in the Fall. Surely this is auspicious news of the progress of the Cause in Denver, and leads the way for Bahá‘í communities everywhere in the unfoldment of Bahá‘u’lláh's distinctive principle of religious unity.

In Reno the Faith has pioneered in still another direction, that of racial unity. The first Spiritual Assembly of Nevada is representative of three racial groups, white, negro, and Japanese, and we understand that the young Japanese secretary is the first of his nationality to be elected to an Assembly. Fireside meetings in Reno are thrilling experiences, foreshadowing as they do the future World Order of Bahá‘u’lláh!

From Alaska comes word that Janet Whitenack has resigned her teaching position in Tuluksak to insure the victory of the Seven Year Plan at Anchorage. The occasion of leaving the Eskimo village gave Miss Whitenack a remarkable chance to present the Message to eighty-five Eskimos, who invited her to speak at their church service on the fourth of July. She writes, "With a native interpreter it took about three quarters of an hour. It is difficult to know what the response was. They seemed interested, and several thanked me for talking to them. ... One man said, 'Everybody liked it.'"

While the necessities of the Seven Year Plan have taken Janet Whitenack away from the Eskimos, strangely enough in Albuquerque, N. M., the first Eskimo Bahá‘í has been confirmed. Kathryn Frankland
The formation of a Local Assembly in Edmonton, Alberta, last April was a striking evidence of the power and vitality of the Faith. No group existed in Edmonton when Muriel Warmick went there last summer. Soon, however, she had attracted a number of people to whom Marcia Atwater was then sent as a teacher. In November, after several had enrolled as believers, Anita Ioss moved to Edmonton as a pioneer. Less than a year elapsed from the beginning of this swift campaign to its climax in the election of an Assembly. Today Edmonton possesses nine native Bahá'ís, in addition to its settlers, and teaching opportunities have so increased that Anne McGee was recently transferred from Calgary to aid the work. Thus a bright victory has been won in this virgin Province, marking another milestone in the evolving Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

Inter-America News

Exhilarating evidences of "the miraculous unfolding of a fresh marvel every day" are showered upon us as the friendly postman delivers the news of our pioneers. Airplanes whisk them from Texas to Panama, from Chile to Argentina, across mountains and jungle valleys and seas. And airplanes bring their precious reports of goals achieved, and new seeds planted.

Central America

An exuberant letter from Julie Regal expresses her gratitude to Mrs. Cora Oliver for her help in securing the Canal Zone position which makes it possible for Julie to assist the teaching work in this important Republic during the next crucial months. Miss Regal enjoyed a brief chat with Mrs. Caswell in Chicago which served to add to her fervor to participate in the teaching activities of this cross-roads of the world.

During the few weeks of her unexpected holiday Mrs. Caswell visited the friends in many localities. As soon as she had established Gwennie Sholtis under medical care, Mrs. Caswell went direct to the Geyserville Summer School and was present for the closing days of the Session. A brief visit with the friends in San Francisco was followed by a two-day stay in Los Angeles. The Bahá'ís of that area were delighted to hear of the increasing development of the Cause in Panama and of the teaching work which has been carried forward during Mrs. Oliver's and Mrs. Caswell's pioneer service there.

The Committee's warm appreciation to Sr. Santos Dominguez for his recently published "Primer Centenario," received a reply from him which was radiant with spiritual grace, with the dignity of deep humility, and gratitude that his "small work had proved useful for the spreading of the Great Cause."

Sr. Hernandez, Assembly Secretary of the thriving Bahá'í Community of San José, Costa Rica, writes of the meetings, held twice weekly, which are a part of the teaching activities in this city. Sr. Hernandez also rejoices that a new supply of books has arrived to give an added impetus for a broader scope in the teaching field. The eagerness of all these energetic friends for an ever larger supply of the Bahá'í literature is a gratifying evidence of the solid foundations which are being laid in these blessed Bahá'í Centers.

Clarence Iverson is again in San Salvador but his recent letters have been filled with the activities of his month's visit in Guatemala, from which point his mother returned for a few months visit to the States.

With characteristic enthusiasm Clarence's letters reflect his happiness in meeting with the friends in Guatemala City. He renewed old friendships, made many new acquaintances, and was given numerous opportunities to show his collection of the Temple slides for various types of gatherings. On one of these occasions some of the friends who were present had seen the Temple at different stages of its construction, and all were keenly interested in the beauty of its completed exterior.

In a delightful letter from Sr. Batres, Secretary of the Guatemala City Assembly, we hear most graciously of the pleasure the Bahá'í friends had received from Clarence's sojourn. Sr. Batres also wrote of the earnest endeavors of the Assembly members to consecrate themselves to their new responsibilities that the Cause may be established upon the firm and noble foundations of the Divine Plan. A beautiful registration book, the gift of Sr. Torres, will record the membership of this new Community of the Most Great Name.

On her return to Panama, Louise Caswell wrote at length, and touchingly, of her visit to Mathew Kaszab's grave in Brownsville, Texas. "An imposing Bahá'í stone" distinguished Mathew's resting place from the many other graves marked only by "wooden crosses or just a stick."

Flying south Louise's plane conveniently made scheduled stops in Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua. At each point there was time for a brief, happy visit with some of the Bahá'ís living in these Republics.

A few stimulating hours with three believers in Guatemala was followed by a joyful reunion with Clarence Iverson in San Salvador. "Their boys' school," writes Louise, "is one of the outstanding works in Latin American pioneer work."

A charming letter from the Secretary of the San Salvador Assembly tells how close to their hearts is this "youth Academy, founded in March" for which they are busily engaged in "seeking solutions of the teaching and needs of the students" whose ages range from sixteen to twenty years. Other activities are the meetings held on Saturdays and Sundays. The messages of the Guardian and the monthly Inter-America bulletins are translated and read at these meetings. The Baha’i Procedure in Spanish has been gratefully received—"some articles of this Procedure are read in each Sunday’s Spiritual Assembly meeting."

Honduras provided Louise with a glimpse of Gayle Woolson, which was “heavenly,” for all its brevity. In Managua the word of arrival had been delivered in time for a beloved little Nicaraguan believer to meet the plane and have every precious moment for a mutually inspiring visit. This valiant Baha’i has “a quenchless enthusiasm for the Cause, and is fanning the immortal flame which has been lit in Nicaragua.”

Glowing proof of her words greeted Louise’s return to Panama. An eminent Nicaraguan educator and statesman, fulfilling lecture engagements at Universities of Central and South America, arranged his plans in Panama to permit him to meet with the Baha’is and to serve as speaker for their Spanish meeting. “This very humble and noble person,” explained Louise, had come to them from the gentle believer in Nicaragua!

South America

Vivid letters from Virginia Orbison have thrilled us this past month, as she flew across the Southern Continent, from Santiago, Chile, to go to the support of Asuncion, Paraguay for several weeks.

Nearly three weeks were spent with the friends in Buenos Aires, awaiting plane space to Asuncion, and Virginia thoroughly enjoyed the frequent meetings, with the more than thirty believers of this great metropolis of Argentina, made possible by the unexpected delay. The Guardian has written a number of letters to the Argentina Baha’is, and these messages, full of encouragement for their great work and destiny, have proven a mighty bulwark for this strenuous pioneer period.

Baha’i meetings in Buenos Aires are held twice weekly. Virginia spoke at five of these gatherings, and adds—“my Spanish has a special flavor, but it makes understanding!” She continues, “the dear and devoted Etta Mae Lawrence is installed in a sweet apartment, which will be full of friends always . . . what has impressed me so deeply is the genuine closeness and profound love that exists between the believers and everywhere is so evident. Perhaps May Maxwell’s wonderfully loving spirit is pervading all of this country. It is profoundly moving to arrive in a strange city, among people that one has never seen, and immediately to have a feeling of deeper intimacy and genuine affection than one ever approaches with other friends. This is what makes the goal of the Baha’i Faith absolutely certain of attainment.”

Two happy days were spent in Montevideo, where the hospitable Uruguayan Baha’is arranged for Virginia to speak to twenty-five people. Wilfrid and Marta Barton took her for a delightful drive “to see this beautiful city strung out along the mouth of the river.”

Later Virginia sketched her first impression of Asuncion, Paraguay—“There are many Americans here from the States . . . The weather is a bit of perfection just now. It is nearly tropical here and extremely picturesque. Orange trees in bloom and fruit on the street give a wonderful fragrance, and the flowering trees are breathtaking in their beauty. One of the friends has written and is producing his own play at the main theatre next month.”

Flora Hottes, from the mountain city of La Paz, in Bolivia, draws entrancing verbal pictures that we wish all of you might have in their entirety. “The Message has been literally sown broadcast in the period of your two pioneers,” writes Miss Hottes, “and not a week goes by but there is some new contact or some old one renewed.” A broad range of human relationships and needs, significant of the universality of the Cause, is revealed in the descriptions of the varied Baha’i activities being carried on in La Paz.

“Several new refugees have become interested in the Faith, fine people, who are touched with new hope, and will come to us again to hear more . . . The boys are still coming, and some of the thoughts they gather are clearly reflected in their school themes. . . . The minister to the Aymara Indians, whose daughter we see occasionally in the school office, came for tea, and looked into the new books. He liked them for their love and tolerance, and said he was going to a meeting of young people with whom he wished to share these great ideas.”

A public meeting was arranged at which an accomplished young Chilean woman, whom Flora had met in Lima a year ago, was invited to be the guest speaker. Her humanitarian work for women gave an opportunity to “outline the Cause in relation to the great developments of the age” and to connect the dynamic influence of Tahirih in the growing emancipation of women. Another guest, a young Bolivian woman lawyer, was deeply stirred to return with her mother for a fuller understanding of the greatness of the Message.

The La Paz group had befriended a little boy whose parents had been unable to provide him with the surgical care he needed. "Recently the father and mother came to talk to us about the Cause. They are real people of the country — so kind and hospitable. To visit them one rides through the real indigenous section of the city, the markets, the crowds of Indians, streets filled with the native folk with their burdens and their babies on their backs. So much life and needing so much of what our Faith will ultimately bring to humanity."

When school is out in October, Flora will take a holiday in a lower altitude and will spend a month or two with Eve Nicklin in Lima.

Dominican Republic

Margaret Lentz sends us word of her new living arrangements in a letter vibrant with her plans for the teaching work to which she will now devote her entire time. At her pleasant hotel-pension she will also help the attractive young daughter of the owner to acquire English.

Miss Lentz wrote of her pleasure at a recent Embassy Reception when she learned, in the course of a conversation with the new Consul, that he had lived for some time in Bahia and enjoyed knowing Mrs. Holsapple-Armstrong during her residence there.

Haiti

L'Assemblée Spirituelle des Bahá'ís, Port-au-Prince, Haiti! With this letter-head the mailbag brings thrilling proof of the onward march of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh!

Mr. Gerald McBean, Secretary of the newly established Spiritual Assembly of Port-au-Prince, sends the joyful news of two new believers accepted into the Faith. These two members have joined the Cause since the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell, and Mr. McBean adds—"...This will be good news to them. We are sorry they had to leave us, but we are doing our best to carry on the work. As usual the meetings are held at my home every Thursday night."

The friends in Haiti are eagerly awaiting the arrival of the French translations which are being provided by the National Spiritual Assembly. "...nearly all of our friends are French speaking and most of our literature is in English. These reprints will help us wonderfully."

Mrs. McBean also writes with poignant sincerity of their joy in serving the Faith and of their deep desire to help establish a beautiful Bahá'í Center in Haiti—"...we miss the Blackwells, they were much beloved in Haiti."

Ecuador

Another new believer is joyfully reported from Ecuador. Hans Dory, Secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of Quito announces that the Quito Community now numbers ten members.

Uruguay

The happy news of a wedding comes to us from Montevideo! The first of two joyous letters from Mrs. Mary Barton brought word of her happiness in the engagement of her son, Wilfrid, to Senorita Marta Brito del Pino, charming daughter of a distinguished family of Uruguay. Mrs. Barton's second letter told of the beautiful wedding which was solemnized, early in July, at the home of the bride, in the presence of many relatives and friends. Mrs. Barton writes glowingly of her delightful and accomplished new daughter and of Wilfrid's great happiness. Our congratulations and felicitations to Mr. Barton and his lovely bride.

Mrs. Mary Barton has been doing valuable teaching work in Montevideo since her arrival there in January. She has recently returned home, having postponed her return in order to remain for Wilfrid's marriage.

Jamaica

Dr. Malcolm King, preparing to return to the States for a time, has sent a detailed record of his contacts since his arrival in Jamaica. Many hundreds of people have heard the glorious Message and from all parts of the island have come inquiries about the Faith.

Notice of The Bahá’í World, Vol. X

Because Volume X of The Bahá’í World is the last volume of the first Bahá’í century it is of unusual importance. It will contain much material of historical interest and value relating to the whole of the first Bahá’í century as well as to the two years, April 21, 1942-April 20, 1944.

The committee desires particularly photographs both those illustrating events and institutions of the Cause, such as summer school activities, pageants, exhibitions, activities of traveling teachers etc., during the two-year period covered by the book and those of earlier date. Please send them to Mrs. Anna Kunz, 714 Iowa Street, Urbana, Illinois.

Please send references to the Faith which appear in non-Bahá’í books, pamphlets and magazines, also references in specialized reference works to Mrs. Bertha H. Kirkpatrick, Olivet, Michigan. These references should give name of book or magazine, author, publisher and page on which reference is found. The dates of these publications should be within the period 1942-1944.

Any other material which would prove interesting to the public at large or valuable to be preserved in the records of the book please send to the Secretary of the committee.

Care should be taken not to repeat material which has been used in former volumes.

Please send your material so that it will reach the committee by January first, 1944.

All material gathered will be sent by the committee to the Guardian, who selects what he considers best for the book.

Baha’i World Editorial Committee,
Mrs. Mabel H. Paine, Secretary
606 Pennsylvania Avenue,
Urbana, Illinois

Request for Material on Youth or Children's Activities

We would like to renew our plea for all material relating to youth activities and children's activities for publication in The Bahá'í World, Volume X. While we have had interesting accounts and photographs from a good many youth groups, some of our largest youth groups have not...
Publishing Committee
Overcoming Emergency Conditions

Due to the emergency conditions affecting all publishing activities today, our Bahá’í Publishing Committee is making a determined effort to anticipate future demands for the books and pamphlets. Advance orders for paper and binding cloth have already been placed for the next volume of The Bahá’í World as well as for a new book which the Guardian is preparing to send in manuscript form in a few months.

It has become evident that a policy is needed in order to assure that the books and pamphlets of first importance can be kept in stock at all times, even though this may require the temporary discontinuance of certain standard books and pamphlets. The lack of paper and the inability of binding departments to fill orders not having war priority has seriously restricted our freedom to develop the important publishing work along lines of normal expansion.

For example, in the production of the compilation Bahá’í World Faith, the intention was to make the book as light in weight as possible, but the selection of grades of paper had become so restricted that the type of book readily possible a few years ago could no longer be manufactured. Moreover, the schedule called for the appearance of this book in time for the Convention, but unavoidable delays in manufacturing postponed publication until after August first.

By bringing out the set of three pamphlets entitled Selected Writings of Bahá’u’lláh, of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and of Shoghi Effendi, in an edition of 25,000 sets, and the new compilation Bahá’í World Faith in an edition of 10,000, the Publishing Committee has assured itself of capacity to provide Bahá’í literature for a period of from two to three years. The next step in the policy to be worked out with the approval of the National Spiritual Assembly is to establish an immediate printing schedule embracing every book and pamphlet needed in the teaching work for the next four years for which printing and paper facilities can be obtained.

New and Restored Assemblies

The National Spiritual Assembly is happy to report that four Assemblies have been formed in recent weeks, two in virgin areas, and two being the restoration of Assemblies that were dissolved for lack of numbers.

The new Assemblies are: Anchorage, Alaska; Fargo, North Dakota; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and Omaha, Nebraska. Thanks to the Guardian’s recent direction, these Assemblies could be formed without awaiting until April 21, 1944.

All newly formed Assemblies are requested to report their establishment on one of the forms provided by the N. S. A., send a full list of members of the community with addresses, and also provide three copies of a group photograph.

Teaching theme for November and December: Religious Unity.

Yerrinbool School, Australia
(Reprinted from “Bahá’í Quarterly”)
On Saturday, June 5th, friends journeyed to Yerrinbool to attend the Bahá’í Winter School. On Sunday, June 6th, in glorious weather, 36 friends gathered at “Bolton Place” for the Unity Feast. At 2:30 p.m. the Chairman of the committee opened the school and Mrs. Hyde Dunn read the prayer for All Nations. Mr. Bolton as Chairman welcomed the friends and read telegrams and messages of congratulation.

Mrs. Bolton read “The Souvenir of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá” by Shirley Warde from the World Order Magazine which reported a gathering in America in June, 1912, when ‘Abdu’l-Bahá held a unity feast.

Then Mrs. Dunn gave a short talk to the young people in reference to their responsibilities in the New World Order and congratulated them upon the enthusiasm which they displayed in all their activities. Mrs. Hall gave greetings from the Sydney community, and Mrs. Hambridge greetings for the Yerrinbool group.

On Monday morning the friends gathered in the Hyde Dunn Memorial Hall when the School sessions opened with devotions on Healing. Monday afternoon was devoted to the study of The Dawn-Breakers between 2 and 4 p.m. On Monday evening the Covenant of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was studied.

On Tuesday morning devotions were held and in the afternoon further studies and readings from The Dawn-Breakers. Tuesday evening was devoted to the reading of healing prayers and the “Experience of a Pioneer” from World Order Magazine.
On Wednesday morning devotions were from Prayers and Meditations. On Wednesday afternoon the dedication of the Hilda Gilbert Cabin was performed by Mrs. Hyde Dunn with a reading from the Gleanings (page 151) “Life after Death.” At the dedication Hilda’s favorite prayer “Forgiveness” was recited by Mrs. Bolton. After this ceremony a reading from The Dawn-Breakers was given by Mr. N. Walker. In the evening questions and answers were the order of the day.

On Thursday morning devotions were held and readings were selected by Mrs. Gale from the Gleanings. On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Hambridge selected readings from the Gleanings on Justice. Thursday evening was devoted to the study of Administration by Miss Belling.

On Friday morning Mrs. Coleman led the devotions, followed by further studies of The Dawn-Breakers. Friday evening concluded by the study of the Covenant and prayers.

The School closed on Saturday.

The entire study periods and periods of leisure were characterized by harmony and concord and as the garden develops and takes on a definite shape it will be a perfect setting for peace and tranquility which is so essential in these days of chaos and strife. So I would urge the friends to prepare now for the Summer School that is to be held in January, 1944, as we all know this is to be one of the most important years in Baha’i history.

We had the privilege and pleasure of having two non-Baha’is with us, who both proclaimed their firmness and acceptance of the Revelation of Baha’u’llah before the school closed.

All we are asked to do is sow the seed and God will reveal to the people in His time the greatness of His Cause. Indeed we are living in a very great day.

Baha’i Winter School Committee,
A. Tunks, Secretary.

Teaching Activity in England

Although we have for the moment put a great accent on publicity, we have not during the year forgotten our obligation to teach the Faith to all who are willing to learn. Both the local assemblies and the National Teaching Committee have done everything they can to foster existing outlets and to create new ones.

The National Teaching Committee’s work lies mainly amongst those believers who are not members of a local community. Their name was during the year changed from the lonely word “isolated” to the brave and encouraging “pioneer.” Working all by yourself, perhaps without even seeing a fellow Baha’i for months, is not by any means easy. It takes courage and fortitude to keep on trying, especially if for a long time no tangible results are achieved. It shows the strength of the pioneers and the degree of their faith that out of the nine new believers declared during the year, seven are due to teaching efforts of pioneers or, in one case a group, rather than the work of Assemblies.

The National Teaching Committee, realizing that it is through the pioneers that new communities must come into being, has tried to help them as much as possible, by keeping in touch by correspondence, by giving suggestions, explanations of the Teachings, etc., through the Journal, and by offering to send any help which might be needed. The response to their efforts has not been quite what was hoped, but this no doubt will gradually change as the Faith becomes known and the pioneers are more and more involved in active teaching. The National Spiritual Assembly has also tried to help the pioneers, to understand their difficulties and to keep in touch with them by sending various of its members to visit different pioneers, to consult and discuss with them, rather in the way that a local Assembly consults with the believers at a 19-day Feast.

Believers serving in the Army have done their best to help the teaching work. One has given talks on the Faith to Toc H in Dartwich; one, who is in the Shetland Isles, has written asking for books to be sent. Another, who is in the Midlands, has also been trying everything he can think of. This believer was the main originator of an innovation in the Midlands, when four believers came together at Miss Eastgate’s home near Birmingham and for the first time held a Naw-Ruz Feast in that part of England.

A number of fireside meetings have been held in Blackburn during the year, and one was held at Blackpool where a newly declared believer lives.

There has been a good deal of activity in Northampton. A believer has gone to live there and by advertisements in the local press and by personal efforts, a number of fresh people have been contacted, and one has already declared himself a believer. The resident pioneer has held fireside meetings and has also spoken at various meetings, one a very large one.

Other pioneers may not have addressed big audiences or even held fireside meetings, but most of them have taken every opportunity to speak of the Faith here and there, helping thereby in publicity even if not yet in more intensive teaching.

Some months ago the N.S.A. appointed one of its members as Contacts Secretary, to deal with such things as statements in the press sympathetic to the Baha’i principles, and to contact prominent people. During the year various people have been reminded of previous contact with the Faith, such as King Haakon of Norway, who was sent a telegram of greeting on his seventieth birthday, the Dean of Canterbury who was sent some books, and President Benes, Sir Ronald Storrs, and some others were sent a photograph of the Temple with greetings at the New Year.

Linked up with teaching is the question of the literature used. In August the N.S.A. appointed a committee, the members of which were to consult informally with members of the community and prepare a long-term plan for new literature needed. This committee has produced several suggestions, which in the course of time will be carried out, and also one idea which has already been put into practice. The committee stated that there was a definite need for a Baha’i periodical for sale to the public, and out of this arose the decision to revive our previous magazine, “New World Order,” but in view of the present situation it has to be a quarterly instead of a monthly. Production has been greatly helped by a generous gift from one of the believers to give it a start. The first issue was out in time for Naw-Ruz, with the main subject of “World Unity.” The next one is to feature the Temple.
Bahá'í Martyred at Ival, Mazindaran

The village of Ival is a summer resort of Mazindaran, about 16 farsakhs from Sari. There are about a score of Bahá'í families there comprising in all some 200 souls. Our informants reported that during the course of the attack one Bahá'í, Mirza Aqa Jan Jazbani, was put to death. To verify this report, we immediately deputed an agent to Ival. Before his return Aqa-Ja vilu' llah Jazbani, brother of the murdered friend, presented himself at the Sari Assembly and his answers to our queries brought out the following facts:

On the morning of the 2nd or 3rd of the current month, a party of eight armed horsemen proceeded to the home of Mirza Aqa Jan Jazbani and summoned him to the house of a Yaqub, the headman of the locality. Unaware of their design and wicked intent, this friend, accompanied by four others, appeared at the summoned spot. They were seized on arrival and their hands tied behind their backs. All manner of torture then was levelled against their persons and all manner of abuse directed against their Faith. A ransom of one thousand tumans was further demanded of each prisoner. To this Mirza Jazbani replied, "Not even if we sell our total effects to the last button can we raise the sum you have named. Nevertheless, free one of us to enable him to collect whatever sum is within our means and submit it to you," Jazbani was thereupon, set at liberty and by scraping together what he had of his own and some sums from others he was able to realize the amount of four hundred tumans which he presented to his captors. Finding the proffered sum to be less than their demand, these men commenced their persecution and put the friends to the rack. Thereafter they conveyed all five of them, handcuffed and with bare feet, to Gird-Mir, a village one farsakh from Ival.

The same 'evening, another batch of fourteen armed horsemen dismounted at Ival. It was dark by the time they learnt the result of the activities of their accomplices; nevertheless, a local inhabitant, an oppressor and enemy of the Cause, Saad'u'lllah Ismail by name, who had at one time professed adherence to the Faith and had associated with the friends, directed them to the residence of each and every believer of that locality. Here these monsters wrought that which the pen shrinks from mentioning. They ended with plundering all their property, setting fire to all Bahá'í books and effects, and even the Assembly records which were in Jazbani's house. The local Bahá'í census they carried away with them.

The next morning, all the captives, save Jazbani, were released. The enemies designed to pick off one of these by rifle-shot, when they had proceeded some distance. This friend, however, Faraj'u'lllah Naimi by name, realized their sinister intention and, having once escaped their clutches, fled and gained safety.

Some hours later, Mirza Aqa Jan Jazbani, who was half-dead from the tortures inflicted on him, was allowed to return home. He had not gone far, however, before three of the ruffians shot at him from behind and there in the wayside martyred him.

(The above report was taken from statement issued by the Spiritual Assembly of Sari in December, 1941.)

Frankland Home Transferred to Berkeley Assembly

Arrangements have been completed whereby Mrs. Kathryn Frankland made a gift deed to the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Berkeley conveying, subject to a life estate, her old home located in an attractive residence section of the city. In this generous and greatly appreciated gift she was joined by her daughter, Mrs. Helen Kitzmiller, of LaJolla, California and by Miss Julia C. Culpe, of Los Gatos, California, who also had an interest in the property.

The Frankland home is affectionately held in memory by Berkeley Bahá'ís. There Mrs. Frankland and her devoted husband during his lifetime, conducted earnest pioneer activities in the beginning of the Bahá'í Cause in Berkeley, and not a few of the community owe their first interest in the faith to spirited meetings held under the Frankland roof.

It was necessary for the Bahá'ís of Berkeley to become incorporated in order to receive title to this property and the community is much indebted to Miss Gladysce Linfoot and Attorney Maurice R. Carey for valuable legal services unselfishly contributed.

True to the same ideals that left their lasting impression on the Bahá'í Cause in Berkeley, Mrs. Frankland has been serving with much success in the pioneer field of Texas and New Mexico.
“Imperishable Bounties”
Letter from the Guardian

Dear valued co-workers:

The vigorous action promptly taken by your Assembly to insure the success of the forthcoming Centenary Celebration is highly commendable, and provides a fresh demonstration of the magnificent response made by the American believers to every call demanding renewed exertion on their part in the service of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh. The progress recently achieved in building up Spiritual Assemblies in the virgin areas of the North American continent has been truly remarkable. To consummate so vast an enterprise, however, a still more compelling display of the vitality of the spirit animating the American Bahá’í community is required, a still greater concentration of effort is needed, an even more stirring evidence of the daring boldness of its members is imperative. Whoever will arise, in these concluding, fast-fleeting months of the last year of the first Bahá’í Century, to fill the remaining posts, and thereby set the seal of total victory on a Plan so pregnant with promise, will earn the lasting gratitude of the present generation of believers in both the East and the West, will merit the acclaim of posterity, will be vouchsafed the special benediction of the Concourse on High, and be made the recipient of the imperishable bounties of Him Who is the Divine Author of the Plan itself. Whoever will rush forth, at this eleventh hour, and cast his weight into the scales, and contribute his decisive share to so gigantic, so sacred and historic an undertak ing, will have not only helped seal the triumph of the Plan itself but will also have notably participated in the fulfilment of what may be regarded as the crowning act of an entire century. The opportunity that presents itself at this crucial hour is precious beyond expression. The blessings destined to flow from a victory so near at hand are rich beyond example. One final surge of that indomitable spirit that has carried the American Bahá’í community to such heights is all that is required, as the first Bahá’í century speeds to a close, to release the flow of those blessings that must signalize the termination of the first, and usher in the dawn of the second, Bahá’í Century. —Shoghi Effendi Haifa, November 16, 1943.

Certificates of Incorporation

He requests you to send him from now on, two copies of the photo­static reproductions of incorporation certificates of any Assembly which becomes incorporated in future, and immediately after its incorporation. He has already placed in the Hall of the Mansion the copies of all the incorporation certificates of the Assemblies, and he wishes to have a complete record of them in that historic building, so close to the shrine of Bahá’u’lláh.

Local Election Date, Latin America

The Guardian’s directions regarding the formation of local Assemblies before April 21st applies to Central and South America as well as to the North American communities.

Teaching Effort in Latin America

The maintenance of the existing Assemblies in Central and South America, at whatever cost, and the reinforcement of the groups that have been formed, should be the constant care of the N. S. A. and the special object of the Inter-America Committee during the remaining months of this last year of the first Bahá’í Century, particularly the Republics where the situation is still precarious and the foundation as yet insecure.

Teaching Effort in North America

Every effort should be made to carry out the last details of Assembly settlement in the United States and Canada, so that there will not be the slightest failure to impair, at the last moment, the truly glorious achievements of the American believers in connection with the Seven Year Plan. The Guardian views with immense pride and satisfaction the almost miraculous success that has attended their efforts during the past year and a half, and he desires that, on the occasion of so momentous a celebration as that of the 100th anniversary of the Faith, the record should be complete, the roll call filled, and the mighty task victoriously concluded.

(The above passages are excerpts from that portion of the Guardian’s letter of November 16, 1943, written through his secretary).

Letters from the Guardian to Individual Believers

With Shoghi Effendi’s consent, excerpts from two of his letters to believers are published here for the information of the friends.

From letter written on January 25, 1943, to Mr. and Mrs. William Kenneth Christian:

“The questions you ask in your letter about individual guidance have two aspects, one might say. It is good that people should turn to God and beseech His aid in solving their problems and guiding their acts, indeed every day of their lives, if they feel the desire to do so. But they cannot possibly impose what they feel to be their guidance on anyone else, let alone on Assemblies or Committees, as Bahá’u’lláh has expressly laid down the law of consultation and never indicated that anything else superseded it.

“As to meditation: This also is a field in which the individual is free. There are no set forms of meditation prescribed in the teachings, no plan as such, for inner development. The friends are urged—nay enjoined—to pray, and they also should meditate, but the manner of doing the latter is left entirely to the individual.
"The same thing is true of teaching methods; no system, for teachers to practice, exists. But obviously the more people know about the teachings and the Cause, the better they will be able to present the subject. If some people find that prayer and placing all their trust in God, releases in them a flood of inspiration, they should be left free to pursue this method if it is productive of results.

"The inspiration received through meditation is of a nature that one cannot measure or determine. God can inspire into our minds things that we had no previous knowledge of, if He desires to do so.

"We cannot clearly distinguish between personal desire and guidance, but if the way opens, when we have sought guidance, then we may presume God is helping us."

From letter written to Mrs. Amelia E. Collins:

"Regarding your question concerning the Fast: Travelers are exempt from fasting, but if they want to fast while they are traveling, they are free to do so. You are exempt the whole period of your travel, not just the hours you are in a train or car, etc. If one eats unconsciously during the fasting hours, this is not breaking the Fast as it is an accident. The age limit is seventy years, but if one desires to fast after the age limit is passed, and is strong enough to, one is free to do so. If during the Fast period a person falls ill and is unable to fast, but recovers before the fast period is over, he can start to fast again and continue until the end. Of course the Fast, as you know, can only be kept during the month set aside for that purpose."

Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly
Beloved Co-workers and Friends:

This letter comes to you under date of 1944, the most fateful and significant year in our Bahá’í lives. It culminates a century of Revelation, creation, sacrifice and consecrated service. It fulfills the first and most important measure of achievement laid upon the community of believers. It finds the world engulfed in the toils of war and conscious of the immense difficulties of attaining peace when the conflict ends. The radiant Figure of the Báb sends forth its illumination to the hearts of the faithful. The Guardian, appointed Trustee of all the divine hopes for a regenerated and united mankind, calls upon us to redouble our effort in pressing forward to the sublime goal.

Now only a few months, weeks, days and hours remain in which to complete the task assigned the American Bahá’ís to discharge before the Centenary of the Declaration of the Báb finds us assembled in the House of Worship after sunset, May 22.

As reported by the National Teaching Committee on November 30, there are five unfinished tasks which require additional settlers:

Regina, Saskatchewuan, settlers needed. 2
Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, settlers needed
Moncton, New Brunswick, settlers needed
Halifax, Nova Scotia, settlers needed
Reno, Nevada, settlers needed

Number of new settlers needed at once:

To state this need in figures of unoccupied areas and settlers required is to show the marvelous work done in the past few years, for the goal is now within our grasp. But in spiritual matters there is no such thing as "almost accomplished" or "nearly done" or "only slightly imperfect." We must accomplish the Seven Year Plan completely and perfectly or acknowledge that we have failed.

Therefore the National Spiritual Assembly sends out for the National Teaching Committee this most urgent and imperative call. Only eight settlers are requested, but this is a minimum number. It does not provide settlers for other areas where the unavoidable loss of one single believer would dissolve the Assembly and replace the State or Province in the list of virgin areas still demanding help.

Twelve or more settlers are needed! This number of souls must be kindled with zeal and enthusiasm, charged with the spirit of heroic mission, and dispatched to their posts within the next few weeks. Every believer in the land must ponder his or her responsibility under this final call. Every Assembly must accept the challenge to discover the pioneers in its own community. Every Regional Teaching Committee must earnestly scrutinize its list of believers in prayerful resolve to find ready and willing Bahá’ís.

The volunteers are to report immediately to the National Teaching Committee, Miss Charlotte Linfoot, Secretary, 156 Nova Drive, Piedmont, Calif.

"Progress in the completion of the tasks of the Seven Year Plan has been slowing up," the National Teaching Committee has written, "due largely to the general feeling that seems to exist among the American Bahá’ís that the goals have been achieved or are within easy reach. Actually we still have five virgin areas and need for at least nine settlers. Many of the Sixth Year Assemblies are very weak and in need of a great deal of teaching assistance."

"The American Bahá’ís should not be permitted for a moment to overlook the fact that our position with respect to the Seven Year Plan is still extremely precarious."

All this means, dear friends, that concentration upon the Seven Year Plan is still our central and predominating responsibility. The plan of the five successive teaching themes and the portfolios of teaching material being given the Assemblies are aimed to draw the local communities within the spiritual arena of teaching effort, not as a substitute for the Seven Year Plan, but deeper consecration to assure its complete success.

In a few short months, whether we celebrate the Centenary in the House of Worship at Wilmette, or in our local Center, or alone in our own home, it will be as though we have the glory of meeting the Báb. The Letters of the Living who met Him gave their lives to receive Life. Can we hold back, refusing to give our time, our effort, to fulfill their sublime martyrdom?"

Bahá’í Centenary Plans
SECOND ANNOUNCEMENT

The Centenary Committee has received a large number of signed application forms as requested in the first Announcement included as insert in Bahá’í News for November, 1943. The purpose of that application is to acquaint the Committee with the approximate number of friends who plan to attend the Centenary and Convention sessions. As the Committee is explaining to each applicant by letter, the sending of the signed form does not mean that an actual reservation has been made. Reservations are made after the applicant receives information concerning the accommodations available and has made his selection and sent the cash required.

ROOM SHORTAGE
The Centenary and Convention coincide with an emergency situation as far as rooms in private homes or hotels are concerned in the Chicago area. The vast increase in the population due to construction of new industries and the establishment of various military establishments makes it necessary to search out every possible facility in order to meet the needs of the Baha'is and their guests.

An appeal is made that believers having homes or apartments in the Temple area with a room or so that could be used during the Centenary week notify the Committee so that these special accommodations may be added to those already in sight.

Rooms will be assigned in the order of the applications as soon as possible. Those who have their written application need take no further step until they hear from the Committee. However, there are doubtless many more believers who expect to come, and all these friends are urgently requested to fill out and return the application form as repeated on page six. Such applications do not obligate the sender financially—they are merely a notice of intention, and each notice will be acted upon by the Committee as soon as possible.

Further announcements will be made in Baha'i News from month to month. Please watch for them. To repeat the information already given:

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS
1. The dates are FRIDAY, MAY 18, through THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 25. The Convention will begin Friday morning, and the first public meeting will be held that evening. The morning and afternoon sessions are to be for the business of the Convention, except Sunday afternoon, when a public meeting will be conducted; and evenings are to be public meetings in accordance with the following schedule:
2. Friday evening, May 19—Public meeting on the subject of the Temple.
3. Sunday afternoon—Public meeting for the presentation of the Faith.
4. Monday evening, May 22—The meeting of spiritual dedication in Temple auditorium, followed by the most important of the public meetings in Foundation Hall.

Tuesday evening, May 23—Public meeting with speakers chosen from North America pioneers.
Wednesday evening, May 24—Public meeting with speakers chosen from Latin American pioneers.
Thursday evening, May 25—Banquet in a Chicago hotel.

The Committee feels a great responsibility in its task of providing accommodations for all the friends who wish to attend this occasion of surpassing historic importance. The only way that this responsibility can be met is by making the necessary arrangements now with hotels and owners for rooms on the basis of the number of reservations actually applied for before December.

North America Teaching
The culminating year of the first century has opened with far-reaching activities. In every part of the United States and Canada pioneers, settlers, and teachers are proclaiming the Faith with challenging and vital force. A record of those bold spirits who have added their names to the Pioneer Roll of Honor since May, 1943, is published in this issue. We wish there were space to recount the adventures and bounties which have sustained them in their irresistible advance on every front.

Since Convention four Spiritual Assemblies have been formed, three in virgin territories—Anchorage, Alaska; Fargo, N. D.; and Omaha, Nebraska—and the fourth in Pittsburgh, Pa., which was formerly disbanded.

In this same period more than twenty-five teachers have undertaken circuits or special assignments to pioneer areas and newly-organized communities. Everywhere their reports reflect a universal readiness to investigate the Plan of Bahai 'u'llah. Perhaps the following notes on a few of these circuits will speak for the achievements of all.

During August and early September Mrs. Milly Collins visited the friends in the Pacific Northwest, the Prairie Provinces of Canada, and North Dakota. After "three happy days" in Vancouver, Mrs. Collins stopped in Calgary where individual and fireside meetings with friends of this pioneer group resulted in enthusiastic plans for a study class. Next came a week in Edmonton with six meetings, described in glowing terms by the Local Assembly. Delighted with her talks for inquirers, the believers also found their own knowledge clarified and deepened. "She gave us so much encouragement in the work already done and to be done in the future." Then followed a week in Regina for intensive work in this important virgin Province, and a short visit to Winnipeg, after which Mrs. Collins arrived in Fargo "exactly at the psychological moment" to assist the friends to prepare for the election of the first Spiritual Assembly of North Dakota.

Another extensive circuit was carried out by Virginia Camelon, who left the South in mid-August to assist with teaching campaigns in St. Louis, Kansas City, Topeka, Omaha, Fargo, Winnipeg, and Regina. It is reported that the St. Louis group is fast approaching Assembly status. Both here and in Fargo Miss Camelon found an especially warm public response to the Faith. Five public meetings and several informal occasions were arranged in Fargo, the latter attracting many of the city's outstanding women. In a radio talk Miss Camelon introduced the newly-formed Baha'i Community, emphasizing its future significance for the State. "Fargo," she pointed out, "has now become part of an historic and world-embracing force." A brilliant public meeting with fine publicity was held in Winnipeg, and in Regina a series of four public meetings was arranged causing widespread interest. Writing of the universal response Miss Camelon commented: 'All these groups seem to be the result of long years of work everywhere, the fruiting is now evident.'

Eastern Canada received the news of the clear victory with enthusiasm. The Baha'i Community held high hopes in Canada, and important contacts were also made in the Toronto Assembly, and the Regional Committee held high hopes for Fuskegee where Mr. Washington was a former student.

These are but samples of the dynamic work which Bahá'í teachers have undertaken throughout the country. Other projects already carried out (by mid-October) included: Louis Gregory ..... Central States
Marguerite Ulrich ..... Pittsburgh
Muriel Warmnick ..... Regina

These projects, combined with others already planned or under way, undoubtedly represent the most intensive and widespread campaign effort ever released for the triumph of the Faith in North America.

The Bahá'ís of Denver have recently completed two successful experiments in indirect teaching. The Inter-Faith program arranged last June, which resulted in a permanent Inter-Religious Study Group, has been reported previously. More recently a "Brotherhood of Man Program" was carried out under the chairmanship of Artemus Lamb, in which eleven local organizations including the Bahá'ís participated. The approach used in inviting groups was to point out "that none of them knew much of anything about the others, and that it should be most educational, inspiring and beneficial for each and the public in general to have a joint program at which each organization would introduce itself and its platform on the brotherhood of man." The meeting was highly successful, with a Judge of the State Supreme Court as presiding officer and an audience of over 400 to hear speakers and examine literature displays of each group. "Such a splendid feeling of fellowship and trust has come out of this affair that it is impossible to describe," Mr. Lamb has written, adding that the purpose of these efforts was "not merely to display the Bahá'í principles but to obtain recognition of the Cause and to get it directly into circles where it seemed no other way would do it." He reports that Denver is gratified with the results.

—NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

Final Tasks of Seven Year Plan

With the completion of the pivotal sixth year of the Seven Year Plan, the American Community won a height from which "total victory" was "in sight." Only seven States and Provinces stood between us and the final goal. Since the Convention five of these assignments have been thrillingly consummated, with the election of Spiritual Assemblies in Fargo, N. D., on September 2nd; Anchorage, Alaska, on September 8th; Omaha, Nebraska, on October 11th; Sioux Falls, S. D., and Greenville, S. C., on November 5th—bringing within the orbit of the Faith these far-flung territories.

Now, in mid-November, with Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Nevada as added tasks, we are confronted with five remaining objectives. Here is the actual situation:

Clearly, we stand in a strong but critical position. Our strength is proven, the steps to be taken are but few. Actually, only eight Bahá’ís are needed to fulfill the goals in North America! Yet the Teaching Committee is compelled to report that it lacks these volunteers.

The months are swiftly passing; we dare not hesitate. Our sure weapon of conquest is a swift and sweeping response to the Guardian’s uncompromising call: “Veteran believers, however brilliant their record, neophytes, however limited their experience, are all summoned as the final hour approaches to rush forth in a last supreme effort to bridge the remaining gaps in the spiritual front extending the entire length of the Western Hemisphere.”

Beloved friends, this summons to “a last supreme effort” comes from the Guardian himself. As in those early days when Shoghi Effendi raised the call for “nine holy souls” and we with thrilling momentum fulfilled his anxious and expectant hopes, is not today our golden, our compelling hour to arise again and claim a brilliant victory?

New Temple Photographs

This issue of Bahá’í News reproduces three new Temple views taken by Curtis Kelsey, and later issues will illustrate more of this series of pictures. The friends have long wanted a selection of attractive pictures of the House of Worship with the completed exterior decoration, and the National Spiritual Assembly has arranged for the sale of photographs through the Temple Library and Sales Committee.

The size is eight by ten inches, and the cost per picture is 40c which includes packing and shipping.

Send cash with order (and specify whether glossy or mat print is wanted) to H. E. Walrath, Chairman, 4839 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill. Order by key number as assigned to each of the photographs reproduced in Bahá’í News.

Honduras

The Spiritual Assembly of Tegucigalpa has had the joy of welcoming Sr. Antonio Fernandez as a member of the Bahá’í Faith. The announcement was also received that Sr. Leonigualdo Alfaro is now serving as the Assembly Secretary of this thriving community.

Delightful letters from the friends in Tegucigalpa express their deep gratitude for the teaching stimulus gained by the “many packages of wonderful literature” they have received from the National Spiritual Assembly. Sr. Dominguez and Sr. Viana describe their local plans for a special program in honor of the Bahá’í Centennial. Sr. Viana is preparing a summary of the teaching methods he has developed for his weekly children’s class. “Sixteen wonderful children” attend this Sun-

Inter-America News

“We have heard with joy the glorious news of the surging response to the Divine summons. Sixteen adult believers, and two youths, are newly enrolled recruits in the ranks of Bahá’u’lláh’s Universal Cause! Like powerful magnets, their devoted service will attract added bounties for the six Latin-American countries which are their homelands. A precious harvest, indeed, has thus been garnered from the sacrificial labors of our valiant pioneers and their loyal supporters in the American Bahá’í Community. Five new believers were enrolled a month ago.

Delightful letters from the friends in Tegucigalpa express their deep gratitude for the teaching stimulus gained by the “many packages of wonderful literature” they have received from the National Spiritual Assembly. Sr. Dominguez and Sr. Viana describe their local plans for a special program in honor of the Bahá’í Centennial. Sr. Viana is preparing a summary of the teaching methods he has developed for his weekly children’s class. “Sixteen wonderful children” attend this Sunday morning class. Additional newspaper contacts are being initiated, and the Libraries of Honduras have been supplied with Bahá’í literature in Spanish.

El Salvador

Delightful letters have come from Senora Montalvo, Secretary of the San Salvador Spiritual Assembly. This enterprising Assembly maintains a circulating library of Bahá’í literature, conducts study classes twice weekly, sponsors the Bahá’í Youth Academy, and carries on extension teaching work in four additional towns and cities in El Salvador.

Clarence Iverson writes that they are much encouraged by the increased interest being shown among the residents of Santa Ana, the second largest city in El Salvador. Members of the San Salvador Assembly visit Santa Ana as often as possible and continue the work in all the extension areas through the供应 of books and pamphlet material.

Clarence Iverson has cheered us with his decision to remain for another year at his post in San Salvador. He sent us a splendid photograph of the young people who attended the Bahá’í Youth Academy, and comments that the school will close for the customary vacation period of November and December. They plan, however, to organize as a Bahá’í Youth Group and carry on activities!

The Extension Teaching work undertaken by the San Salvador Assembly in the neighboring city of Santa Ana, is bearing fruit. The Santa Ana Library recently asked for a supply of Bahá’í books, and one of the San Salvador friends promptly made the journey to fulfill this welcomed request.

Another San Salvador member is spending two months visiting the Bahá’ís of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. Sr. Vega expects to leave Costa Rica for a prolonged visit in Panama.

Thus the Divine Plan continually evolves! Threads of friendly human contacts weave back and forth, bringing out in ever elaborated beauty the Divine Pattern of World Unity. Business trips, vacation journeys and letters of introduction all combine to draw together the friends of many lands, through the imperishable bonds of service to our beloved Faith.

Haiti

The Spiritual Assembly of Port-au-Prince joyfully announces the acceptance of two new believers—Mr. Royer DeJean and Mr. Andre Paul. Letters from both Mr. and Mrs. Mckean are radiant with gratitude for this testimony of the growth of the Cause in Haiti. Every avenue of approach is being explored by the Assembly for ways and means of establishing the Faith in Port-au-Prince with befitting strength and dignity.

The National Spiritual Assembly has arranged to assist the Spiritual Assembly of Port-au-Prince, to broaden the scope of their teaching activities through the additional increase of pamphlet material in French.

In nearby San Domingo, Margaret Lentz has found a charming house which she hopes will lend itself to a wider range of Bahá’í activities for the city of Trujillo. The return of Dr. Berges to Trujillo will broaden the scope of the concentrated teaching efforts that these two workers will strive to carry out during the coming months.

Jamaica

To Marie Louise Browne and Marion Lord Maxwell, of Kingston, has come the imperishable privilege of being the first residents of Jamaica to enlist under the Banner of Bahá’u’lláh. Dr. Malcolm King’s many months of patient, loving service for the Cause has been bountifully rewarded in the confirmation of these two radiant believers. We rejoice with him that Miss Browne and Miss Maxwell will carry forward the Divine Plan in Jamaica when he returns, shortly, to the United States.

To the precious nucleus of two believers in Kingston has been added the thrilling strength of three new members! Both men and women are now sharing the privilege of establishing the foundations for the Spiritual Assembly of Kingston, Jamaica. We send our heartfelt congratulations to Miss Siley, Mr. Duff, Porter and Mr. Mitchell—new members of the Bahá’í World Community.

Poetic beauty graced Dr. King’s expression of his heart’s gratitude to Bahá’u’lláh, and to all the friends “whose prayers most assuredly have been answered in a definite way.” Tenderly he writes of his plans to assist the group to grow in understanding of their new and sacred trust—“and on November 4th, God willing, I am hoping to give the first Bahá’í Feast in Jamaica, according to the method used in the United States. Is this not a most glorious blessing? I hope God will continue to crown my effort, and keep me in His service without deflection in ardor and love of His sublime Cause. Time is short and the sand in the hour glass is running low. We must spread the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh for God’s Divine Kingdom to everyone, or we shall be found wanting in our responsibilities, and unworthy recipients of such a noble heritage in this Divine Springtime of His Revelation.”

Dr. King sent us a number of newspaper clippings containing the series of articles on the Faith which he had been invited to write. These clippings, he tells us are only a few, and the others will arrive later! “The paper in which these articles are published circulates, not only in Jamaica," he comments, "but also in Central America and the United States. God's mysterious forces will cause them to be seen by people with receptive hearts."

Paraguay

Virginia Orbison's buoyant letters have flown swiftly to us from Asuncion, during the two months of her visit there. In one of these, she wrote with deep tenderness of the celebration of the Feast of Might—the first Feast to be held after her arrival. Typifying the chaos of the world, a roaring storm of thunder, wind and rain raged outside, through which the little band of believers had bravely struggled in order to meet together. A sense of physical and spiritual sanctuary was heightened by the "very impressive atmosphere of love and unity among all." This momentous night marked "another fruit-bearing of Elizabeth Cheney's efforts in Paraguay"; the first two Bahá'ís of Asuncion made this the occasion for a heart-warming reaffirmation of their Faith, and two others of the original group made their declaration of Faith and enrolled as members.

Virginia has renewed the interest of a number of charming and talented people, also a part of Elizabeth Cheney's spiritual legacy, as well as meeting many new friends. Physicians, writers and educators have listened graciously to the Great Message. In several instances, their courtesy has flowered into a more intensive eagerness to learn of the promise of peace enshrined in the Bahá'í Revelation. In every contact of her daily life, Virginia has offered warm friendliness, and the "Glad Tidings," to young and old, to Paraguayan acquaintances in varied walks of life, and to people from other countries who are finding a refuge and a new homeland in Paraguay.

Argentina

Sr. Barros, the energetic Secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of Buenos Aires, has supplied us with a most informative resume of the various activities of this largest Bahá'í community of South America. Local work functions progressively, by means of regularly scheduled classes, and supplementary study is made available through their circulating library. Extension teaching work continues in neighboring areas, with intensive effort directed to two adjoining cities over a period of months.

The National Spiritual Assembly has authorized that Bahá'í literature in Spanish be published in Buenos Aires to facilitate quicker distribution throughout the South American countries. Sr. Barros writes of the earnestness with which the members of the Reviewing and Publishing Committee are seeking to expedite the work. He mentions that Wilfrid Barton, of Montevideo, Uruguay, is a valued member of this Committee and joins their consultations as frequently as possible.

Bolivia

Flora Hottes bestows fascinating news from La Paz in intimate, flowing phrases which banish distance and bring these dear Bolivian neigh-bears very close to us. We share the richness of their joy in the declaration of a new believer—the fifth Bolivian Bahá'í! This gracious new member moved almost immediately to Tarija, and yearns to spread the Creative Message in this southern city of Bolivia. Through their prayers and frequent letters, the Bahá'ís of La Paz will support this brave pioneering work of their beloved friend—"who is lovely to look at and lovely in her desire, sweetly and sincerely, to know and serve the Cause."

Every contact of daily life is utilized that the Teachings may be offered to those in all walks of life. The kindly serving maid becomes aware of new horizons; the little seamstress stitches new hope into the garments she mends; a talented young Bolivian diplomat snatches spare moments from a busy day to read from his treasured collection of Bahá'í literature. Loving and patient work continues with the Indian friends, to whom gentle explanations are offered. A former happy acquaintance was renewed, and more books were given, when a charming couple returned for a brief visit in La Paz from their home in Isla del Sol. Writes Flora: — "These two splendid people have given years of wise and selfless service to the Indians of Isla; they are the very highest type of Bolivians. . .always together, they read and meditate upon the great universal truths of Bahá'u'lláh, and they love His Cause.

"Gradual as is the unfoldment of the wonder of the Cause in hearts and minds, nevertheless I think that some day there will be a noble harvest of believers here. And how I love this country and the people! . . . Our little Bahá'í Group in La Paz is devoted, loyal and generous, and is achieving a greater and greater unity in cooperation and consultation."

Miss Hottes pleads the ever increasing need for Bahá'í literature, the outgrowth of widening opportunities for attracting the interest of studious cultured individuals. Their gatherings are drawing many guests distinguished for their achievements in various fields of the sciences and the arts. A recent evening brought together some of the college friends of Senora de Castillo's son, and a number of the literary men of La Paz. One of these guests "read a very beautiful poem, which he had written and dedicated to one of our former meetings."

This brilliant galaxy of writers, professors and authors contributed a stimulating and unforgettable evening.

Colombia

Mail from Bogota tells us that this capital city of Colombia is now blessed by eight resident Bahá'ís! Six Colombian believers are enrolled as members and are striving to deepen their knowledge of the Faith, with the help of Winnie Lou Baker and Gerrard Sluter. We hope to have further interesting word for you of this Bahá'í Group as additional letters come flying up to us bearing more details of their activities. A glorious future is destined for each of these South American Republics whose citizens so nobly respond to the call of God.

Venezuela

The first issue of an exceptionally attractive new magazine, entitled "Pro-America" arrived by recent post. This beautiful magazine is published in Caracas by the Consejo Nacional de la "Unión de Mujeres Americanas." Auspiciously, enshrined within its pages, is a significant discourse from the Bahá'í Writings on the equality of the sexes. We send our felicitations and congratulations to the editors and their able co-workers. May their glorious purpose succeed far beyond even their fondest hopes!

The demand for Bahá'í literature in the Latin-American countries is growing by leaps and bounds. Approved Spanish translations of various pamphlets, and selected compilations, are being published as rapidly as possible. Sr. Lupe Torres, of the Berkeley, California, Bahá'í Community, recently completed a scholarly translation of the "Pattern For Future Society," an excerpt from the Guardian's World Order Letters. Copies of this translation have been sent to all the Bahá'í centers where the Spanish language is used.

Mrs. Leonora Hoisapple Armstrong continues her valuable labors of translating the needed literature into Portuguese for use throughout Brazil.

Radio Teaching

With the national radio campaign so well under way, the National Spiritual Assembly has felt it advisable to ask the friends to consider the unique nature of this new and universal medium which serves to link together countless persons in the reception of one and the same message or program.

By its very nature the radio is a universal teaching medium, since the influence of radio talks cannot be confined to any limited place such as the administrative area assigned to any one local Spiritual Assembly. The talk is carried out far and wide as on invisible wings—an audible edition of a book or pamphlet which if printed and circulated to the same number of persons would represent a considerable undertaking.
Every believer using the radio necessarily transcends the administrative bodies which bear responsibility for the accuracy of talks and lectures delivered to audiences in the customary way. Therefore the administrative body or individual believer employing the radio should regard itself or himself as a trustee acting for the entire Bahá’í community.

The importance attributed by the National Spiritual Assembly to the quality of the Bahá’í material employed in radio programs is indicated by its recent action in appointing a Radio Script Reviewing Committee as announced elsewhere in this issue. Its purpose in establishing this Committee was to make available the best possible Bahá’í radio material, and to stimulate the greater use of radio as a teaching medium. Moreover, the National Assembly feels its responsibility in making it possible to maintain radio activities under its National Bahá’í Radio Committee.

At present a national radio campaign is being conducted by the Committee in three different cities.

In New York the station is WQXR, the Bahá’í program being known as “Musical Calendar,” a broadcast going on Wednesday evenings at 9:15. This program consists of selected classical music, with comments on the composer, with a period in which passages are read from the Bahá’í teachings. No lecture or address is given. The program is identified as Bahá’í, the public meeting held weekly at the New York Bahá’í Center is announced, and Bahá’í literature offered to those requesting it.

This type of program is new and experimental, but the Committee and the New York Assembly, which participates jointly in the program, are satisfied that it is producing excellent results.

In Chicago the station is WCLF, the Bahá’í program is also entitled “Musical Calendar,” and the time is 9:30 p.m. Tuesday evenings for thirteen weeks, beginning December 28.

A program has likewise been arranged in San Francisco but the details are not yet reported. This program will be described in Bahá’í News next month.

To have three campaigns proceeding simultaneously is a great undertaking and a powerful effort on behalf of the Faith. Every local Assembly, Regional Teaching Committee and group in these three areas should take vigorous action in order to make use of this potential force. Like the momentum of a river turned into useful work by the construction of dams, sluices and waterwheels, the best of radio programs will accomplish little unless we ourselves develop the contacts and teaching activities taking full advantage of its influence.

Ninth Bahá’í World Youth Symposium

Once again the Bahá’í Youth of the World will meet together on February 27, 1944, in spirit and in love for the Ninth “World Bahá’í Youth Symposium.”

It is hoped that the Bahá’í youth everywhere, no matter how few the number, will hold a fitting program for this occasion, either by themselves, or by joining with youth from nearby vicinities.

"The Bahá’í Centennial" has been chosen for the main theme. This cannot be over-emphasized, as in May, 1944, "we will celebrate not only the termination of the first century of the Bahá’í Era, but also the centenary of the birth of the Bahá’í Dispensation, of the inception of the Bahá’í cycle, and of the birth of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and commemorate as well the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Bahá’í Faith in the Western World."

The four subjects follow:
- History of the Bahá’í Faith.
- The Bahá’í House of Worship.
- The New World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.
- The Need of Spiritual Living.

Transliteration of Bahá’í Terms

In one of the Guardian’s earliest letters (March 12, 1923) published in Bahá’í Administration, he directed the believers to follow the system of transliteration provided for the accurate writing and printing of Bahá’í terms. The code sent with that letter was reproduced here scrupulously and at all times to have been followed, and endorsed, a "curate writing and printing of Bahá’í Terms have been made available in transliterated letter."

Publicity Bulletin

The Bahá’í News Service Committee has just sent out the first of its bi-monthly bulletins containing releases and suggested types and ways of obtaining publicity. If you did not receive a copy and would like one, write the secretary, Miss Virginia Russell, 2322 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, Illinois.

Please send two copies of all publicity clippings, assembled, to the secretary. All clippings must be received not later than March 31 to appear in the Press Books for 1943-44.

Appeal By Archives Committee

The response of the American believers has been most generous to the recent appeal of the National Archives and History Committee that the Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the letters of the Guardian be placed in the National Bahá’í Archives before the close of the first century. Lists of these Tablets and letters and other sacred objects given to the Archives are now being completed under the names of the donors. Orders will be filled in the near future for more than 300 photostatic copies of these sacred manuscripts, received within the past three months.

Local Assemblies and groups are requested to remind the friends at the next Feast that this is their last opportunity to become one of that great company of believers who, within the first fifty years of the history of the Faith in America, have added their most precious possessions to that growing spiritual treasury of the original writings of the Master and the Guardian,—the National Archives.

MAY SCHEFFLER, Secretary, 1821 Lincoln Street Evanston, Ill.

Calls for Bahá’í Books in Public Library

The Library Committee would like to share with the friends this encouraging report on the circulation of our books in the Syracuse Public Library and the University of Syracuse. We should welcome similar detailed reports which show the great teaching value of placing books in libraries. In the Syracuse Public Library, most of the books have circulated actively from 1940 to 1943. Even The Bahá’í World volumes have been taken out with Volume 7 having a record of six withdrawals. The two copies of the Book of Assurance have been drawn out seven times; Spirit of the Age, seven times; Some Answered Questions, eighteen times; Modern Social Religion, twenty times; Splendour of God, twelve times. Remey; Bahá’í Movement and Universal Consciousness, six and eight times. The Bahá’í Revelation by Thornton Chase was out at the time of the report. Nineteen of the twenty-one books in this library have been drawn out.

The Syracuse University report was also most gratifying as the copy of the Scriptures had been taken out fourteen times and had been on reserve three times; Volume one of Promulgation of Universal Peace had been drawn out nine times; Spirit of the Age seven times; Some Answered Questions, four times and on reserve twice. Most of the Remey books had been drawn out several times up to 1942.

Circulation reports from other cities would be most welcome as a basis for comparison and to show public interest in the Bahá’í books in libraries.

Messages from Tehran and Adelaide

Two messages have been received full of interest for the American Bahá’ís. One is from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Iran, the other from the NSA of Australia and New Zealand.

From Tehran we have the thrilling news that the Memorial to Keith Ransom-Kehler has been completed and that photographs are being mailed. The message states: "Monument to beloved Keith, first distinguished American Bahá’í martyr and eminent hand of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh has been completed. We will mail photographs and report.

May
the exemplary services of beloved Keith continue to exert an abiding influence upon the humble services of the believers of Persia.”

The words of the Guardian, and a memorial notice by the NSA concerning Keith were published in Baha’i News of January, 1934, and the design for her Memorial at Isfahan made by the late Myron H. Potter was illustrated in March, 1935. Her passing was duly observed in The Baha’i World, Vol. V.

From Adelaide we have acknowledgement of the contribution of $500 made by the National Spiritual Assembly for the American friends toward the cost of a National Baha’i Headquarters for the NSA of Australia and New Zealand. “Mumificent donation for National Headquarters gratefully received. National Assembly and all the believers are profoundly moved and inspired by this manifestation of the true Baha’i spirit. We pray for great blessings for the loving American friends.”

New Assemblies

In addition to the four Assemblies reported in the November issue, the National Spiritual Assembly is gratified to list the following additions to the Assembly roll: Tacoma, Washington; Greenville, South Carolina; Sioux Falls, South Dakota; and Alexandria, Virginia. The formation of Assemblies in South Carolina and South Dakota remove two more States from the virgin areas.

“The Auspicious Year”

Message from Shoghi Effendi

The auspicious year destined to witness the Centenary of the Birth of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh is brilliantly opening. The last year of the first Bahá’í Century is more than half spent. The tempo of organized, concerted activities of the members of the worldwide Bahá’í community is correspondingly accelerating. Teaching campaigns, enterprises of institutional significance, publicity measures, publication projects, and celebration plans are rapidly multiplying. Inter-community competition is steadily mounting. The world-desolating conflict, now in its fifth year, is powerless to cloud the splendid prospect of the triumphant termination of the first, most shining century of the Bahá’í Era. Tihrán reports thirty-four Assemblies constituted, fifty-four groups reinforced, fifty-eight new centers established. Messages from Delhi indicate that Bahá’ís have established residence in over sixty localities in India and eighteen Assemblies are already functioning. To the National Bahá’í Headquarters previously founded in Tihrán, Wilmette and Baghdad, are now added similar centers in Cairo, Delhi and Sydney, officially registered in the names of their respective National Assemblies, and representing an addition to Bahá’í national endowments amounting to approximately eighteen thousand pounds. The Bahá’í international endowments have been further enriched by a recent acquisition on Mount Carmel in the vicinity of the Bab’s Shrine transferred to the name of the Palestine Branch of the American National Assembly. Twenty-five acres of land situated in the Jordan valley have just been dedicated to the Tomb of Bahá’u’lláh.

The recent acquisition of land adjacent to the site of the projected Tihrán Temple raises the holding to over three and a half million square meters. The Seven Year Plan, providing the chief impulse to the extraordinary expansion of these magnificent activities, must, during the remaining five months, as befitting the Thanksgiving act for continued outpouring of God's unfailing grace, surge ahead to dazzling victory surpassing our highest expectations. The prosecution of the Plan, whose scope transcends every other enterprise launched by Bahá'í communities throughout the whole century, must, ere the hundred years run out, culminate in one last, supreme effort whose repercussions will resound throughout the Bahá'í world.

Temple Teaching

The number of visitors to the Temple for the first ten months of 1943 compares favorably with the years before there were so many transportation difficulties. The visitors seemed to be unusually receptive and a large number requested literature.

Total from the time guiding started, July 1, 1932, through October 31, 1943, 104,360

More visited in August than in any other month of 1943, namely, 2,918.

The visitors this year came from all the states and the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Alaska, seven provinces of Canada, and the countries of England, Australia, Bahamas, Wales, Cuba, Belgium, Finland, Germany, Austria, Monaco, India, Palestine, China, Honduras, Bolivia, Brazil, and Mexico. No doubt they came from many other countries as well, since only one-fourth sign the Visitors' Register from which this information was taken.

The Temple Guides Committee has many difficult problems to solve, one of which is the obtaining of enough guides to perform this prodigious task. Pioneering in Bahá'í work, the armed services, defense work, illness, removal from town, etc., have taken a toll of at least forty-two from the list of active and prospective guides. Appeals for volunteers in this work have not brought enough response. Due to the national publicity and radio broadcasting that will take place prior to the Centennial Celebration, there will surely be a large increase in visitors. We must have more guides.

Weekly classes to prepare guides will be started in the Temple on Sunday, January 9th, at 2 p.m., and in the Chicago Bahá'í Center, 116 S. Michigan Avenue, on Wednesday, January 5th, at 7:30 p.m. All who can possibly do so are urged to attend these classes.

Those who guide are thrilled and enthusiastic about the work. Some come from such great distances that the trip each way takes two or three hours, such as, the far south side of Chicago, Riverside, Waukegan, Franklin Park, and Milwaukee. Nine guides came from Milwaukee, two guiding every Sunday and holiday and the rest twice a month.

Our Temple is a beautiful building. It attracts throngs. We have invested at least $1,343,000 in it so far. We should make the most of our opportunity to use it in making the world cognizant of the Teachings of this Faith, God's remedy for its ills.

Bahá'í Service for the Blind

Through the devoted service of a member of Bahá'í Service for the Blind, 50 copies of the pamphlet, Principles of the Bahá'í Faith, in printed Braille are available to Assemblies or groups with blind believers or blind friends; also available to pioneers. This service is rendered by Mrs. Amedée Gibson of California, in the name of the Nat'l Spiritual Assembly; and in memory of Mrs. Constance Rodman and Mr. Albert Engelder, whose devoted services to the work for the blind—although they have passed to the life beyond—still inspire us.

Please address requests for the above to the chairman of Bahá'í Service for the Blind, Miss Ella C. Quant, 1089 Glenwood Boulevard, Schenectady, N. Y.

Following is a list of Books in Braille at the Reserve Library. These books are available for use of the blind—free of charge—loaned for a period to suit the individual need. Kindly address all requests for Reserve Library books to Mrs. Mayme Jackson, 9615 N Boulevard, Cleveland, Ohio.

BAHÁ’Í NEWS

National Spiritual Assembly of the Báb’s of the United States and Canada — 536 Sheridan Rd., Wilmette, Ill.

No. 168
March, 1944

Year 101
Bahá’í Era

Messages From The Guardian

Since the transmission of my recent message conveying news of the magnificent progress achieved by Bábí communities, a substantial addition to the endowments dedicated to the shrines raises the holdings in the Jordan Valley to over five hundred acres. The extension of teaching enterprises East and West, the multiplication of Bábí endowments, national and international, the consolidation of administrative institutions, above all the superb evidences of incorruptible loyalty to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and His Will, equally proclaim the unyielding determination of the world community to seal with triumph the first Bahá’í Century.

—SHOGHII RABBAH
Received January 16, 1944

The participation of Latin American believers in the Bahá’í Centennial Convention is vital to the future development of the Faith in the Americas. I urge individuals as well as the National Assembly to extend assistance, financial and otherwise, to enable as many representatives as possible to join the North American believers in the proceedings of a gathering of such momentous importance and historic significance in the evolution of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in the western hemisphere.

—SHOGHII RABBAH
Received January 29, 1944

Delighted at notable successes achieved and splendid prospects ahead. Fervently praying for speedy formation of Assemblies in the four unsettled areas and full attendance of Latin American representatives.

—SHOGHII RABBAH

The first envelope containing locket with hair was returned after meeting with an accident. Though the accompanying letter was half burnt, the hair is intact. I rejoice at the providential escape and safe arrival. Inform friends.

—SHOGHII RABBAH
Received March 14, 1944

(This message refers to the shipment of the hair of the Báb for exhibit at the Centenary and preservation in the Archives. It was sent in June, 1943, and never received here, but now we have this news of its providential escape from loss or destruction and safe return to its sender, the Guardian, in Haifa.)

From a letter dated Haifa, January 14, written through his secretary, we quote this message from the Guardian:

“In this connection he would like you, in Bahá’í News, to call the attention of the friends to the importance of these endowments in the Jordan valley, by quoting Bahá’u’lláh’s own words as found on pages 116 and 117 in the ‘Gleanings,’ in which He very clearly states His approval of such dedicated lands, anticipates the importance they will acquire in those regions, and associates them with the words in the Old Testament: ‘Spread thy skirt, O Jerusalem!’"

The passage in Gleanings From the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh reads as follows:

“If a man be found willing to rear, in Our name, an edifice of pure gold or silver, or a house begemmed with stones of inestimable value, such a wish will no doubt be granted. He, verily, doeth what He willeth, and ordaineth that which He pleaseth. Leave, hath, moreover, been given to whosoever may desire to raise, throughout the length and breadth of this land, noble and imposing structures, and dedicate the rich and sacred territories adjoining the Jordan and its vicinity to the worship and service, of the one true God, magnified be His glory, that the prophecies recorded by the Pen of the Most High in the sacred Scriptures may be fulfilled, and that which God, the Lord of all worlds, hath purposed in this most exalted, this most holy, this mighty, and wondrous Revelation may be made manifest.

“We have, of old, uttered these words: Spread thy skirt, O Jerusalem! Ponder this in your hearts, O people of Bahá, and render thanks unto your Lord, the Exponent, the Most Manifest.”

Finally these excerpts from letter dated November 16, 1943, written through his secretary:

“Regarding the seven points submitted to the Guardian in connection with the new basis of the election of Convention delegates. He approves the action taken by your Assembly but wishes to stress the importance of reminding the believers that they should make every possible effort to attend the meeting for the election of the State or Province delegates, in order to stimulate a larger group consciousness which will greatly facilitate the process of the believers becoming acquainted with each other, and provide an intermediary stage—which will become increasingly valuable and necessary between the local organization, represented by the group or Assembly, and national collective action, represented by the activities of the Convention and the institution of the National Assembly.

“Regarding the District of Columbia: the Guardian feels it should be accorded its independent status of a State and should be treated on a footing of absolute equality with the other States and Provinces. Believers residing in that district should be accorded the same rights, in all matters of election and otherwise, as those who reside in the States and Provinces of North America.

“The Guardian’s directions regarding the formation of local Assemblies before April 21 applies to Central and South America as well as to the North American communities.

“Regarding the election of the local Assembly on April 21: He feels that it should not take place after sunset on that day, for otherwise it would be, according to the Bahá’í Calendar, falling on April 22; if any changes should be made in the By-Laws, uniform action should be enforced by your Assembly.”

Letter from the National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Co-workers and Friends:

There is urgent need of communicating information to all the believers concerning the Convention and the Centenary. This special number of Bahá’í News is being issued in order to convey the information to all the American believers as rapidly as possible. Another number of Bahá’í News, containing items of current interest, will follow in about ten days.

Election of Delegates

Beginning this year, the 171 Convention delegates will be elected by all the believers and not merely by those who are members of organized local communities. The delegates are assigned by proportionate representation to the States and Provinces of North America, and the elections will be held at some central point within each State or Province, under a new procedure which has been established with the Guardian’s approval.

1. The National Spiritual Assembly has appointed for each State and Province a Temporary Chairman to open the meeting. Those present at the election then proceed to the election of a permanent Chairman and Secretary, and the Chairman appoints two tellers.

2. Reading of passages from the Bahá’í literature related to elections and the nature of Bahá’í institutions, the following references being suggested: Bahá’í Administration, by Shoghi Effendi (third edition, 1936) —Prayer, on pages 20 and 21; last paragraph, page 21; third paragraph, page 36; third paragraph, page 45; second paragraph, page 52; all of pages 54, 55, 56 to the end of the letter, beginning with the first new paragraph on page 54.

3. The tellers certify the result of the election and the Chairman promptly transmits the tellers’ report and the ballots to the National Office.

4. In case of a tie vote the second ballot is to be cast by those present, and their votes are to be cast for one of the two or more persons who were tied.

5. The Secretary prepares and transmits a report of the proceedings of the meeting.

All effort is being made to have every State and Province electoral unit hold this first state-wide election on Sunday, April 9, at 11:00 A.M. A blank ballot, a letter of instruction and a list showing where each election is to be held as well as the number of delegates assigned to the various States and Provinces, will be sent to all the Bahá’ís as follows:

a. In bulk through the local Assemblies for distribution to the community members.

b. In bulk to group Correspondents for distribution to the group members.

c. Mailed direct to every listed Bahá’í who is neither a member of a community nor of a group.

The friends are exhorted to attend their respective election in person if possible, because these meetings inaugurate a new and important advance in the evolution of the Bahá’í administrative order. From now on, the distinction between voting and non-voting Bahá’ís is removed. Every believer, whether in a city with an Assembly or alone in a remote village, has one and the same right and responsibility to elect the delegates who constitute the annual Convention. There are no more “isolated” believers, for one is either identified as (for example) a “Chicago Bahá’í” or as a “North Dakota Bahá’í,” depending on whether he is listed as a member of a local community or member of a State or Provincial community.

In voting for the number of delegates assigned to your State or Province, bear in mind the fact that the name or names you write on your ballot must be resident or residents of your own State or Province, and must be adult (twenty-one years of age or more), duly listed Bahá’ís.

As the Guardian wrote in the letter quoted above: “He... wishes to stress the importance of reminding the believers that they should make every possible effort to attend the meeting for the election of the State or Province delegates, in order to stimulate a larger group consciousness which will greatly facilitate the process of the believers becoming acquainted with each other, and provide an intermediary stage—which will become increasingly valuable and necessary — between the local organization, represented by the group or Assembly, and national collective action, represented by the activities of the Convention and the institution of the National Assembly.”

The Temporary Chairmen have been appointed and notified. Where a suitable Bahá’í center or Bahá’í home is not available for the meeting, the Temporary Chairman has been authorized to rent a place.

The Convention

The 1944 Annual Convention will be held in Temple Foundation Hall, Wilmette, on Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 19 to 25. There will be Convention business sessions each morning from 10:00 to 12:00 noon, and each afternoon from 2:00 to 4:00, except Sunday when the event will be a public meeting as scheduled in the program of the Centenary. The Centenary program will fill the evenings of the same days, May 19 to 25, as the Convention sessions.

Convention Agenda

Printed copies of the Agenda will be provided. Among the themes chosen for general consultation are:

The Guardian’s Survey of the First Bahá’í Century, the new book which he has entitled “God Passes By.”

Completion of the Seven Year Plan —Temple, North America Teaching and South America Teaching.

Convention photograph, 11:30 a.m., Sunday, May 21; Annual Election, 2:00 p.m., Monday, May 22.

Will the friends kindly note that the Convention sessions are open only to delegates and Bahá’í visitors. The Centenary meetings are open to the general public.

Bahá’í Centenary

All believers will be supplied with a copy of the printed Centenary program now in preparation. The dates and subjects are outlined here as follows:

Friday, May 19, 8:15 p.m. Subject: The Universal House of Worship.
Saturday, May 20, 8:00 p.m. Subject: A Bahá’í Meeting.
Sunday, May 21, 3:30 p.m. Subject: The Bahá’í World Faith.
BAHA'I NEWS

Monday, May 22, 8:00 p.m. Subject: Centenary of the Birth of the Bahá'í Faith.

Monday, May 22, 9:30 p.m. (In Auditorium of Temple, for believers). Subject: Dedication of the Bahá'í House of Worship. 10:00 p.m. Subject: Centenary of the Declaration of the Báb. Showing of Portrait of the Báb and of Hair of the Báb.

Tuesday, May 23, 8:15 p.m. Subject: North America, The Citadel of Universal Peace.

Wednesday, May 24, 8:15 p.m. Subject: The Meeting of the Americas.

Thursday, May 25, 6:30 p.m. Banquet in ballroom of Hotel Stevens, Chicago.

Annual Election of Local Spiritual Assembly

The date of the annual election of local Assemblies was fixed by the Guardian some years ago as the first day of Ridván, April 21. But as the Bahá'í day begins at sunset and not at midnight, the election date hereafter is to be regarded as the twenty-four hour period beginning at sunset, April 20, and ending at sunset, April 21.

In response to inquiries received concerning the best method to use when the result of the first ballot is a tie vote, and whether absent voters are to participate in a second ballot, the National Spiritual Assembly refers to the statement on page 48 of Bahá'í Procedure, and amplifies the procedure as follows:

In case of a tie vote in any Bahá'í election, another ballot is to be cast, restricted to the persons tied in the first vote. If necessary, successive ballots will be cast, all of which are confined to the persons tied. The election is to be completed in the one meeting duly called.

Thus the friends who vote by mail are unable to participate in a second or successive ballot. Each ballot after the first is confined to those present when the ballot is taken.

Annual Reports

National Committees have been requested to send in their reports by April 1 for publication before the Convention period.

Reservations

Two notices prepared by the Centenary Committee are published below, and deserve careful attention by all believers wishing to attend the Convention and Centenary sessions. The plans and arrangements made by the Centenary Committee are fully endorsed and thoroughly approved by the National Spiritual Assembly.

Needs of the Seven-Year Plan

At the March meeting of the NSA the National Teaching Committee reported the need of one settler in Boise, and two settlers in Louisville, to complete the requirements of the Seven Year Plan as far as North America is concerned — provided that all the present arrangements which the Committee has in hand are consummated, and no new and unexpected needs develop.

New Assemblies can be formed, and former ones reestablished, as late as May 22 to be reckoned as part of the Plan given us by the Guardian for the concluding years of the First Bahá'í Century. The National Assembly understands that this permission for formation of Assemblies on dates other than April 21 is for this year only.

It is also an important element in the teaching Plan that local Assemblies undertake vigorous public campaigns on the successive themes selected for the year. During March and April our theme is the Manifestation of God, preparing the way for the Centennial.

—National Spiritual Assembly

The Guardian's Book

Amid all his weighty responsibilities and burdens, Shoghi Effendi has found time to present the Bahá'ís with a new and most notable book, a survey of the history of the Faith throughout its first Century. The title he has chosen is "God Passes By."

The precious manuscript has been arriving chapter by chapter via air-mail, and each chapter when received is turned over to the Publishing Committee for the printer. As of the present time we are still to receive several chapters, so the publishing date can not be determined. The aim is to produce the volume before the Centenary and Convention dates if humanly possible under existing conditions affecting printing and binding.

To the individual Bahá'í this work brings new and deeper insight into the majesty and power of the Cause of God. Its distribution throughout the general public by all available means, including review copies to the press, will redound to the prestige of the Faith and answer many questions raised by inquirers as well as uniformed and unsympathetic critics.

Advance orders may be placed now subject to shipment when ready and subject to final determination of selling price.

A Centenary Book

The Publishing Committee has on the press a work entitled "The Bahá'í Centenary 1844-1944" compiled by the National Spiritual Assembly with the help of a number of the friends in order to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the Faith. Its contents include the following:

Centenary Committee

Important Annoucement

Since early Fall, your Centenary Committee has been making a thorough survey of housing possibilities necessary to take care of the unprecedented number of Bahá'ís who have indicated their intention of attending the 1944 Convention and Centenary Celebration. The results of this survey show:

1. That because of an acute housing shortage, due to the new war industries, recently developed in these environs, the largest number we can hope to place in private homes in Wilmette or along the North Shore is about 300 persons.

2. That all of the Evanston Hotels, with their unusual number of permanent residents, cannot promise to take care of more than an additional 100.

3. That all of the outlying hotels, between Evanston and Chicago, are completely filled.

4. That the only Chicago Hotel that can guarantee sufficient space for the rest of our reservations is The Stevens, recently turned back by the Army to private ownership and now being completely renovated.

To date, some 900 reservations have been received, with others arriving by every post. From the above, it is obvious that we shall have to go to Chicago for most of our rooms and the Centenary Committee feels it most providential that the Stevens Hotel should have been released for civilian use, just at this time. We have made this the "official" hotel and are holding enough space to take care of everyone. The 300 to 350 places which we expect to have in private homes will be assigned to the older friends and to those who, for some physical reason, must be near as possible to the Temple.

Transportation

The current regulations permit of making reservation on trains one month in advance. We strongly urge those travelling by rail to secure their reservations both to and returning from, Chicago at the earliest possible moment. Do not leave your return accommodations until arriving in Chicago, unless you want to risk delays.

To those near enough to Wilmette to consider driving to the Centennial, we wish to recall that the period of change in the validity of gasoline coupons falls during the Convention, on May 21st. They could therefore use coupons 11 for their journey to Wilmette and 12 for their return home.

The "L" and North Shore Electric both have stations convenient to The Stevens and go directly out to Linden Avenue, Wilmette, in about 35 minutes. If feasible there will be some private motor-bus service established between The Stevens and the Temple.

Food

We are happy to report that a very satisfactory arrangement has been worked out whereby attractive wholesome food (hot meals, as well as good sandwiches, etc.) will be served on a cafeteria basis from 11:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. in a large tent, which will be erected on our present parking-lot, adjacent to the Temple. This service is to be carried out by an excellent catering company which is equipped to take care of any number, so you can plan on having your luncheons and dinners in this convenient and congenial way.

Weather

Although we should have nice spring weather, during the Centennial period, the latter part of May is still unsettled and can be quite cool. We would therefore caution everyone to be provided with a warm top-coat. It would also be wise to be prepared in the event of rain.

Program

The session of the Convention will take place in Foundation Hall each morning and afternoon. In planning the different Public Meetings, the Centenary Committee, although building the programs around such phases of the Faith as its growth in North America, its development in Latin America, the building of the Temple, etc., has endeavored to lift the addresses above personalities and select themes that would cover the subjects emphasized by the Guardian and present the Cause in its broad and universal aspects. We regret that we cannot yet give full details as to the speakers, but the program of these Public Meetings, prepared by the Committee and approved by the National Spiritual Assembly, is as announced above.

The Banquet, which concludes this Program, will be held in Hotel Stevens, Chicago. Formal or informal dress optional.

Messages From the Guardian

Dearly-beloved friends:

The one remaining and indeed the most challenging task confronting the American Bahá’í Community has at long last been brilliantly accomplished. The structural basis of the Administrative Order of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh has, through this superb victory, and on the very eve of the world-wide celebrations of the Centenary of His Faith, been firmly laid by the champion-builders of His World Order in every state of the Great Republic of the West and in every Province of the Dominion of Canada. In each of the Republics of Central and South America, moreover, the banner of His undefeatable Faith has been implanted by the members of that same community, while in no less than thirteen Republics of Latin America as well as in two Dependencies in the West Indies, Spiritual Assemblies have been established and are already functioning — a fact that has outstripped the goal originally fixed, for the valiant members of that Community in their inter-continental sphere of Bahá’í activity. The exterior ornamentation of the first Mashriqu’l-Adhkár of the West — the culmination of a forty year old enterprise repeatedly blessed and continually nurtured by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has, furthermore, through a remarkable manifestation of the spirit of Bahá’í solidarity and self-sacrifice so powerfully animating the members of that stalwart community, been successfully completed, more than a year in advance of the time set for its termination.

The triple task undertaken with such courage, confidence, zeal and determination — a task which ever since the inception of the Seven Year Plan has challenged and galvanized into action the entire body of the American believers and for the efficient prosecution of which processes of a divinely appointed Administrative Order had, during no less than sixteen years, been steadily evolving — is now finally accomplished and crowned with total victory.

The greatest collective enterprise ever launched by the Western followers of Bahá’u’lláh and indeed ever undertaken by any Bahá’í community in the course of an entire century, has been gloriously consummated. A victory of undying fame has marked the culmination of the fifty year long labors of the American Bahá’í community in the service of Bahá’u’lláh and has shed imperishable lustre on the immortal records of His Faith during the first hundred years of its existence. The exploits that have marked the progress of this prodigious, this three-fold enterprise, covering a field stretching from Alaska in the North to the extremity of Chile in the South, affecting the destinies of so great a variety of peoples and nations, involving such a tremendous expenditure of treasure and effort, calling forth so remarkable a spirit of heroism and self-sacrifice, and undertaken notwithstanding the vicious assaults and incessant machinations of the breakers of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Covenant, and despite the perils, the trials and restrictions of a devastating war of unexampled severity, augur well for the successful prosecution, and indeed assure the ultimate victory, of the remaining stages of the Plan conceived, a quarter of a century ago, by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for the followers of Bahá’u’lláh in the North American continent.

To the band of pioneers, whether settlers or itinerant teachers, who have forsaken their homes, who have scattered far and wide, who have willingly sacrificed their comfort, their health and even their lives for the prosecution of this Plan; to the several committees and their auxiliary agencies that have been entrusted with special and direct responsibility for its efficient and orderly development and who have discharged their high responsibilities with exemplary vigor, courage and fidelity; to the national representatives of the community itself, who have vigilantly and tirelessly supervised, directed and coordinated the unfolding processes of this vast undertaking ever since its inception; to all those who, though not in the forefront of battle, have through their financial assistance and through the instrumentality of their deputies, contributed to the expansion and consolidation of the Plan; to myself, as well as the entire Bahá’í world, owe a debt of gratitude that no one can measure or begin to describe. To the sacrifices they have made, to the courage they have so consistently shown, to the fidelity they have so remarkably displayed, to the resourcefulness, the discipline, the constancy and devotion they have so abundantly demonstrated future generations viewing the magnitude of their labors in their proper perspective, will no doubt pay adequate tribute — a tribute no less ardent and well-deserved than the recognition extended by the present-day builders of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh to the Dawn-Breakers, whose shining deeds have signaled the birth of the Heroic Age of His Faith.

