INDIAN RESERVATIONS OFFER OPPORTUNITIES

"God will assist all those who arise . . ."

Macy, Nebraska

This is a direct appeal to Bahá’ís in the teaching profession to consider applying for a position for next year in the public school at Macy, Neb., on the Omaha Indian reservation. A new domestic science and shop facility, as well as more elementary classrooms, are being added to the present school.

There is a high school in nearby Winnebago which Macy children of that age attend, so that there now are employment opportunities for teachers of all grades in the Macy area. There is no greater need for loving Bahá’í service than that which exists in the little reservation town of Macy.

Crow Agency, Montana

At Crow Agency, Mont., there are positions open for a registered and a practical nurse at the hospital, which is run by the Public Health Service. Many friends for the Faith have been won by Dr. Fazly Melany, who has just concluded a year’s contract as Medical Officer among the Crow and Northern Cheyenne Indians.

Dr. Melany adds his appeal to the Committee’s for a pioneer to carry on the work among the Indians in this spot where, as he says, the weather is ideal and the people very friendly.

Just before leaving the reservation, Dr. Melany was told by one of his good Indian friends, "I dreamed the Northern Cheyenne tribe are building a Bahá’í Temple and I had to get there to be in the Temple the first woman from Crow".

To qualified teachers and nurses who cherish the hope of serving the Faith among a needy people at this critical hour, this appeal is earnestly directed. For those who respond, the first step is to write to the American Indian Service Committee for important additional information, rather than to make employment application direct: Nancy Phillips, Secretary, 736 Encanto Drive, S.E., Phoenix, Ariz.

WOMEN'S CLUBS STRESS STUDY OF RELIGIONS

The General Federation of Women's Clubs in its current two-year program is encouraging local women's clubs to undertake the comparative study of the history and basic teachings of the religions of the world as one of its efforts to increase understanding among peoples at home and in other lands.

One of the books recommended by the General Federation of Women's Clubs for use in this study program is Truth is One, by Henry James Forman and Roland Gammon, in which there is an illustrated account of the Bahá'í Faith.

In her speech of acceptance of the office of president of this organization last May, Mrs. Robert I. C. Prout, in referring to this particular activity in the Federation's program said:

"An avenue of approach to understanding the cultures and history of mankind is through the comparative study of the religions of the world. . . Today, the most literate and educated nation in the world (the United States) is suffering from a tragic and pathetic illiteracy. . . an ignorance of the historical foundations of its own religion . . . God is the God of all mankind, and humanity is made up of many peoples and nations—precious in His sight, sharing a common humanity answerable to abiding values of truth, justice and love . . . There is a Divine pattern for humanity and within this pattern there is a variation, which individualizes each one of us . . . The individual—as an individual—may be powerless to shape events. The sum of the individuals—organized in high endeavor—may be potent enough through knowledge to lead the world out of the shadow of war into a lasting peace . . ."

As a result of this emphasis, opportunities have already been provided for a number of Bahá'ís in various states to provide literature and even speakers on the Faith for local women's clubs. Thus, another fine avenue of teaching has been opened to the believers by the Hand of God.

"CHILD'S WAY" PLANS NEW FORMAT

Bahá'u'lláh's Teachings embody a new standard of education with emphasis on spiritual values which will ultimately free mankind from the bonds of ignorance and animalism. Bahá'í children, though scattered and few, are being versed in this standard through the efforts of parents and teachers dedicated to the highest calling—the education of children, who are the potential new creation envisioned by Bahá'u'lláh.

Child's Way, the only Bahá'í publication in this country prepared especially for teachers and children, draws together from all corners of the world the small, distant groups united in the great goal of unifying all mankind.

The National Child Education Committee has devoted its efforts and talents to the task of making all communities, groups, and isolated believers aware of the vital importance of child education. One of the Committee's goals, the publication of an eight-page bulletin, has been reached. The new eight-page format will appear with the April issue of Child's Way.

Present subscribers who appreciate the privilege of receiving Child's Way can make the committee's second goal of 1200 subscriptions possible by promoting this publication at Feasts and conferences, and through gift subscriptions to friends. The attainment of this goal will help the National Fund by making Child's Way self-sustaining.

To new subscribers the Editors offer all past issues for this year, including the new eight page April issue, for $1.00. A further announcement about the 1957-1958 series beginning with June issue will be carried in the April bulletin. Mail requests for subscriptions to Miss Banu Hassan, 1244 Maple Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

Hawaii-Wide Teaching Conference and State Convention, the first attended by Bahá'ís from all the major islands of the Territory, held at Honolulu on December 1-2, 1956.
LIBRARY CONTACTS,
DONATIONS EXPLAINED

When the World Crusade pioneers first went to their far assignments, the Guardian advised them not to publicize their presence, but rather to build a firm foundation of friendship and trust in those whom they were to serve.

This service is also available to workers on the Home Front who wish to establish a workable contact with libraries. Bahá'ís should be patrons of the libraries in their own cities or districts, become acquainted with their book collections, the librarian and staff, and wholeheartedly make use of the varied facilities offered.

Although it may appear slow, it lays a firmer foundation for future cooperation than does the more or less propagandist approach when a stranger appears out of nowhere to donate a book about which the librarian too frequently knows nothing.

This year the following book donation record form was sent to all believers who indicated that they wished to contribute books to libraries:

"The Bahá’í book(s) was (were) placed in (name of library) (address of library) by (individual, group, Assembly) on (date).

With this definite detailing of information, it is hoped that many of the uncertainties and errors formerly accompanying records of book donations will be prevented in the future.

You will note that the statement reads "books were PLACED." This does not mean that the donor INTENDED to place, but that the books were ACCEPTED by the library.

The name and location of the library should be accurately given, as there is frequently more than one library or library system in a city or county. The name of the donor and the date of donation are also important, as at times the same donations have apparently been reported by more than one person in a place, or the same titles were sent in at different times in the same year, or in the ensuing year.

In some cities the believers have begun a check-up of Bahá'í books in the libraries, with the object of replacing old and inadequate titles with new and more attractive and accurate editions.

All such work should be done only by those duly appointed for the task, and with the full understanding and cooperation of the library authorities.

Replacements and new donations should be made a little at a time, rather than in quantity, as it is professionally easier and more agreeable to catalog and prepare one or two books and get them on the shelves than to tackle a sizeable collection. Librarians are busy people.

The National Library Service Committee thanks all those who have aided this quiet and inconspicuous but basic branch of the teaching service on the Home Front, and it hopes that another year will see an upsurge of renewed activity on the part of both field workers and committee members whoever and wherever they may be.

HUMAN RIGHTS PROGRAM FOLLOWED BY TEACHING

The February BAHÁ’Í NEWS reported briefly the program for the observance of Human Rights Day in which the Bahá’í women of Long Island, N.Y., were active participants. This further report is given here as an illustration of good follow-up for a public teaching event.

Having found that the contributions of the Bahá’ís to the Human Rights Day program had aroused great interest in the Faith, several of the Long Island believers consulted on how to capitalize on this development by providing an opportunity for those wishing it to receive further information. Therefore, a tea was arranged at the home of Mrs. Hubert H. Cowan in Garden City on January 13 for all who wished to come. Approximately 25 people attended—all non-Bahá'ís. Mr. O. Z. Whitehead, chairman of the New York local Spiritual Assembly, gave a direct talk on the Faith. Three days later there was further follow-up in the form of a ten-minute radio discussion of the coming World Religion Day observance, with Mrs. Cowan and Mr. Whitehead as the participants.

Plans for any public presentation of the Faith, whether by the Bahá’ís themselves or in cooperation with other local groups, should include arrangements for prompt follow-up, thus providing for some carry-over of whatever interest in further contact with the Faith may have been aroused.

SERVICE FOR BLIND APPEALS FOR HELP

At one time the records of the Bahá’í Service for the Blind, listing the Bahá’ís who must read the Teachings in Braille were up to date. However, since there has been much change, and many changes have not been reported, the Service for the Blind appeals for help from groups, Assemblies, and isolated believers in correcting these records.

Please send them the correct names and addresses of Bahá’ís who make use of Braille. Address the Bahá’í Service for the Blind, Mrs. Amedee Gibson, Chairman; 842 N. Hayworth Ave., Los Angeles 46, Calif.

The Bahá’í Service for the Blind wishes to emphasize that they have the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh in Braille, to be used in preparing contacts for enrollment in the Faith. They invite correspondence on other available Braille books, since there are many titles which may be borrowed by those who find this medium necessary, or by those who are preparing them for enrollment.

BAHÁ’Í ESPERANTO ACTIVITIES REPORTED

From Miss Roan U. Orloff, Newton Center, Mass., has come an interesting report of how the Bahá’í Faith is being promulgated throughout the world through Esperanto.

Some months ago, Miss Orloff, who is a member of the Universal Esperanto Association, translated and printed the Guardian’s statement, "The Bahá’í Faith, a World Religion," which he prepared in 1947 for the United Nations. Miss Orloff sent copies to all Bahá’ís who are delegates to this Association for distribution among the Esperantists at their meetings.

Copies were sent also to all im-important Esperanto publications for review, of which there are approximately thirty-five. The reviews are now beginning to appear. The first one was in La Norda Prismo in Sweden, and the second one appeared in Heroldo de Esperanto, the only Esperanto newspaper in the world.

The reviews state that a copy of the pamphlet would be sent to anyone interested in having it. Requests have already been received from Belgium, The Netherlands, and Sweden.

In the November issue of Esperanto Revue Internacia, the official organ of the Universal Esperanto Association, which has a subscription membership all over the world, even in the Iron Curtain countries, Dr. Tibor Sekelj of Hungary, who is traveling in the Orient in the interests of the Association, mentions two long interviews with Mr. Leroy Toas regarding Esperanto.

This same magazine carried an advertisement paid for by one of the Baha'is of Portugal, offering information about the Faith to interested seekers. This is to run for three months. At the end of the first month 22 requests had come from 12 countries, including a request for an article about the Faith from the American Branch of the Protestant Esperanto League.

BAHA'I IN THE NEWS

The World's Great Religions, which appeared serially in Life Magazine, has been published in book form. While the Baha'i Faith was not included, there are two references to it.

On page 5: “One illustration is the recent brutal persecution of the Baha'is in Iran. It is true, of course, that the Baha'i faith emerged in the last century as a reform movement within Persian Islam, and that it thus — insofar as it occurs within Persia — represents a refusal to submit to compressing the Persian populace into one united body of Islamic doctrine. But that would not justify or explain the ruthless treatment of the little Persian portion of what has by now become the Baha'i world brotherhood seeking peace among all races, peoples, nations and sects.”

Page 118: “One offshoot (from Shi'ah Islam) the pacifist faith called Baha'i, founded in Persia in the mid-Nineteenth Century, is now an independent religion intermittently persecuted in the land of its birth.”

Teacher's Letter, a bi-monthly bulletin issued September through May by Arthur C. Croft Publications, referred to the Faith in its Christmas 1956 number. “Good guidance is said to be based on affection for the child. Says a Baha'i dictum: ‘All beside love is but words.’”

Altars of the East, by Lew Ayers, Doubleday, 1956, contains the following passage on pp. 258-259: “As a contributing factor in any movement for world peace, the importance of such an organization cannot be overestimated. The aims and principles as set forth, are to me, above reproach. They present a beautiful and mature ideal of world fellowship in the broadest possible aspect.” This passage ends a description of the author's visit to the Shrine and Gardens on Mt. Carmel, with some of the Baha'i principles stated.

Chicago Daily Tribune, December 18, 1956, featured a story on its front page about the “Boom In Religion.” The Baha'i Temple was illustrated.

Columbus, Ohio, Despatch, December 19, 1956, presented a two-column illustration of the International Archives Building on Mt. Carmel with caption: “Baha'i Museum In Israel.” The picture was credited to Wide World Photo, and therefore might have been syndicated.

Herald Statesman, Yonkers, N. Y., carried a story about H. B. Kavelin in connection with the sale of Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, and indicated not only his business position but also referred to him as a leader in the Baha'i World Faith who was to speak at the First Unitarian Church in Yonkers.

Memo, a newsletter published by the American Institute of Architects, announced in its January 25, 1957, issue that “The Fine Arts Medal, the highest honor the Institute can bestow in the fine arts other than architecture, is to be awarded to Mark Tobey of Seattle, Wash., for distinguished achievement in painting.”

“Missionary Zeal Today in Upswing,” an article in the Gazette, Indiana, Pa., distributed by United Press, announces the date of the Baha'i annual State Convention.

Good Housekeeping Magazine, January, 1957, has a crossword puzzle using the word “Baha'i.”

NATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

Four tape-recorded programs were broadcast over radio station WACE, Springfield, Mass., during January. The programs were composed of direct quotations from the writings of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

A weekly children’s class patterned after the Nineteen Day Feast is held on Saturday afternoons at the Hagíratu’l-Quds in Anchorage, Alaska. The first part of the program is for study of the lesson, memory verse, and prayers; the second part is for consultation on future plans, the Fund, and other business; the third part is the social, devoted to arts, crafts, and refreshments.

A representative of the San Francisco, Calif., community was invited to speak on the Faith to the Evening Alliance, Branch of the National Unitarian Alliance, on January 9. The members are mostly business and professional women.

The Los Angeles, Calif., Spiritual Assembly sponsored an institute on January 12 at the Bahá’í Center on The Power of the Covenant, Spiritual Perspectives, and Charter of a Divine Civilization.

A member of the Minneapolis, Minn., community was contacted by a Methodist missionary to give the Bahá’í message to the Adult Bible Study Group of about 20 people at the Aldersgate Methodist Church there. Much interest was shown by this group, and the Bahá’í speaker was invited to return at a future date.

Fairbanks, Alaska, has been promoting the Faith with many newspaper articles publicizing its public meetings, with free television time on the occasion of visits from Bahá’ís from the States, with purchased radio time for the broadcast of Bahá’í tape recordings, and with activities as an auxiliary member of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Adult Sunday School class of the Methodist Church in Aurora, Colo., invited a local Bahá’í to present the principles of the Faith at a Sunday morning meeting. One member of the class borrowed a copy of Gleanings from the public library and prepared and introduced a study statement about Bahá’u’lláh, on which the Bahá’í speaker enlarged.

A regular Sunday morning service of the First Unitarian Church in Yonkers, N.Y., attended by over 150 persons, presented Borrah Kavelin speaking on "The Bahá’í Faith, Pathway to Religious Unity." The pastor read a Bahá’í prayer and selections from Gleanings.

The chairman of the Fort Wayne, Ind., local Spiritual Assembly spoke by invitation to an audience of 150 people at a Methodist Church. One of the members of the church later served as a member of the panel of speakers for the World Religion Day observance.

A Methodist class at Cape Vincent, N.Y., asked for literature on the Faith, and later wrote a letter of appreciation.

A Persian Bahá’í student attending college in Edmond, Okla., spoke on the Faith before the Methodist Church there.

Friendships made by a Bahá’í in Grand Island, Neb., while teaching a public speaking class at the YWCA, led to the formation of a study group to discuss problems of world peace. Books on race and the unity of mankind were discussed, as well as the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights. Sources of statements on human rights from earlier religions, and from the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh were presented.

The Bahá’í group of Santa Monica Judicial District, Calif., reports that its four members have been conducting Bahá’í meetings in the Veterans Administration facility, attended by from twelve to twenty people. Three new contacts are ready to declare their faith. When a student has advanced far enough, the group arranges to have him join a study class in the Los Angeles Bahá’í community where he is prepared for membership. This is perhaps the only Government reservation of this kind on which Bahá’í activities are being carried on in a continuous fashion.

The local Spiritual Assembly of Bernalillo County, N. Mex., reports that since last July it has carried on what is called a "Practice Teaching Class" jointly with members from the Albuquerque community. This class meets weekly and the members state that they have gained much in poise and confidence in presenting the teachings to others.

AREA NEWS BULLETINS

The Youth and Young Adult Committee of Los Angeles, Calif., whose panel discussion programs were described in the January issue of Baha’i News, conducted an outstanding public meeting in Las Vegas, Nev., in December. Topic for the meeting was "Human Life and Purpose," and attendance was estimated near 50 persons, with several good contacts gained.

The Central Atlantic States Area Teaching Committee held a Teaching Conference at Inspiration House, Washington, D.C., on January 26. The theme of the meeting was "The Meaning of the Covenant Today."

Area Teaching Conferences were held at Toledo, Ohio, on January 26-27, and at Fort Wayne, Ind., on February 9-10, sponsored by the East Central States Area Teaching Committee.

Two Bahá’ís spoke at the Wayne State University Campus Conference on Religion, Detroit, Mich., on December 46. Four classes were addressed on the principles of the Faith, and almost 100 contacts were made during the sessions.

A Unitarian Fellowship meeting in Waco, Texas, was given the Bahá’í message by two Bahá’ís of the Fort Worth community.

Mrs. Gladys Weeden addressed an assembly of 50 mothers of the Eastman School Mothers’ Club in Concord, N.H., last autumn, and spoke to 30 members at a dinner meeting of the Hadassah there. The theme was "Human Prerequisites for Teachings" was the theme of a Teaching Conference in Jersey City, N.J., on January 27. A similar conference was held in Elizabeth, N.J., a goal city, on February 24, and a third is scheduled for March 31 in another goal city, Trenton, N.J.

The Pittsburgh, Pa., local Spiritual Assembly sponsors weekly public meetings on Sunday afternoons at the YWCA.

"Translate Sentiment into Action," was the keynote of a teaching conference held at East Providence, R.I., on December 16. Four future meetings are planned on the following topics: "Personal Contacts and How to Handle Them," "Questions You Are Asked and How to Answer Them," "Firesides and How to Conduct Them," and "Improve the Efficiency of All Our Baha'i Meetings."

The North and South Dakota Area Committee held a conference at Sioux Falls, S.D., on December 22. Subjects discussed included Firesides, Youths, and Area Bulletins. Newspaper publicity, Pamphlets and books, and Local records.

Greeley, Colo., reports that it "started its public life as a group" with a meeting commemorating the birth of Baha'u'llah at the Hotel Camfield there. Newspaper advertising and publicity was used to announce the meeting.

The busy teaching schedule followed by the Gallup, N. Mex., group includes: Mondays, attendance in a class in conversational Navajo at Window Rock, Ariz.; Tuesday, Baha'i study class at Cameron; Thursday, Baha'i study class at Zuni, on the Zuni Reservation; and Saturday, class in English for Indians at Gallup. The community maintains an active Baha'i Center in Gallup, and is finding increasing ways in which they may serve the Indians of the area.

Area Teaching Conferences were scheduled by the South Atlantic States Area Teaching Committee on January 27 at the following places: Greenville, S.C., Atlanta, Ga., and Gainesville and St. Petersburg, Fla. The theme was "The Charter of a Divine Civilization."

The Area Bulletin of the Tennessee Valley States publishes regularly an educational feature. Each month a Baha'i book is reviewed briefly, a work is analyzed for pronunciation and meaning, and a question of the type frequently asked by inquirers is answered with references. Although only a few minutes per month is required to absorb this information so clearly and compactly presented, a year of such study can add up to a considerable store of knowledge about the Faith.

—NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The Role of American Baha'is

America's God-Given Mission. A compilation for round table study. On page 1 of this issue of Baha'i News the National Assembly points out the significance of this material concerning the particular mission of the American Baha'i Community in this day, and suggests it for individual or group study.

Free Booklet Included

With each copy of this compilation, a free copy of the booklet 'Abdu'l-Baha, Center of the Covenant will be included. In this booklet, written by the late Juliet Thompson (revered by the Guardian in his recent message to Baha'i News), we have one of the most warm and revealing pictures of the Master that we have in our literature by one who had close association with Him. It is a story that could have strong appeal to friends of the Faith, as well as to Baha'is. (Additional copies of this booklet are available at 8 copies for $1.00).

The price of America's God-Given Mission is $.15 each.

The Books of God Are Open. By E. S. Campbell. Friends will be glad to know that this publication, which deals competently with the theme of Bible prophecy, is again available. This edition, which has certain revisions, has been reprinted in a format that is more attractive and easier to read. A thorough study of the material presented by Mr. Campbell (formerly a minister of the Baptist church and Head of a college Bible Department for many years) should make the sincere seeker ready to go into a broader study of the subject of Bible prophecy and its fulfillment in the Baha'i teachings — works such as Some Answered Questions by 'Abdu'l-Baha, The Heart of the Gospel, The Promise of all Ages (both by Townshend,) and the many works available that relate both Old and New Testament teachings to the Baha'i Faith.

A larger printing has resulted in another decrease in the price to enable Baha'is to make a wide distribution of this booklet.

Per Copy .................................. $3.50

20 copies ................................ $5.00

A Spiritual Assembly's Growing Pains. A play by Ruhiyih Khanum. This is a new edition of a play written by the wife of the Guardian, published by the Baha'i Publishing Trust at New Delhi, India, and originally published in the United States. The title is indicative of the theme. The humor in the situations presented help to emphasize problems of immaturity that exist, and ways of solving them. 29 pp., 8½x5½, toast brown paper cover.

Our Annual Convention

Forty-nine years ago the first Bahá’í Convention was held in the city of Chicago.

That Convention was called because ‘Abdu’l-Bahá informed the Chicago Assembly that the Temple building project was national, and that all the Assemblies and friends should be associated together in this important undertaking. The Chicago Assembly then invited its sister-Assemblies to send representatives to the Convention.

This first Convention did not elect a National Spiritual Assembly, because such a Bahá’í body was yet unknown. Out of it came Bahá’í Temple Unity to function primarily on Temple matters, though it also appointed a Teaching Committee, a Reviewing Committee, and others.

The first American National Spiritual Assembly, as we understand the term, was formed in 1923 under direction of the Guardian. Bahá’í Temple Unity continued to hold title to Temple property and the Temple funds until its trustees executed an Indenture of Trust (recorded November 13, 1928) for the Benefit of the National Spiritual Assembly. Under its terms those persons elected annually to the National Spiritual Assembly constitute the Bahá’í Temple Trustees.

Attorneys and a title company consulted in the matter recommended this type of trust deed, and the same form was followed in the case of Green Acre, Geyserville, Davison, and Temerity Schools, and the Wilson and Wilhelm properties. Since the members of the National Spiritual Assembly are under all these trusteeships the trustees, national Bahá’í matters are coordinated without confusion, with the further advantage that any liability laid against one property could not involve any other property nor the National Spiritual Assembly itself.

Aside from such legal considerations, the great distinction between the National Spiritual Assembly and Bahá’í Temple Unity is that the National Spiritual Assembly has final power of decision, while the Temple Unity had authority only to carry out the plans adopted by the Annual Convention.

The Temple Unity Constitution reflected American political practice while the National Spiritual Assembly represents the Guardian’s interpretation of Bahá’í law and principle. That is why, in all basic particulars, the constitutions of all National Spiritual Assemblies are identical throughout the world, and will continue in their present form until, as the Guardian has written, the House of Justice will review the whole situation. At that time the constitutional basis of a National Spiritual Assembly will no doubt derive from the organic powers of the House of Justice and sustain a secondary relationship to that world body.

When delegates and visitors arrive for the Forty-Ninth Annual Bahá’í Convention, they will give consideration to projects beyond the conception of those attending the first Convention.

On account of the fact that all nine members of the present National Spiritual Assembly will attend the nine Conventions sponsored by our body, the Convention dates here had to be placed at the very end of the Ridván period. Our Convention, therefore, opens on Sunday morning, April 28, and continues until four o’clock Wednesday afternoon, May 1.

The Convention theme is: “The American Bahá’í Community in the World Crusade.” After the Convention officers have been elected, the first and all-important item will be the reading of the Guardian’s message to the Convention. Discussion of this message will take place during the same morning session. The Convention photograph will be taken at noon on April 28.

This year the Ridván Feast will be held Saturday evening, April 27, preceding the Convention. The customary public congress will not be held.

Other Convention items involve our most important responsibilities: The Crusade on the Home Front; reports on the formation of the nine new National Spiritual Assemblies sponsored by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States; World Crusade financial requirements; progress report on the First Dependency; remaining tasks of the Intercontinental Teaching Committee; tasks of the American Indian Service Committee and the Bahá’í Interracial Teaching Committee; Child Education, Bahá’í Youth, Summer Schools, reports of the various service committees, and special topics suggested by delegates.

The annual election of the National Spiritual Assembly will be held from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., Monday, April 29.

Bahá’ís unable to attend the Convention are urged to pray for its spiritual success. For it is the Annual Convention which releases the forces of the entire American Bahá’í community and generates inspiring power for the incoming National Spiritual Assembly. Those planning to attend are urged to prepare themselves by prayer and meditation to receive the confirmation of the Holy Spirit.

GUARDIAN APPROVES SUMMER SCHOOL IN SOUTHERN AREA

The National Spiritual Assembly shares with the friends the following passage from a letter written on behalf of the Guardian by his secretary, dated January 29, 1957:

"As regards the suggestion that a Summer School be established in the South, the Guardian feels that there is no objection, as the southern friends are so far from the three existing Bahá’í Summer Schools, to a southern region Summer School being held similar to what they do in Europe, where the friends meet in some particular place and hold a Summer School, which is not on Bahá’í property. To purchase property for this purpose and try and set up a fourth Summer School would naturally be very unwise at the present time, but he feels that the activities which are conducted under the auspices of a Summer School would be a great stimulation to the Faith in the South, and further the teaching work there."

This permission, it will be noted, is for a School consisting of sessions planned for only a week to ten days, and not involving the purchase and maintenance of a Bahá’í School property.

The National Spiritual Assembly is requesting the Area Teaching Committees and local Assemblies throughout the Southern States area (as defined by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in His Tablets of the Divine Plan) to consult and report recommendations as to a suitable site where interracial gatherings can be held. The matter will also be discussed at the National Convention.

Since advance planning is required, the new school cannot be launched until the summer of 1958.

Meanwhile, the Blue Ridge Conference will be held as usual in the summer of 1957, since arrangements have already been made and its duration is too limited for the program of a Summer School session.

BAHÁ’Í CENTERS RESTORED IN IRÁN

The National Spiritual Assembly is happy to inform the believers that all but a few Ḥazíratu’l-Quds in Iran have been returned to their Bahá’í custodians.

The believers throughout Iran are especially grateful and joyous over the restoration of the House of the Báb in Shiráz and of His shop in Būlābāh.

As for the National Ḥazíratu’l-Quds in Teherán, orders were issued by the Royal Court and the Prime Minister to evacuate and restore this property. However, since the Military Headquarters was renewed for three months, there is every reason to expect its return early in 1957.

Western Hemisphere

Alaska Achieves Maturity This Month

On April 21 the Bahá’ís of Alaska will elect its long and eagerly awaited first National Spiritual Assembly. It will thereby have achieved its coming of age, and will no longer be under the guidance of the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee.

Nine delegates from the five local Assemblies were elected on January 6 at local conventions. The National Convention is to be held in Anchorage, and Paul E. Haney, Hand of the Cause and chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, will be in attendance.

The achievements leading up to this prize goal have been spectacular in the Bahá’í world, and Alaska has been a shining star of energy and activity since the beginning of the Crusade in 1953.

At that time there were two Assemblies. The third Assembly was formed in April 1955, and last year Ketchikan and Tanana Valley reached Assembly status, completing the present five.

This year Juneau will undoubtedly become the sixth Alaskan Assembly. In addition, the cities of Barrow, Nome, and Valdez have been opened to the Faith; Indian and Eskimo believers have entered the Faith; and translations have been started in Eskimo and Aleut.

"Child's Way" Magazine Enlarged in Size, Features

Beginning with the April issue, Child's Way will be enlarged to an 8-page bi-monthly publication, including a complete section for children and for junior youth, thus making it a more valuable teaching aid for Bahá’í parents and teachers.

The enlarged format and increased printing costs, plus the desire to make Child’s Way self-supporting, necessitate an increase in the subscription price to $2.00 a year (for six issues). The National Spiritual Assembly urges all local Assemblies, Bahá’í groups, and individuals to subscribe to and support this publication, which is valuable to all believers interested in Bahá’í child education and the training of the future generations on whom will depend the establishment of the World Order of Bahá’ulláh.

Mail requests for subscriptions to Miss Banu Hassan, 1244 Maple Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

—National Spiritual Assembly
About 149ioneers have gone to Alaska from the States. The total number of believers in Alaska at the present time is about 100, with 32 new enrollments during the past year.

The election of the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, however, is only a beginning, rather than an end, and the future of Alaska appears to be very great. Economically it is a frontier, and we receive continual reports concerning opportunities for employment.

Labor Shortage

There is at the present time a great shortage of labor in nearly all fields, presenting the Bahá'ís living in the United States a challenge to pioneer in Alaska, and an opportunity to assist in the building up of the newly formed institution of the Faith.

The Alaska Teaching Bulletin for January reports that “in Nome, lab or X-ray technicians or nurses could easily obtain employment with the ANS, and would be working with the natives. This is a wonderful opportunity for persons in these professions, and we hope that anyone having Bahá'í friends trained in them will write them of these openings. A hospital under construction in Kotzebue will also create job openings.”

A Bahá'í has written: “Here at the Sitka Community Hospital where I am working we have urgent need for a laboratory technician or medical technologist... This is a new hospital just opened last April... The place was started with a skeleton crew and a big question mark as to how much business the two could afford to give us. People have been coming from all over southeastern Alaska for care by our orthopedic surgeon, and we have been trying to increase the staff... We need a bacteriologist... We could help with living arrangements.”

For further information about these openings, please write to the committee: Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, secretary; 73 College Road West, Princeton, N.J.

Growth of Faith

In September the Guardian wrote urging the members of the Alaska Teaching Committee and all the friends to “leave no stone unturned to gain new believers, and also to do all in their power to assist in the further consolidation of the Faith throughout the important lands.”

As an example of the rapidity with which the Faith seems to be growing in Alaska, Ketchikan started in April with 10 believers, set a goal of 20 before the end of the year, and by January already had 22. As with Anchorage Recording District and Fairbanks Recording District (Tanana Valley), the nucleus for an Assembly outside Ketchikan has already been formed with three adults and one youth.

Cooperation Appreciated

Space does not permit a complete survey of the outstanding things that have been achieved in Alaska, but as the retiring “parent” or “guardian” of the Alaska community, this Committee is taking its last opportunity to express its appreciation of the fine cooperation that has existed between the WHTC and the Alaska Teaching Committee, the Alaskan Assemblies, and the pioneers—all of whom will now be under the leadership of the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska.

We will miss our responsibility, but it will be outweighed by our pleasure at having watched our “child” grow swiftly and move successfully into its own sphere of activity and responsibility.

ASSEMBLY INCORPORATION WIDELY PUBLICIZED

On January 10, 1957, the letters patent, which formally incorporated the Brisbane, Australia, Local Spiritual Assembly, was signed by the State Governor of Queensland, the Australian Baha'i Bulletin reports.

The Brisbane Assembly issued a press release announcing this achievement. A section of this was used by the ABC News Service in the State News Bulletin and the Brisbane Telegraph on the following day. It was used in its entirety by the Queensland Times at Ipswich on January 12.

Radio publicity was also obtained. A member of the community was given a four minute interview on "Radio News Reel" over Stations 4-BC, 4SB, and 4GR. A 2 minute explanation of the Faith was broadcast over the ABC State network in "Queensland Magazine" on January 19.

ASSEMBLY REVIEWS
SEVEN-YEAR GOALS

Progress in the work toward goals of the Guardian’s Seven Year Plan for the new National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa is reported in the latest issue of their Newsletter, published in December:

1. To do as much as the Guardian will permit for the establishment of the Masriqul-Adhkar, which he called the "supreme objective." This is going on very well.

2. To obtain national incorporation, which means that the National Assembly must become a legally recognized body. The application for incorporation is now being considered by the government.

3. To obtain incorporation for some local Assemblies. Those of Dar-es-Salaam, Kampala, Mombasa, Nairobi, and Port Victoria were chosen as being ready and strong enough for such incorporation. The necessary documents are now being studied by the local Assemblies and their lawyers.

4. To establish 15 new Assemblies. The National Assembly has allocated these projected Assemblies as follows: Uganda, 10; Kenya, 3; Tanganyika, 1; and Comoro Islands, 1. At the time of writing, only one of these goals has been won, but the situation is favorable, as new declarations are being accepted and there is a great deal of teaching in progress.

5. To strengthen the Fund. The teaching work has suffered because of a lack of funds, and the National Assembly has the task of making the believers aware of the importance of the Fund and of contributing to it.

Assembly Consolidation

6. To consolidate local Assemblies. The National Assembly has attempted to help local Assemblies become strong by producing literature in Ateso, French, Luganda, Swahili, Runyoro-rutooro, Acholi, Lugbara and Luo, and Lumasaba; by sending pioneers; by forming District and Territorial Committees; and by holding 11 weekend schools to encourage and strengthen the local Assemblies and to deepen the believers.

7. To make the Haqiratu’l-Quds a national institution. The National Assembly has taken over the running Clara Dunn, Hand of the Cause, surrounded by youth attending the Australian Baha'i Summer School at Yerrinbool, New South Wales. The school, held from December 26 to January 7, was reported in "Bahá’í News" for March, page 7. of the Hazíratu'l-Quds, all Assembly meetings are held there, and the important documents and precious relics are stored there. When the National Assembly receives incorporation papers, the Hazíratu'l-Quds will be registered in the name of the Assembly.

Teaching Stimulation

8. To stimulate the spirit of teaching. This work was detailed in point No. 6 above, and the Assembly reports that the teaching work throughout the region is generally good.

The Newsletter also reports that a total of 61 local Assemblies have now been formed and recognized by the National Assembly.

FAITH PARTICIPATES IN RADIO DISCUSSION

Der 19-Tafl Brief, a letter from the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria distributed among the Bahá'ís of those countries at Nineteen-Day Feasts, carries in the issue of January 19, 1957, a report of a radio program of interest to the believers.

The Hesse Radio invited the National Spiritual Assembly to have a representative participate in a panel discussion, "Frankfurt Conversation," on the subject of tolerance in connection with the building of the Bahá'í Temple in Germany.

Dr. Eugen Schmidt, who was the chosen representative, was asked to explain what the Bahá'í Faith is, and its aims and objects. Most of the questions following the several presentations were addressed to Dr. Schmidt.

Since there appears to be no possibility now of securing property on which to erect the Temple in the vicinity of Frankfurt as originally intended, consideration is being given to a site in Offenbach.

The letter expresses the belief that this radio talk will do much to forward the Temple building project.

Annual Teaching Conference held on January 5-6 at Birmingham, England, under the auspices of the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles.
American Bahá'ís' newest national public relations event, race amity meetings held this year in conjunction with the observance of Negro History Week from February 10 to 17, proved to be highly successful throughout the nation.

The Bahá'í Interracial Teaching Committee, which made extensive plans for this event, reports that 83 Bahá'í communities in 35 states presented some form of public meetings to carry out the Guardian's injunction that we must attract more Negroes to the Faith.

Of these meetings, 48 presented both non-Bahá'í and Bahá'í speakers, 7 featured a Bahá'í speaker alone, and 4 heard a non-Bahá'í as the speaker. Eight communities gave a banquet or similar form of dinner, while 16 communities presented panel discussions or symposiums. Others held firesides, or informal programs of readings or discussions.

An outgrowth of the Interracial Teaching Committee's planning for these race amity meetings on a national scale was close cooperation with the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, a 32-year-old non-profit, scientific organization. It works through the schools for the adoption of textbooks which include Negro history and literature, and seeks revision of those textbooks which continue to promote the belief in the inherent inferiority of the Negro.

The Association voluntarily distributed a large quantity of Bahá'í literature to its special mailing list of eminent American Negroes. The Interracial Teaching Committee also provided the Association with 500 copies of Race and Man, which they mailed out from their Washington, D.C., headquarters. Each book contained a small card stating "Compliments of the Bahá'í Interracial Teaching Committee."

A feature story of these nationwide observances has been requested by this Association for publication in the May issue of their magazine The Negro History Bulletin, circulated throughout the United States, and in South America, Europe, Asia, and Africa.

Highlights of Meetings

Bahá'í News has selected highlights of the Interracial Teaching Committee's report on these race amity meetings to illustrate the content and diversity of some of the programs. Comments from the communities themselves are quoted to emphasize the reactions to these presentations:

Fairbanks, Alaska, held a Race Amity Banquet attended by 61 guests and 17 Bahá'ís. Two non-Bahá'í speakers talked on "Race and Biology," and "The Negro and World History"; the Bahá'í speaker spoke on "Race Amity and the Bahá'í Faith."

Fairbanks reported the meeting was "most successful . . . (with) largest crowd of people ever attending Bahá'í sponsored program to date."

Phoenix, Ariz., held a public meeting at the Park Recreation Hall in the Negro and Mexican district with Bahá'í speakers. Sixteen non-Bahá'ís and ten Bahá'ís were present.

They reported: "We wanted to go to these people, not expect them to come to a home or predominately 'white' meeting place. . . . your program awakened us to this field of teaching which has been neglected in this area. . . . With the integration in the schools taking place with such success here, we must not lag behind in sharing . . . the spark that has made this possible." A public meeting in the public library of Monrovia, Calif., was attended by 46 non-Bahá'ís and 14 Bahá'ís. A Bahá'í spoke on "The Meaning of Race Unity."

Monrovia reported: " . . . feeling of non-Bahá'ís was one of great joy at the complete harmony here . . . several Bahá'ís from other communities said 'never witnessed such warmth and appreciation on the part of an audience.'"

Colorado Springs and El Paso county, Colo., jointly sponsored a public meeting at the Negro City Recreation Center, attended by 35 non-Bahá'ís and 11 Bahá'ís. A non-Bahá'í and a Bahá'í speaker shared the speaker's platform.

The El Paso county Assembly stated: "There was a very friendly relationship . . . all Negroes present were so happy to find the fellowship between us."

The St. Petersburg, Fla., Bahá'ís participated in the Negro History
Baha’i Teaching of The Oneness of Mankind

Week observance with the Negro Baptist Church at their invitation. In addition to the church program, a Baha’i spoke on “The Oneness of Mankind.”

The African Methodist Church of Ada County, Idaho, invited the neighboring Baha’is to attend services at the church in fellowship with Negro friends. Mrs. Mildred Cossey gave comments on the Oneness of God, the Oneness of His Prophets, and the Oneness of Mankind.

“These are the Negro friends,” Ada County reported, “who attended the observance of the Birthday of Baha’u’llah at the Art Gallery in November 1956.”

Lafayette, Ind., held a public meeting in a private home with two Baha’i speakers, Negro and white. Fourteen non-Baha’is were present, in what Lafayette reported “apparently was the first fruitful interracial meeting in Lafayette in years.”

“The Quakers tried in December and got none to show up. Civic groups had met with disappointment.” Besides two Negro ministers, the Vice-President of the NAACP, and a teacher, two Asian Buddhists also attended. “We cannot work with Negroes on a more spiritual level, which we think is the best way. Other ways had failed here,” Lafayette’s report stated.

A Race Amity Conference was sponsored by the Baha’is of Niles Township, Mich., with three speakers, two non-Baha’i and one Baha’i. Topics were: “Amity Through Legislation,” “Amity Through Education,” and “Amity Through Religion.” There were 14 non-Baha’is and 22 Baha’is present.

Niles Township reported this meeting the “most successful yet. Publicity given, comparatively speaking, was excellent. . . . Activity of community organizations stimulated by project. It appears that two firesides will develop as a result of project.”

A fireside at the Baha’i Center in Jackson, Miss., featured a non-Baha’i speaker; Dr. John E. Eubanks, Negro, Head of the Sociology Department, Jackson State College. The Jackson Baha’is, in reporting on Dr. Eubanks’ talk, stated: “The knowledge he has of the Baha’i Faith and other world religions makes him a channel for our committee to work at Jackson College, which has a student body of 1500. He is using Race and Man as required reading in his anthropology classes.”

Waterloo, Iowa, Baha’is participated in three events. On February 11 the chairman of the local Baha’i Assembly was present on the platform at the Antioch Baptist Church for the opening observance of Negro History Week. Baha’is in the audience were publicly recognized. On February 15 George Amerson of Maywood, III., spoke at a panel discussion at Union Hall on “A Heavenly Gem,” bringing out the brotherhood of all mankind.

That same evening, at a recital by Mahalia Jackson, well-known Negro singer, at one of the Junior High Schools, she was presented with a copy of Race and Man. Three Baha’is were present on the platform at this recital, and the “Prayer for All Mankind’’ was read. The Baha’is report that many contacts and friends were made through their participation with the Negroes of the city during this observance.

Widespread publicity through press and radio attended the panel discussion held at Flint, Mich. Two non-Baha’i and one Baha’i speakers, and a Baha’i moderator took part in this meeting at International Institute, with 30 non-Baha’is and 15 Baha’is present.

Twelve newspaper articles totaling 81 column-inches, and 20 free radio announcements publicized this meeting.

A panel discussion was also presented at the Douglass Interracial Community Center in Kalamazoo, Mich., with a non-Baha’i speaker and moderator, and two Baha’i speakers. “There isn’t any doubt that this was the best meeting ever held in Kalamazoo,” their report stated.

“A . . . the spirit displayed was beyond description, there seemed to be complete unity and harmony. The question period, limited to ten minutes, went to 40 minutes.”

In Trenton, N.J., a public meeting in a Baptist Church featured a non-Baha’i Negro teacher of Latin and social studies in Trenton Junior High School, and a Baha’i speaker. Of 100 persons attending, 90 were non-Baha’is.

Discussion group at Marysville, Mich., race amity meeting, representing five religious faiths.
"A complete success!," Trenton reported.

Mount Vernon and Yonkers, N.Y., sponsored jointly a symposium in a Bahá'í home. Four prominent non-Bahá'í Negroes spoke, in addition to a Bahá'í speaker. The Bahá'í subject was "The Contribution of the Bahá'í Faith to Racial Understanding."

The report of the Mount Vernon Assembly said: "The meeting was on a high level. . . . We feel a greater understanding exists between those who attended and participated in the meeting, both Negro and white. This was the finest thing we have ever done."

Rochester, N.Y., Bahá'ís' public meeting attracted "the largest number of Negro guests ever had. Usually quiet during the meeting, and people stayed long after it was over, discussing it." The program included a non-Bahá'í and a Bahá'í speaker, a vocalist and accompanist.

In Greensboro, N.C., a large audience of 82 non-Bahá'ís and 16 Bahá'ís heard a panel discussion featuring a white and a Negro college professor, and a Bahá'í representative. Subjects of the talks were "Anthropology Versus Myths," "Contributions to Society," and "Man: His Reality and Goal." The Bahá'í community sent out 240 invitations for the meeting, and placed posters in store windows, libraries, and college halls.

A similar type of panel discussion in Eugene, Ore., brought together a college professor, a Christian minister, and a Bahá'í speaker on the University of Oregon campus. The program was co-sponsored by the Bahá'ís of Eugene and the local chapter of the NAACP.

The Eugene report stated: "A fine meeting with a good, relaxed, and gay spirit. . . . There was a good representation of Negroes present, mostly from the university, and also a number of foreign students. Most of the audience heard of the Bahá'í Faith for the first time."

"Toward True Integration" was the topic of the public meeting at Providence, R.I., held at Brown University. A Negro feature writer for a Providence newspaper and Mrs. Robert McLaughlin, Bahá'í, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, shared the platform.

Memphis, Tenn., Bahá'ís presented a banquet and symposium at the Negro YMCA, with two non-Bahá'í speakers and one Bahá'í representative. Seventy non-Bahá'ís and 15 Bahá'ís attended this meeting, which elicited the comment, "We had the best response ever achieved here. . . . Among our guests were two educators from LeMoyne College, a Chinese and a Nigerian. There was also a young Chinese woman from Hawaii. Other guests included businessmen, two newspaper women, several ministers, professional men, young people, and old people."

In Yakima, Wash., the Bahá'í community invited 32 non-Bahá'í guests to a banquet at the Elks' Hall. Two Bahá'í speakers, representing the African Methodist-Episcopal Church and the Baptist Church, a Negro college student active in youth work, and a local Bahá'í were the speakers. The guest list was limited, as the Bahá'í community financed the banquet.

At a public meeting in Tacoma, Wash., the president of the NAACP local chapter spoke on "The Meaning of Race Unity," and a Thlinget Indian Bahá'í spoke on "The Progress of Religion."

The Tacoma Assembly commented: "At the meeting we had Eskimo, Indian, colored and white. We had a man from Jerusalem, one from Frankfurt, Germany, and one from South Africa."

The Governor of Wisconsin, invited to the Amity Day dinner sponsored by the Madison community and the Monona Group, sent a telegram of commendation when he was unable to attend: "Sorry that I cannot be with you for the Amity Day observance. You are all to be commended for your efforts in behalf of tolerance and world brotherhood. I hope you will continue with great success this worthy and important endeavor. With good wishes, Vernon W. Thompson, Governor."

The non-Bahá'í speaker at this Madison observance was William T. Evjue, nationally known newspaperman, and editor of the Capital Times. At one point in his talk, Mr. Evjue, in speaking directly to the Bahá'ís present, said, "When I learned that the fundamental doctrine of your faith is the oneness of the entire human race, I began to have a feeling on oneness with you. I am at one with you in other principles which you support: the condemnation of prejudice—religious, racial, class, or national; equality of men and women; compulsory education; abolition of extremes of wealth and poverty; a world tribunal for adjudicating disputes between nations; and belief in justice as the ruling principle in human society."

The above quotation, as well as other comments on the dinner, were published in Mr. Evjue's newspaper the next day. The Madison Assembly reported that 11 nations and 5 religions were represented at this affair. Attendance included 83 non-Bahá'ís and 37 Bahá'ís.

Milwaukee, Wisc., gave a buffet supper and public meeting that was..." attended by a total of 179 people; of these, 35 were Negro non-Bahá'ís, 25 were white non-Bahá'ís, and the rest were Bahá'ís. A Negro professor of philosophy at the University of Wisconsin spoke on “The High Cost of Desegregation.” The chairman was an Oceana Indian Bahá'í.

“It was one of the largest meetings held at the Center,” the Milwaukee Assembly reported. “The Interracial Committee of Milwaukee finds this type of informal meeting most gratifying, and hopes to elaborate on it for other interracial meetings in the future.”

A fireside at the home of a Bahá'í in Laramie, Wyo., was the first of its kind ever held in that city. “It deepened our friendship with some of the finest Negroes in town,” the Laramie Bahá'í stated.

The Bahá'í community of Des Moines, Iowa, initiated plans for a race amity meeting during Negro History Week, and gained the cooperation of the Des Moines Interracial Commission and the local chapter of the NAACP, with all three organizations jointly sponsoring the program. A panel discussion, exhibit, and tea attracted 210 non-Bahá'ís, as well as 14 Bahá'ís.

Comments from Des Moines Bahá'ís stated: “Great success. Best ever,” according to our Negro friends. We had our new City Manager and our new Governor's wife . . . good talks, beautiful music, lovely tea table, handsome exhibit, friendly folks, and people learning to say, properly, the new words ‘Bahá’í’ and ‘Bahá'u'lláh’ . . . it's a beginning!“

Albuquerque, N. Mex., sponsored a panel discussion that listed as speakers a white Presbyterian minister, a Negro African Methodist-Episcopal minister, a Catholic layman, a Jewish layman, and a Bahá'í. The theme was “Race and Democracy,” and 25 non-Bahá'ís and 15 Bahá'ís attended.

“Stimulating, excellent panel,” Albuquerque Bahá'ís reported. “We discussed racial relations in the United States, both from a social and a religious angle. . . . We agree that a Racial Amity Conference should become an annual Bahá'í event.”

Seattle, Richmond Highlands, and Kirkland, Wash., Bahá'ís joined to present a banquet and musical program, with a presentation on the theme “Spiritual Mission of the American People.”

The report on this observance stated: “The program was actually one in which the Negro community felt it was working with the Bahá'ís in giving a suitable program. The script was so written that it carried the audience along with it completely. Artistically it was splendid; moreover it was a tremendous spiritual experience for participants and audience alike.”

Bahá'í News could quote from many more of these reports if space permitted, but those published above should convey the warm acceptance and enthusiasm with which these programs were received.
GREEN ACRE PLANS
8-WEEK SESSION

Green Acre will have an eight week session this summer extending from June 30 through August 25. Regular classes throughout the school season will be open to both youth and adults, but courses of special interest to youth are being planned for the first two weeks and the last week of the session. The curriculum is based on a unit of one week so that those attending the school should plan to come for at least one full week.

A Children's School for children ages 5 through 13, divided into three age groups, will be in session throughout the summer with classes in the mornings and organized recreation for part of the afternoon.

As in the past there will be varied weekend programs in which students will have the opportunity to be heard from and meet members of various National Committees, Hands of the Cause, visiting pioneers, and others. A mid-summer Teaching Conference under Area Teaching Committee auspices will take place July 27 and 28.

The basic Green Acre program design this summer includes one course each week given by an outstanding Bahá’í teacher to which the entire school will be invited. Following this course there will be two periods each day during which the students will break up into small seminar or workshop groups for more intensive and collaborative study of various aspects of the Faith with the assistance of selected discussion leaders.

The Schedule of Courses, subject to revision, is as follows:

July 1-5: The Guardian—On Teaching
July 8-12: The Covenant and You
July 15-19: Bahá’ís By The Hundreds
July 22-26: Our Place in History
July 29-Aug. 2: Spiritual Verities and the Individual
Aug. 5-9: Toward World Order
Aug. 12-16: Powers and Attributes of the Manifestations
Aug. 19-23: Spiritual Laws

Workshops and seminars will each focus attention on a subject included under one of the following headings:

1. Study of the Writings and History of the Faith.
2. How To—give a Bahá’í talk, conduct a fireside, consult, raise children in the Faith, serve on an Assembly or committee, etc.
3. Action Projects—work on a concordance project, talk at a local fireside, etc.

Watch subsequent issues of Bahá’í News and your Area Teaching Bulletins for further details of the Green Acre School program for 1957 as they are developed.

What is Youth?

“Youth is not a time of life, it is a state of mind. Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years. People grow old by deserting their ideals. Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul. Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair, these are the long, long years that bow the head, and turn the growing spirit back to dust. You are as young as your self-confidence, as old as your doubt, as young as your faith, as old as your fear. As long as your heart receives messages of beauty, cheer, courage, grandeur, and power, from the earth, from man and from the infinite, so long you are young.”

Let us remain “as young as our Faith” to keep alive its beauty, grandeur, and cheer in these days of world crises, lack of faith, and darkness. To protect our beloved Faith from the ailments of “old age” which are apathy, bias, and fear, we must live in the present by living for the future. To do this let us constantly strive to develop the youth within us, among us and surrounding us.

The youth within us is in our enthusiasm, awareness, steadfastness, and courage to be different in an age of conformity, indoctrination, and compromise. Being “different” requires courage, strength of will, and firmness in our principles, yet retaining an open mind receptive to the needs, interests, and questions of those around us. In this way we are vanguards rather than followers in the creation of the future world order.

Helping the youth who surround us means increasing our youth contacts to connect them with the spirit of Bahá’u’lláh. This may be done by surveying the existing organizations of your community where there is youth activity and participating with them.

Such organizations include youth recreational centers; Junior Chambers of Commerce, and interracial organizations. Colleges also sponsor inter-faith, interracial and international clubs which welcome and often need outside interest and assistance. Other sources for youth contacts can be found through YWCA’s, YMCA’s, YMHA’s, 4-H clubs, and court cases such as juvenile delinquents. Your own relatives, friends, and neighborhood may provide other untapped resources.

Wherever they may be, you will certainly find that youth are only too eager to be considered as adults and included in the serious discussions and concerns related to our teachings. With vitality, elasticity, and independence, they are ready and waiting to investigate the divine teachings revealed for this age and to bring them into their lives. Just as society is influenced by our concern with its problems, so can youth contacts be reached for Bahá’u’lláh by working through their needs and interests.

There is also much which can be done for the youth already with us in the Faith. Their participation can be enlisted in youth panels, talks, and circuit teaching. Such activities provide the impetus for deepening as well as the stimulus to apply our writings to present day questions and concerns. They also offer practice in speaking before the vast non-Bahá’í public soon to be at our door, as well as familiarity with Bahá’í communities and areas.

By establishing, supporting, and maintaining youth committees, youth can become familiar with administration while acquiring the practical experience needed to establish future and distant assemblies.

Deepening classes can be planned for youth with an eye to their present and future concerns. Among the immediate needs for those who have been brought up within the Faith, is a thorough knowledge of Christian writings and the Bible, so that we may introduce our contacts to our Faith from the background with which they are most familiar.

Another need, especially in view of present difficulties between the Muslim East and the Western world, is a more thorough understanding of Islam and recognition of its place as a step beyond the Gospel in the direction of the Kitáb-i-Aqdas.

Finances for youth activities and transportation to and from conferences, meetings, and schools are two more ways to help youth. Hospitality also plays an important part for Bahá’í youth and their contacts. This is especially true for the youth scattered in colleges and universities who do not have the facilities of a home to which they can introduce their friends and contacts.

Since very few colleges or universities have Bahá’í representation on campus, communities and groups can help by working with campus activities providing teachers, speakers, and literature for such events as those sponsored by interracial, international, and religious organizations. Notices of Bahá’í activities when placed in school papers are another way of reaching seekers.

By keeping in touch with the youth and assisting their growth and development, our Faith is ascertained of future triumphs from an increased legacy of strength, vigor and vitality.

Cable from the Guardian to Hands of the Cause and National Assemblies

“Inform Hands (and) National Assemblies (of the) Bahá’í world, (of the) passing (into) Abhá Kingdom (of) Hand (of) Cause George Townshend, indefatigable, highly talented, fearless defender (of the) Faith (of) Bahá’u’lláh. Agnes Alexander, distinguished pioneer (of the) Faith, elevated (to) rank (of) Hand (of) Cause. Confident (her) appointment will spiritually reinforce teaching campaign simultaneously conducted (in) North, South (and) Heart (of) Pacific Ocean.” —Shoghi

Haifa, March 27, 1957

Beloved Friends:

As directed by Shoghi Effendi, our Assembly has dispatched copies of this message to Hands of the Cause in Asia, Europe, Africa, and America, and also to all National Spiritual Assemblies now in existence.

The brilliant Bahá’í career of Dr. Townshend, so praised by the beloved Guardian, does not terminate with his departure from this world. His books and pamphlets will continue to deepen the understanding of Bahá’ís and offer them a highly effective contact with the public. Indeed, his latest work, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, is now on the press in England and copies will soon be available through the United States Publishing Trust and Publishing Trusts or Committees in other countries.

The elevation of Agnes Alexander to the rank of a Hand of the Cause, simultaneously announced by the beloved Guardian, establishes a valued representative of the Guardian in an important, rapidly growing Bahá’í area of the Far East. By the time this issue of Bahá’í News appears, two new National Spiritual Assemblies will have been elected in that area—the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of North East Pacific, and the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of South East Pacific. Their services will be blessed and enriched by the appointment of one long associated with pioneer teaching in that area.

His fearless championship Cause he loved so dearly, served so valiantly, constitutes significant landmark British Bahá’í history. So enviable position calls for National tribute his memory by assembled delegates, visitors, forthcoming British Bahá’í Convention. Assure relatives deepest loving sympathy grievous loss. RACE AMITY DAY
A New Annual Event

With the Guardian’s approval, the National Spiritual Assembly has instituted an important new annual event to be observed with public meetings and publicity by local Assemblies and groups throughout the United States. This event, comparable in importance with World Religion Day, will be known as Race Amity Day and observed on the second Sunday of June beginning June 9, 1957.

Race Amity Day is exclusively sponsored by Bahá’ís, and unlike Brotherhood Week or Negro History Week, not merely Bahá’í participation in an event sponsored by another organization. Its purpose is to celebrate the Bahá’í teaching of the Oneness of Mankind, the distinguishing feature of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh.

Press releases and other materials will be provided as they are for the other special events composing the annual Bahá’í teaching program. Meanwhile the Assemblies and groups are urged not merely to note the date and the theme, but also to begin planning their public meeting on as large a scale as possible, including non-Bahá’í as well as Bahá’í speakers, and the cooperation of local racial groups. Negro History Week will in future not be listed as a special Bahá’í event, though Assemblies are perfectly free to cooperate with the various local organizations which endorse and sponsor it.

The complete list of Bahá’í Special Events for 1957-1958 will be published in the June issue of Bahá’í News.

—National Spiritual Assembly
May 23, 1944, signals the commencement of the most turbulent period of the Heroic Age of the Baha'í Era, an age which marks the opening of the most glorious epoch in the greatest cycle which the spiritual history of mankind has yet witnessed. No more than a span of nine short years marks the duration of this most spectacular, this most tragic, this most eventful period of the first Baha'i century.

It was ushered in by the birth of a Revelation whose Bearer posterity will acclaim as the "point round Whom the realities of the Prophets and Messengers revolve," and terminated with the first stirrings of a still more potent Revelation, "whose day," Bahá'u'lláh Himself affirms, "every Prophet hath announced," for which "the soul of every Divine Messenger hath thirsted," and through which "God hath proved the hearts of the entire company of His Messengers and Prophets."

He Who communicated the original impulse to so incalculable a Movement was none other than the promised Qá'im (He who ariseth), the Sáhibu'-Zamán (the Lord of the Age), Who assumed the exclusive right of annulling the whole Qur'anic Dispensation, Who styled Himself "the Primal Point from which have been generated all created things . . . the Countenance of God Whose splendor can never be obscured, the Light of God Whose radiance can never fade."

The opening scene of the initial act of this great drama was laid in the upper chamber of the modest residence of the son of a mercer of Shíráz, in an obscure corner of that city. The time was the hour before sunset, on the 22nd day of May, 1844. The participants were the Báb, a twenty-five year old siyyid, of pure and holy lineage, and the young Mulla Husayn, the first to believe in Him.

Their meeting immediately before that interview seemed to be purely fortuitous. The interview itself was protracted till the hour of dawn. The Host remained closeted alone with His guest, nor was the sleeping city remotely aware of the import of the conversation they held with each other. No record has passed to posterity of that unique night save the fragmentary but highly illuminating account that fell from the lips of Mulla Husayn.

"I sat spellbound by His utterance, oblivious of time and of those who awaited me," he himself has testified, after describing the nature of the questions he had put to His Host and the conclusive replies he had received from Him, replies which had established beyond the shadow of a doubt the validity of His claim to be the promised Qá'im.

"This Revelation," Mulla Husayn has further testified, "so suddenly and impetuously thrust upon me, came as a thunderbolt which, for a time, seemed to have numbed my faculties. I was blinded by its dazzling splendor and overwhelmed by its crushing force. Excitement, joy, awe, and wonder stirred the depths of my soul. Predominant among these emotions was a sense of gladness and strength which seemed to have transfigured me. How feeble and impotent, how dejected and timid, I had felt previously! Then I could neither write nor walk, so tremulous were my hands and feet. Now, however, the knowledge of His Revelation had galvanized my being. I felt possessed of such courage and power that all the world, all its peoples and potentates, to rise against me, I would, alone and undaunted, withstand their onslaught. The universe seemed but a handful of dust in my grasp. I seemed to be the voice of Gabriel personified, calling unto all mankind: 'Awake, for lo! the morning Light has broken. Arise, for His Cause is made manifest. The portal of His grace is open wide; enter therein, O peoples of the world! For He Who is your promised One is come!'

A more significant light, however, is shed on this episode, marking the Declaration of the Mission of the Báb, by the perusal of the "first, greatest and mightiest" of all books in the Bábí Dispensation, the celebrated commentary on the Surih of Joseph, the first chapter of which, we are assured, proceeded, in its entirety, in the course of that night of nights from the pen of its divine Revealer.

The description of this episode by Mulla Husayn, as well as the opening pages of that Book attest the magnitude and force of that weighty Declaration. A claim to be no less than the mouthpiece of God Himself, promised by the Prophets of bygone ages; the assertion that He was, at the same time, the Herald of One immeasurably greater than Himself; the summons which He trumpeted forth to the kings and princes of the earth; the dire warnings directed to the Chief Magistrate of the realm, Muhammad Sháh; the counsel imparted to Háji Mirzá Aqásí to fear God, and the peremptory command to abdicate his authority as grand vizir of the Sháh and submit to the One Who is the "Inheritor of the earth and all that is therein"; the challenge issued to the rulers of the world proclaiming the self-sufficiency of His Cause, denouncing the vanity of their ephemeral power, and calling upon them to "lay aside, one and all, their dominion," and deliver His Message to "lands in both the East and the West"—these constitute the dominant features of that initial contact that marked the birth, and fixed the date, of the inception of the most glorious era in the spiritual life of mankind.

NORWAY HAZIRATUL-QUDS

DEDICATION REPORTED

“Blessed is the spot, and the house, . . . where mention of God hath been made, and His praise glorified.”

The white cement bungalow, nestled among the pines on a hilltop near Oslo, became indeed a “blessed” spot, when on the occasion of the Feast of Dominion, February 6, 1957, a “mere handful of His loved ones” gathered to dedicate the house as the seat of the Institution of the future National Spiritual Assembly and the Haziratul-Quds of Norway. The house, made of white cement blocks, stands as an achievement of the Crusade bestowed on Norway through the inspired leadership of our beloved Guardian, and the agency of Mrs. Amelia Collins, Hand of the Cause of God, and Vice-president of the International Bahá’í Council.

A Persian brother and sister arrived unexpectedly, just before the meeting, and East and West met and embraced each other in joyous exultation! Mr. and Mrs. Habib Sabet, fresh from the presence of the Guardian who had requested them to visit Norway, brought the wonderful news that our Guardian was well and very happy. Happy for two reasons: first, over the lifting of the persecutions in Persia; and second, over the rapid progress of the Global Crusade.

Therefore, it was in an atmosphere of the greatest joy and happiness as well as deepest reverence, evoked by the occasion, that the chairman of the Oslo Spiritual Assembly, Mrs. Sigry Sørlie, opened the dedication program. There were readings from the Sacred Writings given by Winnie Ringstad, Asta Barnholdt, Bodil Skodstrup, Ciss Hannevig, and Gerd Strand.

In the dedication address given by Amelia Bowman, the growth of the Faith in Norway was reviewed as a continuity of teaching activity from the first known mention of the Faith in 1911 at the Theological Seminary at Elverum; the translations provided by Johanne Schubarth, “mother of the Faith in Norway,” under the direction of Shoghi Effendi; the long list of itinerant teachers, which included Martha Root, “archetype of Bahá’í teachers,” who had visited Norway; the arrival of the pioneers, Solveig Corbit, Mildred Clark, Elinor Gregory, and others, followed by the establishment of the first Spiritual Assembly of Oslo in 1948; each had contributed something to the achievement of this spiritual victory for the Faith, when we shall begin the next stage of our development on a higher plane of co-operation through the establishment of a Regional National Assembly, a prelude to the National Spiritual Assembly of Norway.

The gift from the Guardian, a hanging from the Shrine of the Báb, was opened; and the friends, appointed with altar of rose from the Holy Land, inhaled the fragrance and were brought close in spirit to the heart of the Faith, our beloved Guardian.

Greetings were read from Edna True, chairman of the European Teaching Committee in America; Mrs. Dorothy Ferraby, member of the Auxiliary Board in London; the Bergen Spiritual Assembly; the groups in Lofoten and Stavanger; and other friends. The many gifts and furnishings which had been received, made the Haziratul-Quds festive with candle light and flowers, and colorful with stunning coral draperies, a blue-green corner divan, a yellow banquet cloth on the table; the chairs and lamps; the Bahá’í books in the white bookcases which flanked a cozy red-brick fireplace; and with pictures of the Temple in America and the symbol of the Greatest Name which hung on the white plastered walls.

During the refreshment period of the celebration, Mr. and Mrs. Sabet spoke of their recent visit to the Guardian, and made a contribution to help with the teaching activity in Oslo. So it was with heartfelt gratitude that the following cable was sent to the beloved Guardian: “Deeply appreciate gift from Guardian and visit Sabets at dedication Haziratul-Quds. Requesting prayers progress success.” A reply came shortly afterward “Assure loving prayers success activities. Shoghi” —AMELIA BOWMAN
PIONEERS NEEDED IN LATIN AMERICA, MEXICO

With the establishment of the four new National Spiritual Assemblies in Central and South America, another victory has been won. However, this is but a step in the objectives of the World Crusade, since these are interim Assemblies, out of which 20 National Assemblies are to be built during the Ten Year Plan. The door of opportunity is still open to any who may yet wish to face the challenge of pioneering. In all three of the following National Assembly goals the Faith has been established so far only in the capital cities. All are Spanish-speaking.

Latin America

Uruguay is the most socially advanced country in the entire Western Hemisphere. It has a beautiful climate, and its capital, Montevideo, is a modern, cosmopolitan city.

Paraguay, on the other hand, is perhaps the least "advanced" country, but a very fascinating one. It has an unusually interesting Indian history, as the Indians were protected by the government and not exploited as in other countries.

Nicaragua, located in the heart of Central America, is very Latin, though it has interesting Indian archaeological remains and there are still some Indians. On the East coast there are English-speaking settlements, their population descended in part from former African slaves.

The cost of living varies from country to country, and the problem of support will always be an individual one, depending on what one is able to do. If anyone would like to consider Latin American pioneering, please contact this Committee, giving as much information about yourself as you can.

Mexico

Dr. Edris Rice-Wray is now in Mexico with the World Health Organization, and has sent us some valuable information on possible job opportunities with WHO. We quote from her letter of March 18, 1957: "The World Health is a terrific organization for a Bahá'í. We are told we are world citizens; we must accept all peoples of whatever race, religion, or nationality. We are not permitted to engage in politics or take sides in any controversial issue.

The staff is composed of many nationals all working together to serve people everywhere—not special groups but people. The secretarial staff, janitors, etc., are recruited from the local country, but the technical staff can be from anywhere. There are positions for doctors, nurses, and veterinarians, who have public health training, health educators, administrators with training in personnel, also nurses trained in nursing education, and sanitary engineers and sanitarians.

"The Bahá'ís should know about this possibility. There are many scholarships available to get a master's degree in public health for doctors, nurses, veterinarians, and health educators; anyone interested can write to the U.S. Public Health Service, Washington, D.C., for information about scholarships.

"For information about jobs with WHO, write Pan American Sanitary Bureau, 1501 New Hampshire N.W., Washington, D.C.

"For U.S. citizens there are also similar jobs with the ICA (International Cooperation Administration) of the U.S. Government. They have projects everywhere also, and cooperate with us in this field.

"The World Health Organization has projects all over the world. This is one way Bahá'ís can get around. I am delighted to be here. I love Mexico and love my job."

Further information about opportunities in Latin America or Mexico, as well as in Alaska, described in Bahá'í News for April, is available.

AUCKLAND HOLDS 17th ANNUAL SUMMER SCHOOL

The 17th Annual Summer School of the Baha’is of New Zealand was held in almost perfect weather at Camp Wesley, Henderson Valley, Auckland, from December 28 to January 7, 1957.

God Passes By was the main study course for this year. With this, the second session morning talks and study on “A New Way of Life,” the interpretation of the Tablet of the Holy Mariner, a review of the Kitab-i-Iqan, letters from pioneers, personal experiences, and the history of the early Baha’i days in Auckland, all seemed to combine to provide a striking theme for the school: how the Cause moves steadily on despite all opposition, and how tremendously we ourselves can help it on if we live this new way of life according to the laws of Baha’u’llah, steadfastly, determinedly, in deeds, not words.

Round table discussions also strengthened this theme, the subjects being “Freedom and Discipline,” “Personal and Social Prejudice,” “Psychology as an Aid to Spiritual Matters,” and “Fear, a Barrier to Truth—How to Conquer It.”

The children were not neglected in Morning Study. Mrs. G. Milne planned and conducted Baha’i readings for children, in which much interest was shown by the young ones.

A Regional Teaching Conference was called during the school, with representatives from the local Spiritual Assemblies of Auckland, New Plymouth, and Wellington, and groups of Whangarei and Mangawhai attending.

All who attended summer school this year go out again fortified and rededicated, more steadfast in the Faith of Baha’u’llah, to meet and solve the problems before us and the world around us.

There are now two believers in Sierra Leone, which was formerly a virgin territory.

Successful teaching work in this region by the pioneers has been crowned with the enrollment of 16 new believers, the establishment of four new localities where Baha’is reside, and by the possibility of a new Assembly being formed during Ridván this year.

The Northwest Africa Baha’i News is published at present in four languages to meet the requirements of the Baha’is of the region: Arabic, English, French, and Persian. It is hoped that in the near future it will be necessary to also publish in Portuguese and Spanish.

Incorporation of the Monrovia Local Spiritual Assembly has been granted, and Baha’i marriages recognized by the government of Liberia.

An endowment has been established in Bomi Hills in the form of a plot of land, given by a Chief there, to establish a school. This came as a result of the successful Literacy School held by the Baha’is there.

Consequently the Assembly has appointed a Ḥāẓiratu’l-Quds Location Committee to find a place as soon as possible that will meet the minimum requirements at the lowest possible price. As soon as this is done, the expropriated property will be sold.

LAURENTIAN SCHOOL LISTS SUMMER PLANS

A preliminary announcement listing the summer school sessions at Laurentian Bahá’í School, Beaulac, P.Q., gives the dates as July 20 to August 3, 1957.

Three topics, “The Covenant,” “Spiritual Verities,” and “History of the Faith” will be given each of the two weeks. The sessions have been designed as a teacher-training project, so that those attending may teach the courses at regional seminars on weekends and evenings.

SUMMER CONFERENCE PLANNED AT BANFF

A Western Canada Bahá’í Summer Conference will be held on August 25-31, inclusive, at the Banff School of Fine Arts, Banff, Alberta.

Mrs. Edna J. Montfort, 3119 Barnard Avenue, Vernon, B.C., Canada, will send further information upon request.

Germany, Austria

CONTINUE SEARCH FOR TEMPLE SITE

Negotiations for a site for the proposed Bahá’í House of Worship in Germany are being conducted in a hostile atmosphere of confusion and rumor on the part of elements of the populace, according to Bahá’í-Nachrichten, published by the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria.

“From week to week, yes, from day to day, the situation changes in this unbelievably and indescribably difficult struggle,” Bahá’í-Nachrichten states.

“Propositions, offers, purchase negotiations, protests, rebuffs, acceptances, again refusals, enthusiastic agreement, bitter abuse, succeed one another like the pictures of an exciting newsreel.

“The press is eager for the latest news, and often a decision is reported in the newspapers before it has been made.

Five Sites Considered

“At present five sites are in process of negotiation. Three are west of Frankfurt, and two lie to the east of the city. The decision rests with three rural boards and one civil board.

“The watchfulness of the Evangelical Church, which has now officially and repeatedly protested, is grotesque, but so effective that our every step must be made with the greatest care and wariness.

“Everything possible is being done to conclude this matter in the shortest possible time,” the publication states. “We need the prayers of the friends.”

Canada

EXPROPRIATE CANADA HAZIRATU’L-QUDS

The national Ḥāẓiratu’l-Quds of the Bahá’ís of Canada, located at 274 Huron street, Toronto, has been expropriated by the University of Toronto.

This property was included in the 26 acres taken over for expansion of the university campus.

University authorities advised the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly that they will not require the property for some time, and that the Bahá’ís may rent the building from them, possibly for several years.

This proposal is not satisfactory, as the Guardian wishes all National Spiritual Assemblies to own their Ḥāẓiratu’l-Quds.

Three topics, “The Covenant,” “Spiritual Verities,” and “History of the Faith” will be given each of the two weeks. The sessions have been designed as a teacher-training project, so that those attending may teach the courses at regional seminars on weekends and evenings.

Further information may be obtained from R. Thomson, 845 Willibrord Ave., Verdun, Quebec.

GEYSERVILLE SCHOOL ANNOUNCES PROGRAMS

For the 29th summer, Bahá'ís and their friends are offered the opportunity at the Geyserville Bahá'í School to have time to deepen their knowledge of the Bahá'í World Faith.

Again, the opportunity is offered to experience, during their visit, living in a society which foreshadows the New Age. Here the principles of the Bahá'í Faith can be put into practice, and here one may have some time away from the tensions and strife of a confused and bewildering world.

The 1957 schedule lists six weekly sessions, beginning with the week of June 30, and ending with the week of August 4. The annual Unity Feast will be held on Sunday, July 14.

Daily Workshops Planned

During the conference period workshops, seminars, and conferences will be held to consider the problems which confront the Bahá'í as he attempts to promulgate the Faith. A workshop will be offered daily throughout the six sessions dealing with specific teaching problems.

Classes will be held six days each week. Different Bahá'ís who are giving their time to this program will conduct the courses during the six different sessions. Special programs will be held on Sundays.

Special Class for Youth

For young people, ages 15 to 21, a special class will be held each morning from 10:00 to 10:50. This special hour will be devoted to those interests and problems of the Bahá'í youth and their friends.

Special classes for children, ages 2 to 15, will be held during the mornings.

Further information may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Viviana Lisota, secretary, 910 Sierra Vista, Redding, Calif.

DAVISON SCHOOL TO STRESS INDIVIDUAL DEEPENING

Courses at the summer session of the Davison Bahá'í School will emphasize the deepening of the individual to participate in the World Crusade: in administration, in the Creative Word, and in practical methods. There will be children's classes at all family sessions. The family sessions will be scheduled by the week beginning Monday July 15 through Friday August 16.

There will be a Junior Youth Session (ages 10-14) July 1-July 12, and a Senior Youth Session (ages 15-21) August 19-August 30. Adults should plan to attend the Family sessions.

Special weekend sessions are being planned for those believers who cannot attend a week session. These will begin July 13-15 and will culminate in the Homecoming Weekend August 31-Sept. 2.

Rates for the sessions vary from $4.00 to $3.50, depending on the length of stay and the type of accommodation. The Junior Youth rates are about $3.00 a day. The friends are asked to make reservations with the Registrar, Miss Judy Long, Box 213, R.R. No. 3, Coldwater, Mich.

If you do not normally receive a program, write to Mrs. Lois Nouchman, secretary, 532 Western, Inkster, Mich.

Panel of speakers for a race amity meeting at New Rochelle, N.Y., held on February 10, 1957, during observance of Negro History Week, arranged by the Bahá'ís of Yonkers, Mt. Vernon, Mamaroneck, Hastings-on-Hudson, and New Rochelle.

YOUTH, YOUNG ADULTS GIVE PANEL DISCUSSIONS

During the year the Los Angeles, Calif., Youth and Young Adult Committee, through the Southwestern States Area Teaching Committee, has been doing circuit teaching with panel discussion programs. An adult moderator always accompanies the panel and gives a brief introduction to the Faith.

Panels have spoken in Las Vegas, Nev., and in Fresno, Escondido, and Almaden, Calif.

To prepare the youth and young adults for circuit teaching, a two-hour study class has been held every Tuesday night. The attendance has averaged 15 to 20 each week.

These study classes covered three phases:

(1) The Advent of Divine Justice was studied during the first hour. During the second hour, five minute talks on the Faith were given by those present. The talks were recorded on tape, and played back for constructive criticism.

(2) A two-hour deepening class on The Promulgation of Universal Peace was conducted.

(3) A two-hour study class on the Covenant and Administration was given. The last class was devoted to a workshop with a mock Spiritual Assembly, with elections and the handling of various problems.
NAW-RUZ PUBLICITY PROCLAIMS
THE RENEWAL OF RELIGION

The Bahá’í Press Service Committee welcomes the opportunity to report on the publicity for the observance of Naw-Rúz on March 21, 1957, received through the first week of April.

Fifty-six communities in 23 states are represented in this report, which may be only one-third of the total number of localities gaining recognition from the press for this celebration.

It is interesting to find that many of the communities received publicity on the Fast and the Intercalary Days as well.

Following is the list of communities reporting:

Alabama: Mobile received publicity in the Beacon, a Negro newspaper.

Arkansas: Little Rock and North Little Rock gave a dinner at the Hotel Lafayette, at which Rev. and Mrs. R. D. Adams of the First Presbyterian Church showed slides of their five-week tour of the Middle East, and the chairman of the local Bahá’í Assembly gave a brief talk on Naw-Rúz.

Escondido held a potluck supper at a Bahá’í home. Each guest was met at the door by a flower girl, who presented a rose boutonniere as a Naw-Rúz greeting. The 12 Bahá’í principles were illustrated on a huge poster over the fireplace, showing a rising sun with 12 different colored rays, each ray a principle. The names of the nine revealed religions were below the horizon, indicating that the Bahá’í Faith is the culmination of all previous revealed religions. Music was provided during the evening. There were 55 adults and children attending this festivity. Fresno held a dinner at the El Rancho Hotel, followed by a public meeting at which Rhoderick W. Delaney, president of the Market Research Foundation, Inc., was the principal speaker. His topic was “Thoughts to Live By.” Long Beach held a dish supper at Morgan Hall, followed by a talk on the Bahá’í Peace Program by Mrs. Virginia Foster. Forty adults were present, of which 18 were non-Bahá’ís. Monterey Peninsula Herald carried publicity on a tea given at a Bahá’í home in Carmel. This was followed on the next evening with a meeting for worship. Redding had publicity in the Record Searchlight, and also carried an advertisement on Naw-Rúz. Riverside held an open house at a Bahá’í home. Sacramento and surrounding Bahá’í communities held a meeting at a Bahá’í home.

Colorado: Colorado Springs and El Paso county celebrated Naw-Rúz with a covered dish supper at Carpenter’s Hall. This was followed by a public meeting on the significance of the spiritual springtime.

Connecticut: Norwich featured a reading of the Bahá’í Peace Program at a Bahá’í home.

Massachusetts: Attleboro held a meeting at a Bahá’í home, with eight non-Bahá’ís and six Bahá’ís attending. Colored slides of Haifa and the House of Worship were shown. The Attleboro Sun ran a 22-inch story on Naw-Rúz and the Bahá’í principles, with a picture of the Temple. Baltimore Fireside Technique Explained

In response to a letter from the National Spiritual Assembly asking for a description of the fireside teaching technique that has resulted in several recent enrollments in Baltimore, Md., the following account has been received:

Several months ago you asked that we send the techniques we use at the fireside, since we had two enrollments last year. The two that I have just sent in really make seven declarations that have been made from the firesides. Four came into our community, but three lived just outside the city limits and therefore came in through the Area Teaching Committee.

The fireside is held at my apartment, but Bill Burgess of our community comes over and we have it together. We are the only Bahá'ís present and we work like a team. The techniques we use are those that were in the insert of Bahá'í News with a few additions which I am happy to pass on.

We hold them regularly, every Friday night. We keep them small, not more than three contacts. We take a positive and prayerful attitude, knowing that Bahá'u'lláh will send us someone. The few times no one came are so few and far between I cannot remember. Sometimes I did not know the people who phoned and invited; the chain of circumstances that they related of how they got my telephone number would sound fantastic to a non-believer, but we know it is Bahá'u'lláh's work.

We prepare what points we want to cover but make it conversation, seemingly spontaneous. We have worked out our team work so well that it goes like a breeze. We do not make it too serious. We put a little humor in the conversation whenever appropriate. We laugh together, we eat together (very simple refreshments). We talk with them of their hobbies, baseball, football etc., always coming back to the Faith.

They themselves bring it back, but by this time they are relaxed and are drawn closer and they speak of the Faith from their hearts.

While these are little techniques we use, we feel the real fundamental that has helped us is the fact that we love our contacts and let them feel the love and warmth.

We try to create a loving, happy and enthusiastic atmosphere and before long they say the cherished words: "I want to be a Bahá'í."

To close with a little statistical note, there have been 37 different people who have attended. Seven became Bahá'ís, or 20 per cent.

Dallas Sponsors Study of Religions

The Bahá'ís of Dallas and the Park Cities, Texas, are jointly sponsoring a ten-week series on "The Study of the World's Religions." The first meeting, held on March 15 in the Theology Department of Southern Methodist University, was an introduction to the series and a general presentation of the Bahá'í concept of progressive revelation. There were 31 present; 17 of these were non-Bahá'ís who had not previously attended a Bahá'í meeting.

Due to an unforeseen problem, the meeting place was changed following the first meeting and the second week only 13 were present for the study of the Sabaean religion. The three non-Bahá'ís attending had also been to the previous meeting. On March 29 the Hindu religion was presented to an audience of 27; 17 of this number were non-Bahá'ís.

This type of meeting, to study the religions of the world, seems to be of particular interest to the public at this time. The audiences have been quite receptive and the discussion period following the various presentations very good. The remainder of the series will cover Zoroastrianism, Judaism, Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, the Bábí religion and the Bahá'í Faith.

Highly successful World Religion Day meeting presented by the Durham, N.C., Bahá'í group, attended by more than 60 non-Bahá'ís.
GREENSBORO YOUTH DAY PUBLICIZES FAITH

The Youth Committee of the Bahá’ís of Greensboro, N. C., sponsored a World Youth Day meeting in the Civic Room of the O. Henry hotel on March 24. Twelve were present, with three races represented, Indian, Negro, and white.

To break the initial self-consciousness, games were played, establishing a spirit of friendship that gave added value to the group discussion following the talk.

The World Youth Day theme, “Divine Physician for an Afflicted World,” was discussed by Glenn Mitchell, a young Bahá’í from Kingston, Jamaica, who is pioneering in Raleigh and attending Shaw University.

The hotel was abuzz with talk about “those young people of different races meeting in the Civic Room.” Getting this room for a mixed meeting was a triumph for the Greensboro community.

If Bahá’ís of the North and West could imagine the stares that were evoked when the little group stepped out of the hotel when the meeting was over! People almost wrecked their cars upon seeing the attractive little Indian girl, dressed in her beautiful clothes, and the unimaginable thing of Negroes and whites acting like brothers, laughing and talking. It was a wonderful sight to see in this stronghold of the old South, already tempered by the progressively greater influence of the six colleges within its limits, for Greensboro is far better off than other cities where vicious prejudice is concerned.

It seems that there’s no better teaching medium than practicing Bahá’í brotherhood, quietly and unashamedly, under the eyes of others in this darkened land.

YOUTH COMMITTEE ACTIVE IN DAKOTAS

The North Central States Area Youth Committee has been assisting the Area Teaching Committee with teaching activities in four areas of South Dakota and three areas of North Dakota.

In the Black Hills, S. Dak., pamphlets have been distributed and firesides are being held. The Youth Group of the Methodist Church in Piedmont has heard the Bahá’í Message through a contact made in this work.

At Brookings, S. Dak., there are weekly firesides. The first public meeting held here attracted 19 people, representing every race.

The Bahá’í youth of Mitchell, S. Dak., have made contacts locally, and have distributed Bahá’í literature. They have presented a copy of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era to the head of the Religion Department of Dakota Wesleyan College.

Regular youth classes are held in Sioux Falls, S. Dak., each week, and the Bahá’í youth have given literature to other localities in the state. These youths have also made circuit teaching trips to Mitchell and Brookings.

In North Dakota, at Minot children’s classes are held each Sunday. At Devil’s Lake conditions for continuation of classes with the Indian children have been greatly improved. The Devil’s Lake Bahá’ís have placed literature locally, and in Leeds, Knox, Rugby, Towner, and Jamestown. Fargo held a World Youth Day program at the Bahá’í Center.

BAHÁ’ÍS SPEAK AT OHIO WESLEYAN UNIV.

The Religious Co-ordinator’s Committee of Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, sent an invitation to the National Spiritual Assembly for a Bahá’í representative to speak on “Brotherhood” at the University Chapel service on February 27.

The National Assembly informed the Columbus, Ohio, Local Spiritual Assembly, who contacted Richard Gay, the Religious Co-ordinator, for details of the program.

Miss Beverley Bennett, a teacher in the experimental school at Ohio State University, consented to be the speaker, and five Bahá’ís from Columbus were invited to accompany her to Ohio Wesleyan and sit with her on the stage. They included a Bahá’í youth, an Ohio State University student of Filipino and German parentage, a youth from Iran, and a Negro and a white woman.

The audience included 1600 students and many faculty members. After the meeting closed, many students came to the platform to ask questions and request literature. Copies of What is a Bahá’í? and The Universal Faith were distributed.

AMERICAN INDIAN NEWS

In a traditional Makah ceremony, the Indian name of Kleesi-oo-hocks was given to pioneer Mrs. Modeille Mudd by the chief of the Makah tribe at Neah Bay, Wash., on February 11. Only two other non-Indians have been so honored by the tribe.

At the ceremony, Mrs. Mudd was given a document signed by the chief bearing these words: “I, Chief Moquinna, Jongie Claplanhoo, do honor my good friend Mrs. Modelle Mudd, for her constant show of admiration, love, and friendship to my people, the members of the Makah Tribe, by giving her an Indian name. Since coming to live among us she has striven, by her actions, to teach what my people have always known, that all men are brothers! It is my wish that she will always cherish this greatest of honors, which I, by the authority of my heritage bestow upon her. You will receive your name in solemn trust. You must strive to live up to and honor this name always. Because the Sun is the Great Lightgiver, it is in my heart to give you the name Kleesi-oo-hocks, First Rays of the New Sun. To you, Kleesi-oo-hocks, I, Moquinna, give my blessing.”

Members of the Neah Bay Bahá’í Group are Mr. and Mrs. Foster Mudd, pioneers, Mrs. Kiara Tyler, and Nelson Greene (youth). They would welcome assistance from other pioneers. A doctor is greatly needed on the Makah reservation.

Details about the unique pioneering opportunity at Neah Bay may be had by writing to the American Indian Service Committee, Mrs. Nancy Phillips, secretary, 736 Encanto Drive, S. E., Phoenix, Ariz.

COLLEGE ACTIVITIES

A Bahá’í youth at the University of Illinois, Champaign, was asked to speak about the Faith to a class on the Philosophy of World Religion. Although the presentation was scheduled to last for a half-hour, a whole hour was spent discussing the Faith because of the numerous questions of the students.

Moojan Khadem wrote of his experience: “I never saw such an audience in my life. They took notes of every word, and they were absorbing it like sponges, especially when the Bahá’í view on miracles, resurrection, and the Trinity were presented. The interest was fantastic. I guess they were ready, because one whole semester they were discussing religion, and so they were ready and confused.”

At Lincoln University, located in Lincoln, University, Pa., Hormoz Sabet spoke to 53 ministerial students on the Bahá’í Faith. He was one of four speaking on religions in general, and he was asked the majority of questions afterward.

A symposium held at the International Center on the University of Michigan campus at Ann Arbor, jointly sponsored by the Bahá’í Student Group and the Ann Arbor Baha’i Community, attracted a capacity crowd.

The theme, “Attitudes Toward World Peace,” was developed by representatives of six faiths: Buddhist, Hindu, Jewish, Christian, Muslim, and Bahá’í.

Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., are co-sponsors of a Bahá’í Club, established at the University of Minnesota after almost two years of effort. A young Bahá’í couple, John and Beverley Kolstoe, are students at the university this year, and through their efforts this club has become a reality. Mr. Kolstoe is the club’s president.

Cyrus Omidvaran and Farhang Roshan-Zamir were hosts at a Bahá’í meeting at the Union Building of South Dakota State College on February 28. Of 50 invitations sent out, 14 responded, representing five races. The room, decorated by Farhang, had cards lettered with the Bahá’í principles, artistically arranged with a large picture of the House of Worship. This meeting was reported by the college newspaper Collegian.

The Naw-Rúz observance at Anchorage, Alaska, featured colored slides of scenes of the Bahá’í Shrines on Mt. Carmel and other places in the Holy Land, a short talk on the meaning of Naw-Rúz, and a display of rare Persian antiques by a non-Bahá’í, Mrs. Milan Eloit of Fort Richardson. Mrs. Eloit collected the antiques from 1951 to 1953 when she and her husband, a U. S. Army officer, were stationed in Iran. Nearly 30 Bahá’ís and their guests enjoyed the program.

Flinn, Mich., observed World Youth Day with a public meeting at the International Institute. John Nash spoke for the Bahá’í Faith, and a non-Bahá’í showed colored slides of France.

The 12 children enrolled in the Bahá’í Children’s Class on Maui, T. H., have completed a study of the lives of the Messengers of God, and will next study the teachings which Bahá’u’lláh has revealed for today.

A group of young people of the First Methodist Church of Riverside, Calif., who are studying Comparative Religion, invited a representative of the local Bahá’í community to explain the teachings of the Bahá’í Faith to them.

A panel discussion on “Death,” at the Unitarian Church of Santa Monica, Calif., attracted over 100 people, including 12 Bahá’ís. Arthur Dalil, Jr., offered the Bahá’í assurance of life after death, in contrast to speakers representing other faiths who made no point of eternal life.

The Unitarian Church of Santa Monica, Calif., jointly sponsored a public meeting in March in collaboration with the American Association for United Nations, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peoples. A Bahá’í presided, and short talks were given by representatives of all three groups. Thirty-five attended, including 20 non-Bahá’ís.

NEW TRANSLATION PUBLISHED

The Secret of Divine Civilization. By 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Translated by Marzieh Gail. Introduction by Horace Holley. This work, written in 1875, first published in English in London, 1910, and in Chicago in 1918 under the title Mysterious Forces of Civilization, is more accurately rendered in this new translation. Although this message was ignored by the rulers and people of Persia to whom it is addressed, it applies to the general state of modern civilization as a whole today. 'Abdu'l-Bahá has employed passages from the Qur’án on which to establish the spiritual significances of His theme. Since the Qur’án is little known in the West, these passages have an incidental importance in making the Western reader more familiar with the Holy Book of the Arabic and Persian peoples at a time when understanding of the Orient is direly needed in Europe and America.

This book, handsomely printed and bound, is set in Fairfield type with Civilité initial letters, and has a two-piece binding of natural linen and deep red, with gold stamping. The cloth is pyroxylin treated to resist moisture and soil.

BAHÁ’Í ANSWERS.

This pamphlet answers many of the questions most frequently asked about the Bahá’í Faith, such as: What does the word “Bahá’í” mean? Is the Bahá’í Faith essentially an oriental religion? What new teachings are found in the Bahá’í Faith? Do the Bahá’ís believe in a life after death? In reincarnation?

There are nineteen questions in all, briefly but clearly answered.

This booklet, prepared in convenient pocket size for easy carrying or mailing, with an attractive cover design showing a portion of the Bahá’í Temple designed by Wm. Musler, should prove to be an excellent teaching and contact pamphlet for all Bahá’ís.

Cable received May 7, 1957

Beloved Friends:

In this post-Convention message addressed to the National Spiritual Assembly the beloved Guardian concentrates upon two "inescapable, paramount responsibilities" of the majestic import of his Convention Message. Let us ponder that message in the light of this later cable.

The various tasks listed in Shoghi Effendi's Convention Message are discussed elsewhere in this issue of Baha'i News.

The whole impact of our collective undertakings this year is tremendous, and their importance must be taken to heart and fulfilled in heroic sacrifice and action.

A Thrice Blessed
World Crusade

Dear Baha'i Friends:

The National Convention held this year assembled 967 Baha'is, and concentrated their serious and reverent attention on the beloved Guardian's Convention Message, a copy of which went to every believer with the May issue of Baha'i News. The unity of spirit, the maturity of understanding, and the stirring response evidenced to Shoghi Effendi's appeal made this Convention a potent instrument for arousing the entire American Baha'i Community to achieve its historic mission during the current year.

What is this historic mission? The Guardian's Message challenges us to carry out the following tasks:

1. The rededication of the individual believers.
2. Proclamation of the Faith to the multitudes.
3. Resettlement of any virgin territories which pioneers have been obliged to abandon.
4. Opening up the three remaining islands assigned to the United States—Spitzbergen, Hainan, and Sakhalin.
5. Settlement of one Baha'i in each Soviet Republic on the European continent: Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, White Russia, Moldavia and Ukraine. (Some of these areas have been assigned to the National Spiritual Assembly of Persia, some to the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria, and some to the National Spiritual Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland. However, American Baha'is are called upon to assist in this project as a task of utmost importance.)
7. Settlement of the two islands in the Soviet orbit assigned to the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States: Sakhalin and Hainan.
8. The broadening and consolidating of the foundations of the newly-emerged National and regional National Spiritual Assemblies.
9. Safeguarding the status of all established local Spiritual Assemblies and increasing the number of Assemblies.
10. Multiplication of the number of local groups and isolated centers.
11. Acquisition of the two remaining Ha'izratul-Quds: Lisbon and Caracas.
12. Acquisition of the two remaining endowments: Peru and Portugal.
13. Acquisition of the remaining Temple site: Stockholm.
14. Translation and publication of the remaining languages listed in the Ten Year Plan: some Latin American Indian languages, and Lapp in Europe.
16. Expediting the incorporation of local and newly formed National Spiritual Assemblies.
17. Assisting in the establishment of the Bahá'í Publishing Trust in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
18. Obtaining the right to conduct legal Bahá'í marriages by an increasing number of local Assemblies.
19. Increasing the number of public schools recognizing Bahá'í Holy Days.
20. Contributing to the cost of constructing the Bahá'í Temples in Sydney, Australia; Frankfurt, Germany; and Kampala, Uganda.
21. Deepening the Bahá'ís on the home front, expanding the number of individual believers, and consolidating the local institutions in order to provide a larger reservoir for the World Crusade.

Beloved Friends! To appreciate the vital urgency of achieving these tasks we must, as individuals, as local groups and communities, and as committees, study and meditate on the Guardian's Convention Message as a whole, recalling that this same Message was sent to all national conventions throughout the world. The above list of tasks represents those particularly related to the United States. This Message, incidentally, presents a most significant summary of the decline of the old order amidst afflictive disturbances and the rise of the Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

Our tasks for 1957-1958 fall into several classifications: individual regeneration, which each Bahá'í must undertake with God's help for himself by prayer, meditation, and whole-hearted service to the Faith; proclamation of the Faith to the multitudes, a collective task with which the National Spiritual Assembly and many of its national committees are deeply concerned; pioneer settlements and consolidation of the foundations of the nine new National Spiritual Assemblies, a task primarily resting upon the Intercontinental Teaching Committees functioning in the Western Hemisphere, in Western Europe, in Africa and in Asia; settlement of Soviet Republics and satellites, a project involving special conditions and one which the National Spiritual Assembly will directly supervise; tasks related to the home front, the special responsibility of the National and Area Teaching Committees, the American Indian Service Committee and the Bahá'í Interracial Committee, with the assistance of the National Spiritual Assembly in devising special homefront campaigns and materials; contributing to the cost of three Temples, a task which can only be performed as American Bahá'ís support the National Fund. Indeed, as the Guardian pointed out years ago, the National Fund is the "life blood" of all our national institutions and enterprises, and the means by which the individual Bahá'í can measure his own devotion to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

The National Spiritual Assembly asks for intensive study of the two homefront campaigns presented elsewhere in this issue of Bahá'í News.

Why has the Guardian termed this a "thrice blessed Crusade"? The National Spiritual Assembly understands this term to refer to the blessing conferred by the Master in revealing the Tablets of the Divine Plan, and to the blessings received by association with the Jubilee of the Birth of the Mission of Baha'u'llah in 1953 and with the Great Jubilee to be celebrated in 1963 when the Crusade attains its consummation in Baghdad.

The Conference of Badasht

In accordance with a Convention recommendation, the National Spiritual Assembly makes the following brief reference to the Conference of Badasht in order to explain the Guardian's allusion to the Conference in his Convention Message:

"In 1963, a conference was held during the early days of the incarnation of the Bab in the fortress of Qadii'a. 'The primary purpose of that gathering was to implement the revelation of the Bayan by a sudden, a complete and dramatic break with the past—with its ecclesiasticism, its traditions, and ceremonials.' In the hamlet of Badasht Baha'u'llah rented three gardens, one assigned to Qadii'a, another to Tahirih, the third reserved for Himself. Eighty-one disciples of the Bab assembled as the guests of Baha'u'llah. The climax of the conference was the action of Tahirih in divesting herself of the traditional veil worn by the women of Islam and proclaiming the inauguration of a new Dispensation. 'The call she sounded was the death-knell of the twelve hundred year old law of Islam.'

A Teaching Campaign to Revitalize the Home Community

The First Step

Beloved Friends:

American Baha'is will be startled to learn that Marcus Bach, author of The Circle of Faith and several other studies in current religions, has written an article entitled "Baha'i: A Second Look," which appeared in the Christian Century magazine of April 10, 1957. The National Spiritual Assembly is reliably informed that this article is the most effective publicity about the Faith yet seen, by an outstanding university educator in touch with developments in the religious field.

Appreciating the possibilities of wide use of the Bach article, and realizing the need of a strong teaching impetus throughout the home front, the National Assembly has authorized the Baha'i Publishing Trust to order a large quantity of reprints. A reprint is enclosed with this issue of Baha'i News sent to every American believer, with a large supply on reserve for purchase by individual friends and local communities to hand or mail to their Christian friends and contracts.

What the National Spiritual Assembly proposes is nation-wide participation in a simple yet effective teaching plan as the first step in a determined effort to revitalize the home community. Therefore the friends are urged to send the Publishing Trust immediate orders for good quantities of the Christian Century reprint in order that tens of thousands of Christians may receive this challenging statement by the eminent Marcus Bach. The Christian Century itself is regarded as the expression of liberal Christianity and is read by leaders in all sects.

It should be noted that all copies of the reprint distributed, whether by individual believers or by local Assemblies, should carry the identification of the donor in order to assure that interested inquirers can be duly handled.

The cost of the reprint is exceedingly low. The Publishing Trust supplies it in quantities of 25 at $1.00, and in quantities of 100 at $3.00, 500 for $12.00.

The most convenient and helpful Baha'i reply to the vital question raised by Marcus Bach in his article is the use of the Baha'i pamphlet The Lord of the New Age. This offers the friends an ideal follow-up to the reprint, and in ordering the reprints the individual believer and the local Assembly should also order a good supply of The Lord of the New Age. This item is supplied by the Publishing Trust at the very moderate cost of 20 copies for $1.00, or 100 copies for $4.50.
As this teaching campaign develops there will be other featured Bahá’í material for effective contact and fireside use. The new pamphlet Bahá’í Answers has an unlimited field of service, and soon we will have a portfolio of Temple photographs, which makes an impressive gift to an editor, a radio or TV worker, George Townshend, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh.

"The beloved Guardian has been very impressed with the latest book written by our dear departed coworker, George Townshend, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh.

"This book outlines clearly the relationship of Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, and presents the manner in which the Bahá’ís are setting up the Kingdom of God for which the Christians are praying.

"It is challenging, and surely will affect many religious leaders.

"The Guardian feels your Assembly should make this book the basis of a very active teaching campaign."

After consultation on this important directive, the National Spiritual Assembly has adopted plans involving: distribution of copies directly by the National Assembly to a large number of representative Christian clergy of various denominations; efforts to obtain publicity and book reviews; advertising the book in a leading Christian weekly magazine.

Believers are requested to send to our National Headquarters the names and addresses of church leaders who they feel should be included in the National Spiritual Assembly distribution.

Other assistance needed in this campaign is the placing of a copy in the local library by individual believers, groups or committees, and the widespread use of Christ and Bahá’u’lláh in Bahá’í study classes and as material for public teaching.

The vital importance of Mr. Townshend’s book is as an exposition of the Faith which answers the questions raised by the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments.

The distribution of the book to clergy at this time is undertaken solely by the National Spiritual Assembly.

Contacts with Visitors from Other Countries

In the November 1956 Bahá’í News (page 2) the National Spiritual Assembly published certain paragraphs of a letter written on behalf of the Guardian by his Secretary on July 19, 1956, calling upon the American Bahá’ís to give more attention to the matter of making contacts with minorities in the United States.

In light of the Guardian’s Convention Message, which emphasizes the all-important task of broadening and consolidating the foundations of the newly-emerged national and regional assemblies as well as for “acceleration in the process of individual conversion,” the instructions of the Guardian in the letter referred to above take on even greater significance.

“A great impetus could be lent to the work in the European countries, in certain far-eastern areas, and in Latin America,” he says, “if the Bahá’ís residing in the big cities and university towns would make a determined and sufficient effort to extend friendship and hospitality to students and nationals from countries where the Bahá’ís are struggling so hard to establish the Faith. They would not only have the possibility of making more local believers, but they would also increase the membership of communities abroad, by sending back Bahá’ís from the United States.”

In accordance with the Guardian’s instructions contained in the same letter, the National Spiritual Assembly appointed a special committee to survey the possibilities and to make recommendations as to how the American Bahá’í community can apply this directive. The report of the committee has been studied and the National Spiritual Assembly now takes this means of conveying its suggestions to the believers.
These suggestions are by no means the only ways in which this important work may be carried forward, but they provide a starting point and the National Spiritual Assembly hopes that as the communities develop local plans and gain experience in this type of teaching they will send their reports to be shared with all the Baha'is through Baha'i News.

From the survey of the special committee we quote the following comments and recommendations:

"The number of foreign students in this country runs into the tens of thousands. Many of them are befriended by Baha'is. At most of our larger universities the Baha'is make every effort to work with these minorities, but there must be thousands more who could be reached if we make the effort.

"How does one get to know foreign students? Sometimes a university will have a dean, or a counselor, of foreign students who is usually only too happy to have others help him with this concern for the visitors. Or there may be a local organization, such as the YWCA or YMCA, a service group, or perhaps one sponsored by one or more churches, in charge of placing foreign students in American homes. If there are these opportunities, the Baha'is should let it be known that they are eager to cooperate. It is important to make it clear that our interest is genuine and personal, and not primarily to proselytize.

"If there is no person or organization to help foreign students at a university, or at a near-by Army or Air Force base, here is a wonderful opportunity for the Baha'is to organize a service committee.

"What can you do with foreign students? Above all, give them or show them family life. You can, and you should be, their family away from home. Invite them to informal meals (include the children) and visit them afterwards. Show them places of local or historical interest; take them to visit a farm or a school. These things are far more interesting than a conducted tour.

"Always be guided by their reactions and by what they say as to how you can show your friendship or what to do with them. Simple things like finding a doctor or a dentist, getting proper clothing for winter, finding the foods they are used to, or finding a tutor for English—all offer opportunities to show real interest and concern.

"And finally, ask them to speak at a fireside or other Baha'i gathering about their country, their faith. It will be interesting to the friends and gratifying to them to be asked. Do not exert pressure toward getting them to attend study classes unless they express interest."

The National Spiritual Assembly strongly recommends that youth members of the community, or even youth contacts, make friends with these visitors; also that every effort be made to keep in touch with them as they move about within the country by putting them in touch with other believers who might follow up the interest that has been created. Make real friends of them, and encourage them to include a fellow student or national in whatever plans are made for them from time to time.

Another suggestion for communities in cities where there are foreign consulates is to offer the assistance of the Baha'is to entertain for a few hours individual members of groups of visitors who come to this country from time to time for study purposes. Experience has shown that this is a service that is greatly welcomed both by those responsible for planning the programs for these people (particularly over weekends), and by the visitors themselves, who may have few opportunities in their crowded schedules to observe American family life.

Dear friends: These are but a few first suggestions as to how we can not only befriend and serve these visitors who, as our Guardian says, "... are invariably lonely, and often respond to kindness much more quickly than the well-established majority of the population," but through whom we may be of inestimable assistance to the pioneers.

In the words of the survey committee: "Think what it must mean to a pioneer to find a friend among the native population, someone who has been with the Baha'is in this country while he was a student at one of our universities, or a visitor on some special study. It would be wonderful, of course, if the visitor could go home a Baha'i, but there may be very good reasons why he does not, or cannot, declare himself here. But even as 'a friend of the Cause' he will be able to open doors for the pioneer that otherwise might remain shut."

Moved from Membership

The National Spiritual Assembly has found it necessary to remove Mr. Calvin C. Steinmetz from membership in the Baha'i community. This action deprives him of his voting rights, participation in Nineteen Day Feasts, and other activities reserved for Baha'is.

ALASKAN BAHÁ'ÍS FORM NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

"The historic moment has arrived!" With these words, and the reading of the Tablets of Visitation revealed by Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, Paul E. Haney, Hand of the Cause of God, opened the first Alaskan Convention in Anchorage on April 22, 1957.

With 100% representation of delegates, the Convention got under way with the election of permanent convention officers. Mr. Robert E. Maul was elected chairman and Mrs. Rose Perkal Yarno, secretary.

The first thing on the agenda was the reading of the Convention Message from the beloved Guardian to the Alaskan Bahá'ís, by Mr. Haney. Discussion of this letter was taken up throughout the three-day Convention. The long Convention Letter was also read.

There were many greetings received and read. A cablegram from Honor Kempton, first Bahá'í to settle in Alaska, was received from Switzerland. A letter from the Auxiliary Board member, Florence Mayberry, was read and tears of joy shown in the eyes of all present when she wrote: "The prayers that I shall be saying will have a special potency, not due to the one who will . . ."

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR FRANCE ACQUIRED

Exciting news for all Bahá'ís is the accomplishment of one of the French goals of the Ten-Year Crusade. On March 2, 1957, a beautiful tract of wooded land was purchased to serve as the Bahá'í National Endowment for France.

The French Endowment is located in Normandy, in the Department of Orne, about six kilometers from the town of Le Théil sur Huise.

An irregular rectangle of land, the property is situated in a lovely green and rolling countryside of farms and forests. Lying atop a small plateau, it overlooks a shallow valley.

The achievement of this goal was made possible through the generous contributions of Mrs. Amelia Collins, Hand of the Cause, and a Persian Bahá'í pioneer to France.

After signing of the contract, the special committee of the Paris Assembly charged with the execution of the purchase of the Endowment visited the property. In a small clearing of a grove of trees, the group sat on the trunk of a felled pine tree for a brief service of dedication.

Three prayers of praise were read, followed by the reading of "From the sweet-scented streams . . .," "Blessed is the spot . . .," and the prayer from the "Tablets of the Divine Plan," "O Thou incomparable God!" It was a deeply moving experience, and each one fervently hoped that this beautiful spot would, in the years to come, be a rallying point for a strong French Bahá'í Community.

be saying them, but the Holy grounds on which they will be uttered, as I shall arrive in the Holy Land on April 22, 1957." This was the very day that our Convention opened and throughout the three days there prevailed a great spiritual force that was felt by all. She referred to the Alaskan Baha'is as "the Northern Lights of Baha'u'llah."

As the time drew near for the election of the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, Mr. Haney said "The mysterious process of Baha'i elections constitute worship in the real sense of the word." He also said, "An event is about to take place in this room, the significance of which no one of us can fully understand ... only the Guardian can grasp its full significance!"

After reading words from the beloved Guardian, Mr. Haney called for absolute silence. Upon completion of the reading of two prayers, the roll call of delegates took place.

The newly elected National Spiritual Assembly and its officers are as follows: Robert E. Maul, chairman; Howard J. Brown, vice-chairman; Evelyn Huffman, secretary; Kathy Rodgers, recording secretary; and Lois K. Lee, treasurer. Other members are: Warren H. Rodgers, Janet Stout, Verne Stout, and Rose Perkal Yarno.

Regarding the teaching problems of the Native Peoples, the following are quotations from the various pioneers and the first Indians to embrace the Faith:

Frances Wells, pioneer at Barrow: "According to an Alaskan Native School teacher, the Barrow people have come up from the Stone Age to the Jet Age within 50 years."

Bernard Blumenstein, pioneer at Nome: "What we need is more pioneers to go out into the field and 'live the life.'"

Elaine Caldwell, pioneer at Unalaska: "When teaching by word of mouth we don't get very far; living the life is the best teacher."

Joyce Combs, first Indian believer in the Territory: "This Faith is for our people—we have been looking for it and need it!"

Mrs. Joyce Baldwin, Tsinshian Tribe: "Our people are united in race, disunited in feelings—when you teach, teach from your heart; our people know when you are sincere."

Bernard Guhrke, pioneer at Kodiak: "I'm sure that Kodiak has a great future, but we must proceed with caution."

Maude Hartline, pioneer at Juneau: "The only way you can contact people is to work with them—meet them as friends first."

Highlight of the Convention was when Paul Haney, acting as the Guardian's personal representative, anointed all present with attar of roses. The children were anointed during the noontime recess and the adults in the evening after the election of the National Spiritual Assembly.

At that time many wonderful gifts were presented to the National Spiritual Assembly, including two beautifully bound volumes of pictures from the Guardian.

There were two public meetings held during Convention: one, the Baha'i Congress, held Sunday night preceding the opening, drew a crowd of 87 people. Mr. Verne Stout was chairman, with Mr. Paul Haney as speaker. The second public meeting was the Feast of Ridvan. Mrs. Evelyn Huffman and Mrs. Lea Brown were on the program with Mr. Haney. Refreshments were served by the women of the Anchorage area.

Average attendance throughout the Convention was 66.

Referring to the Six-Year Plan that lies ahead for the newly formed National Spiritual Assembly, Mr. Haney said: "What has been done in the past four years is just plain impossible, but it has been done because of the Guardian. The same will be true with the next six years —what the beloved Guardian has set for our goal will be accomplished!

It was apparent that those assembled left the first National Convention of Alaska with renewed spirit and energy, and that everyone returned to their respective homes with one objective foremost in their minds, to rededicate their lives to the teaching of the Cause of Baha'u'llah.

FORM NATIONAL ASSEMBLY IN BUENOS AIRES

The first historic Convention of the five countries of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay was held April 22, 23, 24 in the beautiful Alvear Palace Hotel, having a panoramic view of Buenos Aires.

Two days of Pre-Convention School (April 20, 21) preceded the Convention with the study of the Igân, Baha'i Administration with emphasis on the internal functioning of a National Spiritual Assembly, as well as inspiring talks by the distinguished representative of the Guardian and Hand of the Cause, Dr. 'Ali Muhammad Varqâ and by Mrs. Margery McCormick, representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States. On the evening of April 19, all delegates and visitors were guests at a tea reception held in the Haźiratu'l-Quds.

Since space would not permit a detailed report of this historic Convention, a resume of the distinctive events follows.

Baha'i history will record the first pilgrimage of the believers of the five countries accompanying the Hand of the Cause, Dr. Varqâ, to the Tomb of May Maxwell “living in solitary glory in the southern outpost of the Western Hemisphere,” whose Tomb, as promised by Shoghi Effendi “will become the historic center of pioneer Baha'i activity.” The event took place on the first day of Ridván, April 21, as the friends gathered in the tranquil cemetery outside the village of Quijmes to pay homage to the radiant martyr who fills a special niche in the hearts of all South American believers.

The “Tablet of Visitation” was chanted in Persian by the Hand of the Cause, followed by its recitation for the first time in the Spanish language at this sacred spot.

Mrs. Margery McCormick placed rose petals from the Threshold of the Tomb of Bahá'u'lláh in front of the winged Monument.

A bouquet of the most fragrant flowers obtainable (carnations) was placed in the name of May Maxwell’s beloved daughter, Rúhíyyih Khánum. The fragrance and beauty of banked flowers lovingly arranged by the friends, birds singing their praises, a vibrating atmosphere of intense peace, the abiding sense of the presence of May Maxwell and her cohorts in the Supreme Concourse combined to make this an unforgettable shared experience. Without doubt, the high inspiration and success of the Convention can be greatly attributed to this united pilgrimage.

Unforgettable, too, will be the joyful Ridván Festival, held on the evening of April 21, as Dr. Varqâ gave a new awareness of the meaning of this sacred festival, recalling the first Ridván when the great Declaration was made, and the annual celebration of this event as the only holy period in which Baha’i forces are united in formulating plans for action in the year ahead.

The recorded divine voice of the “star servant,” Martha Root, recited in clear ringing tones the “Tablet of Ahmad,” spoke of the Ridván, gave a farewell exhortation to teach the Cause unceasingly, closed with the Greatest Name with such poignancy and power that all felt this ever-living heroine and “Pride of Baha’i Teachers” in our midst.

To each of the National Haźiratu'l-Quds, the Paraguayan friends presented a Ridván gift of framed delicate native nanduti lace with an inscription of love “that our hearts are woven together as in a delicate filigree of exquisite lace.”

The Convention was officially opened April 22 by Mrs. Margery McCormick in her capacity as representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States. She focussed attention on the institutions of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

“The Crusades of the Middle Ages had as their goal the conquering of cities with brick, stone and mortar; our purpose in the Global Crusade is to conquer the cities of men’s hearts. What is the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh? The Guardian has defined it as the sum total of all the institutions revealed by Bahá’u’lláh, through which the spirit of Bahá’u’lláh works and flows forth regenerating all mankind, bringing not only individual salvation but social salvation to all the human race.”

Then the Hand of the Cause, Dr. Varqâ, lighted a candle from the Tomb of Bahá’u’lláh, symbolically shedding illumination on the assemblage during the election of the Convention officers.

This was followed by the anointing of the friends by Dr. Varqâ, using four flasks of attar of roses sent by the beloved Guardian for this purpose. Dr. Varqâ then read the Guardian’s Convention Message to the four Latin-American Conventions.

The friends listened joyously to the congratulatory messages received from the American Hands of the Cause, the 15 National Spiritual Assemblies, the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee, the Local Spiritual Assemblies of Paris, France; Anchorage, Alaska; Bahia, Brazil; from the pioneer in the island of Precious gifts for the new Archives included the two albums prepared by the Guardian with drawings of the Temples to be constructed and photos of all the Haizratu'l-Quds; an exquisitely mosaic-framed picture of the Master, presented by Dr. Varqā in the name of the Bahá'ís of Tehran; a gold-lettered Greatest Name presented by Mrs. McCormick to all the local assemblies in the five countries.

The outstanding triumph announced this year was the formation of the first all-Indian assembly of South America in Bolivia. The Convention had the honor of receiving as a visitor Andres Jachacollo, first Bolivian Indian believer, who had undertaken the difficult train trip after taking the responsibility of participating in the election of this first assembly. Never will the voice of this mountain Indian believer be forgotten in his humble supplication and communion with his newly-found Lord, Bahá'u'lláh, as he offered up his first prayer in the Convention.

In solemn prayerful silence the delegates cast their votes, electing as their trustees for the coming year the first Regional National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay: Jose Mielenk, chairman; Roque Centurion, vice-chairman; Roberto Cazcarra, secretary; Athos Costas, recording secretary; Fabienne Guillen, treasurer; and Alejandro Reid, Salvador Torno, Ellen Sims, and Else Cazcarra.

The following Convention message was sent to the Beloved Guardian: "Believers, delegates deeply grateful presence Varqā, McCormick, express undeviating loyalty and devotion, beseech prayers Guardian merit trust, bring victorious conclusion tasks assigned Six-Year Plan, loving Ridván greetings."

Iberian Peninsula
NATIONAL ASSEMBLY
FORMED IN MADRID

Under extraordinary divine protection, and with joyous thanksgiving and eager expectations, the first Iberian Convention was held in Madrid, on April 22-24, 1957, for the purpose of electing the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the Iberian Peninsula. The scene of this "epochal" event, fraught with such far-reaching consequences, and designed to confer manifold and enduring benefits on the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, (to use the Guardian's own words)—was the new Haizratu'l-Quds, which had been officially dedicated, on the evening of April 21st, by the Hand of the Cause, Dr. Ugo Giachery.

Charles Wolcott, member of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, sent especially to represent that body, convoked the Iberian Convention in its name, and presided until the election of its permanent chairman, Miss Virginia Orsibor, and secretary, Mr. Manuel Garcia Vasquez, after which he acted as counsellor on matters pertaining to administration and procedure.

Dr. Ugo Giachery, Hand of the Cause, acting as the Guardian's personal representative, brought two transcendental messages, one to the Conventions in general, duly translated into Spanish and read to the assembled delegates, and the special message addressed to the "simultaneously convoked Conventions," read in its translation by Dr. Giachery, who also presented two unique and prized gifts, these being two beautifully leather-bound albums, one containing photographs of the existing Haizratu'l-Quds, among them that of Madrid, and the other containing pictures of the Holy Places of the Bahá'í World; all this arranged and written in by the beloved Guardian's own hand.

Dr. Giachery himself brought, to borrow his own words, "a small useful memento, a bell for the future chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly. It is an exact replica of the ship-bell of the Nina, Christopher Columbus' little flag-ship," symbol of "the debt of gratitude owed by America to Europe," and in this later day, "a reminder of the debt of gratitude owed by Europe to the Americans for having brought the Bahá'í world civilization to its shores."

Mr. Wolcott presented, in the name of the European Teaching Committee, a beautiful looseleaf book with plastic envelope leaves containing letters of acclamation from various national assemblies, among these being one from the United States and one from Persia. A wonderful letter from the beloved European Teaching Committee, who so tenderly and generously has directed faltering steps and encouraged efforts during the ten years of painful gestation, was read, and also deep gratitude was felt at being assured that a continued relationship would be maintained.

Mr. Charles Ioas, Mr. Angelo Carneiro, and Mr. Lopez Monge were asked to draft a cable to the Guardian in which the Convention expressed its profound gratitude for the stimulating messages and for the unique gifts, pledging united, dedicated, and active love. The cable was worded to comply with the restrictions to which the Bahá’ís are subject in Spain and Portugal.

On the afternoon of April 22nd, after special and fervent prayers said in English, Spanish, Portuguese and Italian, the 19 delegates (two by absentee ballots) from nine local Spiritual Assemblies, seven of Spain and two of Portugal, addressed themselves to the sacred task of selecting the nine members of the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the Iberian Peninsula. The three tellers, Mr. Luis Ortuno, Mr. Isidro Torrella and Mr. Pablo Fuentes, announced the following names as having received the highest number of votes: Charles Monroe Ioas, Ramon Escartin Alamanac, Manuel Garcia Vasquez, Virginia Orbison, Angelo da Silva Carneiro, Sara Tiffon Ramonet, Isidro Torrella Arnau, Luis Ortuno Puche, and Francisco Salas Heras.

This historic moment is one which can never be forgotten by those privileged to be present, and the embrace given each elected member of the new Spiritual Assembly by the revered Hand of the Cause were accompanied by tears and exclamations of profound emotion and gratitude for having witnessed the seemingly impossible become a living and potent reality! Surely each heart made its own pledge to increase its devotion and service to the creative Cause of Bahá’u’lláh.

Mr. Charles Monroe Ioas convoked the newly elected members in order to choose by secret majority vote the officers of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of the Iberian Peninsula, who were duly presented to the Convention during the Feast of Ridvan celebrated that same evening. They were: Charles Monroe Ioas, chairman; Ramon Escartin, vice-chairman; Manuel Garcia, secretary; Luis Ortuno, treasurer; Angelo Carneiro, ass. treasurer for Portugal; and Sara Tiffon, recording secretary.

Each of those present then had the honor of receiving from the Hand of the Cause the fragrance of attar of roses sent by the Guardian, thus feeling anew the blessing of a gift from the Sign of God on earth.

On the morning of the second day, April 23, the Guardian’s message to the Iberian Convention was again read, this time by the Secretary of the Convention, Mr. Garcia, after which the delegates made an official recommendation to the new National Assembly to the effect that the subsidiary Six-Year Plan, contained in the message, be officially inaugurated.

During the ensuing sessions, attention and effort were concentrated on the goals outlined in the new Plan, which briefly, are: increase numbers of believers; multiply isolated centers, groups, and local assemblies; incorporate local assemblies when possible; inaugurate Regional Funds; stimulate translating, printing and disseminating of literature; obtain recognition by authorities of Bahá’í marriage certificates and Holy Days; extend the scope, and increase the number of summer schools; attraction, and conversion of Gypsies and Basques; and purchase plot for Temple on outskirts of Madrid.

Two of these goals were given a beginning by the opening of the Regional Fund with contributions from the various communities and individuals. A Temple Fund was also begun.

The beloved Guardian, in his message, again called upon the American Bahá’í Community to continue its “material and moral support” in this effort, for which indeed the Bahá’ís of the Peninsula felt most profound gratitude.

On the last day of the Convention, April 24, a cable was received from the beloved Guardian through the Hand of the Cause, in answer to the convention message sent to him. The text of the Guardian’s cable was:

—SHOOHI

The Convention was officially closed after a brief summing up by the Secretary, the pronouncements by Mr. Wootton, Mrs. Tove Deleuran, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands, and by Dr. Ugo Giachery, Hand of the Cause of God, who assured the assembled friends that he saw the light of Bahá’u’lláh in their eyes, brightly shining. All present were again appointed with the attar of roses from the Guardian, and the flask containing it presented to the Iberian Community.

Due to the fact that the Spanish and Portuguese authorities have so far refused to recognize the Faith, the rule that more than twenty persons cannot meet together without permission was observed. Therefore, as only the delegates and several official visitors were allowed to attend the sessions, a tape recording was made of the highlights, during the proceedings, to be played back to the Iberian communities in separate gatherings, so that they might also enjoy, even in such a restricted manner, the thrilling and historic happenings, which, through the power and unfailing protection of Bahá’u’lláh were celebrated by hearts overflowing with gratitude and a new spirit of complete dedication.

Benelux Countries

BRUSSELS CONVENTION
FORMS BENELUX NSA

At this unique occasion, the gathering of the delegates for the first National Convention of the Benelux countries in Brussels, Belgium, our thoughts went back over the past years.

It was a little over ten years ago that our beloved Guardian entrusted the American believers with the tremendous task to spread the Faith in the European countries, and that pioneers settle in Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg.

A few years later, in 1949, the Benelux Regional Committee was appointed, with the purpose to sow the seed of cooperation in these three little countries.

With the never-failing help and assistance of our American friends, in the course of the following years the seed grew up, till a little but strong young tree was rooted in the soil of three neighboring countries.

An overwhelming feeling of joy and gratitude came over us all when we learned that our beloved Guardian found the young Benelux tree strong enough to range as a new pillar for the future International House of Justice in the row of National Spiritual Assemblies.

Almost 60 Benelux Bahá’ís came on April 20-22 to Brussels, to be presented at this historic event.
Our ranks were reinforced by our reliable friend, Dr. Herman Grossmann, Hand of the Cause of God, whose presence on various occasions in the past had become so very dear to us, and who came with a special message of our Guardian; and by two members of the Auxiliary Board, Louis Henuzet and Joel Marangella, who with their clear explanations contributed a better insight into our tasks for the remaining six years of the World Crusade.

At this historic moment a very special place in our midst was taken by H. Borrah Kavelin, treasurer and representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States.

He fulfilled his tasks, to direct the Convention and later to assist the members of the newly elected National Spiritual Assembly, so inspiringly and charmingly that we could not help but see him as the personification of the cordial love that we experienced all the years before from the American National Assembly.

The Guardian’s message to the Convention and his special letter, presented to us by Dr. Grossmann, containing the specific tasks and goals for the Benelux countries, formed the main subject of the consultation.

We learned that from now on we have to share our own National Spiritual Assembly in the many-fold tasks, as: increasing to an unprecedented degree the number of the believers, multiplying the local Spiritual Assemblies and groups, inaugurating Regional and National in incorporating the Spiritual Assemblies, selecting and purchasing ground for the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár, and many others.

We realized very well that all of these tasks are heavy for us, very heavy; but in full trust in the Guardian’s guidance, his powerful prayers, and our own combined forces, we promised ourselves to go to work immediately, to show that we will be equal to the tasks that are entrusted to us, and that we have really understood God’s Plan for us and for the world we live in.

The election of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Benelux countries, so eagerly awaited, gave the following results: Louis Henuzet, Roger Swinnen, Mrs. Lea Nys, Miss Else de Koninck, Bob van Lith, Claude Levy, Jean Nys, Jan van Syd, and Fernand Nadar.

With that lovely aroma of the altar of roses around us, specially sent by the Guardian to Dr. Grossmann to anoint the friends, and loaded with a dynamic desire to proceed to action, we all went back to our own places enriched again by that very strange power that we drew from our first Convention.

STOCKHOLM HOLDS FIRST NATIONAL CONVENTION

Like birds coming from all directions, delegates, visitors, and messages converged on Stockholm, Sweden, April 22 for the first Convention to elect a National Spiritual Assembly for Scandinavia and Finland, representing Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Finland, to be held through April 24, 1957.

Edna True, National Spiritual Assembly representative for the United States, came from Wilmette; Dr. Adelbert Mühlschlegel, Hand of the Cause of God, from Stuttgart; Honor Kempton, E.T.C. representative, from Geneva; Dorothy Ferraby, Auxiliary Board member, from London; Joyce Lawrence, Mildred Clark, Amelia Bowman, Josephine Kruka, and Greta Jankko, American pioneers, from Norway and Finland.

On arrival we were given the added joy of being present for the dedication of the newly acquired Haţratul’-Qud’s. The Stockholm Baha’is had worked day and night to have the house in readiness for the occasion, and now all was in order with beautiful flower arrangements adding perfume and beauty to the warmth and coziness of the house.

As Dr. Mühlschlegel pointed out in his dedication address, we felt at home in this house, which “is like a flower to gladden seeking souls.” A warm welcome was extended by Hans Odemyr, chairman of the Stockholm Local Spiritual Assembly, to the delegates and visitors, and the hearts joined in loving reunion with the reading of the prayers by Edna True, Dorothy Ferraby and Martha Collander.

The Convention was opened by Edna True, official representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, who evaluated the significance of the occasion for Scandinavia and Finland, and for the world, as beyond our comprehension, that we were witnessing “a momentous stage in the establishment of a New World Order, which we know is the Ark of Salvation to all mankind.” She also called attention to what was happening in the world this Ridván with more than 42 territories participating in the election of 13 national Spiritual Assemblies on four continents of the globe.

Dr. Mühlschlegel in his remarks alluded to the American Baha’i community, who through the pioneers had brought the seed to these countries that “had grown and flourished, and is now gathered by the Will of God and His Covenant to achieve a oneness and unity in variety through the institution of the National Spiritual Assembly.”

Sixteen of the nineteen delegates assigned by the Guardian—and who had been elected by the Bahá’ís communities of Copenhagen, Stockholm, Helsinki, Oslo, and Bergen—answered the roll call. The Convention then proceeded to elect the Convention chairman, Hans Odemyr of Stockholm; and secretary, Gerd Strand of Oslo.

Our beloved Guardian’s message was then read by Dr. Mühlschlegel, and brought forth the first recommendation to the forthcoming National Spiritual Assembly that copies be made available to the believers in all four countries. Messages were also read from the European Teaching Committee, Assemblies, groups, and friends over the world, and all too quickly the first session was over.

At the Ridván Feast held that evening, the fervor of the prayers and supplications read, created a heavenly atmosphere in which one felt God very near! A gift from the Guardian,—altar of roses,—was given by Dr. Mühlschlegel, who pointed out that when we use altar of roses, it is not rite or cult, “simply a token of the Guardian’s feelings for you all! The rose, the king of the flowers, gives its essence to the Guardian, the noblest of men, who gives it to you with the king of feelings, love, and with this I acquaint you.” As we listened to the recording of the Message of the beloved Guardian, read by his representative, Amatu’l-Baha Ruhíyyih Khánum, on the occasion of the dedication of the Temple in Wilmette, the fragrance of our Guardian’s love pervaded the atmosphere.

The program included a presentation of the goals of the World Crusade, with special reference to Scandinavia and Finland, by Lotus Nielsen of Stockholm; and “The Spiritual Significance of the National Spiritual Assembly,” by Gudrun Ofstegaard of Bergen. At the public meeting Gerd Strand of Oslo spoke of “Faith, Hope and Conviction,” and Hans Odemyr of Stockholm on “The Significance of the Bahá’í Teachings for the Individual and the Community.” Colored pictures of Bahá’í edifices at the World Center, and of the Temple in Wilmette added also to this lovely evening.

Each session began with a devotional period that was indeed the source of a great spiritual outpouring that prevailed during the entire Convention, and which reached the apex during the election of the National Spiritual Assembly. Edna True, before the prayers were read, called on the delegates to forget national boundaries and to be entirely impersonal in the performance of this greatest of all responsibilities which they were called upon to assume.

“Surely the eyes of Bahá’u’lláh are upon us,” she said. “Now let us strive to give Him those whom He wishes to serve Him in this area,” lifting the consciousness of all to that “rarified atmosphere of selflessness and detachment...” so necessary in our Bahá’í elections.

Surely not one of us present will ever forget the spiritual atmosphere of that moment, nor the thrill that came with the announcement that the National Spiritual Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland had been elected with the following members, listed with their appointed officers: Hans Odemyr, chairman; John Nielsen, vice-chairman; Gerd Strand, secretary; Lotus Nielsen, recording secretary; Gudrun Ofstegaard, treasurer; and Lisbeth Anderson, Palle Bischoff, Josephine Kruka, and Modesta Hvide.

The next morning we shared the great bounty of hearing the voice of the Master chanting “Glad Tidings,” and the hearts were filled with such love, we became indeed as one family! Gifts from the Guardian were presented by Dr. Mühlschlegel,—two beautifully tooled leather albums,—one containing colored pictures of Bahá’í edifices and the designs of future Temples to be erected, and the other contained pictures of the Hazíratu’l-Quds over the world. Edna True presented a red leather folder, a gift from the E.T.C., containing the acclamations of the established National Spiritual Assemblies, which she read, and messages from loving friends conveying greetings and congratulations followed.

Then the melody from the hearts of these birds “in the rose garden of His grace” rose in a great anthem of thanksgiving for the great love of the Guardian and his precious gifts; to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States, whose pioneers had brought the seed of truth to them; to Jenny Anderson, the first pioneer to Sweden under the Plan; to the European Teaching Committee, who had followed their progress from the first uncertain steps to this moment of consummation; to Julia Shows (“J.S.”) whose initials had appeared on all European Teaching Committee correspondence during these years of service.

The Convention then settled down to a consideration of the goals set forth in the Guardian’s Convention Message. These goals, constituting a subsidiary Six-Year Plan, were: the multiplication of Assemblies, groups and believers; the incorporation of the local Assemblies; the inauguration of a National Fund; the translating, printing and dissemination of Bahá’í literature; the increase in the number of summer schools; the introduction of the Faith into the three Baltic States; the recognition of the Bahá’í marriage and Holy Days; the attraction and conversion of racial minorities, particularly the Finns and Lapps; and the purchase of a Temple site in Stockholm. To accomplish these momentous achievements, each believer resolved to consider himself a pioneer on the home front.

As we returned to our homes we carried with us a lovely gold-lettered souvenir program of this first Convention in these Northern countries, containing a picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Author of the Divine Plan, Who had given the original impulse to the teaching effort which was now consummated with the election of the Divine Institution of the National Spiritual Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland.

HAZIRATU’L-QUDS ACQUIRED IN VICTORIA

From a circular letter addressed by Musa Banjá, Hand of the Cause for Africa, dated March 28, 1957, these facts have been gleaned:

In a cablegram sent by the beloved Guardian to Mr. Banjá, Shoghi Effendi acclaims the services rendered by Enoch Olinga, pioneer to the British Cameroons, and declares that as the result of the status of the Faith produced there by Mr. Olinga, a Hazíratu’l-Quds is to be established in Victoria.

Mr. Banjá has recently been informed that this Hazíratu’l-Quds has already been acquired.
Forty-Ninth Annual Convention, Stirred by Guardian's Appeal.

To take stock of its present position in the spiritual Army of Bahá'u'lláh and to begin plans for the immediate year ahead through election and consultation, were the tasks that faced the Forty-Ninth Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of the United States as it convened in Foundation Hall of the Bahá'í House of Worship on Sunday morning, April 28, 1957. The theme of the convention was: “The American Bahá'í Community in the World Crusade.”

Most of the 133 delegates present on that first morning already knew that the fourth year of the Ten-Year Crusade was coming to a close with triumphant victory on the world front. For here had been the establishment during the Ridván period of thirteen new National Spiritual Assemblies, bringing the total number of existing “Pillars” of the rising world order of Bahá'u'lláh to twenty-six. Of these, nine were nurtured into being by the American Bahá'ís.

Had the American Bahá'í community achieved like victory on its own homefront? Had it strengthened itself within? What increasing material and spiritual resources was it gaining with which to play its “lion’s share” in serving a rapidly developing Faith?

These were questions in the minds of every delegate and visitor as the work of the four-day convention began. Reports from the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly and its committees would be revealing. Already the formal Annual Reports, edition for 1956-57, was in their hands with the lesser victories and some failures apparent.

The spiritual tone of the convention this year was actually established on the preceding night with the Feast of Ridván, when devotions concentrated around the words of Bahá'u'lláh, “Arise, and proclaim unto the entire creation the tidings that He Who is the All-Merciful hath directed His steps towards the Ridván and entered it.” With the beautiful singing of the children’s Temple choir flooding our hearts and the words of Bahá'u'lláh: “O Son of Being! Walk in my statutes for love of Me!” lingering with us, Bahá'ís gathered for the social period in Foundation Hall, renewing friendships while at the same time preparing for the convention.

Devotions each morning at 9 o'clock, the regular Sunday afternoon devotions for the public, all in the auditorium, and the opening prayers for the consultation sessions, brought to every heart the creative words of our Founders. This inspiration and renewal was essential to the action required of the convention.

Fulfillment of Promise
On behalf of the National Spiritual Assembly, Paul E. Haney, its chairman, welcomed the delegates and visitors and then called attention to the significance of the establishment of the thirteen new “pillars” of the Cause. “These wonderful events mark the ninety-fourth anniversary of the greatest event in the history of the world, the Declaration of Bahá'u'lláh,” he said. “These events are a reflection of the fulfillment of the promise made to Bahá'u'lláh in the Siyáh-Chá: ‘Grieve Thou not for that which hath befallen Thee, neither be Thou afraid, for Thou art in safety. Breathe will God raise up the treasures of the earth—men who will aid Thee through Thyself and through Thy Name, wherewith God hath revived the hearts of such as have recognized Him’.”

Mr. Haney made the first reference to the Convention Message received from Shoghi Effendi with the words “one of the most wonderful documents he has ever sent to us.”

After the convention had organized itself with Mr. Haney as chairman and Horace Holley as secretary, had adopted the agenda with the qualification that it could be changed at any time by vote of the delegates, and heard the first of the greetings that were to come in from other Bahá'í communities and individuals, the “Table of Visitation” revealed by ‘Abdu'l-Bahá was read to precede the reading of the Guardian's Message.

Message of the Guardian
At the direction of the Guardian the chairman read the Message which he had sent them, for sharing with them and with twenty-three other Bahá'í Conventions simultaneously during Ridván, the joyful word of victories won, directives for the forwarding of the Crusade and inspiration for meeting the challenging issues that history has given to this age.

Against the background of the world's turmoil Shoghi Effendi calls the Bahá'ís to ponder the “portentous prophecies” of Bahá'u'lláh and the “dire predictions” of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, “all foreshadowing a universal commotion, of a scope and intensity unparalleled in the annals of mankind.” And then he renews our vision which is the purpose of our lives and the overall purpose of all convention consultation:

"—a calamity which must purge the human race of the dross of its age-long corruptions, and weld its component parts into a world-embracing Fellowship—a Fellowship destined, in the fullness of time, to be incorporated in the framework, and to be galvanized by the spiritualizing influences, of a mysteriously expanding, divinely appointed Order, and to flower, in the course of future Dispensations, into a Civilization, the like of which mankind has, at no stage in its evolution, witnessed."

Parallel with the process of progressive deterioration in human affairs has been the process of “integration,” the Message continues, “as demonstrated by the increasing cohesion, the multiplication, and the reinforcement of the foundations, of the institutions of the embryonic Bahá'í World Order.” This is a process that is contributing “to the building up, slowly but irresistibly, of the Ark of human salvation,” ordained as the ultimate haven for human society.

After enumerating the outstanding achievements of the World Crusade in detail to show the gains made in the remotest area or on the smallest scale as well as the triumphant establishment of the thirteen new National Assemblies and the lifting of the grave persecution in Iran, the Guardian turns our attention to the tasks ahead. Most brilliant of the accomplishments just ahead must be the erection of three Temples, Mother-Temples of the European, the Australian and the African continents. The designs are ready; the construction must begin.

In the current year no gain must be allowed to be lost, the Guardian emphasizes, and a “determined effort must be made to insure, as speedily as possible, the resettlement of the territories which Bahá’í pioneers have been forced to abandon, and the opening of the three virgin islands situated in the North Sea and in the Indian Ocean, as well as the six Republics of the Soviet Union and the five territories included within the Soviet Orbit.”

The safeguarding of all existing institutions and the broadening of their foundations must be accompanied with a rapid increase in the number of believers in every continent in order to insure the completion of all future tasks and the spread of the healing light of the Bahá’í Faith.

Renewal on Homefronts

“Great are the strides that have already been made, and phenomenal the success achieved . . . . The tasks that still remain to be accomplished, however, are truly formidable. Above all, the homefront, that must serve as a reservoir for the supply of a steady flow of pioneers and resources for the multiple organized operations of a continually expanding Crusade, and which, alas, in several countries . . . has been progressively declining, must, at whatever cost, and within as short a time as possible, be revitalized, extended, and consolidated.”

The Guardian closed his “review of the superb feats already accomplished,” with an appeal for a “renewed dedication” on the part of every Bahá’í throughout the world—his “spiritual brethren”—a dedication that is a pledge “willingly and solemnly made for the prosecution of the collective task” which they are confronted.

The Guardian’s deep hope is that the Crusade, speeding on to its midway point, may reap such a harvest “as will amaze its prosecutors, astonish the world at large, and draw forth from the Source on high a measure of celestial strength adequate to insure its triumphant consummation.”

Arising to the Challenge

The convention appointed a committee to draft a reply to the Guardian, which was sent by cable within a few hours. It was a pledge, sincerely made, as follows:

“With joyous hearts, gratitude, thanksgiving thrilling achievements announced stirring message, assembled delegates solemnly pledge whole-hearted effort inspire renewal of dedication entire American community to fulfill remaining goals World Crusade at home, abroad. Deeply grateful beloved Guardian’s continuing prayers for our strength, steadfastness, victory. Send devoted love, Ridván Greetings.”

—49th ANNUAL CONVENTION

On April 29 the Guardian replied to our message with the following message carrying a plea for “unprecedented” effort on the American homefront:

“Welcome pledge (by) delegates. Fervently supplicating Bahá’u’lláh’s sustaining grace; urge intensification efforts rededication achievement goals (of) plan, discharge befittingly sacred, manifold, inescapable, urgent responsibilities confronting entire American Bahá’í community. Appeal unprecedented increase pioneers homefront all continents (of) globe on which prosperity, security (and) destiny (of) American believers must ultimately rest.”

—Sohn

Deeply stirred by the victories already won and our Guardian’s appeal to move forward together for the redemption for mankind, the convention took up its work with a solemnity and dedication that increased as the hours passed. If we felt that we must “dig in,” as it were, for a rugged pull, it was because there was much to be done and little time at convention sessions to speak of all that was in our hearts and minds. Yet, looking back on those four days we find, from notes taken at the time, that the sessions were marked with an efficiency, a speed, a realistic approach and a mutual courtesy unequalled at previous American Bahá’í conventions. Consultation is becoming a wonderful instrument in the light of the new Day of God.

To the call of the Guardian was to be added, during convention reports, the specific challenges of the growing recognition of the Faith by racial minorities in America, of notice taken of it by religious commentators and of the increasing space given to its announcements in the press. The publication of Dr. George Townshend’s last book, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, was hailed as an unusual opportunity for proclaiming clearly to the Christians of the West the Second Coming of Christ.

And so the tone and temper of the convention rose as the hours passed, the delegates striving to attain the station of love and ardor which would produce good recommendations to the incoming National Assembly and go forth with them for revitalization of the friends back home . . . . the ninety percent that could not be present among the 967 Bahá’ís who “feasted” at the convention table of bounty.

Greetings of the Hands

The American Hands of the Cause greeted the convention on the first afternoon in a message shared with seven national conventions of the western hemisphere. “Let us pause and give thought to the mighty upsurge that we are witnessing in the Cause,” this message said. A review of the establishment of the thirteen new “pillars” gives a threefold sign: The Guardian is provided with more powerful institutions for the fulfillment of the Will and Testament provisions; new agencies have been created for spreading and consolidating the Faith; and we have a stronger administration which reinforces our contacts with the United Nations and its member states.

"These victories, marking the year 1956 to 1957, are a means to an end. The Ten-Year Plan presents new goals to be reached; the race is still to be won. The Bahá'í world is in motion and its consecrated energies will not be relaxed until all people are gathered into one fold and under one Shepherd. . . . Would the Bahá'ís themselves have conceived of this vast World Crusade? The Guardian alone knows the swift movement of destiny."

High tribute was paid by the Hands, Mrs. Corinne True, Mr. Horace Holley and Mr. Paul Haney to the members of the Auxiliary Board for the western hemisphere: Margery McCormick, Florence Mayberry, William deForge, Katherine McLaughlin, Gayle Woolson, Rowland Estall, Margot Worley, Esteban Canales and Dr. Sarah Martin Pereira.

Services of the Hands and of the Board members were offered to the Bahá'ís of the western hemisphere, who have a particular mission as we know when we ponder the words of the Tablet which Bahá'u'lláh revealed to the Americans: "Assist with the hands of justice the brokenhearted, and crush the great oppressors with the scourge of the Commands of your Lord, the Powerful, the Wise."

We Look at Our Objectives

The convention began its detailed appraisal of the American community's position in relation to its Crusade objectives through the supplementary report given by the secretary of the National Assembly, Mr. Holley. (Annual Reports gives all but the recent facts.)

1. A cable from the Guardian dated March 27, 1957, informed the Hands and the NSA's of the passing into the Abáh Kingdom of Hand of the Cause, George Townshend, speaking of this beloved servant of the Faith as "indefatigable" . . . "highly talented" . . . "fearless defender" of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh.

In the same cable the Guardian announced the appointment of Miss Agnes Alexander, pioneer to the Japanese, to the station of Hand of the Cause, thus retaining the number of 19 at the present time for service to this divine institution.

2. In a letter from Shoghi Effendi's secretary reference was made to Dr. Townshend's book, Christ and Bahá'u'lláh, with the comment that the Guardian is very impressed with it. The National Assembly will work out details for carrying out Shoghi Effendi's directives concerning our use of the book in giving the Message to Christian people, obtaining press publicity and presenting copies to ecclesiastics. The Guardian asked that a copy be sent to Marcus Bach.

3. Each of the nine members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States assisted at the organization of nine of the thirteen new National Assemblies organized at conventions meetings during the Ridván period. For five or six days all members were outside of this country. In discharging this mission for the American Bahá'ís in their sponsorship of the new Assemblies, the places of mission and the members were as follows:

(1) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of North East Asia; Tokyo, Japan; Charlotte Linfoot.
(2) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Alaska; Anchorage, Alaska; Paul E. Haney.
(3) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Central America and Mexico; Panama City, Panama; Robert W. McLaughlin.
(4) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the Greater Antilles; Kingston, Jamaica; Dr. Katherine True.
(5) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'í of Brazil, Peru, Columbia, Ecuador and Venezuela; Lima, Peru; Horace Holley.
(6) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Margery McCormick.
(7) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Scandinavia and Finland; Stockholm, Sweden; Edna True.
(8) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the Benelux Countries; Brussels, Belgium; H. Borrah Kavelin.
(9) National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the Iberian Peninsula; Madrid, Spain; Charles Wolcott.

(Note: The other four National Assemblies to be established were: the Bahá'ís of Pakistan; of South East Asia; of New Zealand, and of the Arabian Peninsula . . . under other sponsorship.)

4. Yuma, Arizona, has secured recognition of Bahá'í Holy Days, (making six places added since April 21, 1956).

5. A letter from Haifa made reference to Dr. Bach's article in a recent Christian Century called "Bahá': A Second Look." This article by a member of the Department of Religion at the University of Iowa and writer on religion, is very excellent publicity, Mr. Holley remarked. (Dr. Bach was a guest of Shoghi Effendi three years ago.)

6. The National Assembly held meetings during the year with 33 days of work, and recorded 1,255 actions taken. Absences were brief and rare.

7. A new translation of Mysterious Force of Civilization, authored by 'Abdu'l-Bahá is now off the Bahá'í press. It is entitled The Secret of Divine Civilization and was translated by Marzieh Gail. With many quotations from the Qur'án, Mr. Holley remarked that it is particularly good for the West, and it proves that Islam was the basis of modern civilization.

8. A most recent report on the situation in Iran made by Habib Sabet shows that the government is regretful of what it did, but not yet willing to give full liberty to the Bahá'ís.

9. The institution of Race Amity Day (for the second Sunday in June) the Guardian hopes will become very important and ultimately listed with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce as is World Religion Day.

10. The Home for the Aged (left for special report).

11. Enrollments, May 1, 1956, to April 15, 1957:
   Adults by Local Assemblies ......... 244
   Adults by Area Teaching Committees ......... 164
   Youth by Local Assemblies ......... 52
   Youth by Area Teaching Committees ......... 27
   Alaska, Hawaii ......... 17
   Total ......... 504

Lost from membership: 130 by withdrawal and 94 by death (224); Net increase, 280. Five or six states made no enrollments; 95 of 188 LSA's enrolled one or more; and 92 of 188 LSA's enrolled none.

Last year up to convention time the enrollment figures were: 233 by Local Assemblies; 211 by Area Teaching Committees; total 434, with 69 being youth. Withdrawals were 355; deaths, 199; lost, 474. This meant a net loss of 49 members in 1955-56.

12. Other goals: in addition to the objectives reviewed in Annual Reports eleven goals have been opened in Africa and a Local Spiritual Assembly has been established in the Balearic Islands.

On the Home Front

The objective of the national teaching this year, reported by the National Teaching Committee on the first afternoon of convention, was to establish 30 new Local Spiritual Assemblies with a minimum of one in each state. This seemed necessary if we are to meet the objective of 300 strong local Assemblies by 1963. As a result of a message from the Guardian urging that teachers with knowledge of the Covenant travel in circuits, the new committee, delayed somewhat by change in personnel this year, instituted two circuit plans that by now are running smoothly in many sections of the country. Results as far as figures go: new Local Assemblies, 23; restored, 5; lost, 10; net gain, 18. Four states were without a local Assembly; now we have one in Greensville, S. Car., and Minot, S. Dak., leaving just Rhode Island and Vermont without Assemblies. Sixteen states have only one Assembly. We must move from the cities, the Committee advised, to obey the Guardian, even if it is just to the suburbs.

On Tuesday when more reports had come in from the April 21 elections the National Teaching Committee reported: "It now seems that we have 209 Assemblies. Twenty-two are new and seven are restored. Many are still in danger because weak."

"We must double our efforts to deepen and attract," the committee stated; then, quoting the Guardian: "It is primarily a task that concerns the individual believer, wherever he may be, and whatever his calling, his resources, his race, or his age." (From "Inestimable Prizes. . . .")

The National Teaching Committee report was a springboard for vigorous consultation that began with the rousing statement: "This next year can be the most interesting and exciting on the homefront if we arise and seize the God-given opportunities before us. It seems time to take the Message to the Christians."

There followed in rapid succession many suggestions, recommendations and experience stories of helpful nature, beginning with a formal recommendation to the National Spiritual Assembly to consider securing reprints of the Christian Century article by Dr. Marcus Bach and distributing it widely throughout America, making an introduction to Dr. Townsend's latest book also in this connection.

The consultation, which continued through the afternoon on Sunday and was allotted time on other days, ran a long gamut of ideas including the presentation of other committees, all of which were bent on assisting and serving the World Crusade in their respective spheres.

"The homefront, that must serve as a base, and act as a reservoir for the supply of a steady flow of pioneers and resources for the multiple organized operations of a continually expanding Crusade . . . has been progressively declining," were the words of the Guardian that spurred on the discussion and made the American believers come to grips with their situation once again this year and face themselves with truthfulness.

"We have a clear-cut direction to initiate a deeper and wider program for fulfilling our obligations under the Covenant; "each one teach one," is what the Master said; when lighted we do spontaneous teaching; get the "unknown quantity," the inactive believers to work through stimulation from Local Assemblies or area teaching committees; assist the isolated believers more than is being done now through state conferences and corner-state gatherings; "We have the problem of combining the administrative order with the flame of the spirit—keeping everyone busy is contagious." "We must believe that the Power will be released to help us," pray more, learn to attract, study diligently and act continuously; set local goals that will lead us to the goals of the Crusade; such as so many firesides, card campaigns, etc.: "We have need of revitalization. Let us do our utmost to achieve it... The Administrative Order and the homefront plans are carried out by administrative bodies, of which the Guardian says we have enough. Let us give all the emphasis to personal regeneration. If we are active we don't need elaborate plans. People come into our lives."

Continuing the consultation—encourage the setting up of more extension committees by local Assemblies; use tact and courtesy between an extension committee and groups it endeavors to serve; call groups and isolated believers in to an Assembly for consultation; ask isolated believers to help in the work of a locality or an area; extension work goes on easily if properly planned; use the administrative bodies that we do have and developing special projects which the Area Teaching Committees can set up in an area; isolated believers can work together to study, learn and increase their numbers.

Out of this consultation came the recommendation: that the area committees encourage special projects in a state or smaller area where Assemblies need assistance and isolated believers need fellowship and stimulation to teach.

Speaking to the subject of spiritual revitalization, which grew more and more to be the basic theme of the convention, the delegates were deeply moved to offer remarks that were inspiring to all present and helped to make the convention, in the opinion of many, one of the best in many a year.

Recommendation: that the NSA consider asking the National Teaching Committee to look into opportunities for co-operating in an international teaching plan with the communities near the border states.

Recommendation: that the Convention record a solemn appeal to individual Bahá'í's throughout the United States to respond wholeheartedly in acceptance of the Guardian's appeal for renewed consecration in the teaching work; and that the Convention refer this message to the National Spiritual Assembly with the request that it devise such measures as will fulfill the collective desire of the American Bahá'ís; and, that the Bahá'í community of the United States accept whatever plans are announced, and then give its whole-hearted effort and devotion.

"Let the Breeze of God awaken you. Verily, it hath wafted over the world. Well is it with him that hath discovered the fragrance thereof and been accounted among the well-assured."

Evidence of Resistless March

The program Sunday evening was a moving experience, giving to the assembled Bahá’ís a two-fold picture of historic happenings in the Faith in lands far-flung from their own but closely allied in heart through the love of Bahá’u’lláh. First came the presentation, one by one, by members of the National Spiritual Assembly, of word pictures of the nine conventions which convened for the first time to elect National Spiritual Assemblies under the sponsorship of the American Bahá’í community; and second, came a graphic recital by Habíb Sabet of the special mission which he served for the Guardian in the land that is the Cradle of the Faith.

To be privileged to hear these first-hand stories by eyewitnesses and participants in these historic events was a rare blessing for Bahá’ís in convention. And yet how small may be our comprehension of the great significance of these recent steps which have been taken in the building and protection of the Cause!

Varied in their ethnic and religious background are the peoples now drawn within Bahá’í National Assembly jurisdiction by the new institutions; different in their cultural and economic way of living; in temperament contrasted in many ways to our own; but alike in their love of Bahá’u’lláh, our National Assembly members reported. To each convention the Guardian sent gifts: altar of roses for anointment of the believers; albums with pictures of the Temples and the Hazíratulláh-Quds; loving messages; a six-year plan for their participation in the Ten-Year Crusade. These plans are patterned much the same with the assignment of ten or eleven tasks for the expansion and consolidation of the Faith, the building of a National Fund and the acquisition of Temple sites. While in Alaska this means one Temple site, in the areas where there are several states now under a regional NSA jurisdiction, such as that of the Greater Antilles or of the two divisions of South America, it calls for a Temple site to be purchased in each state division.

A Hand of the Cause representing the Guardian presented the gifts and addressed the assembled delegates at each convention: Paul Haney at the Alaskan convention; Horace Holley at the one in Peru; Díkhrúlláh Khádem, at Panama City; Mrs. Corinne True, who at 95 years of age went to Kingston, accompanied by her daughter who represented the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States: Ugo Giachery, at Madrid; Dr. Hermann Grossmann, at Brussels; Adelbert Mühschlegel, Stockholm; Dr. ‘Alí Muhammad Varqā, Buenos Aires, and Djalál Khážeh, Tokyo.

Attendance at the conventions ranged from 17 at Madrid to 85 at Anchorage. An objective of the years ahead for the United States National Assembly will be the strengthening of these new bodies within the Bahá’í Administrative Order that they may become firm pillars. This will undoubtedly mean financial aid as well as guidance and love.

Memorable was the experience to these intrepid workers of the Faith and memorable the stories that they related of seeming miracles wrought to bring these countries and regions to Assembly status.

Defender of the Faith

In introducing Habíb Sabet, who gave a revealing account of his mission in Iran the past two years, Mír­dred Mottahedeh explained how after he had finished his work in respect to the persecution of the Bahá’ís there, the Guardian said to him: "You are the standard bearer of the innocents. You are the Defender of the Faith." And he called him Násirí’d-Dín, which means "defender of the faith." (This was the name of the Shí’í who persecuted the Bahá’ís; there seems a significance, that Mr. Sabet has made the name "clean.")

Immediately after May 15, 1955, when the Bahá’í community of Iran fell under what the Guardian has termed “barbarous” persecution, Mr Sabet was called by the Guardian to proceed to Tíhrán, where he began special negotiations with the officials.

Many were the delicate tasks he had to perform until at last His Majesty’s government was convinced through these efforts and those of the Bahá’ís throughout the world, that it should bring the persecution to an end. Baha’i property has been returned, though the central Hazíratulláh-Quds has not been completely vacated. There is still such restriction on assemblage that the national convention could not meet this Ridván. Election for the National Assembly was deferred.

Verily, the Bedrock

To support the World Crusade undertakings of the American Bahá’í community, at home and abroad, stands the National Fund. Consideration of the achievements, the responsibilities, the objectives and the problems associated with this fund was given by the delegates in consultation with the National Spiritual Assembly on Monday morning.

"What we can be aware of (since the Guardian’s Message) is that the great institution of the National Fund in the United States is more and more demonstrating that it is the bedrock upon which other institutions must rest; and as it grows in scope so likewise will other Pillars of the Cause increase in numbers and grow in strength," said Bórah Kavelin, national treasurer, as he introduced the presentation.

"As tensions mount, as signs of unrest multiply, and as people everywhere seem to have lost their grip on the hand of God, a world within a world is being fashioned. A little circle of light is expanding, pushing outward, drawing larger areas within itself, sustaining with hope and faith more and more of the world’s peoples."

Mr. Kavelin continued: "We are all soldiers of this Army of Light, marshalling our forces together,symbolizing the advent of a new Faith.

We bear the seeds of human transformation and the seeds of the Most Great Peace. We in America have been placed in the vanguard of this Army of Light, as a bounty from our beloved Guardian. Our duties are consummated in carrying out this responsibility placed upon us. Then, how have we fared?"

After describing what objectives we have achieved that called upon the National Fund, the nature of which are described at other places in this story, Mr. Kavelin presented the budget of National Assembly suggested for the new year and made the report on expenditures and receipts for 1956-57. The convention adopted the budget as it has been outlined, with a total of $425,000 as the goal, a reduction of $75,000 compared to last year. With receipts only $327,000 from contributions last year and $348,600 the amount collected, even including estate funds available, it seems realistic to reduce the budget for 1957-58. There were attempts on the part of the delegation to raise this total by recommendation of a $40,000 to $50,000 increase; there were many questions of why national committees had not spent all the sum allocated to them in several instances; and there was careful scrutiny of the trusteeships, particularly the Summer Schools.

The treasurer explained that the income from the Mathews property in Colorado when the government expropriated it for an Air Force Academy has been allocated for the much-needed deferred repairs at Green Acre, Davison and Geyserville.

"It is fitting", the treasurer explained, "that the monthly report in Baha'i News which the NSA makes be dignified and simple so each of you can respond as you feel impelled to do. I hope that this standard of advising the friends on the Fund will be maintained."

An item in the budget that is new is the token gifts for the two new Temples, Germany and Australia—$2,500—one thousand a year for two years and then five hundred dollars. (The Kampala Temple contribution has already been budgeted.) And the budget is set up for the new fledgling Assemblies, to each of which Amelia Collins, Hand of the Cause in Haifa has already given $1,000 each.

So strong was the feeling about the inadvisability of the National Teaching Committee continuing to spend less than allowed that a recommendation passed which in its final form included all the committees and suggested to the National Assembly the propriety of making a realistic analysis of expenses involved for the purpose of meeting needs of the teaching campaign, in the United States particularly.

Our Home for the Aged

Presentations made by all other committees, teaching, proclamation, and service—were excellent, helpful for the delegates and stimulating splendid consultation, with requests for information and final recommendations to the National Assembly. Some were exceptionally thrilling because of achievements; others notable because of unique plans for the future; and all correlated with the needs of the World Crusade on some one of its many fronts.

Because of the principle of the oneness of mankind to which the Baha'is must adhere, the First Dependency, or Home for the Aged, to be erected on property that we own in Wilmette, has been delayed. "We must await the judgment of the court on May 13 to know our next move."

Plans for the building to house 20 guests are now complete and were explained by the committee, with prints also for the delegates to see. Allocations made for the Home in the budget have not been spent. It will be a home for elderly people, not a hospital, and a large proportion may be paying guests, though it will have its humanitarian aspects.

Teaching Abroad

The vivid pictures drawn by the Intercontinental Teaching committees were fascinating disclosures of the heroic endeavors of pioneers. In Asia all virgin goals are now filled except those behind the Iron Curtain. More pioneers are needed to strengthen the base for the new regional National Spiritual Assembly of North East Asia, the third Pillar in the Pacific area.

In Europe three new National Assemblies will need assistance and a new one is to be established in France, 1958. We are not yet reaching the French natives and need pioneers to teach the French. There are still virgin goals, including Spitzbergen to the far north where an airline has recently established a base. A devoted committee searches weekends for appropriate property for a Temple site in Stockholm.

In Northwest Africa where a National Spiritual Assembly was established in 1956 there is need of pioneers; and the Guardian has called for purchase of an Ḥaḍiratu'l-Quds in each opened territory. Nigeria needs pioneers and Ghana is now open to Baha'is. South and West Africa is having phenomenal success in spite of difficulties, though without love we could not have won." Because of restrictions on assemblage the National Assembly was elected this Ridván by mail.

In the Western Hemisphere we have six years to evolve the four new regional National Assemblies and one new National Assembly into 20 National Spiritual Assemblies. There are many waiting to be led.
Many new Local Assemblies must be formed to form the base for the future. The Guardian determines when the base is strong enough. The one remaining Hazíratul-Quds, in Caracas, remains to be secured.

Our Younger Bahá’ís

One of the most outstanding presentations of the Convention was that of the Child Education Committee, now working on a philosophy of education, which when completed from a study of Bahá’í writings, will influence Child’s Way and all other material produced by the committee and which the committee believes will be an approach to what ‘Abdu’l-Bahá often stated would revolutionize the teaching methods in current use. The first statement on this philosophy was made available to the delegates in printed form and will be studied, with the consent of the National Assembly, in Summer Schools. It is a philosophy, not a technique, but from it techniques may be evolved. Its basic viewpoint is the “independent investigation of truth,” a privilege that the committee has come to believe must be encouraged for the child as well as the adult. Only then can the child really learn; then will he become a Bahá’í so firm that he will not waver from the Faith. The convention expressed a need for more children’s literature.

The Youth Committee in a careful presentation and during a long consultation made it clear that the youth need the adults, want to cooperate with them on committees and in conferences, wish to make use of the Persian Bahá’í students in this country, suggest the scattering of Bahá’í youth in many colleges, advise the formation of youth committees even in communities where there are no youth, and encourage the sharing of the Youth Bulletin with all the community.

Reaching the Minorities

The Interracial Teaching Committee reached the highlight of its presentation with details of observance of Negro History Week, a thrilling story of the greatest response from the Negro population in this country that there has yet been. Out of this came the idea for a Bahá’í Race Amity Day, which the National Assembly and the Guardian have approved, and on which we may concentrate on the Bahá’í principle of the oneness of mankind.

One of the goals of the Divine Plan and an objective of the Crusade is to introduce the Teachings to the American Indian. The Indian Service Committee reported that its work in two fields, translation and conversion of tribes, has had small successes this year, with translation proving an open door to the Indians. “A new day is coming” if and when we can have more Bahá’í pioneers on the reservations; but Indian contacts can be found in the big cities also.

Amoz Gibson, a delegate, and pioneer on the great Navajo reservation; Ethel Murray, the beloved pioneer on the Cherokee reservation; and Dr. F. Melany, who for a year held the Indian Service medical post on the Crow Agency, Montana, told wonderful stories of the Indians and how they receive the message of Bahá’u’lláh.

Other Pioneers

In addition to these three special speakers, there were other pioneers at convention: Miss Valerie Wilson, member of the Auxiliary Board for Africa, who was one of the first pioneers to that continent and who spoke of the needs there now; Mrs. Robert Miller, of South Africa, who brought greetings from the friends there; Mrs. Carole Hautz, pioneer to South Africa; Dr. Leland and Opal Jensen, Mauritius; Mrs. Charlotte Pinto, Mozambique, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hadden of Rhodesia. Miss Leslie Webster, who has been pioneering in the Far East, spoke stirringly of Korea and neighboring lands.

Mr. Bert Rakovsky was accorded the platform to bring greetings from our sister community of Canada.

Arms of the NSA

There is only space here to point out important features of the fine presentations of all other committees of the National Assembly and urge that the believers read not only their Annual Reports but also the NSA report in Baha’i News on its action on all convention recommendations.

The Summer School program committees called attention to the Guardian’s oft repeated plea that the believers go to the schools, Green Acre, Davison and Geyersville, reviewed the curriculum for this year and distributed attractive program folders. The fourth Blue Ridge Conference was announced for August by the three area committees sponsoring it, and plans for the first Southern Region Summer School in the summer of 1958 were discussed. It was pointed out that it is not necessary to purchase property to set up the activities of a summer school. The question of location is not determined yet, nor whether there will be only one such school.

Mildred Mottahedeh, representative of the Bahá’í International Community, revealed that the Guardian has warned that we will again have persecution in Iran and so the UN contacts committee will be needed. Choosing one of the exciting conferences of the United Nations which she has attended, she described the interest shown by contacts at the Ceylon meeting.

The Bahá’í Publishing Trust, which came into existence as an objective of the World Crusade, the first and only institution that exists in the Faith that is self-sustaining, conducts its business on the basis of teaching the Faith through literature and of building something toward a reserve fund for expansion in the future. Mrs. Enice Braun, Managing Director, laid special emphasis on setting up of more efficient distribution mediums, such as local Assembly committees and area conference displays.

The United Nations Committee urged celebration of UN Day and likewise of Human Rights Day next fall. The Radio Reviewing Committee reported it will be glad to receive new scripts, and it urged the convention to prepare a catalogue of existing scripts and tapes. The Press Service Committee reported a gratifying increase in circulation and column inches for Bahá’í releases and advertising, and reviewed by the use of cards the Schedule of Special Events for the current year, with Race Amity Day as the most important addition, in this systematic campaign.

The Audio-Visual Committee can supply a great variety of tapes, records and slides suitable for Bahá’í and for public use. Convention showed enthusiasm over several proposed projects. Service for the Blind receives appealing letters for more Bahá’í literature in Braille than we have produced.

Election of the NSA

About midway of the Convention, so that consultation could be possible with both the outgoing National Assembly and the incoming one, the national election was held, with delegates casting their ballots in the dedicated and prayerful atmosphere of a quiet Foundation Hall. Total number of delegates entitled to vote was 171; voting in person, 131 and by mail 38; total votes cast 1,521. The Bahá'ís named to serve on the national body for this year with the office that subsequent organization of the Assembly gave them, are as follows: Paul E. Haney, Chairman; Charles Welcott, Vice-Chairman; Horace Holley, Secretary; Edna True, Recording Secretary; Borrah Kavelin, treasurer; Charlotte Linfoot, Assistant Secretary; and Margery McCormick, Dr. Katherine True and Robert McLaughlin.

Convention registration figures on the last day were: number of delegates 136; Bahá'í visitors, 809; Bahá'ís from abroad, 29; total attendance 987, a new high for years other than Jubilee.

The three American Hands of the Cause, Mrs. Corinne True, Mr. Holley and Mr. Haney, closed the convention Wednesday afternoon with their presence and words of wisdom. Mr. Holley said:

"The divine institutions imply a divine community raised to a certain level of insight and co-operation. We can be carried along by the rest of the group just as a child is by its parents and we as Bahá'ís often are, and not from the light in our own hearts. Each individual has a responsibility between himself and God. He must take the step from the unconscious, the hereditary and the instinctual to the realm of the spirit. When we as a community have each taken that step the institutions will operate as well-oiled machinery. This is the mystery of the unfoldment of the light of God in our hearts."

"So my appeal to you is that we realize that as individuals we must take that most decisive step. We must be on the level of carrying ourselves, not of being carried along."

Mr. Haney reminded us that in this Faith blessings bring responsibilities and quoted: "His grace shall assist thee at all times, ere long it shall be manifest."

SPECIAL EVENTS FOR PROCLAIMING BAHÁ'Í FAITH TO THE PUBLIC

BAHÁ'Í IN THE NEWS

The Bridgeport Sunday Post (Conn.) of March 17, 1957, published a feature story on Israel as a home not only for Jews but for Christians, Arabs, and others. "The different non-Jewish communities within the state of Israel are assisted by the Ministry for Religious Affairs. Special departments serve the Moslem, Christian, Druze and Bahá'í communities." "The Bahá'ís have an enormously impressive temple (i.e., Shrine of the Báb) in Haifa, bringing disciples from everywhere to their world center."

The Jerusalem Post, March 21, 1957, noted the Bahá'í New Year's Day with a feature article with illustration of the International Archives Building showing the dome of the Shrine of the Báb in right background. Written by Ya'acov Ardon, this article presents the history and teachings of the Faith with accuracy and sympathetic understanding. "The religious principles of the Bahá'í faith, as expounded by the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh are similar to those of older monotheistic faiths and express restatement of 'the eternal verities of underlying all the religions of the past.' There is, however, an essential point of difference with a distinctly modern flavor: re-religious truth, according to Bahá'í conception, is not absolute but relative and divine revelation (is) continuous and progressive."