To the elected representatives of all the Bahá’í communities of the New World, assembled beneath the Dome of the Mother Temple of the West, on the occasion of the historic, first All-America Bahá’í Convention...
Message from Shoghi Effendi

I advise you to share the following facts with the believers at Convention celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

Bahá'ís have established residence in seventy-eight countries, fifty-six of which are sovereign states. Bahá'í literature has been translated and published in forty-one languages. Translations have been undertaken in twelve additional languages. Thirty-one races are represented in the Bahá'í world community. Five National Assemblies and sixty-one local Assemblies belonging to ten countries are incorporated and legally empowered to hold property. The Bahá'í international endowments held in the Holy Land are estimated at half a million pounds sterling. National Bahá'í endowments in the United States are estimated at one million, seven hundred thousand dollars.

The area of land in the Jordan Valley dedicated to the Bahá'í Shrines is over five hundred acres. The site purchased for future Bahá'í Temple of Persia comprises three and a half million square meters. The cost of the structure of the first Bahá'í Temple in the West has been one million, three hundred thousand dollars.

In every state and province of North America Bahá'í Assemblies are functioning. In thirteen hundred localities of the United States and Canada Bahá'í assemblies have been established in every republic of Latin America, fifteen of which posses Spiritual Assemblies. The Faith in the Western Hemisphere now stretches from Anchorage, Alaska, to Magellanes, Chile, the world's southernmost city. Sixty-two Centers have been established in India, twenty-seven with Spiritual Assemblies.

Among the historic sites purchased in Persia are the Tíhran home of Bahá'u'lláh, the Báb's shop in Búíshir, the burial place of Quddús, part of the village of Chíhríq, three gardens in Badí, the place where Táhirih was confined.

Bahá'í administrative headquarters have been founded in Tíhran, Delhi, Cairo, Baghdád, Wilmette and Sydney. Bahá'í endowments in the Holy Land and the United States have been exempted from taxes by the civil authorities. Civil recognition has been extended to Bahá'í Assemblies in five states of the United States to solemnize Bahá'í marriages.

I suggest you utilize the above information for publicity purposes wherever advisable.

Message to the Convention

Hail with glad, grateful heart the historic Assembly of the elected representatives of the followers of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh throughout the Western Hemisphere participating in the first All-America Convention gathered in the vicinity of the first Bahá'í Center of the Western World beneath the dome of the first Masjídiq'í-Achqír of the West to commemorate alike the Anniversary of the founding of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and the Birth of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the Anniversary of its establishment in the Occident and to celebrate the completion of the exterior ornamentation of the most hallowed House of Worship in the entire Bahá'í world. I recall with profound emotion on this solemn, auspicious occasion the milestones in the progress of the community whose rise constitutes one of the noblest episodes in the history of the First Bahá'í Century. Called into being through the operation of the Will of the Center of Bahá'u'lláh's Covenant, energized at the hour of its birth by dynamic spirit communicated to it by the band of first returning pilgrims, purged in its infancy by fiery tests involving the defection of its acknowledged founder, nursed through the dispatch of unnumbered Tablets by the vigilant Master, as well as by the successive messengers designed to support its infant strength, launched upon its rapid career through series of institutional acts and missionary journeys signaling the first stirrings of its community life, infinitely enriched by priceless benefits conferred upon its members in the course of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's sojourn in their midst, invested with a unique mission through the revelation of the Tablets of the Divine Plan, firmly knit through processes proclaiming the emergence of the Divinely appointed Administrative Order, immortalized through the signal acts of its illustrious member who succeeded in winning the allegiance of royalty to its cause, consummating its record of achievements through total victory of the Seven Year Plan thereby sealing the triumph of the first stage in the Mission bestowed on 'Abdu'l-Bahá, this repeatedly blessed, much envied community deserves to be acclaimed the Torchbearer of the civilization, the foundations of which the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is destined unassailably to establish in the course of the Second Bahá'í Century. I am moved to pay a well deserved tribute at this great turning point in the career of so privileged a community to the gallant band of its apostolic founders whose deeds heralded the dawn of the Day of the Covenant in the West, to its intrepid pioneers who labored to enlarge the bounds of the Faith in the five continents, to its indefatigable administrators whose hands reared the fabric of the Administrative Order, to its heroic martyrs who followed in the footsteps of the Dawn-Breakers of the heroic age, to its itinerant teachers who with written and spoken word pleaded its cause and repulsed the attacks of its adversaries, to its munificent supporters whose liberality accelerated the expansion of its manifold activities, and last but not least to the mass of its stout-hearted, self-denying members whose strenuous, ceaseless, concerted efforts so decisively contributed to the consolidation and broadening of its foundations. I desire to direct a particular appeal to the Latin American representatives participating in the Centennial Convention to deliberate on measures to reinforce the ties binding them to their Sister Community, unitedly devise means for the inauguration of teaching campaigns in their respective Republics, the dissemination of Bahá’í literature, the multiplication of Bahá’í administrative centers as preliminary steps in the formation of Bahá’í National Assemblies, and lend impetus to the prosecution of any enterprise launched to carry still further the Plan conceived by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for the American Bahá’í Community.

Message from Shoghi Effendi
I am overjoyed by the auspicious opening of the Centennial Convention. The dearly-beloved American Bahá’í community was remembered during the historic night of the glorious Declaration at the Báb’s Holy Shrine. Announce to the friends the joyful tidings that the hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of the Mission of the martyred Herald of the Faith was signalized by historic decision: the multiplication of Bahá’ís administrative centers as preliminary steps in the formation of Bahá’í National Assemblies, lend impetus to the prosecution of any enterprise launched to carry still further the Plan conceived by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá for the American Bahá’í Community. The recently designed model of the dome has been unveiled in the presence of assembled believers. Praying for early removal of obstacles to the consummation of the stupendous Plan conceived by the Founder of the Faith and the hopes cherished by the Center of His Covenant.

The magnificent victories achieved in the teaching field and the sphere of administrative activity by the American Bahá’í community crowned with glory the historic services rendered by the followers of Bahá’u’lláh throughout the West during the last fifty years of the first Bahá’í century. I rejoice in the brilliant celebrations befittingly consumming the record of splendid achievements. Immediate attention should be focussed in the course of the opening year of the Second Century on consolidation of the nobly-won victories through reinforcement of newly formed Assemblies, multiplication of groups and increase in number of Assemblies as well as corresponding effort through Latin America. Praying for continuous flow of Divine outpourings.

Messages From the Guardian
In connection with your Assembly’s two actions regarding the formulation and dissolution of Spiritual Assemblies: The Guardian approves of your first action, which he understands is only for this last year of the first Bahá’í Century, as, of course, in the future Assemblies will be formed only during the month of April. As to the second action, however, any Assembly which is dissolved must immediately report to the national secretary, who must always keep an up to date list of Assemblies. Any dissolved Assembly cannot be reconstituted until the time of election in April. This is the general principle which must be followed in the future. In this last year of the Century, however, naturally any Assembly that is dissolved may be reconstituted as soon as the number of believers reverts to nine again.

Regarding your question as to the changing of pronouns in Bahá’í prayers: The Guardian does not approve of such changes, either in the specific prayers or in any others. They should be read as printed without changing a single word.

Rejoice success vitally needed timely conference Latin American representatives. Greatly welcome decisions reached plans formulated. First year second Bahá’í century should witness establishment Spiritual Assembly every remaining Republic and be signalized by steady increase pioneers both Latin (and) North America; further multiplication groups; wider dissemination Bahá’i literature both Spanish (and) Portuguese; closer relationships consolidating communities; more effective contact these communities with masses population all races (and) classes. Ardently praying mighty victories every field as essential preliminary emergence independent National Spiritual Assemblies and indispensable prelude launching in other continents, soon after termination world conflict, second stage momentous world plan so intimately associated by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá with future destinies illustrious American Bahá’í community.

Retrospect and Prospect

Dear Friends:

Impressive events marking the close of the first Bahá’í Century have attested the greatness of the Divine Cause. Ideal friendships are created. News of the Faith has been disseminated widely. Many inquirers have been attracted by the genial, friendly spirit of gatherings. The bond of unity among members of the world-wide community of Bahá’ís has been strengthened. The two-fold task of the Seven Year Plan has been achieved. Confidence has been deepened through evident signs of selfless devotion. The praise of our noble Guardian has been generously given and the manifest Favor of God has been directed toward His servants.

The achievements which have crowned with glory the end of the first Bahá’í Century had their foundations laid by the Dawn-Breakers, whose heroism illumined the early days with deathless fame. The station of becoming their spiritual heirs has been conferred upon the American Bahá’í community. Ours is now among the rarest of opportunities. If we evaluate this high privilege, with fidelity to its demands of service, the second century’s end may be fraught with such victories as are beyond fancy. While those now living may not behold them with mortal eyes, yet their fame may penetrate the worlds on high.

Auspicious is the opening of the new century. During the period covered by the last session of the National body, July 8th to 12th, six of the Latin-American delegates whose arrival at the Centenary had been hindered, responded to a new invitation. These were Sr. Salvador Tormo of Argentina, Sra. Angela Ochoa Velasquez of Honduras, Sr. Roge Centurion Miranda of Paraguay, Sra. Isabel Tirado de Barreda of Peru, Dr. Manuel Bergès of San Domingo and Sra. Clara Luz Montalvo of San Salvador. Latin American pioneers present were Miss Gwenn Sholtis, Miss Margaret Lentz, Miss Elisabeth Cheney and Mrs. Gayle Woolson, and also Mr. Raymond I. Betts of Lima, Peru. Mrs. Woolson acted as interpreter and translator for these friends.

Scenes and observances of the Centenary were re-enacted for the instruction and entertainment of these friends and there were several conferences among themselves and with the National body, with a view to ways and means of deepening and spreading the Faith throughout those regions. The spirit of the Centenary gladdened each and all and the zeal of efficient service took hold.

But now for the present tasks to be undertaken in the same spirit of loving and loyal devotion. One point of concentration should be the stability of the National Fund which must meet increasing demands with the expansion of the Faith. It has been depleted by the unusual cost of recent great activities. The duty of every Assembly, community, group and isolated Bahá’í to aid is apparent. We can now express our gratitude to God by contributions as well as by prayer, labor, service and other forms of sacrifice. May the flame of unity inspire all in such lines of service as guidance and consultation may direct. Priority is given National activities in the domain of service by the wisdom of the Guardian.

The agenda of the Guardian concentrates our capacities primarily at this time upon teaching; building up the work in the pioneer areas, laying an unshakable foundation upon which an enduring structure can be built; preparing the way for Bahá’í Temples in every land.

Some years ago, as a community we discovered, by the aid of the Guardian, the capacity for recent victories. While we have divine assurance that no one is burdened beyond capacity, yet the powers may continue forever latent until quickened by the divine spirit. The body of the Teachings, clarified and applied by the directions from the Guardian form an agenda for both our collective and individual lives and services. Indications are that souls of great capacity will ere long join our ranks and swell the chorus of those who proclaim the Faith. Shall we not strive to the utmost to awaken them? The more we strive, the more strength is given. The more we sacrifice the more we grow. The more we teach, the more we know of divine mysteries and the illumination of souls. This is truly the time for intensified activities, viewing the world’s imminent chaos on the one hand and growing capacity on the other. All the universe is in motion. Intensified activity is the call. If our wish is to stir others we must keep in motion.

National Spiritual Assembly

Annual Election

The annual election created the National Spiritual Assembly with the following membership: George O. Latimer (Chairman), Allen B. McClellan (Vice Chairman), Horace Holley (Secretary), Louis G. Gregory (Recording Secretary), Roy C. Wilhelm (Treasurer), Dorothy Baker, Amelia E. Collins, Philip G. Sprague, Leroy Ios. The Assembly has appointed Siegfried Schopflocher the Treasurer of the Canadian Bahá’í Fund.

Inter-America Committee

Relative to use of name, Inter-America Committee, by Assembly local Committees the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to inform the believers through Bahá’í News that the National Spiritual Assembly can recognize only one Inter-America Bahá’í Committee because of the international implications of the title, and therefore local assemblies making contacts and teaching the various racial elements in their local communities, will have to use a different designation for such committees.
Race Unity Committee

Highlights from the report of Mrs. Mary Stevison of Chicago bring us close to the western Indian friends. In May, immediately before the convention, Mrs. Stevison journeyed to Nebraska and gave the Message of Bahá'u'lláh to the Omaha and Winnebago tribes, visiting Sioux City, Nebraska and Macy.

Much of the work was among individuals. Many of the friends called upon Mrs. Stevison and received her in their homes. One family became so enthusiastic that on one of their calls, they remained until long after midnight, talking of the future world and of the future of their great race, in the light of the coming of Bahá'u'lláh. Eight Indian families showed special interest, and some of these friends not only entertained their Bahá'í guest at dinner, but invited other Indian friends to meet her from time to time. Thus a nucleus of interested Indian friends has been formed.

Mrs. Stevison reports that pictures of the Temple were especially appreciated, and in the case of three of the families, large framed pictures were hung in the homes. “Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era” and “Race and Man” were also given to these families.

Contacts were made in a variety of ways. For example, many Indians came to the Community Building to obtain garden seeds for their spring planting. These friends met Mrs. Stevison and received pamphlets from her, as well as post card pictures of the Temple and a few friendly words of explanation. This did much to open the doors.

Books and many pamphlets were distributed in community centers, missions, public schools and hospitals. In one school, post card pictures of the Temple and pamphlets on the principles of the Faith were distributed among the students. In another, talks were given before a number of classes and not only pamphlets were distributed, but adequate text books were placed in the library for general reading.

The friends who would be interested in following up Mrs. Stevison’s splendid Nebraska effort are requested to write to the Race Unity Committee for further information. Mrs. Stevison can supply a list of names of the Indian friends who responded to the Faith.

Bahá’í Schools

Programs from August 1, 1944

GEYSERVILLE
July 23—August 6, 1944

This summer the Geyserville School will enter its eighteenth year as a center for the training of Bahá’í teachers and workers throughout the West. Ours is a period of immeasurable opportunity for the Faith. It is our plan and hope that this session at Geyserville will contribute a full share in preparing the friends for the responsibilities to come.

The theme of this session will be “Inaugurating the Second Bahá’í Century”—in the spirit of the Guardian’s words: “The opening of the second century of the Bahá’í era must needs disclose greater vistas, usher in the initial stages in the establishment of its administrative institutions.”

MORNING CLASSES

I. “God Passes By”

Two weeks devoted to outline and study of the Guardian’s forthcoming book on the first century of the Bahá’í Faith, reviewing “the salient features of its birth and rise, as well as the initial stages in the establishment of its administrative institutions.”

II. “The Reality of Man” — First Week

A basic course on Bahá’u’lláh’s spiritual Teachings concerning the human spirit, man’s relation to God, his potentialities and conditions of progress.

III. “The Evolving World Order” — Second Week

A study of the Bahá’í Administrative Order in terms of process, as the dynamic source, nucleus, and pattern of that World Order “destined to embrace in the fullness of time the whole of mankind.”

AFTERNOON ROUND TABLE

IV. “Teachings—the Creative Bahá’í Life”

First Week — “Expanding the Faith”

Second Week — “Consolidating the Faith”

Informal discussion under the Big Tree of teaching as a way of life, and of its application to the vast opportunities unfolding through “the promulgation of the Divine Plan.”

FOUR EVENINGS

V. “The World Moves On to Its Destiny”

First Week — “The New Social Horizon”

Second Week—“The Growth of World Society”

A bird’s-eye view of Bahá’í humanitarian and social principles operating in the world today, through “the irresistible diffusion” of the Faith’s “world-shaking, world-energizing, world-redeeming spirit.”

Reservations and rates may be obtained through:

Gladys Linton, 136 Nova Drive, Piedmont, California

LOUHELEN

“Until the people of the world see a shining example set by us they will not embrace the Cause in masses, because they require to see the teaching demonstrated in a pattern of action.”

Subjects for all sessions will be based on facets of a Bahá’í Pattern of Action inspired by the Centenary. “The Guardian suggests that the school committee discuss, after attending the convention, what subjects would be of greatest help in facing the new projects, plans and needs of the Faith brought to light during the Convention.”

GENERAL SESSION

(August 4 to 13, inclusive)

SENIOR YOUTH SESSION

(August 16 to 23, inclusive)

RATES (including meals)

ADULTS—Dormitory rates $1.75 per day per person; double rooms $2.25 per day per person; single rooms $2.75 per day per person.

YOUTH—Rates for youth at youth sessions only, all dormitory, per youth, per day $1.65.

Please make your school and travel reservations early.

Bahá’í Publications
The Publishing Committee regrets exceedingly the delay in bringing out the Guardian’s historic book, God Passes By, planned for the Centenary, also The Bahá’í Centenary, 1844-1944 which should have been ready for the May anniversary. The printers have been doing so much Government wartime printing that all other work suffers. We can only hope to have copies of both books in the early fall.

Bahá’í World Faith, Centennial edition bound in red leather stamped with dates in gold. This is an attractive remembrance of the Centenary, and we feel that every Assembly will be happy to have a copy in their library. Copies still available, price $2.00.

New Pamphlets
Bahá’í Teachings for a World Faith, a revised edition of Principles of the Bahá’í Faith, sold in lots of 100. $2.00.
The Spiritual Meaning of Adversity by Mani, known under title of Tests, Their Spiritual Value, sold in lots of 100. $2.00.
Oneness of Mankind by Hussein Rabbani, reprinted, sold in lots of 100. $2.00.
The Lesser and the Most Great Peace by George Orr Latimer, sold in lots of 100. $2.00.
Prophecy Fulfilled, by Elisabeth H. Cheney, sold in lots of 100. $2.00.

World Order Magazine
Copies of May and June issues at special price of ten copies for one dollar are still available. These issues contain many of the talks given at the Centenary meetings and are of paramount interest especially to send to interested friends.

Excerpts from an Inter-America Report Received Prior to the Convention
Latin-America and the Caribbean Islands are indeed astir with new teaching enterprises, and with preparations for the celebration of the first Bahá’í Centennial. Assemblies, or Groups, in each country are arranging local festivities in tribute to this historic occasion. Word of the representative elected to attend the Convention has been received from nearly all countries. Mail wings its way southward providing detailed instructions from the National Spiritual Assembly, the Centenary and Inter-America Committees, for the privileged journey to the Temple in the heart of the North American Continent.

SOUTH AMERICA
Dorothy Baker’s return from a two months’ visit in Colombia and Venezuela brings us her radiant account of the blessings Bahá’u’lláh has bestowed upon these countries.
Under the guidance of Mr. Gerrard Sluter, and with the assistance of Winifred Louise Baker, new souls were confirmed and the establishment of the Spiritual Assembly of Bogota, Colombia, was recorded. Shortly after this memorable occasion Mrs. Baker bade farewell to the two valiant pioneers and the beloved members of Colombia’s first Assembly. En route to Venezuela she made a brief stop in Barranquilla to see the first believer of Colombia, young Sr. Carlos Nieto. Wistfully he expressed his longing for the day when other believers would join him in service to the Faith in Barranquilla. Through the help of Sr. Nieto several Bahá’í books were accepted by the Library for display and circulation.

VENUEZUELA
“Venezuela, land of budding agriculture and modern education!” Eight enrollment cards, and precious new friendships, are the treasures brought back from Venezuela by Dorothy Baker. Her loving words share with us the awakening of this country in the dawn of its spiritual destiny.
“The extreme cordiality of the people forbids the ‘foreign’ feeling in Caracas. What a happy task it was to find, one by one, the friends of Gwennie Sholtis, former pioneer, and remind them of the great Cause, which had been the object of her love and devotion while among them. They had not forgotten, and some of them were glad to come to the little meetings at the Gran American. Delightful contacts of Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala were later added, and new friends found their way to the little gatherings. Through the courtesy of Sra. Trina Curlaender, editor of the magazine ‘Pro-America,’ and president of the National Club for the Union of American Women, a world of friendships opened up. The meetings grew to about forty in attendance.
"At the close of a period of five weeks, eight historic souls accepted the joy and responsibility of the World Order under the Guardian, and in addition, one youth, and one adult who lacked permanent residency. Sra. Courlaender herself, became one of the group that organized on that memorable night. All were present when Dr. David Escalante was elected the first Secretary, and all assisted in laying the first plans for feasts and regular classes."

The Costa Rican Bahá’ís rejoice that Dr. Escalante is giving his able assistance to the establishment of the Faith in Venezuela, for it was in San José that Dr. Escalante first heard and accepted the call of Bahá’u’lláh.

PERU

The spiritual flowering of Peru is precious testimony to the many months of Eve Nicklin’s devoted services in Lima. With patient care she has built strong foundations of friendship and deep respect for herself, and the Faith she loves and teaches. Her painstaking preparations for a Bahá’í Center in Lima have taken form in a bright and charming apartment, centrally located, and admirably suited in size and arrangement for the Bahá’í gatherings she had prayed and worked for.

A new acceleration of interest in the Faith has become increasingly apparent in recent months. Flora Hottes’ visit provided the opportunity for many pleasant meetings in Eve’s apartment. Acquaintances new and old came to hear with fresh eagerness of the Message of peace and progress enshrined in the Revelation. Flora also found a most receptive heart in kindly Sra. de Barreda, owner of the pension in which Eve had engaged a room for her.

Arriving a few days after Flora’s return to La Paz, Virginia joyfully went to stay at this same pension. Soon buoyant letters from Eve and Virginia brought us the glorious news that Sra. de Barreda had accepted the Faith. Virginia gaily comments—"At the Feast in Eve’s home the first believer to sign in Peru enrolled as a member of Bahá’u’lláh’s Cause!"

Other activities on a breath-taking scale were also being developed by these two glorious pioneers. Writes Eve, "These are busy times! I have taken a job teaching in the first Summer School ever held here in Peru, for Peruvian teachers of English — one hundred teachers from all over Peru. Virginia could fit in perfectly as a guest speaker, having done Library work at the Paramount Studios. She brought a "New Day" aspect to the subject and made it easy for me to ask these people into my home. We have had startling results, and now interested friends have asked us into their homes, too, to tell the Message to their families and friends. Everything seems to be awakening all at once here in Peru."

Virginia adds zestful words of the response of these Peruvian teachers —"They are mostly young, intelligent, alert. Eve invited them all to tea, when we could discuss further these ideas of world unity, and world culture. They all wanted to come, so we are booked solid for the next week or so!" Exciting glories are anticipated for Peru before the close of the Century and humble prayers blend with delighted hopes that several of these new friends may soon become confirmed believers.

THE HISTORIC
THIRTY-SIXTH CONVENTION

The thirty-sixth Annual Convention, covering the week of May 19 to 25, 1944, was indeed unique in both the number and greatness of the significances of the Faith included within its span. All Bahá’í Conventions have inestimable value. They provide ways and means for wide consultation and more closely relate to each other the various activities and institutions of the Cause. They engage eager interest with news of progress. They pool spiritual values and increase harmony. They enable friends scattered over wide areas to know each other. They concentrate minds, hearts, means and labors over ever widening fields of service marked out by the Guardian. They delight the eye, brighten the mind and gladden the heart by the inspiring beauty of the Temple of God and the shining forth of the reality of great souls. They inculcate veneration for the Light and veneration for the Faith and furnish means and ways and means for the believers at Convention to share the following facts with each other:

The friends upon arrival found the spirit of welcome in the very atmosphere. Trains were met. Bulletins of information were distributed, wholesome advice was given for the Bahá’ís so to conduct themselves as to be a means of attraction to strangers, especially those who had opened their homes for entertainment. The respect which people in near-by cities have for the Bahá’ís is a pleasing sign of attraction and growth. Nothing appeared to be unthought of among the local members of the Centenary Committee in their arduous and devoted efforts to make everyone comfortable and happy.

The Convention opened with readings and prayers, an inspiring feature of the sessions throughout. One prayer service was conducted by children.

George O. Latimer, as Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, voiced genial and loving welcome and felicitations upon the triumph of the Seven Year Plan. He reviewed the successive steps, praising the foundation laid by the Master's Charter of the Divine Plan and the wonderful initiative and guidance of the Guardian.

Edna M. True, Chairman of the Centenary Committee, announced the general program and expressed the conviction, to which eager hearts responded, “We are the most fortunate people in the world!” She also told of the Bahá’í Centenary Registration Book. This was a very large, artistically designed and beautiful volume, specially prepared for this occasion and a gift from Charles Mason Remey, one of the apostles of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Over sixteen hundred friends registered during the week.

“By the righteousness of Mine own Self! Great, immeasurably great is this Cause! Mighty, inconceivably mighty is this Day! Blessed indeed is the man that hath forsaken all things and fastened his eyes upon Him whose Face hath shed illumination upon all who are in the heavens and all who are on the earth.”

(Gleanings P. 245.)

After roll call, the temporary officers of the Convention, George O. Latimer, Chairman, and Horace Holley, Secretary, were made permanent.

Messages from Haifa

The following Convention messages from the Guardian were read, with printed copies circulated among the delegates and friends: “I advise you to share the following facts with the believers at Convention celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the Faith of Bahá’ulláh.

“Bahá’ís have established residence in seventy-eight countries, fifty-six of which are sovereign states. Bahá’í literature has been translated and published in forty-one languages. Translations have been undertaken in twelve additional languages. Thirty-one races are represented in the Bahá’í world community. Five National Assemblies belonging to ten countries are incorporated and legally empowered to hold property. The Bahá’í international endowments held in the Holy Land are estimated at a half million pounds sterling. National Baha'i endowments in the United States are estimated at one million, seven hundred thousand dollars.

"The area of land in the Jordan Valley dedicated to the Baha'i Shrines is over five hundred acres. The site purchased for future Baha'i Temple of Persia comprises three and a half million square meters. The cost of the structure of the first Baha'i Temple in the West has been one million, three hundred thousand dollars.

"In every state and province of North America Baha'i Assemblies are functioning. In thirteen hundred localities of the United States and Canada Baha'i's reside. Baha'i Centers have been established in every republic of Latin America, fifteen of which possess Spiritual Assemblies. The Faith in the Western Hemisphere now stretches from Anchorage, Alaska, to Magellanes, the world's southernmost city. Sixty-two Centers have been established in India, twenty-seven with Spiritual Assemblies.

"Among the historic sites pur- in Persia are the Tihran home of Baha'u'llah, the Bab's shop in Bushir, the burial place of Quddus, part of the village of Chihriq, three gardens in Badaqht, and the place where Tahirih was confined.

"Baha'i administrative headquarters have been founded in Tihran, Delhi, Cairo, Baghdad, Wilmette and Sydney. Baha'i endowments in the Holy Land and the United States have been exempted from taxes by the civil authorities. Civil recognition has been extended to Baha'i Assemblies in five states of the United States to solemnize Baha'i marriages.

"I suggest you utilize the above information for publicity purposes wherever advisable."

(Signed) SHOGHII RABBAI Received May 15, 1944.

On the last day of the Convention came this message from the Guardian, received by the National Secretary:

"I am overjoyed by the auspicious opening of the Centennial Convention. The dearly-beloved American Baha'i community was remembered during the historic night of the glorious Declaration at the Bab's Holy Shrine. Announce to the friends the joyful tidings that the hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of the Mission of the martyred Herald of the Faith was signalized by historic decision to complete the structure of His sepulcher erected by 'Abdu'l-Bahá on the site chosen by Baha'u'llah. The recently designed model of the dome has been unveiled in the presence of assembled believers.

Praying for early removal of obstacles to the consummation of the stupendous Plan conceived by the Founder of the Faith and the hopes cherished by the Center of His Covenant."

(Signed) SHOGHII RABBAI Received May 25, 1944.

Convention Message to the Guardian

"Baha'ís of all the Americas represented by largest number of delegates in person from United States, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto
Session of Thirty-sixth Annual Bahá'í Convention, May 19 to 25, 1944

Rico, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Guatemala, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, gathered in this glorious centennial convention, humbly send heartfelt appreciation for your epoch-making message. "Express loving gratitude for continuous guidance making us humble instruments in completing Seven Year Plan culminating in this unique assemblage whose celebration is being broadcast throughout North America and whose historic and momentous events will be disseminated throughout this hemisphere. "Beg for further confirmation to become worthy Torchbearers of new civilization, the foundations of which are destined to be established in the Second Bahá'í Century. "Plans already being formulated by Latin American delegates for further cementing bonds between two Americas, for strengthening the structural basis of the administrative order, and for extending Bahá'í teaching activities by all available means in their respective countries."

Sent May 20, 1944.

The report of the National Secretary told, among various items, the remarkable story of the Hair of the Báb in its journey to America as related by W. Sutherland Maxwell in a letter. This sacred relic was shipped upon an airplane which enroute went down in flames. Later the envelope, partially burned, but with the hair within intact, was returned to Haifa, where the postal authorities identified its owner by the serial registration number, returning it to the sender, with both the locket and envelope. It was joyfully received. Later it was again posted to America, arriving safe, and is now in the Temple Archives.

A review of the Guardian's latest book, "God Passes By," was also given, and the story of its arrival in triplicate copies and installments over a considerable period. As soon as enough copies arrived to make a connected whole it was turned over to the printer. The laborious task of typing the manuscript was done by the Guardian himself, despite the tremendous pressure of other calls upon his time. By the wish of the Guardian, the introduction is written by Dr. George Townshend and signed by him in his capacity and identity as a member of the Church of England. The book is divided into four periods covering in turn the ministries of the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'll-Bahá and the Guardianship. It is both a retrospect and prospect with fundamental consideration of present and future values. The author has reviewed every movement from the Declaration of the Báb to the present, recreating and restating it. The spirit of the Guardian brings the incidents vividly to us and every movement is significant. There is shown the recurrence of acceptance and denial, the people of truth and those of error. The episodes bring to mind what the Holy Ones of the past experienced. Also it clarifies the vision and makes resolute the heart for the task that is now before us. Passages were quoted. If we wonder why we have not been given the Báb's writings, perhaps it is because the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh includes the Báb's and all other previous revelations.

The Properties Representative set forth, briefly, in connection with Temple ornamentation, the long, devoted gift of service which Allen B. McDaniel, Supervising Engineer, made to the Temple over a long period of years; so fruitful and so well remembered, the renovation of Foundation Hall; the acquisition of two lots which separated the Wilhelmin property from the Grove of 'Abdu'll-Bahá at West Englewood, due to the efforts of William de Forge; and the large expansion of the Bahá'í properties which had their beginning with two lots, costing $2,000.00, bought by Bahá'í Temple Unity in 1909, were mentioned as matters indicating unmistakable growth.
North America Teaching

Leroy Ioas and Charlotte M. Linfoot, Chairman and Secretary of the National Teaching Committee, that virile arm of service, set forth in picturesque and eloquent form the far-flung activities of the Seven Year Plan, resulting in victory. How the Guardian inspires us to live in the flow of Baha'i history; how heavenly armies subdue the denisons of earth with the brightness of divine love; how barren wastes were first visited by itinerant teachers, attracting souls who afterwards became contacts for pioneer settlers; how effective are labors that follow God's own plan, bounteously of the collective capacity of the friends and how effective in action; and no matter how great the success now apparent, there must be no suspension of effort to consolidate the work and to build new centers. The entire plan was made vivid by charts, by mention of the names of itinerant workers, some still working, others promoted to the realms above, and by the presentation of these workers and settlers — as many as were present — to the Convention, which showed signs of great admiration for the extraordinary sacrifices mentioned. Leaving home, friends, business, comforts and congenial surroundings to augment the hosts of God in other cities, set in motion influences that are powerful. The inspiration of the Dawn-Breakers and present concentration upon thirteen hundred new cities is now the absorbing task.

Cynthia Powell told an interesting story of how Wilmington, Delaware, which at the eleventh hour lost its Assembly status, retrieved it by inviting inquirers, long with them, to join, which they readily did. Teachers more and more are promised.

There lay concealed within the Holy Veil and prepared for the service of God's chosen ones, who shall be manifested unto men; who shall aid His Cause; who shall be afraid of no one, though the entire human race rise up and war against them. These are the ones who, before the gaze of the dwellers on earth and the denizens of heaven, shall arise and, shouting aloud, acclaim the name of the Almighty, and summon the children of men to the path of God, the All-Glorious, the All-Praised. Walk thou in their way, and let no one dismay thee. Be of them whom the tumult of the world, however much it may agitate them in the path of their Creator, can never sadden, whose purpose the blame of the blamer will never defeat. Gleanings, P. 280.

Inter-America and the Far South

The Inter-America Committee reported to the Convention through its Chairman, Sr. Octavio Illescas, and its Secretary, Mrs. Stewart W. French, the former joyously greeting and the latter relating and beaming, a spiritual victory long sought, full of trials, but now gloriously won. With the aid of a large map, there was a thrilling recital of an epic which moved to laughter and tears, with all hailing the Divine Fire a blaze over the Western Hemisphere and affecting the remotest parts. Special acknowledgments were made to Edna M. True for her invaluable aid and advice regarding transportation and the settlement of pioneers. A detailed account of these itineraries and settlements appears in the Annual Report. The presentation of this Committee was at once followed by:

The Latin-American Session

As a graceful courtesy extended the Latin-American honorary delegates, of whom there were thirteen present, they were invited to elect one of their number to preside as Co-Chairman of the Convention. This selection was Dr. Edelberto Torres of Guatemala. Whereupon they held a Latin-American session before the Convention, conducted in Spanish but translated into English. This proved to be one of the most interesting and engaging features of the week. In reply to an expression of thanks for their presence, Dr. Torres replied: "We thank you for your expression of thanks. But we would remind you that our appearance here is due to your munificence. Therefore we can prove our gratitude only by expressing our conviction that the coming of the Cause of Hispaniola-America is comparable to no event in history or in time; but only is it to be compared to that cosmic event which occurs when the returning sun touches a new sign of the zodiac." (Expressions of great approval)

Brazil sent greetings through its delegate, Dr. Fernando Nova, who paid feeling tribute to itinerant and pioneer teachers from the United States who had come to them over the years.

Alfred Osborne of Panama was eloquent in a similar vein, eulogizing the many teachers and asking prayers and encouragement for the strategically located zone and country in which conflicting stocks meet. He especially expressed the hope for a Baha'i school.

Blanca Victoria Mejia, delegate from Nicaragua, reported thirty-two Bahai's sending their greetings. She was fulsome in praise of the itinerant teachers, etc.

Josephone Rodriguez brought loving greetings from Colombia and reported twenty-five Bahai's and twenty-three students.

Juanita Velasquez, delegate from El Salvador, reported on gatherings of which there were many, and the present and future prospects of her country. She also reported on the work of her brother, a doctor of medicine, in the Panama Canal Zone.

A considerable time was given by the Convention to the work of the Baha'i Teaching Committee of Latin America. carlos Vergara, Mexico City, was joyful over a presence and atmosphere where religion is the cause of unity, science and religion agree, prejudices are removed and the speech of love is uttered. Heroic deeds of the past, among his countrymen, will be excelled in this Day when the Light of Reality is penetrating all hearts.

Raul Contreras of Costa Rica, reported the growth of the Cause during four years, since two pioneer settlers came to them. There are now two Spiritual Assemblies. He brought a message from grateful hearts and was grateful to be its bearer. A prayer in Portuguese closed this session, impressive by the fine bearing of its delegates, their sincerity, grasp of spiritual values, joyousness and zeal in spreading the Message. The Cause is winning people of capacity.

A considerable time was given to them in consultation over Latin-American problems which vary in the different countries. There was also a prayer for the late May Maxwell who was reported as the Mother of teaching service among the Latins, from her work in Paris and Canada, crowned by her martyrdom in South America.
A committee consisting of Mrs. Ella G. Cooper, Rowland Estall, Hon- or Kempton, Rafi Mottahedeh, Alfred Osborne and Ali Kuli Khan, appointed to send on behalf of the Convention, a message to the Guardian, reported the following, which was sent:

"Fifteen hundred Bahá'ís, thronging auditorium of consecrated House of Worship, exalted to heaven of reverence at privilege of beholding the likeness of His Holiness the Báb and approaching the relic of His Sacred Person, gratefully testify we owe to you our sublime opportunity of participating in glorious consummation First Bahá'í Century, achieved by unity created through Guardianship, the Master's final blessing to the Bahá'í world."

The Election

Election of the National Spiritual Assembly, set by the agenda for the middle of the convention, proceeded, following the instructions of readings and prayers from Bahá'í Administration. Those reported by the tellers, who did their work quite expeditiously, were later reported organized as follows:

George O. Latimer, Chairman
Allen B. McDaniel, Vice Chairman
Horace Holley, Secretary
Louis G. Gregory, Recording Secretary
Roy C. Wilhelm, Treasurer
Dorothy Baker
Amelia E. Collins
Philip G. Sprague
Leroy Iloa

The delegates from Chili and Ecuador, delayed in arrival, were introduced.

The chairman stated that one of the oldest churches in the United States, First Church of Salem, Massachusetts, 1629, recently included in its schedule a sermon by its pastor which bore the title: "A Venture in True Catholicity," with the explanation "This sermon will be a tribute to our friends, the members of the Bahá'í Faith, which celebrates its Centenary May 23." Salem is to be felicitated upon showing such wonderful advancement during the centuries.

The Meeting of Two Signs

Variable weather followed the week. At one time rain, poetically called "the angel of the sea" and a sign of bounty, descended in abundance. On another occasion a beautiful rainbow followed its wake. The legend of the rainbow is that one who reaches its end will discover boundless treasure. But as one advances the rainbow recedes, making this attainment impossible. But to one moving lakeward along Linden Avenue, at the rainbow's end appeared the Temple of God! Following the unvarying law of nature, the rainbow receded as one advanced, but in this case it left its precious treasure behind!

Yes, there stood the Temple of God, surpassing in wonder, sublimity and beauty all other structures; a solace to the eyes and illumination to hearts; a sanctuary for meditation and prayer; a sign of the sacrifices of devotees in many lands; an object lesson to seekers after truth, impressing its lesson by day, floodlighted by night as illustrative of its continuity of service, filled to overflowing with the temples of souls who reflect the varied beauty of the new creation; a channel for the flow of mysterious powers which transform the earth with the new creation, and like the welcoming Hand of Providence to all who seek release from the deepening shadows of earth. All hail its dedication.

Was the meeting of these two heavenly signs, the rainbow symbolizing promise and hope and the Temple expressing assurance and fulfillment, but an accident? May we not reflect that both these wondrous phenomena are divine creations? Perhaps their meeting was but another of the wondrous signs of Divine Favor.

The weather was favorable to the battery of cameras and Kodaks which took many pictures of the assembled friends and those seen all turned out well, faces showing happiness, contentment and peace.

Assembly Development

This important phase of Bahá'í administration brought an interesting discussion to which members of the Committee and a number of delegates made contributions. This work has a growing interest and value with the rapid expansion of the Faith. The Chairman of this Committee, Dorothy Baker, brought out that Assemblies must consider their relationships to each other, to the National, to the Guardian, to its own community and to the various committees appointed by the National Assembly and by themselves. As miniature Houses of Justice, they should uphold the right of the individual member of the Assembly and community to free expression. The local Assembly gives impetus and intelligent direction. Each member should realize his responsibility to the whole. Be warned against reflecting local and sectional jealousies and try to think in terms of world values and economies. Other contributions were the impressive reading from Page 133 of “Bahá’í Administration”; the duty of sustained effort in teaching; striving for a unity, not of inaction or indifference, but one of principle and activity. Differences of detail may not be harmful. As Bahá’ís are chosen instruments of God they cannot risk themselves of each other. To do so will only be postponing a test which later must be met. As far as possible, put everybody to work. Attract new people with advanced ideas. Keep out of ruts.

Youth

Robert L. Gulick, Jr., reported the Youth Banquet to the Convention. Those attending were from thirty-eight states, five provinces, Persia and a number of Latin American countries. A Nipponese youth was also among them. Eloquent pleas were made for their encouragement. Out of a bevy of Persian youth recently come to this country for education, five attended the Convention. They were introduced by Ali Kuli Khan as scions of some of the noblest families, some of their ancestors having been martyrs in the Faith. They were most cordially received and Hushang Javid, their spokesman said: “Alláh-u-Abhá! It gives us great happiness to be here among our sisters and brothers of all this hemisphere. When we left Tehran we were asked to be bearers of loving greeting from the Bahá’ís of our home city, and felicitations on the completion of the Seven Year Plan and the historic Temple. You have worked long and hard for this and we hope from now on to join hands with the Bahá’ís the world over in completion of the next step in the progress of the Cause of God.”

Radio

Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh spoke for the Radio Committee, perhaps referred to in prophecies as “the angel pouring his spirit upon the air.” This work is proving a very effective way both of advertising the Cause and attracting attendance at meetings in various cities. Advice against the controversy was given and a wise and dignified approach recommended. Also the advice of the Guardian to use the word “Bahá’í” as often as possible so that the public will get used to it and know that the Faith exists.

Do not follow the hours and times used by the churches, a custom now growing very unpopular. Many stations have cut them off entirely. Impress with something new and different. It is encouraging to know that two radio stations have recently asked for Bahá’í scripts. New York stations are becoming increasingly cooperative. It is estimated that millions of people have listened to the Centenary broadcasts. About seventy-five broadcasts have been reported to-date in forty-four states. All scripts should be sent for approval to the National Radio Committee. Illustrative charts showed the vast ramifications of this service, the most universal way of presenting the Teachings. There were two broadcasts during the Convention week, one of which, on the oneness of humanity, was from the Temple and the other from the Hotel Stevens at the final banquet, when several very interesting speakers joined in.

Contacts

Marguerite True reported for this committee, which contacts people who are good prospects, by letter and pamphlet literature. Names are suggested to the Committee by its members, the National Spiritual Assembly, College Speakers’ Bureau, the National Teaching Committee, local Assemblies and individuals. A variety of prominent people are thus accosted. People in the armed forces, both men and women, are thus included. Many show a growing interest and express thanks for literature. Dr. Lenore Morris told an interesting story about a contact with the daughter of the late President Wilson who was much interested in a Tablet pertaining to her father.

China

Hilda Yen, aviatrix and lecturer, a distinguished Chinese lady, sought opportunity to join the Faith during the Convention, and in view of her constant travels was given the status of isolated believer. She was by vote invited to address the Convention. She said in part: “Fellow Bahá’ís, this is more than a pleasure. It is a miracle that I am participating with you in discussing such important matters. I contacted two denominations and a parliament of religions before I met Julia Goldman, Bahá’í, who sowed this seed in my heart. While convalescent from a flying crash, my life was given me for service to God. Julia took me under her wing. I saw God vaguely; then more clearly, through the Bahá’í Faith. Then came the battle of Hongkong where all shared in a common danger and hunger—forced to live the oneness of mankind. At length I secured a priority to fly to America and how do I rejoice to be in this free country! Convention with American Bahá’ís! I have found this country the best to execute the message of peace. I have been blessed in meeting other Bahá’ís. I have been deeply impressed by the love and affection among Bahá’ís. China is well prepared by its sages for the Bahá’í Faith. My country has had seven years of suffering. At times we have been so starved as to be forced to eat human flesh. We are more than ready for the most great peace. We struggle to end all tyranny and oppression.” She concluded by reading some wonderful words of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá about the Chinese people, their spiritual capacity, their freedom from hypocrisy; also expressed the hope that great souls would rise to convey to them the Great Message. “God speed your work; fellow American Bahá’ís.”

The Convention listened with deepest interest to our Chinese sister whom perhaps God has raised up to enlighten and save a great harvest of souls.

Out of two hundred peace plans read, she found the Bahá’í Plan the best. She is eager to teach and obtained counsel as to a wise procedure. She also exchanged messages with the Guardian during the Convention period.

Schools

The printed program of Green Acre, outlining an eight weeks’ session beginning July 10, and extending to September 3, was circulated, with invitations to all who can attend.
Louhelen announced its tentative program with its special appeal to youth. Geyserville plans to put special emphasis upon the study of the Guardian’s latest book, “God Passes By.”

The International School will serve those who wish to enroll for foreign teaching service. It has a well prepared program of teaching and entertainment for ten days in June.

Education will be a part of the Canadian Conference, with Dr. Edris Rice-Wray and Harry Ford as teachers. It is to he held at Rice Lake, Ontario.

The Child Education Committee announced a new book now available on this very important subject.

The Braille Committee gave an interesting account of progress in teaching those physically sightless.

Several young Bahá’ís appeared in uniform, and one of them, T. Lane Skelton of Louisiana, made an earnest plea for teachings to the armed forces.

Publicity

Clarence Niss, for this Committee, mentioned reams for the press; news in rotogravure sections from glossy prints; also many clippings sent the Guardian. Articles have also appeared in the National Geographic Magazine. No statistics are yet available as to the actual number of Bahá’ís in the world. More local work to supplement the National publicity was urged. The “Pattern for Future Society” and similar publications are suggested as most appealing for publicity releases.

Race Unity

The past year has recorded the most progress in race unity since this movement began. It has been growing very perceptibly in the outer world since the great war began, which the Guardian states “is at once a visitation from God and a cleansing process for all mankind. Its fires punish the perversity of the human race, and weld its component parts into one organic, indissoluble, world-embracing community.” This affects all human relations as the outward world unconsciously obeys the mandate of God. It is amazing to note what great changes have come in a brief time.

In the Cause itself, where there is conscious knowledge through the attraction of hearts, this has been the banner year. Fifty-seven centers sent reports of race unity meetings in response to the appeal of the National Spiritual Assembly. Work was reported in the colleges among the American Indians, in the minority press, and in contacts with the Eskimos both in Alaska and Seattle. In the latter, a young Eskimo has recently received a letter from Shoghi Effendi.

Miss Janet Whitenack gave an interesting report of contact with the Eskimos in Alaska. The work of the Chairman, George Washington, Elsie Austin and others in colleges of both races, has been especially outstanding. Of the highest value has been the preparation of the book, “Race and Man,” which is a treasury of scientific and spiritual values, compiled by the research, devotion and spiritual insight of Maye H. r v y Gift and Alice Simmons Cox. Its perusal shatters idol worship and its circulation is making many friends for the Cause.

Perhaps more time might have been spent upon a theme so inseparably connected with the nation’s destiny. But in reflection, the Convention itself was the greatest demonstration of race unity that history records, with so many traditionally discordant elements melted into oneness by the attracting power of the love of God. It was also the sign of the unity of religions and none the less, an index of world unity.

Inspiring Messages From Ajar

One of the brightest features of the Convention is the spirit of unity which connects those by distance sunned far. The National Secretary sent the following message to the National Spiritual Assemblies of Persia, ‘Irán, Egypt, Britain, India, and Australia: “American Bahá’ís send joyous felicitations century celebration (of the) Báb (and) birth (of) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá (and) dedication (of) the House of Worship. Fervently striving (to) assist universal expansion (of) Divine Faith (of) Bahá’u’lláh second century.”

A similar message was sent all Latin American Bahá’í centers, expressing the hope of realizing All-American Bahá’í unity.

Responses came from the National Spiritual Assemblies of Australia and New Zealand, Great Britain, Egypt-Sudan, ‘Irán and India. The longest of these replies was from ‘Irán, occupying three pages and in eloquent terms stating admiration for the glorious achievements of the American Bahá’ís with fervent hopes that their (the Americans’) would be the means of spreading the Great Message throughout the earth.

The message from Great Britain stated that the British Bahá’ís were the only ones in Europe openly celebrating these joyous days.

Costa Rica, San Salvador, Guatemala, Peru, Brazil, Chile, British Columbia, Seattle, Santa Rosa, California; Boise, Idaho; Honolulu, T. H.; Anchorage, Alaska; Carmel, California; San Francisco, California; Miami, Florida, joined the chorus.

The message from Africa, to wit, Cairo, Egypt, which wonderfully conveys the spirit and even in part the letter of all these happy messages, follows: ‘In this blessed Century, terminating the century of Bahá’u’lláh, believers of Egypt-Sudan send warmest congratulatory greetings. Verily, first Bahá’í century records far-reaching activities in spreading (the) Faith of Bahá’u’lláh (and) birth (of) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, indeed (the) world (and) heart (it) will remain (the) guidance to future generations.”

From the Board of Trade, Chicago, came a cordial invitation to delegates and friends to see Chicago from its observation tower.

Convention Closing

The Convention toward its closing seemed to resolve itself into a great appreciation league as joyousness beamed from the faces of friends and tongues waxed eloquent in expressions of heartfelt gratitude to God and His loved ones who had been so unspiring of themselves in efforts to serve. Praise and thanksgiving were like a mighty chorus. For a full week were we not uplifted to the heaven of God’s given happiness, the only joy that is real, with little or no sense of weariness to our bodies? Then it was necessary to be let down again to earth with its stern exactions and duties and a greater responsibility to share divine treasures with others. The Bahá’í World community is like an oasis, capable of spreading its verdure and beauty to the vast desert of human hearts. The plan for this week was perfect due to the inspiration and directions from Haifa. Their brilliant execution by all who cooperated, may in some details have been different. But who, except one knowing all, can say better? The success of any Bahá’í is the joy of every Bahá’í, while the failure of one (perish the thought of failure!) can be but a cause of grief to all.

The Convention closed with the prayer written by the Guardian many years ago and by his request to be said for him:

“O God! I pray that from now on, Thou, the Beloved, may bestow upon Shoghi Effendi, all the strength and vigor that will enable him to pursue, over a long and unbroken period of strenuous labor, the supreme task of achieving in collaboration with the friends in every land, the speedy triumph of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh."

The Convention resolutions will appear in Bahá’í News, supplemented with the actions of the National body. The public addresses will be published and the public meetings covered by a far abler pen. In bringing this sketchy narrative to a close, we are humbly apologetic for its sheer inadequacy—at best a feeble and flickering reflection only, of the great Light of Unity whose vibrations made hearts rejoice. All who spoke did so wisely, as each expression was related to some ideal or activity of the Faith. There are, however, degrees in wisdom; yet for loyalty, to all be praise. No less to the majority of the delegates, numbered amongst whom were not wanting many with rare gifts and graces, both of speech and action, who yet chose silence save expressions by vote. Some arose early to pray. Two at least spent the entire night of the Báb’s memorial in prayer. A tribute must go also to the still greater number of loyal friends who followed with eager interest all that passed. A thought too for those held by enforced absence and who at a distance observed in reverence the wonders of the week. And last but not least, homage to that ethereal host of invisible heroes, the Dawn-Breakers of the East and the Trail-Blazers of the West, whose deeds and traces laid an imperishable foundation for this monumental triumph. The Manifestation says: “Your names are more famous in the supreme Kingdom than are well-known to your own selves.”

In His Tablet to Ra’is, Minister to the Sultan, Bahá’u’lláh also says: “The beloved of God are those in whom the Word of God taketh effect and who tasteth the sweetness of commemoration, and upon whom the fragrance of unity hath taken hold in such wise that they separate themselves from whoever is upon the earth and advance to the Face with brilliant countenances; and though they have committed that which God never permitted, yet God pardoned them as a favor on His part. Verily He is the Pardoner, the Merciful. The attraction of the Most Powerful hath overpowered them in such wise that it seized from their hands the reins of option, until they ascended into the station of presence and disclosure before God, the Precious, the Wise.”

Community of the Greatest Name

Three meetings were planned on the Centenary program for the Community of the Greatest Name. The first bore the above caption and its idea was to bring the intimate matters of the Faith close to the hearts of the friends.

Roy C. Wilhelm was chairman and in his happy vein introduced this historic occasion. Readings were the Will and Testament of Bahá’u’lláh, the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and writings of the Guardian. Those who read were Mrs. Ella G. Cooper, Mrs. Emogene Hoagg, Alfred Osborne, Siegfried Schopflocher, Eli Powlas, Ali Kuli Khan, N. D., and Esteban C. Leyton.

An inspiring address was made by Mme. Laura Dreysus-Barney, one of the very early Bahá’ís, who spent two years, 1902 to 1904, in ‘Akka at the time that ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was still a prisoner under the despotic Turkish government and received from Him, and translated into English, the Teachings in the volume called “Some Answered Questions.” She expressed pleasure over the signs of progress.

Edwin W. Mattoon, Chairman of the National Archives Committee, made and described exhibits of photographs of the Wills and Testaments of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá with Tablets and records from the Archives, beautifully displayed and very attractive. The moving picture film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and another of Holy places in Palestine were presented by Albert Windust, whose historical address, dealing with the evolution of the Faith from the time it first reached America, was one of most absorbing interest and great value. It is hoped that this address will be published for general circulation. It was given by one of very, very few people who could have given such information. It dealt with Chicago, Kenosha, Wisconsin, in the very early days, and later New York and Washington, D. C., which the Cause reached; paid a tribute to the early Bahá’ís who won imperishable renown for their sacrificial work of translating the Tablets, teaching, publication of literature, etc., and who bore bravely the tests and were victorious through the mighty confirmations of pioneer days.

Edna M. True in fitting words paid a tribute to those who were believers prior to 1912 and presented all who were present with a Centenary souvenir containing a photograph of the Master and a picture of the Temple.

This meeting was extended to the Sunday evening following, when a number of the relics in the National Archives were shown. These included a piece of tile from the pillar on which the Báb was suspended in Tabriz at the time of His martyrdom; the Locks of Hair of Bahá’u’lláh presented to the American believers by Shoghi Effendi, a coat of Bahá’u’lláh and a piece of wood from the frame of the window of His room in the prison of ‘Akka, and an ‘abá and ferr of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s, rosary and a scarf used by the Greatest Holy Leaf.

The framed Tablets of the Divine Plan and the illuminated Tablet to the House of Justice in Chicago were hanging on the walls of the Foundation Hall during this meeting.

The film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in New York and the color films of the Shrines and gardens at Bahji and on Mount Carmel were shown again for the benefit of many who had been unable to see them on the previous evening.
Mrs. Amelia Collins, who was entrusted with bringing the Locks of Hair of Bahá'u'lláh from the Holy Land to Wilmette, spoke upon the significance of this gift.

Mr. Charles Mason Remey presented a silver reliquary to the Archives, containing hair and some particles of dried blood of Bahá'u'lláh.

Temple Dedication

This meeting was held on the main floor of the Temple on Monday, May 22, at 9:40 P.M. It consisted entirely of prayers and readings from words of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. This program follows:

"All praise, O my God, be to Thee ..."-Bahá'u'lláh.

Reading: Anthony Seto

"O concourse of creation! O people! Construct edifices ... in every city ... in the Name of the Lord of Religion ..."-Bahá'u'lláh.

"The century is great and the age belongeth to His Majesty, the Merciful ..."-'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Reading: Edward Lindstrom

"O friends of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and His co-sharers and partners ..."-'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Reading: Harlan F. Ober

"It is the power of God, the Divine Favor of Bahá'u'lláh which has drawn you together ..."-Bahá'u'lláh.

Reading: Paul E. Haney

"Many a chilled heart, O my God, hath been set ablaze ..."-Bahá'u'lláh.

Reading: Charlotte Linfoot.

Commemoration of the Declaration of the Bab

This most holy service, the most impressive of the whole Convention period, was set for two hours and eleven minutes after sunset, May 22, 1944, exactly a century after the Bab's Declaration. The program follows:

"Say: God sufficeth all things above all things ..."-The Bab.

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handiwork ..."-Psalm of David.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven ..."-Jesus.

Reading: Olivia Kelsey.

"God is the Light of the heavens and of the earth ..."-Muhammad.

Reading: Louis G. Gregory

"This night, this very hour will, in the days to come ..."-The Bab.

"I am the Mystic Fane which the Hand of Omnipotence hath reared ..."-The Bab.

"I am the Primal Point from which have been generated all created things ..."-The Bab.

Reading: Albert R. Windsust.

"This is ... the anniversary of the Message and Declaration of His Holiness the Bab ..."-'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Reading: Honor Kempston.

"Praise be to Thee, O my God, that Thou hast revealed Thy favors and Thy bounties ..."-Bahá'u'lláh.

Reading: Mary A. McClennen.

This night, this very hour, will, in the days to come, be celebrated as one of the greatest and most significant of all festivals. Render thanks to God for having graciously assisted you to attain your heart's desire, and for having quaffed from the sealed wine of His utterance.

Flood-Lighting

The Temple

The Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette, Illinois, has frequently been referred to as the Temple of Light. This descriptive appellation may have been inspired by the lacy stone ornamental surfaces which reflect the sun rays in an ever changing pattern, or the effect of the light within the structure, which is unique because the perforations in the outer envelope of stone permit the infiltration of the sunlight.

The unique beauty of the structure itself, standing above its surroundings, the inspiring sweep of lines that delineate its majestic form, the general theme of its graceful forms, the ever changing play of light and shadow creates a form poem of singular charm and impressive beauty.

As the sunlight moves over its surfaces from dawn to sunset, and as it stands silhouetted against the ever changing sky and the cloud pattern, it inspires ever new feelings of wonderment and awe. Not, however, until at the time of the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the Faith, when the trustees undertook to make the first experiment with artificial lighting of the exterior of the building, was the truly exquisite ethereal character of the whole structure revealed. The lighting installations were only temporary and therefore in no sense perfect. The equipment used was only roughly adapted to the purpose, yet the effect was simply astounding. A feeling of unreality, of a building that was not of the earth, but which seemed to be a vision, overpowered every one. It arrested the step of every person, no one could walk past without stopping again and again to gaze at it. The entire form glowed as though made of luminous material and there was a feeling of vibration that seemed to make it alive.

The very fact that this effect could be obtained by equipment so inadequate gives promise of a future development that may in itself become most significant. In this experiment it was found impossible to actually illuminate the dome of the structure. This was due partly to the nature of the equipment found available in this war period and to the curve of the surfaces of the dome. There is every reason to believe that this will not prove to be an insolvable problem and one may be assured that in the not too far distant future the fully illuminated House of Worship will stand in the night as well as in the day time, a powerful beacon to guide mankind toward the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

May 19

We went out early to the Temple, to register and then pray upstairs under the Dome. The Baha’is in the Temple area were handling the Convention crowds with the greatest of ease—an ease which meant that months of planning lay behind the Centenary week. The first thing we did was fill out printed cards with our names, our home addresses, our addresses during Convention.

The cards of Centenary Committee members sported long red badges with gold lettering, and those of delegates long blue badges. (It was a pleasure always to know whom you were addressing—an old friend, or a pioneer you had often read about but never visualized, or a cherished fellow committee member you had met only by mail. As one who has lived in forced hypocrisy all through life, because of an inability to remember names, I found the Convention a great relief in this respect.)

When we had registered, a friend and I climbed upstairs under the Dome. It was like walking up into the next life. Whatever may be going on downstairs in Foundation Hall, or out along the highways, or in Chicago, or the world, it is always the same up under the Dome. The interior of the Dome section is not finished. I felt suddenly glad to live in a time when it is not finished; to see it this way—perhaps to work with others around the planet and arch of the glass. Bird shadows flickered. The interior of the Dome section was like walking up into a city where churches were nonexistent. When people ask me where is Wilmette? I tell them: if you want to locate Wilmette, just locate the Baha’i Temple. There’s where Wilmette is....

Mr. Kinne added: You good people are welcome. Please feel welcome. And if you violate any little regulations or ordinances, please see Mr. Wolff (The Village Manager) or myself (laughter) and we’ll pardon you.

because we know you wouldn't do anything but what you'd think would be all right.

The President was much applauded and naturally we all resolved to live on our best behavior, at least during Convention week in Wilmette.

Robert Gulick was good enough to give me the notes he made of this session, as follows: The familiar melodies and harmonies of the Cesar Franck Symphony in D minor recalled the words of Bahá'u'lláh that music is a ladder which the soul may ascend to heaven. The theme of the evening was "The Universal House of Worship." "Achieved is the Glorious Work" from Haydn's "Creation" served as a fitting prelude to this time of jubilee.

Foundation Hall was occupied largely by guests and older Bahá'ís while the rest ascended the stairs to the first floor. It was an impressive sight to view the world at twilight from this sacred spot. Each door and window opened on tree tops painted in the pale green of spring. The Temple impressed itself on the souls present as a sanctuary from the turmoil of a troubled world walking in darkness because it has lost touch with God, and as the best promise of a united world. God's Holy Ark, gracing the shore of Lake Michigan, resting on a firm foundation that no tempest can shake, immune to the whisperings of the followers of the false gods of racialism and nationalism.

Harry C. Kinne, President of the Wilmette Village Board, acclaimed the greatness of the Temple and mentioned the esteem in which the Bahá'ís are held locally. Later the chairman remarked on the significance of the change from the time when the Temple was called "that thing" until the present when, in the phraseology of the Village Board, it has become "our Temple".

Mrs. Corinne True, who during the uphill struggles of the early years never allowed despondency to interfere with her resolve to expedite work on the House of Worship, gave an address based on the words of the Master, "The most important matter is to found a Temple."

The flood lights enhance the beauty of the ornamentation. When the lights come on in the Dome, the interior changes to a fascinating trichrome pattern of glass and steel. Surely this Temple of Light, this lacy shelter covering the heart of the continent, will have an increasingly ennobling effect on American civilization. "The real Temple is the Word of God." This holy House of Worship is the point of radiation of the unifying light of God's Word. The Gothic tracery with its stars and crosses and symbols of many faiths, glistening in almost incandescent... splendor, bears luminous testimony that "This is the changeless Faith of God, eternal in the past, eternal in the future."

The drama of the Temple, described by one of its leading actors, seemed too great for any human being to unfold: the humble, unheralded efforts of a numerically insignificant group to erect a truly universal house of prayer. Profound emotion underlined the words of the speaker, Mrs. True, who was from the beginning in the vanguard of the struggle to establish a sanctified place where sincere souls of all races, classes, and creeds might worship in complete freedom the one God.

The guest speaker, Earl Reed, explained some of the technical features of the building, indicating that new methods and materials had to be discovered in order to carry out the ideas of the inspired architect. As an example of attention to detail, he mentioned the excellence of concrete casting to be noted in the steps which are placed a half inch apart for drainage purposes and to allow for expansion. We heard of the humble shopkeeper of India who gave his sleeping-mat for the Temple fund, a Bahá’í successor of that widow who sacrificed her mite for the spread of Christianity.

In this structure, functionalism supplements the organic unification of past architectural styles. The sky has disappeared from view and the stone lace has become snowy-white and fairy-like. The intertwined forms portray cosmic unity. Those unfamiliar with the world’s religious history are startled to find the Cross, the Star of David, and the Swastika in harmonious association.

The fine, shining wires of the sound amplifying system looked like harp strings waiting to hum with the music of the spheres.

I would like to add here that we experienced the greatest cordiality from the citizens of Wilmette, the surrounding area and even into Chicago. They were friendly to us simply because we were Bahá’ís. Many homes were opened to Convention visitors, stores displayed Bahá’í books and Centenary placards and worked long hours taking care of the crowds. The press was generous.

May 20

Today I noticed that the Greatest Name, framed in black, had been suspended against the drapes behind the speakers’ platform. The flowers had been changed, and this happened all through the sessions; today there were two great bowls of them on the main table: yellow daisies, purple lilacs, pink and orange snapdragons. The atmosphere of ease, of something preordained and running almost by magic, continued today and throughout the entire Convention. So far as I could discover, no serious mishaps or hardships were experienced by any of those who attended. That one week will always be something set apart in memory; it will be a time when for once life was out of our hands and ran smoothly.

This evening the prize seats—the section immediately facing the center table—were roped off. Gradually they filled with Bahá’ís who had been in the Faith prior to 1912. (I noticed, however, that some of the younger ones who were Bahá’ís at that early date felt the urge to sit elsewhere). We knew these early believers were to receive a special surprise and that a moving picture would be made of them. This session was primarily for Bahá’ís, and Foundation Hall was jammed; it was a case of Standing Room Only, with the Baha'i ushers polite but firm. At 8:00 o'clock there was already an overflow of some hundred and twenty-five persons up under the Dome, who could hear, but unfortunately not see, the proceedings. I might say in passing that the Convention sessions started promptly, and the traditional American Baha'i practice of arriving late had to be abandoned throughout.

This was the session which the Committee members referred to among themselves as "Old Home Evening". There was something special about those people in the front section; those heads grown white in the Faith. Those who, however, the current generation, pushing on this second century to the rims of the planet, may overshadow them—reared the Faith in America; visited the Master in His prison; gathered to serve Him when He came to the West; built this Dome above us.

Like all Baha'i audiences, this one was in constant motion, and far from silent. The recorded musical program—selections from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, followed by Richard Crooks singing "The Holy City"—was coming over beautifully.

Mr. Roy Wilhelm was in the chair this evening and his first words were the Master's: "Are you happy? You must be so happy that your faces will shine."

Mr. George Latimer welcomed everyone on behalf of the Convention. He said: This is truly a gathering of the Community of the Most Great Name, and I am sure that the reinforcing spirit of our beloved Master is here with us tonight.

Miss Edna True, chairman of the Centenary Committee, spoke to us on the changes that have taken place since the Faith first came to this hemisphere. She said: In the beginning only those souls with the keenest perception could discern the very slight glimmerings of the dawn of the sun of Baha'u'llah. They, a mere handful of consecrated souls, initiated most of those things which we count today as our greatest Baha'i blessings. Many here can remember when Mary Lesch literally carried the Publishing Society around in her ample handbag. . . . Miss True then announced that a Centennial remembrance would be presented to every Baha'i who had been in the Faith before 1912. Quietly, girl ushers began to distribute the large brown paper envelopes, and everyone not in the roped-off section craned to see what they were—two handsomely mounted photographs, the one on the right a camera portrait of 'Abdu'l-Baha, that on the left a study of the Temple, the two set in a gray folder bearing the inscription: "Baha'i Centenary, 1944-1945." in blue.

Mr. Williams was in the chair, drew laughter, especially from the reserved section, with his reference to a newly-fledged preacher who had delivered a sermon on "the old ancient relics of antiquity". He went on to describe the progress of the Faith around the world, and paid a tribute to the historic services of M. and Mme. Hippolyte Dreyfus-Barney: Hippolyte has now crossed the big river... 'Abdu'l-Baha said, could we have even a glimpse of even the next step we could scarcely be kept in this world... I now present you all to Laura Dreyfus-Barney.

Mme. Barney spoke with her usual concentrated calm. Completely bilingual, she has a slight trace of French accent. She said: Two months ago I was hesitating whether or not to attend the Convention. I felt this to be a moment of rejoicing, and I so attuned to the war-torn world, because I have been so much in Europe and the Far East, that I would bring a note of sadness which should not appear here. But Shoghi Effendi wrote me that he wished me to come to this Centenary gathering. So here I am, in full appreciation of what has been done. I felt I should pay tribute here to the strength that is growing from the Americas. Though not an accredited delegate, I feel I can speak for France and Switzerland and the other countries, and greet you, and say they are expecting much from this part of the world.

We don't know what has happened to many of our friends—Lydia Zamdenhof and many others—or how much Baha'i literature remains in Europe—but we do know we can prepare to serve them. The second century opens up a vast field—the field that has been tramped in all directions by this war.

Of the book Some Answered Questions, Mme. Barney told us: Some Answered Questions, I feel, is everybody's book. When I saw the Master—a prisoner in 'Akkâ, cut away from much of the world—and saw how He dictated to His scribes, I asked Him whether it would be feasible to have some talks written down when He honored us by coming to take a meal with us, or sometimes in the early morning when we were having tea... We never knew when we were going to have these talks. It was after a heavy day of visiting the poor or attending to some very difficult and complicated business that He would come, and sit, and rest; and it was the thought of you all, and the thought that perhaps it would save Him the cost of many Tablets, that gave me the courage to ask, when I wanted to remain silent.

The people that wrote it down were the sons-in-law or the secretaries, Munir or Nur-i-Din. It would be written very rapidly and copied out. Again, I had to watch for opportunity when He wasn't too tired or going away for something else—for when He was rested, away He went; and then He would complete them—sometimes three lines—sometimes one word. And when they were as He wished them to be, He would put on His seal—Ayn-Ayn—so that Some Answered Questions is the same as a Tablet.

They say women are marvelous smugglers; to get the book out of 'Akkâ, I asked the secretaries to copy the set twice; they did; I smuggled it out and brought it to Paris. Hippolyte Dreyfus was so very helpful; it was in translating Some Answered Questions that we came to understand how well we worked together. . . . Whenever I went back to 'Akkâ I would ask a little more, add a new subject. The Master had that wonderful patience in trying to get a few words over; He would use the Persian words that we understood, over and over. A Persian scholar helped with the English translation. Hippolyte Dreyfus did the French.

I never felt quite at ease while the original manuscript remained in Paris, but I didn't do much about it because my logic didn't tell me which way I was to go. Then a Persian woman was returning to see her family in the East; I said: Will you take these to Shoghi Effendi? I included, with the manuscript, all my Tablets and Mrs. Tewkesbury Jackson's too, so that all these documents are in Shoghi Effendi's hands. I wonder if it isn't that deeper sense of Guardianship that makes us turn to him when we don’t know quite what to do.

In Paris the Master liked to walk in the gardens of the Trocadéro. When in 1917 there was a magnificent exhibition there—with all the flags of the world floating in the wind—I couldn’t help seeing Him as He had walked there years before.

He wanted us to go to Persia. We went—a little group. I was most anxious to visit Māh-Kū, that slab of rock; it seemed absolutely cut away from the rest of the world.

We are faced with a magnificent future. We, the American hemisphere, are preparing ourselves to aid this rest of the world—that we will find ill-poverty-stricken—but hopeful.

Mrs. Ella Goodall Cooper now came to the platform. She said: Dear friends, this is almost too much happiness—to come here and find an old-fashioned meeting. The old-timers knew what Mrs. Cooper meant; for once, instead of the dust and heat of labor, of nonstop effort to establish the Faith, of distance stretching thousands of miles between friends, the Bahá’ís could pause and be together in the old-time way.

Everything was very easy and natural, as if we were already together in the world to come. I looked across the many-colored audience, and saw all the strains: Negro-American Indian—Semitic—Persian—Far Eastern—Nordic—all tossed together, and beyond them, across the Hall, the Master’s portrait, cameo-white.

Mrs. Emogene Hoagg, California’s first Bahá’í, now read from ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s words on the power of the Covenant; Emogene Hoagg, not at all bowed down by her years of endless services—among the most notable being her typing of the Dawn Breakers at the Guardian’s direction. All-Kuli Khan, sent here by the Master in 1901 as the interpreter to Mirzá Abu’l-Fadl, read next; Mr. Siegfried Schopflocher, the distinguishéd Canadian Bahá’í, Mr. Alfred Osborne, Panama’s envoy to the Convention, Mr. Eli Powlas, the much applauded young American Indian, and Cuba’s popular delegate, Sr. Eugenio Gines, were the other readers tonight.

Mr. Edwin Mattoon spoke briefly of the precious Tablets and relics belonging to the National Archives and now on exhibit in Foundation Hall. Then the lights were dimmed, and all at once in the darkness, very close at hand, we heard the voice of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. As we listened to the recording, the moving picture film of the Master was projected on a screen run up by technicians in front of the speakers’ platform, and Mr. Albert Windust guided us through the scenes with a few words of explanation.

The “Old Home” session ended with a showing of the new films sent by the Guardian especially for this event: technicolor views of Bahá’í holy places in Palestine, so lovely that one showing was not enough and they were presented again the next evening.

May 21

Arriving at the Sunday afternoon meeting I found that as usual, seating priorities had been accorded to non-Bahá’ís—this being standard Bahá’í practice—and the Bahá’ís were being requested to go upstairs and take seats under the Dome. The great Hall was already jammed. The ushers, members of many different races, were doing an efficient job of being firm with their fellow-believers, who are rapidly learning that it’s no use trying to sneak past them.

Glancing over the audience, I thought it was the sort of gathering that would please ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, because so many varieties of the human race were represented. The atmosphere was extraordinarily happy and the Bach recordings were coming over well. I was there only on sufferance, having used the plea that I had to take notes on the meeting.

Then the speakers mounted the platform: Mr. Kenneth Christian, and Mrs. Charles Bishop. Mr. Philip Sprague was in the chair. Welcoming the audience, he told them: This is a particularly happy time for those of us who call ourselves Bahá’ís, because we are celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of our Faith and the completion of what the Guardian of our Faith called the Seven Year Plan—a goal which had to be reached by the close of the first century.

You will be able to read elsewhere the things that they said from the platform today. Mr. Christian showed how, at a time when the world was concerned with local problems, local needs, local aspirations, Bahá’u’lláh, an Exile and Prisoner, raised the banner of world unity and world justice, restated the spiritual obligations of man to God, inseparably joined the spiritual and the practical aspects of life. “God moves in human history. His hand is above all things. A new order founded on the oneness of humanity is taking shape under the guidance and protection of God.” Mr. Christian closed with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s words, twice repeated: “Behold the portals which Bahá’u’lláh hath opened unto you!”

Mrs. Bishop told the audience that if they were convinced all knowledge belongs to the past, and that God is unable to speak today, then it would be impossible for them to understand what Bahá’ís mean by the oneness of religions. She said that Bahá’u’lláh had been received among all peoples with that devotion accorded only a Prophet of God. She told of the Tree of Revelation, sprung out of Abraham’s posterity and including both Jesus and Muhammad; and of “God’s two languages”, the Semitic group and the Aryan; and of how these elements were joined today in the respective manifestations of the Báb and Bahá’u’lláh.

Mrs. Bishop went on to speak of the swans she had seen in the most around an English cathedral; whenever a bell was rung, the swans would flock together to be fed. In the same way, she said, the masses react to the repetition of certain words, certain stimuli. This has happened in religion as well as elsewhere: through constant repetition of certain words a mass action is brought about; such words inflame but do not enlighten; it is the words of the Prophet that enlighten.

The audience listened with complete attention and at the close there was prolonged applause.

This evening a meeting was held in Foundation Hall for the Bahá’ís, at which time Mr. Remey presented the relics already referred to, and Mrs. Amelia Collins told of the Guardian’s gift to the American Archives—the Locks of Bahá’u’lláh’s Hair—reading from the words of Bahá’u’lláh as transcribed around the Locks. Members of the Archives Committee described relics of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, the Master and Bahiyyih Khánum, these sacred objects being on view in three display cases.

Last night when we came out of the Tent after the Youth Banquet, we stepped into mist. The Temple seemed to be floating away, the lights from it streaming away in the wind and mist. Street lamps blurring, wet branches shifting and glimmering, and the Temple floating through above us in the mist.

The Baha’i House of Worship does not look like the pictures taken of it, or like the models—that have been widely exhibited. They are heavy and static, while the Temple itself is fragile and light; it almost drifts; it seems only to have settled, the way a butterfly will settle. It symbolizes a religion utterly unlike anything humanity had in the past. For centuries, the West has worshipped in vault-like places, crowded with statues and pictures; and while the mosques, in my view, have been less obstructive to the searching mind, because they run with fountains and sunlight and are empty of images—still they are exclusive, and shut the non-believer out.

Now here is the Temple, welcoming you with its nine portals, no matter who you are, atheist or faithful, sinner or saint; no matter which way you turn. You cannot help entering—there is no wall to keep you away.

The National Assembly conceived the plan of having the Temple floodlighted throughout the Centennial. They were fortunate in discovering, in these days of shortage, a man who had bought equipment used for this purpose at the Chicago World’s Fair in 1933. The problem of lighting the Dome proved hard to solve but in the end the very difficulties resulted in new light effects. I had expected long Klieg lights on the order of a Hollywood opening; instead, there was a white glowing, an unfolding of radiance, a great white-rose, white-petalled light against the soft darkness.

You cannot write about the Temple in static adjectives, or still verbs; you have to use adjectives that suggest color and motion, verbs preferably in the active participle; because the Temple always swings and moves, and that is why the models and photographs do not resemble it.

This was the night when we entered the second century of our Faith.

A public evening meeting was held first, and followed at 9:40 by the great Baha’i gathering up under the Dome, when we dedicated the Mashriqu’l-Adhkara and commemorated the Declaration of the Bab.

Mr. George Latimer, chairman of the public meeting, first introduced Mrs. Dorothy Baker, who spoke on “Religion returns to Mankind.” She told of the Prophets, who restore man’s contact with God that is the supreme passion of humanity; of the Prophet, who is a Man alone against the world. She emphasized the stream of progressive revelation, speaking of Judaism, Christianity, Islam and the other Faiths, and ended: The words of the Bab are dedicated to all who are gathered in this commemorative place: “Enter therein in peace, secure.”

Dr. Harry Allen Overstreet, guest speaker of the evening, then addressed us on “Getting Ready for World Peace.” He told us: “You celebrate a great event—the founding of a new kind of Faith... The urge to peace is upon us all... the difficulty lies in the curious confusion of our minds—we also want other things. We’ve got to get our minds ready for peace... No peace can come save out of the utter unity of the world... The world civil war is being waged between two kinds of ideas; between those who want special privileges and those who want privileges for everyone... The new world will be one of cultural generosity... we shall pass from cultural monism which is our occidental provincialism, to cultural pluralism....

Mr. Horace Holley then spoke on “The World in Transformation.” This address, like the rest, will be available in print, and my notes will do it no more justice than they have the others. Among the things Mr. Holley told us were: For hundreds of thousands of years, man’s daily routine required only a little thought; man worked in nature and nature gave man his daily bread. Then came the great erupting force of scientific thought; by the impact of science and technological industries the simplicity of life was completely transformed. This change involves every human being... We have seen—the rise of education as a duty of the state. We have seen great dynasties and civilizations destroyed. We have seen submerged peoples arise and clamor for their rights... Our economic structure has been imperiled until a sense of worry and foreboding has descended upon the average family... It is too late to retire into some beautiful dream... The past has been destroyed, the present is in turmoil, the future is hidden behind a cloud. Description of a problem, if it leaves the problem, is a luxury we cannot afford. If you are sick, you don’t want a doctor to describe the description of the sickness; you want a diagnosis, but only to produce healing. (The speaker quoted here from the words of Baha’u’llah: “The All-Knowing Physician hath His finger on the pulse of mankind. . . .”) The abyss into which we have fallen spiritually is individualism. People do not unite in their personalities, but they unite when they agree on certain fundamental truths... Religion is the society-building power—the release of a spirit which enters into the constitute of human beings and evokes from them their latent and undeveloped powers. When these powers are evoked from human beings, they possess the basis of a civilization. Civilization perishes by the misuse of the human powers. We cannot of ourselves return into the spiritual light... Those who accept the Baha’ accept all the Manifestations of God. Entering into the common experience of sharing one God is the basis of all civilizations... The Bab created the foundation of a world consciousness. The great proof of a religion is its power to create a community... Peace is not a human theory; peace is not even a desperate human need; peace is a divine command... The victory has already been won.

After the public meeting, we walked up the white path in the darkness, up the steps and through one of the nine great portals. The vast space beneath the Dome was packed with Baha’is. I wished the Guardian could have been here to see them; to see all these souls across the earth, who have grown out of the words that the Bab spoke in Shiraz a hundred years ago tonight.

We had been carefully instructed in what we were to do: if downstairs, we were to hurry upstairs and join the others under the Dome; we were to make no sound while the readings were going on, for they were to be recorded. And no children under twelve were to be present. (It was wonderful to see how quickly the tiniest youngsters became twelve.)
Then a great silence and a voice came out of it: Anthony Seto reading “All praise, O my God, be to Thee...” The program of dedication had begun. I looked behind me and saw faces pressed against the glass—people on the steps outside, peering in and wondering. I can’t explain how happy the people inside were; I had never felt an audience like this.

A voice, reading: “O friends of Abdu’l-Baha...” Paul Haney, reading “It is the power of God... which has drawn you together.” Charlotte Linfoot, reading “Many a chilled heart, O my God, hath been set ablaze...”

We heard a Psalm of David, and the Beatitudes, read for us by Olivia Kelsey; and the John Charles Thomas recording of the Lord’s Prayer. Now Louis Gregory was repeating from the Qur’an: “God is the light of the heavens and of the earth...” The colors around us were dove colors—light grays and dull grays and tans. The segment of the Dome that I could see was a spiderweb of gray geometric filaments and black panes. Mr. Gregory closed with: “And unto God the final return.”

This must have been the moment when we passed into the second century of the Bahá’í era, for a new voice, Albert Windust’s, began: “This night, this very hour will, in the days to come, be celebrated as one of the greatest and most significant of all festivals...” And then the voice of Honor Kempton: “This is the anniversary of the Message and Declaration of His Holiness the Báb.” Light ran along the sound wires that had been strung across under the Dome.

Mary McClennen was reading “I yield Thee such thanks...” A little Negro boy-friend of mine slipped by in a red leather jacket; his name is Noel Grant, he can recite long passages from the Guardian’s writings by heart, and he has frequently confided to me that he is five. On this evening of evenings, he was making no tiniest sound.

Very gradually, through the strains of “Parrishal”, the people were rising and forming lines to look at the holy relics of the Báb.

Then all of a sudden, standing above the heads of the people, I saw a lighted niche, arched like a mihrab in a mosque. I did not know that a curtain had been suddenly drawn aside. I saw only that there was an arch of golden light where there had been shadows before, and that in its center was the Portrait, sharply defined in its frame.

The lines formed slowly; after each one had looked at the Face of the Báb, he left by a portal of the Temple; I could see the shadows of the people moving on the great Temple windows as they went. At last we reached the palms that stood on our side of the lighted alcove; its inner surfaces were covered with a hand-embroidered Persian weave—a pale gold cloth with green- and crimson velvet flowers across it. I looked ahead, past Sabet, in order to see the Portrait longer, because there could be only a glimpse. There would be no time to watch for details. I only knew that I was to look upon His Face, as the people in Persian streets had crowded and pushed against their fellows to look upon it long ago... A man stood on either side of the Portrait, at a little distance, keeping watch.

And then I was looking into the Face of the Báb. He seemed weary and hard-pressed somehow, a Youth made too old for His years by suffering. It was an expression I have seen now and then, on the faces of His toiling followers. He seemed to permit me to look at Him and I loved Him at once and kissed the green velvet sSil under the Portrait, and passed by without wanting to, having spent my allotted time in looking at His Face, and thus missing the smaller frame above the Portrait, which I now know held the Lock of His Hair.

People were talking unobtrusively as they streamed away in the darkness. Over the dark bridge, on the Canal, I stopped and looked back. Dark shapes went quietly by. There was the lit Temple, rising above us. And I felt, thinking of the Portrait of the Báb being there—in this, His setting—as if He had come home somehow. And I felt relieved, as if at last the peoples of the western hemisphere could hear Him say, as the first believer heard Him, long ago in Shiráz: “Enter therein in peace, secure.”

May 23

The velvet weave, used as a background for the Portrait of the Báb, was made in the 16th century by order of Sháh ‘Abbás of Persia. He gave it as a gift to the Sultan of Turkey. Later, the Austrians captured it, and it eventually came into the possession of the King of Saxony, where it remained two hundred years. The weave, from the Rafi Mottahedeh collection, is one of a pair; its mate belongs to the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

This afternoon we were allowed to view the Portrait once more, this time in Foundation Hall, where it stood against a strip of soft green velvet (something the color of a Siyyid’s belt faded by the Persian sun), itself laid across the rugs covering the central table; to either side of the Portrait was a vase of white lilacs, and beside each of these, a smaller one of white roses; a loose sprig of lilac lay casually before it, as I have seen flowers lie on the Shrine thresholds in Haifa.

The Portrait is set in a narrow, oval of gold-lone; the light green mat has delicate gold rays radiating from the center. This time I looked above the Portrait and saw the smaller frame, illuminated blue-and-gold mat, and central glass-covered section in which lies the delicate, shining Lock of hair. I learned from Mr. Mattoon that the illuminated designs surrounding the Portrait and Lock, as well as the specifications for carving the two frames, were prepared in Haifa by Mr. Sutherland Maxwell.

And I thought that the Báb must have seen us today, when He was there alone in the prison, awaiting His death, with His face swollen by the shock of the farrásh... He looked at each one of us as we passed. One of the young Persian students had given me this poem of His, which He seemed to be saying: You, the free birds of the garden, Know the delights of the cypress and rose—

For I have a trust with the Fowl And the pangs of the snare await Me.

I do not remember very much about what happened this evening. It was dedicated to “North America, Citadel of Universal Peace.” I sat on the platform beside Mr. Rowland Estall of Canada, and could see bits of the audience between the ferns on one hand and the speakers’ reading stand on the other.

Mr. Leroy Ioa, as chairman, opened the session, and Mr. Windust described the progress of the Faith in America up to 1912. Then my turn came, and in spite of the difficulty it was a bounty to speak His Name in this Temple He Himself had founded, and to recall some of the things that took place during His days in the western world.

Marion Holley described the growth of the American Bahá’í community up to 1944, and Rowland Estall closed with his address, now published in World Order Magazine: "America and the Most Great Peace." May 24

Mrs. Stuart French was chairman of the Inter-America program, dedicated to the meeting of the Americas, and the recorded musical program featured South American festival music and the compositions of Heitor Villa-Lobos.

Three of the talks which were given this evening have since been published, but the composite flavor of the evening, the fusion of the Americas which we all felt tonight, are delicate matters which will not go easily into print.

Sr. Octavio Illiescas of Peru told us: "The religious heritage, the known fervor and devotion of the masses, in the Latin American nations will be the fertile soil on which the seeds of the Bahá’í Faith, a religion of action, a religion in which service to humanity is worship of God—will grow and bear rich fruits."