A special article on Dr. Marcus Bach by Dan L. Thropp, religious editor, published in Los Angeles Times, March 30, 1957, includes the Bahá'í faith among the religions Dr. Bach has studied. "With the collapse of schemes for improving the world through political devices," he said, "we are turning to an honest investigation of the eternal values and our relationship with them."

The Finnish-American Blue-White Book for 1957, a yearbook published in the Finnish language by Finnish Newspaper Co., Brooklyn, publishes a detailed article about the Faith based upon an approved Bahá'í text. Two Finnish-American Bahá'ís, Ida Hiltunen, Chicago, and Josephine Kruka, are mentioned at the end of the article.

A pamphlet entitled Some Current Religious Teachings on Biological Matters in the United States, by Phyllis C. Martin, Chatham College, Pittsburgh, reprinted from Proceedings of the Pennsylvania Academy of Science, Vol. XXX, 1956, lists Some Answered Questions as one of the references used. The author has sought to find religious teachings dealing with the origin of life, the origin of species, the place of man among the species, diet, surgery, marriage, etc.

The Vista, Central State College newspaper, Edmond, Okla., on March 14 ran a brief sketch of an Iranian Bahá'í student, Mohabat Sobhani, with a photograph of him showing the reporter some Bahá'í illustrations.

La Table Ronde, September 1956, a monthly review published in Paris, presents an article by Robert Amadan which devotes a paragraph to summarizing the Bahá'í Faith.

Prairie Club Bulletin, March 1957, which supplies information about weekend walking tours for members, for April 7, 1957, listed the Bahá'í Temple, the Sunday afternoon worship service, and a guided tour.

The Wilmette Park District has circulated an illustrated brochure on local parks and playgrounds. A photograph of Wilmette Harbor shows the Temple in the background.

A newspaper in Stavanger, Norway, has published an article devoted to the Bahá'í Faith under the title "Eastern Unity Religion That Is Spreading Over the World." Based on an interview with Mrs. Amelia Bowman, American Bahá'í pioneer, the article answers the questions: What Is Bahá'í? What Are the Bahá'í Ideas, and furnishes its readers with a very interesting summary of the present worldwide status of the Faith.

The Delta Trading Co., Ltd., of Tel Aviv, Israel, publishes a daily calendar for 1957 with full page illustration of the Shrine of the Báb. The calendar dates are given in English, French, and Spanish.

Bryce News, mimeographed house organ published by the patients of Bryce Hospital, Tuscaloosa, Ala., on March 23, 1957, devoted an article entitled "Bahá'í Dies" to the passing of George Stephens Fraim in Northport on March 16. His wife, Dr. Marie Fraim, is a psychiatrist and physician on the hospital staff.

The Ledger-Star, of Inkster, Mich., on February 28, 1957, announced a Bahá'í talk by Mrs. Lois Nochman, with photo. Mrs. Nochman was referred to as author of The Curtel Sonnets of Gerard Manley Hopkins, and was an instructor of English at Highland Park Junior College.

Radio Replies, Vol. III, a Catholic work published in St. Paul, Minn., refers to the Faith, concluding with this statement: "This strange religious aberration is winning many credulous souls who have lost their grip on such religion as they previously possessed, and are in search of a new one."

Ledger-Divwatch and Star, March 30, 1957, published in Norfolk-Portsmouth, Va., ran an extensive interview with Mrs. Behjat Arnold with a three-column photo of Mrs. Arnold seated in her home with a picture of the Master and a framed Greatest Name in the background. This interview was arranged after Mrs. Arnold had spoken to the Chesapeake Women's Club and its members had brought her talk to the attention of the editor. The reporter emphasized Mrs. Arnold's Persian background but made it possible for her to introduce the subject of the Faith. "When Bahá'u'lláh was imprisoned in the Great Prison of Acca, Palestine . . . the prophet sent for Mrs. Arnold's great grandparents. Though they were allowed to live in homes, they were still considered prisoners. Thus it was that Mrs. Arnold was born in Palestine.'"

A novel entitled The Valleys of the Assassins, by Freya Stark, a Penguin book, has a brief but favorable reference to the Faith on page 162.

The New York Times Book Review section, Sunday, March 10, 1957, carried a large advertisement of Marcus Bach's The Circle of Faith which includes the name of Shoghi Effendi as one of the “great figures of our time” interviewed by the author.

The Illinois Times, Negro paper published in Champaign, Ill., on March 26 announced the Bahá'í Friendship dinner given on March 23 at the University YMCA at which Prof. F. G. Banta of the University of Illinois, and George R. Brawley, Bahá'í, were the speakers.

The April 21 issue of the Sunday Star-Ledger of Newark, N.J., announced on its religion page the beginning of Ridván with a brief reference to the three Central Figures of the Faith.

The New York Sunday Mirror, March 31, 1957, published a photograph of Actress Lisa Monteel over the caption “Actress to Be a Bahá'í Bride.”

The photograph of the International Archives Building has now appeared in the Seattle Times of March 3.

The Pampa, Texas, Daily News, reporting on February 22 on State Legislature events, mentioned that a bill had been introduced to allow Bahá'í officers to perform marriage ceremonies and had been passed by the House.

AREA NEWS BULLETINS

The Area Teaching Conference held in Austin, Texas, on February 24 attracted over 20 Bahá'ís from Texas and Louisiana. The Charter of a Divine Civilization and a paper titled “Action for the Individual” were studied. A summary of the plans of the four Texas communities for extension teaching was presented, and consultation followed on the agenda theme “What You Want to Do to Further the Ten-Year Crusade.”

A series of public meetings on “A Common Faith: Basis of World Peace” has been conducted by the Galveston, Texas, group. Guest speakers gave talks on some of the world religions, and Bahá'í speakers presented the principles of the Muslim and Bahá'í Faiths. This series was preceded by a television interview with two Bahá'ís and one guest.

“Bahá’ís in Their Community,” “Bahá’ís in Their Non-Bahá’í Community of Everyday Life,” and “Our Attitude and What It Means” were the subjects for consultation at a New England Area Teaching Conference held at Worcester, Mass., on February 17.

An inspiring all-state dual adult and youth conference was held at Lakewood, Colo., on February 17. Mrs. Ruth Moffett conducted the morning session consultation on “Revitalization of the Home Front.” At the afternoon session local activity reports from seven communities were given, while the youth consulted on questions submitted by the National Youth Committee.

Six New Mexico communities were represented at a state conference held at Albuquerque on March 3.

Laramie, Wyo., Bahá'ís held 15 firesides during January, at two of which there were Indian guests, and 24 meetings of various types during February, including small but effective open meetings. One fireside was attended by 12 Navajos, including six children.

The literature container was designed in the shape of the Baha'i House of Worship, and was painted gold, with a glass front added to hold the pamphlets.

Regular weekly firesides at Greeley, Colo., brought ten new contacts in one month. Additional firesides have been held in non-Baha'i homes at the specific request of several new contacts, "as yet too shy to attend the regular gatherings."

-Haifa, June 3, 1957

Dear Bahá‘í Friends:
The beloved Guardian’s message, addressed to all Hands of the Cause and all National Assemblies, reveals the mysterious power of the Mani-ifestation, operating on its own time schedule, to protect the Faith of God. Terminated at last are those evil efforts to suppress the Divine Word which so long assailed Bahá‘u’lláh, the revered Master, and later our Leader and Head, Shoghi Effendi.

Now at last the sacred area constituting the Shrines and the spiritual and administrative World Center in the Holy Land has been purged of the presence of the Covenant-breakers. Pure and stainless, it symbolizes for Bahá’ís the origin and the unfolding of the World Faith destined to unify mankind in one religerion and one order; and for non-Bahá’ís their supreme challenge and fateful test.

Likewise this victory calls to all believers to arise, in deeper

-Haifa, June 4, 1957

Dear Bahá’í Friends:
The Victory announced by the beloved Guardian in his message of June 3 marks a turning-point in the evolution of the Bahá’í world community.

The present message, following so closely, calls upon the two institutions of the Faith, the Hands of the Cause and the National Assemblies, to assume greater responsibilities in prosecution of the Ten-Year Plan.

For each victory raises up new enemies and by successive victories the Faith of Baha'u'llah establishes itself throughout the world. As every religion born of God testified, the quality of faith is inseparable from struggle to save mankind from superstition, dogma, materialism, which are the dark shadows cast by those who turn their backs to the Sun.

The Institution of the Hands, Shoghi Effendi announces, is "now entering a new phase (in the) process (of the) unfoldment (of) its sacred mission."

To its responsibility for assisting National Spiritual Assemblies in their prosecution of the World Crusade the Guardian now adds that of watching over and insuring the protection of the Bahá'í Community in collaboration with these same National Assemblies.

The great historic achievements of the Faith, the Guardian points out, have inflamed the "unquenchable animosity (of its) Muslim opponents," "raised up (a) new set (of) adversaries" in Christendom, and "roused internal enemies, old (and) new Covenant-breakers (to) fresh attempts" to destroy the Cause of God.

The Guardian finds "evidences (of) increasing hostility without" and "persistent machinations within" which foreshadow "dire contests" destined to bring into complete opposition the Bahá'ís and the "forces (of) darkness, both secular (and) religious" which 'Abdu'l-Bahá plainly foretold.

Such a formidable world-wide struggle, as the Guardian states, call for "closer association (of the) Hands (of the) five continents (and the) bodies (of the) elected representatives (of the) national Bahá'í communities (the) world over (for) joint investigation" and the "adoption (of) wise, effective measures (to) counteract their treacherous schemes, protect (the) mass (of the) believers and arrest (the) spread (of their) evil influence."

He further adds: "Security (of our) precious Faith, preservation (of the) spiritual health (of the) Bahá'í communities ... fruition (of) its worldwide enterprises, fulfillment (of) its ultimate destiny" are directly dependent upon the discharge of their weighty responsibilities by the members of these two institutions.

While this message is primarily directed to the Hands of the Cause and the National Assemblies, the individual Bahá'í is also wholly involved. For this climax of resistance to the Promised One will, sooner or later, present each Bahá'í with some situation which will either demon-
Guardian Announces
Return of National Center in Tihran

In a cable received June 8, 1957, which directed our National Spiritual Assembly to cable the text to the other National Assemblies, the beloved Guardian stated: “Rejoice announce yet another victory won (in) cradle (of) Faith, swiftly following crushing defeat recently sustained (by) Covenant-breakers (in) Holy Land. National Hażratu’l-Quds (in) Tihrán (has been) returned, completing thereby (the) restitution (of) Bahá’í properties seized (at the) instigation (of) traditional enemies (in) Bahu’lláh’s native land.”

The same cable directed that the National Spiritual Assemblies, and the local Assemblies under their jurisdiction, cable the Sháh expressing their gratitude. All local Assemblies in the United States were immediately advised by letter.

The Guardian in a separate cable received at the same time directed that all National Assemblies are to avoid publicity concerning the restoration of this Hażratu’l-Quds. The same directive naturally applies to all local Assemblies, Committees and individual believers.

Individual Firesides

The following excerpt is taken from a letter written on behalf of the Guardian by the Assistant Secretary dated March 6, 1957, to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bennett of Butte, Mont. It is published as an incentive to all American Bahá’ís.

“The friends must realize their individual responsibility. Each must hold a Fireside in his or her home, once in 19 days, where new people are invited, and where some phase of the Faith is mentioned and discussed. If this is done with the intent of showing Bahá’í hospitality and love, then there will be results. People will become interested in ‘what’ you are interested in, and then be interested in studying. Individual firesides will bring the knowledge of the Faith to more people, under favorable circumstances, and thus constantly enrich its circle of friends, and finally its members. There is no substitute for the teaching work of the individual.”

Our Inescapable Responsibility

In response to the recommendation of the delegates to the Forty-Ninth Annual Convention, the National Spiritual Assembly is calling to the attention of every Bahá’í the following closing paragraphs from the “Report of the Secretary” (of the National Spiritual Assembly) published on pages 8 and 9 of the Bahá’í Annual Reports, 1955-1957, a copy of which was sent to every American believer with the May issue of Bahá’í News. The friends are requested to read these paragraphs carefully, to discuss them at an early Nineteen Day Feast and to relate them to the Guardian’s cable reply to the pledge contained in the message sent to him from the Convention. (See page 15, column 2, June Bahá’í News.)

Whatever tasks are allotted to the Bahá’ís of the United States during the next phase of the Ten Year Plan, the strengthening of the home front will be an essential requisite to our success as trustees of the Master’s Divine Plan.

At the root of this particular, long-term task lies the spiritualization of the individual Bahá’í.

In the Master’s era stalwart believers arose whose teaching classes and lectures established Bahá’í communities across the land. Upon their strong shoulders it sat for the mass of believers to lay their personal and community responsibilities. These great teachers answered the questions, knew the Bahá’í literature, courageously and eloquently proclaimed the Message, made the decisions. Aside from the beloved Master (and He was cut off during the years of the First World War) the element of authority, as in all primitive societies, existed by virtue of the influence emanating from the strong and active person.

Then followed the years when local and national institutions had to be established, replace with their actual authority the assumed authority of the teachers, and undergo a long process of development in order to acquire experience and capacity. During that period there was repression of personal initiative because personal initiative had never before been called upon to recognize a higher authority within the local and national community, and the boundaries of effective Bahá'í activity had not been defined. There was also repression of local Assembly initiative whenever Assemblies exceeded their powers or misdirected their efforts.

The call was raised for detailed and specific answers to all types of administrative situations. Believers wanted rule 1 for one problem and rule 7 for another, so that the mere application of a rule seemed all that was necessary.

At a certain point the Guardian interrupted this trend and pointed out that the institutions were not ends in themselves but instruments for the channeling of the spiritual forces of the Faith to the public. The Divine Plan was put into operation by the Guardian's First Seven Year Plan, followed by the Second Seven Year Plan, and then the Ten Year Plan of the World Crusade, 1953-1963.

No believer can now fail to realize that faith is an evolving, dynamic reality demonstrated in action and not a passive belief or passive membership in a community of fellow believers who listen to a talk, read prayers, contribute some funds, and then go their separate ways. For the dire state of civilization coincides with the challenging plans of the Guardian. The Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is the sole salvation of a stricken humanity.

All our talents, capacities, training and experience are needed today to help fulfill the divine Mission of the Faith. There are no repressions nor restrictions laid upon us when we walk the right path. Courage, initiative, intuition, emotion, knowledge, understanding—all we possess and are, in whatever measure, the Faith requires and Bahá'u'lláh expects.

Once knowing the few basic principles of administration, this knowledge becomes a habit we individual Bahá'ís can practice without conscious thought, and thus free ourselves of inhibition, fear, scorn and jealousy of other Bahá'ís, and throw ourselves wholeheartedly into service for the World Crusade. When every local Assembly harmoniously discharges its duties with devotion and justice; when every committee thinks only of its privilege of serving some particular aspect of community activity; when every individual Bahá'í realizes that he must unfold his God-given capacities and powers—then will our anxieties and burdens vanish and the world about us will be discerned as a starving orphan crying for food. Our contacts resist us because we resist the Spirit. Opportunities elude us because we have strayed from the path.

Now, as a new Bahá'í year opens may we not feel complete assurance that the Bahá'í community possesses every resource required for a far more energetic and determined teaching campaign than we have ever undertaken before. It has become the most elemental issue of all: our own relationship to the Manifestation of God.

ASSEMBLY ACTS ON CONVENTION RECOMMENDATIONS

The recommendations adopted by the delegates to the Forty-Ninth Annual Bahá'í Convention and referred to the National Spiritual Assembly for action were given careful consideration at the first two meetings of this body. Following is a report of the decisions and actions taken by the Assembly:

Action: This recommendation was acted on by the National Spiritual Assembly at its meeting following the Convention as reported in the June issue of BAHÁ'Í NEWS.

2. That the National Spiritual Assembly print those excerpts from the Guardian's messages which outline what the believers need to do to increase their capacity to teach and to deepen themselves in the Faith.

Action: The intent of this recommendation is being carried out in the steps being taken by the National Spiritual Assembly this year to revitalize the entire Bahá'í Community.

Summary of Teaching Needs

3. That each Assembly, group, and isolated believer in an area be encouraged to send to the Area Teaching Committee at the beginning of the year, a summary of their teaching needs.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly feels that Assemblies, groups, and individuals should submit their requests for such help at any time in the year and as far in advance as possible so that the Area Teaching Committee may be able to incorporate such assistance in its plans for the area.

4. That the National Spiritual Assembly stimulate all local Spiritual Assemblies to carry on extension teaching activities in cooperation with the Area Teaching Committee concerned and that this activity be continued and not sporadic.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly has for many years encouraged this type of teaching service on the part of every local Assembly that feels able to undertake it.

5. That the Area Teaching Committees encourage special projects in states or smaller areas where Assemblies need assistance and isolated believers need fellowship and stimulation to teach.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly points out that this has always been a function of the Area Teaching Committee and approves encouraging groups and isolated believers to cooperate in organizing and carrying out teaching activities in their respective areas.

"Philosophy of Education"

6. That the statement by the National Bahá'í Child Education Committee on the "Philosophy of Education" be made available in printed form to the believers, either in Child's Way or in some other medium that will give the widest possible circulation.

Action: The National Child Education Committee has been authorized to prepare this material for circulation throughout the American Bahá'í Community at an early date.

7. That the National Child Education Committee be requested to provide additional teaching material, such as stories from the Dawn-Breakers and material from The Epistle to the Son of the Wolf; graded to various age levels so that the children do their own reading.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly calls attention to the fact that there already exists one book of stories from the Dawn-Breakers for children. However, this recommendation has been referred to the National Child Education Committee for study and recommendation to the National Assembly.

8. That stories which have been appearing in Child’s Way be compiled in some manner and made available to the believers as a collection.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to remind the friends that the National Bahá’í Child Education Committee will welcome subscriptions for Child’s Way so that the friends themselves can compile their own files on this type of material.

9. That Child’s Way be sent directly to Bahá’í children without charge.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly feels that this recommendation is impracticable at this time.

Children’s Classes

10. That Bahá’í Communities be urged to sponsor Bahá’í children’s classes open to both Bahá’í and non-Bahá’í children and that children in outlying areas where such classes are not available be invited to attend.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly encourages this type of activity wherever it is possible.

11. That the National Bahá’í Child Education Committee make a survey among youth between the ages of 15 and 21 as to the type of Bahá’í education they have received, and solicit their recommendations with a view to planning a course of study and preparation for declaration by Bahá’í youth.

Action: This recommendation is being referred by the National Spiritual Assembly to the Child Education Committee for study and recommendation.

12. That the agendas for the State Conventions and inter-community teaching conferences include events for children of the age group between 10 and 15 years.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly feels that this is a matter which can be arranged by the host city wherever such arrangements seem desirable.

13. That the Child Education Committee solicit songs and poems which will help in teaching history to children of the younger age levels.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly reminds the friends that the National Bahá’í Child Education Committee welcomes materials of this type.

Political Controversies

14. That the National Spiritual Assembly clarify for all the believers the reasons why Bahá’ís, either individually or as administrative bodies, do not take specific positions on pending legislation and current political controversies.

Action: The clarifying statement requested by this recommendation will be published in an early issue of Bahá’í News.

15. That the National Spiritual Assembly again call the attention of the Bahá’ís to that portion of its annual report appearing on pages 8 and 9 of the Annual Reports, under the heading "Our Inescapable Responsibility," and urge the believers to study and act upon it.

Action: The action on this recommendation appears on page 4 of this issue of Bahá’í News.

16. That the National Spiritual Assembly clarify the relationship between Local Spiritual Assemblies and Area Teaching Committees and make that clarification available to the believers.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly recommends that the believers refer to the statement of functions assigned to the Area Teaching Committees as published in the annual Bahá’í Directory. The aim of the Area Teaching Committee is to offer teaching service and the Local Spiritual Assemblies, particularly the smaller ones, should gratefully accept such service, while the larger Assemblies should participate actively in extension and circuit teaching work and Area conferences.

Convention Reports

17. That when delegates give their reports on the Convention they include the reading of the Guardian’s message and make every effort to share with the friends the spirit of the Convention; that in those states from which no delegates or visitors attended the Convention, a delegate or visitor from some other state be invited to give the report.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly records its hope that all of the believers who attended the Convention have shared with the friends in all localities the inspiration and consultation of the Convention and that they made a special effort to reach those states which were not represented by delegates or visitors.

18. That the National Spiritual Assembly gather together a group of experienced teachers and request them to consult on a coordinated plan of teaching for the American Bahá’ís; that the recommendations of this group be submitted to the National Spiritual Assembly for study and review, and that the portions of the program which may be approved by the National Spiritual Assembly be offered to the believers through the American National Teaching Committee.

Action: The National Spiritual Assembly recognizes the merit of this recommendation, but feels that the primary urgency at this time is re-emphasis of the Guardian’s repeated direct appeals to the individual believers and their response to his call for dispersal at home and abroad. However, the Assembly will consider this recommendation again at a later time.

LETTERS RECOUNT INSPIRATION GIVEN BY CONVENTIONS

Letters coming from the pioneers since this spring’s Conventions reflect the immeasurable which these historic assemblies have lent to the march of the Crusade, as well as the inspiration received by those who attended. The Committee wishes to share some excerpts from a few of these letters.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tucker, Cordoba, Argentina

"... our historic Convention in Buenos Aires was thrilling and inspiring. The Guardian’s representative, Hand of the Cause ‘Ali Muhammad Varqā, was a beautiful example of devotion and humility and we were doubly blessed because the Convention was small and we were able to become well acquainted with him. We almost feel that Mar­gery McCormick, representative of the National Assembly of the United States, was sent just for us; she did so much to uplift our spirits . . . we shall be forever grateful for her visit.”

Cora Oliver,
Belize, British Honduras

“How good it was for us to have the visit of Mabel Sneider after the Convention in Panama — and to­morrow we are to have the bounty of receiving our beloved Guardian’s representative, Mr. Khádem. The friends here are anticipating his visit with considerable interest and understanding so we expect extremely happy days ahead. We do believe that they are aware that theirs is a special bounty which others in vir­gin areas are not enjoying. May we all arise with greater zeal and de­vor­tion as a result of this precious gift.”

George Haley,
San Pedro Sula, Honduras

“It seems impossible that over a month has elapsed since we were in Panama . . . Mr. Khádem’s visit was marvelous, and even though Honduras was in a state of war and we held our public meeting in a pri­vate home without any advertising, we had almost 30 in attendance. The tempo of activities has not decreased and we continue to be very happy with the possibilities. We have three classes each week for different stages of study, but most of our faith­ful Baha’is come to all of them, and, bless them, usually bring a con­tact to a deepening class and sometimes still bring them to strictly Baha’i meetings.”

Three new pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Hoeppner and Mr. Joseph Carroll, are now en route to their posts, and more offers are coming to the Committee. Anyone consider­ing pioneering, or who can make a teaching trip in the Western Hemi­sphere is asked to write to Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee, Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, secre­tary, 73 College Road West, Prince­ton, New Jersey.

Members of the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela, elected at the first National Convention held in Lima, Peru, on April 22-24, 1957, with Horace Holley, Hand of the Cause, present as the Guardian’s representative.

FORM NATIONAL ASSEMBLY IN LIMA

For most of the delegates and visit­ing Baha’is the Convention began Friday evening, April 19th, with the reception at the Haziratull-Quds of Lima where old friends met again and others met for the first time.

April 20th and 21st were set aside for pre-convention school, which con­sisted of four sessions each preceded by prayers and meditations in Span­ish and English.

The first class encompassed a study of The Kitáb-i-Iṣqán. The follow­ing points were brought out in this course: The Kitáb-i-Iṣqán proves the Station of the Bab and Baha’u’llah and discusses the pur­pose of the Prophets and Their teachings. The primary requisites for one who seeks the City of Certi­tude; the real and true guides to reach that City were discussed, and the sixteen points touched by The Kitáb-i-Iṣqán as written by the Guardian in God Passes By were briefly mentioned.

The important principles of Baha’i Administration were stressed such as: attending meetings, revision of voting lists before elections, the work of the Regional Teaching Commit­tees. The functions of the National Spiritual Assembly were studied Sun­day morning. A discussion was held on the importance of harmony and unity, obedience to the Guardian’s suggestions; the Hands of the Cause; committees and their responsibili­ties, enrollment of new believers, voting rights.

On Sunday afternoon the two Per­sian delegates, Djalal Eghrari and Cyrus Monadjemi from Brazil told of the early history of the Faith in Persia and its significance. In the evening the Feast of Ridván was celebrated. Mr. Horace Holley, Hand of the Cause, and the Guardian’s repre­sentative to this convention, told the story of the Announcement of Baha’u’llah as the Promised One in the Garden of Ridván in Bagh­dad. Mr. Holley then appointed each of the friends with the Beloved Guard­ian’s gift of Attar of Roses. The scent of roses permeated the room and an atmosphere of love and a great peace could be felt by all. After dinner on Sunday evening the English speaking Baha’is gathered for the reading of the Guardian’s message in English.

On Monday, April 22, the Conven­tion was convened by Mr. Holley, who told us how this year was designated by the Guardian for the formation of many regional National Spiritual As­semblies and the Guardian asked the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States to convene nine of the conventions for the formation of these Assemblies. Mr. Holley then read the Guardian’s message to the Convention, which was received with great love and appreciation.

There were 26 delegates attending the Convention and approximately 35 visiting friends from the five countries. Margot Worley was elected chairman of the Convention and Dorothy Campbell, secretary. Fifty-eight letters of greeting from Bahá’í Spiritual Assemblies throughout the world were then read before the Convention and a committee was named to write up a message from the Convention to the Guardian.

Mr. Holley presented the Guardian’s beautiful gift albums for the newly-formed regional National Spiritual Assembly. These albums were received with great interest and love. One contains photographs of all the Haźiratu’l-Quds purchased and the other pictures of the Sacred Shrines and Temples, some of which are to be constructed. These albums are made of beautiful hand-tooled Italian leather.

The National Spiritual Assembly reported that five new local Spiritual Assemblies had been formed in the past year, making a total of 18 local Spiritual Assemblies in the five countries of South America. The National Treasurer’s report was presented and the assembled delegates resolved to stress the need for contributing to the National Fund in their respective communities. The Guardian’s message was then read by the whole Convention with emphasis placed on the new goals.

The Convention was opened on the second day with a feeling of dedication and dignity and a resolve for action. Mr. Holley, Hand of the Cause, lent his assistance in answering several questions concerning administrative procedure. With prayerful meditation the members of the new National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’í of Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela were then elected and later organized into their respective offices as follows: Margot Worley, chairman; Edmund Miessler, vice-chairman; Dorothy Campbell, corresponding secretary; Gayle Woolson, recording secretary; Jorge Bejar, treasurer; and Eve Nicklin, Mercedes Sanchez, Djalal Eghrari, and Cyrus Monadjem.

At noon several delegates representing each of the five countries were interviewed and questioned about the Faith on a radio program in Lima. The interview consisted of direct, concise questions which were answered clearly, briefly and warmly.

The delegates from Brazil exuberantly requested the National Spiritual Assembly of the five countries to ask the Guardian if he would approve Brazil’s forming their own National Spiritual Assembly in 1958, as they felt they would be ready to accept this responsibility at that time. This created great joy in the Convention and admiration for the valor and accomplishment manifested by Brazil.

Detailed reports were presented by all national committees. In the evening an excellent talk, “The Unity of Mankind,” was given by Mr. Horace Holley, Hand of the Cause, in the Haźiratu’l-Quds. There was a good attendance and the talk stimulated questions and interest among non-Bahá’ís. It gave inspiration to all attending and insight to the friends of a way to present the Bahá’í message. The last day of the Convention was largely devoted to the presentation of recommendations of the delegates to the new Regional National Assembly. A spirit of earnest striving filled the Convention and 76 recommendations were presented with much discussion and consultation.

Mr. Holley addressed the Convention at its close, saying that the delegates had performed a great service to the Cause of God by electing a new National Assembly to unify the friends and to stimulate them to perform the work which must be done in these five great countries under the guidance of the Guardian.

He called on them for their continued devotion and their own obedience to their National Assembly. Mr. Holley’s departure was accompanied with joy and sorrow. His love, insight, humility and dignity were a living lesson for all assembled. The members of the new Regional National Spiritual Assembly, the Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís alike, escorted Mr. Holley to the airport to see him off.

All Bahá’ís attending the Convention extend their heart-felt thanks to the Guardian for sending Mr. Horace Holley as his representative to this Convention of Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela. His love and presence touched and opened every heart there.

Central America and Mexico
NEW ASSEMBLY
FORMED IN PANAMA

The National Convention of Central America and Mexico was inaugurated under the inspired guidance of the distinguished representative of the beloved Guardian, Ḍhikr’u’lláh Khádem, Hand of the Cause; the representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, Robert McLaughlin; and the representative of the Hands of the Cause of America, Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, member of the Auxiliary Board.

dor, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Panama. In addition there were many visitors from other countries.

The convention opened with a brilliant reception on April 21 in the beautiful salon of the Hotel International, the site of the convention. Among those attending the opening was an official representative of the Panama government, Juvenal Castrellon Adames.

The business sessions of the convention opened on April 22, with Mr. McLaughlin presiding at the election of the convention officers. The delegates elected Artemus Lamb as chairman, and Esteban Canales as secretary.

Then the Guardian's representative, Mr. Khádem, Hand of the Cause, presented the message from the Guardian to the Latin American conventions, which was immediately translated and read to the audience. The Guardian's message to all the conventions was also translated and presented to the delegates for study and consultation.

The spirit of the delegates during their deliberations on the Guardian's messages was beautiful. There was a great display of courage and strength as the delegates faced the challenge outlined in the new Six-Year Plan.

A new spirit of dedication was pledged in the following cable sent to our beloved Guardian: "Hearts overflowing deepest gratitude great

With this new spirit of dedication we begin a new phase of extensive work which will bring great victories for the Faith in the Central American territory.

SECOND CONVENTION HELD IN KAMPALA

The spirit of convention here is very much the same as everywhere else, and there is the same wonderful, uplifting feeling that brings everyone joyously together.

All through our convention it is necessary to have three translators interpreting every word of the proceedings. The general feeling was different again from the convention of last year, which had been the very first in Central and East Africa. Then there had been the wonder and excitement of something quite new and the thrill of meeting overseas visitors. This time there were no such visitors and, although many of the same faces were to be seen, a much more businesslike atmosphere prevailed; these people were here with problems to voice and ideas to share.

The convention opened with prayers and readings which had been chosen by the Kenya delegates, after which the Chairman of the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly addressed the gathering, welcoming them to the convention.

The roll was called, and it was found that 42 out of the 76 delegates were present. Two others came later. Following this, the Chairman explained the procedure for electing convention officers, and voting commenced. The results were that Ali Nakhjavani, chairman of the outgoing National Assembly, would serve as chairman of the convention, and Hassan Sabri would be its secretary.

The Chairman then told the delegates of the wonderful Ridván message from the Guardian, copies of it were given to the English-speaking delegates, and a summary in the vernacular languages was promised.

A special cable from the Guardian to the National Assembly was read, as follows:

“DELIGHTED URGE GREATER CONCENTRATION COURSE CURRENT YEAR MULTIPLICATION CENTRES INCREASE NUMBER BELIEVERS. FERVENTLY SUPPLICATING SIGNAL VICTORIES, SHRINES.”

Following this the revered Hand of the Cause, Musa Banání, spoke in Persian of his appreciation that so many delegates had come such long distances; he spoke of the Guardian’s message and his wish that all the delegates should read it, study it, and realize the great expectations which the Guardian has of us all; he stressed the importance of teaching so that the number of believers, tribes, centres, and Assemblies would increase, and added that he was hoping and praying that in their consultations the delegates would adopt useful decisions which would promote the teaching work; he urged the delegates, when they returned, to become promoters of the teaching work in their localities, and said that this was how all would attain the good pleasure of our well-loved Guardian. He finished by saying that the Guardian was very happy with Africa, and prayed that he might continue in his happiness in our work.

National Assembly Report

The report of the National Spiritual Assembly followed, and contained the exciting news that 21 new Assemblies had been formed in the region, 9 in Kenya and 12 in Uganda, raising the total number of Assemblies to 82.

Eighty-nine new centres had been opened to the Faith, raising the total number of places in the region where Bahá'ís are living to 341, while over 500 new believers raise the total in the territory to 1909.

During the afternoon the cable to the Guardian was presented and approved as follows:

"44 DELEGATES 19 VISITORS ASSEMBLED KAMPALA BLESSED BY PRESENCE HAND CAUSE SEND LOVING GREETINGS HEARTFELT THANKS CONVENTION MESSAGE GRATITUDE YOUR BOUNTIFUL PRAYERS JOINING SUCCESSES ACHIEVED CONSULTING BASIS YOUR BLESSED GUIDANCE."

Next an analysis of the Guardian's Ridván message was read and translated. The delegates then consulted upon it, and in the ensuing discussions 21 out of the 29 resolutions passed were related to the teaching goals set by the beloved Guardian.

Monday, voting day, began with readings on elections and prayers for the guidance of the delegates, after which the names of the tellers were announced and instructions for voting given. Some delegates who had been unable to attend had sent their ballots by post and these, together with those placed in the box of this day, totalled 64.

At the beginning of the second session of the morning the delegates were delighted to find that a prisoner who had just been released from Kitalya Prison Farm had arrived, bringing with him a message of greeting from the 25 other Bahá'ís still detained, and a letter from the Bahá'í who had first spread the Faith in this prison.

The letter was read, and the released prisoner asked to speak. The hearts of all who were present were most touched by his words when he spoke of his surprise and perplexity at finding himself welcomed in such a gathering immediately after his release from prison.

He told the delegates how grateful he and his fellow-prisoners had been for the coming of the Light, and left everybody with the impression that great good was being done in this prison, where the authorities had already allowed the Bahá'ís to keep the Holy Days.

Shortly after this the Guardian's reply to the convention was received as follows:

"DEEPLY APPRECIATE MESSAGE URGE INTENSIFICATION TM SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENTS FERVENTLY SUPPLICAING RICHEST BLESSINGS MIGHTY VICTORIES, DEEPEST LOVE."

Election Results

At the afternoon session the tell-ers arrived with their report, and announced the results of the election: Ali Nakhjavani, Philip Hains-worth, Oloro Epyeru, Hassan Sabri, Aziz Yazdi, Max Kanyerezi, Kolonario Oule, Irene Bennett, and Javan Gutosi. Of these, the last three are new members.

The announcement of the election results was followed by a display of the Temple designs, with a talk and questions on the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár. Photographs of the new National Spiritual Assembly were taken, and a second small committee was appointed for the drafting of a second cable to the Guardian. This cable was read, ap­proved, and dispatched, and the convention was closed with a prayer.

The presence of all the members of the new National Spiritual Assembly at the convention enabled them to meet on two evenings during that time and elect their officers: Ali Nakhjavani, chairman; Philip Hains­worth, secretary; Aziz Yazdi, vice­chairman; Hassan Sabri, treasurer. In addition, Irene Bennett was appointed recording secretary, and Hassan Sabri librarian.

The National Spiritual Assembly was also able to appoint the three main working committees, and the Bahá'í Temple and Literature Reviewing Committees, deal with all urgent matters, and approve the budget which had been recommend­ed by the convention.

CONVENTION DELEGATES VISIT TEMPLE SITE

We were standing at the top of "our" hill, the hill on which the Mother Temple of Africa is to be built, feeling very small and awed and humble, watching a procession of little white-shirted figures picking its way up the steep winding path. We had passed them a few moments before, in a car that had bucked like a mad horse, the access road had been so muddy and full of deep holes. As the procession drew nearer the approach road to the land, we could hear that they were singing, and as they closed we heard that it was "Alláh'u'Abhá, Alláh'u'Abhá . . ." Quite spontaneously, as they had set foot on the Bahá'í land, they had begun to chant this.

These were the delegates to the Central and East African second convention, paying their first visit to the Temple land, and when they arrived, the Unity Prayer was sung, a prayer was chanted in Persian, prayers read in English and Ateso, and once again the delegates sang “Alláh'u'Abhá . . .”

Then they began to look at the land. On a small rise there is an enormous mvuli tree, which is going to remain there, and which will be almost as high as the Temple itself. The Temple will be built so that the door facing Haifa will look over landscaped gardens and through a valley where no buildings are yet to be seen.

The other side of the Temple faces Kampala, so that, as one of the visitors said, you can turn your back on the world and look towards Haifa.

Looking across the city, on the different hills surrounding it, are the seat of learning for East Africa, Makerere College, the hospital, the Governor's Lodge, the weather station, the Cathedral, all of which can be seen from “our” land, and from which the Temple, when built, will be visible.

The architect paid a special visit to the site at this time to explain something of the plans to the delegates, and to answer any questions.

This was very thrilling for everybody and we left the site feeling excited and uplifted, and hardly able to wait for the time when the Temple would rise into the blue African sky—a shining symbol that our beloved Faith is indeed established in the hearts of our African brothers.

SCHOOLS STIMULATE GROWTH OF FAITH

In a drive to implement the Guardian’s plea to increase the number of believers and centers, the Central and East African National Spiritual Assembly has encouraged the holding of schools which would be designed to deepen as well as to teach.

These schools were of two kinds: the first was of the weekend type initiated during the English Six-Year Plan, organized to commence late on Saturday afternoon with an opening devotional program and an initial class, followed by dinner and an evening of social activity to enable those attending to enjoy each other’s company.

Sunday morning and part of Sunday afternoon was devoted to more classes, panel discussions, demonstrations of the various procedures of Bahá’í administrative life, such as elections and consultations, and to question and answer sessions. They terminated with a devotional.

The second type was for more experienced Bahá’ís selected by the teaching committees as being suitable for training as teachers. Those chosen had to be willing and able to give up some of their time to travelling around their districts and passing on to other Bahá’ís and new believers what they had learned at the school.

Sessions were planned to include history, administration and law, and practical demonstrations of how Assembly meetings, Feasts, and elections were conducted. This particular type of school was intended to alleviate the severe manpower shortage by providing the region with a number of African Bahá’ís well-versed in their Faith.

Put into practice, both types of school proved to be most successful, there having been three week-long training schools and seventeen weekend schools.

At the end of each of the training schools, consultations were held between teachers and students to discover whether any improvement might be made and whether those attending felt that they had gained from the experience.

It was generally felt by all concerned that a great deal of good had been done and that every effort should be made in the coming year to increase both the number of schools and the number of students attending them.

Of the 17 weekend schools, 13 were held in Uganda, three in Kenya and one in Tanganyika. In many cases the organization of the physical arrangements was left to the local believers themselves, who were re-
Members of the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the Greater Antilles, elected at the National Convention at Kingston, Jamaica, on April 22, 1957.

All delegates from other countries had to surmount great difficulties to attend. This brought a strong spirit of sacrifice and dedication, which was deepened by the inspiring messages received from our beloved Guardian. All hearts were filled to overflowing with the joy of the privilege of participation in this glorious task.

The convention was opened by Dr. Katherine True, representing the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, who served as temporary chairman until convention officers could be elected. Dr. True's first action was to introduce her mother, Mrs. Corinne True, Hand of the Cause, serving as the Guardian's representative at the convention.

Mrs. True, after greeting the delegates and friends, asked that the Guardian's message be read by her daughter, Mrs. Arna Perron.

Next Dr. True presented the gifts to the Bahá'ís of the Greater Antilles from the Guardian, exquisitely bound books containing photographs of the Hazíratú'l-Quds and Maḥríqú'l-Adhkár.

Following the roll call of delegates, permanent convention officers were elected: W. A. W. Mitchell, chairman; and Mrs. Dee Worth, secretary.

NATIONAL CONVENTION HELD IN JAMAICA

Our first National Convention, establishing the National Spiritual Assembly of the Greater Antilles, was held in Kingston, Jamaica, on April 22-24, 1957. It was one of great inspiration and loving cooperation.

The Jamaican believers showered everyone with love and kindness, and were deeply grateful for the privilege of serving as hosts to the convention. Their gentle devotion and sacrifices were an inspiration to everyone present, and the spiritual power poured upon the meetings will never be forgotten.
message to the Guardian submitted the following text for a cablegram, which was approved and dispatched:

"Your divinely inspired message, heart-felt visit revered Hand Cause Corinne True, precious gifts all received with over-flowing hearts. United dedicated determination fulfill goals. Supplicating prayers, deepest love." First Bahá'í Convention Greater Antilles.

On the second morning of the convention came the election of the first National Spiritual Assembly. Dr. True spoke on the importance of the election, pointing out that this was the primary purpose of the convention, and a most solemn occasion. After the reading of prayers, the ballots were cast.

During the counting of the ballots, Mrs. Corinne True, Hand of the Cause, anointed all present with attar of rose, sent by the Guardian, and then spoke of the miracle of the presence of the Bahá'ís there, under the shade of the Guardian's name, and of the fulfillment of the Christian prophecies in the advent and teachings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Results of the election were later announced, with the following membership of the National Spiritual Assembly, listed with their officers: W. A. W. Mitchell, chairman; Elizabeth Cheney, vice-chairman; Mrs. Dee Worth, secretary; Sheila Rice Wray, treasurer; Randolph Fitz-Henley, recording secretary; and Eustace Bailey, Circe Brantome, Celestina Perez, and Juana Ortuno.

Many messages of acclamation from national and local Assemblies were read to the convention, and there was valuable consultation on the Guardian's messages.

All of these activities, the beautiful words of our beloved Hand of the Cause, Mrs. Corinne True, the receiving of the gifts from the Guardian, the anointing with the attar of rose, and the letters of acclamation, brought deep inspiration and a stronger realization of our unity in the divine Administrative Order, as we strive here in the Antilles to establish another Pillar.

TOKYO CONVENTION ELECTS FIRST NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Two stirring messages from the Guardian, the presence of two Hands of the Cause of God, and greetings from Bahá'í Assemblies, groups, and individuals in many parts of the world, brought to the Convention of the Bahá'ís of North East Asia, meeting at the University Club in Tokyo April 27, 28 and 29, 1957, a bounteous joy from which overflowed a devotion and dedication apparent throughout the meeting.
First National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of North East Asia, elected at the first National Convention held in Tokyo, Japan, on April 27-29, 1957.

The knowledge that in this Pacific area, as assured by the Guardian, "Bahá'í exploits bid fair to outshine the feats achieved in any other ocean, and indeed in every continent of the globe," gave to this gathering also a sense of urgency, of that "The time is now," and "We must get going fast."

Without doubt, the Guardian's messages were the highlights of this historic convention. The teaching session which preceded it, the prayers in four languages with which each session opened, the stimulation and inspiration which radiated from the Hands of the Cause, Djalâl Khâzeh and Miss Agnes Alexander; the anointing of the former of the 80 believers present with the attar of rose sent from the Guardian; the roll call of the delegates; the formation of the new Assembly and the election of its officers; the splendid publicity in Japan's leading newspapers; the thoughtful deliberations, and the presentation of gifts inaugurating the National Fund—all were significant phases of the convention, but it rose to its greatest heights when the two messages from Haifa were read and discussed. Their contents and portents lifted the hearts of the delegates and others there assembled, and gave them a thrilling awareness, first, of goals accomplished, and second, responsibility in the tasks ahead.

The opening words of the Guardian's message, "With feelings of exultation, joy and pride I hail the convocation of this history-making convention of the Bahá'ís of North East Asia, paving the way for the emergence of a Regional Spiritual Assembly with an area of jurisdiction embracing Japan, Korea, Formosa, Macao, Hong Kong, Hainan Island and Sakhalin Island," stirred the hearts of all present with the realization of the greatness of this moment and the purpose for which they had assembled.

Then came the beloved Guardian's recognition of this event as the culmination of a process initiated half a century ago in the capital city of Japan, under the watchful care and direct inspiration of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. "Such a consummation cannot fail to lend a tremendous impetus to its onward march in the entire Pacific Ocean. . . . " Next the Guardian paid tribute to the members of the American Bahá'í community for their part in promoting the interests of the Faith in Japan and its neighboring islands.

Six-Year Plan

There then followed the Guardian's appeal to signalize the birth of this new assembly through the initiation of a subsidiary Six-Year Plan. In his review of the 11 goals assigned by the Guardian the devoted Hand of the Cause, Mr. Khâzeh, said: "One of the goals is to increase the centers. We should not be satisfied with the 21 or 22 groups we have, but we should increase very fast . . . and we should incorporate the different Assemblies as soon as possible . . .; also we should get the certificate for the right to perform marriages . . . Now that we have an Assembly in North East Asia, we should have a strong fund with support from all the Assemblies . . . also a summer school . . . also a plot of land for the first Masir-qul-Adhkár . . . and we should give strong financial support to the Fund . . . It is not for us to spend our money much for ourselves and a little for the Cause, but much for the Cause, and a little for ourselves, in the way the Guardian does. . . ." Upon the heights reached from the reading of the specific message to this convention on Saturday morning, came the reading in the afternoon of the Guardian's other message to the 24 Bahá'í conventions being held simultaneously. This message, following so closely upon the one to their own area, left the listeners fairly breathless, astonished, and excited.

There was a special moment of reverence as the Hand of the Cause, Mr. Djalâl Khâzeh, touched each of those present with the attar of rose, saying as he did so that he was spreading the fragrance of love from the Guardian, and also the fragrance of the Cause all over the area.

Then he offered his sincere congratulations to "the daughter of the Kingdom," Miss Agnes Alexander, upon her elevation to the rank of Hand of the Cause, and he repeated that part of a Tablet written by 'Abdu'l-Bahá wherein He said of Miss Alexander: "If she had founded an empire, it would not be as great as this empire, for this is eternal glory."

"The convention on the second day was devoted to discussion of the goals in North East Asia, and the election of the new Assembly. In opening the discussion period, Miss Linfoot stated that the Guardian had emphasized the importance of the believers settling in the northern islands of Japan. "If we scatter, as the Guardian wishes us to do, and make more assemblies, then we will have a solid foundation for this Regional Spiritual Assembly."

The magnitude of the teaching tasks and the vast extent of the area under the jurisdiction of this new assembly called forth much serious consultation on how to proceed most effectively in the six short years left before 1963.

Accomplishments Reviewed

Preceding the Assembly election, the Hand of the Cause, Mr. Kházeh, addressed the delegates in the name of the Guardian whom he represented upon this occasion. He reviewed the accomplishments of the Faith in the last 35 years and spoke lovingly of the part played by the Knights and heroes of the Faith who came to Japan and the surrounding areas in fulfillment of the Ten Year Crusade.

Then followed the historic act of electing the nine members of this new pillar of the future Universal House of Justice. The spiritual atmosphere in which the delegates carried out this responsibility, created by the reading of prayers and appropriate selections from the Writings, was sustained during the writing of the ballots by the continuing silent prayers of the visitors.

National Assembly Elected

The members of the new Spiritual Assembly and the officers whom they elected are: William Maxwell, chairman; Hiroyaso Takano, vice-chairman; Yadullah Rafaat, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Barbara Sims, recording secretary; Noureddin Montazi, treasurer; Miss Agnes Alexander, Philip Marangella, Ataullah Moghbel, and Michitoshi Zenimoto. The election officers elected at the opening session, were Philip Marangella, chairman and Barbara Sims, secretary.

Many greetings had come to the new Assembly. On behalf of the beloved Guardian, Mr. Kházeh presented two handsomely bound photograph albums, one consisting of pictures of the Bahá’í holy places, including the architects’ drawings of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkár to be erected in Sydney, Kampala, Frankfurt, and on Mount Carmel.

The other album was of the Ḥaziratu’l-Quds already acquired in the Ten-Year Plan. Letters of acclaim were read from the National Spiritual Assemblies round the world, all preserved for the national archives in a beautiful red leather book presented by the members of the Asia Teaching Committee of the United States.

There then followed a most moving demonstration of love and generosity; delegates and friends arose in quick succession, and presented their gifts.

This session of spontaneous giving epitomized the spirit of dedication which prevailed throughout the convention, and which was expressed in the message sent to the Guardian on the opening day, "Profoundest gratitude presence Hands and manifold bounties. Renewing dedication sacred tasks. Earnestly beseeching prayers. Deepest love." In response the Guardian cabled, "Deeply appreciate message. Welcome dedication delegates, tasks ahead. Fer­vently supplicating richest blessings. Deepest love." —CYNTHIA OLSON

2ND ANNUAL CONVENTION
MEETS IN CAIRO

On April 27, 1957, 30 delegates, representing nine nationalities, gathered together at the National Headquarters in Cairo to discuss ways and means for the dissemination of the heavenly Divine Principles in the nine localities under the jurisdiction of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Hiroshima, Japan, formed on April 21, 1957.
The Baha'is of North East Africa, which extend from Tripoli at the extreme north to Mogadiscio and Socatra at the other extreme ends.

The assembled delegates, humbly kneeling, expressed to the beloved Guardian, through ethereal waves, their loyal devotion, seeking the Guardian's prayers at the Sacred Shrines for abundant lasting confirmations to serve the Cause of God upon earth.

This humble prayer was answered in the following inspiring words: "Deeply appreciate message, urge redouble efforts, attainment goals Plan. Fervently supplicating abundant blessings." Shoghi

Guardian's Message Read

The convention, in session from April 28 to 30, 1957, was blessed with the Ridván Message of our most beloved Guardian which, in most spiritually laden and emphatic words, pointed out to every individual the stupendous responsibility that is laid upon him in his or her capacity as an avowed follower of the great Baha'i Principles, the sole panacea for a perturbed and ailing world.

It was a most inspiring scene to watch the exchange of greetings, in various forms, between the African, European, Asian, and American members of the convention—a real rose garden, each spiritual flower giving out its aromatic emanations and variegated colour.

The inspiration of the beloved Guardian from the Holy Land created an atmosphere of peace of heart and composure of mind enabling the sincere well-wishers of human society to deliberate, with greater depth, upon the methods of teaching and guidance of the many souls who are anxiously awaiting the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

It is interesting to note that the first National Spiritual Assembly for the Baha'is of Egypt was established in 1924 and was incorporated in 1936, a duration of 12 years. It took a period of another 12 years to amend the articles of association to include the Sudan.

But in view of the divinely ordained acceleration bestowed upon the holy Ten-Year Crusade, the amended incorporation of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of North East Africa took only 12 months to be consummated. Measures for this incorporation were taken immediately the National Spiritual Assembly was constituted in May 1956 and was finally completed on April 10, 1957.

It was not easy to achieve this end; lack of sympathy, sectarian prejudices, fanaticism, and other forms of embarrassments were strongly leagued to check the realization of this goal, but the dynamic power of the Cause of God mustered invisible forces from the Abha Kingdom to untie this Gordian knot.

New Name Acknowledged

The convention was doubly rejoiced to learn from the copy of a letter dated September 21, 1956, No. Pu. 160(1-1-29) from the United Nations, Section for Non-Governmental Organization Department of Public Information, acknowledging receipt of advice about the change of name of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Egypt and Sudan to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of North East Africa.

Our heartfelt prayer is that each one of us may deeply appreciate the words of our most beloved Guardian incorporating same into our daily life. "I feel that the dominating purpose inspiring the assembled friends, delegates, and visitors alike, should be a two-fold one. The first is a challenge to the individual, the second a collective responsibility." —Mirza Badi Bushiri

ONTARIO SUMMER CONFERENCE DATES ANNOUNCED

The Ontario Summer Conference will be held on August 10-17 at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, Ontario.

Miss Jean Smith, 213 Geneva Street, S. Catherines, Ontario, will send further information upon request.
Recognizing the growing importance of presenting the Faith effectively to young people in school, the National Spiritual Assembly has appointed a Bahá’í College Bureau, with responsibility for coordinating and expediting all Bahá’í teaching work done in universities, colleges, junior colleges and trade schools.

Since this is a long-term project, the committee must first collect and organize the necessary background information before it can begin its broader program. To help it get started on this important work, the committee requests all Bahá’ís to send, at their earliest convenience, any information they may have concerning the following:

1. Bahá’í teaching or contact work done in any school above the high school level, including information on the nature of the contact, the individuals involved, the results, and any special problems encountered; any information, in short, which would be of value to another Bahá’i doing teaching at the same institution.

2. Bahá’í books, or books concerning the Bahá’í Faith, now in college libraries.

3. Bahá’í students now registered in colleges, or expecting to go there in the near future.

4. Bahá’í communities adjacent to colleges, and their experiences and relationships with these institutions.

5. Teachers in colleges who are Bahá’ís, or known to be friendly to the Faith.

The committee would appreciate all such information known to Bahá’ís, even though some of it may be duplicated from other sources. work in this field in the future. It would appreciate receiving much of this data by its August meeting, so that it can at least make a start in its analysis by the start of the fall school term.

OGDEN ACHIEVES ASSEMBLY STATUS

Although various members of the Bahá'í Faith had passed through Ogden, Utah, from time to time over the last 30 years, leaving books in the library, not until the Ten-Year Crusade began did this city feel the impact of the teachings.

Mrs. Leroy K. Fouts, formerly of San Diego, Calif., and Yuma, Ariz., answered the Guardian's call and pioneered this area in 1954. Unaided, she arranged public meetings when Mrs. Florence Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board, included Ogden in her teaching tours, and through contact with schools and colleges, the NAACP group, the beginning of the local United Nations group, radio, and newspapers, Mrs. Fouts soon became a well-loved and well-known local figure.

In 1955 other settlers began to arrive, and by 1957 the membership had reached ten adults and four junior youth members.

The first week of every month a public meeting is held, with out-of-town speakers. Every Thursday night the Center, which is in the home of one of the Bahá'í families, is open to a public fireside, with local members taking turns serving as host, chairman, and speaker.

Every Sunday four classes are maintained for adults, junior high school, elementary, and nursery levels, with local members teaching the classes and a non-Bahá'í playing music for the songs.

The junior youth members serve on committees and act as ushers at public meetings.

A mailing list of 200 names was used during the three-day seminar conducted by Mrs. Mayberry in January. All the special events have been commemorated with a large showing either at the Center or at a hotel. Many telephone inquirers have been received at the Center.

Study classes for preparation for membership have been conducted by various members. Never is the study confined to one member.

BRAILLE BOOK GIVEN TO MARYLAND SCHOOL

A specially bound Braille copy of The Story of Louis G. Gregory, by Elsie Austin, has been presented to Albert N. D. Brooks, secretary-treasurer of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, by the Bahá'í Service for the Blind, with the suggestion that Mr. Brooks present it to a school of his choice.

The Bahá'í Service for the Blind has been informed that the volume was presented to the Maryland...
Over the years isolated Baha’is have found various opportunities to speak before non-Baha’i audiences: to a group at the First Baptist Church in Philadelphia where there was a series on the “Living Religions of The World”; to the Trinity Club of the Church of the Holy Trinity (an indirect approach on “Is One World Possible—Socially, Politically, Economically, Religiously?”); to the Elm Methodist Church; to the Universalist Church of the Messiah on “Why I am a Bahá’í”; to the Unitarian Fellowship; and finally to the Media Providence Friends Meeting forum.

As a result of a Lincoln University philosophy teacher’s attendance at a fireside, Hormoz Sabet was the Bahá’í student speaker at a forum with representatives from different faiths at Lincoln University.

A Bahá’í Children’s and Youth Meeting is now moving along happily in its second year. For the first year meetings were held in Media Fellowship House, an interracial and inter-religious institution, which welcomed our activity and would welcome us back.

However, at present we meet in the West Chester Bahá’í Center, where Patricia Tomarelli of the West Goshen Township Group has joined us in teaching the children and youth. This activity serves a wide area extending as far away as Lancaster.

School for the Blind at Overlea, Md. This school was founded in 1853, and no longer has separate departments for pupils of different races. The presentation was made in the name of the Bahá’í Service for the Blind.

This Braille copy of The Story of Louis G. Gregory made an impressive book 9½ by 11 inches in size, and over one-half inch thick.

SWARTHMORE BAHÁ’IS
DESCRIBE FIRESIDE TEACHING METHODS

The few Bahá’ís of Delaware County, Penn., are widely scattered and no two form a group. Yet there has been considerable activity. A report may help to encourage others who also are isolated.

Over the years firesides have been held at various intervals. These included experimentation with morning coffee hours and occasional luncheons. Several homes in Lima and Swarthmore, including that of a contact, are now open for meetings. For Naw-Rúz two Bahá’ís joined an isolated friend in an adjoining county.

Lending support to one another and meeting in loving fellowship breaks down the feeling of being alone. A monthly deepening class has been started with the realization that much is gained even if only one or two earnest contacts study and discuss together.

Negro History Week lent itself to getting publicity in the Media Weekly Visitor. The results of an invitation to attend a fireside and of a boxed Bahá’í quotation were gratifying.

Books on the Faith have been placed with the Swarthmore College Library, Swarthmore Public Library, Pendle Hill, and Media Fellowship House.

First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Victor, N.Y., formed on April 21, 1957.

First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Flagstaff, Ariz., formed on April 21, 1957.
The intercalary party in Feb. was greatly enjoyed by all present. The gifts exchanged were small (as agreed upon beforehand), but the feeling of joy and happiness was very great indeed.

The Youth planned the Naw·Rúz celebration. These youth have gotten together at other times for further study and fellowship. Meeting recently at the time of an adult conference proved successful.

A youth was responsible for one of the finest openings we have had.

For one of her classes, Carol Hon·nold wrote a theme on the Bahá'í Faith. Her teacher had previously had another theme on this subject and had come to feel that what she needed was world religion. It was at this time in her life that she came across Carol's theme. As a result she is studying and attending firesides. When this same teacher was made responsible for a Senior High School Assembly meeting during Brotherhood Week, she went to a Bahá'í for help. As a result a program on “Getting Rid of our Prejudices” was worked up which included a film and short talks on the subject from three points of view: Jewish, Christian, and Bahá'í. Some 250 students in the Swarthmore Senior High School, located in a town of 6000 people, heard about the Faith. After the Bahá'í had spoken, she had requests for more information.

We have found that our contact with non-Bahá'ís in the interracial field is most productive in finding receptive souls. Indeed, we continue to be astonished at the number of doors that open as we try to mix with people with love and gladness in our hearts.

CHARLESTON TRIES
NEW TYPE OF MEETING

Charleston, W. Va., Bahá'ís are finding that their new kind of Sunday meetings are very successful in attracting the believers themselves and uniting them in a stronger bond of spiritual unity; also that the contacts who come like the meetings very much.

There is one hour of worship together at 11:00 a.m., introduced by 15 minutes of recorded music, followed by a recording of “Words for the World.” Then there is a half-hour of meditation, with very short readings of a strictly inspirational nature, without any attempt to teach or preach, in which all are invited to participate. The hour is closed with more music.

The local Bahá'ís hope to advertise this meeting with church notices in the newspapers in the near future. The notices will stress the fact that the meetings are for all denominations, and are services without a sermon.

NORTHERN PEOPLES
TEACHING REPORTED

The Northern Peoples Teaching Committee, organized in Alaska under the supervision of the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee, has as its function “To reach and teach the Eskimos, Indians, and Aleuts.”

Their annual report of activities during the past year emphasizes the problems of translating the Bahá'í writings into the various native languages, revealed in the following excerpts:

“Translation of the Teachings into the various native dialects, which the Guardian has never ceased to stress, were given much consideration, and many attempts were made and leads followed to gain a foothold in this important phase of reaching and teaching the native peoples of this country.

"While this committee is not directly responsible for the translation, except through our prayers, we are pleased to report a translation into Aleut of Bahá'u'lláh's prayer "Blessed is the spot . . . ." which is now in the hands of the WHTC and the printers.

"Dr. Robert Marsh, teacher of languages at the University of Alaska, was contacted. He discussed at length the technical side of the translation problem with two members of the committee.

"It sums up to this: there are many different dialects among the natives, just about one for each tribe and each section of the Territory.

"The next point to consider is the absence of a written language. Dr. Marsh, who seemed more interested in Aleut, stated that most Aleut writing is done in Russian printing type. Other dialects may be written by using the English alphabet to form the various sounds. He made us more conscious of the largeness of the task. However, he was also extremely generous, and offered his assistance to any potential translators in getting the work onto paper.

"Using the natives themselves to do translating is hampered by the fact that they are slow to adopt new concepts; that is, they must be "sold on an idea." They must be fully convinced of the sincerity of anyone approaching them for any reason.

"When they have accepted a religion, which they have done numerious times in whole tribes, they will not jeopardize their standing in the church by doing something like translating the literature of another religion.

"As the Eskimos and Indians have little or no written languages, but do express their thoughts quite well in the form of dances and in drawings, the idea of getting some of the teachings in these graphic forms is being investigated.

"The Eskimos love parties, and invitations to them to attend the Nawa Rúz Feast are always stressed in the Fairbanks area. This year they were well represented.

"The evening of April 12 a party to which only Eskimo guests were invited, along with local Bahá'ís, was sponsored by the NPTC. There was a full evening of fun and games. Each of the Eskimo guests was given a copy of the Eskimo pamphlet translated by Mrs. Hadley Ferguson.

"During the last week of July 1956 an All-Alaska Teaching Conference was held in Fairbanks. This was reported in the September issue of Bahá'í News."

The Assurance of Firmness

'Abdu'l-Bahá's Talk on Attacks by Ministers

"But after I leave, some people may arise in opposition, heaping persecutions upon you in their bitterness, and in the newspaper there may be articles published against the Cause. Rest ye in the assurance of firmness.

"... If such things do not happen, the fame of the Cause will not become widespread and the summons of God will not be heard.

"Consider the history of the past. Recall for instance the days of His Holiness Christ and the events subsequent thereto... But remember that these statements did not affect the Cause of Christianity. On the contrary, Christianity advanced daily in power and potency.

"Day by day the majesty of Christ grew in splendor and effulgence. Therefore my purpose is to warn you and strengthen you against accusations, criticisms, revilings, and derision in newspaper articles or other publications. Be not disturbed by them. They are the very confirmation of the Cause; the very source of upbuilding to the movement. May God confirm the day when a score of the ministers of the churches may arise and with bared heads cry at the top of their voices that the Bahá'ís are misguided. I would like to see that day, for that is the time when the Cause of God will spread.

"Bahá'u'lláh has pronounced such as these the couriers (heralds) of the Cause. They will proclaim from pulpits that the Bahá'ís are fools; that they are a wicked and unrighteous people; but be ye steadfast and unwavering in the Cause of God. They will spread the message of Bahá'u'lláh." (Promulgation of Universal Peace, pp. 423, 424.)

The Station and Function of the Hands of the Cause

Dear Bahá'i Friends:

In a letter written on behalf of the Guardian, the National Assembly has been informed that some National Assemblies do not understand the position and rank of the Hands of the Cause. These Assemblies, in writing the Guardian, mention first their relationship to the Guardian, next their relationship to National Assemblies and then their relationship to the Hands of the Case.

The communication directs our Assembly, after clearly understanding the station and functions of the Hands of the Cause, to inform the friends.

"The rank and position of the Hands of the Cause are superior to the position of the National Assemblies. In writing concerning the Hands, therefore, when there is reference to the Institutions of the Faith, after the Guardian should be mentioned the Hands, and then the national bodies."

The NSA understands from this explanation that in corresponding or reporting about any Bahá'í situation which includes the Hands of the Cause, or a Hand of the Cause, reference to the Hands, or to the Hand, precedes reference to any other Bahá'í institution except the Guardian himself.

To clarify this matter for the present generation of believers, the National Assembly has reviewed references to the Hands of the Cause published in Bahá'í literature or reported in Baha'i News. "Hour now ripe take long inevitably deferred step, (in) conformity (with) provisions (of) 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Testament... through appointment first contingent (of) Hands (of) the Cause of God, twelve in number, equally allocated (to) Holy Land, Asiatic, American, European continents..."

As to their function at that time, the Guardian stated: "Nine elevated rank Hands three continents outside Holy Land advised remain present posts continue discharge vital administrative, teaching duties pending assignment specific functions as need arises. Urge all nine attend as my representatives all four forthcoming Intercontinental Conferences..." (Guardian's cable of December 24, 1951)

This same cable states that the appointments of the first contingent were made in conjunction with these six historic steps in the history of the Faith: first, the inauguration of construction of the superstructure of the Sepulchre of the Báb; second, the creation of the International Baha'i Council; third, the acquisition, restoration and embellishment of the historic sites associated with the incarceration of Baha'u'lllah and 'Abdu'l-Baha; fourth, the initiation of formal negotiations with central municipal authorities of Israel to preserve for posterity the neighborhood of the Most Holy Tomb of Baha'u'llah and acquire properties near the Sepulchre of the Bab as site for future edifice housing the auxiliary agencies revolving around the Guardianship and the House of Justice; fifth, preparation of the design of the House of Worship to be constructed on Mount Carmel; and sixth, the inauguration of the intercontinental stage of Baha'i activity through the Intercontinental Teaching Conference to be held in 1953 preparing for the final step, the calling of an assemblage representative of the Baha'i communities of all sovereign states, chief dependencies and islands of the entire planet (1963).

On April 6, 1954, the Guardian cabled all Hands of the Cause and all National Assemblies a message marking a further unfoldment of the function of the Hands.

"This newly constituted body, embarked (on) its mission (with) such auspicious circumstances, (is) now entering second phase (of) its evolution signalized (by) forging ties (with the) National Spiritual Assemblies (of the) Baha'i world (for the) purpose (of) lending them assistance (in) attaining (the) objectives (of the) Ten Year Plan.

"The hour (is) ripe (for the) fifteen Hands residing outside (the) Holy Land (to) proceed during Ridvan (with the) appointment, (in) each continent separately, from among the resident Baha'i's (of) that continent, (of) Auxiliary Boards, whose members acting (as) deputies, assistants (and) advisors (of the) Hands, must increasingly lend (their) assistance (for the) promotion (of the) interests (of the) Ten Year Crusade. . . .

"All Boards must report (and) be responsible (to the) Hands charged (with) their appointment. . . .

"Urge initiation (of) five Continental Baha'i Funds which, as they develop, will increasingly facilitate (the) discharge (of the) functions assigned (to the) Boards."

In this same message the Hands were directed to keep in close touch with, and report the result of the nominations and progress of the activities of the Boards to the National Assemblies of their respective continents, as well as to the four Hands residing in the Holy Land "destined (to) act (as) liaison between themselves (i.e., the various Hands) (and the) Guardian (of the) Faith."

We now turn to the Guardian's latest reference, his cable of June 4, 1957, addressed to all the Hands and all the National Assemblies, published in the July issue of Baha'i News.

"Divinely appointed Institution (of the) Hands (of the) Cause, invested (by) virtue (of the) authority conferred (by the) Testament (of the) Center (of the) Covenant (with the) twin functions (of) protecting (and) propagating (the) Faith (of) Baha'u'llah, now entering new phase (in the) process (of the) unfoldment (of) its sacred mission. To its newly assumed responsibility (to) assist National Spiritual Assemblies (of the) Baha'i world (in the) specific purpose (of) effectively prosecuting (the) World Spiritual Crusade, (the) primary obligation (to) watch over (and) insure protection (to the) Baha'i World community in close collaboration (with) these same National Assemblies (is) now added."

Hostility to Cause Noted

The friends have by now carefully noted the Guardian's powerful exposition of the hostility from without, and the persistent machinations within the Cause, which impelled him to issue this call to the Hands and the National Assemblies to establish contact and deliberate on all evidences of hostility and the efforts of Covenant-breakers to destroy the Faith.

Master's Will Cited

Finally is cited the passage in the Master's will and Testament which invested the Guardian with authority to appoint Hands of the Cause.

"O friends! The Hands of the Cause of God must be nominated and appointed by the Guardian of the Cause of God. All must be under his shadow and obey his command. Should any, within or without the company of the Hands of the Cause of God disobey and seek division, the wrath of God and His vengeance will be upon him, for he will have caused a break in the true Faith of God."

"The obligations of the Hands of the Cause of God are to diffuse the divine fragrances, to edify the souls of men, to promote learning, to improve the character of all men, and to be, at all times, and under all conditions, sanctified and detached from earthly things. They must manifest the fear of God by their conduct, their manners, their deeds and their words."

Dear Bahá’í Friends:

Impelled by an urgent message from the Guardian, the American Hands of the Cause issued on June 19 a letter to every believer in the United States. This letter cited the Guardian’s appeals and warnings of 1954, 1956, and 1957 concerning the deterioration of the homefront and the menace of catastrophe to the nation through a third war.

At the request of the Hands, the National Spiritual Assembly called fifteen conferences in population centers throughout the country to be held on June 29 or 30, each conducted by a Hand of the Cause, a member of the Auxiliary Board or a member of the National Spiritual Assembly. The purpose of these rallies was to consult on the letter from the Hands which appealed to each individual believer to make a response to the Guardian’s continued appeal.

All possible effort was made, through the local Assembly of the city selected, and through the Area Teaching Committees to bring together the Bahá’ís from surrounding communities and groups.

The forms of action to which response must be made were outlined in the letter of June 19: pioneer abroad in Europe, Latin America, Africa, or Asia; pioneer on the homefront—dispersal to some weak community, bring a group to Assembly status, or establish a new isolated center anywhere in the United States; actively, prayerfully give the Message and confirm souls in one’s own town or city if dispersal is not immediately possible; contribute to the National Fund in the full measure of devotion and sacrifice called for by the Guardian.

Fifteen meetings were held.

New York, conducted by Paul E. Haney, Hand of the Cause; Temple Foundation Hall, conducted by Horace Holley, Hand of the Cause; Philadelphia, conducted by William de-Forge, member of the Auxiliary Board; Seattle and Los Angeles, conducted by Mrs. Florence Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board; Lima and Cleveland, conducted by Mrs. Margery McCormick, member of the Auxiliary Board; Washington, D.C., conducted by Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, member of the Auxiliary Board; Atlanta, conducted by Dr. Sarah M. Pereira, member of the Auxiliary Board; San Francisco, conducted by Charles Wolcott, member of the NSA; Albuquerque and Phoenix, conducted by Charlotte M. Linfoot, member of the NSA; St. Louis, conducted by Edna M. True, member of the NSA; Boston, conducted by H. B. Kavelin, member of the NSA; Detroit, conducted by Dr. Katherine K. True, member of the NSA.

Reports indicate that a total of 2216 believers attended the fifteen conferences. Without doubt, these conferences represent the greatest gathering of American Bahá’ís ever held for concentration on one essential objective, except for the great Centenary celebrations of 1944 and 1953.

While the Guardian’s repeated appeals were expressed by the American Hands, the responses by individual believers are to be channeled through the regular administrative channels—the Intercontinental Teaching Committees for pioneering abroad, and the American National Teaching Committee for pioneering on the homefront.

The National Spiritual Assembly awaits prayerfully the evidences of a tremendous outpouring of the spirit in terms of actual responses to the beloved Guardian’s warnings and appeals.

The Non-Political Character of the Bahá’í Faith

Dear Friends:

In these days of worldwide political disturbance it seems wise to review the Master’s teachings, the Guardian’s directions, and explanations by the National Spiritual Assembly published on this subject over the years. The references are so numerous that another explanation at this time would be out of place and unnecessary.

These essential points must be universally upheld: obedience to civil government; complete non-association with any subversive movement; non-acceptance of any political office by vote of a political party; enrollment as a non-partisan and not as a member of any political party.

Local Assemblies and individual believers, therefore, are urged to study, if the subject is not already clear, the following references:

The Bahá’í World, XII, pp. 306-312. Bahá’í News Nos. 69, pp. 3-4; 72, p. 4; 78, p. 2; 80, p. 2; 105, p. 4; 140, p. 2.

Another view of the new entrance door of the Shrine of Báb’suláh at Bahji
Indeed, it is an important element in administrative efficiency for local Assemblies to preserve published references on subjects important to the preservation of the integrity of public teaching and individual Bahá'í belief and action. The National Spiritual Assembly is called upon to devote much time to answering questions already fully answered in Bahá'í literature, The Bahá'í World and Bahá'í News.

Your Bahá'í Directory

With this issue of Bahá'í News each American believer will receive a copy of the Bahá'í Directory for 1957-1958. This publication is issued annually for the sole purpose of providing information that can be valuable to local Spiritual Assemblies, groups, national and local committees, and individuals in planning and carrying out their teaching work.

Reference to the functions assigned to each committee will indicate the type of assistance and information available from those sources. The “proclamation” and “service” committees particularly have much to offer both in the way of materials and suggestions.

Bahá'ís traveling or settling in other areas can find the addresses of local Spiritual Assemblies and Area Teaching Committees through which they can get in touch with the other believers in those localities.

In a further effort to aid in channeling requests to the proper source this year, the National Spiritual Assembly has added general information where to order or send the various types of material. In the past much valuable time has been spent in forwarding to various committees and offices requests and materials that have come to the wrong place, frequently resulting in the recipient not receiving it in time. The Bahá'í Publishing Trust, which is greatly under-staffed, has particularly been the victim of far too many requests for services and materials which that office does not handle and which would not have come there if the sender had referred to his directory or the Bahá'í literature catalog.

If the directory is to serve its purpose it should be carefully filed for ready reference and kept up to date by noting the directory changes that are published in Bahá'í News.

'Be Not Distressed’

Letters frequently come from pioneers who mention early difficulties and discouragements in their first attempts to establish the Cause in a new land. Then, suddenly, after persistent effort and prayer, the circumstances change and the doors are opened to fruitful activity and achievement. The Master, ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, speaking in Paris said:

"... do not be discouraged because you are few or because people think that your Cause is of no importance. If few people come to your gatherings do not lose heart, and if you are ridiculed and contradicted be not distressed, for the apostles of Christ had the same to bear.

“Lift up your hearts above the present and look with eyes of faith into the future! Today the seed is sown, the grain falls upon the earth... Rejoice and be glad that this day has dawned, try to realize its power, for it is indeed wonderful! God has crowned you with honour and in your hearts has set a radiant star; verily the light thereof shall brighten the whole world!”

Now a letter has come from Charles Duncan, pioneer in Bangkok, Thailand, which records something of teaching efforts expended in that country. It follows in part:

"... As you know I lived at the YMCA for over a year. It was the only place that I could find that I could afford. I wasn't able to have any firesides and I couldn't find any-

Dr. ‘Ali Muhammad Varqá, Hand of the Cause, and Mrs. Margery McCormick, member of the Auxiliary Board and of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, at the Tomb of May Maxwell, near Quilmés, Argentina, on April 21, 1957. The memorial service was reported in Bahá'í News for June.
Dr. ‘Ali Muhammad Varqa, Hand of the Cause, Mrs. Margery McCormick, representing the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States; and the newly elected National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

It was getting very discouraging because I could spend so little time teaching the Cause. "Then circumstances changed. I was able to get a new job teaching which paid more money and took less time. So I have rented a house and it is now the Bahá'í Center in Bangkok. There is a sign over the gate in English and Thai. The House is on the road to the airport so it must be seen by hundreds of people each day, both Thais and foreigners. We now have firesides every Sunday morning with attendance of 12 or so people each time.

"In addition to this a friend of mine has an English school. He has invited me to speak on the Bahá'í Faith at his school. I did this last week and everyone was enthusiastic. So now I am preparing a nine lecture series to give the general outline of the Cause. I am starting with social teaching and the importance of religion to civilization. Introducing the Manifestation is easy, but introducing God is much more difficult because the Buddhists don't believe in God or any gods. Needless to say I feel elated after treading the mill for so long. It's very gratifying to see the students nod their heads from time to time showing their approval.

"The last big item of news is that we are translating the Esslemont book into Thai. A friend of mine translates during the week and we go over it on Sundays. Although this method is much slower than having a professional translator, it is better in the long run because I can check each sentence to make sure that there are no misinterpretations (which are usual in translations from Thaí to English). I know just enough Thai to keep an eye on things. Then another friend checks the two and makes suggestions. The translator is a Buddhist and the checker is a Christian.

"Now that things are at last underway in Thailand, I'm sure that we shall have some results."

Again the Master's words: "Only have faith, patience and courage—this is but the beginning, but surely you will succeed, for God is with you!" (Quotations from Paris Talks)

Western Hemisphere
HAWAIIAN, NICARAGUAN PIONEERS NEEDED

Because of the renewed stress and urgency of the appeals by the Guardian for more American pioneers, the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee continues to use this means of acquainting potential pioneers with current goals to be filled, as well as job opportunities which come to our attention. Anyone thinking of pioneering either now or at a later date is urged to get in touch with this Committee through its Secretary at the address below.

It should be noted that qualified teachers can expect to find employment almost anywhere except in Hawaii.

In addition to persons able to pioneer on a permanent basis, this Committee needs the services of traveling teachers as well, and would be very happy to hear from anyone who is in a position to take on a circuit teaching trip for a period of several weeks.

Maui, Hawaiian Islands

Maui is the only other established local Spiritual Assembly in the Hawaiian Islands, besides Honolulu. One or two pioneers are needed there before next Ridván in order to preserve its Assembly status. As em-employment possibilities are not great, the best suggestion is that this post be filled by retired Bahá'ís with independent income sufficient for an average American city.

Bluefields, Nicaragua

Bluefields has no pioneer at the present time, but is a good possibility for an Assembly next Ridván, as the way has been paved with contacts (some of whom are earnest seekers) by our pioneer, Ruth Yancey, who spent two months there recently on a special teaching project sponsored by the Nicaraguan Teaching Committee. We quote from her report:

"The population of Bluefields is approximately 15,000 inhabitants, composed mostly of Creoles from the English speaking islands of the Atlantic with a smaller minority group of Spanish speaking peoples and a smattering of Mosquito Indians... Until recently, all teaching was done in English with Spanish being taught as a foreign language. As a result... the people regard English as their mother tongue and prefer it to Spanish.

"The mode of living in some respects is comparable to that in the United States possibly half a century ago. The homes are all of wooden construction and for the most part lack running water and indoor plumbing. The diet consists principally of rice and beans plus fruits which grow naturally and are available at certain seasons of the year. Fish is free for the fishing."

Miss Yancey, in her two months at Bluefields, made a number of contacts "who are begging for a permanent pioneer and books..."

"The contacts themselves in requesting a resident pioneer for Bluefields, have expressed the wish that it be a person who is mature, well versed in the Teachings and capable of explaining things in a simple, clear, and eloquent manner. To them this is a matter of utmost importance.

"Bluefields is fertile ground and ripe for the Faith. Because of the constant friction which exists between the groups already established there... many people are seeking and more will be seeking for a resident pioneer and books...

ANNUAL CONVENTION HELD IN SYDNEY

The Annual National Convention of the Bahá'ís of Australia was opened on the evening of April 25, 1957, by Stanley Bolton, vice-chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, in the absence of Collis Featherstone, chairman, who was attending the first New Zealand Convention.

Mr. Bolton welcomed the delegates and friends, and expressed the regret of the friends at the absence of Mrs. Clara Dunn, Hand of the Cause, who was attending the New Zealand Convention as the representative of the Guardian.

Following his welcome, Mr. Bolton incorporated into his address the Guardian's message to the New Zealand Convention, sent by Mrs. Dunn, which called upon the National Assembly of Australia to continue to assist the New Zealand Bahá'í community in every possible way.

At the roll call of delegates, 22 were present.

Convention officers were elected, with Mr. P. Bird serving as Chairman, and Mr. J. Heggie as Secretary.

The Guardian's message was read by the convention secretary, who also, as arranged by the National Spiritual Assembly, unveiled a sketch of the Australian Temple as the Temple plans were announced in the Guardian's message.

This was a momentous period in the reading of the Guardian's stupendous record of World Crusade accomplishments. Only time and much study will reveal the full implication of this wonderful message, which left the convention filled with the wonder of the greatness of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh under the unerring guidance of Shoghi Effendi.

The first session was closed with the reports of the secretary and treasurer of the National Spiritual Assembly.

On the next day, April 26, various committees made their annual reports, and recommendations were made and discussed pertaining to the Australian Bahá'í activities.

Cable to Guardian

The Cable Committee submitted a draft of a message to the Guardian, which was approved as follows:

"AUSTRALIAN CONVENTION DEEPLY MOVED YOUR MESSAGE REJOICES CRUSADE ADVANCES HEARTS OVERFLOWING AWE HUMILITY LOVE GRATITUDE MAGNIFICENT TEMPLE PLANS SUPPLICATE YOUR PRAYERS STRENGTH POWER COURAGE ARISE ACHIEVE ALLOTTED TASKS GREETINGS LOVING ASSURANCES REDEDICATION."

On Saturday, April 27, the voting for the new National Spiritual As-Assembly was conducted, with these results: Mr. J. Heggie, Mr. H. C. Featherstone, Mr. P. Bird, Mr. N. P. L. Walker, Mrs. D. Whiting, Miss T. Perks, Mr. S. W. Bolton, Miss M. Degotardi, and Mr. F. Wyss.

Visit Temple Site

Sunday morning, April 28, over 60 people assembled at the Temple Site despite an early morning rain. The site had recently been cleared of trees, and the markers for the Temple foundations were found, with one pylon site partly excavated. The friends gathered around for prayers, including a prayer for the departed, with special thought of Mr. George Townshend, Hand of the Cause.

Receive Guardian's Reply

In the afternoon the Guardian's reply to the convention cable was received: DEEPLY APPRECIATE MESSAGE APPEAL ENTIRE BODY AUSTRALIAN BELIEVERS RE-DUOLE EFFORTS BETITLINGLY DISCHARGE SACRED HEAVY MANIFOLD RESPONSIBILITIES PRAYING FERVENTLY FULFILLMENT CHERISHED HOPES.

SHOGHI

Following further discussion on teaching ideas, the convention was closed, and the friends assembled to commemorate the Feast of Beauty.

Canada

TENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION HELD

The tenth annual National Convention of the Baha’is of Canada was held on April 26-28, 1957 in Toronto, Ontario.

This history-making convention, which was held for the first time in our own Haziratu’l-Quds, opened on Friday morning with devotions, which assisted each delegate to prepare himself humbly and sincerely for the work to be done.

The beloved Guardian’s message, addressed this year for the first time to 24 national conventions assembled throughout the world, invited the delegates to survey with him “the latest evidences of (the Faith’s) resistless march along the path traced for it by both its Founder and the appointed Center of His Covenant.”

In answer to this message the convention sent this heartfelt response by cable to Shoghi Effendi: “Convention message tremendous inspiration. Overjoyed global successes. Rededication greater fervour fulfillment Crusade, Beseech prayers assistance tasks allotted Canadian community. Loving greetings.”

During the first afternoon much time was given to discussion of the reports of the National Teaching and New Territories Committees, particularly the matter of lost local Spiritual Assemblies. Sixty Assemblies are required by the completion of the Ten-Year Crusade, and the present status is 18. There was a general feeling, not only by the Committee but also by the delegates, that teaching activity appears to be on the increase throughout Canada.

Ridvan Feast Observed

The Ridvan Feast was held in the basement of the Haziratu’l-Quds on Friday evening. Following the readings and prayers, Winnifred Harvey spoke briefly of her recent pilgrimage to Haifa, the play “The Seated Baha’i” was presented, and Mrs. Meherangiz Munsiff, a visitor from India via the United States, spoke.

Midway in the convention the election of the new National Spiritual Assembly for 1957-1958 was held. In an atmosphere of devotion and prayerful thought the delegates cast their ballots.

In all, 19 delegates voted, the two absentee sending in their ballots by mail. The following were elected: Hart Bowesfield, Peggy Ross, Winifred Harvey, Audrey Westheuser, Allan Raynor, Lloyd Gardiner, Rowland Estall, Fred Graham, and Harold Moscrop.

A Public Congress was held on Saturday evening in the Royal Ontario Museum Theater, at which Mrs. Munsiff was the speaker.

The remainder of the convention was given over to consultation on the plans and objectives for the coming year on the home front, on the national, regional, and individual levels.

There was an acute awareness on the part of those present of a subtle change in the Baha’is throughout Canada. More active teaching, a greater sense of maturity, was expressed.

In one of the most inspiring keynote talks in any Canadian convention, Fred Graham summed up the attitude of the individual by calling upon us all to arise and act. We must rely on the promise of our Faith for aid and know that success will come through “all those who arise” in “whom the Word of God taketh effect.”

To the 17 delegates who were present must be added the over 100 registered visitors during the convention, who returned to their homes with renewed dedication, determined to put into action what they had experienced.

FIRST ASSEMBLY FORMED IN SAMOA

Details of the formation of the first Local Spiritual Assembly in Samoa have been published in the Canadian New Territories Committee Newsletter, quoting a letter from Suhayl ‘Ala’í:

“First day of Ridván was a truly joyous occasion for every one of us in Samoa. We are sure that you were just as happy to see the formation of the first Spiritual Assembly in the Samoan Islands come to realization.

“On the morning of that ‘Blessed Festival’ we all gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nemat ‘Ala’í for the wonderful occasion we had all longed for. After appropriate excerpts from the writings of Baha’u’llah, ‘Abdu’l-Baha, and the Guardian were read, a joint declaration was signed by the nine present. We had received your welcome cable about midnight, the night before the formation of the Assembly. It was certainly most inspiring and deeply appreciated by every one of us.”

BAHA’IS PARTICIPATE IN U.N. CONFERENCE AT COLOMBO

A conference of United Nations Non-Governmental Organizations met in Colombo, Ceylon, on October 29 to November 1, 1956, in which three representatives of the Baha’i Faith took part.

One hundred ninety-seven delegates representing 75 organizations in Burma, Ceylon, India, Nepal, and Pakistan participated.

Baha’is included Mr. K. Sivapirakasam, chairman of the Colombo Local Spiritual Assembly, representing Ceylon; Mr. Lionel J. Peraj, representing India; and Mr. N. A. M. Sultan, representing Pakistan.

During the first three days of the conference there were talks on “The UN Technical Assistance Program,” “The Establishment of a Better Understanding of the UN,” “The Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy,” and “The Role of the UN in World Affairs Today.”

Many of the delegates contacted by the Baha’is individually were of the opinion that ultimately the doings of United Nations would lead to universal peace and one world, promulgated by Baha’u’llah. The Director of the UNIC in Pakistan, who was one of the leading figures at the conference, told the Baha’is that he was from the land of our Beloved, and that he had a good number of relatives who were Bahá'ís and lived in Persia.

On the final day of the conference the participants divided into four informal working groups. The Bahá'ís joined the group of “Teaching about the United Nations and Cooperation Between the Various Organizations.” At this group level Mr. Sivappirakasan delivered a short speech. He stressed that it is the spiritual force only, and not the force of arms and not economic emancipation that would give stability to universal peace and happiness to the human race. If, with the technical, health, and other assistance given to the underdeveloped areas, spiritual education is imparted from a common pool, the world would be a paradise enjoying universal peace.

Many friends of the Bahá'í representatives were contacted during tea, lunch, and other intervals, and were given the Bahá'í Message. Pamphlets pertaining to our Beloved's Cause were distributed. Most of the delegates from India and Pakistan had earlier acquaintance of the Faith, but some of the delegates from Nepal had not heard of it, and were anxious to have more literature.

One important fact to be noted was that not a single delegate had any ill will towards the Faith. One Mr. Chakravarthi from New Delhi, in a short speech, said that the world was heading for a one-world government. When he was contacted by the Bahá'ís after his speech he said that he had heard about the Faith, and that the Bahá'í idea of one world government could only be realized after a decade or two, and not in the near future.

Pakistan

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY FORMED IN KARACHI

All the friends were delighted when the holding of the First Convention of the Bahá'ís of Pakistan was announced. The dates fixed for it were from April 27 to 30, 1957. The meetings of the convention were to be held at Bahá'í Hall, Deepchand Ojha Road, Karachi.

Delegates of the local Assemblies of the Bahá'ís of Pakistan, except a few who could not come, reached Karachi by April 27 to participate in the convention. A large number of Bahá'ís also came to witness this historical and glorious function. In those days the Bahá'í Hall and gardens were illuminated by colored electric bulbs in such a way that people passing at night were attracted by this beautiful scene. The atmosphere resounded with the cries of “Alláh-u'Abhá!”

Hand of Cause Present

The beloved Guardian sent the revered Hand of the Cause, Shu'á'u'lláh 'Aláí, as his representative at this occasion. Mr. Abbasally Butt, member of the Auxiliary Board to the Hands of the Cause in Asia, and Mr. Isfandiar Bakhtiari and Ghulam Hassan Ambreliwala, representatives of the National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma, attended the meetings.

Mr. Bakhtiari, chairman of the sponsoring National Assembly, opened the convention. The revered Hand of the Cause of God distributed the perfume, sent through him as a gift from the beloved Guardian, to the delegates and visitors. The revered Hand of the Cause also delivered the message of the beloved Guardian and addressed the assemblage.

Translations of the messages of the beloved Guardian were read in the meetings, and the revered Hand of the Cause gave an address on the progress of the Cause of God.

The Rívdván Feast was celebrated in a spirit of jubilation, and in the evening a public reception was held in the garden of the Haqíratul-Quds, to which the cream of the society of Karachi was invited. This gathering was addressed by the revered Hand of the Cause.

On April 29 the National Spiritual Assembly came into being and was organized. The following, and their offices, were elected: Mr. I. K. Bakhtiari, chairman; Choudhri Abdur Rehman, vice-chairman; Faridoon Yazameidi, secretary; Mr. A. C. Joshi, treasurer; and Mr. S. Mahfoozul Haq Ilmi, Mr. Memboob Ilahi Qureshi, Mr. S. Abul Abbas Rizvi, Mr. S. Mawazish Ali Shah, and Dr. M. A. Latif.

The delegates were distributed into six panels to discuss the various items of the agenda, and a common discussion was held on their reporting the result of their consultation.

Several functions, including one by the Bahá’í Youth Committee, Karachi, were held. Many friends spoke in these meetings and many read poems. Beginners also came, and had their problems solved by the teachers present at the functions.

The sacred impression of this auspicious occasion gave freshness and a new encouragement to the Bahá’ís. We trust that the friends will serve the Cause of God with daily increasing ardor and endeavor.

New Zealand
FORM NATIONAL ASSEMBLY IN AUCKLAND

From April 26 to 28, 1957, at the Haziratu’l-Quds in Auckland, New Zealand Bahá’ís thrilled to the joys of their first convention, the two highlights of which were the beloved Guardian’s Convention Message, together with our objectives in the new Six-Year Plan, and the election of our own National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand.

Our beloved Hand of the Cause, Mrs. Clara Dunn, and Auxiliary Board members Miss Thelma Perks and Mr. Collis Featherstone, blessed and guided our fledgling steps during the proceedings.

Three-fifths of the total number of Bahá’ís in New Zealand were present, along with many Australian friends, to hear the Guardian’s review of events, the outline of future activities, and to share in the soul-warming joys of Bahá’í fellowship.

Our part in the Six-Year Plan is as follows: (1) Multiplication of centers and local Assemblies, (2) Incorporation of well-grounded Assemblies, (3) Inauguration of a National Fund, (4) Obtaining recognition of Bahá’í Holy Days and of the Bahá’í marriage certificate, (5) Conversion of Maoris and ensuring their participation in Bahá’í administrative institutions, (6) Extending the scope of teaching in the South Island, (7) Incorporation of the newly-formed National Spiritual Assembly, and (8) Selection and purchase of the site for the first Mashriqu’l-Adhkár in New Zealand.

Race Amity Day meeting sponsored by the Hayward, Calif., Bahá’í group on June 9 at the Bahá’í Center.
There were 14 Baha’is and 13 non-Baha’is in attendance, comprising college students and teachers of the Negro and white races. The meeting was held in the O. Henry Hotel, where the Greensboro World Youth Day meeting in March attracted such favorable attention to the Faith.

Baha’is of the Miami, Fla., area also reported a large attendance at their public meeting in a Bahá’í home. Twelve non-Baha’is and 44 Bahá’is heard a talk by Dr. Charles Williams, principal of Booker T. Washington High School of Miami on “The Price We Pay,” explaining what it takes to be a good citizen.

As a result of newspaper publicity for the Miami meeting, the Rader Methodist Church of El Portal, a Miami suburb, asked for a Bahá’i speaker to explain the Faith to a church group studying the various religions.

Newton, Mass., Bahá’is held their first interracial public meeting in observance of Race Amity Day, with 17 present, including 8 non-Baha’is and 6 Negros. Mr. Beverly F. Booth of the University of Alabama was the non-Baha’i speaker.

Royal Oak, Mich., Bahá’is planned their Race Amity Day observance in the nature of a reception, with a short talk on the Faith followed by a general discussion. Twenty-five persons attended, including six non-Baha’is.

Battle Creek, Mich., invited a leader of the local Unitarian Church to share a platform with a Bahá’í speaker at their public meeting, the subject being “Brotherhood of Man.”

The San Francisco, Calif., public meeting included prayers and readings from the Bahá’í Writings, vocal selections by an Oriental artist; a brief Bahá’í talk on “The Oneness of God, the Oneness of the Prophets, and the Oneness of Mankind”; brief talks by a Negro representative of the Urban League, a young Filipino woman in national dress, who spoke of the contributions of America to the development of the Philippine Islands, a Japanese artist who demonstrated Japanese brush painting, and a fellow artist who displayed wax-dye on cotton.

These meetings demonstrate that there is a firm basis for the development of future Race Amity Day meetings to proclaim the distinguishing feature of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh, the Oneness of Mankind.

We estimated that there were about 600 in the audience when I spoke. The service was in the college auditorium, and there was a nicely lettered poster in the lobby advertising it.

The talk, which I read in order to obtain the maximum smoothness in phrasing, covered a great deal of ground, and did not pull any punches with respect to the necessity of overcoming the divisions between religions.

After the talk I was greeted in a very friendly manner by Dr. Jones, the President of the college, who is a friend of the Bahá’í, Mrs. Van Sombeek. Then we went to the lounge of the Meetinghouse, where a coffee hour was scheduled for those who cared to carry on a discussion with the speaker. We were told that the count was 51, which Dr. Trueblood considered an expression of considerable interest. The discussion was lively, largely along Christian lines, but quite intelligent and constructive.

The next afternoon we were invited to attend Prof. Hugh Barbour’s class in “Religions of the World.” It is a seminar class around a huge oval cherry wood table in the Meetinghouse. There were about 20 around the table, and another ten or so around the edges of the room.

When we came in we noticed the names of all the leading Bahá’í figures, as well as the ones we regard as major Prophets, written on the blackboard. At first we thought this was in preparation for this class, but when Prof. Barbour erased them, it turned out they had been used for discussion in a morning class.

The whole class hour was devoted to questions on the Faith addressed to us. Again they were intelligent and penetrating, and we felt that a great deal of interest was generated.

The next day was the Yokefellow Conference. To my surprise, Dr. Trueblood asked me to contribute to the period of Common Prayer that opened the meeting. I read one of the short prayers by Baha'u'llah.

There were about 225 in attendance, some ministers, but more lay leaders in the churches. We were greatly impressed with the vitality of this movement, and particularly to the extent to which people who were at first sophisticated and worldly found that religion brought positive values to them when they applied it in their daily lives, and made them happier and better able to cope with modern problems.

Evaluation of Visit

The campus as a whole is now very much aware of the Faith. This experience convinced me even more that an opportunity to present the Faith in the classroom or auditorium under the official auspices of a college is infinitely more effective than a meeting sponsored by Baha'is, and if it reaches a large fraction of the campus at one time, the impact is that much more forceful. College students are open to this type of approach, and there is no telling what the ultimate effect might be.

“Yet Another Outstanding Objective (of) Crusade”
Cable From the Guardian

Inform Hands, National Assemblies, transfer (of) remains (of) Mirzá Buzurg attainment yet another outstanding objective (of) Crusade. Advise avoid publicity.

—Shoghi

Cable received July 17, 1957

Beloved Friends:

The spiritual significance of this message from the beloved Guardian is revealed when we turn to page 94 of God Passes By: “He (Bahá’u’lláh) was moreover a descendant of Jesse, and belonged, through His father, Mirzá ‘Abbas’, better known as Mirzá Buzurg — a nobleman closely associated with the ministeral circles of the Court of Fath-Alí Sháh — to one of the most ancient and renowned families of Mázindarán.”

In the Guardian’s Ten Year International Bahá’í Teaching and Consolidation Plan 1953-1963, No. 15 in the list of “Objectives of the Ten Year Plan to be Conducted by Twelve Bahá’í National Assemblies 1953-1959” (page 51) is: “Identification of the resting-place of the Father of Bahá’u’lláh and of the Mother and of the Cousin of the Báb, and their reburial in the Bahá’í cemetery in the vicinity of the Most Great House.”

Paramount Importance of Interracial Teaching

Beloved Friends:

A recent letter from Haifa calls upon the National Spiritual Assembly to concentrate upon teaching activities among the colored population of the Southern States, and the American National Teaching Committee, the Area Teaching Committees in the South, and the Interracial Teaching Committee have been requested to undertake this important mission.

Far more than a mere numerical addition to the Bahá’í community is involved. The relationship of the white and the Negro races in America is crucial in the national and indeed the international destiny. In His address at Howard University in 1912 ‘Abdu’l-Bahá described racial amity in America as the assurance of the world’s peace. Furthermore He stated to the believers that strife between these two races could afford the opportunity for America’s enemies to strike, with disastrous results to our Civilization. (Bahá’í News, June 1927, page 5.)

In the light of the current international situation, especially as depicted by the beloved Guardian in his 1954 message on America in Time of World Peril, the Master’s stern warning returns with redoubled force.

As long ago as April 12, 1927, the beloved Guardian wrote to the National Spiritual Assembly:

“As this problem, in the inevitable course of events, grows in acuteness and complexity, and as the numbers of the faithful from both races multiplies, it will become increasingly evident that the future growth and prestige of the Cause are bound to be influenced to a very considerable degree by the manner in which the adherents of the Bahá’í Faith carry out, first among themselves, and in their relations with their fellow-men, those high standards of interracial amity so fearlessly exemplified to the American people by our Master, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

“I direct my appeal with all the earnestness and urgency that this pressing problem calls for to every conscientious upholder of the universal principles of Bahá’u’lláh to face this extremely delicate situation with the boldness, the decisiveness, and wisdom it demands. I cannot believe that those whose hearts have been touched by the regenerating influence of God’s creative Faith in this day will find it difficult to cleanse their souls from every lingering trace of racial animosity so subversive of the Faith they profess...”

“We can prove ourselves worthy of our Cause only if in our individual conduct and corporate life we sedulously imitate the example of our beloved Master, Whom the terrors of tyranny, the storms of incessant abuse, the oppressiveness of humiliation, never caused to deviate a hair’s breadth from the revealed law of Bahá’u’lláh.

“Such is the path of certitude, such is the way of holiness He chose to tread to the very end of His life. Nothing short of the strictest adherence to His glorious example can... safely steer our course amid the pitfalls of this perilous age, and lead us on to fulfill our high destiny."

Thirty years—thirty fateful years—have intervened since the Guardian pointed out the path of our Bahá'í destiny. Every failure to tread that path—individual or collective failure—has augmented the obstacles and heightened the perils of true obedience while illuminating an issue which few of us could understand so long ago.

Prayer, meditation, and consecrated action in this field of interracial teaching are indeed required!

The Mission of Baha'u'llah

Presentation Pamphlet for a Bahá'í Special Event

The Mission of Baha'u'llah was compiled and published in commemoration of the Centenary of the Bahá'í Revelation, 1853-1953. This pamphlet has such value as an exposition of the Teachings that the National Spiritual Assembly requests the friends to give it special consideration.

Request Material for Biography of May Maxwell

The following request has been received from Rúhíyyih Khánum:

"I want to gather material for a biography of May Maxwell, my mother, and would deeply appreciate the cooperation of the friends; letters or copies of letters written by her (preferably the originals for accuracy's sake) and any memories they may have of events connected with her, public talks given by her, etc., would be deeply appreciated. As time passes it becomes increasingly difficult to collect accurate data, and I feel it my duty and privilege to begin this undertaking even though I may not be the person who completes it."

In the first place, the Selections from the Writings of Baha'u'llah were carefully chosen in order to present the basic Message of the New Era: The Purpose of Creation, The Prophets of God, Progressive Revelation, The Day of Fulfilment, The Soul of Man, The Duty of Man, World-wide Regeneration, The Way to Unity, The Eternal Faith of God. The Introduction provides a brief background for the Bahá'í concept of the Manifestation and the World Mission of the Founder of our Faith.

In the second place, the typography, paper, and colored cover on the deluxe edition were designed with such excellence that this pamphlet received an award from the American Institute of Graphic Arts. Two editions were published: the deluxe at 90c, and copies on less expensive paper at 20c each.

In order to make effective use of the supply of both editions still available, the Bahá'í Publishing Trust has been authorized to sell the deluxe edition at 75c per copy, and the other edition at 10c each. These lower prices make the pamphlet readily available to the individual believer, the fireside, or community study groups and for free distribution by Assemblies and groups for publicized Bahá'í public events such as Bahá'í Proclamation Day, the Anniversary of the Birth of Baha'u'llah, and World Religion Day.

The pamphlet, finally, is ideal for deepening classes and supplies the material for a wide range of public talks.

For ordering copies, consult the announcement of the Bahá'í Publishing Trust in this issue.

Portfolio of Temple Pictures

The National Spiritual Assembly calls attention to a very important contact and public relations instrument now ready for use by Assemblies and individual Baha'is.

This consists of a folder or portfolio containing ten different Temple views: exterior, interior and landscaped gardens. Measuring 8½ by 11 inches, the portfolio is entitled “Picture Series, Bahá’í House of Worship, Wilmette, Illinois.” The inside cover carries a brief statement explaining the architecture and purpose of our House of Worship, and reference to the guided tours.

The ten illustrations measure 8 by 10 inches, and are easily withdrawn from a protective inside flap. They are reproduced in black and white from photographs by a special printing process.

This portfolio can be put to excellent use by presenting copies to libraries, radio program directors, TV program directors, and photograph editors of the daily and weekly press. Either mounted separately or all together on a cardboard with appropriate lettering, these Temple pictures will create an excellent display.

Glossy prints can be ordered of any of the ten illustrations for use in magazines or the press.

The portfolios, including the special mailing envelope, are available at 50 cents each. On orders for 25 or more the price is 40 cents. The glossy prints are 50 cents each, or a set of thirteen at $4.50. Check or money order to cover must accompany the orders.

Both the portfolios and the glossy prints are to be ordered from the Bahá’í Sales Committee, Mr. Harry Walrath, chairman, 909 West Foster Street, Chicago 40, Ill.

PIONEERS VISIT U.S., TELL TEACHING NEEDS

We’ve all had the bounty of receiving the challenging, soul-stirring letter from the American Hands of the Cause, and of meeting with them or their representatives to consider it carefully. The call for further consecration and deeper dedication has awakened in us a more determined effort to answer the plea of the beloved Guardian to each of us to arise and go. Immediate response is needed.

As the visiting pioneers from Africa have told us so eloquently, the work there is well begun, but it is only a beginning. Even by 1963 they consider the work will still be in its opening phase, so vast is the continent and so great the teaching opportunities it offers.
It is a privilege to hear, in person, the thrilling stories and heart-warming experiences from these pioneers. We know that you will wish to meet these people, presently in the United States, whenever possible.

On the West Coast there are the Collins and Valerie Wilson; in the Middle West Carol Hautz, the Jennes, and Vivian Wesson; and in the East there is the Hadden family and, soon, Elsie Austin, to name a few.

Africa is a land of opportunities, many and varied, both material and spiritual. Job opportunities for Americans have been limited, but new ones are opening, including some with our U.S. Government, which is now expanding its sphere of activities all over Africa.

May each one of us prayerfully consider the call of our beloved Guardian for more pioneers in Africa, so that his wish for "rapid multiplication of pioneers abroad" to reinforce the African campaign may be answered with a steady and ever-swelling flow of dedicated believers.

For information write to the U.S. Africa Teaching Committee, Mrs. Sylvia Parmelee, secretary, 4700 47th St. N.W., Washington 16, D.C.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

South East Asia
NEW NATIONAL ASSEMBLY ELECTED AT DJAKARTA

The following report of the South East Asia Convention held in Djakarta, Indonesia, April 30, May 1 and 2, 1957, has been gleaned from the Convention Secretary's minutes.

The Convention opened at 9:00 o'clock on the morning of April 30, with prayers in Persian, English, Malay, and the Mentawai languages, with 25 delegates present. Mr. A. A. Furutan, Hand of the Cause and representative of the Guardian, was present and anointed the delegates and friends with the attar of rose sent by the beloved Guardian for this occasion, and presented the gift of the Guardian to the new National Spiritual Assembly.

A committee appointed for the purpose drafted the following message, which was cabled to the Guardian:

"Friends assembled express deep gratitude blessings bestowed upon them in witnessing this memorable occasion. Highly indebted your soul-stirring message conveyed through Mr. Furutan. We supplicate enable us fulfill great tasks ahead."

The 7 salient points of the message from the Guardian outlining the Six-Year Plan were discussed at length, the delegates expressing their views on how the Plan can best be implemented. Among the suggestions offered were: each believer bring in one new believer each year; the believers to disperse; translation of Bahá'í texts into native languages; (the Message of Bahá'u'lláh has already been translated into Vietnamese); holding of more public meetings; living the life.

Committees were appointed, one from each country to formulate recommendations to the Convention.

Delegates Report Progress

During the evening session of the first day the discussion on the Six-Year Plan continued and one delegate from each country presented the report from each delegation.

The delegate from Singapore and Malaya reported that all local Spiritual Assemblies in Malaya are incorporated; the government has promised an acre of land in Singapore for a Bahá'í burial ground; (this will probably mean that the other Bahá'í centers in Malaya will be given free land); it is assumed that it will not be difficult for the Bahá'í marriage to be recognized in Malaya.

Because point 7 of the Six-Year Plan — the site for the first Bahá'í Temple in the region — was not clearly understood, Mr. Furutan, the Hand of the Cause, explained that each country is to buy a plot of land. From these the Guardian will choose one location. The remaining plots of land can then be sold or converted into local Ḥaṣíratu'l-Quds.

Sixteen new declarations were reported by a delegate from Vietnam, 13 of which were from the village of Trung Gian, where a new local Spiritual Assembly was established Ad̄van 1957, which has already applied for incorporation.

Many excellent recommendations were made by the delegates for contacting and winning followers for Bahá'u'lláh.

The delegate from Mentawai spoke about the tasks in Mentawai envisioned in the Six-Year Plan; ten new local Spiritual Assemblies will be established; three primary Bahá'í Schools now exist and two new ones are planned; one secondary school in Muarát Siberut, Mentawai; a summer school in December 1957; temple site being purchased in Muarát Siberut; Ḥaṣíratu'l-Quds under construction.

Miss Arden Thur, pioneer in Cambodia, reported four believers there, of whom three are pioneers, and... urged the friends to visit Cambodia to stimulate the teaching work. Translation of a pamphlet into Cambodian is under way.

On May 1, 1957, the Hand of the Cause spoke to the friends about the nature of Bahá'í elections. He said there are three types of Assemblies: the local, which is chosen by direct election; the National, by a two-step election; and the International, by a three-step election. At present there is another type of Assembly, the Regional, which is temporary.

Mr. Furútán then pointed out that although the friends have known one another too short a time to be well acquainted, they will, if they turn their hearts to Bahá'u'lláh, be inspired to make the right choice in casting their ballots. The balloting then took place, and the later report of the tellers showed the following results: Mr. K. H. Payman, Mr. Jamshed Fozdar, Mr. A. Samimi, Mrs. Shirin Fozdar, Dr. E. Rasekh, Dr. K. M. Fozdar, Dr. R. Muhajer, Dr. F. Astani, and Mr. Kishin V. Khemani.

Further consultation on the points of the Six-Year Plan brought out that Bahá'í teaching in Malaya must be most circumspect because of the recent Independence movement which produced an upsurge of Muḥammadan propaganda there.

The Hand of the Cause, Mr. Furútán, spoke of the importance of women in the Faith, since they are the mothers who must teach the children. He also urged that in view of the Guardian's emphasis on the teaching work in Mentawai, more believers assist in that post.

It was estimated that a budget of Rp. 85,000 would be needed to finance the most necessary projects, which included three schools, three teachers, salaries and supplies, purchase of a temple site and burial grounds, and conducting the Summer School, which the Convention recommended be held in Mentawai.

Upon suggestion of the Hand of the Cause, Mr. Furútán, a Mentawai believer addressed the friends, stating that the Mentawai believers were illiterate; they know of Islam and Christianity, but have found their goal in the Bahá'í Faith.

Guardian's Message Read

On May 2, 1957, after reading of prayers in Persian, English, and Malay, the Convention Chairman read the long message from the Guardian, which the Hand of the Cause likened to a syllabus for the coming year of education. He pointed out that the goals of the Ten-Year Plan, which at first seemed so difficult of achievement, have now in large measure already been attained. He advised that these achievements be recalled if at any time the task seems difficult. Our goal, the oneness of mankind—the greatest goal of all time—will be achieved under the guidance of the Guardian.

The evening session of May 2 was opened with prayers in Persian, French, Arabic, and Malay, followed by reading of Ridván greetings from the Guardian.

The work done in Mentawai was praised by the Hand of the Cause, and the representative from Mentawai was given a flask of attar of rose with which to anoint the friends there.

Announcement was made of contributions of Rupiahs 5000 each from two of the friends, to the Temple Fund.

The names of the officers of the new National Spiritual Assembly were announced, as well as committees appointed and various actions taken by the Assembly.

The meeting adjourned following prayer offered by the Hand of the Cause.

After adjournment, slides of the Holy Places in Haifa and 'Akka, and the Temple in Wilmette, brought by the Hand of the Cause, were shown.

ACHIEVE TWO AFRICAN GOALS

Two more victories of the World Crusade have been announced by the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa, the incorporation of the National Assembly, and the incorporation of the first local Spiritual Assembly in that area.

On December 8, 1956, the National Spiritual Assembly applied to His Excellency, the Governor of the Uganda Protectorate, for a Certificate of Registration. The application was signed by the members of the National Assembly.

Exactly six months later, on June 8, 1957, the Honorable Charles Herbert Hartwell, K.C.M.G., Deputy Governor, signed Certificate of Registration No. 253, and the National Spiritual Assembly became a recognized corporate body with the title "The National Spiritual Assembly (Registered Trustees) of the Baha'is of Central and East Africa."

Even before the National Assembly's certificate was signed, the Local Spiritual Assembly of Dar-es-Salaam obtained their registration with a Certificate of Registration according to the Trustee's Incorporation Ordinance of Tanganyika, signed by the Registrar-General on April 30, 1957.

Thus, the Assembly that was founded by the first pioneer to Central and East Africa, and which had the first African declaration, became the first local Spiritual Assembly to be incorporated in the region.

South and West Africa
FIRST BAHÁ'Í MEETING IN S. RHODESIA TOLD

An account by an African Bahá'í of the first Bahá'í meeting in South Rhodesia in August 1956 has been released by the National Spiritual Assembly of South and West Africa.

"I have the pleasure to submit to you the account of the first meeting of the two Bahá'ís in this part of the world.

"Yesterday, Sunday, August 5, a cloudy and windy day, after having received a letter from Nora on Friday evening, found me walking to (the appointed meeting place). I could feel a wave of eagerness in my heart as I at certain minutes increased my speed by running.

"At 9:15 a.m. I was already a few yards from the place only to recognize Nora's car speeding south. Standing under a muchakata tree I read the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh interrupted only by long looks along the road. A few minutes later I got sight of a car coming at my side. 'Could it be?' I asked myself as I looked more keenly at it.

"A lapse of a few seconds found us amidst great excitement. It was a long shaking of hands that broke into smiling, a really-felt union after such a long separation. Having nowhere convenient enough to park, we drove the same road south. There was a cloud of dust as the car tore along this dusty road. We swung into a valley, rounded a turn, and turned off the road along a lawn that landed us near an old, broken, and unroofed building hidden from the road by wattle trees.

"Here we opened our meeting with a prayer specially selected for guidance in our effort to introduce the Faith in this part of the world. After this inspiring prayer we touched a number of points, sharing our difficulties in the introduction of the Faith.

"After minutes which I may say were of quietness though we were talking, we decided to have prayers,
(2) To form three new groups, one in each area: Barrow, Cordova, and Petersburg.

(3) To open nine virgin areas to the Faith, three in each area: Ft. Yukon, Kotzebue, Nenana, Homer, Kenai, Valdez, Metlakatla, Wrangell, and Douglas.

In addition to these goals, the publication of the Alaska Bahá'í News was inaugurated, and an Editorial Committee was appointed. Action was taken to publish an appeal to all believers for support of the National Fund.

It was reported that plans to incorporate the National Assembly are moving forward.

Attempts are to be made through area conferences for the consolidation of existing Assemblies in order that incorporation proceedings may be inaugurated as soon as they are firmly grounded.

A three acre Temple site has been offered as a gift by two Alaskan Bahá'ís, and a description of the site is being prepared to submit to the Guardian for approval.

Plans were initiated for the holding of summer schools in October in each of the three areas where Teaching Committees have been appointed.

Finally, it was announced that steps are being taken to obtain fuller recognition throughout the Territory of the Bahá'í Holy Days, and to legalize the Bahá'í marriage certificate.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY
SETS GOALS FOR YEAR

The newly formed National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, in its first meetings, concentrated upon the objectives of the Six Year Plan outlined in the Guardian's message to the national convention, and stressed by the American Hands of the Cause.

Specific goals were set up for this year to increase the number of Bahá'ís, Assemblies, and groups, as follows:

(1) To increase by 50 per cent the number of local Spiritual Assemblies, one in each area to which an Area Teaching Committee has been assigned.

(2) To form three new groups, one in each area: Barrow, Cordova, and Petersburg.

(3) To open nine virgin areas to the Faith, three in each area: Ft. Yukon, Kotzebue, Nenana, Homer, Kenai, Valdez, Metlakatla, Wrangell, and Douglas.

In addition to these goals, the publication of the Alaska Bahá'í News was inaugurated, and an Editorial Committee was appointed. Action was taken to publish an appeal to all believers for support of the National Fund.

BEGIN CONSTRUCTION ON HOUSE OF WORSHIP

The construction of the Bahá'í House of Worship in Sydney is scheduled to begin during the present season, the Australian Bahá'í Bulletin reports.

At the time of the national convention the site had been cleared and pegged, and initial excavation for the foundation was commenced.

The Temple, designed by Hand of the Cause Mason Remey, in conjunction with Sydney architect John Brogan, will be approximately 126 feet high and 100 feet in diameter at the base. It will be built of steel reinforced concrete.

The type of facing proposed, never before used extensively in Australia, will be a white quartz aggregate. This will give a rough finish to the large surfaces, and should confer distinctive beauty to a Temple already distinguished in design.

The base will rise to two sets of nine steps. The dome will be tiled, and the interior finish will be a sprayed colored cement.

The main hall and galleries will seat 500 persons.

A Temple of such dimensions, limited to a cost of £150,000, will demand great economy in construction. The essential element will be that once the work is started it must be continued and completed without interruption.

SOLOMON ISLANDS

FORM FIRST ASSEMBLY

One of the highlights of the National Convention of Australia was the report of Alvin Blum, pioneer of Honiara in the Solomon Islands, where the first local Spiritual Assembly was formed on April 21, 1957.

Mr. Blum's remarks on his experiences at Honiara over a three year period, leading up to the formation of the first local Assembly, were reported in the Australia Bahá'í Bulletin.

A native school teacher was the first believer in the Solomon Islands. There are about 100,000 natives in this island group, and 300 Europeans. Competition between the missions leaves the natives bewildered. It is often necessary to teach in Pidgin English, and fortunately the Solomon version is not unduly difficult.

Natives now come from distant islands asking for news of the Bahá’í Faith. The Bahá’ís of Honiara hold study classes every Sunday morning, and Wednesday night meetings are also held to study the Bahá’í Teachings. Mr. Blum found it necessary to purchase a bus to convey natives to these meetings.

The Honiara Bahá’ís have been able, despite great difficulties, to arrange for three Persian believers to enter the Solomon Islands.

TEACHING CONGRESS HELD IN PANAMA

The National Teaching Committee of the Republic of Panama held its first Teaching Congress for the Bahá’í year 114 in Panama City on July 20-21, 1957. This Teaching Congress was only one of the many conferences held simultaneously in every country of Central America from Mexico to Panama, in coordination with plans of the National Teaching Committee of Central America and Mexico.

The two day session opened with excellent reports on Bahá’í marriage and Bahá’í burial, by Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Keith Jr.; the importance of contributing to the Bahá’í Fund by Miss Mable Sneider; and the necessity of individual teaching of the Faith by Mr. Fred Berest.

Reports, compiled after much research, on the Indians of the Republic of Panama regarding their receptivity of outsiders into their settlements, their mode of living, and the opportunities of earning a living in these locations were fully discussed, resulting in stimulating... the pioneering spirit to answer our Beloved Guardian's plea to carry Bahá'u'lláh's Message to the Indians.

Most of the Indian settlements in Panama are located in very remote places and their living conditions are very primitive. Some are reported as being quite hostile toward an outsider invading their villages, making it necessary to send ahead for permission to enter. The only transportation into some of the settlements means traversing dangerously swift-flowing rivers with a competent guide and entering where malaria, typhoid, and yellow fever is prevalent. Nevertheless, inquiries and preparations are already being made by four of our selfless Bahá'ís for the purpose of making this sacrifice.

The Panama City community is conducting a home fireside on Saturday night, a fireside on Tuesday night and study class on Thursday at the Hazíratu'l-Quds each week.

The Canal Zone community has a home fireside each Monday night, and Sunday School classes for both adults and children are held in the Community Building in the Zone. The number of enthusiastic inquirers attending these meetings, and the request for Bahá'í books is increasing tremendously, resulting in the declaration of many new believers who are overflowing with the fire of spiritual love for Bahá'u'lláh and surging with the desire to promote His Blessed Cause.

U. N. CONFERENCE HELD IN ROME

A United Nations Non-Governmental Organizations Conference was held in Rome, Italy, on June 24-26, 1957.

The forenoon of June 24 was devoted to the registration of delegates and observers. Four hundred participants were present, representing 47 international and 106 national Non-Governmental Organizations; of the latter, 73 were Italian.

The official opening took place at 5:30 p.m. on that day with a speech by the Italian Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs Folchi, followed by the Secretary General of the Foreign Affairs Office, and by the Under Secretary General of the United Nations, Prof. Bokhari.

After the opening and the election of the Conference officers, the Conference divided itself into three commissions: Teaching about the U.N., Information Activities of the U.N., and Economic and Social Activities of the U.N. I enrolled in the third, as one could only choose one commission.

On June 25 the work of the commissions got underway, and because of the limited facilities at the Foreign Affairs Office, all went very slowly. Addresses were made by representatives of the U.N.I.C.E.F. and of the Economic Commission for Europe. Many resolutions were adopted, mostly of the necessity of better and more often information about the D.P.I. to the N.G.O.'s.

On June 26 another plenary session, the final, took place, and all resolutions from the three commissions were adopted, totalling well over forty.

Nearly all resolutions dealt with the matter of exchange of informa-

A delegation, with special emphasis to the observance of the Declaration of Human Rights, so often violated. The Bureau tried its best to avoid any reference to many of the most flagrant violations of recent times. It was reminded that those N.G.O.'s who have consultative status can approach this subject in the proper manner.

A warm invitation was made to all the N.G.O.'s to celebrate in an appropriate manner the Tenth Anniversary of the Declaration in December 1958.

My personal impression is that, although they tried their best, the Conference did not run too well. However, there was a spirit of elation on the part of many participants who were attending the Conference for the first time, mostly Italians.

There were no background papers available, nor agendas for the commissions, no releases or addresses, or of the final resolutions.

FIRST NATIVE BAHÁ'Í ENROLLED IN ICELAND

The joyful news of the declaration of the first native believer in Iceland has been announced by the Canadian New Territories Committee.

A letter from Marguerite Allman, pioneer in Iceland, has been published in Canadian Bahá'í News, describing this event:

"We have good news for you. Our first Bahá'í of Iceland has brought us her letter with nine beautiful dark red roses, one being a small bud which she described as herself, a budding rose.

"We celebrated the occasion by reading prayers and talking of the Faith. We burned the Bahá'í candle given to Amy by our beloved Shoghi Effendi. We have given her the tangerine Bill Carr left here for the first Icelandic Bahá'í. He picked it from the Holy gardens."

VISITORS TO TEMPLE SET NEW RECORDS DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Although sight-seeing busses in Chicago are not making regular runs to Wilmette and the Bahá'í House of Worship this summer, the number of visitors to the Temple this season has been phenomenal.

During the period from July 1 to August 12, the average number of visitors on Sundays has been 1,258, with the largest number being on August 4 when 1,751 visitors were registered.

The daily average during the same period, exclusive of Sundays, has been 320, or a grand total of 20,350 visitors in 46 days.

A check of where the visitors have come from during this same period reveals that they registered from practically every state in the United States and from 32 other countries. These countries were: Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Brunei, Burma, Canada, Cuba, Denmark, England, Formosa, France, Germany, Hawaii, India, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Lebanon, Mexico, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Peru, The Philippines, Puerto Rico, Scotland, Sweden, and Thailand. Many had heard of the Temple or had seen pictures of it in their own countries before coming to the United States.

During the summer months the Temple is open to all individuals or groups who wish to visit it, from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. daily, and on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays from 10:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. continuously. The half hour program of public worship at 3:30 p.m. every Sunday in the year is also open to all.

The gardens with their nine fountains have been particularly beautiful this summer and have attracted thousands of camera hobbyists as well as professional photographers and artists anxious to catch the magnificent patterns and colors of the nine gardens, as well as the changing lights and shadows of the Temple itself.

NEW DIRECTORY REVEALS INCREASE IN ASSEMBLIES

The study of the new Baha'i directory reveals that there are now 196 local Spiritual Assemblies in Continental United States. This represents a gain of sixteen over the previous year. Had it been possible to maintain the Assembly status of the sixteen communities which reverted to groups on April 21 this year, we would now have 212 local Assemblies. The re-establishment of these Assemblies is one of the major goals of the American Baha'i community this year.

Another interesting fact revealed by the directory is that of Assemblies formed on April 21. Nineteen are new and twelve were restored after having reverted to group status one or more years ago.

The National Spiritual Assembly has reported that because nine of the local Spiritual Assemblies did not return their annual report forms, it has been unable to compile complete statistics, but the following facts reflected in the reports that have been received indicate where emphasis must be laid in the home front teaching campaign:

Of the present 196 Baha'i communities in the United States, 36 or nearly one-fifth have only nine members. With no "margin of safety" these Assemblies present potential danger of reverting to group status. Since "the spiritual prizes" must be held at all costs, these are among the goals which members of the larger communities should consider when making plans to disperse, and they should also receive assistance from the larger neighboring communities.

The National Spiritual Assembly further reports that there are approximately ninety Baha'i groups having a membership of five or more. If these can be brought to Assembly status this year, together with the restoration of the disbanded Assemblies, the goal of 300 Assemblies in the United States will be easily achieved.

First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Santa Ana, Calif., formed on April 21, 1957.

Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Springfield, Mo., formed on April 21, 1957.
The report of the National Spiritual Assembly indicates a considerable increase in the number of communities now holding regular firesides; the number holding one or more institutes last year was twice the previous year, and 159 held regular study classes for inquirers, for beginning students, or for the deepening of the believers.

Finally, the report of the National Spiritual Assembly shows that there are 42 communities in the United States having a membership of more than twenty, and of these nine have a membership of more than fifty. These are the reservoirs for the "increased flow of pioneers" called for by the Guardian.

URGE FOLLOW-UP OF RACE AMITY DAY

Reports have been received by the Bahá'í Interracial Teaching Committee from twenty-five localities that observed the first Race Amity Day. The reports indicate that the Faith was successfully carried to many minority groups, representative of both Asia and Europe.

The committee wishes to stress the importance of follow-up with these new contacts and the necessity of initiating plans now for wider observance of this event next year.

If any communities have not yet reported their Race Amity Day program to the committee, please do so promptly.

SOUTH CENTRAL STATES TEACHING WORKSHOP SETS INDIVIDUAL GOALS

An Area Teaching Conference for the South Central States held in St. Louis, Missouri, June 30, took the form of a four-part workshop devoted to consultation on four subjects: Personal Preparation and Deepening, How to Make Contacts, Fireside Teaching and The Study Class. Each subject was considered in the light of the Area's goal "Each One Confirm One — in 1957." The following brief excerpts have been gleaned from the synopsis of the consultation:

The general formula for individual regeneration is: prayer, study, and teaching, and teaching is the goal of all our prayers and our study, and the fulfillment of our purpose. "Of all the gifts of God the greatest is the gift of teaching. It draweth unto us the Grace of God, and is our first obligation." (Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.)

The greatest asset in attracting and making contacts is "living the life" of a happy, active Bahá'í. We reflect what we are, and what we believe. This is the true "audio-visual aid" in teaching the Faith. The radius of our contacts expands as we increase our interest and activity in business, social, recreational and educational fields.

Fireside teaching is intimate and personal. The purpose in fireside teaching is to prepare the seeker for the study class, and beyond that confirmation in the Faith. As fireside "teachers" we are primarily guides. We must pray that we will be good "guides."

The goal for the study class is confirmation: preparing the seeker to become an active believer, actively engaged in continual personal deepening in the Cause, making contacts, holding regular firesides, and preparing students for confirmation and enrollment.

A follow-up conference is planned for September 22 in Kansas City, Missouri, when the effectiveness of the application of these teaching goals during the preceding three months will be evaluated.
STUDY WORLD RELIGIONS AT CHARLOTTESVILLE

Over 40 non-Bahá'ís attended the first of a series of talks on the "Great Religions of the World" at Charlottesville, Va., last April. The meetings were conceived by Mr. and Mrs. Challoner Chute as a means of attracting people to the Bahá'í Faith.

The first program was opened with an account of Israel illustrated with colored slides of the Holy Land, shown by Miss Mary Emerson, Head Librarian of the Institute of Textile Technology. Some of the slides showed views of the Shrine of the Báb, with its golden dome towering against the landscape of Mt. Carmel.

This was followed by a talk by Mr. Israel Posner, a native Israeli, who gave a vivid account of the Holy Land today. A lively discussion followed, and a number of those present asked to know more about the Bahá'í Faith. The realization of the Bible prophecy of the returning of the Jews to their homeland was forcibly illustrated.

The second meeting of this series was held on May 25, with a study of the Hindu Faith. Prof. Sunderam, Embassy, gave a fascinating account of the Hindu philosophy of the Vedas, the Bhagavad Gita, and the Hindu temple.

Further meetings in this series are planned for the Fall, with the Buddhist Faith scheduled as the next world religion to be studied.

The first two meetings attracted audiences that included natives of the United States, Israel, and the United Kingdom. The first two meetings attracted an average of 50 non-Bahá'í voices. Among the talks heard were: "The Jew and His Religion," by Mr. and Mrs. Challoner Chute; "The Buddhist Faith," by Dr. J. W. Posner, a native Israeli; "The Hindu Faith," by Prof. Sunderam, Embassy; and "The Jewish Faith," by a member of the Jewish community.

BAHÁ'Í IN THE NEWS

A Preliminary Program issued by the Society for the Study of Social Problems, meeting jointly with the American Sociological Society August 28-30, 1957, at Stoneham Hotel, Washington, D.C., is accompanied by a Report for Committee on War and Peace with a list of references "which will be utilized as soon as possible."

Among the books or articles listed, we find A Pattern for Future Society, by Shoghi Effendi, Bahá'í Declaration of Human Rights and Obligations, and The Secret of Divine Civilization by 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

The May 1957 issue of The New Outlook for the Blind contains a book notice of Marcus Bach's The Circle of Faith, reviewed by Dwight C. Smith, Ph.D. This review mentions the chapter devoted by Dr. Bach to Shoghi Effendi.

In Manhattan Beach, Calif., 11 business firms jointly paid for a series of large advertisements, each featuring "The Church of the Week." The Bahá'í notice, Sunday May 19, 1957, presents a large illustration of the Temple, a brief statement about it, the main caption being "This Earth Is But One Country and Mankind Its Citizens," below which is a list of "Truths For A New Day." The local Assembly's title and telephone number are given.

University College, The University of Chicago, has published a brochure of the summer courses illustrated with scenes of local interest. One of these is a view of Wilmette Harbor showing the boats, with the House of Worship in the background.

Wooster College Alumni Bulletin, March 1957, refers to a member of the class of 1939 as follows: "On February 10 William Alred and family saw the first public performance of a new song cycle "Nine Songs from Hidden Words of Bahá'u'lláh," composed by Lee Tichnor and sung by his wife Elizabeth (Panetta, '37), mezzo-soprano. It was at the Ethical Society in Philadelphia in a Bahá'í celebration of Negro History Week."

A beautifully illustrated brochure has been published by the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry entitled Chicagoan. The Bahá'í House of Worship is shown on page 31, along with several churches and cathedrals.

The Festival of Faith, "An Adventure in Peace Making," is the title of a pamphlet written for the San Francisco and Pomona Valley Festival of Faith Committee. The Bahá'í participation in both festivals is noted.

The Daily Oklahoman for May 10 announced a meeting sponsored by the Oklahoma City Baha'i community, the speaker to be Mrs. Ludmila van Sombeck, "an international religious leader and social worker from Vienna, Austria." The announcement was also carried by several other papers.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer has been publishing a series of articles under the general title "My Faith." Doris Dahl contributed an article on the Baha'i Faith in the issue of June 8, 1957.

From La Paz, Bolivia, has come a copy of the daily El Diario dated May 23, 1957, containing a three-column illustration of the House of Worship and a feature article entitled "The Baha'i's Celebrate Today the Revelation of a New Faith." It appeared during the UN Conference held in La Paz and led to a number of inquiries.

Yakima Herald, Sunday, June 23, 1957, published a feature story by Velma Baylor on the artistic career of Mrs. Victor de Araujo, with a photo of the artist seated at her easel. "Both Mr. and Mrs. de Araujo are active in the Baha'i Faith and take part in study classes and firesides."

"Elijah's Mountain Today" is the title of an article on Mount Carmel by Paula Arnold published in The Evening Sun, Baltimore, Md., on May 30, 1957. "Easily the most spectacular building on Mount Carmel, however, is not any of the churches mentioned, but the Baha'i Temple (i.e., Shrine of the Bab) with its golden cupola, standing halfway up the Mount, above landscaped gardens, visible from every point of the town."

Mercer Crose, Minneapolis Tribune staff writer, devoted considerable space to an article on the Faith in the Morning Tribune of May 27, 1957, under the title "Baha'i's Stress Unity." "The earth is but one country, and mankind its citizens." So reads the message over one of the entrances to the beautiful ornate temple of Wilmette, Illinois. "The Triumphant Baha'í Community"

Message From the Guardian

Announce (to) Hands (and) all National Assemblies (that) following (the) loss (of the) appeal (to the) Supreme Court, (the) Government expropriation order (has been) implemented, resulting (in the) complete evacuation (of the) remnant (of) Covenant-breakers (and the) transfer of all (their) belongings (from the) precincts (of the) Most Holy Shrine, (and the) purification, after six long decades, (of the) Haram-i-Aqdas (from) every trace (of their) contamination. Measures under way (to) effect transfer (of) title deeds (of the) evacuated property (to the) triumphant Baha'í community.

Received September 6, 1957

Dear Baha'i Friends:

The epoch-making victory won over the Covenant-breakers, thankfully announced by the beloved Guardian in his cable of June 3, has now been completely assured. Since the appeal submitted to the Supreme Court of Israel by the Covenant-breakers in the hope of frustrating the Government's order expropriating the property in the precincts of the Most Holy Shrine was denied, the Government order has been carried out and the “remnant of Covenant-breakers” evacuated. The Haram-i-Aqdas is now forever secure, and the titles to the evacuated property are being transferred to Baha'i ownership.

The epochal importance of this event was clearly unfolded by the beloved Guardian in his June message:

“The implementation of this order will, at long last, cleanse the Outer Sanctuary of the Qiblih of the Baha'i world of the pollution staining the fair name of the Faith and pave the way for the adoption and execution of preliminary measures designed to herald the construction in future decades of the stately, befitting Mausoleum designed to enshrine the holiest dust the earth ever received into its bosom.”

The present cable has been shared with all Hands of the Cause and all National Assemblies.

The Measure of Our Spiritual Success During The Current Year

Beloved Friends:

Since June 19, 1957, the date of the letter issued by the Hands of the Cause in America to all American Baha'is, the National Spiritual Assembly has called two different series of conferences in population centers throughout the country. Their purpose has been to arouse the greatest possible response to the Guardian's repeated appeals emphasized by the Hands.

All the believers are well aware both of the crucial character of Shoghi Effendi's appeals and the definite actions challenging our Baha'i community.

1. To pioneer abroad—in Europe, Latin America, Africa, or Asia.

2. To pioneer on the home front—to strengthen a weak community, to bring a group to Assembly status, or to establish a new isolated center.

3. To teach in one's own community.

4. To contribute devotedly to the National Fund.

How can we measure our collective success in responding to the first of these four forms of action? By counting the number of American pioneers in those areas abroad as of May 1, 1957, and noting the exact numbers of new pioneers from time to time who enter one of these fields. For example:

May 1, 1957—141 pioneers (including four youth) in Western Hemisphere goals—15 more pioneers by September 1. In Africa, 69 American pioneers (plus 18 children) as of May 1—one new pioneer by September 1. In Europe, 39 American pioneers as of May 1—six added up to September 1. In Asia, 39 American pioneers as of May 1—nine added by September 1.

To summarize: As of May 1, 1957, there were 286 American pioneers established in our various goals, and during May, June, July, and August 31 additional pioneers set forth from our country.

As for the measure of home front pioneers, we cannot start with a base figure as of May 1 for the simple reason that home front pioneering has been carried on since the first Seven-Year Plan which began in 1937, and moreover many believers have moved to a new address without reporting any pioneer intention.

Each non-pioneering Bahá'í must apply his own self-measurement to No. 3. Our own spiritual awareness will register success or failure, each for himself.

The Treasurer's simple and dignified monthly reports on contributions to the National Fund is our measure of collective success (or failure) in relation to No. 4.

These basic matters are essential points for discussion at Nineteen Day Feasts, as well as at regional and national conferences. The National Spiritual Assembly cannot relax in its responsibility for assuring in every possible manner the unqualified success of this supreme mission.

NSA Urges Mail Campaign Using Two Bahá'í Pamphlets

The National Spiritual Assembly is very pleased with the excellent response already made to the article in the June issue of Bahá'í News, "A Teaching Campaign to Revitalize the Home Community," urging wide distribution of the reprint of The Christian Century article by Marcus Bach, "Bahá'í: A Second Look," and the Bahá'í pamphlet, The Lord of the New Age, among friends, acquaintances, and contacts. However, a much wider distribution must be made if we are to carry out the beloved Guardian's instructions about bringing the Faith to the attention of the Christians.

Therefore, the National Spiritual Assembly is calling upon the friends to engage in an intensive widespread mail campaign by local Spiritual Assemblies and Bahá'í groups. In order to make this possible a special price is being offered by the Bahá'í Publishing Trust on these two items, the Marcus Bach article and The Lord of the New Age, if ordered in lots of 50 of each title. This price, which will be available only for the limited period from October 15, 1957, to January 31, 1958, will be $3.00 post-paid per kit of 50 of both publications, sent to one address. It is hoped that the members of communities and Bahá'í groups will combine their orders for kits to help lighten the burden and cost that this special offer imposes upon the Bahá'í Publishing Trust.

The local Spiritual Assemblies and Bahá'í groups are to organize the community campaign to insure maximum local distribution and yet avoid duplication of mailing so far as possible. It is left to the discretion of the Assemblies and groups to determine the method of building up the mailing list. However, this list must not be limited to personal contacts or current mailing lists. The use of telephone directories and similar lists should be considered.

In order that this campaign may be effective in producing new contacts and local response, the envelope in which the two items are mailed, or the pamphlet The Lord of the New Age, should carry a local address or telephone number where further information can be secured.

Local Spiritual Assemblies and the Bahá'í groups are requested to report to the National Spiritual Assembly by the end of January what distribution they have made of this material.

Clarity Distribution of "Christ and Bahá'u'lláh"

In order to clarify the matter of the distribution of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh by George Townshend, as announced in the June issue of Bahá'í News, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to make the following explanation:

The distribution of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh to leading clergy is being handled by the National Spiritual Assembly at the instruction of the Guardian. It is not anticipated that all clergymen whose names are submitted by the friends will be recipients of gift copies. Already more names have been received than the National Spiritual Assembly can supply by the number of free copies available. Since the distribution is aimed first at leading clergymen, sufficient facts should accompany each name recommended, to enable the National Spiritual Assembly to determine whether it should be included in the free distribution list.

Apart from this special project the friends are encouraged to make as wide local distribution as possible of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh, in addition to studying the book themselves. Gift copies should be placed in local public libraries and in the libraries of local divinity schools or colleges having departments of religious education or classes in comparative religions.

It friendly contacts have been established with local clergymen or leading laymen, gift copies may be presented to these individuals by the local Spiritual Assembly or Bahá'í group.

Copies may also be presented to any other friends or acquaintances of Christian background, particularly if they are known to be receptive to the Teachings of the Bahá'í Faith.

Only the distribution to clergymen of national and regional prominence is being done by the National Spiritual Assembly. If in doubt as to whether a particular individual may be on this list, the friends should inquire of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Legal Obstacles Cleared. Bahá'í Home Plans Proceed

The National Spiritual Assembly is happy to report to the friends that the legal case which has prevented the construction of the Bahá'í Home for the Aged, the first Dependency of the Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette, has now been settled, and architect's plans and other initial steps toward actual construction are being completed with all possible speed.

Baha'i Marriages Legalized
In Two More States

On May 21, 1957, the Governor of Texas approved an amendment to Article 4602 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas enlarging the list of those "authorized to celebrate the rite of matrimony" to include "officers of religious organizations, which officers are duly authorized by the organization to perform marriage ceremonies." This amendment was the direct result of the application of the Bahá'ís of Texas for the right to perform legal marriages.

On July 17, 1957, the Assistant Attorney General for the State of Tennessee rendered the decision that, since the Constitution of Tennessee prohibits the State government from showing any preference to any religious establishment or mode of worship, "marriages performed by the chairman of the local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís would be held to be valid marriages."

Thus 27 states and the District of Columbia in the continental United States have given legal recognition to marriages performed by the local Spiritual Assemblies.

Two More School Systems
Recognize Baha'i Holy Days

Upon the request of the Bahá'í group in Pendleton, Ore., some time ago, the Superintendent of the Pendleton Schools granted permission for Bahá'í children to remain away from classes on Bahá'í Holy Days, stating that this was in line with the policy of the school system with respect to "religious training."

Also, the Superintendent of Schools in Yakima, Wash., has informed the Local Spiritual Assembly of Yakima that "it is perfectly in order" for Bahá'í parents to request that their children be excused from classes on the days designated, but that it is understood that all pupils excused for any purpose whatever are always obliged to make up the work they have missed during their absence.

This now brings to 39 the number of school systems in 20 states of the United States, plus the entire state of Rhode Island, that recognize Bahá'í Holy Days.

Western Hemisphere
LIST JOB OPENINGS FOR PROSPECTIVE PIONEERS

With the latest renewed effort on the part of our National Assembly to urge dispersal from the larger centers to pioneering posts where the services of the friends are so urgently needed, the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee wishes to be of all possible assistance to all of you who wish to become pioneers in the near future: first, in suggesting definite places for you to consider; and second, in expediting your decision and plans for getting you to your post with all possible speed. For application blanks, write to our Secretary at the address shown below.

We have just received from the National Assembly of Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela useful information on conditions in the goal cities in those countries which is valuable to a prospective pioneer, and can be obtained by writing to this Committee. Copies of this material have also been sent to the secretaries of the local assemblies of New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Detroit, Milwaukee, Washington, and Cleveland.

In reference to Ecuador, we quote from that National Assembly's accompanying letter to us: "... It is the country where pioneers are most desperately needed now. Mrs. Woolson has just visited Guayaquil and feels that they must have pioneers there to help them with the teaching work or they will be in real danger of losing that Assembly... We shall be very, very grateful to you if you will concentrate on getting pioneers for Ecuador, and especially for Guayaquil at the moment, as Mrs. Woolson is the only pioneer in the country and we need help there more than in any other country (of the five northern countries of South America)."

Work opportunities in Guayaquil include the following: Opticians and optometrists, mechanics in general, electrical engineers, agronomists, textile technicians, naval engineers, fishermen, canning specialists, candy factory workers, English teachers, school teachers for the American School.

Of the five southern countries in South America, one of the neediest is Paraguay. Recently we have received from the National Assembly of Paraguay a report on a new industrial development which has the cooperation of the Paraguayan Government and the American Point Four Program. This development is planning a city, and there will be future opportunities for dentists, doctors, mechanics, small businesses, machine shops, grocery stores, etc. Job opportunities now are with the Cafe Company.

It is already becoming an international colony as there are seven or eight nationalities already represented, including Persians and Japanese. Many Indians live in the area (the Guardian stresses teaching the Indians of Paraguay). Educated people can find work with the Company in responsible positions. Cost of living is very little for a family, as meat and fruits are cheap and plentiful, and a vegetable garden can be grown. For fuller details, write us for a copy of the complete report sent by the Regional Teaching Committee of Paraguay.

More information has been received concerning opportunities for employment in Alaska. The National Teaching Committee of Alaska informs us that individuals wishing employment in Alaska can write for a job list to: The Alaska Territorial Employment Service, Box 1598, Fairbanks, Alaska.

More specific information has been received from the lone pioneer at Nome. Not only are opportunities plentiful, but Nome has been selected as a goal city for this coming year. If you are interested in pioneering in Nome, here is a list of openings immediately available: beauty shop owner; department store clerks; waitresses (summer); nurses; doctor; laboratory technician; x-ray technician; bush pilot; radio operator, electronics technician, or general mechanic, for Civil Aeronautics Administration; Grade and High School Teachers.

For further information regarding any of the above, please write to Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, secretary, 73 College Road West, Princeton, N.J.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

Alaska Assembly Announces First Endowment, Teaching Activities

The National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, through its new publication Alaska Bahá'í News, gives details of the purchase of the first local endowment, and news of some of the teaching activities under their jurisdiction in the September issue.

On May 2, 1957, Wilma and Arthur Gregory presented the gift of a ten acre tract of land to the Anchorage Recording District Local Spiritual Assembly, thereby fulfilling the Guardian's request to initiate local Bahá'í endowments.

The endowment site is located about one-half mile from the National Endowment on high, nearly level but well-drained ground. It is accessible on two sides by gravel roads. With careful clearing, a sweeping view of the Chugach Mountains can be developed.

In a letter through his secretary, written on July 12, the Guardian expressed his gratitude, saying, "This will give the Faith a greater prestige and standing there. The spiritual vitality shown by the friends in Alaska pleases him greatly. He assures you of his prayers for you all, and for the rapid progress of the work in that region, and throughout Alaska."

Teaching Activities

The Native People's Teaching Committee reports that Mrs. Kathy Rodgers has been invited by the Alaska Health, Education, and Welfare Council Executive Committee to be a member of the Council. They stated that since she is very interested in the native people and their problems, she would be a great asset to their organization. The Council is primarily interested in getting to the root of the problem concerning natives in outlying areas.

Teaching activities are increasing in Juneau since the formation of the Local Assembly there. Firesides are being held by individual believers, and a deepening class in God Passes By is proving very inspiring for the Bahá'ís. A series of newspaper articles on the history and basic teachings of the Faith is being run in the weekly newspaper, and there has been favorable comment from local residents.

Miss Margaret Pirkey, one of the first pioneers to come to Ketchikan during the World Crusade, has accepted a teaching post at Barrow with the Alaska Native Service.

At Ketchikan, Rex King conducted a series of six public meetings on Comparative Religion at the Pioneer Hall.

Anchorage Bahá'ís conducted public firesides at the Hazratu'll-Quds during the summer months, in addition to the regular firesides in the homes of believers.

Bahá'í News for June 1957, page 13, column 2, line 21, refers to Jennie Anderson as the first pioneer to Sweden. Mrs. Alice Dudley was the first pioneer, having preceded Mrs. Anderson by approximately two weeks.

TEACHING CONFERENCES HELD IN TASMANIA AND QUEENSLAND

Two Regional Teaching Conferences were held during June, in Hobart, Tasmania, and Brisbane in Queensland, Australian Bahá'í News reports.

At the Tasmanian Conference in Hobart on June 1, representatives from Hobart, Launceston, Clarence, and Glenorchy attended. Also present were Greta Lamprell and Glad Parke, who were waiting to return to Tahiti.

The entire convention time was spent in studying the Guardian's message to the Australian Convention.

Brisbane Meeting

Nine believers attended the Queensland Conference in Brisbane on June 2. The morning session was devoted to reading the Guardian's Convention message, and in the afternoon there was a detailed study and discussion of the message, with particular reference to the instructions for the work to be done in the year ahead.

A considerable amount of discussion took place on the Guardian's repeated appeal for the re-dedication of each individual believer, and of ways in which the friends could assist each other in deepening their knowledge and understanding of the Bahá'í Teachings.

TEACHING OPPORTUNITIES OPEN IN GRAZ

Bahá'í-Nachrichten, publication of the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria, has reported Mrs. Hermi Muhlschlegel's recent trip to Graz, Austria.

"On the train going to Graz there were many opportunities to tell fellow travelers about the Bahá'í Faith and to distribute literature," Mrs. Muhlschlegel wrote.

The funeral of a young Persian Bahá'í medical student took place during her visit. "It was attended by many persons, particularly fellow students, among them many Muslims who were greatly impressed at hearing a German woman say 'Ya-Bahá'u'lláh' and an American and a German repeat prayers of Bahá'u'lláh.

HAND OF CAUSE VISITS ONTARIO AND QUEBEC

Zikru'lláh Khádem, Hand of the Cause from Iran, spent several weeks during the summer visiting various Ontario and Quebec communities with his family.

Canadian Bahá'í News, at the time of publication of their August issue, listed Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa, and Montreal as some of the places Mr. Khádem visited. His deep understanding of the Guardian, and his inspiring account of the great pioneering work were greatly appreciated.
Closing of Geneva International Bureau
Recalls Devoted Efforts of Secretary

It was during the summer of 1928 that Mrs. Anne Lynch first joined the staff of the International Baha'i Bureau in Geneva, during Miss Julia Culver's time, when she worked faithfully until May 1957—30 years of faithful, efficient, and devoted service.

After the departure of Miss Margaret Lenz in 1939, Mrs. Lynch alone was responsible for the Bureau, and was the only believer in Geneva at that time.

The outbreak of the war isolated Switzerland from most parts of the world, though it was possible throughout the duration to correspond with the beloved Guardian, and, with great care, also with the believers in Germany.

It was a period when the Guardian's messages of comfort and hope encouraged Mrs. Lynch through eight years of loneliness and trials, and enabled her to bring about a closer relationship between the few scattered believers in Switzerland: Zurich and the northeastern cantons. This was done by periodic visits, intensive correspondence, and a monthly bulletin in German, especially issued for this purpose.

Some of the specific tasks accomplished during Mrs. Lynch's service at the Bureau were:

In 1933: Translation of The Hidden Words into Russian. This work was published by instructions from the Guardian, who provided the costs of publication.

Between 1939 and 1946: Printing of the revised edition of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era in German. The old edition and the completed type of its revised version were both destroyed in Germany, together with most Baha'i literature, by order of the government. The type script of the revised edition was preserved, and brought over the border by Mrs. Vautier of Zurich, with great personal danger to herself. The new edition was printed in Geneva.

Printing of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era in Polish. This translation, made by Lidia Zamenhof, daughter of the late Dr. Zamenhof, founder of Esperanto, has been available for some time. Following instructions from the Guardian, an appeal for funds was made by Mrs. Lynch from the Geneva Bureau, and contributions were sent from the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States and Canada, and individual believers. The edition was printed in France, proofs being corrected in a Swiss internment camp for Polish officers, by Mrs. Lynch's nephew, born in Poland.

Paris Talks of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in French. A translation of this book by a Paris believer was made available. With the approval of the Guardian, and with financial assistance by Mrs. Dreyfus-Barney, Mrs. Lynch stencilled and mimeographed 250 copies of this book for teaching work in the French-speaking countries.

Swiss Bulletin in German. In order to cement the unity of the Swiss believers and stimulate their study of the revealed Word in this period of isolation, a monthly bulletin in German was started in 1938, and kept up for eight years. This was approved by the Guardian, who instructed Mrs. Lynch to include in it material of "doctrinal, devotional, and administrative nature." Accordingly, passages were selected and these formed the contents of the Bulletin. Nothing was included other than the words of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Guardian. One of these bulletins carried the complete text of the Master's Tablet to Dr. Forel.

The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh in German. The translation of this work was sent by the German believers, and stencilled and mimeographed by Mrs. Lynch in 1939.

Swiss Summer School. A gathering was arranged with the approval of the Guardian, who sent a precious message of encouragement, at which five believers, together with Mrs.

Attendants at Green Acre Bahá'í School, Eliot, Maine, August 25, 1957, following the morning meeting when Zikrul'lah Khadem, Hand of the Cause (center), gave a message from the Guardian.
Lynch, studied several important points of the Teachings, at Mrs. Gladys Vaulier's country home near Zurich.

Bulletin in Esperanto. In 1945 a bulletin in Esperanto was started and carried for three years, with the help of Vuk Echter of Prague and Mrs. Etty Graeffe, first representative of the American European Teaching Committee in Geneva. This Bulletin contained not only the revealed word, but short articles and spotlight news of the progress of the Faith, suitable for non-Baha'is. This teaching medium had great success among European Esperantists, and the highest tribute it received came from a non-Baha'í Esperanto magazine in Germany, stating that "... of all the Esperanto papers and magazines we receive, yours is of the highest quality, loftiest ideals, and impeccable presentation." This Bulletin was suspended as the world tasks of the Baha'i community were becoming centered on more definite goals, but meantime and in connection with it, the following were stencilled and mimeographed by Mrs. Lynch in Esperanto, as further means of teaching for countries where no Baha'i literature existed, mainly those of Eastern Europe:

Goal of a New World Order by Shoghi Effendi, Unfoldment of World Civilization by Shoghi Effendi, and Some Answered Questions by 'Abdu'l-Bahá (Twenty Questions). All three of these were translated by Lida Zamenhof.

Almost all of the Baha'ís of Poland (then in seven localities) were attracted and confirmed in the Faith through the means of these teaching efforts in Esperanto.

In the year 1945, when communications opened again with the Western Hemisphere, many letters were received asking for Baha'i news. It was then that Mrs. Lynch started a general letter in English.

Bulletin in English. This bulletin was first entitled Glimpses from Europe, and started with an issue of two pages. Gradually the bulletin widened in scope and became a summary of all Baha'i news. It was then called the News Exchange. The beloved Guardian more than once expressed his approval and satisfaction with this work. He also mentioned it in his message The Challenging Requirements of the Present Hour.

The main idea of the enlarged bulletin was suggested to Mrs. Lynch by the contents of the General Letter from Haifa, which ceased with the outbreak of the war. That letter always gave some news of the Faith in Eastern countries, yet its circulation did not extend to the individual believer.

At the commencement of the Second Seven Year Plan in 1946, a section of the Geneva News Exchange faithfully recorded the progress of the pioneer work then being done in the ten goal countries of Europe, under the direction of the European Teaching Committee of the National Assembly of the United States.

Gradually news other than European was included in the bulletin, and the Guardian's general messages were added, making a bulletin reaching from 20 to 25 pages.

The year 1957 brought the inevitable change which comes from growth. The formation of the new National Spiritual Assembly naturally absorbed this work of the International Baha'i Bureau and its news letter, and its publication was discontinued.

We miss the International Baha'i Bureau and its news letter, but we rejoice exceedingly over the new step forward in the progress of our beloved Faith.

Mrs. Lynch is preparing to continue her loyal and valuable work in other fields of service, and we pray that continuing confirmations will bless her steadfast efforts wherever she may go.

—Honor Kempton
Seriousness of purpose, an attitude of dedication and earnestness on the part of students and faculty alike characterized the Geyserville Baha'i Summer School this year more than ever before.

A talk by Hand of the Cause Zikru'lllah Khadem was the high point of the school sessions. Everyone felt exhilaration during his visit. He gave such a profound and intimate glimpse of the Guardian, his consecration, his self-sacrifice, and his desires for the progress of the Faith. Mr. Khadem's own example of untiring service was an inspiration to those who heard him.

There was also a stream of other individuals who gave outstanding service to the Faith; as one left another would be arriving—an Auxiliary Board member, visiting pioneers, and returned pilgrims.

Auxiliary Board member Mrs. Florence Mayberry brought a soul-stirring message from the Guardian, and another from the American Hands of the Cause; and she gave such a graphic word-picture of her visit to Haifa that she made her listeners feel they had been there.

There was information about Africa from pioneers Rex and Mary Collison, on a visit from Uganda; Valerie Wilson from Liberia; and Glen and Lois Lissner from Nigeria. There was knowledge of American Indians from Nancy Phillips of the Indian Service Committee; Grace Dean, who had taught on the Apache Indian Reservation; Eugene and Melba King of the Alaskan Indians and Eskimos; and Nelson Greene of the Makah Indians.

Louise Groger, visiting from Chiloe, Chili, made the needs of South America seem very real. Dwight Allen, who taught in Athens, Greece, emphasized the present most urgent goals in Europe. Mamie Seto from Hong Kong arrived in time to impart the feel of the Orient.

Attendance for the six weeks compared favorably with all previous years, with a total of 512 registrants, including children who attended regularly at least one session. In addition there were frequent day or weekend visitors who did not live on the campus. At the Unity Feast between four and five hundred were present.

A succession of experts in the sciences, the arts, and other fields of knowledge, including faculty members from Yale and from Stanford, donated their services to instruct the classes, each approaching the subject from a different viewpoint, so that one could benefit by repeating for several sessions.

The courses were well-balanced to avoid duplication and yet include essentials. A brief description of these courses follows:

"The Word—Sacred Writings of Bahá'u'lláh" was presented sometimes as a survey and sometimes as an intensive study of a small section. The creative word, it was emphasized, should change the reader; something new and different should
NEGRO SPIRITUALS FEATURED AT BAHÁ’I PUBLIC MEETING

An interracial public meeting titled “The Singing Word” was presented by the Bahá’ís of Independence, Mo., at the Watson Memorial Methodist Church on July 25.

Featured was the Independence Male Chorus, a group of 15 Negro singers from the Independence churches, with narration by Mrs. William Alexander, a Bahá’í of St. Joseph, Mo. The program was modelled after one written by Ellsworth Blackwell, titled “The Relation of the Negro Spiritual to the Bahá’í Faith.”

Many of the spirituals were written over 100 years ago, and the audience of over 50 people, mostly non-Bahá’ís, were pleased to have the opportunity of hearing these old songs.

Before the choral presentation began, Mrs. Alexander spoke briefly on the Bahá’í Faith. Bahá’í prayers, recited by local Bahá’í children, opened and closed the program.

Each member of the choral group was given a copy of the manuscript used, not only to acquaint them with the order of presentation of the spirituals, but that they might have information about the Faith. Bahá’í literature was also distributed at the meeting.

The response to this program indicates its value for establishing contact with Negro groups by Bahá’í communities that do not as yet have Negro representation.

REFERENCE LIBRARY COMMITTEE SEEKS HELP ON INDEX PROJECT

The National Reference Library Committee needs help on the Master Index Project in listing Verities and Summaries that are to be indexed. Full instructions (simple ones, this time) and an assignment will be sent on request. This is an excellent deepening technique and the work can be done at odd moments with no time limit for completing assignments. Write Mrs. Marian C. Lippitt, secretary; 1587 Virginia Street East; Charleston 1, W. Va.

The following mimeographed articles and compilations by Mrs. Gene Crist are still available at 20c each or in sets of four at 75c a set: God’s Everlasting Covenant, Prophecy, Progressive Revelation, and The Return of Christ. This material is intended for the use of the Baha’is and not for general distribution. Their purpose is to help the believers in their teaching efforts to establish a “bridge” from Christianity to the Baha’i Faith. One compilation on Teaching the Baha’i Faith, costs 15¢ when ordered with the above. Order from the National Reference Library Committee Secretary.

EVERETT, WASH., TELLS OF GROWTH TO ASSEMBLY STATUS

One of the new local Spiritual Assemblies formed on April 21, 1957, was that of Everett, Wash. The story of its growth from several pioneers in a goal city to Assembly status is an inspiration to all.

When settlers Theodore and Pauline Thorson left Denver, Colo., they were intent on a foreign goal. Everett, Wash., was selected as a temporary goal while seeking an overseas job. Two and one-half years later that job still eluded them but an Assembly on the home front had been born!

Shortly after their arrival in Everett, the Thorsons learned through the Area Teaching Committee that two Baha’is lived in this goal city, but by some strange coincidence had never met. This mystery was cleared up when it became known that Harry Matlock, a new enrollee in the Merchant Marine, had never experienced Baha’i group activity, having been enrolled by Dr. John Fozdar in a hospital overseas.

The other Baha’i, Mrs. Betty Eastman, was a young working mother who also had never participated in Baha’i group efforts.

A meeting of this group was speedily accomplished. A correspondent and recording secretary were elected; before the evening was over plans had been made for a weekly deepening class to evolve, as contacts were made, into a fireside, for two public meetings monthly, accompanied by publicity, and for a weekly business meeting for consultation and evaluation on what was to be accomplished in this goal.

With strict observance of all Feasts and Anniversaries an indispensable part of the plan, it can be seen that such a complete schedule of activity would call for mutual effort, cooperation, and consecration on the part of each member. A constant workshop atmosphere and the keeping of complete secretarial records brought deepening in the techniques and methods of Baha’i community living to the group.

It soon became apparent that a new officer was needed: a treasurer to handle contributions to the Local and National Baha’i Funds. Appointments of a librarian and an archivist committee were also made as the need arose.

Throughout the first six months the public meetings met with excellent success. Out-of-town speakers were invited to participate, and contacts through newspaper publicity alone averaged six to twelve for each meeting.

The twice-monthly meetings were reduced to one each month, and fireside activity was increased.

The first enrollee, Rowland Strandell, came in through newspaper publicity and an invitation to participate in a weekly fireside.

Transfers into Everett included Mrs. Jessie Wood, who had been an isolated believer outside Everett for some time, and the Wesley Bakers of Bellingham, Wash., enabling Mr. Baker to take a teaching position in nearby Lynnwood.

The first loss in membership came with the transfer of Mrs. Betty Eastman to Richmond Highlands, but shortly before Ridvan 1957 Sylvia Strandell announced her desire to enroll and help form a new Assembly, which now began to appear a reality.

The climax came when Mr. and
Foster Mudd of Neah Bay, compelled by reasons of health and employment to seek another goal, chose Everett, bringing into being the new Assembly.

During this time, as the activities in Everett increased, the activities of the isolated believers in the nearby towns of Marysville, Monroe, and Lake Stevens also increased. These friends began to attend the various meetings and to bring contacts in support of the Everett public meetings. Several fine joint efforts were held. As Everett's numbers increased, likewise did her sister communities.

The truly great lesson we have learned is the strength of the isolated believers is firmly functioning and can stand alone. A part of the total growth in this area can be attributed to the very active participation in conferences and conventions, cooperation and close contact with the Area Teaching Committee, and contact with the national committees who can so well exchange ideas and stimulate.

Since the formation of the Everett Local Spiritual Assembly there has been one transfer out of the community, but a new enrollment has replaced the loss, so we are still ten in number and hopeful of fruit from our current firesides.

Guardian announces Series of Five Intercontinental Conferences and Appointment of Eight Additional Hands of the Cause

With this issue of Baha'i News each believer will receive a copy of an epochal document from the beloved Guardian bearing the foregoing title and addressed to the Hands of the Cause of God and to the National Spiritual Assemblies throughout the world.

The announcement of five Intercontinental Conferences to be held during 1958 in five continents of East and West marks another great historic turning-point in the annals of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, summoning the entire Bahá'í World to a new and higher spiritual potency. The Guardian's enumeration of the tasks performed discloses the vast realm of victorious achievement that the believers have already attained since the inception of the Ten-Year Plan. His appointment of eight new Hands of the Cause effectively strengthens this institution created by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in His Will and Testament.

The conduct of an Intercontinental Conference in Chicago calls for the formulation of plans which the National Spiritual Assembly will announce to the believers at the earliest possible date.

It is for us now, and continuously, to enter into the Guardian's creative, triumphant vision and prepare ourselves spiritually and mentally for the conquests required for the consummation of the next phase of the World Crusade, conquests calling for the aid of an infinitely larger number of believers than presently comprise the community of the Greatest Name.

Second Series of Regional Conferences Attended by Over 2000 Bahá'ís

The second series of 15 conferences called by the National Spiritual Assembly and held during the third and fourth weekends of September, drew a remarkable attendance of believers numbering more than 2,000.

The purpose of this series was: (1) to discuss the forms of service defined in the letter written by the Hands of the Cause on June 19 to every American believer, (2) to bring to fulfillment the responsibility of the individual American Bahá'í presented in that letter, and (3) to discuss the role of the various institutions of the Faith concerned with pioneer settlement and teaching work under the Ten-Year Plan. The agenda consisted of five topics: This Critical Period in Bahá'í History; Four Forms of Service: The Supreme Goal; Pioneering Opportunities, and What Can I Do?

Consciously in the minds of all believers present was this sentence in the letter from the Hands of the Cause: "The most important moment in our entire life is surely that in which, at last realizing the real measure and purpose of the Guardian's successive messages, each American Bahá'í, acting for himself in love of Bahá'u'lláh, makes his final decision to consecrate himself in service to a God-given Faith."

Pioneer pledges were distributed to all present at the conference who could immediately set in motion plans to pioneer either abroad or at home. While not many pledges have yet been returned to the National Spiritual Assembly, a number of assemblies have reported that there is a decided acceleration among the members of their communities in planning toward dispersal.

More than 150 Bahá'í communities were represented at the 15 conferences, as well as several hundred groups and isolated centers. Thirteen of the conferences were conducted by members of the National Spiritual Assembly, and two by well-qualified representatives, Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin and Mrs. Jesma Herbert.

An important by-product of these gatherings was the gratification and benefit derived by the believers as well as by the members of the National Spiritual Assembly themselves from the frank, heart-to-heart consultation on the major tasks and problems facing the American Bahá'í community and its National Assembly.

World Religion Day
A National Bahá'í Event

World Religion Day was instituted by the National Bahá'í Assembly in 1950. Its celebration on January 19, 1958, marks the ninth annual observance of this significant public event.

The purpose of World Religion Day is to elevate the minds of sincere seekers above the confusion and conflict of historic creeds, and inspire them with the vision of the oneness of all revealed faiths proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh, Founder of the Bahá'í World Religion a hundred years ago.

That the teachings of all the Prophetic Founders of religion emanate from the same God, exalt the same ideals and principles, and are nothing else than successive expressions of the same sublime truths — this is the great Message which World Religion Day proclaims. Apart from spiritual unity in worship of the one God, humanity can find no justice nor peace, Bahá'ís affirm.

Since 1950, local Assemblies and groups have publicized World Religion Day so successfully that this public event is now listed in the Calendar of Special Months and Days sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

For 1958 a threefold service is available to Bahá'ís: a press release and suggested newspaper advertisement, distributed by Bahá'í Press Service to all local press representatives; a very attractive World Religion Day display poster; and a World Religion Day 8 1/2 x 11 sheet for free local distribution, setting forth the purposes of the event and quoting relevant passages from public addresses made by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in America.

The poster, a photograph of which appears on this page, measures 14x17 inches and comes in two tones of blue. It is printed on paper only and can be obtained at 25 cents each or five for $1.00, mailed in a tube by third class mail. The place and time of the local meeting and the name of the local Spiritual Assembly or Bahá'í group can be lettered in the space below the sketch provided for the purpose. A hard-backed poster can be made by mounting it on cardboard with rubber cement and an easel can be attached for a stand-up poster.

The single sheet statement, entitled, "World Religion Day" can be ordered in lots of 50 for $1.00 post paid.

Orders for the poster and for the statement are to be sent with accompanying remittance to: Bahá'í Press Service, 434 Thomas Avenue, Rochester 17, New York. Orders sent to any other office will delay delivery.

ARThUR L. DAHL ELECTED TO NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Robert W. McLaughlin has resigned from the National Spiritual Assembly because repeated absences from the country would make it impossible for him to perform his duties as a member this year.

This action necessitated a by-election by the delegates to the last National Convention to fill the vacancy.

The voting, held on September 28, resulted in the election of Arthur L. Dahl of Pebble Beach, Calif., to replace Mr. McLaughlin.

GUARDIAN HERALDS
OPENING OF NEW PHASE OF RICH PROMISE

A message from the Guardian, added to a letter from his Secretary to the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa in reply to its communications, contains passages of interest to all Bahá'ís. Baha'i News has extracted these paragraphs for reprint.

"The year that has just elapsed, marking the opening phase in the progressive unfoldment of the destiny of the Bahá'í communities, labouring singly and collectively for the expansion and consolidation of the institutions of the embryonic World Order of Bahá'u'lláh in both Central and East Africa, has witnessed a series of achievements, in both the teaching and administrative fields, that are truly heartening, and may well be regarded as worthy of emulation by their sister communities, now embarked on similar enterprises in the Northern, the Western, and Southern territories of the far-flung African continent.

"Particularly in Uganda and Kenya—among the first of the Negro-inhabited territories to be warmed and illuminated by the rays of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh—now leading the field numerically, and exhibiting a vitality and a spiritual receptivity second to none among the communities spread over that continent, has this progress been noticeable. In the steady increase in the number of believers—though not as spectacular as in the early days when the Faith was introduced in these territories—in the multiplication of centres, testifying to the widespread diffusion of the light of this Revelation over such extensive areas within their confines; in the diligence, the loyalty, the courage, and dogged perseverance displayed consistently by the elected representatives responsible for the conduct of Bahá'í affairs in these areas; in the enthusiasm and organizing ability which these representatives, aided by the rank and file of the faithful, so whole-heartedly collaborating with them in the pursuit of a common and glorious task, have demonstrated since the announcement of the project of the construction of the Mother Temple of Africa; in their recent success in incorporating the first of the three newly emerged Regional African Assemblies,—in these, as well as in less conspicuous fields, the standard-bearers of an all-conquering Faith, in these highly promising contiguous territories, a number of whom have distinguished themselves through their superb exploits far away from their homes, have set an example which posterity will not fail to extol, and which the organized followers of the Faith, not only in Africa but in other continents of the globe, will do well to follow.

"... A new phase, pregnant with rich promise and undreamt-of possibilities, is undoubtedly opening with the founding and rise of the first Mashriqu'l-Adhkar in the African continent, following upon the three successive milestones of the Faith in that area on the eve of the launching of the Ten-Year Plan, by the inception of the World Spiritual Crusade and, more recently, by the emergence of the Bahá'í Regional Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa.

"This latest stage in the unfoldment of the Mission entrusted to the stalwart promoters of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in so promising and privileged an area, must be distinguished, and exceed the previous period during which it was born, and the machinery of its Administrative Order set up, by acts so brilliant as to throw into shadow the magnificent feats they have already achieved in its service. . . ."

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY INCORPORATED

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of North East Africa was granted official incorporation under its present title on April 10, 1957, by the Egyptian government.

The original incorporation was effected on December 26, 1934, under the name of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Egypt. Subsequently the document was amended to include the Sudan on November 17, 1949, and in April 1956 the National Assembly jurisdiction was enlarged to include North East Africa.

TEACHING IN SOMALIA

Teaching activities in Mogadiscio, Somalia, since Ridván 1957 have included two new translations, two teaching conferences, many firesides, and extension teaching work, the Mogadiscio Local Spiritual Assembly has reported.

The translations of a pamphlet into Somali and Bravanese were completed in time for Ridván. Two cables and a letter from the Guardian were received, expressing appreciation for this accomplishment.

The Teaching Committee arranged two inspiring Teaching Conferences the first two weekends of June. The program was varied and lively, and included a survey of the Guardian's Ridván message, talks on the responsibility of the individual to Queensland was one of the Baha'i Faith's state assemblies. Each year, a fireside was held every Friday evening, and many firesides are held each week. From Ridván to the middle of August, 142 fireside meetings have been held. Extension teaching is carried on in Hafun and Afgoi by Mohamed Musa and Mohamed Saleh. Cyrus Samandari has made a number of teaching trips, sometimes accompanied by one of the Somali friends, and considerable teaching work has been done.

Alaska

CONFERENCE STRESSES TEACHING METHODS

A Baha'i Summer Teaching Conference emphasizing methods of presenting the Baha'i teachings on God's Eternal Covenant, Progressive Revelation, Prophecy, and the Return of Christ was held at Fairbanks, Alaska, on August 10-11, 1957. Each subject was given a half-day's time on the program, and each was presented jointly by two Baha'is.

In addition to the daytime conference, a fireside was held each of the two evenings, to which contacts were invited.

QUEENSLAND SCHOOLS RECOGNIZE HOLY DAYS

A further step in the recognition of the Baha'i Faith in the state of Queensland was achieved in July, when the Department of Public Instruction granted official recognition of the Baha'i Holy Days, the Australian Baha'i Bulletin reports. All schools and educational institutes have been instructed in the Queensland Educational Gazette that children of Baha'i parents are to be considered absent with adequate reason on these days, and that teachers who are members of the Baha'i Faith are to be granted unpaid leave on request.

Also reported in Koala News is another translation of Basic Facts of the Baha'i Faith into the Bogotu language. This language is in addition to the assigned World Crusade goals.

Canada

GRAND MANAN ISLAND ENROLLS FIRST BELIEVER

The enrollment of the first native believer on Grand Manan Island, a goal of the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly, has been reported by the Canadian New Territories Committee Bulletin.

Doris Richardson, the Baha'i pioneer on Grand Manan Island, wrote: "How wonderful to be able to share with you my supreme joy! After four years... to have someone say they wanted to be a Baha'i, and begin to read and search is perhaps an experience that is indescribable. It has been my feeling for some time that Edward Somers was a believer, and recognized Baha'u'llah; nevertheless he had not really done any studying for himself until this summer.

"Then, when Amo Chesley was here recently on her vacation, he declared his belief in the Baha'i Faith to her... Bless him, for he little realizes what it means to be the first believer on Grand Manan."

NEW BAHAI GROUP FORMED IN SAMOAN ISLANDS

The Canadian New Territories Committee Bulletin has published the news of the formation of a new Baha'i group in Pago Pago, Samoan Islands. This brings the total in the Samoan Islands to one Assembly and five groups.

JAMAICA RECOGNIZES BAHAI MARRIAGES

Jamaica has extended legal recognition to Baha'i marriages, the National Spiritual Assembly of the Greater Antilles has reported.

New Zealand

BEGIN SEARCH FOR TEMPLE SITE

A Temple Site Committee has been appointed by the National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand to acquire a suitable location for the Mother Temple of New Zealand.

Instructions from Haifa have been received by the National Assembly that the site is to be located on the outskirts of Auckland, easy of access, and of three or four acres in extent, the New Zealand Baha'i Newsletter states. No publicity is to be given to any site under consideration.
NINETEEN CITIES REPRESENTED AT JAPAN'S FIRST SUMMER SCHOOL

Another of the goals of the Six-Year Plan was achieved on August 24, when a Hand of the Cause, a member of the Auxiliary Board, and friends from 19 cities in Japan gathered in Takarazuka to inaugurate Japan's First Summer School.

In response to a message sent on August 25 by the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly, the beloved Guardian cabled: "Congratulations attendants historic summer school fervently praying expansion vailed activities. Love. Soon.”

The Takarazuka Hotel was an ideal selection by the committee for its convenience to a majority of the Bahá’í communities in the Kansai area.

The program prepared by the Committee ordinarily would have required a week to complete, especially as all talks had to be translated into two other languages; the official languages being Japanese, Persian and English. However, with an able chairman and translators, speakers and attendants all entered with enthusiasm into the program and realized its fulfillment in three days, with no time for recreational activities.

Thirteen topics were presented, dealing with the history, teachings, and administration of the Faith. There was a public lecture in the evening of August 24, with two talks, "Need for World Religion," and "Bahá’í World Faith."

A feature of the final day's session was a Panel Discussion on "Goals of the Six-Year Plan," with a chairman and six participants.

Each morning, afternoon, and evening session was preceded by devotions in the three languages. At the opening session Mr. M. Zenimoto, on behalf of the School Committee, welcomed the friends and outlined the purposes of the School.

The attendance statistics were: 75 Bahá’í adults, 7 non-Bahá’í adults, 3 non-Bahá’í youth, 1 Bahá’í youth, 23 Bahá’í children, and 2 non-Bahá’í children, a total of 111.

A 'spur of the moment' suggestion for a special Children's Class at the School was put into action and 19 participated. The teachers were Miss Y. Inatsuka, Miss M. Morita and Miss M. Naderi. This class gave great joy to all present.

Mention should also be made of a surprise feature at the public lecture meeting on August 24, when Miss Yoshiko Morita of Kyoto sang Mr. Wolcott's composition of Bahá'u'lláh's prayer "From the Sweet Scented Streams," accompanied on the piano by Mr. Koji Akizawa of Yokohama.

Mr. M. Odani of Kyoto, who completed a tour in August to western Honshu and Kyushu, attended the closing day of the Summer School on August 26. Mr. Odani spoke with such fervor and inspiration as to captivate the hearts of all present. His eloquent testimony to the power of the spirit when one arises in the name of Bahá'u'lláh to bring to fulfillment any goal or wish expressed by our beloved Guardian.

They left Osaka on the evening of June 8, arrived in Aomori the following night, and crossed by ferry to Hakodate, the southern port of Hokkaido, where they arrived on the morning of June 10.

HOKKAIDO ISLAND OPENED TO FAITH

The Bahá'í Bulletin of North East Asia has published an account of the opening to the Bahá'í Faith of Hokkaido Island, Japan, as follows:

The report furnished by Mr. Rouhollah Momtazi of the teaching trip to Hokkaido Island by him and Mr. Gekie Nakajima is still another evidence of the power of the spirit when one arises in the name of Bahá'u'lláh to bring to fulfillment any goal or wish expressed by our beloved Guardian.

They left Osaka on the evening of June 8, arrived in Aomori the following night, and crossed by ferry to Hakodate, the southern port of Hokkaido, where they arrived on the morning of June 10.
As Mr. Nakajima's friend, Mr. Muneto, is a former mayor of Hakodate, this afforded an introduction to the people of that city. He arranged for a newspaper interview and a public meeting through the Chamber of Commerce.

Another public meeting in the city library was arranged by Mr. T. Seki, Chief of the General Affairs Department. Over 30 persons heard the message in that meeting, including the Chief of Education and the Chief Librarian. Several hours of private discussions were spent with these men later.

On June 11 a visit was made to the city of Otaru, where another friend of Mr. Nakajima, Mr. Yamazaki, arranged for a meeting there on June 14. Mr. Yamazaki also went with them to Sapporo, the capital city of Hokkaido, where he introduced them to the Chairman of the Foreign Trade Association, Mr. Koshiyama, on June 12.

In Sapporo they called on the Chamber of Commerce and the Industry Club, and a joint meeting was arranged for June 17. Through an introduction from a business friend in Osaka, a television coverage was arranged with the Hokkaido Broadcasting Center for the luncheon meeting on June 17. After discussing the business and economic conditions in Japan, a brief history of the Faith was given, followed by many questions. The telecast was given the same evening.

On June 16 a visit was made to Shiroi with the Moritake family of the Ainu tribe. The Faith was explained during their one and one-half hour visit.

On June 19 at the Rotary Club in Sapporo an opportunity was afforded to speak of the Faith to 200 members. A regular weekly fireside meeting was definitely arranged in the home of Mr. Giro Sasaki, who was given the Greatest Name, and pictures of the Shrine of the Bab, the International Archives, and the Bahá’í Temple for display in his home for these fireside meetings. A quantity of literature was also left with him.

They returned to Osaka on June 21, confident that real results were achieved.

Trip to Inland Sea

A second report from Mr. Momtazi tells of a two week trip in July to Takamatsu on Shikoku Island, and nearby Shodo Island in the Inland Sea. Many new contacts were made, literature was distributed, and a fireside group started.

Teaching on Awaji

Extension teaching has been progressing for the past few months on the inland of Awaji, under the guidance of Mr. A. Katriai. A regular fireside group meets weekly, and several students are studying with the full intention of becoming enrolled believers.

Awaji Island is located between the main island of Honshu and Shikoku Island, at the entrance to the Inland Sea.

Mr. Katriai recently entertained as guests in his home several university students from Takamatsu on Shikoku Island. They remained a full week, studying the Faith during three sessions each day.

Pákistán

NSA Publishes

Souvenir Booklet

A souvenir booklet, giving a brief history of the development of the Bahá’í Faith in Pákistán, has been published by the National Spiritual Assembly of Pákistán.

Attractively printed and bound, the booklet encompasses 48 pages, and is divided into three sections, including a statement on the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh by Shoghi Effendi, a Short History of the Bahá’í Faith in Pákistán, and an account of the first National Convention and the formation of the first National Spiritual Assembly there.

There are 38 photographs illustrating the growth of the Faith, with pictures of some of the early believers, ceremonies connected with the dedication of the Hazíratul-Quds, various Bahá’í properties in Pákistán, conventions, teaching conferences, local Spiritual Assemblies, and the first National Spiritual Assembly.

Of special interest are pictures of Miss Martha Root with members of the Karâchí Spiritual Assembly, and of Mrs. Dorothy Baker addressing a meeting in Karâchí during the Intercontinental Conference in 1953.

Scandinavia, Finland

Tour Seeks Contact

With Lapps in Sweden

Among the special teaching plans reported by the National Spiritual Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland for this fall is a tour by the Hand of the Cause in Europe, Dr. Muhlschlegel, and a small group of Scandinavian Bahá’ís into the Lapp country of North Central Sweden in an effort to make contacts with the Lapps, conduct firesides, seek receptive souls, distribute literature, and pave the way for additional teaching and a possible Lapp summer school next summer."

Commemoration of United Nations Day is one of the special public teaching events to be observed throughout Scandinavia and Finland. An attractive pamphlet for the event has been prepared to explain the relationship of the Bahá’í Faith to the United Nations, and giving the principles of the Faith. It is to be printed in all four languages spoken in these countries.

Central America and Mexico
NICARAGUA BAHÁ’IS HOLD FIRST SUMMER SCHOOL

The first annual Bahá’í Summer School of Nicaragua opened a three-day session in Nandaime on September 14, 1957.

Two visiting teachers, Margo Miersler and Allen Pringle of Honduras, assisted Donald Witzel and Pablo Perez of Managua with the teaching activities, which covered 20 subjects under two main themes, “The Individual and Collective Aspects of Bahá’í Life,” and “The Administrative Order.”

Special programs were given each evening after the classes. The agenda for September 14 was “The Life of Bahá’u’lláh” by Margo Miersler, “General Highlights of the Bahá’í Faith” by Allen Pringle, and 50 pages of stories translated from Portals to Freedom of “The Life Picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá” by Pablo Perez. Following these topics, slides of the Holy Land were shown.

On September 15 the subject was “The Presentation of the Bahá’í Cause” by the Bahá’ís of Nandaime.

Mrs. Mignon Witzel was responsible for the planning and practical aspects of this new institution in Nicaragua. It was a great success and, needless to say, we can hardly wait for the next one.

Gathering gave the Unity Feast high. The love has been great; the August 24 to 28, 1957. Assembly, was again held at the Blue Ridge Pine Islands making a tour of the Scouts from Korea and the International Parliament and representatives of the House of Councillors of Japan. Most recently ten members of visitors from a-broad, such as Boy Scouts from Korea and the United States after attending the International Scout Jamboree, and most recently ten members of Parliament and representatives of the House of Councillors of Japan.

LOVE, UNITY KEYNOTE
BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE

The fourth Blue Ridge Conference was again held at the Blue Ridge Assembly, in North Carolina, from August 24 to 28, 1957.

As one of the teachers commented, "The spirit at Blue Ridge has run high. The love has been great; the unity evident." Each of us left with a renewed sense of dedication, a clarity of purpose, our lives once again re-channelled and re-directed. From the talks came inspiration; from the reports and discussions, practical techniques by which that inspiration can be put into effect. One hundred and thirty-seven people came; one hundred stayed for the whole conference.

We have been, each year, especially blessed by the presence of Paul E. Haney, Hand of the Cause; by the active participation of both the youth and the children; by the bounty of loving fellowship, growing out of worshipping, studying and living together. Next year, the first Southern Summer School will be held—one to be at Blue Ridge, to last at least five days, and longer if we are able to obtain the Blue Ridge facilities for a longer period.

The over-all theme of the conference was "The Road to Mount Carmel," and among the friends present were several who have made their pilgrimage. They evoked much of that spirit which has been brought back to us from the World Center of the Faith with ever-increasing intensity.

For the first time at Blue Ridge a seminar was held, in which everyone took an active part, based on the compilation of excerpts on The Covenant and Administration. For this study, the friends were divided into nine groups, each studying its own set of four questions each day, with references from the compilation to guide the discussion. At the end, the secretary from each group presented his group's answers in a three-minute résumé. We were all thrilled with the wealth of ideas coming out of the consultation, and amazed at the amount of information that can be packed into a three-minute résumé.

Through the discussion on the work of the Area Teaching Committees, much practical information was brought out, on how the isolated Baha'i or a group can get more assistance, and just what the Area Teaching Committees' work should be.

The non-Baha'i youth had two special discussion sessions with an adult Baha'i, covering everything from stories of the experiences of outstanding Baha'i teachers, to many phases of the Administrative Order, and how to answer questions they are often asked by their friends.

In the report from the National Baha'i Youth Committee, it was stressed that every community should have a Youth Committee, even if they have no youth, which could provide a speaker or activities for other youth organizations.

It is also important that children in Baha'i families be prepared for enrollment. The youth must catch the vision of what we are building. The talk on how youth are travelling the road to Mount Carmel was based on the "Tablet to the True Believer." We should study this Tablet, use it, and become magnets to attract pure souls.

The Interracial Teaching Committee report showed us what they are trying to do, and how they are going about it. In addition to their primary goal, on which the Guardian is currently placing such great emphasis, we should devote more time to all minority groups; show hospitality, for instance, to foreign students, who may go back to other places on the earth, and be of inestimable help to the newly born communities.

Here are some notes, taken from the talks and discussions:

For 7000 years, mankind has been travelling toward the day when God's promises would be fulfilled. Where we stand today depends greatly on the vision and actions of individuals in the past who, through their vision and efforts, have made the path a little broader and more apparent for us today. What we do today will make it easier for the people tomorrow. We must cleanse our spiritual veins, so that the bounties may flow through us. We will come to that place where neither praise nor condemnation can touch us. This is the spiritual road to Mount Carmel.

We are building the Kingdom of God on earth. These institutions could not be created until this Day. The Kingdom of God has come, and to it we must adjust. It is the fulfillment of the promise of all ages.

Why the Ten-Year Plan? These years before 1963 are crucial. We could not have conceived this Crusade; only the Guardian could do so. He plans and directs the successive stages of the Divine Plan, channeling to us the Divine guidance. Bahá'u'lláh "put into our hands the lamp of His teachings. By its light the world will be illumined," said 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

The Guardian is dispersing the assets of the Faith (the Bahá'ís). Dispersal is not new. Dispersal among the people of God has been going on since the beginning of time. Whenever we arise to do something which the Guardian wants done, it must be with purity of heart, and a sense of sacrifice. If we do it for personal reasons, the spiritual potency of our action is jeopardized, if not doomed. If we act with courage and pure hearts, the confirmations will flow. Teach the pure souls, wherever you find them. The more you teach, the more avenues will open.

We must study the Faith for knowledge. Through the Teachings, we can become truly educated. Pray for assistance and guidance daily; listen for an answer. Martha Root once said, "Every breath, almost, is a prayer to be a channel . . . be ready when opportunity comes . . . When I do not pray, in two or three days I see the effect. The work is not so good." We cannot be lukewarm. We must be enwrapped with the love of God. "Wear the mantle of Bahá'u'lláh proudly!"

Travelling the road to Mount Carmel will demand a great deal of spirituality. God gave us the maps, through Bahá'u'lláh, and the Guardian directs us. We have the Administrative Order, and outside the Faith there will be a federated world. When these two things come together, the Golden Age will come. Out of world order, will be born spiritual salvation.

Mrs. Florence V. Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, conducted three-day seminars on the Bahá'í Faith in Missoula, Mont., and Casper, Wyo., during September.

Her visit in both cities was well publicized in the press and on radio and television, contributing to the success of the meetings. Attendance in both cities exceeded 60 persons.

In Missoula a one-half hour interview was broadcast over KBTM, with the Station Manager, William Strothman, leading an extended discussion with Mrs. Mayberry on many facets of the Faith. There were two other radio interviews on KGVO, and announcements of the seminar on KXLL and KMSP-T.

The two radio stations and the television station in Casper also allotted time for interviews with her, and she was allowed to speak freely about the Faith.

Subjects discussed in the seminars were "Progressive Revelation," "Herald and Author of the New Era," and "Regeneration of Mankind."

BAHÁ'Í IN THE NEWS

Believers resident in Eureka Springs, Ark., paid for a large advertisement in Eureka Springs Times-Echo, October 3, 1957, reprinting the National Spiritual Assembly statement on "The Oneness of Mankind." This type of publicity, in view of the race integration problem in Little Rock, has great importance in expressing the Bahá'í position through non-political means.

The Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal, September 13, 1957, reported a talk given to the local Bahá'í community by Dr. Ekanem A. Udoh of Nigeria, who taught two years at Moyne College. "He said the Bahá'í Faith may become the major religion of Africa. He said the aims of Bahá'ís have strong appeal to Africans." The same newspaper on September 22 published a brief notice of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh, by George Townshend, in its review column.

An impressive full page devoted to the Faith appeared in the Charleston Gazette on July 20. Featuring a very large photo of the Bahá'í House of Worship, the statement represented one in a series of local church histories sponsored by leading business firms "who realize the importance of the church in this community." The text was supplied by the Local Assembly.

The Sarasota (Fla.) News of August 3, 1957, and the Sarasota Herald Tribune of the same date, both featured a Coast Guard honor paid to Charles R. Gilman (Bahá'í), member of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, for using his motor yacht for outstanding emergency missions and also his radio transmitter for the same purpose.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, September 7, 1957, carried a three-column photo of Mrs. Bertha Piepenburg showing Mrs. Anna Hanel some souvenirs brought back from South Africa, illustrating a feature story about Mrs. Piepenburg's visit to her Bahá'í daughter and son-in-law in Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia. This human-interest story was written by James M. Johnston, staff reporter, as a personal interview.

The Sarasota (Fla.) Herald-Tribune, September 1, 1957, presented a three-column story by Stan Windham, staff writer, on "Another Faith Explained," a summary of the history, teachings, and administrative order of the Faith. The text was based upon Bahá'í literature presented by the local Bahá'ís, and also a brief oral exposition made by one of the believers.

The Christian Century, July 24, 1957, reported that in Germany a call had been issued to Christian churches to ward off the "offensive" launched in Germany by non-Christian religions. Reference was made to plans for a Bahá'í Temple as one of the "non-Christian" invasions of the Christian claim to Germany.

Baha'is attending the Regional Conference sponsored by the National Spiritual Assembly in Houston, Texas, on September 14. Charles Wolcott, vice-chairman of the National Assembly, center, conducted this meeting.

Beloved Friends:

With noble utterance Ruhiyyih Khánum conveyed to the Bahá'í world the tragic, unexpected and afflictive news of the Guardian's passing. His physical departure from this world marks the ending of an era in the history of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

"SHOGHI EFFENDI BELOVED OF ALL HEARTS SACRED TRUST GIVEN BELIEVERS BY MASTER PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY HEART ATTACK IN SLEEP FOLLOWING ASIATIC FLU. URGE BELIEVERS REMAIN STEADFAST, CLING INSTITUTION HANDS LOVINGLY REARED, RECENTLY REINFORCED, EMPHASIZED BY BELOVED GUARDIAN. —Ruhiyyih Khánum

In a second message cabled the same day (November 5, 1957) Ruhiyyih Khánum added: "Appeal (to) Hands, National Assemblies (and) Auxiliary Boards to shelter (the) believers (and) assist them (to) meet (this) heart-rending, supreme test. Funeral (of) our beloved (will be held) Saturday (November) Ninth (in) London. Hands, Assembly (and) Board members invited attend ... Urge hold memorial meetings Saturday."

An appropriate press announcement, prepared under Ruhiyyih Khánum's direction, was released to Reuters in London and to the wire services in Chicago. A copy of this same release was sent to all local Bahá'í press representatives by the National Bahá'í Press Service. The National Assembly, as directed, dispatched two telegrams to all local Assemblies; one requesting the friends to pray for the protection of the Faith because it had been learned that the beloved Guardian was desperately ill; the second reported his passing and requested that local meetings be held on Saturday, November 9.

On Sunday, November 10, the National and Regional Spiritual Assemblies received this message from Ruhiyyih Khánum written after the funeral had been held in London:

"BELOVED GUARDIAN LAID (TO) REST (IN) LONDON ACCORDING (TO) LAWS (OF) AQDAS (IN) BEAUTIFUL BEFITTING SPOT AFTER IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY HELD (IN) PRESENCE (OF) MULTITUDE (OF) BELIEVERS REPRESENTING OVER TWENTY COUNTRIES (OF) EAST (AND) WEST STOP DOCTORS ASSURE SUDDEN PASSING INVOLVED NO SUFFERING. This message was sent to all Assemblies and Area Teaching Committees in the United States on Monday, November 11, with a covering letter.

On the following day, November 12, this further cablegram was received from Ruhiyyih Khánum:
"ASSURE FRIENDS BELOVED, SACRED GUARDIAN BEFITTINGLY LAID (TO) REST SURROUNDED BY LARGE, REPRESENTATIVE GATHERING (OF) BELIEVERS (FROM) EAST (AND) WEST. (THE) LIGHT (OF) OUR LIVES DEPARTED, WE MUST NOW STAND FIRM, REMEMBERING (THE) PEERLESS EXAMPLE (OF) HIS DEDICATION (TO) THE WORK (OF) THE BLESSED PERFECTION, (THE) GLORIOUS VICTORIES HE WON, (AND THE) PLANS HE LONGED (TO) SEE COMPLETED. —Rúhíyyíh

These are the successive stages through which the heart-rending announcement of the Guardian's passing have been reported to the date of this writing.

What can we say about the Guardian's consummation of his unique mission?

Turning again to Rúhíyyíh Khánum, we quote these passages from her great tribute to the Guardian as written in Twenty-Five Years of the Guardianship dated November 1946.

"Twenty-five years ago the Bahaí world was shaken by a great earthquake. 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the Center of the Covenant, had suddenly passed away, with no premonitory illness to prepare His friends and followers for this tragic shock. Stunned, the Baha'ís of East and West tried to rally their faculties. We knew great tasks lay ahead of us; we believed in this new Faith and in its Manifestation and in the World Order that He had come to establish, but we felt terribly alone and the responsibility for the future lay heavily upon us. Where was the shepherd? The familiar voice, that had spoken with an authority vested in it by the Prophet of God Himself, was stilled. We had the teachings; like a wonderful laboratory, equipped for every purpose, they were there — our priceless treasure. But where was the chemist who transmuted base metals into gold? Where was the listener who answered our questions and guided us in the use of all that great laboratory possessed?

"Then came the reading of the Master's Will, and with an infinite sense of relief we realized that, though the sense of tribulation and separation had risen about us, 'Abdu'l-Bahá had not left us alone. He had given us the mighty Ark of His own Covenant which we could enter into in peace secure. With what grateful hearts we turned to the youthful figure that had suddenly been revealed to us in that Will as our priceless legacy, described by 'Abdu'l-Bahá as the fruit of the Twin Lote Trees, the pearl of the Twin Surging Seas, this new creation, vested with a unique function, the hereditary office of Interpreter and Protector of the Faith and life-head of the International House of Justice.

"Let us go back for a moment and recall what we were and what Shoghi Effendi was when he first assumed his function as Guardian. Those who remember the passing of the Master and the terrible blow it was to them, the intense unbearable grief it caused them, can best grasp what his feelings were. At that time he was twenty-four years of age, studying at Oxford University in England in order to better prepare himself to serve 'Abdu'l-Bahá as an interpreter, and to translate some of the Baha'i literature into English, when news of the ascension reached him. Broken-hearted, so weak from suffering he had to be practically lifted from the train, he returned to Haifa. Then the second blow, as unexpected and in many ways more cruel than the first, fell upon him. The Will and Testament of his Grandfather was read to him and for the first time in his life he became apprized of the Master's great and well-guarded secret: that he, Shoghi Effendi, the beloved, eldest grandson, was His successor and First Guardian of the Cause of God. Saddled with this great weight, crushed by this great blow, he turned his eyes to the Baha'i world. He beheld a widely diversified, loosely organized community, scattered in various parts of the globe, and with members in about twenty countries. These people, loyal, devoted and sincere though they were, were still, to a great extent, living in their parent religion's house, so to speak; there were Christian Baha'is, Jewish Baha'is, Muhammadan Baha'is and so on. They believed in the Baha'i Faith but were intimately connected with their former churches. Like fruit on a tree, they were a new crop but still stuck to the old branch. This was true East and West alike. That was the point to which the Faith had evolved at the time of the Master's ascension.

"We, on our part, beheld a young man of only twenty-four, standing at the helm of the Cause and some of the friends felt impelled to advise him about what it would be wise for him to do next. . . . We quickly came to realize that he was not only divinely guided but had been endowed by God with just those characteristics needed to build up the Administrative Order, unite the believers in common endeavor, and coordinate their world-wide activities. The wheels of the Cause which had momentarily stood still at the Master's passing, began to revolve again and at a higher tempo than ever before. Our Father, so patient, so constantly forgiving, whom we had tired and perhaps worried far more than we dreamed of, was gone, and in His stead stood our "true brother," young, determined to see we at last got down to accomplishing the tasks set us by Bahá'u'lláh and the Master, and not willing to lose any time at all.

"With the reading of the Will and the establishment of the Guardianship, came quite naturally and organically a new phase in the development of the Faith . . . "

A Great Joint Effort

"For sixteen years Shoghi Effendi never ceased to broaden our horizon and train us in Baha'i Administration, whether local or National. After that, he suddenly opened a new door. He told us, so to speak, that we were now trained enough to use our laboriously erected Administrative System for a great joint effort, an effort to carry into effect the first stages of the Divine Plan . . .

"No appraisal of the wonderful work achieved by the Baha'is the world over during this period would be complete without mention of what the Guardian himself, singlehanded, has done at the world center of the Faith in Palestine (now Israel). Aside from his constant and very heavy correspondence, with not only national and local Assemblies but with groups and individuals as well, aside from his cables and directives addressed to the Baha'is in different parts of the world, aside from his books he writes and the Baha'i literature he translates so painstakingly and beautifully, he has aided the believers financially in all of their major undertakings, in the East or the West . . . In Haifa and 'Akka, he has not only succeeded in having all the Baha'i Shrines, Pilgrim Houses and lands pertaining to them exempted from both government and municipal taxes, but has also vastly increased the area of these endowments... The purchase of Bahá'u'lláh's mansion at Bahji, the defeat of the constant machinations of the Covenant-breakers, are but the highlights of his accomplishments at this world center of our Faith, to which flow the pilgrims and guests from every land.

"As we look back over these twenty-five years, it is with feelings of profound contentment. We Bahá'ís have matured greatly... We have stood close to that tree which shadowed all mankind, and come to realize how live and great it is, how dense its foliage, how heavy its yield of fruits — the tree of our first Guardian, our Shoghi Effendi... whose sure and patient hand is guiding it on to the great victories promised by Bahá'u'lláh for His Faith in this Century."

"In gratitude for both this mighty institution of Guardianship in which mankind has found a safe refuge in this new age, and in gratitude for this particular first Guardian, this Shoghi Effendi, let us resolve to rise to a truly higher plane of endeavor, and above a higher plane of spiritual awareness, during these coming years. We must always remember that the only real limitations we suffer are those within ourselves. Rallied closely about the center of the Cause, loving him and, in him, each other, we can, during the next quarter of a century, double our record of achievement."

Shoghi Effendi's Titanic Achievements

Looking back from the present hour we can perhaps summarize our awareness of Shoghi Effendi's titanic achievements in these terms:

1. His resistance to and victory over the cruel onslaughts of Covenant-breakers both within and outside the Holy Family itself.
2. Construction of the Shrine of the Báb, the International Archives Building, and of the gardens surrounding the Tomb of Bahá'u'lláh and adjacent to the Shrine of the Báb.
3. Training and developing the local and national Assemblies, the number of the latter having increased from two to twenty-six.
4. Defining the world-wide Ten Year Plan including the assignment of responsibility for achievement of its several tasks.
5. Appointment of members to the International Bahá'í Council.
7. Incomparable translation of Tablets and Prayers and Meditations of Bahá'u'lláh; the writing of successive letters and works illumining the meaning and scope of the Faith and its history from 1844 to 1944.

Now let us turn to those earliest, precious letters through which the beloved Guardian gave advice, encouragement and direction to the Bahá'ís of North America.

"At this early hour when the morning light is just breaking upon the Holy Land, whilst the gloom of the dear Master's bereavement is still hanging thick upon the hearts, I feel as if my soul turns in yearning love and full of hope to that great company of His loved ones across the seas, who now share with us all the agonies of His separation..."

"True, the shock has been too terrible and sudden for us all to recover from in so short a time, but whenever we recall His Sayings and read His Writings, hope springs in our hearts and gives us the peace that no other material comfort can give.

"How well I remember when, more than two years ago, the Beloved Master, turning to a distinguished visitor of His, who was seated by Him in His garden, suddenly broke the silence and said: 'My work is now done upon this plane; it is time for me to pass on to the other world.' Did He not on more than one occasion state clearly and emphatically: 'Were ye to know what will come to pass after Me, surely would ye pray that my end be hastened?' In a Tablet sent to Persia when the storm raised years ago by that Committee of Investigation was fiercely raging around Him, when the days of His incarceration were at their blackest, He revealed the following: 'Now the foundation of this all-highest Bounty and this wondrous Gift. Gradually whatsoever is latent in the innermost of this Holy Cycle shall appear and be manifest, for now is but the beginning of its growth and the dawning of the revelation of its Signs. Eee the close of this century and of this Age, it shall be made clear and manifest how wondrous was that Springtime and how heavenly was that Gift!"

"With such assuring Utterances and the unmistakable evidences of His sure and clear knowledge that His end was nigh, is there any reason why the followers of His Faith, the world over, should be perturbed? Are not the prayers He reveals for us sufficient source of inspiration to every worker in His Cause? Have not His instructions paved before us the broad and straight Path of Teaching? Will not His now doubly effective power of Grace sustain us, strengthen us and confirm us in our work for Him? Ours is the duty to strive by day and night to fulfill our own obligation and then trust in His Guidance and never failing Grace. Unity amongst the friends, selflessness in our labors in His Path, detachment from all worldly things, the greatest prudence and caution in every step we take, earnest endeavor to carry out only what is His Holy Will and Pleasure, the constant awareness of His Presence and of the example of His Life, the absolute shunning of whatsoever we feel to be an enemy of the Cause... these, and foremost among them is the need for unity, appear to me as our vital service. Should we in this spirit arise to serve Him, what sure and greater promise have we than the one His Glorious Father, Bahá'u'lláh, gives us in His Most Holy Book: 'Verily, We beheld you from Our realm of effulgent Glory, and shall graciously aid whosoever arises for the triumph of Our Cause with the hosts of the Celestial Concourse and a company of Our chosen angels.'" (January 21, 1922.)

Beloved friends! Such was the clarion call sounded by the beloved Guardian to comfort and reassure the hearts grief-stricken by the loss of the Master thirty-six years ago.

That consolation and inspiration has eternal validity, and moreover to it is added the example of Shoghi Effendi's own sacrifice and unique achievement. Honorable is the sorrow caused by the passing of a loved one, when that sorrow purifies the heart and confirms within it the supreme love — the love of God, and the resolute will to serve Him.

In our meetings with another, let us be tender and considerate; in our contacts with non-believers let us be steadfast as the rock in conviction of the victory of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh! For that Sun has arisen which shall never be followed by night.

Concerning the future guidance of our world community, information will come to us through the proper channels in due time.

Western Hemisphere Intercontinental Conference

First Announcement

Dear Bahá'í Friends:

Since receiving the beloved Guardian's announcement of the series of five intercontinental conferences to be held during 1958, the National Assembly has given Shoghi Effendi's approval of dates and general arrangements.

The Chicago Conference will be held on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 2, 3, and 4, immediately following a three-day National Convention to be held April 29, 30, and May 1.

These dates make it possible for American delegates and believers to attend both events.

The Guardian has also approved the holding of a devotional gathering in the auditorium of the House of Worship, where the precious photographs of Bahá'u'lláh and the Báb can most fittingly be exhibited by the Guardian's representative, Hand of the Cause Dr. Ugo Giachery.

The final arrangement approved by Shoghi Effendi is the holding of a public congress which undoubtedly will be scheduled for Sunday evening, May 4, as the final session of the Intercontinental Conference.

The beloved Guardian's own words impress us with the importance of this historic occasion, convened for the "five-fold purpose of offering humble thanksgiving to the Divine Author of our Faith... of reviewing and celebrating the series of signal victories... of deliberating on ways and means that will insure its triumphant consummation; and of lending simultaneously a powerful impetus... to the vital process of individual conversion... and to the construction and completion of these Mother Temples to be built in the European, the African, and Australian continents."

The Conference, while convened and held by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, will receive the Guardian's message to the Western Hemisphere as delivered by Dr. Giachery, and will provide reports by, and consultation among, the National and Regional National Spiritual Assemblies of that same area.

The purpose of this first announcement is to make it possible for all Bahá'ís to make arrangements to attend. Travel and hotel or other arrangements are to be made by the individual believer for himself.

Guests of the National Assembly will be provided with hotel accommodations on arrival.

Those who attended the historic Jubilee Celebrations in 1953 will recall not merely the vivid episodes of the extensive program, including dedication of the House of Worship on behalf of the Guardian by Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum, but above all the power of the spirit engendered which enabled us to transcend local and national Bahá'í areas of interest and activity, and attain a realization of the universal, the global significance of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.

"The holding of this second series of Intercontinental Conferences... signals the opening of the fourth phase of the Ten-Year Plan." What higher privilege is offered a human being today?

Give Address Change to NSA Promptly to Receive Bahá'í Mail

The volume of work at the National Bahá'í Administrative Headquarters now makes it impossible for the administrative staff to assume the responsibility of following up any returned issues of Bahá'í News in an effort to ascertain the new address of any believer who has moved and left no forwarding address, or who has made no arrangements for having his News held or forwarded during a temporary absence.

Hereafter, when a Bahá'í News is returned, the address will be withdrawn from the mailing list until such time as the believer himself furnishes the new address and ten cents to cover the cost of re-mailing each issue that was returned.

In other words, we must now depend upon the believers themselves to assume responsibility for keeping the National Spiritual Assembly informed of all permanent or temporary changes of address that may affect the receipt of their Bahá'í mail and their proper listing on the State Convention voting lists.

SUMMER SCHOOL PREPARES FRANCE FOR FORMATION OF NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Sanary-Sur-Mer, a picturesque port nestled along the curving shoreline of the Mediterranean Sea, was the scene of the historic gathering of France’s third Bahá’í Summer School, held from September 1 to 6, 1957.

Sunny skies and tropical surroundings added their charm to this region, one of the most beautiful in southern France.

The friends were housed in the Hotel du Parc, where all sessions of the conference and school also met.

The first two days of the school were devoted to a teaching conference on the theme, “France and the World Crusade.” At the opening session we listened to Dr. Hermann Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, read a prayer. The bounty of his presence gave this conference special significance and an atmosphere of rare spirituality.

Joel Marangella, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, acting as Chairman, then greeted the assembled believers on behalf of the Summer School Committee, and asked for a roll call. This roll call revealed that there were 39 adults, 2 youth, and 3 children present, representing the cities of Lyon, Chateauroux, Chatellerault, Orleans, Paris, Strasbourg, Nice, and Marseille in France; and believers from Germany, Belgium, Austria, Holland, the United States, Kenya, Belgian Congo, and Madagascar.

Much love was evident in the hearts and on the faces of those from each center as they arose to give their names. A further blessing was the fact that among them there were many new French believers who were attending their first summer school.

Dr. Grossmann, speaking in English, gave some inspirational opening words. He remarked on the great change which had taken place in France since his visit of two years ago. He compared the cold winter of that time to the growth of the teaching work, and pointed out how it had developed into the warm springtime of spiritual blossoming.
and development. He hoped that this great surge of spiritual enthusiasm would soon bring forth the summer with all its fruits.

He pointed out that France would have a special opportunity with the new National Spiritual Assembly which is to be formed during Ridván 1958, and that this achievement would require much effort, as only a few months remain.

In closing, Dr. Grossmann said he hoped that this conference would strengthen us for the time ahead, and help us to enter next year with strong communities, as well as a strong National Assembly.

Reports on Goals

Later in the conference reports were called for from representatives of Assemblies and groups on "The Goals in France and the Actual Progress."

"The Goals in France" provided a theme for much consideration. Mr. Marangella reminded us that our beloved Guardian had announced at the Stockholm conference the goals for Europe. We were told at that time that our assemblies must be quadrupled during the Crusade, meaning that eight would be needed by 1963. Also, that our other goals were the establishment of the National Spiritual Assembly, the acquisition of the Haziratu'l-Quds and the National Endowment, and the achievement of National Incorporation.

In conclusion Mr. Marangella pointed out that we have already achieved two of these goals, namely the Haziratu'l-Quds in Paris which will become national when the National Assembly is formed, and the National Endowment.

Shoghi Effendi has specified that France will form its National Spiritual Assembly during the mid-point of the Crusade, and has designated certain cities in France as goal cities. These are Orleans, Marseilles, Bordeaux, Strasbourg, Metz, Dijon, Nancy, Poitiers, and Lille. With the recent settlement of Miss Honor Kempton in Nancy, Mrs. Amelia Bowman in Strasbourg, and Mr. Charles Somers in Metz, all goals have been opened except Dijon.

At the Sunday evening session on September 1, Dr. Grossmann was most informative in discussing questions put to us during our teaching efforts. He answered such questions as: What is the difference between good and evil? Does God answer every prayer? What is soul and spirit? Why should we pray? What is obedience?

He pointed out that when a soul becomes a Bahá'í it is changed, and it will attract everything in a different way.

The Monday morning session was given over to Louis Henuzet, member of the Auxiliary Board, who gave an illuminating and comprehensive presentation on the Administrative Order.

That afternoon 35 of us travelled by chartered bus to the nearby city of Marseilles for a public meeting at the Foyer-Theatre Massalia. Mr. Henuzet gave a brilliant talk on "Which to Choose: Science or Religion?" Seventy-two persons attended this meeting.

In recalling the spirit of the entire week, these words came to mind: "Know thou of a certainty that Love is the secret of God's holy Dispensation, the manifestation of the All-Merciful, the fountain of spiritual outpourings. Love is heaven's kindly light, the Holy Spirit's eternal breath that vivifies the human soul." (The Divine Art of Living, page 108.)

We had, one and all, been refreshed at the fountain of that love, and our souls were truly vivified and illumined. As we journeyed homeward, we were resolved that we would accomplish more than ever this year.

Correction

The United Nations Non-Governmental Organizations Conference in Rome, Italy, reported in Bahá'í News for September on page 10, was held at the Food and Agriculture Administration headquarters instead of Foreign Affairs Office. The error was due to a misinterpretation of abbreviations used by Dr. Ugo Giachery in his report.
HAIL NEWSLETTERS FROM LAND OF FAITH'S BIRTH

Plans for a regular newsletter from Iran have been received with joy and thanksgiving by National Assemblies in many lands, and many of their national news publications have been reprinting information from the first two issues of this newsletter received to date.

Written over the signature of A. Furutan, secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Iran, the newsletter conveys heart-warming assurances of the steady spread of the Faith in the land of its birth despite the recent persecutions by the Iranian government.

Following are excerpts from these first two issues of the Iranian Baha'i News:

Baha'is are at present serving the Cause of God in more than 1000 centers throughout Iran. In 1955, when the persecutions began, there were 100 centers throughout Iran. Considering the difficult circumstances under which the friends were working, this is a tremendous achievement, even to a degree that the beloved Guardian has congratulated them.

The restrictions and persecutions of the friends that started in Iran in 1955 are gradually subsiding. The government agreed to return all the Baha'i Hazratu'l-Quds, even the National Hajiratu'l-Quds in Tehran, but no meetings are yet held in these buildings.

The news of the activities and victorious accomplishments of the friends in other parts of the world are regularly translated and sent out to all the Baha'i communities in Iran, so that they may rejoice in the success of their spiritual brethren.

In Touch With World Center

One fortunate circumstance that compensates for all the persecutions of the friends in Iran is the constant communication with the World Center of the Cause of God and the beloved Guardian.

Cables from the Guardian, messages from the revered Hands of the Cause residing in the Holy Land, communications of the International Baha'i Council, and letters of the Eastern Secretary of that Council, conveying the instructions of the Guardian, have been regularly received.

Each year a great number of the friends from Iran, and particularly from Tehran, go on holy pilgrimage, and on their return bring messages, instructions, and glad-tidings from the beloved Guardian. Since the friends in Iran very eagerly meet with these pilgrims, the glad-tidings from the Holy Land are conveyed to a great number of friends.

During the past year 64 persons from Iran have gone on holy pilgrimage and returned to gladden the hearts of the friends with their messages and news from the Holy Land.

In the same period 32 pilgrims from Iraq made the pilgrimage under a schedule of the Iranian National Spiritual Assembly, which is responsible for the administration of the Faith in Iraq.

Letters From Pioneers

Many letters from Persian pioneers throughout the world have been received by the National Assembly. Here is a sample of such letters. Dr. Rahmat Mahajir is one of the Baha'i pioneers who is also the spiritual conqueror of Mentawai Islands. The names of this beloved friend and his dear wife are registered on the Roll of Honor.

He writes: "In Sipapajet, one of the Mentawai villages, a Baha'i School has been established and named 'Tarbiyyat' after the Baha'i School of Tehran which was closed by the Government in 1933. Mr. Samurry, one of the native Baha'is who is a very learned person, has resigned his position as a teacher in the government schools, and is teaching the native Baha'is in the Baha'i School.

"The children and the villagers are all very happy. So is he of this achievement of his. Baha'is of other villages complain that Mr. Samurry has not been given to them. These same natives, who value education so much, compete in persuading a teacher to go to their village, whereas before embracing the Faith did not want schools and said, 'God has given us capra and chickens, what do we want with education? Our children eat these and grow up.' Now these same people build a house for the teacher.

"We are trying to establish Baha'i schools in every village, even though they may only have one or two grades.

"Mr. Jamshid Ma'ani, one of the Persian pioneers in Indonesia, has volunteered, with the approval of the National Spiritual Assembly of South East Asia, to come to Mentawai and spend two years in these islands serving the Cause and educating Baha'i children. He is very successful in the service of God, and will soon bear the responsibility for one of the Baha'i villages all by himself.

"Mr. Rustam Payman is another Persian pioneer who is serving these islands with utmost sincerity, and the natives almost worship him. One of the villages has been named 'Rustamabad' after him. He is going to assume total responsibility for one of the villages."
Mr. Ventura Rodriuez then read the following tenderly stirring message of the Guardian, written to the Iberian believers in his own hand, on July 2, 1957, but indeed a galvanizing stimulus to all who labor for the Faith wherever they might be:

"The recent achievements of my dearly loved friends, labouring so devotedly in the Iberian Peninsula, has filled my heart with feelings of joyous admiration and profound thankfulness. I cannot but marvel at their consecration, their fidelity, their perseverance and untiring endeavours for the furtherance of so glorious a Cause.

"The Plan, with which their spiritual destiny is so closely bound up, must be prosecuted with inflexible resolve and utter dedication to its aims and purposes. They must not rest for a second, and, with hearts afire with the love of God and fixed on the ideals of His infinitely precious Faith, must labour systematically and unitedly until all the objectives of the Plan they now prosecute with such noble determination are achieved.

"Upon the discharge of their present responsibilities must depend to a large extent the enlargement of the scope of their glorious mission, and the initiation of a still more momentous stage in the evolution of their institutions within the orbit of our glorious Faith.

"Thiers is a mighty and sacred responsibility which they must not, under any circumstance, abandon or neglect. Thiers is a priceless opportunity which they must seize with promptitude and eagerness, and utilize to the utmost until that responsibility is fully and befittingly discharged.

"The Concourse on High watches over them, ready to vouchsafe its aid and confer its blessing on their valiant and concerted endeavours. The Author of the Divine Plan will, as promised by Him in His epoch-making Tablets, assist them to surmount whatever obstacles they may encounter in their path, and crown their historic enterprise with a resounding victory. The Founder of the Faith, Himself, will not fail to reward them, in His Own Kingdom, and in accordance with His wisdom and bounty, for their share in the furtherance of the interests of His world encompassing Order, and to exalt them amidst the company of..."
His immortal saints and heroes dwelling in the Abhá Kingdom.

"That they may prove themselves worthy of their high calling, that they may excite, by the quality and range of their achievements, the admiration of their brothers in all the continents of the globe, that they may hasten, by the very nature of their exertions, the advent of the day when they will have entered upon a still more exalted stage in their collective advancement on the high road of their destiny—is a prayer that I will continue to offer with all the fervour of my soul, at the Threshold of His Most Holy Shrine." - Virginia Orbison

A signed message from the Hands of the Cause in America, Mrs. Corinne True, Mr. Horace Holley, and Mr. Paul Haney, was read, followed by messages from the National Spiritual Assemblies of the U.S., and Iberia, as well as the various local spiritual assemblies. Loving gifts were acknowledged, among these being a large framed portrait of the Master, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, from the Azores Group; a beautiful photograph album with historic pictures from the Oporto friends; a precious framed Greatest Name given by an Oporto friend; a beautiful leather-worked Greatest Name brought by Joel Marangella.

Carlos Salomão, vice chairman of the Lisbon Spiritual Assembly, raised a prayer that the Faith in Portugal would grow fast and strong, and as straight as the little green cypress about to be planted in the nine-sided pool. With the triumphant "Ode to Joy" from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the friends filed outside to the garden to plant the tree, to take photographs, and then to partake of material food to balance the abundant spiritual feast.

The first part of the afternoon was devoted to the celebration of the Anniversary of the birth of the Bab, with prayers and a short talk by José Serra. At four o'clock on this joyous day a first Summer School under National auspices was held as a result of the Guardian's recent instructions to hold more such reunions even though very small. Virginia Orbison, member of the National Teaching Committee, presided, and short but instructive discourses were given by Angelo Carneiro, who gave a masterly introduction to the Faith with logical and persuasive argument; Joaquim Cunha, who read a paper on the 12 principles; Joel Marangella, who spoke on the importance of the Summer Schools and teaching; and Carlos Salomão, who spoke movingly on the spiritual aspects of the Bahá'í Faith.

After tea and a social time, the friends took leave of each other with glowing faces reflecting new and promise-laden resolves for the fulfilling of all of the goals of the Ten-Year Plan and the triumph of Bahá'u'lláh's Faith in Portugal. A cable was sent to the beloved Guardian assuring him of the love of the friends and of their renewed impulse to go forward on this day of the Dedication of the Ḥazíratu'l-Quds of Lisbon, the Anniversary of the Bab, October 20, 1857-144.

Germany, Austria

DIFFICULTIES CONTINUE ON TEMPLE SITE

The negotiations for the Temple site at Diederben/Thunus have been continued with the Government of Hesse, the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria reports.

Unfortunately another difficulty has arisen which seems insurmountable. The projected building would be standing too close to a beacon, which will be enlarged, for directing the airplanes so that the authorities of the airport had to refuse their approval, for strictly technical reasons.

A definite answer, however, has not yet been received as it is channelled through the Government. In all probability the fact must be faced that another location has to be found.

The Temple design was further developed in order to meet with the requests of the Guardian and reconcile the desired building with the restrictions put up by the authorities. The present plans seem to meet with these two requirements.

North East Asia

FIRST SUMMER SCHOOL HELD IN KOREA

Anticipated by three preceding winter and summer conferences in that same city, the first Bahá'í Summer School of Korea took place in Kwangju, Korea, September 28, 29, and 30, having been called into being by the beloved Guardian in his message to the first Bahá'í Convention of North East Asia as one of the goals of the Six-Year Plan for that area.
Exceeding both in the depth of the teaching offered and in the maturity of the believers attending any previous gathering of Baha'is in Korea, the session began on a serious note when early the first day Hand of the Cause of God Agnes Alexander slipped and fell on the stone steps of the meeting place, spraining her ankle. But the prayers of the following morning brought unity as well as healing, and the school continued with an ever-deepening tone.

The talk by William Maxwell on the successive purifications of the Water of Life; the reading and explanation of the "Tablet of Carmel" by Noureddin Momtazi and his recounting of his experiences in meeting both 'Abdu'l-Baha and the Guardian in different times, places, and conditions; the reading and elucidation of portions of the "Will and Testament" of 'Abdu'l-Baha and the explanation of the Guardianship by Hand of the Cause Miss Alexander, as well as her very presence itself—a blessing to this opening school unequalled in the history of any of the previous conferences—these stand out as the most memorable aspects of an entirely successful and unforgettable "summer" school. And the following cablegram from the beloved Guardian revealed the reason for its success: "Delighted. Assure attendants fervent prayers extension activities consolidation newly born institution. Deepest love."

SIGN CONTRACT FOR FOUNDATION OF AFRICA TEMPLE

On October 22, 1957, the contract for the building of the foundations of the Mother Temple of Africa was signed. This initial contract will cover the building of the Temple to the floor level, including the exterior steps. There have been a number of unfortunate delays which now seem to be behind us, and the building will go ahead with all speed.

During the three months estimated for this preliminary foundations work, all drawings for the main contract will have been completed and submitted to those Government authorities directly concerned with such work, and whose approval must be granted; bills of quantity will have been finalized; the main contractor chosen, and contracts signed.

On the site of the Temple there is no water, so after considering all aspects, it was decided to make arrangements for the sinking of a bore-hole. Drilling for this has already commenced, and when water is struck a considerable saving in the cost of the Temple is envisaged. Kampala is greatly honored, for before the foundations work is completed, during the African Intercontinental Conference in January 1958, Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum will place in the foundations a portion of the precious earth from the inmost Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh. Also in the foundations will be placed, by the revered Hand of the Cause Musa Banání, a casket containing a small quantity of the plaster from the ceiling of the room in the fortress of Mák-Kú, where the Báb was imprisoned.

Shortly after this great occasion, work on the main building is scheduled to commence, and it is hoped that the Temple will be completed by March 1959.

ENDOWMENT ESTABLISHED TO CONSTRUCT SCHOOL

The pioneer in New Hebrides, Mrs. Bertha Dobbins, has conducted a school in her home at Port Vila which has been recognized by the Guardian as one of three Baha’i schools in the Pacific area. She recently has received notice to vacate her residence there.

To insure the continuance of this school, the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia has established a “New Hebrides Endowment.” At least £2500 is required in order to purchase land and construct a building suitable for use as a residence and school for Mrs. Dobbins for the preservation of this historic enterprise.

North East Africa

TRANSLATE “25 YEARS OF GUARDIANSHIP” INTO ARABIC

The National Translation and Reviewing Committee of the North East Africa National Spiritual Assembly has published the translation of “Twenty-Five Years of the Guardianship” by Ruḥiyih Khánum into the Arabic language.

Wide distribution has been undertaken, the National Assembly reports, to enable the friends to understand more fully the institution of the Guardianship, leading to a better understanding of the Faith and greater loyalty to the Sign of God on Earth.

EGYPT, SUDAN BAHÁ’IS INSPIRED BY VISIT OF HAND OF CAUSE

During the month of October the friends of Egypt and of the Sudan had the privilege of a visit from the Hand of the Cause in Africa, Mr. Musa Banání, Mrs. Banání, and Auxiliary Board Member Aziz Yazdí. On the instructions of the beloved Guardian, Mr. Banání cheered the friends with the glad tidings of the progress of the Cause in the African Continent as well as in the Pacific Ocean areas.

The news of the initiative steps to construct the Bahá’í Temple in Kampala, heart of the African Continent, was a source of greater momentum to the desire of the friends to keep pace with the march of the World Crusade, filling them with renewed energy to serve faithfully toward the great Jubilee of 1963.

Mr. Banání met with the National Spiritual Assembly as well as the Local Spiritual Assemblies of Cairo, Port-Said, and Alexandria. As a result of these meetings many of the friends took immediate steps to pioneer.

BADI BUSHRUI

Northwest Africa

CONTACT KABYL BERBERS, MUSLIMS OF M’ZAB

Northwest Africa Bahá’í News has published an account of the visit of Mr. Attar, the Regional Teaching Committee secretary, of Algiers, to Bone, where during four days he contacted some Kabyl Berbers, who showed interest in the Faith.

The highlight of this teaching trip by Mr. Attar was his visit to M’zab, 600 kilometers south of Algiers, where no previous Bahá’í had set foot. Some of the Algiers contacts were in M’zab. Mr. Attar taught the Faith to many people, among whom was the chief religious man, who is the head of the progressive Muslims of M’zab. Two hours were spent in talking with him, and Mr. Attar left copies of the Kitáb-i-Íqán and A Traveller’s Narrative.

Mr. Attar wrote: “And in this way I taught the Faith discreetly or plainly, and gave proofs of the authenticity of the Blessed Perfection in their meetings or Feasts either individually or collectively. In all, the Faith was taught to more than 200 persons, but the number with whom I had direct contact and to whom I had spoken a few times is 27.”

One contact embraced the Faith and said he would come to declare in Algiers, while six others are very near declaration.

Alaska

FIVE NSA MEMBERS TO PIONEER

Five members of the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, newly formed last April, have made decisions to pioneer.

Robert Moul and his family will move to Nome in southeastern Alaska; Warren and Kathy Rodgers will move to Nome; and Verne and Janet Stout will move to the goal area of Malanusa Valley, 50 miles northwest of Anchorage.

Nome is a goal for the formation of a local assembly by next April, and at present has only one pioneer; the goals to be filled by these friends are virgin areas.

National Assembly Incorporated

A further goal of the World Crusade was attained on September 25, 1957, with the signing of the legal papers for the incorporation of the National Spiritual Assembly by the office of the Attorney General in Juneau.

Temple Site Land Approved

The National Assembly also reports that the Guardian has approved the three-acre gift tract of land for a Temple site, reported in Bahá’í News for September.
"Not By The Force of Numbers..."

Not by the force of numbers, not by the mere exposition of a set of new and noble principles, not by an organized campaign of teaching — no matter how widespread and elaborate in its character — not even by the staunchness of our faith or the exaltation of our enthusiasm, can we ultimately hope to vindicate in the eyes of a critical and sceptical age the supreme claim of the Bahá’í Revelation. One thing and only one thing will unfailingly and alone secure the undoubted triumph of this sacred Cause, namely, the extent to which our own inner life and private character mirror forth in their manifold aspects the splendor of those eternal principles proclaimed by Bahá’u’lláh.

—SHOGHI EFFENDI, Bahá’í Administration, p. 66

This is the story of Jay, through whose example and devotion a capable, dedicated soul has been won for service to Bahá’u’lláh and His Cause in another land.

Jay is almost 80 years of age. For many months he was in the county hospital recovering from broken bones and severe bruises after having been struck by a motorist. He lives alone, in one small room, and he does his own shopping.

One day a passerby, a business visitor from a South American country, saw Jay struggling on his way home with a bag of groceries, with a cane to help support his still-weak leg. He assisted Jay to his room, and after they had visited a few minutes Jay asked his visitor “the question.” The stranger was at once so interested that he stayed for almost an hour asking questions, and departed with a few Bahá’í pamphlets.

A few days later the young man returned, asked more questions, and again left with literature. The next week Jay invited him to go to the fireside of another believer, and here his eager interest became an inspiration to the group of Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís studying the teachings together. Within a few weeks he was completely convinced of the validity, the aims, and the purposes of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh and applied to the local spiritual assembly for enrollment, that he might return to his home fully prepared to play his part in the consolidation of this new Faith in his own city and country.

A war refugee from Central Europe to South America, and sent to the United States by his business firm for specialized training, this young man found through this “chance” acquaintance the real purpose of life shining through the broken pattern of his past, and it is Jay, whom he loves as a father, who gave him the key.

This is a glowing example of the truth that everywhere there are ready souls waiting to receive the Message and that no Bahá’í is ever too old, too feeble, too poor, to attract and win for Bahá’u’lláh new “recruits” with the fire and capacity to spread the Light of His Cause in places and lands far beyond the reach of him who mentions the blessed Name of His Lord.

TWO EDITIONS OF CATALOG AVAILABLE FROM BAHÁ’Í PUBLISHING TRUST

The new general catalog is now available from the Bahá’í Publishing Trust, and is being sent to all local librarians, national committees, and isolated Bahá’ís who have accounts with the Publishing Trust. Extra copies will be included in next ship­ments of book orders for local libra­rians to furnish to their local commit­tees. This general edition of the cata­log includes everything available at time of its publication. It is not inten­ted for distribution to contacts, bookstores, or anyone except Bahá’ís who order literature, as it contains many Teaching and Administrative aids of no interest to non-Bahá’ís.

All new publishing items, or items going out of print, as well as any price changes, are listed regularly in BAHÁ’Í NEWS and catalogs should be kept current from this source of in­formation which is readily accessible to everyone.

Special Edition Prepared for Bookstores and Contacts

A special, briefer edition of the Bahá’í Literature Catalog has now been made available for furnishing to the book trade (bookstores, dealers, etc.), and also for giving to contacts who are seriously interested in ordering Bahá’í books.

The Publishing Trust receives many requests from communities and individuals concerning information on handling of Bahá’í books by a local bookstore. There is no reason why a local assembly should not encourage the handling of Bahá’í books by a local bookstore, or suggest titles most likely to be in de­mand from the public. From this point on, however, the bookstore should deal directly with the Publishing Trust. The local assembly should in no way act as a supplier or dealer, since it is a non-profit or­ganization stocking literature solely for its own religious purposes. Either the book dealer can write direct to the Publishing Trust in Wilmette for information, or the local as­sembly can furnish the Trust with the name and address of the book dealer. In either case the necessary information, together with the special catalog, will be sent to the book dealer direct.

Most bookstores are aware of the source for ordering Bahá’í books through ads and listings of titles in The Trade List Annual, Books In Print, The Pu.blisher’s Weekly, and other trade reference sources.

Bahá’ís desiring copies of this special edition of the catalog for inter­ested contacts may order them through their local librarians at cost price of $.10 per copy. (See Publishing Trust section).

LIST COLLEGES NEEDING STUDENT PIONEERS

The College Bureau now has a list of colleges where Bahá’í students are needed. It would be appreciated if all students interested in going to col·lege next fall or transferring at the end of the semester would contact the College Bureau, P. O. Box 856, Stanford, Calif. This is a chance for students who want to pioneer at home while still in school.

This Committee still has not heard from all students enrolled in univer­sities and colleges. It would be ap­preciated if every student would write immediately.
SUNDAY MORNING LSA MEETINGS SUGGESTED

An unusual solution to the problem of finding enough time for local spiritual assembly and committee meetings without detracting from teaching activities has been suggested by the Birmingham, Ala., Local Spiritual Assembly.

"In our efforts to give adequate time to local spiritual assembly meetings and other planning work, and still not detract from the time and effort we wish to give to actual teaching, we feel that we have struck on an excellent compromise.

"We hold one major assembly meeting at 9:30 a.m. the first Sunday of every month. We feel that in this way we come to our consultation fresh and unhurried. In addition to this, the assembly members meet for a brief (one-half hour) meeting preceding each Nineteen Day Feast.

"In this way we can keep our work up-to-date, take care of any urgent things that may come up, and still not take away an evening or other time which could otherwise be given to other activities."

Yakima Herald, Sunday, June 23, 1957, published a feature story by Velma Baylor on the artistic career of Mrs. Victor de Araujo, with a photo of the artist seated at her easel. "Both Mr. and Mrs. de Araujo are active in the Bahá’í Faith and take part in study classes and firesides."

"Elijah’s Mountain Today" is the title of an article on Mount Carmel by Paula Arnold published in The Evening Sun, Baltimore, Md., on May 30, 1957. "Easily the most spectacular building on Mount Carmel, however, is not any of the churches mentioned, but the Bahá’í Temple (i.e., Shrine of the Bab) with its golden cupola, standing halfway up the Mount, above landscaped gardens, visible from every point of the town."

Mercer Cross, Minneapolis Tribune staff writer, devoted considerable space to an article on the Faith in the Morning Tribune of May 27, 1957, under the title "Bahá’ís Stress Unity." "The earth is but one country, and mankind its citizens." So reads the message over one of the entrances to the beautiful ornate temple of Wilmette, Illinois. It is the basic message of the Bahá’í world faith, a little-understood religion that believes in the eventual coming together of all races, nations, classes and creeds."

Under the caption "World Melting Pot of Faiths" the Chicago American on October 24, 1957, published an article from Jerusalem which stated that "Haifa is world headquarters for the Bahá’í Faith, whose American Temple is located in Wilmette."

The Delta Trading Co., Inc., of Tel-Aviv, Israel, has produced a beautifully illustrated Jewish calendar with an illustration facing each month. For December 1957 the illustration is a large photograph of the Bahá’í International Archives building overlooking the Bay of Haifa.

The Publishers’ Auxiliary for October 19, 1957, lists the special events for 1958, January through June, taken from the list compiled by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. World Religion Day appears as of January 19.

On October 12, 1957, the Bahá’ís of Little Rock, Ark., published the statement on "The Oneness of Mankind" as a paid advertisement. This message appeared in the very center of the agitation against race integration. Already requests for literature have been received in Wilmette from seekers in Arkansas.

Los Gatos Times—Saratoga Observer, August 23, 1957, announced that Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Lissner, recently returned from Nigeria, would present a program at the home of Mrs. Hansen, Kings Acres. The Lissners were described as members of the Bahá’í World Faith.

Paris (France) Presse l’intransigeant, March 21, 1957, reproduced from the Frankfurter Rundschau an article reporting that the German Bahá’ís, after purchasing a Temple site near Frankfurt, would be obliged to await a permit by decision of the regional court.
On November 3, 1957, the Chicago Sunday Tribune published an article reporting the decision of the court approving the construction of the Bahá’í Home in Wilmette and announcing plans for an early beginning of construction. The Cook County Circuit Court upheld the permit given to the Bahá’í Temple Trustees by the Village Board after approving a variation in the zoning.

What We Believe

If we are not sure what we believe, then the fault is our own. The responsibility rests with each one of us to acquire a sound basic knowledge of Bahá’í teachings and Bahá’í history so that we may have in our minds the complete picture ready for presentation to anyone who is interested. It must be an accurate picture and it can be an accurate picture if we are willing to make the effort.

Proclamation by the Hands of the Cause to the Baha’is of East and West

Beloved Friends:

Nine days had not yet elapsed after the interment of the sacred remains of our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, in London, when the Hands of the Cause, to the number of twenty-six, assembled at the World Center of the Faith, in our capacity as “Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá’u’lláh,” to consult together on the most tragic situation facing the Baha’is since the Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Baha, and to take all necessary and appropriate measures to safeguard the highest interests of our Faith.

On November 18th the Hands conducted a Memorial Meeting at Bahji, in the Haram-i-Aqdas surrounding the most sacred Shrine in the Bahá’í world, afterward entering the Holy Tomb itself and prostrating ourselves in utter humility at the Sacred Threshold.

On the following morning, November 19th, nine Hands of the Cause, selected from the Holy Land and the several continents of East and West, with ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánum, broke the seals placed upon the beloved Guardian’s safe and desk and made careful examination of their precious contents. These same Hands, rejoining the other Hands assembled in the Mansion of Bahá’u’lláh at Bahji, certified that Shoghi Effendi had left no Will and Testament. It was likewise certified that the beloved Guardian had left no heir. The Aghsán (branches) one and all are either dead or have been declared violators of the Covenant by the Guardian for their faithlessness to the Master’s Will and Testament and their hostility to him named first Guardian in that sacred document.

The first effect of the realization that no successor to Shoghi Effendi could have been appointed by him was to plunge the Hands of the Cause into the very abyss of despair. What must happen to the world community of his devoted followers if the Leader, the Inspirer; the Planner of all Bahá’í activities in all countries and islands of the seas could no longer fulfill his unique mission?

Guardian’s Life of Complete Sacrifice

From this dark abyss, however, contemplation of the Guardian’s own life of complete sacrifice and his peerless services gradually redeemed our anguished hearts. Shoghi Effendi himself, we know, would have been the first to remind the Hands and the widespread body of the believers, that the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh has quickened those powers and resources of faith within mankind which will achieve the unity of the peoples and the triumph of His World Order. In this new light of understanding the company of the Hands could perceive with heightened gratitude the existence of those innumerable blessings which Shoghi Effendi had created and left as his true legacy to all Bahá’ís.

Has not the World Center, with its sacred Shrines and institutions, been firmly established? Has not the Message been established in 254 countries and dependencies? Have not the National and Regional Spiritual Assemblies, forerunners of the Universal House of Justice, been implanted in twenty-six great areas of all continents? Has not the Guardian left us not only his incomparable translations, for English-reading Bahá’ís, of the Bahá’í Sacred Literature but also his own master works of interpretation which disclose to us the unshatterable edifice of evolving Bahá’í Order and world community? Has not the Guardian, building upon the enduring foundation of the Master’s Tablets of the Divine Plan, created the World Crusade to guide our work until 1963?

Has not the Guardian, moreover, in his mysterious insight into the present and future needs of the Bahá'í Community, called into being the International Bahá'í Council and the company of twenty-seven Hands with their Auxiliary Boards, whom in his final communication to the Bahá'ís, he designated “Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh”?

Foundations of World Order Strongly Laid

Such reflections could but, in such a world-shattering experience as all Bahá'ís have this month endured, reveal to us how strongly Shoghi Effendi has laid the foundations of the world order of Bahá'u'lláh through the appointments of Hands of the Cause and likewise the appointment of the International Bahá'í Council, the institution destined to evolve into the Universal House of Justice.

In our capacity of Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh, we Hands of the Cause have constituted a body of nine Hands to serve at the Bahá'í World Center. This body of nine Hands will energetically deal with the protection of the Faith whenever attacks, whether from within or outside the Bahá'í community, are reported by Hands from their areas or by National or Regional Assemblies, or whether they arise within the Holy Land. Correspondence will likewise be maintained with the Hands of the Cause working in the several continents. This same body will correspond with National Assemblies on matters connected with the prosecution of the objectives of the Ten Year Plan. On matters involving administrative questions this same body will assist National Assemblies by citing those passages of the Bahá'í Sacred Literature which direct the Assemblies to a sound solution.

As to the International Bahá'í Council, appointed by the Guardian and heralded in his communications to the Bahá'í world, that body will in the course of time finally fulfill its purpose through the formation of the Universal House of Justice, that supreme body upon which infallibility, as the Master's Testament assures us, is divinely conferred: “The source of all good and freed from all error.” The main work of the Council has been to act as the Guardian's representative in matters involving the Israeli government and its courts of law.

Our Most Precious Legacy

Beloved friends! Is not the most precious legacy bequeathed to us all by Shoghi Effendi the privilege of constancy in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and devotion in teaching His Message? This is the heartfelt plea we direct to every Bahá'í: The hour has come, as it came with the passing of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, when true Bahá'ís will be distinguished by their firmness in the Covenant and their spiritual radiance while pressing forward the mighty work committed to every area of the world community,—to every individual Bahá'í! For now our implacable opponents may, and probably will, unleash attacks, assuming in their ignorance that the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is weakened and defenceless. By consecration of spirit we are armed against all manner of assault and we hold the weapon of faith with which the triumph of the Guardian's aims and purposes is assured.

The Hands of the Cause, determined to carry out every aspect of the Guardian's expressed wishes and hopes, call upon the National Assemblies to proceed with the holding of the Intercontinental Conferences which Shoghi Effendi has planned for 1958, and make each of them a great rallying-point of determination to achieve the tasks of the next phase of the World Crusade. We are, moreover, to keep ever before us the other tasks fixed in the Ten Year Plan as objectives to be won by 1963.

Evolution of International Bahá'í Council

Meanwhile the entire body of the Hands assembled by the nine Hands of the World Center will decide when and how the International Bahá'í Council is to evolve through the successive stages outlined by the Guardian, culminating in the call to election of the Universal House of Justice by the membership of all National Spiritual Assemblies.

When that divinely ordained body comes into existence, all the conditions of the Faith can be examined anew and the measures necessary for its future operation determined on consultation with the Hands of the Cause.

"O God, my God! Shield Thy trusted servants from the evils of self and passion, protect them with the watchful eye of Thy loving kindness from all rancor, hate, and envy, shelter them in the impregnable stronghold of Thy Cause and, safe from the darts of doubtfulness, make them the manifestations of Thy glorious Signs, illumine their faces with the effulgent rays shed from the Dayspring of Thy Divine Unity, gladden their hearts with the verses revealed from Thy Holy Kingdom, strengthen their loins by Thy all-swaying power that cometh from Thy Realm of Glory. Thou art the All-Bountiful, the Protectoy, the Almighty, the Gracious!"

"O ye that stand fast in the Covenant; When the hour cometh that this wronged and broken-winged bird will have taken its flight unto the celestial Concours, when it will have hastened to the Realm of the Unseen and its mortal frame will have been either lost or hiddenneath the dust, it is incumbent upon the Afnán, that are steadfast in the Covenant of God, and have branched from the Tree of Holiness; the Hands, (pillars) of the Cause of God, (the glory of the Lord rest
Assembly Gives Grateful Affirmation and Pledges of Unqualified Support

Beloved Bahá’í Friends:

The foregoing message of transcendent importance prepared by the twenty-six Hands of the Cause recently assembled at the World Center of our Faith was transmitted on November 30 to every American Bahá’í. This Proclamation to the Bahá’í world assures all believers that, following our tragic loss of the beloved Guardian, the World Faith established by Bahá’u’lláh will have continuity and direction.

On behalf of the entire American Bahá’í community, the actions taken by the body of the Hands appointed by the Guardian have received the grateful affirmation of your National Assembly and our whole-hearted pledge of unqualified support.

We unitedly join their heartfelt appeal for renewed dedication to the Faith and for energetic action in spreading the Message and completing the objectives of the Guardian’s World Crusade.

The maturity of the Bahá’í world community now begins as we collectively press forward to carry out the beloved Guardian’s expressed wishes and plans. Indeed, in this thirty-six year mission as Guardian, Shoghi Effendi has perfected the expression of the Divine Guidance we need for years to come, until the Universal House of Justice shall have been elected and the Master’s Will and Testament thereby executed. Moreover, the Tablets of the Divine Plan, which the Guardian’s successive Seven-Year Plans and the present World Crusade brought into the field of action, continue to have spiritual vitality until the world of humanity is united in one Faith and one Order under the All-Powerful Will of God brought to our age by the Bab and Bahá’u’lláh.

Committees and Assemblies Called Upon

The National Committees and the local Assemblies, these important organs of our Bahá’í Community, are likewise called upon by our body to function in unity and dedication so that the American Bahá’ís may maintain their primacy in devoted service to the Faith.

Let us cherish in our hearts the conviction that the Guardianship remains with us in Shoghi Effendi’s elucidation of the administrative order, his interpretation of the Bahá’í Sacred Writings, and his example of supreme sacrifice to the Call of God addressed to this crucial age.

Message From The Hands of the Cause in America to the 1957 State Conventions

Dear Friends:

By now all American believers have received and read with rapt attention the Proclamation issued by the company of Hands convened in the Mansion of Bahá'u'lláh, outside 'Akka, soon after the interment of the sacred remains of our beloved Shoghi Effendi in the London cemetery.

That document builds a bridge for the world Bahá'í Community from the passing of the Guardian to the completion of the Ten-Year Plan and the eventual formation of the Universal House of Justice. It assures the progressive unfoldment of the Bahá'í Administrative Order, the continuous operation of our local and National Assemblies, and the uninterrupted teaching of the Message of Bahá'u'lláh. It provides, likewise, for the protection of the Faith from slaughters wherever and however directed against the Faith of God.

What is the firm foundation on which the company of Hands based their decisive action in such an unexpected, such a crucial hour for all Bahá'ís?

It would be well to review together on this impressive occasion the successive pronouncements made by the Guardian in creating the function and mission of the Institution of the Hands, established by Bahá'u'lláh and maintained in this era of the Faith by provisions in the Master's Will and testament.

On December 24, 1951, the Guardian cabled: "Hour now ripe (to) take long, inevitably deferred step (in) conformity (with) provisions (of) 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Testament ... through appointment first contingent (of) Hands (of the) Cause of God ... Initial step now taken, regard (as) preparatory (to) full development (of) institution provided in 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Will, paralleled (with) preliminary measures formation (of) International Council destined (to) culminate (in) emergence (of) Universal House of Justice."

In the second telegram dated February 29, 1952, the Guardian used these words: "Members (of) august body invested (in) conformity (with) 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Testament, two-fold sacred function, propagation (and) preservation (of) the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, (are) destined (to) assume individually (in the) course (of) time (the) direction (of) institutions paralleling those revolving around (the) Universal House of Justice, supreme legislative body (of) the Bahá'í World. . . ."

Next, on October 8 of that same year, the Guardian cabled: "Call upon fifteen Hands (of) five continents, by virtue of their supreme function as chosen instruments (for) the propagation (of) the Faith, (to) inaugurate historic mission through appointment ... (of) five Auxiliary Boards, (one) each continent, nine members each, who will as their adjuncts, or deputies, and working (in) conjunction (with) (the) various National Assemblies ... assist, through periodic, systematic visits (to) Bahá'í centers, (in the) efficient, prompt execution (of) the twelve projected National Plans."

On April 6, 1954, we received the following: "Urge initiation (of) five Continental Bahá'í Funds, which as they develop, will increasingly facilitate (the) discharge (of) the functions assigned (to the) Boards."

"Fervently supplicating (at the) Holy Threshold (for an) unprecedented measure (of) blessings (on this) vital, indispensable organ (of) the embryonic, steadily unfolding Bahá'í Administrative Order, presaging (the) emergence (of) the World Order (of) Bahá'u'lláh which must pave (the) way (for) the establishment (of) the World Civilization destined (to) attain maturity (in the) course of successive Dispensations (in the) five thousand year Bahá'í cycle."

During the course of the present year the Guardian made profound and significant references to the station and function of the Hands.

On June 4, 1957, he cabled: "Divinely appointed institution (of the) Hands (of the) Cause of God, invested (by) virtue (of) the authority conferred (by the) Testament (of the) Center (of) the Covenant (with the) twin functions of protecting (and) propa­gating (the) Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, now entering new phase (in the) process (of) the unfoldment (of) its
Guardian Announces Series of Five Intercontinental Conferences and Appointment of Eight Additional Hands of the Cause

With this issue of Baha'i News each believer will receive a copy of an epochal document from the beloved Guardian bearing the foregoing title and addressed to the Hands of the Cause of God and to the National Spiritual Assemblies throughout the world.

The announcement of five Intercontinental Conferences to be held during 1958 in five continents of East and West marks another historic turning-point in the annals of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, summoning the entire Bahá'í World to a new and higher spiritual potency. The Guardian's enumeration of the tasks performed discloses the vast realm of victorious achievement that the believers have already attained since the inception of the Ten-Year Plan. His appointment of eight new Hands of the Cause effectively strengthens this institution created by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in His Will and Testament.

The conduct of an Intercontinental Conference in Chicago calls for the formulation of plans which the National Spiritual Assembly will announce to the believers at the earliest possible date.

It is for us now, and continuously, to enter into the Guardian's creative, triumphant vision and prepare ourselves spiritually and mentally for the conquests required for the consummation of the next phase of the World Crusade, conquests calling for an aid of an infinitely larger number of believers than presently comprise the community of the Greatest Name.

Second Series of Regional Conferences Attended by Over 2000 Bahá'ís

The second series of 15 conferences called by the National Spiritual Assembly and held during the third and fourth weekends of September, drew a remarkable attendance of believers numbering more than 2,000.

The purpose of this series was: (1) to discuss the forms of service defined in the letter written by the Hands of the Cause on June 19 to every American believer, (2) to bring to fulfillment the responsibility of the individual American Bahá'í presented in that letter, and (3) to discuss the role of the various institutions of the Faith concerned with pioneer settlement and teaching work under the Ten-Year Plan. The agenda consisted of five topics: This Critical Period in Bahá'í History; Four Forms of Service; The Supreme Goal; Pioneering Opportunities, and What Can I Do?

Consciously in the minds of all believers present was this sentence in the letter from the Hands of the Cause: “The most important moment in our entire life is surely that in which, at last realizing the real measure and purpose of the Guardian's successive messages, each American Bahá'í, acting for himself in love of Bahá'u'lláh, makes his final decision to consecrate himself in service to a God-given Faith.”

Pioneer pledges were distributed to all present at the conference who could immediately set in motion plans to pioneer either abroad or at home. While not many pledges have yet been returned to the National Spiritual Assembly, a number of assemblies have reported that there is a decided acceleration among the members of their communities in planning toward dispersal.

More than 150 Bahá'í communities were represented at the 15 conferences, as well as several hundred groups and isolated centers. Thirteen of the conferences were conducted by members of the National Spiritual Assembly, and two by well-qualified representatives, Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin and Mrs. Jesma Herbert.

An important by-product of these gatherings was the gratification and benefit derived by the believers as well as by the members of the National Spiritual Assembly themselves from the frank, heart-to-heart consultation on the major tasks and problems facing the American Bahá'í community and its National Assembly.

World Religion Day
A National Bahá'í Event

World Religion Day was instituted by the National Bahá'í Assembly in 1950. Its celebration on January 19, 1958, marks the ninth annual observance of this significant public event.

The purpose of World Religion Day is to elevate the minds of sincere seekers above the confusion and conflict of historic creeds, and inspire them with the vision of the oneness of all revealed faiths proclaimed by Báb, Founder of the Bahá'í World Religion a hundred years ago.

That the teachings of all the Prophetic Founders of religion emanate from the same God, exalt the same ideals and principles, and are nothing else than successive expressions of the same sublime truths — this is the great Message which World Religion Day proclaims. Apart from spiritual unity in worship of the one God, humanity can find no justice nor peace, Bahá'ís affirm.

Since 1950, local Assemblies and groups have publicized World Religion Day so successfully that this public event is now listed in the Calendar of Special Months and Days sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

For 1958 a threefold service is available to Bahá'ís: a press release and suggested newspaper advertisement, distributed by Bahá'í Press Service to all local press representatives; a very attractive World Religion Day display poster; and a World Religion Day 8½ x 11 sheet for free local distribution, setting forth the purposes of the event and quoting relevant passages from public addresses made by 'Abdu'l-Bahá in America.

The poster, a photograph of which appears on this page, measures 14x17 inches and comes in two tones of blue. It is printed on paper only and can be obtained at 25 cents each or five for $1.00, mailed in a tube by third class mail. The place and time of the local meeting and the name of the local Spiritual Assembly or Bahá'í group can be lettered in the space below the sketch provided for the purpose. A hard-backed poster can be made by mounting it on cardboard with rubber cement and an easel can be attached for a stand-up poster.

The single sheet statement entitled, “World Religion Day” can be ordered in lots of 50 for $1.00 post paid.

Orders for the poster and for the statement are to be sent with accompanying remittance to: Bahá'í Press Service, 434 Thomas Avenue, Rochester 17, New York. Orders sent to any other office will delay delivery.

ARTHUR L. DAHL ELECTED TO NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Robert W. McLaughlin has resigned from the National Spiritual Assembly because repeated absences from the country would make it impossible for him to perform his duties as a member this year.

This action necessitated a by-election by the delegates to the last National Convention to fill the vacancy.

The voting, held on September 28, resulted in the election of Arthur L. Dahl of Pebble Beach, Calif., to replace Mr. McLaughlin.

Central and East Africa
GUARDIAN HERALDS
OPENING OF NEW PHASE OF RICH PROMISE

A message from the Guardian, added to a letter from his Secretary to the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa in reply to its communications, contains passages of interest to all Bahá'ís. Baha'i News has extracted these paragraphs for reprint.

"The year that has just elapsed, marking the opening phase in the progressive unfoldment of the destiny of the Bahá'í communities, labouring singly and collectively for the expansion and consolidation of the institutions of the embryonic World Order of Bahá'u'lláh in both Central and East Africa, has witnessed a series of achievements, in both the teaching and administrative fields, that are truly heartening, and may well be regarded as worthy of emulation by their sister communities, now embarked on similar enterprises in the Northern, the Western, and Southern territories of the far-flung African continent.

"Particularly in Uganda and Kenya—among the first of the Negro-inhabited territories to be warmed and illuminated by the rays of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh—now leading the field numerically, and exhibiting a vitality and a spiritual receptivity second to none among the communities spread over that continent, has this progress been noticeable. In the steady increase in the number of believers—though not as spectacular as in the early days when the Faith was introduced in these territories—in the multiplication of centres, testifying to the widespread diffusion of the light of this Revelation over such extensive areas within their confines; in the diligence, the loyalty, the courage, and dogged perseverance displayed consistently by the elected representatives responsible for the conduct of Bahá'í affairs in these areas; in the enthusiasm and organizing ability which these representatives, aided by the rank and file of the faithful, so wholeheartedly collaborating with them in the pursuit of a common and glorious task, have demonstrated since the announcement of the project of the construction of the Mother Temple of Africa; in their recent success in incorporating the first of the three newly emerged Regional African Assemblies,—in these, as well as in less conspicuous fields, the standard-bearers of an all-conquering Faith, in these highly promising contiguous territories, a number of whom have distinguished themselves through their superb exploits far away from their homes, have set an example which posterity will not fail to extol, and which the organized followers of the Faith, not only in Africa but in other continents of the globe, would do well to follow.

"... A new phase, pregnant with rich promise and undreamt-of possibilities, is undoubtedly opening with the founding and rise of the first Maghribí-Adhkar in the African continent, following upon the three successive milestones of the Faith in that area on the eve of the launching of the Ten-Year Plan, by the inception of the World Spiritual Crusade and, more recently, by the emergence of the Bahá'í Regional Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa.

"This latest stage in the unfoldment of the Mission entrusted to the stalwart promoters of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh in so promising and privileged an area, must be distinguished, and excel the previous period during which it was born, and the machinery of its Administrative Order set up, by acts so brilliant as to throw into shadow the magnificent feats they have already achieved in its service. . . ."

MOGADISCIO LSA REPORTS
TEACHING IN SOMALIA

Teaching activities in Mogadiscio, Somalia, since Riḍván 1957 have included two new translations, two teaching conferences, many firesides, and extension teaching work, the Mogadiscio Local Spiritual Assembly has reported.

The translations of a pamphlet into Somali and Bravanese were completed in time for Riḍván. Two cables and a letter from the Guardian were received, expressing appreciation for this accomplishment.

The Teaching Committee arranged two inspiring Teaching Conferences the first two weekends of June. The program was varied and lively, and included a survey of the Guardian's Riḍván message, talks on the responsibility of the individual to..." teach, and a spirited consultation by all.

Regular teaching meetings for the friends and their contacts are held every Friday evening, and many firesides are held each week. From Riónván to the middle of August, 142 fireside meetings have been held.

Extension teaching is carried on in Hafun and Afgoi by Mohamed Musa and Mohamed Saleh. Cyrus Samandari has made a number of teaching trips, sometimes accompanied by one of the Somali friends, and considerable teaching work has been done.

GRAND MANAN ISLAND ENROLLS FIRST BELIEVER

The enrollment of the first native believer on Grand Manan Island, a goal of the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly, has been reported by the Canadian New Territories Committee Bulletin.

Doris Richardson, the Bahá'í pioneer on Grand Manan Island, wrote: "How wonderful to be able to share with you my supreme joy! After four years ... to have someone say they wanted to be a Bahá'í, and begin to read and search is perhaps an experience that is indescribable. It has been my feeling for some time that Edward Somers was a believer, and recognized Bahá'u'lláh; nevertheless he had not really done any studying for himself until this summer. "Then, when Amo Chesley was here recently on her vacation, he declared his belief in the Bahá'í Faith to her. . . Bless him, for he little realizes what it means to be the first believer on Grand Manan."

NINETEEN CITIES REPRESENTED AT JAPAN'S FIRST SUMMER SCHOOL

Another of the goals of the Six-Year Plan was achieved on August 24, when a Hand of the Cause, a member of the Auxiliary Board, and friends from 19 cities in Japan gathered in Takarazuka to inaugurate Japan's First Summer School.

In response to a message sent on August 25 by the Secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly, the beloved Guardian cabled: "Congratulate attendants historic summer school fervently praying expansion vaunted activities. Love, Soon."

The Takarazuka Hotel was an ideal selection by the committee for its convenience to a majority of the Baha'i communities in the Kansai area.

The program prepared by the Committee ordinarily would have required a week to complete, especially as all talks had to be translated into two other languages; the official languages being Japanese, Iranian and English. However, with an able chairman and translators, speakers and attendants all entered with enthusiasm into the program and realized its fulfillment in three days, with no time for recreational activities.

Thirteen topics were presented, dealing with the history, teachings, and administration of the Faith. There was a public lecture in the evening of August 24, with two talks, "Need for World Religion," and "Baha'i World Faith."

A feature of the final day's session was a Panel Discussion on "Goals of the Six-Year Plan," with a chairman and six participants. Each morning, afternoon, and evening session was preceded by devotions in the three languages. At the opening session Mr. M. Zenimoto, on behalf of the School Committee, welcomed the friends and outlined the purposes of the School.

The attendance statistics were: 75 Baha'i adults, 7 non-Baha'i adults, 3 non-Baha'i youth, 1 Baha'i youth, 23 Baha'i children, and 2 non-Baha'i children, a total of 111.

A 'spur of the moment' suggestion for a special Children's Class at the School was put into action and 19 participated. The teachers were Miss Y. Inatsuka, Miss M. Morita and Miss M. Naderi. This class gave great joy to all present.

Mention should also be made of a surprise feature at the public lecture meeting on August 24, when Miss Yoshiko Morita of Kyoto sang Mr. Wolcott's composition of Baha'u'llah's prayer "From the Sweet Scented Streams," accompanied on the piano by Mr. Koji Akizawa of Yokohama.

Mr. M. Odani of Kyoto, who completed a tour in August to western Honshu and Kyushu, attended the closing day of the Summer School on August 26. Mr. Odani spoke with such fervor and inspiration as to captivate the hearts of all present. His eloquent testimony to the power of the spirit and the invisible assistance when one arises to teach, will be long remembered as the most outstanding contribution at this Summer School. Mr. Odani is the first Japanese believer to arise under the Six-Year Plan and make a teaching tour unaccompanied by any other believer.

The spirit of fellowship which prevailed, no less than the instruction given, was of lasting value to all who participated in this first Summer School. The Committee deserves sincere congratulations for a task so well performed on such short notice from the National Spiritual Assembly. As indicated by the Guardian's cable this school was 'historic' in the annals of the Faith in Japan.

HOKKAIDO ISLAND OPENED TO FAITH

The Baha’i Bulletin of North East Asia has published an account of the opening to the Baha’i Faith of Hokkaido Island, Japan, as follows:

The report furnished by Mr. Rouhollah Montazi of the teaching trip to Hokkaido Island by him and Mr. Gektie Nakajima is still another evidence of the power of the spirit when one arises in the name of Baha'u'llah to bring to fulfillment any goal or wish expressed by our beloved Guardian.

They left Osaka on the evening of June 8, arrived in Aomori the following night, and crossed by ferry to Hakodate, the southern port of Hokkaido, where they arrived on the morning of June 10.
A family of the Ainu tribe of native peoples of Hokkaido Island, Japan, who are being informed of the Baha'i Faith by the two pioneers there, shown at the left.

As Mr. Nakajima's friend, Mr. Muneto, is a former mayor of Hakodate, this afforded an introduction to the people of that city. He arranged for a newspaper interview and a public meeting through the Chamber of Commerce.

Another public meeting in the city library was arranged by Mr. T. Seki, Chief of the General Affairs Department. Over 30 persons heard the message in that meeting, including the Chief of Education and the Chief Librarian. Several hours of private discussions were spent with these men later.

On June 11 a visit was made to the city of Otaru, where another friend of Mr. Nakajima, Mr. Yamazaki, arranged for a meeting there on June 14. Mr. Yamazaki also went with them to Sapporo, the capital city of Hokkaido, where he introduced them to the Chairman of the Foreign Trade Association, Mr. Koshiyama, on June 12.

In Sapporo they called on the Chamber of Commerce and the Industry Club, and a joint meeting was arranged for June 17. Through an introduction from a business friend in Osaka, a television coverage was arranged with the Hokkaido Broadcasting Center for the luncheon meeting on June 17. After discussing the business and economic conditions in Japan, a brief history of the Faith was given, followed by many questions. The telecast was given the same evening.

On June 16 a visit was made to Shiroi with the Moritake family of the Ainu tribe. The Faith was explained during their one and one-half hour visit.

On June 19 at the Rotary Club in Sapporo an opportunity was afforded to speak of the Faith to 200 members. A regular weekly fireside meeting was definitely arranged in the home of Mr. Giro Sasaki, who was given the Greatest Name, and pictures of the Shrine of the Bab, the International Archives, and the Baha'i Temple for display in his home for these fireside meetings. A quantity of literature was also left with him.

They returned to Osaka on June 21, confident that real results were achieved.

Trip to Inland Sea

A second report from Mr. Momtazi tells of a two week trip in July to Takamatsu on Shikoku Island, and to nearby Shodo Island in the Inland Sea. Many new contacts were made, literature was distributed, and a fireside group started.

Teaching on Awaji

Extension teaching has been progressing for the past few months on the inland of Awaji, under the guidance of Mr. A. Katirai. A regular fireside group meets weekly, and several students are studying with the full intention of becoming enrolled believers.

Awaji Island is located between the main island of Honshu and Shikoku Island, at the entrance to the Inland Sea.

Mr. Katirai recently entertained as guests in his home several university students from Takamatsu on Shikoku Island. They remained a full week, studying the Faith during three sessions each day.

There are 38 photographs illustrating the growth of the Faith, with pictures of some of the early believers, ceremonies connected with the dedication of the Hazrat-ul-Quds, various Baha'i properties in Pakistán, conventions, teaching conferences, local Spiritual Assemblies, and the first National Spiritual Assembly.

Of especial interest are pictures of Miss Martha Root with members of the Karachi Spiritual Assembly, and of Mrs. Dorothy Baker addressing a meeting in Karachi during the Intercontinental Conference in 1953.

Tour Seeks Contact with Lapps in Sweden

Among the special teaching plans reported by the National Spiritual Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland for this fall is a tour by the Hand of the Cause in Europe, Dr. Muhlschlegel, and a small group of Scandinavian Baha'is into the Lapp country of North Central Sweden in an effort to make contacts with the Lapps, conduct firesides, seek receptive souls, distribute literature, and pave the way for additional teaching and a possible Lapp summer school next summer."

Commemoration of United Nations Day is one of the special public teaching events to be observed throughout Scandanavia and Finland. An attractive pamphlet for the event has been prepared to explain the relationship of the Bahá’í Faith to the United Nations, and giving the principles of the Faith. It is to be printed in all four languages spoken in these countries.

NICARAGUA BAHÁ’IS HOLD FIRST SUMMER SCHOOL

The first annual Bahá’í Summer School of Nicaragua opened a three-day session in Nandaime on September 14, 1957.

Two visiting teachers, Margo Miesler and Allen Pringle of Honduras, assisted Donald Witzel and Pablo Perez of Managua with the teaching activities, which covered 20 subjects under two main themes, "The Individual and Collective Aspects of Bahá’í Life," and "The Administrative Order."

Special programs were given each evening after the classes. The agenda for September 14 was "The Life of Bahá’u’lláh" by Margo Miesler, "General Highlights of the Bahá’í Faith" by Allen Pringle, and 50 pages of stories translated from Portals to Freedom of "The Life Picture of ‘Abdu’l-Baha" by Pablo Perez. Following these topics, slides of the Holy Land were shown.

On September 15 the subject was "The Presentation of the Bahá’í Cause" by the Bahá’ís of Nandaime.

Mrs. Mignon Witzel was responsible for the planning and practical aspects of this new institution in Nicaragua. It was a great success and, needless to say, we can hardly wait for the next one.

LOVE, UNITY KEYNOTE
BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE

The fourth Blue Ridge Conference was again held at the Blue Ridge Assembly, in North Carolina, from August 24 to 28, 1957.

As one of the teachers commented, “The spirit at Blue Ridge has run high. The love has been great; the unity evident.” Each of us left with a renewed sense of dedication, a clarity of purpose, our lives once again re-channeled and re-directed. From the talks came inspiration; from the reports and discussions, practical techniques by which that inspiration can be put into effect. One hundred and thirty-seven people came; one hundred stayed for the whole conference.

We have been, each year, especially blessed by the presence of Paul E. Haney, Hand of the Cause; by the active participation of both the youth and the children; by the bounty of loving fellowship, growing out of worshipping, studying and living together. Next year, the first Southern Summer School will be held—one to be at Blue Ridge, to last at least five days, and longer if we are able to obtain the Blue Ridge facilities for a longer period.

The over-all theme of the conference was “The Road to Mount Carmel,” and among the friends present were several who have made their pilgrimage. They evoked much of that spirit which has been brought back to us from the World Center of the Faith with ever-increasing intensity.

For the first time at Blue Ridge a seminar was held, in which everyone took an active part, based on the compilation of excerpts on The Covenant and Administration. For this study, the friends were divided into nine groups, each studying its own set of four questions each day, with references from the compilation to guide the discussion. At the end, the secretary from each group presented his group’s answers in a three-minute resume. We were all thrilled with the wealth of ideas coming out of the consultation, and amazed at the amount of information that can be packed into a three-minute resume.

Through the discussion on the work of the Area Teaching Committees, much practical information was brought out, on how the isolated Bahá’í or a group can get more assistance, and just what the Area Teaching Committees’ work should be.

The non-Bahá’í youth had two special discussion sessions with an adult Bahá’í, covering everything from stories of the experiences of outstanding Bahá’í teachers, to many phases of the Administrative Order, and how to answer questions they are often asked by their friends.

In the report from the National Bahá’í Youth Committee, it was stressed that every community should have a Youth Committee, even if they have no youth, which could provide a speaker or activities for other youth organizations.

It is also most important that children in Bahá’í families be prepared for enrollment. The youth must catch the vision of what we are building. The talk on how youth are travelling the road to Mount Carmel was based on the “Tablet to the True Gathering of Bahá’í friends on the grounds at 126 Evergreen Place, West Englewood, N. J. where ‘Abdu’l-Bahá gave the Unity Feast to the friends in 1912. This occasion, September 8, 1957, was to hear Zikru’l-láh Khadem, Hand of the Cause, center, speaking on the station of the Guardian, and on the Covenant.

Believer." We should study this Tablet, use it, and become magnets to attract pure souls.

The Interracial Teaching Committee report showed us what they are trying to do, and how they are going about it. In addition to their primary goal, on which the Guardian is currently placing such great emphasis, we should devote more time to all minority groups; show hospitality, for instance, to foreign students, who may go back to other places on the earth, and be of inestimable help to the newly born communities.

Here are some notes, taken from the talks and discussions:

For 7000 years, mankind has been travelling toward the day when God's promises would be fulfilled. Where we stand today depends greatly on the vision and actions of individuals in the past who, through their vision and efforts, have made the path a little broader and more apparent for us today. What we do today will make it easier for the people tomorrow. We must cleanse our spiritual veins, so that the bounties may flow through us. We will come to that place where neither praise nor condemnation can touch us. This is the spiritual road to Mount Carmel.

We are building the Kingdom of God on earth. These institutions could not be created until this Day. The Kingdom of God has come, and to it we must adjust. It is the fulfillment of the promise of all ages.

Why the Ten-Year Plan? These years before 1963 are crucial. We could not have conceived this Crusade; only the Guardian could do so. He plans and directs the successive stages of the Divine Plan, channeling us to the Divine guidance. Baha'u'llah "put into our hands the lamp of His teachings. By its light the world will be illumined," said 'Abdu'l-Baha.

The Guardian is dispersing the assets of the Faith (the Baha'is). Dispersal is not new. Dispersal among the people of God has been going on since the beginning of time. Whenever we arise to do something which the Guardian wants done, it must be with purity of heart, and a sense of sacrifice. If we do it for personal reasons, the spiritual potency of our action is jeopardized, if not doomed. If we act with courage and pure hearts, the confirmations will flow. Teach the pure souls, wherever you find them. The more you teach, the more avenues will open.

We must study the Faith for knowledge. Through the Teachings, we can become truly educated. Pray for assistance and guidance daily; listen for an answer. Martha Root once said, "Every breath, almost, is a prayer to be a channel... be ready when opportunity comes... When I do not pray, in two or three days I see the effect. The work is not so good." We cannot be lukewarm. We must be enwrapped with the love of God. "Wear the mantle of Baha'u'llah proudly!"

Travelling the road to Mount Carmel will demand a great deal of spirituality. God gave us the maps, through Baha'u'llah, and the Guardian directs us. We have the Administrative Order, and outside the Faith there will be a federated world. When these two things come together, the Golden Age will come. Out of world order, will be born spiritual salvation.

MISSOULA, CASPER HOLD THREE-DAY SEMINARS

Mrs. Florence V. Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, conducted three-day seminars on the Baha'i Faith in Missoula, Mont., and Casper, Wyo., during September.

Her visit in both cities was well publicized in the press and on radio and television, contributing to the success of the meetings. Attendance in both cities exceeded 60 persons.

In Missoula a one-half hour interview was broadcast over KBTK, with the Station Manager, William Strother, leading an extended discussion with Mrs. Mayberry on many facets of the Faith. There were two other radio interviews on KGVO, and announcements of the seminar on KXLL and KMSS-AM.

The two radio stations and the television station in Casper also allotted time for interviews with her, and she was allowed to speak freely about the Faith.

Subjects discussed in the seminars were "Progressive Revelation," "Herald and Author of the New Era," and "Regeneration of Man-kind."

BAHA’I IN THE NEWS

Believers resident in Eureka Springs, Ark., paid for a large advertisement in Eureka Springs Times-Echo, October 3, 1957, reprinting the National Spiritual Assembly statement on “The Oneness of Mankind.” This type of publicity, in view of the race integration problem in Little Rock, has great importance in expressing the Baha’i position through non-political means.

The Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal, September 15, 1957, reported a talk given to the local Baha’i community by Dr. Ekanem A. Udoh of Nigeria, who taught two years at LeMoyne College. “He said the Baha’i Faith may become the major religion of Africa. He said the aims of Baha’i have strong appeal to Africans.”

The text was supplied by the Local Assembly.

An impressive full page devoted to the Faith appeared in the Charleston Gazette on July 20. Featuring a very large photo of the Baha’i House of Worship, the statement represented one in a series of local church histories sponsored by leading business firms “who realize the importance of the church in this community.”

The text was supplied by the Local Assembly.

The Sarasota (Fla.) News of August 3, 1957, and the Sarasota Herald-Tribune of the same date, both featured a Coast Guard honor paid to Charles R. Gilman (Baha’i), member of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, for using his motor yacht for outstanding emergency missions and also his radio transmitter for the same purpose.

A greeting card designed for use on the Jewish New Year carries a color photo of the Bay of Haifa showing the Shrine of the Bab, and also a color photo of Haifa Town Hall.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, September 7, 1957, carried a three-column photo of Mrs. Bertha Piepenburg showing Mrs. Anna Hanel some souvenirs brought back from South Africa, illustrating a feature story about Mrs. Piepenburg’s visit to her Baha’i daughter and son-in-law in Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia. This human-interest story was written by James M. Johnston, staff reporter, as a personal interview.

The Sarasota (Fla.) Herald-Tribune, September 1, 1957, presented a three-column story by Stan Windham, staff writer, on “Another Faith Explained,” a summary of the history, teachings, and administrative order of the Faith. The text was based upon Baha’i literature presented by the local Baha’is, and also a brief oral exposition made by one of the believers.

The Christian Century, July 24, 1957, reported that in Germany a call had been issued to Christian churches to ward off the “offensive” launched in Germany by non-Christian religions. Reference was made to plans for a Baha’i Temple as one of the “non-Christian” invasions of the Christian claim to Germany.

Beloved Friends:

With noble utterance Rúhíyyih Khánum conveyed to the Bahá’í world the tragic, unexpected and afflictive news of the Guardian’s passing. His physical departure from this world marks the ending of an era in the history of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

“SHOGHI EFFENDI BELOVED OF ALL HEARTS SACRED TRUST GIVEN BELIEVERS BY MASTER PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY FROM SUDDEN HEART ATTACK IN SLEEP FOLLOWING ASIATIC FLU. URGE BELIEVERS REMAIN STEADFAST, CLING INSTITUTION HANDS LOVINGLY REARED, RECENTLY REINFORCED, EMPHASIZED BY BELOVED GUARDIAN. ONLY ONENESS OF HEART ONENESS OF PURPOSE CAN BEFITTINGLY TESTIFY LOYALTY ALL NATIONAL ASSEMBLIES AND BELIEVERS TO DEPARTED GUARDIAN WHO SACRIFICED SELF UTTERLY FOR SERVICE FAITH.”

—Rúhíyyih Khánum

In a second message cabled the same day (November 5, 1957) Rúhíyyih Khánum added: “Appeal (to) Hands, National Assemblies (and) Auxiliary Boards to shelter (the) believers (and) assist them (to) meet (this) heart-rending, supreme test. Funeral (of) our beloved (will be held) Saturday (November) Ninth (in) London. Hands, Assembly (and) Board members invited attend ... Urge hold memorial meetings Saturday.”

An appropriate press announcement, prepared under Rúhíyyih Khánum’s direction, was released to Reuters in London and to the wire services in Chicago. A copy of this same release was sent to all local Bahá’í press representatives by the National Bahá’í Press Service. The National Assembly, as directed, dispatched two telegrams to all local Assemblies; one requesting the friends to pray for the protection of the Faith because it had been learned that the beloved Guardian was desperately ill; the second reported his passing and requested that local meetings be held on Saturday, November 9.

On Sunday, November 10, the National and Regional Spiritual Assemblies received this message from Rúhíyyih Khánum written after the funeral had been held in London:

“BELOVED GUARDIAN LAID (TO) REST (IN) LONDON ACCORDING (TO) LAWS (OF) AQDAS (IN) BEAUTIFUL Befitting SPOT AFTER IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY HELD (IN) PRESENCE (OF) MULTITUDE (OF) BELIEVERS REPRESENTING OVER TWENTY COUNTRIES (OF) EAST (AND) WEST STOP DOCTORS ASSURE SUDDEN PASSING INVOLVED NO SUFFERING. This message was sent to all Assemblies and Area Teaching Committees in the United States on Monday, November 11, with a covering letter.

On the following day, November 12, this further cablegram was received from Rúhíyyih Khánum:
"ASSURE FRIENDS BELOVED, SACRED GUARDIAN BEFITTINGLY LAID (TO) REST SURROUNDING BY LARGE, REPRESENTATIVE GATHERING (OF) BELIEVERS (FROM) EAST (AND) WEST. —Rúhíyyih

These are the successive stages through which the heart-rendering announcement of the Guardian's passing have been reported to the date of this writing.

What can we say about the Guardian's consummation of his unique mission?

Turning again to Rúhíyyih Khánum, we quote these passages from her great tribute to the Guardian as written in Twenty-Five Years of the Guardianship dated November 1946.

"Twenty-five years ago the Baha'i world was shaken by a great earthquake. 'Abdu'l-Baha, the Center of the Covenant, had suddenly passed away, with no premonitory illness to prepare His friends and followers for this tragic shock. Stunned, the Baha'is of East and West tried to rally their faculties. We knew great tasks lay ahead of us; we believed in this new Faith and in its Manifestation and in the World Order that He had come to establish, but we felt terribly alone and the responsibility for the future lay heavily upon our already grief-filled hearts. Where was the shepherd? The familiar voice, that had spoken with an authority vested in it by the Prophet of God Himself, was stilled. We had the teachings; like a wonderful laboratory, equipped for every purpose, they were there — our priceless treasure. But where was the alchemist who transmuted base metals into gold? Where was the listener who answered our questions and guided us in the use of all that great laboratory possessed?

"Then came the reading of the Master's Will, and with an infinite sense of relief we realized that, though the seas of tribulation and separation had risen about us, 'Abdu'l-Baha had not left us alone. He had given us the mighty Ark of His own Covenant which we could enter into in peace secure. With what grateful hearts we turned to the youthful figure that had suddenly been revealed to us in that Will as our priceless legacy, described by 'Abdu'l-Baha as the fruit of the Twin Lote Trees, the pearl of the Twin Surging Seas, this new creation, vested with a unique function, the hereditary office of Interpreter and Protector of the Faith and life-head of the International House of Justice.

"Let us go back a moment and recall what we were and what Shoghi Effendi was when he first assumed his function as Guardian. Those who remember the passing of the Master and the terrible blow it was to them, the intense unbearable grief it caused them, can best grasp what his feelings were. At that time he was twenty-four years of age, studying at Oxford University in England in order to better prepare himself to serve 'Abdu'l-Baha as an interpreter, and to translate some of the Baha'i literature into English, when news of the ascension reached him. Broken-hearted, so weak from suffering he had to be practically lifted from the train, he returned to Haifa. Then the second blow, the unexpected and in many ways more cruel than the first, fell upon him. The Will and Testament of his Grandfather was read to him and for the first time in his life he became apprized of the Master's great and well-earned secret: that he, Shoghi Effendi, the beloved, eldest grandson, was His successor and First Guardian of the Cause of God. Saddled with this great weight, crushed by this great blow, he turned his eyes to the Baha'i world. He beheld a widely diversified, loosely organized community, scattered in various parts of the globe, and with members in about twenty countries. These people, loyal, devoted and sincere though they were, were still, to a great extent, living in their parent religion's house, so to speak; there were Christian Baha'is, Jewish Baha'is, Muhammadan Baha'is and so on. They believed in the Baha'i Faith but were intimately connected with their former churches. Like fruit on a tree, they were a new crop but still stuck to the old branch. This was true East and West alike. That was the point to which the Faith had evolved at the time of the Master's ascension.

"We, on our part, beheld a young man of only twenty-four standing at the helm of the Cause and the friends felt impelled to advise him about what it would be wise for him to do next... We quickly came to realize that he was not only divinely guided but had been endowed by God with just those characteristics needed to build up the Administrative Order, unite the believers in common endeavor, and coordinate their world-wide activities... The wheels of the Cause which had momentarily stood still at the Master's passing, began to revolve again and at a higher tempo than ever before. Our Father, so patient, so constantly forgiving, whom we had tired and perhaps worried far more than we dreamed of, was gone, and in His stead stood our "true brother," young, determined to see we at last got down to accomplishing the tasks set us by Bahá'u'lláh and the Master, and not willing to lose any time at all.

"With the reading of the Will and the establishment of the Guardianship, came quite naturally and organically a new phase in the development of the Faith..."

A Great Joint Effort

"For sixteen years Shoghi Effendi never ceased to broaden our horizon and train us in Baha'i Administration, whether local or National. After that, he suddenly opened a new door. He told us, so to speak, that we were now trained enough to use our laboriously erected Administrative System for a great joint effort, an effort to carry into effect the first stages of the Divine Plan..."

"No appraisal of the wonderful work achieved by the Baha'is the world over during this period would be complete without mention of what the Guardian himself, singlehanded, has done at the world center of the Faith in Palestine (now Israel). Aside from his constant and very heavy correspondence, with not only national and local Assemblies but with groups and individuals as well, aside from his cables and directives addressed to the Baha'is in different parts of the world, aside from the books he writes and the Baha'i literature he translates so painstakingly and beautifully, he has aided the believers financially in all of their major undertakings, in the East or the West... In Haifa and ' Akká, he has not only succeeded in having all the Baha'í Shrines, Pilgrim Houses and lands pertaining to them exempted from both..."
government and municipal taxes, but has also vastly increased the area of these endowments. The purchase of Bahá'u'lláh's mansion at Bahji, the defeat of the constant machinations of the Covenant-breakers, are but the highlights of his accomplishments at this world center of our Faith, to which flow the pilgrims and guests from every land.

"As we look back over these twenty-five years, it is with feelings of profound contentment. We Bahá'ís have matured greatly. We have stood close to that tree which overshadowed all mankind, and come to realize how live and great it is, how dense its foliage, how heavy its yield of fruits — the tree of our first Guardian, our Shoghi Effendi... whose sure and patient hand is guiding it on to the great victories promised by Bahá'u'lláh for His Faith in this Century."

"In gratitude for both this mighty institution of Guardianship in which mankind has found a sure refuge in this new age, and in gratitude for this particular first Guardian, this Shoghi Effendi, let us resolve to rise to a truly higher plane of endeavor, and above a higher plane of spiritual awareness, during these coming years. We must always remember that the only real limitations we suffer are those within ourselves. Rallied closely about the center of the Cause, loving him and, in him, each other, we can, during the next quarter of a century, double our record of achievement."

Shoghi Effendi's Titanic Achievements

Looking back from the present hour we can perhaps summarize our awareness of Shoghi Effendi's titanic achievements in these terms:

1. His resistance to and victory over the cruel onslaughts of Covenant-breakers both within and outside the Holy Family itself.
2. Construction of the Shrine of the Bab, the International Archives Building, and of the gardens surrounding the Tomb of Bahá'u'lláh and adjacent to the Shrine of the Bab.
3. Training and developing the local and national Assemblies, the number of the latter having increased from two to twenty-six.
4. Defining the world-wide Ten Year Plan including the assignment of responsibility for achievement of its several tasks.
5. Appointment of members to the International Bahá'í Council.
7. Incomparable translation of Tablets and Prayers and Meditations of Bahá'u'lláh; the writing of successive letters and works illuminating the meaning and scope of the Faith and its history from 1844 to 1944.

Now let us turn to these earliest, precious letters through which the beloved Guardian gave advice, encouragement and direction to the Bahá'ís of North America.

"At this early hour when the morning light is just breaking upon the Holy Land, whilst the groom of the dear Master's bereavement is still hanging thick upon the hearts, I feel as if my soul turned in yearning love and full of hope to that great company of His loved ones across the seas, who now share with us all the agonies of His separation..."

"True, the shock has been too terrible and sudden for us all to recover from in so short a time, but whenever we recall His Sayings and read His Writings, hope springs in our hearts and gives us the peace that no other material comfort can give."

"How well I remember when, more than two years ago, the Beloved Master, turning to a distinguished visitor of His, who was seated by Him in His garden, suddenly broke the silence and said: 'My work is now done upon this plane; it is time for me to pass on to the other world.' Did He not on more than one occasion state clearly and emphatically: 'Were ye to know what will come to pass after Me, surely would ye pray that my end be hastened?' In a Tablet sent to Persia when the storm raised years ago by that Committee of Investigation was fiercely raging around Him, when the days of His incarceration were at their blackest, He revealed the following: 'Now the foundation of this all-highest Bounty and this wondrous Gift. Gradually whatsoever is latent in the innermost of this Holy Cycle shall appear and be manifest, for now is but the beginning of its growth and the dayspring of the revelation of its Signs. Ere the close of this century and of this Age, it shall be made clear and manifest how wondrous was that Springtide and how heavenly was that Gift!"

"With such assuring Utterances and the unmistakable evidences of His sure and clear knowledge that His end was nigh, is there any reason why the followers of His Faith, the world over, should be perturbed? Are not the prayers He revealed for us sufficient source of inspiration to every worker in His Cause? Have not His instructions paved before us the broad and straight Path of Teaching? Will not His now doubly effective power of Grace sustain us, strengthen us and confirm us in our work for Him? Ours is the duty to strive by day and night to fulfill our own obligation and then trust in His Guidance and never failing Grace. Unity amongst the friends, selflessness in our labors in His Path, detachment from all worldly things, the greatest prudence and caution in every step we take, earnest endeavor to carry out only what is His Holy Will and Pleasure, the constant awareness of His Presence and of the example of His Life, the absolute shunning of whatsoever we feel to be an enemy of the Cause... these, and foremost among them is the need for unity, appear to me as our vital service. Should we in this spirit arise to serve Him, what surer and greater promise have we than the one His Glorious Father, Bahá'u'lláh, gives us in His Most Holy Book: 'Verily, We beheld you from Our realm of effulgent Glory, and shall graciously aid whosoever ariseth for the triumph of Our Cause with the hosts of the Celestial Concourse and a company of Our chosen angels.' (January 21, 1922).

Beloved friends! Such was the clarion call sounded by the beloved Guardian to comfort and reassure the hearts grieved-stricken by the loss of the Master thirty-six years ago.

That consolation and inspiration has eternal validity, and moreover to it is added the example of Shoghi Effendi's own sacrifice and unique achievement. Honorable is the sorrow caused by the passing of a loved one, when that sorrow purifies the heart and confirms within it the supreme love — the love of God, and the resolute will to serve Him.

In our meetings with another, let us be tender and considerate; in our contacts with non-believers let us be steadfast as the rock in conviction of the victory of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh! For that Sun has arisen which shall never be followed by night.

Concerning the future guidance of our world community, information will come to us through the proper channels in due time.

Western Hemisphere Intercontinental Conference

First Announcement

Dear Bahá’í Friends:

Since receiving the beloved Guardian’s announcement of the series of five intercontinental conferences to be held during 1958, the National Assembly has been given Shoghi Effendi’s approval of dates and general arrangements.

The Chicago Conference will be held on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, May 2, 3, and 4, immediately following a three-day National Convention to be held April 29, 30, and May 1.

These dates make it possible for American delegates and believers to attend both events.

The Guardian has also approved the holding of a devotional gathering in the auditorium of the House of Worship, where the precious photographs of Bahá’u’lláh and the Báb can most fittingly be exhibited by the Guardian’s representative, Hand of the Cause Dr. Ugo Giachery.

The final arrangement approved by Shoghi Effendi is the holding of a public congress which undoubtedly will be scheduled for Sunday evening, May 4, as the final session of the Intercontinental Conference.

The beloved Guardian’s own words impress us with the importance of this historic occasion, convened for the “five-fold purpose of offering humble thanksgiving to the Divine Author of our Faith ... of reviewing and celebrating the series of signal victories ... of deliberating on ways and means that will insure its triumphant consummation; and of lending simultaneously a powerful impetus ... to the vital process of individual conversion ... and to the construction and completion of these Mother Temples to be built in the European, the African, and Australian continents.”

The Conference, while convened and held by the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, will receive the Guardian’s message to the Western Hemisphere as delivered by Dr. Giachery, and will provide reports by, and consultation among, the National and Regional National Spiritual Assemblies of that same area.

Give Address Change to NSA Promptly to Receive Bahá’í Mail!

The purpose of this first announcement is to make it possible for all Bahá’ís to make arrangements to attend. Travel and hotel or other arrangements are to be made by the individual believer for himself. Guests of the National Assembly will be provided with hotel accommodations on arrival.

Those who attended the historic Jubilee Celebrations in 1953 will recall not merely the vivid episodes of the extensive program, including dedication of the House of Worship on behalf of the Guardian by Amatu’l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum, but above all the power of the spirit engendered which enabled us to transcend local and national Bahá’í areas of interest and activity, and attain a realization of the universal, the global significance of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

“The holding of this second series of Intercontinental Conferences ... signalizes the opening of the fourth phase of the Ten-Year Plan.” What higher privilege is offered a human being today?

SUMMER SCHOOL PREPARES FRANCE FOR FORMATION OF NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Sanary-Sur-Mer, a picturesque port nestled along the curving shoreline of the Mediterranean Sea, was the scene of the historic gathering of France's third Bahá'í Summer School, held from September 1 to 6, 1957.

Sunny skies and tropical surroundings added their charm to this region, one of the most beautiful in southern France.

The friends were housed in the Hotel du Parc, where all sessions of the conference and school also met.

The first two days of the school were devoted to a teaching conference on the theme, "France and the World Crusade." At the opening session we listened to Dr. Hermann Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, read a prayer. The bounty of his presence gave this conference special significance and an atmosphere of rare spirituality.

Joel Marangella, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, acting as Chairman, then greeted the assembled believers on behalf of the Summer School Committee, and asked for a roll call. This roll call revealed that there were 39 adults, 2 youth, and 3 children present, representing the cities of Lyon, Chateauroux, Chatellerault, Orleans, Paris, Strasbourg, Nice, and Marseille in France; and believers from Germany, Belgium, Austria, Holland, the United States, Kenya, Belgian Congo, and Madagascar.

Much love was evident in the hearts and on the faces of those from each center as they arose to give their names. A further blessing was the fact that among them there were many new French believers who were attending their first summer school.

Dr. Grossmann, speaking in English, gave some inspirational opening words. He remarked on the great change which had taken place in France since his visit of two years ago. He compared the cold winter of that time to the growth of the teaching work, and pointed out how it had developed into the warm springtime of spiritual blossoming...
and development. He hoped that this great surge of spiritual enthusiasm would soon bring forth the summer with all its fruits.

He pointed out that France would have a special opportunity with the new National Spiritual Assembly which is to be formed during Ridván 1958, and that this achievement would require much effort, as only a few months remain.

In closing, Dr. Grossmann said he hoped that this conference would strengthen us for the time ahead, and help us to enter next year with strong communities, as well as a strong National Assembly.

Reports on Goals

Later in the conference reports were called for from representatives of Assemblies and groups on "The Goals in France and the Actual Progress."

"The Goals in France" provided a theme for much consideration. Mr. Marangella reminded us that our beloved Guardian had announced at the Stockholm conference the goals for Europe. We were told at that time that our assemblies must be quadrupled during the Crusade, meaning that eight would be needed by 1963. Also, that our other goals were the establishment of the National Spiritual Assembly, the acquisition of the Hazíratú'l-Quds and the National Endowment, and the achievement of National Incorporation.

In conclusion Mr. Marangella pointed out that we have already achieved two of these goals, namely the Hazíratú'l-Quds in Paris which will become national when the National Assembly is formed, and the National Endowment.

Shoghi Effendi has specified that France will form its National Spiritual Assembly during the mid-point of the Crusade, and has designated certain cities in France as goal cities. These are Orleans, Marseilles, Bordeaux, Strasbourg, Metz, Dijon, Nancy, Pottiens, and Lille. With the recent settlement of Miss Honor Kempton in Nancy, Mrs. Amelia Bowman in Strasbourg, and Mr. Charles Somers in Metz, all goals have been opened except Dijon.

At the Sunday evening session on September 1, Dr. Grossmann was most informative in discussing questions put to us during our teaching efforts. He answered such questions as: What is the difference between good and evil? Does God answer every prayer? What is soul and spirit? Why should we pray? What is obedience? He pointed out that when a soul becomes a Bahá'í it is changed, and it will attract everything in a different way.

The Monday morning session was given over to Louis Henuzet, member of the Auxiliary Board, who gave an illuminating and comprehensive presentation on the Administrative Order.

That afternoon 35 of us travelled by chartered bus to the nearby city of Marseilles for a public meeting at the Foyer-Theatre Massalia. Mr. Henuzet gave a brilliant talk on "Which to Choose: Science or Religion?" Seventy-two persons attended this meeting.

In recalling the spirit of the entire week, these words came to mind: "Know thou of a certainty that Love is the secret of God's holy Dispensation, the manifestation of the All-Merciful, the fountain of spiritual outpourings. Love is heaven's kindly light, the Holy Spirit's eternal breath that vivifies the human soul." (The Divine Art of Living, page 108.)

We had, one and all, been refreshed at the fountain of that love, and our souls were truly vivified and illumined. As we journeyed homeward, we were resolved that we would accomplish more than ever this year.

HAIL NEWSLETTERS FROM LAND OF FAITH’S BIRTH

Plans for a regular newsletter from Irán have been received with joy and thanksgiving by National Assemblies in many lands, and many of their national news publications have been reprinting information from the first two issues of this newsletter received to date.

Written over the signature of A. Furútan, secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Irán, the newsletter conveys heartwarming assurances of the steady spread of the Faith in the land of its birth despite the recent persecutions by the Iranian government.

Following are excerpts from these first two issues of the Iranian Bahá’í News:

Bahá’ís are at present serving the Cause of God in more than a thousand centers throughout Irán. In 1955, when the persecutions began, there were 160 centers throughout Irán. Considering the difficult circumstances under which the friends were working, this is a tremendous achievement, even to a degree that the beloved Guardian has congratulated them.

The restrictions and persecutions of the friends that started in Irán in 1955 are gradually subsiding. The government agreed to return all the Bahá’í Haqíratul-Quds, even the National Haqíratul-Quds in Tihrán, but no meetings are yet held in these buildings.

The news of the activities and victorious accomplishments of the friends in other parts of the world are regularly translated and sent out to all the Bahá’í communities in Irán, so that they may rejoice in the success of their spiritual brethren.

In Touch With World Center

One fortunate circumstance that compensates for all the persecutions of the friends in Irán is the constant communication with the World Center of the Cause of God and the beloved Guardian.

Cables from the Guardian, messages from the revered Hands of the Cause residing in the Holy Land, communications of the International Bahá’í Council, and letters of the Eastern Secretary of that Council, conveying the instructions of the Guardian, have been regularly received.

Each year a great number of the friends from Irán, particularly from Tihrán, go on holy pilgrimage, and on their return bring messages, instructions, and glad tidings from the beloved Guardian. Since the friends in Irán very eagerly meet with these pilgrims, the glad tidings from the Holy Land are conveyed to a great number of friends.

During the past year 64 persons from Irán have gone on holy pilgrimage and returned to gladden the hearts of the friends with their messages and news from the Holy Land. In the same period 32 pilgrims from Iraq made the pilgrimage under a schedule of the Iranian National Spiritual Assembly, which is responsible for the administration of the Faith in Iraq.

Letters From Pioneers

Many letters from Persian pioneers throughout the world have been received by the National Assembly. Here is a sample of such letters.

Dr. Rahmat Mahajir is one of the Bahá’í pioneers who is also the spiritual conqueror of Mentawai Islands. The names of this beloved friend and his dear wife are registered on the Roll of Honor.

He writes: “In Sipapajet, one of the Mentawai villages, a Bahá’í School has been established and named Tarbiyyat after the Bahá’í School in Tihrán which was closed by the Government in 1933. Mr. Samsury, one of the native Bahá’ís who is a very learned person, has resigned his position as a teacher in the government schools, and is teaching the native Bahá’ís in the Bahá’í School.

“The children and the villagers are all very happy. So it is of this achievement of his. Bahá’ís of other villages complain that Mr. Samsury has not been given to them. These same natives, who value education so much, compete in persuading a teacher to go to their village, whereas before embracing the Faith did not want schools and said, ‘God has given us copra and chickens, what do we want with education? Our children eat these and grow up.’ Now these same people build a house for the teacher.

“We are trying to establish Bahá’í schools in every village, even though they may only have one or two grades.

“Mr. Jamshid Ma’ani, one of the Persian pioneers in Indonesia, has volunteered, with the approval of the National Spiritual Assembly of South East Asia, to come to Mentawai and spend two years in these islands serving the Cause and educating Bahá’í children. He is very successful in the service of God, and will soon bear the responsibility for one of the Bahá’í villages all by himself.

“Mr. Rustam Payman is another Persian pioneer who is serving these islands with utmost sincerity, and the natives almost worship him. One of the villages has been named Rustamabad after him. He is going to assume total responsibility for one of the villages.
"I am writing this letter from the Sipora Island, one of the Mentawai Islands. The people of this island are, for the most part, Christian, but there are also a few Muslim villages. I believe it will be very easy to teach the Faith in this island, and in the future these people will embrace the Faith in groups, because they are ready for the message of God.

"The site of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar in Mentawai has also been purchased. Mrs. Mahájír was instrumental in accomplishing this goal."

HAZIRATUL-QUDS DEDICATED AT LISBON ON BÁB’S BIRTHDAY

The day of the dedication of the Hazíratul-Quds, October 20, the Anniversary of the birth of the glorious Báb, was a splendidly brilliant one in Lisbon. Since June 21, 1957, date of the acquisition, things had been stirring this new Bahá’í Center in the Garden Quarter, District of Luminar (light). Richard Nolen had come from his pioneer post in the Azores Islands to help with moving, and Carlos Salomão of Portugal had put the place in bright condition for its new function.

The beloved Guardian had written to the Iberian friends on October 21, 1956, saying that "to establish these essential institutions of the Faith at this time is of great importance, and the believers will find, when they have their own center, how it will become a focal point for their activities and how it will attract to the Faith souls with capacity, who, when they understand the Teachings, will be eager to join the ranks of the Bahá’ís and reinforce their efforts." Believers and their friends came from Oporto, Lisbon, and Portimão, making about 23 in all. On Sunday morning they gathered in the large, light, upstairs room with its large porch overlooking the campus of the University of Lisbon, now under construction but still mostly farmland.

Mr. José Serra, chairman of the Lisbon Spiritual Assembly, welcomed the guests and presented Mr. Angelo Carneiro, member of the Iberian Regional National Spiritual Assembly, who presided thereafter. Since Dr. Ugo Giachery, Hand of the Cause, was not able to attend, Mr. Joel Marangella of Orleans, France, an Auxiliary Board member, came in his stead.

After music and prayers Mr. Marangella gave a short discourse, mentioning the pioneers who had worked to build the Bahá’í community of Portugal. He then explained the importance of the institution of the Hazíratul-Quds, as well as the urgency of teaching and spreading the Message of Bahá’u’lláh. In the name of the Guardian, the Hazíratul-Quds of Lisbon was declared officially dedicated to the service of the Faith.

Mr. Ventura Rodríguez then read the following tenderly stirring message of the Guardian, written to the Iberian believers in his own hand, on July 2, 1957, but indeed a galvanizing stimulus to all who labor for the Faith wherever they might be:

"The recent achievements of my dearly loved friends, labouring so devotedly in the Iberian Peninsula, has filled my heart with feelings of joyous admiration and profound thankfulness. I cannot but marvel at their consecration, their fidelity, their perseverance and untiring endeavours for the furtherance of so glorious a Cause.

"The Plan, with which their spiritual destiny is so closely bound up, must be prosecuted with inflexible resolve and utter dedication to its aims and purposes. They must not rest for a second, and, with hearts afire with the love of God and fixed on the ideals of his infinitely precious Faith, must labour systematically and unitedly until all the objectives of the Plan they now prosecute with such noble determination are achieved.

"Upon the discharge of their present responsibilities must depend to a large extent the enlargement of the scope of their glorious mission, and the initiation of a still more momentous stage in the evolution of their institutions within the orbit of our glorious Faith.

"Theirs is a mighty and sacred responsibility which they must not, under any circumstance, abandon or neglect. Theirs is a priceless opportunity which they must seize with promptitude and eagerness, and utilize to the utmost until that responsibility is fully and befittingly discharged.

"The Concours on High watches over them, ready to vouchsafe its aid and confer its blessing on their valiant and concerted endeavours. The Author of the Divine Plan will, as promised by Him in His epoch-making Tablets, assist them to surmount whatever obstacles they may encounter in their path, and crown their historic enterprise with a resounding victory. The Founder of the Faith, Himself, will not fail to reward them, in His Own Kingdom, and in accordance with His wisdom and bounty, for their share in the furtherance of the interests of His world encompassing Order, and to exalt them amidst the company of..."

"That they may prove themselves worthy of their high calling, that they may excite, by the quality and range of their achievements, the admiration of their brothers in all the continents of the globe, that they may hasten, by the very nature of their exertions, the advent of the day when they will have entered upon a still more exalted stage in their collective advancement on the high road of their destiny—is a prayer that I will continue to offer with all the fervour of my soul, at the Threshold of His Most Holy Shrine."—Snow.

A signed message from the Hands of the Cause in America, Mrs. Corinne True, Mr. Horace Holley, and Mr. Paul Haney, was read, followed by messages from the National Spiritual Assemblies of the U.S., and Iberia, as well as the various local spiritual assemblies. Loving gifts were acknowledged, among these being a large framed portrait of the Master, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, from the Azores Group; two hand-wrought iron wall lamps made by two of the Lisbon friends; a beautiful photograph album with historic pictures from the Oporto friends; a precious framed Greatest Name given by an Oporto friend; a beautiful leather-worked Greatest Name brought by Joel Marangella.

Carlos Salomão, vice chairman of the Lisbon Spiritual Assembly, raised a prayer that the Faith in Portugal would grow fast and strong, and as straight as the little green cypress about to be planted in the nine-sided pool. With the triumphant "Ode to Joy" from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the friends filed outside the garden to plant the tree, to take photographs, and then to partake of material food to balance the abundant spiritual feast.

The first part of the afternoon was devoted to the celebration of the Anniversary of the birth of the Báb, with prayers and a short talk by José Serra. At four o'clock on this joyous day a first Summer School session under National auspices was held as a result of the Guardian's recent instructions to hold more such reunions even though very small. Virginia Orbison, member of the National Teaching Committee, presided, and short but instructive discourses were given by Angelo Carneiro, who gave a masterly introduction to the Faith with logical and persuasive argument; Joaquim Cunha, who read a paper on the 12 principles; Joel Marangella, who spoke on the importance of the Summer Schools and teaching; and Carlos Salomão, who spoke movingly on the spiritual aspects of the Bahá'í Faith.

After tea and a social time, the friends took leave of each other with glowing faces reflecting new and promise-laden resolves for the fulfilling of all of the goals of the Ten-Year Plan and the triumph of Bahá'u'lláh's Faith in Portugal. A cable was sent to the beloved Guardian assuring him of the love of the friends and of their renewed impulse to go forward on this day of the Dedication of the Hazíratul-Áqds of Lisbon, the Anniversary of the Báb, October 20, 1957-144.

The negotiations for the Temple site at Diedenbergen-Taunus have been continued with the Government of Hesse, the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria reports.

Unfortunately another difficulty has arisen which seems insurmountable. The projected building would be standing too close to a beacon, which will be enlarged, for directing the airplanes so that the authorities of the airport had to refuse their approval, for strictly technical reasons. A definite answer, however, has not yet been received as it is channelled through the Government. In all probability the fact must be faced that another location has to be found.

The Temple design was further developed in order to meet with the requests of the Guardian and reconcile the desired building with the restrictions put up by the authorities. The present plans seem to meet with these two requirements.

North East Asia

FIRST SUMMER SCHOOL HELD IN KOREA

Anticipated by three preceding winter and summer conferences in that same city, the first Bahá'í Summer School of Korea took place in Kwangju, Korea, September 28, 29, and 30, having been called into being by the beloved Guardian in his message to the first Bahá'í Convention of North East Asia as one of the goals of the Six-Year Plan for that area.
Exceeding both in the depth of the teaching offered and in the maturity of the believers attending any previous gathering of Bahá'ís in Korea, the session began on a serious note when early the first day Hand of the Cause of God Agnes Alexander slipped and fell on the stone steps of the meeting place, spraining her ankle. But the prayers of the following morning brought unity as well as healing, and the school continued with an ever-deepening tone.

The talk by William Maxwell on the successive purifications of the Water of Life; the reading and explanation of the "Tablet of Carmel" by Noureddin Montazi and his recounting of his experiences in meeting both 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the Guardian in different times, places, and conditions; the reading and elucidation of portions of the "Will and Testament" of 'Abdu'l-Bahá and the explanation of the Guardianship by Hand of the Cause Miss Alexander, as well as her very presence itself—a blessing to this opening school unequalled in the history of any of the previous conferences—these stand out as the most memorable aspects of an entirely successful and unforgettable "summer" school. And the following cablegram from the beloved Guardian revealed the reason for its success: "Delighted. Assure attendants fervent prayers extension activities consolidation newly born institution. Deepest love."

SIGN CONTRACT FOR FOUNDATION OF AFRICA TEMPLE

On October 22, 1957, the contract for the building of the foundations of the Mother Temple of Africa was signed. This initial contract will cover the building of the Temple to the floor level, including the exterior steps.

There have been a number of unfortunate delays which now seem to be behind us, and the building will go ahead with all speed.

During the three months estimated for this preliminary foundations work, all drawings for the main contract will have been completed and submitted to those Government authorities directly concerned with such work, and whose approval must be granted; bills of quantity will have been finalized; the main contractor chosen, and contracts signed.

On the site of the Temple there is no water, so after considering all aspects, it was decided to make arrangements for the sinking of a borehole. Drilling for this has already commenced, and when water is struck a considerable saving in the cost of the Temple is envisaged.

Kampala is greatly honored, for before the foundations work is completed, during the African Intercontinental Conference in January 1958, Amatu'l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánum will place in the foundations a portion of the precious earth from the innermost Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh. Also in the foundations will be placed, by the revered Hand of the Cause Musa Banání, a casket containing a small quantity of the plaster from the ceiling of the room in the fortress of Mah-Ku, where the Báb was imprisoned.

Shortly after this great occasion, work on the main building is scheduled to commence, and it is hoped that the Temple will be completed by March 1959.

South East Asia
PUBLICATIONS IN FIVE LANGUAGES COMPLETED

Five languages are represented in new publications announced by the National Spiritual Assembly of South East Asia. They include: Message of Bahá'u'lláh or Adajaran Bahá'u'lláh published in the Indonesian language; Bahá'í Faith—A Faith for Unity in the Toaradja language; Bahá'í Teachings for a World Faith published in the Batak and Javi languages; and Buddha and Amitabha in Chinese.

In addition, the work of reviewing the translation of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era into the Indonesian language is nearing completion, and it is hoped that the printing will be completed in the near future.
Australia
ENDOWMENT ESTABLISHED TO CONSTRUCT SCHOOL

The pioneer in New Hebrides, Mrs. Bertha Dobbins, has conducted a school in her home at Port Vila which has been recognized by the Guardian as one of three Bahá’í schools in the Pacific area. She recently has received notice to vacate her residence there.

To insure the continuance of this school, the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia has established a “New Hebrides Endowment.” At least £2500 is required in order to purchase land and construct a building suitable for use as a residence and school for Mrs. Dobbins for the preservation of this historic enterprise.

TRANSLATE "25 YEARS OF GUARDIANSHIP" INTO ARABIC

The National Translation and Reviewing Committee of the North East Africa National Spiritual Assembly has published the translation of “Twenty-Five Years of the Guardianship” by Rúhíyyih Khánum into the Arabic language.

Wide distribution has been undertaken, the National Assembly reports, to enable the friends to understand more fully the institution of the Guardianship, leading to a better understanding of the Faith and greater loyalty to the Sign of God on Earth.

EGYPT, SUDAN BAHÁ’ÍS INSPIRED BY VISIT OF HAND OF CAUSE

During the month of October the friends of Egypt and of the Sudan had the privilege of a visit from the Hand of the Cause in Africa, Mr. Musa Banání, Mrs. Banání, and Auxiliary Board Member Aziz Yazdi. On the instructions of the beloved Guardian, Mr. Banání cheered the friends with the glad tidings of the progress of the Cause in the African Continent as well as in the Pacific Ocean areas.

The news of the initiative steps to construct the Bahá’í Temple in Kampala, heart of the African Continent, was a source of greater momentum to the desire of the friends to keep pace with the march of the World Crusade, filling them with renewed energy to serve faithfully toward the great Jubilee of 1963.

Mr. Banání met with the National Spiritual Assembly as well as the Local Spiritual Assemblies of Cairo, Port-Said, and Alexandria. As a result of these meetings many of the friends took immediate steps to pioneer.

Northwest Africa
CONTACT KABYL BERBERS, MUSLIMS OF M’ZAB

Northwest Africa Bahá’í News has published an account of the visit of Mr. Attar, the Regional Teaching Committee secretary, of Algiers, to Bone, where during four days he contacted some Kabyl Berbers, who showed interest in the Faith.

The highlight of this teaching trip by Mr. Attar was his visit to M’zab, 600 kilometers south of Algiers, where no previous Bahá’í had set foot. Some of the Algiers contacts were in M’zab. Mr. Attar taught the Faith to many people, among whom was the chief religious man, who is the head of the progressive Muslims of M’zab. Two hours were spent in talking with him, and Mr. Attar left copies of the Kitáb-i-Áqán and A Traveler’s Narrative.

Mr. Attar wrote: “And in this way I taught the Faith discreetly or plainly, and gave proofs of the authenticity of the Blessed Perfection in their meetings or Feasts either individually or collectively. In all, the Faith was taught to more than 200 persons, but the number with whom I had direct contact and to whom I had spoken a few times is 27.”

One contact embraced the Faith and said he would come to declare in Algiers, while six others are very near declaration.

Alaska
FIVE NSA MEMBERS TO PIONEER

Five members of the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, newly formed last April, have made decisions to pioneer.

Robert Moul and his family will move to a goal in southeastern Alaska; Warren and Kathy Rodgers will move to Nome; and Verne and Janet Stout will move to the goal area of Matanuska Valley, 50 miles northwest of Anchorage.

Nome is a goal for the formation of a local assembly by next April, and at present has only one pioneer; the goals to be filled by these friends are virgin areas.

National Assembly Incorporated
A further goal of the World Crusade was attained on September 25, 1957, with the signing of the legal papers for the incorporation of the National Spiritual Assembly by the office of the Attorney General in Juneau.

Temple Site Land Approved
The National Assembly also reports that the Guardian has approved the three-acre gift tract of land for a Temple site, reported in Bahá’í News for September.

Bulletin Available

The committee’s bulletin, being mailed to local spiritual assemblies and available to isolated believers on request, describes the Bahá’í role in each of these three endeavors, with major emphasis on Part I — the year-round, continuing, two-fold responsibility of the American Bahá’í community, namely to attract and win more Negroes in the south as recruits for Bahá’u’lláh and to fearlessly demonstrate everywhere, including the south, the oneness of mankind. Teaching aids and other suggestions are offered, including ways and means of checking the reasons why the Negro contact or seeker does not go all the way and become a Bahá’í.

Negro History Week

While the assemblies and Bahá’í groups are not expected to sponsor Negro History Week this year to the extent this was done last year, the excellent ground work that was laid and the fine relationships and contacts established with Negro leaders and local organizations interested in interracial work must not be allowed to wither.

Active participation in local Negro History Week observances should be offered, and this as soon as possible so as to be in on the planning stage. Again, the Interracial Teaching Committee’s bulletin suggests how this might be done.

Race Amity Day

In line with the Guardian’s hope that the Bahá’í-sponsored Race Amity Day may achieve the same national recognition that is accorded World Religion Day, all Bahá’í communities and groups are urged to cooperate in making the observance of this event a full-scale undertaking this year. The Committee outlines how this can be done and suggests a wide variety of local programs that can be undertaken “to celebrate the Bahá’í teaching of the Oneness of Mankind, the distinguishing feature of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh.”

In planning and carrying out any and all of these three aspects of interracial teaching work, the interest, talents, and vitality of Bahá’í youth should not be overlooked. Youth members might well be added to the planning and contact committees, and the panel of speakers or for group discussion should, if at all possible, include a Bahá’í youth.

The Committee welcomes requests for suggestions and help in making interracial teaching an outstanding and significant aspect of local teaching effort this year.

—BAHá’I INTERRACIAL TEACHING COMMITTEE

"Not By The Force of Numbers…"

Not by the force of numbers, not by the mere exposition of a set of new and noble principles, not by an organized campaign of teaching — no matter how worldwide and elaborate in its character — not even by the staunchness of our faith or the exaltation of our enthusiasm, can we ultimately hope to vindicate in the eyes of a critical and sceptical age the supreme claim of the Abhá Revelation. One thing and only one thing will unfailingly and alone secure the undoubted triumph of this sacred Cause, namely, the extent to which our own inner life and private character mirror forth in their manifold aspects the splendor of those eternal principles proclaimed by Bahá’u’lláh.

—SHOGHI EFFENDI, Bahá’í Administration, p. 66

This is the story of Jay, through whose example and devotion a capable, dedicated soul has been won for service to Bahá’u’lláh and His Cause in another land.

Jay is almost 80 years of age. For many months he was in the county hospital recovering from broken bones and severe bruises after having been struck by a motorist. He lives alone, in one small room, and he does his own shopping.

One day a passerby, a business visitor from a South American country, saw Jay struggling on his way home with a bag of groceries, with a cane to help support his still-weak leg. He assisted Jay to his room, and after they had visited a few minutes Jay asked his visitor “the question.” The stranger was at once so interested that he stayed for almost an hour asking questions, and departed with a few Bahá’í pamphlets.

A few days later the young man returned, asked more questions, and again left with literature. The next week Jay invited him to go to the fireside of another believer, and here his eager interest became an inspiration to the group of Bahá’í’s and non-Bahá’í’s studying the teachings together. Within a few weeks he was completely convinced of the validity, the aims, and the purposes of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh and applied to the local spiritual assembly for enrollment, that he might return to his home fully prepared to play his part in the consolidation of this new Faith in his own city and country.

A war refugee from Central Europe to South America, and sent to the United States by his business firm for specialized training, this young man found through this “chance” acquaintance the real purpose of life shining through the broken pattern of his past, and it is Jay, whom he loves as a father, who gave him the key.

This is a glowing example of the truth that everywhere there are ready souls waiting to receive the Message and that no Bahá’í is ever too old, too feeble, too poor, to attract and win for Bahá’u’lláh new “recruits” with the fire and capacity to spread the light of His Cause in places and lands far beyond the reach of him who mentions the blessed Name of his Lord.
TWO EDITIONS OF CATALOG AVAILABLE FROM BAHÁ'Í PUBLISHING TRUST

The new general catalog is now available from the Bahá'í Publishing Trust, and is being sent to all local librarians, national committees, and isolated Bahá'ís who have accounts with the Publishing Trust. Extra copies will be included in next shipments of book orders for local librarians to furnish to their local committees. This general edition of the catalog includes everything available at time of its publication. It is not intended for distribution to contacts, bookstores, or anyone except Bahá'ís who order literature, as it contains many Teaching and Administrative aids of no interest to non-Bahá'ís.

All new publishing items, or items going out of print, as well as any price changes, are listed regularly in Bahá'í News and catalogs should be kept current from this source of information which is readily accessible to everyone.

Special Edition Prepared for Bookstores and Contacts

A special, briefer edition of the Bahá'í Literature Catalog has now been made available for furnishing to the book trade (bookstores, dealers, etc.), and also for giving to contacts who are seriously interested in ordering Bahá'í books.

The Publishing Trust receives many requests from communities and individuals concerning information on handling of Bahá'í books by a local bookstore. There is no reason why a local assembly should not encourage the handling of Bahá'í books by a local bookstore, or suggest titles most likely to be in demand from the public. From this point on, however, the bookstore should deal directly with the Publishing Trust. The local assembly should in no way act as a supplier or dealer, since it is a non-profit organization stocking literature solely for its own religious purposes. Either the book dealer can write direct to the Publishing Trust in Wilmette for information, or the local assembly can furnish the Trust with the name and address of the book dealer. In either case the necessary information, together with the special catalog, will be sent to the book dealer direct.

Most bookstores are aware of the source for ordering Bahá'í books through ads and listings of titles in The Trade List Annual, Books In Print, The Publisher's Weekly, and other trade reference sources.

Bahá'ís desiring copies of this special edition of the catalog for interested contacts may order them through their local librarians at cost price of $.10 per copy. (See Publishing Trust section).

LIST COLLEGES NEEDING STUDENT PIONEERS

The College Bureau now has a list of colleges where Bahá'í students are needed. It would be appreciated if all students interested in going to college next fall or transferring at the end of the semester would contact the College Bureau, P. O. Box 666, Stanford, Calif. This is a chance for students who want to pioneer at home while still in school.

This Committee still has not heard from all students enrolled in universities and colleges. It would be appreciated if every student would write immediately.

Yakima Herald, Sunday, June 23, 1957, published a feature story by Velma Baylor on the artistic career of Mrs. Victor de Araujo, with a photo of the artist seated at her easel. "Both Mr. and Mrs. de Araujo are active in the Baha'i Faith and take part in study classes and firesides."

"Elijah's Mountain Today" is the title of an article on Mount Carmel by Paula Arnold published in The Evening Sun, Baltimore, Md., on May 30, 1957. "Easily the most spectacular building on Mount Carmel, however, is not any of the churches mentioned, but the Baha'i Temple (i.e., Shrine of the Bab) with its golden cupola, standing halfway up the Mount, above landscaped gardens, visible from every point of the town."

Mercer Crose, Minneapolis Tribune staff writer, devoted considerable space to an article on the Faith in the Morning Tribune of May 27, 1957, under the title "Baha'i's Stress Unity." "The earth is but one country, and mankind its citizens." So reads the message over one of the entrances to the beautiful ornate temple of Wilmette, Illinois. It is the basic message of the Baha'i world faith, a little-understood religion that believes in the eventual coming together of all races, nations, classes, and creeds."

Under the caption "World Melting Pot of Faiths" the Chicago American on October 24, 1957, published an article from Jerusalem which stated that "Haifa is world headquarters for the Baha'i Faith, whose American Temple is located in Wilmette."

The Delta Trading Co., Inc., of Tel-Aviv, Israel, has produced a beautifully illustrated Jewish calendar with an illustration facing each month. For December 1957 the illustration is a large photograph of the Baha'i International Archives building overlooking the Bay of Haifa.

The Publishers' Auxiliary for October 19, 1957, lists the special events for 1958, January through June, taken from the list compiled by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. World Religion Day appears as of January 19.

On October 12, 1957, the Baha'is of Little Rock, Ark., published the statement on "The Oneness of Mankind" as a paid advertisement. This message appeared in the very center of the agitation against race integration. Already requests for literature have been received in Wilmette from seekers in Arkansas.

Los Gatos Times—Saratoga Observer, August 23, 1957, announced that Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Lissner, recently returned from Nigeria, would present a program at the home of Mrs. Hansen, Kings Acres. The Lissners were described as members of the Baha'i World Faith.

Paris (France) Presse l'intransigent, March 21, 1957, reproduced from the Frankfurter Rundschau an article reporting that the German Bahai's, after purchasing a Temple site near Frankfurt, would be obliged to await a permit by decision of the regional court.
On November 3, 1957, the Chicago Sunday Tribune published an article reporting the decision of the court approving the construction of the Bahá’í Home in Wilmette and announcing plans for an early beginning of construction. The Cook County Circuit Court upheld the permit given to the Bahá’í Temple Trustees by the Village Board after approving a variation in the zoning.

What We Believe

If we are not sure what we believe, then the fault is ours. The responsibility rests with each one of us to acquire a sound basic knowledge of Bahá’í teachings and Bahá’í history so that we may have in our minds the complete picture ready for presentation to anyone who is interested. It must be an accurate picture and it can be an accurate picture if we are willing to make the effort.

Proclamation by the Hands of the Cause to the Baha’is of East and West

Beloved Friends:

Nine days had not yet elapsed after the interment of the sacred remains of our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, in London, when the Hands of the Cause, to the number of twenty-six, assembled at the World Center of the Faith, in our capacity as “Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá’u’lláh,” to consult together on the most tragic situation facing the Bahá’ís since the Ascension of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and to take all necessary and appropriate measures to safeguard the highest interests of our Faith.

On November 18th the Hands conducted a Memorial Meeting at Bahji, in the Haram-i-Aqdas surrounding the most sacred Shrine in the Bahá’í world, afterward entering the Holy Tomb itself and prostrating ourselves in utter humility at the Sacred Threshold.

On the following morning, November 19th, nine Hands of the Cause, selected from the Holy Land and the several continents of East and West, with ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum, broke the seals placed upon the beloved Guardian’s safe and desk and made careful examination of their precious contents. These same Hands, rejoining the other Hands assembled in the Mansion of Bahá’u’lláh at Bahji, certified that Shoghi Effendi had left no Will and Testament. It was likewise certified that the beloved Guardian had left no heir. The Agás (branches) one and all are either dead or have been declared violators of the Covenant by the Guardian for their faithlessness to the Master’s Will and Testament and their hostility to him named first Guardian in that sacred document.

The first effect of the realization that no successor to Shoghi Effendi could have been appointed by him was to plunge the Hands of the Cause into the very abyss of despair. What must happen to the world community of his devoted followers if the Leader, the Inspirer, the Planner of all Bahá’í activities in all countries and islands of the seas could no longer fulfill his unique mission?

From this dark abyss, however, contemplation of the Guardian’s own life of complete sacrifice and his peerless services gradually redeemed our anguished hearts. Shoghi Effendi himself, we know, would have been the first to remind the Hands and the widespread body of the believers, that the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh has quickened those powers and resources of faith within mankind which will achieve the unity of the peoples and the triumph of His World Order. In this new light of understanding the company of the Hands could perceive with heightened gratitude the existence of those innumerable blessings which Shoghi Effendi had created and left as his true legacy to all Bahá’ís.

Has not the World Center, with its sacred Shrines and institutions, been firmly established? Has not the Message been established in 254 countries and dependencies? Have not the National and Regional Spiritual Assemblies, forerunners of the Universal House of Justice, been implanted in twenty-six great areas of all continents? Has not the Guardian left us not only his incomparable translations, for English-reading Bahá’ís, of the Bahá’í Sacred Literature but also his own master works of interpretation which disclose to us the unshatterable edifice of evolving Bahá’í Order and world community? Has not the Guardian, building upon the enduring foundation of the Master’s Tablets of the Divine Plan, created the World Crusade to guide our work until 1963?

Has not the Guardian, moreover, in his mysterious insight into the present and future needs of the Bahá'í Community, called into being the International Bahá'í Council and the company of twenty-seven Hands with their Auxiliary Boards, whom in his final communication to the Bahá'ís, he designated “Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh”?

Foundations of World Order Strongly Laid

Such reflections could but, in such a world-shattering experience as all Bahá'ís have this month endured, reveal to us how strongly Shoghi Effendi has laid the foundations of the world order of Bahá'u'lláh through the appointments of Hands of the Cause and likewise the appointment of the International Bahá'í Council, the institution destined to evolve into the Universal House of Justice.

In our capacity of Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh, we Hands of the Cause have constituted a body of nine Hands to serve at the Bahá'í World Center. This body of nine Hands will energetically deal with the protection of the Faith whenever attacks, whether from within or outside the Bahá'í community, are reported by Hands from their areas or by National or Regional Assemblies, or whether they arise within the Holy Land. Correspondence will likewise be maintained with the Hands of the Cause working in the several continents. This same body will correspond with National Assemblies on matters connected with the prosecution of the objectives of the Ten Year Plan. On matters involving administrative questions this same body will assist National Assemblies by citing those passages of the Bahá'í Sacred Literature which direct the Assemblies to a sound solution.

As to the International Bahá'í Council, appointed by the Guardian and heralded in his communications to the Bahá'í world, that body will in the course of time finally fulfill its purpose through the formation of the Universal House of Justice, that supreme body upon which infallibility, as the Master's Testament assures us, is divinely conferred: “The source of all good and freed from all error.” The main work of the Council has been to act as the Guardian's representative in matters involving the Israeli government and its courts of law.

Our Most Precious Legacy

Beloved friends! Is not the most precious legacy bequeathed to us all by Shoghi Effendi the privilege of constancy in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and devotion in teaching His Message? This is the heartfelt plea we direct to every Bahá'í: The hour has come, as it came with the passing of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, when true Bahá'ís will be distinguished by their firmness in the Covenant and their spiritual radiance while pressing forward the mighty work committed to every area of the world community,—to every individual Bahá'í! For now our implacable opponents may, and probably will, unleash attacks, assuming in their ignorance that the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is weakened and defenceless. By consecration of spirit we are armed against all manner of assault and we hold the weapon of faith with which the triumph of the Guardian's aims and purposes is assured.

The Hands of the Cause, determined to carry out every aspect of the Guardian's expressed wishes and hopes, call upon the National Assemblies to proceed with the holding of the Intercontinental Conferences which Shoghi Effendi has planned for 1958, and make each of them a great rallying-point of determination to achieve the tasks of the next phase of the World Crusade. We are, moreover, to keep ever before us the other tasks fixed in the Ten Year Plan as objectives to be won by 1963.

Meanwhile the entire body of the Hands assembled by the nine Hands of the World Center will decide when and how the International Bahá'í Council is to evolve through the successive stages outlined by the Guardian, culminating in the call to election of the Universal House of Justice by the membership of all National Spiritual Assemblies.

When that divinely ordained body comes into existence, all the conditions of the Faith can be examined anew and the measures necessary for its future operation determined on consultation with the Hands of the Cause.

"O God, my God! Shield Thy trusted servants from the evils of self and passion, protect them with the watchful eye of Thy kinder blessing from all rancor, hate, and envy, shelter them in the impregnable stronghold of Thy Cause and, safe from the darts of doubtfulness, make them the manifestations of Thy glorious Signs, illumine their faces with the effulgent rays shed from the Dayspring of Thy Divine Unity, gladden their hearts with the verses revealed from Thy Holy Kingdom, strengthen their loins by Thy all-swaying power that cometh from Thy Realm of Glory. Thou art the All-Bountiful, the Protector, the Almighty, the Gracious!"

"O ye that stand fast in the Covenant; When the hour cometh that this wronged and broken-winged bird will have taken its flight unto the celestial Concourse, when it will have hastened to the Realm of the Unseen and its mortal frame will have been either lost or hidden near the dust, it is incumbent upon the Afnán, that are steadfast in the Covenant of God, and have branched from the Tree of Holiness; the Hands, (pillars) of the Cause of God, (the glory of the Lord rest..."
Assembly Gives Grateful Affirmation and Pledges of Unqualified Support

Beloved Bahá’í Friends:

The foregoing message of transcendent importance prepared by the twenty-six Hands of the Cause recently assembled at the World Center of our Faith was transmitted on November 30 to every American Bahá’í. This Proclamation to the Bahá’í world assures all believers that, following our tragic loss of the beloved Guardian, the World Faith established by Bahá’u’lláh will have continuity and direction.

On behalf of the entire American Bahá’í community, the actions taken by the body of the Hands appointed by the Guardian have received the grateful affirmation of your National Assembly and our whole-hearted pledge of unqualified support.

We unitedly join their heartfelt appeal for renewed dedication to the Faith and for energetic action in spreading the Message and completing the objectives of the Guardian’s World Crusade.

The maturity of the Bahá’í world community now begins as we collectively press forward to carry out the beloved Guardian’s expressed wishes and plans. Indeed, in this thirty-six year mission as Guardian, Shoghi Effendi has perfected the expression of the Divine Guidance we need for years to come, until the Universal House of Justice shall have been elected and the Master’s Will and Testament thereby executed. Moreover, the Tablets of the Divine Plan, which the Guardian’s successive Seven-Year Plan and the present World Crusade brought into the field of action, continue to have spiritual vitality until the world of humanity is united in one Faith and one Order under the All-Powerful Will of God brought to our age by the Báb and Bahá’u’lláh.

Committees and Assemblies Called Upon

The National Committees and the local Assemblies, those important organs of our Bahá’í Community, are likewise called upon by our body to function in unity and dedication so that the American Bahá’ís may maintain their primacy in devoted service to the Faith.

Let us cherish in our hearts the conviction that the Guardianship remains with us in Shoghi Effendi’s elucidation of the administrative order, his interpretation of the Bahá’í Sacred Writings, and his example of supreme sacrifice to the Call of God addressed to this crucial age.

upon them), and all the friends and loved ones, one and all to bestir themselves and arise with heart and soul in one accord, to diffuse the sweet savors of God, to teach His Cause and to promote His Faith. It behooveth them not to rest for a moment, neither to seek repose. They must disperse themselves in every land, pass by every clime and travel throughout all regions. Bestirred, without rest and steadfast to the end they must raise in every land the triumphal cry ‘O Thou Glory of Glories!’ (Yá Bahá’u’lláh), must achieve renown in the world wherever they go, must burn brightly even as a candle in every meeting and must kindle the flame of Divine love in every assembly; that the light of truth may rise resplendent in the midstmost heart of the world, that throughout the East and throughout the West a vast concourse may gather under the shadow of the Word of God, that the sweet savors of holiness may be diffused, that faces may shine radiantly, hearts be filled with the Divine spirit and souls be made heavenly.”

“In these days, the most important of all things is the guidance of the nations and peoples of the world. Teaching the Cause is of utmost importance for it is the head cornerstone of the foundation itself. This wronged servant has spent his days and nights in promoting the Cause and urging the peoples to service. He rested not a moment, till the fame of the Cause of God was noise abroad in the world and the celestial strains from the Abhá Kingdom roused the East and the West. The beloved of God must also follow the same example. This is the secret of faithfulness, this is the requirement of servitude to the Threshold of Bahá’í!”

—HANDS (OF THE) HOLY LAND

Cable received December 5, 1957

Beloved Friends:

The foregoing announcement transmitted from the Hands in the Holy Land through our National Spiritual Assembly to all Hands and National Assemblies, provides an occasion for grateful recognition of the providential forces guiding and protecting the Faith of Bahá’ú’lláh.

For now the title deeds to all properties within the Haram-i-Aqdas have been transferred to the Israel Branch of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, in conformity with the Guardian's intention.

The area surrounding the Most Holy Spot within the Bahá’í World is now completely purified—a symbol of the Guardian's consummation of his peerless services, as well as a most significant victory for the Bahá’í Faith.

Message From The Hands of the Cause in America to the 1957 State Conventions

Dear Friends:

By now all American believers have received and read with rapt attention the Proclamation issued by the company of Hands convened in the Mansion of Bahá’ú’lláh, outside 'Akká, soon after the interment of the sacred remains of our beloved Shoghi Effendi in the London cemetery.

That document builds a bridge for the world Bahá’í Community from the passing of the Guardian to the completion of the Ten-Year Plan and the eventual formation of the Universal House of Justice. It assures the progressive unfoldment of the Bahá’í Administrative Order, the continuous operation of our local and National Assemblies, and the uninterrupted teaching of the Message of Bahá’ú’lláh. It provides, likewise, for the protection of the Faith from onslaughts wherever and whenever directed against the Faith of God.

What is the firm foundation on which the company of Hands based their decisive action in such an unexpected, such a crucial hour for all Bahá’ís?

It would be well to review together on this impressive occasion the successive pronouncements made by the Guardian in creating the function and mission of the Institution of the Hands, established by Bahá’ú’lláh and maintained in this era of the Faith by provisions in the Master's Will and Testament.

On December 24, 1951, the Guardian cabled: "Hour now ripe (to) take long, inevitably deferred step (in) conformity (with) provisions (of) 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s Testament ... through appointment first contingent (of) Hands (of the) Cause of God ... Initial step now taken, regard (as) preparatory (to) full development (of) institution provided in 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s Will, paralleled (with) preliminary measures formation (of) International Council destined (to) culminate (in) emergence (of) Universal House of Justice."

In the second cablegram dated February 29, 1952, the Guardian used these words: "Members (of) august body invested (in) conformity (with) 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s Testament, two-fold sacred function, propagation (and) preservation (of) the Faith of Bahá’ú’lláh, (are) destined (to) assume individually (in the) course (of) time (the) direction (of) institutions paralleling those revolving around (the) Universal House of Justice, supreme legislative body (of) the Bahá’í World ... "

Next, on October 8 of that same year the Guardian cabled: "Call upon fifteen Hands (of) five continents, by virtue of their supreme function as chosen instruments (for) the propagation (of) the Faith, (to) inaugurate historic mission through appointment ... (of) five Auxiliary Boards, (one) each continent, nine members each, who will as their adjuncts, or deputies, and working (in) conjunction (with) the various National Assemblies ... assist, through periodic, systematic visits (to) Bahá’í centers, (in) the efficient, prompt execution (of) the twelve projected National Plans."

On April 5, 1954, we received the following: "Urge initiation (of) five Continental Bahá’í Funds, which as they develop, will increasingly facilitate (the) discharge (of) the functions assigned (to the) Boards."

"Fervently supplicating (at the) Holy Threshold (for an) unprecedented measure (of) blessings (on this) vital, indispensable organ (of the) embryonic, steadily unfolding Bahá’í Administrative Order, presaging (the) emergence (of) the World Order (of) Bahá’ú’lláh which must pave (the) way (for the) establishment (of) the World Civilization destined (to) attain maturity (in the) course of successive Dispensations (in the) five thousand year Bahá’í cycle."

During the course of the present year the Guardian made profound and significant references to the station and function of the Hands.

On June 4, 1957, he cabled: "Divinely appointed institution (of) the Hands (of the) Cause, invested (by) virtue (of the) authority conferred (by) the) Testament (of the) Center (of the) Covenant (with the) twin functions of protecting (and) propagating (the) Faith of Bahá’ú’lláh, now entering new phase (in the) process (of the) unfoldment (of its sacred mission. To its newly assumed responsibility (to) assist National Spiritual Assemblies of the Bahá‘í world (in the) specific purpose (of) effectively prosecuting (the) World Spiritual Crusade, (the) primary obligation (to) watch over (and) insure protection (to) the Bahá‘í world community, in close collaboration (with) these same National Assemblies, (is) now added."

Special attention is called to the Guardian’s statement in his letter of October 1957: "So marvellous a progress, embracing so vast a field, achieved in so short a time, by so small a band of heroic souls, well deserves, at this juncture in the evolution of a decade-long Crusade, to be signalized by, and indeed necessitates, the announcement of yet another step in the progressive unfoldment of one of the cardinal and pivotal institutions ordained by Bahá‘u’lláh, and confirmed in the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, involving the designation of yet another contingent of the Hands of the Cause of God . . . the Chief Stewards of Bahá‘u’lláh’s embryonic World Commonwealth, who have been invested by the unerring Pen of the Center of His Covenant with the dual function of guarding over the security, and of insuring the propagation, of His Father’s Faith."

"This latest addition to the band of the high-ranking officers of a fast-evolving World Administrative Order . . . calls for . . . the appointment by these same Hands, in each continent separately, of an additional Auxiliary Board, equal in membership to the existing one, and charged with the specific duty of watching over the security of the Faith, thereby complementing the function of the original Board whose duty will henceforth be exclusively concerned with assisting the prosecution of the Ten-Year Plan."

In these successive passages, dear friends, the Guardian clearly established an international body of twenty-seven Hands of the Cause endowed with authority to consult and take appropriate measures to meet the crisis which, with the Guardian’s passing, overtook and indeed overwhelmed the world community of Bahá‘ís. Of this vitally important fact we may have full assurance.

The Proclamation issued by the Hands convened at the World Center sets forth all the questions involved and presents their solution. The body of the nine Hands elected to serve at the World Center is further qualified, both morally and legally, to carry forward Shoghi Effendi’s plans and to serve as trustees of the Holy Shrines, properties and gardens which the Guardian so marvellously developed in Haifa and ‘Akka.

Let there be no confusion regarding the operation of the Hands of the Cause and the elected body of nine. They are preserving and sustaining the Faith as expressed in the Will and Testament of the Master and in the body of Shoghi Effendi’s peerless writings. They coordinate both the teaching work and protection of the Faith as proceeding under the direction of the National Assemblies, the Hands and their Auxiliary Boards. They assist National Assemblies to make correct solution of administrative problems by reference to those passages which illumine the nature of the problem and how it is to be met.

The American Hands, therefore, stand unitedly with the National Spiritual Assemblies in urging the friends to demonstrate, by their unity and their zeal, the devotion to the Faith of Bahá‘u’lláh which has been engendered within each of us, that the meaning of the primacy conferred upon America may be fully realized both by the followers of Bahá‘u’lláh and the general public.

Bahá‘u’lláh, the Author of this Revelation, tries the hearts of His servants that we may be purified and disciplined to rise and proclaim His Message to a darkened world!

Sincerely,
CORinne TRUE

Mail Campaign to be Intensified

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to thank the many friends who sent in copies of the September issue of the magazine Awake!, which carried an article entitled "What is the Bahá‘í Cause?"