The guest speaker, Mr. Philip Leonard Green, pleased us with this opening: "My first contact with the ideals promulgated by this world-wide community of devoted men and women came almost two decades ago through the late Mary Hanford Ford, who presented me with a booklet entitled 'The World of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.' Expecting to find in it little more than an interesting explanation of Oriental mysticism, I was overcome with surprise to read not only the exposition of a philosophy which exalted international cooperation to the status of a religion but which even made prophecies with regard to inter-American developments, which have since become largely transformed into reality. They came from the lips of a Persian mystic who could have had no special interest in singling out the Pan-American movement for preferential mention. He made them in 1912, during a period when relations among the American republics were rapidly deteriorating. The interview during which these prophecies were promulgated was reported in these words: 'So he said there would be in the end a United States of the World, as compact as the present United States of America.' When asked if this change would appear suddenly, he said, no, that it would arise first in the western continent. The bond between North and South America would be greatly strengthened, he declared, and later, the entire two continents including Mexico and Canada, would grow so harmonious that they would act upon all important questions like one country.

These words. . . point out in crystal-clear terms to Americans of the South, Center and North, the cosmic mission which has been reserved for them if they can but grasp its meaning and meet its requirements."

Students of Inter-American relationships should not fail to study Mr. Green’s talk, published in the June issue of World Order.

Mrs. French called on Mrs. Edward Roscoe Mathews—who spoke on the "Spirit of Inter-American Fellowship." Mrs. Mathews visited Central and South America in the interests of the Faith as early as 1934. At that time there were no Bahá’ís in Latin America. Today, only ten years later, Bahá’í centers have been established in every Latin American republic.

Mrs. Mathews told us of her experiences in the countries to the South, and with the new friendship springing up across the Americas, where before, "love for a long time had lain like pressed flowers in our prayer books." May 25

The average person hates banquets, and I believe, rightly so. However, this one, celebrating the coming of the Faith to Chicago in 1894, was different. This was not the sort of banquet where you are imprisoned at a long table, with a plate of cold food in front of you which is never the correct moment to eat—and for no reasonable motive. This banquet was plausible and it made history.

I came in late and found the enormous hall jammed with people; they were distributed at round tables, each seating ten. The banquet photograph had already been made. In the distance, under seven great United States flags and against a background of shimmering silver drapes, stretched the speakers’ table.

The Hotel Stevens had said they would take as many of our delegates and visitors as we sent them and that race was not an issue.

Dr. Raymond Piper’s address on "The Religious Foundations of World Unity" will be available in print, but not the spirit with which he gave it. As one who attended four colleges, in which every professor was either atheist or watered-down agnostic, I could hardly believe I was hearing a public advocacy of religious faith from the head of a Philosophy Department. This address would make me a Bahá’í, I thought to myself, were I not one already; because, whatever the proponents of intellect versus heart, or of heart versus intellect, may say, it is certain that the combination is unbeatable.

Everybody was happy. The Banquet seemed of importance to Chicago, to the Americas, to humanity; and we each took on a momentary significance, reflected from it.

Miss Elsie Austin, the noted Negro attorney, was the featured woman speaker. Miss Austin spoke on "The Social Basis of World Unity". She said to us: "There is no more realistic force in the world today than the Bahá’í Faith . . . There is a great difference between folk who have the means for unity, and folk who have the heart for unity . . . . Legislation and pressures alone have never been able to get at the inward fears, the jealousies and animosities of man . . . . The unity of mankind, in the Bahá’í Faith, is not only a spiritual principle—it is also the basis of a new social pattern . . . ."

Miss Austin’s talk received tremendous applause. Then suddenly radio people appeared with their sound equipment, and we understood from their haste that the timing was very close; we were requested to be silent; the experts went through their usual unintelligible pantomime; then we were on the air, and the announcer was saying: "Ballroom of the Stevens Hotel . . . Bahá’í House of Worship, acclaimed the world’s most beautiful building . . . delegates from all over the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Central and South America . . . ."

The Bahá’í opera star, Mr. Walter Olitzki, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Co., sang "Where'er You Walk", after which Mr. Osborne of Panama, who is a University of Chicago graduate and supervisor of The Youth had announced that twenty-one would be the top age limit for those attending, but raised this to thirty when it was discovered that even some members of the Banquet Committee were above twenty-one. We found the tent spacious and well-lighted, we had gold chairs to sit on and our long tables were decorated with red geraniums in pots, purple lilacs, yellow candles.

There were prayers, Johnnie Eisenauer reading in Spanish and then in English, and Pari Zia Walsh repeating the one for “unity in the love of God” through the world.” Johnnie called the seemingly endless roll by countries, states, territories and provinces; this was punctuated with applause, laughter, and also whistles when occasion demanded.

It developed that nine Latin-American countries, six provinces of Canada, and thirty-two North American states were represented, in addition to which eight young men were present from Persia.

As Master of Ceremonies, Johnnie began to address the crowd bilingually, in Spanish and English. He said: “We all, I know, are grateful to Baha’u’llah for having united us under the banner of His world Faith. We are going to show our gratefulness even more than we have in the past, by spreading His teachings far and wide...and by our actions and deeds. ...(He then emphasized the Guardian’s instruction to the Youth; to become thoroughly steeped in the Teachings, in order to be ready for the tasks ahead). We’re used to saying: I don’t have time; but let’s remember the purpose for which we were created: to know and love God; and that the Intermediate in this day is Baha’u’llah; and that our very first duty is to have a knowledge of His Cause, and to render Him instant, exact, and complete obedience. Do you agree with me?”

(Loud applause)

Various people were then called on to describe youth activities at the summer schools; Paul Pettit, chairman of the National Youth Committee, aroused special interest with his account of work being done at Louhelen Ranch, including the Dorothy Graf School (a kindergarten project at Louhelen), the Winter Session, and the Louhelen Choir. Paul emphasized the Guardian’s instructions to the National Youth Committee—that they study the Teachings, in order to be able to “heal the sick souls and confused minds” of humanity.

Johnnie asked who in the audience planned to attend a summer school this year and practically everyone rose.

Other youth then reported on their pioneering activities — for many, I found, are already seasoned pioneers. Regina, Little Rock, Alberta, Reno (this last reported by the young Japanese secretary of the Renen Assembly, Robert Imagine) Laramie, Greensboro. I was especially moved by this last, since the pioneers there are young Negro girls who gave up a relatively uncomplicated life out West to settle in this southern area. They spoke modestly of what is an outstanding achievement: their establishment of a Local Spiritual Assembly. Eva told how, although she herself had interrupted her college career to go pioneering, she found no difficulty in addressing college audiences because of her study of the Teachings. She closed with: "If you want adventure and a lot of fun and everything that youth desire, you have that opportunity in pioneering. There is no greater teaching opportunity than in the South. Come and help us out."

The young girl from Venezuela, who first heard of the Faith four months ago through Dorothy Baker, said: "I decided to become a Bahá'í because I realized that a religion which can make such wonderful people as you are must be a good religion." Johnnie told the audience: "She has my help without even asking for it."

The youngest woman pioneer to Latin America, "Winnie Lou" Baker of Colombia, spoke of the community in Bogotá; she said a knowledge of Spanish was vital for pioneers there; that secretarial knowledge for women and engineering for men were desirable. She told also of the many translations of Bahá'í literature which are beginning to appear in Spanish.

The wind was blowing a gale under the tent flaps. We had been sitting there a long time—the Banquet developed eventually into a four-hour session. I complained to Robert Gulick, my neighbor, of a pain in my back. He replied that the discomforts would teach us older ones not to come to Youth meetings.

Sr. Eugenio Gines told of the work in Cuba and praised Miss Josephine Kruza and the other pioneers there. Dr. Fernando Nova of Bahia paid a tribute to Miss Leonara Holsapple; he was called back to the platform, and asked to say a few words in Portuguese, and also something on Brazil. In the end he said, "I want to thank you for the long time you have spent with myself."

Miss Jeanne Bolles spoke of Bahá'í youth she had met in various Latin American countries, including Uruguay, where Mr. Wilfrid Barton is the pioneer, and shared with us excerpts from the letters of Rúhíyyih Khánum, wife of the Guardian.

Robert Gulick was called on and began: "Saludos amigos y amigas; salamun alaykum; fellow-youth of all ages.—" He spoke on the importance of youth activities and won applause with: "Very often the youth know a whole lot more than most of their elders are willing to concede. . .

I admire your enthusiasm; I like the way you demonstrate the Bahá'í principles, such as this very meeting which demonstrates the oneness of the world of humanity... You have the most important place in the Faith of God today."

Joel Marangella presented greetings from the Bahá'í youth in Puerto Rico, his sister and brother-in-law, Ayned and Lucien McComb, and told of his life in the Army, where he has served three years. Clement Perry, also in the Service, agreed with Joel that separation from fellow-believers is one of the great difficulties of Army life. Other service men, Ansel Shurgast, Willis Sprattling and John Shurcliff told briefly of their experiences.

A letter to the Guardian, to be signed by all the youth, rejoicing with him on this occasion and acknowledging their responsibility to the Faith, was now read by Jessie Perry. The session closed with Rūhulloh Zargarzūrah chanting in Persian one of the Master's Tablets to the Youth: "O youth of 'Abdu'l-Bahá: How long will ye be still! How long will ye be mute?" Then they all joined in singing the "Benediction."

Special Session Held for Latin-American Representatives From July 9 to 15, 1944

The Latin American delegates who could not get their transportation matters arranged in time to get here for the Centenary Convention were extended an invitation by the National Spiritual Assembly to attend a special centenary session held for them from July 9th to the 16th, 1944. It was an echo of the convention which vibrated that same intense spirit of unity, love and brotherhood expressed amongst all the friends, and that same profound reverence and awe felt upon seeing the majesty and beauty of the Temple and the portrait of the Báb. Through the careful and excellent planning of the Centenary Committee and the kindness and hospitality of the friends in the Temple area, this special session was a great success.

The honored guests were:
- Sr. Salvador Tormo, Argentina
- Sra. Clara Luz Montalvo, El Salvador
- Sr. Eduardo Gonzalez Lopez, Ecuador
- Sr. Esteban Canales Leyton, Chile
- Sra. Isabel Tirado de Barreda, Peru
- Dr. Manuel D. Bergós Ch., Dominican Republic
- Sra. Angela Ochoa Velasquez, Honduras
- Sr. Roque Centurion Miranda, Paraguay
- Sr. Raymond I. Beits, Peru
- Dr. Fernando Nova, Brazil

The Sunday July 9th session was opened with musical selections at 12:45 p.m. in Foundation Hall in the Temple, after which there were the readings of prayers and writings in commemoration of the Martyrdom of the Báb. Then followed the showing of the portrait of the Báb, this also in Foundation Hall. After the friends were seated, the recording of the readings of the Centenary Commemoration meeting was played.

At 3:30 p.m. the public meeting was held in Foundation Hall. The speaker was Mrs. Dorothy Baker, on the subject "A Message for the Americas". Mr. Philip Sprague acted as chairman.

Immediately after the public meeting, the delegates met with the National Spiritual Assembly at the Hazíratul-Quds.

At 6 p.m. there was a buffet supper and reception in the Temple, with invitation to the Bahá’í friends in the Temple area. At 7:45 an evening program was held in Foundation Hall. Mr. Allen B. McDaniel acted as chairman. The Latin American representatives were extended a formal greeting and presented with the Centenary souvenir pictures of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and of the Temple. The speakers were Mrs. Corinne True, subject: "History of the Temple"; Mr. Carl Scheffler, subject: "History of the North American Community"; Mrs. Margery McCormick, subject: "The Second Bahá’í Century". Following this was the playing of the record of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s voice, the showing of the film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in America in 1912, and the colored films of the Holy Shrines and the gardens of Mt. Carmel. Explanatory comments about the Holy Shrines and the gardens were made by Miss Jeanne Bolles while the film was being shown. All addresses of the evening were translated into Spanish. After the evening meeting, the Latin American representatives and pioneers were again permitted to see the portrait of the Báb and a display of the sacred documents in the archives room.

Monday, July 10, 1944—Pictures of the delegates were taken with the National Spiritual Assembly. In the afternoon, a meeting of the delegates with Miss Edna True, Miss Gwenn Shelits and Mrs. Gayle Woolson was held to review the votes made by the Latin American teaching work, based on the consultation had by the Latin American delegates and the National Spiritual Assembly at convention. This meeting was held in preparation for the meeting to be held with the National Spiritual Assembly the following day so as to avoid repetition and to give these delegates an idea of what was already taken up with the National Spiritual Assembly by the delegates who attended the convention.

At 6 p.m., the delegates were guests of the Wilmette Community at a picnic supper held on the beach. After the supper the friends gathered together on the Lake Michigan beach sands and the Latin American friends gave informal talks about their countries and their joy and gratitude felt upon being here.

Tuesday, July 11 — Consultation and luncheon with the National Spiritual Assembly at the Haipratul-Quds.

Dinner guests of the Chicago Spiritual Assembly, then attended evening meeting at the Chicago Center with the Community. The delegates were each invited to speak.

Wednesday, July 12 — Consultation was continued with the National Spiritual Assembly in the afternoon.

In the evening, the Nineteen Day Feast was attended with the Wilmette Community in the Temple. Some Persian friends who had recently arrived to the United States also attended. These friends, had celebrated the Centenary Commemoration in India, and Dr. F. Asgharzadeh who had brought with him nine Centenary badges used at the Convention at India, gave one to each of the nine Latin American representatives present. He also told of his recent visit with the Guardian.

Thursday, July 13 — Trip to Milwaukee as guests of the Milwaukee, Wauwatosa, Whitefish Bay and Shorewood Communities. The friends were met by Mrs. Devah Ingold, Mr. Clarence Niss and son, Hamilton, at the station and taken on a sight-seeing tour on their way to the lake home of Mr. and Mrs. Niss where the friends spent a large part of the day. Later in the afternoon, all went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hautz, after which the supper given at the Milwaukee Center, in collaboration of the four neighbor communities, was attended. After the supper, the Nineteen Day Feast program was held, then the Latin American friends were asked to speak. About one hundred persons were present.

Friday, July 14 — This day was spent in taking care of transportation matters and getting passports ready for the return trip of the delegates. In spite of the many transportation obstacles, the efficient handling of these problems by Edna True resulted in excellent arrangements to get the delegates comfortably on their way to their respective countries without any delay, even to the expressed amazement of the Pan American Airways Office. The kind and helpful assistance of Mr. Mattoon was indispensable.

In the evening the delegates were dinner guests of the Evanston Community and then an informal meeting was held at the home of Miss Virginia Russell. Mr. Carl Scheffler was requested to speak to the friends about the early days of the establishment of the Cause in North America.

Saturday, July 15 — Latin American friends and pioneers with the Persian friends were luncheon guests of Miss Jeanne Bolles. In the afternoon, the Pan American Union meeting was attended. The important contact made at this meeting was their Washington representative who asked for a report of the Bahá’í activities in Latin America and of the Centenary Convention. His comment was that he did not know that the Bahá’í Faith was carrying on its activities on such a large scale.

At 6 p.m. the friends were dinner guests of Mrs. Enos Barton.

Sunday, July 16, Latin American, North American and Persian friends were luncheon guests of Dr. Edris Rice-Wray.

The Public meeting at the Temple was attended in the afternoon. After the meeting the friends were shown the Sacred Relics in the archives room.

Dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hassan who gave a Persian dinner for Latin American, North American and Persian Bahá’ís. Afterwards, the moving pictures taken at the Convention were shown. This beautiful oriental dinner and the seeing of the Centenary Convention films, and the union of the three Americas and Persia represented by the attending friends was a befitting close of this historic occasion.

The Latin American delegates were deeply touched and expressed their profound gratitude and appreciation for the kindness, hospitality and generosity demonstrated by the North American friends. They felt that this experience has brought about a greater spirit of unity cementing the three Americas and that their carrying back this new fire and wider vision will exert great influence in their countries.

Mrs. Gayle Woolson served as interpreter and hostess representing the National Spiritual Assembly for this session.

Gayle Woolson
I rejoice in the success of the vitally needed, timely conference with Latin American representatives; greatly welcome the decisions reached and the plans formulated. The first year of the second Bahá'í century should witness the establishment of a Spiritual Assembly in every remaining Republic and be signalized by a steady increase in the number of pioneers for both Latin and North America; by a further multiplication of groups, a wider dissemination of Bahá'í literature in both Spanish and Portuguese, closer relationships consolidating the communities and more effective contact by these communities with the masses of the population and all classes and races. I am ardently praying for mighty victories in every field as essential preliminary to the emergence of independent National Spiritual Assemblies and as indispensable prelude to launching in other continents, soon after the termination of the world conflict, the second stage of the momentous World Plan so intimately associated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá with the future destinies of the illustrious American Bahá'í Community.

July 17, 1944

The splendid and unique success that has attended the Centenary celebrations so admirably conducted by the American Bahá'í community, has befittingly crowned not only the fifty year record of services rendered by its valiant members, but the labors associated with the entire body of their fellow-workers in East and West in the course of an entire century. The consummation of the Seven Year Plan, immortalizing the fame of this richly blessed community, set the seal of complete spiritual triumph on these historic celebrations. A memorable chapter in the history of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in the West has been closed. A new chapter is now opening, a chapter which ere its termination, must eclipse the most shining victories won so heroically by those who have so fearlessly launched the first stage of the Great Plan conceived by 'Abdu'l-Bahá for the American believers. The prizes won so painstakingly in both the North and South American continents must be preserved at all costs. A mighty impetus should, at however great a sacrifice, be lent to the multiplication of Bahá'í centers in Latin America, to the expansion of Bahá'í literature, to the translation of the Bahá'í sacred writings, to the proclamation of the verities of the Faith to the masses, to the strengthening of the bonds binding the newly-fledged communities to each other, and to the deepening of the spiritual life of their members.

The task so marvelously initiated in the Latin Republics must be further consolidated ere the prosecutors of the World Plan bequeathed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá can embark on further stages, of still greater significance, in their world teaching mission. The cessation of hostilities will open before them fields of service of tremendous fertility and undreamed-of magnitude. The advantages and opportunities these fields will offer them cannot be exploited unless and until the work to which they have already set their hand in the Western Hemisphere is sufficiently advanced and consolidated. Time is pressing. The new tasks are already beginning to loom on the horizon. The work that still remains to be accomplished ere the next stage is ushered in is still considerable and exacting. I feel confident that the American Bahá'í community will, as it has in the past, rise to the occasion and discharge its high duties as befits the unique position it occupies.

The following excerpts from the same letter were written by the Guardian through his Secretary.

As you know, from his various cabled messages, he has been greatly rejoiced over the complete triumph of the arduous Seven Year Plan undertaken by the American believers during a difficult period in world events and carried forward to a glorious conclusion in the very teeth of the tempest of war which has been raging for almost five of the seven years of their heroic endeavor. To complete such a Plan during times of peace and security would in itself have been a great achievement; but to have succeeded during the darkest days of humanity's abasement and trial, is truly little short of miraculous and must forever attest the calibre of the faith and loyalty which fills the hearts of the members of the blessed American Bahá'í community.

His hope and belief is that they will not rest on their oars, but will, their appetites whetted by their successes, carry on their great and noble tasks allotted to them by the Center of the Covenant Himself.

The work that lies ahead of them in the immediate future is clearly defined: The great advantages won for the Faith in the eyes of the public by the remarkable success of the Centenary in Wilmette; the large attendance of believers, the presence of gifted and devoted Central and South American representatives of newly established outposts of the Faith, should be followed up by teaching campaigns, wide publicity... and as many radio broadcasts as can be secured. A contact with the masses has, for the first time, to all intents and purposes, since 'Abdu'l-Bahá's visit, been made, and should be vigorously maintained. Inside the Bahá’í Fold every effort must be exerted to safeguard the newly established Assemblies and prevent them from falling back into group status again. In Latin America the Assemblies must not only be maintained but new ones established in the Republics which have not yet a Bahá’í administrative nucleus. Literature in Spanish and Portuguese should be made available as speedily as possible and disseminated far and wide. Latin American and native Bahá’ís should, whenever qualified, be urged and assisted to pioneer, to travel and to teach in Central and South America, thereby encouraging them to gradually shoulder their own responsibilities.

With such a triumph behind you the Guardian feels confident you will face these many tasks that lie ahead with joy and his prayers will constantly be offered on your behalf and for your inspiration and guidance.

The final message received by the National Spiritual Assembly is the Guardian’s reply to word sent him from the September meeting that the National Assembly is determined to arise in unity with the National Committees and the local Assemblies to preserve the prizes already won and prepare to discharge the greater responsibilities and tasks which lie ahead:

Profoundly gratified, I greatly welcome the noble determination of Committees and Assemblies unidely to arise to preserve the prizes dearly won and prepare themselves belligerently to discharge the mightier, more glorious task ahead in the opening years of the second century.

Letters from the Guardian to Individuals

The following excerpts from letters written by the Guardian through his Secretary to individual Bahá’ís are published with his consent:

He feels that, although your desire to partake actively of the dangers and miseries afflicting so many millions of people today, is natural, and a noble impulse, there can be no comparison between the value of Bahá’í work and any other form of service to humanity.

If the Bahá’ís could evaluate their work properly they would see that, whereas other forms of relief work are superficial in character, alleviating the sufferings and ills of men for a short time at best, the work they are doing is to lay the foundation of a new spiritual Order in the world founded on the Word of God, operating according to the laws He has laid down for this age. No one else can do this work except those who have fully realized the meaning of the Message of Bahá’u’lláh, whereas almost any courageous, sincere person can engage in relief work, etc.

The believers are building a refuge for mankind. This is their supreme, sacred task and they should devote every moment they can to this task.

—To Dagmar Dole, March 25, 1943.

Regarding the four and twenty elders: The Master, in a Tablet, stated that they were the Báb, the eighteen Letters of the Living, and five others who would be known in the future. So far we do not know who these five others are. —To Mrs. George R. True, July 22, 1943.

If the believers could properly evaluate the work they are doing they would be astonished at its importance, but they are in the position of not being able to see the forest for the trees; they are too close to it to realize its true import.

—To Mrs. Alice Dudley, May 3, 1942. The Hosts of His Testament refers to those who are firm in the Will and Testament of Bahá’u’lláh and who defend and uphold it. —To Mrs. Alice Dudley, April 18, 1941, in answer to question about the meaning of this term used in the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

The word “cordon” so often mentioned in the Teachings means both the Faith itself and also the power of the Faith which sustains those who cling to it. —To Mrs. Alice Dudley, April 18, 1941.

Ultimately all the battle of life is within the individual. No amount of organization can solve the inner problems or produce or prevent, as the case may be, victory or failure at a crucial moment. In such times as these particularly, individuals are torn by great forces at large in the world, and we see some weak ones strong, and strong ones fail—we can only try, through loving advice, as your Committee has done, to bring about the act on the part of the believer which will be for the highest good of the Cause. Because obviously everything bad for the Cause cannot be the highest good of the individual Bahá’í. —To Letroy Joas, December 17, 1943.

Now is not the time for the friends to seek to establish a Bahá’í village; they have definite tasks confronting them of the utmost importance and urgency, and on these they should concentrate their attention. Nor does the Guardian feel that it is necessary for the friends to buy land at this time. In the future, when they have accomplished the goals set out for them by the beloved Master Himself, they will be able to develop more community projects, but now such enterprises would merely dissipate their strength which should all be directed into the teaching work.

—To Mrs. Ethel Murray, March 26, 1942.

Baha'i News

Baha'i News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Bahá’í community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: “The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function. . . . I would urge you to enlarge its scope . . . that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise.

“it should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá’í activity, both local and foreign, stimulating interest in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause.”

The contents include: material supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly, such as the Guardian’s messages, the Assembly’s letters and its general statements and reports; Committee plans which have been approved and authorized; Committee news reports of activities; annual reports from local Assemblies; news items from local Assemblies; activities in regional areas as reported by or through the National Teaching Committee; activities in Central and South America as reported by the Inter-American Committee; news from other lands gathered from the bulletins of the various National Assemblies: a record of new enrollments and transfers; a record of deaths; photographs of general Bahá’í interest.

Baha'i News is edited by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is News Committee: Horace Holley, Secretary, Carreeta Busey, Mable H. Paine. Address: Baha’i News Committee, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill.
Prayers to Be Read as Revealed

Regarding your question as to the changing of pronouns in Bahá'í prayers: The Guardian does not approve of such changes, either in the specific prayers or in any others. They should be read as printed without changing a single word.—Shoghi Effendi, through his Secretary, to the National Spiritual Assembly April 13, 1944.

(This excerpt was written in reply to question frequently asked by believers, whether it is permissible to change a prayer in order to suit the immediate situation. For example, to say "we" instead of "I," or "he" instead of "she" etc.)

On Dissolution and Formation of Local Assemblies

In connection with your Assembly's two actions regarding the formation and dissolution of Spiritual Assemblies: The Guardian approves of your first action, which he understands is only for this last year of the first Bahá'í Century, as, of course, in the future Assemblies will be formed only during the month of April. As to the second action, however, any Assembly which is dissolved must immediately report to the national secretary, who must always keep an up to date list of Assemblies. Any dissolved Assembly cannot be reconstituted until the time of election in April. This is the general principle which must be followed in the future. In this last year of the Century, however, any Assembly that is dissolved may be reconstituted as soon as the number of believers reverts to nine again.—Shoghi Effendi, through his Secretary, to the National Spiritual Assembly April 13, 1944.

(Written in reply to question of procedure raised by the NSA in connection with the special condition existing prior to the Centenary date due to the Guardian's temporary waiving of the regulation that Assemblies can only be elected or constituted on April 21.)

A New Bahá'í Era Begins

Beloved Friends:

In the messages which have come to us from the Guardian since the Convention and Centenary, we respond deeply and joyously to two different but blended and inter-related themes. Shoghi Effendi has expressed his satisfaction and gratitude for the successful completion of all three aspects of the Seven Year Plan, and for the achievement of so great a Centenary celebration. At the same time he quickens us to awareness and capacity for the greater tasks which lie before the American Bahá'í Community in terms of the mission entrusted to us by 'Abdu'l-Bahá to spread the Faith of Bahá'ulláh to the ends of the earth.

The first year of the second Bahá'í century is the opening of a new era for the Bahá'ís of North America, associated now so closely with their coworkers of Central and South America and the isles of the Caribbean sea. We have entered a higher class of the spiritual university, we have been given a greater rank, we live in a world community and not merely in that of our city, our state or our nation.

Let us read and ponder these particular messages, for they not only guide our steps of progress but release the power we require to become so mature, so tireless, so effective in the prosecution of our Bahá'í affairs. We are to safeguard and maintain all the Assemblies established in the new states and provinces; we are to multiply the number of Assemblies and the number of groups; we are to bring the Faith to the attention of the masses, not merely to a few individuals; we are to become better acquainted with the other Bahá'ís of our state or province; we are to form Assemblies in seven more Latin American republics—and accomplish this during the present year, as necessary foundation for the international teaching which both North and South American believers are to undertake as the tides of war recede and the major problem of world order confronts a devastated mankind.

This year the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to draw close to each individual believer and each administrative body, as parts of one and the same spiritual entity and social organism charged with a holy and unique mission by the Manifestation who came to save humanity and give it the means of law, order, unity, peace and knowledge of God. No part of the Bahá’í body can be effective or joyous except by unified and cooperative relationships with all other parts. Each believer must attain his own degree of consecration to realize his contribution to the general unity, and the administrative order, which is the form which the general spiritual unity is to take in the social world, must in each of its vital institutions attain and preserve a true vision of order and activity as a whole. The function entrusted to each Assembly, national or local, is to be understood and discharged conscientiously, and each Committee, national or regional, has its appointed field of action wherein it carries responsibility for the entire Bahá’í community. Whatever is accomplished, by heroic individuals or by devoted and efficient Committees or by unified and experienced Assemblies, we draw our capacity and inspiration from one and the same common store. The Holy Spirit surrounds us all alike. We have no private hoards or special privileges of spiritual wealth. The Spirit flows through the individual and through the organ and institution without stint or discrimination in the measure of the individual’s capacity and sacrifice and in the measure of the institution’s unity and devotion for the fulfillment of its particular task.

In its luminous depths, the work of the Spirit is a mystery which each Bahá’í learns for himself. The Guardian is its perfect universal expression for the worldwide community at this time. Under his general guidance the national and local work requires faith, knowledge and courageous energy on the part of all the Bahá’ís concerned. Our work will not be done for us but through us and with us by the higher Power.

There are certain elements which can and will contribute to the collective capacity of the American Bahá’í community this year. First, a sharing in the spirit of intimate comradeship of all the national plans and activities through regular communications in Bahá’í News. Second the employment of the National Fund for appropriations distributed as fairly as possible over all the work. Third, every possible assistance in meeting the need for state and province development as the basis for the election of Convention delegates each year. Fourth, enlargement of Bahá’í News as may be required by the Bahá’í News Committee for reporting the activities made known by National Committees and local Assemblies. Fifth, provision of large editions of teaching literature so that the friends may distribute pamphlets at low cost.

National Fund

First let us share some very important facts about the National Fund.

Certified Public Accountants have gone over our financial records for the period April 1, 1938 to February 29, 1944, and found them in order. This brings the certification of the accounts up to the end of the last Bahá’í fiscal year.

From the report of the Centenary Committee we cite the following figures of special expense incurred in this great undertaking.

1. Improvements to Temple interior and grounds ............ $2,908.75
2. Centenary expense .......... 7,454.81
3. Latin American representatives, travel and living expense (in May and also July) .......... $12,506.58

One additional item is the amount provided to Canadian delegates in American currency to make it possible for them to attend the Convention and Centenary — $325.00. This amount was donated to the Canadian Bahá’í Fund by the delegates in Canadian currency, so that this transaction represents a transfer of funds rather than an appropriation or expense.

The Annual Budget for the current year was reported in a circular letter issued early in June. Its items include:

- Administration, $15,000.00;
- North America Teaching, $30,000.00;
- South America Teaching, $15,000.00;
- Temple Maintenance and Operation, $10,000.00;
- Purchase of Temple Land, $10,000.00;
- Properties Maintenance other than Temple, $10,000.00;
- Annual Convention, Public Program and State Elections, $5,000.00;
- Service Committees, Operating Expenses and Activities, $15,000.00;
- Assembly Development Committee, $5,000.00;
- Contingent for Literature, $5,000.00;
- Reserve, $5,000.00 — Total, $125,000.00.

This total is less than that of the budgets adopted in recent years for the achievement of the Seven Year Plan. Nevertheless it calls for intense and constant devotion, and for hearty cooperation on the part of the local Assemblies, that each community may donate to the National Fund every month.

Assembly Roll

Up to the September meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly, reports had been received of four local Assemblies reduced to group status since April 21, the date of the annual elections: Jersey City, Newark, Huntington Park and St. Lambert. Deaths and departures from the city brought the number of believers below the minimum required to sustain the institution.

This report is evidence of the fact that zealous teaching, ardor in study, and unity in spirit is required to maintain as well as establish a Bahá’í community. To preserve what we have we must strive for more.

All-America Unity

One new and distinctive step which has been taken this year is the appointment of Committees in Latin America with general functions which could not be carried out by any one local Assembly’s authority or resources. We report here as important current news an excerpt from circular letter recently sent to all the Bahá’í centers in Central and South America:

Many momentous decisions were made possible by this new and unprecedented union of minds and hearts from all parts of the Americas. But before we share with you the various actions taken after mutual consultation, we wish to record the names of all the Bahá’ís who came as representatives of their fellow-believers at home, either at the time of the Centenary in May or the meetings held during July:

- Sr. Salvador Torno, Argentina
- Dr. Fernando Nova, Brazil
- Sr. Estaban Canales, Chile
- Sr. Eduardo Gonzalez Lopez, Cuba
- Sra. Josepha Bibow, Colombia
- Sr. Raul Contreras, Costa Rica
- Sr. Eugenio Gines, Cuba
- Sra. Eduardo Gonzalez Lopez, Ecuador
- Sra. Angela Ochoa Vazquez, Honduras
- Mr. William Mitchell, Jamaica
The Bahá’ís who had planned to come from Bolivia, Haiti, Uruguay and Venezuela were unfortunately prevented on account of travel difficulties. Visitors from Latin America, including pioneer teachers, included: Miss Elisabeth Cheney, Mrs. Gayle Woolson, Mrs. Louise Caswell, Mrs. Cora Oliver, Miss Gwenne D. Sholtis, Miss Margaret Lentz, Miss Josephine Kruka, Miss Winifred Louise Baker, Miss Jean Silver, Srta. Ofelia Montalvo, Mr. Raymond I. Betts and Mrs. Frances Stewart, all of whom contributed to the spirit of these Inter-America Bahá’í gatherings.

The plans adopted at the conference in May, supplemented by further actions taken in July, are summarized as follows:

To appoint a committee on Spanish translation of Bahá’í literature with function of translating Bahá’í literature into Spanish, review translations submitted to the Committee, recommend the order in which books are to be sent to the press, this Committee to submit its recommendations to the National Spiritual Assembly for final approval. The Committee is to be established with the following membership: Emilio Barros, Chairman, Lillian McRae and Salvador Tormo.

To establish a Committee on Portuguese translations of Bahá’í literature with function of translating Bahá’í literature into Portuguese, review translations submitted to the Committee, recommend the order in which books and pamphlets are sent to press. This Committee is to submit its recommendations to the National Assembly for final approval. The Committee is to be established with the following membership: Leonora Armstrong, Chairman, Mrs. Roy Worley, Dr. Fernando Nova and Mrs. Roscoe Wood.

To establish a secondary center for distribution of Bahá’í literature, with the authority to print leaflets and pamphlets, and receive and reship books published in Buenos Aires or North America.

To establish a committee with these functions, consisting of Alfred Osborne, Chairman, Louise Caswell, Cora Oliver, Julia Regal.

To provide all the Latin American Bahá’í centers with copies of documentary material which indicate the recognition of the Bahá’í religion by the American Federal Government, including photostatic copies of the certificates issued by the State and Treasury Departments which certify the Declaration of Trust, and copy of the latest report on the Bahá’í Faith of the religious census, and photostats of the trademark issued on the Greatest Name, the word “Bahá’í” and World Order Magazine.

To deposit with the American Consulates in all cities of Latin America where Bahá’í centers exist, and where they are established in future, a set of the documentary material listed in the foregoing paragraph, and including a copy of the summary in English issued by the National Spiritual Assembly.

To appoint an editorial committee with the function of producing a monthly bulletin in Spanish to be issued in mimeographed form to circulate items of Bahá’í news of particular interest to Latin America, teaching plans, notices of new publications and other Bahá’í material, to be prepared by contributing editors selected by each of the various centers, and also carrying such material as may be provided by the Inter-America Committee and the National Spiritual Assembly. The bulletin to be started by budgets voted from the Latin American fund of the National Spiritual Assembly.

To appoint this committee with the following members: Alfred Osborne, Editor, Prof. Edelberto Torres, Assistant Editor.

To appoint an editing committee of a Portuguese section to be added to copies of the bulletin received in Brazil and distributed to the Brazilian believers.

To appoint the above committee to consist of Dr. Fernando Nova, Chairman, Mrs. Leonora Armstrong, Mrs. Roy Worley.

To request the committee to submit a sample of the bulletin with an estimate of cost on an edition sufficient to include all the Latin American believers, and to run it with four pages, front and back, of standard form.

To authorize the Treasurer to provide a budget up to $250.00 for the first year for this expense.

The Spirit of Victory

The world will pass through its greatest changes and transformations in the years that lie immediately ahead. Great and powerful organizations will attempt to exploit troubles and uncertainties and confusions for the seizure of power and control of human life for ends other than those revealed by Baha’u’llah. Our conviction of spiritual victory for His Cause will be tested as never before.
Those who wish to review this suband united encourage a schedule of constructive activity which prepares Bahá'í youth for full administrative responsibility and teaching experience.)

The National Youth Committee is being requested to plan in the course of this year a general rally meeting to be held at the Bahá'í House of Worship during one of the posted sessions of the National Spiritual Assembly in order to combine such a rally with a brief consultation with the National body.

It was voted to publish in Bahá'í
News, and to submit to the Guardian, the following general resolution adopted by the Convention:

Voted, that we, the delegates assembled under the dome of the Bahá'í House of Worship in this first All-America Convention, representing the Bahá'ís of North, Central and South America, conscious that the destiny of America as envisioned by the Fathers of the Bahá'í Faith is to 'lay the corner-stone of a universal and enduring peace; proclaim the solidarity, the unity, and maturity of mankind;'_ usher in the future world commonwealth; and 'lead all nations spiritually,'_ do solemnly and gratefully acclaim the triumphant consummation of the spiritual tasks of the First Century of the Bahá'í Faith.

With profound emotion we record the successful conclusion on March 28, 1944, of a Plan launched in 1937 which was the first step in the "world mission entrusted ... to the American Bahá'í Community." This step signalled the erection of the framework of the Bahá'í Administrative Order in every State of the United States, every Province of Canada, Hawaii, District of Columbia, and Alaska; and the establishment of the Faith in every Republic of Central and South America.

As we stand upon the threshold of this Second Century, we feel it incumbent to call upon the collective devotion and united will of the Bahá'í communities of all the Americas, for the immediate and energetic prosecution of the next stages in the enfolding of this mission.
To this end we propose the adoption of the following program of action:

1) The rapid development in North America of a Bahá'í community fully qualified to prosecute its world mission, and to discharge all the responsibilities with which this community has been vested.

2) The complete establishment at the earliest possible date of the structural basis of the Bahá'í Adm inistrative Order in every Republic of Central and South America, and the multiplication of Bahá'í communities throughout Latin America.

3) Preparation, through translation and publication of literature, and the training of teachers and pioneers, for bringing to the aid of our fellow Bahá'ís in Europe, Asia and Africa, such material and spiritual assistance as they may require when the termination of the war shall permit the resumption of full teaching ac-vitivity.

We recommend to the National Spiritual Assembly that these proposals for inaugurating the tasks of the Second Bahá'í Century be submitted to the Guardian of the Faith for his advice and counsel, and that a Plan be then devised and promulgated for our guidance in the redoubled efforts which we are eagerly resolved to undertake.

The N.S.A. has voted to record that it was deeply moved by the determination of the friends at the Convention to immediately carry on actively all branches of our National and International teaching work:
that actions have been taken to set

On Publication of the Guardian’s Letters

For a number of years, the National Spiritual Assembly has only published in Bahá’í News such excerpts from the Guardian’s letters to individuals, committees or local Assemblies as the Assembly itself had brought to the Guardian’s attention and obtained his consent to publish. This procedure, which rests upon the Guardian’s own direction to the N.S.A., means publication not only in Bahá’í News but in any official Bahá’í communication such as Assembly bulletins, National Committee circular letters or Regional bulletins and circular letters. The believers are requested to submit to the N.S.A. whatever letter they have from Haifa which they feel should be published.

Our Teaching Program

“Immediate attention should be focused in the course of the opening year of the Second Century on consolidation of the nobly-won victories through reinforcement of newly-formed Assemblies, multiplication of groups and increase in number of Assemblies...”

—SHOGHI EFFENDI

Through this message we can find the outlines of our teaching program taking shape.

1) The reinforcement of new Assemblies means more settlers and more teaching assistance, as well as the intensification of local effort. There is still very great need for volunteers in both capacities, since several of the new Assemblies have lost personnel and are in a precarious position, while all will benefit by the stimulation of circuit and travelling teachers.

2) The multiplication of groups is a logical development from the remarkable fact that believers already reside in 1300 localities in North America. It is these believers and groups who today have the true opportunity for pioneering. It is to them the Guardian looks, for they are the growing-points of dynamic expansion.

3) The increase in number of Assemblies has inexhaustible possibilities which lie close at hand. At the present time, Regional Committees are surveying their areas for groups which have nearly the required number. Although we do not yet have their count, we know that the total is amazingly large, and promises that we shall far outstrip the work of the last seven years which doubled the number of Assemblies.

Clearly, the three-fold program which the Guardian describes is a call to each one of us and can embrace the efforts of all. Settlers, teachers, isolated believers, groups, local and regional teaching committees—all are summoned to take up this new phase in collective teaching, to found on this continent the mighty reservoir of Bahá’u’lláh’s legions.

What can be achieved through devotion and effort has been richly demonstrated by the pioneers of the Seven Year Plan. Today, we are all pioneers in a new and all-embracing task. We have the opportunity to apply well-tested methods, and to advance with confidence in the confirmation of God, which has supported us in the past and will assuredly sustain every sincere believer.

Here, in the exhilarating phrases of the Divine Plan, may our vision be renewed and reinforced: “Now strive ye that the Collective Center of the sacred religions—for the inscription of which all the Prophets were manifested and which is no other than the spirit of the Divine Teachings—be spread in all parts of America... This is the most great work! Should you become confirmed therein, this world will become another world, the surface of the earth will become the delectable Paradise, and eternal institutions be founded.”

—NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE
Special Financial Report of Publishing Committee

A brief summary of report submitted by the Publishing Committee on September 4 will give the believers a very clear picture of the size of our publishing operations through the final year of the first Bahá’í Century and well into the opening of the second Century.

On November 5, 1943, the Committee submitted to the National Spiritual Assembly a complete list of books, pamphlets, outlines, etc., either being printed at that time or earmarked for reprinting a year or so from that date. The purpose of this special survey was to develop a plan for keeping all the necessary Bahá’í titles in print during the period of the war, when publishing operations have become difficult and uncertain.

The total amount involved in that list was $37,000—the cost of keeping the needed titles in stock for two or more years. At that time the Committee was obliged to point out that it could not commit itself to that amount of expense at any one time but could meet a large part of it over a period of time.

Since then, and up to September 4, the Publishing Committee has manufactured books and pamphlets to the amount of $14,827.65, and has in process of completion work of the amount of $8,801.00—a total of $23,628.65. Against this cost, the Committee has paid printing bills to a total of $8,912.86, leaving a balance payable now or in the near future of $13,515.79. Through the beautiful generosity of one Bahá’í family a special donation has been made to pay the cost of the Guardian’s book, God Passes By, and therefore the Committee has cash on hand to defray this cost which is more than $3,000.00, thus reducing the outstanding amounts to something a little more than $10,000.00.

The Committee is making every effort to meet all these printing costs from current income, so that the National Bahá’í Fund will not have to be drawn upon for a special appropriation. In this connection the Committee wishes to emphasize the fact that the retail price of books cannot be set as low as many purchasers would prefer, for without a margin of profit the Committee would be unable to finance any new books or meet any emergency conditions, but could only manage to keep existing stock in print, unless the National Assembly each year adds a publishing appropriation to its annual budget. In purchasing a Bahá’í book, the believer is not merely acquiring one volume but also contributing to the development of the Bahá’í publishing facilities and making this branch of Bahá’í activity independent of the National Fund.

New Publications

God Passes By, by Shoghi Effendi. The Guardian’s survey of the first Bahá’í Century is now in the bindery and a supply of books by November 15 is hoped for. This work has 436 pages and is bound in dark red fabricoid. Price $2.50

The Bahá’í Centenary, compiled by the National Spiritual Assembly. Prepared as part of the Centenary celebration, this book contains excerpts concerning the Báb, words of Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and the Guardian concerning America, and articles by believers outlining aspects of American Bahá’í history and achievement. 288 pages, bound in blue fabricoid. Now in the bindery. Publication date not determined. Price $2.00

The Báb’s Address to Letters of the Living, pamphlet reproducing hand-lettered text taken from pp. 92-94 of The Dawn-Breakers. Price 10c

The Divine Art of Living, compiled by Mabel Hyde Paine. This beautiful title is now restored to our literature in an attractive, and small and convenient volume of excerpts from the Bahá’í Writings, 132 pages, bound in fabricoid, Price $1.25

A World Survey of the Bahá’í Faith 1844-1944, compiled by the Guardian of the Faith. This is a 20-page pamphlet containing Shoghi Effendi’s own selection of facts and data showing the growth of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in its first century. The National Spiritual Assembly wishes this featured in our teaching work, and the believers will find it of unique value for conveying a clear impression of the scope of this world-wide Cause. 50 copies for $1.50

The World Faith of Bahá’u’lláh; A Summary of Its Aims, Teachings, History and Administrative Order, by the National Spiritual Assembly. A reprint, in more convenient size, of the four-page, 8½ by 11-inch summary issued in August, 1943. The present edition is a pamphlet of eight pages and measures 5 by 7 inches. 100 copies for $1.00

Headlines Tomorrow, by Marzieh Gail. This interesting brief statement, which has been found so useful in teaching contacts, has been reprinted as a four page leaflet. 100 copies for $1.50

A Bahá’í Child’s ABC, text by Roberta Christian, illustrations by Rochelle Boonshaft. Following the classic style of the traditional first book for children, this work illustrates the letters of the alphabet with a running text associating each letter with a Bahá’í Figure or truth. Bound in red paper, title in gold. Price 75c World Order Magazine—a special Centenary issue, May and June, 1944. Copies of these two numbers may be obtained at the special rate of ten for $1.00. Centenary talks have been made available in later issues of the magazine.

Complete price list of Bahá’í books sent on request. Address Bahá’í Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

Public Teaching Bulletin

The leaflet entitled A World Faith, each issue consisting of excerpts from the Bahá’í writings, is published by the National Spiritual Assembly and copies are obtained by sending cash with order to the Treasurer. Three new bulletins are now out, number 5, 6 and 7 respectively. Each issue is sold at the rate of 50 copies for 50c, 100 for $1.00 and so on.

Letters from Subscribers

The business office of World Order reports that numerous letters from the magazine’s subscribers continue to reflect its growing appeal to Bahá’ís and potential believers alike. Its recognition as an inspiring teaching medium is frequently referred to in letters that accompany gift subscriptions; references, similar in meaning to the following excerpt from a subscriber’s communication:
"I believe, for those interested in the Faith, a gift subscription will be a constant teaching medium and a source of inspiration. Sometimes these friends cannot get to meetings and the magazine will maintain their touch with the Faith."

Another inspiring letter that accompanied an order for five new subscriptions contained the following message: "We are proud to tell you that every Baha'i family here now subscribes to World Order. That means nine copies come to our city each month and we have only fourteen Bahais here."

Incidentally, we understand that whilst single copies of the April and July 1944 issues of World Order are no longer available, it is still possible to secure copies of the May and June issues, containing: Selections from the Writings of the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Guardian, related to the Mission of the Báb; also: Passages from the talks at the Centenary Convention, in quantities of 10 or more at the special price of .10c per copy by addressing orders to World Order, 110 Linden Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

Lecture Slides

Through the Temple Librarian and Sales Committee 25 sets of Temple slides are now available for purchase. Each set includes 15 Kodachrome views of the Temple and details of its ornamentation, and 35 black and white views showing progress in construction and sections of the outer finish. The color views are mounted in 2 x 2 inch paper mounts ready for projection, while the black and white views are in the form of a positive film strip. Titles of each of the 50 views and directions for mounting the separate black and white views in S.V.E. Ready-Mounts, obtainable at any Kodak store, are supplied with each order. The cost of the slides is $5.00 per set of 50, plus 25c for postage and insurance.

Photostats

Positive photostats or facsimile copies in black and white of the Will and Testament of Bahá'u'lláh and of the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, photostats of the first or 1916 (framed) series of the Divine Plan Tablets, and of the historic Tablet of 'Abdu'l-Bahá to the House of Justice in Chicago are also available through the Temple Librarian and Sales Committee. The cost of these photostats is as follows:

- Will and Testament of Bahá'u'lláh (3 pages) ............... $.75
- Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá (10 pages) .... 1.75
- Divine Plan Tablets to North-eastern, Southern, Central, Western States, and Canada, each ........................... .35
- Divine Plan Tablets to the United States and Canada: .50
- Tablet to the House of Justice ............................ .50
- First Tablet (2 pages in length) ......................... .70
- Second and third Tablets (4 pages in length), each 1.40
- Orders enclosing check to cover cost and mailing should be sent to Mr. Harry E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill.

Ornamentation of Baha'i Temple

Final Report of Supervising Engineer

To the Temple Trustees for the Benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'ís of the United States and Canada

Dear Friends:

About one year after the completion of the superstructure of the Temple, on June 6, 1932, the first contract for the ornamentation was awarded to John J. Earley of Washington, D.C. This contract involved the making and placing of the material comprising the dome ornamentation including the great ribs. As the work proceeded, it was found necessary to continue these ribs beyond the base of the dome to the foot of the clerestory.

The preliminary work under the first contract included studies of plant, technique, and methods for the execution of the work. While new and more difficult problems arose as the various subsequent contracts were prosecuted, the general principle of technique and method, early established and developed, were generally used throughout the entire project. For example, to allow for expansion and contraction of the reinforced concrete material and to eliminate cracking as far as practicable, the ornamentation was made in sections and placed with suitable spaces between adjacent sections. Each section was designed and prepared as a concrete cast reinforced with a steel frame to provide sufficient strength for handling at the plant and at the building and for resisting wind and other pressures as a part of the structure.

Practically the same groups of workmen carried out the various steps of the preparation of the models and molds and the pouring and curing of the casts at the Studio, and the erection of the casts and pouring of the piers, arches and other broad flat members on the building.

Outstanding among the problems that were solved in the handling of the work was the support and fastening of the dome ornamentation. A structural steel furring system was devised and built on the outer steel dome framework and to this system the 367 casts that comprise the dome ornamentation were securely supported and fastened.

One of the principal reasons for doing the dome ornamentation first was the early belief that this portion of the project would be the most difficult. As the work progressed into its later stages, however, unforeseen conditions and difficulties were encountered. These problems reached their highest complexity in the first or main story, especially in the placing and setting of the great spandrel sections and of the L-shaped cornice pieces. In this portion of the work, the cost of setting the casts was from two to three times the cost of making the sections; the reverse of the experience in the ornamentation of the dome, clerestory and gallery story. This unforeseen situation accounts partly for the over-run in cost over the original estimate of the main story contract.

The unique method of building the Temple; erecting an enclosed framework superstructure and subsequently clothing it with an outer covering to furnish the architectural design, especially for a structure of this unusual type and intricate nature, was predicated on the use of a plastic material for the making of many casts from one model and mold, and the accurate application of these concrete sections to the superstructure. Realizing these requirements, the sub-contractors under the contractor, the George A. Fuller Company, in the fabrication and erection of the framework and in the pouring of the concrete of the superstructure, made every effort to build a structure true to the dimensions of the architect's design. In the application of the ornamentation on the dome, clerestory, gallery story and in the setting of the 917 step sections, the superstructure was found to be remarkably true to form and dimension. In the main story, however, a distortion of a maximum of about six inches was found at the cornice and involved cutting out of the concrete at the top of several faces and the filling in with additional concrete as backing on other faces. This condition accounted for an additional expense for labor and material of about $10,000.00.

The accompanying table gives a brief résumé of the various steps in the handling of the exterior ornamentation, and the expenditures made under the series of contracts with John J. Earley under which this work was done.

The first two contracts, which involved the ornamentation of the dome, ribs and clerestory or drum beneath the dome, extended over a period of nearly three years. The preliminary work, involving the preparation of plans, the remodeling of the plant at Roslyn, Virginia, the building of the full-size wooden replica of one-ninth of the outer dome framework and other similar work were done during the summer and fall of 1932. Construction at the Temple was initiated with the erection of the furring system on the outer dome framework and continued through January, 1934, when the last sections of the great ribs were swung into place along the top of the dome. The erection of the dome and rib sections—involved the handling of pieces weighing up to three tons—was handled efficiently and without mishap by the Friedstad Company, the same contractors that erected the structural steel dome in the fall of 1930. In January, 1934, upon completion of the dome and ribs, a second contract was entered into with the Earley Studio for the ornamentation of the clerestory. This project was completed a little over a year later in January, 1935.

The over-run of some $30,800 in the cost of these first two contracts was due largely to the furring system and to the erection of castings; two items which had not been adequately allowed for in the original estimate.

A two-year period of construction inactivity elapsed from the summer of 1935 to the fall of 1937, during which time a special Technical Committee of Baha'is and non-Baha'is reviewed the work done under the first two contracts, with special reference to placing future contracts on a competitive and lump-sum basis. The unanimous report of this committee made to the Temple Trustees at Green Acre in August, 1937, recommended that the ornamentation be continued with the Earley Studio on the basis of the experience gained in the development of methods, technique, materials, etc. under the first two contracts.

Baha'i News

Re-estimating the second or gallery story ornamentation at $125,000.00, the Earley Studio was awarded a cost-plus contract for this work in October, 1937. The faces were finished in November, 1938, and the nine pylons about eight months later. The cost of this work exceeded the estimate only by about $2,800.00.

Meanwhile, to expedite the Temple construction and under the impetus of generous contributions, the Earley Studio was authorized by the Temple Trustees to proceed with the preparation of the models and molds for the main story ornamentation. During the late winter and spring of 1939, the work under these two contracts was carried on in the Studio. With a saving of about $10,000 effected in the making of the molds, the contractor was given permission to proceed with casting of the lowest section of the nine main story pylons. This work was continued and the pylons were completed in September, 1940.

The casting and erection of the main story grilles, pilasters, columns, arches, spandrels, cornice and other minor parts, was handled under two principal contracts; first one involving the ornamentation of three faces and second, the work required for the remaining six faces. These two contracts overlapped as to time and construction involved. As the pouring of the concrete and the placing of the casts proceeded from the bases of the faces, the difficulties inherent in the handling of the great arch and spandrel sections and in the setting of the cornice pieces became a major factor in running up the cost of the work above the original estimate.

Other unforeseen and unallowed-for factors in the final cost of the main story ornamentation were the wage overtime ornamentation were the wage overtime, increased costs of materials, higher freight rates and social security and liability insurance. As will be noted in the table, the over-run in construction cost on the main story was about $57,500, or 38 per cent above the original estimate of $150,000.

With Europe becoming engulfed in war and realizing the need for haste in the prosecution of the Temple construction, the Temple Trustees wisely arranged with the contractor for the purchase of reinforcing steel, cement and stone necessary for the building of the 18 circular steps at the base of the Temple. The cement and stone were contracted for and the steel purchased in the summer of 1941.

The original plans of the architect contemplated pouring the concrete steps on the ramp of the foundation structure built in 1922. In 1939, the Earley Studio prepared sketches and made a preliminary estimate of $30,000 for building the steps in sections suspended from the main floor platforms. Later studies and the experience of the Federal government on monumental buildings in Washington developed a final design comprising 917 step sections supported on carriages built over the girders that support the sloping deck. In May, 1941, the Earley Studio was authorized to proceed with the steps, and the plans, forms, and other preliminary work, involving an expenditure of some $3,000, were done at the Studio. In April, 1942, the preparation of the reinforcement units for the step sections was begun at the Earley plant, and the construction of the carriages started at the Temple about the middle of May. The setting of the step sections was begun in July and was somewhat retarded by lack of sufficient reinforcement units to cast and set all of the 17 sections in one flight at one setup of the hoist. These reinforcement units should have been prepared in the winter of 1940 and the spring of 1941 as directed by the Supervising Engineer, but at this period the

Baha'i Center of Minneapolis
Earley Studio was running seven days a week on war contracts for the War and Navy Departments and the reinforcing shop was not available.

The final cost of $50,817.84 for the work involved in the steps contract, while it exceeds the original estimate of $30,000 (made on the basis of a different, much simpler design), is a reasonable cost under conditions at that time, for the work done, involving about 10,000 lneal feet of circular steps, 1000 square feet of main floor platforms and the faces of the plinths of the nine pylons.

In the early winter of 1940-41, Mr. Earley became ill and was unable to be at the Studio and attend to his business. During the past sixteen months his associate, Mr. B. G. Taylor, has carried the burden of the business under the heavy pressure of wartime conditions. On April 1, 1943, Mr. Taylor collapsed at the Studio and is still (April 22) in the hospital in a serious condition. It will be several months before Mr. Taylor will be able to attend to his duties at the Studio again. Fortunately the exterior ornamentation of the Temple is practically completed. At a conference with Mr. E. Roger Boyle early last January, Mr. Taylor promised Mr. Boyle and your engineer that he would arrange to go to the Temple on order from the Temple Trustees to acid wash the exterior ornamentation of the Temple, equipment and materials, which were purchased by the contractor and paid for out of the Temple funds, were on hand in an estimated value of six or seven hundred dollars.

In conclusion, as supervising engineer, the writer wishes to express gratitude for the priceless opportunity of being intimately and actively associated for nearly a quarter of a century with the building of the Temple—one of the most unique and remarkable structures of all time. Looking back over this experience, one glimpses great progress in the science of building construction, new techniques, methods and materials and their utilization in a structure for which there were no precedents. Perhaps it may be surmised that this epoch-making achievement is part of a Divine Plan. Certainly, the workers that were raised up to do this great task were guided, supported and sustained until their work was done.

Respectfully submitted,

ALLEN B. McDaniel
Supervising Engineer

Bahá'í Public Relations

The Committee on Bahá'í Public Relations has been making a survey of its field, and among the constructive activities the members wish to perform this year is the occasional reporting in Bahá'í News of some of those interesting and significant expressions of the influence of the Faith which come to our attention from time to time. The Committee does not intend to duplicate the reports of other Bahá'í bodies which, like the Radio Committee and the Bahá'í News Service Committee, initiate many important public contacts.
for the Faith, but rather to deal with the unexpected and incidental events concerning the Faith not directly caused by the believers themselves. In addition to the presentation of such matters as news, the Committee is of course concerned also with the handling of attacks and misrepresentations of the Faith appearing in responsible periodicals or emanating from responsible platforms, as well as the presentation of accurate statements about the Faith to encyclopedias, year books and other organs of a factual type.

Last June a request was received from the publishers of the World Book Encyclopedia for revision of its statement about the Cause written many years ago. The material was corrected, amplified and brought up to date, and it is hoped that the next edition will use this corrected statement.

In August we interested a member of the faculty of a College in Chicago in adding the Bahá'í House of Worship to his lecture on the marvels of architecture delivered before public audiences in many cities.

The Travel Bureau of Chicago Motor Club from time to time requests a supply of Temple booklets as it distributes copies to members wishing to know about local points of interest.

Marshall Field and Co., Chicago department store, issues a pamphlet entitled "Home Town Tour," which advises the reader to visit the Bahá'í Temple.

Universal Atlas Cement Co. of New York some time ago took pictures of the Temple and submitted them to Architectural Record, which published a statement on the Temple in its September number. The Concrete Manufacturer, a section of Pit & Quarry magazine, carried in its September number an article on the work of John J. Earley, including illustration of the House of Worship. Apparently the Atlas Cement Co. likewise supplied this material to the publication.

The Portland Cement Association of Chicago has prepared an excellent illustrated article on the Temple for its magazine Architectural Concrete, to appear in an early issue.

Redbook Magazine in 1939 carried an article by Hendrik Willem Van Loon, the historian, entitled "Somewhere a Man Is Sitting," which graphically depicts the need of a man of superhuman power who can reconcile men's spiritual and physical needs and thereby save the modern world from the fate of Babylon or Nineveh or Thebes. This clear and enlightened point of view can best be contacted through presentation of a copy of the Guardian's book, God Passes By, and this will be done.

Good-Will Magazine of Cleveland has requested a photograph of the Temple for use as front cover illustration.

During the fall and winter of 1943-1944, many local newspapers published an advertisement to promote the sale of government bonds in which a picture of the Temple was used to illustrate the theme of religious freedom, one of the issues of the war.

The front cover of Wilmette Life and Winnetka Talk for September 21 reproduced the new aerial picture of the House of Worship on their front cover. The same issue of Wilmette Life ran a photograph of a mural painting in a non-Bahá'í home of the village which illustrates Wilmette harbor and the House of Worship.

In the dining room of Hotel Orrington, Evanston, one end of the room has been recently decorated with a mural of Wilmette harbor and the Temple—a beautiful and impressive view which is attracting much favorable comment.

A good friend of the Cause, Mr. Howard S. Ross of Montreal, conducts a department entitled "The Forum" in The Suburban News, a weekly paper published in that city. His column on September 28 contained a very interesting reference to the Centenary celebration.

The Chicago Daily Tribune of August 19 ran a half-page photograph of the view from the top of the Tribune tower looking north, and the principal structures visible, including the Bahá'í Temple, are marked by name.

In addition to the Bahá'í reports sent to the appropriate national Committees, the Committee on Bahá'í Public Relations would request word of any unusual reference to the Cause, favorable or unfavorable, emanating from non-Bahá'í sources, which might be mentioned in future statements prepared by this Committee.

Temple Guiding May-August, 1944

Considering the transportation difficulties, it is remarkable that during the first eight months of this year the number of visitors to the Temple, namely, 11,230, was greater than during a similar period of any previous year with the exception of 1936 when the number was 11,207. This period in 1944 exceeded by 1,807 the number taken through the Temple in the same period in 1942, and by 172 in 1943.

During May, visitors numbered 1,414. They came from forty states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Panama, Alaska, the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Nova Scotia, Quebec and Edmonton, and the countries of Chile, Ecuador, Bolivia, Brazil, Costa Rica and Jamaica.

During June, visitors numbered 1,907. They came from forty states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Panama, the Canadian provinces of Ontario, British Columbia, Manitoba, and the countries of Argentine, Brazil, Uruguay, England and Poland.

During July, visitors numbered 2,920, the largest number ever taken through the Temple in July. They came from 44 states, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Ontario (eight groups) and New Brunswick, and the countries of Bolivia, Peru, Honduras, Dominican Republic, San Salvador, Mexico, Poland, Turkey, France, Switzerland, Persia and China.

During August, visitors numbered 2,654. They came from forty states, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Quebec and British Columbia, and the countries of Brazil, Colombia, Denmark, England, Australia, China and Persia.

Guides numbering fifty and hosts and hostesses numbering twelve, come from twelve towns, the most distant of which is Milwaukee. About half of these guides guide once a week or more; the other half only occasionally. Nine guides come from Milwaukee, one from Racine and four from Kenosha, the most distant towns, have guided regularly from one to eight times a month.

The Temple is open to visitors every Sunday from 10:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. throughout the year but it will be closed weekdays in October, after cold weather begins.
One great problem the Guides Committee has each year is to find enough guides to take care of the visitors. This is especially true in July and August. These are the months when visitors come in greatest numbers, and is when we have the fewest guides, for then is when most of the guides take their vacations or visit summer schools. Consequently, the need is for more guides, especially during July and August.

Visitors are increasingly receptive each year. During the first eight months of this year they made many requests for literature, purchasing from the guides literature amounting to more than $70. Other evidence of the value of guide work is the number who joined study classes. This is one of the most important phases of teaching in the Cause, and one of the finest kind of "pioneering," as people come from all over the world and ask us to tell them about the Cause.

Centenary Radio Activities April 1 - June 1, 1944

These two months marked the greatest progress that the Faith has ever made in this particular method of teaching. It was a triumph for the entire community of the Most Great Name. Eighty-four broadcasts describing the Centennial and its purpose were given from May 12 to May 28. These broadcasts covered Forty-five States and Eight Provinces of Canada; Alaska; Hawaii and Cuba. No report has been received from Puerto Rico, although scripts were sent. We also had requests from Mexico City and Bogota, Columbia, and no doubt these were used also.

On April 28 the first Bahá’í short-wave broadcast ever given was beamed from New York to all of Latin-America through the assisance of the Office of Coordinator of Inter-American affairs.

The following statistics may be of interest to the friends:

Eleven weekly series of broadcasts were given during the year as follows:

1. A broadcast direct from the American Tour.
2. A broadcast over WCFL.
3. The regular Tuesday night broadcast over WCFL, on which Walter Olitzki sang, Walter Olitzki is a Bahá’í and a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.
4. A broadcast direct from the Banquet held at the Stevens Hotel; with a talk given by Alfred Osborne, delegate from Panama, and shorts talks by the following:

- Sr. Edorado Gonzalez Lopez
- Delegate from Ecuador
- Miss Elsie Austin
- Delegate from District of Columbia
- Dr. Fernando Nova
- Delegate from Brazil
- Mr. Firuz Kasemzade
- Guest from Teheran, Persia (now a student at Leland Stanford.
- Miss Hilda Yen
- Guest from Chungking, China

The guest speaker of the Latin-American evening, Mr. Philip Leonard Green, has offered to make his talk into a recording, with a Bahá’í introduction and conclusion, which he will arrange to have broadcast to Latin America.

It is also noteworthy to report that for the first time a network approached us to submit a script for a nation-wide prayer service to be used on Invasion Day. At the time we were asked to submit this script, the plan was that the day of the invasion was to be a day of prayer and the network was to pick up these prayer programs from various churches throughout the country. It was their purpose to read prayer services submitted by religious organizations. Our scripts were submitted, containing not only prayers for the whole world but hopeful words of promise from Shoghi Effendi revealing the glorious future that should follow this great calamity. We feel that our selections were unique among those offered.

The enthusiastic response of all the Bahá'ís to this first nation-wide radio campaign was responsible for its great success. It remained for the Radio Committee alone to have the thrill of receiving telegrams and letters, pouring in from Assemblies all over the country and Canada, advising us of their Centennial broadcast plans. This Committee feels that the large amount of work involved in handling this campaign was amply repaid by the results. We do not feel that any nation-wide hook-up comparable in scope could have been purchased for even ten thousand dollars. It is interesting to note that many of the broadcasts were carried by local outlets of the three largest radio chains in the country. The friends may also be interested in knowing that the report of the Centennial was sent out over Trans-Radio Press to be used by newscasters and commentators on the air. Just how much of this material was used and to what extent we have no figures available at the present time. We do know that it was used on WOR, New York, one of the most powerful stations in the country, with a large listening audience.

It is significant that all of this tremendous activity should have taken place in the hundredth year of the Bahá'í Faith and truly ushered us into the Second Century before all of North America. This radio work is a new landmark in public relations. Many of the Assemblies are so encouraged by the response to their Centennial broadcasts that they are planning future radio work. This is the most powerful and cheapest teaching medium now open to us for the Bahá'í Faith and the principles for which it stands. It must, of course, be backed by the efforts of the friends to make Bahá'ís of those interested. It does plow the soil and make it ready for their efforts.

The National Radio Committee would like to express its appreciation to all of the friends for their prompt and efficient cooperation in the conduct of this nation-wide radio campaign.

Inter-America News

BOLIVIA

The members of the La Paz group have joyfully welcomed another new member! Flora Hottes expresses their gratitude that this distinguished young woman, Sra. Maria Lijeron has arisen to serve the Cause in Bolivia. "We are very happy and proud of her," proclaims Flora. "She is our fifth member in La Paz, and is a brilliant young lawyer of this city. She understands and loves the Cause deeply. Sra. Lijeron has a radio program for women and children. John Stearns' radio booklet was given to her to look over, and already she has used some quotations from Bahá'u'lláh on her programs." Miss Hottes adds that two other members who accepted the Faith in La Paz are now living in other cities of Bolivia, and a third, the young Peruvian artist, has now returned to her home in Lima.

Many pages of delightful and historic detail record Virginia Orbins's brief but fruitful tour through Cochabamba, Sucre and Potosí. Glorious opportunities were given her to meet many people of distinction in the fields of industry, of education and the arts.

"In Potosí," Virginia tells us, "I had the privilege of staying at the Rancho Hochschild, where some of the officials of the great Hochschild Mining Company live. Quick and deep friendships are made in these lands and four men whom I met here were greatly moved by the Faith."

The gracious courtesy of Don Raúl Jaimés Freyre, distinguished man of letters of Bolivia, and the Director of the Museum in Sucre, made it possible for Virginia to meet many of the artists and scientists who are now residents of this colorful mountain city. Like Don Raúl Freyre, Virginia founded the Director of the School of Fine Arts, Juan Rimsa, noted Lithuanian painter, to be a spiritually mature soul, "wonderfully prepared" for a profound interest in the Message she had brought. A lecture, arranged at the Museum for Virginia, was attended by a stimulating audience of twelve persons of outstanding accomplishments in their varied fields of endeavor. Leaving these newly-illumined friends was a hard task, but with parting gifts of the Bahá'í Writings and hopes of a later return, Virginia left Sucre to fulfill her next assignment in Peru.

CHILE

Another area ardently desired by the Guardian for the establishment of the Faith is the city of Punta Arenas, Magallanes, in the southern tip of Chile. From the first seeds of the Faith, planted by Marcia Steward (Atwater) in this distant section of the Southern Hemisphere, the teaching work continues to expand and to consolidate.

Generous assistance from press and radio has helped to acquaint both residents and visitors in Magallanes with the name and principles of the Cause. Later, informal gatherings and individual interviews were held with interested friends, and a series of lectures was arranged. A study group has now been formed, and with the coming of the Chilean winter, it is believed the present study group will quickly increase in membership.

Marcia writes—"...the whole town is permeated with at least the name of our Prophet; the Fact of His Revelation; the fact of the existence of the Bahá'í Faith, and the fact that there are classes! The Cause has been established as dignified, intelligent and non-proselyting."

There has been a most gratifying demand for books. Marcia found it necessary to translate into Spanish long passages, even whole chapters, from the texts of her English books, until the supply of pamphlets and books in Spanish was received from Buenos Aires.

Many visitors from Santiago have heard of the Faith through her lectures and are eager to follow up this Message of a Divinely-conceived world civilization of unity and peace. Marcia continues to carry on teaching work in Santiago, through regular correspondence, at the request of the Spiritual Assembly. Thus the spiritual bonds of her pioneer service are being forged in two areas of the country, despite the many intervening miles.

PANAMA

Sr. Gerardo Vega, of Costa Rica, first Latin-American pioneer teacher, has carried out an intensive teaching campaign, with the enthusiastic support of the Panama Bahá'ís, during the months of his service in this post.

Panama — geographically significant in its linking unity of great continents and great oceans—shelters residents widely diversified in human capacities and spiritual qualities. With zeal and warm understanding Sr. Vega has extended the scope of the teaching work and opened new avenues of attraction for the Faith. "I am very optimistic for the future of the Cause in this locality," Sr. Vega tells us, "even though there are many obstacles it is also true that the splendor of the light shines more brilliantly wherever the darkness is great."

Of bright promise toward the achievement of Panama's great destiny was the recent celebration of Brotherhood Week. For the first time Panama participated in this international observance of fellowship among all peoples. Mr. Alfred Osborne, Secretary of the Panama Baha'i group, served as a member of the Committee of Arrangements for this eventful week. Julie Regal joyfully writes us that he was Chairman, and one of the four speakers, of a highly successful meeting held in the USO Center and broadcast over the Army radio.

International Baha'i Youth Day, Julie adds, was celebrated by a festive gathering in Cora Oliver's apartment. A delightful program of music and brief talks honored this occasion for the young friends and acquaintances who shared in the evening's hospitality.

CENTRAL AMERICA

Only briefly can we dip into the precious packets of mail from our neighbors in Central America. The Spiritual Assembly of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, joyfully sends the enrollment cards of four new members for their community. With grateful hearts we record each new evidence of growth and rejoice to find, from many lands, the mounting response of Youth to acceptance of Baha'u'llah's call.

GUATEMALA

Mrs. Florence Keemer's energetic experiment to expand the teaching field with both speed and range, is receiving stimulating confirmations. Widespread interest in the Faith has developed through her offer, by radio and press, to teach English, gratis, to all who wished to learn the language. A deluge of replies rewarded this ingenuity, and presently the courtesy of the school authorities made it possible to use the facilities of the classrooms after the close of the regular sessions.

"I teach over a hundred people every day, without books!" ponders Mrs. Keemer in swift notes. "So you will realize how carefully the lessons must be prepared. I give a new alphabet each day—the ethical one, for example, has all our principles in it. Last night was art and tonight will be technical. Then we talk and recite poetry, both Spanish and English, have grammar and spelling too, and end up singing familiar old songs together. About half of the students are teachers, and the other educators who look in on us occasionally seem to enjoy it as well. There are few methods by which one can reach the real thinking people as quickly and deeply as by teaching something they want."

The acceptance of the Faith by a respected and substantial member of the community, a man who has studied the Teachings with great earnestness, has brought happiness to the Bahá'ís of Guatemala City. The formation of a thriving children's class, new interest aroused among the older youth, and increasing opportunities to offer the Message of the Faith in the homes of newly-awakened friends, are highlights of progress in Guatemala.

HAVANA

Exhilarating word of new goals achieved comes from Havana, Cuba. Long-cherished hopes for the expansion of the teaching work through radio have become historic realities. Our pioneers, Miss Silver and Miss Krutka, tell us that regular broadcasts of half-hour programs are given twice weekly. Daily announcements of the Bahá'í meetings are also made, and include an invitation to the listeners to attend the study classes and lectures.

In recognition of the historic import of the first radio broadcast, the Havana friends provided a visual record of the occasion. Charming Carmelo Perez was photographed as this first Bahá'í program went on the air. "The Words of Baha'u'llah," these friends comment, "have now echoed throughout Havana and the nearby provinces."

LOCAL ARCHIVES PROCEDURE

The following outline of recommendations on procedure in the collection and preservation of material for local Bahá'í Archives is submitted to local Spiritual Assemblies and groups with the purpose of aiding them in the efficient performance of this significant function.

1. Appoint an archivist or an Archives Committee consisting of members who are interested in the collection and orderly arrangement of local Assembly records.

2. The collection of archives material should begin as soon as there is one or more Bahá'ís in a locality.
   a. An account should be written of the introduction of the Cause in the locality.
   b. A list of believers and of visiting Bahá'ís should be kept.
   c. Be sure that all material is dated and that a careful record is kept of sources of material, such as newspaper clippings.

BAHA'I NEWS
3. The following materials should be collected for the archives:

a. Bahá’í treasures or relics, with the name of the donor and a written statement from him as to their authenticity. (See Bahá’í Procedure, page 19.)

b. Original Tablets of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to individuals, groups, or to the Assembly. (Keep a negative photostat with a copy of the translation in the local archives, and forward the original Tablet and translation to the National Archives.)

c. The Guardian’s letters to individuals, groups or the Assembly. (Keep a negative photostat in the local archives, and forward original to the National Archives.)

d. Legal documents including copies of marriage license records and such other legal records as the local Assembly may not decide to retain in its own custody.

e. Photographs of individuals and of Bahá’í gatherings, with names and other records of interest. If ‘Abdu’l-Bahá visited the local community, the Archives should contain photographs of homes and public places visited by Him.

f. Bahá’í correspondence which may be of interest to future historians of the Cause.

g. Newspaper and magazine clippings:
   (1) Announcements of Bahá’í meetings and events.
   (2) Publicity about visiting Bahá’ís. (Note: This record may be kept by the Publicity Committee, but eventually should become a part of the local archives.)

h. Copies of programs.
   (1) Public meetings.
   (2) Bahá’í anniversaries.

i. Copies of annual reports of committees, unless the Assembly preserves these with its minutes.

j. Records of Bahá’í vital statistics.
   (1) Marriages and births.
   (2) Deaths and cemetery statistics.

4. Make a card index inventory of all material in the Archives.

5. Make a folder for each subject or individual about which there is material in the Archives. It is common archives practice to file material under each subject chronologically, and to keep individual collections donated to the archives intact.

6. If possible, arrange an exhibit from time to time. This will encourage the friends to contribute material, will show the work that the Archives Committee is accomplishing, and acquaint new friends with the history of the local community.

7. If possible, maintain complete files of Bahá’í books and pamphlets. Some of the titles in local Bahá’í libraries are certain to be lost, and early editions of Bahá’í literature will no longer be available.

8. Keep local Bahá’í historical record up-to-date. Such records should be supplemented at least once every two years. A number of local communities, such as Washington, Philadelphia, and New York, have compiled excellent local histories.

To date only twenty Assemblies have sent copies of their local histories to the National Bahá’í Archives. The Committee would appreciate receiving a copy from each Assembly and group.

References to the Cause

Will the friends be on the lookout for new references to the Bahá’í Faith in non-Bahá’í books and periodicals and send the same to Bertha H. Krikpatrick, Olivet, Mich.? These are for Bahá’í World, volume X. Please give name of publication, author, publisher and date of publication and page on which reference occurs. Publicity in newspapers is not included. If the article is by a Bahá’í, please so state.

Bahá’í News Service

The work of the Bahá’í News Service will be greatly facilitated if you will send two copies of all publicity to the secretary, Virginia A. Russell, 2622 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, Illinois at regular intervals. All publicity regarding the Centennial Celebration should have been turned over to the Bahá’í News Service by this time.

Supplementary Report
National Spiritual Assembly
1943-1944

The spiritual life of the American Bahá’ís has been greatly enriched by the Guardian’s gift of the lock of hair and the portrait of His Holiness the Báb, “to hope forward.” Shoghi Effendi wrote on April 14, 1943, “in time for the solemn thanksgiving service to be held in the auditorium of the Temple on the evening of May 22, at the hour of His epoch-making Declaration, a sacred portrait of the Báb, the only copy ever sent out from the Holy Land, to be unveiled at the dedication ceremony and to repose for all time, together with Bahá’u’lláh’s blessed hair within the dome of the Holy Edifice within the heart of the North American continent."

In a previous letter dated March 26, 1943, the Guardian outlined the details of the Centenary celebration, and included these words: “In honor of this unique occasion the Guardian hopes to send a copy of the portrait of the Báb and some of His relics to be displayed for the first time to the assembled believers in the auditorium of the Temple on that memorable evening, after which they should be placed in a safe spot within the Temple together with the hair of Bahá’u’lláh previously presented to the American believers. Under no circumstances should the portrait of the Báb be left exposed or hung on the wall of the Temple, nor should any copy of it be made. Only on very rare occasions should it be displayed, and wherever shown should be in no other place except the Foundation Hall of the Temple. Its display in the auditorium is permitted only for this occasion. No such portrait is to be found anywhere in the Bahá’í world—with the exception of Haifa—not is the Guardian contemplating sending any copy at present to any other Bahá’í community. This indicates the importance he attaches to the Temple in America, which he feels is a befitting edifice to enshrine it. The utmost vigilance should be exercised that no copy be made of it in the future, or any attempts be made to reproduce it in any way.”

On June 24, 1943, the Guardian mailed from Haifa through Mr. Maxwell an envelop containing a locket with hair of the Báb. This was not received. On March 14, 1944 a message came which explained the reason. “The first envelop containing locket with hair was returned after meeting with an accident. Though the accompanying letter was half-burnt, the hair is intact. I rejoice at the providential escape and safe arrival. Inform friends."

The locket and hair, however, was mailed again on February 11, 1944, and this time safely received. The details of the providential recovery of this precious relic have been given us by Mr. William Sutherland Maxwell in a letter dated March 14 last.

"The thrill of finally receiving the precious Hair relic is not to be compared with what was experienced here. On June 24, 1943 I mailed you a registered letter and it contained the Hair of the Báb inside a small locket. After waiting a long time to hear from you about its arrival, it was decided to have the Post Office registration department trace the matter and report. A lengthy printed document was filled in by me and it was forwarded to Jerusalem by the Postal authorities. Later I received a letter from the Postmaster General enclosing my last letter to you. The envelop was badly burnt, parts of the address being missing out the registration number was intact (enough information remained to enable the Postal authorities to notify me of its reception—but apparently the regulations require the sender to take the initiative).

"With care the letter was opened and safely enounced therein was the little silver locket (which is modern) containing the Hair of the Báb.

"You can imagine the joy and satisfaction experienced by Shoghi Effendi, Ruhiyyih Khanum and by me, in recovering this precious relic.

"Now the locket and its contents are arrived in Illinois, and in the Temple Archives one of the most precious and rare Bahá'í relics is safely enounced in its appropriate setting.

"It appears that the airplane was caught down in flames and we have a detailed account of the happening. About the fate of the pilot to whose skill and bravery we owe the deepest gratitude.

"The second voyage of the Hair of the Báb was uneventful from the viewpoint of transportation and your able about its arrival brought peace and happiness."

As the Bahá'í delegates and guests will observe when the portrait and air are exhibited at the appropriate moment, Mr. Maxell has designed most a beautiful frame for the portrait and setting for the hair, and his designs have been executed by craftsmen of Chicago under the direction of a special Committee appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly.

"Another blessing intended for us by the Guardian is his book entitled 'God Passes By,' a survey of the first Bahá'í Century. It is a matter of keen regret that printed copies are not yet available though the manuscript has been turned over to the printer in the form of successive chapters since January, the final installment having been turned over on April 8. The Foreword and the first two chapters, however, with the Guardian's kind consent, have been published separately in World Order Magazine for March, April and May of this Centenary year.

"From the Table of Contents we learn a great deal about the structure of this unique work. It opens with the Guardian's Foreword which summarizes the events of the first Bahá'í Century, explains the significance of the Faith, and defines the purpose and scope of his book. This is followed by an Introduction written by Dr. George Townshend and signed by him with his title and rank in the Church of England.

"Chapters one to five present the Mission of the Báb and cover the first period of Bahá'í history, 1844 to 1853.

"Chapters six to thirteen summarize the Ministry of Bahá'u'lláh, the second historical period extending from 1853 to 1892.

"The third period represents the Ministry of 'Abdu'l-Bahá', and chapters fourteen to twenty-one outline its principal events and meanings from 1892 to 1921.

"Chapters twenty-two to twenty-five explain the Rise and Development of the Administrative Order, the fourth period, from 1922 to 1944, and the work concludes with a chapter entitled Retrospect and Prospect.

"What Shoghi Effendi has given us in this volume is a new dimension of spiritual truth—an authentic history of a revealed religion through its first hundred years of action upon human existence. In no previous cycle has this been accomplished: a presentation of the Figure of the Manifestation and of His disciples and His Exemplar and Interpreter created by one so spiritually endowed that he can turn back to the Person and the sacred Events and give them actual reproduction at a later time.

"By virtue of the Guardian's power to experience the history of the Faith as a living and vital present force and not merely a past event, the days of the Báb and the days of Bahá'u'lláh live for us again. We can in this book behold once more the episode of the Declaration of the Báb, His imprisonment and His execution, the sufferings inflicted upon Bahá'u'lláh, His exile from land to land and eventual incarceration in 'Akka; and the moving record of the Master's services by which the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh was firmly planted in East and West. A clear light is thrown upon all the significant episodes and events—the revelation of Bahá'u'lláh's principal works and an analysis of His essential teachings; the rise and fall of the great betrayers and deniers of God's Cause; and the forces which transferred the power of action in the Bahá'í community from Persia to America.

"The Guardian's unique function as Interpreter of the Bahá'í Sacred Writings has here been realized as capacity to interpret not only the Word but its effect upon persons in one time and place. Thanks to this book the Bahá'ís have the infinite privilege of living within a fully unified world—the world of spirit and the world of humanity acted upon by divine forces for a divinely ordained end.

"In recent weeks the National Spiritual Assembly has received many letters on the subject of the new method of election of Convention delegates. It will clarify many questions if we explain that before adopting any definite method for the holding of state and provincial elections—elections in new administrative areas possessing no administrative bodies capable of action for the state or province as a whole—we submitted a number of points to the Guardian.

"On July 7, 1943, the Assembly wrote Shoghi Effendi as follows on this subject:

"'After consideration of the new State and Provincial basis of the election of Convention delegates, the Assembly voted to approve seven points for submission to you for your approval and whatever further information you wish to provide. These points are:

1. The National Spiritual Assembly is responsible for these elections.

2. Local Assemblies are not to be employed as a basis for the State or Provincial organization.

"3. The National Spiritual Assembly should appoint the presiding officer and call the election, designating the time and place; the believers present then elect their Chairman and Secretary, and the Chairman appoints the tellers. A certified report of the election is sent to the National Spiritual Assembly. Absent voters are to vote by mail. It is suggested that this election meeting be combined with a public teaching meeting if possible.

"4. Ballots and voting list to be prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly.

"5. The N.S.A. pays the cost of a meeting place; the local Bahá’í center to be used where possible.

"6. The Assembly understands that under the system of proportionate representation, a State or Province having less than nine believers will be entitled to representation by a delegate. That is, unless otherwise directed, the Assembly will include in the voting arrangements any State or Province which may have no local Assembly at the time the election is called."

The Guardian’s reply, dated November 16, 1943, approved these points as follows:

"Regarding the seven points submitted to the Guardian in connection with the new basis of the election of Convention delegates. He approves the action taken by your Assembly but wishes to stress the importance of acquainting the believers that they should make every possible effort to attend the meeting for the election of the State or Province delegates, in order to stimulate a larger group consciousness which will greatly facilitate the process of the believers becoming acquainted with each other, and provide an intermediary stage—which will become increasingly valuable and necessary—between the local organization, represented by the group or Assembly, and national collective action, represented by the activities of the Convention and the institution of the National Assembly."

The calling of the elections, therefore, and the simple procedure laid down in the call, represented an action of the National Spiritual Assembly in the fulfillment of a responsibility which could not be delegated to any existing administrative body nor carried out in consultation with the body of the believers resident in each State or Province. Whether, once the believers have assembled in these units and elected officers for the election meeting, they themselves were qualified to create a continuous administrative body for that new, intermediary stage, was a question which can only be answered by the Guardian. The appointment of temporary chairman was, for the first election at least, a necessary action since the believers themselves possess no administrative agency between the Assemblies or groups and the Convention and the N.S.A.