Although we wish the article had not contained so many inaccuracies, nevertheless it has been the means of arousing the interest of a great many people who, attracted particularly to the principles of the Faith as stated in the article, have written, requests for Bahá'í literature are arriving in great numbers in response to an article in the December issue of the Journal of Lifetime Living listing the Bahá'í Faith as one of the sources for literature for “Building a Library of Faith.”

Mention is made of these two items of unsolicited publicity about the Faith simply to indicate that all over the land there are seekers who have not yet heard the word “Bahá'í,” and in whom it arouses an instant interest and desire to know what we have to offer in the way of hope for both the individual and for the troubled world. Therefore, the widespread mail campaign announced in the October issue of Bahá'í News (page 2) is extremely important.

No opportunity must be neglected or lost at this crucial stage in the progress of the World Crusade to find and attract among the millions of Americans, and particularly in every locality where Bahá'ís reside, those who have the readiness and capacity to become part of “the continual flow” of new members “so essential for the safeguarding of the prizes won in the course of the several campaigns of a world-girdling Crusade,” and who will help to furnish the “spiritual reinvigoration, administrative expansion, and material replenishment constituting the triple facets of a task that can brook no further delay,” as emphasized “more fervently than ever before” in the beloved Guardian's clarion and final call to the American Bahá'í community.

The National Spiritual Assembly urges the friends to continue and to intensify the mail campaign until there has been maximum distribution of The Christian Century article by Marcus Bach, “Bahá'í: A Second Look,” and the Bahá'í pamphlet, The Lord of the New Age.

Many communities have found that these two pieces can be mailed without envelopes and inexpensively by placing the pamphlet inside the folded reprint, stapling them together and by writing the address on a slip of paper pasted above the words “Christian Century.” In this manner, both pieces can be mailed for one two-cent stamp.

Furthermore, believers who are distributing the new Bahá’í Questionnaire mailing piece can fold these two items inside without involving any increase in the cost of mailing the questionnaire material.

The National Spiritual Assembly again requests the local Assemblies and Bahá'í groups to report by the end of January what distribution they have made of the material and what plans they have for continuing it.

The Guardian's Latest Directive Concerning Non-Bahá'í Persians

Among the last few letters from our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, was one through his Assistant Secretary mailed November 7, 1957, to an American believer from which we quote the following paragraph:

"In response to your question 'should Bahá'ís invite non-Bahá'í Persians to meetings or to Bahá'í schools,' the Guardian feels it is very unwise for non-Bahá'í Persians to be invited to Bahá'í meetings or to Bahá'í schools. In fact, he instructs that non-Bahá'í Persians should not be invited under any circumstances to any Bahá'í public gatherings or schools or Bahá'í meetings. He has repeatedly informed the American Bahá'ís that Persians must become Bahá'ís in Persia and therefore the believers in America must concentrate all of their efforts on teaching the Americans and not the Persians."

A copy of the letter from which this paragraph is quoted was sent to the National Spiritual Assembly with the instruction to see "that this important injunction of the Guardian is carefully followed out." Therefore, local Assemblies, Area Teaching Committees, Bahá'í groups and Summer School Committees are to report promptly to the National Assembly all instances where believers invite or bring non-Bahá'í Persians to Bahá'í schools or any Bahá'í gatherings.

Features of Baha'i Home for the Aged Revealed with Completion of Construction Plans

A description of the Baha'i Home for the Aged, the first dependency of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkār in Wilmette, has been released by the National Spiritual Assembly, as plans have been completed for an early beginning of the actual construction.

The architect, Wm. Campbell Wright of Wilmette, has prepared this account of the features to be found in the Home.

The building will be contemporary in design, primarily of brick, with stone and wood trim. It is designed to provide living quarters for 20 residents, and an administrative staff of three persons.

It will be essentially U-shaped, surrounding a private garden area open to the south, which will contain a number of large oak trees in addition to plenty of space for formal landscaping and flower or vegetable gardening. The building will be well set back from surrounding lot lines, and the adjoining areas will have many trees, mostly oak, with a few hickory trees and more gardening space.

Ingress and egress will be extremely simple, through numerous widely-separated doorways, all at grade level. Ample off-street parking space will be provided for visitors, easily accessible from Fourth street, and with direct entrance into the building. An existing three-car garage, at the alley, will remain for use of the staff.

All habitable rooms will be on one floor, just slightly above sidewalk level. There will be no stairs for the residents to climb. Radiant heating will be provided by means of coil-panels in the floor.

Sleeping rooms are so arranged that they will accommodate sixteen individuals and two couples. Each pair of individual rooms will share a connecting toilet room, and will have a lavatory in each room. The rooms for couples will each have a private half-bath containing toilet and lavatory. Shower and tub facilities will be provided for both men and women in bath rooms off the main corridor.

There will be a large common room or living-dining room with large glass areas facing south on the garden side. This room will have a high-beamed ceiling and a large fireplace. Off the common room will be a parlor which will double as a library and a room for private meetings of residents and their guests.

An adequate and well-equipped kitchen is provided, with plenty of food storage area. The kitchen will adjoin the administrative offices, which will also face the entrance foyer.

The administrator will have a suite of two offices, and a two-room living suite with private bath. Two rooms with connecting bath will be provided, to house a cook and one resident maid.

In the same general area there will be an infirmary, with a bath containing a small laboratory counter and case. The infirmary will provide space for not more than two people, for short periods of time, but is not intended to provide actual hospitalization facilities.

Other interesting features will include a large hobby room and an open porch opening only off the resident's private corridor.

Instructions for Temple Visitors

In order to prevent disappointment on the part of the Baha'is who visit the Baha'i House of Worship at times other than the National Convention, the National Spiritual Assembly finds it necessary to explain the situation which exists in Wilmette, and which it is hoped traveling Baha'is will take into account when planning to come to the Temple area, particularly in the winter and early spring months.

In the first place, the Baha'i House of Worship is open only from one to four o'clock on weekday afternoons, and from 10:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Sundays during the period from October first to May first. Only one guide is on duty during the weekdays, stationed at the entrance to the auditorium. This makes it impossible for the guide to devote any length of time to any single person, whether Baha'i or non-Baha'i, and he or she cannot leave the post to sell books, Baha'i ring stones, or kodachrome slides which are available only at the...
Book Sales counter in Foundation Hall.

Even during the summer months, the guides are unable to spend time with Bahá'ís, for, in addition to receiving visitors who often number several hundred a day, the guides have various other duties to perform in and about Foundation Hall.

The National Spiritual Assembly and the Temple guides, as well as the local Bahá'ís in Wilmette, wish very much that they could provide hospitality for the out-of-town believers who come to the Temple, particularly for the first time, but the number of Bahá'ís in the area surrounding the Temple is too small. Most of them have full-time employment, many have families, and the time of the few who are available for guiding must be carefully scheduled so that the Temple can be kept open during the hours announced to the public.

Another problem that must be considered is that there are no hotels in Wilmette and no Bahá'í homes that can offer overnight hospitality. During the Annual Convention a housing committee which functions only for that period is able to find accommodations for delegates and visitors in the homes of a limited number of Wilmette residents, but these homes are not open for such purposes the year round. Therefore, if Bahá'ís arrive at the Temple expecting to remain in Wilmette overnight, it becomes necessary for the staff to get in touch with some one who served on the housing committee the previous Convention period who, in turn, must try to find a place for them to stay. If the visitors have no transportation of their own, the problem is increased.

Sunday Visit Suggested

The foregoing explanation has become necessary because the Temple guides are greatly concerned lest any Bahá'í who comes to the Temple in eager anticipation of the spiritual experience of praying and meditating in the House of Worship and of discussing the Faith with believers at the national center of the Faith, should go away with a heart made heavy from disappointment. The National Spiritual Assembly hopes that, so far as possible, traveling Bahá'ís will plan their visit to the Temple on Sundays when Bahá'ís from all the surrounding area gather in Foundation Hall to meet and visit with each other before and following the service of public worship in the afternoon.

Traveling Bahá'ís are again reminded of the importance of carrying their identification cards with them when visiting the Temple area as well as other communities where they are not already known.

Bahá'í Holy Days Recognized by Two Additional Schools

The Bahá'í Group of Monona Village, Wis., has reported that in 1956 permission was received from the school authorities for Bahá'í children to be excused from classes in both the elementary and high school on Bahá'í Holy Days.

Also, the All Saints' Episcopal Church School in Fort Worth, Texas, has informed a local Bahá'í that "your child will be allowed to miss school on religious holidays recognized by your Church," but that this permission "is not to be construed as recognition on the part of the Episcopal Church of the claims of your particular religion but a recognition of the right of your child to observe the religious holidays set forth in the religion."

Western Hemisphere
NATIVE SON OPENS BARBADOS TO FAITH

The Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee has received news of the opening to the Faith of Barbados by a native son, Charles Winfield Small, the first Bahá'í enrolled in the Bahamas. Although he did not at that time intend to return to Barbados, the Guardian wrote through Rúhíyyih Khánum that "he is hoping this young man will be instrumental in guiding many of his fellow-countrymen to the Cause." Now that circumstances have taken him back to Barbados, the good wishes of all Bahá'ís will follow him for his success in establishing the Cause on that island.

Hawaiian Bahá'ís Pioneer

We are also happy to report that the Hawaiian Bahá'ís themselves have now taken up the pioneer challenge in that Territory. Until now most of the believers have been concentrated in Honolulu. Recently, however, three members of the Honolulu Community arose to pioneer on the island of Hawaii, one of the several islands of the Territory. We hope that others will follow their example until all the islands in the Territory have become firmly established in the Faith, fulfilling the hope expressed by Shoghi Effendi that this Paradise of the Pacific will become its spirit-
The Committee is grateful to the many new volunteers who have responded to our pioneer appeals during the last few months, and is doing all in its power to expedite these as quickly as possible—mainly to Latin American goals. Because our greatest emphasis at the present time is on Latin America, where twenty National Spiritual Assemblies must be established by 1963, we would like to suggest that the friends who are even remotely considering pioneering begin now to study Spanish.

Two Challenging Goals

Two particularly difficult and challenging goals are temporarily unfilled because the pioneers there have had to leave, due to circumstances beyond their control. Both are on the coast of South America, one on the Atlantic and the other on the Pacific. Both have disagreeable environments, physically, socially, and spiritually. Although the light has reached these virgin territories, through the services of self-sacrificing pioneers, new settlers must be found so that the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh may be firmly established. Single men are to be preferred due to the unsuitable conditions, and they must be hardy souls. Anyone interested in meeting such a challenge may write to this Committee for details and the names of these two places.

FOUR HANDS OF CAUSE FOR AFRICA MEET IN KAMPALA

Immediately after receiving the news of the appointment of the three new Hands of the Cause for Africa, the revered Hands Enoch Olinga, William Sears, and John Robarts met with Hand of the Cause Musa Bahá'í in his home in Kampala.

When it was learned that this historic gathering had been convened, the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa, then in session, made arrangements to go to the airport to welcome William Sears and John Robarts upon their arrival from South Africa.

Towards the end of the consultations, many Kampala believers and visitors were privileged to join the Hands of the Cause at a feast provided by Mr. Banání.

TWO MORE CRUSADE GOALS ACHIEVED IN AFRICA

Purchase of the Haírátu'l-Quds for the Seychelles Islands, and the incorporation of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Kampala, Uganda, both achievements of goals of the Ten-Year World Crusade, has been announced by the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa.

The Seychelles Haírátu'l-Quds is located in Port Victoria, and was purchased for about £1,000 through the contribution of Mr. Munir Wakil and his family.

Incorporation of the Kampala Local Spiritual Assembly was granted on August 22, 1957, with Certificate of Registration No. 258, under the Trustees Incorporation Ordinance.

Action for the incorporation of the Port Victoria, Seychelles, Local Spiritual Assembly was instituted recently with a bill before the Legislative Council. This move has caused a heightened interest in the Faith in the Seychelles Islands.

Australia
HANDS APPOINT BOARD MEMBERS

In accordance with the directions recently received in the Guardian's World Message of October 1957, the Hands of the Cause of God in the Pacific area have appointed the following additional members to the Auxiliary Board, "charged with the specific duty of watching over the security of the Faith, thereby complementing the function of the original Board, whose duty will henceforth be exclusively concerned with assisting the prosecution of the Ten-Year Plan," as proclaimed in that Message: Mr. Hugh Blundell, Auckland, New Zealand; Miss Margaret Rowling, Suva, Fiji.

Pioneers Active in Island Goals

From a partial report of Auxiliary Board member Thelma Perks, published in the Bahá'í Bulletin of Australia, we glean the following comments concerning the sustained and valiant efforts of the pioneers in the Solomon Islands, Gertrude and Alvin Blum, and the new believers.

"I was impressed by the way these believers are being trained to teach the Faith. Many enrollments could be made, but the pioneers are carefully deepening the students before they allow them to become Bahá’ís. There is great activity here: the pioneers lead a full and very busy life providing essential services, which entails long working hours. Nevertheless, six meetings are held per week, excluding Feasts, Holy Days, and local assembly meetings. Despite trying climatic conditions, these friends work at terrific pressure, never sparing themselves."

From the same report we learn of the work of the pioneer settler, Rodney Hancock, in the islands of New Britain and New Ireland (in the Bismarck Arch): "Rodney is doing good work with some natives here (Ribaul, New Britain) but his great work lies on the island of New Ireland. The native believer, Mazakmat, who learned the Faith in Manus Island, is now teaching in a school in New Ireland, is also actively teaching the Faith there, and is president of the island local council this year. Rodney periodically goes by air to this island and, aided by Mazakmat, has made wonderful contacts and friendships. The natives are a very good type, courteous and dignified and unspoiled by not having had too much contact with Europeans. Rodney has won their hearts because he shares their homes and their ‘kai.’"

Mazakmat, together with the pioneer and visiting Auxiliary Board member, flew to another island, Kavieng, where talks were given in six villages to several hundred people in one weekend. Mazakmat gave the opening talk, and then translated the other talks into the native tongue. In two villages a very good contact, a school teacher, translated into a tongue that Mazakmat did not know. The report states: "We were always heard with great interest and attention. These people are longing for the Faith and the oneness of the human race. They have the Methodist, Catholic, Seventh Day Adventist, and Lutheran missions on the island and they realize the lack of unity between them all. I was impressed by the gentleness and superioriy of these people, their gardens and their clean and tidy villages by the sea. In fact, I can never forget the beauty of this island and its charming inhabitants."

Violet Hoehnke, pioneer to Manus Island, is now matron of the European Hospital at Samarai. "She has won great respect for the standard of her work and for her good relations with everyone on the island," writes Miss Perks. "All know that Violet is a Bahá’í. Former contacts from Manus Island have come to live in Samarai and Violet is winning them to the Faith. We spent a wonderful evening with these friends. Her great devotion and desire to teach is opening the way for the spread of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh."

Bahá’í Holy Days Recognized

Port Adelaide, Australia, has obtained permission from a Primary School and a High School for Bahá’í children to observe their Holy Days.

First Major Article in Leading Journal

The Sydney Morning Herald has published its first major article on the Bahá’í Faith on its feature page, written by a staff correspondent. The article is sympathetic to the Faith and will attract the attention of hundreds of thousands who read this journal.

TEACHING IN MALAITA HIGHLIGHTS ACTIVITIES IN SOLOMON ISLANDS

The Local Spiritual Assembly of Honiara, first Assembly formed in the Solomon Islands, reports teaching activities in many fields during the past months.

Latest news includes a trip to the island of Malaita, the largest populated island of the Solomons and where the greatest interest has been evinced, by three Bahá’ís, John Mills, Shebuel, and Orbet. It appears that doors are opening for the spiritual conquest of Malaita.

Teaching work is continuing, a feature of which is the Bahá’í Sunday School, which is well attended by enthusiastic children. At the Anniversary of the Birth of the Báb the children sang songs from the Bahá’í Children’s Song Book, recited prayers, and gave a play called "Trees That Bear No Fruit."

On our teaching evenings, held Wednesday and Sunday, we study Some Answered Questions, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, and Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era. Everyone who can read takes a lesson.

Our committees are functioning well. They are: Teaching, Children’s, Book, Translation, Feast, and Development.

Sikkim, in the high Himalayas near Mt. Everest, is a wondrous, beautiful country, famed for folk songs, stories, and simple hardy people. It is an independent State, protected by India and bordering on Tibet—a rugged land of deep impassable gorges and roaring torrents very difficult of access. Its people are mostly of the Buddhist and Hindu religion, with some Christians, and they speak various languages—Tibetan, Lepcha, Nepali, and Hindustani (or Hindi), the first two being goal languages of the World Crusade.

Early in 1953 when the Bahá’í world was just awakening to the mighty challenge of a global spiritual crusade, there were many, perhaps, who did not know where this region lay. At that time our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, prepared a World Crusade Map, listing Sikkim as a virgin goal assigned to the Bahá’ís of India, Pakistan and Burma.

Sikkim was among the first of the virgin goals of the World Crusade to be reached. Pioneer Mr. Udai Narayan Singh arrived before August 15, 1953, this victory being joyfully announced by the Guardian in his cable of September 20, 1953.

What has happened to Sikkim since that memorable day when the banner of God’s new Revelation was first planted on its soil by the valiant pioneer?

Today there are Bahá’í centers in the capital city of Gangtok, and in Pakyong, where friends reach out in Bahá’í fellowship to the believers around the world, and the pioneer settler, Shri Bajjnath Singh, is continuing the efforts begun by Udai Singh. Now, in the October 1957 issue of the Bahá’í News Letter of India and Burma, we learn of a journey taken by a Bahá’í teacher of Calcutta, Mr. S. Chatterjee, who traveled to Sikkim to visit the friends there and to assist them in their difficult but joyous task of spreading the Teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. It was not an easy journey—first several hours by train, then by river steamer up the Ganges, the river considered to be sacred by the Hindus, then by train again. After this it was necessary to engage a ride with a driver of a cement truck, or lorry. Here, as the wheels of the lorry rolled along the steep, winding roads of the Himalayas, Mr. Chatterjee was able to present the Teachings to two fellow-passengers—one a government engineer and a businessman, who were deeply impressed and happy to accept books to take with them.

Leaving the hanging bridge at Rangpo, the Bahá’í traveller entered Sikkim state, only to learn that landslides had closed the roads to Gangtok. After hours of waiting news came that the road was passable and he was able to hire a jeep whose driver was willing to risk the roads impaired by continuous rains and landslides. After a total of two days and a night of varied and continuous travel, Mr. Chatterjee arrived the night of October 7 in Gangtok, greeted by the pioneer, Shri Singh. By morning news of his arrival had spread through the town and Bahá’ís and non-Bahá’ís thronged to see him. Many excellent contacts were strengthened by his visit, including that of a Government College professor who promised to arrange future Bahá’í lectures in the college. The next day an interview was held with the press, and with students, businessmen, a magistrate, and with the Education Director of the government of Sikkim, all of whom were eager to discuss the Faith and to accept literature.

Journey to Pakyong

Early on October 10, after two days in Gangtok, Mr. Chatterjee and Shri Singh hired a jeep and after many delays due to rock blasting and the work of bulldozers on the road, reached Pakyong in mid-afternoon where the Bahá’í friends had assembled to greet them. Mr. Chatterjee spoke to them about pioneering, local and national funds, and some difficulties with local authorities were also clarified, giving encouragement to the Bahá’ís who had been confronted with certain problems. A proposal was made for a joint meeting of all the Bahá’ís in Gangtok the next day in spite of many problems of transportation to be resolved. Returning to Gangtok that evening, Shri Singh and the visiting Bahá’í, Mr. Chatterjee, were invited for a second time to tea at the home of Mr. D. K. Das, manager of the Sikkim Darbar Press. Of that interview Mr. Chatterjee writes: “A spirit of unity prevailed. He questioned me intelligently about the Dumber and nothing can stop us now. We all promise we will be double in Sikkim next, and suggested a public meeting."
Singh

Joint Meeting in Gangtok

The joint meeting at the Gangtok Bahá’í Center brought earnest discussion of pioneering, consolidation, self-reliance in teaching, administrative duties of assembly members and officers, how to conduct meetings, and above all the importance of obedience to Bahá’í institutions.

Mr. Chatterjee writes: “This meeting had a very warming effect on the friends and all of a sudden they all got up and promised to work more for the Cause... their exciting and confident words are still ringing in my ears... ’Please give us some more time... in one year we all promise we will be double in number and nothing can stop us now. Then we will be able to relieve Mr. Singh to go elsewhere.’”

After the meeting the Officer-in-Charge of the Gangtok police approached and asked, “Are you the Bahá’í from Calcutta?” He had heard the news of the arrival of the Bahá’í teacher and asked to take tea with him and discuss the Cause of God.

Teachings Show Fruits

Of Sikkim itself Mr. Chatterjee writes: “Sikkim itself... Sikkim is a place with practically no industry, used by businessmen dealing with Tibet for the transport of goods from Gangtok into Tibet. Cost of living is very high—many of the inhabitants are illiterate. At such a place the Bahá’í teachings are beginning to show fruits of the tree whose first seeds were planted by our pioneer Mr. Udai Singh and since then nurtured by pioneer Mr. Baijnath Singh. I can say with pride that Sikkim has reached the true teachings of the knowledge of God. Friends there are firm, simple and sincere, though they are not well educated and they need frequent warming up. Most of them speak Nepali and books in Nepali are needed most.”

Translation Goals

There have been translations in both Nepali and Hindustani previous to the World Crusade. Lepcha and Tibetan, the two goal languages, have had some translations made, but Lepcha remains to be printed. The National Assembly of India states that there is only one press in India able to print in Lepcha, the Baptist Mission Press of Calcutta, and it refuses to handle the work of the Bahá’ís up to this time.

Sikkim, once a small region in the remote Himalayas, enclosed by Nepal, Bhutan, and Tibet, is no longer either small or remote. It is mighty in the plan of Bahá’u’lláh and near to the hearts of all Bahá’ís whose efforts for victory in His World Crusade encircle the globe.

India, Burma

CONFERENCES SCHEDULED TO STIMULATE TEACHING

The National Spiritual Assembly of India and Burma has been sponsoring a series of teaching conferences and school sessions that began in August 1957, and will continue through February 1958, to stimulate new teaching efforts and a corresponding increase in new assemblies and groups.

In India teaching conferences were held in Belgaum and Rampur last October, and a second conference is scheduled for February in both cities. A Summer School was held at Gwalior in October, and a Winter School was again held at Poona in December.

A Burma Teaching Conference last August and a school session in November took place at Rangoon. Colombo, Ceylon, was the location of a Teaching Conference in December.

The central theme of all the sessions was to find ways of fulfilling the remaining goals of the Ten Year Crusade, and to arouse new pioneering responses. The conferences employed that technique of a general opening discussion, with smaller panels meeting separately for consultation, followed by a final general consultation of the entire conference.

Bahá’í youth took an active part in the school sessions, with delegates representing both youth committees and Bahá’í communities.

UN DAY RESULTS IN PROCLAMATION VICTORIES

A number of public meetings were held throughout India and Burma to commemorate United Nations Day on October 24. Bombay reported a large audience was deeply impressed by the two talks given there. Sholapur, Poona, Eranakulam, Cochin, and Ahmedabad all received good press reports. In Karikal, one of the original virgin goals of the World Crusade, the Local Bahá'í Assembly conducted a most successful meeting, resulting in good press coverage.

From Moulmein, near Rangoon in Burma, the American pioneer, Keith de FoIje, reported a meeting programmed by representatives of many religions, including Bahá'í, that was attended by over 500 people, all of whom heard the Bahá'í prayer, "Prayer for all Nations." There were many requests for literature and information on the Teachings.

Attendance at Public Meetings

The Bahá'ís of India have been having other unique successes in recent weeks in proclaiming the Faith to large audiences. In Devlali a visiting Bahá'í, Dr. Munje, and his son, gave two lectures, one at the Devlali High School and the other at the Rotary Club. The latter talk resulted in an invitation by the president of the Rotary Club and the president of the Literary Society to give a Bahá'í lecture to the Literary Society, composed of military officers and their wives. Two other high schools, with audiences of 500 and 1000, also heard Dr. Munje speak on the Bahá'í Faith with several fireside discussions following.

Government Honors Bahá'í

In Bangalore the president of the Local Bahá'í Assembly was awarded a gold medal by the Government of Mysore for distinguished services in the cause of social upliftment of Harijans. On this occasion leaders of the Hindu, Muslim, and Christian religions were present, partaking food together. It was a unique occasion rarely occurring in India, in which Brahmins, high-caste Hindus, Harijans, and persons of many religious communities met and dined together at one table. Mr. D. N. Krishna Setty, the Bahá'í receiving the award, is well known throughout the state of Mysore, and he used the occasion to tell the assembled guests of the long and careful investigation of truth that led him to the conclusion that the Bahá'í Faith was the panacea for removing disunity from among the people of the world.

UN OBSERVANCE IN HAITI WARMLY RECEIVED

The United States National Spiritual Assembly received the following enthusiastic letter concerning the celebration of United Nations Day in Port-au-Prince, Haiti:

"We are happy to inform you that the visit of Auxiliary Board Member William deForge is bringing a great spiritual impetus to the territory, and this was especially noticeable on the United Nations observance held in the Hazíratu'll-Quds in Port-au-Prince, October 24, 1957, under the auspices of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Port-au-Prince. United Nations Day is recognized in Haiti as a national public holiday, and all stores are closed. About 80 persons attended, of whom 70 were non-Bahá'í invited guests interested in the Faith.

Parallel Aims of Faith and UN

"The United Nations representative in Port-au-Prince (also a warm friend of the Faith) was the first speaker. It had been decided by the Bahá'ís that Mr. deForge would mention the Faith only indirectly, but to the joy of the believers, at the close of his talk, Mr. Victor spoke about five minutes very glowingly of the parallel aims of the Faith and the United Nations.

"The talk which followed, given by Mr. deForge, was very movingly presented; as agreed, the Faith was mentioned only indirectly. It was very evident that the Bahá'ís were sincerely engaged in celebrating United Nations Day, not only here, but in their centers throughout the world.

Strong Interest Manifested

"However, this evidently was not the plan of Bábá'u'lláh, for a very interested non-Bahá'í guest wanted to know who exactly was Bábá'u'lláh. The alert interest manifested immediately, which increased strongly, brought other vitally important questions, and the atmosphere was very challenging. The deeply serious, sincerely searching attitude of the guests, and the great stimulation of being enfolded in the Bahá'í love being manifested, welded a force which will not be soon forgotten by any participant. It was a great night for Port-au-Prince, Bahá'í-wise, the contrast being all the more sharp because of its recent and long-standing problems. There was constant linking of the mutual interests of the United Nations' objectives and those of the Bahá'í Faith: that the Bahá'ís are trying to accomplish spiritually what the UN is trying to accomplish politically."

In the spring of 1947 the National Spiritual Assembly of United States and Canada was accredited to United Nations as a national non-governmental organization qualified to be represented at United Nations Conferences through an observer. Shortly after this, on May 9, 1947, Shoghi Effendi wrote to explain why he was encouraging Bahá’í association with United Nations:

“He feels that the friends should bear in mind that the primary reason that he is encouraging Bahá’í association with the United Nations is to give the Cause due publicity as an agency working for, and firmly believing in, the unification of the human family and permanent peace, and not because he feels that we are at present in a position to shape or influence directly the course of human affairs! Also, he believes this association will afford the believers an opportunity of contacting prominent and progressive-minded people from different countries and calling the Faith and its principles to their attention.”

A year later the eight existing National Assemblies were recognized collectively as an international non-governmental organization under the title of “The Bahá’í International Community,” with the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States designated as the representative in relation to United Nations—this recognition noted by Shoghi Effendi in a cable of April 26, 1948, as an achievement of the American Bahá’í Community.

Since this recognition was given to the Bahá’í International Community, the local Bahá’í communities throughout the U.S. and in many other countries have, through their cooperation and leadership in their local communities, added immeasurably to the respect and understanding of the principles of the Bahá’í Faith in relation to world peace and the unity of mankind.

The following report, sent by the U.S. United Nations Committee, though not a complete account of all Bahá’í celebrations, exemplifies the methods and approaches being successfully employed this year.

College Participation

A highlight of Bahá’í UN participation a year ago was the work done by the seven Missoula, Mont., Bahá’ís in securing the cooperation of the local university in launching a full-scale community-wide observance of United Nations Day. What could afford a better opportunity for contacts? College students are usually eager for such participation, particularly now that so many universities gather a part of their student body from distant countries. This year several communities have reported UN programs geared to the interest of college students.

The Bahá’í group of Casper, Wyo., sponsored a United Nations Day observance in the Casper College gymnasium. They report very fine cooperation shown by the college at every level, from granting use of the gymnasium, arranging chairs, microphones, panel tables, and flags, to selecting students for the panel discussion, and displaying posters and other material on bulletin boards and in the library.

The main feature of the program was a panel discussion on the effectiveness of the United Nations. Eleven students participated, and were excellent. The affair was opened by the Mayor of Casper, who read President Eisenhower’s Proclamation. This was followed by a brief history of the United Nations given by the Bahá’í chairman.

Following the panel discussion Casper residents originally from China, Japan, the Philippines, North Africa, Mexico, Poland, France, and Germany joined in “The Circle of Nations,” each giving a salutation in his native language. Then representatives of six Casper churches, led by a Bahá’í, participated in “The Circle of Faiths,” successively offering a prayer for unity. Recordings of music from many lands were played for half an hour while the audience of 100, mostly students, assembled.

The effectiveness of this undertaking was greatly enhanced by excellent publicity: three advance notices in the newspaper, spot announcements during the whole of United Nations Week on two radio stations, and presentation of the panel part of the observance on television. One of the radio stations also gave a 15 minute interview with the Bahá’í chairman, who spoke broadly of the Bahá’í principles. The other station recorded the entire program and broadcast it the next evening.

The Bahá’í Club of Arizona State College at Tempe, and the Bahá’í communities of Tempe, Phoenix, and North Phoenix observed United Nations Day with a variety show of cosmopolitan flavor called “Around the World in 80 Minutes.” American Indians, Jamaica, Germany, England, Hungary, Spain, Turkey, Siam, Korea, and Australia were all represented in a variety of entertainment forms. The show closed with readings from the Bahá’í Writings and the “Prayer for All Mankind.”

The audience of more than 200 was then invited to view the exhibits of artifacts from many countries, and a collection of dolls from 20 countries.

Publicity to promote this endeavor included two exhibits, one in a prominent store window, the other in a display window of the Student Union building. There were radio announcements, one from the college radio station, one on the Spanish language station, and over seven others in the Phoenix area. There were also three television interviews, in each of which one Bahá’í and several of the entertainers took part.

Evanston, Ill., Bahá’ís participated for the second consecutive year in a joint program with the local UN chapter and other civic organizations. Written invitations were sent to all foreign students on four Evanston campuses, including Northwestern University, and to Evanston residents recently arrived from other countries. Over 200 guests attended the meeting, planned as a welcoming reception to those newly arrived neighbors from other lands. Widespread publicity was given by the radio stations and the Evanston Review, and a report was published in the Chicago Tribune.

An informal buffet dinner was the feature of the Missoula, Mont., Bahá’í observance this year, with guests including students from Montana State University in Missoula. These students represented the countries of Honduras, Puerto Rico, Argentina, Crete, Greece, Sweden, France, and Switzerland. Copies of the Bahá’í prayer issued by the United Nations Committee, and a large, colorful UN brochure were given to each guest.

Three local newspapers publicized this banquet, each with a long story in a prominent position in the paper. There was much favorable comment on the program from the guests and others who had learned of the observance through the publicity.

In Logan, Utah, a small Bahá’í group, together with the Bahá’í Club of Utah State University at Logan held an Open House for the international students attending the university, representing 30 countries. The affair was a great success, and it is hoped that a study class can be formed as a result of this meeting.

Films Attract Audiences

The Hackensack, N. J., group held a public meeting at which the film “Three of Our Children” was shown. Among the 37 guests was a native of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, who also attended a fireside and showed great interest in the Bahá’í teachings.

Hackensack Bahá’ís also gave three intimate dinners, with a total of 15 participating. To advertise the public meeting and UN Week, 20 posters were distributed and shown in public buildings. Two newspaper stories and one advertisement provided publicity.

A public meeting sponsored by the Flint, Mich., Local Spiritual Assembly featured the showing of two UN films, a speaker, and vocal music. This affair was publicized with a paid advertisement, seven newspaper stories, fifty spot announcements on several radio stations, and one television spot announcement.

The United Nations Committee of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States presented a United Nations "Bookshelf" of 25 books and pamphlets to the Countee Cullen Branch of the New York Public Library on November 22, as a feature of the Bahá'í observance of United Nations Human Rights Day on December 10.

Mrs. Dorothy Homer (left), Branch Librarian, accepted the presentation from Mrs. Walter A. Blackwell, chairman of the Committee and National Bahá'í Observer to the United Nations. H. Borrah Kavelin represented the National Spiritual Assembly with a brief talk on the Bahá'í principle of the oneness of mankind. To his left are Frank B. Sawyer and Isabelle Silk, members of the Bahá'í UN Committee.
Two Speakers Share Programs

The Manhattan Beach, Calif., Local Spiritual Assembly joined with the local chapter of the American Association for the United Nations in presenting a public meeting at a Bahá'í home. A speaker representing each organization talked on the subject "The United Nations and a Maturing World." Fifty-seven persons attended. Publicity for this observance included displays in three libraries, two of them in adjoining towns, in a restaurant, a bank, and at nearby El Camino College. As a result of the poster in the college, members of the school's International Club attended the meeting.

To close the observance of UN Week, a local Bahá'í gave a party for 32 children, who came dressed in costumes of nations belonging to the UN. Five newspaper stories extended the influence of these Manhattan Beach activities.

Two isolated believers of Waterloo, Iowa, assisted by a third in nearby Castle Hill, conducted a well-attended public meeting in a local school gymnasium, featuring a male Negro choir in addition to two speakers. Printed programs were widely distributed. Posters were placed in many business locations, and a UN-Bahá'í display was arranged in a bank window. UN literature was placed in 12 places, seven of which also took Bahá'í pamphlets and expressed willingness to distribute Bahá'í literature in the future.

Bahá'ís of Healdsburg, Calif., assisted by the Sonoma County Bahá'ís, organized a public meeting with two speakers in a hotel at Santa Rosa. Attendance totaled 47 persons.

The Berkeley, Calif., Local Spiritual Assembly held a well-attended public meeting presenting two speakers, one for the United Nations, the other for the Bahá'í Faith. Much interest was shown, and good contacts were made. Five exhibits were set up: two in stores and three in public buildings. There was an advance notice in the newspaper.

Both a fireside and a public meeting observing UN Week were given by the Marysville, Mich., group. The public meeting was the only UN celebration in town. They were given two spot announcements on the radio, and two newspaper notices.

A public meeting at the Common Room, Dwight Hall, Yale University in New Haven, Conn., was given by the Bahá'í community there. Prof. Williams of Dublin, Ireland, and Dr. Samuel McClellan, Bahá'í, were the speakers. The New Haven Register published both a publicity story and an advertisement of this event, and four radio stations carried announcements. Five hundred invitations were mailed.

Participation With YWCA

The local assemblies of El Paso County and Colorado Springs, Colo., participated in the United Nations Day program given by the International Club of the YWCA in Colorado Springs. The attendance was over 200. Although this was primarily a YWCA activity, the Bahá'ís were given credit for assistance in the newspaper account. An occasion was also provided for setting up a display of UN and Bahá'í books in a local bookstore.

Nine Communities Give Program Tea

A "Program Tea" in a private home was given by the Manhasset, N.Y., group, assisted by Bahá'ís of eight nearby Long Island communities. Attendance totaled 80, with Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh speaking for the United Nations, and H. Borrah Kavelin speaking for the Bahá'í Faith.

Participate in Two Meetings

The Bahá'í group of Provo, Utah, in addition to holding their own public meeting, participated in making the plans for the Utah County UN Committee banquet at Brigham Young University that was attended by 500 people. The program opened with the Bahá'í "Prayer for All Nations."

In addition, the Secretary of the Provo Bahá'ís sent a "Letter to the Editor" in behalf of the United Nations and world justice, and the Bahá'í press representative induced the pastors of four churches to join with the Bahá'ís in statements endorsing the work of the United Nations. These were printed as an article in the local newspaper.

Newton Center, Mass., Bahá'ís also held a fireside and a public meeting in observance of UN Week, and cooperated with several other organizations in a city-wide celebration that drew an attendance of over 300.

Hamburg, N.Y., Bahá'ís held a public meeting with a Bahá'í speaker. Apparently because of newspaper publicity, 45 high school students were required to attend as a class assignment, and made a welcome addition to a good-sized audience. There was one advertisement and two publicity stories in the local newspaper.

Model Presented to School

A model of the United Nations building, and flags of all nations were presented to a grammar school in Three Rivers, Mass., by the Bahá'ís there.

University Vice-President Speaks

The Bahá'í Assembly of Miami, Fla., was fortunate to secure as speaker for their public meeting, Dr. H. Franklin Williams, vice-president of the University of Miami. Dr. Williams, who is a celebrity locally because of his humanitarian work as well as his scholastic abilities, gave a vivid picture of the UN, its fine objectives, and its achievements. Among the guests was Mike Oceola, a Seminole Indian of national fame.

City's Only Observance

The Bahá'í Assembly of Fresno, Calif., arranged the only publicized public meeting held in that city to observe United Nations Week. With two advertisements, newspaper stories before and after the event, and radio and television announcements, the publicity was ample. Three exhibits were set up in strategic locations, and 1000 copies of the pamphlet UN Day 1957 were distributed in the public and college libraries, appropriate college classes, and at the meeting.
City-Wide Celebration

Juneau, Alaska, with the help of several other organizations, arranged a city-wide celebration of UN Week. Three exhibits were displayed, in the library, the high school, and a leading hotel. A panel of five persons spoke for 15 minutes on the radio, and two films were shown on television, making a 30 minute program. Several spot announcements were also broadcast.

Exhibit at University

In Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, it was possible for the Bahá'ís to secure the “Salón de Exhibiciones” at the University of Puerto Rico for a week starting the Sunday before UN Day. The exhibit was composed largely of posters, photographs, and charts furnished by the Department of Public Information of the UN. One of the several bulletin boards had a photograph of the Bahá'í House of Worship, a copy of the National Spiritual Assembly proposals of UN Charter revisions, and a quotation from the Bahá'í Writings.

In a small rack below this board were exhibited copies of Gleanings, and other examples of Sacred Writings from member-countries of the UN.

Summary of Observances

The Bahá'í United Nations Committee has the responsibility of reporting each year to the UN Headquarters the work of Bahá'ís in this field. The committee states: “To date (November 27) we have received reports from 68 communities that engaged in some activity to mark the twelfth anniversary of the United Nations. We are confident our report to UN Headquarters will be accorded high commendation.” Each community making efforts this year in the work of friendly cooperation in local UN work has also helped in the “reinforcement of ties binding the Bahá'í World Community to the United Nations”—listed by Shoghi Effendi in 1953 as one of the objectives of the Ten Year Plan at the World Center of the Faith.

Bahá'ís should be fully informed on the Bahá'í relationship to the United Nations and the progress made in this respect since that memorable spring of 1947. An excellent source of information is The Bahá'í World, Vol. XII, pages 597-615.

SUGGEST USES OF RADIO IN HOME FRONT TEACHING

The following ideas, submitted by a Bahá'í who is experienced in the field of radio, are offered for the benefit of the small communities and Bahá'í groups who would like to secure radio time for Bahá'í events, but who have found that time for religious programs is controlled by the Council of Churches, the local Ministerial Association, or the principle of “free time apportioned according to the number of local members of the religion.”

This believer’s advice, in such situations, is to give up trying to obtain public service time on the station for the time being and to try to do the following instead:

“Make yourself known to an on-the-air personality of the station. This could be anyone who uses interviews or who comments on ‘Things going on around town,’ etc. The first step would be to listen carefully to the station for a week or so and determine what personality could best use the Bahá'í material.”

“As an example, here we have three stations. One station has a regular current events program, and they will announce any meetings we have. Another has a women’s editor who announces our meetings and our holy day celebrations when we ask her to do so. Also she will interview Bahá’ís from time to time. To date, she has had four such interviews.

“This is how to handle a possible interview: Inform the personality that you are going to have a speaker who, you believe, she would find interesting to have as a guest on her (or his) show. Give her pertinent facts about the speaker and let her decide if she can use such an interview.”

SUGGESTIONS PUBLISHED FOR TEACHING ON CAMPUS

The Bahá’í College Bureau has prepared an article containing helpful suggestions for teaching on college campuses. It is being distributed to all Bahá’í college students by the National Bahá’í Youth Committee and it will be sent, on request to the Bahá’í College Bureau, to youth anticipating attending college, to Bahá’ís living adjacent to colleges, and to others interested in this subject.

The Bahá’í College Bureau has also prepared a model constitution for a Bahá’í College Club and suggestions for starting such an organization. This is also available upon request.

Please address inquiries to Miss Barbara Roberts, secretary, Bahá’í College Bureau, P.O. Box 556, Stanford, Calif.

COLLEGE ACTIVITIES

The Bahá’í Club at Wayne State University, Detroit, Mich., was asked to participate on September 13 in a welcoming party for the International Club. Some 125 students and faculty members attended this meeting, held in a church rectory. After the short talks given by representatives of the faculty, the Student Union, and the Christian groups on campus, Frank Meese presented the Bahá’í Faith.

One of the interesting sidelights of this gathering was that a student from Thailand had been studying the Faith in his country for three months from a Bahá’í pioneer from California. This student indicated that he plans to continue studying the Faith with the Wayne Bahá’í Club.
Davison Bahá’í Summer School Sessions
Emphasize Teaching and Deepening of Youth

The report received from the Program Committee for the Davison Bahá’í School for the 1957 session indicates that much emphasis was placed on the teaching, training, and deepening of Bahá’í youth. The school opened with a two-week session for junior youth from 10 to 15 years of age, with emphasis upon the things that would carry over into their daily lives after they left the school, such as the habit of daily devotions, and the ability to explain and teach the Faith to other young people.

Two weeks near the end of the session were planned for youth between the ages of 15 and 21. Two of the teachers for this program were individuals just over 21 years of age themselves.

Five weeks of the school were devoted to general sessions and during that time classes for children were also conducted.

Four courses were given each week. One stressed study of the Creative Word; another was on the World Crusade; the third was devoted to study of the Covenant and Administration, and the fourth area consisted of courses of the work-shop type on such subjects as “Prayer and Meditation,” “The Guardianship,” and “A Bahá’í Philosophy of Education.”

The weekend programs were planned in a manner to present subjects quite completely for those who were unable to attend the school for a full period. These included programs planned by the American Indian Service Committee, a work-shop on community teaching, and other subjects presented by well qualified Bahá’í teachers.

The homecoming weekend drew attendance of more than 100. The major part of the program for those days was devoted to a study of Africa and its teaching opportunity, planned by the Africa Teaching Committee.

The Davison Bahá’í School was particularly blessed this year by the attendance of the Hand of the Cause of God, Mr. Díkru’lláh Khádem, and his family. Other visitors were returned pioneers from Africa, and Bahá’ís who had recently made the pilgrimage to the World Center.

The national assembly referred the matter to the Urbana Local Spiritual Assembly, which in turn delegated Dr. Garreta Busey to attend the conference.

The program called for seminars to be given at 4 o’clock every afternoon by the representatives of various religious bodies. These speakers were asked, as well, to meet any classes which might invite them to attend.

Miss Busey was asked to meet a freshman rhetoric class at 10 a.m. and a sociology class at 11. Her subjects were “Poetry and Religion” and “The Great Family of Religions.” Many questions were asked, and the sociology students, who were upperclassmen and very intelligent, seemed especially interested. After class they swooped down, like a cloud of locusts, on the pamphlets spread out on the desk.

Dr. Busey had been doubtful about the attendance at the 4 o’clock seminar, the subject of which had been announced as “What is the Bahá’í Faith?” Nine other seminars were being given at the same time, one of them on marriage and dating, an overwhelmingly popular subject. She had heard that the attendance at these seminars the day before had ranged from 30 to 1. She writes:

“I expected three or four, but 35 to 40 people turned up, most of them students, some of them older people. They were alert, and asked many questions.

“A Bahá’í freshman who was present took part in the discussion, thereby making it known that she is a Bahá’í, and she talked with some of the students afterwards. I had some Bahá’í books on display; they were not advertised for sale, but one woman asked if she could buy The Divine Art of Living. The pamphlets almost all disappeared. Some students asked for Communion with God.

"One of the most fruitful aspects of the visit was the bringing together of four of the Bahá’ís of Bloomington and Normal. One of them, recently returned from France, who has this fall become a member of the Physical Education staff at the university, made herself known to me. She knew of no other Bahá’ís in the vicinity.

"Tuesday evening my hostess, a non-Bahá’í, kindly allowed me to invite her to the house, along with three other Bahá’ís, and these four were happy to find each other immediately began to plan firesides and a discussion group.

"The whole affair seemed to me to be very encouraging. A state university has asked to have the Baha’i of the locality found each other and began to plan follow-up teaching.”

Beloved Friends:
The Hands of the Holy Land call upon the members of the Bahá'í world community to unite in a reverent and befitting observance of the passing of the beloved Guardian. Their call is for a sincere expression of our grief and longing to relieve our hearts and raise a spiritual monument that will abide in the history of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh.
By "all manner of religious festivity" the National Spiritual Assembly understands that we are to obey the instruction given us by the Guardian as published in Bahá'í News, October 1932, when he called for a period of mourning following the passing of the Greatest Holy Leaf: Festive Anniversaries should be suspended. Administrative gatherings, including Nineteen Day Feasts, should be held with utmost simplicity."

The nine month period began November 4, 1957, and ends August 4, 1958. The "festive anniversaries" falling within this period are the Intercalary Days, Naw-Rúz, the Feast of Ridván, and the Declaration of the Báb. It would be appropriate, however, for the friends to assemble on these anniversaries for prayer and the reading of selections from the Sacred Writings.

Beloved Bahá'í Friends:
The message cabled on December 13 by the nine Hands of the Holy Land challenges the Bahá'í world community to demonstrate the "mystsionous divine forces animating our dearly loved Faith,” and the “vitality of institutions of the embryonic world order,” and calls upon the Hands of the Cause and the National Assemblies, as well as the body of believers, to evince “determination to diffuse uninterruptedly the fragrance of Bahá’u’lláh’s mighty Revelation to fear-laden humanity, deprived of power to recognize Divine Light unaided.”

The Custodians concentrate upon the realization and fulfillment of the beloved Guardian’s essential purpose in announcing, through his last message, the convening of the International Conferences during 1958.

Thus any idle questioning of the direction of Bahá’í affairs proclaimed by the Hands assembled in the Mansion of Bahá’u’lláh is swept away in this fervent, eloquent appeal to respond to the Guardian’s expressed intention and hope. Those at the helm possess experience, the skill, and the devotion to steer the ship through whatever stormy seas arise until the world triumph of the Faith is demonstrated in 1963, the Centenary of Bahá’u’lláh’s Declaration.

The time is brief, the end is supremely glorious for every faithful Bahá’í.

Ruhíyyih Khánum’s Account of the Passing of the Beloved Guardian

The believers are informed that Ruhíyyih Khánum has written an account of the passing of Shoghi Effendi which will be published as a pamphlet. No article on that sacred subject is to be published in Baha’i News. When copies of the pamphlet are available the friends will be informed.

Memorial Meetings Affirm Rededication and Devotion

“Request all believers hold memorial meetings eighteenth November commemorating Dayspring (of) Divine Guidance who has left us after thirty-six years (of) utter self-sacrifice, ceaseless labors (and) constant vigilance.”

This request, included in the message from Ruhíyyih Khánum sent to the national and regional spiritual assemblies following the funeral for Shoghi Effendi in London, November 9, 1957, was immediately transmitted by these bodies to the members of their respective Bahá’í communities. Perhaps it will never be known in how many of the 4,500 Bahá’í centers throughout the world, the believers numbering from one lonely pioneer or isolated individual to possibly hundreds, united with their fellow believers around the world in a short, sacred period of prayers, readings, and chanting to assuage their grief over the loss of the “light of their lives” and to re-dedicate themselves to greater unity and steadfast devotion to the plans he longed to see completed for the establishment of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

All national and regional spiritual assemblies must have received innumerable letters and cables from local assemblies, Bahá’í groups, and individuals reporting the sacred spirit and nature of these gatherings, together with expressions of steadfastness and devotion.

Those received from centers throughout the United States, numbering approximately 200, were forwarded to Ruhíyyih Khánum as evidence of the grief, the love, and re-dedication of the believers, as well as their sympathy and their deep appreciation of her own words of comfort to them.

International Archives Building at the Bahá’í World Center in Haifa, Israel.
Typical of these messages are the following sentences gleaned from letters and cablegrams received by the Regional Spiritual Assembly of Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Venezuela: "Sacrifice will be more intensive. "We'll have to work harder than ever." "In this joint sorrow over the loss of Shoghi Effendi on this plane of existence, we will all be bound closer together." There seems to be already a spiritual maturing ... a courageous unity to face whatsoever the future presents."

There were also many declarations of loyalty to all the institutions of the Faith and to the tasks of the World Crusade, as well as expressions of confidence that the beloved Guardian "will guide our steps from the Abba' Kingdom."

The national and regional spiritual assemblies commenting on the spirit of these memorial gatherings, as well as on the response generated in the hearts of the believers, have expressed assurances similar to that of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Venezuela that "such dedication will bear fruit and the completion of our goals be fully realized."

Urge Early Reservations for Convention Accommodations

Delegates and visitors wishing accommodations for the Fiftieth Annual National Convention, April 29, 30, and May 1, 1958, in private homes should send their request for reservations to: Mrs. Priscilla Hassan, 1244 Maple Avenue, Wilmette, Ill., chairman of the Housing Committee, or to the Co-Chairman, Mrs. Edna Coleman, 1227 Leon Place, Evanston, Ill.

A list of nearby hotels, together with rates, will be published in the next issue of Baha'i News. The friends wishing this latter type of reservations must make their own reservations directly with the hotel of their choice.

All delegates and visitors are requested to bring their Bahá'í identification cards, which must be presented when registering at the Convention. They will be needed also for registering for the Intercontinental Conference as announced in the bulletin sent to all the believers as an insert in the January Baha'i News.

NSA Calls 38 Conferences Throughout Nation in February

In consultation with the American Hands of the Cause, the National Spiritual Assembly has issued a call for a nation-wide series of conferences to be held in 38 centers of Bahá'í population during February 1958, each conference to be conducted by a Hand of the Cause, a member of the Auxiliary Boards, or a member of the National Assembly.

This is the third series of conferences to be conducted on a nationwide scale in the current Bahá'í year, representing the effort of the National Spiritual Assembly to reinvigorate the American Bahá'í community and to produce a maximum response to the beloved Guardian's appeal for pioneer settlement and the multiplication of the number of Bahá'ís in the United States.

The February conferences, however, have special importance in that they are planned also as opportunities for individual Bahá'ís to consult on the new and unprecedented situation created by the passing of the beloved Guardian. Each conference leader will present a statement prepared by the National Spiritual Assembly which deals with this situation and enables the believers to attain the complete understanding they need in order to meet this spiritual challenge with conviction, courage, and action to assure the "triumphant termination of the initial epoch in the unfoldment of the Divine Plan" called for in the Guardian's letter to the Bahá'ís of the United States of September 21, 1957, and to "rise to heights never before attained in the course of ... American Bahá'í history."

In calling these conferences, the National Spiritual Assembly has requested everyone to bring with him the last two letters from the Guardian entitled: "Heights Never Before Attained" (September 21, 1957), and "The Guardian Announces Series of Five Intercontinental Conferences and Appointment of Eight Additional Hands of the Cause" (October, 1957), both of which were distributed with the November 1957 Bahá'í News.

Following is the list of places where the conferences are to be held, together with the date and the conference leader for each one. Details as to meeting places and exact hours are being announced by the various area teaching committees.

American Hands Announce Appointment of Auxiliary Board for Protection

In accordance with directives issued to the Hands of the Cause by the beloved Guardian, the American Hands have appointed an Auxiliary Board of nine members to be concerned with the protection of the Faith from Covenant-breakers. Two members of the original Auxiliary Board for Teaching have been transferred to the new Board.

The membership of the two Boards is as follows:

The membership is thus representative of the Western Hemisphere, the area assigned to the American Hands.

National committees and local assemblies are requested to extend all possible cooperation to Board Members in their valued services to the Hands and to the National Assembly.

Pledges of Loyalty and Devotion Appreciated by National Assembly

The National Spiritual Assembly wishes to express its deep appreciation of the messages received from a number of the state conventions conveying pledges of loyalty, steadfastness, devotion, and renewed dedication to the promotion of the Divine Plan of 'Abdu'l-Baha and to the specific tasks of the World Crusade bequeathed to the Baha'i World Community by Shoghi Effendi, Guardian of the Baha'i Faith.

May the current year witness unsurpassed victories by the Baha'i Community of the United States.

Reply to Editorial in "Time" Magazine

Many believers have noted the editorial reference to the Faith published in the December 9 issue of Time Magazine, entitled "In the Hands of the Hands."

A reply has been sent to the editor of Time by the American Hands who attended the conference held by the 26 Hands of the Cause in the Mansion of Baha'u'llah. As participants they were qualified to assert that the statement concerning a contest for the Guardianship was wholly incorrect.

It is not known at this date whether the letter written by the American Hands has been or will be scheduled for publication in Time Magazine.

Northbrook, Ill., Schools
Recognize Baha'i Holy Days

The Baha'i children in Northbrook, Ill., now have permission to remain away from school on Baha'i Holy Days. The superintendent of the elementary schools of that community, as well as the superintendent of the Glenbrook High School, have informed the parents that it is their policy to excuse pupils from classes on holy days, regardless of the Faith or denomination of the children, provided the parents request such absence in writing in advance.

ANOTHER "precursor of a future world civilization," symbolizing the age of the unity of mankind, will soon be erected near Sydney, Australia. This new Maghrijí'-Adhkár will rise 700 feet above sea level about 19 miles from the heart of Sydney. It commands an extensive view of the coastline from Palm Beach to Sydney Harbour Heads, and across the wooded hills of Kuring-gai Chase National Reserve. The area is seven acres, 5½ perches, and was purchased at a cost of £5,500.

To Be Faced With White Quartz

It is to be built of steel-reinforced concrete with a special facing of white opaque quartz aggregate of approximately one-half to three-fourths inches on the major portions of the building. The castings for the doors and windows will be made up of a smaller aggregate and white cement. A nine-pointed star will be incorporated into the grillwork of the windows, this to be the only ornamentation used. It is anticipated that the floor of the Temple will be a cement resembling Terazzo, but at only one quarter of the cost.

The ribs of the dome, of pre-stressed concrete, will be cast on the ground and lifted into place, as will the major portions of the dome. It is proposed to use a fine aggregate for the interior to be shot onto the wall with a cement gun. The building will have nine sides and will be approached by two sets of nine steps. The main hall and gallery, seating 500, will each be surrounded by an ambulatory section, and five staircases to connect the basement, hall, and gallery will be situated in the turrets at the angles of the sides.

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bábís of Australia states that the cost of the building is to be not more than £120,000 Sterling (£150,000 Australian). The overall dimensions of the Temple are a 100 foot width at the base, rising to a height of 126 feet.

Monument Erected In Sofia to Immortal Baha'i Heroine

A monument has been erected at the grave of Marion Jack by the Baha'is of Canada and the United States, at the Guardian's request, in memory of this courageous pioneer. Loved by 'Abdu'l-Baha, Marion Jack won also the deep gratitude and admiration of the beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, for her steadfastness at her goal in Sofia, Bulgaria, where she now lies buried.

During World War II, in her elderly years, she suffered great privation. She was without heat, lacked clothing, food, and adequate shelter. She was bombed, lost all of her possessions, and was evacuated to the country, later returning, still valiant and on foot, to carry on her teaching work in Sofia.

The Guardian himself urged Marion Jack to go to Switzerland at the time war first threatened to cut her off in Bulgaria. She begged him to permit her to remain with her spiritual children, which she did with the Guardian's consent, until her death on March 25, 1954. How deeply her heroic action must have stirred the heart of Shoghi Effendi is evident in his statement that "every Baha'i, and most particularly those who have left their homes and gone to serve in foreign fields, should know of, and turn their gaze to, Marion Jack."

"Young or old could never find a more inspiring pioneer in whose footsteps to walk, than this wonderful soul," he also wrote on May 24, 1954, in a letter to the European Teaching Committee, and stated that her tomb would become a national shrine, immensely revered, as the Faith rises in stature in Bulgaria.

Her monument itself is inscribed with words of Shoghi Effendi from his cable of March 29, 1954, shared with all national spiritual assemblies at the time of her passing: "Im mortal heroine . . . greatly loved and deeply admired by 'Abdu'l-Baha, a shining example to pioneers . . . Her unremitting, high meritorious activities . . . shed imperishable luster on contemporary Baha'i history."

Monument erected at the grave of Marion Jack in the British Cemetery in Sofia, Bulgaria.

Each step forward in accomplishing the goals of the World Crusade brings the faithful followers of Baha'u'llah nearer to their hearts' desire—complete victory in all that their beloved Guardian so clearly outlined and delineated for them. In God Passes By Shoghi Effendi refers to the construction of the Baha'i Temple in America as the combined effort of the believers of Christian, Muslim, Jewish, Zoroastrian, Hindu, and Buddhist backgrounds. Here is another opportunity unfolded for Baha'is of East and West to join hands and hearts, and materially and spiritually demonstrate to the world the unity of purpose that underlies all of their endeavors no matter where that endeavor may be revealed in the world. Consecrated to the worship of the one God, open to all humanity of every religion or race, the building of this "Dawning Place of the Remembrances of God" will be a visible sign to throngs of people that the Kingdom of God has come, however little they may yet realize it.

'Abdu'l-Baha, speaking of the Divine Edifice to be constructed in America said: "Out of this Mashriqu'l-Adhkâr, without doubt, thousands of Mashriqu'l-Adhkârs will be born." Thus does one victory in the Cause of God give birth to another.

Again the Master stated: "The Mashriqu'l-Adhkâr is the most important matter and the greatest divine institute. Consider how the first institute of His Holiness Moses, after His exodus from Egypt, was the 'Tent of Martyrdom' which He raised and which was the traveling Temple. "Likewise, after His Holiness Christ—the first institute by the disciples was a Temple. They planned a church in every country. Consider the Gospel and the importance of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkâr will become evident."

Opened to Faith

December 8, 1957, was an historical day for the Bahá'ís of Macau, for this was the occasion of the first public proclamation of the Faith in that city. Although the attendance consisted of only fifteen non-Bahá'ís and seven Bahá'ís, this was a remarkable achievement, especially in view of the fact that the required government permission to hold such a meeting had been cancelled twice, the second time on the very day before the event was to take place.

Quick work on the part of the Bahá'ís in explaining the nature of the meeting to government authorities, and to the officials of the school where the meeting finally was held, and in obtaining last minute publicity, aided by the prayers of the Bahá'í group, brought the Faith to the attention of a number of important individuals besides those who comprised the audience.

The speaker was Carl A. Scherer, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause in Asia; his subject was "Progressive Revelation."

The First Korean Pioneer

To Kim Chang Zin of Seoul, Korea, goes the honor of being the first Korean to arise as a Bahá'í pioneer. He has settled in the virgin island of Chaeju, in the Yellow Sea south of the Korean peninsula.

Mr. Kim first heard of the Faith many years ago. The limited knowledge he was able to acquire before Korea was cut off from the rest of the world came largely through correspondence with Esperantist Bahá'ís in the United States. Hearing of it again when the United States Army Occupation took Bahá'ís into South Korea, Mr. Kim was immediately awakened, although none of the Americans in Korea at the time were able to converse with him in a language he could understand.

He attended the Bahá'í National Convention in Tokyo last April, an experience which itself was a victory over great political obstacles; here he became imbued with the determination to teach. This determination has now expressed itself in his response to the Guardian's message to the first Convention of the Bahá'ís of North East Asia, calling for the planting of the banner of Bahá'u'lláh in new island areas.

In other parts of Korea the Faith continues to expand and to require almost superhuman effort on the part of the American pioneers and native Bahá'ís alike. For example, John McHenry III travels three hours by bus and train weekly to conduct firesides and study classes in Mokpo, in addition to carrying on at least three classes in Kwangju where he teaches in Chosen University.

There is at present only one Bahá'í in Mokpo, but 20 other persons who are vitally interested have formed committees to see that publicity and other local arrangements are made in order to insure maximum use of the time Mr. McHenry can give to that city.

With the help of an interested professor at the college, plans are under way to open the virgin city of Chunju to the Faith this year.

Penghu Island Opened by Tainan Bahá'ís

The Bahá'ís of Taiwan, also, are extending their teaching work to surrounding islands. Following the first Bahá'í summer school (see page 8), Mrs. Ruthy Tu of Tainan and Mr. Philip Marangella, chairman of the National Teaching Committee for North East Asia, visited Mahkong on Penghu, one of the Pescadores Islands in the China Sea, 70 miles off the coast of Formosa, where they were able to introduce the Faith to the principal of the government school.

New Islands of Japan Opened

The opening of several of the hundreds of islands comprising Japan is receiving the special attention of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of North East Asia. Until a few months ago, the Bahá'ís in Japan were concentrated on the main island of Honshu. A year ago the beloved Guardian called for the opening of "the northern island of Hokkaido," and in his message to the first Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís in North East Asia last April, he called also for the propagation of the Faith "throughout the smaller islands of Japan."

Since Hokkaido was especially singled out by the Guardian for attention, the settlement of that area was an item of special consultation at the Convention, with the result that a month later Mr. G. Nakajima and Mr. R. Momtazi undertook the first teaching trip to Hokkaido. (See pp. 6 and 7 Bahá'í News, November 1957.) The two residents of the major city of Sapporo who accepted the Faith immediately have now been joined by Quarat'lulláh Vahid Tibráni, a pioneer to Japan from Iran, and together they will follow up the contacts made by Mr. Nakajima and Mr. Momtazi with members of the Ainu tribe.

Mr. H. Labib, also a pioneer to Japan from Iran, is now settled in...
Nagasaki on the large island of Kyushu. Takumatsu, a city on Shikoku, the fourth and last of the "main islands," has been opened by the believers of Kobe. This same Bahá’í community has been doing teaching work also on the small island of Awaji as part of the extension work in the city of Akashi, south of Kobe, and in Himeji, north of Kobe, as well as on Shodo Shima Island.

Nagoya, the only Bahá’í community in Japan composed entirely of Japanese believers, is carrying on a very active teaching program with only occasional assistance from the outside. Its extension assignment consists of opening the nearby cities of Hamamatsu and Toyoyashi.

A special tribute should be paid to Mr. M. Odani, who is the first Japanese Bahá’í to undertake a teaching circuit alone. His first circuit included visits to Kyushu and Shikoku Islands, and making approximately 50 new contacts for the Faith.

The early purchase of a Temple site and of property for burial grounds is a goal of the Six-Year Plan on which the Regional Spiritual Assembly is concentrating special attention in addition to the attainment of its incorporation, all of which the Assembly aims to complete before the end of the current Bahá’í year.

These are but a few of the achievements of the first year of "the second chapter in the history of the evolution of His Faith in the North Pacific area," the Six-Year Plan for North East Asia, the opening of which began with the beloved Guardian’s message to the first Convention in Tokyo in April 1957.

First Bahá’í Summer School Publicizes Faith in Taiwan

The first Bahá’í Summer School to be held in Taiwan was conducted from September 28-30, 1957, at the Eastern Garden Hotel in Tainan. In view of the fact that an official government permit was required to hold such a gathering, the procedure for securing such permission was itself a means of introducing the Faith to the officials of a number of city government sections both in Tainan and Taichung.

The event received additional publicity in the daily newspapers in the cities where Bahá’ís reside, namely, Taipei, Tainan, Chia-Yi and Tsoting.

The presence of two distinguished overseas Bahá’ís—Mr. Philip Marangella, representing the Regional Spiritual Assembly of North East Asia, and Mr. Carl Scherer, the esteemed member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause in Asia,—was a great inspiration to all.

Panel discussions during the daytime session discussed methods of introducing the Bahá’í Faith and the Bahá’í pattern for future society, while the evening sessions were open to the general public. Each session opened with prayers in the three languages represented at the school—Chinese, English, and Persian.

The tone of the school was struck at the opening session when the chairman of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Tainan, Jerome Chu, explained the purpose of Bahá’í summer schools and introduced the two visitors, Mr. Scherer and Mr. Marangella.

Mr. Marangella explained in detail the importance of Bahá’í summer schools that "bid fair to evolve into the Bahá’í universities of the future." He related how his own guidance into the Cause began with his attendance at a Bahá’í school in the United States 36 years ago.

Mr. Scherer conveyed Bahá’í greetings from different Pacific regions which he visits as a member of the Auxiliary Board. He referred to the progress of the Faith during the Crusade years of the beloved Guardian’s Ten-Year Plan, especially in the African continent and the whole Pacific region.

The importance of this first Taiwan Bahá’í Summer School will be known in the future as assured by the beloved Guardian who, in response to a cablegram from the 25 attendants at the school, replied that he was offering "fer­vent prayers (for) success (in their) deliberations."

Canton Huanuni Indian Assembly Formed in Bolivia

THIS is the story of the formation of the first all-Indian Local Spiritual Assembly in the village of Vilacollo, Bolivia, April 21, 1957. It was at the memorable National Convention held in Buenos Aires that the Bahá'ís first heard the mountain-clear voice and sensed the deep devotion and humility of Andrés Jachacollo, chairman of that Local Assembly. They saw the true nobility of the Indian. How had the way been paved for Andrés and his family to enter into the Faith?

Let us try to visualize that bleak forbidding region of Vilacollo, situated on the arid Altiplano, the western tableland, of Bolivia, high above La Paz at 12,000 feet above sea-level. As far as the eye can see there is no green relief, only clumps of a straw-like forage called Paja Brava, to nurture the hardy llamas, small flocks of sheep, a very few cattle, and the ever present burro used for transportation.

The only wild creatures are occasional jackrabbits or fox-like animals which have little or no utility. There seems to be little or nothing to offer for survival. The climate is chilly, ranging from zero to 12 degrees centigrade. With virtually no rainfall, nothing will grow except a wild grain plant which is toasted and ground to give slight nourishment to the ever-hungry Indians.

From La Paz, one travels 260 kms.; from Oruro, 60 kms.; from Huanuni, 20 kms. by foot to the village of Vilacollo to find an Indian population all descended from the family Jachacollo. This is the family chosen by Bahá'u'lláh to spread the Glad Tidings. These are the "Red Mountain" people living on the red-ridged slopes of a sierra which has given the village its name.

"Since 1950," said Andrés, "all our customs have changed because of the constant fees demanded by the church for baptisms, marriages, and even funerals, and we asked if God gave nothing gratis. But our prayerbooks inspired us on to higher thoughts and we tried to live a life in accordance with God's commandments."

With a longing for a spiritual life ever within him, Andrés Jachacollo often visited a wise old man around a hundred years old who belonged to a very ancient race of men called the Urus, who lived on the shores of Lake Popoo. It was he, Toribio Miranda, whom the Indians revered and considered as their spiritual father, who counselled them on their daily living habits, to be pure and clean, and to give up drinking, smoking, and the chewing of the narcotic coca leaves which seemed to give them a temporary sense of well-being and caused them to forget their constant hunger.

Through him they organized their communities, choosing zealous spiritual men to act as their Mayors in guiding them to obey God's purpose for them. This authority was exercised through signed and sealed papers given each Mayor by Sr. Miranda.

In the village of Vilacollo, Andrés Jachacollo was elected the Mayor and he took the responsibility seriously both in the material and spiritual sense. He always felt a sense of spiritual destiny while searching for a better way of life for his people.

It was in April 1956 that Andrés visited La Paz, and while wandering about happened to read the poster outside the Bahá'í Center which told about Universal Teachings for this Day. He thought it over, and returned with his brother, Carmelo, so they could study these Teachings which gave such assurance of "The Oneness of Humanity." He had to make sure that he had really found his goal. After several intensive months of study and questions Andrés and his brother Carmelo accepted Bahá'u'lláh unreservedly, and became the first two members of their race to be believers in Bolivia. (Sept. 8, 1956)

They invited their friends, Elton Smith and Estanislao Alvarez, members of the Regional Teaching Committee, to go back to their little village to talk to the entire Jachacollo settlement. By April 1957 ten members had accepted the Faith whole-heartedly, and held their first local spiritual assembly election. The members elected were Andrés, Carmelo, Nasario, Martin, Julian, Juan, Pedro, Seferino, and Isidro, all with the surname of Jachacollo. Urbano Limachi was the tenth member.

In their village of Vilacollo the Children's Schoolhouse serves as the Bahá'í Center, where the Teachings

They feel that they owe a great debt to the one who prepared them spiritually to recognize Bahá'u'lláh. In the memory of Toribio Miranda they hope to reach all the Indians who were his spiritual family and were imbued with his high ideals. Undoubtedly, we shall learn before long that the first Bahá'ís will have entered the Faith on the shores of Lake Popóo.

Shoghi Effendi sent word to the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay on August 28, 1957, that he felt particularly happy to see that some Indian believers had attended the Convention in Buenos Aires and that he conceded the greatest importance to the teaching of the Faith to the aborigines of the Americas; that 'Abdu'l-Bahá Himself had spoken of their great potentialities and it was their right to receive the Message of God for this Day that they should receive special attention, love, and consideration to compensate them for what others considered an inferior position. Finally, the Guardian gave these instructions: “One of the most meritorious objectives of your Assembly should be the establishment of All-Indian Spiritual Assemblies.”

Prominent Lecturer Reviews Bahá'í Book

Acting on the request of the Guardian to give wide-spread publicity to Dr. George Townshend’s book, Christ and Bahá'u'lláh, the West Hollywood, Calif., Local Spiritual Assembly arranged with Mrs. J'Nevely Terrill, a prominent club woman and lecturer, to include a public review of this book in the list of books and authors she planned to present during the fall months in her very popular program called “The Mental Shop.” Accordingly, Mrs. Terrill’s brochure, mailed to more than 14,000 people, announced Christ and Bahá'u'lláh as her choice for the month of September as the most outstanding book along religious lines.

Since it is customary for Mrs. Terrill to present the author who gives the review of his book to the audience, and since Dr. Townshend had passed away, she invited Charles Wolcott, member of the National Spiritual Assembly, to be the guest speaker on this occasion. As a feature of the program a well-known Los Angeles tenor sang the prayer by Bahá'u'lláh, “O Thou By Whose Name,” which Mr. Wolcott had set to music.

At this meeting, held on September 21, Mrs. Terrill spoke about the book, Christ and Bahá'u'lláh, and about Dr. Townshend, and then announced that she had invited a member of the Bahá’í Faith to explain the Bahá’í Faith and the relation of this book to it, which was done briefly by Mr. Wolcott.

Following the meeting all available copies of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh were sold and a vast amount of free Bahá’í literature was picked up, including copies of The Christian Cen­tery reprint of Marcus Bach’s article, “The Bahá’í Faith: a Second Look,” and the pamphlet, Lord of the New Age.

It is estimated that 1,100 were present at this meeting, most of whom heard of the Faith for the first time. Thousands who could not be present, but who are interested in Mrs. Terrill’s lecture program, undoubtedly were impressed by the fact that she included in her list of 18 books to be reviewed during the Fall this particular book as “J'Nevelyn's choice for the most interesting book,” in the religious field.

Baha'is of Four Nations Attend Dedication of Luxembourg Center

The dedication of the Luxembourg Baha'u'llah Quds, located at 8 rue Maréchal Foch, took place on November 1, 1957. As it was followed by a Benelux Conference, many Baha'is from Belgium, Holland, France, and Germany joined in the joyous celebration.

After beautiful prayers and readings in French, Dutch, and English the Chairman of the Luxembourg Local Spiritual Assembly expressed heartfelt thanks to the beloved Guardian, to Mrs. Amelia Collins, and to the whole body of the American friends who through their generous gifts enabled the acquisition of this lovely Baha'i home.

For many years the Luxembourg friends tried to find a suitable house, but only at the very last moment did they succeed. On April 30, 1957, the contract for the apartment was signed, which however could not be occupied until October 1st.

Mr. Levy took us all, sitting comfortably in the sunny and cheerful room, back to that bleak and cold January evening in 1947 when the first pioneer, Miss Honor Kempton, arrived in Luxembourg. Who could have dreamt that ten years later over 40 Baha'is would witness the dedication of such a beautiful Baha'u'llah Quds! He reminded us of the deep gratitude we owe her, the other pioneers, and the traveling teachers for their contributions to the growth of the Faith in Luxembourg.

To our great joy Honor Kempton, now pioneering in nearby Nancy, took part in the dedication. Only as a "pioneer," she stressed, but to us she always remains the representative of the European Teaching Committee for whose loving guidance and assistance we will be for ever deeply grateful.

Dr. Hermann Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, spoke of his first visit to Luxembourg in 1952, on which he found the friends painting the furniture and arranging their first Center in the house of the regretted late Lily Kraus. Now the friends have not a rented room but their own beautiful Baha'i home. Dr. Grossmann wished them further victories, trusting that they could keep in mind the words of 'Abdu'l-Baha which they had chosen for the dedication: "The best way to thank God is to love one another".

Dhikru'lllah Khamem, Hand of the Cause, expressed his happiness and gratitude to be able to witness this historic occasion. He only regretted that not all the Persian friends could be here and to see with their own eyes what the beloved Guardian had written to them: that instead of their window display in Punta Arenas, Chile, arranged by believers in this southernmost Baha'i community in the world.

one Baha'u'llah Quds taken by the enemies, there were now 48!" Mr. Khamem explained how the Temple was an institution of Baha'u'llah and 'Abdu'l-Baha, but that the Baha'u'llah Quds was a creation of our beloved Guardian. He urged the friends "to pray and see what victories will follow."

Then the congratulatory messages were read: from Dr. Adelbert Muhlschlegel: from the American, the Benelux, the Italo-Swiss the German, and the Scandinavian National Spiritual Assemblies; and various local spiritual assemblies and friends in far-off countries. This made us realize with joy, as so often before at such gatherings, that we were a link in the chain of Baha'i love and unity encircling the world.

Finally, as the tangible expression of this love and unity some lovely gifts — a book to keep treasured, the Greatest Name in gold on brown leather, a beautiful Delft table coverings and beautiful vases with flowers — were received.

Encourage Participation in UNESCO Activities

This issue of Baha'i News (page 13) carries a brief report of the participation of official delegates of the American Baha'i community in the recent Sixth Annual Conference of the United States Commission for UNESCO.

While representation at such events must be left to the decision and discretion of the National Spiritual Assembly, the participation of members of the Baha'i community in local activities of UNESCO need not be limited to national delegates. Indeed, the believers are encouraged to take part in local workshops which follow the annual conferences. These group workshops or "Citizen Consultations" are generally sponsored by universities and colleges, but include representatives from local organizations, agencies, and institutions interested in educational and cultural activities related to the question of international understanding and cooperation.

One such workshop was sponsored last year in Sacramento, Calif., by the Sacramento State College. Among the 56 persons who participated were members of the local Baha'i Community who did so as part of the community's UN activities. The particular topic chosen for this workshop, which met five times between mid-October and mid-November, was: "The American as International Traveler and Host."

While the report gives no details as to direct Baha'i contributions to the consultation, it is interesting to note that a number of the recommendations are completely in line with the approach and aims of the Baha'i Faith in finding points of contact with people among whom the Baha'is live and work, whether at home or in foreign lands. For example, the report emphasized that: "The American abroad should learn to work with the villager, find out what he needs and help him to a solution of his own problems... train the native teacher."

In contacts with the student and visitor from abroad, "Americans must prepare themselves to provide meaningful experience for him while he is here as well as a satisfactory memory of his stay afterward... They must listen and make the most of the opportunity to see ourselves through the eyes of the visitor... The responsibility of the American host does not terminate with a single gesture of hospitality... One-time meeting or entertainment is not enough."

In the opinion of the Sacramento group, preparation for becoming a good traveler is a long-range matter. "The child should be prepared all along the way for his role as an understanding person who accepts people for what they are, rather than to evaluate them in terms of a parochial nationalism." And among the positive proposals for improving the effect that the American community can have upon other peoples, it was recommended that "our citizens may feel compelled to re-acquaint themselves with their own American heritage of cultural progress, with less emphasis on material things, so that foreign visitors or temporary residents... will feel a greater warmth of friendship when they return to their native lands."

As we read the conclusions of this and the six other workshops, some of which were also held in localities where there are Baha'i communities, we call to mind the letter of the Guardian dated July 19, 1956, quoted in the November 1956 Baha'i News (page 2), in which he stated that "a great impetus could be lent to the work (Baha'i) in the European countries, and certain far-eastern areas, and in Latin America, if the Baha'is residing in the big cities and university towns would make a determined and sufficient effort to extend friendship and hospitality to students and nationals from countries where the Baha'is are struggling so hard to establish the Faith."

In this same letter he urged the National Spiritual Assembly to survey the possibilities of this work, "then instruct the local assemblies accordingly, and in the meantime encourage the Baha'is to be active in this field, which is open to everybody, as the minorities are invariably lonely and often respond to kindness much more quickly than the well-established majority of the population."

Suggestions as to how to carry out this instruction from Shoghi Effendi, growing out of a careful survey by a special committee appointed for the purpose, were published in the June 1957 Baha'i News under the title, "Contacts with Visitors from Other Countries." Baha'i communities and groups who are engaged in the suggested activities should be alert to opportunities to participate in such conferences as the one reported in this article, and through such participation let other organizations and agencies in the community know that the Baha'i Faith is a faith of action and that to the Baha'is the world is indeed one fatherland.

UNESCO Conference Stresses
Asian-American Understanding

On invitation from the United States Commission for UNESCO, the National Spiritual Assembly appointed Mrs. Mamie Seto, temporarily in San Francisco, and Mr. Dwight W. Allen of Menlo Park, Calif., to serve as its representatives in the Sixth National Conference of this Commission in San Francisco, November 6-9, 1957.

This particular conference was called "to stimulate additional American interest in the peoples of Asia and in their cultural values and achievement; to consider the extensive American efforts relating to Asia which are now in progress; and to discuss ways in which Americans can contribute to better Asian-American understanding and cooperation."

The theme as announced in the invitations was: "Asia and the United States: What the American Citizen Can Do to Promote Mutual Understanding and Cooperation."

The report from our two representatives indicated that more than 1,500 delegates attended. Besides the presence of peoples from many countries, a colorful atmosphere was created by exhibits of art from the different countries in Asia, Indonesian and Japanese music by the orchestra of the University of California in Los Angeles, and films showing the religions of Asia; the latter was produced by Lew Ayres, screen actor and member of the United States National Committee for UNESCO.

The four plenary sessions and the section meetings were addressed by foreign and American leaders and scholars. Three luncheon meetings were addressed by Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile, Aircraft, and Agricultural Implement Workers of America; U. Thant, representative to the UN from Burma; and Dr. Ismail bin Dato Abdul Rahman, ambassador from Malaya.

A call for American leadership was the theme of many of the prominent speakers and recurred throughout all the session. Mrs. Seto stated that the first who dealt with this subject was the Honorable Ahmed Bokhari, Under-Secretary and Director of the Department of Public Information of the United Nations, who said: "If the American nation cannot take the challenge of the hour, what nation can? It is America's destiny to come forward now."

"The whole Asia continent is thirsting for a religious renaissance, the rebirth of cultural values, and the improvement of moral standards. America can certainly help fill the need."

Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit of India stated: "The question of racial prejudice undoubtedly remains one of the chief barriers between our world and yours. For this reason the smallest item of news from America or Africa which relates to discrimination often makes a disproportionate impact on the Asian mind. Nevertheless, the separation of East and West is ending. The history of the new world, the One World, has begun."

Mr. Reuther in his address said: "The H-bomb has reduced all of mankind to the simple common denominator of human survival. Until we understand that basic historic fact and begin to act in the knowledge of that understanding, the world, you and I, and the human family, are in great peril. We (in America) must begin to work more effectively to provide leadership, economic, political and, perhaps most of all in terms of importance, we need to provide greater moral leadership in this struggle."

"We need to learn that peace, freedom, and social justice are inseparably bound together and that neither can be made secure until all are made universal. We need to work together as a free people to demonstrate that the small minority who are symbolized by the problems in Little Rock do not represent the overwhelming point of view of the American people, and that we are going to not only fight against the master race theory with courage and conviction in Berlin, but to meet that problem at home with the same sense of courage and dedication, and until we do our symbols will be lost to the world...

"I happen to believe it is about time the free world begins to shape its basic policies in the image of its hopes and aspiration, its common faith and the common dreams of a better tomorrow."

For attendance at section meetings, Mrs. Seto chose the one devoted to "The Mind and Spirit of Asia; Achieving Understanding through Philosophies and Religions," while Mr. Allen chose the one on "Educational Problems of Asia, and the Study of Asia in American Education." In all section meetings there were long presentations by panel members with little opportunity for genuine interchange of ideas during the brief discussion periods which followed. In this respect, the delegates felt that the conference fell short of its avowed purpose "to achieve greater understanding."

There was no opportunity to speak of the Faith in the section which Mrs. Seto attended, but in the section on education Mr. Allen, who identified himself to those in his group as a Bahá'í, was able to speak several times and to propose a resolution (which was adopted by the group but omitted by the section rapporteur) calling for an emphasis on the similarities of ideals, beliefs, and spiritual values in constructing a curriculum of study on Asia in the American schools.

Both of the Bahá'í delegates were able to speak of the Faith to several new contacts, but whether or not there will be tangible results is unknown. Nevertheless both felt that it was valuable to have Bahá'í representatives at such conferences if for no other reason than to have the Faith represented on the rolls, to keep the American Bahá'í community informed of what the molders of opinion throughout the world are thinking, and to take advantage of whatever chance opportunities might arise to speak of the Faith to some other delegates in an informal manner.

Temple Site for South East Asia Purchased Near Djakarta

Purchase of a site for the Masjidi-I-Adkhár of South East Asia has been joyfully announced by the South East Asia Regional Spiritual Assembly. The land is located near Djakarta, Indonesia, and is over 14 acres in area.

This acquisition, carried out at the wish and instruction of the beloved Guardian, was concluded despite financial difficulties.

Burial Ground Acquired

In other news from this area, the Regional Assembly reports it has acquired a plot of land about 900 square meters in area within the city of Djakarta for a Bahá'í Burial Ground. The land was transferred to the Bahá'ís from government ownership without charge.

Hazíratu'l-Quds Established

A piece of land in the village of Trung Giang, Vietnam, has been offered by one of the local Bahá'ís to the Local Spiritual Assembly, and it is planned to erect a small building on the property that will serve as a Bahá'í Center.

In Saigon, the capital of Vietnam, a house suitable for a Hazíratu'l-Quds will soon be purchased with the savings of the friends there.

Hold First Regional Meeting in S. Bavaria

The first regional teaching conference of southern Bavaria was held in Munich on the weekend of November 16-17, 1957. Through the efforts of the National Teaching Committee, many of the isolated believers of the area were able to be present, in addition to Bahá'ís from the various communities.

On the evening of November 16 Dr. Schmidt of Stuttgart spoke on the subject "Is Humanity Going Into Uncertainty?" at the German Museum hall before an audience of about 80 friends and visitors. The strongly-stressed theme of the need for the unity of all mankind under the banner of one religion embracing all previous revelations made a deep impression on the listeners. Several interested persons left their addresses for information about future meetings, and purchased Bahá'í literature.

On the following day the friends met in the Munich Center for study purposes. Dr. Doktoroglu, a visitor from 'Iraq, received special thanks for the warm message he brought, and for his report from London.

The group includes Mrs. Shirley Warde and Miss Cora Oliver (front row center); two part-Mayan Indian guests; and several friends who are studying to make their declaration of membership in the Bahá'í Faith.*
Legal Recognition Given
Faith in Canal Zone

The first Baha’i Local Spiritual Assembly of the Canal Zone, formed in April 1957 with 11 members of the community, has announced with great joy the recognition of the Baha’i Faith on July 15 as a registered religious organization by the Government and Civil Authorities of the Canal Zone. Registering with the Executive Secretary of the Canal Zone is equivalent to incorporation since incorporation is impossible in the Zone.

On July 24 the Canal Zone Government recognized the right of authorized persons of the Baha’i Faith to perform marriages, which we expect to put into action in the near future.

On September 3 the Superintendent of Schools assured the recognition of the Baha’i Holy Days. Also the United States Army of the Canal Zone now recognizes the Baha’i Holy Days, through the efforts of Gene Crans, serving in the Armed Forces, who is a member of the Baha’i community.

In August an open-arm welcome was extended to two spiritually radiant young pioneers, the Misses Alda Rendina and Betty De Noma from Chicago, who immediately opened their homes every evening after work to any and all who are interested in Baha’u’llah’s Message, and there is seldom an evening without at least one inquirer. From the very moment of the ascension of our dearly beloved Guardian the true spirit of Baha’ has become greatly pronounced throughout this entire area, and many people are voluntarily seeking information and greater understanding of the Baha’i Faith.

Southern Rhodesian Conference Plans
"Most Historic Year of Teaching"

From a special letter and report by the Hand of the Cause in Africa, Musa Banani, dated September 1957, we learn of an August 1957 meeting held in Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, to consult on the new phase of collaboration between the Hands of the Cause and the national spiritual assemblies, as outlined in the Guardian’s June 4, 1957, cable. Six Auxiliary Board members were in attendance. The purpose was three-fold: (1) To make this the most historic year of teaching since the beginning of the Formative Age in 1921; (2) To concentrate upon completion of the unfinished main goals of the Ten-Year Crusade, as well as the supplementary goals; (3) To formulate methods of closer collaboration between the Hand of the Cause and the national spiritual assemblies so that actions of the enemies of the Faith on the Continent of Africa could be effectively anticipated and counteracted.

The two local communities of the Salisbury area participated indirectly in the week-long sessions by holding three large fireside meetings, with an average attendance of 50, mostly African contacts. When the deliberations of the Hand of the Cause, National Assembly, and the Auxiliary Board would end each night, they would join the teaching meetings. At one meeting the Revered Hand of the Cause, Musa Banani, members of the Auxiliary Board, and National Assembly members were introduced and spoke words of loving greeting.

In response to a message sent to the Guardian at the close of the conference, the beloved Guardian cabled his deepest, loving appreciation.

In summarizing the event, the report reads:

"Those who departed and those who remained were deeply conscious that next Ridvan must be a shining star of triumph, marking the halfway point in this Ten-Year Crusade, the like of which the history of religion had never before witnessed. It was the spiritual conquest of the entire planet. We were entering the battle arena for the crucial clash. Our Priceless Master, 'Abdu'l-Baha, had given us His 'Divine Plan' of victory. Our Beloved Guardian has marshalled our resources and directed our steps. Now it was up to us. However limited our resources, however inadequate our budding knowledge, however surrounded by difficulties, however suppressed, opposed, persecuted, we must press on either to win the victory or lay down our lives in the battle. We had the words of 'Abdu'l-Baha, Himself, to guide us. When He was asked if His life-long labors and sacrifice had
Church Groups, Civic Organizations

Show Growing Interest in Faith

Reports from various communities show a growing interest on the part of church groups, Sunday schools, civic organizations, and clubs to present a Baha'i program to their members. Some welcome a direct talk on the Baha'i Faith with an outline of its historical background and principles, while others not willing to utilize a Baha'i speaker are glad to present a showing of colored slides on the Holy Land that includes the Baha'i Shrines and Holy Places, or on the Baha'i Temple in Wilmette.

Even one or two Baha'is, not gifted as public speakers, can, with a little effort, acquire and prepare an adequate program of this type that will enable them to tell the Baha'i story to large numbers of people in their community. Not only does this help to give a better and broader understanding of the Baha'i Faith to the general public, but often individuals are contacted who desire to investigate the Teachings personally.

Just being alert to community events opened a door to Baha'i proclamation for Baha'is in Tanana Valley, Alaska. During a showing of Look Magazine slides on various religions at the Fairbanks Unitarian Fellowship, an attending Baha'i, Mable Amidon, made a comment during the discussion period that caused the chairman to say: “You sound as if you were a Baha’i!”

As a result she was asked to present a program at the end of the current series. The program included passages from the scriptures of seven faiths and a talk on the basic fundamentals of the Baha'i Faith. The discussion period which followed was so lively and lengthy that the speaker had no time to show the Baha'i slides, originally planned for the program. Forty persons attending the meeting took generously from the free literature on the Baha'i Faith available to them.

During the past year Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Barham of Silver Spring, Maryland, were able to present 21 showings of colored slides entitled “Palestine, the Holy Land of Many Faiths,” including Jewish students of comparative religion, Negro students of the Bible, neighbors, relatives, and friends at firesides and public gatherings. Recently on January 5 they were presented to an all Negro Sunday School at the Meridian Hill Baptist Church in Washington, D.C., to over 100 children and youth and twenty adult teachers and parents.

Dallas News, Radio Editors Attend Baha'i Press Conference

The Dallas and University Park, Texas, Baha'i communities carried out an unusual and promising event in proclaiming the Faith by reaching the news agencies in the form of a Press Conference.

Representatives of the local newspapers, radio, and television stations were invited to a luncheon and a presentation on “The New Revelation and the Need for It Today” by a Baha'i speaker. This was followed by an explanatory talk by the Chairman of the Dallas Local Spiritual Assembly, giving the reasons for the Conference and reviewing recent press coverage of the Faith.

Each guest was presented with a kit of reading material on the Faith which included a copy of Christ and Baha'u'llah. There was also a discussion period when questions on the Faith were answered.

This Conference was followed within a week with a public meeting, held on the anniversary of the Birth of Baha'u'llah. Colored slides were shown on “Haifa, A Name to Remember.”

Beloved Friends:

In the shadow of the unexpected and soul-shattering sorrow which has so recently stricken the followers of Bahá'u'lláh through the passing of our much-loved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, comes the opening of the first of the momentous Conferences planned by him to take place in the five continents of the globe.

With what joy our hearts looked forward to this day when we should be gathered together to render thanks to Bahá'u'lláh for His blessings during the last five years—which have witnessed the most phenomenal progress in the expansion of His Faith since the Declaration of the Báb, to exalt His station, and to praise the manifold evidences of His mysterious power. How our hearts hastened ahead of us to this spot where we knew the first of these mighty conferences would be convened and with what anticipation we looked forward to receiving the message which we knew our beloved Guardian would send to us on this occasion.

It is with sadness and deep humility that the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land address to you these words. The ways of God have never been the ways of men. One thing we know, however, with profound assurance, and that is that no calamity has ever befallen this Faith that has not presaged a mighty victory. They martyred the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh was raised up. They persecuted and exiled Bahá'u'lláh. 'Abdu'l-Bahá carried the banner of His Faith to the very heart of the western world, to which He journeyed in His old age, and to which He gave some of the fairest fruits of His mind. After the ascension of the beloved Master, the believers, bereft of their Father and their Refuge, found in Shoghi Effendi a mighty tree beneath whose boughs they took refuge, and which protected them for thirty-six years.

The Signal of a Far Greater Expansion

At this turning-point in history, which the beloved Guardian repeatedly pointed out to us would be fraught with calamity, we have received a blow the nature of which we never anticipated. We have every right to believe, however, that even such a blow as this will be the signal for a far greater expansion of our glorious Faith, and that the sacrifice of his precious life has endowed the Cause of God with a new strength to face the future, to surmount all tests, to lay more quickly and firmly than ever before the foundations of the Kingdom of Heaven on earth, that Kingdom prophesied since the days of Adam, and promised to men by their Heavenly Father.

Who can doubt that Shoghi Effendi will be viewed by posterity as the true conqueror of Africa? Whoever arose to serve that continent, whatever sign of action he beheld on the part of individual, assembly, or community, attracted his glance and received a burning intensity of interest, an outpouring of encouragement and assistance characteristic of the brilliant mind and wonderful nature with which Bahá'u'lláh had endowed him. With what intense pride he viewed the achievements of the last seven years, beginning with the African work inaugurated by the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles—and continued in collaboration with the American, Persian, Indian, and Iráqi National Assemblies, who were allotted specific tasks in this vast continent and who worked for its spiritual conquest in cooperation with the National Spiritual Assembly of Egypt and Sudan, the first National body established on this continent in 1924 and representing territories opened to the Faith during the lifetime of Bahá'u'lláh Himself. With what love he watched over its spiritual progress, blessing it even before the inception of the World Crusade through the appointment of a Hand of the Cause, an institution he recently reinstalled and of whom has the distinction of being the second Negro Hand in Bahá'í history. With what eagerness he followed the movement of the devoted and self-sacrificing pioneers, whether of African, American, Asian, or European origin, as they spread out—torchbearers of the New Day—into every territory of a continent so long stigmatized as the "dark continent," and brought the illumination of this glorious Faith to its peoples. With what joy he announced to the Bahá'í world on various occasions the progress on the African front, the formation of four new regional national assemblies, one of which was the successor to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Egypt and the Sudan, and of no less than one hundred and fifty spiritual assemblies; the introduction of the Faith into more than two hundred tribes, the translation of its literature into more than seventy languages, the purchase of numerous Hazíratul-Quds and endowments both national and local; the swelling of the number of believers to over four thousand, three-fourths of whom are Africans; and the increase in the number of localities where Bahá'ís reside to over six hundred.

Fourth Phase of the World Crusade

The holding of this historic Conference signalizes the opening of the fourth phase of the World Crusade, a phase which the beloved Guardian himself stated must be characterized by an unprecedented expansion in the vital process of individual conversion and by the construction of three Mother Temples, one in Africa, one in Europe, and one in Australia. From the beginning of the Ten-Year Crusade—indeed it would be more correct to say from the very beginning of his ministry—the Guardian repeatedly emphasized to the believers of east and west the paramount importance of the teaching work, and pointed out to us that the purpose for which we have so laboriously erected our administrative institutions was primarily to enable us to carry the Message of Bahá'u'lláh to the peoples of the world and redeem their hearts through His grace.

In Shoghi Effendi's own messages written last year to the African regional assemblies he strongly emphasized that their primary function and duty was to enroll in ever greater numbers the African peoples under the Banner of Bahá'u'lláh. Such was the importance he attached to the teaching work that in his last Message to the Bahá'í world he stated, that, although the additional auxiliary boards' specific duty was to watch over the security of the Faith, the old auxiliary boards must be exclusively concerned in assisting in the prosecution of the Ten-Year Plan. He urged the regional assemblies in Africa to economize in matters concerning the Administration, in order that their limited resources, as much as possible, could be expended on ways and means of converting the African peoples, so dear to his heart, to the Faith. He pointed out to them that once they had made sure the individual had accepted the station of Bahá'u'lláh as that of the Manifestation of God for this Day, with the implications that this implies, petty obstacles should not be placed in his path or details insisted upon, but rather through a process of loving education after acceptance the new believer should be deepened in his knowledge and understanding of the Teachings. It was his dearest hope that through the concerted efforts of the Hands of the Faith, the regional assemblies, the auxiliary boards, the pioneers, and all the Bahá'ís, an immense flow of new recruits would swell the ranks of the believers and, rising like a torrent, pour itself out in the channels of new Assemblies and communities throughout the territories of this vast continent.

Urged to Surpass Tasks of Ten-Year Plan

So encouraged was the beloved Guardian by the spectacular victories won in so short a time and the evidences of the indomitable enthusiasm of the believers laboring in this field, that he urged them to surpass the specific tasks of the Ten-Year Plan by adding supplementary ones, such as local Hazíratul-Quds and endowments, other languages spoken on this continent, and further undertakings which would redound to the glory of the Faith. He was also anxious that the prizes won at the cost of so much effort should be maintained, and laid particular emphasis on the need for strengthening the work in the newly formed State of Ghana and of consolidating the work in Liberia, the Belgian Congo, Ruanda Urundi, French Equatorial Africa, and Comoro; he strongly emphasized the necessity of reopening Rio d'Oro and the Spanish Sahara; he made strong appeals for more African teachers to circulate amongst the various nations of Africa and carry the Message to their own people, and repeatedly called attention to the need for pioneers to go out into new districts within the territories already opened to the Faith.

Mansion of Bahá'u'lláh at Bahji, ʻAkká, Israel, where the Hands of the Cause of God issued their proclamation to the Bahá'í world community on November 25, 1957, following the passing of Shoghi Effendi, beloved Guardian of the Faith.
Bahá'u'lláh and a fragment of plaster from the room of the Báb in the fortress of Mákú where He was imprisoned. He repeatedly emphasized the tremendous spiritual importance of this Temple, which will be a mighty, silent teacher of the Faith and a haven of refuge spiritually to the believers. To the friends attending this Conference the Guardian has given in his last message the privilege of not only lending a powerful impetus to the completion of this glorious enterprise but also to that of the Mother Temples to be built in the European and Australian continents.

To these many soul-stirring bounties must be added that of viewing the portrait of Bahá'u'lláh and a lock of His precious hair sent at the express wish of our beloved Guardian to grace this Conference, both of which will be entrusted for safekeeping to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Central and East Africa.

A Great Outpouring of Spirit

Now is the time for the believers to demonstrate the firmness of their faith and the ardor that will carry them through every test to the victories beyond. A great outpouring of spirit has been foreshadowed in the beloved Guardian's Message calling these Conferences, and it is for each and every one of us to receive from that outpouring his own allotted portion. Should we all arise with selfless, united, and consecrated effort, should we fix our gaze unwaveringly on the goals the Guardian set us, and resolve to demonstrate the quality of our faith in heroic acts comparable to those of the Dawn-breakers, the unfailing mercy of the Blessed Beauty will undoubtedly sustain and support us and enable us to perform such deeds as will cause all men to wonder and bow down in awe and admiration before the Name of Bahá'u'lláh. Then will the friends in Africa be enabled to attain the bounties promised to them and contribute their share to the erection of the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh about which the Guardian wrote in one of his last messages to an African National Assembly:

“Whatever may tend to accelerate the onward march, the expansion and consolidation of the institutions of this Order, must be eagerly seized upon, and utilized to the utmost, for the attainment of this noble purpose. Whether or not constituting a specific objective of the Ten-Year or Seven-Year Plan, any measure or enterprise designed to reinforce the foundations of these institutions or to noise abroad their fame, or to extend the sphere of their beneficent influence, must be adopted and fearlessly embarked upon, however great the material sacrifices involved, however prolonged and arduous the effort required.

“The splendid exertions of the past must, in the face of the challenge now confronting these communities, be redoubled. The self-same consecration distinguishing the rank and file of the believers, as well as those so ably representing them—nay a still nobler standard of wholehearted dedication to the pressing and manifold requirements of God's infant Faith, now struggling to emerge from obscurity and vindicate its purpose—must be evinced, if the tasks ahead are to be adequately fulfilled. All must participate in this meritorious and collective endeavor, whatever there age, of either sex, and however difficult the circumstances with which they are surrounded.

“They cannot but feel confident, that, if they persevere along the path they have chosen to tread, the Author of the Divine Plan, Whose Mandate they are executing, will guide and succor them in their historic enterprise, and the Concourse on high will acclaim their victories and sustain their labors, and the Founder of the Faith Himself will graciously assist them and abundantly reward them both in this world and in the next.”

The Prayers of Bahá'u'lláh

by Ruhiyyih Khanum

A study of the Creative Word which revives the soul of a withered world

NOT THE least of the treasures which Bahá'u'lláh has given to the world is the wealth of His prayers and meditations. He not only revealed them for specific purposes, such as the Daily Prayers, the prayers for Healing, for the Fast, for the Dead, and so on, but in them He revealed a great deal of Himself to us. At moments it is as if, in some verse or line, we are admitted into His Own heart, with all its turbulent emotions, or catch a glimpse of the workings of a mind as great and deep as an ocean, which we can never fathom, but which never ceases to enrapture and astonish us.

If one could be so presumptuous as to try and comment on a subject so vast and which, ultimately, is far beyond the capacity of any merely mortal mind to analyse or classify, one might say that one of His masterpieces is the long prayer for the Nineteen Day Fast. I do not know if He revealed it at dawn, but He had, evidently, a deep association with that hour of the day when the life of the world is re-poured into it. How could He not have? Was He not the Hermit of Sar-Galu, where he spent many months in a lonely stone hut perched on a hilltop; the sunrise must have often found Him waiting and watching for its coming, His voice rising and falling in the melodious chants of His supplications and compositions. At how many dawns He must have heard the birds of the wilderness wake and cry out when the first rays of the sun flowed over the horizon and witnessed in all its splendor the coming alive of creation after the night.

In this prayer it is as if the worshipper approaches the sun while the sun is approaching its daybreak. When one remembers that the sun, the lifegiver of the earth, has ever been associated with the God-Power, and that Bahá'u'lláh has always used it in His metaphors to symbolize the Prophet, the prayer takes on a mystical significance that delights and inspires the soul. Turning to the budding day He opens His supplications-

"I beseech Thee, O my God, by Thy mighty Sign (the Prophet), and by the revelation of Thy grace amongst men, to cast me not away from the gate of the city of Thy presence, and to disappoint not the hopes I have set on the manifestations of Thy grace amidst Thy creatures." Who has not, in order to better visualize himself in relation to the Kingdom of God, seen his own soul as a wanderer, weary and hopeful, standing at the Gates of the Heavenly City and longing for admittance? The worshipper gazes at the brightening sky in the east and waits, expectant of the mercy of God. He hears the "most sweet Voice" and supposes that by the "most exalted Word" he may draw ever nearer the threshold of God's door and enter under the shadow of the canopy of His bounty—a canopy which is already spreading itself, in mighty symbolic form, over the world in crimson, gold and gray clouds.

The day waxes; the oncoming sun, in the prayer of Bahá'u'lláh, becomes the face of God Himself to which He turns, addressing words of infinite sweetness and yearning: "I beseech Thee, O my God, by the splendor of Thy luminous brow and the brightness of the light of Thy countenance, which shineth from the all-highest horizon, to attract me by the fragrance of Thy rainbow, and make me drink of the choice wine of Thine utterance."

The soft winds of dawn, which must have often played over His face and stirred His black locks against His cheek, may have given rise to this beautiful phrase in His prayer: "I beseech Thee, O my God, by Thy hair which moveth across Thy face, even as Thy most exalted pen moveth across the pages of Thy Tablets, shedding the musk of hidden meanings over the kingdom of Thy creation, so to raise me up to serve Thee Cause that I shall not fall back, nor be hindered by the suggestions of them who have cavilled at Thy signs and turned away from Thy face." How deep, how poetical, how sincere are His words! The playing of the strands of hair recalls to Him the fine tracing of the Persian script, revealing words from God that shed a divine fragrance in the lives of men. But that is not all. In His communion all the love and loyalty of His heart is roused, He supplicates to be made of the faithful, whom naught shall turn aside from the Path that leads them to their Lord.

The sun has risen, as if in answer to the cry of the worshipper to "enable me to gaze on the Day-Star of Thy Beauty..." And as he continues his prayer it seems as if all nature were moving in harmony with it: "I beseech Thee, O my God, by the Tabernacle of Thy majesty on the loftiest summits, and the Canopy of Thy Revelation on the highest hills, to graciously aid me. to do what Thy will hath desired and Thy purpose hath manifested.” North and south the glory spreads, a faint echo of that celestial beauty visible to the eye of Bahá'u'lláh and which He says: “shineth forth above the horizon of eternity.” So deeply does it penetrate the heart that it evokes the desire to “die to all that I possess and live to whatsoever be­longeth unto Thee.” The soul is moved; all earthly things pale before the vision which, as symbolized in the sunrise, it beholds in the inner world; God, the “Well-Beloved” seems to have drawn very near.

The winds flit over the land; some tree calls to the Prophet’s mind, as it shivers and stirs, the Tree of Himself that over-shadows all mankind: “I beseech Thee, O my God, by the rustling of the Divine Lote-Tree and the murmur of the breezes of Thine utterance in the kingdom of Thy names, to remove me far from whatsoever Thy will hath desired me: I possess and live to whatso­ever be­longeth unto Thee.” The soul is moved; all earthly things pale before the vision which, as symbolized in the sunrise, it beholds in the inner world; God, the “Well-Beloved” seems to have drawn very near.

This majestic prayer is composed of fourteen verses, each opening with the words “I beseech Thee . . .” and closing with the same refrain: “Thou seest me, O my God, holding to Thy Name, the Most Holy, the Most Luminous, the Most Mighty, the Most Great, the Most exalted, the Most Glorious, and clinging to the hem of the robe to which have clung all in this world and in the world to come.” The rhythmic em­phasis on the thoughts contained in these words is not only very power­ful but very artistic—if one may borrow the term for lack of a better one—and the sense that all creatures living, and those gone before into the invisible realms of God, are clinging to the skirt of His mercy, dependent on Him and Him alone, exerts a pro­found influence on one’s mind, par­ticularly so when taken in conjunc­tion with what one beholds at this hour of the day: The sky kindling with light, the brush of the wind gently over the face of nature; the whole world waking to the tasks of living on all sides; all things depend­ent on God; they always have and they always will be. This is a little of what this long prayer conveys to those who partake of it.

Unique Prayer for Dead

Another unique prayer of Bahá'u'lláh’s is His congregational prayer for the Dead. His Revelation throughout has aimed at doing away with every form of ritual; He has abol­ished priesthood; forbidden cer­emonials, in the sense of church services with a set form; reduced the conduct of marriages to a naked sim­plicity, with a minimum uniform rite required of those concerned. The one exception to this general policy is the Prayer for the Dead, portions of which are repeated while all present are standing. Prayers such as this and the one for the Fast, can never be properly appreciated by merely reading them. They are liv­ing experiences. The difference is as great as that between looking at a brook when you are not thirsty, and drinking from it when you are. If you lose some one you love and then read aloud these glorious words, you come to know what “living waters” are:

“This is Thy servant . . . who hath believed in Thee . . . deal with him, O Thou Who forgivest the sins of men and concealst their faults, as besemeth the heaven of Thy bounty and the ocean of Thy grace. Grant him admission within the precincts of Thy transcendent mercy that was before the foundation of earth and heaven...” Simple words, words which follow our loved one out into the spaces where we may not follow. But the profound experience of this prayer is in the refrain, each sentence of which is repeated 19 times. “We all, verily, worship God. We all, verily, bow down before God. We all, verily, are devoted unto God. We all, verily, give praise unto God. We all, verily, yield thanks unto God. We all, verily, are patient in God.”

The very strength of the prayer is in the repetition. It is so easy to say just once, “We... bow down before God” or “We yield thanks unto God” or “We are patient in God”; the words slip off our minds swiftly and leave them much as before. But when we say these things over and over, they sink very deep, they go down into the puzzled, the rebellious, the grief-stricken or rebellious, the grief-stricken or...
Thou Who art my Origin and my Highest Wish, and unto the essence of the fragrance of Thy beauty, which Thou wilt manifest, cause me to return, O Thou Who art my God!

"Potent art Thou to do what pleaseth Thee. Thou art, verily, the Most Exalted, the All-Glorious, the All-Highest."

At times Bahá'u'lláh puts words into the mouth of the worshipper according to his need: He writes a supplication for a child, for one who is ill, one who is sad, one who is pregnant, one who is a sinner, one who pours forth his heart to God—capturing the whole gamut of human emotions in His various communions. But at times it is obvious the prayer is His own. We read too, but we cannot be the speaker, our mortal feet cannot tread the path that lay between His soul—the soul of the Prophet Himself—and the God Who sent Him here among men to labor and suffer for them. "I know not," He declares, "what the water is with which Thou hast created me, or what the fire Thou hast kindled within me, or the clay wherewith Thou hast kneaded me. The restlessness of every ocean hath been stillled, but not the restlessness of this Ocean which moveth at the bidding of the words of Thy will. The flame of every fire hath been extinguished, except the Flame which the hands of Thine omnipotence have kindled, and whose radiance Thou hast, by the power of Thy name, shed abroad before all that are in Thy heaven and that are on Thy earth. As the tribulations deepen, it waxeth hotter and hotter." The Holy fire that burned within His being is not for us, frail creatures that we are, to comprehend. We can only gaze into its heart and marvel at its shifting hues and beauty, much as we marvel at the flames that leap and dance on our own hearth fires, though we may not approach or touch them.

Bahá'u'lláh exalts the being and nature of God, in His addresses to Him, as no other Prophet ever has. He defines His relation to Him; He gives us glimpses of the forces surging within His soul; He lays bare the emotions that stir within His turbulent breast. In words of honey He cries out: "Thou holdest, O My God, how every bone in my body soundeth like a pipe with the music of Thine inspiration ..." A love far beyond our ken burns in His heart for the One God who sent Him down amongst men: "Thou seest, O Thou Who art my All-Glorious beloved, the restless waves that surge within the ocean of my heart in my love for Thee ..." "Thou art, verily, the Lord of Bahá and the Beloved of his heart, and the Object of His desire, and the Inspire of His tongue, and the Source of His Soul." "Lauded by Thy name, O Thou Who art my God and throbrest within my heart!" "O would that they who serve Thee could taste what I have tasted of the sweetness of Thy love!" How keenly His soul thrilled with appreciation for the aid that poured into His inmost being from the Invisible Source: "Were I to render thanks unto Thee for the whole continuance of Thy kingdom and the duration of the heaven of Thine omnipotence, I would still have failed to repay Thy manifold bestowals." How ardent is His gratitude to His Lord for raising Him up to serve His fellowmen: "How can I thank Thee for having singled me out and chosen me above all Thy servants to reveal Thee, at a time when all have turned away from Thy beauty!

His Readiness for Trials

Ever and again He confesses His readiness, nay, His eagerness, to bear every trial and hardship for the sake of shedding the light of God upon this darkened world, and in order to demonstrate the greatness of the love He feels for His Creator: "I yield Thee thanks for that Thou hast made me the target of diverse trials and manifold trials in order that Thy servants may be en­due with new life and all Thy crea­tures may be quickened." "I yield Thee thanks, O my God, for that Thou hast offered me up as a sacri­fice in Thy path ... and singled me out for all manner of tribulation for the regeneration of Thy people." "I swear by Thy glory! I have accepted to be tried by manifold adversities for no purpose except to regenerate all that are in Thy heaven and on Thy earth." "How sweet is the thought of Thee in times of adversity and trial, and how delightful to glorify Thee when compassed about by the fierce winds of Thy decree."

Every hair of my head proclaims: "But for the adversities that befall me in Thy path how could I ever taste the divine sweetness of Thy tenderness and love?"

With what passion and majesty He testifies to the unquenchable power and purpose of His Lord—the Lord Whom He called His "Fire" and His "Light"—Which burned within His breast: "Were all that are in the heavens and all that are on the earth to unite and seek to hinder me from remembering Thee and from celebrating Thy praise, they would assuredly ... fall ... And were all the infidels to slay me, my blood would ... lift up its voice and proclaim: 'There is no God but Thee, O Thou Who art all my heart's desire!' And were I to be cast into fire, my ashes would—I swear by Thy glory—declare: 'The Youth hath, verily, attained that for which he had besought His Lord, the All-Glorious, the Omniscient.'"

Reading such testimonials that spring—in moments of who knows what exaltation—from the heart of the Prophet, we cannot but marvel at the mighty and strange bond that binds such a Being to the Source of all power. It is as if an invisible umbilical cord tied Him to His Crea­tor, all His life, His motivations, His inspiration, His very words, flowed down this divine channel, as all the life, blood, and food of the babe flows in through that one bond it has with its mother. He throbbed in this mor­tal vibrations of a celestial world, He set all things pulsating with Him, whether they knew it or not, and drew them up and closer to the throne of God. One of His most mov­ing and sublime rhapsodies is in­cluded in a meditation in which He testifies to the power of the praise which He pours out to God, to transform and influence the hearts of others: "I yield Thee such thanks," He declares, "as can direct the steps of the wayward towards the splen­dors of the morning light of Thy guidance ... I yield Thee such thanks as can cause the sick to draw nigh unto the waters of Thy healing, and can help those who are far from Thee to approach the living fountain of Thy presence ... I yield Thee such thanks as can stir all things to exult Thee ... and can unloose the tongues of all beings to ... magnify Thy beauty . . . I yield Thee such thanks as can make the corrupt tree to bring forth good fruit . . . and revive the bodies of all beings with the gentle winds of Thy transcendent grace . . . I yield Thee such thanks as can cause Thee to forgive all sins and trespasses, and to fulfill the needs of the peoples of all religions, and to waft the fragrances of pardon over the entire creation . . . I yield Thee such thanks as can satisfy the wants of all such as seek Thee, and realize the aims of them that have recognized Thee. I yield Thee such thanks as can blot out from the hearts of men all suggestions of limitations . . .

Poetic and stirring as these words are, we need not assume them to be merely the effusions of an exalted and over-filled heart. Bahá’u’lláh was never idle in His words. If He tells us that enshrined in the thanks He poured forth to His God is a power that can blot out every limitation from the hearts of men, it is so. The trouble is with us. How many Seers and Prophets, how many scientists and pioneers, have brought men tidings of truths and powers they knew not of and offered them to their generation, only to be spat upon, laughed to scorn, killed or ignored? And in the end a more enlightened people would take the key and open the door and find the wonders that the incredulous disbelieved, to be all true, ready at hand, waiting to be used for their good. The Prophets of God are intent on giving us both the good of this world and the one awaiting us after death, but most of the time we will not have it. We blind and perverse, prefer our own ways! Did not Christ say: “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, . . . how often would I have gathered Thy children together, even as a hen gathered her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” It is not a new story. Every Divine Manifestation has placed jewels in the hand of man, only to see them flung aside for some foolish toy of his choosing. Yet each Prophet has assured us that God’s pity knows no bounds. “Thou art, in truth,” states Bahá’u’lláh in one of His prayers, “He Whose mercy hath encompassed all the worlds, and Whose grace hath embraced all who dwell on earth and in heaven. Who is there who hath cried after Thee, and whose prayer hath remained unanswered?

Where is he to be found who hath reached forth towards Thee, and whom Thou hast failed to approach? Who is he who can claim to have fixed his gaze upon Thee, and toward whom the eye of Thy loving-kindness hath not been directed? I hear witness that Thou hadst turned toward Thy servants ere they had turned toward Thee, and hadst remembered them ere they had remembered Thee.”

New Zealand Enlarges Scope of Maori Teaching Work

“The emergence of this independent Bahá’í community . . . must be regarded as a highly significant development in the rise and establishment of the Bahá’í Faith in the Pacific area . . . It should lend an unprecedented impetus to the conversion of the Maoris, and insure their active participation in the conduct of the Bahá’í administrative institutions.”

These were the words of Shoghi Effendi in his message to the National Convention in Auckland, New Zealand, 1957, on the occasion of the formation of the New Zealand National Spiritual Assembly. They present one more affirmation of that central core of the Bahá’í Faith—the oneness of mankind. Close to the heart of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and therefore to the desire of the beloved Guardian in his charting of the World Crusade, are the aboriginal people of every land.

In accordance with the Guardian’s wishes, the Maori Teaching Committee of New Zealand has been actively engaged in making friends among the Maoris and in preparing literature, tapes, and recordings on the Bahá’í teachings in their language. Recently Mrs. Shirley Charters, of the Committee, gave the Bahá’í message at Manukorihi Pa, Waitara, to an important gathering of Maori elders, many of whom had come from as far as Te Kuiti, a hundred miles away. She also spoke to the Maoris at Parahaka Pa, Waitara, where Te Whiti, the great Maori leader, lived. Mrs. Brightwell, secretary of the Committee, and Bill Washington have done teaching work in the district also. The New Zealand Bahá’í Summer School held in December and January in New Plymouth was addressed by a charming Maori lady of high birth, Mrs. Marjorie Pepe Rau, on the subject of Te Whiti and his teachings.

The Maoris have a word in their own language which means unity. It is kohakahitanga. It is a remnant of the teachings of Te Whiti, the great leader who lived from 1817 to 1907, whose life is still remembered and revered by many Maori people. He taught simple basic truths based on fundamentals, which he gleaned largely from Christian teachings, in such a way that it may be said he prepared the way for the Bahá’í Faith. Living in peace with all men was one of his strong principles and so keenly believed that even during the period of strife between the Maoris and Europeans over the question of land, he would not permit his people to fight, but only to maintain passive resistance.

Once the Maoris lived only in their “Pas.” Originally a “Pa” was a fortress, now used as a community village, where all important functions take place at a meeting house. Today many Maoris live in the cities and are educated in the ways of Western culture. And kotahitanga, or unity, is perhaps remembered only as a longing in the heart from out of the past.

Visit of Keith Ransom-Kehler

Over twenty years ago Keith Ransom-Kehler, first American martyr and named by Shoghi Effendi as a Hand of the Cause, made a visit to the Maoris of New Zealand on one of her world teaching tours. She was received graciously by the chief of the Arawa tribe of Maoris, and permitted to give the Bahá’í message to his people. Later she was invited to attend a Maori banquet. Her interesting description of these experiences can be read in The Bahá’í World, Vol. V.

No one in the family of man is forgotten in Bahá’u’lláh’s Divine Plan. Bá’há’í of the world may look forward soon to the time when increasing numbers of the Maori people will enter into their worldwide fellowship, and to the “active participation” in Bahá’í institutions the beloved Guardian longed to see. (See photograph on page 11)
At the International Conference held in Kampala in 1953 it was announced that the Guardian required land to be bought for the eventual building of a Temple in Africa. He gave no indication at that time when this might be built. In April 1954, he sent a gift of a thousand pounds for the purchase of land, and six acres were bought on Kibuliriza Hill.

As a result of the persecution of the Persian Bahá’ís in 1955, when it became apparent that it would be unwise, if not impossible, for them to embark upon the building of their Temple, he announced that plans for the construction of the Mother Temple of Africa should be initiated, thus offsetting the setbacks suffered by the friends in the Cradle of the Faith and consoling their hearts. The National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles, under whose jurisdiction this territory came at that time, was instructed by the beloved Guardian to arrange for the preparation of plans for the Kampala Temple, which were submitted for his approval towards the end of 1955. These were rejected.

In early 1956, a gift of $1,000 was received from Hand of the Cause Mrs. Amelia Collins for the purchase of Endowment Land. With this money thirteen acres of land were bought on a hill about three miles outside Kampala—Kikaya Hill. This land was not on the crest of the hill, but was considered a better site than the land on Kibuliriza, which had no access road. Later it was learned that intensive development was scheduled for the Kibuliriza area. On the other hand, Kikaya Hill lies well outside the town and is surrounded, at the moment, by undeveloped land. Thus, the Guardian’s approval for the building of the Temple on Kikaya Hill and not Kibuliriza Hill was sought and obtained.

It was thought by the National Assembly that the Kikaya site would be considerably improved by the purchase of more land nearer the crest of the hill. The owner was found, who exchanged five acres for three acres of the land on Kibuliriza, and sold a half an acre for cash. This transaction was completed in September 1956.

In the meantime, the beloved Guardian had sent to Kampala a design for the Temple by Hand of the Cause Charles Mason Remey. This was placed in the hands of the architect chosen by the newly appointed National Assembly of Central and East Africa. On looking further at the plan of the site, it was found that a triangular plot jutted into the center of the Bahá’í land. Negotiations were initiated for the purchase of one acre of this plot to eliminate the angle of the triangle immediately adjoining our land in order to safeguard the precincts of the Temple if development in the area commenced. Agreement was finally reached and the impor-
Call Upon Believers to Insure Success of Intercontinental Conferences

"I call upon the entire body of the believers . . . to bestir themselves . . . to meet the challenge, and seize the opportunities, of this auspicious hour, and insure, through a dazzling display of the qualities which must distinguish a worthy stewardship of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, the total resounding success of these Conferences, dedicated to the glorification of His Name, and expressly convened for the purpose of accelerating the march of the institutions of His world-redeeming Order, and of hastening the establishment of His kingdom in the hearts of men."

This is the last sentence of the last communication addressed by our beloved Guardian to the Bahá'ís of the world less than one month prior to his ascension.

The first of these historic gatherings called for by Shoghi Effendi in his last message has already taken place. While the official report is not yet available, it has been learned that approximately 900 believers were present from 38 countries, and that half of them were Africans representing 26 different tribes—a record that must have brought joy to our departed Guardian! Surely the believers in all the other continents will attend in equally great numbers the four remaining Conferences to be held respectively in Sydney, Chicago, Frankfort, and Djakarta.

The five-fold purposes of these Conferences, as defined by Shoghi Effendi, are:
1. To offer humble Thanksgiving to the Divine Author of our Faith who has graciously enabled His followers to prosecute uninteruptedly the Ten-Year Plan;
2. To review and celebrate the signal victories won so rapidly in the course of the world-encircling Crusade;
3. To deliberate on ways and means that will insure its triumphant consummation;
4. To lend a powerful impetus the world over to the vital process of individual conversion;
5. To hasten the construction and completion of the three Mother Temples in Europe, Africa, and Australia.

Among the sacred privileges and blessings to be bestowed upon the believers attending the Intercontinental Conference in Chicago will be the viewing of the portraits of Bahá'u'lláh and of the Báb, which will be exhibited by Dr. Ugo Giachery, Hand of the Cause of God, attending the Conference as the Guardian’s appointed representative. This particular sacred occasion will be part of the special program of devotion and thanksgiving in the Auditorium of the Bahá'í House of Worship on the first afternoon of the Conference, Friday, May 2.

The remaining seven sessions will be held in Chicago, as announced in the January Bahá'í News.

The message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land to the Chicago Conference will be presented by Dr. Giachery. Other Hands of the Cause who will be present will also speak from time to time.

Official representatives of the national and regional spiritual assemblies in the Western Hemisphere will review the "signal victories" won in their areas since the opening of the World Crusade, and there will be consultation on pioneer needs, how to accelerate individual conversion, and on ways and means for early and complete achievement of the remaining goals, including the construction of the three Mother Temples.

Further details of the program will be announced in the April issue of Bahá'í News. It is hoped that every Bahá'í in the Western Hemisphere will make a supreme effort to attend the Chicago Conference and to join with his fellow-believers from all parts of the world in "offering humble thanksgiving to the Divine Author of our Faith" and to our departed Guardian for the victories achieved under his guidance "for the execution of the Grand Design conceived by Abdu'l-Bahá" for the salvation of mankind.

U. S. National Convention Housing Arrangements Listed

The usual services for delegates and visitors to the Annual Bahá'í National Convention will again be offered by the Convention Arrangements Committee and others who have volunteered to assist.

Adequate supervision has been arranged for those children who are old enough to take care of themselves, but the Committee cannot assume any responsibility for children in arms or those requiring individual attention.

Luncheons and dinners will be available in Foundation Hall at reasonable prices, as in the past.

It seems necessary to again point out that the Wilmette and Evanston homes offering rooms for visiting Bahá'ís do so only as a courtesy to the Bahá'ís. Therefore, each Bahá'í making a reservation in a private home must see that any agreement as to time of arrival, the number in the party, and the price must be fully carried out.

Any last-minute necessary changes must be discussed with the Housing Committee, which can usually work them out satisfactorily.

The friends who have made their own arrangements directly with Wilmette and Evanston residents are requested to report them to the Housing Committee so that there will be no overlapping or duplica-

Conference Reservations Must Be Made Separately

It should be noted that the Convention Housing Committee will handle reservations for the Convention period only. All reservations for the Intercontinental Conference to be held in Chicago must be made by the individual believer. It may help to know that only one afternoon session of the Intercontinental Conference will be held in the Temple.

—NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
The Oneness of Religion Is Proclaimed Internationally
With Many Public Observances of World Religion Day

Growing international recognition of World Religion Day, instituted by the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly in 1950 to proclaim the fundamental oneness of religion, was a feature of this year's observance held on January 19, 1958.

Monrovia, Liberia; Belfast, North Ireland; Halifax, Nova Scotia; and Nassua, Bahamas; as well as Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and Canada signified their intention of holding public observances by ordering material from the U.S. Baha'i Press Service that included the 14 by 17-inch World Religion Day poster, and a printed statement setting forth the purposes of this event and relevant passages from the public addresses of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in America.

In Belgium, the Brussels community was host to a successful World Religion Day celebration at the Haziratu'l-Quds. About 40 persons attended, including friends from Charleroi, Liège, and Ostend. Louis Henuzet, member of the European Auxiliary Board for Teaching, gave a stimulating talk on "To Build a Better World Through Spiritual Unity." A lively question period followed, with inquiries on the proofs of the Prophets and the goal of human existence.

A Triumph of Racial Unity at Little Rock
To the world in general Little Rock, Ark., has come to represent the epitome of racial prejudice; yet in the heart of this city Bahá'ís have made an outstanding achievement that the world will also one day come to recognize. Here, on World Religion Day, an audience of almost one hundred persons, half white and half Negro, gathered to attend a panel discussion on "Which to Choose—Religion or Science, Peace or Sputnik?"

Rev. Charles Ford, Hot Springs, Ark., Presbyterian minister, was the moderator. Panelists included Elder Roy B. Thurmon of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, Dr. Paul W. Reagan of the Society of Friends, and Eldon Dennis, representing the Bahá'í Faith. The meeting was held in the B'nai Israel Educational Building in Little Rock.

In the audience was Rev. and Mrs. Dunbar H. Ogden, Jr. Rev. Ogden is pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, and President of the Interracial Ministerial Alliance, and he was called upon to give the closing prayer. Music for the observance was presented by the A. M. and N. College Choir of Pine Bluff, a Negro college.

Porto Alegre's New Assembly Attracts 250
Porto Alegre, Brazil, is a young, rather small community, having incorporated their first local assembly this year. But this did not deter them from making wide proclamation of the Faith through World Religion Day publicity. They report: "For this World Religion Day Bahá'u'lláh gave us a very special impulse and we reached the ears and eyes of the public in every possible way. Besides the show window which attracted a constant crowd in this metropolis in the south of Brazil, placed in the best spot on the most important street, the most read newspapers published nice articles ... We got an invitation to speak during fifteen minutes at the local broadcast, and finally delivered a public conference attended by about 250 persons ... It should be difficult to find an educated person who never saw or heard the name Bahá'í in this city." All of this was generated through the efforts of eleven adult believers.

Variety of Programs Given in U.S.
Committees in the United States reporting their pro-

World Religion Day display in the window of the Lancaster, Pa., Free Public Library. It was scheduled for one week preceding World Religion Day, but was held over for a second week because of the interest shown.
grams for World Religion Day favored the presentation of a single speaker, either Bahá'í or non-Bahá'í, on the general theme of the oneness of religion. However, some communities planned panel discussions with participants representing various religious faiths, graphic demonstrations of Progressive Revelation, amity dinners, or the more informal fireside type of gathering.

Giving a demonstration of Progressive Revelation through speakers of other religions proved to be an excellent means of conveying the meaning of World Religion Day. In St. Louis, Mo., the Hindu, Moslem, Buddhist, Judaic, Christian, and Bahá'í Faiths were represented. Kansas City, Mo., held their meeting in Fellowship House, and attracted 55 people, resulting in excellent publicity in four newspapers. The Bahá'í message was given by the children's Sunday School class, with quotations from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Rochester, New York, attracted 76 to their meeting, more than two-thirds of which were non-Bahá'ís. This program also featured speakers from various world religions, including Hinduism, Buddhism, Judaism, Islam, Christianity, and the Bahá'í Faith.

A chart illustrating Progressive Revelation was used by the Sioux Falls, S. Dak., community to explain this subject. It was supplemented by further explanations and blackboard drawings. The Sioux Falls Local Spiritual Assembly termed this meeting one of their best in recent years.

Impressive Interracial Meeting of Greensboro

"To find a Southern fundamentalist Christian who really understands the Bible and its symbolism is as rare as finding a diamond in a coal mine," wrote F. Kimball Kinney of the Greensboro, N. Car., Local Spiritual Assembly. This man, a fine fundamentalist minister who professed a profound sympathy for the Bahá'í Faith, and who realizes the sad plight of Christianity, was the lone non-Bahá'í white attendant at the Greensboro World Religion Day observance, whose audience numbered 22 non-Bahá'ís and 9 Bahá'ís.

The fact that all the others except this man were Negroes delighted the Greensboro community, since the goal of their teaching work, one of the last expressed wishes of the Guardian, is to confirm the Negro of the Southland.

The Greensboro Assembly ascribes this most successful World Religion Day observance to excellent publicity. Eye-catching posters were displayed in key areas throughout the city. The local television station transmitted six announcements, with a picture of the Bahá'í House of Worship as the video picture. All four radio stations cooperated throughout the week preceding the meeting, and all three newspapers also were cooperative. The Greensboro Record gave front page space to the World Religion Day publicity the day before the meeting, with top billing in the Religion Editor's column.

Lancaster's First Public Meeting

The first public Bahá'í meeting ever to be held in Lancaster, Pa., was in observance of World Religion Day. Hormoz Sabet spoke to an audience of about 40 persons on "The Oneness of Religion." The response of the audience following the talk, and the unusual silence that prevailed during its delivery, indicated a receptiveness that was very encouraging to the Lancaster Bahá'ís.

Six Lancaster newspapers publicized the meeting, and one published a photograph of the Bahá'í House of Worship. One hundred printed invitations were mailed, and a large poster announcing the meeting was placed in the Department of Religion section of Franklin and Marshall College, and in the lobby of the Y.W.C.A. In addition, the window display at the Lancaster Free Public Library, pictured is this issue of Bahá'í News, proved its drawing power.

Amity Dinner at Madison

One hundred-twenty-five people, 55 of them non-Bahá'ís, representing many countries and religions, dined together at a World Religion Day Amity Dinner, an event that the Madison Assembly terms one of their most successful public meetings. Guests included Rabbi Manfred Swarsensky of Beth El Temple, Rev. George W. Vann of St. Paul's African Methodist Church, and Prof. Menahem Mansoor, associate professor of Hebrew Studies at the University of Wisconsin.

Prof. Mansoor, a world-renowned authority on the Dead Sea Scrolls, spoke on this subject, using slides for illustration. He closed his talk with remarks on the Bahá'í Faith as he has observed it in the Holy Land.

Stephen Follett, member of the Madison Local Spiritual Assembly, followed Prof. Mansoor with a talk on the theme of the Scrolls, emphasizing that the authors expected two Messiahs: one to end the existing world order and the other to usher in a completely new world order. He also explained other prophecies of the great world religions to show they agree that this is the Promised Day.

Library Exhibit of Sacred Literature

The Baha'is of Nashua, N.H., obtained the cooperation of Rabbi Bela Fish of Beth Abraham Synagogue and the administrators of the Nashua Public Library in arranging a display of sacred literature representing the world's great religions at the library. The display illustrated the bonds that unite these religions in a common cause, and emphasized the progressive nature of revelation.

Widespread Publicity in Flint

Residents of Flint, Mich., and surrounding villages were made well aware of the World Religion Day observance there. Through the initiative of the local believers, 20 posters were placed in strategic places, 500 invitations for cards were mailed, 12 radio and television announcements were broadcast, and eight newspapers published news of this event. Mrs. Ona Koppe of Mt. Clemens, Mich., was the speaker, illustrating her talk with colored slides of temples, shrines, and churches throughout the world. Thirty-three persons attended this meeting.

Other Meetings Reported

Other communities reporting their World Religion Day meetings include Baltimore, Md., which presented three speakers representing the Jewish, Christian, and Baha'i faiths on the topic "The Future We Face"; Duluth, Minn.; Hackensack, N.J.; Kansas City, Kan.; Boston, Mass., with two speakers, a rabbi and a Baha'i, presented to an audience of fifty; Reno, Nev., with a roster of three non-Baha'i speakers; San Francisco, Calif., featuring a 15-minute radio broadcast; and Twentynine Palms, Calif.

The three adult Baha'is in the goal city of Pocatello, Idaho, sponsored their first World Religion Day program this year, after two years of making contacts in the city and on the Bannock-Shoshone Indian reservation nearby. A slide-talk on the Baha'i World Center was given by Mrs. Mildred Cossey of Boise, followed by an hour of discussion. As a result of this meeting the Idaho State Journal requested information about the Faith and is now listing it in the weekly religious page. During their brief period of time there the Pocatello Baha'is have placed books in the Idaho State College, listed the Faith with the Chamber of Commerce, and have contacted and given the Baha'i message to several Bannock-Shoshone Indians.

World Youth Day

The observance of Baha'i World Youth Day on March 25, which originated in the United States, is an annual event that affords an opportunity for the youth to present their Faith to the public. This year it will be celebrated in the United States with public meetings, talks, panel discussions, forums, symposiums, and other ways that Baha'i youth can bring this Glorious Faith to the insight and understanding of youth throughout the world.

"Society, Destiny, and You"

The theme for this year, "Society, Destiny, and You," is one with many possibilities. Through the use of this theme, the National Baha'i Youth Day programs will be able to see and feel that what society must and will have is God's plan for the world, and taught else but His plan can solve the affairs perturbing men's hearts in this auspicious hour; that the materialism and racialism afflicting the world can only be extinguished through turning to God's plan for our unique age, and that no answer for the problems that face man can be found except the answer brought by the Divine Manifestation of this era, Baha'u'llah.

Among the activities planned by the National Baha'i Youth Committee is a World Youth Day Program in Foundation Hall at the Baha'i House of Worship in Wilmette, Ill., on Sunday, March 23, at 4:15 p.m.
First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Seremban, Malacca, Malaya, formed on April 21, 1957.

"Magnify My Cause"

Repeatedly, each time more urgently, since the beginning of the World Crusade, the Guardian has called upon the individual Baha'i to arise to the challenge, to rally to the Divine standard, and to play his part during these fleeting years of the World Crusade, which he has likened, in its own particular significance, to the days of the martyrs.

"It is upon the individual believer, constituting the fundamental unit in the structure of the Homefront, that the revitalization, the expansion, and the enrichment of the Homefront must ultimately depend." Thus has Shoghi Effendi in his last, eloquent message to the American Baha'is, of September 21, 1957, placed once more the mantle of responsibility on the shoulders of every single Baha'i, even more firmly than before.

What can an individual do? What can one or two, or a very few alone Baha'is in a community, do to unfurl the standard of the Teachings of Baha'u'llah before the people among whom he lives and associates in his home town? Ways do unfold victoriously for those who, with courtesy and kindness as well as eagerness and audacity, stand ready and alert to avail themselves of opportunities, or to create opportunities. Here are just a few examples from a number of stories Baha'i News receives that bring a heartwarming encouragement to all who labor on the Home Front.

In Burlington, Vt., under Baha'i auspices, a panel discussion was held at the University of Vermont on the subject, "How Can Religion Counteract Conditions of a Failing World?" Participants included a Catholic priest, a Protestant minister, a rabbi, and a Baha'i. One point brought out in the discussion, before the audience of about 30 alert and interested people, was that Baha'is believe in religious unity, in contrast to the other viewpoints which clearly held with the preservation of the particular identity of their own religious group. The point was later published in the local newspaper as the essence of the meeting—which indicates the clarity with which the Baha'i viewpoint was expressed. Another result of the meeting was an invitation presented to Paul Meade, the participating Baha'i, to serve on a city-wide Committee on Community Relations, designed to act against prejudice through education.

Women's Club Uses Baha'i Prayer
In Lancaster, Pa., another city opened about a year ago, a single Baha'i, Mrs. Grace Behrens, was able to have the Baha'i "Prayer for America" used at the November meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

University Group Learns of Baha'u'llah
From Peoria, Ill., comes a thrilling account of a Baha'i student from Iran on the campus of Bradley University. Once a year the "Town and Gown Club" of Peoria, composed of professional people in the field of education, law, medicine, and business, calls upon Professor Lew, counselor for foreign students at Bradley University, to present a foreign student program. This year Professor Lew called upon Khalil Khavari, Baha'i from Teheran. Khalil expressed a desire to speak on "Baha'u'llah and Iran." Professor Lew, who has been frequently befriended by the Baha'is of Peoria, readily accepted Khalil's request to speak on the Faith.

Khalil was fourth on the program. His talk was simple, since he is not yet fluent in the English language. With a truly grateful heart he thanked Dr. Lew, a Buddhist and former Dean of the University of Manking, for the opportunity and privilege of telling the members of the club about Baha'u'llah, what he had done for Iran where, at the time of His coming, there was so much hatred between peoples of varying religious backgrounds. He asked those present to pray that this love and unity which Baha'u'llah had welded from discordant groups might be expressed among all peoples of the world. His talk was so sincere, so filled with love of the Cause he espoused, that it seemed every heart was touched.

Toward the close of the meeting, a young South American student on the program passed out an illustrated pamphlet on Columbia coffee. This act prompted Khalil to arise and distribute the pamphlet One Universal Faith, done with such courtesy and friendliness that no one could help but accept it in the spirit in which it was given. Many people studied it with interest. Such remarks as "I can accept all of this!" were heard.

Another result of the talk—one member asked to bring her club group of about 300 to the Baha'i Center for a luncheon meeting to hear Khalil give this same talk.

Let every American Baha'i read again, and pray and ponder over the Beloved Guardian's last message: "Once again—and this time more fervently than ever before—I direct my plea to every single member of this strenuously laboring, clear-eyed, stout-hearted, spiritually endowed community, every man and woman . . . not to allow, through apathy, timidity or complacency, this one remaining opportunity to be irrevocably lost."
Crusade Goals, Many Others Achieved in Africa Since Opening of Ten-Year Crusade in 1953

The objectives of the Ten-Year Crusade in Africa for which the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States was responsible were set forth by the beloved Guardian as follows:

11 Virgin areas to be opened:
- Canary Islands
- Cape Verde Islands
- French Somaliland
- French Togoland
- Mauritius Island
- Northern Territories of the Gold Coast
- Portuguese Guinea
- Réunion Island
- St. Helena Island
- St. Thomas Island
- Spanish Guinea

2 areas already opened to be consolidated:
- Liberia
- South Africa

Purchase of land for National Endowments—South Africa

Purchase of land for one Mashriqi’l-Adhkár—South Africa

Establishment of a Regional National Spiritual Assembly—South Africa

These goals, with the exception of the establishment of the Regional National Spiritual Assembly, were all accomplished by the end of 1954. All of the 11 virgin areas had been filled by July of the same year. In 1953 there was one local spiritual assembly (Monrovia, Liberia) in one of the two areas designated for consolidation. By April 1954 each of these areas had a local spiritual assembly. Two pieces of land, one for a Mashriqui’l-Adhkár and one for a National Endowment nearby were purchased late in 1954. The last goal, formation of a Regional National Spiritual Assembly, was accomplished in August 1956.

Between the end of 1954 and December 1957 the achievements have been supplementary to the original goals, named above, with the following results:

Virgin Areas
- Canary Islands: 2 Assemblies
- Cape Verde Islands: 1 Assembly
- French Somaliland: 1 Assembly
- French Togoland: 2 Assemblies
- Mauritius Island: 3 Assemblies
- Northern Territories of the Gold Coast: 1 Assembly
- Réunion Island: 1 Assembly & 1 Group

Areas For Consolidation
- Liberia: 2 Assemblies
- French Somaliland: 2 Groups
- Mauritius Island: 2 Isolated centers

Incorporations:
- 2 Assemblies

Purchase of Land:
- 5 acres purchased from Tribal Chief Union of South Africa:

There were seven American pioneers in Africa by April 1953. During the following year 51 more Americans went pioneering to Africa. In the succeeding years the work has been supported by a total of approximately 70 American believers.

When the institution of the Hands of the Cause was augmented in 1954 with the first Auxiliary Board of Africa, four of these American pioneers were appointed as members.

Every one of the pioneers has served tirelessly with dedication and sacrifice. It has been the example of their lives, fully as much as their tongues, which has won new recruits to the ever-growing ranks of Bahá’í. When we consider the handicaps of health, lack of money, and opposition which these valiant souls have faced, the accomplishments are indeed miracles.

Inevitably some of these virgin goals, filled at the beginning of the Crusade, have been vacated from time to time during the years. The need now is for strengthening and consolidation. There is much to be done in all areas. As one pioneer has put it: “By 1955 we will have only just begun.”

Over 100 Share Studies, Fellowship at Yerrinbool Summer School

The twenty-second annual Bahá’í Summer School held at “Bolton Place,” Yerrinbool, N.S.W., from December 28, 1957, to January 8, 1958, was overshadowed by the ascension of our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi. Each year has seen an increase in participants and this year 103 believers and friends came together, drawn by the common bond of Bahá’í love and fellowship in their bereavement.

The friends were delighted to have with them, for the duration of the School, Hands of the Cause Clara Dunn and Collis Featherstone, Members of the Auxiliary Board, Thelma Perks and Eric Bowes, were also in attendance, as well as believers from as far away as Samoa, Fiji, Queensland, South Australia and Victoria. Increase in the number of youth over previous years was very evident, and at one stage there were over 20 children under the age of 14 present. Each day the older youth conducted a class for these children.

The gathered friends were saddened that for the first time in the history of the School no cable of greetings could be sent to our beloved Guardian, and with the knowledge that a new era has dawned a loving cable was dispatched to the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land.

A high standard of lectures was maintained throughout, covering Administration (six sessions), Christ and Bahá’u’lláh (five sessions), and, such diverse subjects as the Ministries of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Social and Ethical Teachings, and the Unity of Religions. Although afternoon sessions were left open on the program, by the end of the School only one or two were free! The attendants, eager to gain as much knowledge as they could, asked for special sessions, such as Impressions of the Holy Land, Work among the Aborigines, and Life in the Fiji Islands.

It was pleasing to see so many of the youth taking part in the talks and chairing meetings. Israeli Raculi, the first Fijian to attend an Australian Summer School, brought us closer to our brothers and sisters in the Pacific, and with his rendition of “Isa Lei” (the Fijian Farewell Song), won the hearts of all the friends. A picture evening, which many of the local residents attended, was also thoroughly enjoyed.

The real meaning of Bahá’í fellowship and unity became more and more apparent as the School progressed, and the renewed seriousness with which the friends studied bore testimony to their awareness of the burden which now rests more firmly than ever upon the shoulders of each one of them.

"Winter Weekend" in Las Vegas Stresses Deepening in Faith

Taking advantage of the scheduled visit of Mrs. Florence V. Mayberry, a member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, the Bahá'í's of Las Vegas, Nev., who elected their first Local Spiritual Assembly last Ridván (1957), planned a three-day "Winter Weekend" for December 21-23, 1957, for intensive study and public teaching effort. The 19 who attended included a few souls from California and Utah as well as Nevada believers.

The weekend opened with a social gathering Friday evening arranged by the Bahá'í youth, and closed Monday evening with a public meeting at which a youth panel presented a discussion on "Rewards of Living a Bahá'í Life." One youth member, Carol Sherman, spoke from the standpoint of an enrolled Bahá'í youth; another, Fenton Kay, gave his views on a youth preparing to enter the Faith. During this discussion many questions in the minds of youth who had shown only passive interest were brought out, discussed, and answered from the writings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Mrs. Florence V. Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, present at the conference, was the featured speaker at a public meeting Saturday evening when she gave an illustrated lecture on "A Pilgrimage to Haifa." The following evening she held a meeting for Bahá'ís only, at which she spoke more intimately of her pilgrimage and of affairs concerning the Bahá'í world.

Other public events consisted of a public meeting on Sunday afternoon at which Nazrullah Rassekh of Palo Alto, Calif., spoke on "Christ, Muhammad and Bahá'u'lláh." He spoke from the standpoint of one having been reared in the Islamic nation of Iran, and his treatment of the subject was informative to the Bahá'ís as well as to the seekers. On Monday afternoon Mr. Rassekh gave an eight-minute interview on the local TV station. This interview so aroused the interest of the cameraman, who asked many questions after the program, that he is now attending study classes.

The classes during the weekend planned by the Teaching Committee of the Las Vegas Bahá'í community were equally inspiring. The first one on Saturday afternoon was entitled, "Fulfilling America's Spiritual Mission," with the subject matter from The Advent of Divine Justice, supplemented by other references carefully gathered by Walter Wooten. Emphasis was placed upon the necessity of Bahá'ís freeing themselves from the decadence and materialism of the present day and distinguishing themselves by those standards of conduct and deeds called for in the Sacred Writings; until this is done our words and teaching efforts will have no effect.

The Sunday and Monday classes were devoted to "The Seven Qualifications of an Enlightened Soul," based on references from the Bahá'í Writings compiled by members of the Las Vegas community. Following each reading Mrs. Mayberry directed lively discussion into orderly and constructive channels.

The report by the teaching committee comments: "These classes were invaluable from the standpoint of increasing our capacity and understanding, gaining a larger overall knowledge of the Faith, and deepening our reverence, humility, and love for this great Cause of God and each other. . . . The unity, love, and teaching impetus engendered by the "Winter Weekend" created an overwhelming enthusiasm for making this a yearly event."

Indian Service Committee Offers
Heart-Warming Pioneer Experience

To Bahá'ís in the teaching profession who are about to sign or renew contracts for next year, the American Indian Service Committee is ready to recommend localities where teaching positions may be applied for and where rich opportunities for Indian contacts exist. A list of such localities will be furnished on request. Preference for location on a reservation or town may be indicated.

At this time the American Indian Service Committee would like to reassure every sincere Bahá'í who feels somewhat awed by the prospect of Indian teaching. Letters from pioneers constantly affirm the fact that living among the original Americans is a heart-warming experience, and offers an opportunity to shed those superficialities which so often complicate our lives today. Teaching is first and foremost "living the life," simply and lovingly, and moving in the assurance that "every soul which ariseth today to guide others to the path of safety and infusion in them the Spirit or Life, the Holy Spirit will inspire . . . with evidences, proofs and facts and the lights will shine upon it from the Kingdom of God."

First Winter School in Saigon

Attracts Baha’is of Five Nations

Eight days of classes and evening discussions, from December 25, 1957, to January 1, 1958, the Feast of Honor, a public meeting, a tea, and a picnic comprised the program for the first Baha’i Winter School in Saigon, Vietnam, for believers from Cambodia, Laos, Thailand, Macau, and Vietnam.

Every Baha’i from Central Vietnam was able to attend all sessions, while others could come only on those days when their offices and businesses were closed. The daily attendance varied from 17 to 39 at the Feast of Honor, December 30—not counting the children.

There were several highlights throughout the week, but the most joyous occasion was the Feast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Due, close relatives of the believers as they had been wanting to gather informally at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jamshed Fozdar to further discuss ways and means of spreading the Faith, and sometimes non-Baha’is joined them to hear the Teachings and to see the slides and films shown by Miss Arden Thur. During these night sessions, and also during class periods, Dr. H. Ta’eed, Baha’i pioneer in Laos, frequently related incidents in the life of ‘Abdu’l-Baha’ and of early Baha’i history, thus giving everyone a feeling of personal connection with the early days of the Cause and creating an even stronger bond of unity among all.

Thirty-seven persons attended the public meeting on Sunday evening at which the two speakers, Ho Cau and Nguyen van Tri, discussed the subjects “The Oneness of Religion” and “The Pattern for World Unity.”

Articles on the school appeared in two prominent Vietnamese newspapers, in one of them on the front page.

On the opening day a cablegram of greeting was sent from the school to the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land, to which this reply came the following day: “Delighted evidences progress area so dear beloved Guardian’s heart. Assure prayers Shrine success.”

The successes already achieved even before the school in South East Asia fired the friends with further determination to go out and complete the spiritual conquest of those areas and the immediate accomplishments of the goals of their Six-Year Plan.

Northern Alaskan Outpost Aflame

Through Love of Devoted Pioneers

On the northernmost tip of Alaska a point of land juts out into the Arctic Ocean. This is Point Barrow, where the Eskimo settlement of Barrow is located. It is to this remote and icy outpost, touched by few hours of daylight, that the pioneer, Frances Wells, hastened in August of 1955 to fulfill the Guardian’s plea to spread the teachings far and wide among the Eskimo people.

The National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska reports that Mrs. Wells has now turned over her four room home in Barrow to the National Assembly, which she states is “a gift and token of my love and appreciation for the many believers who have helped me establish residence here. It is my heartfelt wish and desire that this humble home may be used as the Baha’i Center, as well as a residence for those who will come after me dedicated to the Faith and service of spreading the Baha’i Teachings among the Eskimo people here.”

The House of Power and Light

How do the Eskimos feel about the Baha’is who have come to live among them? They have given the Barrow house an Eskimo name—Kounmatikvik, which means “the house from which comes the power or the light.”
Mable Amidon, Barrow Group Secretary, sends in the story: A young Eskimo man in the office where Frances Wells works had just delivered a sign for the office, and Frances expressed a desire to have one for her house.

"I'll be glad to make the sign," he said, "what do you wish to call it?" She had no name in mind. The young man then conferred with other Eskimos in the office and after some discussion they arrived at a name: Koumatikavik; and a sign was made and placed beneath the light at the door.

Crowds Throng to Hear Visiting Bahá’í

During her recent visit to Barrow, Florence Mayberry, Auxiliary Board Member, showed her slides on the Holy Land to a mothers’ club, to the grade school children, and in the evening to an overflowing crowd of 325 at the local theater which the pioneers had rented for this purpose.

The group secretary sums up this history-making visit as follows: "We feel that the Barrow people as a whole were very happy over everything. Many hundreds of them now know that there is a Bahá’í Faith—even those who attend nothing know, because something new sweeps over the entire village very fast."

The Eskimos recently gave a token of their esteem to Frances Wells while she was attending a village election for members of the Council as an observer only. Members of the Council must be Eskimos. Mrs. Wells was asked to vote in the election, and since this privilege was unusual, she asked for the approval of the presiding Council, who granted it.

Bahá’ís throughout the world may gratefully offer their prayers for the continuing strength and perseverance of the pioneers who are devoting themselves at a difficult post with such singleness of purpose for the Cause of God among a people whom the beloved Guardian longed to see become an integral part of the Bahá’í World Community.

18th New Zealand School Offers Unusual Teaching Opportunity

The New Zealand Bahá’í Summer School was held December 27, 1957—January 9, 1958, at New Plymouth. It was the eighteenth summer school, but it was historic in that it was held under the auspices of the newly formed National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand.

In addition to the regular courses, a class was held each morning for inquirers by Mrs. Brightwell, with assistants, on such topics as "Prophecy, Science, and Religion," and "Investigation of Truth," and evening lectures were given.

The site of the Summer School was "Old House," on the slopes of Mount Egmont, commanding a magnificent panorama, and offering the joys of physical relaxation and communion with nature along with spiritual refreshment. This was the first Bahá’í school session held outside of Auckland.

Mayor Gives Official Welcome

An unusual honor was granted the School in the official welcome given by the Mayor of New Plymouth, who was most sympathetic and understanding in his approach to the Faith and to those attending the School. He stated that he realized the Bahá’ís had the welfare of mankind at heart.

There was ample opportunity for teaching work because of the number of sight-seers who come to the mountain and who were entertained in the hostel by the Bahá’ís. Bus drivers told their passengers that the Bahá’ís would provide tea at "Old House," and as a result of this many were given the Bahá’í message. Even the weather cooperated by being cold and rainy part of the time so that the Bahá’í "fireside" became very much appreciated by the visitors. Members of the School were also interviewed at a Fair being held in the city before a large appreciative audience.

A Kotahiitanga, or Unity Day, was held as an invitation to all nationalities to be guests of the school, and that evening Marjory Pepe Rau, a Maori, addressed the audience.
Alaskan National Assembly Appoints UN Observer

The National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska has announced the appointment of Verne L. Stout as observer to the United Nations. Since the Alaska National Assembly has been registered with the UN Information Office, it can participate in the non-governmental activities of this body. Also announced is the appointment of Robert E. Moul as the Alaskan representative to the Intercontinental Conference to be held in Chicago, May 2-4.

98 British Baha'is Attend National Teaching Conference

The National Teaching Conference of the Baha'is of the British Isles was held on January 11-12, 1958, at Leeds. Ninety-eight people attended from all over Britain.

Among the numerous interesting sessions were those devoted to the increasing importance of the regional teaching committees, the work in the Islands under the jurisdiction of the European and Asian Teaching Committees, and the work on the home front. From these sessions two pioneer offers resulted, one for the Islands, and one for the home front.

The highlight of the Conference was the session given over to the Hand of the Cause, Hasan Balyuzi, and the Auxiliary Board members. Mr. Balyuzi spoke of the recent development at the World Center of the Faith.

All present were deeply moved by the showing of the film of 'Abdu'l-Baha, and the reading of the talk given by the Master at this time.

The next morning was given over to the National Spiritual Assembly, during which the Charter for the next five years, given us by the beloved Guardian, was reviewed. The Conference then sent a cable to the Hands of the Cause in Haifa, assuring them of our loving support.

The Conference ended with talks on the early history of the Faith, the Six-Year Plan in Britain, and the needs for today. We went away with a renewed sense of dedication.

Two Summer School Sessions Held in Central America

Two Summer School sessions have recently been held in Central America with encouraging success. One from December 27 to 30, at Karbila, Honduras was at the beautiful ranch of Marcia Steward dedicated to the beloved Guardian, now being used as a Summer School for all of Central America.

Attendants included native believers from Honduras and El Salvador, and pioneers Ruth Yancey, Margaret Miessler, Alan Pringle, George Haley and family, and Marcia Steward.

An innovation was a course on the History and Development of the Roman Catholic Church, a subject of great usefulness for Baha'is in this part of the world, where this religion has always been and still is a strong factor in the life of the people. Those attending this School came away highly inspired to carry on the work of the Baha'i World Crusade.

The second Summer School was a weekend session held in "El Refugio," El Salvador, in a lovely and picturesque camp of the Government high in the pines near the Honduran border.

Attendants included native believers and contacts from El Salvador, and pioneers Marjorie Stee Wadell, Jeanne Welsh Farrand, and Artimus Lamb. For most this was their first experience at a Baha'i Summer School, and all are now demanding more and longer sessions as the best way of understanding the Teachings and entering the warm and loving shelter of the Baha'i world family.

Baha'i Holy Days Recognized By Paramus, N. J., Schools

The Baha'i Group of Paramus, N.J., has sent a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Board of Education for Paramus which states: "The Board of Education adopted a resolution granting excused absences to children of the Baha'i World Faith on their religious holidays." The four specified dates falling on school days were listed in the letter.

This now brings to 46 the number of school systems recognizing the Baha'i Holy Days.

Dearly beloved Friends and Co-workers:

This letter from the Custodians is long overdue; our thoughts have been with all the Assembly members constantly during this great period of trial and sorrow, and we have realized how heavy were your loads and how great the responsibility resting on you at this time. Our own problems, however, and the crushing sense of obligation to our beloved Guardian to carry on his work, have made it impossible to send a more detailed and intimate communication to you before this.

Three months have passed since our best beloved Guardian so suddenly left us — months of longing and heartbreak for all Baha’is! After the meeting of the Hands of the Faith in Bahji, a period of suffering and heart-searching so intense that not one of them could ever endure to pass through it again, the work we had agreed to shoulder began. In our sorrow, our humility before the greatness of our task, we began to see the repeated evidences of the mercy of Baha’u’llah; in a truly miraculous way the endowments, properties, and funds registered in the name of our beloved Guardian have been protected and safely transferred to either the Custodians or other Baha’i bodies.

Kampala Conference a Great Success

The first of the mighty Intercontinental Conferences, planned by the beloved Guardian himself, was held in Kampala with great success; over 900 believers were present, well over half being African Baha’is; the sum of a hundred thousand pounds was raised for the purpose specified by the Guardian himself, thus insuring a far swifter advance in the work throughout the African continent; a most wonderful spirit of determination, rededication, consecration, and zeal was generated and spread to all the friends — whether African, Asian, European, or American. We cannot but marvel at the forethought of the Guardian in calling for these five great Conferences to be held in the months after his passing. What a stimulation they will provide to the work and what consolidation and inspiration to the believers everywhere! The sense of nearness to him, to his wishes and his work was very strong at Kampala, and we feel sure will be as strong or even stronger at the other Conferences.

It is a great pity that the immense distances separating the Hands here at the World Center and the heavy expense of travel prevent us from meeting with the various national assemblies or members of them; the Hands of the Faith themselves, as you know, were only able to foresee, for the time being, an annual meeting of all of them. Of course should an emergency arise they would gather at once, but barring this they felt the teaching work and other aspects of the World Crusade should take precedence over everything else in order to carry out the expressed wishes of our beloved Guardian and hasten the day when the work all over the world will have been so firmly laid that the supreme administrative body, the infinite blessing of Baha’u’llah, the Supreme House of Justice, can be erected.

In view of this, we particularly wish to call to your attention certain things that are, we feel, of supreme importance; our beloved Guardian gave 36 years of his life to the work of erecting Baha’u’llah’s World Administrative Order; had he not felt such an urgency in carrying out this work he might be alive now; he alone saw the entire Plan, the world plan of the work as a mighty unit; how often he pointed out to us that the “heart” and “nerve center” of the Faith was Haifa; that Baha’u’llah Himself had made it clear that here in the Holy Land would forever be united the Spiritual and the Administrative World Center; he guarded this Center (as had ‘Abdu’l-Bahá before him) with the greatest care, well knowing that a blow to the heart is felt in the remotest part of the body and that good circulation from the heart will keep the smallest member of the body vital and in good health. We, daily occupied with the cares and worries of this World Center, are now greatly concerned lest any inadvertent act on our part or on the part of the present national and regional assemblies which form the bedrock of the future International House of Justice, should interrupt this smooth flow of spiritual circulation built up so wisely and painstakingly by our beloved Shoghi Effendi.

The Uncertainty of the Future
We do not know what the future holds in store; by this we mean that the world situation is so precarious that, as the Guardian so repeatedly pointed out, wars and disturbances of an unforeseen nature may break out and perhaps cut the World Center off from all or a part of the other Baha'i Centers temporarily; meantime we have this mighty Plan, the last five years of it to vigorously prosecute; it can only be coordinated and directed from the World Center. To the degree to which we receive news and reports, minutes of your meetings, suggestions, etc., from all of you, as well as from other sources in the Bahá’í world, to just that same degree will we be able to protect and promote the work of the Plan and safeguard the World Center. The blood must go on pumping in and out of this heart of our Faith.

Responsibility to Hands of the Cause
Your responsibility is therefore very great at this time, not only towards the believers whom you represent, but towards us who are seeking to firmly grasp and protect the world affairs of the Faith which are one of the most unique creations of the Guardian. It was his hand at the helm that preserved uniformity in essentials whilst encouraging diversity in non-essentials. This is perhaps the greatest work that must now be carried on by us from the World Center.

With strength and courage at our World Center, the local communities and individual believers may press forward now in Bahá’í service as they did while the Guardian held aloft the beacon light illuminating the Bahá’í world.

2500 Bahá’ís Attend Conferences in 41 U. S. Cities in February

More than 2,500 believers attended the conferences called by the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly in 41 centers throughout the United States during the period between February 15 and 23, and this in spite of the fact that unusually stormy winter weather prevailed in a number of places.

The primary purpose of these conferences, conducted by the Hands of the Cause, members of the Auxiliary Boards, and members of the National Spiritual Assembly, was to reinvigorate the American Bahá’í community as a whole and to produce maximum response to the Guardian’s appeal for pioneer settlement, the establishment of new centers and the multiplication of the number of Bahá’ís in the United States. In addition they aimed to strengthen the

Commentary by U. S. National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:
The letter addressed to all national assemblies by the Bahá’í Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land renews our understanding of the vital importance of Haifa as the heart of the Bahá’í community — its spiritual and administrative world center.

“He (the Guardian) guarded the Center, (as had ‘Abdu’l-Bahá before him) with the greatest care, well knowing that a blow to the heart is felt in the remotest part of the body and that good circulation from the heart will keep the smallest member of the body vital and in good health.”

The nine Hands as Custodians likewise in this communication established their relationship more intimately and firmly with the various national bodies. “Your responsibility is therefore very great at this time not only toward the believers whom you represent, but toward us who are seeking to firmly grasp and protect the world affairs of the Faith which are one of the most unique creations of the Guardian. It was his hand at the helm that preserved uniformity in essentials whilst encouraging diversity in non-essentials. This is perhaps the greatest work that must now be carried on by us from the World Center.”

With strength and courage at our World Center, the local communities and individual believers may press forward now in Bahá’í service as they did while the Guardian held aloft the beacon light illuminating the Bahá’í world.

spirit of assurance, confidence, unity, dedication, and understanding so necessary to orient ourselves to the new era in the Cause resulting from the sudden passing of the “Sign of God on earth.”

Not only the conference leaders, but a number of assemblies and individual Baha’is have expressed their gratitude and satisfaction with these meetings because of the clearer understanding acquired concerning the continuing guidance of the Faith, their greater awareness of the immediate needs of the World Crusade, and their resolve to meet them.

One believer stated that he could not recall any other occasion when the believers left a conference so spirited, completely assured, and confident that the challenges confronting the Baha’is will be met with success, which will aid in hastening the establishment of the Universal House of Justice.

The chief objective of the American Hands of the Cause and the National Spiritual Assembly in holding the total number of 70 conferences during the current Baha’i year has been to rally all the friends to a true sense of dedication and determination to insure the resounding success of the tasks allocated by the beloved Guardian to the American believers in the World Crusade, at home and abroad. The number and magnitude of our achievements in the years immediately ahead will be the measure of our gratitude to Bahá’u’lláh for the unerring guidance of Shoghi Effendi, who sacrificed his all that we, the believers, might taste the spiritual victories of the Divine Plan.

The Prayers of Baha’u’llah
by Ruhíyyih Khanum

Part 2

It is an education in divinity to read Baha’u’llah’s prayers. He maintains the unique nature of God, the utter impossibility of any creature approaching or comprehending Him, in a clear and graphic manner. The unseen God of Moses; the “Father” of Christ, Whom none cometh to but through the Son; the One of Whom Muhammad so beautifully said: “Eyes see Him not but He sees the eyes,” is exalted, one might say, to unimaginable heights by Him. “Thou art He Whom all things worship and Who worshipeth no one, Who is the Lord of all things and the vassal of none, Who knoweth all things and is known of none.” “From everlasting Thou hast existed alone with no one else beside Thee, and wilt, to everlasting, continue to remain the same, in the sublimity of Thine essence and the inaccessible heights of Thy glory,” He declares. In a short and wonderful prayer He solemnly sets forth the fundamental doctrine of the nature of God with a lucidity and power that would, in any past dispensation, have gained it first place in the dogmas of the church:

“God testifieth to the unity of His Godhead and to the singleness of His own Being. On the throne of eternity, from the inaccessible heights of His station, His tongue proclaims that there is none other God but Him. He Himself, independently of all else, hath ever been a witness unto His own oneness, the revealer of His own nature, the glorifier of His own essence. He, verily, is the All-Powerful, the Almighty, the Beauteous.

“He is supreme over His servants, and standeth over His creatures. In His hand is the source of authority and truth. He maketh men alive by His signs, and causeth them to die through His wrath. He shall not be asked of His doings and His might is equal unto all things. He is the Potent, the All-Subduing. He holdeth within His grasp the empire of all things, and on His right hand is fixed the Kingdom of His Revelation. His power, verily, embraceth the whole of creation. Victory and overlordship are His; all might and dominion are His; all glory and greatness are His. He, of a truth, is the All-Glorious, the Most Powerful, the Unconditioned.”

Attributes of Godhead

The “Unconditioned.” That one word provides ample food for thought. Some of the adjectives Baha’u’llah uses for the Godhead are most striking and seem to plow up our minds and prepare them for an infinitely deeper and richer concept of the One on Whom we depend for everything we have, be it physical or spiritual. For instance: “O God Who art the Author of all Manifestations... the Fountain-Head of all Revelations, and the Well-Spring of all Lights.” As words are the tools of men’s thoughts, they are tremendously important. The “Well-Spring of all Lights,” though by another way of saying, that all the Prophets are generated by God, presents a tremendous mental picture to a man who has studied something of modern astronomy, of a universe which is light upon light, of matter which itself is the stuff of which light is made. Compare the mental picture this phrase conjures up with that of an anthropomorphic God, bearded, stern and much like a human grandfather, who created the world in six days and took a rest on the seventh! Though no doubt when that metaphor was propounded it opened up men’s minds to a new and wider concept of the Divinity. A being Who could do all that in six days was worthy of worship and to be strictly obeyed!

Baha’u’llah calls God “The Pityer of thralls,” “The Pityer of the downtrodden,” “The Help in peril,” “the Great Giver,” “The Restorer”—words which sink into our hearts these dark days with an added comfort as we see so many of our fellow-men downtrodden, in deadly danger, despooled and broken. He tells us that this “King of Kings,” this “Quickener of every moulderine bone,” this “Enlightener of all creation” Who is the “Lord of all mankind” and the “Lord of the Judgment Day” is the One “Whom nothing whatsoever can frustrate.” Such a God will right all wrongs and rule the world for the good of man! Grievous, on the other hand, as are our sins, as testified by these words: “Wert Thou to regard Thy servants according to their deserts... they would assuredly merit naught except Thy chastisement...” He yet assures us, in the words He addresses to God, that: “All the atoms of the earth testify that Thou art the Ever-Forgiving, the Benevolent, the Great Giver...” and that “the whole universe testifieth to Thy generosity.” Even though He be the Lord “Whose strength is immense, Whose decree is terrible," yet we can confidently turn to Him, and, in Bahá'u'lláh's words declare: "A drop out of the ocean of Thy mercy sufficeth to quench the flames of hell, and a spark of fire of Thy love is enough to set ablaze a whole world."

Our world is steadily sinking into ruin. We have waxed proud and forgotten our God—many a people has believed to A God's words made known, and turned away from Him, disbelieved in Him, followed proudly our own fancies and desires. No Being that was not such a Being as Bahá'u'lláh depicts would still hold open His door to us! And yet in how many passages such as these the way back, the way we once trod but have now, for the most part, forgotten, is pointed out to us and words placed in our mouths that are food for our sick hearts and souls: "Cleanse me with the waters of Thy Mercy, O my Lord, and make me wholly Thine..." "I am all wretchedness, O my Lord, and Thou art the Most Powerful, the Almighty!" "Thy Might, in truth, is equal to all things!" Whosoever has recognized Thee will turn to none save Thee and will seek for naught else except Thyself." "Help me to guard the pearl of Thy love, which by Thy decree, Thou hast enshrined in my heart." "Many a chilled heart, O my God, hath been set ablaze with the fire of Thy Cause, and many a slumberer hath been awakened by the sweetness of Thy voice." "O God, my God! Be Thou not far from me, for tribulation upon tribulation hath gathered about me. O God, my God! Leave me not to myself, for the extremity of adversity hath come upon me. Out of the pure milk drawn from the breasts of Thy loving-kindness, give me to drink, for my thirst hath utterly consumed me. Beneath the shadow of the wings of Thy mercy shelter me, for all mine adversaries with one consent have fallen upon me. Keep me near to the throne of Thy majesty, face to face with the revelations of the signs of Thy glory, for wretchedness hath grievously touched me. With the fruits of the tree of Thine Eternity nourish me, for uttermost weakness hath overtaken me. From the cups of joy, proffered by the hands of Thy tender mercies, feed me, for manifold sorrows have laid mighty hold upon me. With the broidered robe of Thine omnipotent sovereignty attire me, for poverty hath altogether defeated me. Lulled by the cooing of the Dove of Thine Eternity, suffer me to sleep, for woes at their blackest have befallen me. Before the throne of Thy oneness, amid the blaze of the beauty of Thy countenance, cause me to abide, for fear and trembling have violently crushed me. Beneath the ocean of Thy forgiveness, faced with restlessness of the leviathan of glory, immerse me, for my sins have utterly doomed me."

Obligatory Prayers

Of such stuff as these is the treasury of prayers which Bahá'u'lláh has left us. They are suited to the child before he goes to sleep at night, to the mystic, to the busy man of practical outlook, to the devout. An instance of the comprehension and tolerance with which He viewed human nature is the fact that He revealed a choice of three daily, and obligatory, prayers. While imposing on men the obligation of turning to their Creator once, at least, during every day, He provided a means of doing so suited to widely different natures. One takes about thirty seconds to recite and is to be said at the hour of noon; one is longer and is to be used three times during the day; and the third is very long and profound, accompanied by many genuflexions, and may be used any time during the twenty-four hours of the day. The Divine Physician provided us with what we might call a spiritual polish with which to brighten our hearts. We need this renewal which comes through turning to the Sun of Eternal Truth—as every bird and beast, be it ever so humble, responds to the light of the physical sun at dawn—but He gave latitude to the individual state of development and temperament.

Some Westerners have found the long Daily Prayer very strange; no doubt this is because the present generation has ceased to feel intimate with its God. For a man to stand alone in his room and stretch his arms out to nothingness, or kneel down before a blank wall, in the midst of familiar objects, seems to him unnatural and even foolish. This is because he has lost the sense of the "living God". God, far from being to him, as the Qur'án says, "nearer than his life's vein", has become more of an X in some vast equation. And yet men that we honor and men that we long to emulate have not felt shy before their God. Many a burly crusader knelt on the stones of Jerusalem where he felt His Lord's feet might have trod, and the Pilgrim Fathers did not feel self-conscious on their knees when turning to the God who had led them to a new and freer homeland. The prayers of Bahá'u'lláh will help lead us back to that warm sense of the reality and nearness of God, through use. He makes no compulsion, He takes our hand and guides us into the safe road trodden by our forefathers.

The Extreme of Adversity

No survey, however cursory and inadequate, of His Prayers would be complete without quoting one of the most passionate and moving of them all, one associated with probably the saddest hours of His whole life. After His banishment from Persia to Tráq the initial signs of envy and hatred began to be apparent from His younger brother, Mirzá Yahyá. In order to avoid open rupture and the consequent humiliation of the Faith in the eyes of the non-believers, Bahá'u'lláh retired for two years to the wilderness of Kurdistan and lived, unknown, as a dervish amongst its people. During His absence the situation, far from improving, now that the field was left open and uncontested to Mirzá Yahyá, steadily deteriorated. Shameful acts took place and conditions became so acute that the believers sent a messenger in search of Bahá'u'lláh to report to Him and beseech His return. Reluctantly He turned His face towards Bagdad. He was going back to mount the helm; storms lay ahead of Him of a severity and bitterness no other Prophet had ever known; behind Him, once and for all, He left a measure of peace and submission. For two years He had communed with His own soul. He had written wonderful poems and revealed beautiful prayers and treatises. Now He headed back into the inky blackness of an implacable hatred and jealousy, where attempts against His very life were to be plotted and even prove partially successful. As He tramped along through the wilderness, beautiful in its dress of spring, the messenger that had gone to fetch Him back testified that He chanted over and over again this prayer. It rolled forth like thunder from His agonized heart:

"O God, my God! Be Thou not far from me, for tribulation upon tribulation hath gathered about me. O God, my God! Leave me not to myself, for the extremity of adversity hath come upon me. Out of the pure milk drawn from the breasts of Thy loving-kindness, give me to drink, for my thirst hath utterly consumed me. Beneath the shadow of the wings of Thy mercy shelter me, for all mine adversaries with one consent have fallen upon me. Keep me near to the throne of Thy majesty, face to face with the revelations of the signs of Thy glory, for wretchedness hath grievously touched me. With the fruits of the tree of Thine Eternity nourish me, for uttermost weakness hath overtaken me. From the cups of joy, proffered by the hands of Thy tender mercies, feed me, for manifold sorrows have laid mighty hold upon me. With the broidered robe of Thine omnipotent sovereignty attire me, for poverty hath altogether defeated me. Lulled by the cooing of the Dove of Thine Eternity, suffer me to sleep, for woes at their blackest have befallen me. Before the throne of Thy oneness, amid the blaze of the beauty of Thy countenance, cause me to abide, for fear and trembling have violently crushed me. Beneath the ocean of Thy forgiveness, faced with restlessness of the leviathan of glory, immerse me, for my sins have utterly doomed me."

—Reprinted from The World Order Magazine, November 1943
"The spirit that sent forth, not so long ago...so many pioneers to such remote areas of the globe, must at all costs be recaptured, for the twofold purpose of swelling the number and of insuring the continual flow, of pioneers, so essential for the safeguarding of the prizes won in the course of the several campaigns of a world-girdling Crusade. . . ."

(Message from the Guardian to the American Bahá'ís, September 21, 1957.)

In the October issue of Bahá'í News, the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States reported the number of American pioneers serving abroad as of September 1, 1957 — a total of 317 — representing an increase of 31 in the preceding four months. What has been the response to the beloved Guardian’s last appeal since that time?

Twenty-three pioneers joined the ranks between September 1 and January 1, 1958, distributed as follows: Africa—3; Asia—2 and 1 youth; Europe—7; Latin America—10.

Subtracting those who have been obliged to leave their posts for various reasons, there were on January 1, 1958, a total of 314 United States pioneers abroad in the various World Crusade areas: Africa—68; Asia—49, including one youth; Europe—48; Latin America—149, including 4 youth. These figures have changed only slightly since January, hence "the continual flow" has not yet sufficiently increased. The need is urgent. Several virgin goals are now without American pioneers—a few without any pioneers or enrolled Bahá'ís—and these must be filled with maximum speed.

The various intercontinental teaching committees are waiting and eager to assist any who can free themselves to undertake the most meritorious of all services to the World Crusade.

Homefront Gains Disappointing

What about the homefront? There has been a great surge of movement by the believers within the United States, but what are the results in terms of new centers opened?

Between August 1 and January 31, Bahá'ís moved into 176 new localities where there were no resident believers at the time, but during the same period 164 centers were lost by reason of the only resident Bahá'ís leaving, some after remaining only a few weeks, resulting in a net gain of only 12 new centers to January 31. In many cases the move was necessary for business or employment reasons, and in some cases the believers who moved from these isolated areas re-settled in localities where there were already very small groups or communities, thus adding strength to the established centers, but far too many simply moved to another isolated area without consideration of the homefront goals.

The National Spiritual Assembly again appeals to the believers who can disperse to consider first the small communities needing one or two settlers to enable them to hold, restore, or establish their assembly status. The Guide for Dispersal distributed with the October 1957 Bahá'í News lists most of the localities where help is needed, but there are others. Most of the area teaching committees have compiled valuable data about these communities, including employment possibilities, schools, climate, etc., and this is available to any prospective pioneer or settler.

The Bahá'í communities having 15 or more members are still the main reservoir for all Crusade objectives at home and abroad, particularly for pioneers. When will the veritable exodus called for by the beloved Guardian since 1954 truly begin?

Announce Dates of Frankfurt Intercontinental Conference

The fourth Intercontinental Conference is scheduled to be held at Frankfurt/Main, Germany, at the Gesellschaftshaus am Zoo, from July 25 to July 29, 1958. It is with great and joyful anticipation that the National Assembly looks forward to meeting as many as possible of the friends from all over the world.

This will be the height of the tourist season in Europe, a season which will be doubly active because of the World Fair at Bruxelles, Belgium, and an Esperanto Congress in the Frankfurt area a few days after the close of our Conference.

There is no doubt that these events will offer unforeseen opportunities for proclaiming the Cause. At the same time, however, this activity calls for a greater measure of advance planning and scheduling if the Conference is to be held in that atmosphere of dignity, high resolve, and accomplishment so vital to the prestige and the fair name of our beloved Faith.

The National Assembly of Germany and Austria has asked each national assembly to extend assistance to the Frankfurt Conference Committee in estimating the number of friends who plan to attend.

Arrangements are being made by the Conference Committee with the Frankfurt tourist traffic authorities at Frankfurt/M. Hauptbahnhof (Main Station) for a central clearing and reception point, through which all incoming friends will be immediately assigned to their hotels and private rooms.

The various national assemblies will be informed regularly about the progress of Conference registrations, program points, and other organizational news which may be of value to friends who plan to participate.

All Bahá’ís coming to the Frankfurt Conference must carry proper national assembly credentials. These are an absolute prerequisite for Conference attendance.

San Marino Recognizes A Baha’i Marriage

Bahá’ís of San Marino have been successful in obtaining legal recognition of a Bahá’í marriage performed there on December 28, 1957, at the home of the resident pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Shorab Payman.

Until two days before the ceremony the difficulties toward obtaining legal recognition seemed insurmountable. Although the families of the bride and groom had arrived, it seemed inevitable that the marriage must be postponed. Then, after an evening of prayer by the assembled friends, the obstacles vanished and the necessary approval was given.

This does not mean that the Bahá’í Faith is recognized in San Marino, but the government has accepted the Italo-Swiss National Spiritual Assembly as “competent authority,” and its Vice-Chairman, Fritz Semle of Wolfhalden, Switzerland, as having the faculty to perform the marriage. The Ufficiale dello Stato Civile (Civil Officer), one of the heads of the government, attended the wedding ceremony as representative of the government; also the Capo della Gendarmeria (Head of Police) was present.

San Marino, the oldest and one of the smallest republics, situated in the heart of Italy, is a World Crusade goal of the Italo-Swiss National Assembly. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Banáni, for whom the marriage was performed, made the occasion of their wedding an opportunity to inform those in the Catholic Christian Democratic government of San Marino of the Bahá’í Faith. The non-Bahá’ís present at this occasion spoke of the beauty of the prayers, the evident spiritual atmosphere, and the warm, loving hospitality offered them.

Canada Secures Temple Site

The National Spiritual Assembly of Canada has announced the purchase of the ground on which will be erected the Mother Temple of Canada, a clear title having been obtained on January 16, 1958. The site comprises a parcel of four acres of land, ideally located at Bayview Avenue on Cummer Avenue. Bayview is a through-traffic artery, north of Toronto, and the Assembly feels sure that it complies with Shoghi Effendi’s directives and desire regarding this project.

The Assembly states: “It is our regret that so much time has gone by since our beloved Guardian gave us this objective and assignment. For so long, various adverse and uncontrollable circumstances developed to delay the conclusion of our negotiations.”

Central America Convention To Be Held in Guatemala

The Annual Convention of the Bahá’ís of Central America and Mexico will be held in the city of Guatemala, Guatemala, from April 24 to 27, 1958, thus allowing time to attend the U. S. Convention and the Intercontinental Conference in Chicago.

The Central America Convention will stress the Indian work, so emphasized by the Guardian in the months before his passing. The usual public meeting will be dedicated to the Indians, and Indian leaders are being invited to take part in the program.

One evening will be set aside in memory of the beloved Guardian.

On the day following the Convention, all those who are able will go to Chichicastenango to inaugurate the new Bahá’í Indian Institute there.

It is hoped that many visitors from other countries will attend this unique Convention held in the lovely and picturesque setting of Guatemala.

Hands of Cause in Asia Appoint New Auxiliary Board Members

The Hands of the Cause of God in Asia have announced the appointment of two new members to their Auxiliary Board: Mrs. Mamie Seto of Hongkong, and William Maxwell of Korea.
Five More Countries Report Bahá’í Schools
Held in December-January Period

With the variations in seasons around the globe, Bahá’í Summer Schools are in session in some part of the world almost the year around. In the Northern Hemisphere Winter Schools are also frequently held for youth during their winter vacation period.

Several years ago the beloved Guardian commented on Bahá’í Schools in the May 1941 issue of BAHÁ’Í NEWS: "It is very interesting to follow up the development these institutions make from year to year and the way they attract attention more and more. Before long . . . they will become powerful and well-established organizations that will train innumerable young men and women to go out into the world and spread the message of Bahá’u’lláh."

Today many pioneer teachers in the World Crusade are among the spiritual fruits of these schools. Since the opening of the Ten-Year Plan the number of Bahá’í Schools held has been considerably increased, foreshadowing a rich harvest of Bahá’í scholars and teachers for the future. In March, BAHÁ’Í NEWS reported Schools held during the December-January period in Vietnam, New Zealand, Honduras, Australia, and El Salvador. Since then many new reports have come to amplify the world-wide picture of these beginning Bahá’í educational institutions.

Italo-Swiss School Attracts Youth From Six Countries

For the 35 students coming from six European countries to the Winter School in "Les Diablerets," (Vaud), Switzerland, during the winter holidays of December 26 to January 5, it was a warmly inspiring ten days. Daytime sessions were based upon The Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh, with eager participation from everyone present through the guidance of the teacher, Mr. Joel Marangella, Auxiliary Board member for Europe. The evening sessions were largely devoted to the Guardian’s works, and to his last message, which was carefully reviewed.

Caterina Bosio, who sent the report, comments: "Attending this school was a joyful experience. The beautiful, sunny days spent skiing, skating, and in long walks will live brightly in memory; and the evenings passed in a wonderful atmosphere of togetherness that will long warm the hearts of those participating in this third Italo-Swiss Bahá’í Youth Winter School."

Greater Antilles Holds First International Bahá’í School

The Bahá’í School of the Greater Antilles, held in the National Haşiratu’l-Quds in Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, at the end of December, chose the Covenant as a theme for their study. Students came from Jamaica, Haiti, Virgin Islands, along with the Dominican Republic and two visitors from Madrid, Spain. A second International Bahá’í School session is planned to follow the forthcoming National Convention in April. Students have been invited from the home island countries of Cuba, Jamaica, Haiti, and Dominican Republic, as well as from the virgin and consolidation island areas under the care of the Greater Antilles National Assembly: Martinique, Bermuda, Virgin Islands, Windward and Leeward Islands, Bahama Islands, and the Dutch East Indies. Four major languages and numerous local dialects are spoken in this territory.

German Winter School
Held in Black Forest
The German Winter School for youth was held on beautiful, snowy Mount Schauinsland in the southern Black Forest from December 26, 1957, to January 4, 1958, with about 90 attendants, 30 of whom were non-Bahá’ís, representing Arabia, Persia, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Iceland, England, and Germany. The two teachers were Dr. Hermann Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, and Martin Aiff; the general theme was “Religion and Man in the Machine Age.”

Hand of Cause Presides
Over South East Asia School
Dr. R. Muhijir, Hand of the Cause, presided over the first Summer School for South East Asia held in Malacca, Malaya, December 27 to 29. In addition to several pioneer teachers who were present, the Local Assemblies of Singapore, Kuala Lumpur, Seremban, and Malacca participated. The sessions were devoted especially to consulting on ways of achieving the various goals for this area, including the purchase of suitable pieces of land in Singapore, in Malacca, and also land for Bahá’í Burial Grounds; permission from Boards of Education for exemption of Bahá’í children on their Holy Days; opening of 12 new centers in Malaya, with special attention to native tribes of the Federation; and teaching programs for the educating of children, youth, and the deepening of all Bahá’ís toward their development as Bahá’í teachers.
First Mexico Teaching Congress Pledges
Obedience and Loyalty to Hands of Faith

The first Teaching Congress of the Bahá’ís of Mexico, scheduled for December 7 and 8, 1957, and dedicated to the goals of the Six-Year Plan given to Latin America by the Guardian, took place when the “supreme test” of the loss of our beloved Guardian was being most acutely felt.

The gathering of the friends from Puebla, Monterrey, Guadalajara, Culiacán, and the Federal District of Mexico in the Hazíratu’l-Quds of Mexico City the first evening was, for many, the first opportunity to meet.

The National Teaching Committee of Mexico states: “In the short time which had elapsed since the passing of the Guardian, we had been shaken by inexpressible grief. Our coming together was our joy. It was felt that by complete unity and dedication we could not only go on, but surpass our previous efforts to labor for the fulfillment of the ‘goals so dear to his heart.’”

The early darkness of a December evening had fallen when the friends gathered in the Hazíratu’l-Quds. The Congress opened with 19 Bahá’ís present, a number which grew to 24.

Mrs. Olympia Murray, chairman of the National Teaching Committee, gave a heart-warming welcome to the assembled friends, followed by the reading of the opening prayer by Harold Murray, chairman of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Mexico City.

Etsaban Canales, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause and chairman of the conference, then read the Tablet of Carmel in honor of the beloved Guardian, saying that the Guardian had greatly desired that all should study continuously the significance of this sacred Tablet of Bahá’u’lláh.

New Believers Welcomed

Two new believers were then presented to the group and given a warm and loving welcome. Following this, the friends had a chance to chat during the supper prepared by the Mexican friends.

Mr. Canales opened the evening session by saying that before the presentation of the goals of the Six-Year Plan he wished to speak of the beloved Guardian, and of the arduous and ceaseless labor for the Faith for which he gave his life.

In reference to the goal to stimulate the increase in the number of colored and Indian Bahá’ís, it was emphasized that this delicate work must be done with the utmost tact, taking into account their psychology and offering them real love, and above all, courtesy.

Sunday morning was bright and crisp, crowned with a deep blue sky. The friends gathered, waiting for the first session, when the bell at the street gate of the patio was heard to ring. When the ivy-covered entrance gate was opened, a group of Indian contacts were found gathered outside. It was the first visit of these new friends to the Hazíratu’l-Quds, the center of the Bahá’í community life and to be strong supporters of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh and firm in the Covenant.

He spoke of the National Office in Panama, and of the long hours, many times until early morning, which had been spent in translating the messages of Shoghi Effendi so that all the Bahá’ís might read them in the Bahá’í News. He related that in his visits to different communities he at times found those same messages, which contained such wisdom and teaching, had not been read.

Mr. Canales appealed to the hearts of the friends to reflect on, and be conscious of, the importance of the mission which had been entrusted to them, recommending that they read many times the messages in which the Guardian outlined the path necessary to achieve the new order on earth, and a new civilization.

Six-Year Plan Goals

The goals of the Six-Year Plan were then presented by Mr. Canales. The Guardian, he said, in the formation of the Plans, gave especial attention to teaching, which is the basis of all the activity of the Faith, and the most urgent task before the Bahá’ís in this critical period.

Referring to the words of Shoghi Effendi regarding the importance of the individual arising to proclaim the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh as never before, Mr. Canales cited the Guardian’s instructions that the most effective way to teach the Cause was for the individual to make contacts and choose a few of these friends whom he believed could become Bahá’ís from among them, gain their confidence, and finally select those who have responded to the Teachings and teach them until they are well prepared to take their part in the Bahá’í community life and to be strong supporters of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh and firm in the Covenant.

First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Honiara, Solomon Islands, formed on April 21, 1957. The original pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Blum, are in the center. and the Bahá'ís gathered around them with such friendliness and cordiality that the invitation to return and join the gathering in the evening was accepted.

Everyone felt as if a wonderful event had taken place, and thoughts turned to Shoghi Effendi and how dear this goal was to him. Through friendship with these dear people perhaps an all-Indian assembly can, through the assistance of Bahá'u'lláh, be established in the pueblo where they were born.

Message From the Hands Read

After prayers, the morning session was opened by Mr. Canales reading the message from the Hands of the Cause regarding the succession of the Guardianship. The faith of all these new Bahá'ís was unwavering, and as he closed, Mr. Canales urged the friends to continue to be united in love and service that thus, as he closed, Mr. Canales urged the friends to continue to be united in love and service to the Guardian. The faith of all these new Bahá'ís was unwavering, and as he closed, Mr. Canales urged the friends to continue to be united in love and service to the Guardian. The faith of all these new Bahá'ís was unwavering, and as he closed, Mr. Canales urged the friends to continue to be united in love and service to the Guardian.

A summary and discussion of the last, transcendental message of the Guardian followed, in which the purposes of the coming five Intercontinental Conferences were stressed.

In the afternoon Dr. Edris Rice-Wray opened with a talk on "The Application of the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh to the Personal and Communal Life."

Afterward, the session was devoted to consultation on goals and plans. Many inspired suggestions were made for the attracting of people where fanaticism urges caution and wisdom. There followed suggestions regarding programs in the Bahá'í Centers on cultural subjects, such as are now being done in Mexico City, on the history of the Indian in Mexico. A request for a tri-monthly news bulletin especially for Mexico was made, and there was a discussion of the proposed plan to open up the border towns on the Mexican and American frontier.

Indian Goals Stressed

Discussion of the Indian goals brought out many interesting highlights. It was suggested that the manner in which the Indian visitors were received in the evening could lay the foundation for teaching them later. The great success of the work in Africa was referred to, as also the confirmation of the natives of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands.

The Mexican Indian Committee announced that a pamphlet had been translated into the Nahuatl dialect. Miss Lecile Webster, chairman of this Committee, requested that each community appoint one of its members to maintain contact with the Indian Committee of Mexico, and to make reports of the progress of this goal in their area.

Cable to Holy Land

The following cable, in an effort to express the spirit of complete dedication that had pervaded the sessions, was sent by the Congress to Rúhíyyih Khánum in Haifa: "Pledge unqualified obedience, loyalty blessed institution Hands. Bahá'í Teaching Congress, Mexico."

Three More Countries Report

World Religion Day Meetings

The spread to other countries of public observances of World Religion Day, an annual event instituted by the U. S. National Spiritual Assembly in 1950 to proclaim the fundamental oneness of religion, was reported in Bahá'í News for March.

Since the publication of that issue, reports have been received from three additional countries where World Religion Day was publicly recognized: Laos, the British Isles, and Austria.

Four Faiths Join in Observance of World Religion Day in Laos

With the approval of the Minister of Religion for the country, the Bahá'ís of Vientiane, Laos, were able to join the rest of the Bahá'í world in the observance of World Religion Day this year. He also contributed greatly to the success of the program by sending the Director of Religion and four Buddhist monks to participate.

Miss Banu Hassan, American Bahá'í pioneer in Laos, reporting the meeting, wrote:

"The Director of Religion spoke in Laoatian about World Religion Day, and the monks chanted with such reverence that they brought tears to our eyes. A Sikh followed and translated his Hindu chant into English, also telling the gathering of the happiness he felt in being part of such a program.

First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Webster Groves, Mo., formed on April 21, 1957.

"Others who participated were a Protestant who read a prayer in English, a Muslim who chanted a Muslim prayer, and a Laoatian school teacher who read the Bahá’í Prayer for all Mankind. Following a few closing remarks and the Bahá’í Prayer for Unity, all were invited to remain for tea. "Our little Bahá’í Center was overflowing with people of all colors and religions. Many questions were asked. Our first Laoatian Bahá’í had prepared a beautifully lettered poster for the room with the quotation: 'The world is but one country and mankind its citizens.' The second Laoatian believer provided a huge cake for the occasion with the words 'World Religion Day' frosted across the top. It was a beautiful day!"

With the subsequent enrollment of a Buddhist monk as a believer, the achievement of assembly status in Vientiane is assured this year.

First World Religion Day Observed in British Isles at Many Centers

World Religion Day was observed in the British Isles for the first time this year, and meetings were held throughout the country.

In Reading 70 people attended, in Bournemouth 56, in Bristol 40, and in London the Hazíratu’l-Quds was filled to capacity.

The Manchester meeting was held in the Town Hall, with the Lord Mayor presiding. Here, and also in Eccles, Reading, Cardiff, and other centers, the platform was shared by leaders in many faiths.

Birmingham, Leicester, Northampton, Oxford, and Edinburgh also reported meetings.

At the Hazíratu’l-Quds in London a reception was held on the Wednesday previous to World Religion Day, to which many prominent people were invited.

World Religion Day Observance Marks Spiritual Rebirth of Vienna

After 20 years of suffering caused by the Anschluss and World War II, the flame of the Holy Spirit is burning stronger in Vienna, Austria, a city blessed by 'Abdu’l-Bahá’s footsteps in 1913.

To celebrate World Religion Day this year, the Local Spiritual Assembly of Vienna succeeded in renting one of the newest and most modern auditoriums, with a capacity of 500 persons.

Six hundred-forty posters were displayed in 22 districts, and 150 invitations were sent to the closer contacts. With Bahá’u’lláh’s confirmations and the sacred words of our well-beloved Guardian, who always encouraged the friends in Vienna to search for the ready souls, 250 persons participated.

Six religions were represented: Jewish, Buddhist, Protestant (Lutheran), Liberal Catholic, Old Catholic, and Bahá’í. Dr. Walter Ott from Switzerland, who was the Bahá’í speaker, mentioned in his speech the tolerance of the Israeli government toward the Bahá’í Faith. Music of Bach completed the program.

Throughout the meeting one could feel, through the power of Bahá’u’lláh’s Word, the spirit of harmony and unity. People left the hall with uplifted hearts, great interest, and a new outlook on world unity and world peace.

20 National Assemblies Needed in Latin America By 1963

The biggest task in the Western Hemisphere remaining in the five years before 1963 is the formation of 20 new national spiritual assemblies in Latin America— one for each republic. The number of enrolled believers, including the North American pioneers already at their posts in these countries, is not sufficient to accomplish this task, and there must be more pioneers in almost every country.

Nicaragua, Venezuela, Paraguay, and Uruguay each have but one local assembly. Many more will have to be established before a national spiritual assembly can be elected. Other republics, having two or three assemblies, are equally in need of assistance in establishing additional assemblies.

Two Neediest Countries

Two of the neediest countries, in addition to those mentioned above, are El Salvador and Ecuador. The latter has only one pioneer for the whole country. Some assemblies need assistance in order to become responsible and self-reliant.

Please write to the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee if you are considering pioneering, as we may be able to make specific suggestions based upon individual considerations and problems. The time is getting short, and there is nothing more important to any believer than fulfilling his part in helping to achieve the goals of the Ten-Year World Crusade.

Opening of Leicester Center
Followed By Weekend School

Bahá'ís of Leicester, England, who formed their first assembly last Ridván, opened their new Bahá'í Center on February 15. Hasan Balyuzi, Hand of the Cause, conducted the dedication. Sixty people attended the opening from all over the British Isles, and the Center was filled to capacity.

The opening of the Bahá'í Center was combined with a Weekend School, attended by over 40 persons.

The two local newspapers sent reporters to the opening, and these newspapers printed a photograph and an account of the occasion.

After the tea break following the official opening of the Center, Ian Semple, a member of the Auxiliary Board, spoke on “The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.” Later, Mrs. Dorothy Ferraby, also a member of the Auxiliary Board, reported on the Intercontinental Conference at Kampala, from which she had just returned.

The photograph above shows the first Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Leicester, England, formed on April 21, 1957. To the left is a photograph of the dedication ceremonies at the opening of the Leicester, England, Hażíratu'l-Quds on February 15, 1958.

New Local Spiritual Assembly
Formed in S. King County, Wash.

An interesting account of the events leading up to the formation of the first Local Spiritual Assembly of South King County Commissioner’s District, Wash., on April 21, 1957, accompanied the photograph of this Assembly published in this issue of Baha’i News.

The beginning was the formation of the first Baha’i group of six believers on January 12, 1956, who immediately fixed their eyes on achieving assembly status by April of the next year. All Nineteen-Day Feasts were held regularly, an informal study class was conducted on alternate Sundays for the deepening of the members of the group, and firesides were conducted frequently, with the place and subject arranged to meet the individual needs.

The high point of the year was the Naw-Ruz Feast, which brought together the new contacts who were soon to become members of the group.

During the summer four of the members were obliged to move to another state, but another believer and her husband who was already an enthusiastic student of the Faith moved in. Then for a few months a Baha’i from Alaska contributed greatly to the strength of the group and the believers. Nearby believers helped with firesides, and in February 1957 the first new Baha’i was enrolled, followed by another within a month.

Then in quick succession two more Baha’i couples established their homes in South King County, thus assuring the formation of the first Local Spiritual Assembly in that particular area. Four more believers, two of them from Alaska, joined them, bringing the community membership to thirteen. A few days before Ridván one other new believer was enrolled, and thus was able to take part in the election of this important institution of the Faith.

In writing of the experiences of this rapid succession of events the Local Spiritual Assembly says: “This short story cannot recount the joy, excitement, love, and fellowship found by the members in one year, and no words can express the wonderment felt in each heart by seeing, first hand, God’s Plan in action.”

Paul E. Haney to Serve in Haifa

The friends are informed that Paul E. Haney, Hand of the Cause and Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, has left the United States to assume his position as one of the nine Hands elected to serve in the Holy Land. He has won, by his years of admirable service as one of the American Hands and as Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, the high regard and grateful esteem of his fellow-Baha’is throughout the Western Hemisphere as well as in the United States.

Baha’is Play Active Role in Honolulu’s Brotherhood Week

In the brochure Success in Teaching, Ruhijiyih Khanum discusses some of the reasons why Baha’is reach only a limited number of people in their communities. She suggests crossing over into other “pockets” of community activity—that is, mingling with various social groups and cooperating with organizations who have kindred interests and thus gradually reaching a majority of the receptive people in a locality. The Baha’is of Honolulu demonstrated the results of such activity on their part during their city’s February observance of Brotherhood Week. The Hawaii Chapter of the World Brotherhood activities for Honolulu chose two Baha’is for their Planning Committee, Major Salvatore Pelle and Lee Chang, the former acting as committee chairman. Other Baha’is in the community came forward to help staff a “brotherhood booth” installed outside the Bank of Hawaii building, along with UNICEF and We The Women, and also assisted in the hospitality tour held at the consulates of the Philippines, Japan, Korea and China. Major Pelle acted as master of ceremonies for the annual banquet held at the Hawaiian Village Longhouse, with an attendance of 300.

During the week, on February 20, the Baha’is sponsored their own public meeting and were rewarded with an audience that filled the Honolulu center to capacity.

In Kailua, Lanakai, Hawaii, Mrs. Dorothy Beers, a Baha’i, was in charge of Brotherhood Week activities.

For inspiration and ideas leading to such successes many Baha’i communities would find that some group study and consultation on Ruhijiyih Khanum’s excellent article mentioned above could pay rich dividends. It is an item frequently recommended for individual and community study by the National Spiritual Assembly.
Australian Youth Prepare to Meet Critical Thought of Modern World

The Bahá’í Youth Letter, issued by the Australian Youth Committee, has opened a new department called “Thought and Thinkers.” It will present brief excerpts from the works of some of the world’s leaders, expressing the views of large sections of humanity. The article states: “Only by an understanding of the problems of man, of his ideas, beliefs, and creeds, can we adequately present our own view, our belief in God’s plan for the world. Read these extracts critically, find their weaknesses, if any, and give the Bahá’í answer to the writers’ problems.”

In this way the youth of Australia are preparing themselves to more adequately meet and cope with the intellectual and critical thought of our day, in the light of the Bahá’í teachings. They have emphasized an important aspect of Bahá’í living in today’s world—the need to know and to understand philosophic trends and beliefs—in order to make an increasingly intelligent application of the Teachings, and to illuminate the minds and hearts with God’s Revelation for this day.

Australian Newspaper Publishes “Christ and Baha’u’llah”

The Northern Argus, a South Australian newspaper, is publishing the whole of George Townshend’s book Christ and Baha’u’llah in weekly installments over a 16 week period.

Arrangements for this publication were made by Mrs. Rose Hawthorne, who estimates that the Northern Argus has about 12,000 readers.

BAHÁ’I IN THE NEWS

Wilmette Life, December 5, 1957, used in full the release prepared to announce the election by the Hands of the Cause of the nine members “to conduct and protect the affairs of the Faith from its world center.”

Congress Weekly, a review of Jewish interests, published on January 6 an article by Herbert Freedon of Jerusalem on “Israel’s Youngest Religion.” Following a reference to the recent death of Shoghi Effendi Rabbani, which the author states “has focused attention upon the Faith,” Mr. Freedon reports the information received from a believer at the Bahá’í Temple and proceeds to summarize very sympathetically the Bahá’í teachings and history.

Three pamphlets published for distribution to Israel Government tourist offices contain reference to the Faith: Israel: Treasury of Legend, a beautifully illustrated brochure, concludes its statement on “Legends of Safed and Carmel” with the statement: “But for legends of recent times, and especially of the future, one has only to stand on the hill’s summit at night and glance downwards. The golden dome of the Bahá’í shrine gleams in the moonlight ...”

A Tourist’s Companion to Israel provides suggested itineraries, including one to Haifa— “Country’s main port on the slopes of Mt. Carmel, Carmelite Monastery and Bahá’í Shrine.” Visitor’s Guide to Israel, under “Haifa” lists the main points of interest, including “Bahá’í Temple and Gardens.”

“Roman City Found by Archeologists,” an article in New York Herald Tribune, Sunday, December 1, 1957, contains this passage: “A major tourist attraction in Haifa is the Bahá’í Temple, headquarters for a religion founded by a Persian that has three million adherents throughout the world ... The Bahá’ís have an even more spectacular temple in Wilmette, Illinois.”

Nurses Alumni Bulletin, November, 1957, published by the University of Wisconsin, reprinted the addresses delivered at the 1957 Field Day. Our Bahá’í friend, Manucher J. Javid, M.D., spoke on “Nursing Prescription,” summarizing the history of the nursing profession and introducing the concept, “The Problems Confronting Humanity are due to Lack of Love for God.” On this basis, Dr. Javid cited passages from Bahá’í writings to point to the Source of love in our era.

Journal of Lifetime Living, December 1957, listed the free literature distributed by various religions including the Bahá’í Faith. Hundreds of requests have been received at

Haiti Recognizes Bahá'í Marriages

Haiti has extended legal recognition to Bahá'í marriages, according to information just received. This was incorrectly reported by the Na-

National Spiritual Assembly of the Greater Antilles in the November issue of Bahá'í News, page 5, as Jamaica. This means that Haiti, not Jamaica, is actually the first country under the jurisdiction of the Greater Antilles National Spiritual Assembly to receive this important recognition.

The Faith of Baha’u’llah

The tribulations attending the progressive unfoldment of the Faith of Baha’u’llah have indeed been such as to exceed in gravity those from which the religions of the past have suffered. Unlike those religions, however, these tribulations have failed utterly to impair its unity, or to create, even temporarily, a breach in the ranks of its adherents. It has not only survived these ordeals, but has emerged, purified and inviolate, endowed with greater capacity to face and surmount any crisis which its resistless march may engender in the future.

Whatever may befall this infant Faith of God in future decades or in succeeding centuries, whatever the sorrows, dangers and tribulations which the next stage of its world-wide development may engender, from whatever quarter the assaults to be launched by its present or future adversaries may be unleashed against it, however great the reverses and setbacks it may suffer, we, who have been privileged to apprehend, to the degree our finite minds can fathom, the significance of these marvelous phenomena associated with its rise and establishment, can harbor no doubt that what it has already achieved in the first hundred years of its life provides sufficient guarantee that it will continue to forge ahead, capturing loftier heights, tearing down every obstacle, opening up new horizons and winning still mightier victories until its glorious mission, stretching into the dim ranges of time that lie ahead, is totally fulfilled.

Tribute to Shoghi Effendi
by Ruhiyyih Khanum

At the Kampala Intercontinental Conference
January 26, 1958

Everybody who had the great privilege of knowing the Guardian recognized in him tremendous power; he not only had great spiritual and mental power which radiated from him, he had an electric something in his nature which was like being in the presence of a very powerful dynamo. I have been in electric plants where dynamos have generated electrical power for a whole city; the whole building shook and vibrated with the force that was being created in those generators. I have witnessed, myself, for twenty years, the strange force which emanated from Shoghi Effendi. This emanation from the Guardian was so strong that when he was not in the house, I felt less of it; when he was up on the mountain in the gardens of the Shrine, I would feel the force of it diminish; when he was in Bahji, I would feel still less of it; and if we were not in the same city, I would not feel it. It was a very extraordinary thing, and it was not my imagination.

Another thing about the Guardian, which I have sometimes wondered if those who were not closely associated with him ever realized, is that Shoghi Effendi was a very sensitive person. He was sensitive as a child. He was one of those children that, I believe in my long observation, should have always received encouragement. You know, there are children who don't need it; they are tough little plants. But there are other children who need to be told for everything they do, "My dear, you were sweet to think of it," "You are a wonderful person," "That was a wonderful idea," "How well you did it." The Guardian was like that—he needed, not to mention what he deserved, to always be encouraged.

I would not have you think that the Guardian was a sad being; he had a peculiarly joyous and luminous heart. The one characteristic of that heart was the most extraordinary and true humility I have ever seen. He had, of course, like any other human being, self-respect. But he had no pride whatsoever—no pride in his own person, no pride in his station; but when it came to this religion, then he had a fiery pride. He would never tolerate any insult or any slight that reflected on him as Guardian, nor on the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. But in his own nature he was the quintessence of humility.

Shoghi Effendi's Transition to Guardianship

I have heard many times from the Guardian that he never dreamed that he would be made Guardian. He had no idea that there would be an Institution of the Guardianship and that he would be chosen to become the Guardian of the Bahá'í Faith. He said that his hope and ambition was to return to serve the Master, translate the Teachings into English, and that he thought that perhaps when 'Abdu'l-Bahá ascended, as he was the eldest grandson, it might fall to his lot to be requested by the Master, posthumously naturally, to open any documents of instruction and communicate them to the Bahá'ís.

So, you see that this man, who was twenty-four years old and who had what I would call such an easier heart, so full of purity, enthusiasm, innocence, humility, and love for 'Abdu'l-Bahá, this pure heart of the Guardian received the first and most terrible blow through hearing of the ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá. He was anxious for news of the Master and went to Mr. Tudor Pole's office in London from Oxford. Tudor Pole had received a cable saying that 'Abdu'l-Bahá had ascended. Shoghi Effendi was left by the secretary of Tudor Pole in his private office for a moment, and without meaning to, his eyes fell on this cablegram, laid open on the corner of the table, saying that 'Abdu'l-Bahá had ascended. A few moments later, when Tudor Pole came into the room, he found Shoghi Effendi crumpled in a heap on the floor.

They brought the Guardian back to Haifa, practically ill; and when he arrived there, he received a second most terrible shock of his life because the Will and Testament was read to him, and he found that the burden which had rested first on the Báb, then on Bahá'u'lláh, and then on his beloved grandfather, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, had fallen with all its weight on his shoulders. He told me once, "The day they read me the Will and Testament I ceased to be a normal human being."

We take too much for granted in this world, all of us. I took the Guardian for granted before I went to live in Haifa. I don't know what I thought, I must have thought that he just sat there and all the time heard 'Abdu'l-Bahá speaking into his ears, and that it was a lovely, peaceful experience. My observations, naturally, are those of an ant looking at the sun. But nevertheless I did observe certain things, and I believe that the nature of divine inspiration is not like something that is written up that these great souls read constantly before their eyes. It is rather in the nature of intermittent pulsations—flashes of lightning.

The Guardian was always guided and always protected, but that doesn't change the fact that he had agonizing moments of anxiety, of sorrow, of despair perhaps, over certain situations, and that he suffered terribly. Then came these tremendous impulses. He always said the right thing; he always did the right thing. God never abandoned him for a second. But it was not a constant process—it was flashes, and in between those flashes, there was room for infinite suffering.

Acute Sufferings of the Beloved Guardian

I am not going to give a discourse on the subject of Covenant-Breaking, but everybody knows that in this world, where there is light, there is shadow, and the closer you are to the light itself, the darker is the shadow at the foot of the lantern. In the sky, where the sun shines, there is no shadow—that is the world of God. But in this world, wherever there is brilliant light, at the foot of it is blackest shadow. The Guardian had a heart which was exactly like a source, a spring. It bubbled. Left alone, he had the happiest and most radiant heart of any being I have ever seen, and up until the very end of his life, in spite of the troubles and sorrows that had come to him one could see, sometimes, that heart bubble. Now, no doubt it is bubbling freely on high. But in those early years he suffered so terribly, it left its imprint on him for life.

When my mother and I were in Haifa in 1922 or 1923 (I was a child) the Guardian was going away and he called us to his bedroom. He looked so absolutely haggard, with great circles under his eyes. He said “Mrs. Maxwell, I cannot stand it, I am going away.” But of course, he came back in the Autumn and went on with his work.

He was so conscientious, so conscious of the burden that had been placed upon him, that in the early years almost to the end of his life he denied himself practically everything. Although there were very few things that Shoghi Effendi liked or wanted (he had extremely simple tastes in food, in dress, in everything), he had a very beautiful characteristic—what he liked, he liked all through and for ever.

I don’t think that the friends know, and especially up until perhaps ten years ago, how hard on himself he was—in the sense of depriving himself, of living very simply. He ate once every twenty-four hours. This had nothing either to do with economy or asceticism, he just did not feel hungry more often than that, and from his early childhood he did not seem to be able to eat more than once or twice a day. This was a life-long habit, to eat one meal a day. It worried me terribly, and I used to speak to the doctors about it. They said, “Don’t worry, as long as he is healthy and does not feel that he wants to eat more than once a day, don’t insist, leave him alone.” At length I got used to it.

I think that it encourages the friends to know, especially the poorer friends who have sacrificed so much to this Faith, that the Guardian, although he was so very careful of everything to do with his honor as Guardian, as a man and as an individual where he was not known, lived with the utmost simplicity. For many, many years, when he went away in the summer to rest, and I assure you friends, that the Guardian wouldn’t have lasted for thirty-six years if he had not had a little rest in the summer, he lived very, very modestly. He had a room for about two and a half shillings, and it was so small that when one of his relatives came to see him in it, he could not stand up straight because his head banged on the slanting ceiling.

Fearless Defense of the Cause of God

The Guardian was absolutely fearless when it came to defending the Cause of God. He was like a lion. One of his strongest characteristics was an absolutely inflexible sense about compromise. Shoghi Effendi never compromised a hair’s breadth. I could give you a hundred examples of this in his nature, but I will give you a few, because I think this is very, very important for all of us. It is important for every Baha’i, but it is particularly important for the teachers of the Faith, the pioneers and the national assembly members. I don’t have to tell this to the Hands.

How many mosquitoes does it take to give you malaria or yellow fever? When we compromise our Faith, it is like taking a glass of pure water, and putting one drop of ink in it—it does not become a glass of ink, but the purity of the water is gone. We all know that there is no compromise with people who were Covenant-Breakers, if they had not changed in their hearts, because the heart is the measure. When they were repentant in their hearts, Shoghi Effendi forgave them, and there are many people who were out of the Faith and are in it again because the Guardian inhaled one breath of sincerity from their hearts and accepted them.

You see, the Guardian had so many sides to his nature, and you have seen how strong he was when it came to defending the Faith. He never compromised on principle. Now, I would like to show you another aspect of his nature. He had a tremendous capacity for love and for loyalty for those whom he loved, but when they became Covenant-Breakers it evaporated, they ceased to exist and the bounties ceased to flow. I remember when Dr. Zia Baghdadi died and the news reached him. I don’t know exactly when it was, but it was a very, very short time after my marriage with the Guardian. Perhaps in the first month, or maybe even less time than that. News came saying that Zia Baghdadi had died and the Guardian cried for almost an hour that night.

The Guardian was not emotional, he was absolutely impervious to influence. I think that the friends don't realize that the Central Figures of our Faith had an unimpeachable, steady quality in their nature that was never influenced by their emotions and that whatever they considered right they did in spite of everything.

I don't think the friends realize what went behind those cables putting the different members of the Master's family out of the Cause. Years of suffering, years of crushing his heart, years of hurt and insult—he kept silent and bore and bore and bore and bore, until it reached the point where it was bad for the Cause—then he took action. But what they did to him personally he always endured. He used to suffer very much from two things, and one of them was, of course, the actions of people who were either Covenant-Breakers or in process of becoming Covenant-Breakers, and the other was from the suffering of the Bahá'ís.

Method of Meeting Obstacles

There are three other qualities in the Guardian's nature which I think the friends would like to hear about, and which are very important ones for us to remember now as we go forward into the next five years of the Plan. The first of these is audacity; the second is ingenuity, and the third is economy. The Guardian had all these qualities to a pronounced degree. The Guardian was never prevented from accomplishing anything because there were obstacles in the way. He charged them full on, he never tried to avoid them or go around them—he flew at them. His ingenuity in accomplishing the work in Haifa particularly, was phenomenal. He devised ways of doing things which he himself had never seen done, and had never heard of being done.

For instance, he used to build terraces and gardens. People would come to him and they would say "A tree can't grow in one meter of soil—a tree can't grow on top of a roof of a cistern—you cannot plant a tree in the ground and pile up earth all around up to its crown, it will die," and so on. He did all of those things, he planted trees on tops of cisterns and nothing happened to them, he covered trees up to the crown and it looked as if three beautiful trees would grow out of the soil instead of one. He was not intimidated by the opinions of other people.

The Guardian of the Bahá'í Faith watched the expenditure of every penny that he was responsible for in the Holy Land, and indeed all over the world, to a degree which I think the Bahá'ís have no idea about whatsoever. I have no time to go into details, but I can assure you that there was never any work carried out in Haifa that was not greatly economized by the Guardian—in the building of the Shrine, the building of the gardens, the development of the entrances, the gates, the paths, the pedestals supporting the ornaments—the Guardian made very sure that he was doing the thing in the most economical manner. No matter what the thing was, if he considered that the price was exorbitant, he would not pay it, whether it was required, or very important, or needed for part of a scheme: if the price was exorbitant he just would not pay that price. The basis of this religion is sacrifice, conscientious, tireless, wholehearted, end-less sacrifice—that is what we saw in our Guardian for 36 years.

His Life a Total Sacrifice

The degree to which Shoghi Effendi sacrificed himself in every human sense is unbelievable—he had no life of his own, no time of his own, practically no joys of his own, very little happiness in all of his life. He hurried all the time, he had a sense of haste and pressure, and I think all those who worked with him in Haifa and the friends all over the world, when receiving his messages, and when they felt the vibrations of this power within him, realized this sense of urgency—hurry, hurry, hurry, all the time, to get it done quickly before something happened.

The Guardian said to some of the pilgrims, during the last year and a half or two years, something very strange. He said there are two Plans. The long-term eternal Plan of Almighty God for mankind on this planet; that is the Plan that has the Prophets of God, the Adamic Cycle and all the Great Manifestations of God, like Christ and Mohammed, Buddha, Zoroaster, and Moses and so on, bringing us to this day with the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh. This is the Mighty Plan of God, educating humanity and bringing the Kingdom of Heaven on earth on this planet. He said this is the plan of God, it goes forward in mysterious ways, we do not always understand its workings.

Then, he said, we have the Divine Plan, which is being carried forward by the Bahá'ís in the form as we know it, first, the two Seven-Year Plans, and then this Ten-Year Plan—the World Crusade which we are now engaged upon and part of which has passed.

The Guardian said, who knows, maybe this great Plan of God will interfere in the other Plan. We always thought, at least I always thought, that this meant the war which we have reason to believe we may not be able to avert, was probably the thing. I could never dream that this trial that could cut across the Plan, the Ten-Year Plan that we are working on now, would be the ascension of our Guardian.

The beloved Guardian sacrificed himself for this Cause as completely as anyone who was ever martyred in the physical sense. He burned away until there was nothing left, and suddenly God took his spirit in the twinkling of an eye because he had evidently finished his task in this world. The Guardian was in better health this summer than he had been for years. His own physician said so; he had good doctors when he had the Asiatic flu in London, and he was examined thoroughly and there was nothing in the world for anyone to believe that he could possibly pass away.

We can only bow our heads before the Will of God, believing and knowing that Bahá'u'lláh has His Own Plan, that He will guard and protect this Faith and that nothing can thwart His Will. But He did not leave us empty-handed, we have His work to carry on and the greatest monument that we can build in our love and our sorrow for Shoghi Effendi is the monument of our work in this world-encircling Plan. There are some words of Abdu'l-Bahá which I should like to quote: He said "As you have faith, so shall your powers and blessings be, this is the balance, this is the balance, this is the balance."

So, in the name of Shoghi Effendi, I appeal to you all to carry on his work as one soul in many bodies.
Soul-Stirring Visit of Ruhiyyih Khanum Inspires Kampala Conference to Heights of Devotion to Faith

NEVER has the language of silence spoken so eloquently messages of the heart as for the first time she passed up the center aisle of the auditorium, crowded beyond capacity with believers gathered here in the heart of Africa from thirty-eight countries of the world, almost half of whom were from among the African believers of the continent; beloved, revered 'Aramatul-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánum was embraced by waves of sympathy, and love poured out to her by over 950 believers standing in reverent silence, whose tear-flooded eyes were but a mirror of her own. When she was able, these were the first of the many heart-soothing and inspiring words she addressed to us during this Intercontinental Conference for Africa—January 1958.

"I don't know with what voice to address the friends—it is so hard to speak to them now—it seems too unbelievable that I should ever have to stand here and the Guardian not be in Haifa.

"I want to read you some words which have been a big comfort to me at this time. Perhaps they will comfort all of you. I will read it first in very bad Arabic and then in English. 'He doeth what He willeth, and ordaineth what He pleaseth. None hath the right to ask why or wherefore, and he that doeth so hath indeed turned aside from God, the Lord of all the worlds.'

"Why God should have taken our Guardian away from us, I don't know, but that nothing in the world can ever happen to even the humblest servant of God without its being the Will of God, we know from all the Holy Books of the world. And how much more true this is of such a being as Shoghi Effendi. If he was taken from us, then it was because at last Bahá'u'lláh had mercy on him and ended his burden and his sorrows.

"We know that nothing can deflect the development of the mighty river of God. This Faith will go on. It will illumine all the peoples of the world. The civilization of Bahá'u'lláh will be established, and His promises will come true. But before this great mystery, all of us are broken-hearted, and all of us bow our heads.

"We now must ask ourselves what we must do. If we had performed our duties better during the last thirty-six years as Bahá'ís, I think we would have prolonged the life of the Guardian. But we didn't. He had too many blows, too many sorrows; he was too tender, too sensitive. He threw himself into the fire of service to this Cause, and like a moth in the flame, he was burned up and consumed by it.

"He has performed miracles in five years—now it is our turn. We must perform miracles in the next five years, and this is the only way that we can show that we are his true servants and his true lovers. So I urge you all to devote your minds and your hearts to absorbing as much as you can from this great gathering—not only giving out, but taking in as much as you can of the spirit that is going to be inevitably engendered from this Conference and carry back with you a torch to set the Bahá'í world on fire, because we are not going to have another opportunity. The people are all alone now, and this is their last opportunity. If we have failed in the past we cannot fail now, neither the Guardian, nor the Cause of God, nor humanity. I hope that each one of you will go back from this Conference, whether it's to your homes in the villages of Africa, whether it's to Persia, the Cradle of the Faith, or to America, to Europe, Asia, wherever it may be, just like a blazing fire, and set the Bahá'í world aflame and create a worthy memorial to our beloved Guardian."

Our beloved Guardian had, in his last message to the Bahá'í world in October, announced these five Intercontinental Conferences to mark and celebrate the midway point of the Ten-Year Spiritual Crusade, and had dedicated them to "The glorification of His Name." Here in Africa, we had rejoiced much that he had chosen this continent for the honour of receiving beloved ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum as his personal representative.

African Bahá’ís at the Kampala railroad station upon their arrival at the Conference.

Conference Overwhelmingly Successful

Kampala is, by the standards of the world, a small and quiet town, situated high on a cool, green plateau on the shores of azure Lake Victoria, in the heart of Uganda and Africa. If one could turn back the pages of its history, it is doubtful if one could discover records of any comparable period of furious preparation for coming events.

It was at first visualized that approximately 400 people would attend the Conference; about half of whom would be from among the African believers. Then the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land acted—first, to invite as their guests an African attendance of at least 400, and then to urge as many as possible of the Persian friends to come. Successive stages of frantic planning and re-planning brought us to within two weeks of the convening of the Conference, when it was learned that five chartered aircraft would bring 315 believers from Persia alone. All our plans were now totally inadequate.
Every hotel in town was solidly booked with Bahá’ís.
There wasn’t another bed to be had. The auditorium in which it had been planned to hold the Conference would seat at most six hundred. We had to begin all over again.

The first gathering of the friends was at the Unity Feast on the afternoon prior to the official opening of the Conference. The seven bus-loads of African believers from Uganda were yet to arrive, but already a wonderful spirit of unity and purpose could be felt as the friends listened to the opening greetings of Hands of the Cause Tarázu’lláh Samandari, Enoch Olinga, and William Sears.

Immediately after the Feast, a small group of the Hands of the Cause, Auxiliary Board, National Assembly, and Conference Committee members went to the airport to greet ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum, accompanied by Dr. Lotfollah Hakim, member of the International Bahá’í Council, and by Mr. and Mrs. Challoner Chute, ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum’s cousin and her husband. From the moment she stepped off the plane, dressed in beautiful white, she was, as the Chairman expressed it so well on the closing afternoon of the Conference—"the heart, the light, the life, everything about this Conference."

Deeply tired, grief-stricken—she nonetheless gave of herself utterly, without regard for health or rest, standing at times for many hours, despite their ardent protests, to meet and greet the believers who now turned to her for love and comfort in their deprivation.
Her beauty of spirit and face, her simplicity and informality, her deep understanding of our needs, her gentle love and comforting touch, and most of all her depth, deep love of our Guardian and her determination that his plans shall be fulfilled, eased our aching hearts, and turned our thoughts and energies to consideration of the vital work ahead.

Ultimately, six Hands of the Cause, a member of the International Bahá’í Council, sixteen Auxiliary Board members, and representatives from eleven national spiritual assemblies (including those from the four African regional assemblies, those from the other national assemblies which had participated in the African campaign—Britain, India, Iraq, Persia, and the United States, and those from Arabia and Japan), 450 of the devoted African believers, and other friends from Africa and the rest of the world to a total of 850 were present at the formal convening of the Conference the following morning.

A magnet to the sorrowing Bahá’í world, the Confer­ eence had drawn believers from its remotest precincts.
Two Knights of Bahá’u’lláh had winged their way to Africa from far-off island outposts, one from palm­clad Truk in the Caroline Islands of the mid-Pacific Ocean, and the other from Lofoten Island, deep within the ice­ bound reaches of the Arctic Circle. On that opening morning, we heard greetings from the revered Hand of the Cause, Musa Banání, and had our first opportunity

Those who could not journey to Kampala nonetheless came in spirit. Cablegrams and letters of greeting poured in from the far corners of the world. Hands of the Cause and national assemblies, innumerable communities and individuals throughout the globe sent message to the beloved—England, Ireland, France, Germany, Switzerland, Portugal, Italy, Turkey, Lebanon, Iraq, Persia, Pakistan, India, Indonesia, Australia,
Hong Kong, Japan, Korea, the United States, and Alaska—and from South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Italian Somaliland, Ethiopia, Sudan, Egypt,
Tunisia, Morocco, French West Africa, Madeira Island,
Canary Islands, Cape Verde Islands, and Angola.

Portrait of Bahá’u’lláh Reverently Shown

On the afternoon of the first day when the doors were opened, there was a loud scuffling of running feet, the sounds of many voices, much pushing and peering—something was about to happen. Now had come that one sacred moment when they were to be allowed to gaze on His countenance. They rushed to the scene of their joy, eager, excited. As the prayers were read and chanted, as the friends sat facing the banks of many-hued tropical flowers, in the bosom of which, arranged on a cloth of rich green velvet and surrounded by deep red roses and carnations, were the four precious relics sent to the Conference by our beloved Guardian, a deep silence fell over the room.

As they passed slowly, reverently before 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum to be annointed with the attar of roses found in our beloved Guardian's suitcase at the time of his passing, as they paused on bended knee before the framed lock of Bahá'u'lláh's precious hair, the exquisitely ornamented, round silver box containing a small bag of the blessed earth from the Inmost Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh, the beautifully framed reproduction of His portrait, and, resting in a wooden mosaic box, the piece of the plaster from the Báb's cell in the Prison Fortress of Mah-ku, one could not but note the solemnity and awe with which they went. From 3:30 until 7:15 p.m., row after row moved slowly forward.

All of this time 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum stood—annointing all, embracing most of the women, chatting briefly with many, a smile touching her lips as she recognized some eager African friend come twice to see his Lord.

Guardian's Map Displayed

The following morning our hearts were again stirred when we heard 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum explain the beautiful map, especially prepared and sent by our beloved Guardian, showing the progress of the Ten-Year Spiritual Crusade at its midway point, and about the manner of his work for this Cause.

"Friends, it is a very happy and unhappy moment in our lives to see this precious last gift of the Guardian. Happy because it shows the triumphs we owe to him, and unhappy because it is the last thing of that kind we will ever have from his blessed hands.

"I would like to tell you that this map—not this one but the original of which this is a copy—was entirely drawn up by the Guardian himself. He had the most extraordinary genius for so many things, and one of them was making these maps. Nobody every taught him how to make them, and I don't think he ever saw anyone make a map in all of his life. He would go and do it with swiftness that was unbelievable. To copy this map took a professional two weeks in Haifa, and I think that the Guardian must have drawn most of it the first day that he worked on it, and I don't think that it took him a total of more than three days working time to make the entire map. The whole plan in its symmetry and beauty is that of the Guardian.

"We are too near to our work to realize what we have accomplished: and above all, we are too close to the Guardian to realize what he has accomplished. Many of the people in Israel who had a sort of esteem and admiration for the Faith, after the passing of the Guardian realized with a shock that they had lost something very great, and even ordinary people—people who had contact with us as laborers, as workers at Haifa, were very, very grieved by his passing, because suddenly the body of the man had disappeared and the greatness of the man, like the shadow on the wall, began to appear before their eyes. We don't know what we are commemorating in this meeting, but future generations will realize.

"Everything he accomplished, he didn't accomplish because he was lost in prayer and meditation. He accomplished it because he worked often sixteen hours a day until his heart stopped. I wanted to say that we have everything. Of course, we haven't got what we want, which is our Guardian, but he has left us with such a heritage of plans and instructions and example, apart from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, that we can safely say that we have everything to go forward with the work of his Faith.

"If the friends, and by that I mean all of them from

The convention hall at the Kampala Intercontinental Conference.
The highest to the lowest, and the most active to the most inactive, would pause before they take action, and just consider the Guardian's words and example, they will find that they know what is the right thing to do for the Cause.

"The Guardian, having the whole Bahá'í world in his hand, keeping all the reins in his hands, was able to accomplish so much, of course, because he was the Sign of God on earth also, but the means by which he did it was the close contact he had with all the national assemblies and many of the local assemblies, and, of course, the Hands all over the world. This was how he kept the reins in his hand and so was able to create this map. If he had not had this close contact, he would not have been able to do the map.

"Now you must all remember that although the Guardian has ascended to the Abhá Kingdom and is freed from the torture and slavery of his life in this world, we must go on and carry out his plans, and carry forward our faith.

"The World Center of the Faith is the Qiblih of the Bahá'í world, where the body of the supreme Manifestation of God is laid to rest. It is also the seat of the future International House of Justice. The friends must go on turning to that Center, strengthening it with their love and prayers and sending in their reports, so that the Hands, who are broken-hearted and crushed with the burden of responsibility that has fallen upon them, can continue this work of the Guardian until such date as the administration of the Faith can be handed over to the International House of Justice.

"Haifa is the administrative and spiritual center of our Faith, established by the Manifestation of God, Bahá'u'lláh. All the friends must constantly turn in their hearts to that center—strengthen it and draw strength from it, and pour in information of what they are doing so that we can know where we stand, and in 1963, God willing, we will be able to have accomplished all the plans of our beloved Guardian.'

On the afternoon of the second day, 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum read to us the moving and beautiful message which had been sent to the Conference by the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land. (Editor's Note: This message appears in March Bahá'í News)

The consultations on this and other messages brought forth that afternoon a most remarkable display by the Persian friends of their willing self-sacrifice, devotion, loyalty, and love for our Faith and for 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum and the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land at this time of supreme crisis. In a spontaneous burst of generosity, which many of them could ill afford from the worldly viewpoint, the Persian friends, and a small group of the other friends present, contributed a total of £100,000 ($200,000), ear-marked variously for the Temple, the teaching work, pioneering, literature, the Continental Fund, the erection and perpetuation of a Bahá'í School, and other important needs of the Faith in Africa.

Of this wonderful response to the needs of the Cause, 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum said:

"The Persian Bahá'ís are our ancestors. They are the ones who had the inestimable bounty of having the Manifestation of God for this age appear in their country. They are the ones who first accepted Him, and twenty thousand of them laid down their lives in His path. Because of the handicaps in the country in which they live, they are neither able to go out and serve as freely as their offspring, nor have they the same vigor always. And so, like good parents, they yearn over their children; they bless their children; they take care of their children; and, in this case, it looks as if they are going to finance their children.

On Friday evening, 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum showed us first the exquisite colored films she had brought of the Shrines and gardens in 'Akka and Haifa, explaining first in Persian and then in English.
(with Ateso translations following) all that we saw, telling us the stories of how our beloved Guardian had created this magic world of beauty out of the rocky, forbidding mountainside and plain.

Then, in the darkness and silence, our eyes gazed through a veil of tears upon that wintry London scene, where our hearts lay buried beneath the sweet-scented mounds of fresh-cut flowers which bore the inscription, "From Ruhiyyih and all your loved ones and lovers all over the world whose hearts are broken."

The following morning, the Conference cabled a request to the British National Assembly that a large bouquet of roses, gardenias, and lilies so loved by the Guardian, be placed upon his grave on behalf of the Conference. The roses and carnations which had lain on the table with the holy relics on the opening day had been lovingly gathered by 'Amalu'l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánúm and given to the British representative, also to be placed on the grave of the Guardian. On the final afternoon, at a time when the platform was filled to capacity with the pioneers to and in Africa, and at that moment when it had been cabled, Hand of the Cause Hasan Balyuzí would be placing our flowers on the beloved Guardian's final resting place, we paused in the utter silence of our deepest feelings to join him there at the graveside.

Laying Foundation Stone of Temple

On the afternoon of the fourth day, a long line of private cars and taxis, followed by fourteen huge buses, wound their way into the lush green countryside surrounding Kampala and up the lower slopes of "our hill," Kikaya Hill, where our Mashriqu'l-Adhkár is being constructed, and where we witnessed, under the heat of a blazing sun, the laying of the foundation stone, beneath which 'Amatu'l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánúm and Hand of the Cause Musa Banáni lovingly placed the silver box containing the sacred earth from the Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh, and the wooden box containing a piece of the plaster from the Prison Fortress of Mah-kú, where the Blessed Báb had been incarcerated. The foundation stone, shielding its precious treasures, will ultimately lie under the wall on that side of the Temple facing out across a grassy valley towards the Qiblah of the Bahá'í world—Akká.

Thus, this Africa of ours and its Mother Temple are forever spiritually linked to the World Center and the Cradle of our Faith. In the morning, we had heard the story of the purchase of the land, the design and construction of the Mother Temple, and the appeals for its successful completion. In the afternoon, at the Temple ceremony, 'Amatu'l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánúm told us how she had found a number of small, hand-sewn silk bags made by the Greatest Holy Leaf herself, and how the beloved Guardian had been pleased and had instructed that the sacred earth for our Temple should be placed in one such bag. The Hand of the Cause, Musa Banáni, explained that this plaster was from the ceiling of the cell in which the Holy Báb had revealed His Book of the Covenant and His Laws.

Visitors assembling at the Temple site prior to the ceremony to place the caskets containing the earth from the Inmost Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh and the fragment of plaster from the cell of the Báb in Mah-kú prison.
Each of these treasured dusts was carefully protected from the ravages of time. The earth in its small bag was placed first in a glass container, then in its silver box. The plaster, in its wooden box, was sealed in an outer container of metal. The vault itself was lined with two hand-woven Persian silk scarves.

The Hour of Consultation and Response

Following the stirring tribute to Shoghi Effendi by Ruhíyyih Khánum (see page 4 of this issue of Bahá’í News), there came the hour of consultation—the hour of response. Now the African friends rose to open their hearts, to reveal their deepest feelings, to voice their love, to pledge their strength.

Of all the many who spoke, Max Kanyerezi, a member of Central and East African National Assembly, seemed to epitomize their sentiments: “In the first place, after the passing away of our beloved, there came the letter from the National Assembly telling us that we have everything. I did not realize that we have everything until we came to this Conference. We, particularly Africans, we have everything; really, everything is love of our beloved Guardian. We have seen, and we have been assured by ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhíyyih Khánum, how great the love of our beloved Guardian was towards us.

“Now what are we going to do? Are we going to go back with this love and sit down in our cottages and be sure that the Guardian loved us? Are we going to be proud that we were brave to have been among the Bahá’ís today, and rest assured that we have everything because the Guardian loved us and we are Bahá’ís? I just must remind you about a few words of Jesus Christ—to whom is given much, he will be asked much. Do you realize the great responsibility that our beloved Guardian has laid on our heads? It is tremendous, and we don’t know how to fulfill it. We cannot repay what we have been given—the only way that we can show that we realize how great was the love of our beloved for us is to dedicate ourselves to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Let everyone of us be content in his mind that he can say that we shall set on fire the whole of this continent... I think you will (turning to ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhíyyih Khánum) when you go back to Haifa, please, give the account to the Hands that Africans have now determined to do everything, and will leave nothing until everything be brought to completion.”

Ruhíyyih Khánum’s Journey to Teso

The joy and anticipation of the African believers when they first heard that a Conference was to be held in Kampala, and that ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhíyyih Khánum would attend, sowed also the seeds of longing in their hearts—longing that ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhíyyih Khánum might come to visit them in their own homes.

Loving requests were received inviting her to come to Teso, the heart of the Faith in Uganda, 200 miles from Kampala, where over 1400 Bahá’ís live, and where there are forty-two spiritual assemblies. The longing wishes of the friends were conveyed to her and to everyone’s great joy, she decided to make a brief visit to Teso.

There, for twenty-four of what she described as some of the happiest hours of her visit to Uganda, ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhíyyih Khánum shared the life of Africa—eating curried turkey and soup, millet, rice, and matoke (cooked, green bananas), drinking what became her favorite African beverage “smoked water,” and sitting on handwoven grass mats to watch the evening program of traditional dancing and singing.

From all over Teso had come the outstanding teachers of the Faith to hear more about the Guardian’s love for them, and to be encouraged and inspired by her loving words. The meetings were held on the site of the former Tilling Bahá’í Center, originally constructed of mud and wattle, with grass for the roof. When she heard that their center, despite repeated efforts to save it had ultimately been consumed by white ant invasions, ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhíyyih Khánum generously contributed for the erection of the new and permanent center for which they have yearned so long.
A local chief came to pay his respects to 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum, and she asked him to be one of her translators. She visited an African junior secondary school, where a Teso Bahá'í is headmaster, and where she spoke to the entire student body.

The Teso friends will never forget her loving informality, her wonderful sense of humor, her deep love for them, and her admiration of their work for our beloved Faith. The women, in particular, flowered under her spontaneous interest in their lives, especially their kitchens! The love of the believers was expressed in beautiful gifts of hand-carved ebony and ivory one of which, a beautiful walking stick, had been bought some time ago to be sent through her to the beloved Guardian, and which 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum promised would now be placed in his room in the Mansion of Bahá'.

In Teso, now, and wherever there are African believers who attended the Conference, the friends proudly wear a small black and gold nine-pointed star pinned to their lapels—the black of the background, a symbol of the black races of the world; and the gold of the Greatest Name, a symbol of the yellow races. Five hundred of these pins, inscribed on the back, "Bahá'í love from Bahá'ís of Japan" were sent as a special gift from the Bahá'ís of Japan to the African believers attending the Conference.

Farewell to Rúhiyyih Khánum

The final morning had dawned. Beloved and revered Hands of the Cause William Sears, Enoch Olinga, Taráz'u'lláh Samandari, John Robarts, and Musa Banání were on the platform with 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum—there to send us back from paradise into the world, to place our feet firmly on God's earth and to speed us along His ordained path.

At lunch on that final day of her visit to Africa 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum drew from her handbag an article wrapped in a white silk handkerchief. To the friends gathered about her she said, "I cannot do more for you than to show you this—our beloved Guardian's notebook, which he kept always in his pocket." With that she unfolded the handkerchief and revealed a small but thick red leather loose-leaf notebook.

Opening it, she showed us the pages upon pages of lists of statistics of the Faith and other notes, all meticulously entered in the beloved Guardian's own handwriting. Where goals had been accomplished, they had been crossed off. One page had all but one item crossed off in heavy ink. The pages of the notebook had been endlessly thumbed, and 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum told us that the beloved Guardian thus carried the Bahá'í world in his pocket, using this small book incessantly.

As we drove those twenty sad miles to bid her farewell at the airport, our minds dwelt upon the scenes of the Conference and all that it had meant to us—and especially upon what 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhiyyih Khánum's presence had brought of love and comfort, of inspiration and renewed dedication. Particularly, we thank her in our hearts for that one sublime day when she had spoken many hours to us of our beloved Guardian, and had, all evening, selflessly stood to be introduced and to chat to every believer who had come to the Conference. Indeed she had been "the heart, the light, the life—everything about this Conference."

As the silver wings of the plane carrying our beloved and revered 'Amatu'l-Bahá into the cloudless African skies and back to the Holy Land flew low over our heads and then up to disappear in the blue horizons, these beautiful and stirring words of Bahá'u'lláh and the Master, quoted by Hand of the Cause William Sears at the close of the Conference, echoed and re-echoed in our memories and seemed to bring together in one small breath, all that we had been trying so inadequately to say during these many days.

"I say unto you that any one who will rise up in the Cause of God at this time shall be filled with the spirit of God, and that He will send His hosts from heaven to help you, and that nothing shall be impossible to you if you have faith. And now I give a commandment which shall be for a covenant between you and Me—that ye have faith; that your faith be steadfast as a rock that no storms can move, that nothing can disturb, and that it endure through all things even to the end; even should you hear that your Lord has been crucified, be not shaken in your faith; for I am with you always whether living or dead, I am with you to the end. As ye have faith, so shall your powers and blessings be. This is the balance—this is the balance... Ye are... the breeze that stirreth at the break of day, the soft-flowing waters upon which must depend the very life of all men,.... Neither sun nor moon hath witnessed a day such as this Day.... This is the day in which to speak... Appreciate the value of the hours that are still yours, for they shall come to you no more and you will never have a like opportunity. For even as the swiftness of lightning your body shall be laid to rest beneath a canopy of dust. What can ye then achieve? How can ye then arise from your past failures? Arise in My Name, upon you be the glory of all that is in the heavens and all that is on the earth."

—National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa
Legal Recognition, Increase in Centers Reported in Morocco

The last weeks preceding Ridvan found the Regional Teaching Committee of Morocco workingconcertedly with the friends to form as many new local spiritual assemblies as possible from their collective numbers.

The history of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh in Morocco is a unique one that begins, upon the announcement of the Ten-Year Plan, with the discovery that a Bahá’í was already resident in the country. This was followed, less than four years later, by the supplementary plan that included acquisition of a Hazír'tul-Quds. The friends in Morocco replied, almost by return mail, that this goal, too, was achieved twice over, in Rabat and in Larache, and that the site for a third had been acquired in Tangier.

These past five years have been marked by the increase by more than a hundredfold of that first lone banner of Bahá'u'lláh: local spiritual assemblies number six; the formation of at least two new ones is assured this Ridvan (Meknez and Port Lyautey); the number of centers equals no less than fifteen; the Faith has been officially registered with the government, and the resulting recognition is expected to bring with it an official request by the government to incorporate a permanent national body; if so, the Moroccan National Spiritual Assembly may be elected during Ridvan 116.

The friends, both indigenous and pioneers, are most eager to accomplish whatsoever is advantageous to the Cause they love so dearly; so much so that when it became known that Meknez and Port Lyautey had insufficient numbers to assure formation of the new local assemblies, more than enough persons from other communities took up residence in these cities, the trend went too far, and a previously established community found itself lacking.

This is one of the problems with which the Regional Teaching Committee struggles, but to the friends in Morocco it is just another manifestation of that wonderfully dedicated spirit through which the Bahá'ís, worldwide, achieve the goals that each year become more startling than the year before.

Cornerstone Containing Baha’i Documents and Relics Laid in Ceremony at Baha’i Home in Wilmette

The cornerstone of the Bahá’í Home for the Aged in Wilmette, containing many Bahá’í documents and relics, was laid in a formal ceremony on April 5, 1958.

Horace Holley, Hand of the Cause and Secretary of the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly, representing the Bahá’í Temple Trustees, addressed the gathering of over sixty persons that included John C. Sanderson, president of the Wilmette Village Board; William Campbell Wright, architect of the Bahá’í Home; representatives of the contractor and construction firms; Wilmette residents, and Bahá’ís from the Chicagoland area.

“Our architect, William Campbell Wright, has designed a structure which admirable provides for guests and management personnel, and in addition has produced a building in keeping with the neighborhood,” Mr. Holley stated in his address. “The Bahá’ís are proud indeed to add this second national Bahá’í institution to the resources of Wilmette Village. Our investment in the village exceeds three million dollars, and the House of Worship and its landscaped gardens have attracted some nine hundred thousand visitors from countries throughout the world.”

Explaining the significance of the Bahá’í Home, Mr. Holley said: “The Bahá’í Home has this relationship to the Bahá’í Temple: it fulfills the meaning and power of divine worship in service to our fellow men; for this institution is not restricted to members of our Faith, but opens its doors to persons without any religious discrimination.”

Words of appreciation to the Village authorities were followed by the announcement that the Bahá’í Temple Trustees have submitted an offer to the Wilmette Village Board to select a Wilmette resident as a non-paying guest in the Bahá’í Home:

“On behalf of the Bahá’í Trustees I wish to express our grateful appreciation to the Village authorities for their kind cooperation over the period of nearly fifty years since the first piece of land was purchased for the future Temple.

“In token of this appreciation, the Trustees have submitted an offer to the Village Board to receive as a non-paying guest any Wilmette resident the Board chooses to designate.”

After describing the contents of the copper box that was later placed within the concrete cornerstone inscribed with the figure “1958,” Mr. Holley closed his talk with “May I now, in conclusion, express the confident hope that the Bahá’í Home will prove to be a credit to this Village and deserve the goodwill of its citizens.”

The documents and materials to be preserved within the cornerstone include:

Bahá'ís of Northeast Africa
Share Inspiration and Deepening

A Bahá'í Youth Committee of Asmara, Eritrea (Ethiopia), appointed by the Local Spiritual Assembly of Asmara a year ago, has made excellent progress in teaching as well as in deepening their own knowledge of the Faith. Through their efforts they have not only increased their numbers considerably in a year, but have rendered a great service to the entire community, the Local Assembly states.

One of their first steps was to organize Youth Conferences, held every other week, with lecturers and discussion on various Bahá'í topics. They also took responsibility in conducting courses at the First Asmara Summer School and in bringing friends to the sessions. Other services rendered by the youth have been translation work, and assisting the Teaching Committee during the months of their school vacation.

Visitors Bring Stimulus to Bahá'ís of Somalia

Colored films of the Asmara Summer School were taken by Auxiliary Board member Mr. Shayani on a visit to the Bahá'ís of Mogadiscio in Somalia in January just prior to the Africa Conference in Kampala. Shortly after the Conference the revered Hand of the Cause, Mr. Samandari, accompanied by Habibullah Manavi of Turkey, visited the Mogadisco community and met with many of their friends. The Assembly reports: "He was always ready to receive and serve visitors and his wonderful spirit was an inspiration and example for all." Jeanne Mesbah, returning to Asmara from the Conference, also met with these friends, "bringing her radiance and enthusiasm to encourage a small community."

Los Angeles Bahá'ís Assist Indians in Adjustment to City Life

Mrs. Stevie Standingbear (left) and Mrs. Piquali Rifle (right), directors of the Los Angeles Indian Center, with Mrs. Nancy Phillips of the Bahá'í Indian Service Committee, at the Los Angeles Indian Center on February 22. The friendly welcome the Bahá'ís received seems to be reflected in the faces of Mrs. Standingbear and Mrs. Rifle.

The Los Angeles Bahá'í Community has initiated a program, under the guidance of the American Indian Service Committee, of assisting American Indians in their city who are undergoing the difficult problem of relocation and adjustment to city life. It began with an all-day Indian Teaching Conference on February 22, with thirty-eight Bahá'ís present in the morning to hear Francis Johnson and Mrs. Nancy Phillips from the Indian Service Committee, and David Villasenor of Pasadena speak on the Indian's background, his spiritual depth, and his special problems.

In the afternoon twenty-eight Bahá'ís went to the Indian Center in Los Angeles and held frank consultation concerning the needs of the Indians, after which they were escorted to residential areas where the Indian relocatees live. In the evening the Bahá'ís again met to discuss ways in which they might be of service to the Indians. They were advised by Mr. Johnson, chairman of the Indian Service Committee, to be sincere in their efforts and above all not to make any promises to the Indians that they could not fulfill.

Concerning these initial efforts the Los Angeles Bahá'í Journal states: "Each Bahá'í who attended felt the historic importance of this reaching out by the Bahá'í community to assist the Indians... Positive plans for a continuing action program will now be centered on one facet of America's Spiritual Mission—that of teaching the Indian through service."

Abdül-Bahá said, "You must give great importance to teaching the Indians, that is, the aborigines of America." Shoghi Effendi has continually emphasized the importance of this teaching work.

In addition to the urgent pioneering needs on the reservations, opportunities are now being presented to Bahá'ís in major cities of the United States to engage in service to their brothers, the first Americans. The United States Government Bureau of Indian Affairs has a program of relocating Indians to five major cities—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Chicago, and St. Louis.
Many New Book Titles Announced at U.S. National Convention

An unusual number of new titles has been announced this year by the U.S. Bahá’í Publishing Trust, their publication dates coinciding with the 1958 National Convention and the Western Hemisphere Conference. The majority of these works have been planned specifically to fill the most urgent needs in relation to the teaching work that remains to be accomplished during this last half of the Ten-Year Plan.

Tribute to Shoghi Effendi

Through arrangements with the publisher of Circle of Faith by Marcus Bach, a book has been published that includes only the section on Shoghi Effendi, along with an introduction by Hand of the Cause Horace Holley, and including a tribute given to the beloved Guardian by Marcus Bach at the time of his passing in London.

An Appeal to Christians by Auxiliary Board Member

Great Themes of Life by Eric Bowes consists of lectures originally given in a Congregational church in Australia with simple, direct logic, clearly understandable to the average Christian church member. This is an excellent follow-up to the teaching campaign inaugurated so vigorously last year with The Christian Century Reprint, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, and The Lord of the New Age.

Flexible-Covered Prayer Books Now Available

Because of many requests from the friends for a soft-covered prayer book printed on thin India paper, an edition has been published. This is the Combined Edition, containing both the General and Occasional Prayers. A flexible-covered General Prayers has also been produced and printed on the same antique paper as before.

New Children’s Book in Color

A new children’s book that delightfully illustrates the invocation Blessed Is the Spot, has been published, with drawings prepared by Anna Stevenson.

Other new titles include God, His Mediator and Man, a book on comparative religion by Pritam Singh and Doris McKay; The Destiny of America, a new pamphlet by Stanwood Cobb that covers the inception of the Faith in America, the Divine Plan, the present World Crusade, and the future of the American nation, all in a manner to gain the respectful attention of the public for the meaning and purpose of the Bahá’í Faith; and a 1958-59 Pocket Calendar.

Centralized Literature Service Organized in Morocco

The Regional Teaching Committee for Morocco announces that it has organized a central literature distribution service for all the communities and friends in Morocco. Literature will be stocked in Arabic, English, French, and Spanish. The purchase of literature with different currencies will be facilitated by locating the distribution center in the free exchange city of Tangier.

In the past, difficulties incurred in obtaining literature on the part of individuals and by several communities have resulted in much duplicated effort and a sporadic supply. The teaching efforts here have definitely been hampered by a lack of literature and it is believed that the new central distribution service will eliminate these problems.

Hand of Cause, Auxiliary Board Member on Teaching Tours in Canada

John A. Robarts, Hand of the Cause from Africa, and former Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of Canada, is at present on a cross-Canada speaking tour. While he was in the Maritimes, several believers in the New Territories goals gathered for the conference held in Moncton. Bruce Matthews arrived from Newfoundland, Mrs. Doris Richardson from Grand Manan, Mrs. Ola Pawlowska from St. Pierre and Miquelon, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Geary from Cape Breton, and Larry Rowdon from the Magdalen Islands.

Mrs. Peggy Ross of Scarborough, Ontario, a member of the Auxiliary Board for Teaching for North America, recently visited western Ontario, where it is reported there is very active teaching work progressing. It is hoped that two new local assemblies will be formed, and another assembly restored.

Announce Dates For Djakarta Conference

The fifth and final Intercontinental Conference for 1958 will be held at Djakarta, Indonesia, on September 22 to 27.

Further details will be published in an early issue of Bahá’í News.
The Teaching Challenge to Negro Baha'is

Ever since the passing of our beloved Guardian, the American Baha'i community has been endeavoring as never before to assess their total responsibility in the global Crusade. Perhaps nowhere else can they find a clearer statement of the specific objectives for this closely-knit family than in Shoghi Effendi's matchless document, "Heights Never Before Attained." Not the least of his strong admonitions and pleas is the urgent necessity to remove the stain of racial prejudice from the mantle of the true believers and thereby attract with hearts of pure gold and actions of stainless sincerity the colored people while there is yet time in which to demonstrate the vitality and meaning of their Faith.

In The Advent of Divine Justice the beloved Guardian's acute and peerless knowledge was forevisioned for us over twenty years ago, when he emphasized the critical necessity for the American friends to rid themselves, once and for all, of any taints or hints of this pernicious defilement. The hour has now come when the Negro, enticed and sought after by an ever-increasing number of missionary bands, have become deeply suspicious and highly sensitive. This suspicion, the Guardian said, was the Negro's protection against the perfidy of the white man's word and intention. Had they not been "a sound, talented and sensitive" people, he explained, they would have been relegated to the same conditions as the Indian minority.

No individual, regardless of position or experience, could ever grasp the intensity and seriousness of this situation better than the Guardian. This was all the more evident in the force and power of his words, the sincerity and empathy of his feelings, the fearlessness and audacity of his attitude. At one point in our meeting with the beloved Guardian, his disapprobation of the depth and degree of this malignant tumor in the fabric of American society caused us to suffer, with the white friends present, the depression induced by his words.

Can such intense concern ever be considered lightly or easily dismissed? Dare we, as the products of that very society, lose sight of this cancerous growth that has eaten away the heart and soul of those who harbor it? Cannot the submerged turbulence of this whole crisis be seen almost daily, a vindication of the Guardian's dire prediction?

A Staggering Test of Faith

Indeed, the friends of this country are faced with a difficult and staggering test of their faith. The chosen of God are bound to be a severely tested and tried people. The beloved Guardian explained that the Faith has not grown in America because there have as yet been no tests, no persecutions, no crises. Their glory and blessings are held back until they have sacrificed everything solely for love of God and obedience to His commands.
The true Baha'i can expect to draw at first the recriminations and attacks of the misguided through his efforts to reflect the light and spirit of his Faith. Every day finds a fresh opportunity for the believer to show forth the attributes and qualities of the new race of mankind, inspired by the Báb, established by Bahá'u'lláh, exemplified by Abdu'l-Bahá, and guided by Shoghi Effendi.

The Guardian said that crises have a two-fold effect. On the one hand, they purge the Faith, and on the other, they cause the Faith to grow and progress. He emphasized that the friends should be audacious in their devotion to the Cause and fearless in their undying zeal to serve Bahá'u'lláh. As an example of the purity of heart and soul, the deep sincerity and patient determination of the true believer, he pointed to the outstanding victories of the pioneers in Africa and the South Pacific.

Opportunity Extended Again

What a golden opportunity for the colored friends to arise and answer the call to extend the loving arm of the Faith they espouse to their brothers in the south as well as in the rest of the country! The beloved Guardian offered this precious privilege once before to the colored believers when the Africa campaign was opened. Only a few responded. Now the gift of leading the ranks and laying a firm foundation has been proffered to them again. As the Guardian said when he spoke of the American believers as a whole regarding the triumphs of the African and South Pacific campaigns compared to the gains on the home front, "It remains to be seen what will be done!"

Who else but our beloved Guardian could perceive the signs of the times and delineate our role so clearly and unmistakably? Let us with firm resolve and prayerful but instantaneous action meet this challenging responsibility with undiminished vigor and win for the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh those "inestimable prizes within our reach."

Spirit of Rededication Emerges From South American Schools

Many new summer schools were inaugurated in South America this year in accordance with the Guardian's instructions to establish schools in each country. From all over the continent have come acclamations of a new spirit of rededication and a determination to accomplish all of the appointed tasks of the World Crusade. Although land has been acquired for these schools, complete facilities for functioning are not yet available everywhere, so that temporary arrangements had to be made in many places; but the new spirit of unity and enthusiasm that prevailed was not dimmed by any lack of facilities.

Five Baha'is Participate
In New York UN NGO Conference
Among the 500 participants from 150 organizations attending the Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations on United Nations Information, held February 26 and 27 at UN Headquarters in New York, were five Baha'is representing the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly and the Baha'i International Community.

The major theme was the tenth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which is being observed during 1958. Stressed was the key importance of non-governmental organizations helping to make this observance worthy and fruitful.

For two and a half of the four sessions the Conference met in plenary session; during the remaining time attendants separated into two working groups, one devoting itself to plans for the observance, the other studying problems of the dissemination of information on the progress of the work on two draft Covenants of Human Rights previous to February 20, 1957, when they were approved by the Economic and Social Council, but action has not yet been taken by the General Assembly.

Whereas the Declaration of Human Rights establishes general principles and ideals, but is not compulsory, the Covenants, when adopted, will have the force of international law.

The Conference as a whole was ad-

Three Declarations Result from Loncoche School
"So intense was the spirit of confirmation that three enrollments resulted..." states a report from the Loncoche, Chile, Baha'i School, at their meeting from January 17 to 25.

Because of distances involved and difficulties of travel, the National Spiritual Assembly of Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela proposed that each Baha'i community have its own Summer School this year. The sessions in Arequipa, Peru, on February 9 and February 17 took the form of a workshop, with each Baha'i given an opportunity to demonstrate how to teach some aspect of the Faith. Their fellowship was highlighted by a picnic in a nearby country village for about thirty Baha'is and their families.

Colombia held a combination Summer School and their annual Regional Congress in Medelin from January 4 to 6, with study classes focused on the best ways to teach the Faith in their country.

Baha'i Youth Group of Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, who have organized a study club for young people interested in steps to unite the human race around the world.
addressed during the earlier part of the first morning session by Ahmed S. Bokhari, UN Under-Secretary for the Department of Public Information; and Benjamin Cohen, Under-Secretary for the Department of Trusteeship and Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories.

Mr. Bokhari declared that in the future, when contemporary events are viewed in proper perspective, the adoption of the Declaration ten years ago might be judged the most important action taken by the United Nations, of greater long-term importance than current political issues. The remarkable fact of the Universal Declaration is that its principles have been found acceptable to all the diverse peoples of the United Nations.

Mr. Cohen declared that implementation of the right of self-determination has been progressing quietly through UN activities. One-quarter of the world’s population has acquired self-rule since 1945, and more than a score of nations have been brought into the councils of the UN. The aim of leading peoples toward independence or self-government, set down in the UN Charter as a principle of Trusteeship, is in fact being carried out.

In answer to questions, delegates were informed that both UN Day on October 24, and Human Rights Day on December 10 will be observed in 1958, despite the fact they are so near together. Though the celebrations will be entirely separate, the theme for UN Day this year will emphasize Human Rights. Whereas UN Day is a celebration, Human Rights Day is more properly an observance, since the Declaration is an instrument for facing the facts and promoting future amelioration.

All conferences to date have been sponsored by the Department of Public Information, which has felt duty bound to adhere to its function of giving information about the United Nations. There has been a demand through the years for more participation by the non-governmental organizations and for a wider choice of subject. DPI officers stated that they would welcome conferences so planned, but felt that they must be sponsored in that case by the NGO’s, though with full cooperation on the part of the DPI.

Accordingly, a resolution was adopted instructing the Executive Committee to study the problem of running a Conference under the sponsorship of the NGO’s, and to bring in a recommendation to the next conference. The two Bahá’í delegates voted for this resolution.

It was a fine conference. To Bahá’ís it clearly revealed the fact that principles of the Bahá’í Faith are being put into force by well-meaning peoples covering many walks of life. To other attending delegates and observers, the conference demonstrated the tremendous strides that have been made in the field of human rights, and pointed out the responsibility of the NGO’s to publicize the rights and freedoms set forth in the Declaration, as well as to awaken new interest and understanding of them.

BAHÁ’Í IN THE NEWS

A work by Charles S. Braden entitled “Jesus Compared” contains this reference to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh: “On the basis of numbers, the Bahá’í Faith . . . might . . . be considered one of the great religions . . .”

The Chicago American Pictorial Living for November 24, 1957, carried a photograph of the Bahá’í Temple entitled “Picture of the Week” with an award to the photographer.

Congressional Record, January 21, published remarks by Hon. Abraham J. Muller, Representative of New York, on "Israel's Youngest Religion," which quotes the article by Herbert Freeden, Jerusalem, already noted in this column.

The Sarasota (Florida) Herald Tribune on February 17, reporting the all-Florida sculpture exhibit, reproduced a photograph of the sculpture winning the first prize. This piece was designed and constructed by Vernon Voelz, member of the local Bahá’í community.

The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, March 2, is publishing a series of articles by foreign consuls. The final article by Nahum Astor, Counsel of Israel, stressed the freedom of religion accorded by the Israeli government, mentioning the fact that the "country is the world center of the Bahá’í Faith and the spiritual leader of the Faith resides in Israel."

Pittsburgh Courier Sunday Magazine section, March 1, featured a story on the Faith under the caption "Followers of World's Youngest Religion Spread the Message." Written by Julius W. Holder, the article speaks of local Bahá’í interracial groups who are spreading the Message throughout the United States. Illustrations include the House of Worship, the Shrine of the Báb, and a photograph of two Bahá’í teachers, Mrs. Joseph W. McCormack and Eulalia Barrow, sister of Joe Louis.

On March 13, an article by John Drury was devoted to Wilmette in a Chicago Daily News series dealing with towns and villages adjacent to Chicago. "A world-renowned sight in the Village today is the Bahá’í Temple...." Photographs of the House of Worship and the old Grosse Point Lighthouse illustrate the text.

Three poems by Mrs. Belle Tatum, Bahá’í of Muskegon, Mich., have been published in the Muskegon Chronicle. One is entitled "Our Guardian" and another "The Temple."

L’Afrique et le Monde, a weekly journal published in Brussels, Belgium, announced in its February 6 issue that an intercontinental Bahá’í conference was being held in Kampala, and described the Faith as a Moslem religious sect originating in Persia. Immediate action was taken by the Regional Assembly of the Benelux Countries to correct this error and a later issue published a letter prepared by the Assembly.

Le Petit Journal, a Quebec Province newspaper published in French ran a feature article on March 2 entitled "The Followers of the Great Bahá’u'lláh—there are 100 Bahá’is in Montreal." An illustration of the Wilmette Temple referred to its French-Canadian architect, Louis Bourgeois. The author, Roland Côté, evidently studied the basic literature and also the three-fold character of the Nineteen-Day Feast.

A reprint has been made of an article written by Marie Kershaw Frain, M. D., Bahá’í of Jackson, La., from the Journal of Nervous and Mental Disease, Vol. 124, No. 4.

A German illustrated magazine, Pfingst und Gartenschau, for June 1956, published a beautiful photograph of the Shrine of the Báb, and photographs of the Bahá’í Gardens, the Mansion of Bahá’u’lláh, and a view of the Bay of Haifa from Mt. Carmel.

Commentary on Cable Dated April 19 Concerning the Special Memorial Fund

Beloved Friends:
The cable received from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land offers every Bahá’í a sacred privilege to contribute to the cost of a befitting monument for the resting place of the beloved Guardian in London. By contributing we express our reverence and abiding gratitude to the noble leader through whose sacrifice the Bahá’í community has been transformed since the passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and many of the goals established in the Tablets of the Divine Plan have been achieved.

The National Spiritual Assembly shares this message with the American Bahá’ís in perfect confidence that they will be grateful for this unique opportunity to cooperate with the Bahá’ís of all countries in manifesting their devotion to the Faith and exalting the memory of the revered Guardian in the eyes of the public.

Contributions made to the Memorial Fund are to be over and above all customary contributions to local and national funds. The National Treasurer will transmit to Haifa all sums earmarked for the Memorial Fund.

Message From the Custodians of the Faith in the Holy Land to the Intercontinental Conference in Sydney

Although but five months have elapsed since the passing of our beloved Guardian shook the Bahá’í world and caused turmoil in the hearts of the followers of Bahá’u’lláh, the power of this supreme Faith to survive so grievous a blow is now clearly manifest. A new spirit of determination, dedication, and resolve can be seen throughout the entire World Bahá’í Community. Deprived of him who was our Guardian, our guide, and our true brother, we nevertheless feel his presence constantly in the smooth workings of the mighty Order he erected, according to the designs of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and in the writings, messages, and letters he left us, and above all, in the unfolding of the Ten-Year Crusade he so carefully planned, so untringly promulgated, and so energetically prosecuted through the intermediary of not only the Hands of the Cause and the regional and national assemblies, as well as the auxiliary boards and local assemblies, but above all, through the vast and consecrated army of believers the world over. Our grief at the passing of the beloved Guardian remains fresh in our hearts, but with it is mixed a joy for his sake that he no longer has to
He also strongly emphasized the need to concentrate on teaching the Maoris, to whom he attached great importance, and to increase the centers in the South Island. To the Australian National Spiritual Assembly he particularly recommended the needs of the far-flung teaching work in the Islands. He was immensely pleased and proud of the work accomplished and being carried on by the pioneers, and urged that at all costs their labours be fully supported and reinforced, that more literature in island tongues be added to the translations already so successfully undertaken, that the native believers be strengthened and increased, and that particular attention be given to the Bahá’í School in the New Hebrides, a school of which he was immensely proud and to which he attached great importance.

There can be no doubt that the Australian and New Zealand friends gathered here, as well as those who have come in from the islands for this historic occasion, see before them a glowing vista of future achievements painted in the words of our beloved Guardian. They must, however, bear in mind that the road will not be a smooth one. How repeatedly he warned us all that before the first mighty fruits of the World Order of Bahá’ulláh would appear must come a period of unparalleled trial and struggle for mankind; that tests and dangers would beset the believers from both within and without. We see now the heaviest blow, his own passing, having already struck us, how difficult may be our path, how heavy our burdens. In his Convention Message last April he wrote: “Parallel with this process of progressive deterioration in human affairs, now visibly gathering momentum outside the pale of the Faith of Bahá’ulláh, and recalling the convulsions which, on a far more restricted scale, seized a declining empire in the opening centuries of the Christian era, far less spectacular in its manifestation, has been the process of integration, as demonstrated by the increasing cohesion, the multiplication, and the reinforcement of the foundations, of the institutions of the embryonic Bahá’í World Order, which now, under the impact of the forces released by a World Spiritual Crusade, deriving its authority from the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and launched for the express purpose of executing the Divine Plan bequeathed by Him to His followers in the evening of His life, is contributing, unnoticed by a generation forgetful of its God, and already in the shadow of His Visitation, to the building up, slowly but irresistibly, of that Ark of human salvation, ordained as the ultimate haven of a society destined, for the most part, to be submerged by the tidal wave of the abuses and evils which its own perversity has engendered.”

Whatever may befall us, before this Ark of human salvation is safely launched as the only refuge mankind can know, we are assured that the ultimate victory will be ours, ours the glory of having served and sacrificed for this Most Holy Faith, ours the crown of having remained steadfast in the path laid down for us by our well-beloved Guardian, ours the reward of his radiant smile when we meet him face to face in a better world, ours the joy of hearing him say: “Well done, thou good and faithful servant.”

Five Hands of the Cause, Representatives of 19 Countries Attend Intercontinental Conference in Sydney, Australia

In accordance with the Beloved Guardian’s instructions in his cable of October 1957, the second of the 1958 series of Intercontinental Conferences was convened in Sydney, Australia, from March 2 to 24 by the Chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Australia, Hand of the Cause Collis Featherstone.

One hundred and ninety-two believers registered at the Conference.

It was fitting that on the eve of this historic conference, the first of its kind ever held in Australasia, the representatives of nineteen countries should assemble to observe the Feast of Splendour, the first observance of the New Year. This was indeed a blessed occasion for no less than five Hands of the Cause of God were present: Mrs. Clara Dunn, pioneer of the Australasian continent; Miss Agnes Alexander, pioneer of North East Asia; Mr. Charles Mason Remey, representing the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land; Mr. Dhikru’lláh Khádem from Iran; and Mr. Collis Featherstone. Also present were five Auxiliary Board members.

The Conference proper opened at 9 a.m. on Friday March 21 when, following Devotions, Mr. Featherstone welcomed on behalf of the Australian National Assembly all those who had travelled from far and near to be present. In particular, he expressed the great joy of the Australian believers in having among them for the first time, Hand of the Cause Charles Mason Remey, the Beloved Guardian’s appointed representative to the Conference. After outlining the purposes and plans of the Conference, Mr. Featherstone called on the representatives from outside Australia to present their greetings:

Iran, Pakistan, Korea, Japan, South East Asia, Tonga, New Guinea, Papua, New Hebrides, New Caledonia, Solomon Islands, Samoa, Cook Islands, Fiji, New Zealand, Formosa, and the United States.

Suggesting that he might be called the Bahá’í “Sputnik,” Mr. Sabet brought greetings from America, where he had been spending a few days on his way to the Conference.

Finally the Chairman called upon Hand of the Cause Mason Remey, who after expressing his personal delight in attending the historic Antipodean Conference, presented the stirring and heart-warming Message addressed to those attending the Conference from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land. This message emphasized the “vast panorama of future developments in the entire Pacific Area” for which “tremendous responsibility inevitably rested on the two oldest and strongest communities, represented by the Australian National Spiritual Assembly and the National Spiritual Assembly of North East Asia.”

Recalling the beloved Guardian’s repeated warnings of the tests and dangers which would beset the believers ere “this Ark of human salvation is safely launched,” and reviewing the tremendous tasks which lay ahead of the Australian and New Zealand communities, the Custodians of the Faith concluded their message in these words: “We are assured that the ultimate victory will be ours, ours the glory of having served and sacrificed for this Most Holy Faith, ours the crown of having remained steadfast in the path laid down for us by our well-beloved Guardian, ours the reward of his radiant smile when we meet him face to face in a better world, ours the joy of hearing him say: ‘Well done, thou good and faithful servant’.”

On Friday afternoon devotions were shaped to meet the first of the five purposes of the Conference. The Conference then despatched the following cable to the Hands in the Holy Land: “BELIEVERS REPRESENTING SEVENTEEN COUNTRIES ASSEMBLED OPENING HISTORIC CONFERENCE SEND LOVING GREETINGS. DEEPLY APPRECIATE PRESENCE BELOVED GUARDIAN’S REPRESENTATIVE. HEARTS STIRRED LOVING MESSAGE. FRIENDS DETERMINED CONSUMMATE CAMPAIGN. IMPOLE SUPPLICATION HOLY SHRINES ALL DELIBERATIONS.”

To Review and Celebrate the Series of Signal Victories

This session of the Conference was led by Mrs. Madge Featherstone, a member of the Australian Asia Teaching Committee, who reviewed the victories achieved so far in the Ten-Year Crusade with particular reference to the Pacific goals. Mrs. Featherstone also spoke briefly of the goals to be re-established, Cocos, Admiralty, and Loyalty Islands. A number of the Pacific pioneers present spoke of their work in the islands and the believers were particularly pleased to hear from Mrs. Bertha Dobbins, pioneer to the New Hebrides, whose school there had won the approval of the Guardian.

The Guardian’s Gifts

On Friday evening at the Australian Ḥażíratu’l-Ḳuds, a profoundly moving scene was witnessed when Hand of the Cause Mason Remey presented to the Conference the Guardian’s gifts: a portion of earth from the inmost Shrine of Bahá’u’lláh, a lock of His Precious Hair, and a reproduction of His portrait. Mr. Remey annointed each of the believers with attar of roses as they approached the precious gifts.

“The Construction and Completion of the Three Mother Temples”

On Saturday morning after devotions, the Conference was addressed by Hand of the Cause Clara Dunn, so dear to all the believers and known affectionately as “Mother” Dunn, who recalled some of the memories of “Father” Dunn and herself as pioneers of a Continent.

Mr. S. W. Bolton, on behalf of the Temple Construction Committee, then spoke of the long search for a suitable site for the Temple and the drawing-up of the plans from Mr. Remey’s original design.

Mr. Habib Sabet then led an appeal for funds for the Temple, which in little more than an hour resulted in cash and pledges totalling a little more than £30,000.

Before lunch all assembled on the spacious lawns in front of the Ḥażíratu’l-Ḳuds for the official photographs.

At the outset of the Conference Mr. Habib Sabet, with the concurrence of the National Spiritual Assembly, had obtained the services of a professional cameraman to record the proceedings of the Conference in a movie film which will in time be circulated throughout the Bahá’í World.

Temple Foundation Ceremony

At 1:00 o’clock, in three omnibuses and a fleet of cars, the believers set out for the Temple site at Mona Vale, some twenty-two miles from the city. Here on a hilltop 700 feet high, from which can be seen the city and its surroundings for some thirty miles in all directions, in an indescribable atmosphere of love and amity, more than 250 people including many members of the general public, watched the Foundation Ceremony.

With prayers of gratitude for the great blessing of having this Mother Temple of the Pacific constructed here in Australia, Mr. Mason Remey placed in a specially prepared position, the small silver casket containing a portion of the earth from the Most Holy Shrine, and dear Mother Dunn placed with it a similar casket containing a piece of plaster from the Báb’s cell.
in the fortress of Mah-kú. These were then sealed in with concrete and thus, in a position which will be directly under the center of the dome, the Australian House of Worship will forever contain these precious links with the two foremost Figures of the Faith.

On Saturday evening, the mid-way point of the Conference, the friends gathered in a more relaxed and informal session and were addressed by Hand of the Cause Mason Remey under the title “Armchair Chat—News of the World Center.”

Following the screening of two films of the Shrines and the Holy Places, Mr. Mason Remey told the Conference of the tremendous work of the Beloved Guardian in connection with the beautification of the Bahá’í properties at Haifa and ‘Akká, and of the sadness which still pervades as a result of his passing. Nevertheless, Mr. Remey said the Hands were profoundly grateful that they had been enabled to complete much of the Guardian’s planning. He spoke of the initial difficulties of the World Center in its relations with the Israeli Government and of how with love and care these had been overcome, even to the point where the President of the country called on our beloved Guardian.

On Sunday morning the review of the Ten-Year Crusade victories was continued, discussion being led by Mr. Eric Bowes. Under this heading more of the Pacific pioneers and a number of the overseas visitors spoke of the ways in which the Faith is being spread. At 2:00 p.m. the Conference paused for a period of solemn devotion to the memory of our late beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi. Following this, the believers listened attentively to an address by Hand of the Cause Dhikru’lláh Khádem, on the achievements of our late Guardian in his thirty-six years of Guardianship.

To Deliberate on Ways and Means

Introducing this subject, which was to occupy the greater part of the Conference’s last day, Hand of the Cause Collis Featherstone spoke of “The Road Ahead.” Under no less than twenty-five distinct headings, Mr. Featherstone surveyed the tremendous tasks which must be completed in the next five years if the Ten-Year Crusade is to achieve the glorious purpose of which the beloved Guardian spoke.

“Above all,” said Mr. Featherstone, “is the need for individual deepening of the spiritual life. Regular reading of the sacred scripture, attendance at Feasts and Anniversaries, sustained regular support of the Funds, and a consciousness that whatever else befalls, the Faith must be and remain the prime purpose and object of our life.”

A public meeting in the city on Sunday evening was attended by almost fifty members of the general public who listened attentively to three speakers who outlined the Christian and Muslim approach to their logical fulfillment in the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh.

Following devotions on Monday morning, Mr. Peter Bird, chairman of the Australian Bahá’í Public Relations Committee, spoke to the conference on “Reaching the Masses.” Recalling the Guardian’s last Convention message in which he stated that “teaching the Faith to the multitudes . . . must in this year be accorded priority over every other Bahá’í activity,” the speaker outlined the methods of publicity and public relations which are available and which must be understood and used with wisdom to the fullest extent if this purpose is to be achieved.

Auxiliary Board Member Miss Margaret Rowling then spoke of “Guiding the Seeker.” Reviewing briefly the methods of individual teaching, Miss Rowling emphasized the need to understand the individual seeker, his needs, and his desires—and to be able to present to him the answer to his personal problems as but part of the wider picture of world peace and unity which our Faith offers.

Finally, in the morning session the important task of “Nurturing the New Believer” was outlined by Mr. Hugh Blundell, Auxiliary Board member and member of the New Zealand National Spiritual Assembly, who spoke of the vital need to assist the new believer to identify himself with the Bahá’í community, and to deepen his knowledge and understanding of the many facets of the Faith.

In the course of an Open Forum on Monday afternoon, many ideas and suggestions for use, both on the homefront and in the Pacific goals, were brought forward by the friends, methods of using publicity and of establishing public relations, the need to establish contact with governments, and the importance of becoming known among social and ethical movements in one’s civic community.

As this session drew to a close, the friends thrilled to some words from Mr. Qudratulláh Huseyn, likening the Guardian to the candle which burns itself out in order to give light to the world. Mr. Huseyn proposed that had there been more to say, the Guardian would not have been taken from us. “Remember the sacrifices and the martyrdom of the early believers,” he concluded. “Let us have no more talk; let us have action.”

Mr. Mason Remey then outlined “The Guardian’s Plans for Action.” The Faith is now established over the faces of the earth, except in countries behind the Iron Curtain. Soon our pioneers will reach there too, and can expect great harvest. Bahá’ís are the only people who understand the religions of the past and we must go forth and explain these religions to their followers for their meaning has been lost. The Guardian has laid the plans for the Crusade and has shown the ways in which individually and collectively we can play...
Beloved Friends:

For years the believers have anticipated the beloved Guardian’s annual Convention Message, setting forth the year’s achievements on Crusade tasks and stressing those to be carried out in the next phase of the Ten-Year Plan.

The message transmitted to this year’s Conventions held throughout the Bahá’í world was prepared by the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land as an expression of the Guardian’s intention and using data particular, initial plans had been formulated with the North East Asian Assembly for the close cooperation between these two poles of the Pacific spiritual axis for which the Guardian had called.

These were the outward and visible results of the Conference, but the unseen effects were perhaps the more important, the power of love and faith generated in the hearts of each and every one, power to be put into service by each attendant as he returned to his home. In a virgin goal or in our own street or suburb, God has endowed each and every one of us with the power to live and teach His Faith, and whatever our circumstances He can use each one.

Mr. Featherstone closed the Conference with the Báb’s prayer for assistance:

“In the Name of God, the Victor of the most victorious proclaim: God will assist all those who arise to serve Him. No one is able to deprive Him of His majesty, His dominion, His sovereignty, for in the heaven and the earth and in all the realms of God, He is the Victorious and the Conqueror.”

—National Spiritual Assembly of Australia

PUBLICITY AND PUBLIC RELATIONS

In the few weeks prior to the Conference four full-length articles concerning the Australian House of Worship appeared in leading Australian newspapers. Two of these included references to the Conference. Short paragraphs announcing the Conference appeared in three papers during the week immediately preceding the Conference.

A press reception on Thursday was attended by reporters and photographers from the two Sydney morning papers, both of which carried excellent reports on Friday morning.

Large advertisements carrying pictures of the Temple and notices of the public meeting appeared in the two major Sydney papers on Saturday morning, and smaller ones carrying the Temple picture only appeared in the major newspaper of each other capital city.

Press representatives covered both the Temple Foundation Ceremony and the Public Meeting, but regrettably no further articles were published.

A number of specially printed envelopes and envelope seals carrying the Temple illustration were issued to all those attending the Conference. Used in the mails, these will spread considerable incidental publicity.

U. S. National Assembly Commentary on Convention Message

Shoghi Effendi had assembled before his passing. In addition we find their heartfelt sorrow at the loss of our peerless leader and a feeling that perhaps that tragic event represented the intervention of the Plan of God in the events of the Divine Plan revealed by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. “Every single believer must, during the past six months, have been aware of how mighty is the stronghold of the Faith, how impregnable the walls our Guardian raised about it...”

Ours is now the unique and blessed opportunity to concentrate attention on the objectives of the Ten-Year Plan in our own area and to contemplate the goals still unfulfilled.

As the Custodians point out, the Guardian in his last message left an instrument and gave instructions by which his work could be carried on, "The Crusade safely prosecuted to the end, the Cause of God protected and the design of Bahá'u'lláh, as embodied in His Most Holy Book, executed."

The Hands recount their grief and sudden feeling of "immense moral responsibility" and what a burden rests upon the nine Hands serving at the World Center, and rejoice at the "clear evidences of the unfailing protection of Bahá'u'lláh vouchsafed to His broken-hearted servants."

The State of Israel poured forth its sympathy. The necessary legal documents were approved by which the interests of the Faith are protected.

Among the great achievements of the World Crusade at the Bahá'i World Center are the purging of the Háram-i-Aqdas of the remnant of the Covenant-breakers, the razing of their properties, the Gardens extended, and the completion of the interior of the International Archives building.

Throughout the continents, the achievements include the holding of two of the five Intercontinental Conferences, the formation of the first National Spiritual Assembly of France, the increase in the number of territories within the Bahá'i community to 254. With the settlement of the Chagos Archipelago and Nicobar Island only twelve territories remain unopened of the 131 new territories listed in the Ten-Year Plan, and of these eleven lie within the Soviet orbit. The number of local centers has been raised to over 4500, an increase of 1300 in the last 3 years.

The message also lists the number of local spiritual assemblies, the translation and publication of Bahá'i literature, the Hazíratu'l-Quds and Endowments purchased, the recognition of Bahá'i Holy Days, the right to conduct legal Bahá'i marriage, and the acquisition of Temple sites.

Statistics for Africa, the Pacific area, and the Western Hemisphere are dramatically presented, and the numerous teaching conferences and congresses reported.

We now enter the fourth phase of the Ten-Year Plan which, as the Guardian stated in October 1957, "must be immortalized by an unprecedented increase in the number of believers, of local centers and by swift progress in erection of the Temples in Africa and Australia and the construction of the first Mashriqu'l-Adhkár of Europe."

Four new national assemblies are to be established in 1959: Burma, Turkey, Austria, and the South Pacific.

The message concludes with the "solemn charge laid upon us by our beloved when he was preparing us to shoulder the tasks of the Holy Crusade: 'I adjure them, by the precious blood that flowed in such great profusion . . . to resolve never to flinch, never to hesitate, never to relax, until each and every obligation . . . has been fully consummated.'"

The National Assembly appeals in all love to the American believers to extend every possible assistance throughout the fourth phase of the World Crusade, by contributing to the National Fund, by pioneering abroad or on the homefront, or by consecrated teaching work in their own communities.

First Reports of the 1958 National Conventions Reveal Bahá'ís, Newly Aware of Spiritual Forces Released by Guardian’s Ascension, Resolve to Meet Challenges With Maturity, Audacity, and Dedication

Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela

This year the hearts of the Bahá’ís of the five countries in the northern zone of South America were turned toward Guayaquil, Ecuador, because there, in that fast-growing, commercial coastal city was held the annual convention of the Bahá’ís of Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela.

The friends arrived several days before the convention to attend the two-day school which has grown out of a need to have more time to get better acquainted. This year our study classes covered parts of the book Christ and Bahá’u’lláh. Our Persian friends lent much to the study of the contributions of Muhammad. There were two other classes on Teaching Needs, and Loyalty and Protection of the Cause.

On April 22, the morning of the opening of the convention, we received the letter from the Hands in the Holy Land which both comforted and assured our hearts that although “…the Design has altered the design…the pattern remains in its strength and glory.” Our convention continued in a spirit of seriousness of purpose with always the forward look toward a possibility that one of the five countries in our territory may soon be granted the great honor of having its own National Spiritual Assembly, and others following in the coming years.

From our secretary’s report we realized that we had made strides, not only in numbers but in contributions to our National Fund.

Let the delegates and visitors themselves speak of their impressions of the convention:

"It was the intense longing and need on the part of the delegates and visitors to be here that impressed me," said one friend, referring to the long distances that had been covered by plane, bus, and boat, which involved days and nights of tiring travel.

Another said, "It was the continued feeling of remembrance of our Guardian and our indebtedness to him, and," she added, "the calm assurance of continued guidance."

Another spoke of the growing sense of maturity in consultation.

Several commented on the contributions made by the young people to the spirit of the convention. One said, "It is in them that we have hope for the future."

Others spoke of sacrifice. A young man had saved a thousand dollars in order to visit Haifa when the crushing news came of the passing of our Beloved, preventing him from realizing his dream. He offered this amount, in the name of himself and his wife, toward a goal that is in urgent need of being fulfilled. The following day a young doctor gave 500 soles for the same purpose. All at the convention were given an opportunity to share in contributions for the erecting of a memorial for our Guardian.

One delegate commented on the diversity of languages and accents. There was a continuous flow of Portuguese and Spanish with an intermingling of Portuguese with Persian accent, and Spanish with North-American accent.

The following persons were elected to serve on the National Spiritual Assembly: Margot Worley, Dorothy Campbell, Djalal Eghrari, Edmund Miessler, Cyrus Monadjem, Mercedes Sanchez, Rangvald Taetz, Eve Nicklin, Gayle Woolson. Five of the members live in Brazil, four in Peru and one in Ecuador.

Then came the last day on April 25 when members of the National Spiritual Assembly, delegates, and visitors had to say goodbye to Guayaquil and the friends there that had so lovingly given of their time and their love to make everyone happy and comfortable in their city.

Central America, Mexico, and Panama

The city of Guatemala has been the scene for what surely will be written in future years as a moment of first importance in the awakening of Middle America to the dawn of the New Age.

The Convention of the Bahá’ís of Central America, Mexico, and Panama, coming only six months after the earthquake of our beloved...
Guardian's passing, witnessed to a truly stirring degree those qualities which all the believers in their grief knew must be evidenced at such a crucial time.

It took place in an atmosphere of dedication, determination, and unwavering loyalty to the Covenant and to its custodians, the Hands of the Cause of God. Its deliberations showed a degree of concentration and maturity unknown in the seven previous conventions of the territory. As for unity, one believer remarked that the unity and happiness among the friends is of a completely new quality, and another said on parting, "I have left this convention with nothing but love for everyone I encountered."

It was truly as if the Convention were dedicated not only officially, but in the deeds and resolves of each individual heart present, to Shoghi Effendi. Indeed, this, plus the glorious assurance of Bahá'u'lláh's protection so evident in that vivifying letter from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land, plus the prayers of all, plus seven years of experience, plus the work of those responsible for the various activities of the Convention, gave to all the sessions this very evident sense of maturity and unity.

Approximately 50 delegates and believers from Mexico, Guatemala, Belize, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, and the Canal Zone began the three-day session with a cordial and animated reception in the Continental Hotel. From this evening event it was evident that there was to be no reserve in the friendliness of believer to believer.

After the election of Artemus Lamb as Chairman and Louis Bouche as Secretary of the Convention and the other preliminaries, came that stirring and strengthening message of the Hands of God in the Holy Land. It was read in Spanish and in English, Spanish being the language of the Convention proceedings. This reading was followed by a cable which tried to carry so much of the love and gratitude of those present:

BELOVED HANDS,

HEARTS UPLIFTED GLORIOUS MESSAGE HOPES RAISED FRIENDS ASSURED FAITH STRENGTHENED MEMORIAL MONUMENT FUND ESTABLISHED.

It was obvious from the annual reports of the outgoing National Assembly and the various committees that much ground has been gained in the past year, but that much more could have been gained with more funds and more pioneers. Among the most notable advances are: The stepped-up Indian work, including the formation of a new Indian assembly in Sacapulas, Guatemala, in the days immediately preceding the Convention. Also, very encouraging contacts have been made with Indian groups in Mexico and El Salvador; the outstanding progress of the Faith in Guanacaste, Costa Rica; the new and dynamic spirit of the Faith in Mexico, and the formation of a new assembly in Guadalajara; the great increase in summer school sessions, notably in Karbila, Honduras, in Panama, and in El Salvador; the increasing activity of the Latin believers in the teaching and administrative work; the steady addition to the number of assemblies with incorporation; the presentation of portfolios containing the Tablet of Bahá'u'lláh to the leaders of the American Republics to local spiritual assemblies of each capital city; and the arrival of more pioneers to the territory, and numerous others. The strengthening of the Faith in Mexico and Panama, planned with the possible addition of Costa Rica... to be the earliest of these republics to form their own National Spiritual Assemblies, was one of the most encouraging signs that this Six-Year Plan will, with much prayer and effort, stay on schedule.

The newly elected National Spiritual Assembly for the territory, consisting of James Facey, Artemus Lamb, Esteban Canales, Louis Bouche, Elai Kalantar, Amy McAllister, Alfred Osborn, Dr. Edris Rice Wray, and Valeria Nichols, met immediately to begin their year of work.

Three memorable events were realized in the evenings during the Convention. The first of these, and in many ways the heart of the convention, was an inspiring memorial to Shoghi Effendi held at the Hażratu'l-Quds of Guatemala, and included a musical recording of the "Sweet-Scented Streams," a touching devotional period, followed by the telling of stories and experiences of those present who have made pilgrimages and have seen that blessed face. Then came a well-prepared talk on the Guardian and the Institution of the Hands of the Cause of God.

Saturday evening was dedicated to the Indian work. It was a public meeting with two non-Baha'i speakers, one affiliated with UNESCO and the other with the Government and the University of San Carlos, a trusted friend of the Indians and a scholar of their ways. Both paid high tribute to the ideals and the deeds of the Baha'is. Artemis Lamb then gave a very uplifting and challenging talk, boldly proclaiming that the goal of Baha'u'llah's Faith was to unite organically and spiritually the entire human race, and that these neglected races will, by divine promise, arise to a great and surprising destiny when they understand that Baha'u'llah is the Manifestation of God for them. The evening was then concluded with a delightful presentation by the Quiche Indians from the Baha'i Indian Institute at Chichicastenango with their director, Jennie Taylor.

On Sunday evening the friends gathered again at the Hażratu'l-Quds for the Ridge Feast, a high spiritual experience, fitting perfectly as the climax of this very encouraging and fruitful Convention. As the friends parted or made plans to visit the Institute in Chichicastenango after the Convention, there were unmistakable signs, even without words, that they were resolved to attach themselves to the completing of the goals that this convention so clearly engraved in their minds.

United States

Convening on April 29 for the fiftieth time, at the mid-point of the World Crusade, Baha'i's of the United States declared with 'Abdu'l-Baha, "Now is the time for very great things!" as they set their sights on the theme, "A New Baha'i Era."

In Foundation Hall of "the holiest House of Worship in the world"—from whence would "go forth influence"—delegates of the American Baha'i community gave forth and received a current of searching thoughts and ideas focused on the work already laid out for the next five years by the beloved Guardian, he who had said, "If they would only follow my instructions, be my agents, be reeds through which the spirit could flow to the people of the world, they would be amazed at the victories I would win..."—he who had warned "not to allow... this one remaining opportunity to be irretrievably lost!"

They reminded themselves, and were admonished by their distinguished speakers, that "with his spirit watching over the world now" they truly must "become the reed through which his spirit can flow, the media for the source of salvation to a dying society"; that this very day is "fraught with spiritual power because of the passing of Shoghi Effendi to the Abba Kingdom"; that he had begged "this community—the spiritual descendants of the Dawn-Breakers... champion-builders...standard-bearers...torch-bearers of a future divinely inspired world civilization—(to) arise...to secure the lion's share in the prosecution of a Global Crusade designed to diffuse the Light of God's Revelation over the surface of the entire planet."

They remembered that in 1923 this beloved person had written to the Persians a message of consolation: "The passing of 'Abdu'l-Baha has spread affliction, but His sacred spirit at last has attained the joy of freedom in Paradise. From that lofty peak, He watches and addresses us: 'O ye, my beloved ones, grieve not nor be hopeless and confused. I am with you. Every moment I aid you with renewed confirmation. Sacrifice your lives! Be not deserted, rise in union and harmony! If ye were to fail, ye will never see me, nor meet in the Kingdom. Arise with fortitude!' They were also told that he said to Enoch Olinga, called by him the Father of Victories, when asked what to teach, "Teach them to be saints! We have enough administrators."
First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Salem, Ore., a goal city, formed on April 21, 1958.

Of the rare and beautiful memories of the busy Convention were the silences before prayer, into which was poured the haunting music of the chanting of our beloved Persian friends. It was a wonderful privilege and memorial, to listen to the prayers given to them by Shoghi Effendi himself, and not yet translated into any other language. The collection of chants were like pages of beautiful Persian script translated into music. One also was given in Arabic by a friend from the Baghidad community—and the lovely sounds differed even as do the Persian and Arabic characters delicately penned on the page.

Highlighting the opening of the convention was the message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land to all of the Annual Conventions of the Bahá’í World read by Horace Holley, revered Hand of the Cause and Secretary of the Convention. He counseled that although now we have no Guardian in the flesh, that although, as written by the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, the Plan of God has crossed the Divine Plan, seeming to divert it, in the long run it will reinforce it, in a mystery that cannot be explained.

He said that appraising what Shoghi Effendi has given us in world order, interpretation of the messages of Bahá’u’lláh, work so meticulously planned for five more years, we realize that the Guardian is still our guidance and our blessing. "In the formative years of the Faith of God on earth, we had an incomparable Guardian. The victory he won for Bahá’u’lláh will go down through the Bahá’í Era. There is divine guidance for the future House of Justice. We cannot fill all the gaps. Perhaps we will see the pattern more clearly, but we have enough now. A faithful Bahá’í in action has all the insight he needs from day to day to accomplish his mission. The words of Shoghi Effendi are treasured ones. A gardener must protect a young tree, but when the tree becomes mature, it can take care of itself. We are the tree, roots deeply emplanted, branches encircling the world."

These words of Rúhíyyih Khánum were quoted to inspire: "We thought war might interrupt the Divine Plan. We never dreamed the interruption would be the ascension of the Guardian. Our monument to him must be the carrying out of his plans. In the memory of Shoghi Effendi, I implore you to carry on his work as one soul in many bodies!"

Again, from his own last message: "I would . . . entreat every one of them to immortalize this approaching, fateful hour . . . by a fresh consecration . . . instantaneous plan of action . . . dynamic and decisive."

"They cannot be the chosen people of God and do nothing about it." To do the Guardian's bidding will be a true memorial to our beloved Shoghi Effendi.

And so the delegates acknowledged their shortcomings. They said, "Let us go back to significant passages, not to read them once or twice, but go back to them until they become a part of us, until we reflect intensity of spirit, resignation to the Will of God, utmost humility." "We must create a climate for maturity, in order to realize it. Take advantage of the divine art of consultation with prayer and meditation, then seek answers together." They were reminded that when the Blessed Báb declared His Mission, there was only one true believer in the world! All he had was intense joy, passion to share.

"Why is Africa blessed with so many new assemblies in one year? Those who served arose in a spirit of great sacrifice! The poverty of the Africans is overwhelming. Yet at a Feast, they serve bread and water, in order to send ten shillings to Shoghi Effendi to help those less fortunate! We have been given the spiritual primacy, and we must find out how to capture the spirit of dedication that has brought such tremendous victories in other parts of the world, so that the work will go forward, here on the Homefront!"

Home Front Teaching

Attention turned to the Homefront, which must gain 125 new local assemblies before 1963, remembering with our revered Hand, Leroy Ios, that even in the exciting days when the pioneers were going out, Shoghi Effendi continued to talk about the Homefront. Convention Chairman and National Spiritual Assembly member Charles Wolcott warned that the discussion must be creative and constructive. "We are blessed with the principle of community action, and we must use it well. The hardest objectives are yet ahead, and invigoration of the Homefront must be the basis of our approach."

They counseled one another that if from this Temple "would go forth influence," it is effort that releases influence, that the Guardian had said, "Disperse, disperse, disperse!"

From Alaska came the challenge, "Don't say I'll go pioneering when the door opens—kick the door open!" The last pilgrim to Africa to visit the Guardian told of his admonition: "The fire must be fanned and flamed—go back to God! Passes By, re-read Chapter VI, page 98, 'He Who in such dramatic circumstances . . . ' to the bottom of pages 96, 'When the earth shall shine with the light of her Lord . . .' Something will happen when you stand in your room and read who He is! The world is dying for leadership—here is the Leader!"

Administration

On the subject of strengthening administrative institutions of the Faith, Horace Holley warned, "A group of eight evolves. The whole mystery of Bahá'u'lláh's Order is contained in that group. If we do not employ rightly that interval of time before becoming nine, we are not qualified to grow into an assembly and exercise authority. How does it come into authority? It is a divine creation. That which is a blessing to pure souls, becomes a torment to persons of divided minds. The spiritual world is here—not at some mysterious distant place. The dominant must learn their lesson—the clinging must learn to walk alone. The institution of the local spiritual assembly is given us by Bahá'u'lláh to establish justice and peace upon the earth—not to split hairs over the problems of an enrolled but not confirmed community."

Borrah Kavelin, who was later to become Chairman of the newly elected National Spiritual Assembly advised: "The administrative order is the channel for the release of the spirit. Keep everybody busy! The local assembly has authority, but must be the servant, not the dictator."

Financial

The National Assembly Treasurer for the past year, Borrah Kavelin, prefaced his report of and appeal for the National Fund—"the life blood of all Bahá'í institutions," by reminding the delegates that they are heirs to great responsibility, that at the base of all victories won during the last five years is sacrifice made by each, according to his own measure and understanding.

"How much more precious and meaningful now, are the words of Shoghi Effendi. Let us bring joy to him in the Abba Kingdom by fulfilling our responsibilities." He said that the Convention might view with pride the thirty-five Haziratu'l-Quds opened around the world at a total expenditure of about a quarter million dollars. Only one is yet to be opened, in Caracas, Venezuela, to fulfill the Crusade goal. Inflation has set a high price, but $15,000 is at present set aside toward the total.

American Bahá'ís are investing $15,000 in the Temple site in Stock­holm, and this, together with the $12,000 raised in Stockholm itself, resulted in the acquisition, while the Convention was yet in progress, of the land on which another stately Mashriqu'l-Adhkár will rise.

Mr. Kavelin reported excellent progress on the first dependency, the Home for the Aged, to house twenty guests, being erected in the environs of the House of Worship in Wilmette. At a total investment of about one-fourth million dollars, it should be complete in September of this year.

But lest the American Bahá'ís become complacent, they were reminded of no small current budgetary problems: that the National office is growing, that in the Guardian's last message he made five specific references to finances and insisted that the Homefront be "spiritually invigorated, administratively expanded, and materially replenished," that material resources must not be neglected nor underestimated in a growing Bahá'í order. All were urged to participate in the effort to erect a noble memorial to the beloved Guardian in London.

Intercontinental Goals

All hearts were warmed by the report by National Assembly member Edna True of the formation of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of France, the flowering of the seed planted by the Master Himself. This... the first independent National Spiritual Assembly on the continent of Europe, numbers the twenty-seventh pillar of the House of Justice, and has been attained in the year designated by our Beloved Guardian.

The European Teaching Committee stated that there must be seven more national spiritual assemblies in Europe by 1963, besides those in Austria and Turkey, by Ridván 1959,—that there is an imperative need for sustained pioneers in all these twelve countries.

The Africa Teaching Committee asked, "Have we rested on our cars?" There are now only sixty-eight pioneers in Africa against seventy last year, and the sixty-eight are not distributed according to need. Three countries, Portuguese Guinea, Spanish Guinea, and St. Thomas, must have pioneers. It must be remembered, too, that newly won goals can be lost by pioneers abandoning them too soon.

The Secretary of the Asia Teaching Committee appealed, "Do read the Annual Report." This Committee was delighted to report new native Bahá'ís going out from newly won goals to pioneer in other areas—settled so far with forty-nine American Bahá'ís. Prayers are requested for the non-American who is working on the difficult resettlement of Tibet. He has re-entered with determination, and is enduring great hardships.

The need in the Caroline Islands is hampered by the government code which prevents its employees supporting any particular religion. Yet the natives say, "When will you send us pioneers?" Single male pioneers should go there and live among the natives in patience. Guam is the center of education for natives in the entire area. If taught there, they will return to their homes with the Message. A regional national spiritual assembly is to be formed next Ridván.
in Suva in the Fiji Islands to serve all the South Pacific islands.

The Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee came before the delegates with the affirmation, “The harvest is ripe...'Now is the time for very great things.'” Latin America must have twenty national assemblies in the next five years—one in every republic. The 170 pioneers scattered throughout are far short of the need. Brazil is as large a country as the United States with another Texas thrown in! The necessity is for immediate settlement by three times that number. The native believers are wonderful but lack the self-reliance to build institutions. Mostly they are from the underprivileged, so that they cannot move about.

A native Indian Bahá'í Community in Bolivia is pleading for a teacher to instruct their wives and their hundred children in the Faith, and in Spanish reading and writing. This Committee says “Learn Spanish!”

Special Tasks

For those who cannot go into the foreign fields, the American Indian Service Committee holds out a rich and rewarding work for those who would dedicate themselves to our own aborigines, these oppressed natives of North America. There are thirty large tribal groupings from which thirty-two leading members in sixteen tribes have become Bahá'ís. There are twenty-one pioneers in the field. The Omaha Reservation on the Great Plains, one of the most culturally disintegrated and socially ill, characterized only by its will to survive, has few believers—but if one dedicated pioneer had not gone there last fall, there may have been none.

The needs are always for doctors, dentists, nurses, social workers, teachers, and a variety of possibilities of employment in towns near the Reservations.

There was further discussion of the relocation program by the government, resettling Indians from the overcrowded reservations into certain large cities, where they are lost and lonely, urging that we turn them and simply be neighborly at first.

In Los Angeles alone, there are 10,000 American Indians—and there are relocation centers in 12 other cities in the U.S. If they return home to the reservation because the world outside is too unfriendly, it is to return to abject poverty without government help.

Are these neglected souls, our own aborigines, these beloved of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, the very impetus needed to revitalize the Homefront? Only the pure of heart will be able to reach these simple souls, who will sense his sincerity.

The Interracial Teaching Committee will send on request the script for a Pageant to be used on Race Amity Day, but which is suitable for any time. The Committee says to be on the watch for opportunities to demonstrate Bahá'í unity: attend concerts open to the public, Negro affairs, church dinners, tea at the YWCA, make friends, give book reviews, show colored slides. If we look, there will be many open doors.

The Committee described as of very special merit a film on housing, “All the Way Home,” available through social agencies, public libraries, etc., and “Boundary Lines,” a beautifully done film with “unbeatable impact” by B'na B'rith. Most film libraries will have it. A delegate from Mississippi described how Bahá'ís there are called on the carpet to defend the Faith... their answer: “We are an organization to change hearts, not to change lives.” They are critically watched there in the deep south, and must demonstrate the teachings in their own lives. Negroes are urgently needed to teach their own; those oppressed for decades will not readily accept the Faith from white people.

College, Youth, and Child Education

These Committees demonstrated amazing vitality and fire and left with the delegates a whole new realm of fresh ideas, many applicable to the adult teaching areas. “The colleges are great untapped fields. We shall reach the faculty members so that they may include the Faith in and relate it to their overall teaching pictures.” Students are witnessing the fulfillment of the prophecy of God, the disintegration of the old order. When a student asks what happens next, he is spiritually hooked!” “It is most vital that an effort be made to preserve the continuity of the campus clubs—in the face of constant turnover.”
With the College Bureau functioning separately, the Youth Committee was able to apply itself to the increase of its local committees from 15 last year to 100 at present! They reminded the American community that a youth committee is often made up to begin with, of no youth at all, only adults who will work to reach the youth, and that the Guardian had said, “Concentrate on youth of great capacity—one soul can set the continent ablaze!”

They said, “Students are idealistic, are looking for a cause in which they can lose themselves—but we must let them know that this is a real Crusade!” “Be enthusiastic, not fanatical, audacious, not aggressive!”

The Committee on Child Education appealed for hundreds of subscriptions to Child’s Way, or it may have to suspend publication. This is not a bulletin for children to read, but a guide for Bahá’í teachers. They cited the growing registration of error. They cannot find investigation of truth, it is investigation.

They said, “Students are idealistic, are looking for a cause in which they can lose themselves—but we must let them know that this is a real Crusade!” “Be enthusiastic, not fanatical, audacious, not aggressive!”

The following cable was composed and sent to the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land:

FIFTIETH ANNUAL CONVENTION SENDS WARMEST APPRECIATION MESSAGE REVERED HANDS HOLY LAND. DEEPEST LOVE.

After three intensive days the Fiftieth Annual Convention of the Bahá’ís of the U.S. adjourned, with a total registration of 1,102 Bahá’ís, including perhaps fifty visitors from other countries, and having received and sent loving messages from and to the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, the beloved Amatullá-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum, the National Assemblies of Canada, of Pakistan, the Regional Assemblies of South America, and the American Hands of the Cause.

The bright carnation lei from friends in Hawaii was faded, but the hardy antherium they brought was still perfectly fresh and beautiful—a symbol of the fresh start taken for the remaining five years of the Crusade—“the time for very great things.”

Honored Guests

Our revered Hand of the Cause Corinne True shared the rostrum for a brief period, and dear little Jessie Revell, whom Shoghi Effendi sent for to be his helper and who is now Treasurer of the International Bahá’í Council, brought deep love from Rúhíyyih Khánum and the Hands at Haifa. Her mother had been at the Temple site when the land was blessed. Only ten days before his passing the Guardian said she and her sister should each attend an Intercontinental Conference since they had not attended any in 1953.

A great bounty of the Convention was the loving message of Adelaide Sharp, representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of Iran, in charge of Bahá’í schools in Tihrân. Her message to the American community was: “Take advantage of the freedom you have—freedom of speech, freedom from fear!”

The lovely gift of a precious box containing dust from every room in the Adrianople home of Bahá’u’lláh was brought from the friends in Turkey and presented to the American archives by Torab-Menevi, a Persian pioneer in Istanbul, grand-daughter of Hand of the Cause Taráqí’lláh Samandari.

National Spiritual Assembly, 1958-59

Out of 171 delegates, 166 ballots were cast (six of these being void) for the new National Spiritual Assembly, who met shortly thereafter to elect their officers. The results were as follows: Chairman, Borrah Kavelin; Vice-Chairman, Charles Wolcott; Secretary, Horace Holley; Assistant Secretary, Charlotte Linfoot; Recording Secretary, Edna True; Treasurer, Arthur Duhl; and Katherine True, Margery McCormick, and Ellsworth Blackwell.

The Indian Agency at Window Rock, Ariz., with the "window rock" formation in the mountain visible in the background.

Red rock country interspersed with the twists of snow-capped juniper on the Navajo Reservation in northern Arizona was the inspirational setting of a two-day Baha'i Conference, April 12 and 13, under the famous Window Rock.

Rays of understanding emanated from the discussion of "Reaching Minority Groups" and from the weekend fellowship which drew members of various Indian tribes and their Baha'i friends. The Conference, inspired and planned by the Window Rock Group, began Saturday noon as participants arrived from the four corners—as far south as Phoenix, as far north as Farmington, as far west as Tuba City, and as far east as Albuquerque.

Evening dinner, preceded by a delightful afternoon of mountain climbing, sightseeing, and forming new friendships, was served in the Ginnett's small apartment, which must have had elastic walls as everyone was so comfortable among the large numbers present; however, perhaps this was due to our realization that the gathering was enhanced by the presence of twelve Indians representing Navajo, Delaware, Cochiti, Pueblo, Sioux, Chippewa, and Hopi tribes.

The next morning the group gathered for prayers, followed by a breakfast of bacon and eggs served in the Window Rock Lodge, which is a Navajo tribe enterprise. The Conference convened in the library of the Administration building with an opening of three prayers in various tongues—Hopi, Delaware, and English—and the reading of "The Source of Unity" from Baha'i World Faith pp. 257 to 258.

The ensuing discussion covered two aspects of Indian teaching: (1) how to overcome a barrier such as language, and (2) the need for understanding. Such thoughts as these were expressed:

"To overcome any barrier one must first drop everything and seek to reach others. We can sit on the floor and eat with our fingers with them; we can simplify our lives." This will enable us to demonstrate genuine interest and prove the purity of our motives.

"We must understand what communication is; language is only one form. We must not rely on the crutch of language; we must learn to use other forms of communication which are intangible; it can be only realized, not taught."

"Build up your friendships as this may be the only language you and your Indian friend can speak with understanding."

"In greeting others take time to first greet the heart; this is done only through silence."

"Love your native friend because he is an individual and not just because he is Navajo, Hopi, etc."

"In trying to understand the Indian it is not enough to read books about them; we must read their hearts as well."

Views on life after death and evil forces were shared by Hopi, Delaware, and Navajo Indians with a result that their expressed views were quite similar. It was with this realization of the many similarities among the thoughts of the various Indian backgrounds that the Conference closed with a Navajo chanting his prayer; however, the doors of our hearts opened to receive the spirit of this significant conference.

Dedicate Canadian Temple Site
At North York, Ontario

John Robarts, Hand of the Cause, in the presence of Canadian Bahá'ís from coast to coast, dedicated the site of the second MASHRÍQú'IL-ÁDHYÁR in the North American continent.

The time of this historic event was four o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, April 26, 1958. There were more than seventy Bahá'ís and their friends present.

The short, impressive ceremony was opened with a welcome to the Bahá'ís by Claus Liedtke of North York, on behalf of the Bahá'ís of that community where the temple land is located. He then repeated Bahá'u'lláh's blessing: "Blessed is the spot . . ." He was followed by Lloyd Gardner of Oshawa, chairman of the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly, reading 'Abdu'l-Bahá's prayer for a House of Worship: "O Lord, make these holy souls, who have arisen to build this temple . . ."

Mr. Robarts, during a short talk, briefly reviewed the history of the various MASHRÍQú'IL-ÁDHYÁR in the world, and of the acquisition of this site in northern Toronto. He also told how funds willed to the Canadian Bahá'í community by the late Hand of the Cause Siegfried Schopflocher had paid for the site.

He was followed with the reading, by National Spiritual Assembly member Allan F. Raynor, of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's prayer for Canada: "Praise be to Thee, O God! Verily, these are Thy servants . . ."

The dedication was made even more historic by the presence of several pioneer teachers from Canada and from Africa.

Court Rules Maxwell Home
Entitled to Tax Exemption

On February 24, 1958, another important victory for the Faith in Canada was achieved, when judgment was rendered by the Superior Court in Montreal in favour of the National Spiritual Assembly against the City of Montreal. This was the result of an action commenced in 1955, to require the City of Montreal to recognize the Bahá'í Faith as an independent religious body and grant exemption to it from municipal taxes for the Bahá'í Shrine, as a place primarily devoted to religious worship and therefore eligible under the city's own charter and by-laws.

This house was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland Maxwell and their daughter, Rúhíyyih Khánum, and was given to the National Spiritual Assembly in 1954. 'Abdu'l-Bahá was a visitor to this home when he came to America and Canada in 1912.

Baha'i Teaching on Abstinence
From Alcoholic Beverages Restated

The Guardian's instructions to assemblies on the matter of Bahá'ís who use alcoholic beverages were published in the Canadian Bahá'í News for February 1958, and are reprinted below:

Mr. Allen Raynor reported to the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly that during his pilgrimage the Guardian had told him that in connection with the Bahá'ís who use alcoholic beverages, the assemblies, although acting in a patient, kindly and loving manner toward such persons, could not tolerate a continued disregard of this law of the Kitáb-i-Aqdas.

The Guardian then outlined the procedure indicated below, to be followed by the Assemblies in this connection:

First—Inform such persons of the law.

Second—Exhort them to follow it.

Third—Warn them of the consequences of disobedience.

Fourth—Remove their voting rights if they continue to disobey.

Since this information did not come directly from the Guardian but rather in the form of a pilgrim's note, the National Spiritual Assembly asked the Guardian for confirmation. The Guardian replied through his secretary:

"As regards the question of alcohol, the Guardian explained this to Mr. Raynor, and he feels that his understanding of it is quite correct. The assemblies must be wise and gentle in dealing with such cases, but at the same time must not tolerate a prolonged and flagrant disregard of the Bahá'í Teachings as regards alcohol."

Deprived of Voting Rights

The believers are informed that Norman Powers has been deprived of his voting rights by action of the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly and his name has been removed from the membership list.

Mr. Powers, whether or not he carries an identification card, is no longer to be accepted as a member of the Bahá'í community.

—U.S. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
Our Summer Schools

QUEEN MARIE of Rumania described the Bahá'í Faith as "a wide embrace." Perhaps nowhere else is this as true as in the Bahá'í summer schools. While providing ample time for pleasure and genuine recreation, the main object of the Bahá'í summer schools is serious—to afford an opportunity to draw near to God through study and through association with others, in an atmosphere of devotion.

There is much to study. The Bahá'í Writings are voluminous. Bahá'u'lláh has said that the purpose of religion in general and of His own revelation in particular is "the establishment of order in the world and of tranquillity amongst its peoples." The Bahá'í Writings show us the means to the attainment of such order and tranquillity, today so vital to our very existence. To promote serious study is one of the primary functions of the schools.

Another function, contingent upon this but no less important, is the creation of an environment in which one can live as fully as possible the life, a place where one can find relief from the tensions and world afflicts us. Here we can be trained in the practice of those virtues needed for a civilization where all men can live harmoniously together and each individual can develop his highest spiritual powers.

A World-Embracing Vision

What are these virtues and how can they be demonstrated at the summer schools? The first is a world-embracing vision, in which all prejudices, be they those of color, of nationality, or of religious background, will disappear. Students at a Bahá'í school will notice such differences in their companions only because they lend interest and variety to the whole.

A world-embracing vision is not conducive to the formation of cliques and small exclusive groups. Naturally we all make friends according to our individual tastes and we like to be with them as much as possible, but let us devote part of our time at the schools to discovering the special qualities of those whom we do not know so well and to making all our fellow guests feel that they too are included in this wide embrace.

The Bahá'í Faith also demands in us certain other standards of individual conduct. It forbids the use of alcoholic beverages and stresses moderation, modesty, and propriety in our daily lives. The reaction in this country against a rigid and bigoted puritanism, which seemed to frown on all pleasures, brought with it an inordinate emphasis on freedom. Since the first world war, modesty in behavior and dress has been, decade by decade, redefined until it has almost been cast aside entirely as prudish and old-fashioned. But there are many people in the United States who have a feeling for modesty and good taste, and in numerous other countries some of our American customs are offensive. The Bahá'í Faith is for all the world, and in the summer schools visitors from foreign countries are frequent. They should not go away with a false idea of Bahá'í standards of conduct.

The Guardian's Standards

These standards have been clearly defined by Shoghi Effendi in The Advent of Divine Justice and are familiar to all of us. While the "chaste and holy life" we are called upon to live "can tolerate no compromise with the theories, the standards, the habits, and the excesses of a decadent age," this does not mean that we should not have fun. Perhaps no people are gayer than a group of Bahá'ís gathered together. It means that our pleasures should have a different basis. "It must be remembered," the Guardian says, "that the maintenance of such a high standard of moral conduct is not to be associated or confused with any form of asceticism, or of excessive and bigoted puritanism. The standard inculcated by Bahá'u'lláh seeks, under no circumstances, to deny anyone of the legitimate right and privilege to derive the fullest advantage and benefit from the manifold joys, beauties, and pleasures with which the world has been so plentifully enriched by an All-Loving Creator."

This New Faith

This is a new faith, and some people may even suspect us of practicing nudism and free love. To protect the Faith from misrepresentation and to enable the schools to run smoothly and to a well-defined object, certain rules have been set up. These are not arbitrary nor unreasonable. They are aids in establishing order in the school so that the Bahá'í ideals can be put into practice.

We look forward to a new world civilization, based on a world order. Order presupposes law and the willingness of the people to obey it. Obedience to law for love of Him was the first lesson Bahá'u'lláh taught to the people when He began His mission.

Some of the participants at the El Salvador Summer School at Apaneca in April 1958.
The rules of the summer schools have been made as few as possible. They derive their authority from the National Spiritual Assembly and compliance with them by Bahá'ís is a duty as well as an act of courtesy.

Here we are offered opportunity to attain, in an approximation of the ideal Bahá'í environment, that learning which illuminates all learning. "The Word which is uttered by God," says Bahá'u'lláh, "shineth and flasheth as the sun amidst the books of men." As Bahá'ís, we have the privilege of helping to create that environment and on each of us rests the responsibility of representing our faith before the world, for are we not each one of "the bearers of the name of God in this Day?"

Pioneer Devotes Self-Sacrificing Service to Costa Rica Farmers

Guanacaste is a very primitive region in the heart of the cattle country of Costa Rica. Most of the people who live here are farmers with little plots of land or who work as farmhands on the fincas (ranches). They are sincere and simple people, but extremely poor. Nevertheless, through the deep love and great self-sacrifice on the part of a Bahá'í, many of these people are turning toward the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and are trying to adjust their lives to Bahá'í concepts.

Mrs. Esmarilda Thompson de Vega, former member of the Port Lima Bahá'í Assembly, went to Guanacaste because she wished to work among people unspoiled by civilization. Here in the town of Cañas she began her work, winning friendship of many people including an elderly man who became the first believer of that community. Then, because of some opposition from the clergy which prevented her from teaching as actively as she wished, she went out into the farm district.

It was necessary for her to walk many miles over hills, mountains, and across rivers, but through her kindness and friendliness she won the affection and active support of about thirty-six Bahá'ís, adults, and children. She has taught the children to read and write, and is presently trying to promote the establishment of a school.

Her work has been accomplished only through self-sacrifice. It is often hard and unpleasant. Sometimes her path among the distant farms is beset with venomous serpents, but she treads it fearlessly. Her reward has been the trusting response on the part of the people. This has made her heart happy, her task bearable.

Esmarilda is a member of the Negro race, and her warmhearted kindness and hospitality have attracted all people to her. She inspires confidence in them. In addition to the many practical things she has taught them, she has gladdened their hearts by singing for them and teaching them to sing English songs. Bahá'í teachers who have helped her in her work are Mr. Dikrullah Khádem, revered Hand of the Cause; William de Forge, Auxiliary Board Member; Salomón Escalante, Jose Basquero, and Rosy Vodanovic, Chilean pioneer.

The Costa Rican Teaching Committee writes: "Would to God that more people like this pioneer would be found to carry on with devotion the banner of Bahá'u'lláh to these thirsty and spiritually needy people."

The Teaching Committee is working to instruct these new friends in the Bahá'í way of life and in Administration. One local spiritual assembly is being formed this Ridván, although it will be very difficult for the various members to meet regularly, as many are hard-working people and there is no means of communication or transportation between the farms.

In the heart of this pioneer there must echo these words of the Master: "Oh, how long that it could be made possible for me to travel through these parts, even if necessary on foot, and with the utmost poverty, and while passing through the cities, villages, mountains, deserts and oceans, cry at the top of my voice 'Ya-Bahá'u'lláh' and promote the divine teachings. But now this is not feasible for me; . . . per-chance, God willing, ye may become assisted therein."

Baha'i Youth Activities Attract Students in Three Cities

Baha'i youth in Nashville, Tenn.; Phoenix, Ariz.; and Albuquerque, N. Mex., have interested university students in these cities in the teachings of the Bahá'í Faith through public meetings and campus activities in recent months. Reports on their activities follow.

Tennessee Valley Area Baha'i Youth Conference

The first Tennessee Valley Area Bahá'í Youth conference was held on March 8 and 9, 1958, in Nashville, Tenn., and was convened by the Nashville Bahá'í Youth Committee.

When the National Bahá'í Youth Committee first suggested this youth conference there was much uncertainty on the part of the local committee as to the feasibility and desirability of such a conference. There were few youth in the area, and there was no clear idea as to what should be the subjects of consultation or how the various aspects of the planning should be carried out, but once the decision was made to hold it, the plans began to crystallize.

The National Bahá'í Youth Committee furnished the local committee with a list of names and addresses of all youth in the area. They also furnished the Nashville committee with an agenda complete enough to serve as a definite basis for the conference and flexible enough to allow for creativity on the part of the local committee. It became the working basis for the local plans.

Through the efforts of the local committee, Dr. Lambert C. Case of St. Louis, Mo., an outstanding Bahá'í teacher, was secured as a speaker for a fireside to be held Saturday night, March 8, as part of the conference. Dr. Case agreed also to deliver a public lecture on "World Faith" on March 9, at Vanderbilt University in Nashville. Arrange-
As the conference was held during the period of the Fast, the time normally taken for lunch was spent in a "guided" tour of the Nashville area.

In connection with the discussion of teaching work, two non-Bahá'í books, especially valuable for teaching work, were reviewed for those present at the conference. Bill Hatcher reviewed Arnold Toynbee's Christianity Among the Religions of the World and Tom Thompson reviewed Nels Ferre's The Sun and the Umbrella. These reviews stressed both the utility and the shortcomings of these books.

The high point of the conference was the fireside meeting on Saturday evening attended by about twenty youth contacts, Negro and white. The total number present was about forty-five, and this was the first contact with the Faith for many of them. The value of having a group of Bahá'í youth to teach a gathering of non-Bahá'ís was fully demonstrated, and the spirit which pervaded the meeting was one of unity and love.

The public lecture by Dr. Case the following morning attracted about seventy-five people, mostly youth. So far as could be determined, it is the first interracial meeting ever held on the Vanderbilt University campus.

The Sunday afternoon session of the conference was highlighted by a report on teaching activities in the Cape Verde Islands by Bahá'í pioneer Howard Menking.

The Nashville community, as well as the youth who attended, are still reaping spiritual benefits from the conference. The joy of Bahá'í fellowship, which cannot fail to awaken new levels of experience in the individual soul, the illumination of the mind through consultation and study, and the invaluable witness to contacts of the spirit of the Bahá'í youth—all of these things make a Bahá'í youth conference a unique joy whose deeper meaning can be understood only as the glorious foreshadowing of that Golden Age of Bahá'u'lláh which the fruits of our labors must inevitably bring.

Arizona State University Conference

The Bahá'í Faith was represented by several participants at a recent Youth Conference on Human Relations held on the campus of Arizona State University. Alton Thomas and Mrs. Nancy Phillips of Phoenix served as resource persons for discussion groups and Mr. Thomas was keynote speaker for the conference which attracted 250 students from nineteen Arizona high schools. Bob Phillips and Donna Baumann, Phoenix Bahá'í youth, served as chairmen for two planning committees. The day-long conference under the sponsorship of the National Conference of Christians and Jews was opened with 'Abdu'l-Bahá's "Prayer for All Nations" read by Donna.

Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Phillips will serve as advisors at "Anytown, U.S.A.," a week-long human relations workshop for youth to be held in a mountain camp near Prescott, Ariz., in early June. Donna Baumann and Bob Phillips were among the young people selected to attend last year. Donna will attend this year as a counselor. "Anytown" is sponsored by the YMCA, YWCA, Phoenix Urban League, National Conference of Christians and Jews, and other civic organizations. It strives to provide an ideal setting for youth selected for their leadership qualities to develop greater understanding of family, religious, and racial relationships.

Student Bahá'í Association at University of New Mexico

At the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, the University Student Bahá'í Association has been established and in operation since the beginning of the present semester. For some time it had been unable to be established due to the lack of any student on the campus; however, this year several new enrollments in the Faith of university level students have made the association possible. One interesting fact is that of the club's approximate membership of twelve or thirteen, more than half are non-Baha'is; the Baha'i group being made up of three students and three non-students. Since its inception it has been quite active, meeting every Friday evening and attracting non-Baha'i members with practically every meeting.

As far as activities are concerned, several specific things have been carried out or are in the process of being carried out. Besides the regular meetings and discussions, a program was voted into being in which the Methodist students are non-Baha'i members with practically every meeting.

Frank Evans, a newly enrolled Baha'i, gave a very fine talk at the Methodist College group in answer to an invitation of theirs to speak on the Faith. The Methodist students became so interested in the discussion of the Faith that they remained long after the meeting was scheduled to end and invited Frank to return another night the same week. Again he spoke on the Faith and again they were enthusiastic.

Another activity, the Student Association sponsored the Winston Evans public meeting held on the campus. With the growing enrollment, a non-Baha'i member was elected to represent the Baha'i Student Association on the Student Senate.

Also, in spite of some social pressure which forced one member to resign, and such acts as the defacing and removing of the Baha'i posters, a liaison was appointed to accept the invitation to participate in the Student Religious Association's activities. All in all, the work has proceeded with unusual success and a promise of better things to come.

Ontario Summer Conference To Be Held in August

An Ontario Bahai Summer Conference will be held from August 2-9, 1958, at the Geneva Park YMCA Camp on Lake Couchiching. Courses will include "The Ten-Year Crusade," "Baha'i in a Christian World," and "Sources of Hidden Power."

For reservations and further information please write to: Miss Jean Smith, 213 Geneva Street, St. Catherine, Ontario, Canada.

Study Guide for Membership Prepared by Youth Committee

The National Bahai Youth Committee has prepared a study guide for youth or adults wishing to have a firm basis of study in preparation for membership in the Baha'i Community. The youth study guide covers all of the essential aspects of the Faith, and will also be of great assistance for declared believers, youth or adult, who wish to deepen their understanding of the Teachings and Administrative Order. It can guide the serious student to proper references to understand his responsibilities to the Faith.

The outline consists of four pages divided into five main topics: I. History of the Faith. II. Stations of the Three Key Figures in the Faith. III. Baha'i Administration. IV. Basic Teachings. V. Obligations and Privileges of Baha'i Membership. The Baha'i Youth Study Guide is available on request from the secretary of the National Baha'i Youth Committee, Mrs. Helen Hauck, 716 S. 5th Avenue, St. Charles, Illinois. Please send your requests to the National Baha'i Youth Committee only.

Upon the occasion of the convening of this second Intercontinental Conference in Chicago, our hearts and our thoughts inevitably go back to the first great conference which was held here in 1953 during the opening of the World Crusade under the direct aegis of our beloved Guardian. His Messages, his cables, his words of loving reassurance, the news he sent us from Haifa at that time, the sense of his overpowering presence—all are fresh today in our memories, and our hearts overflow with love for him and with longing for his physical presence in this world. None of us, however, can doubt that during the six months since his sudden passing the evidences of the Divine protection promised to this Holy Faith of God have been overpowering. The structure Shoghi Effendi built, on the firm foundations laid in the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, has withstood the earthquake of his passing and its attendant circumstances; the seamless robe of this greatest of all Revelations has not been torn; the administrative institutions so carefully reared by him, nascent though they still are, have rallied to the support of the World Center, the heart and hub of the Faith, and have demonstrated, not only to the believers but to the observant and curious public, as well as to our enemies, that this Cause is firmly knit together, universal in its operations, united in one purpose and one great loyalty which nothing can destroy. We see in all this the living, breathing spirit of Shoghi Effendi, his protection and his love, which will never leave us.

The five mighty Intercontinental Conferences announced in the last message to the Bahá’í world from our beloved Guardian, we see now as providential rallying-points during this difficult year of sorrow and separation. The midway point of this mighty Crusade the Guardian conceived and set in motion has been characterized not only by extraordinary victories won, but by the falling of a wholly unexpected blow, brought about through the mysterious operations of the Divine Will, which no man dare question and no human mind can comprehend, a blow which may well prove to be the signal for the beginning of that period of turmoil and suffering Shoghi Effendi so often told us the world must pass through before its parts are forged into a single whole, ready for, and capable of putting into operation, the Plan of God for this Day.

Guardian’s Call for World Crusade Reviewed

Let us, at this solemn moment in our destinies, turn back to the words of our Guardian when he sounded the call for this greatest of all enterprises ever undertaken by the followers of any Faith since the dawn of history.

“Let there be no mistake. The avowed, the primary aim of this Spiritual Crusade is none other than the conquest of the citadels of men’s hearts. The theater of its operations is the entire planet. Its duration a whole decade. Its commencement synchronizes with the Centenary of the birth of Bahá’u’lláh’s Mission. Its culmination will coincide with the Centenary of the Declaration of that same Mission. The agencies assisting in its conduct are the nascent administrative institutions of a steadily-evolving, divinely appointed Order. Its driving force is the energizing influence generated by the Revelation heralded by the Bab and proclaimed by Bahá’u’lláh. Its Marshal is none other than the Author of the Divine Plan. Its standard-bearers are the Hands of the Cause of God appointed in every continent of the globe. Its generals are the twelve national spiritual assemblies participating in the execution of its design. Its vanguard is the chief executors of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Master Plan, their allies and associates. Its legions are the rank and file of believers standing behind these same twelve national assemblies and sharing in the global task embracing the American, the European, the African, the Asiatic, and Australian fronts. The charter directing its course is the immortal Tablets that have flowed from the Pen of the Center of the Covenant Himself. The armor with which its onrushing hosts have been invested is the glad tidings of God’s own Message in this Day, the principles underlying the Order proclaimed by His Messenger, and the laws and ordinances governing His Dispensation. The battle cry animating its heroes and heroines is the cry of Yá-Bahá’u’l-Abhá, Yá-‘Alíyyu’l-’A’là.

“So vast, so momentous and challenging a crusade that will, God willing, illuminate the annals of the second epoch of the Formative Age of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, and immortalize the second decade of the second Bahá'í century, and the termination of which will mark the closing of the first epoch in the evolution of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Divine Plan, will, in itself, pave the way for, and constitute the prelude to, the initiation of the laborious and tremendously long process of establishing in the course of subsequent crusades in all the newly opened sovereign states, dependencies, and islands of the planet, as well as in all the remaining territories of the globe, the framework of the Administrative Order of the Faith, with all its attendant agencies, and of eventually erecting in these territories still more pillars to share in sustaining the weight, and in broadening the foundation, of the Universal House of Justice."

Victories of Crusade Recounted

Before we turn our thoughts to the purpose of this Conference as it affects the Bahá'ís of the Western Hemisphere, let us recall the stages through which this globe-encircling Crusade have already passed: Much to the joy and comfort of our overworked and most beloved Guardian, who had already sacrificed over thirty years of his life to the unremitting service of the Cause of God, the first phase of the Ten-Year Plan, which lasted from 1953 to 1954, witnessed the planting of the Banner of Bahá'u'lláh's Revelation in no less than one hundred additional countries, territories, and islands of the globe, raising thereby the total number at that time to two hundred and twenty-eight; the distinguishing feature of the second phase of this Plan, which lasted from 1954 to 1956, was the extraordinary multiplication of National Haqíratu'l-Quds and Endowments, the purchase of the majority of which was to all intents and purposes completed during this period, involving an outpouring of funds which many of the friends had believed could not possibly take place in so short a time; the third phase, which comprised the period from 1956 to 1958, was distinguished by a marked multiplication not only of Bahá'í centers all over the world, but by the establishment in both the Eastern and Western Hemispheres, of no less than thirteen regional and four national administrative bodies. The phenomena of the progress made and the extraordinary victories won during the last five years, have demonstrated to us all, not only the immense power of the Cause of God—a power which the Master said was mysterious and far above the understanding of men and of angels—but have shown us that through the channelization of this force by the Guardian into the mighty blue print of the Divine Plan conceived by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, an immensely potent instrument has been devised in the form of this World Crusade which constitutes a step in the spiritual conquest of the entire planet. The pattern has been clearly defined, the design of God we see distinctly emerging before our eyes. Every act of obedience to the instructions of the Guardian, every fulfillment of a goal set by him, every execution of a phase of his plan, brings victory, breeds strength, creates new spiritual life. He himself was immensely heartened and pleased over the victories won during the first half of this Holy Crusade, and characterized this five-year period as one of marvelous progress achieved in so vast a field in so short a time by a small band of heroic souls.

We know that the Western world, the Western Hemisphere, particularly the “Great Republic of the West,” have been singled out by the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá as regions of the globe whose peoples are endowed with special capacities in this Day with which to serve the Cause of God and through it their fellowmen. The attendants at this particular conference must feel the weight of a very great responsibility resting on them at this midway point of the World Crusade, not only because of the mission conferred upon them by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, but because of the greatness of this affliction which has filled all hearts with grief and longing at this time, and in spite of which—nay, perhaps because of which—they must now arise, wiser, more mature, more consecrated than ever before, to carry out their preponderating share in the prosecution of the remainder of the Ten-Year Plan.

No Escape From Duty

There can be no escape from duty for any believer, least of all an American believer, at this critical juncture in the fortunes of our beloved Faith. We recall to your minds the stirring words of Shoghi Effendi addressed to the Annual Convention of the United States which preceded the first Intercontinental Conference held in 1953:

"May this Community—the spiritual descendants of the Dawn-Breakers of the Heroic Age of the Bahá’í Faith, the chief repository of the immortal Tablets of 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s Divine Plan, the foremost executors of the Mandate issued by the Center of Bahá’u’lláh’s Covenant, the champion-builders of a divinely conceived Administrative Order, the standard-bearers of the all-conquering army of the Lord of Hosts, the torch-bearers of a future divinely inspired world civilization—arise, in the course of the momentous decade separating the Great from the Most Great Jubilee, to secure, as befits its rank, the lion’s share in the prosecution of a global crusade designed to diffuse the light of God’s Revelation over the surface of the entire Planet."

As the friends gathered at this supremely important Conference consider their future work and discuss ways and means of accomplishing it, the believers of the United States should, in particular, ponder the very critical position of the Homefront in their country and, in the Guardian’s own words, “maintain their enviable position, as the vanguard of the army of Bahá’u’lláh’s Crusaders, in rescuing, while there is yet time, their Homefront from the precarious position in which it now finds itself.”

Let them remember that as he himself so clearly stated: “It is primarily a task that concerns the individual believer, wherever he may be, and whatever his calling, his resources, his race, or his age. Neither the local or national representatives of the Community, no matter how elaborate their plans, or persistent their appeals, or sagacious their councils, nor even the Guardian himself, however he may yearn for this accomplishment, can decide where the duty of the individual lies, or supplant him in the discharge of that task. The individual alone must assess its character, consult his conscience, prayerfully consider all its aspects, manfully struggle against the natural inertia that weighs him down in his effort to arise, shed heroically and irrevocably, the trivial and superfluous attach-
The Shrine of the Báb stands on the slopes of Mt. Carmel in the Holy Land as a resplendent memorial to the Martyrdom of the Báb at Tabriz, Persia, on July 9, 1850.

The weight resting on each one of us today is truly crushing and inescapable, the reward which each one of us can win for himself is equally great and of an everlasting nature. In the words of the Qur'án: “Whoso maketh efforts for the Faith, maketh them for his own good only. Verily God is rich enough to dispense with all creatures.”

Guardian's Last Appeal to NSA

In his last letter to the American National Spiritual Assembly the Guardian made an appeal, couched in more poignant terms than any he had ever used previously in addressing the members of that privileged Community who are the “Champion-builders of the World Order of Báb‘u’lláh”:

“Once again—and this time more fervently than ever before—I direct my plea to every single member of this strenuously-laboring, clear-visioned, stout-hearted, spiritually endowed community, every man and woman, on whose individual effort, resolution, self-sacrifice, and perseverance the immediate destinies of the Faith of God, now traversing so crucial a stage in its rise and establishment, primarily depends, not to allow, through apathy, timidity, or complacency, this one remaining opportunity to be irretrievably lost. I would rather entreat each and every one of them to immortalize this approaching, fateful hour in the evolution of a World Spiritual Crusade, by a fresh consecration to their God-given Mission, coupled with an instantaneous plan of action, at once so dynamic and decisive, as to wipe out, . . . with one stroke, the deficiencies which have to no small extent, bogged down the operations of the Crusade on the Homefront.”