As result of the Guardian’s change of the electoral unit from city to state, we are this year attending a Bahá’í Convention, which for the first time is composed of delegates representing the entire American Bahá’í Community. Every believer is henceforth a voting member of the Bahá’í community. But the Guardian has not only extended the electorate from local communities to state and provincial communities—he has stabilized the principle of proportionate representation. For while the number of delegates remains the same from year to year, the number of local communities has increased rapidly during the Seven Year Plan, and in future there will be thousands of Spiritual Assemblies. The number of States and Provinces, however, is presumably constant, and hence the number of delegates can be fairly apportioned to the number of believers within these larger political units, whereas to continue electing delegates from towns and cities would make the application of the principle of proportionate representation impossible in a brief time.

It is likewise the first Convention having representatives from the Bahá’í communities of Central and South America and the islands of the Caribbean area—an All-America Convention in session during the Centenary period.

The Guardian’s messages to the Convention have been reproduced, and copies will be distributed to all the delegates and Bahá’í guests. "Hail with glad, grateful heart the historic assembly of the elected representatives of the followers of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh throughout the Western Hemisphere participating in the first All-America Convention gathered in the vicinity of the first Bahá’í Center of the Western World beneath the dome of the first Mashriqu’l-Adhkar to commemorate alike the Anniversary of the founding of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh and the Birth of ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá, the Anniversary of its establishment in the Occident and to celebrate the completion of the exterior ornamentation of the most hallowed House of Worship in the entire Bahá’í World" his message begins.

Copies of the Centenary program are also available for all the friends. The Centenary Committee has prepared a series of meetings which with dignity and spiritual force can express our joyous devotion and consecration to His Holiness the Báb, whose Declaration one hundred years ago was the First Point of the appearance of the Will of God for the new and universal Cycle of Bahá’u’lláh.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
By Horace Holley, Secretary
536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette
May 19, 1944

Manager for Green Acre

The Green Acre Trustees wish to request applications from Bahá’ís for the position of manager of the School dormitory and dining room on the basis of training and experience. The trustees will consider carefully all such applications, which should include details concerning the applicant’s qualifications. Address: Secretary, Green Acre Trustees, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill. Appointment of manager for the 1945 summer season is to be made as soon as possible.

Race Unity at Green Acre

The annual Race Unity conference at Green Acre, August 11 to 13, 1944, had its usual exhilaration, diffusion of knowledge and confirmation. Dr. Genevieve Coy, chairman, made unity the subject of her address. This she said to be a basic human desire. Rarely is one happy at thought of being left out. The ambition to exert power on the one hand and fear of it on the other may bring conflict. Such is true of various aspects of power, such as economic, political, military or social. Thoughts influence feelings, and those of fear, hatred and anger cause division. A loving and wise attitude toward minority groups is to see no differences. Do not adversely generalize about a minority because of the conduct of a few members of it.
Dr. Sarah Martin Eason of Washington, D.C., spoke on the Oneness of Humanity. The thoughtful are becoming more aware of this as the negligibility of racial differences as a sign of ability appears. Men are now looking the world over for sincerity and love to be the foundation stones of a workable religion. Cultural varieties are a benefit. Blended ideals of culture play a vital part in human progress. Fraternity based upon love should be the objective. Human solidarity, promulgated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá is hailed as a blessing.

At the next session Mrs. Terah Smith of Atlanta, Georgia, told of progress in race relations in the vast section of the South. The Interracial Commission, organized after the former world war to help returned soldiers, has now been enlarged into the Southern Regional Council, going farther than the former organization in that it contemplates unity on a spiritual basis. It recognizes not only a sectional and national but a world need. New publications such as “The South Today,” “Common Ground,” and the addresses of Pearl Buck are much in demand and are shaping thought. These are signs of advancement to the goal set by 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Who said that in this century all the potentialities latent in man will be revealed.

Matthew W. Bulloch of Boston described in graphic terms the poignant disappointment of those like himself, who went abroad during the former world war, inspired by the hope that so great an upheaval would bring justice and peace to mankind. The promised relief appeared neither in religious nor secular circles; rather, class tyranny was strengthened and prejudices were increased. On every hand was heard the lament that religion had failed. He shared with us his experience as a seeker after truth in the Bahá’í Faith and his great joy in the discovery that in this day God has given us a plan; moreover, that all is going according to the Divine Plan!

Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh, chairman at the Sunday morning session, observed that bars of iron too strong to be broken, can yet be melted by fire. It does not help difficult conditions to complain. It is better to work. The Bahá’í plans work not for one day but for every day. The seals of the Holy Books are now open and wonders of life and light are coming to view. Christ never said, “Suffer the white people to come unto me,” but made welcome all colors. All the Prophets bring universal gifts. Man has in many ways failed; but progress and wisdom may come through past failures. The brotherhood of mankind is now the great objective. The dynamic for this is found in the Bahá’í Teachings. They will gain acceptance. The white race, considering world interests and values, is now but a minority group.

Louis G. Gregory spoke on Lights and Shadows on the Inner and Outer Plane. Both, whether objective or subjective, can be observed in individuals, groups and mankind in the aggregate. The value of light is obvious, whether solar, optical, scientific or spiritual. Lights that outwardly appear have their correspondences upon the inner plane and all such phases of the same reality have a direct bearing upon human progress and happiness. Both the earth and Heavens are rich in wonderful treasures, but none can discover them without light. The word Bahá means Light. “The nearer you are to the Light, the farther removed from the darkness,” says 'Abdu'l-Bahá. “O Son of the Wondrous Vision!” expresses the gift of Bahá'u'lláh to His faithful and loyal followers, indicating their capacity under guidance to aid mankind. All are but parts of one great Whole. The mingling of races increases fertility, cleverness and beauty.

Harlan F. Ober, chairman at the forum, stated that the problem in America is between whites, Negroes, Jews, Indians and with the various peoples of the South and Central American countries. While the Bahá'ís have held amity conferences in many cities over a wide area, outsiders have viewed such efforts as remote and academic theories about matters which could not be controlled. Now such matters have become realistic to all and demand solution. Humanity’s problems are interrelated. Those pertaining to race, education, industry and religion cannot be separated. A great opportunity is that of America, a new nation, to carry out to a greater extent than others, the oneness of mankind.

Miss Lydia J. Martin hailed with delight the new order envisioned by Bahá'u'lláh and saw traces of its progress indicated by old age pensions, slums removed and a kindliness and neighborliness transcending racial lines. Such signs point to a great awakening. The call of the universal shepherd must be universally proclaimed so as to overcome the barbarous practices which keep men apart.

Ali Kuli-Khan, N. D. told interesting stories about noted men of color that he had met, among them Robert Turner, the first American Negro to become a Bahá’í. The speaker strongly advocated justice for all mankind. No earthly power can resist the might of God. It is He Who commands unity and points the way. As the temple of Solomon was built from materials brought from many lands, so must the present day edifice of divine civilization cultivate the talents of all races and nations to bring world happiness and peace.

Other contributors to the forum consultations were Mrs. Joy Earl, who told a beautiful symbolic story; Dr. E. Ellis Durrant, distinguished churchman, who acknowledged the oneness of the spirit of the Christ and Bahá'u'lláh; Frank Ashton, who read a Tablet of the Master, showing how thought of war may be overcome by a greater thought of peace; and George D. Miller, who observed that we abandon our skins when we start for Heaven; therefore justice must be here established upon a more durable basis. The chairman exhorted all to dwell together in love and unity.

The musical part of the program was rich and varied, consisting of Negro spirituals and other strains. Among the contributors were Mesdames Evelyn Loveday and Joy Earl, Misses Ida B. Noyes, Lydia J. Martin, and Elsie Norton. The harmony and beauty of all the conference were causes of happiness to the friends and an attraction to inquirers.

Bahá’í Directory

The following changes are reported:

1. Local Assemblies:
   - Montreal — Mrs. Priscilla Waugh, Secretary, 11406 Laval Road, Cartierville, Montreal 8, Quebec, Canada.
   - Syracuse — Mrs. Lena Bevan, Corresponding Secretary, 3566 Genesee Street, Syracuse, N.Y.
   - Greenville — Mrs. Luva Dabrowski, Acting Secretary, 19 W. Earl Street, Greenville, South Carolina.
   - Salt Lake City — Mrs. Eleanor Beckman, 347 East Broadway, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Alexandria—Mrs. Paul E. Haney, Secretary, 3234 Gunston Road, Alexandria, Virginia.

Boston—the Bahá’í Center is at 25 Huntington Avenue, not 26, as incorrectly reported in the Directory.

Milwaukee—Mrs. Claire Frick, Corresponding Secretary, 4704 W. Lloyd Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

2. National and Regional Committees: Child Education Committee—New address for Chairman, Janet Lindstrom, 4383 Asbury Street, Evanston, Ill.

Inter-America Committee—Edwin W. Mattoon added.

College Speakers Bureau—new address for Chairman, Wm. Kenneth Christian, 700 East 5th Street, Greenville, N.C.

The believers are requested to report any changes in the Directory as soon as possible.

Assembly Address

Local Assemblies are requested to register the address of their center or meeting place with any agency in the city which, like the Chamber of Commerce, the USO, etc., maintains a directory of public meetings or of religious organizations. Assemblies which have no public center may register the Bahá’í Assembly in care of a designated officer or member. A Bahá’í telephone address is very important.

In Memoriam

I testify, O my Lord, that Thou hast enjoined upon men to honor their guest, and he that has ascended unto Thee hath verily reached Thee and attained Thy Presence. Deal with him then according to Thy grace and bounty!

Messages from the Guardian

Moneeb Shaheed, grandson of both 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the King of Martyrs, married according to the Moslem rites the daughter of a political exile who is nephew of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem. This treacherous act of alliance with enemies of the Faith merits condemnation of entire Bahá’í world.

Received November 7, 1944

Share grief at passing of devoted, faithful pioneer (John Starnes). His services have been unforgettable and highly meritorious. Advise the construction of a Memorial. Assure friends in Lima (Peru) my deepest, loving sympathy.

—SHOICHI RABANI

Comfported, strengthened by assurance of sympathy and loyalty of American believers in the deplorable, delicate situation created by dishonorable alliances made by members of my family, first with Covenant-breakers and now with external enemies of the Faith.

The marvelously rapid, rapid, sound evolution of the institutions of the Faith in five continents, particularly in the Western Hemisphere, constitutes best monitor, most effective counteraction to the detrimental influence of those whose acts proclaim their severance from the Holy Tree and their forfeiture of their sacred birthright.

The occasion demands that you direct special attention to passages in "God Passes By" indicating the gravity of the past crises precipitated since the inception of the Faith by kinsmen both of the Manifestation and the Center of His Covenant, demonstrating the pitiful futility of their nefarious activities and the sad fate overtaking defectors and betrayers.

The present hour calls for unremitting vigilance, continued heroism, redoubled efforts, renewed dedication by rank and file of the community enjoying preponderating share alike in the erection, the defense, and the consolidation of the worldwide Administrative Order of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh since the passing of the Center of His Covenant.

I urge the entire Bahá’í community of the Western Hemisphere to focus its attention during the remaining months of the opening year of the second century on the formation of local Assemblies in the remaining Republics of Nicaragua, Panama, Venezuela, Bolivia and San Domingo, guard against dissolution of Assemblies already painstakingly established throughout the Americas, exert effort on further multiplication of groups, wider dissemination of literature, greater use of radio, closer contact with masses, more audacious proclamation of the Faith, more effective coordination of local and national activities aiming at fuller demonstration of the rights and claims of the Faith to be regarded as sole refuge of humanity in its hour of bitterest agony.

The American believers' meritorious activities, individual, local, inter-state, intercontinental, will be the object of my special prayers during the approaching Anniversary of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Ascension.

The Spirit Is Progressive

Beloved Friends:

The National Spiritual Assembly met during four and one-half days in November to meet the exigencies of an agenda summarized in fourteen typewritten pages. The Minutes recording the actions taken fill forty-nine pages, a copy of which is supplied to the Guardian and to each Assembly member. In addition, the Minutes of Trustee meetings are recorded in six or seven pages. One hundred and ninety-eight separate votes were adopted, one of these—appointing the sixty-three State and Province Convention Committees—based upon consultation and discussion throughout one entire day.

The messages from the Guardian which were given first consideration at the meeting are published elsewhere in the previous and present numbers of Bahá’í News. Their vital import is evident to every Bahá’í.

'Abdu'l-Bahá bequeathed to His friends the sublime truth that the Spirit is progressive; it is the power of action and continuous achievement on this plane. Unlike religions of creed, ceremonial and formal worship, the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh undergoes irresistible advance. Even when outwardly quiet, even when assailed by the greatest of worldly powers, the Bahá’í Faith is registering progress and manifesting capacity to attain its goal. As we are a Bahá’í community, nourished by the Spirit, let us show forth the characteristics of our faith in activity, union, enthusiasm, and reverence for the guidance we receive from the Guardian.

Treasurer's Report

This will summarize the treasurer's report for November, carrying forward some of the essential items from the beginning of the fiscal year, March 1, 1944.

The annual budget was fixed at $135,000.00. By November 30, $75,024.85 had been donated by the believers. There remains $59,975.15 to be contributed by February 28. One hundred local Assemblies sent donations in November, while thirty-two seemed unable to meet the collective obligation to sustain the Fund. Of the groups, forty-nine contributed. The total received in November was $5,774.61, the total spent was $6,255.51. Among the items of expense were: Administration, $1,269.67; Temple maintenance, $749.23; Temple repair (resurfacing decks), $940.00; Green Acre maintenance, $148.43; National and Regional Teaching, $1,328.00; Inter-America Teaching, $1,100.60. The amount given to other National Committee was $141.50, and $370.00 was sent to the International Bahá’í Fund through the Guardian.

The Canadian Bahá’í Fund receives and dispenses the contributions of the Bahá’ís of Canada which cannot be sent across the border under war regulations. We have statements for September and October. The contributions were: $350 and $519 respectively, while expenditures for the two months combined amounted to $668.50. Most of the expense is for budgets assigned to settlers and pioneers.

National Activities

Many important recommendations made by National Committees for carrying out plans in the field of radio, press publicity, etc., have had to be deferred for lack of funds. As the work develops, more of the Committees arrive at the point where they need immediate and full-time clerical help, which calls for a yearly operating budget. Each step of progress in our collective power to act must be conditioned upon material resources. Every believer wants above all to see evidences of large and powerful public Bahá’í enterprises, just as he wants to see activity in his own community. But a nationwide campaign cannot be developed out of one hundred and thirty or more local campaigns, each planned separately and all calling for most of the available local donations. What the National Spiritual Assembly is striving to bring about is a powerful nationwide campaign which will of its own momentum and influence create the most favorable conditions, and effective instruments, for any number of local teaching and publicity plans. This intention can be realized as soon as the National Fund is given the first and paramount consideration by Assemblies and believers. Just as the construction of the Temple has vitalized the life of every local community, near to or far from the Edifice itself, so will a truly comprehensive radio and publicity campaign return to every local community a result infinitely greater than the amount of its own contribution to the National Fund. The time is at hand when these facts call for understanding, resolve, sacrifice and action.

A good beginning, nevertheless, was made at the November meeting. The National Assembly adopted a number of measures aimed at a coordination of the National and local activity for the promotion of the Bahá’í Peace Program. In outline, this campaign provides for:

1. The printing of 15,000 each of four Peace Broadsides containing excerpts from the Bahá’í Writings, numbered consecutively 1, 2, 3 and 4 but without date, so that their distribution can achieve an accumulative effect. Of these, 5,000 sets will be mailed monthly for four months by the Public Relations Committee to a list being compiled from federal and state officials, peace societies, educators, news commentators, etc. The cooperation of local Assemblies and individual believers is earnestly solicited in the development of this list. Please send suggested names and addresses to the National Office as soon as possible. The remaining 10,000 sets of four Peace Broadsides are offered for sale by the Publishing Committee, as per separate notice in this issue of Bahá’í News.

2. The Radio Committee has been requested to develop material for a broadcast on the Bahá’í Peace Program and make effort to have one station used in each State and Province. The Bahá’í News Service Committee has been requested to develop a news release on the same subject.

3. Local Assemblies are requested to conduct at least one public meeting or general conference on this subject of the Bahá’í Peace Program before April 21. The date is left to the discretion of each Assembly. Among the references easily available are: “Peace A Divine Creation,” “Bahá’í Peace Program,” “Goal of a New World Order,” “Unfoldment of World Civilization,” “Pattern for Future Society,” “Bahá’í Teachings on Universal Peace,” and “The Lesser and the Most Great Peace,” all listed in the Bahá’í catalog.

4. The Study Outline Committee has been requested to prepare an outline for community and group study of the subject, which has such overwhelming importance at this time. Finally, the Publishing Committee has been requested to reissue “The Foundations of World Unity,” out of print for some time.

All of us have a part in this great effort to make the Bahá’í Peace Program a living issue in the hearts and minds of the masses of people, whose future depends on the realization of Bahá’u’lláh’s world order, as well as upon the men and women of eminence and authority who for the most part will make the decisions on matters of public policy in relation to world affairs during the period of the “Lesser Peace.” Let each of us, moreover, make these Teachings on Peace a firm, clear aspect of our very souls, that we may be steadfast witnesses among the people at this crucial time.

Sacred Foundation of World Bahá’í Community

On receiving the Guardian’s message concerning Moneeb Shheed, the National Spiritual Assembly informed Shoghi Effendi that it unreservedly shared his condemnation. of the treacherous act, and that the onslaught of deniers and enemies against the Guardianship, sacred foundation of world Bahá'í community, strengthens the devotion and resolution of the American Bahá'ís.

This pledge and affirmation unites the community of Bahá'ís around their divinely appointed Center in Haifa. It presents an unassailable front to any and all who become Covenant-breakers either in the Holy Land or our own country. It means that we thoroughly understand the fundamental issues involved and enter into no argument or discussion with those who would confuse and betray our faith. We have the highest confirmation possible in this world, the assurance of Bahá'u'lláh Himself, and its perfect explanation and unfailing application by the Master and by the Guardian, that the Faith is impregnable to attack either from without or within; but the mysterious movement of Providence calls for sacrifice as well as knowledge and assurance on the part of the believers. The subject is presented in a separate statement. By activity and achievement we can demonstrate the futility of those seeking to undermine the Bahá'í community.

-NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The Manifestation of God divides as well as unites. Both functions are inseparable since there can never be union between those who turn toward the divine Center and those who turn away. It is in the Holy Family that history attests the operation of this dual principle in the supreme degree, where light and dark are most intense.

The new case of disloyalty to the Faith reported by the Guardian's message from Haifa pertains to another member of the Holy Household who has allied himself by marriage, under an abrogated Islamic law, to violent and implacable foes of the Faith. This event can but steel the determination of the loyal friends throughout the Bahá'í world to condemn such an attitude, expressed in this or similar actions, whenever or wherever they arise. No one, however eloquent his pre­ tense and claim of faithfulness, can sustain such a claim by an act which directly contradicts it. The present case joins in the most intimate of human relations a descendant of Bahá'u'lláh with dark forces which seek to cut down the very Tree of Paradise. The Master, in His Will and Testament, declared that the decayed branches on the tree would be replaced, foretelling the disaffections that would occur in the Family of the Manifestation after His own ascension.

That wondrous Tree of Manifestation bears every manner of fruit, no other than the loftiest attributes giving life to the world. Here are concentrated all the divine energies and productive strength. In striking contrast is the evil tree which bears but bitter fruit, nourishing every evil that influences mankind.

From the Gospels we have the story of how the disciples, doubtless led by Judas, inquired of Jesus who should be the greatest. Among the answers recorded is that He said in part: "Woe unto the world because of offenses! It must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom they come." "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than with two feet or two hands to be cast into everlasting fire."

Was He not thus warning His loyal servants against the machinations of Judas, the traitor?

Obviously the same conditions arise in every cycle. What has happened in this Supreme Cycle is well illustrated in the Guardian's monumental book, "God Passes By." To the faithful, to be warned is to act. Partaking in so bounteous a measure of divine favors carries with it the solemn obligation to guard the Faith from impious assaults, repudiate and also shun those who make themselves the enemies of God. The true believers can never include those who in any manner give aid and comfort to, and ally themselves with, the breakers of His Covenant; for the Covenant is our only assurance of the oneness of mankind.

Now that we may have the information necessary to protect our own communities from the efforts of the New History Society to assail the Guardianship and denounce the Administrative Order, let us make note of statements made by the Guardian concerning Ahmad Sohrab in recent years and previously published in Bahá'í News. These statements suffice. Discussion and argument are closed.

"The material sent to him regarding the legal action taken against the New History Society, as well as copies of their monthly publication, have been received and the Guardian feels that Ahmad Sohrab is increasingly revealing his latent opposition to the spirit as well as to the letter of the Master's Will and Testament. His references to excommunication flatly contradict the Master's own actions and attitude, of which he is personally fully aware, and are irreconcilable with some of the most emphatic and unmistakable injunctions of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in His Will and Testament. His increasingly bold criticisms of the action taken by the Guardian amounts to a repudiation of the authority of the Guardianship, and is thus an open and flagrant violation of the Will establishing that authority. In fact the more he writes and the more he gives vent to his true feelings, and discloses his real attitude to what 'Abdu'l-Bahá has regarded as absolutely essential to the unity, the integrity and protection of the Faith, the more will he clearly demonstrate his disloyalty to the Master whom he professes to uphold and defend. He is no doubt the most subtle, resourceful and indefatigable enemy the Faith has had in America, and the retribution he will in the end suffer will be correspondingly grievous and devastating. Every effort should be made by your Assembly to protect the new believers from the poison which he is trying to instill into their minds and souls, and to reinforce their confidence in his ultimate downfall and complete obliteration."—(Through his secretary, May 25, 1941.)

"Obscure in his origin, ambitious of leadership, and plagued by the lesson of such as have erred before him, odious in the hopes he nurses, contemptible in the methods he pursues, shameless in his deliberate distortions of truths he has long since ceased to believe in, ludicrous in his present isolation and helplessness, wounded and exasperated by the downfall which his own folly has precipitated, he, the latest protagonist of a spurious cause, cannot but in the end be subjected, as remorselessly as his infamous predecessors, to the fate which they invariably have suffered.

"Generated by the propelling and purifying forces of a mysterious Faith, born of delusion or malice, winning a fleeting notoriety derived from the precarious advantages of wealth, fame or fortune, these movements sponsored by deluded, self-seeking adventurers find themselves, sooner or later, enmeshed in the machinations of their authors, are buried in shame, and sink eventually into complete oblivion.

"The schism which their foolish leaders had contrived so sedulously to produce within the Faith, will soon, to their utter amazement, come to be regarded as a process of purification, a cleansing agency, which, far from decimating the ranks of its followers, reinfuses its indestructible unity, and proclaims anew to a world, skeptical or indifferent, the cohesive strength of the institutions of that Faith, the incorruptibility of its purposes and principles, and the recuperative powers inherent in its community life."—(August 12, 1941)

State Conventions
Preliminary Notice

The election of delegates to the 1945 Convention by the Bahá'ís of the States and Provinces of the United States and Canada will be held on the uniform date of February 25, 1945. The National Spiritual Assembly has appointed a State Convention Committee of three persons for each electoral unit, to determine the place of the meeting in each State or Province, to determine the most convenient hour of the day designated by the National Spiritual Assembly, to report these decisions to the N. S. A. to be included in the general call of the State Conventions, and to open the meeting on February 25 with reading of the State Convention Call and arrange for the election of permanent Officers. If any member of the State Convention Committees cannot serve, the remaining members or member are authorized to fulfil the functions of the Committee.

As the State Convention Call is to go out by January 5, 1945, it is evident that the reports of all State Committees must be sent to the National Office at the earliest possible date, and they have been requested to report before December 20.

Since, moreover, the number of delegates assigned to each State and Province depends on the number of resident Bahá'ís, the National Assembly has requested each local Assembly to report its membership list by December 15.

In the case of two States—California and New York—two electoral units have been determined for each State, in view of the widespread distribution of Bahá'ís and the difficulty of convening them in any one place during this period of uncertain accommodations for travel. The Bahá'ís of California are requested to note that the boundary separating the Northern and Southern California electoral units follows the north boundary of the following counties: San Luis Obispo, Kern, and San Bernardino; while the New York Bahá'ís will note that the Southern New York electoral unit comprises the Metropolitan area of the City of New York, Long Island, and the counties of Westchester, Rockland, Orange, Putnam, Duchess, and Ulster. The remainder of the State comprises the Northern New York electoral unit. In these States, the assignment of delegates will be made to each electoral area proportionately to the number of resident Bahá'ís therein. The voter will vote for delegates resident in his particular electoral unit and will not be free to name as delegate a Bahá'í living in the other electoral unit of the State.

Finally, the National Spiritual Assembly emphasizes the fact that these State and Province elections are annual meetings and not, through the Officers they elect at the meeting, permanent secondary administrative bodies. In other words, they are like the annual Convention in that their function is fulfilled at the meeting and does not continue throughout the year. This matter was clarified for us by the Guardian, in response to a question sent to him by the N. S. A. after studying the reports and recommendations received from the Officers of the State Conventions held last April. No administrative authority exists within the various States and Provinces at this time to represent all the resident Bahá'ís in holding other State-wide gatherings or carrying out teaching plans coordinating all the Bahá'í facilities within the State or Province.

Sixty-three electoral areas will participate in the election of delegates this year.

The Source and Nature of Rebellion Within the Cause

As Shoghi Effendi advises us in his message of November 21, he has presented the salient facts and the significant truths concerning rebellion in his book "God Passes By," and it is incumbent on us to study these passages with special care.

The references which seem most relevant for consideration whether in group discussion or individual reflection are the following: pages 112-114: page 133 ("Tell him—"); pages 163-164, from "More odious than" to "bring it to a head"; pages 164-165, the par. beginning "A constant witness"; page 170, from "The Most Great Idol" to "its divine power"; page 233, final par.; pages 246-249, from "This crisis" to "all come to pass"; pages 263-264, from "Emitted by" to "the second letter"; pages 319-320; pages 355-356, from "In the Holy Land" to "sealed their doom."

The volume as a whole gives us the complete answer to the enemies and external resisters of the Faith, for it presents the illumined vision of the Dispensation which the opponent and betrayer wishes to destroy. The passages indicated, however, will enable us to focus attention on the theme at this time.

Knowing that resistance and disobedience to the Revelation is nothing else than rebellion against the Manifestation, we need not allow ourselves to be engulfed by the false arguments and distorted, unfounded claims, pretenses or challenges of those who wage the same battle but at a greater distance from the Center of the Faith. It is merely necessary to realize that while Mirzá Yahýá or Mirzá Muhammad-'Alí expressed their rebellion in attempts to suppress and even assassinate Bahá'u'lláh or 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the words and deeds of Covenant-breakers who would misinterpret the Master's Testament, who would foment suspicion of the Guardian, who would undermine the Administrative Order—such words and deeds, while apparently and superficially non-violent and rational in method, actually exemplify the same attitude though in a feebler expression. The motives are the same; the result, if they were successful, would be the same. That is why the lesser rebel, like the greater, destroys his own position in the Bahá'í community.

The volume as a whole gives us the complete answer to the enemies and external resisters of the Faith, for it presents the illumined vision of the Dispensation which the opponent and betrayer wishes to destroy. The passages indicated, however, will enable us to focus attention on the theme at this time.

World Unity banquet held by the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Milwaukee, February 19, 1944.

The Divine Plan
Realm of the Spiritual Hero

What for convenience and concentration of energy was termed a Seven Year Plan must be regarded as only one stage in the evolution of the Bahá'í community. There were pioneers, settlers and teaching efforts prior to 1937, and the work of teaching will go forward until Europe, Africa, Asia and the Islands of the sea are brought inside the Unity fulfilling the oneness of mankind.

At whatever stage we enter this vitalizing process, however, we contribute toward its consummation, the Divine Plan may be viewed as a spiritually created realm graciously opened to the Heroes and Heroines of the spiritual life in this Day. It is a realm which the Master Himself exemplified and over which He holds sway. To enter this realm and remain there in any capacity is the sign of utmost achievement in this world. The gates swing wide for all humanity, but so far only a handful has heard and heeded the glorious Call.

Few that have entered from our ranks would conceive of themselves as heroic. Of these few the majority no doubt have been conscious of unworthiness and even of fear. Outwardly they were no uniform carrying the insignia of rank, title and authority. Yet they could not remain in the realm of the Divine Plan without attaining true heroism, for the craven spirit and the selfish materialist are not permitted to abide.

Now again, as in 1937, the needs of the Cause, speaking through the words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and calling to us through the messages of the Guardian, require the services of a host of believers to go forth as settlers and pioneers into new cities and unto far lands. The realm of heroism awaits. It can bestow divine gifts, of youth, of strength, of knowledge, of love. The people, as Bahá'-u'lláh cried out, are as dead bodies seeking souls.

Above the clamor of the world's struggle may the spiritual Call be heard by a host of blessed believers, by whose heroism the whole Bahá'í community shall fulfill its sacred mission. Those who are ready to respond may signalize their intention by addressing either the National Teaching Committee or the Inter-America Committee, both of which have posts that must be filled.

—National Spiritual Assembly

Wilmington Assembly Conducts Legal Marriage Service

The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Wilmington, Delaware, has received civil authority to conduct a legal marriage, even though the Assembly is not incorporated. This authority has been granted under statutes which apparently are not duplicated in other states.

Review Notices

The Publishing Committee requests the friends to send clippings of any press review of Bahá’í books which they might note in their local paper. The Committee wishes to maintain as complete a record of press reviews as possible.

Teaching Literature for Small Communities

The National Spiritual Assembly has authorized the Publishing Committee to provide up to $3.00 of teaching pamphlets without cost to Assemblies in cities having less than twenty-five Bahá’ís. Such Assemblies may apply directly to the Publishing Committee and should list the pamphlets wanted. Books are not available under this arrangement.

Inter-America News

"First year second Bahá’í century should witness (1) establishment Spiritual Assembly in every remaining Republic, and be signalized (by) (2) steady increase pioneers both Latin (and) North America; (3) further multiplication groups, and (4) wider dissemination Bahá’í literature both Spanish (and) Portuguese." The above quotation from the Guardian’s message to the National Spiritual Assembly dated July 18, 1944, clearly defines the goals of the Latin American teaching work. With these in mind the Inter-America Committee is bending every effort to send additional pioneers to assist those already serving so valiantly in the field, and to assist the two new committees (Reviewing and Publishing Committee in Buenos Aires and the Bulletin Committee in Panama), which resulted from the consultations with the Latin American representatives during the Centenary and in early July.

The "remaining Republics" in which the Guardian wishes Spiritual Assemblies established by April 21, 1945, are Bolivia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Panama, Nicaragua, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

New Pioneer Projects

On November 11 Dr. Malcolm M. King left New Orleans for Nicaragua, and has already written a most heartening report of the beginning of his work there. He is being greatly assisted by Srta. Blanca V. Mejia, who represented Nicaragua at the Centenary. Through her, Dr. King has met many people of influence and intellectual capacity.

Virginia Orbison is now in Quito, Ecuador, on a temporary mission, and will soon be joined by Haig Kavorkian who is coming from Buenos Aires to be the resident teacher.

The latest pioneer to depart was Elizabeth Cheney, who left Miami on November 29 for visits to Venezuela, Colombia, Buenos Aires, and Uruguay on her way to Asuncion, Paraguay.

Recent Events

Guatemala: After a most successful teaching visit to Guatemala City, Mrs. Florence Keemer has returned to the United States, but before leaving she had the great joy and satisfaction of sending in three membership cards.

San Salvador: Clarence Iverson was called home to Phoenix because of the illness of his mother, who passed away on October 20. This was his first return home since he started pioneering in Central America five years ago. On November 16 he returned again to his post in El Salvador, and writes from there of the great addition to their group through the coming of Dr. Edelberto Torres, formerly of Guatemala City.

Peru: A beautiful letter from Eve Nicklin reported the death of John Stearns in Lima on November 7. Pioneering first in Ecuador, and later in Peru, John made a truly important and valuable contribution to the establishment of the Cause in South America. A message from the Guardian says: "Share your grief in the passing of this devoted, faithful pioneer, whose service is unforgettable and highly meritorious. Ask friends in Lima of deeper, loving sympathy. Advise construction of a memorial."

The reports of the progress of the teaching work in Lima are most heartening. Two new membership cards bring the number of the community there to fifteen. Already, extension teaching has been undertaken, and through the efforts of Sr. Alfredo de Barreda, there is a wonderful group studying in Callao. Eve Nicklin is achieving unusual results with a delightful group of young people who are studying with great interest, although none are as yet signed believers.

Bolivia: After a return visit to La Paz, Virginia Orbison writes, "Bolivia is really going ahead, and this makes me very happy for the sake of the very valiant Flora." Four new membership cards have been forwarded, which increases the number of Bahá’ís in La Paz to nine. Through the excellent teaching efforts of Virginia Orbison and Flora Hottes at Sucre, Bolivia, there are hopes of a group or even an Assembly being formed in this city before April 21.

Chile: From Marcia Steward, recently returned to Santiago, comes a glowing report of Bahá’í activities there. Marcia plans to return to Magallanes sometime in late January to continue the effective teaching work which she has initiated there, and which gives every promise of resulting in the early formation of a Bahá’í group in the southern most tip of this Hemisphere. Marcia also writes of the valuable assistance which Artemus Lamb, who is in Chile on business, has given to her teaching efforts.

Puerto Rico: Margaret Lentz became a settler and pioneer teacher in San Juan early this fall.

Jamaica: William Mitchell, who was a Centenary representative, reports a Bahá’í community of fourteen members at Kingston. Dr. King pioneered there for two years.

Centenary Souvenir

The friends are informed that copies of the Centenary Souvenir are still available. For those who did not attend the celebrations it is explained that a special Souvenir was produced consisting of a photograph of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and a photograph of the House of Worship mounted in a folder measuring 8½ by 11 inches. A copy was presented to all Bahá’ís present at the Centenary who had been believers prior to the Master’s visit in 1912. The picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is a view hitherto not available.

Local Assemblies might well consider presenting a Souvenir to the older members of the community who would have qualified for the public presentation had they been able to come to Wilmette last May. The Souvenir, moreover, is a beautiful Bahá’í possession for any believer to have for himself.

The cost, postpaid, is $1.00 each. Send orders to Temple Librarian and Sales Committee, through H.E.
Centenary Edition

A special edition of Baha'i World Faith, bound in red leather, was produced by the Publishing Committee and first displayed at the book table during Convention and Centenary week. For this edition the last available supply of real leather was used, and only 500 books could be made. In this binding the believers have a permanent as well as beautiful volume of the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Price per copy, postpaid, $5.00. It is suggested that local Librarians have one copy on display.

Order through Baha'i Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

Centenary Memorial Book

The Publishing Committee has already published in Bahá'í News a notice of the volume compiled by the National Spiritual Assembly as a memorial of the Centenary and record of fifty years of Bahá'í activity in North America. This work offers both new and old believers a uniform view of our own Bahá'í history, a compilation of words of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá concerning America, excerpts from the Guardian's letters on the same subject, representative photographs, statistical data, and above all, excerpts from Nabil's history of the Temple most strikingly exemplifies today. The article itself is extremely well done, and the special feature is a reproduction of a photograph of the Temple filling page one, in size about 9 by 11 inches. Sold only in lots of ten copies for $1.00.

Architectural Concrete Magazine-reprint of illustrated four-page article on the House of Worship prepared by the staff of Portland Cement Association of Chicago for publication in the trade paper most directly concerned with the type of construction which the Temple most strikingly exemplifies today. The article itself is extremely well done, and the special feature is a reproduction of a photograph of the Temple filling page one, in size about 9 by 11 inches. Sold only in lots of ten copies for $1.00.

Peace Broadsides, four sheets, letterhead size, numbered consecutively 1 to 4, each containing brief excerpts from the Bahá'í Writings on Peace and prepared for mailing or giving out in consecutive order so as to produce accumulative effect. The broadsides are part of the current nationwide campaign on the Bahá'í Peace Program in which all believers can take part. Sold only in lots of 100 sets of the four (four hundred sheets) for $2.00.

Deepening the Spiritual Life, study outline by Horace Holley, second edition. References needed: "Gleanings," for all but three passages, which can be found in "Promulgation," "Bahá'í World Faith," or either "Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá or "Baha'i Scriptures." The purpose of this outline is to afford a group approach to Teachings which intensify the believer's awareness of the spiritual life. Sold in lots of five copies for $0.25.

Temple Guiding

The number of visitors to the Temple for the first ten months of this year totaled 18,477, an increase of 1,992 over 1943 for the same period.

During September visitors numbered 2,456. They came from 43 states, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Puerto Rico, the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia, and the countries of Chile, Colombia, Australia, New Zealand, Persia, China, Denmark, Brazil, Peru, Scotland, England, Germany, Bulgaria and France.

During October visitors numbered 2711. They came from 37 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Canadian provinces of Alberta, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and the countries of England, Australiala, Colombia, Chile and Peru.

Since this is the first time weekday guiding has continued through the month of October it is interesting to note that 902 visitors were taken through the Temple on weekdays alone. The number of visitors in October this year as compared to October 1943 shows an increase of 1,464. These figures would seem to prove that it was well worth while to keep the Temple open during the week through October. Several guides served three and four times in a week in order to make this experiment.

Three specially conducted tours were arranged during September and October—

Chicago Evangelical Institute of Chicago, 30
Prairie Club of Chicago, 28
Women's Auxiliary of the Chicago Medical Society, 12

A new Temple Guides Study Class was formed in October composed of fifteen youth living in Chicago and suburbs. This class is conducted by Dr. Edris Rice-Wray at the Bahá'í House of Worship every Sunday between 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. The youth are intensely interested and Dr. Rice-Wray assures us that we may expect some fine results from this class by Spring.

A similar Temple Guides Study Class will begin within the next few weeks for adults in the Temple area.

The rearrangement of the Reception Room, separating the visitor's register from the book sales by providing separate tables for each activity, we feel has relieved the congestion considerably in that room and at the same time has resulted in an increased sale of literature.

Library Committee

The National Library Committee would like to share our plans for the coming year with the friends. The following books may now be secured from our committee for presentation to public, college and university libraries: Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, Some Answered Questions, Bahá'í World Faith, The Promised Day Is Come (bound), The Advent of Divine Justice (fabrikoid), The Bahá'í Peace Program (fabrikoid) and Bahá'í World, Volume 8. The current volume of Bahá'í World can only be supplied to important libraries and the local Assemblies are requested to try to donate this book to their main public libraries. Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, and Bahá'í World Faith are the recommended books to offer as a first donation to new libraries. One or two other titles may be offered when teaching activities warrant additional literature to be placed in a local library. The important thing to remember is that each request to the national library committee must be accompanied by a note of acceptance of Bahá'í literature from the librarian.

Summary of library plans for the coming year:

1. Public Libraries: In addition to our routine presentations made through requests from the friends, we plan to continue our attempts to place at least an Esslemont book in each public library system in cities of 10,000 population and upward. All of these libraries were contacted during the past year. The response was not up to expectations but many new librarians became acquainted with the term "Bahá'í Faith" through our attractive form letter and a number asked for books.

2. College and University Libraries: We plan to carry on with the systematic coverage of the remaining colleges and universities in our survey. We did have far better response from these colleges and many received books.

3. Peace Libraries: Libraries housing peace collections and post-war planning data have been well covered by the library committee. There are 144 War Information Centers in colleges and we do have books in 100 of these colleges and have already contacted the remaining Centers. We wrote to the above 100 college librarians to bring to their attention the Bahá'í books on their shelves with reference to their peace collections.

4. Service Libraries: Many of these libraries now are in camps which are in the process of reconversion. Books have been placed in many important camps and the library committee will gladly fill any request for literature for new service libraries. We recommend that Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era be offered to these libraries. Other books should be offered only when there is sufficient interest in the teachings through teaching activities or for their regions to assist them in this vital work.

The general public is becoming conscious of the necessity for the fulfillment of Bahá'u'lláh's principle for the establishment of a universal auxiliary language to facilitate international communication. Every day brings to this Committee requests for information and news of increased activities. We therefore offer the suggestion that Bahá'í public programs this year include one talk on an international auxiliary language. Such a talk will fill an important need. We will be glad to help you all in this work.

Encouraging and interesting news has just been received that Esperanto magazines in South America are publishing translations of Bahá'í writings. The "Pernambuco Esperantisto" in Brazil carried an article recently entitled "La Filozofo de 'Abdu'l-Bahá," translated by Lidia Zamenhof, and copied from the Bahá'í World. Another issue printed an article written by Horace Holley, and translated by Leonora Holsapple Armstrong. This same magazine had a news item in Portuguese about

An illustration which appeared in the November issue is run again in December in order to connect it with the correct description — Birmingham, Alabama. For some reason the caption supplied with the Birmingham Assembly picture was replaced by a caption referring to an illustration intended for another picture.

International Auxiliary Language

In this second century of the Bahá'í Era, as the work of the Cause grows and expands, the services of the International Auxiliary Language Committee are becoming increasingly important. The members of this Committee are appealing to all the believers in the United States and Canada to help us in this vital work.

the translation into Esperanto of "The Dawn-Breakers," and they mentioned the review of the manuscript by the American Esperanto Academy.

We hope that the friends will report to this Committee any of their activities along the line of universal language.

Study Outline Committee

The Study Outline Committee would like to be of the greatest help to the believers in aiding them to carry out the Guardian's statement that "they must study for themselves, conscientiously and painstakingly, the literature of their Faith." To do this most effectively, we urge the friends to write to the Committee if they have a need for study help which they cannot fill. We would also like to hear from those who have had success in group study, through the use of outlines, or through other means of stimulating the acquisition of that familiarity with the teachings which is our duty and privilege. We would like to hear from Assemblies, groups, or individuals, telling what you have used, and what you need. By sharing our experiences we can work most effectively.

Bahá’í News

Centenary News

The Centenary celebration at Wilmette was made more impressive by the realization of the believers assembled there that the joy of the occasion was shared by individuals and groups of people over a large portion of the globe. Greetings to the convention from distant believers, delivered orally or sent by mail, and the accounts of other celebrations, which have begun to come in, add to the sense of unity in the Cause which was so deeply felt last May.

Latin America

Sra. Blanca Victoria Mejia, delegate from Nicaragua, said: “I come from a land that is small in size but great in aspirations and I bring you a message of brotherhood that she sends you by means of the most humble of her daughters. Don’t look at her representative for more than the light that radiates from her soul that is full of love and enthusiasm toward a Cause so high and noble as are the Sacred Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. For a long time I have dreamed of knowing you personally, as we profess the same ideas, and therefore I have enjoyed contemplating your souls reflected in your faces, and thus what I don’t understand because of language, I will read in your glances that are the most eloquent expression of the spirit. There is with you a small part of Nicaragua who in this House of Worship ask with you for Peace, Love, and Brotherhood among men.”

Virginia Orbison, traveling teacher in South America, wrote beautifully of that web of love spreading over the two continents of the western hemisphere, "chwaking them into forming the complete integration of all races, nations, classes and creeds." "Evidence of such diffusion," she continues, "is this passage by a most distinguished South American writer and educator, who writes from the strange heights of Bolivia: The Bahá’í books which you left after your four-day stay in this city of Sucre I have read with great attention, and I hope with benefit. They are a good tonic for the spirit. They, and your words, will be seeds fallen on good ground, and the time is not far away when they will bear fruit. . . . The Bahá’í Temple in Chicago must be a marvel, peerless in all the world. . . . If the opportunity does not present itself to attend the Centenary of the Bahá’í Faith, this group of four which you left, will unite here on May 23 to celebrate this event. Felicitations for the success of your task of promulgating this noble, generous and humane religion.'

(Signed) Raul Jaimes Freyre."

Eve Nicklin wrote: "May the love and unity that is felt here in our little group in Lima, Peru, reach across time and space and unite with that love and unity that must truly be manifest where you are—there in our beloved House of Worship."

And Isabel Tirado de Barreda, first believer in Peru, and delegate to the Convention says: "With all my heart do I enter into belief in the Bahá'í Faith, convinced that it is the most ample and perfect of all the religions, because it leads to the path which must be followed in order to attain the Grace of God; this through the beautiful Bahá'í prayers. Thus, as a drop of water gradually wears away the stone, so must the Bahá'í Faith engrave the heart of humanity so that it may be enabled to attain God's Grace of which it is so much in need."

The delegate from Brazil, Dr. Fernando Nova, who is a native of Bahia, brought greetings from the friends of that community, "and their messages of love and hope, longing for the day when they will be able to come and worship at this sacred spot." "We are still only a small group," he said, "twelve declared believers all told, but we feel that from now on a strong impulse will lead us ahead. So far all our achievements have been brought about through prayer; prayer has provoked deep feeling amongst us and has urged us on when the going was difficult. My coming to the States alone proved to me the power of Bahá'u'lláh's will; insurmountable difficulties faced us and there seemed no possibility of overcoming them and then suddenly the way was cleared and gradually the pattern was formed and everything fitted as perfectly as a chain, each link joining its counterpart for my coming to receive this wonderful message from you all, which in turn I will take back to the dear friends in Bahia."

From Trujillo, Santo Domingo, Gwenn Sholls wrote of the Centenary celebration in that city. It was a joyous fiesta at which were present guests from many countries. Puerto Ricans, one Hungarian, six Dominicans, a young lady from Spain, four Norteamericanos. The eldest guest was a Dominican gentleman of seventy-three, the youngest a child of three and a half. The United States and Canada

There were local celebrations throughout North America, of which some accounts have been received. One of the most interesting of these was held in conjunction with a Negro church in Montreal. Ruhiyyih Khánum was hostess in absentia, having made the celebration possible through her generosity. On June 15 about 50 Bahá'ís and 170 members of the congregation met at the Union United Church for a program which opened with an introductory speech by the pastor, Rev. Charles Este. There followed Bahá'í prayers, music, an account of the history of the Bahá'í Faith by Miss Joy Teller, an explanation of its principles by Mrs. Rosemary Sala, and the readings of a very beautiful letter from Ruhiyyih Khánum. Afterwards refreshments were served by a caterer. "The celebration was permeated by a true Bahá'í spirit. There was a complete feeling of unity as the members of the congregation and the Bahá'ís mingled.

The New York Community presented, on April 28, an Inter-America Centennial program. The music was Latin-American and two addresses were given: Dr. Luis Mena-Solorzano, former Consul General from Nicaragua spoke on "The Destiny of the Americas," and Mr. Philip Sprague told of "The New World Order of Bahá'u'lláh."

In Geneva, New York, the celebration took the form of a recital, April 21. In the first half of the program, poetic readings by Reginald King alternated with music; in the last half, texts were from "The Dawn-Breakers."

The Bahá'ís of Southern California held a meeting at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, Sunday afternoon, May 21, at which Dr. Edward Wilber spoke on "The Greatest Day in History."

The Spiritual Assemblies of Seattle and Richmond Highlands united to give a program in Seattle on the evening of May 22. Bahá'í addresses were given by Mr. C. G. Nordquist, Mrs. Juliet Cole, and Mrs. Hazel Stauter. A radio broadcast had been given on the afternoon of that day.

A centennial broadcast was also given in Vancouver, where, on May 23, the Bahá'ís gave a banquet attended by nearly forty people. This was followed by a public meeting at which Mrs. B. Liddell and Miss Mae McKenna were the speakers.

While we were rejoicing in the beginning of a new century of Bahá'í endeavor, at Wilmette and throughout the western hemisphere, our hearts turned also to the center of the Bahá'í world and to the Guardian. We have been eager to know how the Báb's mission was commemorated at His sacred tomb by Shoghi Effendi, the unifying point of the Faith He inaugurated. Our first news comes by way of clippings from "The Palestine Post" of May 23. The article, which was written the 22, is entitled "Candle-light on Mount Carmel." It runs as follows: "Some 200 Bahá'ís from Palestine, Trans-Jordan, Syria, the Lebanon and Egypt gathered here today for the beginning of the three-day Bahá'í centenary celebrations which will start shortly before 10 o'clock tonight.

"This evening electric lights and hundreds of candles illuminated the shrine off Mountain Road on the shrine of Mount Carmel until black-out time. Inside the shrine, huge floral decorations of roses and lilacs covered the Persian carpets over the tombs of the Báb and of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, where the gathering will take place tonight.

"Led by Shoghi Effendi (the grandson of 'Abdu'l-Bahá) who is the 'Guardian of the Cause,' the Bahá'ís will assemble at the tomb of the Báb at the exact hour tonight when the Báb declared his mission 100 years ago. There will be readings and chantings of Bahá'í prayers and teachings followed by the reading of a centenary review at the Oriental Pilgrims House where Shoghi Effendi will also address the gathering.

"Tonight celebrations are expected to continue until 2 or 3 o'clock tomorrow morning and will be continued in the afternoon with a solemn unveiling of the model showing the entire shrine which will be completed as soon as conditions will permit the carrying out of the elaborate construction.

"Tomorrow night, a film of 'Abdu'l-Bahá... taken in America, will be shown at the Pilgrims House and there will also be slides showing the completed Bahá'í House of Worship at Wilmette, Illinois."

Centenary Committee 1943-1944

Edna True, Chairman; Mrs. Margery McCormick, Horace Holley, Mrs. Sarah Walrath, Carl Scheffler, Albert Windust, Mrs. Nancy Bowditch, Philip G. Sprague, Allen G. McDaniel, Charles Mason Remey, Mrs. Louie Mathews, Leroy Joas, Max Croonen, Mrs. Sarah Kenny, Mrs. Lorel Schopfhecher, Rowland Estall, Louis G. Gregory.

The first meeting of the Committee on Bahá'í Centenary was called by the Chairman for September 15th, 1943, at 418 Forest Avenue, Wilmette. The seven members present were: Louie Mathews, Albert Windust, Louis Gregory, Carl Scheffler, Horace Holley, Allen McDaniel and Edna True.

It was a very humble, almost frightened group who thus met, for the first time, to initiate plans and arrangements for the historic Centenary of the Báb, the importance of which occasion, they were deeply aware of. Earnestly and prayerfully, they studied minutely the specifications and standards for these celebrations which the Guardian had sent to the N. S. A. and which had been published in the July News Letter. It was with a feeling of even this first consultation, to see the Centenary plans begin to take form so that the Committee were..." able to submit to the N.S.A., at their session which followed immediately, concrete recommendations which included the following:

1. That the length of the Centenary Period should be one week from May 19th, so that the Commemoration of the Declaration of the Báb on May 22nd, would fall midway.

2. That the time of this Commemoration Service should be so planned that its climax would come at exactly two hours and eleven minutes after sunset.

3. That the Public Meeting, to be held on this same evening, should include, on its program, two Bahá'í and two non-Bahá'í speakers. (Because of our limited time, this was afterwards changed to include only one non-Bahá'í speaker.)

4. That the subjects for the other public meetings should be carefully planned so as to include all of the special features, mentioned by the Guardian.

5. That a public Banquet should be held, at a befitting place in Chicago, on May 24th. This was later changed to May 25th.

6. That in order to achieve the greatest possible harmony in the pattern of the Celebrations as a whole, and to avoid duplication of effort and possible confusion, all of the arrangements for the Centenary be centralized in one over-all Committee which would function, in turn through its special sub-committees.

On September 28th, the N. S. A. reported back its actions on the various recommendations presented and appointed as an Executive (working) Committee the following members of the Committee on Bahá'í Centenary: Allen McDaniel, Horace Holley, Louis Gregory, Albert Windust, Margery McCormick, Sarah Walrath, Carl Scheffler, and Edna True. In this Committee were centralized the plans and arrangements for the full Centenary Period, with the exception of the Dedication of the Temple and the Commemoration of The Declaration of the Báb, in the Temple Auditorium, May 22nd. The other members of the Committee on Bahá'í Centenary were informed of this action, by the Chairman, under date of September 28th, at which time they were urged to continue in an advisory capacity.

The Executive Committee of the Committee on Bahá'í Centenary met throughout the winter and spring on the following dates: December 2, January 9, January 23, February 20, February 29, March 12, April 3, April 17, April 29, and May 10. A full report of progress and all recommendations needing final approval, were presented to the N. S. A. at each of their sessions. As these were always submitted in writing, they are not included, in detail, in this report.

The various Sub-Committees appointed by the Executive Committee and approved by the N. S. A. functioned continuously through-out the winter and spring. These were as follows:

1. HOUSING
2. FOOD
   Harriet Hilpert, Chairman, Gertrude Henning, Florence Gibson, Wyatt Cooper.
3. CENTENARY NOTICES
   (News Letter, etc): Horace Holley.
4. TEMPLE PREPARATIONS
   Carl Scheffler, Chairman, Robert Hammond, Carl Hansen, Edna True.
5. MUSIC
   Albert Windust, Chairman, Nellie French, Katherine True, Margery McCormick, Janet Lindstrom, Arna Perron, May Scheffler.
6. PROGRAMS
   (Speakers and subjects, for other meetings than those on the 22nd.)
   The committee as a whole.
7. DECORATIONS
   Carl Scheffler, Chairman, Louise Mathews, Doris Holley, Janet Lindstrom, Arna Perron, Gertrude Struven.
8. FIRST AID
   Dr. Katherine True, Chairman, Dr. Edris Rice-Wray, Helena O'Grady, Carl Hansen.
9. SPECIAL INVITATION COMMITTEE
   Sarah Walrath, Margery McCormick, May Scheffler.
10. USHERS COMMITTEE
    Ernest Van Meer, Chairman.

On February 29, the suggested plans and arrangements worked out by the above-mentioned Sub-Committees were gone over and approved by the Executive Committee, and presented to the National Spiritual Assembly. These arrangements were as follows:

1. HOUSING: That the Stevens Hotel in Chicago should be made the official hotel for the housing of the visiting Bahá'ís, and that the public Banquet, Thursday evening, May 25th, should be held in its Ball Room. The Housing Committee were to continue placing as many as possible in Evanston hotels and in private homes along the North Shore.
2. MUSIC: That all of the music in Foundation Hall and the Temple Auditorium should be from records, because of the difficult acoustical problems. In order to clarify the Guardian's wishes in this connection a cable was sent to him and a reply received, approving the recorded music. Each public meeting was to be preceded by a half-hour of selections from symphonies, choruses and solos.
3. DECORATIONS AND SPECIAL CONSTRUCTION: That Foundation Hall, the hallways, reception room, washrooms, and stairways, should be painted. That an adequate check-room should be constructed and that a book-stall should be arranged, in an over-flow reception room to be developed in the open space behind the Temple model. Extra telephones were to be installed, and the Centenary Office temporarily established in the small check-room near the front entrance. A First Aid and Emergency Room should be set up in the room adjacent to the kitchen. New hangings were to be placed behind the rostrum in Foundation Hall, and on the walls of the permanent reception room. New rugs were to be purchased, and furniture re-upholstered, for the permanent reception room. A special niche, designed by Gertrude Struven, was to be built and erected in the Temple Auditorium, for the displaying of the portrait of the Báb.
4. FOOD: That a tent be erected on the Parking Area, in which Lunches and Dinners would be served throughout the Centennial Period by a catering company.
5. PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM: That a Public Address System should be installed by Mr. John Sesterhenn, and arrangements made for the recording of the Commemoration Program.
6. IDENTIFICATION BADGES: That Identification Badges and Registration Facilities should be prepared for the proper identification of the Bahá'í Membership.
7. PROGRAMS: That the Programs in their entirety should cover the subjects emphasized by the Guardian, which were as follows: Significance of the Faith. Its Universality. Its World-Wide Influence. Its Indestructible Unity. Its Moving History. Its World Order.
Its First House of Worship in the Western World.

Its Attitude Towards Other Faiths.

In planning the different Public Meetings for the Centenary Period, the Centenary Committee, although building the programs around such phases of the Faith as its growth in North America, its development in Latin America, the Building of the Temple, etc., has endeavored to lift the addresses above personalities and to select themes that would cover the subjects emphasized by the Guardian, and present the Cause in its broad and universal aspects.

In outline, the Public Meetings were as follows:

Friday, May 19th, (Evening)
"THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF WORSHIP."
Chairman: Allen McDaniel
Greetings: Harry C. Kinne
Speakers: Mrs. True, Earl H. Reed, Carl Schaffner.

Saturday, May 20th, (Evening)
"COMMEMORATION OF THE CENTENNIAL OF THE BÁB.
"THE MEETING OF THE GREATEST NAME"
Chairman: Roy C. Wilhelm
The first part of the meeting to consist of references to important historical developments in the Cause associated with believers still living.

Presentation of Centennial Souvenirs. The second part to consist of the showing of motion picture film of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and of the Garden; the playing of the voice record of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the showing of important documentary Archival material.

Sunday Afternoon, May 21st,
"THE BÁBÁ'I WORLD FAITH"
Chairman: Philip Sprague
Speakers: Helen Bishop, Wm. Kenneth Christian

Monday, May 22nd, Public Meeting at 8 o'clock, "CENTENARY OF BÁBÁ'I FAITH."
Chairman: George Latimer
Speakers: Dorothy Baker, Harry A. Overstreet, Horace Holley.

Tuesday Evening, May 23rd,
"NORTH AMERICA, THE CITADEL OF UNIVERSAL PEACE."
Chairman: Leroy Ioss
Speakers: Albert Windust, Marizhe Gall, Marion Holley, Rowland Estall.

Wednesday Evening, May 24th,
"THE MEETING OF THE AMERICANS."
Chairman: Mrs. Stuart W. French
Speakers: Octavio Illescas, Philip Leonard Green, Mrs. E. R. Mathews.

Thursday Evening, May 25th, At 6:30 p.m. Banquet in the Ball Room of the Stevens Hotel.
Chairman: Albert Windust
Speakers: Dr. R. F. Piper, Elsie Austin.

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Fargo, N. D., newly constituted 1943-1944.

Under date of March 9, the N.S.A. reported its actions taken on the foregoing suggestions, approving all of the plans and budgets and requesting the Committee, in addition, to issue the invitations to the special list of guests; and to take up with the Village authorities the question of parking facilities, special traffic regulations etc. The Committee was further authorized to prepare a Centenary Souvenir, consisting of the photograph of the Master and of the Temple, set in a double panelled folder, copies of which were to be presented to all those who were believers in, and prior to, 1914.

The last meetings of the Centenary Committee, April 29 and May 10, were devoted to such final details as official photographs, the making of a pictorial (moving picture) record of the Centenary; floral decorations, planning of an additional, informal meeting in the Temple, Sunday evening, for the special purpose of showing more of the Archive material and Relics; lighting of the tent and of the Auditorium of the Temple; placing of a temporary path to the Auditorium doorways; Banquet menu and music; registering of the visiting Bahá'ís in the official Registration Book prepared and donated by Mason Remey.

The Committee on Bahá'í Centenary wishes to record in this report the invaluable assistance which it received from the following individuals:

Mountfort Mills, Paul Haney and Philip Sprague, in connection with securing the non-Bahá'ís Speakers.

Edwin Mattoon, in regard to the acoustical problems in the Temple Auditorium and in the securing of a satisfactory Public Address Company. Mr. Mattoon rendered a much appreciated service, also, in connection with the taking of the official moving pictures and with the displaying of the Archive material and Relics.

Gertrude Struven, in connection with the displaying of the Portrait of the Báb. The painstaking care which she gave to every detail of this was evident to all who had the sacred privilege of viewing the Portrait on May 22nd.

Mildred and Raffi Mottahedeh, for their generous loan of the priceless fabrics, used in the displaying of the Báb's Portrait.

Mason Remey for the exquisite and befitting Centennial Register which he personally prepared and donated.

The Walther's and their friends who so laboriously put the silken cords in the hundreds of Centenary Souvenirs, when the printer found he could not do this, at the last minute.

Bahiyih Ford and Arna Perron, for their efficient and untiring services in the Centenary Office, throughout the Centenary period.

All of the many Bahá'ís in the Temple area who served so faithfully in the registering, as ushers and many other capacities.

Without the magnificent team-work of everyone, the gigantic task of carrying out this week-long Centennial Program could not have been achieved.

In connection with the entertainment of the Latin American Friends, we wish to mention especially the deeply appreciated assistance of John Eichenauer, Jr., Winnie Lou Baker and Gayle Woolson.

Membership Records Of The American Bahá'í Community

The National Spiritual Assembly feels it desirable and necessary to explain to the believers how the complete membership roll of the American Bahá'í community is maintained at the National Office.

1. We have the membership lists submitted annually by the local Spiritual Assemblies, and these names and addresses are kept up to date by noting new enrollments, deaths, transfers to and from the city, retirements from the Cause, etc. Each local Assembly is expected to report the name and address of each new believer who enters the community either by confirmation or by transfer; the name and new address of each believer who establishes residence elsewhere, passes on or otherwise is taken from the local roll. It is impossible for the National Spiritual Assembly to have knowledge of all these changes except through immediate and official report. In checking the Convention and Centenary registrations we noted hundreds of changes of address in the city, and many changes of residence to other cities, not previously reported by the Assembly or Assemblies concerned.

2. Groups and isolated Bahá'ís. These are also maintained in the complete national roll in the form of the enrollment card signed by new believers under the supervision of the Regional Teaching Committee or in the form of transfer cards signed by those who come from cities which have an Assembly. This part of the national Bahá'í roll is entirely dependent upon the Regional Teaching Committees, who are expected to report all the necessary data from time to time. The amount of clerical work involved in the maintenance of the national records is exceedingly great. In many cases, information concerning changes of address, changes of status, etc., only comes to the National Office in the form of undelivered mail returned by the Post Office.

3. In addition to data covering all changes affecting individual believers, the National Office must have immediate reports of changes in the address of local Assembly Secretaries, group correspondents and the Secretaries of National Committees. In this connection, the friends are urged to set up some form of permanent address for each local Assembly, in the form of a P. O. box where the Assembly has no headquarters, so that change of address of the Secretary will not affect our mailings. Moreover, the believers are requested as a courtesy to place the address of the writer as well as the date of the letter on each communication sent to the National Office, whether by individual Bahá'í Committee or Assembly. This will greatly facilitate accuracy in our own communications and save much time on the part of the staff.

4. Among the younger Assemblies there exists some misunderstanding of the simple procedures involved in enrollments, transfers, credentials, etc., and the following explanations will clarify the matter.

Enrollment By Assembly. The applicant makes oral declaration of faith to the Spiritual Assembly, covering the qualifications of faith (Procedure, p. 3). Enrollment follows by vote taken after the applicant leaves the meeting. The enrollment is entered in the Minutes of the meeting, and notice is sent to the National Office.

Enrollment By Written Application. Outside the Assembly areas, new believers sign the application card provided to the Regional Committees. These are countersigned by the Committee representative, and filed in the National Office.

Youth Registration. The local Assembly receives the oral declaration of the youth between fifteen and twenty-one years of age that he records his intention to become a member of the Bahá'í community on reaching the age of twenty-one years, and meanwhile desires to be registered as a Bahá'í youth. Outside the Assembly areas, Youth Registration cards are provided to the Regional Teaching Committees, and are countersigned before filing in the National Office.

Credentials. All travelers claiming to be Bahá'ís must have proper credentials, in writing, from their local Assembly. Traveling Bahá'ís not members of a local community, but recorded as isolated believers, can obtain a letter from the N. S. A. (Procedure, p. 21). The National Spiritual Assembly feels that Oriental believers visiting America should transmit their credentials to the Secretary of the National Assembly, so that proper credentials may be issued by the National Assembly for their use while in America. If, therefore, a Bahá'í from the Orient should hereafter present his credentials to any local Assembly, that Assembly is requested to see that the credentials are transmitted. (Procedure, p. 21) All American Bahá'ís...who travel outside the United States and Canada, should have credentials from the National Assembly. (p. 53).

Transfers. When a believer moves from a city which has a Spiritual Assembly to another city which also has an Assembly, his local Assembly of the city he is leaving should give him a letter addressed to the Spiritual Assembly of the city where he is establishing his residence, certifying that he has been a voting member of that community. This letter enables the Spiritual Assembly in the city of his new residence to enroll him as a voting member without questioning his Bahá'í status. (Procedure, p. 51) When a believer moves from a city which has a Spiritual Assembly to a city which has no Assembly, his Assembly should report this fact to the National Assembly, and give the believer's new permanent address. The National Assembly then requests the Regional Teaching Committee of the area to provide the believer with a transfer card to fill out and return to the National Office. (Procedure, p. 51) Any believer moving into a city which has a Spiritual Assembly (i.e., any isolated believer), should apply to the National Assembly for a letter certifying that he has been enrolled as an isolated believer, and this letter when presented to the local Assembly will enable the Assembly to enroll the believer as voting member of the community without questioning his Bahá'í status. (Procedure, p. 52) The date of transfers is the date of change of residence, for a believer must reside within the civil area to be a member of the local community, and therefore to move away requires transfer as of that date, even though the matter is not recorded until later. A believer who moves out of a community cannot postpone change of status for an indefinite period.

5. Report of Change of Address. A suggested form is given here for believers to use in reporting change of address. This is in addition to

Procedure for Conduct of a Local Spiritual Assembly

Action has been taken by the National Spiritual Assembly to clarify the order of business for the consultation period of the Nineteen-Day Feast. The representative of the local Assembly who is to preside is the Chairman, or in his absence the Vice-Chairman, as this session with the community is a joint session of the Assembly and the local Baha’i’s. Thus the same regulation applies as at meetings of the Assembly itself.

Baha’i Youth

Baha’i youth are defined as those young people between fifteen and twenty-one years who have, whether by oral testimony or signing the special youth enrollment card, asserted their intention of applying for membership in the Baha’i community on attaining the required age.

Attendance of Baha’i youth at the Nineteen-Day Feast, while a permission rather than an obligation, nevertheless implies participation in consultation, but without a vote.

The appointment of local Youth Committees provides for the collective activities of those who are under twenty-one years of age. Local Assemblies, in appointing Youth Committees, may include members of less than twenty-one years. In appointing its other Committees, the local Assembly is to choose the membership from the voting list.

The School Committees have been advised that they are authorized to appoint Youth Committees to plan and supervise Youth sessions and Youth programs under the School Committee’s direction.

Regarding the age of fifteen fixed by Baha’u’llah: this relates only to purely spiritual functions and obligations and is not related to the degree of administrative capacity and fitness which is a totally different thing, and is, for the present, fixed at twenty-one.” —Shoghi Effendi

The Guardian’s Photograph

The believers are reminded that many years ago Shoghi Effendi directed us not to circulate or reproduce any photograph of himself. It has been out of respect for this injunction that the National Spiritual Assembly has never included a picture of Shoghi Effendi among those which can be purchased from the Temple Librarian and Sales Committee, the National Committee to which has been assigned the function of selling Baha’i photographs, ringboxes, slides and display material.

Review of Radio Scripts

Those believers who submit radio scripts to the Radio Script Reviewing Committee are requested to send duplicate copies of each script. If and when approved, one copy is to be returned to the author and the other filed in the National Office.

Baha’i News

National Radio Committee, Local Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees

To clarify the question of procedure in connection with plans for radio broadcasts, the National Assembly has recorded three simple directions, as follows:

1. The National Radio Committee is authorized to submit plans involving the use of any radio station in North America, and when approved by the National Assembly the Committee can make contracts directly with the station.

2. Local Assemblies are free to make use of radio facilities existing in their community, preferably taking advantage of advice and assistance from the National Radio Committee and making use of approved radio scripts.

3. Regional Teaching Committees are free to recommend, through the National Teaching Committee, plans for use of radio facilities in the area but not located in any city having a Spiritual Assembly. In carrying out plans which have been approved, the Regional Teaching Committee is to use approved scripts.

Dear valued co-workers:

As the activities of the American Baha’i community expand, and its worldwide prestige correspondingly increases, the institution of the National Fund, the bedrock on which all other institutions must necessarily rest and be established, acquires added importance, and should be increasingly supported by the entire body of the believers, both in their individual capacities, and through their collective efforts, whether organized as groups or as local Assemblies. The supply of funds, in support of the National Treasuries, at the present time, the life-blood of these nascent institutions which you are laboring to erect. Its importance cannot, surely, be over-estimated. Untold blessings shall no doubt crown every effort directed toward that end.

Groups and the Observance of the Nineteen-Day Feast

The National Spiritual Assembly recognizes in the growth of the Cause the need of keeping open at all times the door of fellowship and inter-association. Attendance at area teaching conferences, public meetings, and social and spiritual gatherings of all kinds can add to the solidarity and fusion of spirit upon which must depend the natural evolution of the community of Bahá'íhláh.

The Nineteen-Day Feast, however, has a more specific function, offering as it does not only the spiritual refreshment of sharing in the reading of the divine Utterances but also the opportunity for consultation in the groups as well as in the established communities.

The National Assembly hopes, therefore, that as rapidly as possible the groups will constitute themselves members of Nineteen-Day Feast consultation, and will joyfully avail themselves of the attendant bounties and privileges. While the single, isolated believer is not in this category, a group of two or more believers in one civil community may elect a Secretary, hold Feasts and Anniversaries, contribute as a unit to the National Fund, and work toward the glorious fruition of forming one more Assembly in the World Community of Bahá'íhláh. Such concentration of spirit and action may well mark a turning point in the spread of the Teachings and the deepening of Bahá'I life.

Summary of Group Memberships

As of November first, the local groups of the United States and Canada were listed as follows:—

Total number of groups representing two or more Bahá'ís, 204.

These groups are distributed in the various States and Provinces as follows:—

Alabama, one group of seven believers.

Arizona, five groups, none over three.

Arkansas, one of four.

California, twenty-eight groups, one of eight, two of seven, one of six and four of five.

Canada, nine groups, one of eleven, three of eight.

Cana, one of two believers.

Connecticut, six groups, one of ten.

Florida, three groups, one of five.

Georgia, one of twelve.

Illinois, fifteen groups, one of ten, two of seven.

Indiana, one of two believers.

Iowa, two groups, one of six.

Kansas, four groups, one of three.
In conformity with the provision that the By-Laws may be amended by majority vote after due notice in writing, the National Spiritual Assembly at its meeting of November, 1944, with the approval of the Guardian as to the textual alterations proposed, proceeded to adopt unanimously the amendments here published for the information and instruction of the entire Bahá’í community.

In presenting the new By-Laws which are now substituted for Articles II and VIII, the Assembly points out a few considerations which may be helpful to some of the newer Bahá’ís.

In the first place, the constitution and by-laws of a National Spiritual Assembly are as far as possible uniform and identical with those of every other National Assembly, thus laying the administrative basis of the Bahá’í electoral bodies which later are to elect the members of the Universal House of Justice, and giving every Bahá’í community in the entire world the same organic law. Thus, the American National Assembly does not of its own will initiate amendments, since to do so by independent action would create differences between the various national constitutions, but takes such action only when the Guardian himself has sent directions which require amendments, as in the present case.

Considering now the meaning of the new Articles II and VIII, it will be noted that the American Bahá’í community has been redefined so as to include all declared and recognized believers, whereas previously the constitution named only the voting members of the local communities, leaving out the groups and isolated believers. Second, the new Articles set up the simplest possible legal basis for the election of delegates by Bahá’ís of the various States and Provinces, avoiding details subject to change, which are preferably covered in our secondary procedure. Finally, it will be noted that the definition of the Annual Convention has also been changed. It is now defined as a joint meeting of the Bahá’ís and of the National Spiritual Assembly, and not as the annual meeting of the National Assembly alone. Finally, the Guardian’s direction that members of the National Assembly who are not delegates may participate in the consultation has been incorporated in the new By-Laws, the text of which was submitted to Shoghi Effendi and approved by him before the amendments were duly voted.

Article II. The Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada, for whose benefit this Trust is maintained, shall consist of all persons resident in the several States, Provinces, Territories or Federal Districts of the United States and Canada who are accepted by the National Spiritual Assembly as fulfilling the requirements of membership in the Bahá’í Community under the following qualifications set forth by the Guardian of the Faith:

(a) Full recognition of the stations of the Báb as Forerunner, of Bahá’u’lláh as Author and of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as True Exemplar of the Bahá’í religion, unreserved acceptance of, and submission to whatsoever has been revealed by their Pen; loyal and steadfast adherence to every clause of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s sacred Will; and close association with the spirit as well as the form of Bahá’í Administration throughout the world.

(b) Atainment of the age of 21 years.

(c) Declaration of faith to, and enrollment by, the local Spiritual Assembly if resident in the area of jurisdiction of any local Assembly recognized by the National Spiritual Assembly.

(d) Declaration of faith to the National Spiritual Assembly on the membership form provided for those residing outside any such area of local Bahá’í jurisdiction.

Article II. The Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada, for whose benefit this Trust is maintained, shall consist of all persons resident in the several States, Provinces, Territories or Federal Districts of the United States and Canada who are accepted by the National Spiritual Assembly as fulfilling the requirements of membership in the Bahá’í Community under the following qualifications set forth by the Guardian of the Faith:

(a) Full recognition of the stations of the Báb as Forerunner, of Bahá’u’lláh as Author and of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá as True Exemplar of the Bahá’í religion, unreserved acceptance of, and submission to whatsoever has been revealed by their Pen; loyal and steadfast adherence to every clause of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s sacred Will; and close association with the spirit as well as the form of Bahá’í Administration throughout the world.

(b) Atainment of the age of 21 years.

(c) Declaration of faith to, and enrollment by, the local Spiritual Assembly if resident in the area of jurisdiction of any local Assembly recognized by the National Spiritual Assembly.

(d) Declaration of faith to the National Spiritual Assembly on the membership form provided for those residing outside any such area of local Bahá’í jurisdiction.

Article VIII. The members of the National Spiritual Assembly shall be elected at an annual meeting to be known as the National Convention of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada. This Convention shall be held at a time and place to be fixed by the National Assembly. The National Convention shall be composed jointly of representatives chosen by the Baha'is of each State, Province, Territory or Federal District under the principle of proportionate representation, and the members of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Notice of the annual meeting shall be given by the National Assembly sixty days in advance in the Convention Call which sets forth the number of delegates assigned to the various electoral units in proportion to the number of Baha'is resident in each such unit, to a total number of one hundred seventy-five delegates for the Baha'is of the United States and Canada.

Section 1. All delegates to the Convention shall be elected by plurality vote. Baha'is who for illness or other unavoidable reasons are unable to be present at the election in person shall have the right to transmit their ballots to the meeting by mail. The meeting held in each State, Province, Territory or Federal District for the election of delegates shall be called by the National Spiritual Assembly and conducted by the Baha'is present under whatever procedure may be uniformly laid down by said body. Immediately after the meeting a certified report of the election containing the name and address of each delegate shall be transmitted to the National Spiritual Assembly.

Section 2. All delegates to be seated at the Convention must be recognized Baha'is and residents of the State or Province represented by them.

Section 3. The rights and privileges of a delegate may not be assigned nor may they be exercised by proxy.

Section 4. The recognition and seating of delegates to the National Convention shall be vested in the National Spiritual Assembly.

Section 5. Delegates unable to present in person at the Convention shall have the right to transmit their ballots for election of the members of the National Assembly under whatever procedure is adopted by the National body.

Section 6. If in any year the National Spiritual Assembly shall consider that it is impracticable or unwise to assemble together the delegates to the National Convention, the said Assembly shall provide ways and means by which the annual election and other essential business of the Convention may be conducted by mail.

Section 7. The presiding officer of the National Spiritual Assembly present at the Convention shall call together the delegates, who after roll call shall proceed to the permanent organization of the meeting, electing by ballot a chairman, a secretary and such other officers as are necessary for the proper conduct of the business of the Convention.

Section 8. The principal business of the annual meeting shall be consultation on Baha'i activities, plans and policies, and the election of the nine members of the National Spiritual Assembly. Members of the National Assembly, whether or not elected delegates, may take a part in the consultation and discussion but only delegates may participate in the election of Convention officers or in the annual election of the members of the national body. All action by the delegates, other than the organization of the Convention, the transmission of messages to the Guardian and the election of the National Assembly, shall constitute advice and recommendation for consideration by the said Assembly, final decision on all matters concerning the affairs of the Baha'i Faith in the United States and Canada being vested solely in that body.

Section 9. The general order of business to be taken up at the Annual Convention shall be prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly in the form of an agenda, but any matter pertaining to the Baha'i Faith introduced by any of the delegates may upon motion and vote be taken up as part of the Convention deliberations.

Section 10. The election of the members of the National Spiritual Assembly may be by plurality vote of the delegates recognized by the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly, i.e., the members elected shall be the nine persons receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot cast by delegates present at the Convention and delegates whose ballot has been transmitted to the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly by mail. In case by reason of a tie vote or votes the full membership is not determined on the first ballot, then one or more additional ballots shall be taken on the persons tied until all nine members are elected.

Section 11. All official business transacted at the National Convention shall be recorded and preserved in the records of the National Assembly.

Section 12. Vacancies in the membership of the National Spiritual Assembly shall be filled by a plurality vote of the delegates composing the Convention which elected the Assembly, the ballot to be taken by correspondence or in any other manner decided upon by the National Spiritual Assembly.

Amendment of By-Laws Of the Local Spiritual Assembly

The amendments required to make the local By-Laws conform to the new method of electing delegates are hereby adopted, as the local Assembly is no longer concerned with the holding of the State and Province meetings, or with the conduct of the Annual Convention. All that is necessary is to delete in the present Article III, in the list of functions and duties of the local Assembly, the statement that the Assembly calls the annual meeting for the election of delegates.

The National Spiritual Assembly has duly acted to amend the standard form of local By-Laws.

Annex II. Amended to read as follows: It shall call the meetings of the community, including the Baha'i Anniversaries and Feasts, the Meetings of consultation, and the annual meeting at which the members of the Assembly are elected.

Article XIII. Deleted.

Article XIV. Renumbered as Article XIII.

Article XV. Renumbered as Article XIV.

Unincorporated Assemblies are not required to take any action except to see that their reference copy of the local By-Laws is corrected as above. The incorporated Assemblies are directed to act as soon as possible in the amendment of their By-Laws in conformity with the changes made by the National Assembly. A notice will be sent these Assemblies explaining the steps to be taken in amending their By-Laws.

Centenary Publicity

Horace Holley, Chairman; Edna True, William Hening

In March, 1944, the National Spiritual Assembly appointed a special committee for preparation and release of publicity material concerning the Centenary and Convention. Its membership included a repre-representative of the Centenary Committee, Bahá’í News Service, and the National Spiritual Assembly.

At the time of this appointment, the Committee expected to launch a nationwide campaign of Bahá’í publicity based upon the following material:

The book compiled by the National Spiritual Assembly entitled “Bahá’í Centenary.”

Copies of the printed Centenary program.

It became evident that neither of the books would be available in time for use in connection with Centenary or Convention publicity. Moreover, due to unavoidable conditions, the printed program was not received until about ten days before the opening of the Convention and Centenary sessions.

However, a most favorable condition not anticipated by the Committee was the action of the Temple Trustees, under a special appropriation made by the National Spiritual Assembly, in having the House of Worship floodlighted during the month of May. This effect, as all visitors vividly recall, was extraordinarily impressive, and steps were immediately taken to have the Temple photographed at night when thus illuminated.

The Committee likewise requested the Centenary speakers and chairmen to provide personal photographs and advance excerpts from their public talks.

Before the end of April, the Committee had sent out to the National Press Bureaus, the local Assemblies, National Bahá’í Committees and Regional Secretaries a four-page article on Bahá’í Centenary Celebrations, authorized Mrs. Nina Matthisen of the Radio Committee to contract for radio spot announcements before and during the Centenary meetings, arranged with the publisher of “Wilmette Life” and other North Shore papers to use the floodlight picture, when ready, on their front covers, and planned for special distribution of Centenary programs through local Assemblies of the Temple area.

On May 9 the Committee sent out the floodlight photograph with a brief story to National Press Bureaus, National Weeklies, and to local Assemblies in the larger cities of North America.

Shortly afterward, a five-page article entitled “Bahá’ís of North and South America To Celebrate Birth of World Era” and giving an outline of the complete Centenary program, was distributed to Assemblies, press bureaus and newspapers. Meanwhile, the editor of Wilmette Life was given several stories and also photographs of the speakers to feature in connection with the front cover illustration. One thousand reprints of the cover and these various stories were obtained in time to distribute to Convention and Centenary guests, but this quantity proved insufficient to meet the demand.

After the Convention opened, a press desk was maintained with a supply of photographs, releases and other material for use by believers with press contacts as well as by press representatives who called. A special feature consisted of reprints of the Guardian’s message in which he summarized the range and scope of the Bahá’í world community at the termination of the first century of the Faith.

In response to a wire received from a Bahá’í of New York, several hundred words concerning the banquet held in Hotel Stevens were wired to four papers in that city. Daily releases during the Convention were given to the Chicago press. The Associated Press, Chicago Tribune, and Acme Photo Service sent camera men for feature pictures before or during the Convention and Centenary week. The Committee had no clipping service and hence cannot report on the extent to which the local Assemblies could use the material sent, or the amount of coverage made by the National Press Bureaus. We hope that a complete set of clippings can eventually be compiled, for the permanent records of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Persia

In the land where occurred the event which we were all celebrating, the festivities lasted nine days. By way of Great Britain we get the following account: "All the members of the local National Spiritual Assembly and of the local Assemblies in that country went to Shiráz and attended the Centenary commemoration meeting in the House of the Báb. The Guardian sent a silk carpet to the House as a Centenary gift.

"We hear from Thiráz that they held very many Centenary meetings there. Since conditions do not allow them to gather together in very large numbers, they held meetings in a lot of places at a time. There were about 60 meetings a night for nine nights, each being attended by anything between 120 and 300 people. At first the Press took no notice of the Centenary until the "Iran Daily News" published a telegram about the celebrations in London. This created a big sensation and then the other papers began to take notice. They tended mainly to criti(cise but it proved to be a very good advertisement for the Faith in Persia."

India

We have no news as yet of the actual celebrations in India, but the Centenary number of the "Bábí News Letter" of that country is largely devoted to an account of the Six-Year Plan inaugurated there in 1938. During the first three years little progress was made, but in 1941 a stirring cable from the Guardian, accompanied by a gift of £200 accelerated the teaching activities to such an extent that the National Spiritual Assembly could report, at the end of the first century: "Such loving and inspiring messages came at every step on our way forward until we succeeded in forming 23 new Spiritual Assemblies in the short space of three years. We started with five Spiritual Assemblies in the whole of India and ended the Six-Year Plan with a total of 28 Assemblies, out of which 15 are registered with the Government while the remaining will soon complete their registration. The impetus given by the Six-year Plan to our teaching effort has, however, gathered strength and the believers have tasted the delights of victory. They will not rest now on their oars and continue to steer on and on until they have established a Spiritual Assembly in every inhabited locality of the vast Indian sub-continent."

England

The celebration in London was noticed by "The Palestine Post" as well as "The Tehran Daily News." We have the full story, however, in the "Bábí Journal" of the British Isles: "The celebrations began in the afternoon of Saturday, May 20th, with the opening of the Centenary Exhibition by Sir Ronald Storrs, K.C.M.G., a good friend of the Cause. This opening ceremony was indeed very well attended, and it was reported in three of the national newspapers. The Exhibition, which was held at Alliance Hall, Westminster, lasted for a week, until the noon of the following Saturday, and was open daily from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. There were many visitors, who took away our literature with them and purchased books.

"The most thrilling occasion of the whole week was the meeting at the Centre on the evening of May 22nd. There was a large gathering of the friends, and the meeting, which was timed to coincide with the very hour of the Báb's Declaration, at two hours and eleven minutes after sunset, left a deep impression on all present. It was a memorable event, and a time for rededication of our lives to the service of the Cause. Afterwards we all joined in a feast, which was made possible by the combined efforts of the community.

"On the evening of Tuesday, May 23rd, a public meeting was held at Denison House, Victoria. The attendance was large. Mrs. Basil Hall was in the chair. The Bábí speakers were Mr. W. Tudor Pole, Mr. H. M. Balyuzi, Mr. David Hofman and Mr. Norman Smith of the New York community (who is here with the United States Forces). In addition several well-known people paid their tribute to the Cause. They were Mr. Shaw Desmond (author), Sir William Hornell (late Vice-Chancellor of Hong Kong University), Dr. Harold Moody (President of the League of Coloured Peoples), Mr. Hannen Swaffer (publicist), and the Rev. Walter Wynn (Free Church minister)."

"On the remaining evenings of the week different functions were held at the Alliance Hall. On Wednesday evening (May 24th), Mr. St. Barbe Baker gave a talk on "The Rebirth of Palestine," illustrated with lantern slides. On the following evening Mr. Bernard Leach spoke on "Beauty and Truth." Both of these meetings, as well as the two following, were well attended.

"On Friday, May 26th, we had a programme of readings from the Scriptures, interspersed with musical items. This programme, entitled "The Song of Heaven," was presented by Mr. David Hofman. On Saturday evening, the last of the Centenary week, we had a review of Bábí history in dramatised form, presented by Mr. H. M. Balyuzi."

"This is just a bare account of the Centenary Week, which also included the Annual Convention. But there was much more than just these functions. There was a spirit of joy and gratitude and devotion, which words cannot describe."

(To be continued)
"God Passes By"

"This Revelation," Mulla Husayn has further testified, "so suddenly and impetuously thrust upon me, came as a thunderbolt which, for a time, seemed to have numbed my faculties. I was blinded by its dazzling splendor and overwhelmed by its crushing force. Excitement, joy, awe, and wonder stirred the depths of my soul. Predominant among these emotions was a sense of gladness and strength which seemed to have transfigured me...I felt possessed of such courage and power that were the world, all its peoples and its potencies, to rise against me, I should, alone and undaunted, withstand their onslaught."

A claim to be no less than the mouthpiece of God Himself, promised by the Prophets of bygone ages; the assertion that He was, at the same time, the Herald of One immeasurably greater than Himself; the summons which He trumpeted forth to the kings and princes of the earth...these constitute the dominant features of that initial contact that marked the birth, and fixed the date, of the inception of the most glorious era in the spiritual life of mankind.

With this historic Declaration the dawn of an Age that signalsizes the consummation of all ages had broken. The first impulse of a momentous Revelation had been communicated to the one "but for whom," according to the testimony of the Kitâb-i-Iqân, "God would not have established upon the seat of His mercy, nor ascended the throne of eternal glory." Not until forty days had elapsed, however, did the enrollment of the seventeen remaining Letters of the Living commence. Gradually, spontaneously, some in sleep, others while awake, some through fasting and prayer, others through dreams and visions, they discovered the object of their quest, and were enlisted under the banner of the new-born Faith. Messages From the Guardian

Dear and Valued Co-Workers:

1944, a year memorable for the sharp contrast between the rising tide of spiritual victories culminating in the Centenary celebrations of a world-embracing Faith and the swiftly ebbing fortunes of a war-ravaged, disilllusioned and bankrupt society, is drawing to a close. In every continent of the globe; in the Holy Land, the Heart and Center of our Faith and Pivot of its institutions; in the land of its birth; in the adjoining territory of 'Iraq; throughout the Western Hemisphere; in the British Isles, so severely subjected to the violence of a world tempest; throughout the length and breadth of India; in far-off Australasia and in the Nile Valley—all with the sole exception of the distant Republics of the West subjected in varying degrees to the imminent danger of becoming the theatre of war—the communities laboring for the promotion of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh have, throughout five tumultuous years, been providentially spared to hold aloft its banner, to preserve its integrity, to maintain the continuity of its institutions, to enrich its annals, to consolidate its structure, to further disseminate its literature and to befittingly celebrate its centenary. Preponderant indeed has been the share of that privileged community, which has been invested by the Head of the Center of the Covenant with a world-wide mission, in the prosecution of a task which, ever since the onset of this world upheaval and despite its mounting horrors, the builders of the Administrative Order of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh have so unflagingly pursued. Neither the participation of the Great Republic of the West in this fierce contest, nor the sorrows, burdens and restrictions which such direct association with the agonies of a travelling age has entailed have thus far been capable of dimming the splendor of the exploits that have immortalized the record of the services of this community since the ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Indeed, coincident with the period of America's direct participation in this world struggle and in direct proportion to the turmoil and the tribulations which such a participation has engendered, the members of this community have evinced a heroism and proved themselves capable of a concerted effort that have eclipsed the notable achievements that have heralded the establishment of the Administrative Order of the Faith as well as the first stage in the development of the Seven Year Plan.

What the year 1945, on whose threshold we now stand, has in store for the members of this determined, this valiant, this watchful, this exemplary community only the future can reveal. That the trials and afflictions suffered by their country and the people must wax as this world upheaval moves towards a climax no one can any longer doubt. The challenge that will face this stalwart community will no doubt be severe. To allow the prizes so nobly won, over so vast a field, at so great a cost, at so critical an hour, to fall into jeopardy would be unworthy of a career so auspiciously initiated, so completely dedicated to the Cause of God, so rich in promise and so brilliant in almost every phase of its evolution. Every local Assembly, the ordained pivot of a divinely-ordained System, which has been established in the States and Provinces of the North American continent, as well as in the Republics of Latin America, must, through a supreme effort on the part of pioneers, visiting teachers and Regional Committees, be steadfastly maintained. Simultaneously a no less determined effort should be exerted to enable the admittedly large number of groups scattered throughout the Americas to attain Assembly status. No less urgent is the obligation to proclaim the verities enshrined in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh by every means which individuals, Assemblies and committees can devise, through the press and radio, through an unprecedented dissemination of literature, through its systematic translation into Spanish and Portuguese and above all through active association with leaders of public thought as well as direct contact with the masses of the people. Through such means as these, and through such means only can the members of the American Bahá'í Community, who have so audaciously and successfully launched the first stage of the Divine Plan, be enabled to pave the way and usher in, soon after the cessation of hostilities, the succeeding stage in the evolution of the Power in function. My prayers and loving thoughts surround them continually in their devoted labors.

Sincerely,
Haifa, December 24, 1944

In your letter of Sept. 20th you enclosed a copy of your amendments of the By-Laws of the N.S.A.: he fully approved of these changes rendered necessary by the States and Provinces themselves now being regarded as electoral units in the election of delegates to the annual Convention.

In that same letter you ask for his suggestions concerning possible plans for teaching in Europe, or helping the Bahá'ís there with literature, etc. Obviously, there will be a tremendous need for Bahá'í literature in these war-torn countries and for spiritual enlightenment and help. But as the whole situation is still in the throes of violent changes, and we cannot as yet foresee how soon or where assistance may be given, he feels that there should at present be no diversion into new channels of the energies of the American believers now concentrated on the tasks they already have in hand. Literature in German, French, and any other European languages that can be conveniently undertaken, should be translated and held in readiness for use whenever the time for action comes.

He has been very sorry to notice in various reports received from you that some of the new Assemblies, established at such cost of sacrifice on the part of those who arose as pioneers and overcame every obstacle in their path and those who generously contributed of their meager resources, have lacked a supply of funds for this purpose, are falling below Assembly status. He realizes that your body and the National Teaching Committee and Regional Teaching Committees are well aware of this situation. But he wishes to personally add a word of appeal to the friends not to permit their hard-won prizes to now slip from their grasp through any relaxation of their vigilance and efforts. The believers, now more sure of their own powers and of the Divine help that has so unflaggingly reached them than at any previous period in their fifty-year history, must continue to put forth a mature, dedicated and sustained effort so that these new Assemblies—whether in North or South America—may be preserved and reinforced and, where necessary, re-instated. Groups, though of secondary importance, should likewise be enlarged and built up to Assembly status so that the truly remarkable victory achieved by the American and Canadian Bahá'ís may not shrink in dimension as the months go by, but rather flower into still greater victories in the days to come.

He also wishes to call your Assembly's attention to the great importance of Magallanes as a center, and of the necessity of extending it every assistance, so that this Bahá'í year an Assembly may be firmly established there. It, together with that of Alaska, may be likened to the extremity of the Bahá'í arms stretched out and waiting to embrace the whole world in the order of peace and love which Bahá'u'lláh has established for the children of men in this day.

In closing the beloved Guardian wishes me to assure you and your fellow-members of his most loving prayers on your behalf and for the success of the many tasks of importance which you are, in collaboration with the masses of the believers, seeking to carry to a successful conclusion.

With warm Bahá'í greetings,

R. Rabbani
Haifa, December 24, 1944

Shoghi Effendi very much appreciates the desire of the American believers to participate in the erection of the completed shrine of the Bab. The preliminary plans are now being made, and he leaves it to the friends to contribute towards this sacred enterprise in whatever manner and to whatever degree they wish to.

Also, regarding your letter of Aug. 7th: you ask his advice concerning a school session at Englewood, N.J. He feels that the four Bahá'í schools at present in existence, namely Louellen, Green Acre, Geyserville School and Tomority Ranch, are sufficient for the time being. There is, naturally, no objection to holding meetings and conferences in Englewood.

With loving greetings and the ardent hope that this new year will bring the believers over there many new victories,

Yours ever,
R. Rabbani

Gift of Land on Mt. Carmel

The Guardian has sent the National Spiritual Assembly the Certificate of Registration of a tract of land on Mt. Carmel adjacent to the Tombs of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Family there. It is registered in the name of The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada.
ada: Palestine Branch. The covering letter states that the piece of land was recently given to the Cause by Mirza Enayatullah Estahani of Haifa. "Some of the members of the N. S. A. will remember Mirza Enayatullah who about forty years ago was in America and has ever since remained firm and disassociated himself entirely from his half-brother, Dr. Fair and his sister, Mrs. Sprague." (From letter dated October 22, 1944)

Letters from the Guardian to Individuals

With the Guardian's consent the National Spiritual Assembly publishes the following excerpts from letters addressed to individual Bahá'ís.

"Regarding your question about vaccination: these are technical matters which have not been specifically mentioned in the teachings, and consequently the Guardian cannot make any statement about them. No doubt medical science will progress tremendously as time goes by, and the treatment of disease becomes more perfect. "It is advisable to use both the Bahá'í dates, according to the Bahá'í Calendar, and the usual Gregorian dates as well. The friends at present are free to do as they please. "The Guardian hopes that along with whatever other studies you take up, you will continually study the teachings and endeavor to acquire a profound knowledge of them. The importance of young Bahá'ís becoming thoroughly steeped in every branch of the teachings can not be over-emphasized, as they have great teaching tasks ahead of them to accomplish." (From letter to John C. Eichenauer, Jr., December 24, 1943)

"Regarding your questions concerning the advisability of changing the basis of the National Assembly's election and confining it to the body of delegates or of limiting the term of office: He feels that as any such changes are of a radical nature and should therefore apply to the N. S. A.'s of other countries, they are inadvisable and premature, both for this reason and because of their very nature. "What is needed is to get the administration in its present form to run more efficiently and at the same time to build up a higher sense of responsibility among the body of the believers. They should be encouraged to think more, not only about the qualifications of their elected bodies, but also about such things as you mention, the law of averages, the age and indisposition of some of the members, etc.

"When we look back and see what the Administration has accomplished in twenty odd years, indeed what it has done in the last seven years, we see what strides forward have been made. Far greater tasks lie ahead, but the Guardian does not feel that the way to meet them is to change the present system but rather to perfect it by educating the believers and training them, holding more conferences, publishing more news for Bahá'ís, getting more people active."

(From letter to Mrs. Annie Romer, July 7, 1944)

National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

In the intensity of spirit produced by the Guardian's message to us this month, let us take up constructively some of the important matters arising in our current work.

Bahá'í Community

The preparation of the annual membership roll required for the State and Province Conventions enables us to examine the American Bahá'í community from a statistical point of view.

Baha'i Calendar

Briefly, as of December 15, 1944, the National Spiritual Assembly found that there are 4,920 adult Bahá'ís in the United States and Canada. Of these 3,261 live in local communities; 786 live in groups; and 873 are the only believers in their respective cities or towns. The result of this latest check shows an excellent growth in the past year.

National Fund

From the Treasurer's report for December we quote the following items:

- Total receipts, March 1, 1944 to December 31, 1944, $81,763.97; needed by February 28 to complete the current annual budget, $53,228.03; receipts for the month of December, $6,750.12 (the average monthly total in support of the budget would be $11,250.00); 97 Administrations sent contributions, leaving 38 which failed to lend their support to the national activities; December expenditures,
$7,299.40 (Administration, $2,744.39; Inter-America teaching, $1,144.00; National and Regional Teaching, $740.00; Temple Maintenance, $667.00; Green Acre Maintenance, $1,536.60); Cash on hand, December 31, $3,124.05.

Items from the Canadian Bahá'í Fund for November and December: November receipts, $200.25; December, $213.30; November expenditures (teaching budgets) $425.00; December expense, also for teaching, $300.00. (This means that the total National and Regional Teaching expense in December was $1,040.00 as part is paid each month in Canada).

Inter-America

The detailed news of Inter-America teaching work is presented by the Inter-America in its regular section of Bahá'í News, but we summarize the following items of particular interest:

Recent pioneers who have left for the field—Dr. Malcolm King, Nicaragua; Miss Elisabeth Cheney, Asuncion, with visits en route to Venezuela, Colombia, Buenos Aires, and Montevideo. A number of pioneers are poised in flight, awaiting passports—Miss Louise Baker, Miss Jean Silver, Mrs. Gayle Woolson, Miss Eleven Marsella, Mrs. Helen Roach, Miss Ophelia Montalvo, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop, Miss Jessie Revell, Miss Ethel Revell, Hascel Cornbleth. The monthly budget for Inter-America pioneers, not including travel expense, is $953.00. A special appropriation of $1,000.00 has been made toward cost of printing Spanish editions of the Bahá'í literature in Buenos Aires.

Teaching Budgets

The National and Regional Teaching budgets expended from November to January amounted to $1,710.00, while $1,650.00 has been authorized until March. One new pioneer has arisen to volunteer services in response to the appeals sent forth by the Teaching Committee and the National Spiritual Assembly since November.

Publishing Cost

The friends have been informed through Bahá'í News of the printing schedule maintained by the Publishing Committee during the past year, leading to expense which the Committee has been unable to finance entirely from current income. In order to meet these bills, the National Spiritual Assembly is advancing the amount of $2,000.00 per month to the Publishing Committee for six months, a total of $12,000, all of which the Committee will repay as soon as possible. We are delighted to inform the friends that special donations have been made equal to the entire cost of printing The Bahá'í World, Vol. IX, now on the press.

National Campaign

The National Assembly has given special thought to the coordination and expansion of our collective capacity for carrying the Message to a larger portion of the public and with increased force. The Assembly has accepted the principle of responsibility for planning and initiating the Bahá'í activity in the form of a unified national campaign, embracing all our important facilities such as meetings, circuits, displays, publicity, radio and advertising, and affording larger opportunities for service to National Committees, local Assemblies and the individual Bahá'í. The idea is for the National Spiritual Assembly to arise above its constant mass of detail and adopt a new and larger vision of the possibility of releasing the latent powers of the entire Bahá'í community, so that in future the year's work can be planned as a whole, the objectives defined, the methods chosen, the agencies prepared and the budget requirements fixed in terms of the larger undertaking. The matter is entering the stage of action when announcements can soon be made to the believers.

Centenary Book

A number of letters have been received by the National Spiritual Assembly pointing out errors or omissions in the Centenary book. These are most welcome, and all corrections will be reported from time to time to enable the friends to note these in their copy of the book.

Six cities visited by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 1912 were omitted in the list on page 90, the reason being that this list was taken from 'Bahá'í Year Book" Vol. I, based on the records of talks and public addresses given in the two volumes of "Promulgation of Universal Peace": Worcester, Mass., Milford, N. J., Omaha, Lincoln, Neb., Glenwood Springs, N. Y., Berkeley, Calif.

The list of believers who made early pilgrimages omitted the name of Mrs. Sarah Herron (pages 141-143). Mrs. Kathryn Frankland's name should be removed from this list.

The article by Thornton Chase on pages 356 and 157 was written in 1904 and not 1914, as stated in the footnote.
In the list of teachers given on pages 166 and 167, the name of Mrs. Fred Woodward should be changed to Mr. Fred Woodward.

The page of “Acknowledgments” should include Wm. Kenneth Christian as author of “Growth of the Literature,” page 145.

Government Regulations

The question whether Regional Teaching Committee members can receive extra gasoline rations for performance of religious work has again been taken up with the OPA in Washington, and the decision is that there is no change in their regulations which withhold supplementary gasoline for the administrative or the personal missionary type of religious work. Only Chairmen and Secretaries of Local Assemblies, as reported some two years ago, are eligible, and their use of the extra gas is restricted to local transportation.

Another question recently presented again to a government bureau is whether identification tags can be issued to Bahá’ís in the armed forces bearing the letter “B” for “Bahá’í.” The War Department informed our representative that it adheres to its policy of indicating only three categories of gasoline for the administrative, religious work. Only Chairmen and Secretaries of Local Assemblies, as reported some two years ago, are eligible, and their use of the extra gas is restricted to local transportation.

Assembly Development

The purpose of this series of statements is to recreate in our hearts and minds the spiritual conception of the Bahá’í community; its significance, its importance, and its attainments.

Our beloved Guardian in a letter dated March 5, 1922, early emphasized the vital and sacred status of the Local Spiritual Assemblies in these words:

“A perusal of some of the words of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on the duties and functions of the Spiritual Assemblies in every land (later to be designated as the local Houses of Justice) emphatically reveals the sacredness of their nature, the wide scope of their activity, and the grave responsibility which rests upon them.”

Unless and until each Local Spiritual Assembly acquires the spiritual status of a united, harmonious body, functioning solely, selflessly, and devotedly for the spread of the Faith and the upbuilding of its Bahá’í community, growth and progress of our Faith will not prevail in that community. Personal jealousies, bickerings and dissension are poison in the body of the community and unless eliminated will result in division, disintegration and probable dissolution of the community. Each believer constitutes a unit of the community.

“In order to assist new and inexperienced Assemblies, the Assembly Development Committee has been given a special section of Bahá’í News for the presentation of relevant material.

National Committees

and it becomes his or her spiritual responsibility to labor, selflessly, humbly and ceaselessly as a member of the Local Spiritual Assembly, of a committee or of a group to bring about complete unity, harmony and progress.

Let each and every one read, and re-read, until they become an unconscious part of our very lives, the words of Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and Shoghi Effendi, and the instructions of the National Spiritual Assembly concerning the Local Spiritual Assembly and the Bahá’í community, set forth in “Bahá’í Procedure,” Section Two. Then let us strive day by day, to truly function in full obedience to these basic spiritual principles and commands given to us for our guidance by the Founder, by the Exemplar, and by the Guardian of our Faith.

Newly formed Local Spiritual Assemblies should realize that they have two principal functions:

First—the development of a Bahá’í community through the complete observance of the principles and practice of Bahá’í administration as set forth in Bahá’í Procedure;

Second—the spread of the Faith by teaching through individual effort, fire-side groups and public meetings.

The development of a Bahá’í Community is effected by the united and harmonious functioning of the Local Spiritual Assembly in regular weekly and occasional special meetings. Each and every member of the Assembly must become familiar with

Directory

The following changes made since the last issue of Bahá’í News are reported:

1. Local Assemblies

Halifax, N. S., Canada—Mrs. Edward Bellefeur, Secretary (formerly Miss Muriel Hutchings), 603 Gottingen Street.

Moncton, N. B., Canada—Miss Irmgard M. Mathews, 52 Enterprise Street, Dayton, Ohio—Miss Hazel Voelz, Secretary, 351 Kenilworth Avenue.

Brattleboro, Vermont—Mrs. Eleanor Stone, Secretary, 2 Bennyvale Road.

2. National and Regional Teaching Committees

Radio—reconstituted with the following membership: William Sears, Chairman; Emerie Sala, Secretary, 425 Maynor Street, Montreal, Quebec; Mildred Mottahedeh, Mrs. Florence Morton, Mrs. Alice Bacon, Mrs. Nina Matthiesen, Wendell E. Bacon, Reginald Bacon.

Reviewing—John W. Hart added.

Temple Guides—Mrs. John McHenry added. Laurence LaRoeque has moved from the area and is unable to serve.

Regional Teaching Committees—New England, Ruth Ziebell unable to serve. North and South Dakota and Minnesota—Mrs. Helen Frink added. Mrs. Catherine Whitmore has moved from the area and is unable to serve. California, Nevada and Arizona—Dr. Clyde Laggan added.

Latin-American Session, Centenary Convention, May 19-24, 1944, Temple Foundation Hall. Dr. Edelberto Torres of Guatemala, Co-Chairman; Carlos Vergara of Mexico speaking; Mrs. Gail Woolson, translating.
the purpose and significance of the institution of the Local Spiritual Assembly and the basis of the Bahá’í community as set forth by Bahá’u’lláh, ’Abdu’l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi. (See Bahá’í Procedure, Part Two, pages 29 to 33).

The conduct of the meetings of the Local Spiritual Assembly is based on the spiritual principles of justice, love, purity of motive, radiance of spirit, humility, and servitude. The members must realize at all times the dignity, power and importance of the Assembly, which will evolve into the local House of Justice in the future. (See Bahá’í Procedure, Part Two, pages 34 to 36.)

Promptness, orderliness and efficiency should mark the conduct of the affairs of the Bahá’í community and especially of the meetings of the Local Spiritual Assembly. The calling of the meetings, the order of business and the conduct of business follow the procedure outlined in the “Procedure for the Conduct of a Local Spiritual Assembly.” In the Bahá’í Assembly, while the Chairman generally acts as the presiding officer, he or she must consult and vote, with equal voice and responsibility, with the other eight members. In all Assembly actions, as well as activities, wholehearted consultation and cooperation are required. (See Bahá’í Procedure, Part Two, pages 37 to 39).

The Nineteen Day Feast is the foundation of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, it is the period of consultation for the members of the community, and for the Local Spiritual Assembly with the community. Of such great importance is this meeting that only illness or absence from the community are excuses for non-attendance. The Feast is conducted in three parts; first, the reading of prayers and extracts from the holy utterance; second, a period of consultation of the members of the community with the Local Spiritual Assembly; and third, the material feast and social gathering of all the believers. A regular order of procedure for the conduct of the period of consultation has been provided by the National Spiritual Assembly. (See Bahá’í Procedure, Part Two, Pages 39 to 43). The Local Spiritual Assembly will provide for the community observance of the Bahá’í anniversaries, festivals, and days of feasting. (See Bahá’í Procedure, Part Two, page 44.)

Public Meeting, Bahá’í Centenary, Temple Foundation Hall, May 23, 1944. Subject: “North America, Citadel of Universal Peace.” Chairman, Leroy Isao; Speaker, Albert R. Windust, Mrs. Harold Gail, Rowland Estall.

Inter-America News

In the Guardian’s letter published in December Bahá’í News he urges “...the entire Bahá’í community of the Western Hemisphere to focus its attention during the remaining months of the opening year of the second century on the formation of local Assemblies in the remaining Republics of Nicaragua, Panama, Venezuela, Bolivia and San Domingo ...”

No less than ten North American pioneers are ready and waiting to depart for those Latin American countries where the need for teachers seems to be greatest. Up to the present, however, their departure has either been long delayed or prevented due to lack of favorable response to passport applications. Intensive efforts are being made to find ways of obtaining permission for the departure of these pioneers. We trust that the entire Bahá’í community will pray that this difficulty shall be removed.

This difficulty, which both the former and the present Inter-America Committees have experienced, no doubt offers increasing evidence, however, as was indicated by the Guardian himself in a published letter of last September 24th, that “...native (Latin American) Bahá’ís should, whenever qualified, be urged and assisted to pioneer, to travel and to teach in Central and South America...” The work of native pioneering has already been nobly initiated by two of the South American friends. Sr. Esteban Canales of Santiago, Chile, is teaching in Punta Arenas at the extreme southern tip of the Continent, and Sr. Haig Kavorkian of Buenos Aires is now on his way to assist in the establishment of an Assembly either at Quito or Guayaquil in Ecuador. There are at least five resident believers in each of these cities at present.

Of the five “remaining Republics” mentioned above, the Committee rejoices in being able to share the glorious news that both Bolivia and Venezuela now have sufficient believers residing within a given city to elect their first Spiritual Assemblies on April 21. The membership of the La Paz group has reached the number nine, and in Caracas there are fourteen adult believers and three youths.

While the latest report from Panama indicates the presence of a group of fifteen believers, the problem there is one of residence. The Guardian’s wish is that an Assembly be established in the Republic of Panama or Panama City, rather than the Canal Zone which is United States territory. It seems that the opportunity is open here to achieve the blessings of a pioneer by moving across the street, so to speak. We are confident that by this means and by the addition of new believers a Spiritual Assembly will be born April 21 in Panama City.
Present membership records for Nicaragua and the Dominican Republic show only three Bahá'ís in each of the cities of Managua and Ciudad Trujillo. We have been able to send just one pioneer to these countries. In December Dr. Malcolm King left New Orleans for Nicaragua on a British passport. We have faith in miracles—that when our Guardian calls for a certain accomplishment, such an accomplishment is possible. From what direction shall we look for settlers and pioneers to proceed to these Republics? From Central America?

Word has been received that the Bulletin Committee in Panama expected to issue its first Spanish Bahá'í Bulletin in January, 1945. The cooperation of each community and group in Central and South America and the West Indies in sending local news of the Cause each month will be of great assistance to the Committee. The Inter-America Committee would greatly appreciate receiving a copy of these local news reports, so that they can be drawn upon in our summaries for Bahá'í News. We hope to include news of all the countries in successive issues and not to emphasize three or four countries from which we hear frequently, chiefly through the pioneers. Two members of our Committee are able to translate Spanish communications very readily.

A few of the Bahá'í communities in Latin America are beginning to issue local bulletins or news letters, and several of these communities are carrying on extension teaching in nearby cities. A splendid example of a local bulletin is one which is printed monthly by the Bahá'ís of Tegucigalpa under the title, Nueva Era.

From numerous centers comes the call for Bahá'í literature in Spanish, for more translations. The plea for assistance to the Publishing Committee in Buenos Aires is being answered in the person of Elizabeth Cheney, who arrives there on January 25th. Reading the list of Spanish publications to be brought out as soon as possible are The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh, a new book of Bahá'í Prayers, and a pamphlet, El Alba de la Nueva Era, containing an excellent compilation made by Gerard Sluter of Bogotá. We understand that translations of several other titles have been received and reviewed. Assembly growth and development is dependent upon the availability of literature in the languages of Latin America. May God speed this work!

—INTER-AMERICA COMMITTEE

Temple Visitors

November-December, 1944

The number of visitors to the Temple for the twelve month period ending December 31, 1944 totaled 17,549, an increase of 2,200 over 1943 for the same period.

During November visitors numbered 717. They came from 25 states, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Saskatchewan, and the countries of Turkey, Russia, Egypt, Ireland, Belgium, Australia, Paraguay, Argentine and Jamaica.

During December visitors numbered 431. They came from 20 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and the Canadian province of Ontario.

It is interesting to note that in spite of transportation difficulties and the unusually cold and disagreeable weather there was an increase of 216 in the number of visitors during November and 113 during December this year as compared with 1943.

The following statistics might be of interest:

Total visitors for the twelve month period ending December 31:

The following specially conducted tours were arranged during November and December:

- Hi "Y" Group of Chicago 28
- Moody Bible Institute 46
- Chicago Parks Outing Club 20
- Turkish Delegation to the International Civil Aviation Conference 8

A class for prospective guides will be conducted in the Temple each Sunday beginning January 21, 1945, from 1:30 to 3:00 o'clock. We are striving for a large enrollment on that date.

Publishing Announcement

Selected Writings—Three pamphlets, one containing selections from Bahá'u'lláh, one from 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and one from the Guardian, forty-four pages each, paper covers. This set of small and convenient pamphlets offers every Bahá'í a representative compilation of Bahá'í literature, which may be described as the basic teachings. For personal study, for informal group and fireside group reading and discussion, the Selected Writings are ideal. Because 75,000 pamphlets were sent to press at one time, this set is available at the extraordinary low cost of 25c for all three pamphlets. (Individual copies not sold separately). The Publishing Committee has set the goal of Local Communities

have not only been teaching; they have been studying also on subjects commonly introduced by non-Bahá'ís. Discussions following consultation at the 19 Day Feasts included "Baptism," "Trinity," and "The Second Coming."

The Assembly is to be congratulated on having made a regular contribution each month to the National Bahá'í Fund.

The Bahá'ís of Atlanta, Georgia, have been very active and have made some interesting contacts. Not only have they brought outside speakers regularly to Atlanta (Virginia Cameron Foster, John Inglis, Jean Bolles, Nellie Roche, Alta Krueger, Stanwood Cobb, Marion Little, and Homer Dyer), but they have sent out speakers from their own community. Margaret Ruhe, as representative of the Bahá'í College Speakers Bureau, appeared at seven southern colleges in three southern states, and Terah Smith talked at Berry College and Darlington School for Boys, both in Rome, Georgia.

At one public meeting at the Henry Grady Hotel in Atlanta, when Dr. David Ruhe acted as chairman and Mrs. Ruhe and Mrs. Smith talked on progressive revelation and the working principles of the Bahá'í Faith, Dr. Garber, professor of Religious Education at Agnes Scott College, accompanied by his wife, brought fifteen girls from the college to hear them. It may be added that whenever a public meeting was held for the whites, a corresponding one was held for the Negroes.

Mrs. Marion Little was able to make a number of interesting contacts in Atlanta, among them the superintendent of the public schools, Mr. Skidmore at the High Museum of Art; and Miss Sumner, connected with the Atlanta Constitution. The Editor of that paper sent a reporter to interview the Atlanta Bahá'ís and published an interesting and comprehensive article entitled, "A True World's Peace by 1963."

The report from Berkeley, California, is full of interesting projects, not the least interesting of which is a public speaking class for both Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís. Bahá'í material was used in all five meetings, and the results are summed up as follows: "Enthusiasm for Bahá'í Faith; appreciation of Bahá'í literature; many Bahá'í books read and circulated; general improvement in understanding and ability in reading writings of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and Shoghi Effendi. Average attendance sustained at eighteen, about half Bahá'ís and half non-Bahá'ís. The most successful teaching medium we have used, with several close to membership." The instructor, who teaches dramatics in two colleges and does private studio and recital work, "gave her services in a true Bahá'í spirit with sympathetic understanding of the purpose of the class."

Four kinds of fireside meetings were carried on in Berkeley: youth firesides; guest feasts (Ridván, the Declaration of the Báb, the Birth of the Báb, and the Naw-Rúz); radio group; and social events for members of the National Spiritual Assembly when they visited Berkeley.

Berkeley cooperated with San Francisco in the symposium meetings recommended by the National Assembly, and were able to increase the attendance at those meetings considerably by excellent publicity methods. For instance, for the first symposium, 550 programs, invitations, and radio announcements were distributed and mailed in Berkeley; 27 posters of the program were put up in Y.M.C.A.'s, libraries, hotels, clubs, shops, International House, student living groups, etc.; a display poster was placed in the lobby of the public library; these announcements were followed up by telephone calls and announcements before clubs and by transportation in automobiles. As a result, nearly 100 attended through the efforts of the Berkeley Bahá'ís.

The consequences of this first symposium were thrilling: "Influential people attended the lectures and expressed special interest: the former mayor of Berkeley, the president of the world affairs section of the College Women's Club, and several teachers and writers. A well-known Berkeley author wrote, 'Thank you, and with all good wishes for the success of this tremendous enterprise (for the happiness of our whole planet).'

A high school teacher took 'Pattern for Future Society' to her class, wrote the whole text on the board, and had her students copy it in their notebooks.

"Official recognition of the Berkeley Bahá'í community came with the request from the City Council Committee for Post-War Planning for the Berkeley Bahá'í Assembly's plans for a better city after this war. The Assembly respectfully submitted the Bahá'í plan, with suggested applications to local conditions.

"A leader of the Committee on Better Race Relations in Berkeley attended the Symposium, recognized the spiritual power back of the race unity achievements of the Bahá'ís and became so enthusiastic that she gave a tea at the College Women's Club for the members of her group and of the Berkeley Bahá'í community to hear Marion Holley. The Berkeley Bahá'ís now find on every side this new awareness and appreciation. A student on the campus turned to another student, not knowing he was a Bahá'í, and said, 'Who are these Bahá'ís?—never heard of them before and now all of a sudden I hear of them every place!'

The very young Assembly at Boise, Idaho, has been very active since its organization, April 21, 1943. It has held weekly study classes as well as informal gatherings for the public and it has made wide use of the radio, giving weekly programs at 8:45 on Thursday evenings during part of the time. During the whole year, twelve 15-minute radio talks were given. Mrs. Valeria Thornton was the guest speaker in Boise during the September and October campaign on Racial Unity, when addresses were given at Rotary, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Everywoman's Club, and the Negro Baptist Church. There was also a symposium in which non-Bahá'ís participated. A similar program of events was carried out for each of the great themes in the nation-wide campaigns of the year, with Dr. Stephen Tourney of Salt Lake City and Virginia Camelon Foster as guest speakers. The Assembly has also worked to develop "a strong community well grounded in administrative procedure." All activities of the community have been carried on through the contributions of the friends and a substantial check has been sent to the National Treasury each month.

The teaching campaign in Brattleboro, Vermont, was carried on by means of a succession of public speakers: Carl Krug, Harlan Ober, Dr. Elizabeth Kidder Ober, St. George Spendlove, Horace Holley, Ali-Kuli Khan, Rachel Small, Reginald King, Jean Bolles, and Louis Gregory. Ruth Moffett spent two weeks there giving lectures and conducting classes. Curtis Kelsey spoke at two fireside meetings. Seven radio broadcasts were given over a nearby station. And one of the friends induced the Brattleboro Free Library to order several books on the Faith.

The Edmonton Assembly, in Alberta, Canada, another small, new Assembly, sent in an excellent report, not least the interesting feature of which was a very clear financial statement, which included a separate report from the book committee. This Assembly was able to send more than half of its contributions to the National Fund, at the same time carrying on a very active campaign at home.

Of the public meetings held in Edmonton, that on Racial Unity was particularly interesting. It was held at the home of Mrs. Richard Jenkin, standing speakers, a Jewish lawyer since the audience included certain and a Ukrainian woman, supplementing Christian, Ukrainian, and other races and faiths, including Jewish, Syrian Muhammadans, Christian, Ukrainian, and Bahá'í. Two outstanding speakers, a Jewish lawyer and a Ukrainian woman, supplemented the Bahá'í speaker, Mrs. Davies. It was a most successful meeting, since the audience included certain persons active in unifying movements, such as the Chairman of the Council for Canadian Unity and the leaders of the Moslem group in Edmonton. Much contact work was done for this meeting, upon which work the success of the meeting in large part depended. The most outstanding success of this endeavor was the contact made with the Moslems of Edmonton, which city is the site of the only Muhammadan mosque in Canada."

The Halifax community which had been much reduced in size because a number of its new members had moved away, carried on an intensive program in 1943-1944, which consisted of several series of public lectures followed by study classes. Mrs. Virginia Camelon Foster came first and gave several well-advertised lectures at the Lord Nelson Hotel. After her departure study classes were held at the Halifax School for the Blind. Then Mrs. Foster returned and started a series of lectures at the school under the basic heading, "The Relation of Christ to the Modern Age." The publicity for these talks did much to dissipate the prejudice against the Faith in Halifax. It was then decided by the Assembly that the best way to keep up interest was to bring a procession of speakers to Halifax. Mrs. Emerick Sula was brought from Montreal. She was followed by Anthony Seto, Harlan Ober, and John Robarts. As a climax to the lecture program Mrs. Mamie Seto gave seven lectures on two weekends, the last talk being given at the Lord Nelson Hotel. The Sunday afternoon lectures of all the speakers were followed by informal get-togethers at the home of one of the believers. Mrs. Annie B. Romer, chairman of the teaching committee, sums up the principles on which the work was carried out as follows:

"Your committee believes that the work accomplished has been of a solid and consecutive nature. Also all the publicity has been presented with a view to conveying teaching in an acceptable form to avoid repetition; also to give the reading public some idea wherein this teaching differs from the now prevalent ideas of a new world order and the teachings on a united world."

The Helena, Montana, Assembly has not only been active at home but has carried on extension work in Butte. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Saunders and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bryan made regular alternate trips to Butte every two weeks to conduct study classes, accompanied by other members of the Helena community. Besides this fifty dollars worth of Bahá'í literature was supplied to the Butte friends. As a result of this endeavor, the Butte group applied for recognition as an Assembly on March 12th, 1944.

The Race Unity work in Helena has been interesting. Contacts were made with Negro, Chinese, and Filipino people, meetings were held in the Colored Church in Helena and in the army chapel of Gore Field at Great Falls, Montana, and a large meeting was held at the Placer Hotel in Helena.

This Assembly has started a filing system to record the Bahá'í activities and qualifications of the Helena Community members.

In Indianapolis the Bahá'ís held public meetings; fireside gatherings; and classes for Bahá'ís, at which they studied Mrs. Seto's new outline. This Assembly is to be praised for having made a considerable sacrifice for the sake of the national fund. "We gave up the Center as a monthly project and use it only on Feasts and for special occasions, paying for this room each time used, and trying desperately to send more funds to the National Treasurer, and we believe it has proven very satisfactory."

For Bahá'ís in Foreign Service

The Auckland, New Zealand, Spiritual Assembly sends the following invitation to American servicemen:

"Those Bahá'ís friends in the merchant Navy and Services, who wish to contact Auckland Bahá'ís any week day, may do so at a little shop quite handy to the waterfront and Railway station. Miss K. Carpenter's delicatessen shop is on the corner of Customs St., East, and the foot of Anzac Ave. Anyone can direct you to this corner. The shop is a hundred yards from Kings Wharf, and you'll be really welcome. As the shop is closed on Saturdays and Sundays, you may contact us by phoning number 54-089 and thus be able to meet the friends at their Sunday night meeting. You are assured of a hearty welcome."

In New Delhi, India, Mr. Abbasally Butt, member of the National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma, wishes to do all he can for the American Bahá'í youth serving in the Armed Forces in India. He may be communicated with, care of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of India and Burma, Malka-ganj Road, Sbzimani, Delhi, P.O. Box 19, New Delhi.

News of Other Lands

Centenary News
(Concluded)

England
Celebrations in the provinces followed later in the year. The Torquay Bahá’ís held a meeting each day from June 11th to 18th in their Center.

"Manchester held a Centenary Week from June 17th to 24th, and the celebrations took the form of an exhibition and a number of public meetings. They began to prepare the ground by advertising the Faith in the 'Manchester Guardian' and the 'Manchester Evening News' two months previously, and they received from this a number of postal inquiries about the Faith."

The Bradford Centenary Week, from September 4th to 10th, consisted of public meetings and a display in a shop in one of the main streets of Bradford.

Australia and New Zealand
In Sydney, New South Wales, the Centenary was made especially joyous because it could be held in the new Haziratu'l-Quds, which was opened officially while the Convention was assembled May 19-24. On Tuesday, May 23rd "the Convention delegates and friends were the guests of the Guardian at a buffet dinner held at the Pickwick Club." Mr. H. Blundell spoke on the Báb, Mr. Walker on Báhá’u’lláh, Mr. O. J. Routh on 'Abdu’l-Bahá, and Mrs. Dive on "The Bahá’í Faith Today." There was music and the reading of cables of greeting, "and one felt that the bond of fellowship that united Bahá’ís throughout the world was appreciated by all those present." During this Centenary week a radio broadcast was also given.

In Auckland, 285 Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís assembled at a Centennial dinner. Chinese, English, American, Colonial, German, Yugoslav, Indian, Fijian, Czechoslovak, and Maori, all associated together in love and harmony. The speakers were Mr. Henry Ah Kew (a Chinese gentleman), Mrs. Mary Owen (a Maori Welfare Officer), Mr. Oldfield (President of the Quest Club), Rabbi Astor of the Auckland Jewish congregations, Canon C. W. Chandler (an Anglican Vicar), Mr. W. Decm (an Auckland Bahá’í) and Corporal Alvin Blum, (American service man) who acted as chairman. Canon Chandler afterwards wrote: "The fact that He has made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on the face of the earth is one of many Christian truths that have been well-nigh lost to our age and generation. Well might God have sent another prophet into the world to proclaim again this message of unity. Before passing judgement let us heed the advice which Gamaliel gave to the Sanhedrin with regard to Peter and John, who were charged with preaching in the name of Jesus. 'If this thing be of man it will come to naught, but if it be of God, it cannot be stopped.' Because men have loved darkness rather than light, they have, in every age, been light-quenchers and in consequence of this they still grope in the darkness of unbelief. Among the people of varied races and nationalities, and of even more varied beliefs, I found myself in my element in this unique function."

The Adelaide celebrations included a picnic in April, a reception on the 2nd of May, followed by a supper and a lecture on "World Unity" by Miss Hilda Brooks. On the evening of the 23rd of May the friends gathered at the Bahá’í Center for a reading on the life of the Báb, followed by a supper.

The Hobart Bahá’í Group arranged a book display, May 14th to June 4th, a Youth party, May 20th, and a broadcast May 21st. The evening of the 22nd there was a social gathering, at which several Bahá’í talks were heard by 50 or 60 Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís.

The August, 1944, Newsletter from Hafia, after reporting that the Beloved Guardian was enjoying the best of health, carries news of the Centennial celebrations in Persia, Egypt and Sudan, and Baghdad, Iraq.

Persia
Delegates from all over Persia met on the 22nd of May, 1944 in Shiráz and, shortly before the appointed hour, 2 hours and 11 minutes after sunset, entered the Báb’s House, where He had declared His Mission exactly a hundred years ago. (The believers who read this account will be glad to refer to Nabil’s Narrative, "The Dawn-Breakers" to see pictures of the Báb’s House, pp. 58, 60 and 64). The Shiráz report speaks of the tremendous wave of emotion which swept through the hearts of the delegates as they stood in the upper room.
of the House, known as the Declaration Chamber. After placing a precious rug, the gift of the Guardian, in the sacred Chamber, the delegates "stood there, in all humility and submission and with hearts turned towards the Abhá Kingdom, in complete detachment from the world of matter and man. Shortly afterwards, they withdrew to the hall of the House, where they stayed until the early hours of the morning listening to Bahá’í prayers and tablets chanted in a melodious voice by some of the delegates and communicating with one another with a radiant joy."

"Egypt"

The Centenary celebrations in Cairo, Egypt, which began May 22nd and lasted four days, were highly successful. Not a single untoward incident from mischief makers occurred to mar the joy and happiness of the occasion. Five hundred believers from all parts of Egypt and a small select group of non-believers attended the meetings, which took place in the Hazíratu’l-Quds. The meetings had the official sanction and approval of the local authorities, who have become convinced, as a result of attending some Bahá’í meetings and reading Bahá’í literature, that the followers of Bahá’u’lláh do not meddle in politics and are faithful and obedient subjects of their governments wherever they live. The first meeting, held on that historic day, was a great triumph for the Faith. The meaning of the Cause and the significance of the Declaration of the Báb were proclaimed and the non-believers shared with the believers their joy and admiration for the Bahá’í principles. Indeed the non-believers were so impressed that after tea and refreshments were served and the meeting came to a close, the majority wished to stay for the second meeting, which was to be held that night. They stayed and were present at the hour when the Egyptian believers celebrated the Centenary of the Declaration of the Báb.

Further Bahá’í meetings were held the next day. As a result of these meetings the number of inquirers has greatly increased and a special committee has been appointed to answer the questions of the groups and individuals who now come to the Hazíratu’l-Quds to learn about the Faith.

"Iráq"

At the celebrations held in Baghdad by the believers of Iráq many non-Bahá’í notables, government officials and leaders of religious denominations were present. The National Spiritual Assembly of Iráq is publishing a pamphlet containing a detailed description of the celebrations held at Baghdad and this pamphlet will be sent to all Bahá’í centers of the East and the West.

The Bahá’í delegates from all parts of Iráq present at the Centenary celebrations held several meetings to study the Bahá’í situation in Iráq. Their recommendations and resolutions include the increase in the number of Bahá’í teachers throughout Iráq, the establishment of a Bahá’í bookstore in Baghdad, sending teachers to the Kurds in northern Iráq and printing Bahá’í literature in Kurdish, re-establishing Assemblies in Mosul, Basra and Kirkuk, organizing and advertising special public meetings in the Hazíratu’l-Quds, obtaining from the United States the moving picture film of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and a model of the Temple, etc.

"British Isles"

The British Bahá’í quarterly, New World Order contains, in its summer issue, an account of the Bahá’í Centenary celebrations in London. Sir Ronald Storrs, K.C.M.G., LL.D., L.C.C. opened the celebration and said, in part, "It is a big honor for an Anglican Englishman to have been chosen to open the Centenary of a World Faith." He gave as his qualifications for this honor the fact that he had the honor of ‘Abbas Effendi’s friendship from 1909 until His death. Sir Ronald then went on to tell dramatically and poignantly the story of the Báb, the Centenary of whose declaration was being celebrated.

Speaking of his personal experiences with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Sir Ronald went on to say, "My first glimpse of ‘Abbas Effendi was in the summer of 1909, when I drove round the Bay of ‘Akka in an Arab cab, visited Him in the barracks and marveled at His serenity and cheerfulness after 42 years of exile and imprisonment. I kept touch with Him through my confidential agent, Husein Bey Ruhl, son of a Tabriz martyr, and the ‘Persian Mystic’ of my book, ‘Orientalism’."

"When in his famous victory drive to the North, Allenby captured Haifa, he detached me from Jerusalem to organize the British administration there. On the evening of my arrival I visited my revered friend. I found Him sitting in spotless white. He placed at my disposal the training and talents of His community, and I appointed one or two to positions of trust which they continue to deserve... When on November 21, 1921, He was buried, 10,000 men, women and children of many varying races and creeds walked in the funeral procession up Mt. Carmel, to lay His body in the exquisite cypress avenues shrine."

"I have not lost contact with the Bahá’í world and I hope I never shall. Recently I had the honor of receiving at the British legation in Tihràn, a deputation of the Bahá’í community, headed by Samimi, the respected chief Munshi of the Legation, and Varga, President of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’í of Persia."

"My diary of April 5, 1943 tells me: ‘After luncheon, off to visit the House of the Báb, leaving the car for the narrow winding streets, and shown over by Fazl’u’lláh Banna and the curator. A small but perfect courtyard, with a little blue-tiled, eight feet square tank, six large gold fish, a tiny orange tree and runner carpets round the sides, and a narrow deep well. Above, His bed and His sitting rooms (for which our hosts took off their shoes), and on the second floor the room in which in 1844 He declared His mission, to a solitary disciple."

"What can I say more? Half a century ago the great Dr. Jowett, of Balliol, wrote: ‘This is the greatest light the world has seen since Christ, but it is too great and too close for the world to appreciate its full import.’"
The Time Fore-Ordained

The time fore-ordained unto the peoples and kindreds of the earth is now come. The promises of God as recorded in the Holy Scriptures, have all been fulfilled. Out of Zion hath gone forth the Law of God, and Jerusalem, and the hills and land thereof, are filled with the glory of His Revelation. Happy is the man that pondereth in his heart that which hath been revealed in the Books of God, the Help in Peril, the Self-Subsisting. Meditate upon this, O ye beloved of God, and let your ears be attentive unto His Word, so that ye may, by His grace and mercy, drink your fill from the crystal waters of constancy, and become as steadfast and immovable as the mountain in His Cause.

In the Book of Isaiah it is written: "Enter into the rock and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His majesty." No man that meditateth upon this verse can fail to recognize the greatness of this Cause, or doubt the exalted character of this Day, the Day of God Himself. This same verse is followed by these words: "And the Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day." This is the Day which the Pen of the Most High hath glorified in all the Holy Scriptures. There is no verse in them that doth not declare the glory of His holy Name, and no book that doth not testify unto the loftiness of this most exalted theme.

It is incumbent, in this Day, upon every man to put His whole trust in the manifold bounties of God, and arise to disseminate, with the utmost wisdom, the verities of His Cause, Then, and only then, will the whole earth be enveloped with the morning light of His Revelation.

Messages From the Guardian

I desire to reiterate the warning that no Persian, student or otherwise, must be admitted into the community under any circumstances unless provided with full credentials. Exception and compromise would be detrimental to the vital interests of the Faith at the present juncture. The utmost caution and vigilance are imperative.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Message received January 29, 1945

In view of the fact that a few Persians have, in defiance of the instructions and expressed wishes of their National Spiritual Assemblies, gone to America, and in view of other considerations as well, the Guardian feels impelled to call the matter to your attention. You must recall to the believers' minds the oft-repeated warnings of 'Abdu'l-Bahá concerning Orientals, especially Persians. The Americans, kind and open-hearted as they are, may easily fall a victim to the hypocritical and the insincere, and it is to protect them from being misled and imposed upon that he is sending you this message.—Through his secretary, January 14, 1945.

(These two messages are published for the information of the believers who have recently entered the Bahá'í community and are not yet informed of the strict commands which have controlled our reception of Orientals claiming to be believers ever since the Master departed from America in 1912. The passage on this subject reprinted on page 21 of Bahá'í Procedure, second edition, should be consulted whenever the matter arises for discussion among the American friends).

Deeply appreciate Assembly's loving message, rejoice in the formulation of new plans, delighted with recent accomplishments, anticipate fresh triumphs in the publicity campaigns. Grateful for the provision of funds for The Bahá'í World (Vol. IX) publication. Praying for removal of obstacles to the travel of nine Latin American pioneers. Urge utmost vigilance for preservation at whatever cost of the newly constituted Assemblies throughout the Americas. Appeal exert strenuous efforts to convert the large groups into Assemblies. Praying for increasing flow of blessings on sustained, concerted exertions of the indefatigable, incorruptible, consistently victorious, dearly beloved American Bahá'í community.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Message received February 27, 1945

The question of young Bahá'ís being permitted to serve on committees other than the Youth Committee has been raised in a number of letters recently, and in considering the matter he felt that Bahá'í young people under twenty-one should not be denied the privilege of committee work. Though they cannot be voting members of Bahá'í communities (or exercise the electoral vote at all until they reach that age), and though they cannot, likewise, be elected to Assemblies, there is no reason why they should not serve the Cause on various committees as all committees, national or local, are subordinate to Assemblies and their members not elected but appointed, and appointed by Assemblies. We have many devoted and talented young believers who can be of great assistance to the Cause even though not yet legally of age.—Through his secretary, February 28, 1945.

(On receipt of these directions and explanations, the National Spiritual Assembly annulled its statement concerning youth in which it was said that they were not to be appointed on committees other than Youth Committees).

Regret failure efforts hold Convention. Praying success Peace plan.

Centenary travel expense,

Deeply grieve passing of indefatigable, staunch pioneer* of the Faith in the Day of the Covenant. The record of her services imperishable, her reward great in the Abhá Kingdom.

"Miss Mary Lesch
My faithless brother Husayn, after long period of dishonorable conduct, has abandoned the Master’s home to consort with his sister and other Covenant-breakers.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Message received April 16, 1945

(To this message the following was sent to the Guardian on April 17: “Grieve lamentable defection of Husayn. Rejoice in the unshakable power of the Covenant and the victorious justice of Guardianship”.

The following excerpt is from letter written by the Guardian, through his secretary, to Miss Hannah Lohe on December 19, 1945, and reprinted with the Guardian’s consent.

Regarding your suggestion to the N.S.A. about a People’s Peace Conference. The idea and the aims are excellent, but the Guardian does not feel that the believers are as yet in a position to undertake such a major step; if the friends seek to carry out a thing of such importance and find that they cannot—through lack of members, prestige, funds, or any other reason,—see the thing through to a successful conclusion, they will have done the Cause a serious injury by making it seem just one more ripple on the surface of a disturbed and turbulent society. They must first build the fabric of their community life so solidly that it can bear the strain which such an undertaking would place upon it, and which, by its very nature, would focus the eyes of the press upon the Baha’is everywhere in the world.

National Spiritual Assembly
Beloved Friends:
The inability, under restrictions imposed by the war, to hold Convention sessions this year challenged the National Spiritual Assembly to maintain the important functions of the annual meeting through other means. Steps were therefore taken to provide for voting by mail, with a committee of tellers to serve in the customary way, to conduct a public meeting or Baha’i Congress in Foundation Hall during the Ridvan Period, and to provide the delegates with subjects for written suggestions and views.

A detailed report of the carrying out of these plans will be published in the next issue of Baha’i News.

Financial Report
For the fiscal year ending February 28, 1945, we have the following items for consideration in our review of the Baha’i year opening the second century of the Era.

Cash receipts 693.389.65
Disbursements 93.087.76
Of the disbursements, the Temple Fund received 12.300.00
Green Acre Fund received 3,700.00
Field for National and Regional Teaching 10,767.95
Dezollation 6,953.55
For Inter-America teaching 6,895.70
Radio teaching 6,728.36
Centenary travel expense 13,144.00
Centenary travel expense, Canadian believers (repaid by equivalent contributions to the Canadian Bahá’í Fund) 528.23

Translation of literature into Spanish 1,570.00
National Committees (other than Teaching and Inter-America) 10,654.79
International Fund 2,545.89
Trustee properties other than Temple and Green Acre 570.35
Centenary Committee 8,503.17
National and State Conventions 2,404.16
Administrative expense 18,280.35

It will be noted that the annual budget adopted after the 1944 Convention amounted to $125,000. The smaller income, plus the special Centenary expenses, have been felt particularly in the important work of maintaining the newer and smaller Assemblies. Many more settlers have been needed than could be sent or than offered their services.

At the Guardian’s request, the monthly contribution sent to the International Fund has been devoted to the Inter-America teaching work in the form of appropriations for cost of printing Spanish books and pamphlets, but this action will be reflected in the next annual financial statement more than in the current figures.

Amendment
The National By-Laws have been further amended, in order to eliminate one reference to the assignment of delegates to local communities not taken care of in the amendments adopted earlier this year. In Art. I of the By-Laws the sentence formerly reading: “It shall be charged with the recognition of such local Assemblies, the scrutiny of local membership rolls, the calling of the annual meeting or special meetings and the seating of delegates to the annual meeting and their apportionment among the various local Baha’i communities”, has been amended to read: “It shall be charged with the recognition of such local Assemblies, the scrutiny of all membership rolls, the calling of the annual meeting or special meetings and the seating of delegates to the annual meeting and their apportionment among the various electoral districts.”

The revised text thus deals with the apportionment of the delegates among the states and provinces in accordance with the Guardian’s later directions, and with the membership lists of the groups and isolated believers who now vote in the state.
elections as well as the membership lists of the local communities. Since there are no longer any "non-voting" adult Bahá'ís, the term "all membership rolls" has become necessary.

The amended Declaration of Trust, and the National and local By-Laws, have been prepared in pamphlet form and copies are available through the Publishing Committee in the usual way.

Peace Committee for Allied Nations Conference

The first year of the second Bahá'í century has been devoted to the promotion of the Bahá'í peace program in accordance with a plan prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly coordinating the various National Committees, including Radio, Publicity and Public Relations, with special meetings to be conducted by the local Assemblies.

The calling of the Allied Nations Conference at San Francisco unexpectedly and most gloriously provided the unique occasion of occasions to promulgate the Bahá'í principles on universal peace. This international action filled the hearts of the believers to overflowing, as they saw in it a providential fulfillment of the Master's mission in America, His fertilizing of the continent with the seeds of the future order, and His prophetic utterances and promises concerning America's role, and His words concerning California.

The San Francisco Assembly was requested to submit recommendations, but the Bahá'ís of the bay area had already hastened to the arena of action and were prepared with a comprehensive plan which the NSA adopted at its March meeting.

A committee was appointed, named Committee on Bahá'í Peace Plan, with the function "to promote the Bahá'í Teachings in connection with the Allied Nations Conferences convened in San Francisco, April 25, 1945." This committee was provided with a budget of $3,000, $1,000 of which was pledged locally, and authorized to proceed with the following schedule: preparation of pamphlet, holding one large public meeting, conducting three fifteen-minute broadcasts, and holding series of local meetings in the area with displays.

The believers will await with keenest interest the outcome of this culminating peace effort of the year.

Communication With the President

The friends will be interested in going over the text of the two communications addressed to the President, dated January 4, 1944 and March 26, 1945, the letter sent to Mrs. Roosevelt on April 13, 1945, and the letter received from the State Department dated April 17, acknowledging the receipt, by reference from the White House, of our telegram of March 26.

It was to the same President, Mr. Roosevelt, that a beautifully engrossed copy of Bahá'u'lláh's Tablet to the Presidents of the American Republics, and of two Prayers revealed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá for America, was presented by Miss Juliet Thompson through the President's mother a few years before the war. Photographs of the engrossed text were reproduced in The Bahá'í World.

Step by step we witness the unfoldment of the new World Order. It behooves every believer to realize more deeply the degree of our collective responsibility as agency for the direct reflection of His spirit and the embodiment of His united community.

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Translations

Believers qualified to work on French translations of the Bahá'í literature are requested to communicate with the National Spiritual Assembly. A very capable committee is now functioning on a series of translations into German, and the NSA wishes to adopt plans for translation into the other European languages, as the basic Bahá'í texts will be the first requirement when the operation of the Divine Plan is extended to Europe by the Guardian. Those who can translate into the other languages such as Russian, Italian, etc., should also report, so that the work may be properly coordinated.

Assembly Development

"It is of the utmost importance that in accordance with the explicit text of the Kitáb-i-Aqdas, the Most Holy Book, in every locality, be it city or hamlet, where the number of adult, declared believers exceeds nine, a local Spiritual Assembly be forthwith established. To it all local matters pertaining to the Cause must be directly and immediately referred for full consultation and decision."

—SHOGHI Effendi

Our first election in the second Bahá’í century assumes great importance as we consider the number of Assemblies still representing an area otherwise virgin. None can judge the full privilege that is ours in playing a part, however small, in their first development and progress, for these new-born, nascent institutions of our Guardian are the mother Assemblies of wide-spread North American regions. With this in mind, as well as in answer to a general need, the Assembly Development Committee offers a few simple suggestions for the conduct of elections.

1. Written notification by the secretary to every adult Bahá’í of the time and place of the election. Votes may be mailed back to the secretary if attendance at the election meeting is not possible. Such votes should not be opened before the election.

2. Opening of the election meeting by the chairman. Prayer and appropriate readings are the first order of business.

3. Appointment of tellers by the chairman. Tellers will see that all are equipped and ready for the election.

4. A final period of quiet, with short prayer.

5. Casting of ballots. Write only nine names. Observe silence.

6. Collection by the tellers of all ballots, including those sent by mail, and retirement of tellers to count votes.

7. Annual reports of committees, and review of the teaching work of the year.

9. Arrangement for the first meeting of the new Assembly. The person receiving the highest number of votes will call the meeting and act as chairman until the new chairman is elected.

10. Election of officers. Each officer will be elected on a separate ballot; chairman, vice chairman, secretary, and treasurer. The officers must likewise be elected by secret ballot, but a majority vote is required.

The friends are again urged to remember our Guardian’s often repeated entreaty to refrain from discussion of personalities before the election, in order that each voter may be free from influence that might hinder independent and prayerful selection. “Every Assembly elected in that rarefied atmosphere of selflessness and detachment is, in truth, appointed by God.” It is for each one to determine for himself “the names of those who can best combine the necessary qualities of unquestioned loyalty, of selfless devotion, of a well trained mind, of recognized ability, and mature experience.”

All Bahá’í administration may be said to come out of the election, as we gather each year for a fresh beginning in the conduct of our affairs. We conceive this holy task with reverence in the light of our Guardian’s statements: “The importance, nay, the absolute necessity of these local assemblies is manifest when we realize that in the days to come they will evolve into the local Houses of Justice, and at present provide the firm foundation on which the structure of the Master's Will is to be reared in future.”

"These Spiritual Assemblies will have to be elected directly by the friends, and every declared believer of 21 years and above, far from standing aloof and assuming an indifferent or independent attitude, should regard it his sacred duty to take part conscientiously and diligently in the election, the consolidation, and efficient working of his own local Assembly."

Moving Picture Films of Shrines at Haifa and of Centenary Scenes

The Temple Librarian and Sales Committee is now able to fill a certain number of orders for the long-awaited moving picture films of the Shrines and Gardens which were taken under the Guardian's direction in Haifa last year. The cost per set is $50.00. Only a limited number are available. Orders received for more than the five films on hand will be filled later when and as the Committee finds it possible to make additional copies of the original film.

Motion picture films can also be ordered of the Centenary subjects, showing the Temple, the assembled friends, Convention scenes, Centenary speakers, etc. The cost of these per set is $100.00. These films have been edited and titled from the pictures taken by Mr. Alexander, Mr. Tichenor and by a commercial photographer engaged for the purpose.

Orders and inquiries should be addressed to the Committee through Mr. H. E. Walrath, 4839 Beacon Street, Chicago, Ill.

Centenary Recordings

The two programs conducted in the Temple auditorium during the evening of May 22, 1944—the Commemoration of the Declaration of the Báb, and the Dedication of the House of Worship—were transcribed in order to perpetuate these events for Bahá’í history and also to make them available to the friends.

Under ordinary circumstances, pressings could be obtained from the originals in standard phonograph record size and sets of records could be sold at a very moderate price. The unsettled conditions of these times make it impossible to place an order for pressings, as the large firms are only handling quantities beyond our capacity to use.

Temporarily, however, a number of sets of transcribed records have been produced and these can be obtained from Mr. Walrath at a cost of $21.00 per set.

Teaching in North America

The vitality of teaching in North America is reflected in a constant flow of reports from Regional Committees, Assemblies, and teachers. In the thrilling words of the Guardian, the “splendor of the exploit” of the American Community, despite the “sorrows, burdens, and restrictions” of this difficult period, has not been dimmed throughout 1944. We are happy to share with the friends the following news of progress, altogether inadequate as these paragraphs are to represent the scope or intensity of the national effort.

Regional Committees

Regional Teaching Committees have shown outstanding initiative in carrying out teaching circuits, stimulating group activities, and sponsoring regional conferences.

A conference in Syracuse, N.Y., on December 17th, was attended by about forty friends representing twelve communities of New York State. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ugo G. Glachery, discussions were led by Miss Ida Noyes on youth, Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh on Bahá’í children’s work, Mrs. Mary Collison on firesides, Mr. William Sears on publicity, Mrs. Lil Oltzki on the development of Spiritual Assemblies, and Mrs. Helen Inderlied on study of the Creative Word as a preparation for teaching. A public meeting on “The Bahá’í Plan for Permanent Peace” was held the preceding evening with Mrs. Mottahedeh and Dr. Glenn Shook as speakers.

Friends from Southern California and Arizona met on January 21st in Los Angeles for a stimulating conference with the following discussions: Miss Charlotte Linfoot emphasized the goals as we enter the Second Century and outlined teaching resources available through national committees; Mrs. Virginia Cameron Foster showed the effect of teaching upon the development of World Order; Mrs. Nancy Phillips summarized the Guardian’s teaching Canadian Regional Committees are doing outstanding work in the planning of circuits and the development of new groups. In the Maritime Provinces, monthly circuits have been arranged for Charlottetown, Moncton, and Halifax, using such teachers as Annie Romer, William Sears, Doris McKay, Rosemary Sala, Harlan Ober, John Robarts, and Lloyd Gardner. The Ontario Committee has projects for regular teaching in Ottawa and Hamilton, where a flourishing group promises early reinstatement of the Assembly. Speakers include Rosemary Sala, John Robarts, and Laura Davis. The Committee for the Prairie Provinces in addition to the important circuits carried out by Mrs. Margery McCormick and Mr. Emeric Sala which are reported later, is sponsoring a project in Saskatoon where at least fifteen people are interested in the Faith, with outside teaching help from Lulu Barr and Ernest Court.

These items represent but a small part of the manifold activities of Regional Committees, so encouraging, vital, and indeed indispensable to the evolution of the Faith in North America.

Teaching Circuits

Itinerant teachers have contributed immeasurably to the consolidation and expansion of the Faith this past year, with a detachment from the vicissitudes of travel which is truly an example of devotion and effort.

In October Mrs. Margery McCormick carried out a brilliant teaching circuit in Canada which attracted wide notice and was, in her own words, "a really thrilling episode." A closely-packed itinerary had been worked out by the Regional Committee and the Assemblies, which opened in Winnipeg with a public meeting, fireside, and children's afternoon. Regina was next visited, where a fine public meeting for more than thirty people, fireside, supper, and club talk were planned. In Calgary a public meeting and fireside were arranged. Perhaps the high spot was Mrs. McCormick's return to her home city of Edmonton, where after thirteen years' absence she found many friends ready to hear of the Faith. A reception for some thirty-five club women, two public meetings with overflowing audiences, several firesides, and "every luncheon, dinner, breakfast, tea, and hours between . . . taken." In addition, there were two radio talks and a meeting with some forty Muslims, many of whom later returned to hear Rowland Estall. "The Faith was really proclaimed in Edmonton!" Mrs. McCormick then stopped in Saskatoon, where pioneer teaching is being done for two public meetings and a fireside. Mrs. McCormick writes: "I never worked so hard in my life on any previous teaching trip nor did I ever have such glorious confirmation of spiritual help."

William Sears—in addition to an intensive circuit of the Middle West in August and September including visits to Salt Lake City, Laramie, Denver, Omaha, Topeka, Kansas City, Independence, Milwaukee, and Oshkosh, with a total of forty-eight talks—has given intensive service in Eastern Canada. In Halifax two well-attended public meetings were registered on the 19th, followed by a fireside and a Bahá'í session on "God Passes By." "A deep sense of dedication and devotion was enkindled." Charlottetown arranged two public meetings and a radio broadcast. Mr. Sears' circuit was interrupted by illness, but later in January he was able to return to Montreal. At present he is cooperating with the New England Regional Committee for teaching service.

Dr. Edris Rice-Wray has devoted her weekends and holidays during the past year to teaching in areas suggested by the National Teaching Committee. Last Fall she visited St. Louis, Sioux Falls, Cedar Rapids, Toronto, and Hamilton. Christmas week was spent in Greenville, Atlanta, and Birmingham. Dr. Rice-Wray's work is a proof of what can be accomplished when available time, no matter how limited, is coordinated with the needs in the teaching field.

Marzieh Gail spent two weeks in January in the Pacific Northwest, with meetings arranged in Corvallis, Portland, Tacoma Seattle, Richmond Highlands, and Monroe. In Mrs. Gail's words, "the Faith can't keep up with the audience demand in these places." Although all reports are not yet in, from Corvallis we hear of fine opportunities to meet students and faculty at Oregon State College, including talks before two classes and a Forum Lunch, in all the audiences totalling over two hundred. Very interesting club lectures were arranged in Tacoma, including the American Association of University Women, the League of Western Writers, U.S.O., Tacoma Interracial Council, and a women's Breakfast Club. A Baha'i public meeting, two firesides, and a radio interview completed the program which reached at least four hundred contacts besides the radio audience. Splendid publicity attended this circuit. Mention should also be made of Mrs. Gail’s 4-day visit to Reno last Fall, which was packed with two public talks, fireside, and individual contacts.

Emeric Sala completed in February a two-weeks’ circuit of Winnipeg, Regina, and Edmonton which attracted keen interest and enthusiasm. Full reports are as yet unavailable, but word from Regina tells of three meetings with attendance varying from 35 to 80, and an opportunity to address over 500 students of a Technical School.

Louis Gregory recently completed a circuit of Southern cities from late November into January, which included Charleston, Huntingdon, Greensboro, Greenville, Columbia, the Augustas, and Memphis; and on the return trip Urbana, Springfield, Quincy, and Peoria. In Charleston, besides other fine engagements, Mr. Gregory addressed the assembly of West Virginia State College as well as a Spanish class. Writes Charleston: We “were benefited tremendously” and “the teaching work and each Baha’i took a step ahead.” Many meetings and excellent response are reported from the Carolinas and Georgia; a week was spent in Memphis with talks before churches and colleges; and in Quincy an outstanding meeting was attended by over 75 persons of three races.

Mrs. Peggy True spent two weeks, January 8-22, in New Orleans, Jackson, and Little Rock; and a second Southern circuit is planned for March to include Memphis and Nashville. In addition to Baha’i public meetings and firesides, lectures were given at a high school in Jackson; and for the American Association of University Women, Y.W.C.A., and radio in Little Rock. Many outstanding contacts were made in each city, but the highlight of Mrs. True’s report is her comment on the “wonderful spirit of cooperation and unity” among the believers whom she met.

Charles Mason Remey has recently reported on teaching work completed in 1943 and 1944. His circuit for 1944 included Atlanta, Birmingham, Jackson, New Orleans, Houston, Little Rock, Oklahoma City, Albuquerque, Phoenix, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Geyserville, Reno, Portland, Boise, Butte, Helena, Laramie, Sioux Falls, Fargo, Topeka, and Louisville. It was Mr. Remey’s endeavor to visit particularly the newly-formed Assemblies in virgin areas, and his comments are an inspiring proof of the confirmations which, as promised by Baha’u’llah, are showered upon the pioneers in His Cause.

We quote: “Particularly in these newly organized assemblies did I find much spiritual fervor. The newer assemblies still have a goodly proportion of members who are pioneers and settlers in those places. Some of these friends have gone through troubles, changing residence, giving up former business connections and home environment to go out into new and unknown territories where they have encountered problems in establishing themselves and in teaching the Faith. In other words, their sacrifices have been very considerable. But I found from these very facts a spiritual enthusiasm and an energy and force in their Baha’i relations that was very soul refreshing. There was a lyric quality in their mention of the Cause that reminded me of that same experience that I passed through myself as a young believer many years ago... I write you just as I feel my impressions of the happiness I found among these people...”

Many other teaching visits and circuits have been carried out in the past few months, which will be mentioned in these columns or in the annual report.

In closing this article, however, we mention with pride the pioneers of the Second Century who by responding to new calls during this year have contributed a notable share to the safeguarding of the spiritual prizes. They are Elizabeth Cowles who settled in Charlottetown, Gertrude Gewertz and Katherine McPhee to Greenville, Kathryn Frankland and Rezi Sunshine to Little Rock, Nersa Bissell to Brattleboro, and Margaret Lentz to Puerto Rico. In addition residence projects have been carried out by Mrs. Louise Gregory in Brattleboro, Hannah Lohse in Greenville, and Antonio Roca in San Antonio.

The call of the Guardian remains the foremost responsibility as we approach the new Bahá’í year: Urge utmost vigilance for preservation at whatever cost of the newly constituted Assemblies throughout the Americas.” (January 29, 1945)

Inter-America News

The friends of Buenos Aires joyfully report the arrival of Elizabeth Cheney. In collaboration with the Committee on Translation and Publication two titles are already on the press, “Dispensation” and “El Alba de la Nueva Era”. A third title will be on the press soon. Together with this work of increasing the Bahá’í publications in Spanish, Elizabeth is making frequent visits to Montevideo to assist the believers there with teaching and in the reestablishment of a Spiritual Assembly.
A letter has been received recently from Estaban Canales, the first native Chilian pioneer, who is following up the extension teaching project of the Santiago Assembly initiated by Marcia Steward in Punta Arenas. We quote from his letter:

"I thank God for this great privilege, because...I believe that to be a pioneer in Punta Arenas is the most great privilege. Magallanes is one of the most important places of my Country and one of the most important of America.

"Mr. Artemus Lamb has arrived recently from Santiago. I am very happy, because together we are going to work very much for the formation of a Spiritual Assembly by April, with the help of our beloved Bahá'u'lláh."

We rejoice at this news, and particularly so in view of the Guardian's recent statement calling our attention to "...the great importance of Magallanes as a center, and the necessity of extending it every assistance, so that this Bahá'í year an Assembly may be firmly established there. It, together with that of Alaska, may be likened to the extremity of the Bahá'í arms stretched out and waiting to embrace the whole world in the order of peace and love which Bahá'u'lláh has established for the children of men in this day." (Feb. Bahá'í News.)

Miss Juliet Thompson and Mrs. Daisy Smythe, after an excellent sojourn assisting the friends in Mexico City, are returning to New York to do inter-racial work. Jeanne Bolles was with them for several weeks in Mexico City, where she gave a number of talks on Bahá'í Administration. They also report that Sr. Pedro Espinosa is carrying on extension teaching in Vera Cruz. A group of five young Bahá'ís has been organized there.

We are most happy to report the very recent departure from the United States of two more pioneers. On February 19 Lotnise Baker left Miami for Trujillo, Dominican Republic, where she will remain until about the middle of April, when she will continue her journey to Caracas, Venezuela, her permanent post. On March 3 Ofelia Montalvo, a native of El Salvador who has made Evanston, Ill., her home for the past three years, also departed for Trujillo where she will remain, at least until an Assembly is formed. May Bahá'u'lláh's richest blessing go with these two young pioneers!

A letter from Dr. Malcolm King in Managua informs us that a well attended study group has been functioning there since December 30th. His interpreter, Mr. Robert M. Hooker, has recently declared himself as a believer. Dr. King is very hopeful and optimistic regarding the ultimate success of his project in Nicaragua.

Leonora Holsapple Armstrong has recently moved from Bahia to Rio de Janeiro. The Committee has requested her to take over the responsibility for the Portuguese section of the Spanish Bahá'í Bulletin during the temporary absence of Mrs. Carol Wood from Rio.

En route to the Orient Mr. and Mrs. Mottahedeh of New York City have made a short stopover and visit with the friends in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bishop, are leaving to teach in Mazatlan, Mexico.

Circular letters are being mailed each month by the Inter-America Committee to Assemblies and groups throughout Latin America. They are written in both Spanish and English. The February letter was on the Observation of the Fast. A letter is prepared for mailing in March on the Conduct of Bahá'í Elections. Further issues will cover such subjects as the functions of the Nineteen Day Feast, the Guardianship, Consultation, and Teaching Methods.

Green Acre Baha'i Summer School, 1945

The regular courses of the Green Acre Summer School will open on Monday, July 9, and continue for eight weeks, through September 1. Four types of courses will be given each week: (1) Fundamental Courses in the Baha'i teachings, especially for new Baha'is and non-Baha'is who wish to make a serious study of the Faith. (2) Advanced courses for Baha'is who are, in general, well-informed about the basic teachings. (3) A Seminar, for students who wish to do active research in the Baha'i writings and related materials. (4) A Workshop, in which opportunity will be given to learn and practice techniques in speaking and writing, in relation to Baha'i teaching activities.

The Seminar and Workshop will be open only to those who can attend for at least one week, and it is hoped that most students who choose these courses will be able to attend for two weeks. The Seminar and the Fundamental Course will be given simultaneously, during the second period in the morning. The Workshop will meet for two hours each afternoon.

1. Fundamental Courses.
   2. The Central Figures of the Baha'i Revelation.
   3. The Guardianship and the Administrative Order.
   4. Baha'i character Development.
   5. Baha'i Community Life.
   7. The Baha'i Teacher.
   8. Some Answered Questions—its use as a Baha'i textbook, in teaching activities.

2. Advanced Courses (The order in which this series of courses is given may be changed, in order to obtain the services of teachers who are particularly competent for each course.)
   1. Historical Introduction to God Passes By.
   2. God Passes By—first half.
   3. God Passes By—second half.
   4. The Baha'i Peace Program and the Current World Scene.
   5. Epistle to the Son of the Wolf.
   6. The History and Principles of Christianity, for Baha'i Teachers.
   7. How to Know and Use Baha'i Literature.
   8. The Hidden Words—a guide to Baha'i living.

   Students will carry on a variety of research studies, such as the following: analyzing the teaching techniques used by 'Abdu'l-Baha in His public talks; preparing a study outline; making a compilation on a topic of special interest to the student; working on an index for a Baha'i book which needs one; making an historical study, such as "Islamic Civilization in relation to the teachings of Mohammed." It is hoped that most of the students in the Seminar will come to Green Acre with plans as to the particular research they wish to undertake.

Some of the guests who attended the Naw-Ruz Feast held by the Baha'is of Havana, March 21, 1945

4. Workshop.
   The work in writing will concern itself with the composition of Baha'i material for radio, newspaper publicity, World Order, Baha'i magazines, etc. The work in speaking will deal with the presentation and delivery of Baha'i talks for a variety of situations and audiences.

   Students may elect to work in either writing or speaking; or in both, if they are going to attend the course for three or four weeks. If a student is working in both the Seminar and the Workshop, the results of his research in the Seminar may be used as a basis for writing or speaking in the Workshop.

   Three Conferences are planned for the summer, with approximate dates as follows:
   1. Conference on World Order, for Baha'is and non-Baha'i Youth. July 5, 6, 7.
   2. Inter-America Conference. Friday evening, July 27 through Sunday, July 29.

   Other activities include a daily devotional meeting immediately after dinner in the evening, a public meeting at 11:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, and a series of discussions and musicals in the evenings.

   Daily classes for children will be held in the Recreation room in the dormitory, or out-of-doors when the work the children are doing makes this desirable. The children will be divided into two or three age groups, depending on the ages of the children in attendance. It is expected that all children at the School will attend these classes, and young children may not go with their parents to the adult classes.

Since the National Spiritual Assembly has adopted the policy that Green Acre is primarily a school, and should not be regarded as a summer hotel for persons not primarily interested in the Faith, you are urged to recommend attendance at Green Acre to your non-Baha'i friends only when they have shown a serious intention of studying the Baha'i teachings and wish to attend the classes.

Appeal for Books for the Library of the Green Acre Baha'i Summer School

The Green Acre Program Committee is eager to build a better Library for the Green Acre Summer School. For the summer of 1945 the Library is to be housed in a separate building, where students can work in quiet. We are making an urgent appeal for gifts of books for the Library. Please look over your own books to see whether you have any books which you can contribute,—or send us a gift of a new book. We particularly need the following kinds of books:

1. Extra copies of Baha'i books.
3. Recent books on world problems, both those dealing with the international scene, and those about separate countries.
5. Modern books on economics.
6. Back numbers of any of the Baha'i magazines, especially when those for a complete year are available.
7. A good dictionary; a book of synonyms; books on techniques of writing and speaking.

Books of standard fiction and good recent fiction will also be gratefully received.

If you have books which you are willing to contribute, please send the names to the Chairman of the Green Acre Committee. We will then let you know which ones we can use, and where and when to mail them.

International School 1945 Program

The Committee wishes to report the program scheduled for the Latin-American Session opening June 30th to July 10th, 1945.

Morning Sessions: The study of "God Passes By."
1. The four distinct periods in the evolution of the Faith.
2. A study of the existing conditions of governments and clergy, in Persia and Turkey.
3. Becoming familiar with the sacrifices and suffering and martyrdom of those who gave all to establish the Faith.
4. The development of a World Community working together through the administrative structure brought into being by the Center of the Covenant 'Abdu'l-Bahá and set into action by the Guardian of the Faith.
5. The realization of the Power which was released by the Báb and ignited by the greater Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh destined to bring into being a new creation.

Afternoon Sessions:
1st Period.
Devoted to teaching methods in Latin-America.

2nd Period.
The study of the history of the Cities connected with the Faith.
The Session will close on the Anniversary of the Martyrdom of the Báb, July 9.

The Bahá'í World, Vol. IX

The Bahá'í World, Vol. IX, which will soon be off the press, will cover the activities of the Faith for the years 1940-1944. Because of the unusual length of time represented by this volume and the difficulties of publication in these times, the Guardian was forced to omit many of the excellent things submitted to him for this book. Among these were the articles on early believers which you forwarded to him and which were received. The next, Centennial, volume is also more than likely going to be a crowded one—he sees no objection to these articles being made use of in World Order, if any of them are found suitable for that purpose; and in any case he feels copies of them should be given to the Archives Committee as data in them is of historic interest and should be preserved. Some of these articles may in the future be included in the Bahá'í World.

The committee is preparing to carry out these instructions of the Guardian.

Garreeta Busey, Chairman, Bahá'í World Editorial Committee for Vol. IX.

Child Education

The Child Education Committee wishes to inform the friends that they have ready now for distribution the following outlines for use in the education of Bahá'í children.

"Creation" is especially adaptable for tiny children (5-6 years old). It is a picture course for the tiny tot.

"To Live the Life" deals with a course on Bahá'í ethics for the younger child. Character training is the primary aim of the course.

"Study Course for Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era" is a flexible course for 12-15 year old boys and girls. It deals with the study of the book "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era." The history of the Faith is omitted in this outline, however.

"Comprehensive Study Outline for Children" can be adapted to varying ages, but for the most part is especially designed for the older child. Its purpose is to create an incentive for teaching, by supplying a few fundamental references, questions, poems, stories, and projects.

Beside these outlines, we have "A Bahá'í Child's A.B.C." book which can be used for youngsters of any age. The art work accompanying each letter of the alphabet is most attractive and appealing to the child. It is an excellent book to be used in the home.

We also want to mention the "Child's Prayer Book" for all Bahá'í children.

These outlines and books may be secured by writing to the Bahá'í Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois.

News Service

In answer to a plea for help in the expanding of Bahá'í publicity during 1945 many excellent news articles have been submitted to the News Service Committee during the past few months by writers in the local assemblies. Three releases will be made to the national press on the subjects of Inter-America teaching, race unity teaching and the Bahá'í Peace Program. Individual believers who feel that they can write effectively are urged to contact Laurence W. LaRocque, 837 Second Street, N.W., Mason City, Iowa.

The Committee appreciates the number of clippings of Bahá'í publicity which have been sent to its secretary Miss Virginia A. Russell, 2622 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, Ill. These clippings are not only placed in the permanent file or annual press book but are studied in the hope of helping local publicity chairmen of Assemblies and are often reprinted as examples of good press mentions in the Bahá'í Publicity Bulletin which is issued periodically to local publicity chairmen.

Not all of the material sent in are newspaper clippings on the Bahá'í Faith. Some of the most interesting have appeared in magazines and particularly in the house-organs of business organizations. Just to mention a few: The Highway Traveler (Greyhound Lines) recently included a good illustration and description of the House of Worship in its department "How well do you know your United States?" The Finder (Bell & Howell) shows a most excellent view of the House of Worship which won the B & H employee first prize in a photography contest; Waco Steel Service (Warden-Allen Co.) an interesting structural view of the House of Worship with detail on the steel reinforcing used; and Flying Magazine (this came from a Bahá'í in the American Army stationed in Saipan) carries a feature story with accompanying map explaining that all Naval flying cadets who are trained in carrier landing along Lake Michigan's shore north of Chicago but who are based at the Glenview (Ill.) Naval flying field use the House of Worship (Point Oboe in Naval code) as a marker or guide in flying to the carriers Wolverine and Sable; and the British Edition of The Yank (The Army Weekly) under its department head "News from Home" shows an arresting scene entitled: "Western Shrine." This is also a view of the south entrance of the House of Worship with many visitors in evidence gazing at its inspiring beauty.

Publicity Clippings

We were pleased at the recent letter from John Eichenauer, written somewhere in France, reporting that he and many members of his company had seen the Bahá'í article with illustrations of the House of Worship in the February issue of Pure Oil Magazine. The article of some three pages in length deals with the principles of the Faith and construction details of the Temple. It is replete with illustrations.

From the number of clippings sent the News Service Committee by Assemblies and groups in the past weeks one of the most interesting came from Woburn, Mass. It is a clipping from a Boston newspaper for Italian people, Gazetta del Massachusetts, which used the Bahá'í Peace Program broadsides for the text which is printed in both English and Italian.

Clippings of Bahá'í publicity have also been received from the following cities: Geneva and Floral Park, N.Y., New Haven, Conn., Cabin John, Md., Augusta Ga., Wilmette, Ill., St. Louis, Mo., Reno, Nev., Tucson, Ariz., Los Angeles, Geyersville and San Francisco, Cal., and Honolulu, Hawaii. The Committee asks that two copies of all publication publicity on the Faith be sent its secretary.

Local Communities

Current Activities

HOUSTON

Mr. Gregory's teaching visit to Houston in January and February, 1944 was highly successful. Besides a series of advertised public meetings attended by 75 to 150 people of both races there were several fireside meetings and dinner parties. Mrs. Butterfield opened her house to all inquirers and the minority was well represented at all meetings. The secretary of the Houston Assembly wrote that she had never witnessed such a clamoring for Bahá'í literature and for opportunity to hear a Bahá'í speaker. The people were "attending every meeting, bringing friends and," in reality, "sitting at the feet of Louis Gregory." Many public meeting places were found where there was no segregation of races, and meetings were held in the Negro districts, with no objections whatsoever on the part of white inquirers.

Very fine broad-minded business and professional men, both Negro and white, came to the meetings, also lieutenants and sergeants from Ellington Field.

NEW ORLEANS

The Spiritual Assembly of New Orleans has recently acquired a meeting place situated near the center of the city in the Queen and Crescent Building, 344 Camp street. (This information is printed especially for the benefit of believers and friends who may wish to visit New Orleans.)

WILMINGTON

Gertrude Gewertz spent almost two weeks in August in Wilmington to assist with the teaching work there. Luncheons and informal evening meetings were arranged with friends interested in the Faith. One fireside meeting at the home of a fine colored woman attracted about fifteen, mostly teachers. A young colored man from Asheville, North Carolina, who attended all the meetings is going back to promote the Cause, after making a more thorough study of it. Dorothy Champ is doing excellent work among the Negroes in Wilmington, and her life is such a shining example that people know she has something to give. Cynthia Powell, who came to Wilmington some time ago as a pioneer, and Mr. Olson, a long resident of Wilmington, have recently been married. The wedding was a Bahá'í one, a good teacher in its beauty and simplicity, attracted much attention and received fine publicity in the papers. Rodney Warren, a new believer, a teacher of commercial chemistry, who has good connections all over the city, is fired with the idea of starting a youth group.

LOS ANGELES

The Bahá'ís of Los Angeles sponsored a "Bahá'í World Order" program every Sunday evening from April 22 to July 16, 1944.

The Centenary of the founding of the Bahá'í Faith was observed in Los Angeles on two days, May 18, when an inter-racial banquet was held, and May 21, at a public meeting in the Ambassador Hotel.

A very joyous meeting of the Bahá'ís of Los Angeles and surrounding communities was held on June 16, 1944, about 100 attending. A high light of the meeting was the showing of moving pictures of the National Centenary celebration. Roy Herrick and Victor Alexander were instrumental in the taking and showing of these pictures. A sound film of the founders of the Geyersville Bahá'í Summer School, John and Louise Bosch, was also shown. Among the speakers at this meeting were Mrs. Oni Finks, Mrs. French, who showed on the map where Bahá'í Inter-America work was being accomplished, Mrs. Helen Bishop, Mr. Iliescas, Mr. Falk and Mrs. Longyear.

Mr. Charles Mason Remey of Washington, D. C. has been making a trip through the United States, paying particular attention to the smaller Bahá'í communities. He was in Los Angeles and vicinity September 11 and 12 addressing an audience assembled from all the neighboring communities on the 11th, and on the 12th, speaking to friends gathered in the apartment of Patricia Scott in Beverly Hills.