Before turning to the global objectives still remaining, and which must be accomplished during the fourth phase of the Ten-Year Plan, let us review the specific tasks given by our Guardian to the American Bahá‘í Community, her chief ally, and her daughter communities in the Western Hemisphere:

The opening of Spitzbergen, the one remaining virgin territory other than those within the Soviet orbit, and the resettlement or consolidation of those goals now vacant or in need of supporting efforts by pioneers and visiting teachers; the speedy attainment of the objectives of the subsidiary Six-Year Plans given by our Guardian to the new national and regional assemblies formed during the Ridván period of 1957 under the sponsorship of the National Assembly of the United States, the fulfillment of which is an indispensable prerequisite to the formation, on a firm footing, of the future pillars of the Universal House of Justice which are to be established in each and every Republic of Latin America and in each goal country of Europe by 1963 — victories which can be assured only by a continuous flow of pioneers, as our Guardian repeatedly emphasized; the immediate construction of the first dependency of the Mother Temple of the West, designed to convincingly demonstrate to the public the spirit of service to humanity which underlies the Divinely-ordained institutions surrounding the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar; the establishment, during the Ridván period of 1959, of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of the South Pacific Islands, under the sponsorship of the American National Assembly, a task assigned to that Assembly by our Guardian in his message to the 1953 Annual Convention; a marked acceleration in the process of enlisting in the ranks of the Faith an ever greater number of Indians, the original inhabitants of the Americas, of Eskimos in the far North, and of representatives of the Basque and Gypsy races in those areas assigned to the United States Bahá‘í Community; a carefully planned and vigorously prosecuted campaign aimed at enlisting in the army of Báb‘u’lláh, large numbers of the Negro race — so much loved and admired by Shoghi Effendi, thereby fulfilling one of his frequently expressed and most ardent hopes; the in-
Beloved Friends! At the outset of this Most Holy, decade-long Crusade, our beloved Guardian raised this challenging call addressed directly to the members of the Communities of North and South America:

"It is incumbent upon the members of the American Bahá'í Community, the chief executors of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Divine Plan, the members of the Canadian Bahá'í Community acting as their allies, and the members of the Latin American Bahá'í Communities in their capacity as associates in the execution of this Plan, to brace themselves anew, in addition to the responsibilities they have assumed, and will assume, in other continents of the globe, an intercontinental campaign designed to carry a stage further the glorious work already inaugurated throughout the Western Hemisphere."

"Standing on the threshold of a ten-year long, world-embracing spiritual crusade, these Communities are now called upon, by virtue of the weighty pronouncement recorded in the Most Holy Book, and in direct consequence of the revelation of the Tablets of the Divine Plan, to play a preponderating role in the systematic propagation of the Faith, in the course of the coming decade, which will, God willing, culminate in the spiritual conquest of the entire planet."

"Let Everyone Arise Wholeheartedly"

With this vision before them, let each and every one of them arise, joyously and wholeheartedly, with fresh dedication and determination, and respond to these soul-stirring words of their Guardian:

"I direct my impassioned appeal to obey, as befits His warriors, the Summons of the Lord of Hosts, and prepare for that Day of Days when His victorious battalions will, to the accompaniment of huzzas from the invisible angels in the Abhá Kingdom, celebrate the hour of final victory."

Let them remember how often he said the immediate future was dark, but the distant future infinitely bright. No words could better describe the glory of the Order we are called upon to build than his own:

"How pressing and sacred the responsibility that now weighs upon those who are already acquainted with these teachings! How glorious the task of those who are called upon to vindicate their truth, and demonstrate their practicality to an unbelieving world! Nothing short of an immovable conviction in their divine origin, and their uniqueness in the annals of religion; nothing short of an unwavering purpose to execute and apply them to the administrative machinery of the Cause can be sufficient to establish their reality, and insure their success."

"How vast is the Revelation of Bahá'ulláh! How great the magnitude of His blessings showered upon humanity in this day! And yet, how poor, how inadequate our conception of their significance and glory! This generation stands too close to so colossal a Revelation to appreciate, in their full measure, the infinite possibilities of His Faith, the unprecedented character of His Cause, and the mysterious dispensations of His Providence."

Over 1600 Baha'is Convene at Chicago Intercontinental Conference

In Spiritually-Charged Atmosphere of Consecrated Unity and Resolve

ON a Friday morning in May 1958 at exactly ten o'clock Chicago time, over sixteen hundred assembled Baha'is paused to pay silent tribute to their beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi. In a spirit of consecrated unity, they stood with heads bowed in prayer while in London (three o'clock London time) a wreath was placed on the Guardian's grave by William Sears, Hand of the Cause.

This was a high mark of the first session of the Intercontinental Conference for the Western Hemisphere held at Chicago and Wilmette, Ill., May second, third, and fourth, attended by 1660 Baha'is from thirty-one countries.

In response to the wish of the Guardian expressed in his last message of October 1957, representatives of national and regional spiritual assemblies of the Western Hemisphere met with the Guardian's special representative, Hand of the Cause Dr. Ugo Giachery, and with five other Hands of the Cause. This was the third of a series of five Intercontinental Conferences to be held in 1958.

All who attended the Conference, whether representatives or visitors, were aware that this was a gathering of great spiritual import, a fitting sequel to the historic occasion in Chicago of the first public mentioning in the western world of the name of Bahá'u'lláh. It followed the Conferences held at Kampala, Uganda, in January, and at Sydney, Australia, in March, and preceded the Conferences to be held at Frankfurt, Germany, in July, and at Djakarta, Indonesia, in September.

Throughout the Conference, but especially at the Thanksgiving Service at the House of Worship on Friday afternoon and during the closing session on Sunday afternoon, an awareness was felt of the great spiritual forces released into the world by the Báb, Who sent forth the Dawn-Breakers; by Bahá'u'lláh, Who called mankind to unity; by 'Abdül-Bahá, Author of the Divine Plan; and by the beloved Guardian, champion of the Administrative Order. The souls of those present were filled with awe and their hearts swelled with deep longing for consecration and service.

At nine on Friday morning at Chicago's Eighth Street Theater, the first session was opened with devotions in English and Spanish. The panel of young readers included among others, a pioneer to Korea, a pioneer to the Indians, and a Latin American. The first reading was a selection from the Hidden Words of Bahá'u'lláh: "O Son of Being! Love Me, that I may love thee . . ."; "O Son of Being! My love is My stronghold . . ."; "The sign of love is fortitude under My decree . . ."; "My calamity is My Providence . . ." As the timeless phrases were heard in the dusk of the auditorium with its emerald-green curtain and masses of flowers, the city clamor receded. Each of us had brought his own love and sorrow to this gathering, but our separate individualities seemed to drop from us as we shared this experience.

The Guardian's special representative, Dr. Ugo Giachery, made his entrance accompanied by two members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, Conference hosts, and was warmly greeted on the stage by other officers of the National Assembly. All rose to honor the revered Hand of the Cause and to offer him a loving welcome.

The Convocation was given by H. Borrah Kavelin, the Conference chairman. He said that the Conference was a great bounty from Shoghi Effendi. After his ascension a great spirit was released throughout the Bahá'í world; this spirit was augmented at the first two Conferences, and should be invoked here. The five purposes of the Conferences as outlined by the Guardian were: 1. Offering thanksgiving to Bahá'u'lláh for the first five years of the Crusade; 2. Reviewing and celebrating victories of the first five years; 3. Deliberating on how to fulfill the remaining goals; 4. Stimulating individual conversion; 5. Assisting in the completion of three Temples.

"Friends," Mr. Kavelin concluded, "what more fitting memorial could be raised than to dedicate this Conference to the blessed memory of our beloved Guardian?"

The Primary Mission of the Bahá'í Faith

Mr. Horace Holley, beloved Hand of the Cause, gave the dedication address. "There are not many Bahá'ís," Mr. Holley said, "who know the difference between the condition of the Faith at the time of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's ascension and today. Step by step the Guardian guided the Bahá'í world into World Order and into a profounder understanding of the Bahá'í Faith. In a letter in 1929 the Guardian mentioned, '...that Divine Civilization, the establishment of which is the primary mission of the Bahá'í Faith.'

"In the past it was thought the sole purpose of religion was to guide people into spiritual understanding which would lead to cooperation and peace. Shoghi Effendi was to us then a bright light illumining the path. He outlined the evolution of the Administrative Order in which the spiritual assemblies of today will become the Houses of Justice. In the same letter, he stated, 'Not only will the present-day spiritual assemblies be styled differently in the future, but they will be enabled also to add to their present functions those powers, duties, and prerogatives necessitated by the recognition of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, not merely as one of the recognized religious systems of the world, but as the State Religion of an independent and sovereign power. And as the Bahá'í Faith permeates the masses of the peoples of East and West, and its truth is embraced by the majority of the peoples of a number of the Sovereign States of the world, will the Universal House of Justice attain the plenitude of its power, and exercise, as the supreme organ of the Bahá'í Commonwealth, all the rights, the duties, and responsibilities incumbent upon the world's future super-state.' Again the Bahá'ís were overwhelmed. . . . the Bahá'í Faith was to become the government of the world!

"In another letter of March 21, 1930, the Guardian wrote, 'I consider it my duty to warn every beginner in the Faith that the promised glories of the Sovereignty which the Bahá'í teachings foreshadow, can be revealed only in the fulness of time, that the implications of the Agdas and the Will of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, as the twin repositories of the constituent elements of that Sovereignty, are too far-reaching for this generation to grasp and fully appreciate. I cannot refrain from appealing to them who stand identified with the Faith to disregard the prevailing notions and the fleeting fashions of the day, and to realize as never before that the exploded theories and the tottering institutions of present-day civilization must needs appear in sharp contrast with those God-given institutions which are destined to arise upon their ruin. I pray that they may realize with all their heart and soul the ineffable glory of their calling, the overwhelming responsibility of their mission, and the astounding immensity of their task."

"For let every earnest upholder of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh realize that the storms which this struggling Faith of God must needs encounter, as the process of the disintegration of society advances, shall be fiercer than any which it has already experienced.'"

"The Guardian affirmed, Mr. Holley continued, "that Bahá'u'lláh provided the essentials for a divine economy, one agency for the unification of the world and for the establishment of righteousness and justice upon the earth. Humanity, the Guardian said, has, alas, strayed too far to be redeemed through the efforts of rulers and statesmen, however devoted.'"

Mr. Holley said the small company of Bahá'ís of East and West are crossing a mighty bridge, a bridge suspended high over the chaos of the world. One end rests on the sacrifice of the twin Manifestations of God, the other end will lead us to the Kingdom of God. We can advance only as we construct the bridge in the divine pattern. Only as we construct the bridge will the peoples of the world follow us. Let us not think that any act of our daily lives is in any way transient or trivial.

"The Joy of Our Hearts"

Dr. Ugo Giachery spoke next. "It is impossible for me to tell you at this moment of the emotions which are raging within my heart," he said. With difficulty he continued, "The chairman said I was bringing to you the spirit of our beloved Guardian . . . who was the delight of our eyes, the joy of our hearts, the purpose of our lives. Physical separation has been a hard thing to bear and you must excuse me. It has been five months since his passing. Every flower . . . every leaf . . . every stone has his perfume . . . every corner reminds you of his grace, his spirit, his kindness, his understanding."

Dr. Giachery said that Shoghi Effendi had thirty-six years of unbearable burdens which shortened his dear life. We owe him a debt of gratitude. His spirit is everywhere the friends are gathered. Our gratitude can be translated into action to prove that we are worthy of this sacrifice. "To you who are following in the beloved Guardian's footsteps," he said, "I bring love and fragrance of the spirit. I bring you the love of the Hands in the Holy Land."

Dr. Giachery then read the seven-page message from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land directed to all those attending the Conference in Chicago. It was a solemn and stirring appeal to the friends to arise to fulfill every wish of the Guardian. [Editor's Note: This message is printed in its entirety beginning on page 1 of this issue.]

Dr. Giachery summed up: For this Crusade we have an immensely potent instrument in the Divine Plan. Every act of obedience brings a victory; every victory leads to new spiritual life. The Western Hemisphere was singled out by 'Abdu'l-Baha. Attendants at this Conference must feel the weight of this responsibility. The greatness of this affliction, which has filled all hearts with grief and longing, must make us wiser, more consecrated than ever before. There can be no escape from duty for any believer, least of all for any American believer. We must ponder the critical state of the home front that we may rescue it from its precarious position. "The individual alone must assess its character . . . and shed attachments . . . " We must not allow "this one remaining opportunity to be irrevocably lost." God will make of this dire deprivation a heaven. Let us strive to gladden the heart of the beloved Guardian in the Abhá Kingdom; something we did not always do while he was alive.

While we listened to the Guardian's representative and shared his deep sorrow, we turned with new humility and selflessness to the assigned goals. As one body we felt the purification, the emptying process of grief. We knew again that physical bereavement is the testament of immortality. The ardent love revealed by this cherished Hand of the Cause had evoked in our bewildered and waiting hearts a response from which would flow a new will at the springs of our being.

Many messages of loving support and hopes for the success of the Conference had been received. Some of these were now read by the chairman. Dr. Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, sent heartfelt, loving wishes and hopes for blessings. From the National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand, "We pray the Conference will be the forerunner of great achievements and victories"; from the National Assembly of Italy and Switzerland, "We stand by, pledging our full support." The community of Tonga sent loving prayers. Other messages were read from the Rome community; from the National Spiritual Assemblies of Scandinavia and Finland, of the Benelux Countries, and of the Iberian Peninsula.

"The Word of God Forever New"

Mr. Kavelin introduced Leroy Ioas, Hand of the Cause, as adjutant to the beloved Guardian in the Holy Land, who spoke with deep emotion. He said that the Word of God, while it might be old, was still forever new. The words of the Báb were as if given for this Conference. The Báb asked the people of the Word to leave their homes and travel far and wide to spread the Cause of God. If you do this God will be with you, promised Bahá'u'lláh. Shoghi Effendi laid down the path and the steps we might take to achieve these goals. "May we in this Conference," Mr. Ioas said, "enter into the spirit of the Guardian. He was a driving, dominating force who knew only success."

Mr. Kavelin next introduced Hand of the Cause Mason Remey, who has served the Faith with distinction for more than forty years. Mr. Remey spoke of the International Conference at Sydney which he attended. There were one hundred and ninety-two delegations registered from nineteen countries.

John Robarts, Hand of the Cause, said, "I bring you most loving, most prayerful greetings from five thousand Africans on the continent of Africa. They would want me to express gratitude and love for your assistance. They are praying that this Conference will bring forth the great results of the Kampa Conference. We are forging a link of love and appreciation between the two continents that will go on forever."

Sylvia Ioas and Jessie Revell, members of the International Bahá'í Council at the World Center, came forward to be greeted by the friends. Miss Revell said she brought the love of Rúhíyyih Khánum, of the Hands in Haifa, and of the friends there; also the love of the friends in London where she visited the grave of the Guardian.

Members of the Auxiliary Boards of the Hands of the Cause then gave words of greeting, as did representatives of the participating national and Regional assemblies and distinguished visitors from various countries.

Thanksgiving to Bahá'u'lláh

Friday afternoon the throng of Bahá'ís was taken by bus to Wilmette, where they gathered reverently in the auditorium of the House of Worship, the Mother Temple of the West, for a service of thanksgiving to Bahá'u'lláh. The beautiful tones of the readers' voices and the soaring music of the a cappella choir assisted in lifting the worshippers to new spiritual heights.

At the conclusion of the service each Bahá'í had the inestimable privilege of viewing the sacred portraits of the Bab and Bahá'u'lláh. Dr. 'Ugo Giachery, who unveiled the portraits, lovingly anointed the hand of each Bahá'í with the Guardian's own attar of roses, a symbol of the spiritual fragrance so abundantly present.

The Fourth Phase of the World Crusade

Friday evening the Conference session opened in Chicago with a prayer chanted in Persian. Mr. Kavelin shared further messages of greeting from the Bahá'ís of Pakistan, Stockholm, and Iran, from the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria, from the Local Spiritual Assembly of Brussels, and from the Regional Spiritual Assemblies of Northwest Asia and Southeast Asia.

“The Fourth Phase of the World Crusade” was the subject of the evening, presented by Dr. Ugo Giachery and visiting Hands of the Cause. Dr. Giachery first thanked the friends for their demonstration of love and affection that afternoon. He said, “I would like to have embraced each one. I felt a tremendous bond of love. I did not know the faces, but I am glad that the Faith is growing. I looked at those hands I anointed—capable, strong hands, most of them. I felt happy; they belonged to friends who will be doing things, who will arise to the occasion, who will make a new page of history for the Baha’is of America.”

The key to the work of the next five years, Dr. Giachery stated, is the vital process of individual conversions. Next most important: building the three Temples, at Kampala, Frankfurt, and Sydney. He continued, “It gives me great joy to see how many intelligent Negro friends are in our community—this is most encouraging. I have been told that since the message to the Kampala Conference, there have been more and more enrollments in Africa. The same momentum must take place here among the Negro race.”

“You are blessed in a thousand ways,” he added, “with your great abundance of mechanical civilization. If you just give up these things, which after all do not amount to much, you will be able to increase the flow of pioneers... Let us achieve what would have brought Shoghi Effendi the greatest joy and happiness.”

Mr. Kavelin then reviewed in detail the accomplishments to date toward completion of the twenty-seven goals of the Crusade. Nine of the goals have been completed, thirteen partly completed, and five are not yet achieved. “Great miracles have been attained thus far,” Mr. Kavelin said, “but much remains to be done. We hope that many will see fit to arise in the Crusade and offer their services.”

There were at least three occasions during the Conference for an expression of the great eagerness and enthusiasm which animated the Baha’is who were hoping to enter the pioneering field. At this point in the program many volunteers came forward to tell what prompted them to offer their services as pioneers. Many had been planning to pioneer for months or years. Many also were new Baha’is or were young people to whom “instant and exact obedience” suddenly meant pioneering now.

Mr. Ioas, in reference to the enthusiastic response for pioneers, said that he had asked the Guardian at the beginning of the Crusade why he wanted the Baha’is to disperse, and that the Guardian had replied that the time was fast approaching to spread the Cause of God all over the earth. We need to build the lighthouses of the Faith through which the Holy Spirit descends. If there is one area where a pioneer does not go, he is depriving that area of the regenerative power of the Holy Spirit of Baha’u’llah.”

Mr. Robarts gave eloquent testimony to the spirit present. “The only thing that really matters,” he said, “is serving the Cause in the way Shoghi Effendi really wanted. Pioneers feel so sorry for these poor American Baha’is still at home, for God does assist us in every step we take. Some of us may have remorse that we didn’t serve the Guardian more when he was alive. Now we are on our own, and we are moving forward.”

Mr. Kavelin told of an African at Kampala who remarked that formerly we had to contact the Guardian through personal correspondence which few could do. Now he is everywhere, and we can reach out to him.

Mr. Holley declared a pioneer is not merely a person who goes from an old place to a new place, but a person who goes from an old self to a new self. Spiritual progress is made by obeying a Manifestation. When he sets up a goal we can only attain progress by reaching that goal.

And so this wonderful day closed with a Prayer by ‘Abdu’l-Baha, read by Dr. Ugo Giachery, which contained these words, “O my God! O my God! Verily these servants are turning to Thee, supplicating Thy Kingdom of mercy... O Lord! make them radiant lamps, fruitful trees and shining stars. May they come forth in Thy service and be connected with Thee by the bonds and ties of Thy love, longing for the lights of Thy favor...”

The Second Day of the Conference

Five languages, English, Spanish, Oneida, Mohawk, and an Eskimo dialect were used in the devotions which opened the second day of the Conference.

Mr. Kavelin asked all present who pioneered during the first five years of the crusade to come to the stage to be greeted. As more and more came forward, the official photographers became frantic. One photographer despaired, “We cannot take them individually; we wouldn’t have any bulbs or film left!” Another whispered, “I suggest the audience take the stage and let the pioneers take the auditorium.” In all, seventy-five came forward. The chairman then referred to the great service that many here had given in pioneering on the Homefront, and asked them to come to be greeted. There were eighty-three in this group.

So much zest and enthusiasm was evoked in the audience that Dr. Giachery smilingly said, “I do not like to stop your talking — talking is indeed the best part of these meetings.” Once again he urged the friends to forget all attachments: “No position, no home or family ties can give you the joy of leaving your homeland to pioneer,” he said. “I know; I speak from experience.”

Persian Visitors Addressed in Their Native Tongue

Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh next gave an address directed especially to the large group of Persian friends present who contributed in large measure to the warmth and success of the Conference. It was translated into Persian by Mosratollah Rassekh. She said in part: “We American Bahá’ís owe an everlasting debt of gratitude to Bahá’í of the land of Tá. Our love is so deep that I doubt that in a lifetime we could express it. It was the blood of the Persian friends who watered the seeds of our Faith, their steadfastness that brought us to this glorious moment. I cannot resist this opportunity to tell you of an experience twenty years ago in Persia. An old man showed me his wrists. ‘I was in Siyáh Chál with Bahá’u’lláh—and to think I should live to see the day when a Bahá’í comes out of the West.’

‘Persian friends, we tried in many ways to show you how much we loved you in your trials. Our hearts throbbed with sorrow for you. At that time we prayed for you. We poured forth our energy in a tremendous appeal that cost the American Community $60,000. Best of all, we demonstrated by our telegrams how much all the Bahá’í world loved the Bahá’ís. The Guardian warned us that this victory was not won for all time, that trials would come again and again, leading to a greater triumph. The Persians and the friends in the West are different in temperament. Though our aim is common, our temperaments are widely diverse. This difference was so apparent at the funeral of the Guardian. All our hearts were throb­bin­g with grief, but we showed it in different ways. Persians have, I’m sure, the largest tears in the world. Persians believe, and rightly so, that nothing is too difficult, nothing is impossible. They go about stubbornly doing the things that the West would say cannot be done, and very often they succeed. The Americans have an important part in the combination of emotion and practicality. When they combine, you have unique Bahá’í groups. The Guardian said to some of the pilgrims, if ten per cent of the Persians left to pioneer, all our goals would be settled. Now is the time to demonstrate in action your great love to Shoghi Effendi. We in the Western world need you in many, many places. Turn those tears into action. Come to us. We need many pioneers here and in South America. Please come. You are very, very welcome.”

Progress, Plans, and Needs of the World Crusade

The beautifully printed Conference programs listed Progress, Plans, and Needs of the World Crusade in six parts. The first two included the central area of the Western Hemisphere: Central America, Panama, and Mexico, and the Greater Antilles. South America comprised the second two parts, and Canada and the United States the last.

James Facey, representing Central America, Mexico, and Panama; Randolph Fitz-Henley for the Greater Antilles; Mrs. Dorothy Campbell for Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela; Roberto Cazcarra for Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Uruguay, and Paraguay; and Esteban Canales of Central America all spoke with great feeling of the great need for an ever-increasing flow of pioneers to insure attainment of the remaining goals of the Ten-Year Crusade.

The Guardian’s Map of Crusade Accomplishments

Before the Alaska report was given, Dr. Ugo Giachery displayed and described the Guardian’s map of Crusade accomplishments. This was an identical copy, and the only one made, of the map Shoghi Effendi drew with his own hands. The Guardian was so keenly anxious to have it ready for the Conference that he took it with him to London and was adding to it up to the last day of his life.

It is an exquisite piece of work that exemplifies the artistic mood in which it was planned and executed. Eighteen different colors were used. Lines radiate from the continents in fan-like patterns. The World Center accomplishments are depicted in gold. Of the countries, Uganda was first with ten victories, Alaska second with nine. Dr. Giachery said that Alaska was one of the Guardian’s pet new National Assemblies. On the map the radiating lines look like the coronet of a queen.

“I remember one night at table,” Dr. Giachery said, “when the Guardian came in, his eyes sparkling with joy. He tried to make us guess what news he was bringing, then he unrolled a map and showed the Faith in the far North, on Franklin Island.”

Robert Moul of Alaska spoke next. “There is a National Assembly in Alaska is a miracle,” he said. “Fifteen years ago the first Assembly was formed. In 1958 Alaska was a consolidation goal. We thought we had ten years, but the Guardian had other plans. When we learned that we were to have a National Assembly by Ríjíván 1957, our collective gasp must have been heard round the world.

“To give you an example of the Guardian’s inspiring leadership: when we heard that the Fund for the Hagiratu’l-Quds had been spontaneously started with a contribution of thirty-five dollars, he cabled five hundred pounds for it. The impact of the institution of the Hands of the Cause, and of the teaching work of Florence Mayberry as Auxiliary Board member, was electrifying.”

Mrs. Peggy Ross told of the progress, plans, and needs of the immense territory entrusted to the indomitable Canadian Community. Not only are there thousands of miles to be traversed, but there are varied ethnic and language groups under the Canadian jurisdiction. In the past five years, because it was necessary to concentrate on good foundations, the teaching work seemed to go backwards instead of forwards, but now the results are seen in a steady increase of believers and Assemblies which promises success for the Crusade goals.

“Other goal territories are equally demanding and varied,” Mrs. Ross explained. “They include Samoa, the Marquesas, Iceland, Greenland, Labrador, Keewatin, Franklin, Yukon, and a number of smaller islands. There is a great need for suitable pioneers.”

Cable to Hands in Holy Land

A cablegram from the Conference replying to the message from the Hands in the Holy Land, framed by Katherine McLaughlin, Roland Estall and Jenaee Caldwell was read:

THIRD INTERCONTINENTAL CONFERENCE CALLED BY BELOVED GUARDIAN KEENLY AWARE HIS EVER PRESENT GUIDANCE SEND LOVING APPRECIATION MESSAGE REVERED CUSTODIANS PULSATING HEART WORLD CENTER. H. Borrah Kavelin reviewed the progress of the Crusade goals of the United States. He recalled the Conference of 1953 when Rubiyiyih Khanum brought Shoghi Effendi’s message giving the United States twenty-four goals. “Who would have believed,” Mr. Kavelin said, “that so much could have been accomplished in the last five years. Ninety-four Knights of Bahá’u’lláh have left our shores. As of January first of this year there were 314 believers from the United States in the pioneering field. In the past five years, our National Budgets have totalled two and a half million dollars.”

Intercontinental Teaching

Intercontinental Teaching under the auspices of the United States was reported by Charlotte Linfoot, Asia; Rex Parmalee and Elsie Austin, Africa; Edna True, Europe; William de Forge and Katherine McLaughlin, Western Hemisphere.

Miss Linfoot stated that the few unopened goals in Asia were a result of peculiar conditions, chiefly political. The ultimate success, here, according to the Guardian, may be greater than in Africa. In addition to permanent settlers, there is a need for those who can go for several months. In these countries of slower tempo we need a great deal of persistance of effort, and a great deal of patience. “The only people who are in a hurry,” Miss Linfoot said, “are the Bahá’ís.”

Edna True reported that the mission of the European Teaching Committee will not be accomplished until there is a strong national assembly in each area. Miss True said that there was not one moment when someone was not trying to fill the post in the one remaining opened virgin territory.

Rex Parmalee spoke of the outstanding success in Africa, which has made us complacent. Last year there was a net loss of pioneers. Elsie Austin said that there were only two local spiritual assemblies in North­west Africa in 1953; now there are forty-three, and many groups. “This area still needs many pioneers. It is a great area for teaching. Hearts are ready. We should be proud of our part in their spiritual ferment and growth. Here you are working with pioneers of five great countries; the United States, Britain, Persia, Egypt, and India. One sees the deep reverence of the Oriental pioneers, the activity and fervor of the Western believers; the depth of the Indians; and the order of the English. This is a great learning experience. There is still a great challenge in Africa. In four territories not yet opened, we have been utterly frustrated.

William de Forge said, “The flood of pioneers from the Conference is growing every minute. A total of 154 pioneers is required now. Now is the time."

Katherine McLaughlin gave a moving account of a visit she had recently made to the Indian Bahá'í Community in Bolivia. She said, "The contrast between the rich and the poor in this country is very marked; but, from a spiritual, not a material point of view, who are poorer than those who have not heard the Message of Bahá'u'lláh?"

The friends were saddened by the word received during the conference of the passing of saintly Mrs. Clara Sharp in Tihrvan, But there were happy and humorous notes also. Everyone stood to sing "Happy Birthday" for Mason Remey, who was about to celebrate his eighty-fifth birthday. Strolling in the sunshine to the nearby park for the Conference photograph was a pleasant interlude.

Sunday morning we gathered at the Eighth Street Theater for the last day of the Conference. The deeply moving devotional readings set the tone for the final sessions. They ended with a prayer chanted in Persian. This prayer of Shoghi Effendi, chanted by a voice of extraordinary sweetness and power, seemed to express the essence of spiritual fragrance. One experienced a heightening of the senses so that fragrance and sound seemed to blend into one quality.

Volunteers for Pioneering

The chairman explained that the program had been rearranged so that volunteers for pioneering could come forward in the morning session. This roll call of volunteers was an impressive and moving spectacle which no one present will forget. At least eighty-five dedicated souls stepped forward. There were many touching statements, but a single example may be cited. One gentleman said that he had been a minister for fifty-two years, had now been two months in the Cause, and had never seen such harmony and peace among men as at this Conference. "I'm just floating on air," he said. "Whenever my wings drop, I'm going south in His Name. Bahá'u'lláh has sent me out to talk to the ministers. I have a great message for them. Pray for me!"

Mrs. Nancy Phillips, secretary of the American Indian Service Committee, urged us with great seriousness to consider the importance of teaching the aborigines of the Western Hemisphere. This is the only remaining task of the Seven-Year Plan, she told us. When speaking to the friends in 1933, Dorothy Baker said that during her pilgrimage Shoghi Effendi had spoken again and again of the Indians. "Now, halfway in the Crusade," Mrs. Phillips said, "we have made a beginning. There is a marked acceleration in enrollment in the ranks of the Faith. We must remember that the Indian Service Committee will guide us in the practical considerations of where is great need for teaching and where may be suitable jobs. Find for yourself some of the heartlands of our country," she exhorted, "and know that in fulfillment of the promise of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, there will be a brighter future when the Indians shall have embraced the faith of Bahá'u'lláh."

Mason Remey spoke of the great success of the Conference and of his joy at being present. Leroy loas declared that it was with no little emotion that he arose to speak. "These holy souls who have arisen to carry the banner of Bahá'u'lláh to so many areas, bring close memories of the Guardian's happiness and enthusiasm when he received news of the success of the pioneers," he said.

Mr. loas remarked that he was particularly impressed that so many Negro friends had arisen to serve in the South. He said the Guardian referred to the Negro, as 'Abdu'l-Bahá had done before him, as the apple of his eye. Mr. loas also spoke of the Guardian's deep love for and close association with, the pioneers. The Guardian was depressed and grieved when he learned of some difficulty that had befallen a pioneer. "I am telling you this," Mr. loas added, "so that you will know that the Guardian's heart is with you every moment, every second, and that he is coming to your aid and assistance."

Horace Holley said that as long ago as 1946 the Guardian, in a letter to America, wrote that the Bahá'í Community would have to be a reservoir to provide pioneers for the First and Second Seven Year Plans. "He has repeated this promise and warning with increasing emphasis ever since," Mr. Holley said. "Our capacity to send out pioneers depends on our confirming new believers. We cannot all go, but we can all contribute. We must arise above confusing, harassing, personal disagreements which veil us from the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh, so that the reservoir will be supplied with hundreds and hundreds of additional pioneers throughout the remaining years of the Crusade."

John Robarts reminded us that the beloved Guardian had urged that we on the homefront disperse, not only abroad, but to smaller places on the homefront. In cities we are immersed in a sea of materialism.

Dr. Glachery said, "I cannot express my gratitude to Shoghi Effendi for singling me out to come here. I have a confession to make. When I received the message to come here, I was bewildered, I felt unworthy of such an assignment, and I sent a cable to the Guardian. He answered, "You deserve the honor." I am happy although my heart is very heavy. I have an invisible bond, an unbreakable thread which has tied me to each of you. Your tenderness, love, loyalty—I don't accept it personally. It is for Shoghi Effendi. I take all this love as a tribute to his memory.

"Our Bahá'í World Center"

One of the features of the Sunday morning program was an address on "Our Bahá'í World Center" by Dr. Ugo Giachery. A resume follows:

The great institutions of the Faith in the twin cities of Haifa and 'Akká represent our spiritual development. A few years ago Shoghi Effendi sent Dr. Giachery a photograph of Mount Carmel in 1900. It was then a dry, rocky mountain with little vegetation and no buildings except a Carmelite monastery on the northwest slope. There has since been a tremendous transformation.

Carmel means Vineyard of God. The Old Testament speaks of it. The ancient prophets of Israel trod there. It is the site of Elijah's cave. It is said that Jesus and Muhammad went to Mount Carmel. Bahá'u'lláh's Tablet of Carmel is in Gleanings, pp. 14-16. This is one of the fundamental documents on which the transformation of the entire mountain is based. Dr. Giachery urged us when we get home to read this Tablet again, to memorize it if we can, to help us understand the Institutions of the Faith and the Administrative Order. In it, Bahá'u'lláh promises, "Ere long will God sail His ark on thee."

Of all the living religions, only the Bahá'í Faith has its spiritual and administrative centers in one locality. For Christianity, Jerusalem is the spiritual center, and the administration is elsewhere. Mecca and Medina are the spiritual centers of Islam, but since the fall of the Caliphate, there has been no administrative center.

This land of Mount Carmel and Bahji is permeated with tremendous spiritual power. Shoghi Effendi often spoke of the great potency and force of the spiritual center. Bahá'u'lláh used to pitch His tent on Mount Carmel. He pointed out to 'Abdu'l-Bahá the location, marked by a clump of cypress trees, half-way up the slope of the mountain, where the Báb's remains should be put. The original building was simple, of local stone, constructed under 'Abdu'l-Bahá's direction, with great difficulty and suffering. The real transformation came under Shoghi Effendi's leadership. His vision went beyond physical, human limitations. He often had a faraway look as though he was seeing something not visible to our eyes, that he alone could see. He was planning in terms of centuries, not just a few years, in these basic buildings. It was the Guardian's plan to create a solid Center that will withstand all the storms and conflicts of the world. He added a vision of millenniums ahead, and erected and embellished the Institutions.

In his Messages in 1949, the Guardian embarked on the construction of the Administrative World Center. The Archives building is visible from land and sea. It is valued at $250,000; but is worth much more in labor and effort. If we could express in money the anguish, effort, and labor, the figure would be astron
The Guardian knew exactly what had to be done, and did it in the quickest, most efficient, though sometimes unorthodox manner. The gardens are beautiful, kept with loving care. They are the best in the Middle East. There one is overcome with a sense of peace, detachment, tranquillity to be found nowhere else in the world. This is the impression not only of Baha'is but also of the visitors who come from all over the world. There is nothing else but peace and repose. When the Shrine is lit by floodlights at night, it is a dream vision from all parts of the city. The mayor has requested that the lights be turned on during all of the present centennial celebration.

The Most Sacred Spot

The most sacred spot in the Faith is the Tomb of Bahá'u'lláh, about four miles from the historic city of 'Akka. The ancient city goes back to the time of the Phoenicians. In the tenth and eleventh centuries it was a fortress of the Crusaders. Until 1936 the mansion of Bahjí was in the hands of the covenant-breakers, and was kept in a terrible condition. Shoghi Effendi had it repaired. Now, through his love and foresight, there is no more beautiful building in Israel. It was possible to obtain surrounding land through a descendant of a brother of Bahá'u'lláh. Sandy plots were transformed into gardens. It is Dr. Giachery's opinion that at Bahjí one experiences a different emotion from that felt in the gardens of the Báb's Shrine. One feels something overpowering, something that makes you feel small, infinitesimal, as though you are nothing but a little pebble in the path. You feel the magnitude and intensity of Bahá'u'lláh's power. A new terrace has been recently completed at the gardens. From it one can see the entire area. On clear days one can see the dome of the Shrine of the Báb glittering in the distance. There is an invisible but indestructible bridge connecting these two spiritual centers of the Faith.

The Final Conference Session

Sunday afternoon the session was opened with a prayer read in Spanish by Roberto Cazcarra. Messages received from the revered Hands of the Cause, Adelbert Mulischlegel and Paul Haney were read. Horace Holley and H. Borrah Kavelin gave the last addresses of the program on the topic, "Houses of Worship in the World Crusade." Mr. Holley stated that 'Abdu'l-Bahá, in a talk given in 1912, had described the House of Worship as a collective center, a cause of accord in human hearts, and a symbol of the divine uniting force. The Maujudi'l-Adhkâr with its dependencies, represents the wholeness of life: spirit and science, faith and worship, and the fulfillment of humanitarianism through service to mankind. Moreover, in the recognition of progressive revelation in its services of worship, it acts not merely as the mouthpiece of the latest Revealer, but also of the previous Ones. Because it represents the wholeness of life and the one eternal religion of God, it is an institution of immeasurable spiritual influence. The Maghribi’l-Ashkhar is the sacred place where this great miracle is being maintained. Eventually there will be a Temple not only on all continents, but in all cities. The people will realize that this is the one power that will save mankind from its ills and enable it to establish the new World Order of Bahá’ulláh.

Mr. Kavelin stated that the House of Worship is a source of deep satisfaction to all of us and a spiritual beacon to all the world. He told of his visit to the Temple site at Kampala on the occasion of its dedication. Nearly 500 people rode out on a blazing hot summer day to an elevation overlooking the city. There they witnessed the laying of the cornerstone by ‘Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánum and Musa Banání, Hand of the Cause. The Africans are proud of their achievement. Their House of Worship is to be completed by Ridván 1959. It will be the tallest structure in all Uganda, symbolic of the high station of our Faith on that continent.

Closing Messages From the Hands of the Cause

The five reverent Hands of the Cause gave the closing messages. Mason Remey said that it had been a blessed privilege to absorb, one from another, the bountiful outpourings of spirit. John Robarts told of an episode that Amatu’l-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánum had related: When she first married Shoghi Effendi and came to live in that holy spot, she thought, being under the shadow of that blessed Tree, that the destiny of her soul would be safe and secure. But Shoghi Effendi told her that the destiny of her soul lay in the palm of her own hand. The destiny of every soul, he said, must depend on the service and devotion of each to the Cause. Even the station of a Hand of the Cause is no guarantee of that soul’s future.

The climax of the whole Conference for many an individual present was the final words of Horace Holley. His penetrating, thoughtful mind had contributed in the past week so many speeches that were like polished gems, that the brevity and impact of this one was totally unexpected. In the emotion-charged atmosphere of the last few moments of the Conference, Mr. Holley rose and with what seemed to be all the intensity of his soul, cried out, ‘Ya-Bahá’u’l-Abhá!’ three times with great force and rising inflection. One could only recall ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s words in the Tablets of the Divine Plan, “Oh, how long that it could be made possible for me to travel through these parts, even if necessary on foot, and with the utmost poverty, and while passing through the cities, villages, mountains, deserts, and oceans, cry at the top of my voice, ‘Ya-Bahá’u’l-Abhá!’ and promote the divine teachings. But now this is not feasible for me; therefore I live in great regret; perchance, God willing, ye may become assisted.”

Leroy Ioas said those who have had the great bounty of serving the Cause in Haifa always think how happy Shoghi Effendi would have been to witness a gathering such as this. How he would have thrilled to the achievement of goals of the great Crusade which he conceived, to spread the Cause of God. After such conferences, he would always say, “Now we must see what the friends will do.” It is up to us to prove what we say. There is a new spirit sweeping over the Bahá’í world. The Guardian said that the Fourth Phase of the World Crusade must be the most glorious, most spectacular, and dram Combine the pictures of the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh. He had the strength and delicacy of both. He was ready to frown and ready to smile. He had a humorous manner of address often. Still there was the tenderness that could not be found anywhere else. He had a tremendous capacity for work. His day started very early, sometimes before sunrise and he worked uninterruptedly, sometimes past midnight, always in the service of the friends, of humanity. His translations will never be equalled by any scholar. His vision did not belong to a human being, it was beyond the most perfect telescope that could be invented. That's why he warned us constantly. He saw into the future. That's why he was urging us all the time, pointing the way to physical and spiritual salvation. He chided the American friends sometimes; he was aware, although he had never been here, of the danger of material progress as the two things, comfort and spirituality, do not go together.

"I am telling you these things not to urge you, but to explain. We thought years ago that Shoghi Effendi was a different self—I may look the same, but I am a different person inside. One person summed up the feelings of all: "We were transported."

Message From the Hands of the Holy Land to the First All-France Convention

ON THE historic occasion of the convening of the First all-France Bahá’í Convention and the election of the National Spiritual Assembly of this famous land, long one of the chief pillars of European civilization and a fountain-head of freedom and liberalism, our minds naturally turn to our beloved Guardian, whose ceaseless encouragement, tireless efforts, and unflinching determination made possible this event of such great spiritual significance. In spite of the fact that France had the unique and enviable position of being the first nation on the European continent to receive the warming and illuminating rays of the sun of Bahá'u'lláh’s Revelation, the friends gathered here, more particularly those of French extraction, are well aware of how difficult it has been to bring the work of our glorious Faith to this point of consummation.

Since the light of this New Revelation was first brought to France almost sixty years ago, this country has been blessed by many and varied events of profound spiritual significance. We may well, at this moment of victory, recall some of these which are of outstanding historic interest.

From France the very first party of Western pilgrims proceeded to the Turkish penal colony of ‘Akká to visit ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. In 1899, upon the return of that handful of souls, now aflame with the Glad Tidings of this New Revelation, May Bolf, with the approval and under the loving guidance of the Master Himself, began to teach the Faith in Paris. Before long a flourishing, enkindled and wholly dedicated group of souls was gathered there, including believers of such distinction as Hippolyte Dreyfus, the first native French believer, Thomas Breakwell, the first British believer, the Hand of the Cause Charles Mason Remey, and many others. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá Himself sent the greatest Bahá’í teacher of the East, Mirza Abú’l-Fadl, to deepen the Faith of that early group. In those early years, Laura Barney, who later became the wife of Hippolyte Dreyfus, journeyed to ‘Akká and, during a long sojourn in the Holy Land, compiled that book of inestimable value Some Answered Questions.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Visits to Paris

In 1911 and 1912, Paris was blessed by the presence of the beloved Master Himself, who remained there for considerable periods of time. Many Orientalists, scholars, and men famous for their erudition throughout Europe sought His presence. It was there that He gave His famous Paris talks, lamenting the depths to which Europe had sunk in her pursuit of materialistic ideologies, and exhorting the people to awaken spiritually, in words which were the very breath of the Holy Spirit.

It was during one of his visits that the Master uttered these prophetic words: "Try to propagate the Teachings of God ... Now in Europe, it is the beginning of a new day. It is dawn. Ere long the Divine Light shall penetrate everywhere." On another occasion He said: "Though you find Paris dormant now, eventually it will become revived, because I have spent many a sleepless night here, during which I supplicated the Almighty to shower His confirmations upon the people. I had no rest, no sleep—I was constantly suppliant."

It was not until after World War II, with the inauguration of the Second Seven-Year plan given by the beloved Guardian to the American Bahá'í Community, one phase of which was aimed at the spiritual conquest of ten European "Goal" countries, that the work in France itself began to fulfill the prophecies of the Master. Though naturally herself not one of these goal countries, the vitalizing effects of the systematic prosecution of 'Abdu'l-Bahá’s Divine Plan were felt throughout the length and breadth of France; the faithful and persistent groups of believers already established in such cities as Marseilles and Lyon, as well as the Paris community, began to be stimulated, not only by the general atmosphere of intense activity which was pervading adjacent countries, but also through direct help from traveling Bahá’í teachers and pioneers, and from the European Teaching Committee of the National Assembly of the United States.

The number of French Bahá’ís—the firm bedrock on which all activity in that country must ultimately rest—was increasing; the loyalty and devotion of these native friends greatly encouraged and pleased the Guardian, who saw in them the promise of the future and realized that the day when France would be able to have her own National Spiritual Assembly was fast approaching. From that time on, he fixed his attention on France, showered his encouragement on the work of its believers, urged many American friends to pioneer there, and watched over the progress being made with both pride and interest, a pride and interest which culminated with his announcement that the first election of its independent National Assembly would take place in Rídvan 1958.

First National Assembly on Continent

The believers of French extraction gathered in this convention, as well as their loving and devoted co-workers from other countries who have pioneered in France, without whose unsparking and dedicated efforts this victory could not have been won so soon, are aware that they are now electing the first National, as distinguished from Regional, Spiritual Assembly of the European continent, an assembly which constitutes yet another pillar of the Universal House of Justice. This is a great distinction, a great honor, and imposes a great responsibility, more particularly at this time when the Cause of God has received such a grievous blow through the sudden passing of its beloved Guardian, its guide and its shield. There is no doubt, however, that his love and his spirit are with you on this historic occasion, and that he will continue to watch over the advancement of this community which he so tenderly encouraged for so many years, and whose present coming of age was so eagerly anticipated by him.

Our beloved Guardian doubtless would have called upon the National Assembly elected at this historic first French Annual Convention to formulate its own Five-Year Plan for the remainder of the World Crusade, as he did in the case of the newly-formed national bodies in Africa in 1956. Perhaps he would have specified the objectives himself, as he did for the subsidiary Six-Year Plans given to each of the thirteen national and regional assemblies formed in the Rídvan period of 1957. We may be sure, however, that his hopes for the future development of the Faith in France would, following his earlier pattern, encompass: (1) the devising of ways and means of insuring the rapid spread of the Cause throughout that land; (2) the consolidation and multiplication of its assemblies, groups and isolated centers; (3) the planting of the banner of the Faith in all the various Departments of the country, especially those which have as yet had no sustained teaching activity within their borders; (4) the incorporation of the new National body, as well as the local spiritual assemblies; (5) the establishment of a site for a future Mashriqu’l-Adhkár; (6) the holding of summer schools to deepen the knowledge and understanding of the believers; and (7) above all the spreading of the light of this Divine Revelation far and wide amongst the people of that country, in order that the promises of the beloved Master may be speedily fulfilled, and the French nation receive the redeeming grace of Bahá’u’lláh in this dark age through which it and the whole world is now passing.

Words of Guardian Concerning France

As the assembled friends consult earnestly and prayerfully upon the unfinished tasks before them, they may well turn for inspiration and assurance to the words of the beloved Guardian, addressed to the national conventions two years ago—a message in which he referred specifically to the formation of the National Spiritual Assembly of France.

"Before the eyes of the warriors enlisting under its banner stretch fields of exploration and consolidation of such vastness as might well dazzle the eyes and strike awe into the heart of any soul less robust than those who have arisen to identify themselves with its Cause. The heights its champions must scale are indeed formidable. The pitfalls that bestrew their path are still numerous. The road leading to ultimate and total victory is tortuous, stony, and narrow. Thirs, however, is the emphatic assurance, revealed by the Pen of the Most High—the Prime Mover of the forces unleashed by this world-girdling Crusade—that 'Whoever ariseth to aid our Cause, God will render him victorious over ten times ten thousand souls, and, should he wax in his love for Me, him will We cause to triumph over all that is in heaven and all that is on earth.'"

First National Spiritual Assembly of France, Formed Ridvan 1958, Becomes Twenty-Seventh Pillar of Faith of Baha’u’llah

AIDED by the inspiring, comprehensive, thoughtful message from the Hands of the Cause in Haifa; in the presence of the dearly-loved Hand of the Cause Herman Grossmann and newly-appointed Hand of the Cause William Sears of Africa; under the counsel and attentive loving care of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, the appointed interim National Body, ably and indefatigably represented by member Edna True; with the eventful attendance of one of the first believers of France, devoted early believer Laura Dreyfus-Barney, the first National Convention of the Baha’is of France moved joyously toward the hour of election of its first National Spiritual Assembly and the first independent National Assembly on the continent of Europe.

Deeply moved by the knowledge that this historic step was being taken at the express direction of Shoghi Effendi, aware of the blessings that had been showered upon France in turn by the two memorable visits of ‘Abdu’l-Baha, and by the eternal fires kindled by Him at that time in Paris; and by the divine, masterful guidance of our beloved Guardian in the propagation of the teaching work and the establishment of the administrative pillars, the delegates and the attending friends from twenty different localities of France and from six countries, including Iran and South Africa, moved through their deliberations with a conscious knowledge that the spiritual destiny of a country was being fulfilled.

Assemblage of 90 at First Convention

Opened with the reading of prayers in French and English and with beautiful Persian chanting, reaffirming the unity of the nationalities which have banded together under the banner of Baha’u’llah to bring to fruition this splendid flower of the Ten-Year Crusade, the First National Convention of France, held sixty years after the introduction of the Faith to Paris by a young and enthusiastic group of students, who long since have dispersed into wider fields of service, brought together, in the period of the most joyous Festival, over ninety believers, the largest congregation of Bahai’s yet assembled in France.

Perhaps the most moving aspect of the Convention was the living love and the forceful leadership of the Guardian and the constant mention of his words and works by those who spoke and by those who took part in the deliberations and consultations. The messages of love and appreciation sent by the Hands of the Cause from all parts of the world, from Australia, Asia, continental Europe, and England, the Near East and the United States defined in word and spirit the everlasting unity possible and existent in the Bahai World.

The greetings from the twenty-six national assemblies the world over lent dignity and responsibility to the momentous prospect facing the assembled delegates.

From California, Saigon, Belgium, New York, Tahiti, Chicago, Tunis, Andorra, Tehran and other scattered points, letters and cables came pouring in from those who had pioneered a while in France and had then been forced to move on before this final goal had been attained—but who rejoiced in this Ridvan period that France had won this signal victory. Local assemblies, whose formation had been closely knitted to the work in France, through the selfless, timeless, devoted efforts of the members of the European Teaching Committee, sent messages of congratulations to a national community which was aware that the entire Baha’i World had shared the responsibilities and the work—and had a share of the victory.

As the first delegates were called one by one, they moved forward with their ballots; and history stirred once again—and as gloriously as on ancient pages. Delegates from famous cities moved forward to add a new kind of fame to the annals of Marseille, Nice, Lyon, Orleans, Paris! As the fourth phase of the Ten-Year Crusade opened, France became the twenty-seventh pillar on which the International House of Justice will be built, and the only National Assembly to be formed this Ridvan.

Seventy-seven of the one hundred fifty-two adult believers in France were present at this solemn and crucial juncture. The majority of the followers of Baha’u’llah, working together in this land that has already forty-two localities opened to the Faith, comprising seven local assemblies, seven groups and twenty-eight isolated believers, sat in conscious concentration as the goal set by the Guardian was attained—and the dedication of those noble souls of sixty years ago was realized.

Report on Goals and Achievements

Reports of the various national committees, set up by the European Teaching Committee, brought into focus the extent of the work actually accomplished. Goals set for France to be fulfilled before the formation of the national assembly were humbly acknowledged as attained; with the increase of pioneers and native believers, with the multiplication of isolated centers and local assemblies, with the translation and publication of literature, with the purchase of an endowment, with the establishment of summer schools.

The ten goal cities named by the Guardian were opened to the Faith, with the exception of one. Many visiting and resident believers had travelled to teach the Faith. A magnificently moving tape on the life of Baha’u’llah had been recorded for use. And the astonishing and gratifying total of seventy-two native French believers had assembled under the banner of the Faith.

As the Convention moved on through its three-day session, the perspective necessary to appreciate the goals already achieved and the work to be accomplished in the future was clearly realized. Non-delegate friends, catching the flame of inspiration, clamored to be heard; and the enthusiasm, so precious in the French believers, had to be curbed.

During the afternoon session of the last day, the newly-elected National Assembly announced to the assembled delegates and friends the receipt of a generous gift, left to the National Assembly of the United States with the expressed hope that it be used for the promotion of the Faith in France, a gift from the late Edith Sanderson, who was a bulwark of devotion and service in the long years the Faith in France lay dormant. Thus France, guided by the Guardian, aided by the care and affection of the American National Assembly, helped by the friends throughout the world, materially blessed by this generous bequest, began its national responsibilities, already rich in the treasures of both the spiritual and material worlds.

Reception and Public Meeting Held

The entire Convention period was most fittingly opened with a reception held at the National Hazratu'l-Quds in Paris, on the eve of this great event, during which a report of the first Intercontinental Conference held in Kampala was given. Hand of the Cause William Sears, who unexpectedly found himself in Paris and who had participated in this first of the five congresses called for by the Guardian in his last message to the Bahá'ís of the world, gave a most moving recital of what took place in the heart of that fast-awakening continent. During the Convention sessions and at the Unity Banquet, the friends also had a chance to hear of the work being done by the native believers in Africa. A beautifully-prepared and well-attended public meeting, on the first night of the Convention, at which Madeleine Davy, exceptionally gifted French believer, spoke so simply and yet so eloquently of the spiritual foundations of the Bahá'í Faith, following which Louis Henuzet of Belgium masterfully outlined the administrative form through which the purity and strength of the Faith functions, attracted an audience of about one hundred and fifty.

Election of National Assembly

Halfway through the Convention the solemn period of the election of the National Assembly, at five minutes to four o'clock on the afternoon of April 26, 1958, was announced. The seriousness, the importance, the spiritual significance of this event was lost to no one. In an abrupt quietness, prayers and extracts from the writings of Shoghi Effendi on this subject were read. Reported back to the Convention by the tellers, as the elected National Spiritual Assembly for one year of the Bahá'í believers of France, were the names of nine: Sara Kenny, Jacques Soghomonian, Francois Petit, Joel Marangella, Chahib 'Alá'i, Sally Sanor, Lucienne Migette, Farhang Javid, and Florence Bagley. These nine met immediately after the afternoon session to elect their officers. The results, as reported to the friends were: Chairman, Joel Marangella; Vice-Chairman, Sara Kenny; Corresponding Secretary, Francois Petit; Recording Secretary, Sally Sanor; Treasurer, Farhang Javid.

Having accomplished one half of the duties prescribed to delegates, the Convention moved on after the election, continuing, through two more sessions, with the vitally important task of consultation.

On Sunday, late in the afternoon, following a few words of hope and encouragement spoken by Hand of the Cause Herman Grossmann, the historic first National Convention of France came to a close, leaving to the assemblage of friends these too few memorable hours for their sustenance in the year to come; leaving also to the friends the knowledge that another of the goals so long urged, so tirelessly worked for, so patiently attended by our beloved Shoghi Effendi has been won, and that the establishment of these broader bases of love and understanding his dearest wish.

Convention Reports Reaffirm Awareness of New Spiritual Forces, Dedication of Bahá’ís to Remaining Goals of Ten-Year Crusade

Alaska

Bahá’ís from all points of Alaska met in Anchorage for the Second Annual Bahá’í Convention on April 26-27, 1958. Delegates representing five local spiritual assemblies were present with one assembly delegate voting by absentee ballot. More than forty adults and several youth were in attendance, despite the handicap of distance and the necessity of expensive air travel.

Mr. Robert Moul, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska, called the convention to order, and following roll call by the Secretary, a special prayer for the departed was dedicated to our beloved Shoghi Effendi, whose passing we mourn deeply and particularly on occasions such as this.

With the reading of the Convention Message from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land, assuring all Bahá’ís of their support and stating that most of the statistics contained in the message were gleaned from the Guardian’s own notes, on which he had worked until two days before his passing, the knowledge that we are still under his protection was doubly apparent. There was a spirit of re-dedication and maturity present as the Alaskan Bahá’ís move forward to fulfill the goals set forth in the Ten-Year Crusade.

While the need for more pioneers to Alaska is still great, we are happy to report that Alaskans have also pioneered. Assemblies having sufficient numbers have sent settlers to goals in Alaska and many Alaskan Bahá’ís, members of the Armed Forces, have moved on to various stations elsewhere.

The Secretary of the National Teaching Committee reported on the accomplishments achieved in Alaska in the past year; while all the goals were not filled a good many were and the future looks fruitful. Much ground work was done by visiting speakers and teachers.

Plans for a Bahá’í Summer School, possibly in early August, were discussed briefly; complete details will be announced in the Alaskan Bahá’í News.

Many suggestions and recommendations for ways and means of teaching the natives were offered by the delegates and members of the National Spiritual Assembly; these recommendations will be studied by the Assembly and shared with the friends.

At this point the Chairman of the Convention, Verne L. Stout, asked that the discussion be opened to all persons assembled; this was done, with the approval of the delegates and members of the National Spiritual Assembly. From this discussion many interesting and informative ideas were gleaned. Agnes Harrison, the representative from Bethel, explained some of the problems involving her particular locality: the need for time to invite neighboring villages if a public meeting is scheduled, and the weather in winter making the attendance of such a meeting impossible for these same villages; the need for sincerity, humbleness, and patience, especially when moving to a pioneer post, such as Bethel, Nome, or Barrow, where the population is predominantly native Alaskan.

She further mentioned that teachers, nurses, and secretaries are usually able to find work; couples are more successful as a rule. The need for a ‘true’ picture of the situation was expressed; for instance a pioneer from the midwest might be considerably shocked to find prices like these: Water 15 cents per gallon, Milk 90 cents per quart, and Electricity 25 cents per kilowatt. These facts are mentioned not to discourage pioneers but to keep them from becoming discouraged. The people who have gone out, many times with nothing more than faith to back up their undertaking, report their spiritual reward most glorious.

This report would not be complete without some mention of the Young Adult members; hearing the wisdom poured forth from these young people, seeing the enthusiasm with which they are facing the future, hearing the optimism they express leaves one with the feeling that the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh rests in competent hands.

Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay

The Second Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay was held in the intimate atmosphere of the Ḥazíratu'l-Quds in Asuncion, Paraguay, on April 25-27, 1958. Twenty-four delegates from the five countries were present, including delegates of Negro, Indian, and white racial backgrounds, as well as European and American pioneers, with a joyous welcome also being given to a delegate from the southernmost city in the world, Punta Arenas.

During the Pre-Convention School April 23 and 24, courses were given on the themes of the Covenant, Institution of the Hands of the Cause, the Technique and Spirit of Consultation and The Day of God (from Advent of Divine Justice) which gave great impetus to the flow of consultation and the prevailing spirit of love and unity in the following convention days.

On the evening of April 24, a "Meeting of Unity" was held in lieu of the usual festive Ridván. This meeting was opened with meditation on the real significance of Bahá'í unity, using inspirational passages from the Teachings and excerpts associated with recent events in the Bahá'í World. The Master's definition of Unity was the theme of this introduction: "Unity is the expression of the loving power of God and reflects the reality of divinity." This was followed by an elevated devotional period together in a fragrant atmosphere of jasmine and attar of roses. These fragrances produced the strong impression of the very presence of the beloved Guardian with us that night.

It is always difficult to recapitulate the highlights of a convention in which confirmations flow so abundantly. Perhaps the most unforgettable memory will be the presence of the Canton Huanuni delegates, who spoke such pure words from their hearts as these: "We shall teach our children to enter into the new life;"

"First we shall illumine our brothers and people will ask us why we have advanced so far in our little village;" "I shall go on foot, passing over the mountains, crossing the rivers, seeking for believers; night and day I will walk looking for prepared souls ...; "We invite all our Bahá'í brothers in the world to visit us." A large proportion of the consultation during the Convention was devoted to the clearly expressed needs of the Bolivian Indian Friends in their deep desire to serve the Faith as pioneers.

The Convention closed with prayers in the following languages: Spanish, English, French, Italian, Norwegian, Quechua, and Aymara, read by delegates of those backgrounds. Among the frequently-heard words of "adieus" (farewell) was the phrase "Hasta siempre" (which has the untranslatable sense of being together forever).

National Assembly Election

The following members were elected to serve on the National Spiritual Assembly for the coming year: Jose Mielnik, Athos Costas, Salvador Tormo, Roberto Cazcarra, Roque Centurion Miranda, Else Cazcarra, Fabienne Guillon, Mary Binda, and Ellen Sims.

One can only sum up the spirit of this memorable Convention in the words of the revered Custodians of the Faith in the Holy Land: "A mighty wave of poignant love has swept all hearts, drawing the believers closer, uniting them in purpose, spurring them on to greater dedication, sacrifice and service in the path of God."

Benelux Countries

The second Benelux convention, held April 26-27, 1958, in the conference room of the Hazíratu’l-Quds in The Hague, Holland, opened with prayers in French, Dutch, and English, followed by a moment of reverent silence in memory of the beloved Guardian. Louis Henuzet, chairman of the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly, read a cable from Herman Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, and then called upon Jan Sysling, Auxiliary Board member, to speak of his visit to the Guardian’s resting place in London.

After the election of the convention chairman, Jan Sysling, and secretary, Lea Nys, a report on the formation of the National Spiritual Assembly of France was given by Louis Henuzet, who attended the convention.

The nineteen delegates present deliberated considerably on the many needs and demands of a developing Bahá’í community—the care of three Hazíratu’l-Quds in Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg; budget; translation and distribution of literature; administrative responsibilities and the coordination of committee work; and above all the need to enlarge the scope of teaching so that many new believers may be enrolled.

Particularly stressed was the need to search ways and means for the legal incorporation of the National Assembly, and the urgency of securing their endowment—the last to be obtained.

The Message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, read from a French translation, and distributed in Dutch and English, was followed by a discussion period.

The Dutch Book Sales Committee reported on many new items being translated and published, and the Belgian Book Sales Committee reported an excellent record of distribution and stated its view that a Publishing Trust should soon be established. Both Committees take responsibility for translating as well as publishing, and have been very active.

Convention recommendations made to the incoming National Assembly strongly emphasized the need to concentrate on teaching work and suggested the following: More direct contact between the National Teaching Committees of each country and the communities and isolated Bahá’ís; the direction of Bahá’ís to goal cities as a continuous aspect throughout the year; a monthly schedule of meetings, activities, subjects, and speakers for holding of lectures and firesides, with results published in the Bulletin; the urgent need for a Bahá’í couple who speak French or German to settle in Luxembourg; and the possibilities for Iranian student pioneers. A weekend school following the Frankfurt Intercontinental Conference, for the purpose of deepening Bahá’ís only, was recommended.

The new Benelux National Spiritual Assembly, with its officers are: Chairman, Jan Sysling; Vice-Chairman, Louis Henuzet; Secretary, Lea Nys; Treasurer, Bob van Lith; Recording Secretary, Ben Levy; and Elsa de Kominck, Pierre Bram, Jean Nys; and Claude Levy.

Iberian Peninsula

The Second Annual Convention of the Bahá’ís of the Iberian Peninsula was held in Madrid April 25-28, 1958, and was open to the attendance of the believers in general, who came from the nine communities of the Peninsula to the number of about thirty-five. Charles Monroe Ioa, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands, and chairman of the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly, opened the Convention, after which Angelo Silva Carneiro, also member of the Board, was elected its per-that translations of all messages had been made and distributed, and a revision for publication, of the complete Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá in Spanish. Many important translations into Portuguese were also reported, among these being passages from 'Abdu'l-Bahá in London, the Persian Bayán, and other compilations, this being the work of Angelo Carneiro.

Attention was called to the great Intercontinental Conferences planned by the Guardian himself; about twelve persons from the Peninsula expect to attend the Frankfurt Conference next July.

Charles Ioas gave a clear and inspiring comment on "The New Phase of the Cause," calling attention to the importance of the Proclamation of the Hands of the Cause, which he read with comments, explaining that the Nine Hands in Haifa are the Custodians of the Faith until the formation of the International House of Justice, but in the meantime the friends should concentrate on the goals set by the Guardian for the Ten-Year Crusade.

Virginia Orbison commented upon the Convention Message of the Hands, upon which the delegates consulted in regard to the questions discussed in this important communication. Stress was put upon the individual responsibilities for living the Baha'i way of life, observing strict morality and integrity in all its aspects.

The Convention was summarized by the Chairman, Angelo Silva Carneiro, who commented on the wonderfully comprehensive spirit shown in the Convention, and the harmonious consultation and unanimous decisions made by the National Spiritual Assembly during the past year. He quoted a passage from Bahá'u'lláh which urges the people to become "submerged in the Ocean of My Words" in order to know and learn. He recommended fewness of words and greatness of action. He also expressed gratitude for the spiritual presence of our beloved Guardian, and his watchfulness from the Abád Kingdom, also for the thoughtful vigilance of the Hands of the Faith, the continued and much appreciated support by the American National Assembly and the European Teaching Committee and for the fruitful participation by the delegates.

The Convention ended on a high note of enthusiasm and devotion, each one resolving to do his utmost to fulfill all the goals of the Ten-Year Crusade as the beloved Guardian would have it, keeping in mind and heart his continuous exhortations to become worthy of their elevated mission.

The Iberian friends were again thankful for the continued protection which the Baha'is are being favored with during their meetings, summer schools, and convention, and continually remember the words of the Bab "God will assist all those who arise to serve Him."

New Zealand

The Second Annual Convention of the Baha'is of New Zealand was held at the Hazratu'l-Quds in Auckland on April 25-27, 1958. Unlike the first convention held last year, there was only one overseas visitor present this time.

Average attendance at all sessions was thirty-one delegates and friends. All were disappointed that the convention message from the Holy Land was not received during the convention period. However, portions of the beloved Guardian's message to the previous convention were restudied.

A comprehensive program was arranged and carried through. Special highlights of this agenda were: "Conference Impact," when New Zealand visitors to the Intercontinental Conference in Sydney, Australia, gave their impressions of the proceedings; the New Zealand Crusade Goals review; first-hand accounts of the teaching work in Persia; and a visit by all present to view a suitable site of four and one-quarter acres of wonderful land as the proposed Temple Site, which must be attained. This proposed site is elevated, with extensive views, and is situated fourteen miles south of Auckland on the main "southern outlet" motorway and Great South Road. All those present were unanimous in the opinion that the site could not be bettered.

The most important item of business was the election of the new National Spiritual Assembly. These are the members elected, with the officers designated: S. J. Carr, chairman; Mrs. M. Harnish, vice-chairman; Miss K. Carpenter, treasurer; and Mrs. D. Weeks, Mrs. L. Fenner, Mrs. B. Van der Vaart, E. B. Dewing, P. Leadley, and H. K. Blundell.

On the whole it was a happy convention, with a real Baha'i spirit prevailing. The coming year promises to be one of more intense activity in the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh by the New Zealand friends.

North East Africa

Conscious of the stupendous sacred legacy that our most beloved departed Guardian has entrusted the Baha'i World Community to carry; cognizant of the dynamic power of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and its miraculous permeation throughout the four corners of the world, within the memory of persons who have watched its growth ever since the Author of the Faith was a prisoner in the penal colony of 'Akka; inspired by the presence of the revered Hand of the Cause, Mr. Tarázú'lláh Samandari, who had, in the prime of youth, the unique blessing of beholding the luminous countenance of Bahá'u'lláh, and enriched with a storehouse of spiritual experience which has been accumulating for a period of eighty-five years; in such an atmosphere the third National Convention of the Baha'is of North East Africa was opened on April 24 with the resonance of our impressive prayer, revealed by the Master, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and chanted by a child of five years of age. After this prayer the delegates, as well as the visiting friends, stood in silent prayer for five minutes, in commemoration of our most beloved Guardian.

The whole atmosphere of the Convention was resounding with the spiritually laden words of the revered Hand of the Cause, Taráz’ulláh Sámandari, who attended all the sessions.

The delegates from Mogadiscio, Asmara, Addis-Ababa, Khartoum North, and Port Sudan brought the glad tidings of the progress of the Cause in those areas. It is hoped that the coming year will be a new beginning for the speedy achievement of the remaining goals of the Ten-Year Plan.

The Convention terminated through the receipt of the following message released from the Holy Land:

"Grateful convention message fervently praying divine confirmations delegates friends beloved Guardian ever present his happiness dependent attainment sent victories fulfillment all goals—Hands of Faith."

The result of the election of the incoming National Spiritual Assembly was as follows: Abdu'l-Rahim Yazdi, chairman; Yusuf Mustapha, vice-chairman; Tewfik M. Ali, secretary; Iskandar Hanna, treasurer; Mirza Badi Bushruí, assistant secretary; Dr. Rawshan Yazdi, Hussein Amin Bikar, Abbas Rushdy, Syyid M. Azzawi.

The Regional Spiritual Assembly for the Bábí’s of South East Asia, which is the host for this Conference, expresses the hope that a vast number of friends from all over the world will attend this culminating historic event.

Since housing is a serious and difficult problem in Djakarta, the friends who plan to attend the Conference should inform the National Spiritual Assembly of South East Asia as quickly as they can of their intention, specifying their preferences as to the class of hotel and the exact date of arrival.

In applying for the necessary visa it is very important that the application states that the visit is for tourist reasons and no mention at all must be made of the Bábí Conference. This instruction must be strictly observed.

If any of the friends who plan to attend the Djakarta Conference are able to devote some time to teaching in the various countries in south and east Asia, please inform the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bábí’s of the United States so that suggestions as to cities and addresses can be supplied.

American Bábí’s planning to attend the Djakarta Conference must carry with them current Bábí identification cards from the National Spiritual Assembly.

Call For Unified Understanding

By the Hands of the Cause
Residing in the Holy Land

It has come to our attention that there is, amongst the believers, discussion regarding the Guardianship which exceeds the statement made by the united body of the Chief Stewards of the Faith, the Hands of the Cause, which they issued from Bahji last November after nine days of deep and heart-searching consultation following hours of supplication in the Holy Tomb of Bahá'u'lláh.

We therefore, acting on behalf of the Hands of the Faith, wish once again to call the attention of all the friends to the words in that Proclamation: “It was likewise certified that the beloved Guardian had left no heir. The Aghsán (branches) one and all are either dead or have been declared violators of the Covenant by the Guardian for their faithlessness to the Master’s Will and Testament and their hostility to him named first Guardian in that sacred document. The first effect of the realization that no successor to Shoghi Effendi could have been appointed by him was to plunge the Hands of the Cause into the very abyss of despair.”

The American Hands of the Faith have expressed this same thought very clearly in a message prepared for a series of teaching conferences held in the United States earlier this year.

“Shoghi Effendi appointed no successor in his own lifetime because he himself had no natural heir and because no member of the Holy Family qualified. The Master’s Testament is the sole authority controlling the appointment of successive Guardians, and its specific provisions were scrupulously upheld by the Guardian in his non-appointment of a second Guardian. Since a successor could only be chosen and designated by Shoghi Effendi in his own lifetime, the friends must dismiss all hopeful expection that a will appointing a second Guardian may later be found.”

We call upon all believers, for the sake of preserving the unity of our beloved Faith for which the Báb was martyred, Bahá'u'lláh and the Master imprisoned, and for which the beloved Guardian so completely sacrificed himself, to concentrate on the thoughts expressed in the Proclamation, and to desist from all further speculation on the future development of the institutions of the Faith—speculation which can only give rise to those very differences of interpretation forbidden by Bahá'u'lláh and ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, and against which they repeatedly warned us.

Bahá'u'lláh has left the Divine System He conceived, the Master elaborated and the Guardian clarified, but the Divinely-guided scion of his house, Shoghi Effendi has, for reasons none of us can fathom, been lifted from the pattern. What he has left us is more than sufficient for us, the Community of the Most Great Name, to establish the first stages of that world-redeeming Order Bahá'u'lláh has given to mankind. Our sacred obligation is to fulfill our Guardian’s wishes, his plans, and his most cherished hopes, leaving the overall scheme of God to unfold as He sees fit, in His mysterious ways, in the days to come. Let us be confident that if we do our part He will never fail in His, and with this assurance go forward unitedly, courageously, and with complete consecration.

Let us also rejoice with grateful hearts over the truly remarkable measure of Divine protection vouchsafed to us since the passing of our beloved Guardian, an un-failing sign that Shoghi Effendi’s spirit is with us, guiding and inspiring the believers everywhere, and assisting us to achieve total victory in the Holy Crusade bequeathed to us by him.

Commentary on Message
From Hands of Cause

Beloved Bahá’í Friends:

The communication issued by the Hands of the Faith residing in the Holy Land on June 12, 1958, is earnestly commended to the attention of every American believer.

Its real import and significance is their heartfelt appeal for unified understanding throughout the Bahá’í world community of the present status and future development of the institutions of the Faith of Bahá’ulláh. We are summoned to abide by the statements contained in the Proclamation which came to us from the Holy Land soon after the passing of the Guardian, when the body of the Hands as Chief Stewards, after days of prayerful consultation, rallied the body of the believers around the Revelation of Bahá’ulláh, the Master’s Testament, and the Guardian’s unique service in developing the nascent local, national, and international institutions of the New World Order.

We must discern in this communication the existence of divided opinions reported to Haifa, and the vital need of “preserving the unity of our beloved Faith . . . to concentrate upon the thoughts expressed in the Proclamation, and to desist from all further speculation on the future development of the institutions of the Faith—speculation which can only give rise to those very differences of interpretation forbidden by Bahá’ulláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and against which they repeatedly warned us.”

For the older believers the condition resembles those days of grief and speculation following the passing of the Master until the light of Divine assurance was rekindled in our hearts by Shoghi Effendi in his station and capacity of Guardian.

“Bahá’ulláh has left the divine system He conceived, the Master elaborated, and the Guardian clarified, but the divinely-guided scion of His house, Shoghi Effendi, has, for reasons none of us can fathom, been lifted from the pattern. What He has left us is more than sufficient for us, the Community of the Most Great Name, to establish the first stages of that world-redeeming Order Bahá’ulláh has given to mankind.

“Our sacred obligation is to fulfill our Guardian’s wishes, . . . leaving the overall scheme of God to unfold as He sees fit, in His mysterious ways, in the days to come.”

This communication, dear friends and co-workers, requires the understanding and obedient response of every member of the Bahá’í community. Without that wholehearted obedience, one’s faith would be fatally incomplete.

The western mind is prone to reject the element of mystery, and for it substitute its own rational explanation or human speculation. A primal element of revelation is that it both reveals sacred truths we can understand, and mysteries which we must accept and not attempt to penetrate. The unknowable mystery is the spiritual universe in which the revealed truths are as the glitter of stars.

April 28, 1958

Beloved Friends:

This cablegram from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land sent to all Hands and all national assemblies completes the historical records of Covenant-breaking in America after the passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. Of the few who rejected the Will and Testament, Ahmad Sohrab, working through the New History Society, became the outstanding, bitter, and resourceful foe of the Guardian and the Bahá’í Administrative Order.

As the message states, his every hope was frustrated, his every plan extinguished, and his ambition thwarted. Once more the Bahá’ís have been witness to the avenging wrath of God and His continuous protection of the Bahá’í community and its institutions.

Such an event cannot but inspire the believers in all countries to arise and insure the “complete success of the Crusade.”

—U.S. National Spiritual Assembly
Beloved Friends:

Assurance of victory in the remaining goals of the World Crusade is established for the American Bahá'í community through the glorious achievements already won. In 1953 these achievements appeared to be remote, if not impossible. Let us summarize the record, which should be an intimate part of our Bahá'í knowledge.

Of twenty-nine virgin areas to be opened, twenty-six areas have been opened, the remaining three being inaccessible. The most recent victory has been the placing of a pioneer in Spitzbergen.

In the consolidation areas allotted to the United States, two national assemblies have been formed (Alaska and France) and eleven regional national assemblies are established.

More than twenty languages have been translated and published.

All three Temple sites (Johannesburg, Panama, Stockholm) have been acquired.

Thirty-three out of thirty-four Hazíratu'll-Quds have been acquired. All thirty-four endowments have been purchased.

Eighty-two out of the necessary 100 local assemblies in the United States have been incorporated.

One hundred ninety-seven local assemblies out of the necessary 300 in the United States have been elected.

The Temple landscaping has been completed.

The first Temple accessory, the Bahá'í Home, is nearly completed.

Ninety-four American pioneers have achieved the distinction of nomination by the Guardian as Knights of Bahá'u'lláh.

Three hundred and fourteen American pioneers were serving in foreign fields as of April 21, 1958.

The Primal Goal

The Crusade tasks still to be achieved revolve around the all-important Bahá'í goal—the election of the Universal House of Justice, the Pillars of which are the various national spiritual assemblies. Thus, the existing regional assemblies are to be replaced by national assemblies in each country: Europe, 11; Western Hemisphere, 20; South Pacific, 1.

A total of thirty-two national spiritual assemblies are to be formed by the American Bahá'í community in cooperation with the regional assemblies now actively functioning.

The recent Intercontinental Conference in Chicago made appeals for pioneers from the participating assemblies of the Western Hemisphere: Central America, the minimum need is seventeen pioneers this year; Greater Antilles, eleven pioneers; Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela, forty-five pioneers; Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, a considerable number.

American Bahá'ís through their National Assembly are to make generous contributions to the cost of Temples in Frankfort and Sydney.

The specific requirements of the homefront, to be presented to the friends in a series of communications, are inseparably intertwined with the goals abroad, since the homefront is the source of the pioneers and the budgets needed to bring the Crusade tasks to completion.

Our Supreme Privilege

No people since the dawn of history has had the God-given privilege bestowed upon the American Baha'is of being the decisive factor in the formation of the Universal House of Justice. The unerring guidance assured to its members, the powers and functions assigned to this institution, the vital role it must assume in fulfilling the prophecies concerning the coming of the Kingdom on earth—all these considerations inspire the hearts with clear vision, mature capacity, and inflexible resolve.

Actually, the destiny of the human race is involved in our individual services and our community undertakings during the next few years. This is the hour when the latent heroism of the soul sustained by God will become manifest, and the idols of the vain imaginations of the worldly people will be broken forever and the power of the Manifestation of God will rule mankind.

May each and every American Baha'i ponder the hour in which he is living, and turn with all his power to the Supreme!

For this mission the beloved Guardian labored during thirty-six years in order to prepare the community chosen and blessed by 'Abdu'l-Baha. In assuring the victory of the World Crusade we demonstrate our devotion to Shoghi Effendi and our worthiness to receive the blessings he showers upon us from the realms above.

Reports to Hands in Holy Land

The Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land request all national and regional assemblies to publish the following instructions in their Newsletters:

"The assemblies and believers are kindly requested to address all reports of the progress of the work of the Faith to the Hands in the Holy Land, as a group, and not in the names of or addresses through any one of the Hands serving here. As there are no officers or secretaries amongst us, and as we wish to serve our most beloved Guardian in complete unity, forgetful of personality but mindful only of our sacred responsibility, we request the friends from now on to address all letters sending us messages, or calling our attention to certain matters, enclosing reports or contributions, to THE HANDS OF THE FAITH, P.O. Box 155, Haifa, Israel. Any contribution should be made out to the BAHÁ'Í CUSTODIANS FUND, as it facilitates our arrangements here. Each of us will be happy always to hear from our dearly-loved friends as individuals; but matters pertaining to the Cause of God and its work which the believers desire to call to the attention of the Hands cannot be taken up officially unless addressed to us, as a body."

Additional Reports of 1958 National Conventions

The Convention opened with prayers in English by the Knight of Bahá'u'lláh, Mrs. Edith Craig, in Persian by S. A. Suleimani, and in Japanese by Naomi Hashimoto. Sixteen of the nineteen delegates attended; the Convention was deprived of the presence of the delegate from Taiwan, and the two from Korea, both of who had exerted an arduous heartbreaking three-month effort to get passports and visas in vain. From every other area in North East Asia, however, except Macau and the yet-unopened territories of Hainan and Sakhalin Islands, Baha'is had come.

Under the chairmanship of Yadullah Rafeat, the Convention proceeded with efficiency, and at the same time in a free atmosphere of consultation. The first of the Convention was highlighted by Hand of the Cause Agnes Alexander's talk on the functions of the Custodians of the Faith. Her last words echoed the Master's plea to spread continuously the Teachings and diffuse the "holy fragrances."

North East Asia

With the last and most powerful of the beloved Guardian's messages to the Bahá'ís of North East Asia in his own handwriting set before them in photostatic copies, and with the presence of his dearly loved and revered Hand of the Cause Agnes Alexander and Auxiliary Board Member William Maxwell to further guide and inspire them, the assembled delegates to the Second Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of North East Asia in Tokyo, Japan, answered the roll call on the morning of April 25, 1958.

The world-wide message of the Custodians of the Faith uplifted the Convention to fresh resolve, and all eyes turned with broadened vision from the overall objectives of the Crusade to the assigned tasks revealed by the beloved Guardian in his Six-Year subsidiary plan for their particular area.

As the record of the past year was read, his words of admonishment and encouragement took on a solemn meaning; his sacrifice and the legacy of the Guardianship had thrown our shortcomings into sharp relief.

His statement that "nothing short of complete dedication to the objectives of the Six-Year Plan you are called upon to fulfill, and of the utmost sacrifice on your part... can ensure the success to which I confidently look forward..." reminded us we had been given the clear requirement and secret of success. More deeply understanding that gratitude for being offered the unique opportunity to execute the Plan of God could be vindicated only by obedient fulfillment of his unerring guidance, the Convention devoted itself to the election and the deliberation on the ways and means of prosecuting its part of the Spiritual Crusade.

Cable on Memorial Fund

In response to the cable from the Hands in Haifa, which offered yet a further privilege, that of contributing to the monument for the resting place of Shoghi Effendi in London, the Convention came to the agreement that contributions should express a single, unified spirit of all the Bahá'ís of North East Asia. The attendants at the Convention therefore restrained themselves and, for the most part, reserved their pledge for the combined contribution of the community.

Ridván Feast

The Baha’is of Tokyo and Yokohama were hosts at the Feast of Ridván. It was a fellowship which connected hearts beyond the confines of that gathering, across the expanses of the Pacific Ocean to the brother communities in the Antipodes. It was on this occasion that Habib Sabet showed the motion pictures of the Sydney Intercontinental Conference.

Public Proclamation During Convention

The opportunity for the diffusion of the Light of the Faith was eagerly seized upon by those responsible for the Convention arrangements. There was splendid newspaper publicity in the Tokyo and national newspapers of Japan, as well as radio announcements on three consecutive days.

A public congress on the second night of the Convention featured Hiroyasu Takano and Philip Marangella, who spoke in Japanese and English, respectively. The mild but compelling manner of Mr. Takano harmonized with the dynamic and eloquent speech of Mr. Marangella for a unity of appeal that could not fail to affect every listener.

National Assembly Election

The election of the new National Spiritual Assembly marked the midpoint and spiritual climax of the Convention. The Assembly and its officers include: William Maxwell Jr., chairman; Hiroyasu Takano, vice-chairman; Yadullah Rafeat, secretary; Mrs. Barbara Sims, recording secretary; Philip Marangella, treasurer; and Miss Agnes Alexander, Michitoshi Zenimoto, Nourreddin Montazr, and Dr. David Earl.

Progress of Six-Year Plan

With hearts and minds correctly oriented by the impelling message from the Custodians of the Faith, the Convention proceeded to focus attention upon the record of achievement in North East Asia for the past year. The number of adherents increased by more than 30 per cent; five new local spiritual assemblies came into being; six new centers were established; incorporation of the National Spiritual Assembly was practically consummated; negotiations for the incorporation of firmly-grounded local spiritual assemblies were initiated; a National Bahá’í Fund was begun and its expenditure of 1,399,000 Yen and of $8,456.00 balanced; the holding of regular firesides and of special conferences throughout the entire area indicated the teaching phase of the process of consolidation in the previously opened territories was not neglected; the number of separate translation projects in Korea was raised to eleven; the publication of a second edition of a comprehensive study plan was put to use; four translation projects were completed in Japan, bringing the total number of translations to seven; in Taiwan the booklet Bahá’í World Faith was revised and printed; summer schools in Korea, Japan, and Taiwan met with unprecedented success; a Bahá’í burial ground was acquired in Japan; the introduction of the Faith to the Japanese islands of Hokkaido, Shikoku, Naoshima, and Teshima, and the Korean island of Chaeju raised the number of islands opened to the Faith to seven, not to mention the Pescadores Islands and Okinawa Island visited by pioneer Philip Marangella; plans to acquire a site for the first Maghribí’-Adhkár of this region on the lofty slopes of Mt. Fuji in Japan were almost concluded.

Attainment of Remaining Goals

The Convention then turned to the challenging requirements set by the Guardian: “An effort,” he had written, “unprecedented in its scope and intensity, must be exerted to attain, speedily and completely, the specific objectives of this Plan.”

The imperative nature of those objectives had been underlined by the convention message from the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly when it expressed hope for the early completion of those goals. Determined to redeem the shortcomings of the past, the delegates deliberated on the action that must lead to the attainment of these remaining objectives.

Delegates at the National Convention of the Baha’is of North East Africa in April 1958, reported in Bahá’í News for July.
India and Burma

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of India and Burma for 1958-1959 includes the following members, listed with their elected officers: G. A. Amreliwala, chairman; Dr. M. E. Lukmani, vice-chairman; Hooshmand Fatheazam, secretary; A. A. Butt, assistant secretary; R. N. Shah, treasurer; and K. J. Hakimian, Dr. K. K. Bhargava, S. Chatterjea, and Mrs. Shirin Bomman.

Scandinavia and Finland

The Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Scandinavia and Finland, meeting in Stockholm, Sweden, elected the following members to the National Spiritual Assembly for 1958-1959: John Nielsen, chairman; Palle Bischoff, vice-chairman; Gerd Strand, corresponding secretary; Lotus Grace Nielsen, recording and assistant secretary; Gudrun Ofstedgaard, treasurer; and Modesta Hvide, Hans Oedemyr, Lisbeth Andersen, and Jean Bonn.

As Finland has no member on this Regional Assembly, the National Assembly, meeting after the convention, pledged special vigilance to the needs and requirements of this country for the coming year.

Twenty-seven Bahá'ís attending this Convention went to the Temple ground for a program of prayers. On May 2 the following cablegram was sent to our friends and spiritual parents in the United States: “Purchase completed May 2, loving greetings American Bahá'ís gathered conference whose sacrifice made this possible. NSA SCAN-FIN.”

Southeast Asia

After a year of functioning under their newly-formed Regional Spiritual Assembly, the Bahá'ís of Southeast Asia met in Singapore for their Second Annual Convention, April 29-May 2.

A year of operations brought to the foreground the need for consultation on many topics. Of principal concern was the matter of enlarging the Bahá'í community by increasing the number of centers and local spiritual assemblies; acquiring of Haírátu'l-

The impact of the successive communications from Haifa, of the accounts of the Sydney Intercontinental Conference, of the many messages from Auxiliary Board members and believers from Japan, Korea, and America all stirred those present to reconsecrate themselves to the prosecution of their assigned role in the Spiritual Crusade. All hearts were drawn together by a prayer by Hand of the Cause Agnes Alexander, and the Convention closed with the inspiring words of the Guardian urging us “to arise” still resounding in our minds and hearts.

—John McHenry
Quds, endowments, burial grounds; publication of literature in the various needed languages; and the securing of recognition of Bahá'í marriage and Holy Days, as well as the incorporating of local assemblies. All of these goals are contained in the Six-Year Plan which the Bahá'ís of this region adopted. Emphasis was placed upon a need for deepening work among the many new groups and assemblies, and for understanding of the importance of maintaining a regular flow of funds.

There was earnest discussion on ways to facilitate settlement of two remaining World Crusade goals—the Cocos Islands and Nicobar Island. There is also a need to establish the Faith in British North Borneo.

A cable from the Hands of the Faith in Haifa brought joy to the friends with its acknowledgement of the victories won and the statement that these were “comparable (to) news (of) African continent.” One of the pioneers, Dr. K. M. Fozdar, who had made many of these victories possible, passed away suddenly just a few days prior to the convention. In speaking of him Mr. A. Samimi, secretary of the convention, stated that he was the first pioneer to Singapore and had taught many of the believers in Malaya and Singapore.

The newly elected Regional Spiritual Assembly for Southeast Asia consists of Chairman, Mrs. Shirin Fozdar; Vice-Chairman, Mr. K. H. Payman; Secretary, Mr. A. Samimi; Treasurer, Mr. Kishin Khemani; and Dr. R. Muhajer, Mr. Leong Tat Chee, Mr. Yankee Leong, Jamshed Fozdar, and Mr. G. Saurajen.

Universal Auxiliary Language
A Study and Lecture Reference

The Bahá’í principle that a universal auxiliary language would be chosen and taught in schools throughout the world has not been particularly stressed by believers in recent years, the reason no doubt being the greatly decreased interest in Esperanto. Nevertheless, the teachings make it clear that this principle has a decisive influence in the establishment of a world society.

A recently published work, One Language for the World, by Mario Pei (the Devin-Adair Company, New York, 1958) offers Bahá'í students and public speakers a well integrated exposition of the need for such a language, the past attempts to solve the problem, and the nature of its future solution. This book is commended as an impartial, scholarly, yet simply written treatise admirably suited as background information for Bahá'ís.
A typical North Sea storm on the Frisian Islands. Shoghi Effendi, in his 1954 Convention Message, referred to the Frisian Islands as "the wind-swept and inhospitable archipelagos of the North Sea."

The Frisian Islands, partly belonging to Holland and partly to Germany, were virgin goals assigned to the German National Spiritual Assembly and to be opened during the Ten-Year Plan.

Inspired at the Intercontinental Conference of Stockholm in July, 1953, three pioneers left before the closing of the Holy Year for those remote regions in the North Sea. Gertrud Ankersmit went to Texel; Ursula v. Brunn, with her little daughter Gisela, chose Wyk on the Isle of Föhr; and Elsa Maria Grossmann moved to Westerland on Sylt. Gertrud Ankersmit tried very hard to get settled on Texel. She made several good contacts, had firesides, but could not get a lasting job, and when finally she had fallen very ill, she was forced to leave. Ursula v. Brunn, with Gisela, remained one year and a half on the island of Föhr, where she made valuable contacts and gave the Message to many people. They were followed by Elsa Klagas, who got a satisfying job in Wyk and has, up to this date, tirelessly worked to contact people and make them acquainted with the Faith.

The writer of these lines arrived in Westerland on September 24, 1953. When she left the train—for the Isle of Sylt is connected with the European Continent by a twelve kilometres-long dam throughout the flat sea—the clock was just striking noon, exactly the time for prayer. In this very moment that little island became included in the big Bahá’í circle because Bahá’u’lláh chose to put His finger on its soil!

After one year, on the Báb’s Birthday, the first believer, a lady from Hamburg living in Westerland, adhered to the Cause. Since then we have had many firesides and several study classes, and even had many opportunities of mentioning the Faith in a greater circle of interested people. Two Hands of the Cause, Dr. Mühlschlegel and Dr. Grossmann, lent their kind assistance—the latter also to Wyk on Föhr. Their loving spirit remained with us as a lasting source of inspiration. Lately our friend Bertha Grünewald, a Bahá’í from the Continent, is planning to settle in Westerland.

Several times the Bahá’ís of this region have gathered on the isles of Föhr and Sylt, in order to discuss problems, which are so much the same in both places, and to double our strength and give us mutual consolation. Pioneering in these spots is hard work. Our daily experiences are mostly disappointing and again and again we have to make a new start.

As a rule the people of these islands calmly listen to the news of the Cause when they hear it, even during a longer period, but you cannot in the least realize what they are thinking of in their inmost hearts. Only, in the moment they recognize its claim, they retire and withdraw. This happens to us again and again, almost with mathematical accuracy.

Yet there is quite another happening worthy of record, for it fills the heart with joy and hope. There was a fine and very cultured old lady of pure Frisian origin and belonging to one of the oldest families of this place. She, with the swiftness of lightning, grasped the truth of the Cause, its authority and weight. She loved to listen to its teachings, to inhale their loving atmosphere, and talked about them to others. When finally she fell very ill, still in her fleeing earthly days the Teachings gave her consolation and she mentioned them to the very last lapse of her life. After having passed away from this world, we feel her spirit ever stronger amongst us than ever before and trust that the Beloved of our hearts may bestow upon her the full knowledge of His Glory!

The ancestors of the Frisian folks were mostly navigators, intelligent, keen, and bold, and they loved their freedom more than their own lives, as said in one of their escutcheons: "Rather dead, than slave!" But many of them also were pirates and did not care about leading astray the ships seeking refuge at their islands from storms and tempests of the sea, and to kill the mariners, in order to rob their vessels and their loading. Of course they never did such things to any of their own people. Quite on the contrary, they unhesitatingly risked their lives, in order to save them from sea-troubles. There is another old device, mirroring forth still another side of the Frisian character, which runs: "A pure heart—a clear horizon!"

It seems to me that many of the attributes of the Frisian ancestors have nowadays been transmitted to their great-grandchildren; but in the last hundred years some of these little islands have become seaside resorts and a great love for materialism and making money as quickly as possible has brought quite a new aspect to the development of the Frisian character. Only future time will show what may come out of it, but we know, spiritually seen, that it will depend only upon how people accept the Cause of God.

The landscape of these regions is a very beautiful one, rough in a way, but in summer very rich through its variety of colors and its ever-changing play of light, and clouds, and winds. It may happen to you that, being—perhaps in autumn—quite alone on the solitary, endless dunes and perceiving nothing but this primary landscape with its infinite sky and sea, you suddenly feel that tremendous, almost annihilating loneliness as it might have been experienced by a first man in a first creation.

The story of the opening of the Frisian Islands to the Cause of God is, as yet experienced, not a very crimson-colored one, when compared with many others from more radiant pioneer places. This was for a long time a heavy load on us here, but only the fact that our beloved Guardian was fully aware of the situation and often transmitted us his inspiration and loving comfort, lightened its weight. We think of the little white lighthouses everywhere on these islands, looking over the sea calmly and firmly, and fully indifferent to the storms and tempests around them, just showing the seeking sailor the right route. This exactly is our way: to be like light-houses of His Cause for whomsoever seeks His Path. And this finally, if God willing, may lead to His spiritual victory.

Hand of the Cause Leroy Ioas
Appeals for the Homefront

One of the joyous experiences of the delegates and visitors to the U.S. Fiftieth Annual Convention was to see and hear the revered Hand of the Cause, Leroy C. Ioas, who is in the United States for several months of rest following his years of strenuous services at the World Center of the Faith, as assistant secretary to the beloved Guardian and secretary of the International Bahá'í Council.

Always intensely interested in teaching, Mr. Ioas participated briefly in the consultation on this subject at the Convention, pointing out that even during the period of the great dispersion of Bahá'ís to all parts of the world the beloved Guardian talked continually about the homefront and the need of replenishing it so that the lifeblood might continue to stream out from America to all parts of the globe.

He quoted Shoghi Effendi as saying that if the believers would do as he said, would follow his instructions and become the agency through which he could work, they would be amazed at the victories that they would win for the Faith. His special plea to the friends was that we become the reeds through which the spirit of the Guardian can function in the world and become the medium for salvation to a dying society "because that is the main task of the remaining five years of this great global Crusade."

"Ours is the privilege," said Mr. Ioas, "to be the handful of people who will bring to realization the dream of the prophets of old for which Daniel himself set the date of 1963. When we gather at the World Conclave in that year, let it be not a handful of Bahá'ís but an evidence of the dynamic spiritual power of those who are resurrected in the Name of the Lord, so that the glory of the Lord might cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, and the universal spirit of Bahá'u'lláh might bring salvation to the multitudes over the face of the earth."

Dr. Giachery Shares Platform
With Phoenix Religious Leaders

A public meeting on the theme, "The Day God Declared Himself to Man," held in the auditorium of the Phoenix library building on May 26, was the occasion for a wider and more effective proclamation of the Faith ever possible in that city. Sponsored by the Local Bahá'í Assembly, the program featured a panel discussion shared by a rabbi of the leading Jewish congregation of Phoenix, a canon from the Episcopal Cathedral, a speaker for the Moslem Faith, and

dr. ugo giachery as Bahá'í representative. The date coincided as nearly as possible with the anniversary of the Declaration of the Báb and the Jewish Holy Day of Shevous.

Each participant limited his remarks to the high points of the Faith to the representing. Members of the au-duration were invited to submit writ-ted questions for discussion by all four panel members. The questions provided a unique opportunity for a convincing and clear presentation by

dr. giachery of the conclusive answers which the Faith offers to the confusing religious issues of our time.

These questions were: "Do you believe the peoples of the world will ever be united racially or religiously?"; "Do you believe in life after death?" and "Do you believe the Prophet of your Faith to be divine?"

As the guests arrived in the beautiful auditorium which is a part of the growing civic center in Phoenix, they were greeted by youth of Phoenix and adjoining communities who served as ushers and hostesses.

Chairman for the program was aiTon Thomas, executive director of the Phoenix Urban League and a Bahá'í. Equal consideration was given to each speaker and no Bahá'í literature was offered or displayed.

Printed programs carried information regarding the identity of each of the speakers and the congregations they represented. In the case of the Bahá'ís, the phone number of the secretary of the local assembly was included.

Intense Preparations Made

Preparations for this program included newspaper coverage, advance radio and television interviews with the chairman regarding the educational quality of the program the Bahá'ís were offering to the public, posters placed in all important locations, mailing of invitations, phone calls and personal contacts, an-ouncements in several churches, and meetings for prayers by the Bahá'ís each noon for a week preceeding the occasion.

The blessings conferred upon this effort began with the arrival of

dr. and MRS. Giachery a few hours before the program, the attendance at the meeting of a capacity audience of approximately 300 persons showing obvious interest in the subject, and and the opportunity for radio and television appearances for dr. gia-chery the following day, at which time direct questions regarding the Faith cleared the way for a broader presentation of the Faith than ever before possible through this medium.

First Bahá'í Funeral Service
Conducted in New Zealand

The first funeral to be performed entirely by Bahá'ís was recently conducted in New Zealand, following the passing of Mrs. Helen Parkin of

The service was conducted by two women, and throughout the reading of the Bahá'í Writings, the large congregation listened in rapt attention.

It says much for the beauty of the readings and the great impression which they made that no one thought it incongruous for a funeral service to be conducted by women. This, for such a conservative country, was a remarkable tribute both to the manner in which the proceedings were conducted and to the power of the divinely inspired words which many of those present heard for the first time.

Polynesian from Tonga Island
Attends Sydney Conference

"It would be a great contribution to the world-wide character of our Faith to have people of this race active in this service and representing what their race has to give as time goes on in the joint Bahá'í national and international councils." So wrote the Guardian concerning the Polynesian people to these pioneers on May 1, 1956.

On March 3, 1958, the Guardian's wish was fulfilled when a Tongan believer left to attend the Sydney Intercontinental Conference. His going, like so many initial steps in the development of the Faith, was not achieved without obstacles and difficulties.

In November 1957, after the news of the five Intercontinental Conferences was received here, during a routine report of progress to the Asia Teaching Committee, it was as if someone prompted this pioneer to write, "How I wish it might be possible for someone, perhaps Latu, to go to the Djakarta Conference." Early in February 1958 a letter received here from the Asia Teaching Committee stated "we would like to explore with you the thought you mentioned." The thought was "explored" at once by the nine believers of the temporary Local Assembly here, who decided they would like to send someone to the Sydney Conference if financial help could be given, and the fairest way would be for everyone to vote for the representative. Carefully worded cables flew back and forth between here and the Asia Teaching Committee. Ballots were sent out to the believers on other islands with letters explaining the whole affair.

While waiting for the out-of-town ballots to be received, it was learned with dismay that the letters and ballots sent to two believers temporarily on an island eighty miles away were still in the post office here. No boat was going for about two weeks. It was impossible to explain what was happening by telegram; neither could the two believers vote by telegram. So the voting meeting had to be held without those two votes as voting and travel formalities would not wait.

The result of the voting was that Latu, one of the two believers eighty miles away, who knew nothing of what had transpired, was chosen. A brief telegram was sent asking his acceptance and requesting him to be vaccinated immediately, if he could go. The most important step, however, was to cable the Australian National Assembly to secure cabled landing permission from the Australian Immigration Department for Latu, without which transportation could not be purchased. The days ticked by. No reply from Australia was received concerning the permit. The only boat from Tonga enabling Latu to reach Australia in time for the Conference was to leave March 3.

On February 19 Latu managed to get passage on a schooner to bring him back here, and as he boarded the vessel, our letter telling him what it was all about, was handed to him—after two weeks' delay!

On his arrival here we again cabled the Australian National Assembly about the landing permit and still no reply came. We had been trying to carry out this business, as all else has been done here, in accordance with the Guardian's advice that the work in Tonga should be carried on very discreetly. However, by February 25, with only three business days remaining before the boat left, we were desperate; so after consultation, we decided to invoke the aid of the British Consul. Accordingly an urgent cable was sent from his office. A day or so later, the cabled permission "to attend the Bahá'í International Conference" was received. All our efforts to "keep quiet" were thus blown to the winds, for there is no such thing as private communication—what the office boy knows, pretty soon everybody knows.

However, the way was cleared to purchase the transportation on almost the last day it could be bought.
On February 28 in a tropical thunderstorm and torrential rain, the believers came “to bring their presents for Latu,” some of them so drenched they had to be dried off by the kitchen fire before we could have the meeting. They hadn’t quite raised the amount they had set themselves, and the cables had cost more than we anticipated. The cash gift was presented to Latu, who received it in great humility and asked the prayers of the believers during his important mission.

Then their sense of humour bubbled forth. “Well, Latu, you’ll be in Sydney during the Fast—you don’t need to eat, so that will be enough money!” Latu, who weighs about three hundred pounds, laughed with the rest, for he does keep the Fast although it will be interrupted by his travel time. He was to visit the believers in Samoa and Fiji en route and carried with him, for printing in Australia, the Tongan manuscript of the chapters from Some Answered Questions which is to be our next publication; also the letter from the Guardian which is quoted at the beginning of this story, which to Latu is more precious than words can tell, for he realizes, with great humility, that he was the one chosen to first fulfill the Guardian’s hope.

First Sahara Desert Tribesman
Enrolls in Baha’i Faith

The Sahara—almost since history began the minds of men have been fascinated by this vast, trackless area of stones, sand, and sun. From the Nile valley it stretches a formidable five thousand kilometers to the salt waves of the Atlantic, and from the shores of the Mediterranean, almost two thousand to the dusty brushland of pre-equatorial Africa—stark sterile peaks jutting three kilometers into the cloudless sky, and endless seas of drifting sand—Death Valley the magnitude of the entire United States.

Most of the western half of this burning wasteland has, since antiquity, been dominated by the Tuareg peoples—the proud, hostile Berber tribes known worldwide as the veiled bluemen of the Sahara. These nomadic masters of the desert have survived until today, maintaining their very distinct culture by means of a series of developments including a written form of their Temajegh language, which facilitates the most vital communication about desert and oasis conditions; sedentary slave communities in oasis and mountainous areas; a matrilineal organization which maintains a high degree of purity of race; and a ruthless plundering of all surrounding societies.

For more than a thousand years the Tuareg have each summer established a seasonal camp on the shores of the Niger River in the vicinity of what is now Timbuctoo. After the brief autumn rains they return once again to their desert retreats with their serfs and flocks, leaving behind only a slave community to coax a meager grain crop from the parched sand.

Through the centuries this seasonal camp, Timbuctoo, has grown into a permanent trading community, drawing residents successively from the Ghana, Mandingo, Arab, and Songhoi Empires, and exchanging the products which arrive by water from the south for those which arrive by caravan from the north.

Islam was introduced in the eleventh century; “western civilization,” about fifty years ago. The people, including the Arab slaves, the Ghibbi, and the Tuareg slaves, the Bela, are all nominally Muslim, but the practices incorporate also beliefs in fetishes, genii, and vampires.

Heterogeneous peoples, concepts, and cultures have vied for centuries to dominate the scene in Timbuctoo and each has, in its turn, risen to a position of dominance only to subside again into the eternal sands—and always the noble Tuareg has hovered on the outskirts, observing, entered momentarily, but always disappearing again into his unchallenged domain—the searing hot sand and stones of the vast, trackless Sahara.

Eighteen hundred kilometers to the north on Riddâvân 112 Rabat, the first Local Spiritual Assembly was formed by the mutual declaration of the nine servants of Bahá’u’lláh in that city. This establishment was not unusual. An official stamp was designed and adopted, stationery printed, records made, and a photograph was dispatched to Haifa—another achievement, but just one more among many. The nascent assembly turned to its teaching tasks and within weeks two new members were enrolled.

Then a letter was received from the Holy Land. Shoghi Effendi, beloved Guardian of the Cause, expressed his sincere hope that from Rabat the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh would be “spread throughout Morocco.” The friends were greatly pleased to have so great an aspiration for their future visited upon them; but pleasure soon turned to puzzlement and then concern, for why should Rabat have been chosen for this singular honor—and how was it to be affected?

The year 112 passed, as did 113, and much of 114. The teaching activities had slowed to an occasional contact, but no serious students of the Cause. And so it was when Asa­dek was invited to tea, expectations were not eminent.

This young student was stopping in Morocco on his return trip from Cairo, where he had, for several years, sought the explanations to Qur’ánic prophecies. He had much in common with a local Bahá’í, S. Riaz Rouhani, who had spent his early and student years in that Egyptian city, and soon reservations were replaced by a warm friendship. Each Sura and verse that Riaz explained had the dual effect of intensifying this new friend’s interest and increasing his respect for his newfound source of wisdom. He began to devour books and to feel that perhaps he was at last discovering the Truth that he had sought for so long and for which he had travelled so far from his familiar Almachra. His search became increasingly intense and was culminated three weeks before Riddâvân when he, Asadek Abba, was enrolled in Rabat as the first Tuareg believer in the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh. His ardor, sincerity, and intelligence so impressed his fellow believers that he was chosen to serve on the Local Spiritual Assembly.

He intends to return to his tribe, Kel Antessar, to teach. It is then that the people are scattered throughout the desert and the teaching work can best be affected. He is, in the meantime, sagaciously preparing himself with a more profound grasp of his new-found Faith, and meanwhile has won the friendship of a fellow desert inhabitant, a Mauretanian.

It is known, historically, that during the seventeenth century Morocco’s influence extended to include Timbuctoo and the surrounding Sudan. Could this “Greater Morocco” be that to which our Beloved Guardian had reference in his letter to Rabat? If so, the first step toward the accomplishment of this majestic aspiration has been taken, but then, it must also include Rio de Oro, and, with this in mind, we asked Moh­amed, the Mauretanian, how far was his home oasis, Agjoujatt, from Rio de Oro. He replied, “Not too far—just twelve days—by camel.”

N.W. Africa Reports Enrollments, Formation of New Assemblies

The infinite variations in the development of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh in Northwest Africa are but suggested by the many facets of this gem that this month sparkles with the brilliance of the One Light, a few of which are shared herewith.

One of the oldest established communities in all of Africa, Tunis, is now, after its many years of inactivity, coming into renewed vitality. Under the guiding direction of the Regional Teaching Committee Number One (there are 10 RTC’s in Northwest Africa) the friends here have quietly been carrying out a consolidation plan for some time. Groups have been established in Kef and Sfax. In January a new believer was reported in Kef and in April Mr. Ghadimi, pioneering in that city, reported the declarations of two new believers. This brings the total to seven adults in that goal city.

In the meantime, Tunis has also seen the addition of a new face as a result of the new activity. Recently the friends, here, have in addition made several trips down the east coast to Sfax, and it is hoped that soon the results of this renewed spirit will appear there, too.

Algeria

Algeria is a country in which the passion of ultranationalism is currently dominating the minds of men, and in which every unfamiliar activity and word is suspected of political connotation. Under these circumstances our courageous pioneers in Algiers are carrying out a plan to consolidate the basis of the Bahá‘í Faith and spread the tranquilizing influence of its Divine Message.

The goal cities, Constantine and Bone, recently were visited by Mr. Attar. He renewed old contacts and spoke with many new acquaintances about the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh. After sixteen days in these cities, he returned to Algiers, leaving behind several interested persons and some Bahá’í books.

Morocco

The friends throughout Morocco contributed to a fund established to defray the expenses of African believers who otherwise might not have been able to attend the historic conference in Kampala. The contributions totaled 123,735 francs (about $300), and were forwarded by the Regional Teaching Committee here to the Central East Africa National Spiritual Assembly. A letter from the Hands of the Cause in Africa acknowledged receipt and praised the spirit of this contribution. This, in turn, has inspired the friends to establish another fund in Morocco to assure that at least three indigenous Moroccan believers will be permitted to attend the forthcoming Frankfurt Conference.

In Ceuta, the Spanish controlled Moroccan port across the straits from Gibraltar, two new believers, Mr. and Mrs. Augusto Martin, have brought with them a revivifying influence. Your reporter visited with these new friends in April and can testify that the new enthusiasm among the Bahá’ís in that otherwise sleepy city is indeed an unmistakable experience.

Elsewhere in Morocco, the Kenitra Local Spiritual Assembly was formed this Ridván, and the very active friends in Meknes were successful in their aspirations only at the eleventh hour, when three contacts requested enrollment. The new Meknes Assembly in the North, and the group with our good friend and very active teacher, Mr. Djalali, in the south, in Marrakech, now pose two springboards to the ultimate goal in Morocco—the Berber heartland—the High Atlas Mountains. The friends in Morocco have built the bases for this spiritual conquest patiently and well for the past five years—surely, the ultimate victory will be theirs!

Nigerian and Cameroons

The best news from Northwest Africa this month comes from our revered Hand of the Cause, Enoch Olinga, who wrote very briefly, just before Ridván: “About another 70 have declared in Mamfe since January, making a total of about 242 new believers in six months. The following are new groups ready for local assemblies: Ossing, Taipa, Tinta, Talii, Tutumbu, Boa and Etoko in the British Cameroons, and Akpabuyo in Nigeria.

“Three important chiefs: Chief Fon-gang, Chief Tataw, Chief James Enow, all of Mamfe, have not only accepted the Cause, but are serving it with zeal and zest.”

To this should also be added that the Regional Teaching Committee Number Ten, in addition to organizing the teaching work so well in their area, have demonstrated their vision by sending Mr. Willie Enang to pioneer in Ghana. Mr. Enang has an outstanding record of achievements in Nigeria, and has settled in Kumasi, capitol of the Ashanti district of Ghana.

Coloane Island. Colony of Macau, Opened to Bahá’í Faith

The Portuguese Colony of Macau consists of three geographical units: the two islands Taipa and Coloane, and the peninsula where the city of Macau is located. Formerly this peninsula was an island, but it has been connected with the mainland by reclaimed land. The city is one of the oldest foreign settlements on the China Coast and is situated about fifty miles south of Hong Kong. The islands of Taipa and Coloane are four and eight miles further south of Macau.

In Macau is located the historical spot where the first Peace Treaty between China and the United States was signed in 1844. The site is an old Buddhist Temple, and is marked with a plaque. The stone table where the Treaty was signed is in excellent condition.

For the Ten-Year Plan our beloved Guardian designated Macau as a virgin goal, and so the first pioneer, Mrs. Frances Heller, arrived here October 20, 1953, from the New Delhi Conference. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Scherer left their home in Wauwatosa, Wisc., on September 25 headed for Macau as their goal, arriving on December 8, 1953. In April 1954, the three pioneers visited the Island of Taipa and proclaimed the Faith there.

Although a number of Bahá’ís had already visited Coloane during previous years for business reasons—these being John Chang, Sergeant Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Greensboro, N.C., incorporated on April 2, 1939.

Julio Mata, and Harry Yim—yet the Faith had not been proclaimed, and so on June 19, 1958, Harry Yim and Carl Scherer visited Coloane and officially opened this island to the Bahá'í Faith. Mr. Yim had the unique honor and distinction of being the first Bahá'í to give the Message on this picturesque island when the story was told at the Black Sand Beach Tea House to Mrs. Wong, Po Kwong.

Coloane is a lovely spot with many wooded hills covered with beautiful pine trees. Along the “Bund,” or esplanade, a row of ancient banyan trees enhances the charm of this Chinese village and provides shade during the hot summer months. On this island a number of wealthy Macauns have built summer homes and a number of fine bathing beaches are located. There are several other small villages besides the village of Coloane, where, in the future the words of Bahá'u'lláh will be heard to arouse all mankind from its long spiritual slumber.

First Sicilian Community Contributes New Translations

Taormina, located at the south east end of Sicily, almost reached assembly status within the first year of the World Crusade. However, for material reasons, most of the members were compelled to seek positions in other parts of Italy, and all efforts were then concentrated upon Palermo, the capital city, where an American pioneer family served prior to pioneering in France.

Unlike Taormina, Palermo required four years of continuous effort before the first declarations began. After the enrollment of the first resident couple, other declarations followed successively every few months. The arrival of the first Persian pioneer family, a mother and two sons, descendants of followers of the Báb and of one of the four Hands of Bahá'u'lláh, served to accelerate the teaching effort and to attract three promising students of architecture to the Faith. Hand of the Cause Dr. Ugo Giachery also helped prepare and enroll these friends. The loving, ever-prayerful encouragement of the Italo-Swiss National Assembly and the European Teaching Committee; visits from Bahá'í teachers and friends; and the immediate response to the last-minute call of the European Teaching Committee on the part of another youthful descendant of a Hand of Bahá'u'lláh brought the formation of the first Bahá'í local Spiritual Assembly in Sicily on the fifth Ridván of the Ten-Year Plan.

At present the Community consists of eleven Bahá'ís—the Assembly of four Italians, four Persians and the American Knight of Bahá'u'lláh, plus the first Sicilian youth and the young American pioneer. Six of the youthful members attend the University of Palermo, gather weekly to plan special meetings (such as World Youth Day) for their friends in Palermo and to prepare their monthly News Letter, in hopes of stimulating greater activity in the promulgation of the Teachings among the Italo-Swiss Bahá'í youth. So far, three letters have been mailed to seventy youth centers in the two languages, Italian and English. Three of these youth have already translated, typed, and illustrated four copies of Living Today for Tomorrow's World, placed three of the copies in serviceable plastic-paged books for immediate use in Palermo and sent the fourth copy to the European Teaching Committee to approve and correct in order that they may have it printed and ready for use at the Frankfurt Conference for Italian speaking children. (All the Bahá'ís in Palermo hope to attend the Frankfurt Conference en masse in July.)

Frequent contributions for publishing other essential Bahá'í literature in Italian have been sent from Palermo, including a special contribution in memory of Shoghi Effendi for the publication of Christ and Bahá'u'lláh in Italian. It is interesting to report that an Italian translation was sent from Palermo of this book done by our Sicilian friend and her daughter, because they felt “the Italian people should know of this great truth, too.” Five “Fifteen-Minute Talks,” translated into Italian from the Bahá'í Writings, have been given at the Holy Day gatherings and twice-a-week Fireside and Language Class, and put on file for further use in Palermo.

Sicily indeed is greatly blessed to have for its Archives two glorious letters from the beloved Guardian to the Palermo believers. These should continue to inspire us to grasp the opportunity and privilege of arising promptly and joyously to fulfill the unfinished tasks for the establishment of the Kingdom of God on Earth before it is too late.

Baha'i International Community

Listed in United Nations Yearbook

The believers, and particularly the various national spiritual assemblies, are informed that the Union of International Associations has published a seventh edition (1958-1959) of the Yearbook of International Organizations, which lists all the nongovernmental organizations related to United Nations.

The listing of Bahá'í International Community in this international reference book is a source of great prestige.

The seventh edition is published in the English language. Copies can be ordered from the Union of International Associations, Palais D'Egmont, Brussels 1, Belgium, at the price of $14.00 United States currency, Sterling Zone 78—or 580 Belgian Francs from Europe.

It is advisable that each national spiritual assembly participating in the Bahá'í International Community should order a copy of this reference book and make use of it in their public relations work.

Grand Manan Newspaper Prints

First Publicity on Faith

As a result of attending the Intercontinental Conference in Chicago, the pioneer on Grand Manan, Canadian goal, has obtained the first Bahá'í publicity in the Grand Manan newspaper. The article is an excellent one, mentioning the Conference in Chicago which Doris Richardson, the pioneer, attended, and stating the meaning of the Bahá'í Faith and purpose of the World Crusade.

Mrs. Richardson has written, “The fact that this article appeared as I gave it to the island reporter is proof of so many things. It means that now for the first time since coming to this island the Faith has been publicly announced and favorably too, for the reporter thought it was newsworthy and found it all very interesting. It also means that from now on he will accept other articles. Everyone on this island now knows that I am a Bahá'í, for the paper is read by all islanders.”

Grand Manan, an island in the Bay of Fundy off the coast of New Brunswick, is a rather isolated place, presenting many difficulties to the pioneer who longs to awaken its inhabitants to a knowledge of the new Day of God. Every goal of the World Crusade is vital and every pioneer who labors at that goal is valued by the friends in every part of the globe. Undoubtedly their prayers will lend a spiritual support that this glimmer of light may presage the dawn of victory for this pioneer and for the Cause of God.

Bahá'í School in La Paz, Bolivia,
Prepares Indians For Pioneering

A Bahá'í School for the preparation of Indian pioneers was held in La Paz, Bolivia, from March 10-April 3, 1958, as a result of the offers of several Aymara Indians to serve as pioneers in Bolivia.

The following four believers from the community of Vilacollo (Canton Huanuni) were enrolled for this purpose: Andres Jachakollo, Isidro Jachakollo, Carmelo Jachakollo, and Juan Jachakollo. Besides this group of pioneer volunteers, the enrollment was increased by the presence of two students of the Faith, Sra. Juana de Tapa and her daughter Hortencia, of chola background. Through their deep interest in the Faith, their native city of Potosí, Bolivia, will be opened to the Faith.

The course given, approved by the National Spiritual Assembly, was under the direction of the National Indian Teaching Committee for Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay. The studies were carried through most successfully, using the method of daily reviews and ending with a final test which merited the Confirments of Spirit Recounted
By Pioneer to Buddhist Thailand

Excerpt from letter dated May 6, 1958, from Mrs. Caroline Lawrence, Bangkok, Thailand:

"... I have been thoroughly exhilarated by the interest shown in the Faith by the numerous contacts here in Bangkok. Charles Duncan has many, many contacts. Many have come to him through his teaching English, but many are people he has met otherwise. There are several monks who come regularly to study the Faith. Their questions regarding the deepest essence of the spiritual beliefs is truly wonderful to hear, for they grasp the truth quickly. We have felt quite certain that there are many monks who are monks because that is the only way they could provide themselves with an education. Although they haven't bluntly stated that they would change their religion if they had the same educational opportunities, it is vaguely hinted on many occasions. This is quite significant, and our Thai Bahá’ís understand their predicament and are immediately interested, and all want us to hurry and get enough money to open a Bahá’í school where the underprivileged people, who are truly the needy ones, can go to school and get a first hand good education.

"Prior to my coming here I had studied and read everything I could lay my hands on about the Buddhist doctrine and the way it is practiced in this area. However, I find that much of it, though interesting to know, is not known by the Buddhists themselves. The basic facts of the Buddhist Teachings are not even remotely understood by the people. They are so steeped in 'custom' that the reason behind these customs has ceased to exist in reality. We find it necessary to explain to them their own doctrines before they can begin to listen to the Bahá’í principles. At first it seemed this was a peculiar way of doing it. Why (I thought) must they be taught the reason for their customs, why not just teach Bahá’í Faith and show them how much the Faith could help them both personally and nationally? But it proves not nearly so simple a matter.

"For myself, I have been putting in extra hours studying everything I can find in order to give myself more spiritual insight and understanding. I have worked on various faults of my own in order to make my own life a better example for those with whom I come in contact.

Auxiliary Board member Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin with two Bolivian cholas, students of the Faith.

Correction

The story of the Canton Huanuni Indian Assembly in Bolivia, Bahá’í News for February 1958, page 9, mentioned two friends of Andrés Jachacollo, members of the Regional Teaching Committee, who went to talk to the entire Jachacollo settlement.

The two friends were Elton Smith and Angel Garcia. Estanislau Alvarez, whose name was given by mistake, continued the work with the Indians after the first nine had declared themselves, visited their village, and served actively on the National Indian Committee. He helped conduct the recent Indian Pioneer School in La Paz, Bolivia.

ever being stopped by strangers and invited to talk, or walk, or have coffee with them. I recognized then that there was something that I didn’t understand. Your heart and the others, too, would become very happy at the wonderful interest shown by all whom Charles meets regarding the Bahá’í teachings. I realize, of course, that the number of declared believers here is small, but three local assemblies in a Hinayana Buddhist country is even more than anyone could have wished for at this early stage. It would be marvelous to have more numbers in each area, and we continually pray for them, other place which I used to call home. Here I seem to feel the nearness of Bahá’u’lláh much more so than at Winston-Salem, although I’m sure He was just as close there. Here we call on Him for much more guidance than I ever thought was possible. At first I was somewhat disappointed that I had to be in the city of Bangkok, and not in a glorious new territory, but when I left North Carolina I left with the promise to go wherever I would be of the most help. Strange things led to my being in Bangkok, but I am learning to accept with equanimity all sorts of things as doors open or close at the Will of God. If this is where I am most useful, then so be it. Maybe it’s not where people are needed most, but where I can personally serve Him best.”

Ten Local Assemblies in Canada
Have Been Incorporated to Date

The National Legal Committee of Canada has reported to the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly that to date ten local spiritual assemblies have been incorporated in that country.

Canada’s goal in the Ten-Year Crusade is the incorporation of a total of fifteen local assemblies; thus two-thirds of that number has been attained in the first half of the Crusade.

Incorporated local assemblies include: Edmonton, Alta.; Hamilton, Ont.; Scarborough, Ont.; Toronto, Ont.; North York, Ont.; Vancouver, B.C.; Vernon, B.C.; and Winnipeg, Man.

Halifax and London local assemblies expect to be incorporated in the near future.

The Australian Bahá’í Bulletin reports that the Commonwealth Public Service of Australia has created an Australia-wide precedent by officially granting leave on Bahá’í Holy Days to an Australian believer.

BAHA’I IN THE NEWS

An Iranian students’ association quarterly magazine entitled The Daneshjoo, in its Spring 1958 issue, carries an article entitled “Religion and State in Iran” which mentions the Bahá’í Faith as one of the possible solutions of the religious problem in Iran, other possible solutions being the reinstatement of Zoroastrianism and the adoption of Christianity.

Holiday Abroad, 1958, an illustrated tourist book, lists the Bahá’í Shrines and Gardens as one of the features of Haifa, and contains a large photo of the Shrine.

The Globe and Mail, March 8, 1958, a Canadian newspaper, featured in a detailed article the future construction of a Bahá’í House of Worship in Toronto. The article presents Bahá’í teachings, and refers to the Intercontinental Conferences being held this year and to the World Conference to be held in Baghdád during 1963.

An Israeli tourist pamphlet printed in French states in its final paragraph that the Bahá’í Shrine on Mount Carmel is the inspiration for all the legends of our time or for the future.

A 1958 calendar distributed by Hardings Restaurants quotes a passage by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on the power of love.

The Waterloo Daily Courier, Waterloo, Iowa, published a large feature story on the religion page March 28, which illustrated the Bahá’í House of Worship, and under the title ‘The Promised Day of God’ described the relationship of the local spiritual assembly to the world Bahá’í community and to the teachings of the Faith. This feature was one of a series of church messages underwritten by a number of local firms.

Le Soir, the largest newspaper in Belgium, published a series of informational articles as preliminary to the opening of the world exposition in Brussels, April 17, 1958. On March 5, this paper ran an article entitled “Ten Years in the Promised Land” which reported developments in the Holy Land, and illustrated by a picture of the Shrine of the Bab. Alluding to the Shrine and the International Archives, the author said: “They are the mausoleum and the Temple of Justice of the Bahá’ís who practice the fourth religion recognized in Israel, and who have made of Haifa a center of radiance.”

In Norway, the Morgenavisen Mandag of January 20, 1958 published a long article on the Faith illustrated by a picture of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. No translation has been made available.

A recent issue of The American Mercury, presents an article by Hilary Grey on “The Brotherhood,” in which the Bahá’í Faith is associated with Theosophy, Rosicrucian, World Congress, etc., as organizations responsible for misleading propaganda concerning the brotherhood of man.

A minister or priest, in a letter published on October 1, 1957, by the Charlotte (N.C.) Observer wrote: “... all religions appear to be having a good time from the Bahá’ís in Wilmette (sic) near Chicago to the Rosicrucians in Los Angeles.” The letter, however, adopts the Bahá’í position where it complains that “present-day religiosity” makes God the mere servant to the wishes of men.

From many sources the National Spiritual Assembly has received copies of Awake! for September 22, 1957, published by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, which contains an article entitled “What is the Bahá’í Cause?” Accord-
From Tangier, Morocco, has come a copy of a reference to the Faith published in Paris-Match March 15, 1958, an illustrated French magazine. This reference was made in a letter written to the editor commenting on a series of articles about the "Great Shepherds of the World" — Moses, Jesus, Buddha and Mohammad. The writer stated that he would have been very pleased if the series had also included the two Persian Prophets, the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh.

The map of Chicago distributed by Standard Oil Company gas stations lists the Bahá'í House of Worship under points of interest.

The Camp Fire Girl for January 1958 published a "Capsule Calendar" of January dates which included World Religion Day.

The Philadelphia Inquirer, May 9, 1958, published a story about the Temple University Music Festival which stated: "A first performance by the Music Education Chorus was 'A Bahá'í Prayer' by Lee Tichenor of this city. Well written for voices, Tichenor's work rises in cumulative yet restrained power."

The New Christian Advocate, Methodist magazine, listed All Things Made New by John Ferraby in its Book Review column for July. "Students of religion will welcome this comprehensive outline of the Bahá'í Faith, with its message proclaiming the oneness of God and of religion, addressed to unbelievers and to persons already following a religion."

A far different reception was given to George Townshend's Christ and Bahá'u'lláh in another Methodist magazine World Outlook. "An ex-Christian appeals to Christians to join a reformed and universalized Islam. A missionary document of the Bahá'í Faith."

Dear Bahá'í Friends and Co-workers:

The passing of the beloved Guardian, and his stupendous last messages, present the American Bahá'í community with the greatest challenge in its history. We have been given mighty tasks to perform, and now we are deprived of our greatest immediate source of inspiration, guidance and stimulus. This means that we ourselves must assume the full responsibility for achieving the very clear-cut objectives Shoghi Effendi has assigned to us. It offers us a "God-given opportunity" to come of age, to achieve a state of spiritual maturity that will enable us to move forward to these goals with vigor, unity and effectiveness.

Taking stock of the situation, it has become apparent that our failure to date on the home front has not been due to lack of effort, to inadequate faith or insufficient desire to remedy the situation; rather it has stemmed from the clear fact that we neither understand the power of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh nor obey wholeheartedly its laws and teachings.

This was pointed out by the Guardian himself in the letter written on his behalf by his secretary on July 19, 1956: "It is evident that one of the reasons that the work on the home front in America is so seriously lagging is that the Bahá'ís themselves, though undoubtedly devoted, loyal and conscientious, are not always very deeply grounded in the spiritual fundamentals of their Faith. This produces a maladjustment, so to speak, in the nature of their service to the Cause; and only through a deeper understanding of their Faith and the inner spiritual strength that this understanding brings will they be able to reinforce themselves to meet their tasks, to see the joy of discharging their duties and grasping their privileges."

To overcome this spiritual lethargy from which stems our lack of success, we need a mighty spiritual reinvigoration. The Beloved Guardian places the attainment of this spiritual reinvigoration first in the three special points in his last letter on which he pleads for us to concentrate.

The Faith of Bahá'u'lláh is perfect, possessing its own propelling power and providing everything needed for its establishment. However, the inexhaustible spiritual assistance inherent in it can only flow to and operate through us - the "instruments" through which it must function - when we fulfill the specific conditions and obey the laws and teachings that have been clearly defined in the Writings.

"... Unlike all the dispensations of the past," says Shoghi Effendi, "the apostles of Bahá'u'lláh in every land, wherever they labor and toil, have before them in clear, in unequivocal and emphatic language, all the laws, the regulations, the principles, the institutions, the guidance they require for the prosecution of their task."

In The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh (pages 51-52) he further says: "That the Cause associated with the name of Bahá'u'lláh feeds itself upon those hidden springs of celestial strength which no force of human personality, whatever its glamour, can replace; that its reliance is solely upon that mystic Source with which no worldly advantage, be it wealth, fame, or learning can compare; that it propagates itself by ways mysterious and utterly incomprehensible with the standards accepted by the generality of mankind, will, if not already apparent, become increasingly manifest as it forged ahead towards fresh conquests in its struggles for the spiritual regeneration of mankind."

If we, as individuals, do not reflect the power of the Cause we are neither spiritually reinvigorated nor can we hope to teach the Faith with any appreciable success. Not by the force of numbers, nor by the mere exposition of a set of new and noble principles, not by an organized campaign of teaching - no matter how worldwide and elaborate its character - not even by the staunchness of our faith or the exalation of our enthusiasm, can we ultimately hope to vindicate in the eyes of a critical and sceptical age the supreme claim of the Abá'hí Revelation. One thing and only one thing will unfailingly and alone secure the undoubted triumph of this sacred Cause, namely, the extent to which our inner life and private character are reborn in their manifest upholds the splendor of those eternal principles proclaimed by Bahá'u'lláh."

The National Spiritual Assembly is offering such an approach, emphasizing the most basic of our teachings and stemming from the counsels and warnings contained in the Guardian's last letters to the American Bahá'í community.

It is prepared to provide continuous and sustained assistance for systematic, unified action covering all of the three special objectives so strongly emphasized by the Guardian: "spiritual reinvigoration, administrative expansion, and material replenishment." It will use for this purpose all of the means at its command, including recommendations for individual and group study and carefully planned conferences. The friends are requested to watch Bahá'í News which will be the medium through which much of this assistance will be given.

It is our earnest request that every believer throughout the American Bahá'í community, whether veteran in the Cause or newly enrolled, whether in their midst or afar, will respond wholeheartedly to every recommended effort and undertaking for the home front, and that he will set up for himself his own personal goals for his maximum contribution to the success of the total World Crusade.

With complete humility let us each and every one turn to Bahá'u'lláh and prayerfully seek, through this united endeavor, to gain a fresh and deeper knowledge of our glorious Faith, a more mature understanding of its laws and teachings and of our responsibilities as Bahá'ís. Thus can we feel certain that we will gain that "spiritual reinvigoration" which constitutes the prime requisite for our own spiritual salvation and the attainment of our collective tasks.

Let us fully realize that in this sentence from the beloved Guardian's last treasured message to the American Bahá'ís he is speaking to each of us:

"... I would rather entreat each and every one of them to immortalize this approaching, fateful hour in the evolution of a world Spiritual Crusade, by a fresh consecration to their God-given Mission, coupled with an instantaneous plan of action, at once so dynamic and decisive, as to wipe out, on the one hand, with one stroke, the deficiencies which have, to no small extent, bogged down the operations of the Crusade on the home front, and tremendously accelerate, on the other, the progress of the triple task, launched in three continents, and constituting one of its preeminent objectives."

In our own hands lies the degree of our success. Perhaps nowhere has Shoghi Effendi more lovingly expressed his confidence in us than in this paragraph from his letter through his secretary, written July 19, 1956:

"The American Bahá'ís have so far never failed in any mission they undertook, and he hopes and believes there will be no failure this time. He has the greatest confidence in their loyalty, their faith, and their devotion, and he feels sure that with the help of Bahá'u'lláh they will arise to the occasion which has literally thrust upon them."

With warm Bahá'í love,

Faithfully yours,

August 1, 1956

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
suffer the travails and sorrows inseparable from the promulgation of the Word of God to a humanity that is rapidly losing touch with spiritual reality and being drained of the vital force of faith, and that he no longer must bear the weight of work which rested so crushingly on him for over a third of a century.

Strong Evidence of a New Maturity

As we now survey the vast field of his accomplish­ments in the light of our great loss, we begin to realize what this one being, inspired by God, driven by forces beyond our understanding, accomplished in so brief a time. A staggering task now faces us. The Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land, however, have been amazed at the strong evidence of a new maturity amongst the believers and their firm and irrecoverable determination to carry on to complete fulfillment the work of their dearly-loved Shoghi Effendi. There is no doubt in our minds or in the minds of any of the Chief Stewards of the Embryonic World Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh, that this can be done as long as we all work together in a closely-coordinated pattern following the design he set for us, keeping the life-blood flowing into Haifa, the great Heart and permanent Spiritual and Administrative Center of the Faith as he designated it, and out of it again on a world scale in the form of news, sta­tistics, and advice.

In the great work that lies before us, the Bahá'ís in the Antipodes have a very important part to play. The significance of this role has been strongly emphasized by the fact that, whereas at the opening of the World Crusade in 1953, the beloved Guardian called for four Intercontinental Conferences to be held in Africa, America, Europe, and Asia, this time at the Crusade's half-way point, he has added a fifth Intercontinental Conference to serve the rapidly growing needs of Australasia. The progress which has been achieved in this region has been truly phenomenal, and has kept pace with Shoghi Effendi's own thirty-six years of min­istry of the Faith. From the days after the beloved Master's ascension, when the first Center was firmly established in Sydney, until last April, when the Guardian called for the election of the first historic National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand, the unfoldment has been steady; the loyalty, devotion, obedience, and enthusiasm of the Australian and New Zealand believers were a constant source of pride to him, and attracted an ever-increasing measure of encouragement and attention on his part. His love and good-pleasure were poured upon them in many ways, the most im­pressive evidence being his plan to erect one of the three Masqué 'l-Adhkárs to be constructed during the World Crusade, in Sydney. This project was par­ticularly dear to his heart, knowing as he did that it will constitute a mighty, silent teacher of the Faith, and be a haven of refuge spiritually to all the believers in that area. This Mother Temple, not only of the Anti­podes, but of the entire Pacific region, will, by his ex­press instructions, be specially and eternally blessed through having in its foundations some of the sacred dust from the innermost Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh, and a fragment of plaster from the room of the Báb in the fortress of Máká where He was imprisoned. The Guardian, in his last message to the Bahá'í world, par­ticularly encouraged the believers attending these five historic Conferences to rally to the support of the temples now being erected and thus ensure their speedy completion.

A Mighty Spiritual Axis

In Shoghi Effendi's last message to the Australian National Spiritual Assembly he unfolded before their eyes, in his own inimitable way, a vast panorama of future development in the entire Pacific area: he pointed out that Australia and Japan constitute the northern and southern poles of a mighty spiritual axis running through the Pacific region and that through this axis the current of a close collaboration in the execution of the Divine Plan throughout the entire re­gion must flow. He emphasized that within this area embraced by New Zealand and Australia in the south and Japan in the north, "an area endowed" as he wrote "with unimaginable potentialities, and which, owing to its strategic position, is bound to feel the impact of world-shaking forces, and to shape to a marked de­gree through the experience gained by its peoples in the school of adversity, the destinies of mankind." A tremendous responsibility inevitably rested on the two oldest and strongest communities represented by the Australian National Spiritual Assembly and the Re­gional National Spiritual Assembly of North East Asia, to not only carry forward the teaching work in the islands scattered over the face of the sea, but in their homelands as well. We cannot do better than recall his own weighty words on this subject: "A responsi­bility, at once weighty and inescapable, must rest on the communities which occupy so privileged a position in so vast and turbulent an area of the globe. However great the distance that separates them; however much they differ in race, language, custom, and religion; however active the political forces which tend to keep them apart and foster racial and political antagonisms, the close and continued association of these commu­nities in their common, their peculiar and paramount task of raising up and of consolidating the embryonic World Order of Bahá'u'lláh in those regions of the globe is a matter of vital and urgent importance, which should receive on the part of the elected representatives of these communities, a most earnest and prayerful con­sideration."

He reminded the Australian believers that theirs was a two-fold task: on the one hand, to consolidate, multi­ply, and expand the institutions of the Faith at home and in the many islands beyond its confines, and on the other, to forge fresh links with its sister communities, particularly those in the North Pacific, in anticipation of the mission these communities are destined to col­lectively discharge.

New Zealand's Six-Year Plan

He reminded both the Australian and New Zealand communities of their immediate duties, affectionately naming New Zealand—whose recently elected National Spiritual Assembly will constitute a pillar of the future International House of Justice—that "far-away and promising dominion"; he called upon its National As­sembly to formulate a Six-Year Plan aimed at multi­plying the spiritual assemblies, groups, and isolated centers, at incorporating both the national and local spiritual assemblies, at obtaining recognition of both Bahá'í Holy Days and the Bahá'í Marriage Certificate, and at purchasing a site for a future House of Worship.
Message From the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land to the Fourth Intercontinental Conference in Frankfurt

More than nine months have passed since that heartbreaking day when, according to the inscrutable decrees of God, our most beloved and precious Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, passed to the realms on high. Though our sorrow is still fresh in our hearts we cannot but marvel, as we witness the vast number of friends gathered at the opening of this fourth great Intercontinental Conference being held in the very heart of the European continent, at the protection vouchsafed this holy Faith by the Almighty; at the tender wisdom which inspired our Guardian to provide us, during this first year of cruel and bitter separation, with these five great rallying points; at his forethought when he urged the believers to make every effort to attend them; and at the vigilance which moved him, so shortly before his passing and in his last great message to the Bahá‘í world to reinforce the institution of the Hands of the Faith through the appointment of eight more of these “Chief Stewards of Bahá‘u’lláh’s embryonic World Commonwealth.” This designation, never before applied to them by him, appears to have been calculated to enable them, with the loving support of the national assemblies and the believers, to carry the Cause of God forward through this exceedingly difficult and stormy strait in the history of mankind to the calmer waters which lie ahead as the World Order of Bahá‘u’lláh begins to take shape and gain in stature and experience.

We, in spite of the load of grief we still bear in our hearts, a grief which has bowed our heads and humbled our spirits, can nevertheless lift up our voices in thanksgiving to Bahá‘u’lláh. We thank Him now not only, as was the Guardian’s expressed wish, for the bounties bestowed during the first five years of this World Crusade, but for the measure of sure protection, of merciful grace, poured upon us since the beloved Guardian’s passing. The Bahá‘ís have everywhere stood firm in the Covenant of God; tested, tried, bereft, and filled with longing for their so-deeply loved guide and leader, they have demonstrated how great has been the effect of his life and its works by their steadfastness, by the renewed dedication they have shown to the plans he laid down for them, by an unprecedented degree of unity amongst themselves, by a deeper determination to gladden Shoghi Effendi’s heart than when he was with them physically in this world. They have arisen, East and West, to go forth and pioneer on both the Homefronts and in the newly opened territories; they have supported the Bahá‘í Funds from hearts that were loyal and overflowed with tenderness for their religion in its hour of need; they have rallied round the Hands of the Faith, the Custodians at the World Center, and the national and regional spiritual assemblies; they have gathered in large numbers at these great intercontinental conferences; they have comforted each other in their loneliness; and they have arisen to spread the Word of God abroad with new zeal and dedication. Can there be any doubt that all this is the result of Shoghi Effendi’s sacrifice, the over a-third-of-a-century-long sacrifice of his life, the sudden end, when his spirit in one breath freed itself from his tired and overladen heart? You all are gathered here today because of Shoghi Effendi, according to Shoghi Effendi’s wish, Shoghi Effendi’s Plan, Shoghi Effendi’s hope!

Before turning our thoughts to what he desired should be considered at these great conferences, let us recall the purpose of this vast globe-encircling Crusade. It is a step in the unfoldment of the Divine Plan laid down for us by ‘Abdu‘l-Bahá, and whose execution He entrusted primarily to the people of the “Great Republic of the West,” the most promising child of European civilization. It has already, in five short years, carried us well on the way towards the accomplishment of our primary objective, which the Guardian said is no less than the spiritual conquest of the entire planet. Led by our beloved Commander-in-Chief, we have opened nearly all the independent sovereign states, the chief dependencies, the most important islands and territories of the world to our glorious Faith; even the wintry island of Spitzbergen has been settled, leaving only a few states inside the Soviet Union or within its orbit, still unopened. Of the forty-nine National Ha'iratu'l-Quds to be purchased as part of the Ten-Year Plan, forty-eight have been acquired; of the fifty-one National Endowments that have been acquired; of the eleven Temple sites specifically mentioned by our beloved Guardian, all eleven have been acquired; the mighty task of translating and publishing the literature of the Faith, as called for in the provisions of the Ten-Year Plan, is now nearing completion; the Bahá'í Publishing Trusts, except for those in Islámic countries where the believers are still oppressed, ignored, and proscribed, have all been founded; and the task of incorporating national and local spiritual assemblies is well on its way to fulfillment. Even the Homefronts—the most challenging perhaps of all the tasks allotted to us by the beloved Guardian under the terms of this World Crusade—are, in many countries, meeting, nay surpassing, his expectations. Two of the three mighty Mother Temples are already being constructed: namely, those of Africa and the Antipodes. It was this overall pattern of marked success, of surging spiritual vitality, which characterizes the activities of the World Bahá'í Community, that undoubtedly caused our Guardian to unite us in these five Intercontinental Conferences, not only to humbly thank Bahá'u'lláh for mercies received, not only to deliberate on ways and means of accomplishing the next five years' work, but as a reward for having served faithfully, with enthusiasm and consecration, this blessed Cause of God, and, as we now see, as a mercy in the hour of separation, a tender enfolding of us, his "dearly beloved co-workers," in the arms of that one who, in his modesty and purity of heart, called himself only "your true brother."

The work of Bahá'u'lláh lies before us to be completed. No one generation will do this; a thousand years at least are required to carry out and mature the specific provisions of His Dispensation. But to each man his opportunity, to each generation its tasks. Shoghi Effendi has laid down for us in clear and unmistakable terms our next five years' work. To the degree to which we scrupulously adhere to his plan, obey his words, comprehend the implications of his perfect design, to that degree only will our affairs prosper, our work attract the blessings from On High, and the foundation of the World Crusade be solidly and lastingly laid.

The beloved Guardian, in his last message to us all, made clear that the fourth phase of our Ten-Year Plan which we have, with the holding of these great conferences all over the world, now embarked upon, "must be immortalized, on the one hand, by an unprecedented increase in the number of avowed supporters of the Faith, in all the continents of the globe, of every race, clime, creed, and color, and from every stratum of present-day society, coupled with a corresponding increase in the number of Bahá'í centers, and, on the other, by a swift progress in the erection of the Mother Temples of Africa and Australia, as well as by the initiation of the construction of the first Masriqu'l-Adhkár of Europe."

The commencement of work on the Temple to be erected in Germany is long overdue. We know from the Words of the Master that these Houses of Worship are the greatest silent teachers of the Faith. How infinitely precious is any building erected in the love of God and for the mention of His Name! How much more so these first continental "Mother Temples," being raised to the glory of Bahá'u'lláh! How infinitely so the Temples for whose construction the Guardian himself is responsible, whose location he has specified, whose design he himself has approved. It was one of his most cherished desires to have these Temples built. He himself pledged he would supply one-third of their estimated cost. We must now carry on his work, see that the budget, now being expended monthly for the construction of the Sydney Temple, is met, and that at least the major part of the sum required for the European Masriqu'l-Adhkár is raised, in anticipation of the early commencement of actual building operations. Time is flying. We do not know what the future world situation will be. What we do know is our immediate duty to the work specified for us by our Guardian.

The other half of the main task confronting us is the "unprecedented increase" in the number of believers throughout the world. Pioneers are needed everywhere, in all continents, in all the islands opened to the Faith, on the Homefronts, and in the goal territories. Two things are required to get a pioneer to his post, an enkindled, consecrated soul, willing and ready to go out in the teaching field and, if he cannot supply them himself, the material means necessary to get him to his post and often to enable him to remain at it. This type of service to the Faith offers a wonderful opportunity for partnership between those who have some worldly means at their disposal, but feel for some reason unable to go forth themselves, and those who yearn to respond to the call for pioneering, but are prevented from fulfilling their heart's desire because of lack of material resources.

Let us recall our Guardian's words, at the opening of the World Crusade, to the entire body of the followers of Bahá'u'lláh:

"... I direct my appeal to arise and, in the course of these fast fleeting years, in every phase of the campaigns that are to be fought in all the continents of the globe, prove their worth as gallant warriors battling for the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh. Indeed, from this very hour until the eve of the Most Great Jubilee, each and every one of those enrolled in the Army of Light must seek no rest, must take no thought of self, must sacrifice to the uttermost, must allow nothing whatsoever to deflect him or her from meeting the pressing, the manifold, the paramount needs of this preeminent Crusade.

"'Light as the spirit,' 'pure as air,' 'blazing as fire,' 'unrestrained as the wind'—for such is Bahá'u'lláh's own admonition to His loved ones in His Tablets, and directed not to a select few but to the entire congregation of the faithful—let them scatter far and wide, proclaim the glory of God's Revelation in this Day, quicken the souls of men and ignite in their hearts the love of the One Who alone is their omnipotent and divinely appointed Redeemer."

At this time surely nothing is impossible to us. We have passed through nine months of fire since our beloved Guardian left us, but we have burned together. We have seen, and felt deeply in our hearts, our unity as a world community, as followers of the Most Great Name. We have neither been separated nor paralyzed through this great shock and grief. The World Center of the Faith which he so assiduously built up and consolidated, the heart of the Bahá’í World Community, has not ceased to beat. The communion between the hearts of the friends and the great heart enshrining the Qiblih of the Bahá’í world, continues to gather strength. This has been a shining evidence to us all that Bahá’u’lláh’s mercies have not ceased to be showered upon us; that what the Guardian built endures and will endure, a living organism, throughout the stages in the evolution of our Faith which lie ahead. After this ordeal by fire which we have passed through, can we doubt that, with this fresh sense of oneness, with our purified hearts, we will not receive, if we arise now to serve as we should, an extraordinary measure of the bounty of almighty God? Great moments in history require great deeds; great men are not necessarily those best qualified to be great, but rather those who see their chance and seize it, with love and courage, when it offers itself. The records of our Faith show that its heroes and heroines, its saints and martyrs, sprang mostly from the rank and file, but what they possessed, which raised them to the summits of fame and glory, were vision and faith. Let the friends now follow the path of Shoghi Effendi, let them arise to complete his work as set forth in the Ten-Year Plan, let them labour as he did, steadily, patiently, consecratedly, day after day, week after week, year after year, until his tasks are completed. The world now marvels at what this one man did in thirty-six years. Let his lovers arise and put their shoulder to the wheel and move this blessed Faith forward on the path of its destiny until, God willing, their hearts stop as did his, from the excess of their labours in the path of God.

Construction of Africa Temple Proceeds With Erection of Supporting Pillars

The second contract for the construction of the Mother Temple of Africa at Kampala, Uganda, was signed in June 1958, providing for the erection of reinforced concrete pillars up to dome height. This follows the completion of the first contract, the foundation and the steps up to floor level. In addition, a well and pump have been installed, insuring an adequate supply of water, and a landscape architect has drawn up plans for tree plantings.

In January, during the Kampala Intercontinental Conference, the Guardian’s revered representatives, ‘Amatu’-Bahá Ruhiyyih Khánum and Hand of the Cause Musa Banání, placed a silver casket containing sacred earth from the Shrine of Bahá’u’lláh and a wooden box holding a piece of plaster from the Prison of Mah-kú, where the Báb had been incarcerated, beneath the foundation stone.

When the present work of constructing the pillars is completed, a third contract will be executed for the erection of the walls, roof, and dome.

Construction of the dome will present numerous problems. A dome of the shape and proportions called for by the designs has never been built anywhere in the world before; equipment and engineers for the prestressed concrete work required do not exist in that part of the world. The hill on which the Temple is being erected is high above the surrounding land, and encounters strong winds. This will present difficulties for the builders when planning their scaffolding at such an unusual height. In addition, the extreme changes of temperature, from hot afternoons to cool nights, create great problems of expansion and contraction.

Despite all these difficulties, the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa reports that the problems are slowly being surmounted.

The final work on the finish, acoustics, doors, windows, and electrical fittings should be started by the end of 1958, and it is expected that the building will

Steel shafts for the reinforced concrete pillars that will rise to dome height for the Mother Temple of Africa, under construction near Kampala, Uganda.
There was a total of thirty official participants, consisting mostly of professors of leading universities of Italy, Egypt, Lebanon, Russia, United States, France, India, Switzerland, Japan, Denmark, Belgium, and other countries throughout the world. Very few observers were granted admittance, and it was therefore a privilege for the Baha’i’s to be represented.

As a prelude to the symposium, a day was consecrated to the commemoration of the signing of the Charter of Human Rights.

The discussions of the symposium manifested the desire among the diverse personalities to cooperate by all modern means of popular education to facilitate the exchange of spiritual concepts and mutual tolerance between the peoples of the Orient and Occident.

Nevertheless, it was evident, from the Baha’i viewpoint, that there was a lack of cohesion, proving the need of a superior force capable of cementing hearts together.

They came to the conclusion that religion was the greatest factor in the formation of civilizations in the past, and that if humanity would establish a more humane world it must have new standards of morality and a reconsideration of religious values.

During the intervals between the sessions, personal contacts were made by the Baha’i delegates, and Baha’i literature was discreetly distributed. The delegates felt that the week of fruitful consultation developed an eager desire to investigate the religious problems of our time, and that the presence of Baha’i might prove in the future that the spirit of Baha’u’llah was working among those leading personalities of the world.

Australian NSA Asks Continued Contribution: For Construction of Temple in Sydney

A letter from the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of Australia expresses the hope that the Baha’is will continue their contributions for the construction of the Sydney Temple, so that there will be no interruption or delay in its early completion. It says: “The project is creating a lot of public interest; over 1,000 cars pass the site each hour on Saturdays and Sundays.”

Thirty New Local Assemblies Established In Area of Southeast Asia Regional Assembly

The formation of thirty new local spiritual assemblies in the area under the jurisdiction of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of Southeast Asia was accomplished on April 21, 1958.

Eight of these assemblies are located in Vietnam, where the number of believers now number about 200. Baha’u’llah and the New Era has recently been translated into Vietnamese, and 3,000 copies have been published to assist in attaining the goal of 500 Baha’is in Vietnam by the time of the Djakarta Conference in September.

First Philippine Baha'i Summer School
Conducted at Solano in Two Languages

The first Baha'i Summer School and Conference in the Philippines was held at Solano, in the province of Nueva Vizcaya on Luzon Island, where more than twenty years ago The Greatest Name was first made known on these islands.

This conference was held in the humble, windowless Haziratu'l-Quds, erected by the loving sacrifices of the Solano friends. Baha'i children opened the first session with a beautifully composed choral greeting that added the element of youthful gladness and meekness to the spiritual atmosphere.

All prayers and talks were spoken in either English or the Ilocano languages and then translated into the other, so that all present might understand the proceedings.

Orlando D. Maddela, the convenor of the school, is the son of the first Baha'i believer of the Philippines. He not only conducted the school program, but spoke at a public meeting at the Plaza of Solano, held on the evening of May 31. Other speakers at this meeting were Mariano Tagubat of Solano, and William Allison, a recently-arrived pioneer from the United States.

Sixty-two persons attended the first day's sessions of the summer school. Mr. Tagubat, Theodore Boehnert, and Mr. Allison spoke on subjects that included the history, the principles, and the administration of the Faith.

On the second day, speakers discussed the laws and ordinances of Bahá'u'lláh, the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and prospects for the future. Forty-two persons attended these meetings.

The closing session was devoted to the study of the Regional Spiritual Assembly's Six-Year Teaching Plan and the part of the Philippine Islands in this plan. Subjects included: multiplication of centers, pioneering, increase in the number of believers, consolidation of existing centers, summer schools, translations and publications, incorporation of local spiritual assemblies, obtaining Haziratu'l-Quds, the Bahá'i Fund, and teaching conferences.

This first summer school was an inspiring demonstration to the Philippine believers of the Bahá'í spirit of love and unity, and their steadfastness in their beloved Cause.

Chicago Tribune Publishes Proclamation of Faith by Well-Known Author

Some years ago the Book of the Month Club announced as one of its monthly selections a book entitled Song of the Sky by Guy Murchie. The name of Bahá'u'lláh appeared in this volume and the announcement of the book stated that Guy Murchie was a Bahá'í.

Now this well-known Bahá'í author has written an article entitled "I Am A Bahá'í," which is featured in the magazine section of the Chicago Sunday Tribune of July 13, 1958.

The Sunday Tribune has a very large circulation throughout the middle west and even in distant cities. For example, Mr. Murchie's article was noted and put to good use with contacts by a believer in Portland, Ore. Many inquiries for Bahá'í literature have come to the National Bahá'í headquarters from Sunday Tribune readers, and the number of visitors to the Temple has noticeably increased.

"I Am A Bahá'í. This means that I believe in the new world Faith that began in Persia a hundred years ago and has just now come into general attention in the West," Guy Murchie's article begins. He explains his interest in the Bahá'í Faith by stating that as a writer for the Chicago Tribune he had been asked by Col. Robert R. McCormick, seventeen years ago, to find out what the Bahá'í Temple, then under construction, "was all about."

"The spiritual creed behind this extraordinary creation struck me as so reasonable and beautiful that, after a few months of studying its history and principles and finding it stood for world unity and love and progress, and that it did not conflict with Christianity (but rather fulfilled it), nor modern science, nor anything else I believed in, I embraced it in its entirety.

The article as a whole presents an interesting and sound exposition of the history and teachings of our revelation. The Shrine of the Bab and the Baha’i House of Worship are illustrated. American believers can be grateful not only to Mr. Murchie, but also to the late Col. McCormick and the Chicago Tribune for many instances of publicity favorable to the Faith of Baha’u’llah.

The editor of the Chicago Sunday Tribune has given permission to the Baha’i Publishing Trust to reprint Guy Murchie’s article as a pamphlet. Mr. Murchie has also consented to this arrangement. The Publishing Trust will announce the pamphlet when ready.

Indians of Five Southwestern Tribes
Weekend Guests at Gimlin Ranch

Fifty-five persons gathered at the Gimlin ranch near Camp Verde, Ariz., on the weekend of July 25-27, for two “Indian Days.”

Some came hundreds of miles, as did two Navajo families. Fifteen of the twenty-eight Indian friends came from the nearby Camp Verde Apache Reservation. Other tribes represented were Yavapai, Mohave, Walpi, and Otomi. Ceremonial dances held concurrently in Hopiland prevented several Hopi friends from coming. One guest was a visitor to Arizona from Helsinki, Finland.

Nine Baha’i communities in Arizona, California, and Nevada were represented. Meals were pot-luck, and many brought overnight camping equipment.

Plans for this weekend began early last spring, when Mr. and Mrs. Begay Tsosie, who live near the Monument Valley country in Arizona, visited their first white home, a Baha’i residence in Sparks, Nev.

No program was arranged, but Indian arts and crafts were displayed, including Papago and Apache basketry, water color paintings, and an unusual exhibit of natural dye pigments used in Navajo weaving.

The warmth and love felt by everyone who came was reflected in the spontaneous participation of the Indian guests. Prayers were given in Apache, Yavapai, and Navajo. The Baha’i prayers were translated into Navajo.

Through an interpreter, as spokesman for the Navajo who speak no English, Mr. Tsosie expressed the appreciation and thanks of all, and said that he felt this meeting was a beginning, a promise of things to come. He spoke of the need for more meetings.

Second annual convention of the Bahá’ís of the Greater Antilles, held at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, in April 1958.
such as this one, so that peoples who have been apart can come together in the spirit of oneness and brotherhood.

Highlighting the weekend, for all those who knew of it, was a touching demonstration of this fine man's acceptance of Bahá'u'lláh, through His son. Mr. Tsosie, who had heard the wonderful message of Bahá'u'lláh in Navajo last spring, asked through his interpreter if a certain white figurine in the ranchhouse were of Bahá'u'lláh.

He was told it was not, then shown a picture of the son of Bahá'u'lláh. He stood looking at 'Abdu'l-Bahá's picture silently for a long moment, then touched his heart and his head, and knelt in reverence. He then spoke in Navajo to his eleven-year-old boy, who repeated the same act of devotion.

When the hour came for starting the long drives home, everyone gathered for prayer and heard the words of Bahá'u'lláh in supplication for protection, again spoken in Navajo. The bounty shared in this weekend of fellowship was an uplifting and inspiring experience for all.

Greensboro Bahá'ís Present Faith
On Six Television Programs

The Greensboro, N. Car., Bahá'í community has recently taken advantage of a most unusual opportunity to present the Faith to the general public in three states: Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

It all started several months ago, when the community was asked to join the Greensboro Ministerial Fellowship, with the local spiritual assembly chairman as representative. This gave the chairman the opportunity to attend luncheons and meetings, and will eventually give him an opportunity to tell Greensboro's leading Protestant clergy about the Faith.

Being a member entitles one to the privilege of having the Faith and its representative listed in the Church Directory, and presenting six fifteen-minute programs of a devotional nature on television station WFMY-TV. No sooner had the Faith become a member of this fellowship than the chairman was told he would be responsible for the programs from June 9 to June 15.

Much planning and a great deal of preparation went into the making-up of these programs. It was decided by the Teaching Committee that each morning "Words for the World" would be played, with slides of the Gardens on Mount Carmel as the video picture.

Subsequently the chairman selected a special devotional theme for each day, using Paris Talks, Divine Art of Living, and Life Eternal as source books.

The beauty, the dignity, and the power of the Creative Word: the impression of the program created somewhat of a sensation at WFMY-TV. Everyone was asking about the Faith and the Gardens. One of the Greensboro Bahá'ís is a continuity writer at the station, and he was plied with questions.

Several pieces of mail soon arrived from outlying areas in North Carolina, the only correspondence ever received pertaining to the "Devotions" program. One letter urgently appealed for information on life after death.

Since WFMY-TV has been telecasting since 1949, and instigated the program at that time, the fact that the Baha’i Faith attracted the only correspondence in nine years is of some significance.

On Sunday, June 15, the program was conducted by the Greensboro Local Assembly chairman, Jack Davis, who had as his guest Mrs. Irma Hayden, chairman of the Nashville, Tenn., Local Spiritual Assembly. Having two races on the program was a very important teaching factor in the South, and is bound to have a far-reaching effect.

To have had such a privilege as these six programs, telecast over one of the largest and most powerful stations in the nation, is assuredly one that could not be devised; the opportunity was created for us, and is just another step forward to recognition and the ultimate emancipation of the Faith in this section of the country.

Los Angeles’ Youth Panel Discussions: Attract Youth and Adults to Faith

The Youth and Young Adult Committee of Los Angeles, Calif., in an effort to expand its services in attracting more young people to the Faith, has developed an excellent plan which has been used successfully for more than two years.

Working closely with the Local Spiritual Assembly, it has not only presented youth panels for firesides and for a public meeting each month but also, under the Area Teaching Committee of the Southwestern States, has sent “travelling panels” to several other communities in Southern California and Nevada. Each panel is comprised of three or four youth, or young adult speakers, and an adult moderator. The moderator gives a brief introduction to the Faith to introduce the subject, the questions, and the speakers. The speakers each have five minutes to answer two questions, after which the moderator sums up and opens the meeting for general discussion, assisting the panel members to answer questions when necessary.

Very careful preparation has gone into this program. A two-hour study class, for all those interested in this method of teaching, provided for one hour of deepening in the Faith with the help of Mrs. Jesma Herbert and Miss Serrita Camargo, experienced teachers. This was followed by a one-hour workshop in which five minute talks, assigned in advance, were given. These talks were recorded on tape and played back for evaluation and constructive criticism.

The next phase was a two-hour class of straight study and discussion, with the aid of various study outlines. This was followed by a teaching institute using, besides many quotes on teaching, the study of the brochure Success in Teaching by Ruhlyyih Khánun.

The fourth phase was a one-hour study period on "The Covenant and Administration" followed by practical workshops and discussion on such subjects as: opening a new city to the Faith, functioning as an isolated Bahá’í or as a group, forming an assembly, knowing and using the Bahá’í institutions, living the Bahá’í life, the Ten-Year Crusade, pioneering, and work on the homefront. Charts, maps, and all available visual aids were used extensively, and throughout the emphasis was on the orientation and services of Bahá’í youth and young adults in the Bahá’í community and the World Crusade. Finally there was systematic study of Some Answered Questions.

Much prayer and consultation goes into the selection of panel topics as well as the speakers for each. Alternates are chosen at the same time, and a moderator who will work well with the particular panel and speakers. A rehearsal is always held by the panel members before the public meeting. The secretary and chairman of the committee attend all rehearsals and careful records are kept on possible speakers and moderators as well as those that have participated, including the dates and places. Letters of invitation to participate in this program are sent to all young people and moderators recommended by the assembly and by the area teaching committee.

The enthusiasm and capacity of the young people has been an inspiration to the community, and the impact upon the audiences to which they have spoken has been most effective in attracting both youth and adults to the Faith. This, or a similar plan for using the talents and energy of young people, could well be adopted in every Bahá’í community where there is even a small number of youth and young adults.

Faith Publicized in Saigon Magazine

One of the prominent Saigon, Vietnam, magazines, Bong Lua, has published an article on the Bahá’í Faith, together with photographs of the Holy Shrines and the International Archives Building in Haifa, the House of Worship in Wilmette, and several Bahá’í gatherings.

Chicago Assembly’s Weekly Meetings at YMCA Praised by Religious Work Committee

The Local Spiritual Assembly of Chicago, Ill., has sponsored a program of weekly meetings at the Washington Park YMCA since July 1957. Most of these meetings have featured Bahá’í speakers on various aspects of the Faith, followed by a question and answer period.

One speaker was Mrs. Vivian Wesson, Bahá’í pioneer on leave from Liberia, with students from Liberia participating in the discussion of that country. Another was a young Chicago Bahá’í who had spent the summer in Mexico in volunteer work among underprivileged children. There were also several sessions devoted to reading and discussion of such Bahá’í books as The Reality of Man and Foundations of World Unity.

As a result of this weekly activity at the Washington Park YMCA, the Bahá’ís were invited to participate in their Annual Springtime Teen, sponsored by the Religious Work Committee of this branch of the “Y” as a friendly gesture to the religious workers of many denominations during the year. This year the occasion had further significance because it marked the 100th anniversary of the founding of the YMCA in Chicago.

At this gathering the general chairman of the activity introduced the Bahá’ís, praised their religious activity during the year, and expressed the hope that it would continue.

Second Cherokee Woman Embraces Faith

Mrs. Nellie Jumper, a Cherokee residing on the Indian reservation at Cherokee, N. Car., has enrolled in the Bahá’í Faith, the American Indian Service Committee has revealed.

With Mrs. Jumper and Mrs. Minnie Feather, also Cherokee, and Mrs. Ethel Murray, the Bahá’í pioneer, there are now three Bahá’ís on the reservation, which is small in area.

Bahá’í Literature Published in Indonesian

The translation of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in the Indonesian language has been approved, and is now in the process of being printed. The booklet Bahá’í Community has also been translated into Indonesian, and will soon be published.

Summer School Held at Santiago, Rep. Dom.

The first National Summer School of the Dominican Republic for 1958-1959 was held the first weekend of June at Santiago. Bahá’ís and students from Cuidad Trujillo, Moca, and Santiago took part.

Deprived of Bahá’í Membership

The Regional Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay has been obliged to remove the Bahá’í voting rights of Mrs. Frances Benedict Stewart, an American who has been pioneering in Latin America. She can no longer be recognized as a Bahá’í in the United States or elsewhere.

—U.S. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
The Art of Teaching

Teaching the Cause is the foremost duty and greatest delight of every Bahá'í. It devolves upon us, therefore, to consider how we can improve our teaching activities.

Knowledge

The main requisites of teaching are knowledge, faith, and love. The Founder of our Faith has emphasized that the person who would teach others must first teach himself. Systematic, regular study of the tenets and history of our Faith is a must for all, young and old. Summer schools, conferences, classes, and informal get-togethers are means for supplementing, but not supplanting, private study.

Teaching also is a learning process. If you want to master a subject, try giving a course on it! We dare not wait for our knowledge to become perfect before rushing into the arena of teaching. We shall never know everything about our all-embracing Faith but each one of us, no matter how ignorant or lacking in capacity, has something to impart to inquirers. We must never be overwhelmed by our inadequate knowledge or inability because it is not our puny efforts but solely God's confirming grace that makes Bahá'í.

Our value as teachers sinks to zero if we feel that we have the power to confirm souls. We must avoid the extremes of underestimating and of overrating our abilities. The secret of success in teaching is God-consciousness. According the Faith first place in our lives and realizing that bestowing the Glad-Tidings of God on others is our supreme task and the source of our lasting happiness, will lead us to acquire the knowledge that is needful.

Faith

Faith is contagious. Our devotion to the Cause is bound to influence inquirers. Faith will move mountains of doubt, fear, unbelief, ignorance, and sin. We of the West must take heed not to let the world be too much with us or to permit material pursuits to dwarf our spiritual aspirations.

It has often happened that when the teaching outlook in a locality appeared very dark the doors of progress suddenly opened in response to prayer. Self-discipline is required if prayer is to play a larger part in our scheme of daily living. What we oc­cidentals most urgently require is what the Persians call tawajjüh, which means turning our faces toward God. It is faith that gives us the motivation to teach. Once the desire to teach is powerful enough, abundant means and opportunities will be found, particularly in countries like Britain and America where freedom abides.

Love

The requisite of love must be demonstrated both toward God and toward His creatures. When the strong emotion of love is focussed on both God and man, the result can only be unlimited triumph in teaching the Faith of God. Too often we think of subject matter by itself instead of related to the experience and background of the learner. In teaching, the learner must be uppermost in our minds and the effect of what we say will be tremendously enhanced if it is suffused with the spirit of love.

According to traditions accepted as authentic by al-Bukhári, the Prophet Muḥammad imparted to His companions valuable hints on teaching. "Announce agreeable things; do not startle your auditor." This could mean that we eschew the evang­elist's approach of threatening the listener with the tortures of Hell and instead picture to him the happy Bahá'í world commonwealth of the future in which the wealth of mankind will not be squandered on instruments of human destruction but will be consecrated to such constructive ends as the sharpening and refinement of the human mind and the prolongation of life.

What we teach must be built on the thought patterns and experience of the inquirer and not be repugnant to him. Of course we cannot alter the teachings to make them more palatable, but the order of our teaching should be such that the negative commands come later, after the in­quirer understands the stations of the Central Figures of the Faith.

Our aim is to attract, not to repel. "Make the way easy and not difficult," counseled Muḥammad. When we carry out this instruction, we shall succeed in guiding the "waiting servants" to the "chosen highway" which leads to personal and social salvation. Faith, knowledge, and love constitute the armour of God with which we can capture the "cities of men's hearts."

BAHÁ’Í IN THE NEWS

A new monthly magazine, The Mediterranean and Euraftrica, has published in its first issue (June 1958) an article entitled “Bahá’ísm—Another View of the Middle East” by Delia Mary Seton. The purpose of this article was apparently to establish a new conception of Islam in the Western world by pointing out that the Bahá’í Faith was “kindled within the bosom of Islam, and now it extends as far afield as Africa and—perhaps most significantly of all—it has its headquarters in Haifa, Israel.”

The author has made a careful study of Bahá’í sources and her article is a very creditable exposition of the Faith. A reference to Bahá’u’lláh appears on page 68 of “The Story of Orchestral Music and its Times” by Paul Grabbe.