In September, through the efforts of Charles Ellis, on furlough from the Merchant Marine, Willard Hatch was able to address an interracial meeting at the Lutheran church in Riverside. In October Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop was to address another meeting of the same type in a Negro church of Riverside. There were five clergymen in the group that heard Mr. Hatch, three white and two Negro. About 67 people attended and were made very happy as the various reasons for interracial unity were brought out.

Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop conducted the Los Angeles public meetings during September and built up a record attendance.

Mr. William deForge of New York City spent a few days in Los Angeles and spoke at the public meeting in West Hall on November 28.

Bahá'ís from Los Angeles and neighboring communities gathered at the grave of Thornton Chase on September 30, the anniversary of his passing. Flowers were placed on his grave and a service was held consisting of remarks by those who had known him and readings from his books.

SAN FRANCISCO

A course for inquirers was completed December 11 and another repeating the same material started on January 9.
Letter to the President on Race Unity
January 4, 1944
The President,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

Your firm and powerful support of the principle of justice in race relations in connection with labor policy at this time, and your attitude of understanding and sympathy toward the economic and social hardships sustained by our Negro citizens, have been noted with grateful appreciation by all American Bahá'ís. It is our confident hope that through your authority and influence this gravest problem of civilization in America may at last be lifted up out of the darkness and distortion of prejudice and realized, by people and government alike, to be the fundamental ethical challenge laid by destiny upon our nation. How can we exercise the concentration of material and spiritual power in America for world peace if we continue to abuse that power in dealing with our own most helpless minority?

Therefore, because the Bahá'ís have for many years been conscious and aware of the vital importance of race unity as a foundation for world order, and have established race unity spiritually and socially in their own community, they now deem it a high privilege to express to their President these few words of sincere gratitude, and their heartfelt best wishes for full success in the noble effort to apply the divine law of human fellowship to political and social fields which have claimed exemption from the power of truth until the whole of humanity has become submerged in the sea of violence and strife.

Recently the Bahá'ís have issued a book entitled "Race and Man" in which are gathered together the most enlightened views of the time on aspects of this matter of race unity.

A copy of the book is being sent, and we trust that it will be accepted as a presentation for the Library of the White House.

Among the statements on race unity found in the Bahá'ís Sacred Writings, the text of an address delivered by 'Abdu'l-Bahá at Howard University on April 13, 1912, seems particularly appropriate:

"In the estimation of God there is no distinction of color; all are one in the color and beauty of servitude to Him... Therefore strive earnestly and put forth your greatest endeavor toward the accomplishment of this fellowship and the cementing of this bond of brotherhood between you. Such an attainment is not possible without will and effort on the part of each; from one, expressions of gratitude and appreciation; from the other kindness and recognition of equality. Each one should endeavor to develop and assist the other (race) toward mutual advancement. This is possible only by conjoining of effort and inclination. Love and unity will be fostered between you, thereby bringing about the oneness of mankind. For the accomplishment of unity between the colored and whites will be an assurance of the world's peace."

"Then racial prejudice," 'Abdu'l-Bahá continued, "national prejudice, limited patriotism and religious bias will pass away and remain no longer."

In these fateful days when ethical foundations alone will support the structures of an enduring society, the question of race unity in America, we dare to hope, will receive the priority of effort and spiritual intention needed to create full assurance "of the world's peace" and security for mankind.

Respectfully,

Miss Lucy Marshall entertains Bahá'í service men who wish to spend their free time in town. Her house has become so popular that she can not take care of all her would-be guests and she is asking other Bahá'ís to volunteer for this service.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Shaw, Dr. Nichols and Miss Holley, and Mrs. Louise Gogor have recently entertained in their homes friends who were not familiar with the Cause and thus been able to attract and inform them. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw had several guests to hear a recent Bahá'í radio broadcast. After the broadcast the conversation and discussion were about the Cause.

The Bahá'ís of the Bay Area, (San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley Assemblies) have presented a weekly radio program Sundays at 6:30 p.m., over Station KYA from September through December and will continue it through January and February. Some of the topics were: "The Challenge to Youth," "What is the Bahá'í Faith," "God's Plan for World Peace," Bahá'u'lláh—Light of the Age," "This Evolving Universe," "The Growth of World Society," "The Promise of This Century," "This Great Ordeal," "The Interdependence of Peoples."

NEW YORK

At a special youth meeting held in June Mme. Dreyfus-Barney and Mrs. Marzieh Gail were the speakers. One of the purposes of the meeting was to attract French people in New York. The hall was most attractive with paintings and French altar-pieces, which were loaned by the Mottahedehs. Lee Hagar, whose paintings were exhibited, and Nulta Schapiro, pianist, also participated. Many people who might not otherwise have come to the Center were present.

The New York Bahá'í News for July speaks of the fact that New York is the spot where the Nineteen Day Feast was first celebrated. "A party of American believers were the guests of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 'Akká in 1905... In spite of the trouble surrounding Him, 'Abdu'l-Bahá prepared a Feast for the Eastern and Western believers who were visiting Him. As was His custom, He served His guests with His own hands and, passing among them, spoke the words that gather the friends together every nineteen days in a Feast of Unity and hospitality. The words He spoke were addressed..."
Telegram to the President on Peace
March 26, 1945

The President,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

It is the prayerful hope of the American Bahá'ís that your Excellency, chief magistrate of the American nation and symbol of its destiny at this turn-ing-point in human history, will be spiritually guided and reinforced to lead the nations and peoples of the world in the inauguration of universal peace. We recall with reverence and devotion the exalted mission upheld for America by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in 1912 when He traveled from city to city promulgating the principles of universal peace and in the city of Washington declared: "May this American democracy be the first nation to establish the foundation of international agreement. May it be the first to upraise the standard of the Most Great Peace and through this nation of democracy may these philanthropic intentions and institutions be broadcast throughout the world. Truly this is a great and revered nation. Here liberty has reached its highest degree. The intentions of its people are most praiseworthy. They are indeed worthy of being the first people to build the tabernacle of the great peace and proclaim the oneness of mankind. I will supplicate God for assistance and confirmation in your behalf." May the dire needs of humanity be met by the creation of a new world order through the efforts of the forthcoming conference in San Francisco under your leadership.

Letter From Department of State
April 17, 1945

Mr. George O. Latimer, Chairman
National Bahá'í Assembly
Wilmette, Illinois

My dear Mr. Latimer:

I acknowledge the receipt, by reference from the White House, of your telegram of March 26, 1945, on behalf of the American Bahá'ís, in which you express the "prayerful hope" that the President "will be spiritually guided and reinforced to lead the nations and peoples of the world in the inauguration of universal peace."

The Department of State shares with the American Bahá'ís the hope that universal peace may be inaugurated at the conclusion of this war. As you are doubtless aware, it is the policy of this Government to establish an international organization for peace and security. The attainment of this objective will require the sustained support of an active and informed public opinion, and for this reason, it is heartening to know of the active interest of the American Bahá'ís in the problems of peace and security.

As of interest to you and your associates, I am enclosing some recently released material on the Dumbarton Oaks Proposals. I believe you will be especially interested in the speech by Mr. Henry S. Villard, entitled "The Positive Approach to an Enduring Peace."

Sincerely yours,

For the Secretary of State:
Francis H. Russell, Chief Division of Public Liaison

Letter to Mrs. Roosevelt

April 13, 1945

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

On behalf of the American Bahá'í community we express sincere and heartfelt sympathy for your sorrow in the death of Mr. Roosevelt, and our realization of the sudden blow which the President's passing means to workers for peace and justice throughout the world.

It has seemed to the Bahá'ís that destiny had found in Mr. Roosevelt the instrument needed to complete the world undertaking begun by President Wilson after the first world war, and thereby fulfill the mission providentially laid upon our country to lead the nations in the establishment of universal peace. We pray that the sacrifice of his precious life at this crucial moment may deepen the determination of the American representatives at San Francisco to succeed in their great purpose, and produce in the body of the people a sense of renewed consecration and fuller understanding of the nature of our supreme task.

Only a few days ago we were moved to send the President a message conveying our hopes that under his leadership the gathering of the Allied Nations would lay a basis for peace. Similarly, in January, 1944 we sent the President a letter expressing our appreciation of his activities in behalf of race unity, while nearly ten years ago we had the privilege of giving him, through the courtesy of the President's mother, an engrossed copy of Bahá'u'lláh's Tablet addressed to the rulers of the American Republics, and of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's prayers revealed for America. As the ideals of peace and race unity are so large a part of your own public work and influence, we send you with this a set of photographs of the engrossed document, and copies of the telegram and letter mentioned.

May we also share with you these beautiful words of Bahá'u'lláh:

"O Son of Man! Thou art My dominion and My dominion perisheth not, wherefore fearest thou thy perishing? Thou art My Light and My Light shall never be extinguished, why dost thou dread extinction? Thou art My glory and My glory fadeth not; thou art My robe and My robe shall never be outworn. Abide then in thy love for Me, that thou mayest find Me in the realm of glory."

Respectfully,

National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the U. S. and Canada,

April-May, 1945

Letter to Mrs. Roosevelt

'Abdu'l-Bahá in America

The exposition of these vitalizing truths of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, which He characterized as the "spirit of the age," He supplemented with grave and reiterated warnings of an impending conflagration which, if the statesmen of the world should fail to avert, would set ablaze the entire continent of Europe. He, moreover, predicted, in the context of these travels, the radical changes which would take place in that continent, foreshadowed the movement of the decentralization of political power which would inevitably be set in motion, alluded to the troubles that would overtake Turkey, anticipated the persecution of the Jews on the European continent, and categorically asserted that the "banner of the unity of mankind would be hoisted, that the tabernacle of universal peace would be raised and the world become another world.—Shoghi Effendi, God Passes By, p. 282 and the premiere of Mr. Kinney's music for the 23rd and 24th Psalms of David.

Philip Sprague and Saffa Kinney gave the Bahá'í Message at a meeting at the McKee High School, May 15. There were other speakers, one of whom spoke on "The Basis of Brotherhood," Irna Marisashe sang and Mr. Kinney played. Sylvia King presided. The meeting was planned by Lila Hope and Ethel Peck.

Marzieh Gail in an interview with Martha Deane over WOR on May 31 brought out the Bahá'í Principles and described the Convention.

New York art critics praised Mark Tobey's exhibit held in April at the 'illard Gallery. His picture, "Threading Light," a picture of Bahá'í expression, has caused much comment. Mr. Tobey is also a noted Bahá'í teacher. He has visited the Guardian, pioneered in England, taught at the Geysville School and at the International School at Tem-erity Ranch, Colorado. He lives in Seattle, Washington and made only a brief visit in New York.

YONKERS

Mrs. Sylvia King spoke over WPTAS, White Plains, for the Yonkers Assembly, May 23.

Three Yonkers papers had excellent publicity on the Centennial.

Programs of regular public weekly meetings have been received at the National Office from four local Bahá'í centers. The time and place of these meetings in each city is given below.

Los Angeles, every Sunday at 3 p.m., West Hall Halliburton Building, 1709 West Eighth Street.
San Francisco, Friday, 8 p.m., Bahá'í Center, 126 Post Street.
Philadelphia, Sunday, 8:15 p.m., 308 Fuller Building, 10 South 18th Street, Washington, D. C., Sunday 4 p.m., Bahá'í Center, 1208 Eye Street.

TOPEKA

Topeka, Kansas issued an attractive Bahá'í Program for 1943-44 containing picture of the Temple, membership roll, names of isolated believers in vicinity, and Bahá'í youth, members of the Assembly, committee chairman, and a calendar of Bahá'í events from April to April. The program calls for one Guest meeting a month.

It is the hope of the Bahá'í News Editorial Committee to study local methods and report the most effective suggestions from time to time.
Local News Letters

Copies of their local news letters have been received from the Los Angeles, California, the Maywood, Illinois, and the New York Communities, and they are full of interesting activities. LOS ANGELES issues monthly a seven-page Bahá'í Journal which includes the Bahá'í calendar for the period; an announcement of the time of the feast or feasts which will be held; much devotional material, not only from the Bahá'í Writings but also from the Bible and the Qur'an; and odd items of interest, such as the poem written by John Greenleaf Whittier in honor of Sarah J. Farmer's birthday. One interesting bit of news was the announcement of the arrival of Mrs. Luisa Garrido de Padilla from Chile with her husband, who is connected with the Los Angeles Chilean Consulate. Mrs. Padillo has been a member of the Spiritual Assembly of Santiago since its inception.

In an effort to build up a Youth Group "of distinction and noteworthy capacity" the Los Angeles Assembly invited all the Bahá'í Youth of that community to a consultation and social meeting on January 7th. Mrs. Virginia Camelon foster is conducting a study class in Los Angeles, using "God Passes By" as a text-book. About twenty-six students are attending this class, which lessons are assigned and opportunity for discussion is given.

The very young assembly of MAYWOOD, Illinois, with a membership of thirteen voting members, published in January its first local Bahá'í News, a vigorous little four-page letter giving excerpts from the Bahá'í Writings; the dates of the feasts to be held January through April, with the names of the hosts; news of the various members of the community; and the following challenging questions:

Do you know?
The periods of development of the Bahá'í Faith?
The chief agency empowered to usher in this Age?
What is the sole framework of the Bahá'í future?
What is the pattern of the new world order?
The source of authority of the Administrative order?
The institutions of the Administrative order?
Its functions?
Its successorship?

"What do you know about
The Universal House of Justice?
The secondary House of Justice?
The institution of the Guardianship?
"Will you be able to answer the above questions, and more, when the outside world begins asking them?"

The last page of the paper is given over to pictures taken in 1937 with the caption: "Do you remember when...Maywood was a group?"

Two news items show how strongly Maywood is supporting the institutions of the Cause: "Our membership is 100% subscribed to World Order and has arranged for free copies to be sent to the Hines and the Vaughan hospitals in Maywood." "At the close of 1944 our treasurer has sent a contribution each and every month to the National Fund."

The New York Bahá'í News, issued monthly, begins with a boxed statement of some current matter important to the community. For instance, in December it carried this item: "At the next Feast, December 30th, there will be important consultation in regard to acquiring our own Center this year. Please be present." The calendar, showing the next three Feasts, is given, announcements of meetings of the various classes, items of interest contributed by committees, personal news, and a financial statement.

The New York City teaching program includes a wide variety of public meetings and study classes. Besides a public meeting every Sunday, that held on the first Sunday of the month being conducted by the local Inter-America Committee, there are four study classes weekly and three fireside meetings. Of the study classes, one, for believers, was engaged in studying the Bahá'í Peace Program in January, and, during February, "God Passes By." Fireside groups meet at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Safa Kinney and of Mrs. Sara Ellen Peake and Miss Gale March.

The young assembly of SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, is issuing a bulletin. In the January number the assembly expresses a hope that by means of this monthly bulletin it can continue its contact with other Bahá'ís in Puerto Rico and create a feeling of fellowship between the friends living in different parts of the island. The Bahá'í calendar for the month is given and two news items: that Miss Margaret Lentz, formerly of Santo Domingo, is now a member of the San Juan community, and that Mr. Thomas S. Morales of New York visited in Puerto Rico with his family. Besides this there are several quotations from the Sacred Writings.

Announcements of Meetings

At least three assemblies get out

Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Santiago da Chile, 1944-45 attractive little folders announcing to the public the meetings to be held in their vicinity. That issued by CHICAGO contains announcements of the public meetings to be held at the House of Worship in Wilmette, as well as at the Center, 116 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago. The January calendar contained a special notice of Race Unity Meeting, Thursday, January 25th, having as its theme "Pattern for Future Society." The chairman was Hushang Javid, one of the young Baha'is from Persia, and the speakers were Eli Powlas, Robert Imagire, Arabelle Haywood, and Marion Oas, representing various races and nationalities. Announcement is also made on this program of a Wednesday noon class conducted regularly at the Center by Mrs. Ruth Moffet, a youth meeting every Friday evening, and the Fellowship Group, which meets Saturday evenings, and a Children's hour every Sunday from 12:00 to 1:00.

The little folder published by the LOS ANGELES Assembly contains the announcement of the public meetings to be held at the Bahá'í Library and Reading Room, 207 Haliburton Building during the current two months. In January the speakers were Mrs. Virginia Camelon Foster, Dr. Stephen S. Tornay, and Mr. Robert Thiess, in February, Mr. Willard P. Hatch, Mr. Winston Evans, and Mrs. Orcella Rexford (Gregory). On the back of the folder there is a list of ten Bahá'í classes in the vicinity of Los Angeles with the name and the telephone number of the person to whom one may call for information (Mrs. Jessie B. Kemper, Mrs. J. C. Davenport, Mrs. Elden Smith, Mrs. B. E. Grover, Mrs. Graydon Robertson, Mrs. Olive Dible, Mrs. R. W. Beck, Miss Dorothy Wever, Mrs. Stuart W. French, and Mrs. Charles R. Witt.)

PHILADELPHIA also puts out a very attractive little folder with a fine photograph of the House of Worship on the face and the Words of Bahá'u'lláh inscribed over its nine entrances on the reverse side. It carries the announcement of six public addresses for January and February and two special meetings. The speakers were Marybelle Hammond, Doris Talmon and Edith Segen, Jean Bruce, Curtis Kelsey, Margaret Lear, and Edward Phar. One of the special meetings was a round table discussion on the subject of "Race Unity" presided over by Jes-

Baha'í Program for January, in mimeograph form has been received from the SEATTLE Spiritual Assembly. It announces two public meetings: January 14th, "The Secret of Divine Civilization," at which the speakers were Mrs. Lillian Smith and Miss Elsa Nordquist and the chairman was Mr. Dean Hart; and January 28th, "Peace — A Divine Creation" with Miss Hazel Stauter and Mr. Ray Wardall as speakers and Mrs. Heloise Wardall as chairman. A Friday evening book review and study class was also announced, four meetings at which "God Passes By" was studied by Mr. C. G. Nordquist, Miss Lotus Peterson, Mr. E. G. Washington, and Mrs. Edna Johns.

Two printed cards announcing special meetings have been received. In BEVERLY, Mass., a Race Unity Forum was held with Mr. Harlan Ober as chairman. The guest speakers were Mr. Abraham Gloskky, Baha'i Brith, and Mr. John Caswell Smith, secretary of the Urban League of Greater Boston. Mr. Charles S. Krug, Chairman of the Boston Assembly presented the Bahá'í teachings on the subject. The Beverly Assembly reports that thirty people attended the meeting, in spite of the fact that it was a slippery rainy night.

Last November such a Race Unity meeting was held in BOSTON, presided over by Matthew W. Bullock, of the Massachusetts Parole Board. The speakers were Clarence Q. Berger, Educational Director of the Anti-Defamation League, and Harlan F. Ober of the National Bahá'í Race Unity Committee.

Annual Reports

Some very successful teaching work was done in KANSAS CITY, Missouri, by means of fireside groups. Such meetings were held weekly in two homes, and occasionally outside speakers were present, among them the late Mrs. Howard Ives, Mrs. Virginia Camelon Foster, Mr. Winston Evans, and Mr. Louis Gregory. There were, besides this, seven public lectures and two informal gatherings at which Mrs. Joy Hill Earle was the speaker, one at the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reynolds, and the other at the home of Prof. and Mrs. G. B. Buster. On these occasions there was a mingling of both races. Publicity in Kansas City was carried on by three display ads, an article in the "Call" when Mrs. Earle spoke, and notices on the church page of the "Kansas City Star."

The LIMA, Ohio, Assembly presented four public meetings on the four great teaching themes of the year. The speakers were Mr. Lothar Schurgast, Mr. St. George Spindlove, Mr. Carl Scheffler, and Mrs. Frank Baker. Three radio talks were given over the local station by Mrs. Frank Baker, Mr. Floyd Spahr, and Mrs. Hazel McCurdy. A race unity banquet was held November 21st, attended by two hundred Bahá'ís and their friends. The Lima Assembly reports this as the most outstanding event of the year. In response to the Guardian's call for pioneers, Mrs. Edna Holloway moved to Charlotte town, Prince Edward Island, and there assisted in forming a spiritual assembly. Three of the Lima community are in the armed forces: Dr. Conrad Baker, William (Bill) Baker, and Joe Stahl.

The youth work in Lima is very active. There is a class for small children, which meets Sunday afternoons. The program covers studies from the Bible, with pictures and stories, the Bahá'í principles and prayers, and some handicraft work. Nine pupils attended, five coming from non-Bahá'í families. The intermediate group, or Junior YOUTH Group, consists of eight children, six from non-Bahá'í families. They are studying "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era" and plan to take up the lives of the Bab, Bahá'u'lláh, and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and something about the Guardian. The Senior Youth Group is taking lessons from "The Wisdom of 'Abdu'l-Bahá," "The Chosen Highway," and "Procedure." The ten members enrolled represent seven Bahá'í and three non-Bahá'í families. At the annual Youth Symposium there were guests from Mansfield Medina, and Columbus Grove. The Lima summer session is again planned for a week in June 1944. The theme for the week will be Progressive Revelation, with emphasis on... the Manifestations of the present day, and their fulfillment. An interesting feature will be Bahá’í plays with the miniature theater loaned by Mrs. Esther Toy Wolf. Choral speaking is also tentatively planned. It is hoped that, like last year, there will be a number of out-of-town guests.”

MADISON, Wisconsin, also, is to be congratulated on having sent more than 96% of its funds to the National Treasurer while at the same time doing very active teaching at home. In May the Assembly sponsored a lecture at the Lorraine Hotel, at which Prof. Gerth of the University spoke on the subject of race prejudice and was followed by Mr. Horace Holley. Ruth Moffett spent ten days in Madison and spoke several times publicly. She gave a radio address at the university radio station so successfully that the manager invited her to speak whenever she came to Madison. Ruth Cornell spoke in October and again in January. Mrs. Stebbins, the publicity chairman, has succeeded in getting a number of articles published in the “Voice of the People” section of the local papers. And the young people have organized a flourishing youth group. The first was the Symposium, February 27th, with about fifteen in attendance. “They have met every other Sunday since then, and have attracted several non-Bahá’í youth and had lively discussions.”

In MAUI, Hawaii, public meetings were held weekly at the homes of Mrs. Daisy Sabin and Mrs. Mary Fantom; a children’s class was held every Monday at Mrs. Sabin’s; and books, along with “World Order” were placed, not only in the local library but also in those on the islands of Molukai and Lanai, where there are no Bahá’í residents.

Perhaps the most effective teaching done by this community came at a time of grief and loss. Mrs. Alice Broadhurst (Mother Broadhurst) passed away January 18, 1944, at the age of 89, and Mrs. Ella Federcell left this life on March 30th. Mrs. Daisy Sabin, who presented the Bahá’í part of the funeral services for both of these friends writes of them as follows: “At the memorial service for our beloved Bahá’í, Mother Broadhurst, which was held at Peter’s Undertaking Parlors in Wailuku, Maui, Rev. R. M. Kennan—pastor of the Wailuku Union Church—gave a very beautiful service. Following Rev. Kennan, I had the honor of conducting the first Bahá’í service of its nature to be held on Maui. There were about thirty-five people present who had never heard of the Bahá’í Cause before.” The reading on immortality was taken from the article “The Path to God” in the October 1943 “World Order” magazine, and the service was closed with one of the prayers of Bahá’u’lláh. Many people afterwards spoke of being impressed by the Bahá’í reading. The other service, that for Mrs. Federcell, took place in the Episcopal Church of Lahaina and Mrs. Sabin was invited by Rev. John M. Horton to conduct her part of the service from the lectern. She writes: “This service was a surprise and has significance, since it was the first time a Bahá’í reader has taken part in a service conducted in any church here on Maui. Several people expressed surprise at a woman conducting a service in the Episcopal church. Also it has significance in the fact that there were five denominations represented: Christian Science, Congregational, Catholic, Mormon, and Episcopalian. Ten different nationalities were represented: Chinese, Russian, Norwegian, English, Scotch, German, Portuguese, Japanese, American colored, Hawaiian and part-Hawaiian. Also many were of mixed races.” People from ten different localities were present, making a total of over one hundred, the largest number on Maui ever to hear of the Bahá’í Faith at one time. Many favorable comments were made and the family of Mrs. Federcell, who were non-Bahá’ís expressed themselves as being much comforted by the words of Bahá’u’lláh.

NEW HAVEN, Connecticut, is to be credited with having sent out two pioneers, Mrs. Marion Clark and Miss Betty Clark, who went to Little Rock, Arkansas. This community has held public meetings every Sunday afternoon at their new Bahá’í Center. Fifty-six meetings have drawn out 809 souls of which 159 were non-Bahá’ís. Lillian Steed conducted a class for the training of speakers. Twenty outside speakers were brought in, five of them non-Bahá’ís, and in this undertaking the HAMDEN and ORANGE groups cooperated.

OKLAHOMA CITY reports that the visits of two teachers, Mr. Louis Gregory and Mrs. Beulah Lewis have greatly extended the interest in the Faith in that city. Mr. Gregory stayed ten days, spoke in several of the Negro churches, to groups of ministers, and to a woman’s club, and made many contacts. A study class conducted by one of the interested people was the result of his visit. Alice Entzminger writes: “This is the first opportunity many of us had to meet Mr. Gregory personally and we are deeply grateful for the privilege of association with this saintly soul."

Mrs. Beulah Lewis spent a week in Oklahoma City, during which time she spoke publicly on "The Manifestation" and talked to a Fellowship Class at the Unitarian Church. Many questions were asked by a large and alert audience. "Many splendid fire-sides were held with the study class and with newly interested people." At the Feast of the Rídvan three new members were added to the community.

The OMAHA Assembly has been carrying on four study classes: an advanced class, studying the World Order Letters and three beginning classes. For their two public speakers during the year, Dorothy Baker in October and Dr. Edris Rice-Wray in March, the Omaha Bahá’ís were able to get good publicity, better in March than in October, as the Cause was better known and better received in Omaha at that time. Dr. Rice-Wray spoke on the "Noon-Day Forum" program of the Broadcasting Station W.O.W. while she was there, in an interview with Mr. Ray Clark, who asked his questions in such a way as to give her an opportunity to speak fully of the Cause. The community, which had been using as a center the apartment generously offered them by Mrs. India Haggerty, finding the quarters now too small, has obtained a center in the heart of the downtown district. This is only one indication that the Cause is growing in Omaha. There has been increased interest on the part of the public and spiritual growth within the community. The secretary, Josephine Jones, writes: "Attendance has been good at the feasts with a fine feeling of spiritual unity, which at times has been especially strong. There has been a steady spiritual growth and strengthening during the past six months, and we realize that for continued growth, and to maintain and increase the prestige of the Bahá’í Faith in this community, we must be even more loyal and self-sacrificing."

The high points of the year in PHOENIX, Arizona, were connected with the teaching themes given out by the National Spiritual Assembly. The first was a public lecture given by Dorothy Baker, September 30th, at the Phoenix Woman’s Club on the theme of race unity, which was followed by a ten minute talk on the radio the following morning. Publicity for this event was carried on by means of advertising over the radio, display ads and items in the newspapers, letters sent to civic clubs, and cards of invitation sent to individuals.

The second period, in which religious unity was the theme, had as its high point an evening of music, sponsored by the assembly and held at the home of Mrs. Paul Schoenly. Fifty written invitations were sent to friends.

For the period during which world unity was stressed, an announcement of the subjects for the weekly meetings was printed and distributed. The program also contained a picture of the Temple, mention of the Bahá’í library and reading room at the Center, an announcement of the classes held in PHOENIX and EAST PHOENIX, and quotations from the sacred Writings. The period was climaxd by the Bahá’í Youth Symposium, February 27th.

Programs were also printed and distributed for the meetings in March and April, which had as their theme the Manifestation of God.

On April 2 the Phoenix and East Phoenix communities entered into a contract with the Arizona Republic and Gazette for the insertion weekly, during April and May, of a short quotation from the Bahá’í writings.

An interesting feature of the report of the VANCOUVER Assembly is the very complete and detailed financial statement which was submitted by the treasurer, Ernest Liddell. It was accompanied by separate statements for the lending library, as well as a statement of the account of books for sale.

The teaching work in Vancouver was carried on by means of semimonthly public meetings, which alternated with a study class for Bahá’ís only. At two of the public meetings, non-Bahá’ís guest speakers talked, one on the contribution of the Semitic race and the other on the League of Nations. Several Bahá’ís visited the community: Mrs. Amelia Collins; Mrs. Cox, a pioneer en route to Regina; Mrs. Sylvia Joas; Mr. Rowland Estall; and Mrs. Roland McGee. The two gave public addresses.

Vancouver has helped with the extension work in Regina, where Miss Muriel Warnicker made two extended visits, and in Victoria.

The Vancouver Assembly has maintained a Center throughout the year and finds it very valuable to have a permanent room.

Besides the weekly study class, the WAUWATOSA Spiritual Assembly has held thirteen public meetings during this past year, bringing as outside speakers, Mrs. A. Schwandes, Mr. Carl Scheffler, Mrs. Nina Mathiesen, Mrs. Ruth Moffett, Fanny Junick, and Mr. Solon Fieldman.

The YONKERS, New York, Spiritual Assembly reports that in carrying out the plan for uniform teaching subjects in 1943-4, it held a public meeting on inter-racial unity on September 16th, at which Dr. A. M. Rivera, a local non-Bahá’í, and Mr. Ellahi Kalantar were the speakers. On October 20th, at a fellowship meeting, Mr. Bruce Wendell, a concert pianist, played and then spoke on "Man’s Individual Responsibility," Mr. Archie Tichenor spoke on November 17th and Mr. Kalantar on December 6th with Miss Alferetta Bower, speakers in the series were Mr. Hubeb Sabet and Miss Sylvia King.

News of Other Lands

Persia

From Haifa comes news of the steady progress of the Cause in the land of its birth and the National Spiritual Assembly in Iran writes that it is "striving to bend all the activities of the friends in the channel directed by our Beloved Guardian. And nobly are the friends responding to this call. Forsaking home, comfort, and established ties, they are scattering far and wide, within and without the domains of this land, in an effort to prove worthy of their Guardian's trust. They bid fair to become embodiments of that essence of detachment described by the Master in His Will as the hallmark of a true Baha'i. May Bahá'u'lláh grant them fresh strength and cheer their hearts, may He bless their efforts and vouchsafe unto their sincere endeavors true victory."

Near the tomb of Keith Ransome-Keller are interred the bodies of two of the most famous Baha'i martyrs, called by Bahá'u'lláh the King of Martyrs and the Beloved of Martyrs. They were brutally killed in Isfahan in the early days of the Cause, and now the National Spiritual Assembly, at the request of the Guardian, is building suitable tombs for them. The Guardian sent £1000 for this purpose, and the Persian believers are contributing wholeheartedly.

The interest of the Persian believers in Bahá'í activities is shown by the news that, when the "Picture Post" containing the article and picture of the London Naw-rúz arrived in Tehran the price of the paper rose from 3 riyals to 300 riyals, owing to the enormous demand for it.

India

The Haifa news letter for July is all of rejoicing over the splendid success of the Six-year Plan in India. The number of Spiritual Assemblies mentioned in this news letter exceeds that reported in the May news letter from India and we must conclude that it is based on later information. Thirty-seven Spiritual Assemblies and thirty-five groups are now in existence and the Guardian has written to the Indian believers: "The repeated and striking evidences of their high accomplishments invigorate, encourage, and excite the admiration of their sister communities in East and West. They are holding aloft the standard of Divine Guidance in a manner that cannot but evoke the unstinted praise and the unqualified gratitude of their brethren throughout the Bahá'í world."

Seven youth groups participated in the International Symposium March 28 and three other meetings were projected for the youth throughout India. The first, in April, was to be a meeting of discussion on the topic, "The Dawn Breakers," on "The Secret of Success in Life," and on "Character-forming." The meeting in September was to take the form of public lectures on "The Oneness of Humanity—Its True Significance," "The Making of Personality under the Influence of Divine Teachings," and "The History of Mankind." The third meeting, to be held in December in some public hall was to be a meeting of discussion of the following proposition: In the opinion of this house the present society is ready for the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh which fulfills the present needs of the body politic."

Memorial Book From Bahá'ís of India

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE HUNDRED YEARS' HISTORY OF THE BAHÁ'ÍS OF INDIA AND BURMAH. By Siyyid S. H. Koreshi

This interesting Centenary booklet deals, for the most part, with the first two periods of the first Bahá'í Century, the period of the Bab and the period of Bahá'u'lláh. It is to be followed at a later date, by a complete hundred years' history of the Cause in those countries.

Before reaching the period of the Bab the author describes the intense expectation which pervaded Shi'ih Islám, during the hundred years (1744-1844) which preceded the first Bahá'í Century, of the coming to Bombay, which from the first year of the Bahá’í era has played a notable part in the development of the Cause in India. During the lifetime of Bahá’u’lláh several volumes of His Tablets were published at Bombay. Bombay acted as the organizing center for India and Burmah for almost fifty years. It practically financed the tours of all the traveling teachers who came to India and Burmah from the East or the West. But with the beginning of the fourth or formative period of the first century if “most cheerfully handed over charge of the administration to the National Spiritual Assembly elected by the Bahá’ís of India and Burmah in accordance with the instructions of the Guardian and continued to bear the larger part of the financial burden of administration.” Bombay was, however, selected as the fitting place for the observation of the All-India and Burmah First Bahá’í Centenary Celebrations.

Iraq

We learn from Haifa that the believers of Iraq are very active in teaching the Cause and that their Bahá’í activities and organizations continue uninterrupted. On March 1st the youth of that country took part in the international youth symposium by holding a meeting in the Hazratu’l-Quds. A great many non-Bahá’í youths attended.

The British Isles

The British believers report more activity than has hitherto been possible during the war. Two Assemblies have been re-established, and this year, for the first time since the beginning of the war, a summer school was held. A school was hired at Barford, Warwickshire, in beautiful surroundings. Owing to limitations of space, the committee planned at first to restrict it to Bahá’ís, but it turned out that more non-Bahá’ís attended than ever before and some of them declared themselves believers afterwards.

The following incident, reported by the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles, shows how an apparently unfortunate occurrence may work for the good of the Cause: “Some months ago it was brought to the attention of the N.S.A. that a man appearing before a Conscientious Objector’s Appeal Tribunal in the North of England was calling himself a member of the Bahá’í Faith. The matter was serious, in that he had served in the Army and had been twice imprisoned for refusing to obey orders to fulfill his military duties, and the proceedings had been reported in full in the Yorkshire papers. The man, of course, was not a Bahá’í, but he had been in touch with the London community for a short period before the war. The Assembly got in touch with the Tribunal, who were very sympathetic and helpful, and an opportunity was given for a member of the Assembly to make a statement at the next sitting, showing what our attitude really is. This was duly reported in the “Yorkshire Post,” by arrangement with the editor.

Australia and New Zealand

The July number of the Bahá’í Quarterly published by the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia and New Zealand tells of the establishment of National Headquarters in Sydney. We quote parts of the Quarterly’s account of this enterprise: “The news of the Guardian’s decision that National Headquarters were to be established, together with his gift of £1000 sterling towards the project was a tremendous surprise. How profoundly stirred we were, how honored, and what a stimulus and tonic to the Australian and New Zealand Bahá’í community. But while we were still rejoicing in this gift and what it will mean in prestige for the Faith to have a building, the material symbol of the institution of the N.S.A., another cable came announcing a further contribution of £2,000 sterling from the Guardian. Then cables and a generous contribution from the much loved N.S.A. in America and Canada. Later we were completely dazzled by a loving cable from Furutan Rahání with a contribution of £2,500 sterling from our Persian brothers and sisters... The spirit which prompted this gift is so pure, so selfless, we are dazzled by its sweetness and beauty. But this was not all, our dearly loved Bahá’ís of India, Iraq, America and a Persian believer sent wonderful contributions.

“Now we have realized more than ever before, the meaning of Bahá’í unity. We rejoice in the reality of our spiritual union with the believers throughout the world.”

The search for a suitable property was commenced immediately and resulted in the purchase of the property No 2 Lang Road, Centennial Park, Sydney. This purchase was made in December, 1943. The National Convention was held during the week of the 23rd of May, 1944 at this recently purchased Hazratu’l-Quds. On Saturday, May 20, the building was officially dedicated by Mrs. Clara Dunn. In opening the Convention the Chairman of the National Assembly, Mr. H. Fitzner, traced the growth of the Faith from the Báb to present day administration, and paid tribute to the work of the late Mr. John Hyde Dunn, Mrs. Dunn, the late Martha Root and many of the pioneer believers in Australia and New Zealand. He called upon the Bahá’ís of those lands to intensify and redouble their efforts that the Message of Bahá’u’lláh might be spread; that the Most Great Peace might become a reality.

The Convention received cables from the Guardian, from which we quote the following sentence: “Praying unprecedented blessing for high minded, stout hearted, dearly beloved Australian and New Zealand believers.”

Following the Convention the National Spiritual Assembly drew up plans for spreading the knowledge of the Bahá’í Teachings not only in the capital cities of Australia and New Zealand, but to every town and country district. The plan was eagerly accepted by the believers everywhere and is working successfully.

A monument has been erected on the late Mr. Dunn’s grave at a cost of £172. Mrs. Dunn chose the materials and the design.

The Adelaide Spiritual Assembly has purchased a residence at Belair which will be used as a Bahá’í school, the school later to become a great Bahá’í college.

The N.S.A. continues to publish the magazine “Herald of the Faith.” Many expressions of appreciation of the magazine have been received from America as well as Australia.

According to the October Bahá’í Quarterly, Corporal Alvin Blum of Memphis, Tennessee was still associated with the Auckland, New Zealand community and was responsible for increased activity in that community and also for initiating a youth group, which is now firmly established under Auckland leadership.

The Sydney Spiritual Assembly reported visits from several young American Bahá’ís who had passed through Sydney with the American Forces.
Messages from the Guardian

Dear and valued co-workers:

The Divine Plan conceived by 'Abdu'l-Bahá for the American Bahá'í community, in the midst of one of the darkest periods in human history, and with which the destinies of the followers of Bahá'u'lláh in the North American continent must for generations to come remain inextricably interwoven, has, during the concluding years of the first Bahá'í Century, triumphantly emerged from the first stage of its evolution. Its initiation, officially and on a vast scale, had, for well nigh twenty years, been held in abeyance, while the processes of a slowly emerging administrative Order, were, under the unerring guidance of Providence, creating and perfecting the agencies for its efficient and systematic prosecution. The next stage in the evolution of the Plan cannot, however, be embarked upon, until the external causes, hampering its further unfoldment in other continents of the globe, are removed through the cessation of hostilities and the signal victories already won through its initial development are sufficiently consolidated throughout the Western Hemisphere. The tasks confronting those who have so valiantly and brilliantly inaugurated the first stage in the execution of the Great Design unfolded by 'Abdu'l-Bahá for the promulgation of the Faith of His Father, during this transitional period, are manifold, exacting, urgent, and sacred. The local administrative units, so laboriously constituted throughout the Americas, must needs, as already pointed out and repeatedly stressed, be maintained, reinforced, closely integrated and their number steadily multiplied. The spirit that has inflamed the pioneers who have set the seal of triumph on the Seven Year Plan, must, under the vigilant care of the national representatives of the American Bahá'í community be constantly watched, kept alive and nourished. The literature of the Faith, particularly in Spanish and Portuguese, must be widely disseminated in both Central and South America, as a necessary adjunct to the systematic consolidation of the work that has been undertaken. Above all, the healing Message of Bahá'u'lláh must during the opening years of the second Bahá'í Century, and through the instrumentality of an already properly functioning Administrative Order, whose ramifications have been extended to the four corners of the Western Hemisphere, be vividly, systematically brought to the attention of the masses, in their hour of grief, misery and confusion. A more audacious assertion of the challenging verities of the Faith; a more convincing presentation of its distinguishing truths; a fuller exposition of the character, the aims and the achievements of its rising Administrative system as the nucleus and pattern of its future world-embracing order; a more direct and intimate contact and association with the leaders of public thought, whose activities and aims are akin to the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, for the purpose of demonstrating the universalality, the comprehensiveness, the liberality and the dynamic power of His Divine Message; a closer scrutiny of the ways and means whereby its claims can be vindicated, its defamers and detractors silenced, and its institutions safeguarded; a more determined effort to exploit, to the fullest extent possible, the talents and abilities of the rank and file of the believers for the purpose of achieving these ends—these stand out as the paramount tasks summoning to a challenge, during these years of transition and turmoil, the entire body of the American believers. The facilities which the radio and press furnish must be utilized to a degree unprecedented in American Bahá'í history. The combined resources of the much-envied, exemplary American Bahá'í community must be harnessed for the effectual promotion of these meritorious purposes. Blessings undreamt of in their scope and plenteousness, are bound to be vouchsafed to those who will, in these dark yet pregnant times, arise, to further these noble ends and to hasten through their acts the hour at which a still more momentous stage in the evolution of a Divine and worldwide Plan can be launched.

There is no time to lose. The hour is ripe for the proclamation, without fear, without reserve, and without hesitation, and on a scale never as yet undertaken, of the One Message that can alone extricate humanity from the morass into which it is steadily sinking, and from which they who claim to be the followers of the Most Great Name can and will eventually rescue it. The sooner they who labor for the recognition and triumph of His Faith in the new world arise to carry out these inescapable duties, the sooner will the hopes, the aims and objectives of 'Abdu'l-Bahá as enshrined in His own Plan, be translated from the realm of vision to the plane of actuality and manifest the full force of the potentialities with which they have been endowed.

Haifa, Palestine
March 29, 1945

My heavy laden heart, already oppressed by repeated defections of the unworthy kindred of the beloved Master, is relieved by latest signal evidence of the indomitable spirit of the members of divinely chosen American Bahá'í community now unfurling the banner of the Faith and establishing the structural basis of its administrative order in the world's southernmost city. I hail the staunchness and fidelity distinguishing the winners of such superb victories. I acclaim them true brothers and sisters worthy of the name 'Abdul-Bahá. I urge the Inter-America Committee to devote special attention and undertake prompt measures designed to increase the number of believers, establish local administrative headquarters, and multiply the subsidiary agencies indispensable to the maintenance of a flourishing community in the southern extremity of western hemisphere. Praying ever increasing successes.

Shoghi Effendi

May 8, 1945

The followers of Bahá’u’lláh throughout five continents unanimously rejoice in the partial emergence of a war-torn humanity from the titanic upheaval unerringly predicted seventy years ago by the Pen of the Author of their Faith. The cessation of hostilities in the European continent signals yet another chapter in the tragic tale of fiery trials providentially decreed by inscrutable wisdom designed ultimately to weld the mutually antagonistic elements of human society into a single, organically-united, unshatterable world commonwealth. They gratefully acclaim the signal evidence of the interposition of divine Providence which during such pernicious years enabled the World Center of our Faith to escape what posterity will recognize as one of the gravest dangers which ever confronted the nerve center of its institutions. They are profoundly aware of the bountiful grace vouchsafed by that same Providence insuring, unlike the previous world conflict, uninterrupted intercourse between the spiritual Center and the vast majority of the communities functioning within the orbit of a far-flung Faith. They are immeasurably thankful for the miraculous preservation of the Indian, Persian, Egyptian, British and Iraqi communities, long threatened by dire perils owing to their proximity to the theatre of military operations. They are deeply conscious that the progress achieved, despite six tempestuous years, in both the Eastern and Western Hemispheres through the collective enterprises launched by these communities outshines the sum total of the accomplishments since the inception of the Formative Age of the Faith.

The Seven Year Plan inaugurated by the American Bahá’í community under the lowering clouds of the approaching conflict victoriously completed the exterior ornamentation of the Mother Temple of the West, established the structural basis of the Faith in every State and Province of the North American continent, and hoisted its banner in every Republic of Latin America. The Indian believers’ Six Year Plan, launched on the eve of hostilities, more than quadrupled the centers functioning within the pale of the Administrative Order. The edifices consecrated to the administrative affairs of an ever-advancing Cause, involving the expenditure of over a hundred thousand dollars, were erected, purchased or completed in the Capital Cities of India, Iraq and Egypt as well as Sydney, Australia. The acquisition of numerous properties in Bahá’u’lláh’s native land, on Mount Carmel and in the Jordan Valley, as well as the purchase of several important historic sites associated with the Lives of both the Herald and the Author of the Faith, swelled to an unprecedented degree our Bahá’í endowments.

Preliminary steps for the completion of the Báb’s Sepulchre and the establishment of the World Administrative Center through the removal of the Remains of the Brother and

Bash’i News

Bash’i News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-let­ter of the Bahá’í community. The first issue appeared in December, 1925.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: "The News Letter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function... I would urge you to enlarge its scope... that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, spiritual, educational and otherwise. "It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information on Bahá’í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating false influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause."

The contents include: material supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly, such as the Guardian’s messages, the Assembly’s letters and its general statements and reports; Committee plans which have been approved and authorized; Committee news reports of activities; annual reports from local Assemblies; news items from local Assemblies; activities in regional areas as reported by or through the National Teaching Committee; activities in Central and South America as reported by the Inter-American Committee; news from other lands gathered from the bulletins of the various National Assemblies; a record of new enrollments and transfers; a record of deaths; photographs of Bahá’ís in various parts of the world.

Bahá’i News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá’í News Committee: Horace Holley, Secretary, Carreta House, Mabel H. Paine, Address: Bahá’í News Committee, 536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Ill.
the Mother of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá were undertaken. The termination of the First Century of the Bahá’í Era, synchronizing with the climax of the raging storm, was publicly and befittingly celebrated, despite the multiplication of restrictions. Above all, the unity and integrity of an incorruptible world community was consistently safeguarded in face of the insidious opposition of avowed enemies without and the Covenant-breakers within.

Such splendid victories, over so vast a field, amidst such tribulations during so prolonged an ordeal, augur well for the colossal tasks destined to be accomplished during the course of the peaceful years ahead by the builders of the embryonic World Order of Bahá’u’lláh amidst the wreckage of a disrupted, disillusioned society.

SHOGHI RABBANI
Received May 12, 1945

(The following messages from the Guardian were written through his secretary).

Our Two Tasks

He fully approves of the concept of uniting the believers’ labors through focussing them on nation-wide teaching campaigns and so on. But he feels that the friends should constantly be encouraged to bear in mind certain salient facts: Bahá’u’lláh has brought a new system and new laws and standards of personal as well as racial conduct into the world. Although outside agencies have been to a certain extent illuminated by the radiance of His Message and doctrines, and are exerting efforts to bring the world into that orbit of universal peace and harmony He has set for it, these outside forces cannot achieve what only the followers of His Faith can. The believers must

Credentials for Persians

The Guardian has already laid down the principle that any one claiming to be a Bahá’í from Persia must have his properly issued credentials from the N. S. A. of Persia before he can be accepted by any other Bahá’í community. Now that the doors are opening increasingly for students and travelers to go to America, the National Assembly can not be too careful and vigilant in this matter. The Master, as you know, was very strict, and the Guardian feels it his duty at this time to be equally strict and observant of the measures introduced by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Himself.

March 29, 1945

Letters from the Guardian to Individuals

(The following excerpts are published with Shoghi Effendi’s consent).

The Bahá’ís should deal with the members of all religious sects, however, with the greatest tolerance and friendliness, and try to point out to them the significance of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh to the world in this Great Day. The Guardian would advise you to teach the Mormons, like everyone else, the Faith, when you find them receptive. They have many great principles and their teachings regarding charity, not drinking or smoking, etc., are quite similar to ours and should form a point of common interest. (From letter written to Mrs. Helen Robinson on or about January 21, 1942).

The world that lies ahead of us after this war is going to be in a terrible condition, and if the believers are going to accomplish their duty and present the Divine Solution to mankind, they must prepare themselves for the great tasks that lie ahead. This particularly applies to Bahá’í youth. Young men and women in the Faith must be deep and thoughtful scholars of its teachings, so that they can teach in a way that will convince people that all the problems facing them have a remedy. They must grasp the Administration, so that they can wisely and efficiently administer the ever-growing affairs of the Cause; and they must exemplify the Bahá’í way of living. All this is not easy—but the Guardian is always greatly encouraged to see the spirit animating such young believers as yourself. He has high hopes of what your generation will accomplish. (From letter written to Seymour Weinberg, May 12, 1944).
National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

Since there could be no gathering of the delegates this year, the Tellers reported the result of the election to the National Spiritual Assembly, and the Assembly sends this general letter to the Bahá'í community to announce the election and convey news of plans adopted for the coming year.

Those elected are, with their respective offices: George O. Latimer, Chairman; Allen B. McDaniel, Vice-Chairman; Horace Holley, Secretary; Dorothy K. Baker, Recording Secretary; Philip G. Sprague, Treasurer; Amelia E. Collins, Leroy Joos, Louis G. Gregory, Roy C. Wilhelm.

Our first and foremost concern is to resume, with increased power and determination, the irrefutable forward movement of the body of the Cause in America along the road of our unique destiny. The Guardian has given us the mighty impetus needed to clear our vision and renew our heart. His latest message, dated March 29, 1945, is printed as the clarion call to action throughout the present phase of our Bahá'í evolution.

National Public Campaign

It was voted at the meeting of April 29-May 2, 1945, to adopt the following plan for a National Public Campaign as the essential inclusive Bahá'í activity for the current year:

1. The use of a budget of $40,000 for carrying out the following related projects:
   a. Public Relations Activities, $7,500.00
   b. Publicity, $7,500.00
   c. Radio Activities, $10,000.00
   d. Public Meetings and Annual Congress, $10,000.00
   e. Circuit Teaching, $5,000.00
2. These projects are to be carried out under the general supervision and coordination of the National Spiritual Assembly by the following committees:
   a. Public Relations Committee
   b. News Service Committee
   c. Radio Committee
   d. Public Meetings Committee
   e. National Teaching Committee

3. This National Campaign has for its purpose a larger, more audacious presentation of the Bahá'í teachings, both to public leaders and the masses.

4. These projects are to give expression to the various aspects of one central theme for the current year—"The Price of World Peace is World Religion,"—in order to command attention for the essential verities of the Faith as especially emphasized by the Guardian.

5. The participating committees are to report plans in sufficient detail for the August meeting to enable the National Spiritual Assembly to publish an outline of the entire campaign in order to stimulate and guide the collective efforts of the American Bahá'í community throughout the year.

Appeal to the Friends

The condition of the world is such that the general longing for truth and divine guidance intensifies day by day. It is for us now to deepen our spiritual lives until we can respond adequately to the crying needs of mankind. Opportunity calls upon each of us as individual Bahá'ís; and opportunity presses upon our collective capacity as the American Bahá'í community.

The National Spiritual Assembly would heartily stress the importance of conducting study classes for the believers in each local community and group, that we may continuously turn to the light of truth and reflect its illumination by word and deed.

—National Spiritual Assembly

Centenary Souvenir

The Temple Librarian and Sales Committee reports that there are still available about 1700 copies of the Centenary Souvenir, which consists of a reproduction of a photograph of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and a photograph of the House of Worship mounted in a folder stamped "Bahá'í Centenary, 1844-1944" and tied with cord. This Souvenir makes a beautiful gift to compliment a new believer or to convey loving remembrance to a Bahá'í confirmed during the Master's era. Order from H. E. Walrath, 4639 Beacon Street, Chicago. ($1.00, postpaid).

The first public campaign is to be inaugurated this year, a truly signal and auspicious event, that we may together and with all our facilities both local and national challenge audaciously the leaders of thought and the masses with the Message of Bahá'u'lláh which alone can bring together in a new order the scattered peoples, nations, classes and creeds.

Just as we learned how to adopt a great Plan for building the Temple, so now we need a great Plan for propagating the Faith as the one Temple of spiritual refuge for a stricken world. The details are to be worked out as soon as possible by a number of Committees, and when this preliminary work is completed a comprehensive statement will be made to all the believers.

The time has come for more impressive accomplishments. The Guardian awaits new and greater evidences of our capacity to unveil the astounding majesty and exquisite beauty of the new World Order. Our loyalty and devotion to the needs of the National Fund are to be tested by the results of this appeal for support of the Budget during these first and most precious weeks of the Bahá'í year. The plans are in preparation. We dare not defer them, for the moment of decisive action is now. Therefore we call to each community and group to rally for the beginning of an era of outstanding contribution, of continuous support by every Bahá'í, that the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh may take its rightful place of spiritual preeminence in the hearts of the people and the counsels of nations.
Convention Report
The following agenda was adopted for the special meeting of the National Spiritual Assembly to be held with the tellers in Temple Foundation Hall, Saturday afternoon, April 28, at 2 p.m.:
1. Prayers and selected readings.
2. Reading of Convention Call by the Chairman.
3. Roll call of delegates.
4. Casting of individual ballots by the Chairman as the roll is called.
5. The sealed ballots are turned over to the tellers.
6. The tellers submit a certified report of the election.

The casting of ballots took place on Saturday afternoon, April 28, 1945, at 3:00 P.M. A photograph was taken of the National Spiritual Assembly members and the tellers.

1. The session was opened by prayer read by Mrs. Collins.

2. The Chairman read two passages from "God Passes By" from the chapter "The Covenant of Bahá'u'lláh" and three paragraphs from the most recent letter from Shoghi Effendi, dated Haifa, March 29.

3. The Secretary read the Convention Call issued to the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada on January 5, 1945, through the State and Province election committees.

4. The Chairman asked the tellers, Harry E. Walrath, Joan Crawford and William Henning, to cast the ballots as the roll was called by the Secretary.

Ridván Feast
Another distinctive feature of the Annual Convention which the National Spiritual Assembly maintained this year despite the absence of the delegates was the Ridván Feast, which the Temple Program Committee was requested to arrange for Saturday evening, April 28, with invitations extended to the believers of the Temple area. The program was conducted for the Committee by the Spiritual Assembly of Chicago. Those present had the pleasure of hearing from Irving Hansen, who has returned from an assignment which enabled him to spend some time in Persia, visiting the Guardian and the Bahá'ís of Cairo on his return.

Consultation by Mail
In order to reap the fruit of consultation with the delegates, the Assembly prepared a list of subjects on which each delegate was invited to report his views and suggestions in writing. This opportunity was met in a most gratifying manner. A digest of the material has been made and is receiving careful attention from the incoming Assembly. A special report presenting details of this consultation will be presented to the community at an early date.

The Spiritual Atmosphere of Bahá'í Elections
At the very foundation of the Bahá'í community lies the right of the individual elector to exercise his franchise without restriction or interference. Neither the local or national administrative body, nor any individual believer, has the right to exert pressure to influence the voter's free choice. In a world of organized pressure, the spiritual atmosphere of every Bahá'í election is our most precious privilege and sacred right. It opens the door to the power of divine guidance, and protects the community from any influence that would make for disunity and disintegration.

"Nothing short of the all-encompassing, all-pervading power of His guidance, and love," the Guardian wrote many years ago, "can enable this newly-enfolded order to gather strength and flourish amid the storm and stress of a turbulent age, and in the fullness of time vindicate its high claim to be universally recognized as the one haven of abiding felicity and peace." And again: "Moreover, the practice of nomination, so detrimental to the atmosphere of a silent and prayerful election, is viewed with mistrust inasmuch as it gives the right . . . to deny that God-given right of every elector to vote only in favor of those who he is conscientiously convinced are the most worthy candidates."

Preceding the annual election by the delegates this year, the National Assembly received from a number of delegates a protest at the action of one delegate in issuing a personal circular letter obviously intended to dictate to the other delegates in connection with their votes. After prayerful consideration the Assembly voted to disqualify the ballott sent by that individual delegate. Such occasions can serve to deepen in all the foundations their resolution that the wise and general provisions of the administrative order represent justice and integrity, and are not to be set aside on the assumption that any personal opinion or wish can be a substitute for the teachings and regulations of the Cause.

—NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Local News Letters

The circulation of local news letters and general communications issued by local Assemblies outside their area of jurisdiction is an administrative question which the National Spiritual Assembly felt had been settled many years ago. However, the action of a few Assemblies in recent months, in sending out copies of their letter or bulletin to the entire Assembly list, has raised the question once more.

This action is based upon one of the functions assigned to local Assemblies in the Guardian's earliest communications to the American Bahá'ís: "They must make an effort to maintain official, regular, and frequent correspondence with the various Bahá'í centers throughout the world, report to them their activities, and share the glad-tidings they receive with all their fellow-workers in the Cause."

At the time this and other functions were assigned to local Assemblies, the foundation was being laid for the formation and development of the National Spiritual Assemblies. The local Assembly was naturally first in order of time, but the functions assigned to the National Spiritual Assemblies gradually brought about certain important changes in our collective activities and methods.

For example, the function of review and publication of Bahá'í literature was first vested in local Assemblies, but later became recognized as a national function. In that same letter concerning the local Assemblies the Guardian wrote: "They must supervise in these days when the Cause is still in its infancy all Bahá'í publications and translations, and provide in general for a dignified and accurate presentation of all Bahá'í literature and its distribution to the general public."

In order to prevent any possible confusion as to the relative jurisdictions and powers of local and National Spiritual Assemblies during the formative era, the Guardian established certain clear principles to be applied in any doubtful case or new situation. For example: "Vital issues, affecting the interests of the Cause in that country such as the matter of translation and publication, the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, the Teaching Work, and other similar matters that stand distinct from strictly local affairs, must be under the full jurisdiction of the National Assembly." And, further: "With it, too, rests the full decision whether a certain point at issue is strictly local in its nature, and should be reserved for the consideration and decision of the local Assembly, or whether it should fall under its own jurisdiction and be regarded as a matter which ought to receive its special attention." The need for the centralization of authority in the National Spiritual Assembly, and the concentration of power in the various local Assemblies, is made manifest," etc.

The newer friends will never realize with what conscientious care the Bahá'í community during those years studied and applied each successive direction which the Guardian dispatched. The status of the local Assembly and of the Convention, as well as their relationship to the National Assembly, was gradually clarified through successive problems and issues. By the time the Declaration of Trust and By-Laws were adopted, the nature of the various institutions could be defined. Here, and in the local By-Laws later approved, it is plainly set forth and made implicit that the local area of jurisdiction is the civil community and outside of that area the local institution does not operate. The individual Bahá'í acts through one institution for local matters and another for matters of national scope.

The question of local and national news letters, however, was not finally settled until 1934, and the record taken from Bahá'í News reveals the successive steps.

In Bahá'í News No. 75, July, 1933, page 7, we find the following: "This publication, established by the National Spiritual Assembly several years ago, affords the only responsible and authoritative medium of communication among the American Bahá'ís. Its functions include: the publication of letters from the Guardian; the publication of announcements, statements and letters prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly; the publication of National Committee reports approved by the National Spiritual Assembly; the publication of such letters and news items as are received from other National Assemblies and also from local Assemblies in America as have general interest and importance.

"National Committees and Local Spiritual Assemblies are invited to send in regularly reports and news items suitable for use in Bahá'í News. Individual believers are requested, in order to avoid confusion, to submit their news items through their local Assembly or through the National Committee directly concerned with that branch of Bahá'í activity—as for example teaching—under which each news item is classified."

The Annual Report of the N. S. A. for 1933-34, Bahá'í News No. 84, page 13, contained these references:

"In several communications Shoghi Effendi has given instructions concerning the relation of local Assemblies to the National Assembly. Writing the San Francisco Assembly on February 19, 1934, the Guardian, through his secretary, in acknowledging receipt of a copy of San Francisco Bahá'í News, declared: 'On behalf of the Guardian I wish to thank you for your welcome letter of January 23, as well as for the enclosed December and January issues of the San Francisco news letter, all of which gave him a clear account of the progress of the Cause in that center."

"He would greatly appreciate it if you send him regularly two copies of your local news letter. He would also advise you to send to each of the Bahá'í National Spiritual Assemblies a copy of that circular which will, undoubtedly, prove of great interest to them."
"However, in view of the principle that local activities should always be subordinated to the national interests, needs and requirements of the Faith, he feels that your Assembly should be careful not to develop their local organ to the extent that it would jeopardize the national activities of the Cause in their country. Just as all local institutions, whether administrative or otherwise, must under all circumstances be considered as subsidiary to national organizations, so also local news letters should be viewed as secondary in importance compared to the national organ of Bahá’í activities . . ."

"On February 20 (1934), a similar letter was sent to the New York Assembly, from which the following excerpt is quoted:

"Just as the local Bahá’í fund must under all circumstances be subordinated to the national fund, so also, every local news letter should be considered as subsidiary to the national report of Bahá’í activities in every country."

Two more references are available on pages 52 and 53 of "Bahá’í Procedure," both taken from the annual report of 1933-1934.

Finally, in Bahá’í News No. 88, November, 1934, page 6, we find this definite view expressed by the National Spiritual Assembly:

"The question has been asked whether in view of the Guardian’s words on the subject quoted in the last annual report of the National Assembly in Bahá’í News of June, local Assemblies which issue news letters should circulate them among other local Assemblies. The view of the National Assembly is that the national Bahá’í News is the medium through which local news should be conveyed to the various local communities, and therefore each local news letter should be distributed not only to its own community, but copies sent the National Assembly, the Guardian, and to other National Assemblies for their information. The Guardian’s latest instruction on this matter appears to indicate a development to a new point beyond that reached in 1923, when (see page 33 of ‘Bahá’í Administration’) Shoghi Effendi included inter-Assembly correspondence as part of the functions of the local Spiritual Assembly."

In the light of this record, the local Assemblies are requested to observe the decision made and published over ten years ago.

As we stand back and survey the matter in perspective, we note that certain decisions are published currently but not carried forward in any standard book of reference. They thus tend to be taken for granted by the older believers and overlooked by the new friends. We also note that the available definition of Bahá’í institutions is sufficiently clear to enable any believer or local Assembly to determine what functions are to be exercised by each, without recourse to any detailed catalogue of exact duties.

Finally, we realize the urgent need of developing the national institutions to the point where they can adequately serve the greatly enlarged community of the present era. This matter is receiving the full attention of the National Spiritual Assembly, and the steps taken will be reported from time to time.

The Mission of Bahá'u'lláh

A Revelation, hailed as the promise and crowning glory of past ages and centuries, as the consummation of all the Dispensations within the Adamic Cycle, inaugurating an era of at least a thousand years duration, and a cycle destined to last no less than five thousand centuries, signaling the end of the Prophetic Era and the beginning of the Era of fulfillment, unsurpassed alike in the duration of its Author's ministry and the fecundity and splendor of his mission—such a Revelation was... born amidst the darkness of a subterranean dungeon in Tihrán.

"During the days I lay in the prison of Tihrán," are His (Bahá'u'lláh's) own memorable words, "though the galling weight of the chains and the stench-filled air allowed Me but little sleep, still in those infrequent moments of slumber I felt as if something flowed from the crown of My head over My breast, even as a mighty torrent that precipitated itself upon the earth from the summit of a lofty mountain. Every limb of My body would, as a result, be set afire. At such moments My tongue recited what no man could bear to hear."

In His Epistle to Náṣírí'll-Dín Sháh these passages... shed further light on the Divine origin of His mission: "O King! I was but a man like others, asleep upon My couch, when lo, the breezes of the All-Glorious were wafted over Me, and taught Me the knowledge of all that hath been. This thing is not from Me, but from One Who is Almighty and All-Knowing. And He bade Me lift up My voice between earth and heaven, and for this there befell Me what hath caused the tears of every righteous man to flow... This is but a leaf which the winds of the will of thy Lord, the Almighty, the All-Praised have stirred."—God Passes By, pp. 100-102.

Inter-America News

"Committee gratefully reports eight new Assemblies: Panama City, Mogotes, Caracas, Trujillo, Guayaquil, La Paz, Punto Arenas, Montevideo. Devoted love."

This quotation is part of a message sent to the Guardian by the Inter-America Committee following its meeting on April 26. The Committee has also expressed its deepfelt gratitude to the pioneers in the field for their historic achievements during this past year and for their selfless devotion to their tasks.

The prayers of the Guardian and the blessings showered by Bahá'u'lláh upon the valiant efforts of native believers and of North American pioneers have brought to accomplishment the founding of Spiritual Assemblies for the first time in five Latin American countries, the Republics of Panama, Venezuela, Ecuador, Bolivia, and the Dominican Republic, and the reestablishment of an Assembly that had been dissolved in Uruguay. The Assemblies of Bogota and Santiago have been richly blessed in being enabled to establish, through extension teaching, new Spiritual Assemblies in Mogotes, Colombia, and in Punto Arenas, Chile.

The only remaining country of Latin America in which a Spiritual Assembly has not been formed is Nicaragua. However, the pioneer in this country, Dr. Malcolm King, has performed a signal service, fundamental to present and future Bahá'í teaching in that land. Through judicious correspondence and interviews with government officials he has succeeded in obtaining registration of the Faith with the government and its official recognition as a religious body. This was an essential step to freedom of teaching and publicity. The Committee has expressed to Dr. King its sincere appreciation for this accomplishment.

Briefs from Letters of Pioneers

ECUADOR: From Virginia Orbinson, April 21:

"... It would be too hard to describe the wonderfully deep understanding, devotion and dedication which those seven young men and the two women expressed as they each said a few words after the formation of the first Spiritual Assembly of Ecuador established in Guayaquil. The election of officers followed, and there never was expressed I am sure such firmness and love."

In describing the growth to Assembly status the letter continues, "Eduardo Gonzales (Ecuadorian delegate to the Centenary) is the one who has brought them all, and he helps me in the meetings by reading passages and contributing his great enthusiasm.

"We mentioned John Stearns and his work in Ecuador and Peru most lovingly. The goal of his work and sacrifice is now flowering, and he surely must have been with us and very happy."

The two pioneers were present at this election, Virginia and Haig Kavorkian of Argentina, in addition to the nine resident believers.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC: From Ofelia Montalvo, a pioneer from El Salvador to Trujillo, April 22:

"With the following program was celebrated the 21st of this month; 1. Prayer, 2. Why we must celebrate the 21st of April, 3. Our Master, Ba-Baha'i Social Gathering, Parque Hotel, Asuncion, Paraguay, April 14, 1944. At right is Miss Gertrude Eisenberg, pioneer teacher; and at left, Sr. Centurion Miranda, delegate who attended the Conference with the N.S.A. in July, 1944.

The friends will recall the repeated reference of Abdu'l-Bahá to the great significance of this locality in the Tablets of the Divine Plan. May this new Spiritual Assembly receive wonderful confirmations.

BOLIVIA: From Flora Hottes, April 28:

“Our first feast, yesterday, since the formation of the Assembly, was such a happy one with such harmony . . . And we have real love and an increasing patience and tolerance in our midst, and we are learning to work together in frank consultation. This could not have come here in one year. It took three—and it will take more. I know so well why our beloved Guardian said in his letter: 'Stay until a Firm and Unshakable Assembly with its Community is established in Bolivia.'

No doubt that the following excerpt is typical of the experience of Baha'i pioneers:

“. . . One finely comes to know, not as a prettier than, but from the plowed depths of one's soul, that it is a Divine Hand that guides one—siempre—and we should never for one moment be blind to its beckoning, nor insensible to its constraining touch. Life is so terribly beautiful and wonderful, there is such tremendous Work to be done, especially now, when 'the moving Finger writes' so clearly on the Tablets of the world; we all want to be real Bahá'ís, to serve Him well Who is the One Beloved, to live the life that can show those about us what human unity and love may grow to be. But we must ourselves grow first, through processes sometimes painful, sometimes very slow, but always ahead; and such joy when one becomes cognizant of some new strength, some element of faith reinforced and clarified beyond retrogression. Maybe these seem like too many words (one of the failings of the gents down here!) but you must know the love we feel for you and the always-stronger tie of Baha'i loyalty which at last will knit a world together.

The Flora of the prairies near the Temple blooms in the mountains of South America!

CHILE: On April 17 a message was received from Artemus Lamb announcing eight new believers in Punta Arenas (three had been reported formerly) and assurance of an Assembly. This historic achievement completing the wing-span of the All-America Baha'i community from Magallanes to Alaska was consummated this year by the aid of a series of nine radio broadcasts under the title, "The City of Certitude." This series was publicized as being under the auspices of the Santiago Assembly. The scripts for these Baha'i broadcasts were prepared in question and answer form and were presented by Esteban Canales, Chilian delegate to the Centenary. In this way numerous students were attracted to the classes.

Artemus Lamb writes, "On Naw Rüz we held an International Fiesta at the auditorium of the Radio Station. There was a series of musical numbers from members of the many different national groups present, readings from the Baha'i Writings, and a brief but effective talk by Esteban Canales. The studio audience numbered eighty, including the U. S. Consul and his wife who have become much interested in the Cause. The whole program was broadcast.
It aroused much favorable comment and brought us new students."

A recent letter from Marcia Stewart announces the opening of a new Bahá’í center in Santiago after April 21. 1000 invitations were to be mailed out for this occasion. Extension teaching is being continued in Valparaíso, where it is hoped that in another year a third Chilian Spiritual Assembly will be established.

URUGUAY: From Montevideo comes heartening news of the re-establishment of the Spiritual Assembly, and of most gratifying progress in the teaching work there. They have taken a new Center, where regular meetings are held. Elisabeth Cheney is still in Montevideo, rendering valuable assistance to Wilfrid Barton and the other friends.

COLOMBIA: As a result of a most unusual extension teaching project carried on entirely by mail, the believers of Bogata have been successful in establishing a new Spiritual Assembly at Mogotes. Also, among the members of a leper colony at Contratacion a group of six believers has been formed. A letter from Sra. Magola Maldonado, Secretary at Bogata, in speaking of the members of this newly formed group says, "They seem to be very close to God, and who may say if God may not, for their sakes, reveal a cure for leprosy!"

Library Committee

The Library Committee wishes to express deep appreciation of the assistance given recently by the Assembly Library Committees and the Regional Teaching Committees in getting our library records up-to-date.

We should like to pass along the following suggestions at this time. Assembly Library Committees:

A number of Library committees reported that Bahá’í books were not up-to-date in Main Public Libraries. In several cases, there were no books by the Guardian, no recent Bahá’í World Volumes and little literature in the current Bahá’í Publishing Committee catalog. We fully realize the difficulty of trying to do

Library in your city have separate libraries for "colored" and "white" readers? We should like to donate books to both as new books are available for libraries.

This is the national library task before us. The following list shows our present record of "barren" libraries in the various areas in

It is the center of information to which public personages will turn for research on the Bahá’í Faith to give in sermons, lectures, radio programs, newspaper and magazine articles as soon as public interest is aroused through the growth of the Cause. The time to insure an accurate presentation of the Bahá’í principles and teachings is now when we can lay the foundation by placing our books in key libraries. Do not doubt that there will be a great demand for our books when the time is ripe.

Keep our books in active circulation through appeals to the friends and announcements at public and fireside meetings, on radio programs, in local News Letters and Regional Bulletins and in newspaper articles. The list of books in your Main Public Library might be posted on your Bahá’í Center Bulletin Board for ready reference.

Let us not overlook the importance of presenting at least one comprehensive book in each branch library or perhaps a subscription to World Order magazine. This book may attract readers in various neighborhoods to study further in the Main Public Library or to attend our public meetings as announced in local newspapers.

Reports coming in from your committees show that there is a concerted effort to get Bahá’í books in your "barren" libraries. Several splendid ideas have come to our committee: publishing the list of "barren" libraries in Regional Bulletins with an appeal to the friends to contact those librarians; sending out postcards or form letters to the public libraries and college libraries in your region offering a book or two to librarians; small literature as the literature catalog, Principles of the Bahá’í Faith, Summary of Bahá’í Teachings etc. has been sent to each library; lists of friends in cities where there are "barren" libraries have been sent directly to the National Library Committee so we can enlist their assistance in this national library project.

Correction of address: Miss Helen Reynolds, 3334 Greene Street, Philadelphi­a, 44, Penna. Miss Reynolds is taking charge of the requests coming for "barren" public libraries on your regional list.

Will the friends in the South send us the following information: does your city have separate libraries for "colored" and "white" readers? We should like to donate books to both as new books are available for libraries.

This is the national library task before us. The following list shows our present record of "barren" libraries in the various areas in cities (10,000 population or more) and all colleges and universities:

News Service

Space will not allow the mention of every one of the veritable deluge of clippings that has descended upon us during the past weeks. The friends have surely been most diligent in their Bahá’í publicity efforts and we congratulate them on their success.
The News Service Committee would appreciate receiving two clippings of every Baha'i mention in newspapers and magazines to serve both as a record and to be used in the planning of its operations.

Alta Gaines' "The Baha'i Column" which has been appearing in the Illinois Times of Champaign, Illinois, a Negro newspaper, has interested us very much for its completeness and clarity, and as well, in its continuity. The Arizona Sun of Phoenix, a Negro weekly, has carried many reports of Phoenix and Tucson Baha'i activities. Elsa H. Steinmetz has been making the "Letters to the Editor" department of the Argus-Leader of Sioux Falls, So. Dakota, a novel and powerful form of publicity is that of Mary A. Marlowe in the Portsmouth, N.H. Herald. At the passing of President Roosevelt this paper carried a column of statements on the various tributes that were paid by local churches and organizations. The Portsmouth Baha'i Community's well written statement incorporating Baha'i principles received one-third of the column article! At the opening of the San Francisco Security Conference the Portsmouth Community followed with an article on 'Abdu'l-Baha's statements on peace made to the World-Herald of Omaha, Nebraska.

Annual Report
International School
Latin-American Session, 1944
Members: Louie A. Mathews, Chairman; Marion Littie, Secretary; Amelia Collins, George Latimer, Mark Toby, Max and Inez Greven and Wanden LaFarge.

General Subjects
The program of the School for the Session of 1944 was divided into two main groups, morning and afternoon study sessions.

MORNING SESSION
Methods of Teaching in Latin-America
In what sequence to teach Latin-Americans. Give our personal experiences along the path of religion. The Baha'i Message in regard to individuals; in regard to groups.

The Message in relation to educators, to Civic leaders. This program was followed by open discussion of the ways and means of bringing a live consciousness to the community where we are teaching.

AFTERNOON SESSION
Race and Man
Public Meetings
These public meetings were held in Perkins Hall of the Colorado College. Musical programs were arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Colins Thorpe, distinguished musical friends of Colorado and New York.

Our Latin-American pioneers gave a brilliant evening devoted to a sketch of their country and the Baha'i work done therein. The speakers were: Gayle Woolson, from Costa Rica; Cora Oliver and Louise Caswell, from Panama; Winnifred Baker, from Columbia; Raul Contreras, delegate from Costa Rica.

A very impressive Baha'i evening was furnished by Mrs. Amelia Collins and Mrs. Marjorie McCormick, speaking on "God Passes By."

"Headlines for Tomorrow" was given by Mrs. W. M. LaFarge, Mrs. Robert Sherrill, and Mrs. Marion Little.

A concluding evening was entitled "The Spiritual Force in Art," given Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Charleston, West Virginia, 1944-1945.

News of Other Lands

Haifa

It is with great joy and satisfaction that we convey to you the happy tidings that our Beloved Guardian is in the best of health. The greatest desire and the utmost happiness of the devout and faithful believers throughout the world will forever be the news of the well-being of the Guardian.

Today, the first and foremost duty of every believer and every Bahá’í community is to spread the word of God. This is the day of sowing the seed. “The sower soweth the word.” And the “Word” is badly needed by a world in physical distress and in spiritual agony. A blackout more intense and more blinding than any other form of darkness has enveloped the soul of man, the canker of a moral disease more mortal than any kind of bodily ailment is gnawing at his heart. How can the bearer of light sit still while his neighbor is in darkness, how can the physician refuse to administer to the needs of the sick? Would it not be utter selfishness, to say the least, to keep entirely for one’s self the good that could be done to others? What would it be said of a messenger of happy tidings who kept the message for himself?

“Teach ye the Cause of God, O people of Bahá,” wrote Bahá’u’lláh, “for God hath prescribed unto every one the duty of proclaiming His Message, and regardeth it as the most meritorious of all deeds.”

Iráq

It is for the pursuit of this “most meritorious of all deeds” that the Bahá’í Assemblies in the East are now actively organizing themselves, hoping to accomplish greater victories than in the past. The Bahá’í Newsletter (July-Sept. 1944) of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Iráq conveys encouraging news of Bahá’í activities in that land. The Teaching Committees are aware of the magnitude of their tasks and are endeavoring to live up to their responsibilities. Some fruitful results have been achieved and a number of new believers have joined the Bahá’í community.

The project of a public Bahá’í Bookstore in Baghdad, reported in a previous Newsletter, has been well received by the believers throughout Iráq. It is hoped that this project will soon be executed.

We also learn with great pleasure that the believers held their fifth Summer School for the study of the history and teachings of the Bahá’í Faith, between the 10th and 18th of September, 1944. The following subjects were presented and studied during the various sessions of the school:

The New World Order, by Adib R. Baghdád.

The National Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Iráq reports also the good news that the authorities have granted permission to the said Assembly to obtain the building materials necessary for the completion of certain details in the Hazíratul-Quds or the Bahá’í House in Baghdad. The believers, greatly encouraged by this news, have contributed generously funds needed for the accomplishment of this task.

The Bahá’í Women’s Study Classes continue regularly. In this way, Bahá’í women not only get more enlightened about the Bahá’í Faith, but also prepare themselves to take part actively in Bahá’í fields of service.

Egypt

We are also happy to report that the believers in Egypt are engaged in the service of the Cause with great love and devotion. Spiritual Assemblies are functioning regularly in the four principal centers of Cairo, Alexandria, Port-Said and Ismá’ílíyyih and are actively engaged in upholding the Bahá’í Faith and its Teachings. There are also individual Bahá’ís in sixteen other Egyptian towns and villages. A number of Bahá’í organizations and committees have, during this past year, labored with love and zeal in fulfilling their duties and responsibilities.

The Bahá’í Assemblies are paying special attention to the establishment of a small Bahá’í library in every Bahá’í center. The library of the Bahá’ís at Cairo is well stocked with Bahá’í publications. Two more Bahá’í libraries, still in their infancy, have been organized at Port-Said and in Alexandria.

We learn from the said report of the great efforts made by the believers and the generous funds gracefully donated by the Guardian for the completion of the Hazíratul-Quds or the Bahá’í House in Cairo. The blessing of Bahá’u’l-Ááh was on this project, for many obstacles for the completion of the building disappeared in remarkable ways.

In spite of the many difficulties experienced by the believers in Egypt because of their Faith, they rejoice and give thanks unto Bahá’u’l-Ááh Whose guiding hand has ever been their supporter and protector. They are very happy that their National Assembly has been legally recognized by the government since 1936 and that their Faith stands recognized as an independent religion with its own laws and institutions, thanks to the momentous decision passed in 1925 by the highest Muslim ecclesiastical body in Egypt.

2. To National Spiritual Assembly

Fully share National Assembly’s admiration and gratitude for National Teaching Committee’s remarkable exploits in recent years. I appeal to the new Committee to focus its attention upon the steady conversion of a considerable proportion of the existing groups into Assemblies through multiplication of settlers, intensification of individual teaching, and proclamation of Message to the masses. I urge the Regional Teaching Committees to redouble their efforts to lend continued assistance to the attainment of these immediate objectives. I rejoice in the success of the high endeavors of the Peace Committee in San Francisco, and the departure of pioneers to Latin America. I renew my plea for ever-increasing number of pioneers for both the Northern and Southern fields to unite and lend further, much-needed impetus to the superb, historic enterprises initiated by the American Bahá’í community in the Western Hemisphere during the closing years of the First Century, and hasten the inauguration of a still more shining phase of their World Mission in the opening years of the Second Century.

National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

From 1937 to 1944 the American Bahá’í community concentrated its effort on the achievement of definite tasks within a definite allotment of time. Now that there is no similar schedule before us let us not imagine that the demands of true faith are lessened or that the community can fulfill its great destiny with the slightest relaxation of determination, concentration and sacrifice. The world about us plunges forward at accelerated pace, impelled by the action of divine forces to attain goals already known to every Bahá’í. The momentum of events, the release of a larger measure of power within our community—all this supplies us with a schedule which requires not merely a continuance but an intensification of the best we have ever done for the Faith.

The Guardian’s Plea

“I renew my plea,” the Guardian declares to us in a message received June 30: “I renew my plea for an ever-increasing number of pioneers for both the Northern and Southern fields to unite and lend further, much-needed impetus to the superb, historic enterprises initiated by the American Bahá’í community in the Western Hemisphere during the closing years of the First Century, and hasten the inauguration of a still more shining phase of their World Mission in the opening years of the Second Century.”

This plea is aimed directly at individual Bahá’ís, calling for more and more pioneers and settlers to arise and, under the supervision of the National Teaching Committee or Inter-America Committee, proceed for work in the field of heroic service. But it is directed also to the community collectively, that from our united consultation and action a new and mighty wave of Bahá’í influence shall gather force for achievements more remarkable even than those of the Seven Year Plan. Every local community and group needs to augment its numbers and deepen its spirit. The American Bahá’ís combined need to act through their National Committees in impressing the Bahá’í teachings upon the general public and its responsible agencies. Plans for pioneer settlement and public teaching both depend for their realization upon the sustenance which can be furnished from the National Bahá’í Fund. The condition of that Fund mirrors forth the depths of our collective devotion at all times. Contributions are not a tax exacted by material authority but a sacrifice made by the individual for the Cause of God. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá established this institution; the Guardian has consecrated it by his own donations to the great enterprises we have undertaken.

Treasury Items

In this light let us consider these items from the Treasurer’s report for June:

1. The donations received for May and June together amounted to SCHEDULE

State Conventions
Annual Convention
Meetings of the NSA: September 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10; November 15, 16, 17, 18, 19; February (1946) 15, 16, 17, 18, 19; April 24, 25; April 30, May 1.
Annual Convention, April 26, 27, 28, 29, (election of National Spiritual Assembly on morning of April 28).

Annual Directory

The annual Bahá'í Directory is on the press and will be distributed with a copy of Bahá'í News. The Directory includes the National Spiritual Assembly, the roll of local Assemblies, the National Committees, Regional Teaching Committees, and the Trustee Maintenance Committees, corrected to July 1, 1945.

Committee and Fiscal Year

In this connection the friends are informed that the administrative calendar, which has fixed the yearly term of the National Spiritual Assembly from Convention to Convention (from about May 1 to April 30, the National Committee term from July 1 to June 30, and the fiscal period covered by the Treasurer's annual report from March 1 to February 28, has been synchronized, so that hereafter these two terms shall run concurrently, from May 1 to April 30, allowing the annual election to vary by a few days according to conditions, as in the past, but making for one rather than three administrative years.

National Campaign

The national teaching campaign soon to begin is a challenge to every Spiritual Assembly to adopt its own program of unified effort for the year. The nations have pledged themselves to take the first step in the direction of peace. Many and severe are the problems to be surmounted on the path. But each successive crisis will be the opportunity of the Bahá'í community to connect the revealed Truth with the human and social need. The only effective means of action we have is through use of the various Bahá'í institutions, local, regional and national in scope. Our unity of spirit has developed to this crucial time, for this specific purpose.

National Spiritual Assembly

Consultation with Delegates

Thirty-Seventh Annual Bahá'í Convention—1945

The National Spiritual Assembly, in publishing a summary of suggestions received from the delegates as their written response for consultation, thanks the delegates heartily for their important contributions. The list which follows is necessarily brief, but suggests the scope of the subjects treated in greater detail in the mass of letters received. These and other suggestions, some of which would require decision by the Guardian, have been carefully studied, and the current national campaign is one answer to the widespread, heartfelt demand for more potent action. To each individual believer and each local Assembly is commended earnest consideration of those items which deal with the spiritual life and the community.

I. Deepening the spiritual life of Assemblies.
   a. Weekly study night for entire community, each believer serving as teacher in discussion of book.
   b. Practice by each believer of prayer, fasting, love and service. Living the life.
   c. Instruction and assistance from the National Spiritual Assembly and National Committees on use of national and local resources.
   d. Intensive study and better understanding of Bahá’í Administration.
   e. Sunday meetings for public presentation of Faith.
   f. Individual effort to attain spirit of love and humility through prayer and reading of teachings.
   g. Full and frank discussion of all local problems in Assembly meetings.

II. Strengthening the bonds of love and unity within the Bahá’í Community.
   a. Emphasis on Feasts and activities of local Feast committee.
   b. Assignment of Bahá’í activity to every believer.
   c. Greater reading of creative word by each believer at meeting.
   d. Greater effort to prepare new members for Bahá’í activity in community.
   e. Practice of courtesy, consideration, respect and esteem in community relations.
   f. Follow-up absent members, encourage personal service and sacrifice.
   g. More attention to committee appointments and activities.
   h. Teaching campaign on “How to be a Bahá’í.”
   i. Encourage regular contributions to local and National Funds.
   j. Regular visits of national teachers.

III. Preservation of Existing Assemblies.
   a. Careful selection of committees.
   b. National teaching campaign geared into local teaching programs.
   c. Study classes for all believers to deepen Cause and to prepare for teaching.
   d. Continuous effort to bring new members into community.

IV. Formation of Assemblies in Remaining Latin American Republics.
   a. Encourage Latin American Bahá’ís to pioneer in virgin areas.
   b. Speed more teachers to Latin America.
   c. Training of Latin American believers, groups and organized communities in Bahá’í Administration.
   d. Stress fireside groups, value of prayer, need of study of teachings, observance of Feasts and living the life.
   e. Strengthening of existing Bahá’í centers.
   f. Development of school and establishment of fund for training of teachers for Latin American service in South America.