Mirror for Youth, published quarterly by Youth of All Nations, Inc., New York, reprints a letter written by an American student to her “pen pal” in Germany. This letter describes a visit she made to a Bahá’í fireside meeting. “It was really wonderful. It made me feel as if, in spite of superficial differences, there is really a chance that the world can be ruled through peace and understanding, instead of the childish quarrels that have always plagued men’s relations with their neighbors.”

The Frankfurter Allgemeine (Germany) Sunday, May 3, 1958, published a long and detailed article about the Faith, illustrated by two large photographs of the Wilmette Bahá’í House of Worship, an exterior and an interior view, and also by a picture of the dome of the Hazíratu’l-Quds, Tihbrán, showing the military leaders who were beginning the destruction of the dome there, May 1955.

In the light of the Intercontinental Conference scheduled for Germany, this article was most opportune. An Israeli publication dealing with freedom of religion, freedom from fear, and freedom from want, carries an illustration of the Shrine of the Báb.

The June 1958 issue of Harper’s Magazine contains an unusual reference to the Faith. In an article by Dan Wakefield about a group of teen-age New Yorkers who have abandoned the ways of violence and seek to imbue other youths with their new outlook, he says “As a young man in his early twenties, Ramon (Diaz) came from Puerto Rico on a pilgrimage to the Bahá’í Temple in Chicago and stopped off in New York on the way.”

Three references to the Faith appear in Wilmette Life for July 31, 1958. One is a progress report on the construction of the Bahá’í Home, with a photograph of the building. Another reports the publication of Great Themes of Life by Eric Bowes and the presentation of a copy to Wilmette Public Library by the local Bahá’ís. The third reports that the Bahá’í House of Worship is one of more than 100 houses of worship discussed in Historic Churches of the United States by Robert C. Broderick, published by Wilfred Funk.

"The Most Important Work Human Beings Have Ever Done In the History of Our Planet"

A Communication From the Custodians of the Faith

It is nine months since our world was shaken and hearts broken by the passing of our beloved Guardian. Those poignant words which he wrote after the ascension of 'Abdu'l-Bahá now echo in our ears with a personal meaning to our generation: “The shock has been too terrible and sudden for us all to recover from in so short a time, but whenever we recall His Sayings and read His Writings, hope springs in our hearts and gives us peace that no other material comfort can give.” Although the official period of mourning has now ended, we know that inwardly each Bahá’í will always grieve deeply for the loss of that priceless embodiment of loving kindness and divine wisdom.

The spontaneous declarations of love for our beloved Guardian and loyalty to the Hands of the Cause, raised up by his sacred pen to be the “Chief Stewards of the embryonic world commonwealth of Bahá’u’lláh,” which have been received from all parts of the world, many of them voiced in terms of surpassing beauty, have been a source of great comfort and strength to us.

The Hands of the Cause serving in the Holy Land, as well as the members of the International Bahá’í Council, have felt particularly the terrible physical absence of our beloved Guardian in this place most closely associated with him, where every object our eyes fall on recalls to us his labor, his perseverance, his final sacrifice. The great waves of prayer and of loving confidence, which have come pouring in to us from the national spiritual assemblies and the believers all over the world, have reassured and sustained us, and have given us strength and courage as we labor to protect the World Center and maintain it as the unifying hub of the great wheel of the Cause our Guardian so carefully built up and set in motion. This has given us assurance that our Guardian himself is aiding us to aid him. We thank all the friends for the support and assistance they have given, for the wonderful spirit of steadfastness they have shown, and the many deeds they have performed in the beloved Guardian’s name since his passing. This united action which has resulted in so many victories, is, in the words of the beloved Guardian himself, “an added proof to the world that there is a mighty spirit that animates the friends, that there is nothing impossible to them.”

The Custodians, the group of Hands serving at the World Center on behalf of the Hands of the Cause throughout the world, have had to meet and surmount many problems. Some of the permanently appointed Custodians, because of attendance at various conferences to which they were sent by the beloved Guardian, and for reasons of health, have been unable to be in residence at Haifa at all times. We have been fortunate, however, in having their places filled temporarily by the following Hands, who have acted as substitute Custodians: Ugo Giachery, John Ferraby, Shu’u’lláh ‘Alá‘í, Adelbert Mihlschlegel, ‘Ali Muḥammad Vargā, and William Sears. This arrangement has been most fortuitous, as it has brought us first-hand reports of the status of the Faith in various areas and enabled these temporary Custodians to better sense the overall needs of the Faith as seen from the World Center.

Beloved friends, we are now, together, embarked upon the most important work which human beings have ever done in the history of our planet. Ours is the priceless privilege and the grave, inescapable responsibility of raising up that sacred institution, the Universal House of Justice. This can be done only after the complete triumph of his Ten-Year Plan, which is designed to lay the necessary foundation for that weighty and supreme Edifice of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.

The measure of divine protection already accorded our precious Cause at the World Center, in the cradle of the Faith, and throughout the world, since the beloved Guardian's passing, has been truly miraculous. Surely this is that same divine protection spoken of by the Master in His letter to the entire Bahá’í world following the passing of Bahá’u’lláh. His words today bring us not only solace in our bereavement, but a firm and undying resolve to fulfill our high destiny.

"O ye beloved of the Lord! . . . Today is the day for steadfastness and constancy. Blessed are they that stand fast and firm and immovable as the rock, and brave the storm and stress of this tempestuous hour. They, verily, shall receive His divine assistance and shall be truly victorious . . . In His Most Holy Book He calleth the firm and steadfast of His friends, 'O people of the world! Should the radiance of My Beauty be veiled, and the temple of My body be hidden, feel not perturbed, nay arise and bestir yourselves, that My Cause may triumph, and My Word be heard by all mankind.'"

With warm Bahá’í love,
In the service of the beloved Guardian,

Commentary by U.S. National Spiritual Assembly

Beloved Friends:

Marking the end of the official period of mourning for our irreparable loss and grief at the passing of the beloved Guardian, the communication addressed to each individual believer throughout the world by the Hands of the Cause resident in the Holy Land, dated August 8, greatly strengthens the bond which unifies the believers in their devotion to the World Center.

How gratifying to Bahá’ís in these difficult days to learn of the “spontaneous declarations of love for our beloved Guardian and loyalty to the Hands of the Cause” received from all parts of the world, and the “great waves of prayer and of loving confidence which have been pouring in to us from national spiritual assemblies and the believers all over the world.”

On the other hand, as the Guardian said, “inwardly each Bahá’í will always grieve deeply for the loss of that priceless embodiment of loving kindness and divine wisdom.”

We are brought closer to the work proceeding so energetically at the World Center by the realization that the Hands there have had to “meet and surmount many problems,” including the temporary replacement of those Hands who have missions to carry out elsewhere, or have been called away for reasons of health.

The climax of this communication comes in this passage: “Beloved friends, we are now, together, embarked upon the most important work which human beings have ever done in the history of our planet. Ours is the priceless privilege and the grave, inescapable responsibility of raising up that sacred institution, the Universal House of Justice. This can be done only after the complete triumph of the Ten-Year Plan, which is designed to lay the necessary foundation for that weighty and supreme edifice of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.” Thus, spiritually renewed and purified by the forces conveyed through these words, we return to our immediate duties and responsibilities for assuring the success of the World Crusade.

Eleven Hands of the Cause, 2,259 Bahá’ís Attend Historic Fourth Intercontinental Conference in Frankfurt, Germany

The fourth of the five Bahá’í Intercontinental Conferences requested by the beloved Guardian was visibly under his guiding and inspiring influence, and greatly blessed by the presence of his special representative, the revered Hand of the Cause of God, Mrs. Amelia Collins, vice-president of the International Bahá’í Council; and by ten other Hands of the Cause, nineteen Auxiliary Board members, representatives of sixteen regional and national spiritual assemblies, and 2,259 believers, more than half of them from Iran, which gave a deeply stirring manifestation of the unity of the East and the West, as foretold by the Master.

This historic conference was held at the Congress Hall, in Messsegelande, Frankfurt/Main, Germany, from July 25 through 29, 1958, while from July 22 through 24 a reception for the registration of Bahá’ís took place at Stanley Hall in the Zoological Gardens.

The Words of Bahá’u’lláh: “It beseemeth all men in this day to take firm hold on the Most Great Name, and to establish the unity of all mankind. There is no place to flee to, no refuge that anyone can seek except Him,” appeared on the cover of the attractive Conference Program, which carried also a sketch of the Mother Temple of Europe, to be erected by the Community of the Most Great Name near Frankfurt/Main.

In the program we read the Call to the Conference by Dr. Adelbert Mühlischlegel, chairman of the Host National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria, in which the five-fold purpose of the Conference was set forth; as well as the names of the national assemblies officially represented, as requested by the Guardian: the British Isles, represented by Ernest Gregory; Italy and Switzerland, by Fritz Schar; the United States, by Charles Wolcott; and Germany and Austria by Dr. Eugen Schmidt.

At the entrance to the Congress Hall a large sign proclaimed Bahá’u’lláh’s affirmation that “Religion is a Radiant Light,” and dominating the interior of the hall the Greatest Name, magnified many times, hung against the grey-curtained wall back of the platform; many beautiful Persian rugs were on the floor, as well as on the long table across the front of it, the floor surrounding it, and the stairs leading up to the platform. Here the Hands of the Cause were seated during all the sessions of the Conference, with the Auxiliary Board members and representatives of the national spiritual assemblies seated in the first two rows below the platform.

The Conference was convened by Dr. Adelbert Mühlechlebel, who announced that the Guardian’s representative was about to enter the Hall, whereupon the great assemblage arose in silent homage as Mrs. Amelia Collins ascended the platform, escorted by Dr. Ugo Giachery and Dr. Hermann Grossmann. A period of eloquent silence was followed by a memorial service for the Guardian, with readings from Prayers and Meditations, and the Prayer for the Divine Plan by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, in German, English, and Persian.

Mrs. Collins Speaks of the Guardian

Mrs. Collins then addressed the friends; from her voice, carrying clear and strong over the microphone, and from her face, radiant and smiling, emanated a love that reached the heart of each one present. “How can I ever find words to bring to you what is in my heart about our Guardian?” she asked. “I feel we must all fill ourselves at this time, so that his spirit and his wishes will carry us through the next five years of the Global Crusade he initiated, and enable us to consummate his every hope and wish! This, the fulfillment of his own plan, is the loving memorial we must build for him.

“When I first heard of the passing of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, I was a young believer, and after the provisions of His Will and Testament became known, my whole heart and soul turned to that ‘youthful Branch’ appointed by Him to watch over and guide the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. How I prayed that God would help me to make him happy! Early in 1923 I first met our divine Guardian in Haifa. He was just a young man, with all the determination to carry forward the great work entrusted to his care. He was so spontaneous, so loving and outgoing in the buoyancy of his beautiful heart. Through the years we all watched with wonder and in ever deepening devotion to him and appreciation of his God-given gifts, the unfoldment of Bahá’u’lláh’s Divine Order, which he built up so patiently and wisely all over the world; but, dear friends, what a cost to himself!

“In 1951, when the Guardian called some of the friends to serve him in Haifa, I began to learn of some of the things he had passed through. His face was so sad, one could see his very spirit had been oppressed, during the time when the family opposed and finally abandoned the Faith and the Guardian to go on their own way. I can truthfully say that for a number of years, we who served in the World Center seldom saw him smile... His sufferings had been heartbreaking.

“The Guardian had a profound and innate humility. Whenever the Faith was involved he was averse in his defense and king-like in the authority with which he spoke, but as a human being he was self-effacing, and would brush aside our adulation and praise and turn it toward the Central Figures of the Faith. We knew this characteristic of his, how he would not allow a photo taken of himself, but invariably urged the friends to place a picture of the Master in the room. He would not permit the friends to have clothing or things of his, lest they might be considered as relics.

“After the years of sorrow and trial he went through with the family, after his final separation from them, came a new joy to our beloved Guardian. He loved the progress that came with the goals of the Global Crusade; it lifted him up. How can I ever describe to you his eyes when he came over to the Pilgrim House and spoke of a new achievement! His beautiful face would be all smiles, he would spread out one of his maps on the dining room table, and his fingers would point out the new endowment or the new Hazíratul-Quds purchased, or the new language translated, as the case might be.

“I feel it would be no exaggeration to say that it was the progress of the Ten-Year Plan that gave him the encouragement to go on working so hard. More than once he said, during the last years of his life, that his ministry had lasted longer than that of Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and he complained of the crushing burden, but none of us could think that it presaged his demise...”

Mrs. Collins then reviewed some of the manifold services which the Guardian had rendered the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh, such as the completion of the Shrine of the Báb “with an arcade and dome, both of which the Master had stated it should have,” the erection of the monuments and Archives Building, and she described the developments at the World Center, reviewed the list of translations as well as the writings, which “streamed out over the world in a mighty flow of exquisite language.”

“It was his hand in everything,” she said, “from the littlest to the biggest thing... Many gloves fell apart on that hand but the work of the Cause went on uninterruptedly until the last night of his life!” When he had erected the machinery of the Bahá’í Administrative Order, he suddenly shifted the whole machinery into gear and called the first Seven-Year Plan, the first step of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s Divine Plan which is the instrument for the spiritual conquest of the entire globe... What a gift he had and what gifts he gave to us!”
hearty greeting of welcome to all, and then announced that the message from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land would be read first by Mrs. Collins, followed with a German translation by Dr. Hermann Grossmann, and a Persian translation by Jalâl Khâzîh.

This message enumerated the victories that had been won in the first five years of the Crusade and suggested that "It was this overall pattern of marked success...that undoubtedly caused our Guardian to unite us in these five Intercontinental Conferences, not only to humbly thank Bahá'u'lláh for mercies received, not only to deliberate on ways and means of accomplishing the next five year's work, but as a reward for having served faithfully, with enthusiasm and consecration, this blessed Cause of God, and, as we now see, as a mercy in the hour of separation, a tender enfolding of us, his dearly beloved co-workers in the arms of that one who, in his modesty and purity of heart, called himself only 'your true brother.'"

The special tasks to be considered by the Conference were "that the budget, now being expended monthly for the construction of the Sydney Temple, be met, and that at least the major part of the sum required for the European Majshīrū'l-Adhkár be raised; and that of the 'unprecedented increase' in the number of believers throughout the world, calling for pioneers in all continents, in all the islands opened to the Faith, on the homefronts, and in the goal territories...

The introduction of the Hands of the Cause of God by John Nielsen, chairman of the Regional National Spiritual Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland, followed, and each spoke a brief message of greeting; Mrs. Amelia Collins, Jalâl Khâzîh, Dr. Ugo Giachery, Dhikru'lláh Khâdem, Enoch Olinga, Hasan Balyuzi, John Ferraby, John Robarts, Dr. Hermann Grossmann, and Dr. Ugo Giachery. Hand of the Cause Musa Banâni also attended the conference, but was in the hospital when this picture was taken.

In conclusion she said: "He made each believer feel that he had a part to play; that he was precious to the Faith and had deeds to discharge and enjoyed privileges because he was a member of the community of the Most Great Name. Let us never lose sight of this...His work in this world is done—ours is not! We are in a way Shoghi Effendi's heirs. We have inherited this work. His plan is completed, ours is the task to fulfill it. We must each of us complete our share of the World Crusade. This is the memorial we must build to our beloved Shoghi Effendi. Let us love him now more than ever before, and through the power of our love attract his love to us and bring his blessings on our labors. Let us not fail him, for he never failed us! Let us never forget him, for he never forgot us!"

Prayers closed this morning session, which had indeed brought the believers close in spirit to the beloved Guardian, and the hearts were united in humble thanksgiving for him and for his great service. The prayers at the opening and closing of each session were in the different European languages with chanting in the Persian language, and all of the talks were translated into the English, German, and Persian languages, with a speed and skill that won the appreciation of everyone.

Message From the Hands in the Holy Land

In opening the afternoon session, Dr. Mühlschlegel, on behalf of the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria, which had been given the honor of organizing the conference, extended a warm and the Crusade, and the recognition of Bahá’í Holy Days in forty-four countries, which is a sign that the Faith is being recognized. He pointed out also that the map was on display below the platform where the friends could study it more closely, and he added, “He made of it a work of art, a thing of beauty which we can carry in our hearts as a memorial.”

This visual review of achievements was followed by the living review when nineteen members of the Auxiliary Boards for the propagation and protection of the Faith were called to the platform: in all, thirteen from Europe, three from Asia, two from Africa and one from America. Fifteen regional and national spiritual assemblies were represented, namely: Germany and Austria, the British Isles, Italy and Switzerland, United States, Iran, Arabian Peninsula, Pakistan, India and Burma, Northeast Africa, Northwest Africa, Iraq, Northeast Asia, Benelux, Scandinavia and Finland, Iberian Peninsula, and France. “This review of representatives is the greatest memorial to our Guardian,” cried Ugo Giachery. “For thirty-six years he prepared what we are witnessing now!”

Knights of Bahá’u’lláh Introduced

The afternoon session began with the reading of the messages which had been received from over the world. Then, as a further “living review” of achievements, the Knights of Bahá’u’lláh, those who had arisen at the beginning of the Crusade to pioneer, were called to the platform and each one introduced by Dr. Giachery. Forty-eight were present from twenty-seven goal countries and islands of the Crusade. Each was presented with a pin with a nine-pointed star bearing the Greatest Name which had been sent from Japan for the occasion.

The evening session was reserved for “The Mother Temple of Europe.” Dr. Eugen Schmidt, the chairman of this session, first gave an impressive address about the spiritual significance of the Masjídi‘-u’l-‘Adhkar as the “visible embodiment of the Universality of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh,” and “the most powerful silent teacher.”

He introduced the architect, Teuto Rochell, who explained some of the architectural matters regarding his plan in a talk on "An Idea Takes Form." Pictures of the model were shown on the screen and the architect explained the features of his plan for a modern building of glass, steel, and cement with a height of thirty meters, a diameter of forty meters, and a glass dome with a diameter of twenty-four meters, buttressed with twenty-seven ribs extending down to the foundation, and a glass corridor with nine entrances surrounding the base of the dome. A cross-section of the model gave the view of the interior, which will seat 450 persons. The entire structure is to cost from 1.2 million to 1.5 million German marks.

Ruprecht Kruger spoke of "The Struggle for Justice and Space," which for the past five years has involved the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria in much red tape, because it is necessary to secure the permission of the local, regional, and national government to build the Temple. He explained that all land that is purchased must be approved by the authorities because they have the right to buy the land first, and only if they waive this right can the ground be bought outright: there are eighteen persons judging the case, and if one says no, it is impossible to purchase the land.

"Usually this does not matter, yet one of them said no in our case," he said. "The Christian Churches are responsible for the status quo and are strongly opposed," with the result that several contracts have been signed but not approved.

A model of the proposed structure was on display, and a cross-section gave a view of the interior. Postcards of the model were on sale and many of the friends purchased them to send to Baha'i communities, soliciting their prayers for the speedy construction of this beautiful Temple in the heart of Europe.

Viewing of Baha'u'llah's Portrait

Sunday, July 27, the high point of the Conference, came when the friends gathered to enjoy the great privilege of beholding the portrait of Baha'u'llah while standing near the blessed earth from the Holy Shrine of Baha'u'llah and viewing a lock of His precious hair, which Mrs. Collins had brought to the Conference as requested by the Guardian. Beautiful talleman roses adorned the table, which was covered with a lovely Persian rug. On one side stood Dr. Giachery and Mrs. Collins, and on the other Jalal Khâ'ez, Hasan Balyuzi, John Roberts, Enoch Olinga, Dikrullâh Khâdem, and Dr. Adelbert Mûhlschlegel, Hands of the Cause.

As the believers filed by, Mrs. Collins, with a radiant smile, anointed the hand of each with altar of roses from a vial used by the Guardian for that purpose, and repeated the Greatest Name, "Allâh-u-Abha!" It was a holy atmosphere of purification and dedication that pervaded the Congress Hall that morning. For more than four hours the believers passed by, and each one had the same loving, radiant greeting and the outstretched hand anointed with altar of roses by Mrs. Collins, who at the advanced age of 85 years was enabled to perform this sacred mission, the crowning act of a lifetime of service to the Cause. Surely no one present will ever hold age a barrier to activity in the Faith, nor doubt the assistance that is vouchsafed to those who arise to serve!

Thanksgiving to Baha’u’llah at Feast and Devotions

At the Unity Feast that evening the hearts turned in humble thanksgiving to Baha'u'llah. "First," as Mr. Ferraby said, "for thirty-six years of the guidance of Shoghi Effendi, for that most potent Covenant which is one of the most distinguishing features of the World Order of Baha'u'llah; and two of the products of that Covenant is the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and the Tablets of the Divine Plan, which is the Charter of the World Crusade. The first fruits were the two Seven-Year Plans, and the latest evidence of the Divine Plan is the Ten-Year Crusade. Now it is half ended. We have seen with our own eyes how the bounties of Baha'u'llah have been showered upon us in these first five years. All the lands of the world were settled by the rush of pioneers in the first year; we have witnessed the contributions of the friends supported the activities, the Haziratu'll-Quds were established, and the endowments purchased. We achieved a very great deal in the third phase; the bounties of Baha'u'llah continued to be showered on us. Many national and regional assemblies were established.

"We are now in the fourth phase, when the Guardian expects a tremendous increase in the number of Bahá'ís throughout the world. Let us this evening, as we pray, feel that the bounties will continue to be showered on us until 1963 when the friends gather in Baghdad to celebrate!"

The devotional program of thanksgiving to Baha'u'llah followed, and the readings and prayers also included the Prayer for the Departed for Fritz Shaver, American pioneer to Switzerland for over ten years, who recently had passed away in Basle.

Dr. Grossmann presented many beautiful and precious gifts that had been received by the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria for the Temple: Persian rugs, a picture of the mosque in which Baha'u'llah prayed in Adrianople, a piece of plaster from the room in which Baha'u'llah lived there, as well as roses from Baha'u'llah's House which He Himself had planted when a prisoner in Adrianopol, silver vases, a plaque carrying the Greatest Name, a shirt of 'Abdu'l-Baha, and many other gifts too numerous to mention.

Donations for the Temple

Monday morning two long prayers were chanted in Persian, and it was explained that the Guardian had especially requested these prayers for the inauguration of the Temple in Wilmette. "These prayers have been used this morning," Jalal Khazeh explained, "because we must now approach the task of securing donations for the Temple, one of the tasks mentioned by the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land. This is an important day, and we must be sure that the spirit of the Guardian is present. To explain this idea: if we visit a factory we see a lot of machinery working and functioning. They are working without their own will and knowledge. It is the will and knowledge of the engineers who have produced them. The same is true of this conference. We have come here from every part of the globe. Why did we do so? It was the Guardian's wish that led us here!"

"I remember when I was in Haifa with my friend, Mr. Navidi. We heard our Guardian tell about the progress of the Cause and the influence it will have in coming centuries. Mr. Navidi asked what use this progress would have for us if we would be dead. Could we witness such progress from the world beyond? The Guardian replied that of course our spirit will be able to witness from the world beyond what is going on here and the victories and emanations of these spirits are continuing their effect on the world. If now this is true of our spirits, we should rest assured that the sacred spirit of our beloved Guardian is a strong force and has great effect in our community and in the progress of the Cause."

Charles Wolcott, delegate of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, and chairman of the morning session, made a few introductory remarks directed to the friends of Iran. "Your fathers and grandfathers," he said, "have sacrificed with their blood for the Faith. Today we must use the means we have to show the Guardian that we give all our efforts and donations to the progress of the Cause. The fourth phase of the World Crusade has started. This stage must establish bulwarks of our Faith in all parts of the globe. Pioneers must arise and go to places which have not been reached. We need more centers everywhere. We must realize that the monthly cost of the Sydney building must be met regularly and we are about to begin the cost of the Mother Temple of Europe in Frankfurt." He announced many donations, which had already come in, of money and jewelry; that an automobile had been given for the trip to 'Akka from Haifa; that an Afnán a candlestick had been given which will be placed on the Guardian's grave in London.

Habib Sabet spoke of a Bahá'í who had asked the Guardian regarding the Crusade and he replied that he had measured the power and capacity of the friends around the world and had then made the Ten-Year Crusade. "It has been estimated that the expenses of the first five years that have been met thus far have exceeded twenty million dollars, and this amount has been paid by the Bahá'ís throughout the world," he said.

"We all know that Mrs. Amelia Collins has been contributing continuously throughout her life. Today we have the pleasure to announce the donation of $50,000 which she gave when the efforts for the Temple started." He continued to announce contributions that were sent to him on the platform, while the ushers distributed pledge forms in Persian, English, and German for those who wished to pledge a specific amount to be paid later. This hastened the collection of donations.

Cable to Hands in the Holy Land

The committee that had been requested to draft a cable to be sent to the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land, submitted the following which was unanimously adopted: SACRED SPIRIT BELOVED GUARDIAN SHELTERING CONFIRMING BELOVED REPRESENTATIVE AMELIA COLLINS NINE REVERED HANDS CAUSE 229 BELIEVERS 57 COUNTRIES PRESENT THIS HISTORIC CONFERENCE. WITH GRATEFUL HEARTS WE HEREBYE PLEDGE OURSELVES PROVE OUR LOVE DEVO­TION TO HIM BY ACCOMPLISHING ALL REMAINING GOALS CRUSADE STOP WITH EVERY DEEPEST LOVE AND ASSURANCE FAITHFULNESS VENERATION HANDS CAUSE HOLY LAND BEG YOUR PRAYERS HOLY SHRINES.—FOURTH INTERCONTINENTAL CONFERENCE.

At the beginning of the afternoon session the three gifts from the Guardian to the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria were presented by Mrs. Collins, and received by the chairman, Dr. Mühl­schlegel.

Excerpt From Convention Message Read

Joel Marangella, chairman of the afternoon session on pioneering, read an excerpt from the Convention Message of the Hands in the Holy Land concerning the attainment of every objective of the World Crusade. He then pointed out the goals that took priority in the countries not yet opened to the Faith, and the islands where there is just one Bahá'í pioneer at this time. Mimeographed forms in the different languages were distributed to those wishing to pioneer as Marion Hofman forcefully and dynamically spoke on "Our Pioneers."

"The mission of Bahá'u'lláh is to establish the Kingdom of God on earth, therefore teaching is the essence of this Faith," she stated. "We must take this message to every city and every person in the world. This is pioneering!"

Island Pioneers Introduced

The pioneers who now lived on an island alone were asked to come to the platform and give their name and the island on which they were pioneering so that the friends could better understand how many there were who needed help. Pioneers were there from the Faroes, Hebrides, Orkneys, Skye, Malta, Rhodes, Sardinia, Corsica, Sylt, and Iceland. Liechtenstein and Andorra were also mentioned as in need of pioneers. Then in response to this call for pioneers seventy-five believers arose, and were introduced to the friends.

Congress Hall Filled for Public Meeting

In the evening a public meeting was held in the Congress Hall, to which had been invited the city of-Official and friends of the Frankfurt Bahá'ís. The hall, with a seating capacity of 2,500, was filled, and many Bahá'ís stood in the balcony.

Dr. Adelbert Mühlenschlegel spoke in German on the subject "The Earth is but One Country," and Hasan Balyuzi spoke in English on "Religion is a Radiant Light."

The last day of this great conference was devoted to a consideration of the remaining teaching needs of the Crusade, and Musa Bánání, the Hand of the Cause of Africa, was able to be present. Before he spoke, a cabled reply from the Hands in the Holy Land was read: "HEARTS TOUCHED (BY) EVIDENCE (OF) DEDICATION AND DETERMINATION CONVEYED (BY) LOVING MESSAGE (AND) UNMISTAKEABLE EVIDENCE (OF) SPIRIT (OF) THE) BELOVED GUARDIAN PERVADING (THE) UNPRECEDENTED HISTORIC CONFERENCE PLANNED BY HIM. ARDENTLY PRAYING (AT) SHRINES (FOR) ATTAINMENT (OF) ALL OBJECTIVES (OF) HOLY CRUSADE (AND) PARTICULARLY SPEEDY CONSTRUCTION (OF) MOTHER TEM-

Rostrum of the Congress Hall, Frankfurt/Main, Germany, crowded with volunteers for pioneering at the Intercontinental Conference.
Mr. Sabet was asked to report on the contributions; he announced that 915,917 D.M. had been contributed by the friends in cash and asked that another effort be put forth by the friends to make it a million; this goal was reached by further contributions.

At twelve o'clock there was a pause, and David Hofman explained that "at this very moment the friends in England are laying flowers on the most sacred and blessed spot in Europe, the grave of our beloved Guardian." He then read the excerpts with reference to Shoghi Effendi from the Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

Review of Remaining Crusade Goals

Charles Wolcott then gave a brief review of the remaining goals to be attained in the next five years: "During the second Seven-Year Plan given by the Guardian to the United States, the original ten goal countries of Europe were opened. At the beginning of the Crusade our goal was a national assembly in each of these ten countries. Later in 1953 the Guardian added Finland and France. The Guardian knew our capacity and gave us our tasks step by step. The closing of the third phase of the Crusade witnessed the achievement of four regional assemblies in these countries. Now each must form its own national assembly in the coming five years. To do this we must have many local assemblies. Many local assemblies are the first step toward a national assembly." He made an appeal for Latin America "where we need 150 pioneers to establish twenty local assemblies," and appealed to the Bahá'í's of Holland to go to Dutch New Guinea.

Jaláí Kházeh explained that "our principle aim is to establish the International House of Justice, and this matter needs great work and sacrifice. If we imagine the International House of Justice to be a structure it would be erected on about sixty pillars, each to stand as a symbol of a national spiritual assembly. When the plan started we had only twelve national assemblies, twelve pillars, then in 1956 we had three, in 1957 we had thirteen, and this year one; in 1959 there will be four more, totalling thirty-three. In reality, however, we will only have twenty-three as the remainder are regional national assemblies. We have then eleven national assemblies to be erected in Europe, three in Asia, and twenty in Latin America! Thirty-four pillars must be erected and then the dome should be put on these fifty-seven pillars. Our main goal is to build up the rest of the edifice which our Guardian has started.

"The important thing," Mr. Wolcott reminded the friends, "is to keep this goal in front of you and take back to your homeland the thrilling news, and entreat all of the believers at home to become a part of this Crusade while there is yet time!"

The session then turned to a consideration of the teaching needs of the European countries. Jan Sysling, chairman of the Regional National Spiritual Assembly of the Benelux countries, spoke of Luxembourg; Hand of the Cause Dr. Vargá reported on Austria; Miss Virginia Orbison, a member of the National Assembly of the Iberian Peninsula, explained the requirements of Portugal and Spain; John Nielsen, chairman of the Regional National Assembly of Scandinavia and Finland, made a special plea for Finland; and Fritz Schar, chairman of the Italo-Swiss National Assembly, spoke on Switzerland and Italy.

A call for pioneers was raised for these areas, and fifty-eight responded. This brought the total number of volunteers to 133, which meant that both tasks laid before the conference had been achieved, with one million marks contributed and the above number of pioneer offers.

Appeal to the Government

A special committee had been appointed during the conference, at the request of the National Assembly of Germany and Austria, to appeal to the national government for the realization of the Temple project. Dr. Schmidt now announced that such an appeal had been drafted, and it was hoped that it would have an effect on the Hessian government.

Farewell to the Conference

The Hands of the Cause then one by one approached the microphone and said farewell to the friends, with comments on the achievements of the conference. In particular, the hearts of the audience were touched with these precious words of Mrs. Collins, which closed the sessions:

"Beloved friends, you have all become so dear to me in these days. You have all brought the Guardian nearer to me. There is little more to say, but I would like to add to what has been said today to those who have offered to go pioneering. To win one smile from the Guardian is enough to take you through a whole year of pioneering, and I am sure you won the first smile today!

"I am going to say something very personal. When our beloved Guardian informed me of the mission I was to perform, I became frightened, and then I laid it aside. I thought 'I will see the Guardian before long and he will give me strength and he will tell me what to say,' but we all know that plan was changed, and I came here fearing to face so many of the friends. I was not well, but miracle after miracle happened to me, and why? Because I felt the great loving spirit of the Guardian.

"For six weeks before I came to Frankfurt I practised almost every day to see how long I could stand, fearing that I had a very sacred mission to perform. I never could endure over one half-hour, and I was completely exhausted! You all know what happened: I stood for over four hours! That was what the Guardian gave me and I am sharing it with you. Because that will happen to everyone of you if you will just do what the Guardian wishes you to do. You have the key here, and don't lose it! We must each become a magnet, a magnet to attract the Holy Spirit—and I have felt that here every hour I have been with you, so precious and sacred!

"Several here this afternoon have said it was hard, it was sad, to say good-bye. I feel just the opposite. Every year when the Guardian parted from us in Haifa he would give me certain instructions; last Spring when he left he had said goodbye, he was coming before in my room, but the next morning when we were gathered to see him off, he took my hand and said, 'Don't be sad!' So I leave those words with you 'Don't be sad!'"
U. S. National Assembly Implements Dynamic, Decisive Homefront Campaign
With Study Material to Deepen Understanding of Bahá'ú'lláh's Teachings

In his last communication to the American Bahá'ís dated September 21, 1957, the beloved Guardian called more urgently than ever before upon “every single member of this strenuously laboring, clear-visioned, stout-hearted, spiritually endowed community . . . to immortalize this approaching, fateful hour in the evolution of a world Spiritual Crusade . . . with an instantaneous plan of action, at once so dynamic and decisive as to wipe out, on the one hand, the deficiencies which have . . . bogged down the operations of the Crusade on the homefront, and tremendously accelerate, on the other, the progress of the triple task . . . constituting one of its preeminent objectives.”

The three aspects of this task “which can brook no further delay” he named as being “spiritual reinvigoration, administrative expansion, and material replenishment.”

With this clearly-defined challenge before it, the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, following much prayer and consultation, has mapped out a “dynamic and decisive” homefront campaign for the remainder of the Ten-Year Plan, which incorporates the participation of every national committee, local spiritual assembly, Bahá'í group, and individual believer. The campaign was launched on August first with a letter addressed to every American Bahá'í, appealing for wholehearted response to all the requests made by the National Assembly, including the adoption of personal goals for maximum contribution to the three aspects of teaching and service called for by the beloved Guardian.

Since “spiritual reinvigoration” was named by Shoghi Effendi as first of the three points on which he pleaded for us to concentrate, the National Spiritual Assembly distributed at the same time an individual and group study and discussion outline designed to help every believer deepen his knowledge and understanding of the essential teachings regarding (1) the Station of Bahá'ú'lláh, (2) the Covenant of Bahá'ú'lláh, (3) the Mission of Bahá'ú'lláh, and (4) His Laws and Teachings.

Further Study Material to Follow

Further study material will follow at regular intervals, each release dealing with certain fundamental spiritual and administrative verities, aimed at indi-

A section of the quartz facing for the Mashriqu'í-Adhkar of Australia, being constructed near Sydney. Behind this quartz facing the main cement supporting wall will be constructed. The architect and builders expect the completion of construction by March 1959, to be followed by interior decoration, furnishings, and exterior landscaping.
individual reinvigoration, and better understanding and application of basic administrative principles in local and national activities.

To give further impetus to this campaign, the National Spiritual Assembly has scheduled a series of approximately forty conferences throughout the nation to be held on the latter part of October, and to be conducted by the Hands of the Cause, members of the Auxiliary Boards, and members of the National Spiritual Assembly. At these conferences the friends will be given opportunity to consult on the various aspects of the campaign, particularly on subjects relating to administration which appear to need clarification before "administrative expansion" can be realized.

By these and various other means, the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States is endeavoring to take dynamic leadership in wiping out the deficiencies which have "bogged down the operations of the Crusade on the homefront" and, in the words of Shoghi Effendi, to assist the American believers "to arise to the occasion which history has literally thrust upon them."

Custodians of Faith Restore Bounty of Pilgrimage to Holy Land

The believers are informed that the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly has received a cablegram from the Custodians in Haifa stating that pilgrimage to the Holy Shrines will be reopened beginning December 1, 1958. Before proceeding to the Holy Land each pilgrim must have received approval from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land of his or her application for the blessing of pilgrimage.

It is also to be understood that approval of pilgrimage is granted according to the priority of applications as received in Haifa. The Guardian made no distinction in dealing with applications, except this element of priority.

—U.S. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

The Baha'i Home

As we near the date when the Baha'i Home in Wilmette will be opened, the National Spiritual Assembly wishes to offer the friends, both for their own information and for accurate statements in speaking of the Home to non-Baha'is, an explanation of its particular purpose and the special advantages it assures to its guests.

All believers understand from the beloved Guardian's instructions that the Baha'i Home represents the first accessory of the Baha'i House of Worship to be constructed, and in addition it is a Crusade goal assigned to the Baha'is of the United States.

As soon as possible a series of photographs will be taken showing exterior and interior views, and these illustrations when published will reveal the impressive architectural design, the efficient layout of rooms, and the very attractive furnishings and scheme of decoration. The photographs will also show at least the beginnings of a most attractive landscape plan prepared by Mr. Hilbert Dahl.

As a structure designed for a specific purpose, the Baha'i Home when completed will be an achievement in which all believers can take pride.

It has already been reported that the Baha'i Home accommodates twenty guests, the administrator, and a staff of workers. Not only is there a large reception room, hobby room, and library, but the landscaping plan also provides attractive garden paths and an area for leisurely outdoor hours.

The land was purchased, and the construction carried out, by the Temple Trustees. Since a home for the aged operates under special regulations, the Baha'i Home has been incorporated, with a Board of Directors consisting of the nine annually elected members of the National Spiritual Assembly. This corporate body holds title to the land and building, will operate the Home, and maintain its own records, including a bank account in the name of The Baha'i Home, Incorporated. The administrator will be Mrs. Florence Gibson, a Bahá'í, whose professional training admirably prepares her for the operation of the Home where personal relations are all-important.

What the Baha'i Home offers is a beautiful home environment and pleasant association with other persons within the age group. There are many individuals who at the age of sixty-five find themselves facing ten or more years without family or intimate friends. For such persons the Baha'i Home offers a haven of comfort and the opportunity to make a new circle of intimate friends. Moreover, because this Home is not a nursing home, the Baha'i guest is not obliged to live with the sick, the helpless, and the senile.

Two guests will be offered accommodation as a gift from the American Bahá'í community. The other eighteen guests will pay as much as they can toward the actual cost of their maintenance. All guests are carefully chosen with reference to sound personal character and capacity for pleasant human relations.

What the American believers are accomplishing in this unique project is to demonstrate to the public the Bahá'í principles of the oneness of mankind and humanitarian service. The Baha'i Home makes no discrimination of race, religion, or nationality. It is hu-
Official Commemorations of the Passing of the Guardian Not to be Held

The U.S. National Spiritual Assembly has received from the Hands of the Cause residing in the Holy Land a letter dated August 11, addressed to all national assemblies. This communication reports a decision which each national assembly is requested to present to the believers.

"After careful thought and prayerful consideration, the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land feel that it would be disloyal to the wishes of our beloved Guardian for us, or for the friends throughout the world, to gather on November 4 and officially commemorate his passing. His words given in the Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh makes this very clear: To commemorate any event associated with his life would be tantamount to a departure from those established truths that are enshrined within our beloved Faith."

The letter also states: "However, each individual believer may, indeed we feel should, remember this unforgettable day with prayers and meditation, and seek to rededicate himself to the service of the Faith and to ponder ways and means by which he can aid in achieving the goals set by the beloved Guardian."

In accordance with this decision, the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly points out that on November 4, 1958, and also on successive anniversaries of the passing of the Guardian, no local, regional, or national meetings are to be held and no programs of commemoration prepared even for a few believers. The sacred character of the day will inspire individual believers, each by himself, to pray, meditate, and make effort to attain rededication to the service of the Faith.

Ghana Prime Minister Accepts Baha'i Citation of Appreciation During Visit to United States

When Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, Prime Minister of Ghana, Africa, visited the United States in July, an effort was made by the National Spiritual Assembly to present to him in person a citation expressing the appreciation of the American Bahá’í community for his work in assuring freedom of religion to his people.

Since Dr. Nkrumah’s schedule was too full to permit a personal interview, the following letter and a beautifully framed photograph of the Bahá’í House of Worship was delivered to him in New York on July 24 by H. Borrah Kavelin, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, and Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh:

Dr. Kwame Nkrumah,
Prime Minister
Ghana, Africa
Your Excellency:

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States, in our capacity of administrative body directing the affairs of the members of our Faith resident in this country, esteems it a high privilege to express respectful greeting and spiritual welcome on the occasion of your Excellency’s visit to the United States.

On behalf of the American members of our Faith, the National Spiritual Assembly more particularly honors your Excellency for the enactment of laws assuring religious freedom in the country of Ghana. For many years our Assembly has maintained Bahá’í teachers in all continents, and in the course of spreading the Bahá’í message affirming the unity of God, the unity of His Prophets, and the unity of mankind, we have experienced many forms of opposition arising from prejudice and the denial of the principle of religious freedom.

For this reason the American Bahá’ís desire to pay tribute to your Excellency for enlightened leadership in the moral and social progress of humanity. In token of this Bahá’í esteem we respectfully request your Excellency to accept the gift of an illustration of the Bahá’í House of Worship located in Wilmette, Illinois, whose doors are open to all seekers without discrimination of creed, race or nation.

Sincerely,
National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States.
H. Borrah Kavelin, chairman
Horace Holley, secretary.
Dr. Nkruman's reply through his private secretary on July 31 is reproduced below:

PRIME MINISTER'S OFFICE

Dear Mr. Chairmen,

The Prime Minister has asked me to convey to you, the Secretary and the Members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís in Wilmette, his sincere thanks for your letter of good wishes to him and for the framed photograph of the Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette.

Dr. Nkruman sends you all his greetings and good wishes.

Yours sincerely,

Private Secretary to the Prime Minister

The Chairmen,
National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís

49,166 Visit Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette During Summer Months

The number of visitors to the Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette during the three summer months of June, July, and August 1958 totalled 49,166, of which more than one-third were Sunday visitors. The visitors on one Sunday in July numbered over 2,000. These figures bring to more than 550,000 the number of individuals who have visited the Temple since its dedication on May 1, 1953.

During these same summer months, tours were arranged for approximately fifty special groups ranging in size from 15 to 550, or a total of more than 1,800, both adults and young people. Several of these groups were from churches and from YMCA and YWCA organizations from as far away as Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio. The largest single group to have visited the Temple this year was composed of 350 retired employees of the Western Electric Company and their friends. Other large groups were composed of 150 delegates to the International Congress of Religious Libraries, librarians from the Chicago Historical Society, three bus loads of delegates attending the Lions International Convention, and 115 students from all the states of the United States and Canada, attending the National High School Institute at Northwestern University, all of them editors of high school publications who were to write articles on the Temple and the Faith for their local school papers. Fifty teachers attending summer session on the Chicago campus of Northwestern University were another very interested group.

The gardens surrounding the Temple were the special attraction for the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit Guild of the Illinois Garden Club and for the Garden Club of the Village of Winnetka. The superintendent of a new cemetery was so impressed by the Temple landscaping that he requested the name and address of the landscape architect, Hilbert Dahl, for the purpose of consulting him for the landscaping of this new cemetery.

Not all visitors sign the guest registers, but an examination of the records for June, July, and August reveals that there were 374 visitors from 64 foreign countries, the largest number from Canada (47), Germany (26), Sweden (24), England (24) and Mexico (18). The seventeen countries of Asia represented were: India, Pakistan, Burma, Israel, Turkey, Indonesia, Malaya, China, Formosa, Syria, Philippine Islands, Jordan, Iraq, Japan, Iran, Russia, and Hong Kong. The twenty-one European countries listed included Hungary, Poland, Greece, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia. There were visitors also from Australia, New Zealand, Guam, Hawaii, six countries in Africa, and fourteen in Latin America.

The Temple and the gardens continue to attract the attention of innumerable photographers who, in addition to taking their own pictures, purchase large numbers of colored slides and postcards to send to their friends back home. Many requests come to the National Spiritual Assembly for information from people all over the country. Frequently these inquiries are addressed simply to "Bahá'í Temple, Wilmette (or Chicago), Illinois."

In an effort to stimulate a still larger number of tours, the Temple Guides Committee has provided local spiritual assemblies in the area surrounding the Temple with posters which can be sent to organizations to post on their bulletin boards, inviting their members to visit the Bahá'í House of Worship singly or in groups. Thus the Bahá'í House of Worship continues to be the great "silent teacher."

East Baton Rouge, La., Schools Recognize Bahá'í Holy Days

The Bahá'í Group of Baton Rouge, La., has been informed by the East Baton Rouge Parish School Board that the state school law (R. S. 17:221-17:232—Sub-Part C) makes absence from school, for observance of religious holidays, legal absences. (The word parish as used in Louisiana is equivalent to the word county as used in other states).

Baha’is of Alaska, Canada, and United States Contribute to First Alaskan Summer School

For the first time in history, Bahá’ís from other parts of Alaska, Canada, and the States converged on Juneau for an official Bahá’í gathering—the opening of the first permanent Bahá’í Summer School in Alaska. Juneau established its first Local Assembly a year ago, and a unique but most evident change in the spiritual atmosphere of the city was sensed by the friends who had been present in Juneau previous to that time. A spirit of general awakening seemed evident to all.

The Summer School was blessed with a message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land through the National Assembly of Alaska which read: “Please convey loving greeting attendants first Summer School.”

The total number attending the school sessions was thirty-nine, with ten of them being contacts, the students and teachers being drawn from ten places in Alaska, Whitehorse in the Yukon Territory, Seattle, and Evanston, Ill. The Bahá’ís were very grateful for this attendance, considering the vast distances involved, both within Alaska and from outside.

The school was opened with an informal Chinese dinner at the American Legion hall, rented for the entire summer school period, at which time the friends viewed a TV program presented by Mrs. Eunice Braun from Evanston, Ill., who was introduced by Monte Smith of the Juneau Bahá’í community. On Sunday afternoon the Juneau Bahá’ís were hosts at a picnic at Auke Bay, with a trip to see the nearby Mendenhall glacier.

Courses included “Bahá’í History,” and “Islam,” by Joan Anderson of Whitehorse; “Know Your Bahá’í Literature,” by Eunice Braun, Managing Director of the Bahá’í Publishing Trust in Wilmette; and “Prophecy and Christianity,” by Hazel Mori of Seattle. Two programs on “Morals and Ethics” were given by the youth, with Vivian Ayerst of Sitka and Janet Stout of Palmer presenting material at one session on “Child Education.”

Evenings were utilized as public teaching events, the first being Monday evening with a talk on “The Purpose of Life” by Eunice Braun; a Tuesday evening talk on “Christian Prophecy” by Hazel Mori; a youth session on Wednesday, and a showing of Life magazine slides on Islam by Joan Anderson on Thursday evening, coordinated with a slide-showing of Spain by Eunice Braun with emphasis on the Islamic period. On Friday evening a farewell party was held, after a talk by Hazel Mori, with a number of guests of the Bahá’ís attending.

Outstanding publicity for these events, and for the School, was obtained on radio, TV, and press through efforts of Monte Smith, publicity chairman. An unusually attractive window display was arranged by Herb Johnson through arrangements with Pan American airlines office—the most strategic place in the city.

Bahá’ís attending the school were grateful for the services of Don Anderson, who handled registration, housing, and social arrangements; Glenn Moul, session chairman; Janet Smith, in charge of devotions; Al Tasaka, official photographer; and Mrs. Marian Johnson, literature sales, and who also was secretary of the Summer School Committee.

Hazíratu’l-Quds of Osaka, Japan, Donated by Persian Pioneer

The third Hazíratu’l-Quds of the Bahá’ís of Japan has been established with the gift of the residence of Hassan Naderi, Bahá’í pioneer in Osaka. The other Hazíratu’l-Quds are the National Center in Tokyo and the Local Center in Amagasaki.

This newly-acquired Bahá’í Center is located near the heart of Osaka. It is a two-story residence with all necessary utilities on 357 square meters of land.

Two Chicago Television Programs Present
Basic Facts of Faith, Temple Worship Program

Television station WBBM-TV (CBS), Chicago, is conducting a Public Affairs feature on the world’s great religions under the title “Pathways to Faith.” Each religion is presented through materials furnished by the religious group itself in a program prepared by WBBM-TV with the cooperation of representatives of the religion.

The series includes Buddhism, Hinduism, Islam, Judaism, Christianity, and Bahá’í.

The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh was presented in two half-hour periods, 9:30-10:00 a.m., Sunday, August 24 and August 31.

On August 24 the history, teachings, and meaning of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh were vividly expressed in a number of black and white slides that included a photograph of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, the Mansion of Bahá’u’lláh, the Shrine of the Báb, the International Archives Building, Green Acre Institute, and Geyserville School. There was also a moving picture of the House of Worship in Wilmette. A running commentary on these subjects was delivered by the program announcer.

He then interviewed four representatives of the Faith, who answered questions concerning the Founder, the worldwide Bahá’í community, the basic teachings and the administrative order, the relationship of the Faith to other religions and to civil government, and the principle of progressive revelation.

The Baha'is interviewed were Horace Holley, Miss Charlotte M. Linfoot, Miss Judy Bernstein, and Harlan Scheffler.

The concluding Baha'i program, Sunday, August 31, consisted of the reproduction of a public worship program as conducted in the Temple auditorium, with readings from the Holy Books and selections by the Baha'i Temple A Cappella Choir.

The readers taking part in the worship program on August 31 were Mrs. Lili Clooman, Herbert Baler, Mrs. Anne Floyd, and Harlan Scheffler.

Following so closely the publication of the Baha'i article by Guy Murchie in the Chicago Sunday Tribune, this TV performance, transmitted by so important a Chicago station, can be regarded as a notable landmark in the public recognition of our Faith in the United States.

Baha'i Teachers and Youth Contacts

Form Cultural Club in San Salvador

A group of non-Baha'i youth of San Salvador, El Salvador, together with three adult Baha'is as counselors, have founded the "Club Juvenil Excelsior" as a way of filling the moral and cultural vacuum threatening these earnest and promising students. They have had their meetings for several months in the local Haziratu'l-Quds.

"Contemplating the state in which society now finds itself," begins their constitution, "we have decided to form a club with the proposal to gather youth who in the future will guide the society to noble and cultural ends."

There are at present fifteen members, who with about ten guests listen to men of education or public affairs explain their work. One recent guest speaker was so intrigued by both the club and by what little he knew of the Baha'i teachings that he spent the greater part of the program asking questions about the Faith. Though this was unexpected, it did give the believers the opportunity to explain the teachings without giving the youth, who are mostly Catholic, the feeling of being indoctrinated. Three of the youth have already said that they wish to become Baha'is.

The other activities of the club are recreational. It is open without discrimination to youth of all social classes, races, nationalities, and religions, and promises to respect the ideas of all the members. The constitution mentions that the applicants for membership must have "no vices," and includes as the moral of the club, the entire text of 'Abdu'l-Baha's "To Live the Life."

Youth of three other cities of El Salvador have expressed a desire to form clubs using the same text.

Two Panama Baha'is Visit Guatemala, Mexico

Seeking Employment to Settle as Pioneers

One of the greatest joys of teaching the Faith is to see our pupils rise on their own to spread the Message. Recently, two young men from Panama, Hector Ehrman and Alberto Landau, worked overtime for some months, saved their money, and went to the Annual Convention in Guatemala, visiting Baha'i communities en route, and continuing their journey afterwards by land to Mexico where they visited many communities, deeply impressing all who saw and heard them with their obvious sincerity and dedication. They are looking for employment throughout this territory with the hope of becoming permanent pioneer settlers.

This is the kind of spirit that will make the Faith grow by leaps and bounds, because whereas the inhabitants of these countries rather take for granted North American pioneers and travellers, the idea of the Latins doing this work is still rather new and very convincing.

Yerrinbool Summer School Dates Announced

The twenty-third annual Yerrinbool Baha'i Summer School will be held at "Bolton Place," Yerrinbool, New South Wales, from December 26, 1958, to January 8, 1959.

Inquiries should be addressed to: Mrs. J. Vohrads­ kay, secretary; Baha'i Summer School Committee; 108 Prince’s Highway; Dapto, New South Wales.

BAHA'I IN THE NEWS

Magnolia Times, a mimeographed newsletter published by the patients in East Louisiana State Hospital, refers to the fact that Caroline Rogers, a Baha'i employee, is described so favorably that the Faith is arousing attention.

The Chicago Sunday Tribune Magazine for June 1,
1958, had an article reporting the results of a poll taken of a cross section of Chicago area teen-agers. One of the questions asked was to name the historical man and woman most admired, and the name of Baha'u'llah was turned in by one student.

The publication entitled An Expert's Guide to Chicago includes the "famous Baha'i Temple" as one of the sights along the North Shore.

The Kiwanis Magazine, April 1958, published a visitor's guide to Chicago in preparation for their Forty-Third Annual Convention, which included a map marked with nine featured places to see. The Baha'i Temple was second on this list.

The Lynn, Mass., Daily Evening Item, May 21, 1958, answered a question about how many people belonged to the Baha'i religion. "When Shoghi Effendi, international Baha'i leader, died in November 1957, it was reported the religion had nearly 4,000,000 members in 250 countries."

The Daily Journal-Gazette and Commercial-Star, May 22, 1958, ran under the heading "Community Church Services—this Week's Sermon" the text of the first number of the Baha'i Public Relations Bulletin entitled "Religion."

The Employment Security News, State of Idaho, of March 1958, published this item: "Rhoda Broughton wished all her friends a 'happy New Year' on Friday, March 21. She happily announced that she is going to Chicago in April as a delegate to the Baha'i Convention."

Thou dost witness, O my God, how He Who is Thy splendor calleth Thee to remembrance, notwithstanding the manifold troubles that have touched Him, troubles which none except Thee can number. Thou beholdest how, in His prison-house, He recounteth Thy wondrous praises with which Thou didst inspire Him. Such is His fervor that His enemies are powerless to deter him from mentioning Thee, O Thou Who are the Possessor of all names!

Praised be Thou that Thou hast so strengthened Him with Thy strength, and endowed Him by Thine almighty power with such potency, that aught save Thee is in His estimation but a handful of dust. The lights of un­fading splendor have so enveloped Him that all else but Thee is in His eyes but a shadow.

And when Thine irresistible summons reached me, I arose, fortified by Thy strength, and called all that are in Thy heaven and all that are on Thy earth to turn in the direction of Thy favors and the horizon of Thy bounties. Some caviled at me, and determined to hurt me and slay me. Others drank to the full of the wine of Thy grace, and hastened towards the habitation of Thy grace, and hastened towards the habitation of Thy grace.

I beseech Thee, O Thou Who are the Creator of earth and heaven and the Source of all things, to attract Thy servants through the fragrances of the Robe of Thine Inspiration and Thy Revelation, and to help them attain the Tabernacle of Thy behest and power. From eternity Thou wert by Thy transcendent might supreme over all things, and Thou wilt be exalted unto eternity in Thy Godhead and surpassing sovereignty.

Let Thy mercy, then, be upon Thy servants and Thy creatures. Thou art, in truth, the Almighty, the Inaccessible, the All-Glorious, the Unconditioned.

Message From the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land to the Fifth Intercontinental Conference in Singapore

As the last historic Conference marking the midway point of the Crusade opens, our thoughts and our hearts turn with a great wave of mingled emotions to our beloved Guardian—and beyond and above him to Bahá'u'lláh, the supreme Manifestation, the Glory of the Father, the Eternal Beauty of God revealed in all its splendour to men in this age.

It is nearly a year since the historic “October Message” of 1957 was released to the Bahá'í World by our Guardian. We cannot but look back upon this year with feelings of awe and wonder; in spite of the great calamity which overtook us, our hearts are moved in profound thanksgiving to Bahá'u'lláh. Swiftly following upon the plans for the celebration of the halfway point of the Ten-Year Plan came the paralyzing shock of the sudden passing of our beloved Shoghi Effendi, our guide and leader, our appointed protector and Guardian. Added to our grief and consternation was a sense of bafflement at the ways of God—but only for a short time. East and West the followers of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh demonstrated how deep was their belief in Him, and how well His Guardian had built the foundations of His Divine Order in the hearts of His servants. Chastened through their great sorrow, purified through their great love, the believers arose as one man to support unitedly the institution of the Hands carefully erected by the Guardian during the last decade of his life and strongly reinforced by him just before his passing. This profound unity manifest amongst the Hands of the Cause themselves, and amongst all the widely scattered Bahá'í communities throughout the world, immediately attracted the protection and blessings of Bahá'u'lláh.

The first of these five historic Conferences, held in Africa less than three months after the passing of the Guardian, witnessed a great release of spiritual power in that continent so dear to his heart. This was swiftly followed by the equally successful Australian, American, and European Conferences. An unprecedented number of believers gathered on these occasions, and large numbers of pioneers volunteered for service with a dedication reminiscent of that great wave of enthusiasm and consecration which in 1953 carried the pioneers to all corners of the earth, and in one brief year opened nearly all the virgin territories—a feat which was the source of immense pride to the beloved Guardian.

The Conferences held to date this year have also witnessed, pursuant with the expressed hope of the beloved Guardian, the raising of nearly three-quarters of a million dollars for the construction of the three Mother Temples of Africa, Europe, and Australia, and the attainment of the other goals of the Ten-Year Plan.

Had not Bahá'u'lláh overshadowed the followers of His Cause with His infinite love and bounty, at this time of grief and profound tests, had not Shoghi Effendi’s own spirit remained with us, guiding and protecting us, we would not be able in this last historic Conference called for during this year by the Guardian, to look back over the past eleven months of victory and say, “Praise be to Thee, O God, for the outpourings of Thy Mercy and Bounty and Thine infinite protection.”

The overflowing measure of Divine grace we have witnessed has ensured that the Plan of Shoghi Effendi for these great Conferences has been successfully fulfilled, the spirit he hoped would be generated by them has been generated; the pioneers he hoped would arise, have arisen; and funds he hoped would be raised have been forthcoming; and the ways and means for the furtherance of the work of the Crusade which he urged should be discussed, have been deliberated upon and are bearing fruit already in different parts of the Bahá'í World.

These will be hard years for us all, but love has matured us, grief steeled us. At these five Conferences we have gathered strength from the outpourings the Guardian promised us; these gatherings would attract from on High, and from our association with each other. We must now go forth like good soldiers, a conquering army, each to his own post, to do his own battle, to keep his own tryst on the home or the pioneer front. This is not going to be easy. Every formation of something new involves a certain degree of death of the old self. The old order is dying and we see how harsh are its death pangs. Something of our protected past may well be said to have died with the closing of this Conference. For over one hundred and fifteen years we Baha’is have been nursed and personally watched over. Now we are required to stand on our own feet and, in the path of service to this Holy Faith, we ourselves must watch over and assist our fellowmen to turn to the Supreme Manifestation of God for this Day, and seek their salvation through Bahá’u’lláh. That patience and fairness, that loving forgiveness and wise tolerance Shoghi Effendi invariably showered on us individually, we must emulate and show to each other as well as to the world. That justice he so impartially administered must be emulated by all elected Baha’i bodies, that unflinching, adamantly adherent to principle which won him the respect of government and layman alike, the believers, as individuals and when functioning as assemblies, must show forth at all times. In other words, dear friends, the spirit of Shoghi Effendi must go with us from this Conference, not only with the attendants gathered here, but with the believers all over the world, who, surely, inwardly or outwardly, have participated in these five majestic, stirring, creative commemorative Conferences. His spirit we must keep alive in our hearts, his love we must foster through loving him more, his radiant nature, which the Master so well knew, must always be remembered by us so that we may, as individuals, strive to acquire a little of that selfless radiance ourselves.

The beloved Guardian often said that whenever he suffered, the work of the Cause went forward. We may ask ourselves if this unworthy world did not require the supreme sacrifice of the life of its Guardian to release those forces, at this critical juncture in human history, which are necessary to carry it forward into that Golden Age of spiritual civilization which the Bahá’í Dispensation must give rise to. Whatever interpretation we place upon the passing of Shoghi Effendi, an event which in its very essence is one of the mysteries of God, one thing must be evident to all—the sacrifice of this infinitely precious life must not for an instant, to the slightest degree, be in vain. We must be the ransom that pays for that sacred blood. We, all the Bahá’ís everywhere, East and West, young and old, new in the Faith or veterans, must arise with complete unity, a more mature consecration, a deeper love for Bahá’u’lláh, and ensure that the vital objectives of the Ten-Year Crusade are completed, and in many fields added to and markedly surpassed.

We have had a soul-shattering shock; deepest grief, longing for our beloved Guardian so suddenly removed from our midst, has moved us to the depths of our being and made our hearts restless with desire to do many things for him now which we neglected to do when he was alive. The Bahá’ís have rallied to his conferences, helped in the protection of the Faith to which he gave all his service, and have supported the appointed Hands of the Cause and the elected representatives of the believers. This, however, is only the first step. Before us lie almost five years of hard work, years, we may well believe, of turmoil in the world, years when, in the face of a steady process of deterioration in human affairs, our institutions must be painstakingly erected and consolidated, the foundations for the future Universal House of Justice securely built, in order that this Supreme Edifice, when it comes into being, may be in a position to fulfill its Divinely appointed functions, the spirit of the Faith made to burn brighter, its teachings disseminated far and wide, and that process of mass conversion so often referred to by the Guardian, set in motion and given increasing momentum.

Purity of heart, honesty of mind, sincerity of motive were characteristics deeply prized by Shoghi Effendi. These characteristics he felt were strongly represented in the so-called primitive peoples; they drew him to them and increased his conviction that the Cause of God has a tremendous future amongst the dark-skinned peoples of the world, and that they have great racial gifts of mind and heart to bring to the service of this Faith. It is significant to ponder that the first, the opening of this halfway point of the World Crusade was chosen by him for the heart of Africa, and that the last, the closing Conference, was set midway in the Pacific-Asian region. He did not thus honor the old world and the new. No, he chose the black people and the brown people for this distinction. He visualized the African and the Pacific peoples vying with each other in the spread of the Faith. Each marked increase in membership in one region was relayed by him to the other, with the hope of stimulating a fresh burst of enthusiastic teaching efforts. Much of his joy, during the last years of his life, came from the news of the remarkable progress

Bahá’í Endowment in Luxembourg, situated in the Commune d’Eich, Section C de Weignier Kirch: Rue des Forarms.
The first of the two annual teaching congresses was held in Managua, Nicaragua, on July 26-27, 1958. Seventeen Baha'is and six guests attended. Sessions were arranged to allow for everyone to enjoy a simple meal together on both days. The teachers, Pablo Pérez, Hooper Dunbar, and Donald and Mignon Witzel, covered the most important phases of teaching in Latin America, as well as the spiritual fundamentals of the Faith.

the Faith was making in these two areas.

The African Conference released a great spiritual power among the Negro believers, who returned from it to their tribal homes to teach with new enthusiasm and understanding, and to convince their own peoples of the truth of Baha'u'llah's Message. We feel confident that the representatives of many of the peoples of the Pacific region attending this Conference will do likewise, and that this will mark the beginning of a vast process of conversion of the inhabitants of the islands of this immense ocean to the Cause of God.

Who knows, perhaps it is the immediate destiny of our great Faith to be raised on the two wings of the black and brown races through a great wave of mass conversion which will have repercussions all over the world, and, releasing spiritual powers as yet untapped, enable the leaven of the Faith of Baha'u'llah to penetrate into the lives of the peoples of the older yellow and white civilizations, so materialistic, so disillusioned, so morally corrupt and spiritually bankrupt.

The first evidences of this mighty process envisaged by our beloved Guardian have already become manifest in the extraordinary, the truly heartening conversion of such a large number of people in the Mentawai Islands and the Gilbert and Ellice Islands to this new religion. Those who have had the privilege of carrying the Message of Baha'u'llah to them can testify how deep is the faith with which they have embraced it, how steadfast their intent to serve it and uphold its laws, how ripe their hearts to enfold its truth and make it a part of their lives.

Another evidence of the unfoldment of this process has been the formation of Baha'i schools in the new Hebrides, in Mentawai, and in the Gilbert and Ellice Archipelago—schools of which Shoghi Effendi was immensely proud. How many pilgrims watched enthralled as the strong, forceful, and fascinating hand of the Guardian pointed to the spots on the map of the world he had filled in, and tapped the circle which marked one of these precious schools. How bright the light that lit up his blessed face as he stated this was no mere summer school, but a real school, opened and maintained by Baha'is, in which the children of indigenous people were being educated in both a normal curriculum and in the Baha'i standards. It was his ardent hope that these schools should be maintained, reinforced, and similar ones established on a sound and permanent basis in other areas. He repeatedly made it clear that in these unspoiled regions of the world lay a great hope for the future. He constantly encouraged pioneers to move into them, and in these fertile fields of service, busy themselves with the teaching work where it promised the greatest success.

This culminating Conference held during this sad but fruitful year must yield, for all believers present, as well as for those throughout the Baha'i world, a special harvest. Our hearts, still bleeding in separation from our dearly beloved Guardian, we must annul in the fire of self-sacrifice to this infinitely precious Faith. The need of our fellowwomen is to hear the Glad-Tidings of Baha'u'llah greater than ever. The doors to pioneering, to the construction of the Mother Temples called for in the Ten-Year Plan, to the founding of Baha'i schools, to the dissemination of our literature, to the erection of our administrative institutions, still stand open. Before some world catastrophe closes them devastatingly, albeit temporarily in our faces, let us not waste one precious moment!

Shoghi Effendi's love is burning in our hearts, his appeals are still fresh in our ears. The vision he gave us of our present task is clear and perfect; let us keep it forever before our eyes.

"Let there be no mistake. The avowed, the primary aim of this Spiritual Crusade is none other than the conquest of the citadels of men's hearts. The theater of its operations is the entire planet, its duration a whole decade. Its commencement synchronizes with the Centenary of the birth of Baha'u'llah's Mission. Its culmination will coincide with the Centenary of the Declaration of that same Mission. The agencies assisting in its conduct are the nascent administrative institutions of a steadily-evolving, divinely appointed Order. Its driving force is the energizing influence generated by the Revelation heralded by the Bab and proclaimed by Baha'u'llah. Its Marshal is none other than the Author of the Divine Plan. Its standard-bearers are the Hands of the Cause of God appointed in every continent of the globe. Its generals are the national spiritual assemblies participating in the execution of its design. Its vanguard is the chief executors of 'Abdu'l-Baha's Master Plan, their allies and associates. Its legions are the rank and file of believers standing behind these same ... national assemblies and sharing in the global task embracing the American, the European, the African, the Asiatic, and Australian fronts. The charter directing its course is the immortal Tablets that have flowed from the Pen of the Center of the Covenant Himself. The armor with which its onrushing hosts have been invested is the glad-tidings of God's own Message in this Day, the principles underlying the Order proclaimed by His Messenger, and the laws and ordinances governing His Dispensation. The battle cry animating its heroes and heroines is the cry of Ya Baha'u'll-Abba."—HANDS OF THE FAITH IN THE HOLY LAND
Three new Indian groups in Bolivia have recently accepted the Bahá'í Faith through the efforts of the La Paz and the Canton Huanuni Indian Assemblies.

In Potosí there is a group of five chalas (a mixture of the white and Indian races), in Huanacota there are eight Indian Bahá'ís, and in Chalapiti there are five Indian believers. The two latter places were opened by Andrés Jachacollo, who went on a forty-six day teaching trip, and Isidro Jachacollo, on a twenty-six day teaching trip, both of whom are dedicated Canton Huanuni friends.

Both state that there are a number of other Indians interested in the Faith in these places, and that they will continue with their efforts, hoping to confirm enough to make local spiritual assemblies before long. One of these friends is also going on a teaching trip to Potosí to cooperate with the chalas there in several weeks of joint efforts.

An idea of the sacrifice required can be given when one learns that these Bahá'ís must walk for a total of ten days going and returning to their own village.

In a recent teaching trip, Athos Costas, secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, recorded the following impressions of his two days' stay in Canton Huanuni:

"The Bahá'ís of Villakollo are almost all young, numbering seventeen believers with twelve children in the community. They are very hospitable and amiable, having a great desire for spiritual, cultural, and social progress. They are much nearer to the real values of life than city inhabitants. They are pure of heart, and the progress of the Faith there could be like Africa. On leaving them, I thought of these people who live in the mountains, enduring such extreme cold, and with such arid soil, living in their tiny huts made of adobe and thatched with straw, with unglazed openings for doors and windows, and felt that a part of my heart remains with them.

"At the end of my Bolivian teaching trip, I thought..." that the Bahá'ís should not spend their energies in the arid spiritual climate of the great cities, but go out to the provinces, the little 'pueblitas' where the people live a more primitive life, much less superficial, where the Faith will progress much more rapidly through contact with consecrated pioneers."

That Bolivia is awakening to the Faith is evident from the report of Mr. Costas on his August teaching trip.
In Cochabamba he gave a radio talk, and spoke at a public meeting in the Centro Cultural Boliviano-Norteamericano before a group of eleven Bahá'ís and twenty-three guests, mostly young people who showed great interest.

The newspaper El Pueblo gave a full summary of the talk.

In La Paz, a public meeting was held in the Municipal Library, with an attendance of eight Bahá'ís and fifty guests. This was preceded by announcements on the radio, and was followed by a summary of the talk in the newspaper La Nacion. Many of the contacts in La Paz were brought by the three Indian Bahá'ís resident in that city.

In Santa Cruz a talk was given in the salon of the radio station "Grigotá," with an attendance of thirty.
The entire forty minute talk was also broadcast by the radio station, and two newspapers published summaries of the talk. One publication used a photograph of the Bahá'í House of Worship as an illustration.

Land for Mother Temple of Paraguay
Purchased Near Capital City of Asuncion

Among the additional goals set by the Guardian before his passing was the purchase of land for the Mother Temples of Bolivia, Paraguay, and Uruguay.

Paraguay achieved this goal on September 30, 1958, after months of searching and disappointments over excessively priced land. The National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay joyfully announces that an area of three hectares (about seven and one-half acres) has been bought.

The land is located fifteen kilometers from the capital city of Asuncion.

This land should increase in value in the future, as it is located about three kilometers from the National Airport, on the road between the well-known towns of Luque and San Lorenzo. About half of the land is a coco palm tree plantation, overlooking a typical Paraguayan panoramic view.

Esperantists at World Congress in Germany
Attend Bahá'í Meeting, View Exhibits

Almost one hundred people from eleven countries attended the Bahá'í meeting at the Forty-Third World Congress of the Esperantists at Mainz, Germany, on August 3, 1958.

After the program was opened with music and the reading of a prayer of Bahá'u'lláh, W. von der Ley spoke on the teachings of the Bahá'í Faith. Guests from England, France, Sweden, The Netherlands, Poland, Italy, Spain, Brazil, the United States, and Germany left their names and addresses on the contact list.

Over two hundred people visited the Bahá'í exhibit, where Bahá'í literature in Esperanto, and pictures of interest to Esperantists were displayed. The pictures included a large portrait of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, photographs of leading Bahá'ís and Esperantists such as Martha Root, Lidja Zamenhof (the daughter of the founder of the Esperantist movement), and John E. Esslemont. Other photos showed Haifa and the Shrine of the Báb, views of the House of Worship in Wilmette, and pictures of the Intercontinental Conferences in 1953.

Public Teaching Launched at Palmer, Alaskan Goal City

Since Mr. and Mrs. Verne Stout and their two children went to Palmer, Alaska, a few months ago to open that goal city, they have been quietly but steadily making friends for the Faith. The Matanuska Valley fair, held August 29 to September 1, provided an occasion for public proclamation through the Bahá'í exhibit, with some 400 pieces of literature distributed.

The booth, centrally located and displaying a Temple model, photographs, and literature, was unavoidably visible to all 14,000 persons who attended the fair. Chairs were provided in the booth so that visitors could rest and read various Bahá'í books and pamphlets on a small table, including the latest Bahá'í World volume, and Appreciations of the Bahá'í Faith. Newspaper advertisements of public meetings in other Alaskan cities were on display. The booth was also utilized as a means of presenting Bahá'í literature (including Destiny of America, and A Pattern for Future Society) to a number of civic leaders on a local and state level.

Bahá'í visitors to the booth came from Kodiak, Una-laska, Tanana Valley, Bethel, and Anchorage, Alaska, the first two places representing World Crusade goals.

The Matanuska Valley, flanked by the Chugach Mountains, is the richest farming area of Alaska and is the site of the well-known "farm-colony" experiment begun in the 1890's under the U.S. government, when this land was first cleared and settled.

First Photographs From British Cameroons Illustrate Results of Continuous Teaching By Regional Committee and Local Assemblies

The outstanding record of achievements in Nigeria and British Cameroons, reported in Bahá'í News for August 1958, is due to a well-known, yet potent, formula: continuous organized teaching activities.

The mainspring in these countries is Northwest Africa's Regional Teaching Committee No. Ten. This body plans a never-ending series of teaching meetings, conferences, and other activities throughout the area.

Then the local spiritual assemblies concerned cooperate in organizing the numerous details and notifying the believers. If appropriate, the believers then extend invitations to their friends and contacts.

The result is invariably the same: a well-attended meeting in that distinctly Bahá'í atmosphere, so wonderful to experience, so conducive to spiritual regeneration.
S. Australian Government Appoints Baha'i to Officiate at Marriages by Local Assemblies

The Australian Bahá'í Bulletin for August 1958 has reprinted an extract from the South Australian Government Gazette for July 3, 1958, as follows:

Marriage Act Registration

"Notice is hereby given that, under authority of His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, dated 21st June 1958, the Principal Registrar has registered Mr. Harold Collis Featherstone of Port Adelaide (Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Port Adelaide, Incorporated) as an officiating registrar under the Marriage Act, 1936-1937.

A. W. Bowden, Principal Registrar"

The Bahá'í Bulletin points out that local spiritual assemblies in South Australia may conduct marriages in conjunction with the Officiating Registrar.

Baha'is of Belgium and Luxembourg Hold Joint Conference to Study Teachings

A "National Bahá'í Day of Belgium and Luxembourg" was held in Charleroi, Belgium, in September, under the auspices of the National Teaching Committee for these two countries. The day was dedicated to the study of the Bahá'í Teachings, and proved to be an immense success.

There were thirty-four Bahá'ís and five guests present, from Brussels, Luxembourg City, Antwerp, Liege, Ostende, and Charleroi, as well as a Persian pioneer family from Tunisia.

The program was excellently planned, with three subjects for discussion: "Spiritual Qualities Which Conform to the Bahá'í Life," "The Stature of Bahá'u'lláh Among the Other Prophets," and "The Twin Nature of Man," presented respectively by Miss Suzanne de Koninck, Louis Henuzet, and Marcel Mathot.

This National Day was designed as a substitute for a summer school this year, due to the Intercontinental Conference held at Frankfurt, Germany, in July.

First Summer School of Southern States Held at Blue Ridge in August

A SUMMER sun . . . an early dusk . . . the scent of the spruce and the pine . . . misty clouds bowing low to hide majestic mountain peaks . . . a solemn stillness . . . a nearness to God . . . all this is Blue Ridge, and here from August 23-28, 1958, nearly eighty Bahá'ís and friends held the first Bahá'í Summer School of the South. Here, deep in the mountains of western North Carolina, this interracial group gathered with love and harmony.

Conferences had been conducted at Blue Ridge in other years, but this was a school, and from the very onset this was evident to all in attendance. The study and consultation were serious. Although it was required that each person take at least two classes, nearly everyone attended all three. A great impetus for further study was generated. The time was short and the schedule heavy. Each day began at 7:30 with Devotions.

Morning courses, running simultaneously from 9:15 to 11:15 were: "Islam," taught in a masterly fashion by Roy Mottahedeh; "World Crusade," clearly outlined by Lorana Kerfoot; and "Introductory Class," ably given by Erma Hayden.

Afternoon courses, running simultaneously from 1:15 to 2:45 were: "Advent of Divine Justice," warmly presented by Albert James; and "Bahá'í Administration," dramatically set forth by Zella Svendsen.

The evening course from 7:15 to 9:00 was: "Covenant and Covenant Breaking," effectively directed by Jack Davis.

In each case we were blessed with exemplary teachers, who gave devotedly of their time.

The youth attended morning and evening classes with the adults, but in the afternoon held their own class where they consulted on many aspects of the Faith, particularly those that concerned the Youth most directly.

Thelma Allison, Louise Jackson, Alice Walton, and Marion Goldstein conducted the children's classes, and on the last morning the children presented the Devotions and displayed their handiwork.

Each day formally ended with Devotions at 9:15; however, informal gatherings lasted long into the night. Mrs. Allison and Mrs. Svendsen shared the stories of their pilgrimages to Haifa. Slides of the Temple and Shrine Gardens were shown, and Bahá'í experiences were exchanged over cups of coffee. The warmth and feeling in these evening get-togethers are never to be forgotten.

The recreational facilities at Blue Ridge are many, among them hiking, swimming, and horseback riding. While many spent their leisure time pursuing these, at the same time others used the hours to come together for discussion and visiting with the teachers.

Many who had attended other summer schools in the past felt that this was the best in spirit and content, and it was hoped that we might continue to have a school in this beautiful setting. This seemed impossible, as we had not near the attendance that the YMCA management required to renew our contract. However, at the time the School Committee was meeting with the management the entire group gathered together for prayers, and great was our joy when we were offered the facilities for three years.

Five days are not many. All too soon they sped by. We gathered for the last time on the huge veranda of the main house. We felt the knowledge and the beauty fill our minds and hearts. The time of parting was near ... still we stood. These past days we had prayed, studied, laughed, wept and had fellowship together. Reluctantly we bid goodbye to old friends and new. Our feelings were divided—a part of us yearned to stay, to partake forever of this closeness, and yet already stirring within us was the great longing and urgency to hurry forth—back to share our re-awakened faith with fellow believers, and to take what we had gained to a thirsting world.

This was the first Blue Ridge Summer School. The sun was warm, the mountains stood like sentinels against the sky. The clouds bowed low, the air was still—and God was there.

Pioneers From United States Settle in Five Central American Countries

A group of devoted new pioneers have been welcomed to five of the Central American countries during the past few months, to assist at this crucial time in the Ten-Year Crusade.

To Costa Rica has come Richard Mirkovitch from California, who is working as a physical education director at the Methodist School in Escazu.

Hooper Dunbar, also from California, is teaching English in Managua, Nicaragua.

Honduras has now become the home of Grace Dean from New Mexico, Seymour Malkin from California, and David Mathieson from Connecticut, all of whom are getting oriented in Tegucugalpa. Robert Anker from Nevada is now in San Pedro Sula looking for work there or in one of the goal cities along the Caribbean coast.

Mrs. Edith McLaren, a pioneer from New York state, has recently arrived in Guatemala.

Frank Wilson, another Californian, is getting established in Santa Tecla, El Salvador.

Successful pioneering demands many personal sacrifices which later bring manifold blessings. A vivid example is that of Donald and Mignon Witzel, devoted, hard-working, and valiant pioneers for many years in hot, inhospitable Managua, Nicaragua.

This year, after a series of trying housing difficulties, they found a perfect house, but decided that it is more important to spread the Faith than to live comfortably, so they sub-let the house and moved to Masaya, where they will commute each day to their positions in the American School in Managua, despite high transportation expenses.

Retailhuleu, Guatemala, Baha'i Community Functions Without Resident Pioneer

The city of Retalhuleu, Guatemala, is one of those rare spots in the civilized world that does not seem to be contaminated with materialism and fanaticism. The people are friendly, spiritually minded, and unprejudiced.

This city was opened to the Bahá'í Faith a few years ago by Louise Caswell, who took advantage of the visit of another Bahá'í to announce, through leaflets distributed by a jeep and with the assistance of a public address system, a series of public lectures in the movie theater and in an open-air garden.

The first two lectures were well attended, but no one came to the third one. However, Louise made her presentation, and the speaker, Artemus Lamb, gave his lecture to an invisible audience which gradually gathered outside the garden and in the street. At the end, three women and a man came in, and another lecture was given.

Today there is a happy little Bahá'í community formed, and it is maintained without the help of a resident pioneer, a rare occurrence in Central America.

Just two miles away is the Indian village of San Sebastian, where there are Latin Bahá'ís and Indian contacts. There is much optimism for its Bahá'í development.

Pakistan Temple Land Purchased, Assembly Attains Registration by Government

Two goals of the Guardian's Six-Year Plan for Pakistan have been achieved, according to the National Spiritual Assembly there:

About twenty-two acres of land has been purchased for the first Mashriqu'l-Adhkar of Pakistan in Deh Ibrahim Hyderi, Karachi.

The National Spiritual Assembly has been registered under the Societies' Registration Act on May 26, 1958.
Baha'i Indian Center at Gallup Redecorated by Weekend Work Party

The Baha'i Indian Center at Gallup was given a face-lifting within and without when a work party of pioneers and members of the American Indian Service Committee painted, remodeled, and decorated the Center on the weekend of July 19.

Part of the new adornment placed in the Center was a beautiful rendition of the “Greatest Name” made by Don Hawley and Kahir Radpour, and color prints of the Shrine of the Bab and the House of Worship.

On Saturday evening the group gathered among the paint pots to hear a wonderful talk by Ted Cardell, well-known British pioneer to Africa, who was a member of the work party. Then on August 16, during the famous Gallup Indian ceremonials, a dinner and open house were held at the Center with Ted Cardell and his wife, formerly Alicia Ward of Tempe, as guests of honor.

Pioneers From Peoria Now Hosts at Center

Anthony and Josie Madonia, resident pioneers at the Center during these activities, have now moved from Gallup to nearby Fort Defiance, Ariz., where Mr. Madonia is employed by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Their places as hosts and pioneers at the Center have been taken by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wright and their family, who arrived from Peoria, Ill., on August 19. The Gallup group, which includes the original pioneer to this “Indian capital of the world,” James Stone, is starting new teaching and service activities for the benefit of the many Indians in that city.

Baha'i Youth Serve the Indians

An Open Letter

The American Indian Service Committee shares the following letter, feeling that its appeal extends to all believers, although it is addressed to Baha'i Youth. Its author, Tim Rost, became a pioneer among the Indians immediately after his graduation from college two years ago. He is presently teaching school and serving among the Indians of the Fort Totten (Sioux) reservation in North Dakota.

Dear friends,

This letter is addressed to those Youth who wish to strive to live the Laws of God's Faith and to serve humanity with no selfish motives, with no desire for rewards, with willingness to lay down their lives if necessary, and with tender spiritual love. The Indians await you.

You are not inadequate. If you are not yet ready—and remember, you are still young—you can train yourselves to become so. There is nothing to fear. You must act promptly before it is too late.

We who are on or near the reservations can perhaps most fully realize how badly you are needed. Your generation has a great responsibility in this manner. Anguish fills our hearts when we consider how much work there is to be done, and how few to do it.

Contact Bahá’ís who have had experience in this work. Visit places where Indians can be found. Get to know Indian Bahá’ís. You can then glimpse their great spiritual potentialities.

If you plan to attend college or are now in college, find out what kinds of occupations can lead to positions on or near reservations, or in towns with at least some Indian inhabitants. If there are Indians in your college or university, try to cultivate their friendship.

The American Indian Service Committee can give you invaluable help. Contact them.

Sometimes it is best for a young Bahá’í to choose a place to pioneer near other Bahá’ís who can give spiritual and material help. This work is not always easy.

Prayer is a dynamic force. Use it in dealing with them. They will respond sooner or later. Be free. Do not let them take advantage of you—they will lose respect for you. They are very observant.

Be especially obedient to the Laws of the Faith, dealing with morals. Disobedience can lead to disaster.

The rewards are great. The love of a little Indian child is like a precious jewel. No one can really help them except us. This fact is constantly becoming clearer and clearer.

You must raise the level of their thoughts by raising your own. You must raise their morals by raising your own. You must give them hope for the future by having more confidence that the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh will uplift the poor ones of the earth.

Don’t expect immediate responses from them. Remember, you too are being trained. Be patient.

There is no doubt whatsoever that the Bahá’í Youth can meet the challenge. The Bahá’í Faith, as we all know, presents basically a joyous Message. You can find this joy with them.

—Tim Rost

95 Students From 11 States Attend

First Southwestern Bahá’í Summer School

The first Bahá’í Summer School in the southwestern part of the United States was held at Bachman’s Lake on the site of the YMCA-Camp Kiwanis. It was a precedent-setting event in that it marked the first time that facilities of the resort area were made available to Negroes.

All who were privileged to attend the week-long session of the Southwestern Bahá’í Summer School were impressed with the facilities and highly appreciative of the job done by the committee. One of the most warmly expressed appreciations was a report on the school written shortly after his return to Roswell, N. Mex., by P. R. Meinhard, editor of the Area Teaching Committee Bulletin for the Rocky Mountain States. We take the liberty of quoting verbatim Mr. Meinhard’s excellent report:

“Blessed to a rare degree with a spirit of combined consecration, studiousness, and fellowship, the opening session of the new Southwestern Summer School was indeed a joyous and fruitful occasion. It was conducted at the spacious YMCA-Kiwanis camp on Bachman’s Lake on the outskirts of Dallas, Texas. The time was August 23 to 30. An unofficial count indicated that about 95 students came from eleven states to attend. And, thanks to the energetic and resourceful committee, faculty and staff, all seemed to share a double sense of having spent a profitable week and of having helped to open an important new teaching facility.

“The study courses and teachers were as follows: Bahá’í Administration and Institutions of the Faith, Mrs. Velma Sherrill; Know Your Bahá’í Literature, Mr. Lloyd Sherrill, The World Crusade and Its Relationship to the Divine Plan, Miss D. Thelma Jackson and Mr. David Baral; The Covenant and Covenant-Breaking; Mrs. Florence Mayberry. In addition, special events included classes on Teaching the Minority Groups and on Firesides, both by Mr. Ellsworth Blackwell, and a session in which the students, guided by Mr. Robert Hopkins, framed suggested Bahá’í answers to frequently asked questions.

“In the first of two successful public meetings, Mrs. Velma Sherrill gave an excellent general talk on the Faith. The second one presented a panel comprised of Mrs. Florence Mayberry, Ellsworth Blackwell, and Dr. Neil McFarland of the Divinity School of Southern Methodist University. Dr. McFarland created a mild sensation by foreshadowing a distinctly liberalized Protestant attitude of ‘coexistence’ toward all other faiths.

“Interspersed with all these events were recreation periods for both youngsters and grown-ups, and evenings of sociability under the soft Texas moon. All in all, the week impressed those present with the great significance and value of the new teaching center. Needless to say, it offers essential Bahá’í training to many believers hitherto unable to reach a summer school. Its very inauguration apparently proved a great ‘invigorator’ to the valiant believers of the surrounding area. And it provides a broad, new gateway through which the beloved colored people may pass to find the Faith. In short, the school is a great boon to the American Bahá’í community in general, and to its Southwestern members in particular."

Cooperation, and assistance wherever help was needed, on the part of members of the Dallas Bahá'í community contributed greatly to the success of the Southwestern Summer School. Children's classes and activities were conducted by Mrs. Pauline Hansen of Dallas and Mrs. Marjorie Heath of San Antonio.

John D. Thomas of Dallas was convenor of the Southwestern Bahá'í Summer School Committee, which consisted of these committee members: Jack Raborn, Robert Hopkins, Mrs. Allene Squires, all of Dallas; Miss D. Thelma Jackson, San Antonio; E. D. Gray, Houston; and Mrs. Thelma Thurston Gorham, Oklahoma City.

Conferences in Chautauqua and Phoenix

Study Bahá'í Principles of Child Education

A conference on the Bahá'í philosophy of child education was held at Chautauqua, N.Y., on August 30-31, 1958, with sixty-three registrants representing twenty-seven communities in seven states. Frank Meese, chairman of the East Central States Area Teaching Committee, served as chairman of the conference.

Mrs. Martha McCloskey of Hamburg, N.Y., spoke on the philosophy of education. She explained that the word "to educate" means "to draw out," not "to fill in," and that philosophy meant wisdom underlying a system of knowledge.

In order for education to be effective, she stated, one must teach the whole being. The three elements in Bahá'í education were stated as: (1) The independent search after truth, (2a) Science and religion must agree, (2b) The oneness of the world of existence, and (3) The law of God.

Laurence La Rocque, Oak Park, Ill., chairman of the National Child Education Committee, was the principal speaker. He told of an extensive survey by the committee on methods of teaching the Faith to children.

"It seemed to us," he said, "that to pour facts into the mind of a child was not education. Our direct aim should not be to make Bahá'ís, but to so educate and guide the children that through their own experience they would be led to Bahá'u'lláh."

Mr. La Rocque spoke on the children's classes at the Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette, used as a laboratory for trying out the ideas of the committee. Knowledge comes in three ways, he explained: through sensation, through perception, and through conception.

The children in the primary class, who range in age from three to five years, learn through their senses. These children are taught that there are three kingdoms of creation, without attempting to have them comprehend these kingdoms, and that God is a Mystery, a Power, Unknown. They are encouraged to talk and to discuss the ideas they bring up. They play, sing, tell stories, and take walks. Visual education materials are used extensively.

The six-to-eight-year age group learns through perception. They learn of the kingdom of man; the qualities and needs of the human kingdom; the social laws; obedience to God, society, and the world about him; their physical tools and their spiritual tools, such as prayer. Plans and participation are encouraged, using dramatics in acting out a given situation. The goal is a spiritual basis for a solution of their personal problems.

The nine-to-twelve-year age group learns through conception, as well as by sensation and perception. They have an understanding of abstract ideas and can deal with the powers of man. An understanding of self in relation to the world and to God is stimulated, with a conception of the inner and outer worlds. The children lead the discussion; the teacher begins to be merely a guide.

The thirteen-to-fourteen-year age group studies the unity of science and religion, and progressive revelation. The story of religions are related to the Bahá’í Revelation as an evolutionary development, with no attempt to show the Bahá’í Faith as superior. These children should fully study the Bahá’í Faith, its institutions, history, and teachings.

Mr. La Rocque concluded his talk with the following suggestions: Teach the children the kingdom of heaven, emphasize the mystery of God, guard against analogies of God, and keep alive the wonderment of life. The goal of child education is to awaken and train the child’s soul.

On Sunday morning the conference continued with Mrs. Jane Czemiejewski presiding. She emphasized the obligation of teaching, and stressed the point that no one is excused.

Charles Grindley of Ontario, Canada, explained his plan of teaching based on the compilation The Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh, and Frank Meese concluded the conference with the reading of a Bahá’í News insert on “Education.”

Phoenix Conference Studies Teaching Activities

On September 7 an Open House for the Child Guidance Classes, jointly sponsored by the Phoenix and Phoenix Suburban Area North Assemblies, Ariz., gave members of the two communities an opportunity to highlight their studies of the children and children told of their current study an interesting program was disclosed.

First and second graders are studying the attributes of God, such as Love, Kindness, and Mercy, illustrated through Hidden Words, prayers, favorite children’s poems, and short stories, not only of the Bahá’í Faith but of other religions as well. The third graders go a step further and investigate reasons behind our physical, cultural, and religious differences with the aid of the book, All About Us by Eva Knox Evans, stories of other lands, illustrative crafts, prayers, and discussions.

Fifth and sixth grade students are beginning a study of social and cultural conditions of children in the 1840s, with an emphasis on the mission of interest on the children of Persia and the early life of ‘Abdu’ll-Bahá. The class has voted to have a conference in January which will cover the life and teachings of each Manifestation of God as its extra achievement project. Following a year-long course on the Bible and the Qur’án, a study of The Dawnbreakers, and some sections of God Passes By is providing the junior youth with a background understanding of progressive revelation, as well as a general knowledge of the history and literature of the Faith. The youth class is studying the “Origin, Powers, and Conditions of Man,” using Some Answered Questions as text, with supplementary material from Bahá’í and other sources, reading from the books in class followed by roundtable discussion.

The adult group, composed chiefly of parents of children attending classes, provides an opportunity for discussion of steps in spiritual growth of children and their parents, as revealed in the Bahá’í writings. Children’s classes in Phoenix have had a long and interesting history. Originally sponsored by the Phoenix Assembly and carried on with one teacher and an average attendance of from three to nine children, the classes were co-sponsored with the Assembly of adjacent Phoenix Suburban Area North, beginning in 1951. Teachers increased to three and attendance to fifteen. Presently there are six teachers with an average attendance of twenty-eight. Meetings are held every Sunday morning from 10 to 11 in various Bahá’í homes on a monthly rotating basis.

Plans for the devotional period with which the classes begin are made by the host family. Simple prayers with a background of recorded classical music makes up the program generally, after which the children divide into their classes. Dens, kitchens, bedrooms, and outdoor patios, as well as dining and living rooms serve as locale for these groups.

Teachers meet regularly to discuss any problems, make necessary changes, and assess their progress. In selecting material for study, attention is paid to the capacity and interests of the children’s age levels, continuity of instruction, and the underlying responsibility to provide each growing child with the knowledge he will need for intelligent and devoted acceptance of the Faith at age fifteen. In general, class divisions are made according to grades in school, but the happiness and adaptability of individual children is always considered.

Currently all teachers are parents, and each has made time for this work amid other Bahá’í responsibilities.

On October 6, 1,000 of the 1,500 “Grandmas” gathered in Chicago for the seventeenth annual meeting of the National Federation of Grandmother Clubs of America, visited the Bahá’í House of Worship in twenty-chartered buses. These women came from all parts of the United States and showed great interest in the Temple.
Guardian's Messages From 1950 to 1957

To Be Published in November

Messages to the Bahá'í World, 1950-1957, by Shoghi Effendi, the new work containing the Guardian's messages during this period to the entire Bahá'í world community, is expected to be available by the Bahá'í Publishing Trust of the U.S. by November 10. This is an historic work, eagerly anticipated by Bahá'ís throughout the world.

From 1922 until 1950, the letters and cablegrams from Shoghi Effendi in his capacity as Guardian of the Bahá'í Faith were addressed to individual national spiritual assemblies or national Bahá'í communities conveying various directives and explanations. For example, the letters written to the American Bahá'í community between 1927 and 1932 were published under the title, Bahá'í Administration, and a later series as The World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

In 1950 the Guardian changed his emphasis from the needs and activities of national bodies to the Bahá'í world community, culminating in his initiation of the Ten-Year World Crusade launched in 1953 and calling for the first time upon the participation of all Bahá'ís in one common world plan. These letters likewise announced the establishment of the International Bahá'í Council, the institution of the Hands of the Cause, and other important international developments.

The present volume includes the major communications which Shoghi Effendi addressed to the Bahá'í world from April 25, 1950, to his last general letter of October 15. They possess unique importance in documenting the progress of the World Crusade and determining its progressive unfoldment to the year 1963, the Centenary of Bahá'u'lláh's announcement of His prophetic mission—a Crusade which is not only establishing the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh throughout the world, but is also preparing the way for the formation of the Universal House of Justice.

These are messages that require deep and prayerful study on the part of every Bahá'í. It is not possible for us, who long to carry out Shoghi Effendi's plan, to fathom the measure of wisdom, divine guidance, and sacrifice that has given us these messages or the Plan that they outline. We can only bring a humility of heart and a resurgent of our own determination to fulfill our rightful part in these precious years that remain of the Ten-Year Plan.

Foreign Students of Seven Countries Attend
National Dress and Costume Party in New York

Twenty foreign students from Iran, Trinidad, Ghana, Turkey, India, Pakistan, and Japan attended a "National Dress & Costume" party at the invitation of the Intercontinental Committee of the New York Spiritual Assembly on September 5, at the New York Bahá'í Center. Among the guests were the president and vice-president of the Ghana Students Union.

The guests were impressed by the warmth and sincerity of the Bahá'ís; most of them were introduced to the Faith for the first time, although some had heard of the Faith in their native lands.

At a follow-up "Fireside" some of the guests attended and heard H. Borrah Kavelin, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly, speak on "One World."

This was the first organized mass effort to attract foreign students in which results were evident. Many friends were made for the Faith and similar activities of this nature are planned for the future by the Intercontinental Committee. This committee was formed by the New York Local Spiritual Assembly, following the advice of the Guardian to contact foreign students.

50 Attend Race Amity Follow-Up

Public Meeting at St. Petersburg

On September 28 Miss Olive Alexander of Miami, Florida, spoke at a public meeting given by the Bahá'ís of St. Petersburg, Florida, at the Metropolitan Council House, headquarters for the National Council for Negro Women in St. Petersburg. The room was offered to the Bahá'ís free of charge "because of their service to the Negro people in this city." About 50 people attended, representing both races.

This meeting was planned as a follow up to Race Amity Day when a mixed audience of approximately 175 responded to the 500 invitations sent.

Miss Alexander's talk on The Advent of Divine Justice was well received. A large quantity of literature was taken, and several inquiries were made about future meetings.

The St. Petersburg Bahá'ís are to be highly commended for their efforts. Though small in number, they have successfully combined audaciousness with careful planning.
Central American Teaching Committee Plans
Summer School in El Salvador for December

An international summer school at Lake Coatepeque, El Salvador, will be held on December 24 to 28, sponsored by the Central American Teaching Committee.

"To Teach and Confirm Bahá'ís," a class for believers, will study the goals of the World Crusade, and a class for Bahá'ís and their guests will examine "The Standards of Bahá'í Life."

A special project of the school will be a visit to the Pepil Indian town of Izalco to present a Bahá'í program there.

San Antonio Uses "Bahá'í News" to Discuss World Crusade Progress at Feasts

Bahá'í News has been used at Feasts in the San Antonio, Texas, community in a way that should be of interest to other communities as well.

Someone is appointed to review the current issue of Bahá'í News before each Feast to formulate pertinent questions about the international and national progress of the Faith. These questions form the basis for a short discussion during the consultation period. A large world map is also used to make the news of the victories and needs of the Crusade more meaningful.

This discussion of the Bahá'í News stories has proven helpful in creating an awareness of the current events of the World Crusade.

November 2, 1958
Beloved Friends:

The “exquisitely beautiful monument” designed as a memorial to the beloved Guardian has been completed at his resting place in the London cemetery. No doubt we shall soon have the privilege of seeing photographs of the ceremony when, in the presence of four Hands of the Cause, sacred dust from the Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh was placed in the foundation.

This historic occasion is employed by the Custodians for an appeal to all Bahá'ís throughout the world to rededicate themselves in service to the "Holy Cause for which beloved of all hearts sacrificed his precious life."

So poignant and compelling a call will surely bring a world-wide response from the Bahá'ís of all local communities in all continents. May the American Bahá'ís as one soul be kindled in ardor and determination to carry out the Guardian's wishes for the triumphant termination of the World Crusade.

Nine Hands of the Cause, Bahá'ís of Thirty-Four Countries
Meet in Singapore for Fifth Intercontinental Conference

The five Intercontinental Conferences so providentially planned by our beloved Guardian and announced to us in his last communication to the Bahá'í world in October 1957, have now been concluded. In the words of the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, "the overflowing measure of Divine grace we have witnessed has insured that the plan of Shoghi Effendi for these great conferences has been successfully fulfilled, the spirit he hoped would be generated by them has been generated, the pioneers he hoped would arise, have arisen, the funds he hoped would be raised have been forthcoming, and the ways and means for the furtherance of the work of the Crusade which he urged should be discussed have been deliberated upon and are bearing fruit already in different parts of the Bahá'í world."

Although all five Conferences were dedicated to the same five-fold purpose defined by the Guardian himself, each was unique in certain respects. This was true also of the fifth and final Intercontinental Conference held September 27 to 29, 1958, in Singapore, Malaya, for it drew representatives from the largest geographical area of the world, included members from the black, white, yellow, and brown races, and converts to the Faith from all the major religions of the world.

Conference Site Changed to Singapore

Shoghi Effendi had designated Djakarta, Indonesia, as the city for this final Conference. However, the internal conditions of that country were such that at the last moment a change of venue to Singapore became necessary. Nevertheless, there were in attendance 150 believers from thirty-four countries, representing thirteen national spiritual assemblies. Present also were nine Hands of the Cause, a member of the International Bahá'í Council, twelve members of the Auxiliary Boards, and nine Knights of Bahá'u'lláh.

This inspiring report of attendance was included in the cablegram from the Conference conveying to the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land the deepest appreciation for the presence of the beloved Guardian's special representative, Leroy C. Ioas, and of their own loving message to the Conference. The message further expressed assurance of the gathered friends of "loving devotion, loyalty and dedication of (their) services (in the) execution of 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Grand Design initiated by the beloved Guardian" and humbly supplicated their prayers.

As in the other Conferences, the reading of the special message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land and greetings from the Hands in attendance struck the keynote for the deliberations which were to follow. Mrs. Shirin Fozdar, chairman of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of South East Asia, acting as chairman of the Conference, presided at all sessions, which opened with prayers in Persian, English, and other languages spoken in this area. After extending a loving welcome to all the friends, she presented the representative of the Guardian, Hand of the Cause Leroy Ioas, who, after commenting that in reality Shoghi Effendi was the host of this Conference, read the stirring message from the Holy Land (published in the November Baha'i News).

Leroy Ioas Pays Tribute to Shoghi Effendi

The chairman next introduced Hand of the Cause 'Abu'l-Qasim Faizi, who spoke of the five aims of the Conference. Then Mr. Ioas gave to the friends an intimate, loving, and reverent account of the thirty-six years of the sacrificial services of the beloved Guardian to the Cause of God, including in his remarks many moving incidents illustrating the humility, love, kindness, devotion, insight, and unerring guidance of the Guardian, as well as the degree to which he sacrificed his personal life in his obedience and dedication to the commands of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. (This address by Mr. Ioas is printed on page 4 in this issue of Baha'i News.)

Mr. Ioas presented the World Crusade map created by the beloved Guardian himself, which had been displayed also at the other four Conferences, describing how Shoghi Effendi personally kept a record in his pocket-size notebook of every achievement of the objectives of the Ten-Year Plan, and with what happiness he received news of every new victory.

The sessions of the first day concluded with the Guardian's representative anointing all present with attar of roses and the viewing of the portrait of Bahá'u'lláh brought to the Conference by Mr. Ioas at the Guardian's instruction for this purpose.

Southeast Asia Crusade Goals Reviewed

The sessions of the second day included a review of the Crusade goals in Southeast Asia, followed by a call by Habib Sabet for contributions for the further progress of the Faith in that part of the world. In a short time the sum of $104,000 (United States dollars) was pledged. Then a call was made for pioneers, and nine arose on the spot and offered their services.

The morning of the third and last day was devoted largely to talks on teaching, emphasizing the Guardian's instructions that knowledge and teaching are the sacred duties of each believer, and that the administrative aspect of the Faith must be developed so that the Cause will function readily and efficiently at all times. Throughout the sessions there were inspiring talks by the nine Hands of the Cause, who, in addition to Leroy Ioas and 'Abu'l-Qasim Faizi, were: Tarazu'llah

Mrs. Margery McCormick, special representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States, reported the accomplishments of that community in the World Crusade, including the statement that there are forty-eight pioneers from the United States in nineteen countries of Asia, that $49,158 had been spent on teaching assistance to Asia since the opening of the World Crusade, and that $1,515,000 had been spent in achieving other objectives of the Crusade throughout the world.

Mr. Faizi explained how the Custodians of the Faith function in the Holy Land, and Miss Agnes Alexander spoke of the development of the Faith in Japan, where there are now eight local assemblies and a national spiritual assembly embracing six territories. She also stated that the beloved Guardian had called the National Spiritual Assembly of Japan the spiritual North Pole of the Pacific, and Australia the spiritual South Pole, and had instructed them to work together as the axis for teaching work in that vast area.

Call for More Pioneers in Pacific

Mrs. Peggy Ross, secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of Canada, and Mrs. Marguerite Sears of Africa also spoke on behalf of the Bahá'ís of their countries. Noel Walker, representing the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia, called for more pioneers in the Pacific, especially for the Admiralty and Cocos Islands, and for help for the New Hebrides and its Bahá'í school.

Mrs. Shirley Charters of New Zealand described the teaching work among the Maoris, and Miss Mable Sneider of Central America, enroute to pioneer in the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, asked for help for the Pacific goals of the National Spiritual Assembly of Central America, Panama and Mexico: the Marshall Islands and Tuamotu, as well as for the Gilberts, where there are many believers needing careful and patient deepening in the Faith. Pioneers from Brunei and Laos also spoke, and a moving moment was one in which four Arabian believers who had been in prison for six months for the Faith, were called to the platform.

Members of the Auxiliary Boards, pioneers, and believers from all of the countries represented were asked to give reports on the progress of the World Crusade and particularly on the supplementary tasks assigned to them by the beloved Guardian in his last communications to the Regional Spiritual Assembly of Southeast Asia. Many of the Hazíratu’l-Quds were already purchased, summer schools had been conducted, and time schedules adopted for other goals.

Minute's Silence for Memorial Observance

On the last day, at four o'clock Singapore time, after the chanting of prayers in Persian, a minute's silence was observed by the Conference to coincide with the exact time of the placing of flowers on the grave of the beloved Guardian in London by English believers on behalf of the Southeast Asia Conference.

Thus ended the last of the five great gatherings called by Shoghi Effendi himself for the rallying of all the believers throughout the world and for the release of the spiritual forces that can, if each plays his part, insure the triumph of the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh in all of the five continents and the islands of the seas.

Having witnessed the results of the other four Conferences, the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land had confidently expressed the hope that this final Conference “will have repercussions all over the world, and, releasing spiritual powers as yet untapped, enable the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh to penetrate into the lives of the peoples of the older yellow and white civilizations, so materialistic, so disillusioned, so morally corrupt and spiritually bankrupt.” “Let us not waste one precious moment,” they wrote in their Conference message. “We must now go forth like good soldiers, a conquering army, each to his own post to do his own battle, keep his own tryst on the home or pioneer front . . .” “Shoghi Effendi’s love is burning in our hearts, his appeals still fresh in our ears, the vision he gave us of our present tasks clear and perfect; let us keep it forever before our eyes.”
The Guardian of the Faith
by Leroy Ioas

Singapore Intercontinental Conference
September 27, 1958

It is difficult for a person with a limited capacity to say anything about the Guardian of the Bahá’í Faith. I recall one time when speaking of the Guardian, I spoke of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá at the same time and Shoghi Effendi said: “You must never mention ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and the Guardian at the same time. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá is the ocean, I’m but a drop.” All I can do is to relate experiences of the love and deeds of the Guardian.

Shoghi Effendi was thirty-six years dedicated and completely efaced for the Faith of God. Thus he was thirty-six years a complete sacrifice to the Cause of God. Shoghi Effendi arose usually about 5:30; then performed his prayers, then received his mail, cables, letters, and minutes from all over the world. Friends, you don’t know how meticulous he was—all mail was opened by him. After this rush cables were read and answered.

In the afternoon he would go up to the Shrine of the Báb and meet with the Eastern pilgrims and have tea with them, would lead them in prayer at the Sacred Shrine. He would return to his home, read cables, direct correspondence, thence to Western Pilgrim House and dine with the pilgrims from the West; would answer their questions, then meet with the Bábí Council and direct correspondence again, 5:30 to 11:30, not one day a week, not two days a week, but seven days a week, week after week, year after year.

When I first arrived at Haifa I was impressed by the delicacy of the features of Shoghi Effendi. I was amazed to see the delicate, fine, beautiful, but small man Shoghi Effendi was. He was smaller than ‘Abdu’l-Bahá; Shoghi Effendi was about the size of Bahá’u’lláh. When Shoghi Effendi was a small child, the Greatest Holy Leaf used to take him into her arms and say that these hands are the hands of Bahá’u’lláh. His features were a great deal like those of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. His eyes were like those of the Báb, they had the same brilliance.

Everything about Shoghi Effendi was refined, delicate, beautiful, glorious. The trait or virtue that stands out most is his rare humility, a humility I could not understand. It was evanescent in the greatest degree. For instance, Shoghi Effendi never spoke of himself, never spoke of himself as the Guardian. He would talk of the days of the Báb, Bahá’u’lláh, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, then refer to the days after them. Shoghi Effendi never spoke about his Ten-Year Plan. He said the task we have to do is the Ten-Year Crusade. Then another virtue that we don’t understand is a love that I am unequal to describe. When he loved an individual he saw the good deeds accomplished, never the shortcomings. How deeply he loved every person! I can’t tell you how deeply he suffered when all his kind and kin turned against the Cause.

The next trait was kindness; always trying to make someone else happy. The weight of the world was on his shoulders. Friends would cable him questions, questions—never would the friends cable him good news. What could he do for this one, that one, the servants working in the gardens, every one. A kindness to reach out to every heart to make everyone happy.

I want to tell one story to show his tenderness, his love. A member of the National Spiritual Assembly of Canada was on pilgrimage. One night that person discussed translations into the Eskimo language. This person said the Eskimos are not acquainted with roses and nightingales, etc. So many of the Writings mention these things, could the rose, nightingales, etc. be changed to fish and other words the Eskimos know. Shoghi Effendi said in translating literature it is about God. The Words of Bahá’u’lláh must be written as Bahá’u’lláh wrote them. Next night when saying goodbye to this pilgrim, Shoghi Effendi took a phial of attar of roses out of his pocket and said to the pilgrim: “When you return to Canada, please anoint the friends on my behalf. This is special attar of roses for the rose. He then reached in his pocket and brought out another phial of attar of roses and said that this is for the Eskimos. Perhaps this way they will get acquainted with the rose Bahá’u’lláh spoke of.” Now how could Shoghi Effendi, so weighed down with the weight of the Cause, think of these things to do. This is the spiritual insight, the tenderness, the love of Shoghi Effendi.

One day a person came to Western Pilgrim House sick and looking like a refugee, poorly dressed. I asked what I could do for him and he said he was on pilgrimage. I took him to his room. When it came to meet the Guardian I suggested he change his clothes. I didn’t realize the only clothes he had were on his back. We went down to meet the Guardian. The Guardian said that this guest of honor must sit at the head of the table; this man was a Knight of Bahá’u’lláh. When this man left he kissed him likewise on both cheeks and said that this man is one of God’s heroes. The way the Guardian judges people is in contrast to the way we judge people.

This was astonishing to me, being trained in the west—the precision of the mind of Shoghi Effendi. The manner in which he dispatched his work, everything he did was astonishing. I say that I was trained as a business man, to make quick decisions. Letters would come from all over the world about this subject or that subject, and the Guardian would say, "Why don’t they write the essence, that is all I wanted.” Then he would cable for essence.

I want to say he suffered a lot because of wrong actions of Baha’is. I was asked about the divine infallibility. The same question came up in the Christian era. Where did Shoghi Effendi and the Guardianship begin or end? Was everything he did infallible? I can only say I don’t know. The best thing I can do is state one or two experiences, then judge for yourselves.

One night at the dinner table Shoghi Effendi was discussing the operation of the administration in the future and as he talked I noted one thing that I felt wouldn’t work under a certain condition and intended to ask him later. When the Guardian had finished and was sipping his coffee he turned to me and said that under certain conditions that wouldn’t work, and then went on to explain it to me.

Another time the Guardian was relating an incident which happened when I was on the National Spiritual Assembly of U.S.A., and he said to me: “You were on the National Spiritual Assembly at that time, weren’t you, Leroy? You tell me whether what I say is what happened at that meeting.” It was as the beloved Guardian related.

I have been asked whether the Guardian knew his passing was near. I can only relate incidences.

One night the Guardian came to dinner very very distressed. He had not been well all day, and when he came over he pushed his dinner away, he pushed his food away. Ruhíyyih Khánum said: "Shoghi Effendi, won’t you eat? You haven’t eaten all day.”

One night Shoghi Effendi talked on spiritual things, the most beautiful I ever heard. He said, “Let us enter the door of heaven and forget for a few minutes.”

Usually I would take Shoghi Effendi over to his house after dinner and talk of all sorts, the National Spiritual Assembly, the pilgrims. This night the Guardian said: “Leroy I’ve been Guardian of the Cause of God for thirty-six years. Bahá’u’lláh was Head of the house for twenty-nine years. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá was Head of the Faith twenty-nine years. I’ve been Guardian for thirty-six years. In Bahá’u’lláh’s time the Faith was in eleven countries, in the days of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá in thirty-one countries and today it is in 250 countries and islands. The problems have weighed me down, I can’t stand it.”

I said: “Shoghi Effendi, why not give me more work, and you just make the decision, that will give relief.” The Guardian, with tears in his eyes said, “Leroy, only God can give me relief.”

Friends, just a few more minutes:

Shoghi Effendi one night related early experiences when he was appointed Guardian of the Cause of God. He said he had not expected it because he thought he would be able to help establish the Universal House of Justice, then when he returned from England to Haifa he found he was appointed Guardian, and he didn’t want it. He said: “I didn’t think I was capable of the heavy task. I knew what it meant, so went away by myself and did not return till I conquered myself and gave myself to God, and when I had conquered myself and turned myself to God I returned and knew I could do the thing God wanted me to do.”

The Guardian said that this is what every Bahá’í in the world must do. Every Bahá’í must turn and give themselves to God. It makes no difference what the responsibility is, national spiritual assembly, local spiritual assembly, pioneering, all must become channels; until he does, he cannot do full service to the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.
Benelux Bahá’ís, With Assistance of Many National Assemblies, Proclaim Faith to Millions at World’s Fair in Brussels

On the seventeenth of April 1958, King Baudouin of Belgium pronounced, in his royal discourse which opened the Universal and International Exhibition of Brussels: “Technology does not suffice to create a civilization. Though it is an element of progress, it demands a parallel development of our moral conceptions, of our will to realize, together, a constructive effort.”

There, on the plain of Heysel just north of Brussels, was launched a magnificent and extraordinary undertaking, concentrating the effort of forty-seven nations and eight international and supranational organizations, to present to the world the scientific, cultural, artistic, and moral achievements of our times. Its theme . . . “World Cooperation; The Building of a New and More Human World; Modern Technology in the Service of Man.”

To the Bahá’ís throughout the world, this exhibition spelled out in very realistic terms the teachings and prophecies of Bahá’u’lláh about the progress which man would attain, and of the crying need which mankind has for the healing grace of God.

For those Bahá’ís visiting the exhibition grounds, though marveling at the audacious architecture, the technological wonders, the folklore and customs of so many peoples, they saw that humanity was not yet really aware of that Cord which could bind the human race into one fold, one world. All the elements were there, but the divine knowledge of mankind’s oneness and the machinery of world order were lacking. The majority of the nations, in presenting all aspects of their cultures, also showed a considerable degree of nationalistic sentiment.

But in spite of this, such organizations as the United Nations and the Specialized Agencies, the European Coal and Steel Community, the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, the Council of Europe, Benelux, and the Customs Cooperation Council demonstrated that the path ahead leads to unity.

As itinerant teachers. A fine response was received, and literature poured in from Germany and Austria, India and Burma, Denmark, United States, Brazil-Peru-Columbia-Ecuador-Venezuela, British Isles, Sweden, and Singapore.

Through the Hands of our Faith residing in the Holy Land, contacting the Commissioner General in Tel Aviv, it was made possible for the showing of some color slides of the Bahá’í Shrines and Gardens in the continuous projections which were given every day at the Israeli Pavilion. What Bahá’í was not also surprised, in walking into the basement projection room of this Pavilion, to find, among eight immense panels representing major cities in Israel, one showing the Queen of Carmel seated upon her throne overlooking the Bay of Haifa, and another the city of ‘Akká—with the Most Great Prison! In addition, free literature showed certain photographs of the Shrine of the Báb.

2100 Large Posters Displayed Over Large Area

The National Spiritual Assembly of Persia announced that, since it had no literature to send, they were transmitting a contribution to be used to spread the name of the Faith during the period of the exhibition. This sizeable contribution was put to immediate and efficacious use. A series of 2100 large posters were printed in black ink on an orange background, and were placed all over the cities of Brussels, Antwerp, Charleroi, and Liege in Belgium; in Amsterdam and The Hague, Holland, and in Luxembourg City. The poster simply was headed with the word "BAHA'I" in large letters and beneath it the words "WORLD UNITY" printed in French, Dutch, English, German, Spanish, and Italian. At the base of each was indicated the address of the respective Bahá'í Center of the city, and when meetings were held.

The literature, so generously offered, was passed out at every opportunity, and all efforts were united, both by the local Bahá'ís as well as the visiting Bahá'ís, to broadcast the Faith.

It was also through the means provided by the National Assembly of Persia and the aid of the National Assembly of the United States, that a neat, attractive display was maintained for a period of over four months at a central location in the city. The display showed the beautiful model of the House of Worship at Wilmette and various photographs and literature of the Faith in different languages.

It was an honor to have in Brussels during the entire period of the Fair, Mehdi Azizbaglou, a Persian Bahá'í who was the Commissioner-General of the Iranian Pavilion, and his wife. Mr. Azizbaglou gave an immense prestige to the Faith by his presence and position, and he never failed to help wherever possible. On October 1, on behalf of King Baudouin, Commissioner-General of the Exposition Baron Moens de Fernig decorated Mr. Azizbaglou as Commander of the Order of the Crown for his services rendered. This took place as part of the celebrations of National Day of Iran.

Worthy also of mention is Mr. Ezzat Zahra'i, secretary at the Iranian Pavilion to the Commissioner-General, who was equally a member of the Executive Committee of "Jeuneexpo," a youth organization of those who worked at the fair grounds, amounting to 1800 youth. This organization, strictly non-political, was designed to meet the demands of the youth, to acquaint the young people gathered there from all nations, and to create a better understanding aiming at harmony of the races and peoples. Opportunities were taken to make the Faith known to many of the members.

Before and during the exhibition, the Chief of Translators for the Belgian Government at the Fair attended many public and fireside meetings.

Reception Committee Serves Visiting Bahá'ís

To handle the physical arrangements for the Bahá'í visitors coming to Brussels during the Fair, a special Reception Committee was formed locally, and their services greatly facilitated helping the friends. Special cards showing the name and address of the Hazíratu'l-Quds, telephone numbers of French, Persian- and English-speaking Bahá'ís, and a map indicating how to get to the Hazíratu'l-Quds were printed.

The name "Bahá'í Faith" and Hazíratu'l-Quds address was registered with Directeur du Syndicat d'Initiative de Bruxelles, Commissariat de Tourisme, and Federation Touristique du Brabant in order that the friends could be traced by visitors.

It was announced that this year a long article written by the Bahá'í International Community for the Yearbook of International Organizations would be printed, and excellent contact was made with leading personnel connected with this yearbook which is printed in Brussels.

Preliminary to the exhibition opening, an unsolicited article appeared in Le Soir, leading newspaper in Belgium, entitled "Ten Years in the Promised Land" by Mr. Louis Verschraeghen, with a photo of the Shrine of the Báb and an accompanying three-column article.

At the inauguration ceremonies held with all Commissioner-General's, Philibert Schoomblood, a leading Belgian architect and designer of the "Palais de l'Elegance," spoke openly of the Faith.

As part of a series of three meetings entitled "Messages of Brussels," Bahá'ís attended one on May 28 which had as its theme "Spiritual Values in a More Humane World," where leading professors and spiritual leaders from Italy, France, Brazil, and Japan spoke on the need for spiritual values amidst temporal achievements. Most talks were strongly akin to the Bahá'í teachings.

The Baha'i News of September 1958 reported at length on the "East-West Symposium" held June 26 to July 3 under the auspices of the Belgian branch of UNESCO. Excellent contacts were made through the two Bahá'í delegates to this Symposium and many of the leading personalities assisting declared openly their knowledge of the Faith and admiration for its Teachings. These personalities included the Director-General of UNESCO, who spoke very warmly of the Bahá'ís of the United States and his keen awareness of the Bahá'í International Community.

During the summer months at the exhibition, the Israeli Pavilion came out with the showing of a 16 mm film on Israel, which included the Shrine of the Báb.

There was a break in activities with the holding of the Bahá'í Intercontinental Conference at Frankfurt on July 25-29, and the second European Conference of the Hands on July 30-31. After that historic Conference, Brussels had the privilege of being veritably deluged with Bahá'í friends from all over the world.

Brussels, being the midway point between Frankfurt and the graveside of our beloved Guardian, received these dear friends, totalling from 250-300. Up till that time and after the Conference, the visiting Bahá'ís came from Tanganyika, Uganda, India, Algeria, Morocco, Tunisia, Germany, Austria, England, Rhodes Islands, Pakistan, Israel, France, United States, Turkey, Iran, Libya, Ireland, and the Canary Islands.

Two Hands of the Cause Visit Brussels

A particular honor for the community was to welcome Jaláí Khážeh, Hand of the Faith in the Holy Land, on August 3, during his first trip to Europe to see the friends, and Dhikru'lláh Khádem, Hand of the Cause in Asia, well known by the Benelux friends from past visits, on August 27. Their words were inspiring and comforting as they spoke of the sacrifice of our beloved Guardian and the meaning of our lives in terms of the Ten-Year Crusade. Mr. Khážeh spoke at a fireside, and Mr. Khádem to all Bahá'ís of Belgium at the Hazíratu'l-Quds in Brussels.

Firesides and open meetings were held at the Hazíratu'l-Quds at numerous intervals during the visits of the friends, often totaling over fifty present. The majority of the visitors were Persian friends from the cradle of our Faith who, by their special character, imparted a great joy and strength to the Community.

Glistening in the sun on the plain of Heysel stands the nine-globed Atomium, symbol of the World's Fair and the material benefit of man. Another united effort of man and nature's resources were put to work in order to give humanity a hope and pave the way for a better world. God's ways are often mysterious and beyond our immediate ken but we, the Bahá'ís, can pray that this gathering-place, this experimental testing-ground of international cooperation, become another of the prime-movers which pushes the human race onward to that Lesser Peace. The words of 'Abdu'l-Bahá ring ever louder in our ears as we reflect: “O Thou kind Lord! Unite all, let the religions agree, make the nations one so that they may be as one kind and as children of the same fatherland. May they associate in unity and concord. O God! Upraise the standard of the oneness of humankind. O God! establish the Most Great Peace.”

First Bahá'í School of South Vietnam Has Over 100 Students

The first Bahá'í school in South Vietnam is located in the village of Phuoc Long. The school has two classes: the morning class, with its teacher, Bui Van Trieu, is shown in the photograph at the left. This class consists of eighty-three students, and the afternoon class has twenty-five students. All teachers are Bahá'ís.

The building in the picture at the right shows the Hazíratu'l-Quds of Phuoc Long, which also serves as the Bahá'í school house. This is the only school house in this village.

Students are taught the basic grammar school subjects, and elements of Bahá'í history and principles simplified for their capacities.

It is expected that next year the village itself might assist the Bahá'ís in enlarging the school facilities, since the village officials are very favorably impressed.
Guardian's Last Wish For Paraguay Realized With Dedication of Temple Site

DEDICATION of the land for the Mother Temple of Paraguay was the culminating event of the third annual Bahá'í Teaching Congress at Asuncion on October 12, 1958.

The purchase of this site, located fifteen kilometers from the capital of Paraguay, was made on September 30, and reported in Bahá'í News for November. It is three hectares in area (about seven and one-half acres).

Prayers were read in English, Spanish, and Guarani at the dedication ceremony, held in the midst of tall, swaying palm trees.

During the program, the Paraguayan friends were reminded that the purchase of this land was the last expressed wish of Shoghi Effendi for their country, and they felt a sense of deep gratitude and triumph as well as the expectancy of many teaching confirmations for the future.

The Teaching Congress, held at the Hazíratu'lı-Quds, brought together the Bahá'ís of Paraguay and Srta. Mary Binda of Santiago, Chile, a member of the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, for a program of study and consultation.

Srta. Binda spent a week in Asuncion, and during this time she was given opportunities to speak directly on the Faith on two radio stations, as well as to talk with United Nations' officials and make other important contacts for the prestige of the Faith. Three public meetings were held at the Center during this time.

Central and East Africa Progress Report
Lists Impressive Achievements

Included in a general progress report of October 1, 1958, from the National Spiritual Assembly of Central and East Africa are these impressive facts:

There is a total of 176 local spiritual assemblies, 151 groups, 202 isolated centers, making a total of 529 centers. The individuals that make up these centers represent ninety-eight African tribes.

At the present time Bahá'í literature has been produced in the following languages: Acholi, Ateso, Giriam, Kikikuyu, Lubukusu, Luganda, Lugbara, Lumasaba, Luo, Runyoro-Rutoro, Swahili, and Yao.

All five goals of the Ten-Year Plan have been achieved: purchase of land for the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, formation of the Regional National Assembly of Central and East Africa, establishment of the National Hażiratu'l-Quds in Kampala, incorporation of the National Assembly, and purchase of national endowments.

Action on achieving the six goals of the Central and East Africa Seven-Year Plan has been initiated, and varying degrees of progress are reported. These goals include the multiplication of the number of believers, isolated centers, groups, and assemblies; consolidation of work achieved; initiation of the National Bahá'í Fund; establishment of Bahá'í endowments and incorporation of local assemblies; construction of the first Mashriqu'l-Adhkár; and translation and dissemination of Bahá'í literature.

Supplementary goals toward which progress has been made include at least one Hażiratu'l-Quds for each territory, recognition of Bahá'í Holy Days, establishment of Bahá'í burial grounds, public recognition of the Faith, settlement of additional islands, and acquisition of land for Bahá'í schools.

Three-Day Taiwan Summer School
Stresses Administration of Faith

Devotions in Chinese, Persian and English opened the sessions of the second Taiwan Summer School held in Taipei, October 10-12, in the Anna Lee room of the International House. Miss Agnes Alexander, Hand of the Cause from Japan, was present, and also Carl Scherer, Auxiliary Board member from Macau, China.

Topics discussed included the following: "The Will and Testament of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and the Guardian" by Agnes Alexander; "The Need for Administration" by Carl Scherer; "Bahá'í Principles" by M. S. Yuan-on; "History of the Bahá'í Faith" by Wang Shi; "Progressive Revelation" by Mr. Suleimani; "Institutions of the Faith" by Keith Craig; "Development of the Soul" by Edith Danielson-Craig.

Agnes Alexander also reported on the Southeast Asia Conference, and Carl Scherer presented slides on the Shrine of the Bab, and the Southeast Asia Conference.

An open panel discussion on applications of administration, held on the morning of October 12, gave an interesting highlight to the meetings.

Thornton Chase Memorial Meeting Held

A memorial program for Thornton Chase, the first American Bahá'í, was held at his grave in Inglewood Park Cemetery, Los Angeles, Calif., on September 30, 1958. The Local Spiritual Assembly of Inglewood conducted the program, consisting of readings from the Bahá'í Writings.

'Abdu'l-Bahá asked that Mr. Chase's grave be visited annually on the date of his passing.
Formation of Bahá’í Group on Cherokee Reservation

Demonstrates Perseverance and Obedience to Teachings

__Ethel Murray__ was among the first Bahá’ís in this country to arise to pioneer among the American Indians in the beginning months of the Ten-Year Crusade. Leaving her home in Providence, R.I., in November 1953, Mrs. Murray settled first in Asheville, N. Car., then in Bryson City, and finally in Cherokee, which she had chosen as her ultimate destination.

This reservation was of special importance to the Crusade, for the Cherokee language was the one chosen by the Guardian for the first American Indian translation of the Bahá’í Writings.

Mrs. Murray has remained in Cherokee since June 1954. Only those closely associated with her know to some extent the “staying power” of her devotion to the Faith and to her beloved friends, the Cherokee Indians. With the recent formation of a Bahá’í group in Cherokee, with Mrs. Murray, Minnie Feather, and Nellie Jumper as members, and the establishment of a small but exceedingly attractive Bahá’í Center in the heart of the village, it seemed timely that something of the Cherokee story be shared with the friends in Baha’i News. A letter from Mrs. Murray, written in response to such a request, follows:

Dear Friends:

It is difficult to summarize the varied experiences of the last five years, when I have been wholly dependent on Bahá’u’lláh.

I felt that the first thing that should be done, was to find someone to translate some of the Bahá’í teachings into the Cherokee language. This took some time and effort, but finally two were selected who could work together. Our wonderful Indian Committee sent the substance for a pamphlet A New Day Comes and Mose Owle and Ben Bushyhead did the translation.

As distances to most of the Indian homes are so great that it was difficult to reach many of these people, and some other doors were closed, I decided to follow ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s example and try to get some people to come to me. By offering clothing that was badly needed, and which the friends have been kindly sending to me for distribution, it was not long before a number were coming to my house more or less regularly.

In this way I was able to talk to them of the Faith.

My home was open to all, and I soon became known as “the Bahá’í lady.” I made it a point to follow Bahá’u’lláh’s teaching in the Hidden Words No. 30, “Deny not My servant should he ask anything from thee, for his face is My face; be then abashed before Me.”

During the second year Minnie Feather, who is part Cherokee, came into the Faith, and though she had difficulty in coming at regular periods, there was a close bond of friendship and understanding.

There have been many happy experiences, some humorous and some discouraging, but Bahá’u’lláh has gradually opened doors of service, and made it possible to establish a suitable place for a Bahá’í Center, with a display in front, where many of the thousands of tourists from all over the country can stop if they wish, and learn something of the Faith; or they will, at least, see the name “Bahá’í World Faith.” A few come into the Center for literature. Two Baptist ministers have been in, among others. And now almost every day I have callers and am able to say a few words for the Faith.

Then, last but not least, another sincere soul, an Indian woman whose name is Nellie Jumper, has accepted the Faith, making three of us in this group. We are looking forward to the time when another Bahá’í will come to help in this very important work, among these kind and lovable people, so dear to the heart of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá.

The American Indian Service Committee is anxious to hear from prospective pioneers who are interested in.

assisting the work of the Cherokee Bahá’í Group. Except for the usual opportunities for teachers, nurses, and doctors, jobs are scarce on the Cherokee reservation. However, Mrs. Murray has recently written, “I believe an electrician could get a great deal of work, but he would probably have to live just off the reservation, unless Bahá’u’lláh found him a place as He did me.” Mrs. Murray’s experiences offer abundant proof that “God will assist all those who arise to serve Him.”

Training Course in Bubulo, Uganda, Prepares Teachers To Conduct Bahá’í Weekend Schools

A Bahá’í School for thirty-three Teso teachers and District Committee members was held at Bubulo in Bugisu, Uganda, from August 23 to 29, 1958.

Javan Gutosi, member of the Central and East Africa National Spiritual Assembly, secured classroom and sleeping accommodations from the Bugisu Coffee Cooperative. For convenience, beauty of location, and the cordial hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Gutosi, no better place could have been found.

The school offered three general courses: “Bahá’í Administration,” presented by Ali Nakhjavani at the morning sessions and then demonstrated by the students at two-hour afternoon sessions; “Bahá’í History,” presented by Mary Collison; and “Some Bahá’í Laws and Social Teachings,” by Rex Collison.

Textbooks in Ateso were prepared for the latter two courses, and there was also an outline on “Administration.” Written tests on these subjects were given, and prizes were awarded to the honor students.

Although everyone worked hard for over six hours a day, they were all enthusiastic. Many said it was the finest school yet held in Uganda. The real measure of its worth will be shown in the number and success of weekend schools held in sections of Teso by these students of the Bubulo school.

Informal evening discussions, stories, and singing, were enjoyed by everyone. It is hoped that similar schools in Swahili and Luganda will be organized soon.

First Results of Teacher Training School

The first school planned as a result of the Bubulo Teacher Training course was held in Teso District B, and was staffed by eight of the believers that had attended this training school.

In the village of Kobwin, Teso, a Bahá’í has offered his house for Bahá’í meetings and for a special training course for local assembly secretaries.

Evangelical Church Leader in Uruguay Expresses Interest in Faith Following Holy Land Visit

Bahá’ís of Montevideo, Uruguay, gave a reception for Dr. Nector Figari, well-known pastor of the Evangelical Church, on October 23, 1958, following his return from Jerusalem, where he took part in the World Bible Contest.

Since Dr. Figari’s return, he has been giving much publicity to the Bahá’í Faith in his public talks, as he was greatly impressed with the beauty of Mt. Carmel and the spirituality surrounding the Holy Tombs.

The reception was given in the home of Roberto and Else Cazcarra, who, at the request of their distinguished guest and his friends, gave the Bahá’í Message with special reference to the prophecies fulfilled. Many questions were asked, and great interest was manifested in the Bahá’í answers.

Dr. Figari stated: “The Bahá’í Faith is so ample that the program it presents with respect to the unification of all the religions is marvelous and admirable.”

The visitors were deeply impressed when the Bahá’ís narrated the life and work of Hand of the Cause Dr.
George Townshend, and showed great interest in his last book, Christ and Bahá'u'lláh. Copies of the Kitáb-i-Áqá and The Renewal of Civilization were presented to Dr. Figari, and a beautiful bouquet of flowers was given to his wife. An invitation was extended to him to take part in the World Religion Day program in January.

Geyerville School Offered Enthusiastic Study, Improvements in Services and Accomodations

Enthusiastic study marked the 1958 season at the Bahá'í School at Geyerville, Calif. There was a strong feeling of warmth and consecration as the friends worked together and studied courses on the Covenant, various phases of Bahá'í society and culture, and ways of teachings.

In addition to the weekday schedules of eight different classes, there were Sunday seminars for about three hours in the middle of the day, with time out for lunch, that were especially appreciated by those who could come only for the day or weekend.

The school was in session for seven weeks from June 29 to August 31, with a two-week intermission. This was longer than any previous summer school season at Geyerville. Devotions were scheduled three times a day—morning, noon, and evening—instead of the usual once-a-day in the morning.

Three hundred eighty-five people were registered. The smallest weekly attendance was eighty-seven and the largest weekly attendance was 138.

The library was very popular. A total of 1,034 books were drawn, not counting those used for devotions and those read by browsers in the library.

All-year-round publicity was obtained last year in several newspapers of Sonoma County, one new paper being added to the list and the number of column inches being increased in all of them. Two newspapers in the area welcomed the Bahá'ís with editorials, and the Geyerville Chamber of Commerce published a welcome to Bahá'ís.

The extra-curricular events of the school attracted more interest than in previous years, and many came from the surrounding area for these programs. One of the high points was a talk by Hand of the Cause Leroy Loas, who gave his memories of the Guardian to a packed hall. About four hundred attended the Unity Feast, an annual "home-coming" occasion. Classes were suspended to keep the Holy Day for the Martyrdom of the Báb.

Afternoon forums were planned for every weekday except for sessions when there were classes in the afternoon. Evening programs were mainly of two types, recreation for the students attending the school, or proclamation of the Faith to the public.

In the opinion of people who have been associated with the school for many years, this season was outstanding from several other standpoints, namely (1) financial returns which helped to pay for improvements, (2) harmony evidenced by many expressions of appreciation but only a few minor complaints, (3) more efficient management of all departments and better service offered, (4) better accommodations with a new cafeteria, improvements in the dormitories, and central sanitary facilities, and (5) the success of the newly adopted scholarship system.

This scholarship system was a "share-the-work" plan in which students put in a few hours a day on some assigned job in exchange for half of their living costs at the school. This made it possible for some to attend who otherwise could not, and helped the school to keep down salary costs. No outside help was employed.

Other students helped to keep down expenses by performing their own maid service in living quarters and by carrying their own trays in the cafeteria from steam table to dining room and back to the dishwasher. There were also volunteers for special work projects. As a result of this spirit of Bahá’í service, the National Spiritual Assembly was able to apply $2,000 from net receipts of the summer school toward the cost of cafeteria improvement.

Those who came from a distance were surprised to see the remodeled cafeteria, which was in process of being completed as the school opened. Plans for its new kitchen and for modernizing the old dining room were drawn by architectural student Roderick Ward, and the new construction was done by a Cloverdale building firm. Raymon Dones supervised all construction, and the renovating of the dining room was done by volunteer labor. The success of the project was due in large part to many hours of unselfish volunteer labor contributed by many Bahá’í individuals and communities in Northern California. Two new washrooms were built at one end of the cafeteria building. Other buildings were improved by volunteer labor with repaired foundations, new roofings, a replaced porch, additional windows, and exterior painting.

It seemed as if pride in the school and a desire to serve were contagious and carried over into the classes. There were requests for school improvement projects that could be performed from a distance by communities too far away to come to Geyserville for weekend work parties. There were also requests for more school sessions and a broader curriculum to answer the needs of more people.

Attendance and Interest at Davison School
Showed Gains Over Previous Summer

Over 325 people registered for instruction during the past summer at the Davison Bahá’í School, Davison, Mich. Under the able management of Mr. and Mrs. Elva Green, and the efforts of the Maintenance Committee in redecorating and repair, the school provided an attractive fresh appearance and a pleasant, home-like atmosphere for study and discussion.

Through the skilled and devoted tutelage of Mrs. Etta Catlin, program director, the classes and social program were conducted in a well-organized manner, productive of worthwhile instruction and Bahá’í experience.

Many qualified Bahá’í teachers responded to the invitation to teach, and those in attendance benefited from their knowledge and spiritual development. Among others there were: Lois Nochman, Marjorie Brown, Edith McLaren, and Michael Jamir.

Particularly well-attended were those courses which offered help in meeting the problems of the Bahá’í in a Christian culture, and the application of Bahá’í principles in our future society. Indicative of the conscientious desire of Bahá’ís to "leaven" was the special interest displayed by students in those classes designed to aid in teaching the faith to all types of fundamentalist or liberal Christians. Also well received was a music program conducted by Esther Wilson, making the students better acquainted with available Bahá’í devotional selections.

Both the teachers and the students were heartily in favor of the experimental double-period classes in which lecture, workshop, and directed study were all used. Two such classes were scheduled and they were taught by two husband and wife teams; John and Madeline Byers, and Robert and Elinor Wolff. This method provided an intensive study of one subject rather than a survey of several subjects, and its popularity recommends it for next year’s planning.

Both the Junior and the Senior Youth Sessions were well attended, many of the students having come back for their second or third year. Wholesome recreation was sprinkled throughout their studies, and the opportunity to "socialize" with youth of other races provided a preview of the pleasant possibilities inherent in the future world community.

Weekend courses proved very popular and drew heavily from surrounding urban centers, for those people who could not arrange for a longer stay at the school. The teachers cooperated enthusiastically in these "capsule courses," and thus enriched many lives who could not otherwise share in the benefits of the school.

Throughout the summer public talks were given...
First Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Logan, Utah, formed on April 21, 1938.

The student secretary in her report commented on Mr. Holley's address as follows: “Everyone there was fascinated because this was their first experience with this religion.”

A question period followed the talks, and many excellent questions were directed to all three speakers. Refreshments were served afterwards and those who wished to do so were privileged to visit the auditorium of the Bahá'í House of Worship. Many viewed the exhibits in Foundation Hall and purchased books and pamphlets.

The local Bahá'í youth circulated among the students and found several eager to accept their invitation to attend the Bahá'í youth firesides in Wilmette.

Many Arizona State College Students Learn of Faith During “Religion in Life Week”

The Religious Council on campus at Arizona State College at Flagstaff, Ariz., sponsored an observance known as “Religion in Life Week” the week of September 28 to October 3, 1958, which opened with a banquet at the First Baptist Church.

Four Bahá'ís, two students, and two adults, were in attendance. Harry Hambley, a Bahá'í representative on this council, was asked to give the Invocation, one of the Prayers for Mankind, which was very graciously received.

Each day of that week seminars for students and public meetings were held by the various faiths and denominations, culminating with a Bahá'í seminar from 3 to 4 p.m. on October 3, and a public meeting in the auditorium the same evening, both conducted by Dr. Nosratollah Rassekh.

Over seventy-five students were present at the seminars; in fact, a whole psychology class was in attendance. The evening session was most inspiring, with an excellent and thought-provoking talk by Dr. Rassekh, and a most interesting question and answer period followed. The theme for this week's activities was, “Missing Something?”, which, of course, from the Bahá'í point of view was a matchless opportunity for our speaker.

Following the meeting Bahá'ís and their interested contacts enjoyed an informal fireside at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCormick.

Greensboro Bahá'ís Continue Integrated Public Meetings

The Greensboro, N. Car., Bahá'í community continues to promulgate the Bahá'í teaching of the oneness of mankind with integrated meetings in an area that is very segregation-conscious.

On September 21 they held their Proclamation Day meeting at the Hayes Taylor YMCA with a panel discussion on “The Oneness of Religion.” Three adult Bahá'ís and one youth took part: Betty Thompson, Jack Davis, Kimball Kinney, and Judy Bernstein, a student at Duke University.

About twenty-five persons were in attendance, among them two women students from A. and T. College who became interested to the point of attending the Conference for College Youth in Charleston, W. Va.

After the Proclamation Day meeting, most of the contacts met for coffee and fellowship after the meeting in the only restaurant in Greensboro where the white and Negro races may mingle.

The Greensboro community sponsored a statewide institute on the highlights of the Blue Ridge Summer School on October 12. Baha'i's from Charlotte, Durham, and Raleigh attended. The morning session featured a discussion of Islam, and in the afternoon summaries were given of the Blue Ridge courses on Baha'i Administration, the World Crusade, the Youth Institute, and the Covenant and Covenant-Breaking.

At least once a month the Greensboro committee goes to Winston-Salem for extension teaching. The only building in all of Winston-Salem in which integrated meetings can be held is the U.S. Army. The Greensboro Assembly's representative, Jack Davis, contacted the officer in charge, was courteously received, since the officer had a favorable impression of the Faith from a Baha'i contact in Panama, and received a definite government contract for use of the building.

Negro Welfare Group. Named for Baha'i, Dedicates New Headquarters in Miami

The James E. Scott Community Association (Negro Welfare) dedicated their new headquarters in Miami, Fla., on October 19, and the local Baha'i's were invited to attend.

Capt. James E. Scott, for whom the association was named, was a member of the Baha'i Faith. At the dedication Mrs. Emily Bethel, chairman of the Miami Local Spiritual Assembly, was invited to read the opening prayer, which she selected from the Baha'i Writings.

This Community Association functions within the framework of the National Federation of Settlements and Neighborhood Centers.

Message to 1958 State Conventions from the Hands of the Cause in America

WHILE in this hour all American Bahá'ís are immersed in the pressing tasks of the homefront, let us raise our eyes to the level of the universality of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh, from which the purpose of our human existence and the devotion of our hearts are continuously nourished.

That universality, created for mankind in the text of His Revelation, was maintained in its full integrity from 1892 to 1921 by the Center of His Covenant, and from 1921 to 1957 by the Guardian of His Faith.

With the passing of our beloved Shoghi Effendi on November 4, 1957, the responsibility for preserving the unity of the believers throughout the world has rested upon the Chief Stewards of the Commonwealth of Bahá'u'lláh by express appointment and direction of the Guardian himself. Though the Chief Stewards supply the instrument through which the Bahá'í World Community is guided and encouraged to complete the projects defined by the Guardian, that weighty mission cannot be fulfilled except through the conscious knowledge and the ardent cooperation of the believers themselves.

It will be well to review on this occasion the salient passages in the letters we have received from Haifa since the Guardian's passing.

The Proclamation issued on November 25 by the entire body of Hands assembled at Bahji contained the words: “Is not the most precious legacy bequeathed to us by Shoghi Effendi the privilege of constancy in the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh and devotion in teaching His Message? This is the heartfelt plea we direct to every Bahá'í: The hour has come, as it came with the passing of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, when true Bahá'ís will be distinguished by their firmness in the Covenant and their spiritual radiance while pressing forward the mighty work committed to every area of the world community—to every individual Bahá'í!...”

“When that divinely ordained body (that is, the Universal House of Justice) comes into existence, all the conditions of the Faith can be examined anew and the measures necessary for its future operation determined on consultation with the Hands of the Cause.”

On December 13 this cabled message was transmitted for all national assemblies and believers: “Conferences (that is, the five Intercontinental Conferences announced by the Guardian for 1958) provide unexampled opportunity to demonstrate mysterious divine force animating our dearly-loved Faith, the vitality of the institutions of the embryonic world order, and the determination of the Bahá'í community to diffuse uninterruptedly the fragrance of Bahá'u'lláh's mighty Revelation to a fear-laden humanity, deprived of power to recognize the Divine Light unaided.”

Two months later we received this significant message: “We do not know what the future holds in store; by this we mean that the world situation is so precarious that, as the Guardian so repeatedly pointed out, wars and disturbances of an unforeseen nature may break out and perhaps cut the World Center off from all or part of the other Bahá'í centers temporarily; meantime we have this mighty plan, the last five years of it to vigorously prosecute; it can only be coordinated and directed from the World Center.... "You and we must always bear in mind that what inspires and unites the Bahá'í World Community is the pulsating stream to and from one universal point... The Guardian himself spoke in his last message to all national assemblies of the Holy Land—the Qiblih of a world community, the heart from which the energizing influences of a vivifying Faith continually stream, and the seat and center around which the diversified activities of a divinely appointed administrative order revolve."”

In a cabled message received on April 20, the believers were invited to contribute to a special memorial fund for the purpose of erecting a monument at his grave in the London cemetery. By this decision the Custodians offered a worldwide project which united the Bahá'ís in a common gratitude for the beloved Guardian's unique services to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh. A recent cable from Rúhíyyih Khánum in London announced that the monument had been completed.

On June 12 the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land issued a grave and serious call for unified understanding: “We call upon all believers, for the sake of preserving the unity of our beloved Faith for which the Báb was martyred, Bahá'u'lláh and the Master imprisoned, and for which the beloved Guardian so completely sacrificed himself, to concentrate on the thoughts expressed in the Proclamation, and to desist from all further speculation on the future development of the institutions of the Faith—speculation which can only give rise to those very differences of interpretation forbidden by Bahá’u’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, and against which They repeatedly warn us. . . . Our sacred obligation is to fulfill our Guardian’s wishes, his plans, and his most cherished hopes, leaving the overall scheme of God to unfold as He sees fit, in His mysterious ways, in the days to come. Let us be confident that if we do our part He will never fail in His, and with this assurance go forward unitedly, courageously, and with complete consecration.”

These words were received in a letter dated August 8, 1958: “The great waves of prayer and loving confidence which have come pouring in to us from the national spiritual assemblies and the believers all over the world, have reassured and sustained us, and have given us strength and courage as we labor to protect the World Center and maintain it as the unifying hub of the great wheel of the Cause our Guardian so carefully built up and set in motion. . . .

“Beloved friends, we are now, together, embarked upon the most important work which human beings have ever done in the history of our planet. Ours is the precious privilege and the grave, inescapable responsibility of raising up that sacred institution, the Universal House of Justice. This can be done only after the complete triumph of his Ten-Year Plan, which is destined to lay the necessary foundation for that weighty and supreme edifice of the World Order of Bahá’u’lláh.”

Who can fail to see that in the Bahá’í situation revealed by these messages, the pure spiritual vision coincides with the nearest and most practical task facing every believer and every Bahá’í institution? Thrilled by a glimpse of the Kingdom, we turn with redoubled energy to our daily efforts to serve the World Crusade, realizing in the depths of our hearts the fact that the Crusade must be achieved in full measure by 1963 if the Universal House of Justice is to assert its majestic grandeur and creative power against the dark forces which threaten to engulf mankind in a common ruin.

The unity of Bahá’ís throughout the world is no uniformity forced upon us at the cost of our self-respect and rational powers, but a pure expression of the Holy Spirit which descended through Bahá’u’lláh as God’s Supreme Gift to mankind.

The American Hands and the members of the Auxiliary Boards pledge their utmost support to the teaching work in every state of the United States where the problem of a laggard homefront has not yet been solved, and stand ready to deal with any evidences of Covenant-breaking or insidious attempts to darken the hearts of the believers and divide the community.

Sincerely,
CORINNE TRUE

Baha’i Marriage

In order to further emphasize and clarify the requisites concerning Bahá’í marriage, the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States wishes to call attention to the following excerpts from communications from the World Center, most of which were published in the Canadian Bahá’í News in August 1958.

The first is from a letter from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, dated April 25, 1958, and is as follows: “Our beloved Guardian made it clear that it was the responsibility of the Bahá’í body performing the marriage ceremony to confirm without question the fact that the living natural parents of the two individuals who are being married have given their consent to the marriage. It is preferable that this consent be given in writing, but if this is not possible, or inadvisable for some reason, verbal consent in the presence of witnesses is sufficient.”

In this connection a letter from the beloved Guardian to the Canadian National Assembly through his secretary on June 28, 1956, stated:

“Regarding your question of applying the sanction of suspension of voting rights to people who marry without the consent of parents, this should be done from now on. The laws of the Kitáb-i-Aqdas are explicit and not open to any ambiguity at all. As long as the parents are alive, the consent must be obtained; it is not conditioned on their relationship to their children. If the whereabouts of the parents is not known legally, in other words, if they are legally dead, then it is not necessary for the children to obtain their consent, obviously. It is not a question of the child not knowing the present whereabouts of its parents, it is a question of a legal thing—if the parents are alive, they must be asked.”

Quoting again from the aforementioned letter from the Hands of the Faith: “The Guardian would permit no compromise on the question of non-Bahá’í religious marriage ceremonies in cases where both parties are Bahá’ís. If one of the parties is a non-Bahá’í, there can be two religious ceremonies.

“All believers must have the Bahá’í ceremony, regardless of whether it is legally recognized or not. If the Bahá’í is marrying a non-Bahá’í, there would be a Bahá’í ceremony in all cases, even though the non-Bahá’í also wished to have another ceremony, either civil or religious.

"...The beloved Guardian stated that in cases where there is more than one ceremony, the Bahá’í service and the other civil or religious ceremony must both be performed on the same day.”

In a letter to Australia through his secretary on June 20, 1954, the Guardian explained that where the Bahá’í is marrying a non-Bahá’í who wishes to have a ceremony of his own religion carried out, it must be quite clear that, first, “the Bahá’í partner is understood to be a Bahá’í by religion, and not to accept the religion of the other party to the marriage by having his or her religious ceremony; and second, the ceremony must be of a nature which does not commit the Bahá’í to any declaration of faith in a religion other than his own.”

In still another letter dated May 7, 1957, the Guardian wrote to Australia through his secretary: “...The Bahá’ís must, in view of the conditions of the world today, stand forth firmly and courageously as followers of Bahá’u’lláh, obeying His Laws and seeking to build His World Order. Through compromise we will never be able to establish our Faith or win others’ hearts to it. This involves often great personal sacrifice, but we know that, when we do the right thing, God gives us strength to carry it out, and we attract His blessing. We learn at such times that our calamity is indeed a blessing.”

"Call out to Zion, O Carmel, and announce the joyful tidings: He that was hidden from mortal eyes is come! His all-conquering sovereignty is manifest; His all-encompassing splendor is revealed. Beware lest thou hesitate or halt. Hasten forth and circumambulate the City of God that hath descended from Heaven, the celestial Kaaba round which have circled in adoration the favored of God, the pure in heart, and the company of the most exalted angels. Oh, how I long to announce unto every spot on the surface of the earth, and to carry to each one of its cities, the glad-tidings of this Revelation—a Revelation to which the heart of Sinai hath been attracted, and in whose name the Burning Bush is calling: 'Unto God, the Lord of Lords, belong the kingdoms of earth and heaven.' Verily this is the Day in which both land and sea rejoice at this announcement, the Day for which have been laid up those things which God, through a bounty beyond the ken of mortal mind or heart, hath destined for revelation. Ere long will God sail His Ark upon thee, and will manifest the people of Bahá who have been mentioned in the Book of Names."—Gl. p. 16
Construction of Gallery Walls and Roof Nears Completion as Work Progresses on House of Worship in Australia

It is nearly twelve months since the excavation work for the Temple was started. By January 1958 the cement foundation for the outer brick retaining wall had been laid and by March 21st during the Sydney Intercontinental Conference, the foundation walls with a quarter of the Temple floor had been constructed. For some months following this period work was confined to completing the base and to the preparation of forms which were to be used in the building of the walls of the Temple.

The completion of the foundation floor allowed for the next step in the construction program, which was the erection of a central cement pouring tower with its nine sixty-foot supporting columns. These columns with the tower will be further extended as the work progresses. The steel reinforcement for the columns supporting the dome and gallery now began to appear and were quickly joined by the sections of the outer walls which had been prepared on the site. These sections, each comprising a face of the Temple up to the gallery windows, were cast in moulds containing the outer facing of opaque quartz; here white cement was used, as well as a waterproofing material. These sections, about two inches thick and strongly reinforced with heavy timber, are lifted into position by a large travelling crane which serves all parts of the construction. An inner form is then erected and that portion of the wall is poured. The outer surface of the Temple walls is thus finished as the wall is poured and requires only a stiff brushing when the form is removed to show the quartz aggregate. The repetitive nature of the work enables an unusual degree of economy to be achieved as the materials used in construction can be used progressively from face to face of the Temple.

At this time, November 1958, the nine facings of the lower walls have been erected. It is estimated that the outer gallery walls and gallery roof will be completed by January 1959. Precast frames for archways and doors, gallery windows etc., are being made in the factory—these will be made entirely of white cement and a finer opaque quartz than that used for the walls. Progress has been delayed in part by the need to experiment with unusual features in construction. This is the first time in Australia that such a type of finish has been used extensively on a building. The completion of the gallery roof will actually mark the halfway point of construction and, as the second story and dome will be much less in area, progress is expected to be accelerated. The dome itself originally presented a number of problems which have now been satisfactorily eliminated, and the construction of the dome should not now be difficult or lengthy. The ribs of the dome, made of pre-stressed concrete, will be made on the ground, then when lifted into position will support the scaffolding and forms for the dome sections. It is now intended to make only an inner form and then to blow the cement and fine aggregate on to the forms with a cement gun. An unusual feature of the Temple will be the use of a hollow ring immediately above them is built, the first roof is almost complete, and the wall between the two roofs has been started. It is estimated that this contract will be completed within four months, after which the dome will be constructed.

Mashriqu'l-Adhkar of Africa Rises on Kikaya Hill

From many parts of Kampala it is now possible to see the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar rising on the crest of Kikaya Hill. The contract now being executed is for the main structure, and already the beams of the arches are cast in place, the concrete-block wall...
Readings at Nineteen-Day Feasts

Although the question about what readings are appropriate for the spiritual portion of the Nineteen-Day Feast was answered a number of years ago, it has been asked so frequently in recent months that the National Spiritual Assembly finds it advisable to quote the following excerpt from a letter to a believer from the Guardian through his assistant secretary dated April 27, 1956, published in the Australian Bahá'í Bulletin:

"The Writings of the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh can certainly be read any time at any place; likewise the Writings of 'Abdu'l-Bahá are read freely during the spiritual part of the Feast. The Guardian has instructed that during the spiritual part of the Feast, his own writings should not be read. In other words, during the spiritual part of the Feast, readings should be confined to the Writings of the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh and to a lesser extent, of the Master; but during that part of the Feast the Guardian's writings should not be read. During the period of administrative discussion of the Feast, then the Guardian's writings may be read. Of course, during the administrative part of the Feast there can be no objection to the reading of the Writings of the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh or 'Abdu'l-Bahá."

Visit to New Zealand by Hand of the Cause from Africa
Eagerly Received by 4000 Who Heard His Talks on Faith

WHEN Enoch Olinga, Hand of the Cause from Africa, a native of Nigeria, made his pilgrimage to Haifa nearly two years ago, the beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi, gave him a new name, “Father ofVictories,” for the contributions he had made in teaching the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. Now, along with the efficient and enthusiastic sponsorship of the Bahá’ís of New Zealand, he has added new triumphs to the Cause of God.

On Saturday, October 18, Mr. Olinga arrived from Australia where he had gone following the Intercontinental Conference in Singapore, and was immediately driven to Hamilton, eighty miles way, where a very full program had been arranged among the Maori people. An official welcome was given to Mr. Olinga, and a party of twenty-five Bahá’ís, at Turangawaewae Marae, where it was mentioned that he was the first person from Africa to cross the Marae, although many famous people had visited this Pa (Maori village), including the Queen of England. A recording of the Bahá’í Faith in the Maori language was presented by Mr. Olinga to the Maori ruler, King Koroki, in a tearful, and heart-moving scene. Then, after another journey of thirty-three miles, Mr. Olinga addressed over 200 Maoris at Kihikihì. They came in chartered buses from many miles around, and along with their four paramount tribal chiefs who were present, were spell-bound at the speaker’s words, and presented him with gifts.

On October 19 Mr. Olinga visited Rotorua, most famous of Maori areas, where personal contact was made with several people. The next stop for the Bahá’í party, with their honored guest, was a large forestry school in Kaiangaroa where there are two Tongan Bahá’ís, and where an address by Mr. Olinga had been arranged by the Welfare Officer in charge. The audience, completely absorbed by Mr. Olinga’s words, took all of the literature on the Faith that was available. A most thrilling sidelight to this evening was the news that the Welfare Officer had twice visited Shoghi Effendi and the Bahá’í gardens in Haifa, and both he and his wife declared their desire to be Bahá’ís.

A number of schools and colleges were addressed by this honored Hand of the Cause, and several excellent newspaper interviews were published. The final occasion in this area was a well-attended public meeting in Hamilton, attended by a Maori Methodist minister who had been present at Turangawaewae. Altogether Mr. Olinga had addressed almost 3,000 people, other than Bahá’ís.

Talk on Race Amity Enthusiastically Received

The New Plymouth, New Zealand, area had also made excellent plans for Mr. Olinga’s visit, which included a talk on “Racial Amity and Good Will” at the YWCA to a group of thirty-nine guests of the Bahá’ís, some of them Maoris. Concerning this talk, the New Zealand Bahá’í Newsletter states: “After he had spoken for an hour and a half, discussion was so eager that supper was put back time and again and, at the request of the audience, slides of the Holy Places at Haifa were shown and explained.”

There were many newspaper interviews in New Plymouth, and invitations to appear at schools where the children were much attracted to Mr. Olinga and clung to his hands. One headmaster spoke of the visit at the evening Parents’ Center discussion. There were luncheon meetings, many personal contacts with Maori friends, and one with the Mayor of New Plymouth, Mr. Honner, who had officially opened the Bahá’í Summer School last year on Mt. Egmont, reported in the March 1958 Bahá’í News. The power of Bahá’í love and fellowship was demonstrated in the Maori friends’ insistence

Auckland Activities Include Radio, Magazine Interviews

Activities in Auckland began with an informal evening gathering where one contact declared her intention to become a Bahá'í. On Friday, October 23, an interview was held at the National Radio Station, after which Mr. Olinga addressed the entire assembly of 750 students at the Teachers Training College, meeting later in a smaller lecture room to answer specific questions; this was followed by a magazine interview. Mr. Olinga's public lecture in Auckland on "The Unity of Mankind" was also well attended.

In addition to his many public appearances and meetings with interested contacts, accompanied by Auxiliary Board member Hugh Blundell, Mr. Olinga met in various places for special study and discussion with the Bahá'ís alone, and while in Auckland was taken to see the Temple Site. Here there was a pleasant surprise encounter with a gentleman from Uganda, now attached to the Adult Education center in Auckland, and his son, who conversed with Enoch Olinga in his own language.

What It Means to Be a Bahá'í

The following moving comment on Enoch Olinga's visit was made by the National Spiritual Assembly of New Zealand:

"... the National Assembly is at a loss to adequately express ... its thanks to Bahá'u'lláh for the blessing of the presence of beloved Enoch Olinga in this country. No words can describe the deep joy and spiritual fragrance which he has left, not only with the believers but with all those with whom he came in contact in New Zealand ... overall about 4,000 persons.

"During the nine days of his visit, the Bahá'ís fortunate enough to have met him have known the true meaning of love, humility, and devotion. They have learned of the power of positive thinking and have enjoyed laughter. But above all this they have seen what it means to be a Bahá'í.

"The National Spiritual Assembly offers its deep appreciation for this bounty and earnestly hopes that through it much work for the Faith will be accomplished. The National Assembly will do all in their power to consolidate the very remarkable work done by Mr. Olinga. This is the only tribute worthy of him."

In his last message to the Bahá'í World, Shoghi Effendi wrote: "The fourth phase (of the World Crusade), the opening of which is now approaching, must be immortalized, on the one hand, by an unprecedented increase in the number of avowed supporters of the Faith, in all the continents of the globe, of every race, clime, creed, and color, and from every stratum of present-day society ... must witness ... an upsurge of enthusiasm and consecration, before which every single as well as collective exploit, associated with any of the three previous phases, will pale."

In New Zealand has been witnessed such an "upsurge" of enthusiasm, the results of which should inspire and spur on every Bahá'í community to arise and demonstrate to their fellowmen the love of the Manifestation of God in the hearts of those who bear His name. The victories are waiting—they need only the outstretched eager hand, the dedicated heart, and faith.

Baha’is Participate in Many UN Day Observances

REINFORCEMENT of ties binding the World Baha’i Community to the United Nations was considered by our beloved Guardian such an important matter that it was included by him as one of the objectives in our Ten-Year World Crusade.

Each year the Bahá’ís of the United States, and other countries as well, have done much to accomplish this objective, through many vital programs developed for observance of United Nations Day and other special days and events in support of the United Nations. This year was no exception, and some of the highlights reported are given below.

Outstanding in both advance preparation for, and in results obtained, was the public meeting held in Willowick, Ohio, sponsored by them and four other Bahá’í groups (Cleveland Heights, Mayfield Heights, South Euclid, and Euclid, Ohio) attended by 125 persons, thirty-five of whom were guests. Their program was given twenty-two column-inches of newspaper publicity, seven radio spot announcements, nine large posters were placed in stores, and two displays set up in bank windows. When the Bahá’ís went to one bank to dismantle the display after UN Week, the manager expressed regret that it had to be withdrawn because of the attention it had attracted. He asked the Bahá’ís for a photo of the display for reproduction in the bank’s magazine, along with an appropriate article. The report of this meeting expressed deep appreciation for the cooperation of William deForge, Auxiliary Board member, who was their speaker, and concluded with this comment: "Due to Cleveland’s magnificent support of this meeting, the audience was integrated by close to a 50% margin in a strictly white neighborhood."

Seattle, Wash., reports two successful projects: An afternoon forum, attended by fifty persons, and a dinner and talk on the general theme of the birth of the Báb and its import on present-day world affairs. The dinner was attended by twenty-six persons. Programs were mailed to personal friends, newspaper releases were issued, and publicity items giving the gist of both programs were furnished to the local press.

An interesting and enjoyable evening was sponsored by the Bahá’ís of Oklahoma City. They called it "An International Mixer." This was a social evening devoted to international games, music, fellowship, and a smorgasbord featuring foods that are typical of many parts of the world. A display of artifacts and handicraft objects from around the world was an interesting exhibit to those attending. Ten guests of other faiths were present, among them nationals of Korea, Formosa, and Iran. In addition to the "Mixer," the friends in Oklahoma City participated in a local United Nations pilot project known as the "World Affairs Program Clinic," a full day and evening conference. One of the Bahá’ís served as a hostess at the evening session and assisted with the distribution of U.N. literature.

The Webster Groves, Mo., Bahá’ís were particularly busy during UN Week, for they sponsored three important projects: a public meeting, which was attended by forty-eight persons, and at which the speaker was Mrs. Margery McCormick, a member of the National Spiritual Assembly and the Auxiliary Board; a UN dinner for high school students and international visitors, which was attended by twenty persons; and a Children’s UN party to which twenty-three children came, dressed in costumes representing various countries. A delightful film, "The Toymaker," was shown at the party which, through the use of puppets, demonstrated the "oneness of mankind." This exciting project for children will be a continuing one through this community’s "Friendships, Unlimited" series. The children are already invited to attend the next party in November, and other gatherings will follow at regular intervals. The report also stated: "We made excellent contacts with foreign consuls during our UN Week activities and have arranged for several of them to participate in the Human Rights Day program. Also, we have been asked to participate in an American Tea to be sponsored by the Missouri Interracial Council as a result of our participation in the Greater St. Louis Citizens Committee for UN Week. Two believers living in Clayton, Mo., participated in these activities and in addition, assisted Kansas City, Kan., as speakers at the Kansas City meeting.

Baha'i exhibit at the United Nations Festival at the Winthrop hotel in Tacoma, Wash.
Logan, Utah, in addition to assisting with the city-wide celebration of UN Day, held a meeting in the form of an Open House for international students at Utah State University. The twenty students attending represented eleven different countries, and good fellowship and lively discussion filled the evening. The friends report that later they heard that one student from the Middle East, who did not attend, upon hearing that the event was sponsored by the local Bahá’í community, expressed amazement at that fact: he had believed until then that Bahá’ís were to be found only in Iran and ‘Iraq.

Bahá’ís of Shorewood, Wis., cooperated with the Milwaukee community in a Panel Discussion meeting. Persons on the panel included nationals of Austria, India, Ghana, and the U.S. The Bahá’í chairman of the meeting, Cornett Taylor, is a member of the Milwaukee Mayor’s Human Rights Committee. Eighty persons attended the meeting as a result of fine publicity from newspapers and radio, library exhibit and window displays.

Manhattan Beach, Calif., reported two exciting projects: participation with fifteen other organizations in a "Family Festival." Due to last minute changes it was necessary to rebuild a large, already-completed exhibit, but because of the spirit of the Bahá’ís in dealing with this emergency, they were recipients of much favorable comment, according to their report. "This is one of the few observances where Bahá’ís have an opportunity to live their Faith in working with non-Bahá’ís," they state. "For instance, when we had to rebuild the booths, several people mentioned to some of us that there had been some amazed discussion about the 'marvellous cooperative spirit and friendliness toward others (by the Bahá’ís) in the face of unfair actions on the part of others.' Some of these people are coming to firesides, but mostly it is a way of letting many people know a little more about the Faith, and of making friends for the Faith." Their other project was a public meeting to which thirty-two persons came, seventeen of them of other faiths.

In Fresno, Calif., two UN Day programs were held: one, a public meeting at which a professor of political science from Fresno State College was the speaker; and the other, a UN Day Dinner, sponsored by the local Youth Committee. A number of foreign students were among the twenty-three guests at the dinner. In addition to these two projects, a Bahá’í was invited to serve on the Fresno Committee for UN Week, and the local assembly, in cooperation with that Committee placed UN posters, and gave 500 UN pamphlets to the state and city colleges for free distribution. The Bahá'í public meeting was announced in the bulletins of the Universalist and Unitarian Churches.