V. Development of Groups throughout North America to Assembly status.
   a. Organized communities reach out to assist and strengthen nearby groups.
   b. Emphasize individual study and devotion. Living the life.
   c. Greater attention to fireside groups, social gatherings and contacts with outside groups.
   d. More intensive teaching by group members.
   e. Increase unity and devotion within group by prayer, love, sacrifice and service.
   f. Outside teachers, teaching conferences, visits from members of local and National Assemblies and committees.
   g. Strict observance of Feasts and frequent periods of consultation.
   h. Holding of a series of attractive public lectures to attract and confirm new people.
   i. Small teaching circuits in areas or regions.

VI. Renewed call to pioneers for North and South America.
   a. Each Assembly conduct study group to prepare one or more members to go forth each year on pioneer service.
   b. Tour of representative of the National Spiritual Assembly or the National Teaching Commit-
The Bahá’í Year

Voted to adopt the principle that the fiscal and committee years should coincide as closely as possible with the administrative year representing the term of office of each National Spiritual Assembly. In practice this means that while the election might be held on April 26, 27, 28, 29 or 30, the fiscal year and committee year will be from May 1 to April 30.

b. Develop circuit plan of teaching with nationally directed publicity, advertising, displays, radio programs, etc.

c. Greater appeals for funds for teaching campaign.

d. More emphasis on individual teaching.

e. A centrally directed national teaching campaign.

g. A corps of traveling teachers to visit the weaker Assemblies especially.

h. More dissemination of news through Bahá’í News of teaching work.

Baha’i Relations With Civil Authority

In view of recent inquiries on the subject, the National Spiritual Assembly feels it most desirable at this time for members of the American Bahá’í community to maintain a common understanding of the principles which underlie our relations with different departments of the civil government. In dealing with this matter, the Assembly has no intention of adding to procedure or laying down its own regulations but rather of examining the teachings themselves and bringing forth the principles expressed in the writings of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and the advice and directions of the Guardian.

We find that from the very beginnings of the American Bahá’í community the wise and loving Master counseled the believers to entertain no discussion of political matters in their gatherings. “During the conference no hint must be entertained regarding political affairs. All conferences (i.e., all consultation and discussion) must be regarding the matters of benefit, both as a whole and individually, such as the guarding of all in all cases, their protection and preservation, the improvement of character, the training of children, etc.

“If any person wishes to speak of government affairs, or to interfere with the order of government, the others must not combine with him because the Cause of God is withdrawn entirely from political affairs; the political realm pertains only to the Rulers of those matters; it has nothing to do with the souls who are exerting their utmost energy to harmonizing affairs, helping character and inciting (the people) to strive for perfections. Therefore no soul is allowed to interfere with (political) matters, but only in that which is commanded.” (BWF, p. 407)

“Let them not introduce any topic in the meeting except the mentioning of the True One, neither must they confuse that merciful assembly with perplexed outside questions . . . Make ye an effort that the Lord’s Supper may become realized and the heavenly food descend. This heavenly food is knowledge, understanding, faith, assurance, love, affinity, kindliness, purity of purpose, attraction of hearts and the union of souls.” (BWF, pp. 407-408)

The penetrating power of these words continues through the years. They guide and inspire Bahá’í gatherings today as they did when revealed thirty-five or forty years ago. What the Master tells us is a twofold truth: first, the positive definition of the purpose of Bahá’í meetings and consultation which confines it to spiritual matters; and second, the inherent limitation imposed in the accomplishments of the political realm. The aim of the Faith is to produce the reality of virtue and quality in souls and evolve institutions capable of dealing with social matters justly, in the light of the revealed truths. This is entirely distinctive from the province filled by civil institutions.

Many years later, in 1932, Shoghi Effendi gave us the message now entitled “The Golden Age of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh,” at a time when our ranks were being swelled with new believers who had not been trained by the Master’s Tablets, when the local and National Assemblies were developing power, and the conditions of the Bahá’í community had become less simple and primitive, less hidden from the prevailing influences of civilization. In that message he reminded us of an instruction deemed very important.

"And this principle is no other than that which involves the non-participation by the adherents of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, whether in their individual capacities or collectively as local or national Assemblies, in any form of activity that might be interpreted, either directly or indirectly, as an interference in the political affairs of any particular government. Whether it be in the publications which they initiate and supervise; or in their official and public deliberations; or in the posts they occupy and the services they render; or in the communications they address to their fellow-disciples or in their dealings with men of eminence and authority; or in their affiliations with kindred societies and organizations, it is, I am firmly convinced, their first and sacred obligation to abstain from any word or deed that might be construed as a violation of this sacred principle. Theirs is the duty to demonstrate, on one hand, their unqualified loyalty and obedience to whatever is the considered judgment of their respective governments.

"Let them refrain from associating themselves, whether by word or by deed, with the political pursuits of their respective nations, with the policies of their governments and the schemes and programs of parties and factions . . . Let them affirm their unyielding determination to stand, firmly and unreservedly, for the way of Bahá'u'lláh, to avoid the entanglements and bickerings inseparable from the pursuits of the politician, and to become worthy agencies of that Divine Polity which incarnates God's immutable Purpose for all mankind . . .

"Let them beware lest, in their eagerness to further the aims of their beloved Cause, they should be led unwittingly to bargain with their Faith, to compromise with their essential principles, or to sacrifice, in return for any material advantage which their institutions may derive, the integrity of their spiritual ideals." (WOB, pp. 54, 65)

The application of this principle has produced a series of explanations by the Guardian and the National Spiritual Assembly, as recorded in "Bahá'i Procedure:" on the subject of the voting right in civil elections; on the status of believers in relation to military duty, etc. The National Assembly has also felt it advisable to retain the function of contact with the civil government.

Now we have another application of the same principle to consider with respect to the right, propriety or usefulness of exerting Bahá'í influence for the enactment of certain legislative measures which more or less reflect the aim of some Bahá'í principle or teaching. Should the Bahá'í community, local or national, lend the name of the Cause to support legislation, for example, which seeks to abolish race and religious discrimination in matters of industrial employment, or intervene when measures concerning military training of youth are before a legislature?

The National Spiritual Assembly feels that, as a general policy subject to the Guardian's specific direction in special cases, Bahá'ís and their administrative institutions should not feel obliged to adopt a "Bahá'í" attitude or course of action on matters of civil legislation. Our teachings and basic principles speak for themselves. These can always declare and set forth with all possible energy whenever occasions arise. But a truth which is severed from its sustaining spiritual Source, lifted out of its organic relationship to the Bahá'í community, broken off from the other truths, and made subject to the storm and stress of secular controversy, is no longer a truth with which we can usefully have concern. It has become an enactment to be carried out by institutions and groups committed to other enactments, other aims and purposes and methods not in conformity with the "Divine Polity" entrusted to those alone who give full loyalty to Bahá'u'lláh. Far better for us to strive to mirror forth radiantly the individual and community virtues of a new era than to hope others than believers will achieve the holy mission of the Faith. We Bahá'ís have is reality accepted a world order and not merely a new catalogue of truths or commands. On the other hand, obedience to civil government, is an obligation laid by Bahá'u'lláh upon every Bahá'í.

"Dear beloved friends!" the Guardian called out to us as long ago as 1931, "Humanity, whether viewed in the light of man's individual conduct or in the existing relationships between organized communities and nations, has, alas, strayed too far and suffered too great a decline to be redeemed through the unaided effort of the best among its recognized rulers and statesmen — however disinterested their motives, however concerned their action, however unspiring in their zeal and devotion to its cause. No scheme which the calculations of the highest statesmanship may yet devise; no doctrine which the most distinguished exponents of economic theory may hope to advance; no principle which the most ardent of moralists may strive to inculcate, can provide, in the last resort, adequate foundations upon which the future of a distracted world can be built.” (WOB, pp. 33-34)

Because our hope is firmly founded, our trust complete, our vision clarified, we Bahá’ís can tread the path of assurance through all the troubles of these days, knowing that the goal is secure.

Notice Concerning Teachers
The National Spiritual Assembly, on suggestion and request made by a local Assembly, would like each National Committee, and each Regional Teaching Committee, which has occasion to send teachers to the Southern States, to advise the local Assembly or Committee making arrangements for the activities of such teachers in that area, of the racial status of the teacher in each case, so that suitable plans can be made.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Farewell Words
To the American Friends
I am going away, but you must arise to serve the Word of God. Your hearts must be pure and your intentions sincere.

This is the day when pure hearts have a portion of the everlasting bounties and sanctified souls are being illumined by the eternal manifestations. Praise be to God! You are believers in God, assured by the words of God and turning to the kingdom of God. You have heard the divine call. Your hearts are moved by the breezes of the paradise of Abhá. You have good intentions, your purpose is the good pleasure of God, you desire to serve in the kingdom of the merciful One. Therefore arise in the utmost power. Be in perfect unity. Never become angry with one another. Let your eyes be directed toward the kingdom of truth and not toward the world of creation. Love the creatures for the sake of God and not for themselves. You will never become angry or impatient if you love them for the sake of God. Humanity is not perfect. There are imperfections in every human being, and you will always become unhappy if you look toward the people themselves. But if you look toward God you will love them and be kind to them, for the world of God is the world of perfection and complete mercy. Therefore do not look at the shortcomings of anybody; see with the sight of forgiveness. The imperfect eye beholds imperfections. The eye that covers faults looks towards the Creator of souls. He created them, trains and provides for them, endows them with capacity and life, sight and hearing; therefore they are the signs of His grandeur. You must love and be kind to everybody, care for the poor, protect the weak, heal the sick, teach and educate the ignorant.

Temple Guides
As a means of attracting visitors and thereby making known to the public the Bahá’í Faith, the Bahá’í House of Worship not only sustains its record of previous years but shows a steady growth in the number of people being guided through. This, despite the fact that the transportation difficulties have increased during the war period. We feel that some credit in this direction is due to the efforts of the Temple Program Committee who have made various attempts in securing greater attendance, by means of “L” placards, letters to Bahá’í Assemblies, and also because of other forms of publicity in bringing to public attention special programs given from time to time.

The record of visitor-attendance is its own evidence of the keen public interest in the Temple and in the Bahá’í Faith:

During the first five months of 1945 there were 3356 more visitors guided through the Temple than during the same five months of last year. Those who came represented a cross-section of many classes, nationalities, races and religions. The total for these months in 1945 was 5095.

Especially during Sundays in March, April and May have there been a considerable number of visitors, running as high as 393 in a single Sunday. The record shows:

Month Sundays: 1st 2nd 3rd 4th 5th
March 294 118 243 97
April 389 386 189 250 393
May 395 250 241 230

The foregoing came from many countries, as indicated:

In March there were 897 visitors from 25 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, the Canadian provinces of Ontario and Saskatchewan; Panama, Mexico and Brazil. Ontario, Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Yuko­славia, Holland, Le­banon, Argentina and Brazil.

In April there were 1680 visitors from 33 states, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Manitoba and Quebec; Mexico and Honduras.

In May there were 1821 visitors from 41 states, the District of Columbia, the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia and Saskatchewan; England, Hawaii, Yugoslavia, Holland, Lebanon, Argentina and Brazil.

Among the visitors were many groups represented by various organizations, including:

Where From  Group Represented

CHICAGO—Austin Y.M.C.A., Youth Group, Irving Park Congregational Church.

Lawndale M. E. Church, Ishiking Club, Irving Park M. E.
Church.

Edgewater Lutheran Church, Englewood Hikers Club.

Evanston—National College of Education; Junior Guild of 1st M.E. Church; American Association of University Women.

Kenilworth, ILL.—Girl Scouts.

Valparaiso, IND.—High School Senior Class.

Winnetka, ILL.—Sunday School Class, Congregational Church (Eighth grade).

La Grange, ILL.—Sunday School Class of Evangelical Church.

In view of the foregoing record, it will be seen that the people guided through the Temple form a nucleus for carrying the Bahá’í message to the farthest corners of the world. Seeds are thus being sown in people from every walk of life, including influential members of governments, schools, colleges, clubs and professions. It thus becomes increasingly important to raise and sustain the standard of the quality of guides serving in the Temple, thus challenging those who know most about the Teachings to put forth efforts in behalf of guide work.

College Speakers Bureau
March 1—June 30, 1945

We have completed two projects involving literature distribution: the mailing out of reprints of “Ways to Wholeness” to an additional list of students, and distribution of gift copies of The Bahá’í Centenary to educators who have shown special friendliness to the work of the Bureau.

Additional responses to our general letter to Assemblies have been received and indicate general willingness to cooperate in the development of this type of teaching work. The record of college teaching completing the work of the committee year, includes: Mrs. Margaret Randall Ford: Morris Brown College (chapel), Davy T. Howard, Jr. High School (2 social studies classes), Atlanta School of Social Work (class of post graduate students), Moorehouse College (student group)—all in Atlanta, Ga.; Miles College, Birmingham (class), Lanier High School, Jackson, Miss., (chapel, 4 classes); Rowland Estall: University of Manitoba (student group); Emeric Sala; University of Manitoba (student group); Mrs. Terah Smith: Georgia State College (chapel, 4 classes); Rex King: Olivet College (small faculty group); John Roberts: Olivet College (college student forum); Stanwood, Cobb; West Virginia State College (chapel), Mrs. George R. True, Henderson Business College, Memphis (assembly), Booker T. Washington High School, Memphis (assembly). Vanderbilt University, Nashville (class). The number of students reported hearing of the Faith through these talks totals 4,465.

The members of the College Bureau Committee are deeply grateful for the assistance of Assemblies and individuals in working out these college engagements.

The Baha’i World, Vol. X

The committee for Volume X of the Baha’i World urgently appeals to the believers throughout the world to become “Baha’i World book conscious.” By this is intended the biennial publication which is known as the Guardian's book and which is compiled and edited under his direction and on which he depends for presentation to distinguished individuals and publications which he desires to acquaint with the importance of the growing worldwide activities of the Faith.

The Bahá’í World is the only authentic reference book and is designed to be placed in public libraries and files of important newspapers, in college reference libraries and wherever inquirers might be inclined to seek information on the Bahá’í Faith. However important our other publications may be none carries in such complete form the actual historical records intended for general information and no honor is greater than that which accrues to the contributors of these biennial publications.

Because this is so, and because sometimes valuable material which is highly suitable and should find its way to this committee flows into other channels and reaches us too late if at all, we are now appealing to all who collect valuable data to make a special point of addressing their contributions to the Bahá’í World committee either direct to our offices or through the national office in Wilmette. By the Guardian's instructions we require two copies of all material and we urge that everything be sent in by September first. Please bear us in mind and lend us your valued assistance.

American Memorial To
'Abdu’l-Bahá

On Saturday, June 30th 1945, at Evergreen Cabin, West Englewood, New Jersey, was held the Thirty-Third Annual Gathering, commemorating the 'Unity Feast' given by 'Abdu’l-Bahá in 1912, when He came to America to promulgate Universal Peace, and visited West Englewood where He Himself, served the many guests, at the first Unity Feast.

Plants and bright flowers bedecked the grounds around the Cabin, and the fountains which had not been used for the past several years, were, that day, playing merrily during the meeting. The day was warm, so the friends came as early as noon time, to enjoy the country air and have their picnic lunch outdoors under the shade trees. Believers and friends from seven states attended and many of our Persian brothers and sisters were present. Approximately two hundred and fifty guests were served.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, the program prepared by the committee, began outdoors, in a sort of amphitheatre arrangement, with amplifiers to carry the sound. The chairman, Mr. Curtis Kelsey opened the program with prayer and greetings. Mr. Walter Olitzki, Baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Association sang four songs accompanied by Mrs. Harriet Kelsey. The address given by 'Abdu’l-Bahá at the original Feast, was read by Mrs. Maude Gaudreau. Talks on 'Promulgation of Universal Peace'—the theme of this gathering—were given by the following believers:

- 'Abdu’l-Bahá, the Herald of Peace—Charles S. Krug
- Youth Prepares for Peace—Rustam Payman
- Bases for a Durable Peace—Elsie Austin

At the very spot where the Beloved Master’s holy footsteps fell as He chanted prayers and gave His message to the throng in 1912, was held a service at 5 p.m.—in the Pine Grove. Vafza Kinney presided and called upon those friends present who were present at the original Unity Feast, to recall a few words about that glorious day.

Many of the visitors remained for a picnic supper, after which was held an informal ‘fireside’ meeting, presided over by Mr. Allah Kalantar. The spirit that pervaded the entire gathering during the whole day was of such fellowship and love that it well may have cheered the heart of our Beloved Master!

Bahá’í Peace Program at San Francisco During Allied Nations Conference

(Summary of Committee Report Received from Miss Marion Holley, Secretary)

Radio Activities: Thirty minute broadcast at 3:15 on April 21, over station KQW. Theme: “World Order is the Goal.” Recordings were made of this broadcast and have been sent by the National Radio Committee to 39 other cities for rebroadcast. Through cooperation of the Regional Teaching Committee in California, 20 cities throughout California obtained excellent publicity for the Regional broadcast.

Publicity: The two best newspapers in San Francisco carried large display advertisements, outlining the Bahá’í Peace Program. Excellent publicity secured in all Bay newspapers of all Bahá’í activities. There is a record of 69 items of publicity which appeared in 32 newspapers of 22 cities.

Public Meetings: Symposium on Bahá’í Peace Program held May 9. Speakers Dr. Rudolph Holsti, former delegate to the League of Nations from Finland; Dorothy Baker, Leroy Ions. Chairman, Marion Holley. Attendance 650. This was the largest peace meeting of any peace organization held in San Francisco during the Pacific Conference, according to the advice of two different San Francisco newspapers.

Banquet: Given by the National Spiritual Assembly to friends of Dr. Holsti attending the present Security Conferences:

His Excellency, Francisco Castillo Najera, delegate for Mexico and Ambassador to the United States.
His Excellency, Ivan Korni, delegate for Czecho-Slovakia, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.
Dr. Li Shu-Fan, Adviser to Chinese delegation, and adviser to Chinese Supply Commission.
Dr. Carlos Rodriguez Jimenez, Secretary to Venezuelan delegation, and Consul General.
M. Alphonse Als, Adviser to Luxembourgeois delegation, and Chief of Cabinet, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, (a friend of St. Barbe Baker)

In addition there were 26 other non-Bahá’í present for the most part distinguished friends of Dr. Holsti. In all there were 50 banquet guests. Copies of the Bahá’í Peace Program were distributed to all present.

Bahá’í Peace Pamphlet: 9000 copies of this pamphlet were published by the Committee. 2,000 copies were mailed to all persons connected with the Conference. 1,500 copies were sent to leading citizens of the San Francisco area. 400 were distributed at the banquet, symposium, exhibit. The Los Angeles Assembly ordered 1,000 copies for local teaching use.

Exhibits: Three exhibits were arranged of the Temple model with Bahá’í literature, maps and placards. Free literature distributed at each exhibit.
Official Observer: Marion Holley and Sylvia Ios were appointed official observers for the Bahá'í Faith, which permitted them to attend the plenary sessions. Mrs. Ios arranged a display of the Peace Pamphlet at the Conference Headquarters.

Local Activities: The San Francisco Assembly devoted a thirteen-week radio series to the theme "Foundations of Universal Peace." Public meetings and fireside meetings were held in each locality along these same lines.

Inter-America

The reports of the Youth Symposia in Latin America have been so inspiring that it was felt well worth while to devote the entire news to this subject. The South American Youth joined with their fellow Bahá'í Youth in North America, Europe and Asia on March 4th, 1945, the Tenth International Bahá'í Youth Day to present the Bahá'í Faith to the World.

Thirty youth were present at a meeting held in Buenos Aires, Argentina to hear Miss Etta Mae Lawrence speak on "The Dynamic Power of Religion." Sr. Haig Kevorkian, who spoke on "Prophetic Utterances," Sr. Oscar Aguirre, whose subject was "God's Plan for the Peace of the World," and Sr. Antranik Kevorkian who spoke on "The Spiritual Challenge to Youth," Sr. Antranik Kevorkian presided as chairman of the program. Tea was served following the meeting and everyone felt that the Symposium was a great success. A reporter from the Standard Newspaper of Buenos Aires interviewed the group prior to the meeting and as a result a very favorable article appeared in that paper.

From Santiago, Chile we hear that a wonderful meeting was held in the home of one of the members of the Youth Committee—Thirty one guests were present; Marcia Steward and Roberto Hererra gave talks on the Cause, tea was served and a strenuous period of questions and answers followed. There was a wonderful atmosphere, the audience was truly marvelous, every one requesting books and further information. Present were such types as an architect, newspaper men, a famous young Chilian actress, all young and of great capacity; practically every nationality was represented and a wonderful spirit prevailed. We felt that this meeting marked a great step forward in our youth activities." Also coordinating with the youth of Santiago, the youth of Punta Arenas presented a program at the Hotel Cosmos with seventeen young people present.

Twenty-one Youth attended the Youth Symposium at Lima, Peru. The theme of the Peruvian Youth was, "Youth's Role in the World of Tomorrow." Sr. Alejandro Franco, chairman of the Bahá'í Youth Committee gave the introductory speech, stressing the responsibility of Youth today. The very latest young Bahá'í woman spoke on "Woman's Role in the World of Tomorrow." Another young man spoke on the "Future World Economics," presenting it more from the material viewpoint. The meeting was concluded with an impressive presentation of the Bahá'í Faith by a visiting Bahá'í Youth from Guayaquil, Ecuador—Jorge Sarco.

Carmelo Perez, chairman of the Bahá'í Youth in Havana, Cuba reports the success of the Symposium held in that city, "The Youth Symposium of Havana was held in the auditorium of 'Radio Universal;' Colon and Prado. The program was broadcast over C.M.B.F. Cantos de la Torre, a youth who has recently reached twenty-one years and hence is now a voting member, was chairman. He recited a Temple Poem which he had composed. Carmelo Perez, the Youth Chairman gave the History of the Cause and Dr. Walter Blomquist spoke on Youths' Role in the New World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, elaborating on the principles." Thirty young people attended the broadcast, many of them having been attracted by the handpainted placards announcing the Symposium which had been placed in prominent places all over Havana. A press notice in the Havana Post also announced the program.

The first Bahá'í Youth Day to be celebrated in Guayaquil, Ecuador was held in a sala of Mrs. Anita McGills guest house. From Virginia Or­bison we received the following, "There was in the atmosphere a strong feeling of solidarity and potent among the six believers and their five friends. There were nine nationalities represented: English, Norwegian, German Jew, Swiss, French, Italian, Ecuadorian and North American. Eduardo Gonzales made the informal introductions and gave the first talk on 'Facing our Responsibilities' and quoting at length from the Guardians writings. He then presented Lauro Sanchez... His talk was Why I am a Bahá'í. The third talk was by Virginia Orbison, traveling teacher for South America. There are hopes that a real Bahá’í Youth Group will result from this beginning, with a place of their own for meeting and constructive activities for which they will take the entire responsibility.

News Service

It is apparent from the constantly increasing volume of newspaper clippings which are being sent to our Secretary that local publicity chairmen are meeting with greater success in their patient efforts. We appreciate the various types of publicity attempted by individual Assemblies, Groups and even isolated believers. We should all be encouraged by this showing of an audacious spirit of teaching effort.

Miss Nancy C. Phillips of Phoenix, Ariz., writes of successfully placing this committee’s national release “Bahá’ís Attain Spiritual World Order” in the Arizona Sun, read by the 25,000 Negroes of Arizona, and in the Glendale (Ariz.) News. We commend the Phoenix publicity committee for its efforts in also contacting many other newspapers in their immediate territory. Credit is due the Misses Jessie and Ethel Revell and Blanche Lear for the first Bahá’í news release appearing in the Pottsville (Penn.) daily paper and thanks to them for their comments on the help of the Publicity Bulletin. The Panama (C.Z.) Assembly sends us fine clippings from La Nacion and The Panama American and a good “Letter to the Editor” clipping from the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican, The Atlanta (Ga.) Journal carrying an interesting report written by Rebecca Franklin of the statements by Ali Kuli Khan during his visit to that city, have also reached us. The latter was in the form of an interview covering the Bahá’í Peace Program and the mention that the Wilsonian principles were the stepping stones to the United Nations plan and the world’s desire for a lasting peace.

Mrs. Sarah M. Russell of South Bend, Indiana, pleased us with her good reports, a clipping from The (weekly) Mirror of that city and another from the Plymouth (Ind.) Daily Pilot.

We are sorry that space will not allow the mention of all the letters and clippings we have received recently. We do congratulate the local publicity chairmen for their good material in the Peoria (Ill.) Star, Chicago (Ill.) Tribune, Columbus Grove (Ohio) Vidette, Racine (Wis.) Journal Times, Topeka (Kas.) State Journal, Wilmette (Ill.) Life, West Chester (Penn.) Local News, Helena (Mont.) Independent-Record, Charleston (W. Vir.) Mail, Union City (N.J.) Hudson Dispatch, San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle, Wilmington (Del.) Journal, Tacoma (Wash.) Times and many other newspapers throughout the country. We apologize to Miss Opal Winans of the Independent, Missouri, Assembly for inadvertently referring to her city as being in Kansas.

It has been brought to our attention that quite a number of house organs of the type used by commercial houses and, as well, small magazines of localized circulation are using illustrations of the Bahá’í House of Worship in their content. We would appreciate receiving any of the material for inclusion in the annual Press Books. Please send two copies of any Bahá’í mention you see to our secretary, Miss Virginia A. Russell, 2822 Prairie Avenue, Evanston, Illinois. We thank all publicity chairmen for their good cooperation in helping us keep our files up to date.

Annual Reports

1944-1945

Radio

In response to a request from the National Radio Committee, the Bahá’í Communities of the United States and Canada have submitted their reports on radio activities in their areas for the Bahá’í year 1944-1945. These reports have been digested by the National Radio Committee, and have been assembled here in brief form.

Many of the reports expressed the regret that there had been no radio activity. The reasons were stated, and these particular problems have been passed on to the incoming radio committee for whatever assistance they may be able to give in the coming year.

Some of the local reports were still not available by the time this national report was completed.

In addition to the regularly scheduled broadcasts for the past year, this report contains a brief survey on the special 30 minute transcription “The Goal Is World Order.” This program, featuring the Attorney General of California and several Bahá’í speakers was transcribed during the Peace Conference in San Francisco. It was then shipped to many of the communities of the United States and Canada. The transcriptions were financed by the National Radio Committee.

The special Centenary broadcasts have been covered in a previous report already published in the Bahá’í News.

The summarized report for the year 1944-1945 follows:

1. Total number of stations used: 41
2. Total number of special announcements: 6
3. Total number of programs: 215
4. Total number of states having broadcasts: 25
5. Total number of province having broadcasts: 6
6. Total number of hours on air: 55 hours, 51 minutes.
7. Total estimated audience (all stations) based upon the primary and secondary coverage of stations used, number of programs, average audience, etc. 9 million persons
8. The following is a list of the Bahá’í communities carrying broadcasts during the past year:
   - San Francisco—32 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - Pasadena—35 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - Reno—22 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - New York—11 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - Washington, D. C.—1 Fifteen minute broadcast
   - Cleveland—2 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - Cincinnati—1 Fifteen minute broadcast
   - Portsmouth, N. H.—3 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - New Haven, Conn.—3 Fifteen minute broadcasts
   - Flint, Mich.—2 Fifteen minute broadcasts

Local Assemblies

Peace Programs

In accordance with the recommendation of the National Spiritual Assembly, an effort was made by most of the local assemblies to give public meetings on the Baha'i peace plan. Reports of some of these meetings come to the Baha'i News Committee.

Colorado Springs presented the Baha'i teachings on successive days. Gladys Roberts, the secretary of the Assembly writes as follows: "...the Colorado Springs Baha'i's were co-sponsors with 25 other organizations in a Town Hall Meeting held Saturday, April 7, with a Denver speaker, and a question panel of 9 people. The subject was 'Our Stake in World Peace.' Chosen on the panel was Mrs. Wanden LaFarge, Baha'i from Fountain, Sunday, April 8th, the Baha'i's held a meeting at Halfway House for Mrs. Marzieh Gail, and despite the previous night meeting and no paid advertising, we had 22 people, 15 of whom were non-Baha'i's. We had very good publicity for her in the Sunday paper. On Monday we held a meeting at my home where she spoke on 'Persia as I Saw It.'

Her subject on Sunday was 'Faith in World Peace.' "

Geneva, N. Y., issued a very attractive program announcing a Spring Recital "in tribute to the purpose of the San Francisco Conference on World Organization." A very fine musical program was given, with students from the Eastern School of Music participating. During an intermission William B. Sears of New York talked on "The Dawn of World Civilization."

The Baha'i's of the County of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, gave an enormous peace banquet on March 24th at the Schroeder Hotel, where a model of the Temple was displayed in the lobby, along with books which were for sale. Marie Fricke, the secretary of the Milwaukee Assembly writes:

"We feel this teaching banquet was a wonderful success, particularly as a publicizing feature. There were over 700 people present, including members from as far away as Iowa, members from the cities of Wilmette, Winnetka, Evanston, Oak Park, and Chicago, all of Illinois, and members from all over the state of Wisconsin—it is estimated that about 50% of the attendees were non-Baha'i's. Influential and prominent people attended—including Dr. Frank E. Baker, President of Wisconsin State Teachers College, Lowell P. Goodrich, Superintendent of Milwaukee Public Schools, Daniel W. Hoan, Ex-Mayor of Milwaukee, Miss Dorothy Enderis, Director Municipal and Social Recreation Centers, William V. Kelley, Secretary Milwaukee Urban League, Miss Elizabeth Campbell, Executive Secretary International Institute of Milwaukee County, Inc., and Mrs. Grace M. Corwin, Church Editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel. There were also several clergy-men present.

"The races were also well represented. There were a good sprinkling of Negroes, some Chinese, Japanese, and a Japanese Hawaiian, also some Indians.

"The speakers were splendid, the music brilliant and suitable, the tables decorated with red roses and over it all the blue and rose lights interposed in the chandeliers cast a beautiful glow upon the happy faces of the friends. We were all immensely happy—this was indeed a Peace Meeting."

The New York City peace program took place June 8th at New York Times Hall. It began with music by Mr. Thomas Richner, concert pianist, winner of the Naumburg prize. This was followed by an address by Mrs. Dorothy Baker on "World Peace, everyman's part," three solos by Mr. Walter Olitzki, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Association, and an address on "World Peace, essential institutions" by Mr. Horace Holley.

The San Francisco friends invited the public to celebrate with them the Baha'i festival of Naw-Ruz, at which they presented a program entitled "Foundations of Universal Peace." Rev. Dr. Rudolph I. Coffee, President of the Temple of Religion, was the guest speaker, and Miss Marion Holley and Mr. Leory C. Ioas gave the Baha'i Teachings. This was one of six discussions on the subject, "Prerequisites of Peace" scheduled for March and April. The printed announcement also carried a notice of the Baha'i World Order Radio program given Sundays at 6:30 p.m. on Station KYA.

The Baha'i's of Washington, D. C., Alexandria and Arlington, Cabin John, and Chevy Chase, united with the Regional Teaching Committee to August, 1945

Race Unity Meetings

From Albuquerque, New Mexico, comes the announcement of a very interesting race unity meeting given March 29th. Mr. O. Leon Anderson, Acting Relocation Supervisor, spoke on the subject “Gleanings from the Relocation Program for Racial Adjustments” and illustrated his talk with motion pictures in color. The Bahá‘í speaker was Dr. E. Lenore Curtis, a Director and Chairman of a Study Group of the United Nations Association, and Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan, delegate to the Versailles Peace Conference.

News of Other Lands

British Isles

From the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles comes the inspiring news that they have just pledged themselves to attain the goal set them by the Guardian in response to the request of the 1944 Convention: to form nineteen Spiritual Assemblies in the British Isles before the Centenary of the Martyrdom of the Báb in July, 1950; these Assemblies to be spread over all the different areas, England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and Eire.

Australia

The following excerpts are from a letter from E. W. Handley, Librarian, Hobart Bahá‘í Group, Box 392 C.G.P.O., Hobart, Tasmania, Australia. The letter brought a renewal order covering five World Order subscriptions.

“The Hobart Bahá‘ís extend their greetings and good wishes to the American friends. The Hobart Group is the only Group in Tasmania. It numbers six persons, of whom five are women. We represent only 0.062% of Tasmania’s population; we have however, a promising Youth Group of ten, whose ages range from eight to sixteen years. They have made contact with one or more American Bahá‘ís visiting or passing through Australia.

“We would be glad to hear in ad-

Bullets

A new local bulletin has been added to the list of those received. This is the Albuquerque Bahá‘í News. The first issue was for the month of ’Ašá‘ (beginning March 2nd). It carries the announcement of the weekly Bahá‘í radio program, a list of Bahá‘í events for the month, a few news notes about individual friends, and the financial report.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, continues to issue its attractive little bulletin, beautifully hand-written, and adorned with small sketches in colored inks.

Baha’i Summer School

Baha’is for the United States government, author and lecturer on foreign affairs. Mr. W. Kenneth Christian was the Bahá‘í speaker, and music was furnished by Mr. Walter Oltizki, of the Metropolitan Opera. Attractive invitation cards were issued for this event as well as the printed programs given out on the evening itself.

The Portland, Oregon, meeting was held April 13th. Dr. Norman F. Coleman and Mr. George Orr Latimer spoke on “World Unity and an Enduring Peace.”

The Beverly, Massachusetts, Assembly reports thirty present at its World Peace Forum, fifteen of them non-Baha‘is. It was held May 18, and the speakers were Miss Margaret Curtis, a Director and Chairman of a Study Group of the United Nations Association, and Dr. Ali-Kuli Khan, delegate to the Versailles Peace Conference.

The Urbana, Illinois, Assembly, in combination with the Bahá‘í Group of Champaign, presented a race unity program in the City Building of Champaign on April 28th. Non-Bahá‘í speakers were Miss Lucy Nobler, student at the University of Illinois, who talked about race unity from the scientific point of view, and Miss Mary Grace Jordan, who told of practical work for better race relations being done by non-Bahá‘í organizations. The Bahá‘í teachings on the subject were presented by Mr. Farhang Javid, Persian student at the university. There was a large attendance.

National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States and Canada
536 Sheridan Road, Wilmette, Illinois
“Our Hearts are Uplifted in Thanksgiving”

Our hearts are uplifted in thanksgiving for complete cessation of the prolonged, unprecedented world conflict. I hail the prospects of the removal of the restrictions enabling American Bahá’í Community to expedite the preliminary measures required to launch the second stage of the Divine Plan. I appeal for full attention upon the requirements of the all-important Latin American work. The adequate fulfillment of this vital task presumes the assumption of collective responsibility by triumphant Community of the spiritual enlightenment and ultimate redemption of sorely-tried, war-ravaged European continent, destined to be associated with exploits which must immortalize the second stage of the World Mission entrusted by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá to the apostles of His Father’s Faith in the western world. The opportunities of the present hour are infinitely precious, the time is pressing, the call of the distressed, groaning peoples of Europe pitiful, insistently. The work still to be accomplished to consummate the adequate fulfilment of this stage of an enterprise which, as it reveals its full potentialities, must stretch to embrace the five continents of the globe. World turmoil, grave dangers, severe restrictions, the lethargy of the public engrossed in its war problems, have failed to dampen the zeal, or to undermine the resolve, or to interfere with the successful discharge of the duty assumed by those who have so determinedly embarked on the opening stage of their world encircling, divinely appointed mission. With the return to more normal conditions, with the improvement of the means of travel and communication, with the lifting of the deadening weight of fear and care and the growing receptivity of the masses schooled in adversity and groping for the means of ultimate salvation, opportunities without number and unprecedented in their significance, present themselves to those whose privilege and obligation it is to pave the way for the launching of the succeeding stage of their historic and ever unfolding task.

Not until, however, normal conditions are fully restored and the world situation is stabilized, and, above all, the prizes won through the operation of the Seven-Year Plan are adequately safe-guarded and the basis of the newly established Administrative Order sufficiently consolidated throughout the Western Hemisphere, can the ambassadors of the Faith Bahá’u’lláh, carrying aloft the banner of His Name in the American continent, be called upon to undertake, unitedly and systematically, collective responsibility for the diffusion of His Message, and for the erection of the fabric of His Administrative Order, amidst the sorrow-stricken, war-lacerated, sorely bewildered nations and peoples of the European continent.

The sooner the home tasks are fully discharged, and the newly fledged Assemblies in Central and South America enabled to function adequately and vigorously, the sooner will the stalwart members of the American Bahá’í community, who, during so brief a period, and despite the prevailing darkness, achieved such wonders throughout the Americas, extend the healing influence of their Faith, on a scale as yet unprecedented, to the waiting masses of that agitated continent.

As already observed, an intensification of effort is imperatively required aiming at a bolder proclamation of the verities of a God-given Faith, at a systematic and continent-wide dissemination of its authentic literature, at a closer contact with the masses as well as the leaders of public thought, at a further consolidation and multiplication of the administrative centers scattered throughout the new world, and constituting the nuclei of its future World Order, and, above all, at a more convincing revelation of Bahá’í love, unity, solidarity and self-sacrifice, which alone can hasten the consummation of the preliminary undertakings required to terminate the period of transition intervening between the first and second stages of the greatest crusade ever launched in the history of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

Messages from the Guardian

“Dear and valued co-workers: The cessation of hostilities on the continent of Europe, the prospect of an early termination of the bloody conflict raging in the Far East, invest the members of the world Bahá’í community, and particularly its standard-bearers in the great Revolutionary Community of the spiritual community, and particularly its members throughout the world, with a great, a unique, and inescapable responsibility. The first stage of the mission laid upon them by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the inauguration of which has been so long retarded while the processes of a slowly emerging administrative order were being set in motion, and which coincided with one of the darkest and most tragic periods in human history, has been brought to a triumphant conclusion, and added a golden page to the annals of the closing years of the first Bahá’í century.

As a new phase in the painful evolution of a sorely-tried and wayward humanity opens, a new challenge summons the prosecutors of a Divine Plan to gird up their loins, muster their resources, and prepare themselves for the launching of the second stage of an enterprise which, as it reveals its full potentialities, must stretch to embrace the five continents of the globe. World turmoil, grave dangers, severe restrictions, the lethargy of the public engrossed in its war problems, have failed to dampen the zeal, or to undermine the resolve, or to interfere with the successful discharge of the duty assumed by those who have so determinedly embarked on the opening stage of their world encircling, divinely appointed mission. With the return to more normal conditions, with the improvement of the means of travel and communication, with the lifting of the deadening weight of fear and care and the growing receptivity of the masses schooled in adversity and groping for the means of ultimate salvation, opportunities without number and unprecedented in their significance, present themselves to those whose privilege and obligation it is to pave the way for the launching of the succeeding stage of their historic and ever unfolding task.

Not until, however, normal conditions are fully restored and the world situation is stabilized, and, above..."
Time is pressing, the work that still remains to be accomplished in the new world is vast and urgent, the need of the suffering masses, the world over, and particularly in Europe, is pitiable, the sustaining grace destined to be vouchsafed from on high to those who will arise to achieve that task and fulfill this need is boundless and assured. Its potency has been already fully experienced, and abundantly demonstrated in the years that have witnessed the most prodigious efforts exerted by the American believers. A still more powerful display of its miraculous force can be confidently anticipated, if those who have felt its impact in the past arise to carry out, in the years that lie immediately ahead, the sublime and twofold task of the redemption of mankind and the establishment of the world sovereignty of Bahá'u'lláh.

Sinoom Haifa, Palestine, August 10, 1945

“Greatly Cheered by Evidences of Progress”

Greatly cheered by evidences of progress in all-important teaching work. Praying fervently for complete success of plans adopted. convey my loving appreciation to Gail Woolson, Virginia Orbon and Dorothy Baker for their noble, steadfast services. Supplicating abundant blessing on forthcoming State and Province Conventions. Urge persistent efforts to promote vital tasks facing the believers constituting the prelude to inauguration of second stage of Divinely-conceived Plan.

Shoghi Effendi
Cablegram received September 24, 1945.
(The following messages from the Guardian were written through his secretary).

Mme. Orlova

Regarding the matter of Mme. Orlova: as it is now clear that she is openly associating with the New History group, the friends should ignore her and have nothing more to do with her.

San Francisco Conference

The reports which have reached him about the teaching and publicity during the San Francisco conference were very satisfactory. He feels the American believers are maturing and gaining in experience in presenting the Faith not only to the public at large but also to leaders of importance, and they are doing it in a sober and dignified way. A glance at the pressing problems facing the world is enough to convince any Bahá'í that there is no ultimate solution for its ills except that provided by Bahá'u'lláh. It is therefore of the greatest conceivable importance the manner in which the teachings are presented to a nation with such a leading role in international affairs at the present time as that of the United States. He urges you, in this connection, to seek out and exploit to the full the talents and abilities latent within your community for, whatever the American believers have accomplished heretofore, it is a mere prelude to what they can and must do in the field of Bahá'í service in the future.

August 10, 1945.

Letters to Individuals

The following excerpts from letters written by the Guardian to individuals are published with his consent.

To John Ashton, October 17, 1944

The infallibility of the Guardian is confined to matters which are related strictly to the Cause and interpretation of the teachings; he is not an infallible authority on other subjects, such as economics, science, etc. When he feels that a certain thing is essential for the protection of the Cause, even if it is something that affects a person personally, he must be obeyed, but when he gives advice, such as that he gave you in a previous letter about your future, it is not binding; you are free to follow it or not as you please.

The question of guidance is a very subtle one. We cannot be positive that an impulse or a dream is guidance. We can seek, through earnest prayer and longing, sincerely to do God's Will, His guidance. We can try, as you say, to emulate the Master and at all times live up to the teachings, but we cannot be sure that doing these things we are still making no mistakes and are perfectly guided. These things help us not to make so many mistakes and to receive more directly the guidance God seeks to give us.

Regarding consultation: Any person can refer a matter to the Assembly for consultation whether the other person wishes to or not. In matters which affect the Cause the Assembly should, if it deems it necessary, intervene even if both sides don't want it to, because the whole purpose of the Assemblies is to protect the Faith, the Communities and the individual Bahá'ís as well.

Bahá'í News

Bahá'í News is published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and Canada as the official news-letter of the Bahá'í community. The first issue appeared in December, 1924.

On April 10, 1925, the Guardian wrote: “The NewsLetter which you have lately initiated fulfills a very vital function... I would urge you to enlarge its scope... that in time it may devote a special section to every phase of your activities, administrative, devotional, humanitarian, financial, educational and otherwise.

“It should become a great factor in promoting understanding, providing information about Bahá'í activity, both local and foreign, in stimulating interest, in combating evil influences, and in upholding and safeguarding the institutions of the Cause.”

The contents include: material supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly, such as the Guardian's messages, the Assembly's letters and its general statement and reports; Committee plans which have been approved and authorized; Committee news reports of activities; annual reports from local Assemblies; news items from local Assemblies; activities in regional areas as reported by or through the National Teaching Committee; activities in Central and South America as reported by the Inter-American Committee; news from other lands gathered from the bulletins of the various National Assemblies; a record of new enrollments and transfers; a record of deaths; photographs of general Bahá'í interest.

Bahá'í News is edited for the National Spiritual Assembly by its Bahá'í News Committee: Horace Holley, Garreta Busey, Mabel E. Paine. Address: Bahá'í News Committee, c/o Miss Garreta Busey, 303 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois
Beloved Friends:

The National Bahá’í Campaign has taken definite form. The participating committees met jointly with the National Spiritual Assembly, submitted plans and recommendations, their respective work was coordinated, and the intensive effort is well begun. It now rests upon the whole Bahá’í community of North America to bring to this campaign the energetic and unified support, the continuous cooperation, which alone can assure success.

The campaign inaugurates the real work of the Second Bahá’í Century in North America. It offers those whom ‘Abdu’l-Bahá appointed His trustees and holds responsible for the fulfilment of the Divine Plan a truly providential opportunity. Its aim is to present the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh to the leaders aware of the crisis through which the world is passing, and win the attention and confidence of the masses whose suffering are prolonged by every hour’s delay in entering His Faith.

“A new challenge summons the prosecutors of a Divine Plan” the Guardian declared, “to gird up their loins, muster their resources, and prepare themselves for the launching of the second stage of an enterprise which, as it reveals its full potentialities, must stretch to embrace the five continents of the globe.” What is needed above all at our present stage of evolution is the power which will come when we learn how to unite in one national teaching effort, concentrate upon one task, and create the means by which the energy of the whole community can flow through every local community and group, give it greater capacity to act, and offer more definite teaching assistance than it has ever received before.

Acting one by one, our communities and groups seem weak and ineffective in comparison with the allotted task, for the most part lacking facilities for adequate public presentation of the message. By joining our forces in one continuous, developing teaching campaign we can make the smallest group and the most inexperienced individual believer part of one great and potent organism. This is a new phase; the faster we master it, the sooner and better shall we be prepared to fulfill our sacred trust both here and throughout “five continents of the globe.”

The National Campaign

The foundation of the national teaching plan is a schedule of Public Meetings to be held in eleven key cities, and a great network of Teaching Circuits to serve a large number of other cities and towns. To reinforce and amplify the Public Meetings, the campaign includes newspaper advertising, publicity, radio, free literature, displays and public relations material.

A National Campaign Budget already announced calls for an expenditure of $40,000 as follows:

- Public Meetings and Annual Congress, $10,000
- Circuit Teaching, $5,000
- Radio Programs, $10,000
- Publicity and Advertising, $7,500
- Public Relations Activities, $7,500

The projects sustained by these budget items are carried out under the general supervision and coordination of the National Spiritual Assembly by the Public Meetings, National Teaching, Radio, News Service, Public Relations, Contacts and Exhibits Committees. Their respective projects, activities and functions in the campaign are assigned as follows:

Public Meetings Committee

The Public Meetings Committee prepares the schedule of cities, dates and speakers, selects the subjects, issues the printed programs, selects the free literature, develops where possible special meetings and conferences before or after the Public Meeting to stress the importance of race unity, arranges for the services of field workers in the various cities, and from its budget meets all costs in connection with speakers, printed programs and the meeting places.

The local Assembly of the city distributes the printed programs and makes all possible effort to assure the success of the meeting. It has full responsibility for conducting the follow-up meetings and teaching activities after the Public Meeting has been held.

The Public Meetings Committee is completing its schedule as rapidly as possible. At present we can only report the list of cities and some of the dates: Toronto, October 29; New York, definite date to be decided; Boston, November 16, Washington, D. C., December 5, Atlanta, January 13; New Orleans, January 27; Los Angeles, February 8; Denver, February date to be decided; Portland, March date to be decided; Chicago, April date to be decided.

Baha’i Community of Independence, Missouri. Assembly organized April 21, 1945.
National Teaching Committee

The National Teaching Committee sets up circuits for traveling teachers, both regional and inter-regional in scope, and sustains the expenses from its campaign budget. The preliminary report lists twenty-one different circuits in preparation, bringing the campaign to more than one hundred cities and towns. The detailed and final schedule will be reported later.

Radio Committee

The Radio Committee is preparing a series of thirteen broadcasts along new and dramatic lines. Each broadcast is transcribed when completed, and transcriptions are made available for the radio schedules set up in the different cities. The Radio Committee, with such cooperation as is needed from the local Assemblies, will work out the particular broadcast schedule for each city, and meet the cost from its campaign budget.

News Service Committee

The News Service Committee prepares the campaign newspaper advertising and publicity, working through the local Publicity Committee. It has already issued a Questionnaire in order to obtain the necessary information. The committee will also help the local committee to carry on during whatever follow-up meetings and activities are conducted by the local Assembly. It meets the cost of the campaign advertising and publicity from its campaign budget.

Public Relations Committee

The Public Relations Committee has received approval to complete the projects as recommended:

Reprint an edition of 50,000 copies of Chicago Sunday Tribune colored Temple illustration and accompanying articles, for use as free literature during the campaign and for general teaching purposes.

Prepare and distribute a series of monthly releases to show the relation of the Faith to important current public trends and events.

Arrange for publication of an article about the Faith in a representative weekly or monthly magazine.

Prepare a series of postcard size reprints of selected Bahá’í texts, in color, to provide a new type of teaching literature which individual believers can use at moderate cost.

Prepare and publish a portfolio outlining the Bahá’í aims, teachings and history in a form adapted for making contacts with organizations and leaders of opinion.

Prepare a series of suggestions for local Bahá’í advertising.

Contacts Committee

The Contacts Committee is prepared to mail Bahá’í literature to names and addresses supplied by the local Assemblies in the eleven cities. Each of these Assemblies is requested to develop its list and send a copy to the Contacts Committee as soon as possible.

Exhibits Committee

The Exhibits Committee has been requested to develop a type of display suitable for use in connection with the Public Meetings, and another display suitable for the Circuit Meetings.

Treasurer’s Report

From the Treasurer’s report for July we cite these relevant items: receipts, $6,688.07; expenditures, $5,870.73 (administration, $1,593.33, Temple maintenance, $775.50, Green Acre maintenance, $505.90, National and Regional Teaching, $295, Inter-American Teaching, $1,108.00, etc.). 97 Assemblies, 63 groups and 73 isolated believers contributed in July. At the end of the month the total of all national accounts in bank was $11,904.66, of which only $1,710.44 could be expended by the National Assembly.

The financial report for August shows the condition of the National Bahá’í Fund. The receipts were $13,494.24, a large increase over July; expenditures, $12,045.78, also a large increase (administration, $3,322.69, Temple maintenance, $1,318.90, Green Acre maintenance, $310.64, National and Regional Teaching, $775, Inter-American teaching, $1,761.51, International (covered by a special donation) $4,601.97, etc.). 110 Assemblies contributed, 62 group and 79 isolated believers sent donations. Total amounts in bank at end of month $13,302.71, of which only $2,584.66 could be expended by the National Assembly.

An Historical Record of Bahá’í Service

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to maintain a file containing data on the services rendered to the Faith by believers who have entered the Kingdom. Assemblies and committees are requested to submit material of this nature from time to time, in addition to the obituary notices prepared for the Editorial Committee of The Bahá’í World, or the records prepared for the local Archives.

Request to Traveling Bahá’ís

A local Assembly writes to ask that a notice be published requesting all believers who visit the city and can speak at a public meeting to notify the Assembly secretary as far in advance as possible. Bahá’í News cannot publish such a notice for one city, but the suggestion is made that the same condition might apply to most if not all the Assemblies. Traveling Bahá’ís are asked to bear this in mind when they stop over for a day or so, whether to visit the friends in a community or help with the public teaching work.

Contact With Social Movements

It is surely very necessary that the friends should keep in touch with the modern social movements, but their main objective should be to draw more people to the spirit and teachings of the Cause. They should learn from the experience of others and not permit themselves to go (off) at a tangent, and finally to be absorbed in other movements as to forget the Cause of God.—Shoghi Effendi, through his secretary.

(From Baha’i Procedure, page 15)
Local Pan-America Activities
The Pan-American Committee of the New York Assembly, Mrs. Philip G. Sprague, Chairman, has kindly made some suggestions which are published here for the information of other Assemblies who can serve in this important field. As our Inter-American work at present is of paramount importance, it is clear that every useful contact and strong impression which the believers in North America can make with Latin Americans in Canada or the United States will have a very helpful influence on the progress of the Faith in the other American republics.

1. Local Pan-American Committees might be appointed in the cities where there are Latin American colonies.

2. Prepare a list of Latin American clubs and of Spanish-speaking clubs in the local schools and colleges. Speakers, entertainers and a mailing list to be developed from these sources.

3. If there is a Spanish newspaper a contact with the editor for publicity is most important.

4. Two types of meeting can be planned: social gatherings, and lectures. Strive for a program with the speakers and entertainers. Include a Bahá’í speaker on each lecture program.

5. Avoid those who are connected with radical political and economic movements. Lists of lecturers can be obtained from the Inter-American Cultural Association.

6. Have the chairman inform the audience that there is an address book which can be signed by all who are interested in receiving notices of future meetings.

Temple Guides

Abdu'l-Baha's prophecy regarding the attracting power of the Temple is most strikingly coming true. Even before the rationing of gasoline was removed there was a marked increase in the number of visitors, and since then the numbers have been almost doubled.

In June, the total number of visitors was 2,322, which was 425 more than for the same period last year. They came from forty-two States; Panama, the District of Columbia, Hawaii; the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario; and the countries of England, Latvia, Australia, China, Persia, Syria, Palestine, Columbia and Peru.

In July, the total number of visitors was 4,494, the largest number that had ever visited the Temple in one month. This was an increase of 1,565 over July of last year. They came from forty-one States; Panama, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Panama; the Canadian provinces of Ontario and Alberta; and the countries of India, Chile, Guatemala and Holland.

In August, the total number of visitors was 5,154, an increase of 2,500 over August of 1944. These came from thirty-eight States; Hawaii and Puerto Rico; the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Alberta, Quebec and British Columbia; and the countries of Chile, Ecuador, Dominican Republic and France.

Sales of literature increased markedly. The total amount sold from January 1 to August 31, 1945, was $1,235.57.

The increase in the number of visitors was marked on weekdays, but exceedingly noticeable on Sundays and holidays. A picture of the Temple and an excellent article on the Faith appearing in the Chicago Tribune on June 18 seems to have been partly responsible for the increase. Many visitors mentioned the article. The attendance on Sundays and holidays was, as follows:

Some noted people have been shown through the Temple this summer. Among them were: Sir A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, of New Delhi, India, head of the delegation from India to the San Francisco Conference; two princes from Damascus, Syria, also returning to their home from the Conference; an ex-Governor from Jerusalem; another visitor was from the world's southernmost city.

Another unusual happening at the Temple was the arrival of Bahá'ís from far off to help in this most thrilling and important guide work. Miss Rosalynn Orloff, of Boston, spent ten days of her vacation here guiding, and Miss Clara Edge, of Grand Rapids, spent 2 weeks guiding every day. About the time Miss Edge left, Mrs. Muriel Ives Barrow, of Shandaken, N. Y. arrived and has helped since in guiding daily. We are very thankful that Bahá'u'lláh led them to us. They were urgently needed. They were greatly thrilled with the work which they performed with enthusiasm and gratitude for the privilege of so serving the Cause. An idea of what guiding in the Temple means may be seen from what Mrs. Barrows said recently: "As an isolated believer, hunting up people who are not interested in the Cause and trying to give them the Teachings, it is most refreshing to guide in the Temple where visitors come and are hungry to hear about the Bahá'í Faith."

With the increased number of visitors, there has been the added strain on the guides of working overtime, staying on Sundays as late as 7:30 to 8:00 o'clock, and some of the guides guiding from 10 A.M., thus taxing their strength and endurance, and putting to the test their resolve to serve the Cause. The Guides Committee, through consultation, has taken care of the problems confronting it and has adequate plans to meet the situation as it grows increasingly difficult to handle.

Our appeal for more guides should be given as much publicity as possible, through speakers who know of this problem and who visit the summer schools and who go on teaching trips. Any cooperation given toward this end will be fully appreciated.

Mary Haggard, Chairman
Inter-America News

Goals Defined

In a message from the Guardian to the Inter-American committee published in August Baha'i News, the paramount tasks to be accomplished in Latin America during the present year are assigned. Let us look at them again. The Guardian advises:

1. Concentrate attention on the formation of an Assembly in the one remaining republic, Nicaragua.
2. Consolidation of the newly fledged Assemblies.
3. Multiplication of groups throughout Latin America.
4. Reinforcement of the outpost in Magalannes.
5. Intensification of efforts in the dissemination of literature.

Now that the present year is half in the past, the Committee wishes that a more complete report could be given of progress toward the accomplishment of these goals. This brief report upon our efforts to realize these objectives will be augmented as the year goes on. We earnestly request assistance in this realization from the body of American believers through their prayers and through their contributions to the National Fund, as a means of upholding the Guardian's plea for an 'ever-increasing number of pioneers.'

Nicaragua

From December, 1944, to August, 1945, Dr. Malcolm King of Milwaukee, Wis., worked diligently toward the establishment of a Spiritual Assembly in Managua. Much time and effort were necessary in order to obtain official approval for holding public meetings and publicizing the Cause in that country. A statement of the aims and principles of the Faith was placed in the Government records. The Inter-America Committee is most appreciative of the tact and patience with which a very delicate situation was handled by our pioneer.

As soon as feasible, weekly study classes were organized which attracted and interested prominent people of Nicaragua. These meetings were held at the home of a newspaper publisher in Managua. By August of this year there were eight declared native believers in this city, and regular weekly Bahá'í broadcasts were being given over a radio station that is heard throughout Central America.

Due to circumstances beyond his control, Dr. King was compelled to return home late in August. However, his efforts in Managua were richly blessed, and accomplishments were beyond our highest hopes.

As this is being written, Gayle Woolson is teaching in Managua on a ten-day stopover en route to her new post in Bogota, Colombia. She will also make brief visits to other Bahá'í centers in Central America. Two other itinerant teachers are expected to visit Nicaragua during this fall, and by the end of October the Committee expects to be able to announce the placing of a new North American settler in Nicaragua. There is every reason to believe that a Spiritual Assembly will be formed there next April.

Consolidation

Newly Fledged Assemblies

The North American Bahá'ís will recall that, although there were long delays in obtaining passports for out-going pioneers, the number of new Assemblies formed last April 21st in Latin America was larger than ever before. These included La Paz, Bolivia; Punta Arenas (Magallanes), Chili; Mogotes, Columbia; Trujillo, Dominican Republic; Guayaquil, Ecuador; Panama City, Panama; Caracas, Venezuela; and Montevideo, Uruguay.

There are now nine North American and three native pioneers who are actively engaged in teaching,—the strongest possible influence toward consolidation,—in the eight new centers listed above. New believers are being deepened in the Teachings and classes are organized for seekers. Panama City has three of these pioneers; Punta Arenas, Trujillo, and Montevideo have two each, though one or both of the teachers may be leaving Montevideo in the near future; La Paz, Guayaquil, and Caracas each have one. Mogotes is the only newly fledged Assembly which is at present without a pioneer. This center will be visited during the year, however, by the pioneer to be stationed in Bogota.

Another means of consolidation is through visits to these centers by traveling or itinerant teachers. The Committee is most happy to be able to announce that Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala of Montreal are leaving on October 20 on a four months tour which will combine business with a Bahá'í teaching itinerary that includes nearly all of the centers in Latin America. Cities in which they will remain for from three to nine days include Mexico City, the capital cities of each of the Central American Republics, Bogota, Guayaquil, La Paz, Lima, Santiago, Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro, Caracas, Trujillo, Port au Prince, and Havana. Several other centers will be visited for one or two days.

Publicity and arrangements for public meetings or receptions and for radio broadcasts, where possible, will be made in each center in advance of Mr. and Mrs. Sala's visit.

Plans are under way for a similar tour to be made by another international teacher before the close of the Bahá'í year. Special emphasis in this itinerary will be placed upon visits to newly formed Assemblies and groups.

Letters are mailed each month to all of the Latin American centers stressing such subjects as Bahá'í administration as the conduct of elections, the institution of the Spiritual Assembly, the Nineteen Day Feast, the appointment and functioning of committees, the local Bahá'í fund, and the ordering and sale of literature. These letters, we trust, are of assistance to the pioneers in consolidating the organization and the activities of the newly formed Bahá'í communities. The pioneers themselves are busily engaged in conducting study-classes for the more thorough knowledge of both believers and seekers in the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Multiplication of Groups

Extension teaching carried on under the direction of local Spiritual Assemblies and teaching tours into new cities by North American pioneers has resulted in Bahá'í groups being formed in seven of the ten republics of South America and in at least four of the ten republics of Central America and the West Indies.

Chili and Columbia each have a second Assembly with a third either on the way or ready for formation. A Bahá'í group has been formed in Valparaiso, Chili, under the supervision of Sr. and Sra. Herrera, former members of the Santiago Assembly. This group was recently strengthened by the addition of two believers who moved from Punta Arenas. The number of believers in the latter Assembly is now sixteen.

It should be stated that there are now nine believers in the now colony near Contratacions, Columbia, who will form an Assembly next year. All of these, like the believers in Mogotes, became Bahá'ís by means of vigorous campaign in extension teaching carried on by correspondence with contacts in these and in other Columbian cities by the Assembly of Bogota. Bahá'í literature in Spanish and mimeographed lesson outlines were mailed upon request. Much correspondence was carried on with enquirers and in answer to questions from study groups. It is remarkable that the Assembly at Mogotes, as well as the group at Contratacions, were formed without a single visit by the pioneer, Gerard Sluter, who inaugurated this campaign, nor by any other Bahá'í teacher.

Two of the believers in Buenos Aires, Antroniek Kevikian and Mary Poghaharian, were married in early September. They have located in La Plata, Argentina, with the hope of establishing a second Spiritual Assembly in Argentina. (This is the first Bahá'í marriage in South America.)

In addition to the Assembly in Bahia, Brazil, there is an active group in Rio de Janeiro, which is the center for translation and publication of Bahá'í Writings in Portuguese. This group will be augmented before the close of 1945 by the addition of three North American pioneers. At the present time, Gertrude Eisenberg is in Rio en route from her former post in Asuncion, Paraguay to a new post in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Many of the friends may not realize the great need for multiplication of groups and establishing new Assemblies in Brazil. This country contains approximately half the area and population of all of South America!

Extension teaching work in Bolivia, Ecuador, and Peru will be reported upon in a later issue of Bahá'í News. The new Assembly in Trujillo and Panama City have succeeded in establishing groups in neighboring cities, the former in Sanchez, Dominican Republic, and the latter in the city of Colon.

At almost every meeting of the Inter-American Committee, held every two weeks, new membership cards are presented, either from Assemblies or groups in scattered parts of Latin America. We rejoice at these various evidences of growth.

Reinforcement of Magalanes

Great interest throughout the Bahá'í world has been taken in the new Assembly of Punta Arenas, at the southern tip of the Americas, ever since its founding was announced last April.

Means for the reinforcement of this Assembly which the Inter-America committee has recommended to the National Spiritual Assembly, and which have been adopted and put into effect, include: (a) The deputizing of a native pioneer, Sr. Estefan Canales of Santiago, for a period of at least six months' teaching in Magalanes. Sr. Canales has been most successful in radio and publicity work. A new series of weekly broadcasts is now under way in Punta Arenas, and plans are developing to use the scripts prepared for these broadcasts in other countries, such as Argentina and Uruguay. (b) Financial assistance has also been given toward supplying free literature and toward the expense of maintaining a center.

Sr. Canales is expected to leave Punta Arenas for Santiago in October, — an ocean journey of at least 1500 miles. At that time Marcia Stewart will return to Punta Arenas for a period of at least two months. Artemus Lamb, whose services have been indispensable in the founding and consolidation of this community, has established his business and is making his home in Punta Arenas.

Dissemination of Literature

Space does not permit a detailed report on the translation, publication and distribution of Bahá'í literature in Spanish and Portuguese. Suffice it to say that the committees set up to fulfill these duties in Latin America, after meeting some initial difficulties, are now functioning efficiently. The Spanish Publications Committee, located in Buenos Aires, is under the chairmanship of Sr. Emilio Barros with Lilian McRae serving as secretary. The Panama Branch of this Committee now has Cora Oliver as executive secretary and Alfred Osborne as Chairman. This Committee aids in the distribution of literature and publishes the Spanish Bulletin. A similar Committee is serving in Rio under Mrs. Roscoe L. Wood, Chairman, and Mrs. Harold V. Armstrong, Secretary.

The publication of 25,000 copies of the pamphlet “El Alba” for free distribution was authorized recently. 20,000 of these will be in Spanish and 5,000 in Portuguese. Other publications for free distribution are being prepared.

Gift allotments of Bahá’í books and pamphlets have been shipped to the different centers in Latin America, and all centers are being encouraged to establish revolving funds for the purchase and sale of literature. Budgets have been set up to cover monthly office and storage space rental and other administrative expenses of the above-named committees. Such expenses, together with the cost of free literature, are at present all paid out of the National Fund.

News Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Worley of Bahia, Brazil, visited the Temple on Sept. 20th. They are returning to Bahia in early October. Jean Silver recently returned to her teaching activities in Havana, Cuba. Josefine Kruka of Havana visited in Washington during September. Gwennie Sholtis, who has been teaching in La Paz, will go to Quito, Ecuador, in the near future, upon the return of Flora Hottes from Montevideo to Bolivia. Elena Marcella of Boston, after a long passport delay, is now pioneering with Ofelia Montalvo in Trujillo. Miss Marcella speaks French as well as Spanish, and the Inter-America Committee is suggesting that a part of her time be spent in assisting the Assembly at Port au Prince, Haiti. A number of young believers have been added to the Assembly in Lima through the efforts of our pioneer, Eve Nicklin, in the organization of an International Friendship Club. A part of the meeting time of this club is used in Bahá’í study. Miss Nicklin is publishing a book for children called “Bahá’í Stories.” Dorothy Baker, Chairman of the Inter-America Committee is devoting a few weeks to teaching in Mexico. Her itinerary includes Mexico city, Puebla, and Vera Cruz.

Bahá’í Study Aid

The Bahá’í Study Aids Committee has been appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly “to encourage and promote the practice of organized Bahá’í study” and to work out “effective methods for stimulating Bahá’í study on the part of local communities, groups and isolated believers.” In this, the first statement of this committee through Bahá’í News, the committee would like to quote some of the words of the Guardian to emphasize the importance of study among the Bahá’ís: “Now surely, if ever, is the time for us, the chosen ones of Bahá’u’lláh and the bearers of His Message to the world, to endeavor by day and by night, to deepen, first and foremost, the Spirit of His Cause in our own individual lives, and then labor, and labor incessantly to exemplify in all our dealings with our fellowmen that noble Spirit of which His beloved Son ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has been all the days of His life a true and unique exponent.” (B.Admin., p. 30.)

And, again, the Guardian reminds us that most important is “the realization down in the innermost heart of every true believer of the regenerating power, the supreme necessity, the unfailing efficacy of the Message he bears.” (B. Admin., p. 102.)

Then, “having attained sufficiently the individual regeneration — the essential requisite of teaching — let us arise to teach His Cause with righteousness, conviction, understanding and vigor. Let this be the paramount and most urgent duty of every Bahá’í.” (B. Admin., p. 60.)

The effectiveness of our teaching, the effectiveness of our daily life, are both dependent on the confirmations of the Holy Spirit. These confirmations come not from ourselves but are in direct proportion to the degree of our dedication and the closeness of our contact with the quickening Spirit.

To attain this regenerating power we need to turn constantly to the source of that Power, to know the Commands of God for this day, to become a living part of the new civilization that will become in time the Kingdom of God on earth, for Bahá’u’lláh has given us “twin duties” (Gleanings, p. 339) in His Day — it is not enough to believe, we must believe and act.

To study the Bahá’í Writings, to come to know, with certainty and through action, the greatness of this Cause and the sure support and inspiration from these Creative Words — is to enter on a new life.
Often we may ask ourselves, Why is my teaching not more effective? What did 'Abdu'l-Bahá mean when he said that he desired distinction for us? Why cannot the Baha'is get along with each other — they of all people should be able to? Why did 'Abdu'l-Bahá say that "Truthfulness is the foundation of all the virtues of the world of humanity?" (B. W. F. p. 384.)

And, what am I doing to help hasten the advent of the Most Great Peace? We would be surprised, perhaps, to know that we were delaying it. But the Guardian has said: "The various Assemblies, local and national, constitute today the bedrock upon the strength of which the Universal House of Justice is in future to be firmly established and raised. Not until these function vigorously and harmoniously can the hope for the termination of this period of transition be realized. It devolves upon us whose dearest wish is to see the Cause enter upon that promised era of universal recognition and world achievements, to do all in our power to consolidate the foundations of these Assemblies, promoting at the same time a fuller understanding of their purpose and more harmonious cooperation for their maintenance and success." (B. Admin., p. 54).

There are many subjects for profitable study. The precepts for this Day are not given all in one book, to be learned like a catechism. They are interspersed, restated and interwoven in the Words that streamed from the Supreme Pen. Only by study can we even begin to glimpse the great wisdom and justice and beauty of these Commands.

To the Study Aids Committee there seem to be in general two types of study: (1) Organized weekly study class and (2) study among one or two persons meeting less often. The former would be possible in a Baha'i community; the latter, among isolated believers or small groups.

For the organized class there are Outlines available if one is desired, and the Study Aids Committee will be happy to suggest forms of study that would be suitable, if it is informed concerning the need or interest of the community. For the conduct of a study class, or discussion group, an organizer is advisable, who will serve to keep the discussion on the subject, to assign chairmanship of the Class to different members and to make sure that everyone takes part in the study, in the discussion, in the reading and particularly in looking up answers in the Writings to questions that may come up.

For the individual believer or small group, organized study is more difficult, because the incentive to meet with the rest of the class is not present. Probably there are but few believers, however, who are so isolated that they cannot meet with one or two other Baha'is once or twice a month. If only two people can meet together, much can be gained through Baha'i study. Or even if you have no Baha'i neighbors, you can study alone. Perhaps the Study Aids Committee can help you with suggestions as to how to study or what to study. The Committee offers itself as a contact point through correspondence for your study and can perhaps help you find answers in the Writings to questions that may arise in your study.

"To deepen ... the Spirit of His Cause in our own individual lives" there is no surer way than study of His Work and the putting into action of the inspiration derived. Much more is gained by study of the Writings than by simply reading them, whether in an organized study class or in a group composed of two persons. For in study, consultation enters. In group study one person may remember and be able to find another passage in the Writings where the same subject is mentioned. Cross reference these passages in your book, and your understanding will increase by this research. Questions will arise. Look up the answers in the Writings and bring them to the next class. Thus all will contribute and all will benefit.

The Study Aids Committee will be glad to receive suggestions from groups that have engaged in helpful study. We all long to serve in whatever way we can, and to increase the effectiveness of our service.

Child Education

Dear Parents and Teachers: Many of you have asked us for advice in starting a Baha'i children's class. Because we had some rather general suggestions which we felt would be helpful to you, we have prepared a short manual comprising these, and this is now available for fifteen cents, to be obtained by writing to Baha'i Publishing Committee, 110 Linden Ave. Wilmette, Ill. In the manual we have shared with you some of our ideas which have been formulated through experience in teaching small groups of children. We tried to put in what we thought you might want most to know, and decided on the following headings: How to group children; a sample hour; music; course material for different ages; excursions; books to use; and references for suitable memory verses. Perhaps some of you will have other suggestions which would be helpful if shared. After you have secured the manual, write us, whether it helps you, or whether it doesn't. (We want to know that too!) Write us some of your own experiences in teaching children about the Faith, and tell us what you feel is most needed in course material.

A revision of the course on the Principles of the Faith will be ready soon, and we are hoping to have a new set of mimeographed pictures to be colored in conjunction with it. As soon as this is ready, we promise to let you know. We realize how sparse the actual course material for children is, and are working to meet this need. At present we are at work on a rather ambitious piece of work which goes far too slowly to suit us, but which we feel you will appreciate when completed.

Have you used the Bahá’í Child’s
A B C with the younger children yet? We feel that this is really valuable for a child five to eight, but whether you are using it in the home or in a class, it may be well to remember that children of these ages retain little at one sitting. Read over two or three pages with a small child at one time, and talk about the meaning with him. Let your child ask questions which occur to him, even if they seem far afield. Abdu’r-Rahman Baha’u’llah says that children learn through questioning one another. If you are working with several children, allow them to question each other, acting as a guide and stabilizer yourself. We feel that this is a book containing principles and ideas which lend themselves to discussion, and which can best be absorbed through leisurely and thoughtful perusal. If you do not have this little red book, you may obtain it from the Publishing Committee, for seventy-five cents. If you have a child, don’t let him miss this treasure.

The Child Education Committee is sending to each local Spiritual Assembly in the United States a free copy of the “Manual of Suggestions
For Organizing A Bahá’í Children’s Hour.” Each Community is urged to start a children’s hour.

Write to us and tell us what you are thinking about Child Education.
We need your thoughts.

Youth

The National Youth Committee, with the two-fold objective of assisting the Bahá’í youth in their study of the Writings and of stimulating and coordinating their activities so that they may be enabled to more effectively take part in the teaching and administrative work of the Faith, has laid plans for activities in which youth nationally and to some extent internationally will participate.

An outline of these plans appears in the first issue of the National Youth bulletin, sent to all declared youth. In order that the youth may realize their responsibilities in the Bahá’í community and that Assemblies and communities may in turn guide and assist the youth in their efforts to promote the Cause, we are asking the friends to consider ways in which these plans may be carried out.

Two regional youth conferences have been planned to take place simultaneously in three regional areas — West, Mid-West and East, with San Francisco, Chicago and New York acting as host communities. They will be held on October 13th and 14th of this year and on April 6th and 7th of next year.

Our annual International Youth Day, at which time Bahá’í youth will present at public meetings a symposium, will be held on February 24, 1946. In addition, another symposium, a National Youth Day, is being established in order that youth all over the country may have another opportunity to promulgate the Message of Baha’u’llah. National Youth
Day will be held on November 18, 1945, and we hope that it may also become an annual event. Subjects for talks for both this and the International Youth Day will be suggested later.

We wish to mention also the Youth
Bulletin which will appear this year as a larger edition every other month. If there are declared youth in your community who are not receiving the Bulletin, please send their names to the National Spiritual Assembly so that the National Youth Committee may be in contact with them.

Assembly Development

Consultation

The oldest subject in the western Baha’i world would seem to be consultation. What is consultation? At its best it is a collective channel for the Will of God.

The Assembly Development Committee has enjoyed some comparative experience which may be helpful. They find, for example, that several mistakes are made in the name of consultation, mistakes of the community at large.

Community Mistakes
in Consultation

First, backbiting is often a substitute for consultation. We are all guilty of long telephone conversations “for the good of the Cause,” during which complaints and grievances are aired, without the slightest intention of consultation with either the accused persons or their administrative channels. A legitimate report to a Bahá’í administrative body, be it committee or Assembly, for the sake of the safety and well-bearing of the Faith or its projects, is very different from negative rurors and careless criticism. The test of backbiting is the question, “Am
I speaking to those who can help, and have I thoroughly gone over it first with those whom it concerns?”

Nor is an Assembly member justified in spreading the details of an Assembly consultation on personal matters, for this, too, is in the nature of backbiting.

Second, individual expression is sometimes a substitute for consultation. To consult with the views and feelings of all on group matters is very helpful; to talk over possibilities for group action with fellow Assembly or committee members is likewise helpful. But to proceed without final consultation by the appointed group is not permitted. Not even a chairman may speak for his Assembly. Freedom of suggestion is one thing; freedom of action another. The Feast offers the best of all opportunities for community consultation.

The Assembly Meetings

We can take to ourselves a number of considerations for the Assembly meeting itself, for in this exalted body lies the seed of the World Order.

First, the committee pleads for greater regularity. Lack of meetings inevitably results in undue individual action, bringing grief not only to the group, but to the devoted and capable individual upon whom the burden falls. What are your regular dates for meetings?

Second, the greatest care should be taken that the consultation of the Assembly be full, free, frank and representative of all members. Every member will need to school himself to listen with courtesy to the views of his collaborators, and be open to change of mind.

It is the duty of the chairman to see that each one expresses himself, that the consultation be kept within the orbit of the subject, and that no one unduly monopolizes the attention of the group. It is incumbent upon each one to realize that he is one-ninth. Avoidance of repetition is an excellent training in self-restraint. The best chairman often talks the least and does his utmost to pass around the circle, drawing out the members of the group, even when their views are diametrically opposed to his own.

There are no minorities on a Bahá'í Assembly. If a unanimous opinion is not obtainable, the matter must not be allowed to weary everyone, but rather, after a reasonable time, be brought to a vote, and the will of the majority be loyally accepted.

Shoghi Effendi emphasizes our common need of prayer in consultation. "They should, after dispassionate, anxious and cordial consultation, turn to God in prayer, and with earnestness and conviction and courage record their vote and abide by the voice of the majority, which we are told by the Master to be the voice of truth, never to be challenged, and always to be wholeheartedly enforced. True values are apt to be hidden by strong emotions; it is especially good to stop and take recourse in prayer whenever the issue is clouded by feeling.

Functions of the Assembly A Basis of Consultation

We have found that it is easy for an Assembly, particularly a new or isolated one, either to drown itself in minutia of detail which could be turned over to committees, or to fall into irrelevant subjects. This tendency to "go astray" in consultation might be checked by a consideration of the important and ever-present functions of the Assembly.

1. It is for each Assembly to maintain the integrity of the Faith and the accuracy of the Teachings, written and oral, given to the public of that community.

2. The Assembly must make available the literature. Do you have a lending library, as well as proper representation in the public library of the city? Do you have an up-to-date list of books and pamphlets now on sale? Do you display samples of all the new literature at the feasts and public meetings, and arrange for gift literature as well as for sales?

3. The Assembly represents the community in its relation to the Guardian, to the National Assembly, and to other communities. This in no wise forbids personal freedom in these relationships.

4. The Assembly determines memberships within the community.

5. The meetings are called by the Assembly, including feasts and anniversaries. The nine Holy Days are a part of our privilege and obligation, and every assembly will wish to safeguard their observance.

6. The appointment and supervision of all committees lies with the Assembly. How often does your Assembly meet with its important committees or their representatives? Is there plenty of consultation and encouragement, as well as monetary assistance?

7. Collection and expenditure of funds is an Assembly function.

8. The Assembly must promote the material and spiritual education of the children and youth.

9. They must endeavor to promote amity and concord amongst the friends.

10. The Assembly is the "Good Shepherd" and protects the individual rights as well as the group. Bahá'u'lláh Himself has said, "It behooveth them to be the trusted ones of the Merciful among men and to regard themselves as the guardians appointed by God for all that dwell on earth. It is incumbent upon them to take counsel together and to have regard for the interest of the servants of God, for His sake, even as they regard their own interests, and to choose that which is meet and seemly."

Teaching, The Emphasis

The chief concern of every Assembly remains the obligation to teach. "They must regard themselves in no other light," writes Shoghi Effendi, "but that of chosen instruments for a more efficient and dignified presentation of the Cause of God." Happy is the Assembly whose consultation moves ever and always around the mighty tasks of propagating God's Kingdom.

Spiritual Attitudes

And in conclusion, "let us bear in mind that the keynote of the Cause of God is not dictatorial authority but humble fellowship, not arbitrary power, but the spirit of frank and loving consultation. Nothing short of a true Bahá'í can hope to reconcile the principles of mercy and justice, of freedom and submission, of the sanctity of the right of the individual and of self-surrender, of vigilance, discretion and prudence on the one hand and fellowship, candor and courage on the other."

How dispassionate and objective we have to be! "The members of these Assemblies . . . must disregard utterly their own likes and dislikes, their personal interests and inclinations, and concentrate their minds upon those measures that will conduce to the welfare and happiness of the Bahá'í community."

Step by step our heroic bands of believers are approaching that standard, a standard that has more of the celestial degree than any previous religious dispensation can boast. Without ministerial or priestly assistance, innumerable groups comprising every nationality, race and social stratum, are today attaining to consultation as a way of life. Even in this period of the half-light we are beginning to see the true importance of the words of our revered Guardian: “The various Assemblies, local and national, constitute today the bedrock upon which the Universal House of Justice is in future to be firmly established and raised. Not until these functions vigorously and harmoniously can the hope for the termination of the period of transition be realized.”

Visitor from India
The following item appeared July 12th in Wilmette Life under the head: “Conference Leader from India Visits at the Bahá’í Temple.”
“Sir. Ramaswami Madhiah of India, head of the Indian delegation at the San Francisco Conference, and the supply member of the Indian Governor General’s Executive council was a distinguished visitor to the Bahá’í House of Worship in Wilmette this week.”
“At the conference he headed his delegation and was also chairman of the Commission on the Economic and Social council. He was largely responsible for much of the success attending these deliberations in drawing up the part of the Charter which many view as one of the most important parts of the United Nations’ organization and the most hopeful for the building of a real and permanent peace for tomorrow. In fact, on the day it was presented several spoke of it as the ‘heart of the Charter.’

“Sir. Ramaswami is en route to London via Montreal, the headquarters of the International Labor organization, also visiting our national Capital. Having heard much of the Bahá’í Faith in India and London, he, with his party, made a special stop in Chicago to visit the House of Worship.”

Comment From Outside
The New Haven friends report that God Passes By and The Bahá’í Centenary were both reviewed sympathetically by non-Bahá’ís in The New Haven Journal Courier. The former book was given a whole column on the editorial page. The need for a unified religion is emphasized, a powerful quotation from Canon Townshend’s introduction is quoted, the Bahá’í Administrative order is touched on, and the seven candles of unity are enumerated, with this comment, “The realization of these seven points of Bahá’u’lláh is through his twelve leading principles in analysis and is at once the revelation of Bahá’í vision and the essence of today’s most alert minds.” The twelve principles follow, and the reviewer adds: “Read this book ‘God Passes By’ for a clearer concept of a Faith whose adherence would bring us nearer to a Peace on our domestic as well as our national lives. Whatever your nationality or creed, from East or West, . . . you will find in this book a new insight into the aspects of Truth.”

In ludicrous contrast to this is a warning against the Bahá’í Faith included in the program of a church in Regina, Saskatchewan, which Bahá’ís will find entertaining. “Bahaism believes the true successor to Mohammed (who did not die, they say) will appear one day, establishing justice on earth. He reveals himself thru persons known as Bab’s. The present one is Shoghi Effendi, who calls himself The Everlasting Father, identifying himself with God . . . It is silent on the doctrines of sin, repentance and forgiveness, and in place of the immortality of the soul, teaches unadulterated earthly happiness for the ‘believers’ . . . Christians should read their Bibles, and see there the matchless supremacy of Jesus Christ, in order to confute B’haism.”

Local Assemblies
Local Annual Reports
The year ending April 21, 1945, was one of increased Bahá’í activity according to the annual reports that have been received by the National Spiritual Assembly. The highlights of each community’s activities are summarized here.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA
The northermost of our Bahá’í assemblies in the second year of its existence has been able to make the name of Bahá’u’lláh more widely known throughout Alaska. The Peace Broadsides were of great assistance to this community so far from other teaching aids. The four broadsides were printed in their entirety in the daily paper. They were used as the basis of a 15 minute radio forum in which the radio announcer and two Bahá’ís participated. Also the names of three hundred public officials, editors, teachers, and other leading citizens were compiled and sent to the National Spiritual Assemby with the suggestion that they be sent the Peace Broadsides.

Anchorage Bahá’ís through correspondence and the sending of literature reached persons in twenty other Alaskan cities and villages.

Two Bahá’í pioneer settlers, Miss Janet Whitenack and Mr. Verne Green, were united in marriage, and the radio announcement of their engagement and the newspaper accounts of their engagement and marriage emphasized their connection with the Bahá’í Faith. The first Alaskan Bahá’í baby was born to Florence and Maurice Green.

Twice the USO made use of Bahá’í speakers, once during a Lenten series, “Adventures in Understanding” with Jewish and Christian representatives, and once at a dinner meeting of the Toastmaster’s Club.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA
The first history of the Bahá’í Faith in Atlanta was written by Miss Olga Finke, who came to Atlanta as Out of town speakers included Mrs. the papers as well as “news notices.

For a week a local store carried a display window with a picture of the temple and Bahá’í literature. A local book store gave the Bahá’í literature a table.

The race unity banquet held in celebration of the Centenary was so enriching an experience the community felt they would like to feature such an event every spring.

On March 30, 1945, a public peace meeting was held with Virginia C. Foster as the out-of-town speaker. Concerted publicity efforts preceded the meeting and it was hoped that study classes could be conducted to follow up the talk.

A study class on the 36 Lesson Course and one on Bahá’í Administration were held regularly throughout the year. For the public meetings, the Assembly ran paid ads in the papers as well as news notices. Out of town speakers included Mrs. Randolph Bolles, Mr. Curtis Kelsey, Mr. Louis Gregory, and Mr. William Towart. The most intensive teaching campaigns were conducted when Mrs. Ruth Moffett lectured every evening for a week and held a study class every afternoon, and when Mr. Reginald King lectured every night for two weeks. Both were able to speak over the nearby radio station WKNE in Keene, New Hampshire.

For a week a local store carried a display window with a picture of the temple and Bahá’í literature. A local book store gave the Bahá’í literature a table.

The Community moved into a new center in the Barber Building. They write, “We pray that the divine outpourings hasten the day of the fulfillment of the tasks before us.”

The public peace meeting suggested by the National Spiritual Assembly was held in the court house on April 15, 1945, with Mr. W. Kenneth Christian giving the “Bahá’í Plan for Peace” and two non-Bahá’ís speaking, Dr. Eugene Pfaff, Director of the Southern Council of International Relations and Mr. R. E. Martin, faculty member of the local Negro A. and T. College.

A paid newspaper advertisement and two hundred printed invitations drew an audience of 110.

“We have conducted weekly study classes during most of the year. These have been bi-racial but have not proved very conducive to growth. After having given this a fair trial we plan with the consent of the Guardian to have some separate classes. Those familiar with the local situation realize that most white non-believers need to catch the spirit of the divine teachings first; for prejudiced through inherited tradition, they are prone to be upset when suddenly confronted with this departure from custom before having opportunity to learn the broad aspects of the teachings. This is also true of the majority of the negroes.”

In October, 1944, the local spiritual assembly of Kansas City became incorporated and by the time the report was sent in, the papers were on file in the state capital.
Last year’s teaching activities in Kansas City were varied. There were public classes held at the Y.M.C.A., the Kay Hotel, and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Bailey, Sunday evening fireside meetings at the home of Mrs. John Bechtel, and twenty-two porch meetings and three luncheons at the home of Mrs. Sudy Hurlock.

The Bahá’í mothers helped to form the Kansas City Youth Fellowship. For one meeting Mrs. Opal Winan of Independence, Missouri, showed pictures of the Temple and took pictures in color of the group.

MADISON, WISCONSIN

An active youth group in Madison has met every other Sunday. They attracted ten non-Bahá’í youth through a picnic.

To celebrate the birth of the Báb on October 19, the Bahá’ís had a pot luck supper and met the first Japanese Bahá’í, Mr. Yamamoto, the father of one of the members of the Madison community.

On November 14, the public librarian reviewed Sunner Welles’ Time for Decision, Walter Lippman’s U. S. War Aims, and Becker’s How New Will the Better World Be, while Mrs. Mae Stebbins gave the Bahá’í peace plan.

Two colored people have been attending meetings since the Race Unity meeting at which Mrs. William Fries spoke on the scientific attitude toward race and Mrs. John Svendsen spoke on the Bahá’í teachings of the oneness of humanity.

Four babies were named in a ceremony conducted by Mr. Clarence Niss at the time of the Naw-Rúz. They were James Griffen, Joan Fries, Patricia Schneck, and Bruce Scott.

MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

Inter-American solidarity was demonstrated when Bahá’ís acted as hosts at the Milwaukee Center July 14, to the Latin American friends attending the All-America Bahá’í Centenary Convention. The spirit of oneness “rose to such heights that Sr. Salvador Tormo of Buenos Aires arose spontaneously as did all the rest, and asked the friends to clasped hands and pledge themselves anew to carry on this ‘Great Work’ so that love and unity may soon prevail throughout the world.”

A Second historic event was the Peace Banquet held at the Schroeder Hotel, March 24, 1945. Mr. William Sears and Mrs. Dorothy Baker spoke before an audience of over seven hundred including many Bahá’ís from nearby communities and including such outstanding non-Bahá’ís as Dr. Frank E. Baker, President of the Wisconsin State Teacher’s College, Mr. Lowell B. Goodrich, Superintendent of the Milwaukee Public Schools, Mr. Daniel Hoan, ex-Mayor of Milwaukee, Miss Dorothy Enders, Director of Social and Municipal Recreation Centers, Mr. William V. Kelley, Secretary of the Milwaukee Urban League, Miss Elizabeth Campbell, Executive Secretary of the International Institute of Milwaukee County, and Mrs. Grace M. Corwin, Executive Director of the Milwaukee Sentinel. There were also clergymen present. The races were well represented with the presence of Negroes, Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiians, and Indians. In the lobby of the hotel was a display of a temple model and Bahá’í books.

The Milwaukee assembly did extension work in Green Bay, Oshkosh, Manitowoc, and Shorewood.

Among the young, there were two children’s classes, one for those from 4-8 and another for those from 8-14. Also there was a youth group which met weekly, presented a Christmas program and a Youth Symposium and inaugurated a Louhelen Scholarship Fund. The Youth group sponsored a number of picnics and social events.

During the Centenary, the library committee was able to arrange for a display of Bahá’í Books and a picture of the temple at the public library. Thirteen books and pamphlets were donated to the public library.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT

A full column review of the Guardian’s book, God Passes By appeared on the editorial page of the New Haven Journal-Courier. At the request of the National News Service, five additional copies were sent to it, and one of these went to the Guardian.

At the time of the nationwide Centennial celebration, New Haven Bahá’ís held a banquet on May 25, 1944. Thirty-seven attended, including eight Negroes. Guest speakers were Rabbi Louis Greenberg and Mrs. Ethel Hunt of Washington, D.C.

Each Sunday a study class and a public meeting were held at the Center, 33 Wall Street. In January it was decided to discontinue hiring the room since the meetings held in the homes seemed as well attended as those held in the Center.

RENO, NEVADA

One of the most spectacular of the Reno community efforts was a symposium at the State Building on February 10th on “The Prerequisites of World Peace.” The speakers were Dr. John O. Moseley, President of the University of Nevada, Mr. Samuel Platt, attorney, and Mr. Leroy Iosso, of the Baha’i National Spiritual Assembly. There was an attendance of a hundred and fifty.

On March 24th “Youth’s Responsibility in the Post-War World” was the subject of a Youth symposium at the Reno Little Theatre. Seventy people heard a young woman student from the University of Nevada, a blind boy from Reno High school, Mr. Richard Walton of the Washoe County Bahá’í group, and a young Negro girl pianist.

Reno Bahá’ís have averaged two radio broadcasts a month over station KOH and have been successful in obtaining other publicity. A local store includes free announcements of Bahá’í public meetings in its Friday morning broadcasts of local events. An announcement of public meetings concludes every regular Bahá’í broadcast. Two paid spot ads precede each special public meeting. Each of the two local papers carries announcements of the weekly Saturday public meetings and paid advertisements entitle the Bahá’ís to a free article preceding each special public event. They have made dignified posters for each of the symposiums and have mailed numerous invitations.

Two Bahá’ís have served as advisors to an inter-racial club meeting weekly at the Y.M.C.A. They have secured Bahá’í speakers for the club and have been instrumental in getting permission for all Negroes to use the public skating rink one afternoon each week.

Urbana, Illinois

Urbana’s Centennial celebration consisted of a successful inter-racial banquet held at the Urbana- Lincoln Hotel and attended by 130, a public meeting in the University of Illinois Union Building, a radio talk over station WDWS, and large advertisements besides free news space showing pictures of the banquet and describing the celebration in each of the newspapers.

The Illinois Times, a Negro weekly paper serving the central Illinois area, published by Mr. Edgar Harris a Bahá’í of the Champaign group, has published weekly reports of Bahá’í teachings, providing a unique opportunity for publicity.

Among the Youth activities were a series of Sunday morning breakfasts at a local park followed by a devotional period of readings from the writings of Abdu’l-Bahá. Several non-Bahá’ís have been interested in the writings when they were assigned the devotion period for one of the Sundays.

The local Race Unity meeting was sponsored as a symposium by the Youth: “Contributing to Better Race Relations,” Miss Lucy Nobler, a college student presenting the contributions of science, Miss Mary Grace Jordan, secretary of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People presenting the contributions of such organizations, and Mr. Farhang Javid presenting the contributions of the Bahá’í Faith and religion, Mrs. Robert Hutchens coordinated the program.

Each month a ten minute Bahá’í program is presented over station WDWS. The music of Handel’s Largo cushions the program from the commercials before and after. Sometimes the music is softened for the reading of a Hidden Word or short quotation keynoting the talk.

There are regular weekly public meetings at the Bahá’í Center and occasional special meetings at the Champaign City Building. The Bahá’ís have been holding weekly study classes on God Passes By.

Extension work was done in Champaign, and Urbana Bahá’ís have cooperated with a newly inaugurated circuit system providing monthly out of town speakers to central Illinois communities and groups. Three hundred Peace Broadsides were mailed to well known people in this community.

Vancouver, British Columbia

On May 23, 1944, Vancouver Bahá’ís and their friends attended a banquet at the Devonshire Hotel. There were fifty persons present to hear Miss Mae McKenna and Mrs. Blanche Liddell. Cooperating with the National Centennial Committee the assembly arranged for a fifteen minute radio talk over station KJOR presented by Miss Muriel Warnicker.

Mr. Rowland Estall, Mr. George Latimer, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Ioas, and Mr. Ernie Sala all spoke in Vancouver as part of their teaching tours. Emerio Sala’s talk in the York Room of the Hotel Georgia on February 12th drew an audience of seventy.

Wauwatosa, Wisconsin

Independent fireside groups and weekly study classes have been held by the Bahá’ís of Wauwatosa as well as joint public meetings with the Milwaukee Bahá’ís. Fourteen attend the weekly study classes, including seven or eight who are not Bahá’ís. The class studies alternate weeks Bahá’í World Faith and the study outline Fundamentals of Bahá’í Membership.

Several feasts were open to friends of Bahá’ís and an intercalary party was held to promote fellowship.

Wauwatosa Bahá’ís helped entertain the Inter-American delegates when they were in Milwaukee, and helped with the large area Bahá’í Peace Banquet there. They send five children to the Milwaukee children’s classes, and contribute to the Milwaukee Louhelen Scholarship Fund.

To stimulate closer inter-community cooperation, the assembly frequently secures chairmen from surrounding communities when there is a public meeting.

Editor’s Note: The above items have been gleaned from the annual reports of local assemblies to the N.S.A. for the year 1943-1944. In February “Bahá’í News” we will publish a final article based on such reports as have been sent in before January 1st.

News of Other Lands

Germany

The following extract is from a letter to David and Margaret Ruhe from John Elchinenauer:

“Was visiting the Bahá’í Summer School in Esslingen last Sunday and saw the names of several of the Kunz family in the guest book. How happy I was to see the names of so many friends I knew. Calvin Wilder, a fellow believer, and I first found the Bahá’ís in Esslingen on May sixth and since then have contacted the believers in Stuttgart, Goeppingen, Geislingen, Darmstadt and Heidelberg. About a week ago two of the LSA and I obtained written authorization from Capt. Carvel Busey, Religious and Education Officer of Stuttgart Military Government, for Bahá’í activities. He was very considerate . . . had read some (Bahá’í) books and offered to help me whenever I need it. The local assemblies will apply and later we can write USFET for permission for the NSA. This afternoon the Feast will be held at Bahá’í School on the hill in Esslingen.

(Editor’s Note: Captains Carvel Busey is a cousin of Dr. Garretta Busey of Urbana, Illinois, and heard of the Cause in that city.)

Norway

Urbana friends have heard during the summer from Miss Johanna Schubarth of Oslo, Norway. Miss Schubarth became a Bahá’í while living in Urbana. She returned to her native Norway in order to spread the Faith there, has translated into Norwegian and published "Baha'u'llah and the New Era" and translated the "Iqan," "Hidden Words" and "Advent of Divine Justice."

Miss Schubarth writes that she hopes her health will soon be better and enable her to return to her profession of nursing.

Switzerland

We give below a summary of the annual report from the Bahá'í Bureau at Geneva.

Switzerland, spared the fire of war, has been a haven of refuge for hundreds of thousands of refugees, particularly children from devastated areas who have been hospitalized there.

In Zurich the friends have continued their meetings and have added to their number.

At Heerbrugg Mr. Semle has given two public talks which were favorably received and followed by long and animated discussions.

The Bureau has continued to get out its "Monthly Page," planned to help the friends to remain steadfast in obedience to the revealed Commandments and also for interested outsiders to demonstrate the working out of the Divine Plan in present-day events.

"We are happy and grateful to say that the priceless comfort and strengthening help of the Guardian's letters has not been withheld from us throughout this period."

Toward the end of the year 1941 both letters and periodicals came through from the outside world, Australia, France, Great Britain, U.S., Haifa, Egypt, Iraq and Porto Rico.

Lucien Migette wrote from Lyons, where she is still working, having had two miraculous escapes from danger of death.

Mr. and Mrs. Pomper of Warsaw, parents of Boris Pomper, who did work on the Polish translation of "Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era" were hospitalized at the Geneva Bureau after their release from an internment camp.

M. Renaud Richez, one of the first in Geneva to recognize the Light of this Day, passed away in April. He was a Belgian, a worker in the Secretariat of the League of Nations, and was one of the five who signed the statutes of the Bahá'í Bureau for its official registration in 1930.

Passing of a Great Pioneer

A letter from the National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma has brought the sad news of the passing into the Abhá Kingdom of Siyyid Muṣṭafá Roumie. On hearing of the death of this distinguished pioneer the Guardian sent the Indian and Burman Assembly the following cable dated July 14:

"Hearts griefstricken passing supreme concourse distinguished pioneer faith Bahá'u'lláh dearly beloved staunch high minded Noble Soul Siyyid Muṣṭafá stop Long record his superb services both teaching administrative fields shed lustre on both heroic and formative ages Bahá'í dispensation stop His magnificent achievements fully entitle him join ranks hands cause Bahá'u'lláh stop His resting place should be regarded foremost shrine community Burmese believers stop Advise holding memorial gatherings throughout India honour his imperishable memory stop Urge Indian Burmese Bahá'ís participate construction tomb stop Cabling three hundred pounds my personal contribution so praiseworthy purpose — Shoghi Rabbani."

France

David Hofman recently made a trip to the Continent with Ensá and was able to meet some of the friends in Paris. He saw seven of them; amongst others, Miss Sanderson, Mrs. Scott, Mme. Hess and Mr. Kennedy. They were all well, though cold, owing to the complete lack of fuel, and without many other necessities. They have been through severe difficulties. All were questioned by the Gestapo after the Germans arrived in Paris, but all except one were left alone afterwards. The Germans tried to confiscate all their books, but fortunately they were able to point out that the flat of the secretary, Mr. Kennedy, had been destroyed by a bomb and books with it. In that way they were able to save some books which were stored in another place. The community lost four members during the war: Mrs. Kennedy died, Mlle. Alcan was killed in an air-raid; Mrs. Stannard died of cancer in November, 1944; and Mme. Montefiore was taken to a concentration camp and has not been heard of since. Other friends left Paris and have not returned. In spite of all their difficulties, however, those who remained, though at one time reduced to three, have held a meeting on the first Sunday of every month in Miss Sanderson's flat throughout the period of the German occupation.

We are glad indeed to know that these friends are safe and to get in touch with them again. It was possible to send a small parcel of food and soap over by a traveller going to Paris and we hope to get other similar opportunities of showing our sympathy.

Bulgaria

We also hear that Miss Jack, the well-known pioneer in Bulgaria, who is eighty years old, has returned to Sofia from a village where she lived after her home in Sofia was bombed. She and all the Sofia believers, with the exception of one, have survived and are now trying to resume their teaching activities.

Persia

The Spiritual Assembly of Isfahan has communicated to the Guardian a detailed account describing the transfer of the remains of the two great Baha’i martyrs known as the “King of Martyrs” and the “Beloved of Martyrs” to the new Baha’i cemetery situated outside that town. This was done in accordance with the explicit desire of the Guardian and the decision and help of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of Iran.

In November, 1943, the Guardian wired to the said Assembly that it was a duty and an absolute necessity to start immediately on the historic project of building the tombs of the “King of Martyrs” and the “Beloved of Martyrs,” himself contributing for this purpose the sum of one thousand pounds sterling. We now learn from the official report sent to the Guardian signed by nine members of the Spiritual Assembly of Isfahan and four other believers that the said project was brought to a successful completion on the 15th of March, 1944. On that day, the remains of the twin martyrs which had previously been removed from their original resting place by a committee appointed by the Spiritual Assembly, their new coffins sealed in three places with the sign of the Greatest Name and kept in a safe place, in the house of one of the members of the Spiritual Assembly, were placed in two specially built stone receptacles and laid to rest in their new tombs, separated one meter from each other, in the Baha’i cemetery. The ceremony of the transfer took place in an atmosphere of great reverence and a Tablet revealed in their honor by Bahá’u’lláh was recited on this occasion.

The “King of Martyrs” and the “Beloved of Martyrs” were the sons of Mirzâ Ibrahim Efêzhânî, who was one of the early believers in the Bahá’í religion, whom he had personally met. It is believed that one night in Isfahan, he had the privilege of serving the Bahá’ís at supper time. The two martyred brothers were very famous in their home town, not merely for their great material wealth, but for the extraordinary nobility of their character. They were most helpful and generous to everyone who went to them with his pains and troubles. When Bahá’u’lláh was in Iraq, they left Isfahan twice and proceeded to Baghdad, where they had the wonderful privilege of spending some time in His presence. On one occasion, they both forwarded a humble petition to Bahá’u’lláh while He was still in Baghdad, begging that they might sacrifice their lives in His path and thus attain the honor of martyrdom.

And so it was. Two of the most prominent theologians and religious leaders of Isfahan, Mír Siyyid Husayn and Shaykh Bahá, named by Bahá’u’lláh—because of their inhumanity and merciless cruelty—as the Snake and the Wolf respectively, prevailed upon the governor of Isfahan, who was then one of the sons of the Shah of Persia, to order their arrest. Whereupon, the two brothers were thrown into prison, chained and tortured. Shortly after, they were brought out of prison, conducted to the execution place and, by the personal order of the Snake and the Wolf, beheaded.

At the time when the sword of the executioner was brandishing in the air over their heads, they were holding each other in a brotherly embrace and uttering the Most Great Name. After the execution, their bodies were dragged on the ground to a deserted plot of land and placed under a partially ruined wall. This wall was then pulled down on their bodies. On that same night their bodies were recovered by a third brother and properly buried in a cemetery.

The position of these two resplendent souls is supreme among the Baha’i martyrs. Indeed, Bahá’u’lláh Himself definitely established their unique station when He called them the “King of Martyrs” and the “Beloved of Martyrs.”

Among the acts of hooliganism and vandalism, the victims of which were Baha’is and Bahá’í property, was one that took place last May in the village of Abádah, in southern Persia. A mob nearly four thousand strong, attacked the Bahá’í Centre and Guest House, pillaging and setting on fire Bahá’í property, furniture and books, and fatally injuring four believers.

But trials and sufferings serve only to strengthen the determination of the believers that they must hasten and redouble their efforts in their glorious task of spiritually educating mankind. Thus, it is a great pleasure to learn that during the last four years, the Bahá’í Teaching Plan and programs have continued uninterrupted in Persia. Bahá’í teachers classes have been organized in various Bahá’í centres. Four of these classes were held in Tehran alone, with upwards of two hundred prospective Bahá’í teachers attending them. Aside from these classes, twenty-three recognized and well-known Bahá’í Teachers have given their full time to teaching activities and forty-one Bahá’í Teachers travelled throughout Persia to proclaim the word of God.

The movement of Bahá’í families travelling to and settling in various new districts and provinces has been increased and accelerated. These families have been subjected to great sufferings and privations at the hands of the ill-wishers of the Cause, but as a result of their work, one hundred and eighty-seven new Bahá’í centres have been established in various parts of the country.

The believers in Persia have not only helped to finance their own Bahá’í projects and activities, but have also forwarded one thousand pounds Sterling for the national “Haziratu’l-Quds” (Bahá’í House) in each of the following countries: Syria, Egypt and India; two thousand five hundred Pounds Sterling for Australia and New Zealand and five hundred Pounds for the Haziratu’l-Quds of Kuweit in Baghdad.

‘Iraq

The Bahá’í Centenary Celebration in Baghdad has given a great impetus to the activities of the Teaching Committee as a result of many inquiries on the part of those who have become interested in the Bahá’í Faith. The Teaching Committee has been meeting five times weekly to discuss with those interested the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Bahá'í women in Irán, are given every opportunity to study the Bahá'í Faith and to prepare themselves to serve the Cause side by side with the men. The Women's Progress Committee is actively engaged in this noble task.

Classes for the study of the Bahá'í Teachings and principles for Bahá'í children, young men and women continue regularly and successfully.

Balúchistán

"We are very happy to learn from a letter addressed to the Guardian by the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Quetta in Balúchistán that the believers in that town have at last been able to have a Bahá'í cemetery of their own. The government authorities, after some difficulty, allowed the Bahá'í Assembly to purchase a piece of land necessary for that purpose.

As a result of the efforts made by the Spiritual Assembly of Quetta, the authorities have exempted the Bahá'í House and the land on which it is built from paying the land and property taxes. Other heartening news from Quetta is the opening of a public Bahá'í library in that town.

India

From the annual report of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of India and Burma for 1944-1945 we glean the following:

The National Spiritual Assembly is trying to achieve greater administrative efficiency. It held six meetings during eleven months of 1944-1945. These meetings were all held at the administrative center at New Delhi. The annual report gives the attendance record of each member of the Assembly at these meetings. The Assembly also achieved the transfer of the office of the treasurer to the National Headquarters.

"This is a step forward but it has been almost fully realized that the immediate ideal is the transfer of all the members in office during their term of office to Delhi, inasmuch as the object of assemblies and committees is administration through consultation and consultation is not possible by correspondence.

"International. When this assembly learned about the martyrdoms in Iran, it wired to H.I.M. the Shah of Iran and the Persian Parliament expressing its horror at the tragic event, emphasized the law-abiding nature of the Bahá'ís, their obedience to established Governments, the love that the Bahá'í community of India bore for the native land of Bahá'u'lláh. The assembly drew their attention to the sympathetic interest that similar persecutions in the past had evoked in the breasts of Western writers and finally it appealed for justice and for an impartial treatment of Bahá'ís.

"Mr. Muhammed Sáed, the Prime Minister, chiefly responsible for those dastardly acts, was reminded by the Assembly in its wire that though Persia had been bathed in the blood of Bahá'í martyrs during the last century yet had it failed to stamp out God's Cause from Persia's soil. It further touched upon the lustre that the heroism of Bahá'í martyrs had shed upon the land and the stain which the abominations committed by their persecutors had left upon it. In conclusion the assembly called to his mind the Words of the Báb addressed to a predecessor of his, Hájí Mirzá Aqá, the all-powerful Prime Minister in His day and the arch-opponent of the Cause, wherein the Báb warns him that were the Prime Minister to succeed in killing Him, He will have suffered as the saints and prophets of God had suffered but that act would call down on his (the Prime Minister's) head the curse of God and His eternal wrath.

"It is significant to note that not long after this event Mr. Muhammed Sáed was compelled to resign from his post.

"Visitors. We were happy to have a number of visitors from abroad this year. Most of them were Persians on their way to America. We hope a greater contact with Bahá'ís from other lands will be rendered possible. That it would be beneficial is evident from the instructions of the Guardian to Mr. A. Samimi, now in India, who sought his permission to go to Haifa. "Seize (this) opportunity," ran the cable, "(to) visit the Bahá'í centers throughout India. Promotion of the Faith (at the) present juncture (is) more meritorious (than a) visit (to the) Shrines." Mr. Samimi will visit as many assemblies and groups as the time at his disposal will permit. Other friends from abroad, some passing through, others serving in the armed forces, have given us in one or more centres the pleasure of their company for different periods.

"Books. Bahá'í books for use in India and Burma need to be translated into many different languages. From the annual report we gather that translations have been made or are in course of being made into more than twenty languages.

"Summer School. Secretary, Prof. Pritam Singh. The Summer School held its sessions at Karachi this year. Fifty students attended. The lessons were limited to a few subjects and were spread over a fortnight. Messrs.
Pritam Singh, Ilmi and Akhtar-Khawari were the teachers. A special feature of this year's school was the taking of notes by the students and their submission to a test at the conclusion of the school.

"Eleven lessons on Aqdas and Bayán were given by Mr. M. H. Ilmi and every lesson lasted for an hour.

"A series of public lectures were arranged in connection with the Summer School, on four days, at 7:30 p.m. Chairmen of these meetings were prominent people, such as two ex-mayors of Karachi.

"Youth Secretary, Mr. Núrulláh Akhtar-Khawari. Bahá'í youths between the ages of 15 and 30 years living in all the centres were asked to organize committees. Youth's principal duties were to study the Cause and convey it to non-Bahá'í youth. The National Committee also communicated with National Youth Committees in other lands. The Youth Symposium was duly celebrated in different centres and the Cause brought to the attention of the public."

Australia and New Zealand

The Australian friends have held two successful winter schools, one near Sydney and one near Adelaide. Also the believers in New Zealand have held their fifth summer school and report continued improvement and progress each time.

A new Bahá'í community in Australia has been established at Carlingah, a village about 18 miles from Sydney. The members expected to elect their Spiritual Assembly in April.

British Isles

The Bahá'í Journal, published by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the British Isles, has recently printed, for the first time, the following Tablet from 'Abdu'l-Bahá sent to the early English believers when He was in Paris:

"How are the believers in London? Are they happy? Are they spreading the call of the Kingdom? Are their tongues engaged in the commemoration of God? Are they full of zeal? Do they comfort the unhappy? Do they raise the fallen? Are they kind to all the people of the world? Do they serve the Cause of Universal Peace and Goodwill amongst the nations? Do they sympathize with the unfortunate? Are they the stars of the Heaven of Bahá? Are they the waves of the most great sea? Are they the illuminating path of the travellers? Are they the bright torches of reality? When those art returning to London convey to them my longing and greeting, for I love these friends of God. They are faithful followers of the Light, firm upon the Covenant, sincere servants of His Highness Bahá'u'lláh. They are calling the people to the Kingdom of God and I am extremely pleased with them."

"They must not rest day or night but strive to illumine the children of men, and awaken souls. This is not the day of silence! This is not the day of rest! Each one of you in this day must become a crier for the Kingdom of Abbá, a herald of the glad tidings of the Supreme Concourse. Each one must be attracted and enkindled. Each one must be happy for he has heard the call of the Kingdom. This is indeed a great privilege. Its importance is not known at this time. It will become evident in the future. The apostles of Christ attained to the greatest station in life, yet they were vilified and scorned in their day; because they were followers of the humble Nazarene, they were considered as the most despised and ignorant, but now their brilliant light has flooded the whole world with knowledge and wisdom. Each one of the apostles is shining like unto a star from the horizon of Eternal Glory. Likewise, no one can adequately express the greatness of the friends of God in this Dispensation. The glorious possibilities of this station will become manifest in the future."

"The friends of God must become full of the light of the Teachings. It is well to be thoroughly versed in the sciences, arts and literature, and one must be established in the Kingdom of God on a like basis. The results of physical science are limited. His Holiness Christ said: 'Leave thy nets. Come and I will make thee fishers of men.'"

"The results of the Divine sciences, the guidance of God, the spiritual arts, are unlimited and train the real man. My spirit communicates with you. It annihilates time and space. God willing, the confirmation of the Supreme Concourse shall descend upon you uninterruptedly."

"Day by day may you receive knowledge. Day by day may you draw nearer to God, until you become submerged in the sea of Divine Light. This station is the ultimate result of human life, it is the true fruit of existence. This station is the pearl of human consciousness and consumption, the shining star towards which human destiny points."

Messages from the Guardian

Suicide

Regarding the "In Memoriam" section of Bahá'í News: although suicide is so strongly condemned in the teachings, it does not mean that a person has ceased to be a Bahá'í because he killed himself; he should, therefore, be mentioned, the same as other believers, in this section.

- Haifa, March 29, 1946

Letters to Individuals

To John M. Clifford, October 17, 1944.

Regarding the whole question of an International language and its relation to the Faith: We, as Bahá'ís, are very anxious to see a universal auxiliary tongue adopted as soon as possible; we are not the protagonists of any one language to fill this post. If the governments of the world agree on an existing language, or a constructed, new tongue, to be used internationally, we would heartily support it because we desire to see this step in the unification of the human race take place as soon as possible.

Esperanto has been in wide use, more so than any similar language, all over the world, and the Bahá'ís have been encouraged by both the Master and the Guardian to learn it and to translate Bahá'í literature into it. We cannot be sure it will be the chosen language of the future; but as it is the one which has spread most, both East and West, we should certainly continue to co-operate with its members to learn and speak it, and translate Bahá'í literature into it.

To Mrs. Beatrice Ashton, October 17, 1944.

All over the world the Guardian is constantly encouraging and enjoining the believers to learn to function according to Bahá'í laws and principles; members of Spiritual Assemblies must learn to face their responsibilities, individuals must learn to turn to them and abide by their decisions. When we realize that all marriages, divorces, disposition of inheritance, etc., are now handled in Egypt and Persia solely through the Assemblies and that the believers abide by their decisions, we see that in Western countries the friends still have a long way to go — the sooner they start the better for themselves and for the Faith.

Correction

In a letter from the Guardian through his secretary to Mrs. Helen Robinson, published in the June, 1945, issue of Bahá'í News, two errors have been noted: the word good appeared as great, and chastity was printed charity. The whole passage should read: "The Guardian would advise you to teach the Mormons, like everyone else, the Faith, when you find them receptive. They have many good principles and their teachings regarding chastity, not drinking or smoking, etc., are quite similar to ours and should form a point of common interest."— The Editors.

National Spiritual Assembly

To the local Spiritual Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees.

Beloved Friends:

On this date, twenty-four years ago, 'Abdu'l-Bahá completed His earthly mission and ascended to the Kingdom of Bahá'u'lláh. The era of the Guardianship and the Bahá'í order has since then established the basis of the administrative institutions in East and West, and undertaken the first steps of the Master's Divine Plan embracing the entire earth. He without doubt watches over our progress, rejoices at every success and grieves whenever we fall short of the opportunities lying within our power.

Now is the time when each American believer can well stop and take thought of his own contribution of effort, love and resources to the Bahá'í work. We need the high and pure spirit which 'Abdu'l-Bahá poured forth upon the friends, and the realization which those pioneer workers had that they lived their lives as in His daily presence.

Around us is a world starved for lack of spiritual nourishment. In our keeping is the storehouse of truth. By intensified individual consecration, by unified striving, let us begin a new period of widespread public teaching. The news from the first two cities of the public campaign, Toronto and Boston, is very encouraging. It remains to perfect our coordination of all publicity and promotion resources, to produce a truly vigorous impression upon the public.

Along with this national campaign there must be ceaseless effort to maintain our own weaker communities and develop groups to Assembly status by April, 1946. A Spiritual Assembly is not a name on a list nor a point on a map. It is a spiritual organism which when united will attract the confirmations of the Holy Spirit and charge every individual Bahá'í with power to act as an instrument for the good of the Faith.

Plans are under way to render more and more service to the younger and smaller communities, but there is much that each community can only do for itself. Your National Spiritual Assembly is turning to the Guardian with a devout cry for spiritual reinforcement in these troubled times. Every community, group assembly and committee is dependent upon the spirit for its success. May the Guardian, as he contemplates the Faith in this land, become conscious that all are united in this cry for help, so that the blessed prayers uttered at the Holy Shrines may transmute our weakness into strength.

As of October 27, the Bahá'í funds on hand amounted to $12,489.34. Of this sum, $8,763.27 was either earmarked for special purposes or was held in trustee accounts, leaving $3,786.07 available for expenditure by the National Spiritual Assembly. From October 1 to 27 the receipts amounted to $8,726.84, the expenditures to $12,110.25.

The Assembly is grateful to all the many believers who conscientiously contribute at regular intervals. Their love is what sustains the activities of the National Assembly and all its committees and pioneers, in both North and South America.

Faithfully your co-workers,
—NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

“A Fuller Measure of That Love”

Since teaching is now the paramount concern of every believer and every Bahá’í institution, it will be well for the friends to ponder again some of those advices and appeals which the Guardian directed to us at such frequent intervals during the early years of his mission under the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. For those passages carry the impact of the Guardian’s first expression of his loving concern for the progress of the Faith, his universal message to the whole Bahá’í community.

“Now surely, if ever, is the time for us, the chosen ones of Bahá’u’lláh and the bearers of His Message to the world, to endeavor by day and by night, to deepen, first and foremost, the Spirit of His Cause in our own individual lives, and then labor, and labor incessantly to exemplify in all our dealings with our fellowmen that noble Spirit of which His beloved Son ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has been all the days of His life a true and unique exponent. The sayings of our beloved Master have been noised abroad, His name has filled all regions, and the eyes of mankind are now turned expectant towards His disciples who bear His name and profess His teachings...

“Behold, the station to which ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is now calling His loved ones from the Realm of Glory:—

It behooveth the loved ones of God to be enarowed of one another and to sacrifice themselves for their fellow-workers in the Cause. They should yearn towards one another even as the sore athirst yearneth for the Water of Life, and the lover burneth to meet his heart’s desire.’

“Such is the sublime, the glorious position He wishes us, and all the peoples and kindreds on earth, to attain in this world; how much more to attain unity and common understanding among ourselves, and then arise to herald with one voice the coming of the Kingdom and the salvation of mankind.”—March 12, 1922.

“Let us pray to God that these days of world-encircling gloom, when the dark forces of nature, of hate, rebellion, anarchy and reaction are threatening the very stability of human society, when the most precious fruits of civilization are undergoing severe and unparalleled tests, we may all realize, more profoundly than ever, that though but a mere handful amidst the seething masses of the world, we are in this day the chosen instruments of God’s grace, that our mission is most urgent and vital to the fate of humanity, and, fortified by these sentiments, arise to achieve God’s holy purpose of mankind.—November 14, 1923.

In Memoriam

Baha'i Service Men and Women

The National Office wishes to maintain accurate and up to date records of all the believers, men and women, who return from the armed services and establish residence in their former Baha'i community or elsewhere in the United States and Canada. Assemblies and Regional Teaching Committees are requested to report all such names and addresses as soon as possible.

Nineteen Day Feasts: Questions, December 12; Honor, December 31; Sovereignty, January 19, 1946.

Meetings of the National Spiritual Assembly: December 29 and 30, 1945; February 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 1946.

National Committees

Toronto Public Meeting

The first of the series of eleven meetings to be held in key cities throughout the United States and Canada was off to a successful start with the Public Meeting in Toronto on October 29th. The believers in Toronto and vicinity did a beautiful job and made the meeting an inspiration to the cities who are also to hold public meetings. The meeting was held in the Crystal Ball Room of the Royal York Hotel and the speaker was Mr. Horace Holley, with Mr. John Robarts as chairman. A book display and free literature were included in this Public Meeting and attractive bouquets of flowers.

Owing to the fact that this was the first meeting, some of the national material was not quite ready, and without the aid of radio or sufficient publicity in the paper, the Toronto friends were handicapped. In spite of this they showed what can be done when each believer puts forth his utmost in a unified plan of action. There were over 400 people at the meeting, a direct result of personal contacting, interviewing and constant telephoning.

Since the follow-up work of any meeting is most important, the Baha'i Center was opened for meetings and consultations and Mrs. Amelia Collins offered her services to the Toronto community during the week.

We are deeply grateful to Toronto for starting this National Public Meetings Campaign off so successfully and feel that if each city will put forth as much individual and unified effort, the whole continent will become enlightened.

Public Meetings Committee

Teaching in North America

The new membership of the National Teaching Committee, as it surveys the field of teaching activity throughout North America, is thrilled to witness the extent to which the believers have utilized the "golden opportunities" for meetings to present the Baha'i Peace Program. Inter-regional circuits have provided teaching help for such meetings in Eastern and Western Canada, the Pacific Northwest, the Southwest and Southern States, while Regional projects have provided teaching help to Assemblies and groups in Ontario, New England, New York, New Jersey, Mississippi, Tennessee and California. In Pittsburgh, Denver, and Washington, D. C., the Regional Teaching Committee cooperated with the assemblies in sponsoring Regional Conferences followed by public meetings for the presentation of the Baha'i Peace Program.

Word of the most recent Canadian Conference held from August 19th to 24th at Banff, Alberta, reports that thirty-eight believers and friends from the surrounding Provinces and States attended the conference, at which four persons declared their intention to join the Faith. Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Ober assisted in the program and Mr. Ober continued on a circuit which included visits to Helena, Butte, Fargo, Sioux Falls, and Buffalo on his return to Boston. In each of these cities meetings were arranged for Mr. Ober to speak on the Bahá'í Peace Program.

Teaching activity has gone steadily forward. In Canada Mrs. Amelia Collins visited Regina in April, followed in May by Fred Schopfichmar who visited the communities and groups of Western Canada, as well as Ontario and the Maritime Provinces. Later in May an inter-regional circuit was arranged for Reginald King which included visits to Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver, West Vancouver, and Vernon. Much interest was reported in each of these cities. The largest groups to hear Mr. King were the Regina and Saskatoon, Sask. Technical High Schools with 500 and 1000 in attendance where he spoke on "The Place of Youth in World Peace." Several meetings were arranged in Vancouver and the public meeting was particularly successful with an attendance of about 100 Bahá'ís and their friends. The group in West Vancouver, the RTC reports, "did a good deal of work in preparation for Mr. King's visit and many new contacts heard something of the living Faith and wish to hear more." Mrs. Ethel Hammond, an isolated believer, living in Victoria, arranged for Mr. King to meet a group of 30 new contacts and reports excellent response.

In Eastern Canada there is a new regional committee for the Maritime Provinces to insure the necessary assistance to those struggling little Assemblies. Moncton, New Brunswick, requires an additional settler to holds its assembly status, and Mrs. Annie Romer, who has been a pioneer settler in Halifax is transferring to Moncton to help preserve this "spiritual prize." Mrs. Florence Cox, formerly of California, who was a pioneer in Regina, moved to Charlottetown, P.E.I. in April to further strengthen that center. In July a Regional Conference held just outside Halifax attracted the Bahá'ís from the nearby cities as well as several non-Bahá'ís who had been attending study classes. Mrs. Laura Davis of Toronto gave a course on "What it means to be a Bahá'í," and Mr. William McKay spoke on Administration. The Halifax Assembly reported "A very fine spirit there and real enthusiasm." Of their own progress Halifax reports having "as high as 40 different non-Bahá'ís at Sunday meetings. We sent a series of the Peace leaflets to a selected list of about 80 leading people whom we knew were interested in World Peace and a New World Order. Also we have started a lending library."

In the Southern States, Mrs. Bahiyih Ford completed a circuit in April which started in Baltimore where she served as moderator during two Race Unity panel discussions. Mrs. Ford also visited Washington, D.C., Waterford and Stanton, Virginia, Charleston and Huntington, West Virginia, and Birmingham, Alabama. The Southern Bahá'ís expressed deep appreciation of the help of Mrs. Ford.

A circuit was arranged which provided the teaching help of Dr. Ali Kuli Khan through four Southern States. Greenville, S. C., Assembly reports that "Dr. Khan spoke in the City Hall Council Chamber here and was a marvelous help to us." In Birmingham Dr. Khan spoke at the chapel exercises of the Booker T. Washington Business College to 150 students and at Parker High School to 500 as well as at a public meeting in the Bahá'í Center where the audience seemed most receptive to his message. We know that Dr. Khan's visit will be very productive, as he covered a great deal of territory and "always spoke with inspiration and authority whether it was giving the Divine Message or counseling with interested ones on world affairs, especially the peace plans now in the making. We have needed some one of his caliber and with his intense devotion and we are so grateful for his visit."

In Texas, despite the heat, the new little Dallas group met regularly all summer, and many contacts were made by Antonio Roca during his five weeks' visit in San Antonio and in Houston. Mrs. Kathryn Frankland has moved to Houston to further strengthen that community.

The New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania Regional Teaching Committee has provided teaching help to both Red Bank and Englewood besides arranging a circuit for Mrs. Ruth Moffett through nine New Jersey cities in the spring. A Regional Conference was held in June in conjunction with the Local Spiritual Assembly of Pittsburgh followed by a public symposium on "The Assurance of World Peace."

Further circuits arranged for Mrs. Moffett took her to Michigan, Iowa, and Missouri where, besides speaking publicly at Bahá'í Centers, she spoke in several colleges and gave radio broadcasts. On Mrs. Moffett's return from San Francisco where she attended the Peace Conference, she spoke in Reno, Nevada, Independence, Kansas City, and St. Louis, Missouri.

The RTC for Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, arranged to send teaching help to an isolated believer in Joplin, Mo., Mrs. Grace M. Bell, in June, and reports that a group of 14 attended the meetings at which Mrs. Velma Sherrill spoke on the Faith.

The Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa RTC held the last of its three yearly Regional Conferences in Detroit in April. Bahá'ís from all parts of the state attended the Conference, and the public meeting which followed.

Requests are being made by regional teaching committees and assemblies for reinforcements for the weak assemblies, and the need for volunteers for this type of teaching help is urgent. We are making an earnest plea for these devoted believers who have spent several years of sacrificial service in pioneer areas and who now find for various reasons that they must leave, but remain on at their posts to hold the assembly status until replacements arrive to release them.

—NATIONAL TEACHING COMMITTEE.

Library

The Library Committee wishes to call the attention of the assemblies to the important book, The Bahá'í World, Volume 9, which should be as widely distributed as possible to our important public, college and university libraries. Our committee is presenting this book to the twenty-five most important university libraries and the Library of Parliament. Complimentary copies of Bahá'í World, Volume 9, have been sent to the following libraries:

1. University of Puerto Rico
2. University of Alaska
3. Library of Parliament (Ottawa, Ontario)
4. University of California
5. University of Southern California
6. University of Wisconsin
7. University of Illinois
8. University of Michigan
9. University of Indiana
10. University of Iowa.
The large Middle West universities have been included in this list, because, being so near to the Temple and the National Headquarters, they may be more aware of the Faith and so appreciate this volume. It is to be hoped that Bahá'ís will donate copies to other colleges and universities in order that this book may be as widely distributed as possible. We also hope that every assembly will give serious consideration to the donation of a copy to its main public library. We should like to have a record of all such presentations for our files.

We have some information on placing books in Army Hospital libraries which should assist the friends in making contacts with these librarians. Books may be secured from our committee after written permission to donate books has been given by the librarians. The Chief of Chaplains told the National Spiritual Assembly that the librarian has the personal responsibility relative to the selection of books, religious or otherwise, though the chaplains often advise with relation to religious literature but had no authority as to the inclusion or removal of any particular literature. Such authority is vested in the commanding officer of the unit concerned. The Library Committee feels that one of two steps could be taken: to contact the Commanding Officer to receive his permission to donate books, or to contact the chief librarian making very certain that the librarian is sincere in accepting the books and will not refuse them after further discussion with local chaplains. There have been several cases where books were rejected and returned and so tact and careful contact work is required to get our books catalogued and used.

A suggestion has come to our committee that the friends may find it possible to interest their local librarians in arranging a display on “Patterns of World Peace” or something similar and incorporating such Bahá’í books as Promulgation of Universal Peace, Foundations of World Unity, Bahá’í Peace Program, Security for a Failing World, etc.

The Library Committee would also be interested in hearing further of the progress of placing books in the “barren libraries” listed for the various regions last year. We feel that a wide distribution of our literature in public and college libraries will be the seed-bed for much future teaching work.

---MRS. STUART SIMS, CHAIRMAN.

Contacts Committee

One of the projects of this Committee recently approved by the National Spiritual Assembly is that of maintaining contacts with service men and women in Government hospitals.

To assist us in establishing such contacts it is requested that you furnish us whatever is available of the following information:

Names and addresses of Government hospitals in your vicinity,
Names and addresses of librarians of these hospitals or of adjacent book stores, Suggestions for securing entry into

Believers in Vaughan and Hines Hospitals

The Spiritual Assembly of Maywood, Illinois, will make contact with any Bahá’ís from other communities who is hospitalized in either the Vaughan or Hines Hospitals, and in each case will report to the NSA so that the other local Assembly (or Regional Teaching Committee) may be informed.

Assemblies and friends are requested to advise the Maywood Assembly of the names, serial numbers and if possible the rank and company to which any Bahá’í patient is attached, so that the Assembly may arrange for visits and friendly help and association.

Local Teaching

One of the most successful teaching efforts made recently by a local assembly, was the series of public meetings put on by Milwaukee during the week September 30 through October 7th. Lectures were held every evening at Juneau Hall, of the Milwaukee Auditorium, which was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, and at the back of which there were arranged striking displays of Bahá’í activities—the Temple model; Bahá’í books; a contribution from the National Display Committee showing the overall size of the Cause; and one from the youth group showing the summer schools.

In preparation for these meetings 7,000 programs were printed and 5,000 letters were sent out, each with a program enclosed. In each program handed out in the hall was inserted a questionnaire with a request for free literature. About 100 people signed this request, thus forming the basis for a mailing list. Newspaper advertising was used freely during the weeks prior to the event.

Although the weather was very bad at the beginning of this series of meetings, yet about 350 people
Moffett did some fast thinking and rented the room. It was vacated Friday, June 1, and decorated Saturday, June 2. Dr. Bohn scoured the town for chairs and a Congoleum rug, finally securing 4 dozen chairs, wooden folding, and a 12 x 15 rug. John Bohn waited in the room till after 5:30 Monday for the rug and chairs finally to be delivered. Mrs. Fowler had shopped for curtains, and they were finished between six and seven that evening. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson furnished a walnut center stand and a wall tapestry; Mrs. Snyder loaned a large throw rug and brought flowers; pictures appeared on walls, and lo, by 8:00 p.m. Monday, June 4, all was in readiness and the first Bahá'í Library in St. Louis was dedicated.

The Bahá'ís of Binghamton, New York, now have a Center in the heart of town, on the 2nd floor of the O'Neill Building on Court Street.

An informal youth gathering in Los Angeles at the home of Mrs. Platt is described in the Los Angeles bulletin by one of the guests, Dwight Barstow. "The gathering was truly one to please the heart of Bahá'u'lláh, for we found there were guests from five continents as well as the West Indies.

"The majority of us were, of course, from North America. South America had sent us Sr. Cuevas from Paraguay ... Jamaica sent Mr. Egbert Tai. From Haiti, Raymond Mars had flown; while from Guatemala came Mr. Julio Cobar. Youth party at Urbana, November 10th.

Our friend from Egypt, (Africa), was Mr. M. A. Nafee; and Mr. Hassan Fateh, of Persia, spoke for Asia. Another visitor was born in Germany and educated in England.

... first introduced by Ruhiullah Rahmani, each guest from other lands gave us a personal sketch of his own country and kindly answered our questions. Then Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop, our guest speaker, gave us an inspired message of unity."

The Bahá'í youth of Urbana were the hosts of about fifteen young Bahá'ís from the Chicago area on November 10th and 11th. At a buffet supper and dance, at the home of one of the Urbana Bahá'ís, there were mingled Americans (white, Japanese, and Negro), Persians (Bahá'í and Moslem), Chinese, and guests from Spain and Luxembourg. On the morning of the 12th, a symposium on the subject "The Price of World Peace is World Religion" was presented at the Bahá'í Center by Miss Annamarie Mattoon, Miss Pari Zia-Wairath, and Mr. Charles Ioas, with Miss Cynthia Hastings acting as chairman.

A full day of talks and discussions on "Bahá'í Answers to World Questions" was held at the Bahá'í Center, McCully Street and Ala Wai Blvd., Honolulu, Hawaii, on August 5, 1945. Well printed programs were sent to all who might become interested, describing in detail the plans for the day and describing the purpose of the Bahá'í Faith.

Mrs. Dorothy Underwood of Danville, Illinois, reports that her whole study class of five members has become Bahá'í and subscribed 100% to the World Order magazine.

In June the New York Community also held a big series of meetings on the Bahá'í plans for permanent peace. The first of these was on June 8th at Times Hall, with Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Mr. Horace Holley as speakers and Mr. Paul Haney of Washington as chairman. Thomas Richner, concert pianist, and Walter Olitzki of the Metropolitan Opera Association furnished the music. This was followed by three meetings at the Bahá'í Center, on June 9th, June 13th, and June 15th. There was also a reception at the Center, June 9th, featuring talks by Mr. Haney and Mrs. Baker.

In preparation for this series of meetings, programs were mailed to 1000 persons (1600 non-Bahá'ís). These programs, carried the Bahá'í principles and quotations from 'Abdu'l-Bahá on peace. Given with this booklet was a double-faced post-card making it possible for those attending to request free literature.

The total attendance during the week was 763, and, at the time the report was written, 35 specific requests for further information had been received at the Bahá'í Center.

Here is an informal play-by-play account of the creation of a Bahá'í Center. Miss Nayan Hartfield reports for St. Louis: "The Hall was engaged by other groups three nights during the second series (when Mrs. Moffett was scheduled to speak), and another room in the same building was not available, nor in any other where our colored friends would be welcome. On Thursday, May 31, a tenant vacated Room 215 in the Studio Building. Dr. Bohn and Mrs. Hushang Javid, Persian student of Chicago, teaching the Faith at youth party in Urbana.
News of Other Lands

Germany

The revival of the Cause in Germany continues to be the most striking news from abroad. The New York Baha'i News for November, 1945, contains the following item:

"Bruce Davison and Johnny Eichauer, Baha'i soldiers now in Germany, sent the following cablegram to the Guardian, through Robert Gulick: BAHAI IN DARMSTADT ESSLINGEN FRANKFURT GEISLINGEN GIessen GEPINGEN HEIDELBERG KARLSRUHE KREISACH NECKARGEMUND STUTTGART AND UBERLINGER SEND LOVING GREETINGS BELoved GUARDIAN ASSURE UNDIVIDED LOYALTY FOR PRAYERS GUIDANCE. The following cablegram from Haifa, dated October 15th, was addressed to Robert Gulick to be forwarded to the Bahai's in Germany: ASSURE EICHENAUER DAVISON DELIGHT NEWS CONVEY FRIENDS ALL CENTERS MENTIONED HEARTFELT GRATITUDE SAFETY ARDENT PRAYERS SUCCESS LOVING REMEMBRANCE ADMIRATION CONSTANCY SHOGHI RABBANI."

Over 250 persons attended a Bahai meeting in Frankfurt on October 19. Many had to be turned away. The speaker was the noted Bahai, Dr. Grossman.

The Philippines

Sergeant Alvin Blum has been conducting a Bahai study class of 40 students in a college in Manila. In April, 1945, Alvin made contact with the Bahai's living at Solano, New Viscaya, Philippines. We quote the following from Alvin's letter giving an account of his visit with these Bahai's:

"I found the Maddelas happy and full of spirit... They are fine, intelligent people. However, they are poverty stricken (since the war). Mr. Maddela read about the Faith some years ago and wrote to America for books. Through his efforts over fifty people met and studied the Teachings. The war broke these meetings up, but as soon as books arrive from the States these meetings will be resumed. Over 25 former members have been killed or have disappeared... Solano, formerly a thriving city of 20,000 people, is in ruins, and about 10,000 people remain. The Maddelas took refuge in a rice field, where they lived for three years. When they returned to Solano they found everything destroyed. The only thing left was a sign which read as follows 'Baha'i Center: Reading Room. Every one Welcome'."

Alvin conducted a Bahai meeting outside the Maddelas' straw hut. 9 Bahais and 5 non-Bahais attended. 11 Bahai's were unable to attend.

Egypt

The following account of stirring events in Egypt is quoted as given in the British Bahai Journal:

"The last Bahai Newsletter received from Haifa gives a lot of news of events in Egypt: The successful holding of the Centenary celebrations in the New Haizratul-Quds had an encouraging and greatly stimulating effect on the Egyptian believers, causing them to make new plans and rise to greater heights of service. The result was the formation of three new local assemblies by April of this year, at Suez, Tanta and Sukhah, making seven in all. Egyptian Bahai families have also gone both to Abyssinia and to the Sudan. They have established a public Bahai lending library in Cairo to meet the great interest which is being shown in the Faith since the Centenary. There was, in fact, in Cairo an uninterrupted stream of callers coming to enquire about the Faith. They came every day and often every night, and represented various classes, sects and religious denominations, coming from different parts of the city. They came singly and in large groups. "All this has, however, been achieved only under great difficulty and even persecution, a number of individual Bahai's, as well as Bahai institutions, being attacked. In Tanta, in April and May, 1944, libellous pamphlets were printed and distributed in public places, warning the public against the believers and instigating it to violence against them. In Al-Mahalat ul Kubra a band of fanatics, encouraged by one of their religious leaders, attacked the little group of local Bahai's. In Al-Arish the one believer was brought into court and his marriage compulsorily annulled because his wife had originally been Moslem, in spite of her statement in court that she now considered herself a Baha'i. In Cairo, too, there was a demonstration against the Faith after the Centenary celebrations, led by irresponsible crowds and groups of students, under the influence of various religious bodies. On the night of August 31st, 1944, a great mob attacked the Haizratul-Quds, smashed the electric lights outside the building and broke the arm of the Bahai' guardian in charge of the building. At the same time the magazine 'Al-Nazir published a series of articles full of calumnies against the believers and the Faith. All these attacks have borne with great patience and courage, not allowing anything to deflect them from their duties and activities."

Haifa

From the Haifa Newsletter we learn of the passing of 'Ali Ashgar Qazvini, who had for twenty-five years rendered exemplary service as caretaker of the Master's House.

Messages from the Guardian

Bold Concerted Measures
Greatly welcome evidences of progress in consolidation of the manifold activities of the American Baha’i community. Urge intensification of efforts in national broadcasting and publicity calculated to reach the masses. Appeal to Assemblies to reinforce the measures undertaken by their national representatives. The proclamation of the verities of the Faith through bold, concerted measures is the crying need of the present hour. Fervently praying for fresh victories; fully share your hopes for Holy Land.

SUGG RABBANI
Cablegram received December 31, 1946.
(This message was the Guardian's response to the cablegram sent him from the November meeting, reporting actions taken and expressing hope that the race difficulties in Palestine will be solved and the propheties concerning the Holy Land be fulfilled).

Letters to Individuals
November 30, 1944.
Regarding Mr. Smeskal’s question about the Covenant-breakers: Baha’u’llah and the Master in many places and very emphatically have told us to shun entirely all Covenant-breakers as they are afflicted with what we might try and define as a contagious spiritual disease; they have also told us, however, to pray for them. These souls are not lost forever. In the Agdas, Baha’u’llah says that God will forgive Mirza Yahya if he repents. It follows, therefore, that God will forgive any soul if he repents. Most of them don’t want to repent, unfortunately. If the leaders can be forgiven it goes without saying that their followers can also be forgiven.

Also, it has nothing to do with unity in the Cause; if a man cuts a cancer out of his body to preserve his health and very life, no one would suggest that for the sake of "unity" it should be reintroduced into the otherwise healthy organism! On the contrary, what was once a part of him has so radically changed as to have become a poison.

To Mr. and Mrs. Otto Smeskal.

National Spiritual Assembly

The holding of the State and Province elections for choice of delegates to the 1946 Convention is a matter of great importance to the American Baha’i community as a whole.

This year the National Assembly is providing every believer with a list of the adult voting Bahai’s resident in his State or Province. These lists are now being mailed, and the kind cooperation of local Assemblies is requested in seeing that each believer is given a copy from the supply of lists the Assembly receives.

As soon as possible, there will be another mailing of ballots, Convention Call, number of delegates to be elected in each district, list of State and Election meeting places, with the hour designated for each and address for sending vote when delegates cannot attend in person. The date of February 10 is uniform for all electoral districts.

In reporting on the annual membership prepared for the last election, the National Assembly pointed out that as of December 15, 1944 there were 4,920 adult Bahai’s in the United States and Canada. This year, as of November 1 there were 4,988 believers qualified to vote. This number does not include those who are absent from the country, either as Bahai teachers in foreign fields or as members of the armed forces. Having passed the 5,000 mark, we can not rest satisfied until there are 10,000 adult Bahai’s in our community, one new believer to be confirmed by each of us serving at this hour. The Master declared that the Cause could double its numbers annually. Will it require one year, two years or three years to attain the goal?

Faithfully and devotedly,

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Public Meetings

Boston

Boston had its Public Meeting of the National Campaign on November 16th. The speakers were Miss Elsie Austin and Mr. Kenneth Christian, with Mr. Harlan Ober as chairman. A fine book display was set up in a good show window in Boston prior to the meeting, and was transferred to a display table for the meeting. The audience filled the auditorium almost to capacity, making a round table of about 275 people. One interesting thing about the audience was the large percentage of young people, about 35 years or younger, and also the large percentage of men. The presence of so many young people is an indication that the youth are eager and ready for the Divine Teachings for this age.

There were spot announcements on the radio and publicity in the paper. Many of the audience came because of the newspaper advertisement.

The talks were well received and a number of people remained afterwards to discuss the Teachings further.

As a result of the public meeting, the Center was filled to overflowing Sunday. We know that the Boston community has received great inspiration from the success of this meeting, and their enthusiasm will help to give courage to the key cities whose meetings are yet to come.

Washington, D.C.

A National Campaign Meeting was held in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel, Washington, D.C. on December fifth. In spite of bad weather about 300 people attended. The audience was very responsive to the stirring addresses of Mrs. Dorothy Baker and Mr. Horace Holley. Mrs. Baker’s subject was “Institutions for Peace” and Mr. Holley’s “The Price of World Peace is World Religion.” Mr. Walter Olitzky, Metropolitan Opera Baritone, sang before and after the talks. The stage, decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and gladioli, was a beautiful setting for the presentation of the Great Message. A book display at the side of the auditorium attracted many.

Four Washington daily papers carried advertisements of the meeting, which had been well worked out by Mr. Henning, chairman of the National Bahá’í News Service. The local assembly felt that a new high had been attained in their publicity work. The contacts made with the press, too, were valuable and may have far-reaching effects in the future.

The follow-up meeting conducted by Mrs. Baker the next evening at the Bahá’í Center was well attended. It took the form of questions, answers, and discussion. The questions were thoughtful and Mrs. Baker’s answers most illuminating.

The Washington community cooperated with surrounding communities in arranging this meeting. All felt profoundly grateful for the opportunity to spread a knowledge of the Faith in that area and for the stimulus to further service which this cooperative effort brought.

—Public Meetings Committee

News Service

The first of the Public Meetings Campaign programs was held in Toronto, Canada, on October 28th with this committee furnishing two paid advertisements and eight publicity releases to appear in each of that city’s three newspapers. For the Boston Public Meeting on November 16th two paid advertisements and nine releases were prepared for the seven editions of that city’s newspapers. The Washington Public Meetings Committee for their meeting of December 5th was sent three paid advertisements and five releases to be used in the five editions of Washington’s newspapers.

In all cases the prepared advertising copy was paid for by the News Service Committee and the publicity releases announcing the meeting and reporting it, as well, were personally delivered to each newspaper on the prescribed day by members of the local Public Meetings Committee.

Reports indicate that the plan of advertising and publicity procedure was most satisfactory and effective and that the material furnished added to the public attendance at these meetings. Much experience was gained by the local committees in making newspaper contacts with editors and local newspaper advertising departments. The contacts made and the general plan of operation followed will be of considerable value in future publicity work in these cities.

Currently plans are in process for the advertising and publicity for the Atlanta Public Meeting to be held on January 13th and the New Orleans Public Meeting on January 28th. While improvements in procedure are made with each succeeding meeting the same general plan which has proven itself effective will be continued for the remaining eight cities of the United States where public meetings will be held under the Public Campaign for 1945-46.

Special mention is made of the splendid publicity and advertising which appeared in the St. John’s (Newfoundland) Telegram and News several months ago at the time of Newfoundland’s first public Bahá’í meeting. Well planned advertising was used in both newspapers the day before the meeting and an average of seven inches of publicity appeared in the two newspapers both before and after the meeting. Moncton (N.J.) believers have been securing good editorial mention in The Times which insures inquiries for Bahá’í information by suggesting that the interested address their letters care of a box number of that newspaper.

We are encouraged, as well, by the many well written, interesting and lengthy articles which have come to this committee as they appeared in the Portsmouth (N.H.) Herald, Buffalo (N. Y.) Courier-Express, Ann Arbor, (Mich.) Washtenaw Post-Tribune, Grand Haven (Mich.) Tribune, Indianapolis (Ind.)
It is regretted that more space cannot be devoted to a full description of each of the above newspaper clippings on the Baha’i Faith. The editorial handling of the subject of the atomic bomb, labor unrest and the principles of the Faith are splendid in all cases. Courage is written through each of the releases for that is what it took in full measure to interest newspaper publishers in such a generous use of their editorial columns.

It is indeed evident that month by month Baha’i mentions in newspapers throughout the United States and Canada are increasing in size and, as already indicated, they are better written and therefore attract more interest not only from the editor but from the general public. We compliment the believers on their patient and painstaking work on Baha’i publicity.

—NEWS SERVICE COMMITTEE

Radio

As the friends know, the National Radio Committee has been working for some months on a series of radio transcriptions. Owing to organizational difficulties within the committee and to the fact that we are evolving a new dramatic medium for radio teaching, the committee has been unable to supply transcriptions for the national teaching campaign.

The Toronto Assembly was unable to get any time on the air for broadcasts to tie in with their public meeting. The large networks in Canada are government controlled and it seems to be almost an impossibility to “break in.” However, the friends in Toronto report that they are not discouraged and will keep trying.

The Boston Assembly was able to get nine one-minute “spot announcements” of their meetings and a fifteen minute interview with Miss Austin on the “People You Should Know” program.

Material was sent to the Washington, D.C. assembly for their December 5th program but no report has as yet been received.

Anchorage, Alaska, reports they are having a weekly radio program. They report that they now have sixteen Baha’is in Anchorage and are hoping through increased radio and publicity to add to their numbers.

Sioux Falls, So. Dakota, also reports a regular weekly radio program composed of music and quotation from Baha’i writings and material published in World Order.

The Los Angeles Assembly has purchased a fifteen-minute weekly radio program and have been developing their own material. Of special interest is an unusual program given on November 4th. We quote from their letter: “On November 4th, at 7:06 p.m., the Local Assembly is sponsoring a special radio program over KMTR. The program will show the Baha’i Spirit Around the Globe.” Mrs. Helen Bishop will be the moderator; Mr. Walter Olitzki, Bahá’í, who sings a baritone part in the Metropolitan Opera, will sing “Where’er You Walk”; Mr. Charles Wolcott will represent North America; Mrs. Luisa Garrido de Padilla will represent South America and Miss Dakin and Hascle Cornbieth will be the anonymous voices that give appreciations of the Baha’i Faith quoted from distinguished men and women of different countries, such as Archduke Anton of Austria. When it comes the turn of Russia, Walter Olitzki will sing “O Cara Mia ben’ Professor Edward G. Browne of Cambridge University, England, will be quoted. India, Australia, and the Islands of the Pacific will be heard from in the quotations. The Prayer of All Nations, or parts of it, will close the program.”

Their plan, as outlined above, was successfully carried out and reports have been received that it resulted in a splendid program.

In closing this brief report, the National Radio Committee wishes to say that it is now functioning smoothly. We can supply a series of new scripts for fifteen minute programs.

We deeply regret that the transcriptions planned for the national teaching campaign have not as yet been cut. We are making slow but steady progress in the development of these transcriptions which we believe will be of inestimable benefit to assemblies wishing to do broadcasting. Our difficulty has been the lack of professional Bahá’í script writers who can prepare material that is appealing to the general public, is timeless, and yet timely. We hope to break away entirely from the fifteen minute lecture type of program because we know that its appeal is limited. Assemblies wishing to institute weekly radio programs before the transcriptions are ready might consider the success of the New York City “Music and Quotations” program which ran successfully for almost a year. The committee firmly believes that this type of program achieves a fine cumulative effect. However, we are prepared to supply the lecture type of script for those assemblies who still prefer it.

We wish to ask your patience while we are developing our new series. We would also like to ask all Baha’is who have done professional radio scripts to get in touch with us.

Inter-America News

Itinerant Teachers

Most of the Latin American Bahá’í Assemblies are being favored this fall and winter by two or more visits of itinerant teachers. On November 13 Mr. Charles Mason Remey left Miami on a three months trip with stops-overs at Bahá’í Centers in the following countries: the Dominican Republic, Venezuela, Brazil (Bahá’, Rio, and Sao Paulo) Uruguay, Argentina, Chili (Santiago and Punta Arenas), Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Columbia, Panama, Jamaica, and Cuba.

The itinerary of Mr. and Mrs. Emeric Sala, who are now in Central America and will soon be traveling in South America, was announced in the November issue of Bahá’í News.

Mrs. Gayle Woolson left Chicago on September 18 for an itinerant teaching tour of three months in Central American countries to the north of Panama. She has visited Bahá’í communities in Mexico City, Guatamala City, Tegucigalpa, Managua, and San Jose. She is now in Panama City where she will remain for some time.

Early in October Elizabeth Cheney left Asuncion, Paraguay, where there are now 26 believers, for her new post in Managua, Nicaragua. En route she visited Bahá’í centers in La Paz, Lima, Guayaquil, and Panama City. She has been in Managua since October 25, and she reports that there are now 11 believers in that city.

Virginia Orbison left New Orleans on October 16 and arrived in Rio de Janeiro, her new post, on November 9. She visited the friends in Panama, Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia on her way to Rio.

Because the visits of Mr. and Mrs. Sala and of Mr. Remey will follow each other so closely, the Inter-America Committee plans to use them as the means of carrying out a special teaching campaign in Latin America, similar to the one current in North America. All of the centers have been asked to make every effort to exploit these visits to their fullest, planning special public meetings as well as informal conferences. All of the pioneers have been asked to work with the Spiritual Assemblies in developing plans. The Committee hopes to give financial aid for such expenses as halls, invitations, radio and newspaper publicity. Also, the Committee is supplying these centers with special, free literature. This includes the Bahá’í Peace Program in both Spanish and Portuguese, which was compiled and printed in English at the time of the San Francisco Conference; also, The Pattern of a New World Order, which was recently published in Mexico City.

A very enthusiastic report has been received from our pioneers, Elena Marzella and Ofelia Montalvo, in Ciudad Trujillo regarding Mr. Remey’s visit to the Dominican Republic. A letter from them dated November 19, says, “We have had three write-ups in La Nacion, one write-up and one open invitation on the front page of La Opinion, and two announcements over Station HIN. All were lengthy and detailed. We gave out literature and have new people to come to classes. The fact that we had the public meeting in the Ateneo is the biggest ad of all, because the Ateneo, as its name suggests, is like the public meeting places in the days of Athens. Everything that happens there becomes the news of the country.

A recent letter from Louise Baker in Caracas tells of Mr. Remey’s arrival there, and states that, due to changes taking place within Venezuela, the rights guaranteed in the constitution are temporarily suspended, and no public meetings are allowed. “However,” she says, “we had a small meeting last night, only for Bahá’ís, and this afternoon a few people dropped in for informal discussion. Tonight we are having another meeting which, while not public, will at least include some of the friends of the Bahá’ís. Tomorrow a tea will be given in Mr. Remey’s honor, and from those who come, we hope to start a new study class... The entire group, in this short time, adores Mr. Remey.”

A report has been received of a very constructive peace meeting held by Mr. and Mrs. Sala in cooperation with the Spiritual Assembly in Mexico City. That public meeting was held at the new Bahá’í Center.

As additional news of this public meetings campaign throughout Latin America is received, it will be shared with the North American friends.

Panama Conference

An Inter-American Bahá’í Conference will be held in Panama City January 22-25, inclusive. This conference is being sponsored by the International School at Temerity Ranch, Colorado Springs, and by the Inter-America Committee. Public meetings will be held in the evening in a hall donated through the courtesy of the University of Panama. Morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the study of the book, God Passes By.

The Spiritual Assembly of Panama City is in charge of arrangements for this conference. Announcements have been prepared and sent to all communities in Central and South America.

North America Teaching

When ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was in America, He advised the friends to travel and teach in groups, and a project embodying this counsel has been most happily consummated. In early September Dr. Edris Rice-Wray and Sheila Rice-Wray, together with three Bahá’í youth,—Miss Margaret Swengel, Miss Pari Zia-Walrath, and Charles Iolas, the latter two members of the National Youth Committee,—drove to Denver to attend the first “Regional Conference for Teacher Training,” stopping enroute and on their return journey at Cedar Rapids, Omaha, Laramie, Cheyenne, and Colorado Springs. “In all of these places,” Dr. Rice-Wray writes, “we could... work individually with people, making the teaching project far more rounded. If every teacher would take at least one would-be teacher on every trip, we would soon double or triple our teacher pool. The youth lit, a fire wherever they went... The spirit of the five of us together was perfect. We had a real working unity and it was a grand experience.”

Besides contributing to the discussions of the Teacher Training classes on “How to conduct Study Classes,” “How to present the Bahá’í Faith” and “How to be a Chairman,” this group gave talks at the public meetings, and made contacts with youth organizations, religious groups as well as racial. Dr. Rice-Wray spoke before several luncheon clubs, the largest that of the Lion’s Club in Cheyenne, where for the first time in the history of the organization in that city, the wives of the members were invited to attend the luncheon and listen to the guest speaker. Mrs. Therese Olson, Secretary of the RTC, reports: “The Secretary of State, the Mayor, heads of various civic organiz-zations, institutions and leaders were not only at our table but made up the 100 who were there. This was followed by a talk that evening before the Business and Professional Women’s Club of 50 of the town’s leading women of all fields.”

In the Northwest, Miss Charlotte Linfoot combined a business trip with Bahá’í teaching work, and was able to visit Portland, Tacoma and Seattle. In Tacoma Miss Linfoot addressed an audience of approximately 45 on the subject, “The Scope of Universal Peace.”

Mr. Mason Remey made a teaching trip through the Northeastern States in the Fall, visiting local Bahá’í communities and isolated believers and reports meetings in Newcastle, Kennebunk, and York, Me., and two in Portsmouth, N.H. In Syracuse Prof. R. F. Piper of Syracuse University invited Mr. Remey to address his students in the class on Religion and Philosophy. This is the fourth time Mr. Remey has spoken before Dr. Piper’s classes and he reports they seemed more receptive than on earlier occasions. There were “between thirty-five and forty students present and for fifty minutes they gave full attention, taking notes on which they would be examined later.”

An inter-regional circuit was also arranged for Mrs. Marion Little, who spent a week each in Little Rock, Ark., and Jackson, Miss., with a brief stop-over in Memphis, Tenn., making many fine contacts with key people in the educational field, as well as addressing public meetings and conducting study classes. Mrs. Little writes that “in Jackson we had a Bahá’í dinner . . . and each believer invited one guest who had heard of the Teachings. There were nineteen present. I had place cards with quotations giving an outline of the Teachings. These were numbered and read in sequence, giving the basic principles . . . It proved a great success . . . Arrangements have been made to hold a weekly study class in the Teachers’ Home located near the College campus and in one of the best colored sections . . . and to have Mr. Phil Marangella speak November 25th.”

In October Mrs. Terah Smith of Atlanta, Ga., visited Greensboro, N. C. and Greenville, S. C.; and at Columbia, S. C., where there is now a group of 8 believers, the RTC is arranging for Mrs. Esther Sego to give monthly teaching help. Circuit teaching was also undertaken by Mr. John Haggard of Wilmette, who, accompanied by Mrs. Haggard, toured through Ohio and Indiana stopping at Fort Wayne, Dayton, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo and Springfield. In Colorado Mrs. Mildred Clark, while traveling on business, has been able to arrange for Bahá’í books being placed in the public libraries of Pueblo, LaJunta, Trinidad and Durango, Colorado. She reports that in Pueblo a study class is organized and in Trinidad, Arn Holt, an isolated believer, has done some teaching work and hopes to have a group there soon.

In Canada teaching activity was greatly stimulated by Mr. John Robarts of Toronto, Ontario, throughout the Western Provinces, where he spoke before enthusiastic groups in Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver early in November. Traveling by air, he was able to spend two days in each city with the exception of Edmonton, where he could remain only one day. In Regina the LSA reports two informal meetings besides a public meeting at which Mr. Robarts spoke to about 35 on the subject “World Order is the Goal.” “The group included a number of youth, of which three were Japanese and two Muhammadan. A highlight . . . was the presence of a Japanese Anglican clergyman . . . who serves 3600 Japanese parishioners . . .” At one of the informal group meetings “and in behalf of the Regina Assembly, Mr. Robarts impressively presented Prayer Books to the four individuals who were recently accepted into the Faith in Regina. Mrs. Elsie Gans, William Ganss, Leslie B. Silversides and Harry Takashiba, who is believed to be the first Canadian Japanese Bahá’í.”

Intensive teaching activity is also going forward in Eastern Canada, where Mrs. Ruth Moffett has been conducting a series of three “Educational Seminars” of two weeks each on “Patterns of the New World Order.” Mrs. Moffett reports that “one young man has already made his declaration” and that she “had the privilege of speaking to students at the Prince of Wales College . . . and had a fine response from them.”

In an effort to open new cities to the Faith Regional Teaching projects have been arranged for Saskatchewan, Sask., where Miss Lulu Barr of Regina is continuing her efforts, and for Eureka Springs, Ark., where Miss Reszie Sunshine of Little Rock has interested a class of eight.

Mr. Harlan Ober spent four days in Toronto and Hamilton where meetings were arranged at the Center and a tea at Mr. and Mrs. John Robarts’ home to follow up the National Campaign meeting and hold the interest of those attracted. About 35 were present at one meeting and 40 at the other. Regional Committees have also arranged for teaching conferences to follow the National Campaign meetings in Boston and Washington, D. C. Mr. Ralph Bates of Springfield spoke at the public meeting following the conference in Boston and Dr. Edris Rice-Wray spoke in Washington, D. C. Other RTC Conferences have been held in Binghamton, N.Y. where over 200 are reported to have attended the public meeting following the conferences in Peoria, Ill.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Ridgewood, N. J.; West Chester, Pa.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Dayton, O.; Cleveland, O.; and Sioux Falls, S. D.

Much interest was aroused through exhibits in September at the Cheshire County Fair at Keene, N.H., arranged by an isolated believer, Mrs. Doris Bolton of Ashuelot, N.H., in cooperation with the LSA of Brattleboro, Vt., and at the County Fair in Medina, O., arranged by the Granger Township group in cooperation with the RTC and other Bahá’ís.

Four members of the RTC visited Charleston, West Virginia, “to lend teaching help” . . . Annamarie Honnold spoke to from 700 to 800 people at W. Va. State College and Institute and Paul Haney and Mrs. Adeline Lohse spoke to a group at the Frederick Hotel in Huntington, Va.

Pioneer settlers have moved to the following areas to prevent these Assemblies from reverting to group status: Miss Margaret Lentz of San Juan, Puerto Rico, has moved to

“Bahá’í News”

Bahá’í News, in an effort to get back to a monthly publication schedule, has temporarily reduced its number of pages to eight. The Committee, however, is eager for interesting news items. For, even though a selection may have to be made, the paper cannot be interesting and representative of the scope of the Bahá’í Cause unless it has a great deal of material to select from. News stories, compactly written, and photographs, specifically labeled with dates, names, etc., should be sent to Miss Garreta Busey, 503 West Elm Street, Urbana, Illinois.

The Committee also welcomes suggestions for making Bahá’í News more interesting and valuable. The Table of Contents which appeared for the first time in the November issue, is the result of a suggestion made by the Dumont, N. J. Group. Watch for further innovations in the future.

Youth

National Youth Day, a symposium of three talks presented at public meetings by youth speakers, was held on November 18th in many Bahá’í communities in this country and Canada. The International Youth Day, to be held on February 24, 1948, is to be a symposium of three talks on the theme, “The New Creation.” The youth will ask the assistance and cooperation of the local Assemblies and Bahá’ís in the communities where symposiums are being undertaken, and we hope that many countries which have been unable to do so for some time, will join in this annual youth activity this year.

All Bahá’ís will be glad to hear of a recent special meeting in New York City attended by more than a thousand people who came to the Henry Hudson Hotel Ballroom for a program, “America in the Atomic Age.” The Bahá’í principle of unity was demonstrated by the presence of Negro and white speakers and musicians. The guest speaker, Dr. Harry Gideonse, President of Brooklyn College, spoke on “America in the Atomic Age.” He explained that it was his first appearance before a Bahá’í group but that he had accepted the invitation to speak in order to show his esteem for “one of the healthiest movements I have known” in the social and spiritual life of America. Elsie Austin, prominent Negro attorney, represented the Bahá’í Faith in her talk, “Faith for Freedom.” The Hall Johnson Hollywood and Radio Choir, Philippa Schurler, 14-year-old piano prodigy and composer, and Tom Scott, radio troubadour, furnished the music. To insure future benefits from the meeting, copies of the Center program and of “Faith and Freedom” were distributed to the audience with cards to be signed by those wishing notices of future events.

The Bahá’í message is given on the radio every week in Honolulu, Hawaii. Each week there is a Bahá’í broadcast over station KFQD in Anchorage, Alaska. Anchorage Bahá’ís have the novel experience of commemorating Bahá’u’lláh’s ascension at three o’clock in the morning on May 29 with the sun coming up over the mountains, for it is during the season when there are nineteen and a half hours of sunlight and no real darkness.

Maywood, Illinois, suggests that youth can help spread the teachings by using such books as Race and Man, Security for a Failing World, and The Divine Art of Liking for book reports.

More and more communities are sending out monthly local news bulletins varying in elaborateness from one to seven pages. Recent mails have included those from Maywood, Illinois, Flint, Michigan; Los Angeles, California; St. Louis, Missouri; Urbana, Illinois; New York City; and Dayton, Ohio.

Several new publicity methods were used by the Dayton, Ohio, Baha'is and described in their account of three outstanding public meetings. Dayton has been successful in follow-up work as these reports indicate:

For the annual International Baha'i Youth Symposium, "Letters to the Editor" were printed in two local newspapers, and a letter of invitation was sent to students through each of the principals and presidents of the city's nine high schools and colleges. Besides Dayton's own Al Segen and Mary Evelyn Hoobler, there were Cynthia Hastings and DeWitt Haywood of Chicago, and Julia McCoy Ehardt of Waynesville, Ohio as speakers. Since the symposium, the young people have been invited to speak before the Bethel Baptist Young People's Union and the All-City Baptist Young People's Union.

Peace Broadside's and letters were sent out for Dayton's special peace program. In addition, a picture of Mr. Josei McCoy, chairman of the Dayton Spiritual Assembly and Baha'i speaker for the afternoon. Guest speaker was Mr. John S. Moore, Sr., Director of the League of Nations Association for Ohio and executive secretary of Dayton's Postwar Council.

Art students of the Parker Cooperative High School made a dozen posters which were placed in prominent store windows for the Race Unity meeting. Also there were daily 100 word broadcasts over station WHIO for six days preceding the meeting. Eric Kothoff, a Puerto Rican, and Philip Lee, a Hawaiian, spoke emphasizing the absence of racial prejudice in their countries. Mrs. Dorothy Baker gave the Baha'i message. Three follow-up talks were held on successive Sundays on "The Baha'i Principles," "The History of the Cause," and "Baha'i Administration." Through these meetings several seekers were interested in a study class which meets each Sunday evening.

The Ann Arbor, Michigan, Spiritual Assembly sponsors a discussion group where such subjects as "Dumbarton Oaks Proposals and Their Relation to the Baha'i Peace Plan," "Inter-Racial Relations," and "The Need for a World Faith" are studied. Charlotte Timm is chairman of the discussions.

Pittsburgh's weekly news magazine, The Bulletin Index for August 18, 1945, printed an 800 word article about the Baha'is faith and published a picture of one of the fireside meetings. It gave some of the principles, a brief history of the Faith, and something about 'Abdu'l-Baha's Pittsburgh talk. The same issue carried notice of a public Bahai meeting under the Town Guide.

Baha'is were asked to be guest speakers for the annual Inter-Racial Goodwill Day held at Philadelphia's large Mt. Pisgah African Methodist Episcopal Church. The minister, Rev. Emmet H. Booker, first heard of the Faith through Rubiyiyth Khanum when he was studying at Columbia. His church bulletin for Sunday, July 29, describes the program: "This year we shall be privileged to hear three exceptional ladies, the Misses Jessie and Ethel Revell, and Miss Edith Segin . . . They are faithful members of the great Baha'i Religion, which untranceling labors for the realization of the oneness of all nations, races, and religions. What Wendell Willkie wrote and talked about, they have dared to live daily . . ." As a sequel, the members of the church's Cultural and Racial Unity Committee met with the Bahai's for the Bahai Race Unity banquet on November 24th. The pictures of the Centenary activities were shown, and Rev. Booker asked that they be shown in his church.

Boston's special public meeting on World Peace featured as non-Baha'i speaker, Dr. Ruth Isabel Seabury, educational director of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Mr. Charles Krug was the Baha'i speaker, and Mr. Matthew Bullock served as chairman. There were 35 at this meeting, of whom 15 were not Baha'is.

A recital celebrating the birthday of Baha'u'llah was presented by the Baha'is of San Francisco. Walter Olitzki, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York and of the San Francisco Opera Company, presented a full concert at the California Club, 1750 Clay Street, Monday evening, November 12.

In a series of weekly meetings announced by an attractive printed program, the Brookline, Massachusetts Baha'is presented 'Abdu'l-Baha's "Seven Lights of Unity."

The McCombs have opened their home to meetings each Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

A Baha'i prayer and a Baha'i talk, "God's Assurance of World Peace," given by Mr. Cary Nordquist, were features of an Inter-Faith and Inter-Racial service of worship held at the Plymouth Congregational Church of Seattle, Washington. The Congregational minister, a rabbi, and a member of the Urban League took part in the service which was one of a series sponsored by the city-wide Seattle Religious Fellowship.

A newspaper announcement describes the Seattle celebration of Baha'u'llah's birthday as follows: "Mark Tobey, internationally known painter, will be chairman. Addresses will be given by C. G. Nordquist, Seattle attorney, who will speak on 'Baha'u'llah, the Prince of Peace', and Mrs. Hazel Mori, worker in civic affairs, whose subject will be "The Promised Day Is Come.' Music will be provided by Donald Bushell, cellist and director of the Seattle Philharmonic Orchestra, and John Sundsten, composer and pianist."

Beverly, Massachusetts, held a "World Order Forum" on November 17, with Elsie Austin speaking on "Security for a Fearful World." There were 38 present, of whom 15 were not Baha'is.

News From Other Lands

Germany
From a copy of a letter written to the Guardian by Dr. Hermann Grossman in April, 1945 and containing a detailed account of the trials undergone by German Baha'is under the Nazi regime, we glean the following:
The Faith and its administrative institutions were interdicted by the Nazi government in June, 1937. The publishing stock, the archives, both national and local, were confiscated. Even the greater part of private books was taken away.

From 1937 to 1944 several believers underwent rude and scoffing examinations by the police in their homes and some had terms of imprisonment. Dr. Grossman lost most of his extremely valuable Bahá’í library and archives, which he had during twenty years, spent infinite pains in gathering. A part of this library was allowed to be given to the University of Heidelberg Library, which accepted it gratefully and treated it with care and attention.

In May and June, 1944, judicial proceedings were taken against believers and friends of the Cause in Darmstadt and Heidelberg. The latter trial was public. Here, through a remarkable Providence, the public prosecutor gave a clear statement of the history and principles of the Faith and of the claim of Bahá’u’lláh. At both these trials the believers testified to the non-political character of the Faith and in giving their testimony revealed the majesty and power of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh, their unshakable loyalty to it and the certainty of its ultimate triumph.

"The judges had declared before the tribunals that they intended to extinguish the Cause in Germany. But the Almighty arm of Bahá’u’lláh was stronger than the forces of His enemies. As the false charges against the believers could not be sustained, no sentence could be pronounced against their lives and properties." They were, however, fined.

Burma

Most of the Bahá’ís of Mandalay and Rangoon took refuge in the Bahá’í village of Daidanaw when the Japanese invaded Burma. Not many months afterwards, Burmese hooligans, from adjoining villages, taking advantage of the retreat of the British, attacked Daidanaw, killed many of the friends, looted their property and burned all the huts. Siyyid Mustafá Roumie, the great pioneer teacher of Burma, whose death we recorded in the November News, was murdered in the Hazratu’l-Quds and that building was burned. The surviving Bahá’ís are destitute. The surviving Bahá’ís are destitute.

Iran

The National Board of Education of Iran has passed regulations dismissing Bahá’í students from the National Teachers Colleges. The Principals of these Colleges express entire satisfaction with the Bahá’í students, both as to their behavior and their ability, but are obliged to carry out the Government regulation. A strong letter of protest has been addressed by the N.S.A. of the Bahá’ís of Iran to the Minister of Education.

Through the British Bahá’í Journal comes the report that some Persian Bahá’ís, sent to Mecca by the Guardian, have formed a Spiritual Assembly in that city, the very center of Islam. Miss Garretta Busey of Urbana has recently received a reply to a letter she sent to Mr. Fazii, a young Iranian pioneer on the island of Bahrain in the Persian Gulf. He writes of the joy and inspiration the small group of Bahá’ís there receive from the news and messages from the friends in other lands. He goes on to say: "The news from Iran is always sorrowful. In all villages and cities the Ulama (Muhammadan clergy) try to show their dying power by encouraging the mob against the Bahá’ís and especially against the pioneers in untouched territory. So accustomed are the Iranian believers to these persecutions that when there is no riot or confusion in their locality, they say, 'There is no news in these parts'."

India

"The Promised Day has Come" has recently been republished in India and has received truly appreciative tributes from eminent Indians.

The Indian Bahá’ís have opened a Bahá’í school for children at Panchgani, 63 miles from Poona, where Bahá’í children will be given character training along Bahá’í lines, while attending non-Bahá’í schools for other training.

Australia

The Reverend H. C. Gurney, a returned missionary from Persia, has published an attack on the Bahá’í Faith in the Adelaide Church Guardian. The Herald of the South, Bahá’í Magazine for Australia, will print several hundred copies of its answer to this attack. This attack may aid in the spread of the Cause, as The Adelaide Church Guardian is read in many South Australian homes and, though many may be misled by the Reverend Gurney’s attack, some will be fair and desire to hear the Bahá’í point of view.

Brief Notes

A report that Lydia Zamenhof is alive in Russia has been received through the Red Cross.

Vuk Echtner, the Prague Esperantist, is alive and well. He is busy arranging study groups and translating Tablets.

Mr. A. Samimi made an extensive tour of the Indian Bahá’í Centers in the spring of 1945. He had asked for permission to go to the Holy Shrines, but the Guardian advised him to make this tour instead. His tour was very beneficial, his zeal and enthusiasm infusing into the friends a new ardor for service.

The youth group at Alexandria, Egypt, is very active.