Provo, Utah, held a public meeting on which they received seven inches of local newspaper publicity; they placed fifty UN posters around town, and participated in the Utah County UN Committee banquet. They comment, "Assisting city and county groups has brought increased recognition (for Bahá'ís) from civic and educational leaders."

As far as the Fairbanks and Tanana Valley, Alaska, Bahá'ís can determine, the public meeting held by them was the only UN Day observance in that area. Announcement of their meeting was made on television and radio, as well as through the high school, the University of Alaska, and the Negro Church.

At the meeting in Lima, Ohio, fifty-four persons attended, and it is the plan of this community to follow-up with another public meeting and a meeting in honor of Human Rights Day. Bahá'ís of Findlay, Ohio, cooperated with the International Relations Committee of the B&P Women's Club in presenting two speakers at a public meeting.

Roswell, New Mexico, sponsored both an International Picnic and a public meeting. Fine newspaper and radio publicity was received in connection with these events.

Tacoma, Wash., worked with seventy-two local organizations in the city-wide UN Day program held at a local hotel. In the ballroom were nineteen booths, one of them the Bahá'í booth. Fifty-nine persons signed the Bahá'í guest book.

The small group of Bahá'ís in Barberton, Ohio, were successful in obtaining excellent newspaper publicity on a display of UN literature at the local library. Free UN literature was also made available at the display. These friends sent sixty-five post cards to friends, and placed advertisements in the newspaper calling attention to the display.

Yonkers, New York, held an International Supper and Fireside meeting. They plan to follow-up this meeting with a well-advertised Human Rights Day program. The Long Island, New York, Bahá'ís all cooperated in presenting a Panel Discussion meeting at a centrally located hotel. Members of the panel represented five nationalities. Fifty-four persons attended, twenty being interested guests.

Montclair, New Jersey, was host to twenty persons at an International Dinner. The spirit of friendliness and the fine Bahá'í talk given drew very favorable comment from one guest in particular, a local church leader.

The Providence, Rhode Island, group held a public meeting which was attended by eleven Bahá'ís and eight friends.

The two assemblies and one group, Oakland, Berkeley, and Hayward, California, respectively, cooperated with the AAUN in holding a public meeting for an audience of forty-two. After the meeting they were hosts at an International Tea.

Ventura, California, reports no city-wide observance of UN Day but that their meeting attracted an audience of twenty-six. They distributed posters, sent cards, made telephone calls to friends, and were successful in securing excellent newspaper and radio publicity. A series of fireside meetings will follow this meeting.

New York City held three meetings to which a total of ninety persons came, among them thirty-six guests. Their meetings represented two International Dinner firesides, and one public meeting. At the meetings films and slides were shown, in addition to the talks given. The report states that "Twelve nationalities were represented among our guests." And, "our guests were most impressed by slides showing the Bahá'í World Center."

Many more reports have come in and others are arriving daily; however, because of space limitations it is not possible to cover all of them in a report such as this. It is heartening to note the wide variety of programs held and the ingenuity displayed by the friends in assuring success in the various localities.

As an approach to the high moral standards to which Bahá'u'lláh as the Inaugurator of the first worldwide spiritual civilization, calls us, let us consider the divine gift of life itself.

A seeker of truth once asked ‘Abdu'l-Bahá in what state the soul exists before it enters the body. He answered: "In a state of potentiality. It has no consciousness in the sense in which we comprehend this term. Individual consciousness is not born until conception takes place."

‘Abdu'l-Bahá was asked further whether the choice of entering this world lies with the soul itself. He answered: "The Will of God is the determining factor. When God wills it, the soul steps into the arena of human life."

And asked whether every soul appearing upon earth, is a new creation, He answered: "Yes, every soul has a beginning, but once created, is eternal."

A new sense of responsibility takes hold of us when we become fully conscious that God, and not our parents, decreed the very second at which we were to set out upon the path to eternity. We begin to feel that there is some connection between the time of our sojourn here and the overall plans of God. We who are Bahá'ís have indeed found this connection. Through the mercy of God, we know clearly what our assignment is; namely, bringing into being a "new race of men"—men worthy of the "Day of God."

Since Bahá'u'lláh tells us that "the purpose of God in creating man is to enable him to know his Creator and to attain His Presence," it is obvious that the inner man is our chief consideration, and that the invisible realities—heart, soul, spirit, mind—are more important than the visible. In these intangibles lies our capacity to know God; lie the strength and will, if we choose to apply them, to subordinate our materialistic tendencies and to stimulate our spiritual consciousness—our higher self.

"As all glory lieth in the soul of man," says ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, "there can be little progress connected with a life of the outer senses, any more than there is life in the husks of a seed. It is the kernel of a seed which sprouts, sends forth its shoots, and grows into a flower, plant, or tree, while the husks but break away, shrivel, and die; so the individual who lives only in the world of the senses, lives on the husks of life."

Today, as though impelled by the law of gravity, men's moral standards have been pulled to the earth. There are many causes. Obviously, we are on the ebbing side of old civilizations; men are too far away from the Prophet of their respective religions—too far away from the light of His spiritual teachings. War, the greatest generator of animal instincts, has torn down the restraints which decency and personal responsibility normally impose. Material plenty on the one hand, and hunger and poverty on the other, are both prolific sources of moral weakness and often of sex excesses.

There is a reason why Bahá'u'lláh uses the term "purity" so frequently in His Writings. This wholesome word is seldom heard in everyday living, excepting in relation to foods and drugs. But hear this call of Bahá'u'lláh:

"Be pure, O people of God, be pure; be righteous, be righteous!" "We verily behold your actions. If We perceive from them the sweet-smelling savor of purity and holiness, We will most certainly bless you." And again: "Purity and chastity have been, and still are,
This photograph of the World Religion Day observance held a year ago at Bahía, Brazil, illustrates one of many such meetings held throughout the world on January 19, 1958. World Religion Day, to promulgate the Bahá’í teaching of the fundamental oneness of religion, will be observed in 1959 on January 18.

The most great ornaments for the handmaidens of God.

It is not an unfamiliar experience for any of us today, to find a surprising promiscuity or laxity in relations between the sexes, even among spiritually-aware people, people who know and cherish the Bahá’í Teachings, even among friends who have entered our beloved Cause!

This is most unfortunate, for such a situation ceases to be just the personal responsibility of the individuals involved; rather, a shadow begins to fall upon the entire community, and the sincerity of its teaching efforts is questioned.

With great force and clarity, our beloved Guardian in his message, The Advent of Divine Justice, exhorts us to chastity. “All of them, be they men or women, must, at this threatening hour when the lights of religion are fading out, and its restraints are one by one abolished, pause to examine themselves, scrutinize their conduct, and with characteristic resolution arise to purge the life of their community of every trace of moral laxity that might stain the name, or impair the integrity, of so holy and precious a Faith. A chaste and holy life must be made the controlling principle in the behavior and conduct of all Bahá’ís, both in their social relations with the members of their own community, and in their contact with the world at large. It must adorn and reinforce the ceaseless labors and meritorious exertions of those whose enviable position is to propagate the Message, and to administer the affairs, of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. It must be upheld, in all its integrity and implications, in every phase of the life of those who fill the ranks of that Faith, whether in their homes, their travels, their clubs, their societies, their entertainments, their schools, and their universities... It must be closely and continually identified with the mission of the Bahá’í Youth.”

“Such a chaste and holy life, with its implications of modesty, purity, temperance, decency, and clean-mindedness, involves no less than the exercise of moderation in all that pertains to dress, language, amusements, and all artistic and literary avocations. It demands daily vigilance in the control of one’s carnal desires and corrupt inclinations... It requires total abstinence from all alcoholic drinks... It condemns... the practices... of companionate marriage, infidelity in marital relationships, and all manner of promiscuity, of easy familiarity, and of sexual vices.”

“O ye My loved ones!,” pleads Bahá’u’lláh, “suffer not the hem of my sacred vesture to be smirched and mired with the things of this world...” “They that have tarnished the fair name of the Cause of God by following the things of the flesh—these are in palpable error!”

There is just one moral standard, and that is the standard of right and wrong set by the Manifestation of God. There is no compromise. Yet, we must show great love and humility in emphasizing this fact.

If someone is pursuing an unwarranted love relationship, we must point out that, from the Bahá'í standpoint, this love is being permitted to take precedence over the love of, and the love for, Bahá'u'lláh. We must stress that by sacrificing our transient desires to His Will—the Will of God—astonishing confirmations await us. We must implant confidence and faith in the power of Bahá'u'lláh to straighten out every type of personal and social problem. Has He not come to bring harmonious living?

The Báb and Bahá'u'lláh gave their lives for us—can we not give up an unjustified personal love in obedience to their sacred Commands?

"When God desired to manifest grace and beneficence to men, and to set the world in order," says Bahá'u'lláh, "He revealed observances and created laws; among them He established the law of marriage, made it a fortress for well-being and salvation."

As party to the Covenant of God, ours is the obligation to keep these “observances and laws.” Herein lies the order of the world; herein lies our only guidance and protection.

In the words of Bahá'u'lláh: "Wert thou to consider this world, and realize how fleeting are the things that pertain unto it, thou wouldst choose to tread no path except the path of service to the Cause of thy Lord."

Bahá'u'lláh places “among the highest and most laudable of all acts,” are the following:

1. Trustworthiness: “If any one betray the least of trusts or neglect,” says Bahá'u'lláh, “and be remiss in the performance of duties which are intrusted to him . . . or seeks after his own personal, selfish aims and ends in the attainment of his own interests, he shall undoubtedly remain deprived of the outpourings of His Highness the Almighty!”

2. Truthfulness: This, Bahá'u'lláh calls “the foundation of all human virtues. Without truthfulness, progress and success in all the worlds of God are impossible for any soul. When this holy attribute is established in man, all the divine qualities will also be acquired.”

Under “truthfulness” we may also include refraining from the insidious practice of backbiting: “For the tongue is a smoldering fire, and excess of speech a deadly poison,” says Bahá'u'lláh. “Material fire consumeth the body, whereas the fire of the tongue devoureth both heart and soul. The force of the former lasteth but for a time, whilst the effects of the latter endureth a century.”

3. Purity of Heart While Communing with God: When we sincerely seek the Help of God, “this supplication,” ‘Abdu'l-Bahá asserts, “is in itself a light to the heart, illumination to the sight, life to the soul, and exultation to one's being.”

4. Forbearance.

5. Resignation to Whatever the Almighty Hath Decreed.

6. Contentment with the Things His Will Hath Provided: “. . . He is not to be numbered with the people of Bahá who followeth his mundane desires, or fixeth his heart on things of the earth,” remarks Bahá'u'lláh. “He is my true follower who, if he come to a valley of pure gold will pass straight through it aloof as a cloud, and will neither turn back, nor pause. Such a man is assuredly of Me . . .”

7. Patience, Nay Thankfulness in the Midst of Tribulation.

8. Complete Reliance, in All Circumstances, upon God.
The moral standards which Bahá’u’lláh seeks to inculcate, in both our individual and social lives, are the loftiest which man has ever been called upon to fulfill. All of them are qualities of the mature soul; all are requisite to a spiritual civilization and to eternal life. But, a living God has potentially equipped us to attain to this nobility of conduct.

"Within the very breath of such souls as are pure and sanctified," Bahá’u’lláh assures us, "far-reaching potentialities are hidden. So great are these potentialities, that they exercise their influence upon all created things."

The emergence of a "new race of men" thus becomes inevitable.

Auxiliary Board Member Visits Argentine Bahá’í Communities

Sra. Else Cazcarra, member of the Auxiliary Board and of the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, visited the Bahá’í communities of Argentina on a teaching trip from August 19 to September 8, 1958.

In Buenos Aires, her first stop, she attended the Nineteen Day Feast; was interviewed by a representative of one of the leading newspapers, La Razon, resulting in the publication of an article on the principles of the Bahá’í Faith and a photograph of herself; and spoke on "Science and Religion" at a public meeting attended by forty persons.

Other cities visited by Sra. Cazcarra included Ezeiza, Rosario, Cordoba, and La Plata.

Fifth Annual Italo-Swiss Summer School Attended by 95 Bahá’ís and Contacts

The fifth annual Italo-Swiss Bahá’í Summer School took place from September 19 to 26, 1958, at the Hotel des Salines, Bex-les-Bains, Switzerland.

In spite of the fact that few were expected to attend the school this year, as many friends had used their vacations for the Intercontinental Conferences, there were eighty-three Bahá’ís from ten countries, and twelve guests.

The school was blessed this year in having two Hands of the Cause, Dr. Hermann Grossmann and Dr. Ugo Giachery, who helped greatly in the teaching by their inspirational courses in German and Italian.

The Italo-Swiss community has a language problem, which was solved by dividing the courses into three schools, French, German, and Italian. In addition a very interesting course was given in English for the bilingual friends on the "Promised Day Has Come" by Firuz Kazemzadeh from New Haven, Conn.

The last days were crowned with joy when four of the contacts declared their Faith and several others said that after more study they, too, wanted to become Bahá’ís.

Maud Bosio, reporting the school sessions, stated: "On the day of departure when all were gathered for suggestions for the next year, it was unanimously agreed that this year was the best school we have had. The spirit of love and unity was deeply felt by us all. It was sad to part, but it is sure that each one of us will bring back to his or her community and work a greater enthusiasm to "carry on" with the remembrance of these days."

Twenty Attended Second Summer School of Nicaragua, in Nandaime

The second annual Bahá’í Summer School of Nicaragua was held in its permanent location, Nandaime, Nicaragua. For three days, September 13, 14, and 15, the monotony of this quiet little town was enlivened by laughing groups of young people clustered around the visiting Bahá’í teachers.

The visitors from other countries included Sr. José Antonio Soto Gattgens from San José, Costa Rica; and Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Farrand of Ahuachapan, El Salvador. From within Nicaragua, Managua sent Sr. Armando Fonseca Duval, and Sr. Pablo Pérez Toledo; Masaya was represented by Donald Ross Witzel, and Nandaime itself was proud to present Sr. Juan Castro.

The lectures presented had something for every taste. Mr. and Mrs. Farrand offered inspiring ideas on "The Ethics of Bahá’í Life," "Fulfilment of Bible Prophecy," and related themes, some of which were prepared by Sr. Salomon Escalante of Costa Rica, Baha'i group of Unalaska, Alaska, a World Crusade goal. The first Aleut believer, Vassa Lekanoff, is in the center. Others are Elinore and George Putney, and Elaine and Jenabe Caldwell, pioneers there.

Second Japan Summer School Classes
Include Study and Workshop Sessions

The second Japan Bahá'í Summer School was held at Gohra, on August 29-31, 1958.

Among the talks given were the following: “Fulfilling the Need for Bahá'í Education,” by N. Hashimoto; “The Guardian and the Institutions of the Faith,” by Miss Agnes Alexander, Hand of the Cause; “The Bahá'í Concept of God,” and “The Meaning of the Manifestation,” by H. Takano and Philip Marangella; “What is Prayer?” by Miss Alexander and M. Zenimoto, and “Immortality,” by Mrs. Joy Earl.

The study and workshop sessions were devoted to: the practice of public speaking, led by H. Takano and Dr. Mizuno; methods of presenting the Faith, led by Dr. David Earl and M. Odani; and questions and answers, conducted by Rohollah Montaza, Mr. Ishil and Dr. David Earl.

Mrs. Shirin Fozdar of Singapore, chairman of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of Southeast Asia, was the speaker at the public meeting arranged by the school on August 30.

First Bahá'í Burial Ground
Obtained in Khartoum, Sudan

When the wife of the caretaker of the Bahá'í cemetery in Cairo fell ill and passed away while on a visit to Khartoum, the Bahá'ís there were faced with the critical need for a Bahá'í burial ground. After ten hours of negotiation with the government authorities, the Khartoum North Local Spiritual Assembly was successful in obtaining a plot of land, and the funeral was performed in accordance with Bahá'í principles.

Bahá'ís in many areas of the world who are not faced with such a problem cannot, perhaps, fully appreciate the reasons that lay behind such a difficulty, but they can share and sympathize with their friends' anxiety at such a time, and lend their prayers that the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh may speedily triumph and bring union, concord, and elimination of all prejudice—not only for the living, but for those who have passed on.

Athlete Speaks on Racial Discrimination at Bahá'í Public Meeting in Stamford

Jackie Robinson, the professional baseball player, was guest speaker at a public meeting sponsored by the Bahá'ís of Stamford, Conn., on November 3, 1958.

He spoke to a group of forty on the problem of racial discrimination in the United States and in other parts of the world, on the ideals and goals of the NAACP, and of the vital importance of evaluating each individual as an individual, whatever his race, color, or creed.

Mr. Robinson, in addition to his achievements in the athletic world (he was the first Negro to play on a major league baseball team in the United States), has been active in the fields of the humanities and social science. He was recently honored by the National Young Men's Christian Association as "Man of the Year."

Part of the public meeting was given over to questions and answers, which were lively and informative.
Bahá'í Holy Days Recognized
By Butte and Champaign Schools

The Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Butte, Mont., has received a letter dated October 21, 1958, from the Superintendent of Schools stating that Bahá'í students may have excused absence from school on the Bahá'í Holy Days.

The Local Spiritual Assembly of Champaign, Ill., reports that permission has been given by the Superintendent of the Champaign community schools for children of Bahá'í parents to be excused from school attendance on Bahá'í Holy Days.

Minister Lauds Bahá'í Faith from Pulpit

On November 9 Rev. Keith M. Rhinehart, pastor of the Aquarian Foundation Church in Seattle, Wash., spoke to his congregation of 175 people on “The Beauties of Bahá’í,” giving an hour’s historic outline of the Faith, describing the Temple, and telling about his visit to the Shrine of the Báb and the Gardens in Haifa.

Although there were many inaccuracies in his statements, it was evident to the Bahá'ís in the audience that he himself has been impressed by the Faith and that his discussion of it made a great spiritual impact upon his congregation.

Researcher Interviews Charlottesville Bahá'ís

A member of the social research team of Columbia University recently interviewed the Charlottesville, Va., Bahá'í group on the racial question and the segregation problem in the local schools. The Sociology Dean of the University had recommended that this be the first interview in Charlottesville on the attitudes of the white people. Bahá'ís stressed their belief that the Faith could overcome racial discrimination, and the researcher seemed pleased with the results of her interview.

Clark County School District, Nevada,

On August 28, 1958, the Superintendent of Schools for Clark County, Nev., issued a memorandum to all school principals and administrators in the county listing five Jewish Holy Days and the five Bahá'í Holy Days falling within the school year “for which parent excuses should be accepted for children.”

Besides Las Vegas, where there is a local spiritual assembly, the area includes the larger cities of Henderson and Boulder and a number of small towns.

A MESSAGE FROM THE HANDS OF THE CAUSE TO THE BAHÁ’ÍS OF EAST AND WEST

NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BAHÁ’ÍS OF THE UNITED STATES
WILMETTE, ILLINOIS
Beloved Friends:

Twenty-five of the twenty-seven Hands of the Cause of God have once again met in the blessed Mansion of Bahá'u'lláh near the holiest spot on this planet, and prayerfully considered the grave problems now facing the Bahá'ís of the world. Though no longer plunged in the agony of grief that afflicted our hearts last November, we are nevertheless profoundly concerned over the success of the tasks entrusted to the believers of the East and West by our beloved Guardian in the provisions of his mighty globe-encircling Crusade.

With feelings of deepest gratitude we realize that Bahá'u'lláh has vouchsafed to us during this past year—dark and overshadowed though it was by the passing of our beloved Guardian—many evidences of His unfailing grace and protection. The unity of the Cause of God has been maintained, and out of the fire of this mighty test, the believers have emerged with chastened and consecrated hearts, mature in spirit, with a deeper sense of oneness than ever before, eager to assist in winning every goal set for them by their beloved Guardian. God has indeed opened the doors of His mercy to us.

A befitting and magnificent monument to the beloved Guardian's precious memory has been raised up above the sacred earth in London which enshrines his blessed remains, a memorial to the erection of which the believers from every corner of the earth had the privilege of contributing.

The five mighty conferences called by Shoghi Effendi, and whose purposes he outlined in his message marking the midway point of the Crusade, were held with outstanding success; almost five thousand believers being privileged to attend them. The roll-call from among the followers of the black race in Africa and the brown race in the Pacific has more than doubled during the past year, a triumph which alone would have brought infinite joy to his blessed heart. Two of the three Mother Temples which he specified should be built will be completed well within two years of his passing. The funds for these Temples, and for the teaching work to which he attached such supreme importance, have poured in abundantly from all parts of the world, a loving and loyal testimony to the determination of the Bahá'ís everywhere to carry out his every wish. Spitzbergen, the last and one of the most difficult of the virgin territories to be opened during the Crusade, received its first pioneer less than six months after he left this world.

In spite of such heartening progress, we must face the fact that this year ahead may well prove to be the crucial turning-point of the entire Crusade, and upon which its completion critically hangs. Many of the most important goals still remain to be achieved: work on the Mother Temple of Europe has not yet commenced, although it must rise in all its splendor to shed its spiritual blessings upon that continent before 1963. The Local Spiritual Assemblies still to be formed as part of the original plan number no less than 394. The number of National and Regional Assemblies which must be elected before the end of the Crusade, in the alarmingly short time of four and a half years, is no less than thirty-eight, four of which are to be formed as planned by the beloved Guardian this coming Ridván.

We are now embarked upon the fourth and final phase of this historic Crusade. Our beloved Guardian's own words tell us that this phase must be characterized by "a powerful impetus the world over to the vital process of individual conversion—the pre- eminent purpose underlying the Plan in all of its ramifications" and "must be immortalized on the one hand by an unprecedented increase in the number of the avowed supporters of the Faith in all continents of the globe, of every race, clime, creed and color, and from every stratum of present day society, coupled with a corresponding increase in the number of Bahá'í centers."

The fateful years of the beloved Guardian's glorious Crusade are swiftly passing. "How staggering" he told us, is "the responsibility that must weigh upon the present generation." His stirring appeal for an "upsurge of enthusiasm and consecration, before which every single as well as collective exploit, associated with any of the three previous phases (of the Crusade) will pale" is directed to every believer on the planet, but especially "to their elected representatives, whether local, regional, or national, who, in their capacity as the custodians and members of the nascent institutions of the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh must shoulder "the chief responsibility in laying an unassailable foundation for the Universal House of Justice which, as its title implies, is to be the exponent and guardian of that Divine Justice which can alone insure the security of, and establish the reign of law and order in, a strangely disordered world." This House of Justice, he tells us, "posterity will regard as the last refuge of a tottering civilization."

Upon these National and Regional Assemblies which we must now raise up, has been conferred the sacred privilege of electing the members of this Universal House of Justice. The guidance of the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh will flow into the World Order established in the Bahá'í Dispensation through this Supreme Body, whose infallibility is assured by the Pen of Bahá'u'lláh Himself. 'Abdu'l-Bahá declared in His Will and Testament that the members of the Universal House of Justice must "deliberate upon all problems which have caused differences, questions that are obscure and matters that are not expressly recorded in the Book. Whatsoever they decide has the same effect as the Text itself. . . . That which this body, whether unanimously or by a majority doth carry, that is verily the Truth and the Purpose of God Himself." Guided by the precious storehouse of sacred and inviolable texts given to us by Bahá'u'lláh and elaborated by 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi, pouring our forces into the execution of the Divine Plan of the Master, now in the twenty-eighth year of its unfolding within the successive Plans laid down by our beloved Guardian, supported by the unfailing aid of the Supreme Concourse promised in our writings, with our beloved Guardian's spirit watching over the work he so dearly...
The Hands of the Faith, solemnly mindful of the primary function conferred upon them in the Will and Testament of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá to protect the Cause of God and promulgate its Teachings, and deeply conscious of their present great responsibility as Chief Stewards of Bahá'u'lláh embryonic world commonwealth, have already arranged for a number of the Hands to travel extensively during the coming year in order to carry the spirit of the beloved Guardian and the World Center of our Faith to the believers and their elected representatives, particularly in those areas where so many of the future pillars of the International House of Justice must be erected, namely Latin America and the goal countries of Europe.

The Hands of the Faith have also planned to give every aid within their power to the National Spiritual Assemblies in supporting and stimulating the work on the Home Fronts of such old and tried communities as those of Persia, the United States, Canada, India, Australia, Great Britain, and Germany. In rededicating themselves to their share of the heavy burden now resting upon each and every follower of Bahá'u'lláh, the Hands appeal to the National and Regional Assemblies to assist them in the mighty tasks that lie ahead through a closer and swifter cooperation with the Hands serving at the World Center, who of necessity are called upon to coordinate the international work so laboriously built up, at such a great cost to himself, by our most beloved Guardian. Prompt consultation on teaching problems, reports concerning the progress being made and the present status of the work undertaken by each National or Regional Assembly, as well as appeals for advice and aid, should pour continually into the Holy Land in order that good news may be shared for the encouragement of all and any crises which arise in the Bahá'í world may be swiftly dealt with, and not a moment of our infinitely precious time between now and the completion of the Crusade—just fifty-two short months away—be lost.

Bahá'u'lláh, ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, and the beloved Guardian have repeatedly warned us that the time is short, that these fast-fleeting hours in which we live will come to us no more, and we shall never again have a similar opportunity. The beloved Guardian has in no uncertain terms stated that the “pre-eminent task . . . in this day” is “a task . . . so urgent!” as to be “accorded priority over every other activity.” Let us each one take to heart his passionate appeal.

“However arduous the task; however formidable the exertions demanded of them; however afflictive the darts which their present enemies, as well as those whom Providence will through His mysterious dispensation raise up from within or from without, may rain upon them; however grievous the ordeal of temporary separation from the heart and nerve-center of their Faith which future unforeseeable disturbances may impose upon them, I adjure them, by the precious blood that flowed in such great profusion, by the lives of the unnumbered saints and heroes who were immolated, by the supreme and glorious sacrifice of the Prophet-Herald of our Faith, by the tribulations which its Founder Himself willingly underwent, so that His Cause might live, His Order might redeem a shattered world and its glory might suffuse the entire planet—I adjure them . . . to resolve never to flinch, never to hesitate, never to relax, until each and every objective . . . has been fully consummated.”

Upon the immediate and continued response in each individual heart to this ringing call depend the victory of his precious and holy Crusade, the last world-encompassing Plan which His divinely-guided pen bequeathed to the believers. Never before in the history of the world have human beings been faced with such a staggering responsibility and such a blessed privilege. Now more than ever before the heroic pioneers must cling Courageously to their vital outposts; a swift stream of new pioneers must flow out spontaneously, without a moment’s delay, to reinforce them; traveling teachers must dedicate themselves to the work both in far-off lands and on the critical Home Fronts; ample resources must be poured forth with unprecedented generosity from hearts consecrated to nothing less than an overwhelming victory on every front. The success of the Crusade depends upon the individual believer arising to teach. For, as the beloved Guardian himself has told us, “The unseen legions, standing rank upon rank, and eager to pour forth from the Kingdom on high the full measure of their celestial strength on the individual participants of this incomparably glorious Crusade, are powerless unless and until each potential Crusader decides for himself, and perseveres in his determination, to rush into the arena of sacrifice ready to sacrifice his all for the Cause he is called upon to champion.”

“This challenge, so severe and insistent, and yet so glorious, faces no doubt primarily the individual believer on whom, in the last resort, depends the fate of the entire community. . . . He it is who acts as one of the multitude of bricks which support the structure and insure the stability of the administrative edifice now being raised in every part of the world. Without his support, at once wholehearted, continuous and generous, every measure adopted, and every plan formulated, by the Body which acts as the national representative of the community to which he belongs, is foredoomed to failure. The World Center of the Faith itself is paralyzed if such a support on the part of the rank and file of the community is denied it. The Author of the Divine Plan Himself is impeded in His purpose if the proper instruments for the execution of His design are lacking.” The beloved Guardian ends with this stern warning: “The sustaining strength of Bahá'u'lláh Himself, the Founder of the Faith, will be withheld from every and each individual who falls in the long run to arise and play his part.”

We feel confident that the friends in every corner of the Bahá'í world, fully aware of the gravity of the crisis facing them, and unified as never before by the sacrifice of the life of our beloved Guardian, will arise as one soul in many bodies in a mighty forward surge to complete as an immortal monument to his memory the triumph of his holy Crusade.

The Hands of the Faith eagerly and confidently anticipate that upon the unassailable foundation of this united victory brought about by the consecrated devotion of the friends, there will be raised up the central body, the Supreme House of Justice, and once again a precious source of divine infallibility will return to the earth with the establishment of that Supreme Body on the occasion of the Most Great
Beloved Friends:

Your National Assembly is placing in the Hands of every member of the American Bahá’í community a copy of the message issued to the Bahá’ís of East and West dated at the Mansion of Bahá’u’lláh, Bahjí, November 30, 1958.

This message represents the fruitful outcome of the second annual conference of the Chief Stewards of Bahá’u’lláh’s embryonic World Commonwealth held in the Holy Mansion from November 21 through November 30. Its purpose is to present to the Bahá’í World Community a unified spiritual understanding of the conditions existing within the community at this time and to address an impassioned appeal to every believer and every Bahá’í institution to strive for the successful achievement of the Crusade goals that still lie ahead, together with complete assurance that the powers of God will reinforce the efforts of the sincere and devoted souls.

The National Spiritual Assembly urges each Bahá’í to ponder this message until he grasps its full import and significance. For in these words we possess a faithful reflection of the beloved Guardian’s plans and hopes for the success of the Crusade based upon the Master’s Tablets of the Divine Plan by 1963, a date associated with the prophecy of Daniel. As has been repeated many times, these present years are dark with peril for mankind, and the consolidation of the Bahá’í World Community represents the sole hope of the future. Nothing short of the election of the Universal House of Justice will suffice, for the House of Justice will apply the laws of the new era, and deal with all problems confronting the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh. In this sacred institution the divine gift of infallibility will again provide truth and guidance to mankind. Infallibility gives us the supreme and perfect assurance that ours is indeed the religion of God.

In addition to prayerful study by individuals, this document provides a basis for action by all Assemblies, local and national, and is to be the subject of frequent consultation as well as reference.

What unspeakable blessing is ours, dear friends and co-workers, that the beloved Guardian provided Bahá’ís who can serve as a bridge between the passing of Shoghi Effendi and the election of a God-inspired House of Justice!

In the light of the powers and functions conferred upon that body, in passages of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá cited in this message, we are freed of any apprehension that the death of Shoghi Effendi befall us as a calamity capable of destroying our hope in a golden age, the establishment of the Kingdom on earth.

The hour of our final and irrevocable decision to fulfill or to betray our sacred trust is upon us. May we partake of the love and confirmation assured each and every follower of Bahá’u’lláh!

—National Spiritual Assembly
Whenever religion becomes a matter of passive belief and the performance of ritual, human society reveals fatal symptoms of self-destruction. At such a time the Prophet manifests the Divine Will, revealed as hope to those who recognize Him but as terror to those who deny.

In the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh the nature and purpose of religion is for the first time completely unveiled. We who recognize in Bahá'u'lláh the Word of God are called upon to demonstrate what faith in God actually means at this stage in the evolution of man and society.

For Bahá'ís not only have access to truth; we not only have before us supreme examples of heroism and sacrifice; we not only stand obligated to exercise certain virtues and qualities; above all we are spiritually obligated to establish the new world order, with its local, national, and international elective institutions.

It is through the Bahá'í community that the blessings of the new day are poured forth. The more unified and active our community, the greater the bounty received in terms of assurance, justice, peace, brotherhood, and true progress.

Your National Spiritual Assembly is grieved and shocked to report a poor attendance at state conventions and a small number of votes cast by mail. Such a situation appears as a symptom of an ill that must be cured before it becomes a disaster to ourselves, our nation, our religion, and to the world.

Is the potency of our faith so weak that we tend to reduce the teachings of Bahá'u'lláh to mere passive beliefs? Have we become like the Christians, whose religion no longer guides the individual nor determines the great issues of a civilization?

Beloved friends! Your National Spiritual Assembly appeals to every individual believer to realize that our first and most important Bahá'í obligation is to take an active part in the life of the Bahá'í community. Let us each resolve to attend each Nineteen-Day Feast with a heartfelt devotion to our fellow-believers. Let us share our resources with the local and national Bahá'í Funds. Let us open our homes for teaching inquirers. Let us realize that from day to day our individual lives, unassuming though they may outwardly appear, contain the germ of superhuman quality and influence bestowed upon us by our Creator. The buried seed cannot yield up its treasure in cold, hard earth, nor can our latent virtues and capacities manifest their powers in an indifferent personality.

It is not for any of us to cherish indifference as a reaction to what other believers do or fail to do. We each stand forth in the eyes of God as His creation, meriting His blessing or His condemnation, as weighed in the scales of perfect love and justice. As others join us in our effort to create unity, the rivulet of individual resolve becomes the irresistible torrent.

Upon the Bahá'ís of the world rests the future destiny of mankind. We who call ourselves Bahá'ís, let us disclose the mystery of faith to our fellow men. This is the eloquence which surpasses the powers of speech, the understanding which human education can never bestow. Unity, tender and compassionate, can alone survive the imminent perils of our day.

First Visit of a Hand of the Cause to Fiji and Samoa Islands
Brings Great Bounty to Bābā's and Warm Public Reception

Hand of the Cause Enoch Olinga, following his nine­day visit to New Zealand in October 1958 (January Bābā's News), journeyed to Fiji and Samoa, where he and the Message he brought were as warmly received as in New Zealand.

On Sunday evening, October 26, Miss Lily Buksh had the great bounty and privilege of meeting and welcoming the first Hand of the Cause to visit the Fiji Islands. From the very moment that he stepped from the plane, Enoch Olinga radiated love and joy to all he met. Even the Fijian porters refused to take the customary tip for carrying his luggage, as they felt that here, indeed, was someone different.

The following morning Mr. Olinga was driven by friends to Sigatoka, where it had been arranged that he contact an isolated Fijian Bahá'í who was able to introduce him to several friends, and a small gathering ensued that evening. The result was that some Indian school teachers were so impressed that they sent a special request to Suva that they be allowed to arrange a public meeting for him to address upon his return from Samoa. This was agreed upon.

First Public Proclamation of Faith in Suva

On Tuesday Mr. Olinga arrived in Suva, where he spent forty-three crowded hours before leaving for Apia. He was first taken to the radio station, where an interview was recorded. Then he was taken by a Fijian Bahá'í for an interview with a reporter of the local newspaper. As a result of this, a sympathetic article on the Bahá'í Teachings appeared in the press on the morning of the public meeting.

His first evening in Suva was spent with the Bahá'ís who had gathered at the Hazíratu'll-Quds to meet him. After lovingly greeting everyone, he conveyed words of greeting from the Hands of the Faith in Haifa, and from the Bahá'ís of Africa, Australia, and New Zealand.

He spoke of his experiences with the Guardian, and emphasized the Guardian's words that in these days it was not enough just to agree and sympathize with the fine ideals of the Bahá'í Faith. We must be converted to the Faith. But conversion was not enough, we had to have faith. But faith was not enough alone, we had to have great love. And even that was not enough, we had to teach the people and spread the Cause throughout all the peoples of the world. The Bahá'ís should not remain passive, but should become dynamic.

Previously the Fijian Bahá'ís had worked quietly among the people, without attracting any public attention, but with such a distinguished visitor coming it was determined to seize the opportunity to come out into the open. The task was then to make sure that the Suva Town Hall was filled for this occasion.

The public meeting was advertised over the radio in both the Hindustani and Fiji languages, 400 invitations were distributed, and the information was passed around verbally.

As a result people of four races, representing five major religions, packed into Town Hall. It was estimated that over 400 persons listened raptly, sympathetically, and admiringly to Mr. Olinga's message. The leaders of an Indian religious society approached the Bahá'ís with a plea that they be allowed to arrange another public meeting during the few days that he would be in Suva upon his return from Samoa, and that the Bahá'ís were to be their invited guests.

Early Thursday morning Enoch Olinga left by flying boat for Apia.

Bus Load of Bahá'ís Give Samoan Welcome

On the day of Mr. Olinga's arrival in Samoa, October 29, the friends hired a bus to travel the twenty-two miles to the airport to welcome him. On the way stops were made at the different villages to gather those friends that could come, and by the time the airport was reached about thirty believers eagerly awaited the arrival of their first Hand of the Cause and their first African brother.

How lovingly he met the friends, and how they returned his love! Soon he was laden with the South Pacific welcome, as lei upon lei of beautiful fragrant blossoms were laid upon his shoulders. After greeting the friends he gave a short talk in which he conveyed the love and greetings of the revered Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land and the friends in all the countries he had visited.

That evening an assembly meeting had been arranged to officially welcome Mr. Olinga, and to discuss with him the many problems confronting the assembly, particularly teaching work. During this session much valuable guidance was given by Mr. Olinga, and his comments were of great benefit to the assembly. No public meetings, press, or radio interviews were arranged, as the assembly did not think it wise at the present stage of development of the Faith in the Samoan Islands.

A special meeting for close contacts in the Apia area was held on Thursday night, and about twenty people attended. Mr. Olinga gave an inspiring talk on the Faith, and this was followed by a spirited discussion for several hours.

On Friday evening a meeting of all the Bahá'ís of the Samoan Islands had been arranged. The Bahá'ís and their contacts totalled over fifty persons, listening to Mr. Olinga's words and asking many questions.

As the friends in the villages wanted to show their hospitality and gratitude, and time was limited, they decided to combine into two meetings. On Saturday, November 1, a party of the Apia friends accompanied Mr. Olinga to Fasito'otai, where the Bahá'ís of the village of Fasito'ota, Nofalo'iti, and Fasito'otai had arranged a meeting. He was made ceremoniously welcome in a fale (Samoan house), beautifully decorated for the occasion, by the chiefs of the villages, Bahá'í and non-Bahá'í, and speeches of welcome were made.

Highest Samoan Honor Given by Chiefs

Mr. Olinga gave a short talk in reply on the unity of mankind and religion. This was followed by the king's kava ceremony, which is the highest honor that can be offered in Samoan custom. He was then presented with a kava root, and another was presented by the Bahá'ís, to be taken to the Holy Land.

In Samoa the fale has no fixed walls, and so all afternoon people came by, watched, and listened. Many children gathered around, as if drawn by a magnet. The Bahá'í children presented a beautiful program, and many were moved to tears to hear the gems of Bahá'u'lláh from their lips.

The villages then served a feast, Samoan style, for all present. When Mr. Olinga departed, he left behind him an excited throng of people.

Model of the Bahá'í House of Worship now under construction near Sydney, Australia.

Construction of the Australian Bahá'í House of Worship near Sydney had reached this stage in November 1958.
Sunday afternoon was devoted to a meeting of the Leauvā'a, Malie and Afega Bahā'ī groups. It was held in Leauvā'a at the home of one of the Bahā'īs, and was attended by several non-Bahā'ī chiefs and contacts. Here Mr. Olinga was again welcomed, and he spoke about the Faith. Much time was devoted to questions and answers, which were most fruitful. This was followed by a Samoan feast.

That evening many of the friends called to say farewell, and to listen to Mr. Olinga's words for the last time. He lovingly presented each Bahā'ī family with a beautiful picture of 'Abdu'l-Bahā, and there were tears in many eyes.

Very early the next morning he left by car for the airport, but even at that hour the friends in the villages were gathered at the roadside along his route for one last farewell and the placing of the fragrant flowered leis upon his shoulders.

No words can adequately express the spirit, love, and harmony that pervaded all these meetings in Samoa. The friends said it was as if the hearts were singing. It was a tremendous experience for the local believers, whose horizons had been widened, whose devotion had been deepened, and whose desire to serve the Cause has been manifestly increased.

Return to Fiji

Mr. Olinga's first appointment upon his arrival back in the Fiji Islands was a visit to a village school. It had been his special request that he be enabled to visit a Fijian village, and a Bahā'ī school master had arranged that Mr. Olinga might visit the village where he was teaching.

He addressed the children after being entertained with song and dance, and later spoke informally to their teachers over a cup of tea. Before leaving, the Bahā'ī visitors were invited to a Fijian bure for a delicious meal of native foods. The journey back up the river late at night was very relaxing, and those present will long cherish pleasant memories of his voice rising above the sound of the motor as he taught the party its first Bahā'ī song.

The second public meeting in Suva was held in a motion picture theater which had been loaned to the Bahā'īs free of charge. Once again almost 400 people of many races and religions gathered to hear his address.

Mr. Olinga left Suva early next morning for his last appointment in Sigatoka. Some of the friends gathered at the bus stop to bid him farewell, and as he left a much-needed rain gently began to fall, to mingle with the tears of the friends.

The public meeting arranged by the friends at Sigatoka also proved to be most successful, and although this is only a small township, almost 300 people gathered to welcome him and to hear his message.

The hearts of the friends in all of Fiji are very full as a result of Enoch Olinga's visit. It is their earnest intention to foster the growth of the many seeds sown by his visit, to keep the Faith before the public, and to rededicate themselves anew to the great tasks that lie ahead.

National Spiritual Assembly of South Pacific

To be Formed in Suva, Fiji Islands, in April

The formation of the first Regional Spiritual Assembly of the Bahā'īs of the South Pacific will take place in Suva, Fiji Islands, during the first Annual Convention of the believers of that area on April 24-26, 1959.

This is one of the World Crusade goals assigned by Shoghi Effendi to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahā'īs of the United States. A teaching conference the day preceding the Convention will be open to all Bahá'ís, whether delegates or visitors. The following information will be helpful to believers planning to attend:

1. Visas will be required by all non-British subjects. Applications for visas should be made to the nearest British Consulate.

2. All must have a return ticket and sufficient funds for the period of their stay in Suva, or be in possession of a sea or air ticket to a destination outside the Fiji Islands to which he or she has right of entry.

3. All must carry smallpox inoculation certificates, except people from New Zealand and the surrounding Pacific islands.

4. Native peoples are not normally carried by shipping or air lines without prior approval of the Immigration Department. It is very important, therefore, that the names and addresses of native Bahá'ís planning to attend the Convention be sent to the Convention Arrangements Committee in Suva so that it may take the necessary steps to obtain clearance.

5. Requests for hotel or other housing reservations should be sent to the Convention Arrangements Committee giving the expected date of arrival and the anticipated length of stay. The living costs per day range from £3.5 to £1.76 (Fiji pounds). The address of the Committee is: Miss Irene Jackson, c/o Fiji Broadcasting Commission, P. O. Box 334, Suva, Fiji Islands.

6. All Bahá'ís expecting to attend the Convention and/or teaching conference must carry with them proper credentials from their National Spiritual Assembly.

Bahá'í International Community Takes Part
In Recent United Nations Activities

Our collective international relations with the United Nations have been greatly strengthened in recent months through the following developments.

The Bahá'í International Community was authorized to appoint observers to attend a conference of African nations held in Addis Ababa for ten days beginning December 29. Three observers were requested to serve: Ali Nakhjavani, Gila Behta and Charles Hassan.

The United Nations for the first time has published a “list of non-governmental organizations recognized by the United Nations Office of Public Information for 1958.” Photostats of the pages bearing the titles and the name of the Bahá'í International Community have been sent the various national spiritual assemblies as a prestige item.

Twenty-six national assemblies have sent Bahá'í International Community letters endorsing the Genocide Convention as follows:—“Since the teaching and practice of the oneness of mankind is the cornerstone of the religion revealed by Bahá'u'lláh, His followers throughout our jurisdiction recognize the vital importance of the Genocide Convention for assuring the protection of small and helpless races and peoples.”

National By-Laws Amended to Provide
For Alaska's Admission as a State

Since the Territory of Alaska has become a State of the United States, but possesses its own independent and permanent National Spiritual Assembly, the By-Laws of the Declaration of Trust have had to be amended so as to recognize this fact.

The amendment appears in the National By-Laws, Article 2, which now reads as follows: “The Bahá'ís of the United States, for whose benefit this trust is maintained, shall consist of all persons resident in the several States, Territories or Federal Districts of the United States, except Alaska, who are accepted by the National Spiritual Assembly as fulfilling the requirements of membership in the Bahá'í community . . . .” etc.

Believers are requested to add the words “except Alaska” to their personal copies of the Declaration of Trust. This amendment will be included in the next printing of the pamphlet.

Teaching Tour of Chile by National Assembly Representative
Includes Visit to Southernmost Community of Baha’i World

A N EXTENDED teaching tour throughout Chile was made in October and November 1958 by Salvador Tormo as representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay. Following are some of the interesting highlights of his trip:

In Punta Arenas, the friends received the visiting Baha’i with great joy, saying: “We often have the sensation of being on another continent due to our geographic isolation.” His opening words were: “Punta Arenas can be proud of being in a strategic place in the world spiritually. It is like a lighthouse in the southernmost part of the world.” Excellent publicity was given in the newspaper Prensa Austral and Sr. Tormo, with Sra. Dora de Handler, spoke over Radio Polar on the topic: “New Horizons.”

How necessary it is that those who can travel visit isolated Punta Arenas, is reflected in their local Bulletin: “Our community feels spiritually renewed ... his words of stimulation invigorated our spirits and hearts and gave us the necessary energy to begin a new era of greater activities.” Rúhíyyih Khánum wrote to this community in January 1958: “Your community had a special place in the heart of our beloved Guardian ... he attributed great importance to the Lamp of Baha’u’lláh which shines in that southernmost goal of our Faith.”

On Chiloé Island, where the lone pioneer, Mrs. Louise Groger, stays steadfastly at her post, Sr. Tormo was able to give the Message to nine of her contacts. Later she wrote that one lady returned with her daughter the next day to talk about “What is a Baha’i? and promised to invite other neighbors to come to learn about the Faith.

In Santiago a number of meetings were held, as well as a radio talk and interview with the editor of the newspaper La Nacion.

In nearby Viña del Mar, Sr. Tormo had the moving experience of talking over the radio, addressing words to the Juan Fernandez Island Baha’ís, giving his loving greetings to them and the inhabitants of that island. The friends were delighted to hear his voice, as Sr.

Meeting held during the Regional Teaching Conference at Quilpué, Chile, in November 1958.

and Sra. Tormo were the Knights of Bahá’u’lláh who brought to birth their first local assembly.

In Loncoche, Sra. Tormo spoke to nineteen farmworkers on the grounds where the Temple site and National Endowment is located, and where the Loncoche International Bahá’í Summer School is held nine days each summer. In the little city of Loncoche, the editor of the newspaper La Epoca asked him to stay an extra day to give a public talk. The decision was quickly made and Sra. Tormo, with Sra. Fabienne Guillón, made a house-to-house visit that same night, giving personal invitations to attend the meeting.

The next day forty-five people came to hear the talk, including the important people of the town. The topic was: “Is There a Solution for This World Crisis?” After his departure, Sra. Guillón told of her happiness to learn that the Bahá’í Teachings were being discussed “on all the street corners of the town.” A number of residents have expressed their interest in attending the forthcoming Summer School.

In Quilpué, the Valparaíso and Quilpué friends, and others able to attend, held a successful Regional Teaching Conference of about forty Bahá’ís. Sra. Tormo said: “It was a marvelous conference, characterized by an elevated spirit of unity.” The owner of the salon where the public meeting was held expressed his feelings eloquently with the desire to become a Bahá’í. The deliberations of the conference in the gardens of the Bulling home were also “magnificent,” with the manifestation of the spirit of hospitality and love of that Bahá’í family.

There, too, a joyful surprise awaited Sra. Tormo as two married couples with their children, and another young man from Juan Fernandez Island (all now living on the mainland of Chile), came forward to embrace him.

Leaving Chile, Sra. Tormo visited briefly Mendoza, Argentina, where a poignant incident took place, reminding us of the prisoners’ plea to the Frankfurt Conference to search out those in the prisons and give them the Message.

A young prisoner had become interested in the Faith and had a copy of Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in prison with him. Sra. Tormo was given permission to visit him, although it was not a scheduled visiting day. The young man spoke enthusiastically and intelligently about the Teachings, saying that if Sra. Tormo had come the next day, he would have introduced several other young men to whom he was giving the Teachings.

As they took leave of each other, the prison guard and chief standing nearby were greatly affected to see the two men embrace each other as a father would embrace a loved son. Sra. Tormo later said: “I felt impelled to give him a strong embrace . . . the emotion I felt at that time is unexplainable . . . a heavenly experience.”

Brussels Assembly Publicizes Relationship of Faith to United Nations Organization

Bahá'ís of Belgium ably demonstrated their sincere interest and cooperation with the work of United Nations in 1958. Brussels, Antwerp, Charleroi, and Liège Bahá'ís held public meetings in each city with good newspaper publicity resulting. L'Afrique et le Monde, published in Brussels, gave twenty-seven column inches to a story on the principles of the Faith, and its relationship to United Nations, following a public talk given at the Brussels Center.

As a member of the Bahá'í International Community represented by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the United States, the Brussels Assembly has been placed on the regular mailing list for documentation and visual aids produced by UNESCO and supplied to provide each community and group in Belgium, Holland, and Luxembourg.

Kampala Assembly Secures Land

For a Bahá'í Burial Ground

Formal application for land for a Bahá'í cemetery to the Kampala, Uganda, Municipal Council has been made by the Kampala Local Spiritual Assembly, following preliminary inquiries.

A meeting was called with the Medical Officer of Health, and the Parks and Cemeteries Superintendent, and a piece of land was offered in one of the municipal cemeteries. This was accepted by the Kampala Assembly, and by December 4, 1958, all details were cleared up and a plot of land was marked out for the Bahá'í Faith in the Nakawa Cemetery.

The Bahá'í plot is pleasantly located, shaded with tall eucalyptus trees, and has a metal road to its entrance. It is almost 1200 square yards in area, with space for about forty graves.

A fence of flowering shrubbery ensures its privacy from the surrounding graveyards, and the Bahá'ís have permission to improve the hedge, to lay out paths, and generally to make it a place of simple beauty.

Northwest Africa Teaching Committee Issues

Bi-Monthly Newsorgan, "The Crusader"

Northwest Africa's Regional Teaching Committee Number Seven for Liberia and Sierra Leone recently distributed the first issue of its publication, The Crusader.

The objectives of the newsorgan, according to the introductory statement made by the RTC, are to serve as "a source of news, hope, and inspiration" to the friends, to act as a means of promulgating official notices, and to help unite the region in itself and each believer to the international Bahá'í community. In an excellent effort to achieve these objectives the nine-page paper devoted space almost equally to each.

The leading news item was a report on the construction of the Mother Temple of Africa. It spoke of problems concerning the erection of the dome structure and the finish work, which is scheduled for completion by mid-1959. Another item welcomed the timely return of a pioneer to Liberia. Two others saluted indigenious pioneers who are currently serving at difficult, isolated posts.

The notices for the two-month period included the scheduled meetings of the three local spiritual assemblies, weekly public meetings and a detachable reminder-calendar of Nineteen-Day Feasts and Holy Days.

In several articles the paper fulfilled its function as a source of instructive information. Various aspects of the Bahá'í life were touched upon, and the first of a series of "Health and Home" was presented.

The friends in Area Seven are to be congratulated on their achievement. The Crusader is a paper proudly added to the family of Bahá'í publications.

40 Bahá'ís of Eritrea and Ethiopia Attend Third Annual Summer School in Asmara

The third Bahá'í Summer School of Asmara, Eritrea, held on August 23 to 31, 1958, was an attempt to fulfill the wishes of the Guardian, when, in his cable of September 1957 addressed to Asmara, he assured the friends of his fervent prayers for the expansion of this important institution. Adjirgi, a small village about sixty kilometers outside Asmara, was chosen to witness the sowing of the "establishment of order in the world and of the tranquility of its people...."

During a whole week over forty friends lived together in the Hotel Bellavista, sharing the same spirit, devotional gatherings, Holy Writings, classes, discussions, and recreation.

Friends from many places in Eritrea and Ethiopia came to partake of this true Bahá'í life: Addis Ababa, Gondar, Adiquala, Massawa, Agordat, Barentu, and Asmara. A further blessing was the presence of Eritrean Bahá'í ladies among the new believers that were attending their first summer school.

A diversified program covered these subjects: "Bahá'í Administration" by Charles Hasson of Addis Ababa, "Bahá'í History" by Dr. Hushang Abdieh of Asmara, "Islam" by Mrs. Jeanne Mesbah of Asmara, "The Laws and Ordinances of Bahá'u'lláh" by Dr. Farhoumand, and "Meditation" by Dr. Walter Niederreiter.

In the evenings, Mrs. Niederreiter, who had recently returned from Frankfurt, Germany, spoke about the Intercontinental Conference there. Her eloquent way of presenting the spirit of this conference was deeply felt by everyone.

Interesting and important discussions followed every session, especially after reading Teaching Problems by Rúhíyyih Khánum.

The youth of Asmara showed their desire to deepen their knowledge as Bahá'ís by taking an active part in all the activities of the school.

To close this wonderful summer school, the Youth Committee of Asmara presented a play, "The Assembly's Growing Pains," by Rúhíyyih Khánum. This play was later filmed as a record of this historical summer school, which is "to evolve into the Bahá'í universities of the future."

Religious and Civic Groups Join in Observance of Human Rights Day at Bahá’í Temple

A tenth anniversary celebration of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was held in Foundation Hall of the Bahá’í Temple on the evening of December 8, co-sponsored by the Bahá’ís in surrounding communities and the following religious and civic organizations: Evanston Human Relations Council; United Nations Association of Evanston; North Shore Human Relations Council; American Jewish Committee, and the Catholic Interracial Council.

An appropriate atmosphere was established for the meeting by the playing of a recording, loaned by Station WEAW of Evanston, of the preamble to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights made by Sir Laurence Olivier, the English actor, at the first anniversary of that Declaration in New York City.

Dr. John Slawson of New York City, member of the executive committee of the United States National Commission to UNESCO, and executive vice-president of the American Jewish Committee, was the keynote speaker, reviewing in an authoritative manner the historic first Universal Declaration, the progress made since that time, and the weaknesses and problems that presently exist, making impossible a realization of the full import of that Declaration.

A four-member panel, as follows, then proceeded to comment on various aspects of the bill of human rights, its successes and failures: civil, Dr. Sarah Martin Pereira, member of the Bahá’í Auxiliary Teaching Board and professor of languages at Tennessee A. and I. State University; religious, Rev. Tyler Thompson, professor at Garrett Biblical Institute; economic, Dr. Paul Mundy, head of Dept. of Sociology at Loyola University; cultural, Maurice B. Mitchell, president of Encyclopaedia Britannica Films, Inc. Each panelist commented ably on his respective field, the latter three stressing mostly conditions that exist in the home communities of this area.

After the panelists’ presentations, a very lively discussion period followed, with numerous questions being asked. This enabled Dr. Pereira to illustrate ways in which the Bahá’í Teachings apply to problems of human relations and human rights, and how they are resolved in the Bahá’í community.

A literature table, located near the entrance to Foundation Hall, permitted each sponsoring group to display literature on its organization, as well as materials on the Declaration of Human Rights. In addition to this a special leaflet was prepared, giving some background on each organization and placed on all of the chairs so that each guest could have a copy.

In spite of extremely inclement weather, with hazardous driving conditions and sub-zero temperature, there was an attendance of over 200, about half of what was anticipated had the weather not been so severe.

This tenth anniversary celebration had its inception when the National Spiritual Assembly approved a suggestion from the Evanston Bahá’í Assembly, who were in turn asked to take the initiative in planning such a meeting, with the support and co-operation of the Wilmette, Winnetka, Waukegan, Chicago, Maywood, Elmhurst, Batavia, and Oak Park Bahá’í communities.

All planning, publicity, and preparation of several thousand invitational flyers (which the American Jewish Committee prepared at no cost in their Chicago office) was handled by a central planning committee composed of one representative from each sponsoring group. Mrs. Eunice Braun, chairman of the Evanston Bahá’í Assembly, represented the Bahá’ís on this committee, and took the initial steps in contacting and consulting with the other organizations that eventually resulted in a plan for the co-sponsored meeting. Mrs. Braun also opened the meeting, welcoming the guests to the Temple on behalf of the Bahá’ís, and extending an invitation to visit the Temple auditorium after the meeting, which was kept open and lighted for this purpose. All of the speakers, and many guests, accepted this invitation, this being the first visit for many of them to the Bahá’í Temple.

Lee Thorpe of Evanston, chairman of the Evanston and also the North Shore Human Relations Councils, acted as moderator for the meeting.

At the request of the committee, three members were suggested as hosts to the speaker and panelists at a dinner preceding the meeting, as follows: Lee Thorpe, chairman of the planning committee; Dr. Walter Zand, chairman of the Chicago chapter of the American Jewish Committee, through whose auspices Dr. Slawson was obtained as a speaker; and Mrs. Eunice Braun of the Evanston Assembly. This meeting enabled the speaker and panelists to get acquainted with each other, and to make arrangements for the best order of presentation at the meeting. It was noted that quite a number of questions concerning the Faith were asked at this dinner, and Dr. Slawson, who showed a deep and respectful interest, reflected this in his opening comments at the public meeting in Foundation Hall.

Beverly Hills Human Rights Day Observance
Attracts Many New Contacts to Faith

Beverly Hills, Calif., commemorated the tenth anniyersary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights with a meeting at the YMCA, attended by 100 persons, the majority of them guests who had had little or no contact previously with the Faith.

A well-planned program began with a showing of the film, "Lady From Philadelphia," starring Marian And-derson, who was recently appointed as U.S. delegate to the Thirteenth General Assembly of the UN. The film, first presented on the Edward R. Murrow television program last year, covered Miss Anderson's trip through the Far East as an emissary of the U.S.
State Department, and was a vivid expression of the theme of Human Rights.

Miss Helene Boughton, vice president of the Los Angeles chapter of the UN Association, spoke on the historical background of the Declaration and on current developments in upholding it within the UN.
Charles Wolcott, member of the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly, followed, expressing the Bahá'í viewpoint that all "human" rights originate with God.

The Beverly Hills Bahá'ís feel that the program, along with the fellowship that developed through a social period following it, and the literature presented to the guests, did much to encourage the interest of about twelve persons wishing to make a further study of the Faith.

In addition to personal contacts, many types of publicity were used to attract attention to the meeting, including newspaper ads, a feature story in the local newspaper, spot announcements on local radio stations, and invitation-programs sent to many civic, cultural and service organizations.

Four Faiths Participate in Panel Discussion at Human Rights Day Observance in Boise

The observance of Human Rights Day in Boise, Idaho, November 29, was sponsored by the Bahá'ís of Boise and Ada County communities in the YWCA in Boise. The speakers represented the Buddhist, Jewish, and Christian faiths, with Mrs. Jesma Herbert presenting the Bahá'í view. This was the best attended meeting held by the Bahá'ís for some time, there being fifty-one present, of whom twenty-three were guests. A Negro minister of the local Baptist Church was much impressed by Mrs. Herbert's presentation.
The Jewish speaker stated he had never appeared on a panel with anyone so well-qualified.

A direct result of this meeting was an invitation from the Presbyterian Church for a Bahá'í youth speaker. An invitation also was received from the Buddhist speaker to attend the opening of the new Buddhist Temple in Ontario, Ore., in February.

Bahá'í Booth at Utah State Fair Attracts Many Thousands of Visitors

The Bahá'í's of Utah recently united in a state-wide effort to present the Bahá'í Faith to the public by preparing a well planned booth at the Utah State Fair in Salt Lake City. More than half the population of Utah attended from September 12-22, offering a unique teaching opportunity to the Bahá'ís.

Bahá'í communities of Utah assisted in the work of financing, building, and manning the booth. Utah is fortunate in having Bahá'ís of many talents, with the result that the 16x16 foot square booth gradually took on a professional appearance.

The booth had a prize-winning appearance, from the draped ceiling to the carpeted floor. Symbols of the world's religions, Bahá'í principles, and the names of the Divine Revelators, strikingly lettered in brilliant gold on a soft black background, decorated the walls. Tasteful furnishings from Bahá'í homes, and plants in green and red effectively set off the simple decor. Four spotlights illuminated the points of interest.

The booth was open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily, and was well served by Bahá'ís. The paid personnel of surrounding booths were constantly amazed by the spirit of service shown by the Bahá'ís.

It was an exciting experience! When crowds were large, Bahá'ís, who "never convert," talked to interested people in the booth, and even went out into the aisle to "buttonhole" more timid souls. Fifteen hundred pieces of Bahá'í literature were given out selectively, to prevent careless discarding of it on the fairgrounds. A guest book was kept on the counter for the names of those desiring additional literature or notice of future meetings.

It would seem likely that half of the 250,000 visitors passed the Bahá'í booth, and, in doing so, had an opportunity to learn of the Bahá'í principles. Never before has the Faith been so widely presented to the public in the State of Utah. The effort was extremely rewarding in the spread of the Message, as well as to all of the individual Bahá'ís who served. A large percentage of the Bahá'ís of the state joined in a spirit of service and, as a result, a new unity was found. All of those who cooperated in this effort, have been made aware of "a grace vouchsafed unto him who serves."

Conway, Ark., Methodist Student Movement

Studies Bahá'í Faith at Hendrix College

The Methodist Students' Movement of the First Methodist Church of Conway, Ark., which draws its membership from Hendrix College and the State Teachers College, invited Paul Pettit and Eldon Dennis to speak on the Bahá'í Faith on November 16, as a part of their study of various religions.

The Bahá'ís were invited to spend the entire day with this group, and the whole day was spent in talking with them about the Faith. The day began at 9:45 a.m. with a lecture at the church on the general principles of the Faith, attended by about forty-five persons.

During lunch at Hendrix College a group of nineteen asked questions and sought additional information, then this group adjourned to the Faculty Lounge for further discussion lasting more than two hours.

This was followed by dinner at the church, attended by about forty persons, during which time the students at the individual tables asked one question after another. When dinner was over an hour's discussion of questions and answers followed, with fifty-six attending. When time ran out the questions were cut off, and the meeting was brought to a close with a Bahá'í prayer. However, about twenty students stayed and asked questions on an informal basis. Over 200 pieces of literature were distributed during the day, and many sincere comments and expressions of appreciation were given to Mr. Pettit and Mr. Dennis. The college president and the program chairman remarked that the Bahá'í Faith was the most interesting religion they had studied.

Southern Rhodesia and Northern Mozambique

Hold Area Teaching Conference

The Area Teaching Committee of Southern Rhodesia and Northern Mozambique held a successful Teaching Conference on November 15-16, 1958.

Bahá'ís came from Bulawayo, and almost every Bahá'í from the Salisbury area attended at least one of the sessions.

The theme of the conference was "Deepening." Lengthy and interesting discussions were held on these questions: What is the purpose of deepening, and How can we deepen ourselves in the Faith?

In his opening remarks Hastings Højane, chairman of the conference, said, "I wish you to join together in prayer and devotion." He said he believed that everyone realized the importance of the Area Teaching Committee, and told us that we had come with two baskets within us, one full and the other empty. It was everyone's duty to empty the one which was full, and to fill the other. By joining in the consultation and giving ideas, the full basket would be emptying; by listening and taking notes of what others said, we were filling the empty basket.

The workshop method proved very successful, and all discussions were more clearly understood when they were presented in a summary. It was brought out that the purpose of deepening was to enable us to stand fast and firmly as a tree with our roots firmly embedded in the teachings, and that we were not to be swayed from our truth. We can effectively deepen ourselves by constant attendance at regular meetings, by participating in teaching activities, and by following a well-planned teaching course from the Sacred Writings.

The conference felt that there were new believers that needed great assistance from the older Bahá’ís, and it was felt that they could grasp more of the Bahá’í Teachings, and at the same time increase their interest, if given responsibility within their grasp, and by being encouraged to take part in extension teaching trips.

After a recess for dinner, the friends gathered to hear messages from Hand of the Cause John Robarts, and from the National Teaching Committee. A talk was given by Mrs. Audrey Robarts on “Extension Teaching,” which is our great need in spreading the Cause.

On the next day the discussion touched mostly on “Bahá’í Administration.” It was brought out that knowing the Administration would enable us to love and appreciate any responsibility given us, that we would not absent ourselves from meetings unnecessarily, and that we would have confidence within ourselves in our teaching.

Finally there was a quiz presented by Mrs. Florence Fathe-Azâm. The quiz was so arranged that the Bahá’ís wished they had read most of the books before the quiz! Later on a copy-list of where to find the answers in the Bahá’í books was given for reference. This meant that the friends would have to look up the answers, and in doing so would help to deepen themselves.

Ten Latin American Countries Need More Pioneers To Attain Formation of National Assembly

Following the beautiful and stirring message of November 30 from our leaders, the Hands of the Cause of God, the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee again renews its appeal for pioneer volunteers. No one whose heart throbs with love for Bahá’u’lláh has failed to be stirred by the joyful hope of the establishment of the Universal House of Justice in 1963, nor by the appeal to each individual to do his share to bring the beloved Guardian’s Crusade to a triumphant consummation.

Twenty of the Pillars of the Universal House of Justice—twenty new national spiritual assemblies—must be established in Latin America. While the past five and a half years have witnessed a great expansion of the Faith in many of these Republics, the minimum base for a national assembly, the required number of local assemblies set by the beloved Guardian still remains to be built in no less than ten of them. As pointed out by the Hands of the Cause, this year is critical. The required new local assemblies must be started immediately in order to achieve the victory.

The Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee welcomes the offer of any volunteer to pioneer in Latin America, or to fill the place here in the United States of someone who is ready to leave but cannot until his place on an assembly or goal group is taken. Address: Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, secretary; 73 College Road West; Princeton, N.J.

Stresses Value of “The Bahá’í World” In Teaching at Pioneer Outposts

Assuming that each Bahá’í who reads this already has his personal copy of The Bahá’í World, Vol. XII, have you ever thought of its forceful teaching value in pioneer outposts, or in any part of the world where literature is scarce and the Faith is little known?

Although this international record is timeless in its value to Bahá’ís as an historical record and document

Bahá’ís of Lancaster and Millersville, Pa., combined efforts in observance of Human Rights Day. There was a public meeting at the YMCA in Lancaster on December 7, following the state convention, with Annamarie Honnold speaking on “A Bahá’í Looks at Human Rights.” The above photograph shows the Human Rights display in the window of the Lancaster Free Public Library for one week before the meeting.
The work-study sessions will have a minimum study program of one class per day and devotions. The rest of the time will be spent on work projects for the improvement of the school. A flat rate of $10.00 per week will be charged all registrants for the work-study sessions to apply on the cost of food and lodging.

Anyone who is interested in a scholarship for the Youth Session or the regular sessions should apply to the Geyerville Bahá’í School, Geyerville, Calif.

Brotherhood Award Given NSA Chairman

H. Borrah Kavelin, chairman of the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly, and five other leaders of religion in this country were given Brotherhood Key awards by the Labor Temple Fellowship, Inc., at a Brotherhood Brunch on December 21. This large interfaith group is affiliated with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Mr. Kavelin spoke for about fifteen minutes on the Bahá’í Faith, its Divine Source, and what Bahá’ís throughout the world are doing in the promotion of brotherhood.

Bahá’í Message Given at All-Faith Chapel

The All-Faith Chapel of Solar Aircraft Co., San Diego, Calif., invited Michael Rochester, a local Bahá’í, to speak at chapel services in December. Brief talks and readings from the Bahá’í Writings were given to two groups of employees, totalling about 100 persons.

Speakers for the services are selected by an interfaith board of nine employees, one of whom is a Bahá’í. The chapel, built by employees with company funds, was dedicated in 1955 at a service in which the Bahá’í community was represented.

BAHA’I IN THE NEWS

A handbook published by the University of Chicago in its section devoted to religious groups refers to the Bahá’í discussion group “created to relate the ethical teachings of the Bahá’í Faith to the life on campus.”

The Standard Oil Company map of Chicago and vicinity includes the Bahá’í House of Worship in its section on points of interest.

Los Angeles Community Sets Goal

For Regular Contributors to Fund

As one of its local objectives in the homefront campaign the Local Spiritual Assembly of Los Angeles, Calif., has set a goal of 70% of the members of the community as regular contributors to the Bahá’í Fund. Progress reports are given by the treasurer at each Nineteen-Day Feast.

Starting with April 21, 1958, as the base, the number of regular contributors has steadily increased until at the end of the first six months the percentage had almost doubled.

This is one aim on which all communities and groups should focus attention during the next four years.

The Israel Office of Information is issuing a series of pamphlets entitled This is Israel. No. 6, "Religious Life" contains a paragraph about the Baha'i World Center in Haifa. The Israeli Ministry for Religious Affairs has established a special department for relations with the Baha'i Faith.

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Benelux Countries corrected this error and the letter written by that Assembly was published on February 6, stated: "The two Wisconsin scientists were Dr. Manucher Javid, associate professor of neurosurgery, and the late Dr. Paul Sethlage, associate professor of anatomy."

The Stars and Stripes, newspaper of the American armed forces in Europe, on August 2 mentioned the Intercontinental Conference in Frankfurt, and illustrated the model of the Baha'i Temple to be constructed in Europe.

People and Places, an illustrated monthly magazine published by DeSoto dealers, carried in September a two-page illustrated feature on the Baha'i Temple. In addition to a full-page illustration of the Temple, three small illustrations of the interior of the dome, one of the texts carved on the nine entrance doors, and a picture of the interior were shown. The accompanying text, summarizing the purpose and design of the House of Worship, was taken from accurate sources. This article was written by Marshall K. McClelland, a free-lance writer who has made a careful study of Baha'i literature.

The Courrier du Littoral, published at Ostend, Bel-

The Nashville Banner, July 31, published an extensive notice on the passing of Nellie Jennings Roche: "Recognized as one of the South's outstanding women in the insurance profession. . . . On August 10 the Chicago Sunday Tribune published the seventh in a series of articles by Louise Hutchinson "telling how a Tribune reporter found that Chicago and suburbs are a delightful place for a vacation." This article described a Sunday morning meeting in the Methodist Temple. "But there is another House of Worship in the Chicago area that is unique in all the world." This statement introduced an excellent description of the Bahá'í Temple and its purpose.

Chemical Bulletin, September 1958, a monthly trade journal published by the Chicago Section of the American Chemical Society, describes a journey in and around Chicago of interest to Society members attending a convention in Chicago. This journey includes a visit to the Bahá'í Temple — "One of the most interesting and beautiful buildings in the Chicago area... a glittering gem in white and myriad colors."

The Year Book of International Organizations, 1958-59, published by the Union of International Organizations in official collaboration with United Nations, lists the Bahá'í International Community on pages 261-262 in the section on Religion and Ethics. The twenty-three National assemblies participating in the Bahá'í International Community at the time this statement was prepared, are all listed.

—’Abdu’l-Bahá
"We have commanded you to pray and fast...

Thou seest, O God of Mercy, Thou Whose power pervadeth all created things, the servants of Thine, Thy thralles, who, according to the good-pleasure of Thy Will, observe in the daytime the fast prescribed by Thee, who arise, at the earliest dawn of day, to make mention of Thy Name, and to celebrate Thy praise, in the hope of obtaining their share of the goodly things that are treasured up within the treasuries of Thy grace and bounty. I beseech Thee, O Thou that holdest in Thy hands the reins of the entire creation, in Whose grasp is the whole kingdom of Thy names and of Thine attributes, not to deprive, in Thy Day, Thy servants from the showers pouring from the clouds of Thy mercy, nor to hinder them from taking their portion of the ocean of Thy good-pleasure. All the atoms of the earth bear witness, O my Lord, to the greatness of Thy power and of Thy sovereignty; and all the signs of the universe attest the glory of Thy majesty and of Thy might. Have mercy, then, O Thou Who art the sovereign Lord of all, Who art the King of everlasting days, and Ruler of all nations, upon these Thy servants, who have clung to the cord of Thy commandments, who have bowed their necks to the revelations of Thy laws which have been sent down from the heaven of Thy will. Behold, O my Lord, how their eyes are lifted up towards the dawning-place of Thy loving-kindness, how their hearts are set upon the oceans of Thy favors, how their voices are lowered before the accents of Thy most sweet Voice, calling, from the most sublime Station, in Thy name the All-Glorious. Help Thou Thy loved ones, O my Lord, them that have forsaken their all, that they may obtain the things Thou dost possess, whom trials and tribulations have encompassed for having renounced the world and set their affections on Thy realm of glory. Shield them, I entreat Thee, O my Lord, from the assaults of their evil passions and desires, and aid them to obtain the things that shall profit them in this present world and in the next.

I pray Thee, O my Lord, by Thy hidden, Thy treasured Name, that calleth aloud in the kingdom of creation, and summoneth all peoples to the Tree beyond which there is no passing, the seat of transcendent glory, to rain down upon us, and upon Thy servants, the overflowing rain of Thy mercy, that it may cleanse us from the remembrance of all else but Thee, and draw us nigh unto the shores of the ocean of Thy grace. O Lord, through Thy most exalted Pen, that which will immortalize our souls in the Realm of glory, will perpetuate our names in Thy kingdom, and safeguard our lives in the treasuries of Thy protection and our bodies in the stronghold of Thy inviolable fastness. Powerful art Thou over all things, be they of the past or of the future. No God is there but Thee, the omnipotent Protector; the Self-Subsisting.

Thou seest, O Lord, our supplicant hands lifted up towards the heaven of Thy favor and bounty. Grant that they may be filled with the treasuries of Thy munificence and bountiful favor. Forgive us, and our fathers, and our mothers, and fulfill whatsoever we have desired from the ocean of Thy grace and Divine generosity. Accept, O Beloved of our hearts, all our works in Thy path. Thou art, verily, the Most Powerful, the Most Exalted, the Incomparable, the One, the Forgiving, the Gracious.

Ruhíyyih Khánum Addresses Over 200 British Bahá'ís During London Visit

THE British friends had the wonderful privilege of a visit from Hand of the Cause 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rúhíyyih Khánum last October when she was in London to supervise the completion of the beloved Guardian's monument. On Sunday afternoon, October 26, more than 200 Bahá'ís from all parts of Britain gathered at the Eccleston Hotel in London to meet her.

The following excerpts of Rúhíyyih Khánum's talk at that meeting, reprinted from the January issue of the British Bahá'í Journal, were compiled from notes taken by several people, and while they are not a verbatim report, there was no disagreement among the compilers:

"The strength of the Bahá'ís is in each other. We feel lonesomeness except in meeting together, when our hearts are consoled. We love Shoghi Effendi now more than ever, and we find our happiness in doing something to please him."

'Amatu'l-Bahá then told us that after the passing of the beloved Guardian she had visited the Shrine of Bahá'u'lláh, and there, in spite of her tremendous sorrow and her love for the Guardian, she knew that it was because of Bahá'u'lláh—not because of Shoghi Effendi—that she was a Bahá'í. It is Bahá'u'lláh's Cause we are trying to establish, and she realized that if she turned with all her heart to Bahá'u'lláh she would be able to come through.

Our purpose in life is to know and to love God. Shoghi Effendi once gave advice to a Bahá'í who said he could not get on with the Bahá'í community where he was, and so was no longer active in that community. The Guardian said that this was the wrong attitude, that we cannot possibly be compatible with everyone, but because we love God we love our fellow men. We should love people because we love God and they belong to God, just as we love everything..." connected with those we love, even small mementos. The Bahá'ís must be dear to each other; unity springs from love; warmth and a strong knitting together come from love. The Administrative Order is now working well all over the world. It was built by the older Bahá'ís over a long and laborious period, and now the new Bahá'ís find this Order already here. To-day the need in the Bahá'í world is Love, for each other and for humanity.

The Guardian has left us everything we need; we should hold to the Guardian's plan, the Ten-Year Crusade. This is the last plan we shall ever have from Shoghi Effendi; it gives us opportunities for service which will never recur. We should keep our minds on our objectives, decide which are the most important things to concentrate our energies on and remember that every single moment that escapes us is not coming back. In this way the work will go forward.

There is not enough brevity in the Cause. We must train our minds to say things in a concise and brief manner, avoiding anecdotes and reminiscences in consultation.

We must put first things first; each Bahá'í must consider this and see that he is not tied down by side issues which prevent him from grasping his choice.

The Guardian is not our 'Exemplar,' but we could with advantage imitate his way of working. Shoghi Effendi was unidirectional—like an express train on a track; knowing where he was going, nothing diverted him from his purpose. He spent all his time doing the task which lay ahead. The Hands in Haifa find it is all they can do to keep abreast of work the Guardian did all alone. Shoghi Effendi had method; he had tenacity and a unidirectional drive towards his goal. He worked until the job was completed. We must learn to be like that.

The Guardian relied on God and on himself. That is to say, he would find out for himself as to whether a job could be done and then, having decided that it could, he would do it himself. We must also show initiative in this way; we must be audacious and drive through with perseverance in carrying out the affairs of the Cause. We must analyse the facts. The believers are the power-houses of the Faith.

It is very important now that the Bahá'í think of the Faith as a World Faith. Bahá'u'lláh came to establish World Unity. Shoghi Effendi literally forged the Bahá'í world. This is our most precious heritage, and it must not be allowed to slip back. We must cultivate consciousness of the greatness and preciousness of being part of the Bahá'í world.

The national spiritual assemblies must think internationally;

The local spiritual assemblies must think nationally;

The groups must think in terms of being local spiritual assemblies and the isolated believers of becoming a group. The largeness of vision will bring tremendous strength, and a world consciousness will strengthen the unity of the Bahá'ís all over the world.

The world organization of the Cause is the responsibility of the Hands and the national spiritual assemblies. The function of the Hands in Haifa is to hold the Bahá'í world together. We must pray for these Hands; their work is infinitely important and all are working as hard as they can. It has been a great blessing during the past year at the World Center to have had a number of the other Hands substituting at different periods for some of the Hands appointed to serve there. This has brought the Custodians firsthand reports of the status of the Faith in various areas, as well as enabling the temporary Custodians to better sense the overall needs of the Faith as seen from the World Center.

How to Reach the Grave of Shoghi Effendi

These directions on reaching the grave of Shoghi Effendi in Great Northern London Cemetery are supplied by the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles with the request that visiting Bahá'ís make use of them instead of calling upon that Assembly for information and assistance.

By car from Marble Arch: Up Edgware Road—about half-mile turn right into Marylebone Road (lights)—about half-mile turn left into Gloucester Place (B.523), thence into Park Road (A.41). Keep left and continue to Wellington Road and Finchley Road (still A.41) to Swiss Cottage. Continue on Finchley Road towards Golders Green. At Tower Garage (about two miles) take right fork. Straight on through Golders Green (still Finchley Road till North Circular Road crosses (about two miles). Turn right (A.406). At crossroads after overhead bridge (gasworks on corner) turn left into High Road (A.106). At end bear right, then forward at crossroads and keep left into Brunswick Park Road. Cemetery gates down hill on right.

By underground: Travel to Arnos Grove Station (Piccadilly line), thence by bus or on foot (about ten minutes' walk), following map.
The Bahá'í Home, First Dependency of Mashriqu’l-Adhkar, Opens in Wilmette

On February 1 the American Bahá'í community achieved another and unique objective of the beloved Guardian's Ten-Year Plan, for on that day "the first dependency of the Mashriqu’l-Adhkar in Wilmette," The Bahá'í Home, began actual operation.

To acquaint the residents of Wilmette and the neighboring communities with the particular purposes and services of The Bahá'í Home (as described for the believers in Bahá'í News, October 1958), Sunday, January 25, was publicly announced as open house, both by means of a large advertisement in Wilmette Life and special articles in Chicago and suburban newspapers. In addition, approximately 200 special invitations were sent to officials of the Village of Wilmette, the Wilmette Chamber of Commerce, and a number of social service organizations, as well as to directors of other homes for elderly people, doctors, and business concerns, inviting them to inspect the premises and become acquainted with the facilities and services that are provided. A corps of local Baha'is received the visitors and conducted them on tours of the building.

Although a heavy snow storm and hazardous driving conditions prevailed all day, nearly 200 persons signed the guest book. All were very complimentary and enthusiastic, not only about the structure itself and the artistic and practical interior decorating scheme and choice of furnishings, but also for the concern that has been given for the safety, interest, and comfort of the residents. Many remarked particularly about the unusual safety precautions, which include the absence of steps and scatter rugs, hand rails in the corridors and bathrooms, the communication system between all bedrooms, bathrooms, and the administrative offices, and the isolation room with facilities for the treatment of minor illnesses. The well-lighted, cheery hobby room, the spacious and well-equipped kitchen, comfortable living quarters for the administrator, cook, and maid were other areas of special interest, as were the small parlor for private visits and the inviting book-nook. The newspaper publicity devoted considerable space to the description of the landscaping scheme, which includes several gardens with walks and benches, and a stockade cedar fence on three sides to provide quiet and privacy. Every room of the "U" shaped structure looks out on these private gardens, so planned as to give warmth, color, and beauty all the year-round. One garden of hybrid tea and floribunda roses will provide cuttings for the dining room, and one small plot has been set apart for the residents who wish to make gardening a hobby.

While accommodating only twenty guests, a high standard of selection and operation will be maintained in order to make this a model home for elderly men and women. As the first accessory to the Bahá'í House of Worship, it exemplifies the principle that prayer to God must be fulfilled in service to one's fellow men without discrimination of race, class, or creed.

The construction and furnishing of The Bahá'í Home, costing approximately $200,000.00, has been financed completely by the American Bahá'ís. It has its own Board of Directors and is incorporated under the State of Illinois as a non-profit corporation.

William Campbell Wright of Wilmette is the architect, and the interior decoration was planned and carried out by Mrs. Ida E. Wright, interior decorator of Winnetka, assisted by a committee of Bahá'ís consisting of Miss Edna M. True, Mrs. Dorothy Redson, and Dr. Katherine K. True. Landscaping was designed by Hilbert E. Dahl and L. Wyatt Cooper, who have already won a wide reputation for the beauty of the gardens surrounding the Bahá'í House of Worship. The Administrator is Mrs. Florence V. Gibson. An Admissions Committee appointed by the Board of Directors, composed of six Bahá'ís and three non-Bahá'ís, processes all applications; the final decisions about admission are made by the Directors.

The general requirements for admission are: that the applicant must be sixty-five years of age or over; must be in reasonably good health and able to attend to all personal needs; must be of good character and able to integrate happily into group living in the Home. The financial arrangement arrived at by the Board of Directors in consultation with the applicant and the applicant's family does not include hospital or long-time nursing care, or funeral expenses.

Since The Bahá'í Home is a home in the complete sense for all residents, whether Bahá'ís or non-Bahá'ís, the premises cannot be open at all times for inspection by the casual visitors. However, the Board of Directors will try to work out some arrangement to have the Home open during certain hours for delegates and visitors to the forthcoming National Convention.

—U.S. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY

Canada Launches Bold Campaign to Proclaim Faith to Public

A bold and courageous campaign to proclaim the Message of Bahá'u'lláh in Canada has been undertaken by the Promulgation Committee of the Canadian National Assembly in Western Ontario.

Many communities in this area are reported to have become Bahá'í-conscious as never before, as a result of sympathetic and enthusiastic press support, radio coverage, and public talks.

This campaign has also served to excite and quicken the Bahá'ís, and has produced a unifying and revitalizing force so greatly desired by the Guardian. Repercussions to the proclamation activities have included denunciations of the Faith from the pulpit of Christian churches and sermons directly related to the claims of Bahá'u'lláh, as well as the securing of many vital contacts for the Faith from interested inquirers.
THE tenth observance of World Religion Day, which was inaugurated in 1950 by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of the United States, was held on Sunday, January 18, 1959. When the third Sunday in January was first designated as World Religion Day, it was only a national event; today it is being observed by Baha’i communities in many parts of the world.

The theme for the occasion was “the fundamental oneness of religion.” The Baha’i Press Service prepared a release and advertisement on this theme and distributed these to over 300 Baha’i press representatives, the Associated Press, United Press International, and the Associated Negro Press. It is with great interest that we note that in many instances the papers carried the full text from the release, “If we investigate without prejudice these great religions, we will find that in name and form they differ, but fundamentally they agree.”

When we realize that this message reached 47 states, more than 120 Baha’i communities, over 125 papers with a potential reading circulation of ten million, it is a thrill. We recall the promise of ‘Abdu’l-Baha that “Every seed sown in this day shall bear fruit”; perhaps not tomorrow, this week, next month, nor next year, but some day, and this is what is so important for the future of our beloved Faith. It is a significant example of what the friends can do when they make a concerted effort on behalf of the Faith. “Blessed are those who work in groups.”

How was the public reached? Why did the papers tell our story? We are not an organization of a million adherents in this country, nor did we have the services of a public relations firm, nor a large bank account at our disposal. This outstanding record was achieved by the isolated believer, the sick, the aged, the new believer, the friend with four or five small children, the groups of two, three, or five and the communities of nine, fifteen, and more. This is the miracle of our Faith, friends; that so much can be done by so few when we have the courage of our convictions, and faith is courage.

Colorful Poster Widely Used

Visual materials continue to become a pressing need in reaching the multitudes and with this in mind the Baha’i Press Service had a colorful poster depicting the oneness of religion drawn by an artist, Jack Tarleton, for display. Over 400 of these posters were distributed to the friends, some communities ordering as many as 15, 25, and 30. We have been told that these were most effective, and in some communities the friends were asked to keep the posters on display for a week after the event. These posters were shown or displayed in public libraries, banks, YWCA's, YMCA's, hotel lobbies, bus terminals, vacant stores, and many other places where people are apt to conglomerate.

We didn't have to pay for this space; it was given to us. Our theme, "the fundamental oneness of religion," could have been provocative and controversial, and we could have been denied the space for our exhibits, but we weren't. It is quite evident that your community knows for what the Bahá'í Faith stands, at least the leaders in your community do, and they have no fear. Could the effort, which seems so ineffectual to you at the time it was made, have penetrated the hearts and minds of some of your citizens to make them so cooperative?

The fact sheet of religious symbols, as another aid for attracting the public, and circulated to the press representatives, was put to use, not only as a distribution piece, but as a publicity item in the local papers and in exhibits. There were many exhibits of the sacred writings of the revealed religions, and several centered their display around the golden rule of each of the major faiths. We are becoming increasingly more eye-minded.

Public meetings were primarily the function held in observance of World Religion Day, with a discussion period following the talk. Some of these were panels of representatives of other religions, and a significant number presented friends from other lands, who spoke on their religion, making these meetings a colorful and world-embracing picture, particularly when the speakers were in native costume. Then, there were those who had a Bahá'í speaker only, who drew upon the wealth of material in the Bahá'í Writings on the revealed religions themselves. Children and young adults also participated in the occasion. Many communities had a social time after the meeting and served refreshments; others had special musical programs. It just seemed that the friends made every effort to attract the public.

Many radio announcements and interviews were reported, another mass media for proclaiming the Faith. It is becoming increasingly more available to the Faith.

First Public Meeting Held on Hopi Reservation

The first Bahá'í public meeting ever held on the Hopi reservation took place on January 11 at New Oraibi, Ariz., at the home of a Hopi friend of Melvin and Irene Vanderhoof, pioneers now living on this reservation. Although the date of January 11 was chosen to meet the convenience of other Bahá'ís who came to help, the World Religion Day theme was followed. A welcome was extended by the Hopi hostess and Mrs. Vanderhoof, followed by short talks given by the minister of the local Independent church (a Hopi) and by James Ginnett, Bahá'í pioneer living on the adjacent Navajo reservation. The Vanderhoofs have reported with great enthusiasm that deep harmony and love was felt at this gathering and a sense of spiritual nearness to the Hopi people has been apparent increasingly ever since. "Hopi Hi-Lites," a monthly newsletter circulated on the reservation carried an account of the event, as well as a Flagstaff newspaper.

Bahá'ís from the Navajo reservation attended the World Religion Day public meeting held in Flagstaff on January 18, bringing friends from the reservation with them. The small hall was filled to capacity, with many Bahá'ís and their guests who came to hear Mrs. Nancy Phillips speak. On January 25 a public meeting was held in Window Rock by the Navajo reservation Bahá'ís, with World Religion as the theme. Amoz Gibson narrated the slide showing on the Holy Land and the Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette.

Brussels, Belgium, again celebrated World Religion Day with a public meeting, and even though the city was blanketed by a heavy snow storm, twenty eight people attended the public meeting. E. Claude Levy delineated the march forward mankind is making in the material and political sphere through scientific discoveries and regional unification, and pointed out the need for spiritual unification of the religions of the world, emphasizing what the coming of Bahá'u'lláh signifies for this day.

Panel discussions were held by the Little Rock, Ark., community on the subject: "How Religion Can Solve Today's Problems." Two clergymen and a Bahá'í speaker participated. Bakersfield, Calif., presented a panel of young adult members of the Los Angeles Bahá'í community, who discussed "World Peace." Charleston, W. Va., had a panel discussion on "The Fundamental Oneness of Religion" with representatives from the Judaic, Christian, Islámic and Bahá'í Faiths, followed by coffee and a discussion hour.

Nassau, Bahamas, reports that four American Bahá'ís participated in a panel discussion which resulted in a twelve-column-inch publicity on the World Religion Day observance last year in Little Rock, Ark., in which the meeting was held in a synagogue, with a Presbyterian minister as moderator, representatives from the Seventh Day Adventist Church and the Society of Friends participating in the program, and the president of the Interracial Ministerial Alliance closing the meeting with a prayer, with music furnished by the choir of the Negro college. This was evidently quite newsworthy to the citizens of the Bahamas in light of the publicity on the integration of schools received in the press in Little Rock and elsewhere. We never know how far reaching our efforts will be, Little Rock, Ark., to Nassau, Bahamas.

The communities using visual aids as a means of observing World Religion Day were Iowa City, Iowa, who showed colored slides on Palestine; Rochester, Minn., had colored slides on Haifa and the Bahá’í House of Worship; Dumont, N.J., presented an illustrated talk with slides of Europe and South America; Charlotte, N.C., showed colored slides of the four religions in Palestine, with a Bahá’í narrator; Youngstown, Ohio, had a Bahá’í from Africa who spoke on “Religion In World Affairs” and showed films of Ghana and Africa. An exhibit of African art objects was on display. Waukesha, Wis., showed the film “Haifa, A Name To Remember,” with three speakers; and Lancaster, Pa., presented “Palestine—Holy Land of Four Faiths,” and a Bahá’í spoke on the basic agreement underlying the major faiths.

Communities presenting representatives from other major faiths on their program were: Costa Mesa, Newport and Orange County, Calif., who had a speaker on Judaism, Christianity, Buddhism, Society of Friends, Islâm and the Bahá’í Faith; Pasadena and San Gabriel Valley presented seven of the world religions on the theme “the fundamental spiritual precepts of the world’s religious beliefs are essentially the same.” Speaking to this subject were: a Hindu, a Zoroastrian, a Jew, a Buddhist, a Christian, an American Indian, and a Bahá’í; Montclair, N.J., welcomed an Indian educator from New Delhi to the discussion at their open fireside meeting which had been preceded by a two-week book exhibit at the public library and excellent newspaper publicity. St. Petersburg, Fla., sent out 300 attractive invitations and had a representative from Judaism, Christianity and the Bahá’í Faith; Rochester, N.Y., had a Hindu, a Moslem, a Jew, a Christian, and a Bahá’í on their program, and each spoke of the teachings of his faith. The guest speakers were all foreign students from Bombay, India, Iran, Nigeria, and Israel.

Variety of Related Subjects Are Discussed

The communities that held public meetings on topics other than “The Fundamental Oneness of Religion” were: Birmingham, Ala., who had a Bahá’í speak on “Religion In The Space Age”; San Diego, Calif., panelists spoke on “Religious Unity—A Compromise or Revelation?”; the speaker for the communities of Santa Barbara and Ventura, Calif., spoke on “Keepers of the Flame”; West Miami, Fla., “World Religion,” with a book display in the Florida Light and Power Company; Cedar Falls and Castle Hill, Iowa, communities had a speaker on “Religion—The Hope of The World”; Waterloo, Iowa, had a tea and the Bahá’í speaker spoke on “One Infallible Authority”; Greater Boston, Mass., presented a program at the Adult Education Center with a member of the faculty of Temple Israel the guest speaker; Peoria, Ill., chose as their topic “The Purpose of World Religion”; the Quincy, Ill., Bahá’í speaker spoke on “A Universal Faith Established By The Return of Christ”; Roswell, N. Mex., had a public meeting on “True World Religion And What It Means To You and All Mankind”; the Niagara Falls, N.Y. speaker spoke on “This Is The Day For World Religion”; a Jew, Christian, and Bahá’í spoke on “The Challenge of Religion In Our Time” in Greensboro, N.C.; Barberton and Akron, Ohio, chose the topic “World Religion, What Is It?”; Salem, Ore., had two speakers, the non-Bahá’í spoke on “Panorama of World Religions” and the Bahá’í on the “Bahá’í Faith.”

Astoria, Ore., held a meeting on “Religious Unity”; Syracuse, N.Y., held a public meeting and the speakers were a Bahá’í and a native of Poona, India, who spoke on “Search for God”; Durham, N.C., presented a physicist, a child psychiatrist, and a Bahá’í who spoke on the topic: “The Atomic Mandate: Science and Religion are Equally Important”; Seattle and Spokane, Wash., “God’s Timetable for Religious Unity”; Tacoma, Wash., “Universal Religion To Unite The Hearts of Men”; Wauwatosa, Wisc., presented a Bahá’í speaker on “Journey In Space.”

Key West, Fla., reported a broadcast over a local radio station with a Bahá’í speaker on the “Birth of World Religion”; Burlington, Vt., reports announcements and an interview on the local radio station, as well as two window displays. Topeka, Kans., had a luncheon meeting; Boise, Idaho, had letters to the editor calling attention to World Religion Day and for what it stands; Decatur, Ill., called attention in their ad “Religion Unlimited,” and to Bahá’í books in the public library on the theme. Atlantic City, N.J., reports that they believe theirs was the first publicity on the Faith.

The children’s Bahá’í School in Maywood, Ill., had a program for their friends and families; the East Rochester, N.Y. Bahá’í Children’s School had a special World Religion Day program. An eleven year-old child conducted the meeting, and children from five to twelve participated in the program with prayers, songs, and the presentation of the art work on religious symbols done by the children in the second grade and explained by one of the older children. There was a colored movie on "The Religions In The Holy Land." The children served the refreshments and even the three year-olds assisted by passing the napkins.

Other communities which held public meetings on the "Fundamental Oneness of Religion" were: Jefferson County and Denver, Colo.; in California, Long Beach, Manhattan Beach, Redondo Beach, Oxnard, Redding, San Francisco, and Stockton; Indianapolis, Ind.; Colorado Springs, Colo., New Haven, Conn.; Des Moines, Iowa; South Bend, Ind., Baton Rouge, La., Port Huron, Mich., New Haven, Mich.; Butte, Mont., Yonkers, N.Y.; Minneapolis, Minn.; Lima, Ohio; Logan, Utah.

The topics were numerous, the types of observances many; we are only sorry that the reports were not complete enough to do justice to your efforts; nor have they all been received. However, we do know this, that because each one of you who had a part in this significant undertaking, this impact on the hearts and minds of the public which has been caused by our working together in unity on this occasion, will have its effect. World Religion Day continues to be the leading event to proclaim the Bahá'í Faith to the multitudes.

Central America and Mexico Communities
Hold Outstanding UN Day Observances

Bahá'í communities in several cities of Mexico and Central America have reported very good results from well-planned United Nations Day activities.

The Bahá'í Public Relations Committee of Tegucigalpa collaborated with the Student Council of the Inter-American Cultural Institute of that city in the UN Day Celebration. Nearly one hundred people, including representatives of the various diplomatic missions of the city, attended. According to its own request, the Bahá'í committee received no mention of its services, but the student group knew and unofficially gave publicity to the Bahá'ís.

The next Sunday, as a follow-up, the Bahá'í committee gave a party for the student committee and guests who had participated in the program. The chief of the U.S. Information Service, the Press Attaché, and other guests seemed deeply impressed by the relaxed atmosphere, as well as by the beauty and simplicity of the function.

The Guadalajara Bahá'í community reports an ambitious and highly successful celebration of UN Day. Before an audience including a representative of the Governor of the State of Jalisco, and professors of the University of Guadalajara, four speakers, including two Bahá'ís, one representing UNESCO and the United Press, and the other representing the "Confraternidad Intellectual Mexicana Americana" presented their topics. "Bahá'í Proposals for Revision of the United Nations Charter," and "Principles of the International

Low-Caste, Impoverished Rodiyas of Burma
Given Bahá'í Message and Gifts

An article appearing in the Colombo, Ceylon, newspaper acted as a stimulus for Colombo Bahá'ís and visiting Bahá'í friends from Rangoon, Burma, to travel sixty miles to a remote village to bring the Message of Bahá'u'lláh. The article referred to a branch of the Sinhalese people, known as Rodiyas, considered to be at the bottom of the cast system.

The Rodiyas live in poverty in the village of Diganwela. The nine families making up this village have very little to eat or wear, and range in age from infants to elderly people of seventy-five years. Gifts of food and clothing were distributed to them. There, gathered in an open space in front of a hut, Anver Cadr of Rangoon spoke to them about Bahá'u'lláh in the Sinhalese language. A Bahá'í with a Buddhist background explained about the second coming of the Buddha, referring to the condition of the world at present, and the need for a World Teacher to unite a divided world. Copies of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era in Sinhalese were presented, and a donation was made toward the collective fund for the welfare of their village.

The Local Spiritual Assembly of Colombo writes in the Bahá'í News Letter of India and Burma: "Finally assuring them that we would visit them often, we recited a prayer in Sinhalese and prepared to depart. But no, those kind souls would not let us go unless we partook of their young coconuts. At last we departed with a fervent hope that Bahá'u'lláh would shower His blessings on these souls."

Pioneers Open Goal City of Chitre in Panama

In June 1958 the National Teaching Committee of Panama chose the city of Chitre, Panama, as the goal for an assembly by Ridván 1959. In July six Bahá'ís from the Canal Zone community decided to make the 162 mile trip into the interior of Panama to visit this goal city.

After registering at the hotel, the six gathered in a room and said prayers for the city. Then they split into two groups and began to explore the possibilities. One group had not walked more than two blocks when they looked up and saw a little hardware store which bore the sign "La Nueva Era" (The New Era). They decided to take a picture of it. While they were focusing the camera, the owner came out and posed in front of the store for them. After the believers had introduced themselves they asked him why he happened to name his store "La Nueva Era." He explained that it is a new era, an age of freedom from human bondage. Of course he was the first contact made for the Faith there. It went easily from there on. Many people heard of Bahá'u'lláh on that first visit.

On October 18th and 19th the city celebrated the 110th anniversary of its founding, and three Bahá'ís who have settled there were serenaded as an official welcome to the city and had the honor of being officially invited to attend the fiesta by the president of the city council in person.

Regular firesides are being held every Saturday night, and the response to the cause is more than could possibly have been hoped for by any of those six who first went to Chitre to "plow the ground with their prayers."

First Recognition of Bahá'í Marriage in Canada Achieved in British Columbia

The first Certificate of Registration under the Marriage Act was issued to a Bahá'í assembly by the government of the Province of British Columbia on December 16, 1958, certifying that the chairman of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Vancouver is legally authorized to conduct marriages in that province.

This achievement of the first victory in the legalization of Bahá'í marriage in Canada is a cause of rejoicing by all Canadian Bahá'ís, as it was a goal dear to the heart of Shoghi Effendi.

Spread of Faith in Bolivia Proves Need For Pioneers in Western Hemisphere

On the high altiplano of the Andes live thousands of Indians, some in small cities, many on the plains or in the mountains. Less than three years ago, the mayor of one of the cantons in Bolivia, while in the capital, La Paz, walked past the Bahá'í Center, with its friendly sign, "Inquiries Invited." With his knock, the door opened to a surging spread of the Faith among this race, which both the Master and the beloved Guardian so often urged us to teach. In a few months he and his brother had entered the Cause.

Within a week, Andrés was saying: "This is what the Indian wants. He wants to find the Will of God. He doesn't like contention and fighting; he doesn't like drunken fiestas. He wants justice and education. He wants to obey the Will of God. This is what all the Indians need. This is what the whole world needs."

Already Andrés and Carmelo were telling other Indians of the Faith. By Ridván of 1957, seven months after their enrollment, the first assembly was established in Huanuni, their canton. And the teaching continued. The Indian Bahá'ís are teaching their brothers in many localities, walking the distances of two to five days journey. Already there are several groups, two more large enough to have assemblies this Ridván.

Greeting with joy the fulfillment of the beloved Guardian’s desire, the National Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay appeals for pioneers, “consecrated and detached Bahá’ís,” to live with the Indians “in order to consolidate the formation and functioning of these new groups and communities. This task is so important and the possibilities of reaping fruits are so enormous that we cannot let it go. Bolivia is like Africa and needs the same class of pioneers that are awakening that Negro continent. It is true that these pioneers should know at least a little Spanish in order to communicate with the more educated Indians.” (The Indian in Bolivia speaks Aymara or Quechua.)

Life on the altiplano is bleak and rugged. The Indians are colorful, and long for the opportunities to rise, culturally and spiritually. Teaching Activities at U. S. Colleges Reviewed by Bahá’í College Bureau

Bahá’í teaching efforts at colleges and universities have taken on many different forms, from formal meetings, to intimate personal conversations. The Bahá’í College Bureau has been attempting to help organize the former, stimulate the latter, and act as a clearinghouse for other activities. Here are a few examples of recent events:

Institutes on College Teaching were held at ten campuses across the nation — at Ohio U. at Athens, West Virginia State U. at Institute, Texas Christian U. at Fort Worth, the U. of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Stanford U. in Palo Alto, the U. of Washington at Seattle, the U. of Buffalo, the U. of Arizona at Tucson, Tulane U. in New Orleans, Harvard U. at Cambridge, and the U. of Wisconsin at Madison.

The agenda included a general review of Bahá’í activities at colleges and a discussion of specific local problems. John Ferraby’s book All Things Made New was reviewed as an aid in teaching the Faith in colleges. Public meetings were held at some of the colleges in conjunction with the institute with a representative of the College Bureau as a speaker. An evaluation of the institute by the participants concluded the meeting.

The teaching experience of the students in all parts of the country was very similar: it indicates that public activities are important to arouse interest, but personal contact, based on individual excellence, is by far the most effective teaching method. Participation in various interfaith activities is an excellent means for making contacts. Experience has shown that publicity based on worthwhile activities is not only free — activities are news — but also much more effective than paid advertisements featuring, for example, pictures and quotations.

A key factor in the success of teaching efforts is continuity, such as regularly scheduled firesides and deepening classes. A student’s life is an active one and there is only a limited amount of time for extra-curricular activities. The neighboring communities can do much to help the students with the physical arrangements of such activities. The availability of a Bahá’í home where meetings or classes can be regularly scheduled helps to make these activities successful.

The reports received by the College Bureau indicate that the institutes filled a real need and should be held at intervals. At this time the bureau is formulating plans for another institute to be held early in May, perhaps the weekend of May 9. This will provide an opportunity for an evaluation of current activities and the formulation of future plans.

As the concluding event in the Centennial Celebration of student religious activities, the University of Michigan sponsored a National Consultative Conference in November 1958, to which Bahá’í representatives were invited. This was the first national conference in our times to which representatives from all sections of the country were invited to plan the teaching of religion on campuses and to discuss the religious life of their students.

Six hundred faculty teachers of religion, religious workers, personnel workers, administrators, and representatives of national educational and religious organizations were present. The Bahá’í representatives were Dr. Manucher Javird, Dr. Hamilton Miss, and Dr. Otto Zmeskal, together with Mrs. Marie Esterer and Mrs. Helen McClusky. As a result of their participation in the discussions and informal talks during the three-day meeting, many people of significant standing in the academic community had a favorable contact with Bahá’ís, which is likely to influence their future attitudes toward Bahá’í student activities. The delegates felt that participation in this meeting was of considerable value and expressed their appreciation.

The first meeting with the Indians of Nicaragua, on November 16, 1953, at Momimbe. All are not pure-blooded Indians, but they maintain themselves separately in this area near the city of Masaya, where Mignon and Donald Witzel are pioneering. Meetings are continuing at regular intervals.
of the support given them by the Ann Arbor community.

Religious Emphasis Week is held on many campuses and offers splendid opportunities for Bahá’í participation. During the past year, the verse “Say: All were created by God,” submitted by the Bahá’í students at Ohio University, was used as the theme of their celebration. Students at Arkansas State College at Flagstaff participated in “Religion in Life” week with Dr. Nasrat’olláh Rassekh as speaker. Iowa State College is planning a Religious Emphasis Week during February 1959. Mrs. Velma Sherrill, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, will be the Bahá’í representative. Students at Montana State University have joined in the Religious Emphasis Week activities, with Mrs. Hazel Mori as featured speaker. The newly formed Bahá’í Club at San Jose State College co-sponsored the “Religion in Life” week there.

A very successful teaching effort was made by Winston Evans at Anderson College in Indiana. Although there were no Bahá’í students enrolled at Anderson, Mr. Evans was invited by the Social Science Department to hold a two-day seminar on the Faith, which was received with much interest. An equally successful series of talks was given by Paul Pettit at Hendrix College in Conway, Ark. By invitation of the local chapter of the Methodist Student Movement, Mr. Pettit spent an entire day with this group discussing the Faith, which the president of the group termed “the most interesting religion” they had yet studied. (See Bahá’í News for February.)

Several new Bahá’í Clubs were founded this year: Cornell University, San Jose State College, Palmer School of Chiropractic, University of Wisconsin, and Utah State College all have new Clubs. There are, however, several existing Clubs which are in danger of losing their constitution owing to a lack of new students, particularly the Clubs at the University of Michigan and at Northwestern University. The enrollment of Bahá’í students at these schools would help to maintain these important achievements.

Administratively, the Bureau has compiled a file of all Bahá’í students and a listing of the colleges where there are any Bahá’í activities. A Speaker’s Bureau with a membership of over 100 has been formed to help with college teaching all over the country, and an up-to-date record of these activities is maintained. To keep these records meaningful so that they may serve as a basis for coordinated teaching efforts, the College Bureau is wholly dependent on the cooperation of those directly engaged in this work at the colleges. We therefore urge all of the believers to keep us informed, to let us know of their teaching problems and to share with us their successes. Only in this way can the Bureau perform a useful function.

Teaching the Faith in Norway

A pioneer in Tromsø wrote the following letter which expresses important points of view for the teaching work:

“One of the many requirements which a Bahá’í faces when he enters a country just beginning to build its administrative order, is the fact that he represents the administrative order as long as he is the only Bahá’í in the entire area. Today, in a country like England, one is never far from a spiritual assembly or a group, and every new Bahá’í is slowly led into the existing organization; no one expects him to know everything at once.

“In Norway every new Bahá’í has not only the responsibility of helping to build up the administrative order, but must also teach his new Faith to others as soon as possible in order to pass on to others the divine grace vouchsafed to him. Certainly it is wise to absorb the teachings slowly and carefully, but when you are confronted by someone who says: ‘Please tell me about your wonderful new Faith,’ there is no holding back! A pioneer has had the opportunity to learn his Faith in company with others (later he wishes he had learned more) and can recall his own experiences, but a new Norwegian Bahá’í here in the North must teach in order to learn.

“The thought that the most diverse people, all with their own ideas and personalities, alone have the responsibility for carrying the personal teaching work, would be frightening if it were not God’s work. Actually only one Bahá’í knows about the wonder that lies in maintaining the unity of the Bahá’í Faith. Of course mistakes are made, but the comprehensive, astounding picture of unity and the immovable goal before one’s eyes is, from hour to hour, gaining in stature and is daily being fulfilled by new Bahá’ís to whom recognition (of the Faith) has been granted. The pioneers have a task before them which is not simple, but the Bahá’ís who take their first wavering steps under the guidance of the pioneer are sure of my great admiration and unending praise. Through their efforts the task of those who follow is made much simpler.”

Teaching Congress held at San Miguel Aliende, Mexico, on October 31 to November 3, 1958.
NEWS BRIEFS

An international school under the auspices of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Greater Antilles, held in Port au Prince from December 26 to 29, 1958, was attended by Bahá'ís from Cuba, Dominican Republic, Jamaica, and Haiti. Many expressed deep appreciation for the understanding that they gathered from courses on the Guardian's Six-Year Teaching Plan, the Covenant, and Bahá'í Administration, taught by W. A. W. Mitchell, Sheila Rice-Wray, and Randolph Fitz-Henley.

A half-hour of free television time for a presentation of the Bahá'í Faith was secured by a member of the Avondale, Ariz., Bahá'í group through the cooperation of the Phoenix Council of Churches. The telecast included the reading of prayers, slides of the Shrines and gardens at Haifa and of the House of Worship in Wilmette, and a talk on the Teachings.

The National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska has announced that the hard-to-fill goal of Metlakatla in southeastern Alaska has been settled by William Adams, who had established a business there. This is an all-Indian village, and the home of his wife.

The first Eskimo believer, Peter Singyke, a youth, has been enrolled in the Faith. He resides on Baranoff Island.

All Which Ye Potentially Possess

Know thou that all men have been created in the nature made by God, the Guardian, the Self-Subsisting. Unto each one hath been prescribed a pre-ordained measure, as decreed in God's mighty and guarded Tablets. All that which ye potentially possess can, however, be manifested only as a result of your own volition.

The above words of Bahá'u'lláh are reassuring; but we must read carefully and concentrate on the last line of the quotation, for there we see that the responsibility is put squarely upon us.

BAHA'I IN THE NEWS

A publication of the University of California lists gifts made to the University from January 1, 1957, to December 31, 1957. On page 43 the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Los Angeles appears on the roster of donors.

Presbyterian Life, August 10, 1957, has an article entitled "Iranian Students form Unique Training School" in which the methods used to convert Islamic youth to Christianity are reported. The illustration shows a minister talking with six youths, the caption being "Protestant Minister interprets Islam and Bahá'ism in more advanced class."

La Maison, September 1958, an illustrated monthly magazine published in Brussels, published a photograph of the House of Worship in Wilmette and a photograph of the design selected for the House of Worship to be constructed in Europe.

On page 86 of the book Jesus Compared by Charles S. Braden, the following brief reference to the Faith has been noted: “On the basis of numbers, the Bahá'í Faith, for example, might with equal right be considered one of the great religions, and on the basis of its worldwide spread, much more so, for the Sikh faith has made no effort to propagate itself outside of India and is to be found, apart from India, only where Sikhs have gone as immigrants.”

Newspaper clippings recently received reveal much local interest in and acceptance of the teachings and activities of the Faith.

Fort Wayne News Sentinel, May 31, ran a feature article entitled “Bahá'í Faith Gains Internationally; Successive Crusade Major Factor.”

On September 20 Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette also published a feature article illustrated by a photograph of a meeting at the local Bahá'í Center. The article was entitled “Bahá'í, 'Faith of Unity,' Growing in Mid-West.”

An article in the Boston Herald July 13 on the National Jamboree of Scouts held at Valley Forge, contains a brief reference to the religious services held for Boy Scouts of the Bahá'í Faith. The same article (AP) also appeared in the Boston Daily Record of the same date.

In the section entitled “Letters to the Editor” in the Chicago Daily News on October 7, the featured letter was written by Mary Konishi, a believer, to correct certain religious views expressed by a Daily News columnist.

The Daily Report of Ontario and Upland, Calif., on September 13 ran an extensive article entitled “Student to Devote Life to Expounding of Bahá'í.” The student in question is Hushidar Motlagh, a Persian believer enrolled as a student in Chaffey College.

Described as the “best magazine publicity ever published on the Faith in Argentina” was the three-page article appearing in the July 31 issue of Mundo Argentino, with accurate references to the Faith and photographs of ‘Abdu'l-Bahá, the Bahá'í Temple, and a group of believers gathered in the Bahá'í Center of Buenos Aires. The caption reads: “Bahá'í, an administrative religion for the peace of the world.” This article is the first in a series of reports on the religious communities of Argentina under the general heading: “How God is adored in Buenos Aires.”

The St. Louis Post Dispatch dated Friday, December 12, devoted nearly half a page to a feature story entitled “It's a Small World Romance in St. Louis.” The author presents a vivid human interest report of a Bahá'í marriage conducted in Glendale for Dr. Maarten Nieuwenhzeen of Amsterdam, Netherlands, and Miss Farah Eghrari, Bahá’í from Tíhrán. Their meeting was brought about through an unusual combination of circumstances, as the author recounts. Of greatest interest to believers is the explanation of Bahá’í marriage given the reporter by Mrs. Velma Sherill.

Bahá’í Author Publishes Book of Poems

Gertrude W. Robinson has published a collection of her poems under the title For Fruitage of Tomorrow in a limited edition. All are imbued with the religious spirit, and some refer directly to the Manifestation, or to a Bahá’í institution—the Temple and Davison School.

The author is contributing copies to the libraries of our Summer Schools, but is not offering any for sales distribution.

I Am a Bahá’í, By Guy Murchie. This interesting exposition on the history and teachings of the Bahá’í Faith first appeared as an article in the Chicago Sunday Tribune Magazine Section a few months ago. A report on it was published in the September issue of Bahá’í News, page 6.

Many people visited the Bahá’í House of Worship following its publication in the Tribune, and telephoned or wrote the Bahá’í National Center for information, perhaps more so than any other similar piece of publicity that has appeared in the Chicago area.

In addition to being informative, this article, written by a well-known American writer, who is author of the Book of the Month Club selection Song of the Sky, has a unique approach that makes it unusually interesting and appealing to most readers.

The reprint has been prepared in large quantity for wide distribution, particularly to Bahá’í mailing lists. The format, designed by Conrad Heleniak, a Bahá’í of Green Bay, Wisc., facilitates the simplest, most inexpensive handling and mailing. It opens out to four pages, size 8½ by 11 inches, but is folded to 8½ by 3½, with one side blank for addressing. It can be sealed with sticker, stapled, or mailed in other ways. A return postcard may be inserted on the inside.

Committees should inquire of their post office for information on third-class bulk mailing rates, which are very inexpensive.

A RISE, and proclaim unto the entire creation the tidings that He Who is the All-Merciful hath directed His steps towards the Ridván and entered it. Guide, then, the people unto the garden of delight which God hath made the Throne of His Paradise. We have chosen thee to be our most mighty Trumpet, whose blast is to signalize the resurrection of all mankind.

Say: This is the Paradise on whose foliage the wine of utterance hath imprinted the testimony: “He that was hidden from the eyes of men is revealed, girded with sovereignty and power!” This is the Paradise, the rustling of whose leaves proclaims: “0 ye that inhabit the heavens and the earth! There hath appeared what hath never previously appeared. He Who, from everlasting, had concealed His Face from the sight of creation is now come.” From the whispering breeze that wafteth amidst its branches there cometh the cry: “He Who is the sovereign Lord of all is made manifest. The Kingdom is God’s,” while from its streaming waters can be heard the murmur: “All eyes are gladdened, for He Whom none hath beheld, Whose secret no one hath discovered, hath lifted the veil of glory, and uncovered the countenance of Beauty.”

Within this paradise, and from the heights of its loftiest chambers, the Maids of Heaven have cried out and shouted: “Rejoice, ye dwellers of the realms above, for the fingers of Him Who is the Ancient of Days are ringing, in the name of the All-Glorious, the Most Great Bell, in the midmost heart of the heavens. The hands of bounty have borne round the cup of everlasting life. Approach, and quaff your fill. Drink with healthy relish, 0 ye that are the very incarnations of longing, ye who are the embodiments of vehement desire.”

This is the Day whereon He Who is the Revealer of the names of God hath stepped out of the Tabernacle of glory, and proclaimed unto all who are in the heavens and all who are on the earth: “Put away the cups of Paradise and all the life-giving waters they contain, for lo, the people of Bahá have entered the blissful abode of the Divine Presence, and quaffed the wine of reunion, from the chalice of the beauty of their Lord, the All-Possessing, the Most High.”

Distinguished Foreign Officials Visit Bahá'í House of Worship

By special appointment made by the United States Department of State, a group of ten members of the Senate and House of Deputies of Argentina, with three of our own government officials, visited the Bahá'í House of Worship in Wilmette on February 28. Great interest was shown both in the Temple and the exhibits, and many questions were asked about all aspects of the Faith.

Another special visitor, on March 4, was The Honorable Dwarka Nath Chatterjee, Political Minister of India, recently arrived at the Indian Embassy in Washington. Mr. Chatterjee also asked many questions, and was particularly interested to hear about the strength and activities of the Faith in India.

He was accompanied by James P. Ince, organizing chairman of the third annual session of Evanston, Ill., Inside UN, in which the Bahá'ís of Evanston and neighboring communities are participating both as one of the sponsoring organizations and members of one of the delegations in the general assembly. Mr. Chatterjee was the principal speaker at the first plenary session of the organization.

Hand of the Cause Dr. Giachery Visits Greater Antilles

Hand of the Cause Dr. Ugo Giachery, who has been on a tour of Latin America and the Greater Antilles, arrived in Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, on January 30, 1959, from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

He was met on his arrival by the chairman and acting secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Greater Antilles, W. A. W. Mitchell; by Mrs. Sheila Rice-Wray, the national treasurer; and by Rafael Benzan, chairman of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Ciudad Trujillo.

On his first night there, Dr. Giachery showed his slides of the Bahá'í Shrines and other buildings on Mt. Carmel and of 'Akka, and then addressed the believers.

A visit to the editorial offices of the newspaper El Caribe by Dr. Giachery and Mr. Mitchell resulted in an excellent article and photograph on the purpose of Dr. Giachery's tour of the Greater Antilles, and of the spread of the Faith throughout the world.

February 1 he visited Santiago, about 140 miles away. Two meetings were held, one with the entire community and the other for the showing of the slides of the Holy Land, and then returned to Ciudad Trujillo for another meeting with that community.

Dr. Giachery, accompanied by the national assembly chairman and treasurer, left by airplane on February 2 for Port-au-Prince, Haiti, where a meeting of the assembly was held for two days. He addressed a public meeting on the first night, and showed the Holy Land slides on the second night. Both meetings were well attended by believers and their friends.

On February 5 Dr. Giachery and Mr. Mitchell left for Jamaica, and that evening he spoke to the Bahá'í children of Kingston, and afterward the adult believers.

The next day he spoke at a public meeting in the Lecture Hall at the Institute of Jamaica, and on February 7 he joined the Kingston Bahá'ís in celebrating the Feast of Dominion. He later showed them his colored slides.

Cuba was the next stop on his tour, where he visited the communities of Havana and Marianao from February 8 to 11.

Dr. Giachery returned to Kingston on February 11, and continued on his trip to Latin America.

Endowment in Vientiane Purchased

A piece of land measuring 1000 square meters in area has been purchased in Vientiane, Laos, by the pioneer there, Dr. H. Taed, and donated to the Local Spiritual Assembly.
Baha'i United Nations Observers Attend Economic Commission in Ethiopia

The three Baha'i observers at the UN Economic Commission for Africa: Ali Nakhjavani, Gila M. Bahta, and Charles B. Hassan.

Thanks to the unremitting efforts of the United Nations Committee of the American National Assembly, the International Baha'i Community was granted permission to send three official observers to the first session of the Economic Commission for Africa held from December 29, 1958, to January 6, 1959, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Gila Bahta and Charles Hassan of Addis Ababa, and Ali Nakhjavani (substituting for Philip Hainsworth, appointed observer unable to attend) of Kampala, were the accredited Baha'i representatives at this important Commission called by the United National Economic and Social Council for the purpose of consulting upon effective means of extending economic aid to the countries and territories of Africa.

Although the Baha'i observers had no consultative capacity at the Commission, the fact that they had been granted official status as observers provided them with the invaluable opportunity of meeting and discussing the affairs of the commission and of introducing the Faith to the representatives of many governments and non-governmental organizations present. In this way, it has been possible for the first time in Africa to reinforce the ties of the binding of the Baha'i World Community to the United Nations, one of the goals of the Ten-Year Plan.

Not only was the United Nations Economic and Social Council contacted by the American Baha'i United Nations Committee, but the Baha'i observers in Addis Ababa succeeded in meeting and discussing the Faith with representatives to the Commission from Belgium, Ethiopia, France, Ghana, Guinea, Liberia, Morocco, Sudan, Britain, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Gambia, Kenya, Zanzibar, Tanganyika, Uganda, China, Israel, Japan, Holland, and the United States. In a number of cases they found that the members of the Commission already knew of the Faith, had met

Hall of the Parliament Building in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, where the UN Economic Commission for Africa was held.
Baha'is, and that the representatives from America and Britain had actually helped personally when their governments had protested to the Persian Government about the recent persecution of the Persian Baha'is. A short message of good wishes in writing was sent by the Baha'is observers to all the delegates. Many verbal acknowledgments and expressions of acknowledgment were received. The Baha'i representatives attended two official functions held in honor of the Commission. One was at the Palace of His Imperial Majesty, Haile Selassie I, where Ali Nakhjavani was presented to the Emperor. The second was a party given by the Lord Mayor of Adis Ababa. The next session of the Economic Conference for Africa will be held in 1960 in Tangier, Morocco, to which it is hoped Baha'i observers will also be sent.

Thirteen Language Translation Goals.
Eight Others Achieved by Australia

One of the remaining two language translation goals of the Ten-Year Crusade for Australia has been achieved with a translation of Baha'i literature into Anenityum, the Australian National Spiritual Assembly has announced.

Of the fourteen language translations assigned to Australia, only Bentuni remains unachieved. Assistance from pioneers west of the area of Steenkool, in the far western Netherlands New Guinea, where this language is spoken, has been sought, but a translator has not been found.

However, there have been eight extra language translations attained beside the goal assignments. The Bogotu translation, achieved by the Solomon Island community this year, was placed on the Guardian's map of crusade achievements just before his passing.

Two items of literature have been published in Tongan, an introductory pamphlet and a small prayer book. In the process of publication is a book of selections from Some Answered Questions, and almost ready for printing is a pamphlet on the Baha'i teachings on immortality.

In view of the fact that Tongans are all literate, and the Bible is the only book that has been translated into Tongan, the publication and distribution of Baha'i literature in the Tongan language becomes a most important means for spreading the Faith there.

Following is a complete list of Australian goal language translations:

Group of Baha'is attending the nineteenth New Zealand Summer School held at the Hastratu'l-Quds in Auckland on January 1-9, 1959.
Nineteenth New Zealand Summer School
Attended by Many Baha'is and Friends

The nineteenth Baha'i Summer School of New Zealand was held at the National Ha'iratu'l-Quds in Auckland on January 1-9, 1959.

There were two morning sessions, at which a variety of Baha'i subjects were discussed. On two occasions outside speakers gave talks during the evening sessions. Mr. Blakely, a Baha'i pioneer from Tonga Island, showed slides of Tonga, and others of interest were also shown. The Youth Group entertained the friends on the last evening.

Altogether sixty-five Baha'is and their friends attended the school.

Unity Day was held on January 3, when all were guests at lunch and an afternoon tea. After luncheon the friends assembled to hear a talk on some aspects of unity by Mrs. Blakely.

Hand of the Cause Collis Featherstone was in New Zealand during the sessions and spent some time at the school, although he was engaged consulting with the Maori Teaching Committee.

Alaska Assembly Sponsors Four Conferences to Consult on Message from Hands of Cause

The Alaskan National Spiritual Assembly sponsored four conferences in January to consult on the November 30 message from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land. The essential purpose of the meetings was to consult on the unaccomplished goals of the Ten-Year Crusade and the position of the individual believer in relation to them.

The conference in the Fairbanks-Tanana Valley area, with Mrs. Kathryn Alio in charge, stressed the meaning of sacrifice and the true meaning of the privilege of giving. It was pointed out that sacrifice is not made up of surplus funds and energy, but rather needed funds and energy.

The Anchorage-Spenard conference, with Richard Mereness as chairman, attracted Baha'is from Bethel, Seward, and the Matanuska Valley. Earnest consultation was held on the "staggering responsibilities and blessed privileges" facing each individual believer as pointed out in the Hands' message. Reference was made to the Guardian's words in Baha'i Administration, p. 57, wherein he states that only to the extent "to which our own inner life and private character mirror forth" the eternal principles of Baha'u'llah will the Cause be triumphant.

Robert Moul represented the National Assembly at conferences at Ketchikan and Juneau. The Ketchikan conference traced the progress of the Faith during the past five and a half years, emphasizing this year as the crucial turning point. The needs of the National Fund were also stressed.

In Juneau, the entire membership of the Juneau, Auke Bay, and Douglas communities convened. The discussion was spirited, each person present taking part.

Increasing Number of U. S. Communities
Hold Human Rights Day Observances

A complete report on American Baha'i observances of the tenth anniversary of the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights on December 10, 1958, has been received from the U.S. United Nations Committee, supplementing the reports published in the February issue of Baha'i News.

Twenty-six communities reported their observances to this committee. Most meetings were well-attended, and excellent publicity was received. It is apparent that an increasing number of Baha'i communities are finding cooperation with the United Nations in observing this and other special occasions not only demonstrates our sympathy with their efforts, but also provides excellent opportunities to make contacts and to exemplify the Baha'i principles.

Ezeiza and Mogadiscio Hold Annual Summer Schools

Bahá’ís of Ezeiza, Argentina, and Mogadiscio, Somaliland, again held their annual Bahá’í Summer Schools, and have reported good attendance in a spiritual atmosphere of study and deepening in the Faith.

The Ezeiza International Summer School was held on February 7-15, 1959, with Bahá’ís attending from Argentina, Paraguay, and Uruguay; there were also interested contacts present. Among the courses were God Passes By, Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh, and Bahá’í Administrations.

There were many hours of study and consultation on related topics, including the messages from the Hands of the Cause. All classes were held outdoors under the spreading trees, and there was apparent a sense of deepening together in the realities of the Faith.

On February 9 a group of nineteen students went to the grave of May Maxwell in Quilmes Cemetery, where a commemorative service was held, recalling “the first martyr to rest in the Western Hemisphere, the star-servant of Bahá’u’lláh, and beloved handmaiden of the Center of the Covenant.” An article on this event was later submitted to the British newspaper in Buenos Aires, the Standard, to call attention to this historic site in Argentina.

The theme of the fourth annual Mogadiscio Summer School was a quotation from Bahá’u’lláh’s Tablet to the Shah of Persia referring to the unconquerable power of the Faith of God, and man’s duty to become an instrument of God’s Will. The talks on history, Bahá’í teachings, and administration were given from this viewpoint.

It was a united, happy school, and showed signs of greater maturity. Everyone was happy to have Iraq Yeganeh present, not only for himself, but because it seemed that in some ways he filled the absence of Cyrus Samandari, who had attended all previous schools.

Gratitude to the beloved Guardian was expressed and felt by all, as it was through his wonderful letter of encouragement after the first summer school that the Mogadiscio Bahá’ís found the stimulus to hold the school annually, even when the chances for success had not seemed bright.

British NSA Invites London Visitors to Assist in Teaching Work

The National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles extends an invitation to believers who go to London in order to visit the Guardian’s last resting place, to arrange if possible to spend a few additional days in London assisting in the teaching work. Believers able to do so are requested to notify the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles the dates they can devote to teaching so that meetings can be arranged.

The address of the National Spiritual Assembly of the British Isles is: Mr. John Ferraby, 27 Rutland Gate, London S. W. 7, England.

Brotherhood Theme Presented to the White House

Through the Bahá’í Group of Athens, Ohio, the National Spiritual Assembly of the U.S. received a copy of the material prepared by the Campus Religious Council of Ohio State University during Brotherhood Week, including the agreement to use the phrase—“Say: All are created by God,” as making for the lessening of racial, religious and national tensions. This phrase was chosen after consideration of the University President’s challenge to find a moral equivalent of the atomic bomb.

The Athens Bahá’ís proposed to submit this phrase to President Eisenhower for use as a message to be beamed to the world by the satellite launched during the Christmas season.

The National Assembly approved this plan, but since contacts with heads of governments can only be made by the National Assembly itself, a covering letter was written and the material presented at the White House.

Through Frederick Fox, special assistant in the White House, a letter was written to the National Assembly on February 6 expressing thanks for the Ohio State University material on Brotherhood Week, enclosing copy of letter written by Mr. Fox to the President of Ohio State University Campus Religious Council, and also a copy of President Eisenhower’s message prepared for National Brotherhood Week.

Kenya Holds Teacher Training School

The first seven-day school in Kenya was held under the auspices of the Regional Teacher Training Committee at Namwela Market near Kimilili in western Kenya, from December 28 to January 4. Regular classes were conducted by Irene Bennett of Nairobi on administration; Mary Collison on Bahá’í History, and Rex Collison on Bahá’í laws and social teachings. Many written tests were given and prizes awarded for exemplary work.
Visit to Pipil Indian Village in El Salvador Highlights
 Central American International Summer School Sessions

Fourteen Central American pioneers from Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala, British Honduras, and El Salvador united during their vacations in a most inspiring four-day International Summer School, sponsored by the Central American Teaching Committee, held at the Hotel del Lago at Lake Coatepeque, El Salvador.

The school was divided into classes on two themes: "Teaching in the World Crusade," with eight separate subjects discussed, and "Standards of Bahá'í Life," with three topics.

An invitation was extended to anyone who wished to share in the early devotions on the lakefront at six o'clock in the cold dawn. Everyone participated, every morning! The spiritual power was tremendous, forming a beautiful base for each day's work, in the study classes and consultation.

The closing session brought deeply inspiring anecdotes of 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and accounts by Edith McLaren and Louise Caswell of their trips to visit the Guardian in Haifa.

The school was an experience rich in all its aspects; the spiritual sustenance was profound, and the great joy of sharing in study preparation for forming the national assemblies cannot be overstated.

Visit to Pipil Indian Village

One of the outstanding activities of the school was a visit to the Pipil Indian village of Izalco, about two hours travel from Lake Coatepeque.

After the arrival of the visiting Bahá'ís by chartered bus, the Indian friends gathered at the Bahá'í Center. They recognized instantly the sincerity in the love extended to them, and gave, in return, unstintingly of their friendliness. All of the visiting Bahá'ís were presented, and each said a few loving words while the cacique (chief) responded with a warm welcome.

A happy note was furnished by one of the most promising Bahá'í contacts in Santa Ana, Ramón Turush, who is a nephew of the cacique, Don Félix. He has been educated as a teacher and musician, and has the Indian gift of spiritual perception.

He had made several trips to Izalco with the Bahá'ís, and gladly accepted when asked to say a few words to his own people in this humble village. To the complete surprise and great delight of the Bahá'ís present, he not only extended loving words, but launched immediately into a most enthusiastic and deeply sincere statement of his admiration for the Bahá'ís teachings and for the Bahá'ís themselves. His words had a powerful simplicity.

Then the Teachings were mentioned directly to the Indian friends for the first time by Artemus Lamb. His few words were simple, sincere, and powerful, terminating with brief quotations from the Guardian on the place the Indian has in the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh. His words were received with an intent interest.

Don Félix had brought his Indian marimba band, and they added gaiety with their lovely music. The musical program also included songs by some of the visiting Bahá'ís. All the while many other Izalceños were outside, looking through the windows and doors, charmed by the gaiety and loving companionship expressed.

It was a tremendous experience for everyone, and it was difficult not to weep for joy. All hearts were very full, and all were reluctant to say goodbye. The waiting friends who could not come in were promised that the Bahá'ís would return soon, and would arrange a program for everyone.
First Bahá'í Winter School of Egypt Held in Cairo

The Bahá'ís of Egypt had the privilege of holding their first Bahá'í Winter School at the Hazíratu’l-Quds in Cairo on January 29 to February 4, 1959.

Morning sessions were assigned for study of the following subjects: "History of the Bahá'í Faith," "Bahá'í Laws," "Teaching the Faith," "The Unfoldment of Divine Civilization," "The Administrative Order of Bahá'u'lláh," and "The Bahá'í Community."

Evenings were spent in a period of general discussion of Bahá'í subjects, and in social entertainment. A farewell party was given on the last evening, when the importance of the Bahá'í school was emphasized. It was reiterated that the Guardian attached great importance to these Bahá'í institutions, and that with the establishment of the first Bahá'í winter school in Egypt the confirmations of the Blessed Beauty would assist the Bahá'í community to render greater service to the goals prescribed by the Guardian under the Ten-Year Crusade.

With a new consecration to the love of the beloved Guardian, the Tablet of Ahmad was chanted at this meeting, praying for the members of the community to arise with a new determination in the service of the Faith.

Nine German and Austrian Cities Observe World Religion Day

Eight cities in Germany and one in Austria celebrated World Religion Day this year, with all reporting that the meetings were especially successful and well-attended by the public.

Speakers at all of the German meetings spoke on a theme taken from the Book of Isaiah: "The Fruit of Justice Will Be Peace." Frankfurt, Stuttgart, Hannover, Karlsruhe, Nurnberg, Cologne, Freiburg, and Munich participated in this observance.

The Vienna, Austria, meeting presented Jewish, Buddhist, Protestant, Old-Catholic, Liberal-Catholic, Moslem, and Bahá'í speakers, all stressing the belief that love and justice must be the cornerstone of all religious effort.

Native Chief is Host to First Bahá'í Summer School in Samoa

The first Bahá'í Summer School in the Samoan Islands was held at Siumu, Upolu, on December 25-28, 1958. Arrangements were made by the Local Spiritual Assembly of Apia, Mrs. Lilian Ala'i, the assembly secretary, has submitted the following report on this historic school:

On the morning of December 25 the truck which had been hired for transportation went from village to village picking up friends and equipment until at last, overflowing, it turned down the cross-island road to Siumu, to the accompaniment of songs, laughter, and the music of ukuleles. Siumu was reached around mid-day after three flat tires, and there we were greeted by Chief Atanoa, who had kindly placed his two-story home and two additional fales at our disposal. His home was beautifully decorated in our honor, and the assistance and kindness he showered upon us during our stay at Siumu greatly added to the success of the school.

Before the opening of the school the Bahá'í men attended a welcome kava ceremony given by Chief Atanoa and other chiefs of the village, while the ladies prepared food to be shared by all. The remainder of the afternoon was given over to settling in and making arrangements for cooking and bathing, etc. The school was opened by devotions in the evening, which was followed by an explanation of the purpose of the summer school, the outlining of the program and the setting up of rosters for devotions, cooking, etc., for the next day.

Adult classes discussed the formation, duties, and powers of an assembly, brief discussions on national assemblies and the Universal House of Justice, the Suva Convention in Ridván 1959, and the method of the election of delegates and their duties. This also led on to the Samoan Two-Year Plan and the determination of the accomplishment of additional assemblies in the Samoan Islands. All sessions were followed by question and answer periods. Chief Atanoa attended several of the sessions and asked leading questions about the Faith and its principles. Although the program provided for leisure hours, these seemed to become discussion periods with contacts who asked questions on the Bible and received the Bahá'ís answers thereto.

As twelve Bahá'í children attended the School, special morning and afternoon classes were arranged for them covering God and His Messengers, Bahá'í prayers and songs, and the Bahá'í Child's A.B.C.

On the day of our departure Chief Atanoa presented the school with a roast pig, and we in turn gave a feast for him and his family and some other village chiefs, during which we thanked Chief Atanoa for all that he had done for us.

This was our first Summer School. Thirty-four people, including twelve children, had attended, and it was unanimously agreed that it had been a joyous and instructive occasion. Its success was due to the whole-hearted cooperation and unity of the friends. From it we have gained much experience and closer bonds with one another.
Many Groups Hear Auxiliary Board Member During Brotherhood Week at Baton Rouge

The scheduled visit of Mrs. Florence V. Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause, to Baton Rouge, La., coincided with Brotherhood Week, and the Bahá'ís made a special effort to publicize the Bahá'í teachings on the oneness of mankind.

George B. Galinkin, correspondent of the group, reported that on the very day the public meeting was announced in the local press as a “Brotherhood Day Program” sponsored by the Bahá'ís, the same newspapers carried a statement by the District Attorney that “racially integrated gatherings such as meetings held recently by the American Friends Service Committee do not violate Louisiana law because they qualify as ‘religious functions.’” This article concerned a religious institute sponsored by the American Friends, and gave the address which was also the address of the meeting announced by the Bahá'ís. After defining the segregation laws, the District Attorney quoted the following from the applicable statute: “None of the provisions of this apply to religious gatherings, services or functions.”

As a result of this unexpected publicity, the Bahá'í meeting was the largest ever held in Baton Rouge, with twenty-eight persons attending, sixteen of whom were not Bahá'ís, nine of them being Negroes. Of these nine five came from the newspaper announcement.

The day following the public meeting, Mrs. Mayberry addressed two classes of students at Southern University (Negro), one of seventy-one students and the other thirty-two. This was the first time a Bahá'í had ever spoken at this university. A Negro contact had obtained the invitation for Mrs. Mayberry to speak through the Dean of the School of Sociology, who later expressed his desire to study the Bahá'í Faith.

On the preceding Friday Mrs. Mayberry spoke to the Hillel (Jewish) Foundation at Louisiana State University. This was the first time that a Bahá'í had spoken on this campus also. Fifteen Jewish students were present. The program was scheduled to last one hour, but the students asked questions for an additional hour and a half.

Following this meeting a student from Pan-American House (South American students) asked if they could have a Bahá'í speaker during Religious Emphasis Week; one student of journalism offered his services to the Bahá'ís regarding future publicity, and three non-Bahá'í students and two Negro contacts attended a follow-up fireside.

Besides meetings with Bahá'ís and with contacts, Mrs. Mayberry also spoke on the Negro radio station and made a tape recording which was played a few days later on another station.

Since Baton Rouge is a goal city, this eventful week has done much to encourage and aid the local Bahá'ís towards the early achievement of their aims.

Mauritius Island Forms Eight Assemblies in Four Years. Expects More This Ridván

When she responded to the Guardian’s appeal at the outside of the Ten-Year Crusade, set forth at the Chicago Intercontinental Conference in 1953, Ottilie Rhein knew that she was destined for the far-off island of Mauritius. Searching in vain for information about her goal, she had to fall back on the encyclopedia, which gave her only a summary sketch. Although she was German by birth, and had lived in America for many years, the Bahá’í Faith called her to the tropics!

East of Madagascar, in the blue waters of the southern sea, the island of Mauritius, called “the star and key of the Indian Ocean,” was the place where this miracle was to be performed.

Ottilie Rhein arrived there in December 1954, lived first at the Park Hotel, and then at the Residence Club of Phoenix. A month later she settled at Belle Rose, which would be, henceforth, a center of attraction for interested friends that would soon become the first adherents to the Cause.

At this crossroad of races, where mingle streams of people from China, India, Africa, and Europe, and where each guards jealously its traditions, customs, and manners, Mauritius lends itself with difficulty to a religion that would fuse, into a homogeneous whole, the qualities that two centuries of everyday intermingling had not succeeded in uniting. The task proved to be arduous, but the faith and indomitable courage of a woman were about to triumph over the obstacles erected by the ignorance and selfishness of mankind.

A Persian, Mr. Shayani, who was passing through Mauritius, was fluent in French, a language better understood by the Mauritiussians, and gave her great assistance.

Pioneers who were neighbors on Reunion Island, Le­land and Opal Jensen, finding themselves refused an extension of their permit to remain there, came to lend a helping hand. The ways of God are mysterious! After the trials they had suffered on this sister island, they expended themselves with additional ardor.

The results were not long in coming. Ridván 1956 saw the formation of three Bahá’í assemblies: Port Louis, Beau Bassin-Rose Hill, and Belle Rose. No one can measure at this time what their precious cooperation had brought. Let us say simply that their names will ever be associated with the history of the Faith on Mauritius, for their counsel, their solicitude, and all they have endured for us are to this day a source of inexhaustible inspiration.

Naw-Rúz of 1956 was the first great Feast, and brought together more than fifty believers. We had the pleasure of having with us Jalál Nákhjavání, who was making his second visit to Mauritius, and who would return in April 1958.

In order to help us resolve our problems at the beginning, John Robarts came to pay us a visit in 1956. A year later two doves stopped on our island, Robert Quigley and William Sears. They gave us precious help for the registration of the Port Louis Assembly. Registration of the assemblies of Beau Bassin-Rose Hill, Rose Hill, Quatre Bornes, Belle Rose, and Vacoas had to come the following year with the warm-hearted cooperation of Jalál.

Delegated by the National Teaching Committee of South and West Africa, Gilbert Robert spent a full year with us at the beginning of the year. His brilliant talks stirred enthusiasm among the Mauritian.

At Ridván 1958 two new assemblies were formed: Richmond and Stanley. Our hopes for the coming year are Goodlands, Palma, and Castel. Will we raise the number of assemblies to nine? We ask our friends to help us make it with their prayers.

Teaching, Welfare Activities Among Indians
Conducted by Sioux Falls Bahá'ís

Bahá'ís of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., have been actively interested in working with the American Indians of the South Dakota reservations. One of their activities is cooperation with the Council of Seven Fires, a local group formed three years ago to promote the welfare and advancement of the Indians. The chairman of the Sioux Falls Bahá'í Assembly, Bill Myers, serves as president of this council.

On January 25, 1959, the Sioux Falls Bahá'ís, for the second time, made a teaching trip to Flandreau, S. Dak., and met with their Indian friends at the Indian church there. Mr. Myers spoke to them on “The Oneness of Mankind.” The Bahá'ís have found the Indians very friendly, and experienced an encouraging closeness to them at this meeting.

Mark Spread of Bahá’í Faith in Korea

The continuing expansion of the Bahá'í Faith in South Korea is revealed in a report listing progress over a ten-month period in four goal cities, where extension teaching work is being carried on by the three existing Local Spiritual Assemblies of Kwangju, Seoul, and Mokpo.

In Chunju, where there were no Bahá'ís a year ago, there are now the requisite number for a local spiritual assembly; in Pusan the group of three members has grown to five, with the possibility of an assembly there also this year; in Songjungi there are now two believers and an Hazíratul-Quds has been leased to provide a center for more intensive teaching activities. While there are as yet no Bahá'ís in the fourth goal city of Suwon, an Hazíratul-Quds has been leased so that teaching work may be started.

 Altogether, the number of Bahá'í centers has increased from five to seven, and the number of local spiritual assemblies is expected to increase from three to five this year.

Two teaching conferences, in addition to the summer school, were held under the auspices of the local spiritual assemblies, with Mrs. Mamie Seto, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause of Asla, serving as guest teacher at the conference in Seoul, and Roy MacDonald of Seoul acting in this capacity in Kwangju.

The report also includes a summary of the activities of the Kwangju Bahá'ís in connection with UN Day and Human Rights Day in 1958. The former occasion provided the first opportunity for the proclamation of the Faith from a public platform.

The audience was composed of more than 1,000 high school students who were addressed by high ranking dignitaries of the province, including the president of the UN Association, the president of one of the universities, the president of the Women's Association, the director of the United States Information Service, and others, besides the Bahá'í pioneer, John McHenry III, and his Bahá'í interpreter, J. D. Oh.

Although at first there had been some doubt whether the Bahá'ís should participate, it became clear that the Faith had every right to be represented in view of the unique laws, institutions, and divine economy.
which are the embodiments of the hopes of the United Nations. Other religions were invited to take part, but did not do so.

The result of this meeting was a great increase in the number of students coming to firesides, more than the local believers can possibly teach. Another apparent result has been a request from the United Nations Association of the city of Mokpo to hold an extended conference in their city for the purpose of explaining the role of the oneness of religion and other Bahá’í principles in reaching peace.

During Human Rights Week, a Bahá’í talk was given at the Buddhist High School in Songjongi, all of the arrangements having been made by one of the local teachers, Son Chong Tae. Again John McHenry III was the speaker. It was the third time talks had been given there, always with the warm invitation of the principal of the school.

On that day, less than two hours after the talk, the opportunity arrived to speak directly about Bahá’u’lláh and some of His teachings. This resulted in sincere inquirers, an offer of a meeting place (which has since become the Bahá’í Center), and in the early enrollment of Son Chong Tae as the first believer. Mr. Son soon became chairman of the Bahá’í group, and in December he was married at the first Bahá’í marriage ceremony in Korea.

During this same week, a public meeting was held for students of both of the city’s universities. The Dean of Education of Chosun University, Professor Kwak Bong Soon, gave the main address. The talk on the Bahá’í Faith brought forth many questions, and a number of the students have become regular attendants at the fireside for university students.

College Bureau Schedules Institutes
At Twelve Universities on May 2

The Bahá’í College Bureau is sponsoring, on May 2, a second series of one-day institutes for college youth at the following colleges: San Jose State College, San Jose, Calif.; Santa Ana Junior College, Santa Ana, Calif.; University of Oregon, Eugene, Ore.; Utah State Agricultural College, Logan, Utah, Colorado State College, Greeley, Colo.; Kansas State Teacher’s College, Emporia, Kans.; University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.; University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio; Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mich.; Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.; Duke University, Durham, N.C.; and Brown University, Providence, R.I.

Many of our youth feel hesitant about serving as officers on a committee because they are concerned about their ability to carry out such an assignment. Hence we have chosen as the administrative topic for the morning session: “How to be a Chairman.” This portion of the institute will be conducted by a representative of the Bahá’í College Bureau, covering the subject in a detailed practical manner — chairman of public meetings, firesides, youth meetings, of consultation, panel moderator, etc.

The afternoon session will cover two topics, “Prayer” and “Fasting” with the hope of helping the students answer the many questions they are confronted with about these subjects.

The institutes are for all students, Bahá’í faculty and staff, and adult Bahá’ís who are interested in working with youth.

The College Bureau hopes that these institutes will provide an added inspiration for the teaching efforts on college campuses, which are such an important part of the homefront, thereby helping to fulfill the goals of the Ten-Year Crusade.

Eighty Youth Meet in Black Forest
For Annual German Winter School

German Bahá’í youth gathered again for their annual Winter School during the holiday season at the Schauinsland in the Black Forest. More than eighty people from Italy, Switzerland, Lichtenstein, France, England, America, Korea, and Germany, came to spend ten days in the beautiful surroundings in order to deepen their knowledge of the Faith. Besides studying and discussing the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh, there was time for skiing and other recreation.

One of the highlights of the school was the visit of Jean Sevin, a Knight of Bahá’u’lláh and pioneer to Tahiti, and later Tahiti, who showed his beautiful slides of Tahitian scenes. He skillfully combined historical events, social needs, and daily life on these islands with views of the Bahá’í Faith. The students were greatly impressed by his visit.

Mr. Sevin also spoke and showed his slides at eight other German towns during this period, and all the meetings were well attended.

Faith Well-Represented at Iowa College’s
Observance of “Religion in Life” Week

“Religion in Life” Week, held on February 15-18, 1959, at Iowa State Teacher’s College in Cedar Falls, might best be described as a victory for the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

For this annual event Rev. Harold E. Bernhard, director of religious activities on the campus, contacted the Bahá'í College Bureau for a speaker to participate. Mrs. Velma Sherrill, member of the Auxiliary Teaching Board, was invited to represent the Bahá'í Faith in a series of lectures, panel discussions, and small informal group discussions during the three-day period.

Lecturers on Confucianism, Hinduism, Shintoism, and Catholic Christianity were also invited. These faiths were very well represented by professors from other universities, but it can be truly said that the light of Bahá'u'lláh shone round Mrs. Sherrill. Her own confidence in the message she was giving, inspired much interest among the students and others who heard her.

Mrs. Sherrill's activities began with an unscheduled talk at the College Hill Lutheran Church. Her campus teaching commenced the next day, February 16. Included in her heavy schedule was a recorded interview at the college radio station; one of her talks, "What's New in Religion," which was recorded, has since been broadcast.

On the last evening of Mrs. Sherrill's visit to this area, the friends of Waterloo and Castle Hill communities held a dinner in her honor at a Bahá'í home. Two young people from the college attended the dinner as a result of Mrs. Sherrill's teaching.

The Creative Plan of God; A Comprehensive Study Guide for Teaching Children. This study material, originally compiled by the National Bahá'í Child Education Committee some years ago, was extensively revised this past year. Included in it is a bibliography prepared by Gretchen Westerveldt, college librarian at State University Teachers College, Potsdam, N.Y., specialist in children's books.

Part I deals with creation through the various kingdoms to man and his link with his Creator. Part II covers progressive revelation from the Day of Adam to Bahá'u'lláh. Part III, the Bahá'í World, explores the structure of Bahá'í administration from the individual Bahá'í to the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The lessons are planned to be adaptable by the teacher to all ages of children. They contain prayers, readings, and stories that can be read by older children themselves, as well as the lesson suggestions and projects. The book is 8½x11, 72 pages, with a colorful cover that is attractive to both pupils and teacher.

MAGNIFY Thou, O Lord my God, Him Who is the Primal Point, the Divine Mystery, the Unseen Essence, the Day-Spring of Divinity, and the Manifestation of Thy Lordship, through whom all the knowledge of the past and all the knowledge of the future were made plain, through Whom the pearls of Thy hidden wisdom were uncovered, and the mystery of Thy treasured name disclosed, Whom Thou hast appointed as the Announcer of the One through Whose name the letter B and the letter E have been joined and united, through Whom Thy majesty, Thy sovereignty and Thy might were made known, through Whom Thy words have been sent down, and Thy laws set forth with clearness, and Thy signs spread abroad, and Thy Word established, through Whom the hearts of Thy chosen ones were laid bare, and all that were in the heavens and all that were on the earth were gathered together, whom Thou hast called ‘Ali-Muhammad in the kingdom of Thy names, and the Spirit of Spirits in the Tablets of Thine irrevocable decree, Whom Thou hast invested with Thine own title, unto Whose name all other names have, at Thy bidding and through the power of Thy might, been made to return, and in Whom Thou hast caused all Thine attributes and titles to attain their final consummation. To Him also belong such names as lay hid within Thy stainless tabernacles, in Thine invisible world and Thy sanctified cities.

Magnify Thou, moreover, such as have believed in Him and in His signs and have turned towards Him, from among those that have acknowledged Thy unity in His Latter Manifestation — a Manifestation whereof He hath made mention in His Tablets, and in His Books, and in His Scriptures, and in all the wondrous verses and gem-like utterances that have descended upon Him. It is this same Manifestation Whose covenant Thou hast bidden Him establish ere He had established His own covenant. He it is Whose praise the Bayán hath celebrated. In it His excellence hath been extolled, and His truth established, and His sovereignty proclaimed, and His Cause perfected. Blessed is the man that hath turned unto Him, and fulfilled the things He hath commanded, 0 Thou Who art the Lord of the worlds and the Desire of all them that have known Thee!

Praised be Thou, O my God, inasmuch as Thou hast aided us to recognize and love Him. I, therefore, beseech Thee by Him and by them Who are the Day-Springs of Thy Divinity, and the Manifestations of Thy Lordship, and the Treasuries of Thy Revelation, and the Depositories of Thine inspiration, to enable us to serve and obey Him, and to empower us to become the helpers of His Cause and the dispersers of His adversaries. Powerful art Thou to do all that pleaseth Thee. No God is there beside Thee, the Almighty, the All-Glorious, the One Whose help is sought by all men!

Beloved Friends:

Excerpts from two recent communications received from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land are presented to the American believers with an appeal for their serious consideration by all individual believers, by all local communities, by committees, and by area conferences.

Under date of February 11 our Assembly received a letter from which we cite the following passages:

"As the remaining years of the Ten-Year Plan are rapidly drawing to a close, we are most deeply concerned over the fulfillment of the goals set by our beloved Guardian, and a great deal of our attention is taken up with ways and means of arousing the Bahá’í world to instant action.

"Our suggestion is that these two great pillars of the Faith, Persia and America, representing the East and the West, unite in a joint effort . . . the Persian Bahá’ís should be invited to contribute to a fund which would go directly to the American National Assembly, forwarded by the Persian National Assembly, to be used for the specific purpose of financing American pioneers who are ready to go and fill the all-important pioneer posts abroad . . .

"This plan would have nothing to do with the flow of Persian pioneers who are able to leave their country. It would be a system of deputization of American believers on the part of the Persian believers in order to fulfill at the earliest possible date some, at least, of the objectives of our beloved Guardian’s Plan.

"Although all arrangements would be handled by the American National Spiritual Assembly . . . it would be highly desirable if . . . the Persian contributor or contributors . . . could later be put in correspondence with the person or family that it deputized. This, we feel, would bring the Bahá’ís of East and West, already so much more closely united through the grief caused by the passing of their beloved Guardian, closer together than ever before, and knit them . . . in a deeper bond of fellowship. In this way a firmer foundation will be laid for that occasion . . . when the believers . . . will come under the direct guidance of the Universal House of Justice, and when that august body will need to have the greatest unity, fellowship, and cooperation amongst all believers in order to further the work of the Bahá’í world."

This arrangement means that American volunteers for the pioneer field for Latin American, European, and Oriental areas, whose mission at present cannot be financed from the American National Fund, will be dispatched to these posts through deputization by Persian believers, through that Fund, as replenished by donations forwarded by the National Assembly of Persia.

As rapidly as funds are made available in this manner, American volunteers will be sent to the posts selected for them by one of our intercontinental teaching committees.

Response to This New Opportunity Is Urgently Invited

From a letter dated February 24, also written by the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, the following excerpts emphasize the vital importance of accomplishing the remaining tasks of the World Crusade:

"As the conclave of the Hands of the Cause in Bahjí in November 1958, it became apparent to all that if the Bahá’ís of the world are to remain faithful to their trust and demonstrate their devotion to the beloved Guardian, they must arise in a supreme effort to accomplish all the tasks of the Ten-Year Crusade, and particularly to win those goals which have to do with the establishment of local assemblies, the foundations for the national spiritual assemblies called for as specific objectives of the Ten-Year Plan. These national assemblies constitute paramount goals, because they are pillars of the Universal House of Justice.

"This beloved Guardian himself has called for the holding of the first World Bahá’í Congress in Rejván 1963. It would indeed be a fitting crown to the beloved Guardian’s life of complete sacrifice and service if the House of Justice is established at that time."

"America has the lion’s share of this great task, as the beloved Guardian gave the United States a continuing responsibility for the achievement of the goals in the areas where regional national assemblies have been established in Central and South America, and in Europe.

"As we analyze the situation, local spiritual assemblies must be formed in these areas as follows:"

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Area</th>
<th>Number</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Central America</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South America</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Europe</td>
<td>43</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Beloved friends! The tasks assigned to our Bahá’í community at this stage of the Crusade are clearly defined. The channels of administrative direction are all in operation. The means are assured. The focal point of spiritual achievement is in the hearts of individual Bahá'ís and Bahá'í families willing and eager to respond.

"We are not unmindful, of course, of the great responsibility resting upon your Assembly in bringing the number of local assemblies in the United States up to three hundred. This, in itself, will perhaps require a very marked pioneering movement. However, we hope that strong financial assistance from the Persian Bahá'ís will make it possible for a mighty wave of pioneers to go forth and fill those posts abroad where the need is most urgent. This certainly would simplify your financial problem of settling and developing the Faith in goal cities in the United States."

Destiny has brought our community to its supreme test. In pressing forward now, we bring to fulfillment the very meaning of America in the life of the human race. It is for this crucial victory that 'Abdu'l-Bahá traveled across the land in 1912; it was for this achievement that the beloved Guardian unfolded through our community the significance of obedience to Bahá'u'lláh, the purposes of the Cause, and the nature of Bahá'í institutions. An overflowing cup of the pure Wine of Holiness has been offered the American believers. Your National Spiritual Assembly is assured that it is not offered in vain.

"What service could be more glorious than sacrificing for the establishment of the Universal House of Justice, and what demonstration of love and devotion to the Guardian could be more wonderful than achieving all the objectives of his Ten-Year Plan!

"We live in an hour of great destiny. We pray that each one of us may valiantly play his or her part until total victory is won."

—U.S. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
Benelux NSA Host to European Conference at Brussels Called by Hands of Cause

The fifth European Conference called by the Hands of the Cause in Europe met in Brussels, Belgium, on December 27-28, 1958. The National Spiritual Assembly of the Benelux Countries served as host, and members of the national assemblies and of the Auxiliary Board for Europe attended.

Dr. Ugo Giachery served as chairman, and opened the meeting with a reading of the message of November 1958 from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, and discussion centered on this letter.

Consultation dealt almost exclusively with the Ten-Year Plan goals on the European continent. The Hands of the Cause assured the national spiritual assemblies of all possible help. It was emphasized that everything else must be secondary to the attainment of these goals.

Frances Wells of Alaska, on pilgrimage to the Holy Land by way of Belgium, spoke on Sunday evening about the work of the pioneers in the far north, and showed slides of the northern communities.

It was announced at the conference that in the next few months four of the European Hands of the Cause will be travelling in service to the Faith: Dr. Ugo Giachery in Central America, Dr. Hermann Grossmann in South America, and Dr. Adelbert Mühlschlegel in Scandinavia. Hasan Balyuzi will go first to Haifa for several months, then he, too, will travel.

Dr. Giachery Meets Temple-Area Baha’is
Upon Return from Central America

Dr. Ugo Giachery, Hand of the Cause from Europe, spoke to several hundred Baha’is of northern Illinois at the Baha’i House of Worship in Wilmette on April 5, en route to Europe and the Holy Land after an extended tour of Central America and the Greater Antilles.

Hand of the Cause Horace Holley introduced Dr. Giachery, who spoke first of the deeply moving experience he had that same afternoon when he attended, for the first time, the worship service in the Temple auditorium.

“This was a perfect conclusion to my journey to Central America,” he said. “It is so beautiful.”

He then spoke of the great opportunities the Baha’is have in America, with the many freedoms they enjoy, and went on to emphasize the great challenge before us, with the coming formation of the Universal House of Justice. Sixty-one national spiritual assemblies and 400 local spiritual assemblies are needed by 1962, he explained, so that the Universal House of Justice may be elected in the following year.

Speaking of the Ten-Year Crusade, Dr. Giachery commented: “This is the greatest spiritual enterprise since the beginning of the world. We are bringing the water of life to the people. We must be proud that we are Baha’is, and we must be conscious of the infallibility of the Teachings of Baha’u’llah.”

In contrast with the freedoms enjoyed by the people of North America, Dr. Giachery stated, the people of Central America have been oppressed for hundreds of years; the Baha’is of Latin America are famished, and need a helping hand.

Concluding his appeal for pioneers to assist in the Ten-Year Crusade, Dr. Giachery said, “There is no greater happiness or joy than serving the Cause anywhere.”

Following this talk, Dr. Giachery gave an impressive and loving commentary on a series of beautiful color slides he had photographed of the Shrine of the Báb, the International Archives Building, the monument gardens, and the landscaping on Mt. Carmel; the Pilgrim Houses and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá’s house in Haifa; and the Mansion and Tomb of Baha’u’lláh at ‘Akká, so many of them a wondrous legacy wrought by the hand of our beloved Guardian, Shoghi Effendi.

On the next day Dr. Giachery went to Milwaukee, Wisc., where he spoke at the Bahá’í Center that evening to an audience of about 125 Bahá’ís from all parts of the state.

He then returned to Chicago, and on April 7 departed for New York, en route to Europe.
U. S. Baha’is Hail Naw-Ruz With Many Public Observances

Naw-Ruz observances are reported by seventy-five Bahá’í centers as we go to press. Many fellowship meetings were held where isolated and group believers came together, and children and youth participated. Music was the highlight of most programs with the breaking of bread on this very joyous Bahá’í festivity. All through the reports we sensed a current of unity.

From the press clippings received to date we would conclude that the public was well informed of this anniversary of the New Era declared by the Báb in 1844. Space permits only a brief résumé of these activities, but with it goes a deep appreciation for your reports and for the effort made in the “reinvigoration of the spirit” which comes with this Bahá’í New Year, on the 116th anniversary of the Dawn of a New Age.

Two contacts declared intentions to become Bahá’ís at a Naw-Rúz observance at a Negro Baptist Church Youth Center in Baton Rouge, La., to assist in forming the first Local Spiritual Assembly in that city on April 21. “This has been our goal,” the Bahá’í press representative writes. “A few weeks ago it almost seemed impossible, but we never gave up. Now it is close to being a reality. We have always tried to use the publicity in order to keep the name Bahá’í before the public. Many times we meet people who tell us they see the articles in the newspaper and think we must have a very large number of Bahá’ís in the city. We are only seven.” Invitations were sent out to forty people: twenty-one adults and three children attended. Of this number, eight were Bahá’ís and thirteen were guests. Of the eleven Negroes present, only one was a Bahá’í. Confirmation classes were immediately arranged for the two who declared their intentions of joining the Faith.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá assures us that every seed sown in this day shall bear fruit, but the cultivation and nurturing of that seed is in our own perseverance, our wisdom, our obedience to the Covenant, and in our sincerity of intention. What a thrilling experience to see one’s faith in action! May it be the torch that will set the blaze aglow in our own communities!

Some sixty Bahá’ís and their friends from nine communities joined with the Assembly of Victor Township, N.Y., in a covered dish Naw-Rúz festival at the home of one of the friends in Victor. They came from Canandaigua, Clifton Springs, East Rochester, Geneva, Irondequoit, Linwood, Livonia, Rochester, and Seneca Township. They were privileged to have as their guest speaker, a Bahá’í friend from Quincy Ill., who spoke on “The Dawn Of A New Age.” The following day this same friend spoke at a luncheon for influential Negro contacts at the home of the chairman of the Rochester Assembly.

On Sunday afternoon the Bahá’í children’s schools of East Rochester and Victor had their Naw-Rúz observance at the home of believers in Irondequoit. There were twenty-nine children and twenty-one adults from Canandaigua, East Rochester, Livonia, Perinton, and Rochester. An eleven-year-old boy was program chairman. There were prayers, a reading on the meaning of Naw-Rúz, songs from the Bahá’í Children’s Song Book, group singing, a violin solo by a ten-year-old boy, recitations, and a vocal duet by two little girls aged five and seven. After the program, games were organized for the children; these were followed by refreshments. This was the first time that the two schools had a joint program.

Of the reports received, Long Beach and Lakewood,
Calif., had the largest number of non-Bahá’ís attending a buffet dinner. There were thirty guests out of an attendance of fifty-five. After the dinner there was an illustrated lecture. They had a book display, and literature was distributed; the editor of the local newspaper expressed interest in the occasion and literature was left with him. Follow-up meetings have been planned.

Des Moines, Iowa, had a special program at the home of one of the believers. The history of spirituals and demonstration of group singing was followed by a social hour.

In Missouri, Independence, Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Kansas City, Kans. had a joint dinner meeting at the YWCA with a musical program featuring the Fellowship House Chorus.

Council Bluffs, Grand Island, Lincoln, and Omaha, Nebraska; and Niles, Mich., had a public meeting and luncheon with a speaker on the Jewish, Christian, Islamic, and Bahá’í religions.

Other communities reporting were: Flagstaff, Ariz., had a youth program; Little Rock, Ark., used the media of advertising to bring the message of Naw-Rúz to the public; in the state of California, Altadena had a musical program, a talk and social hour; Beverly Hills gave a special program for the occasion; Geyersville and Sonoma County served pot-luck supper in the community hall, and children were remembered with favors at the social hour.

Lakeside, in addition to the above, had a picnic and program by the Bahá’í children; La Mirada, Downey Judicial District, held an Intercalary Day party, as a pre-Naw-Rúz observance, for the children attending Bahá’í School; Redding advertised the meaning of Naw-Rúz; San Diego had a dinner and guest speaker; Whittier, with Anaheim and Long Beach, had a picnic and special program of Bahá’í songs sung by groups of children.

In Colorado, Colorado Springs held a social gathering with organ music, games, and refreshments; Denver ran a newspaper advertisement for Naw-Rúz; in Connecticut, New Haven had a gathering for the friends in the home of one of the believers; Norwich, Fort Point, and Alton, R.I., joined together at the home of a believer in Mansfield; Wilmington, Del., had a special program of religious readings; Key West, Fla., had a meeting at the home of one of the friends, who showed slides of his trip to Mexico, as well as of the Bahá’í House of Worship and gardens in Wilmette; Boise and Ada County, Idaho, had a dinner meeting at the Columbian Club, and the Bahá’í children’s class presented a program of dances.

The North Shore area of Illinois attended worship services and a public meeting with refreshments at the Bahá’í House of Worship in Wilmette; Peoria observed the occasion with public meetings; Quincy with a panel of youth at the Quincy Art Center; Indianapolis, Ind., had a special program; Sioux City, Iowa, had good publicity and a newspaper advertisement for the occasion; Portland, Maine, held a public meeting at the YWCA; Attleboro, Mass., published publicity; Flint, Mich., gave a cooperative supper at the Davison Bahá’í School with a speaker and slides of Haifa; in Minnesota, St. Cloud used publicity and an advertisement; St. Paul gave a public program at the Bahá’í Center; Dumont, N.J., observed the occasion with prayer and discussion, followed by a social hour.

This Race Amity Day poster has been prepared to help publicize meetings for Race Amity Day on June 14, 1959. It is printed in four colors and gold on heavy, felt-finished white paper, size 14 by 20 inches. There is space at the bottom for information about a local meeting, or for offering literature. The charge is fifty cents each, five for $2.00, and should be ordered from Bahá’í Press Service, 434 Thomas Ave., Rochester 17, N.Y. Orders filled after June 1 are not returnable should they not arrive on time.

In New York, Buffalo held a public meeting and reported one of the best pieces of publicity they ever had; Grand Island and Niagara Falls gave a potluck supper and talk; Hamburg served a buffet supper; Elmira and Horseheads gave a luncheon for twelve, with eight contacts; New York City held a public meeting, with a musical program and refreshments. Naw-Rúz cards were mailed to the news editors of five major daily papers; Logan, Utah, featured a buffet supper and special program with a guest speaker; Hinsdale, N.H., and Brattleboro Vt., had eighteen attend a covered-dish supper, followed by readings from the Hidden Words and a showing of slides of the Holy Land and Bahá’í Temple; Keene, N.H., and Ward白沙和Burlington, Vt., had a worship service dedicated to the unity of mankind and of religion; Spokane, Wash., served a dinner with nearby groups, resulting in their first publicity in the local newspaper; in Wisconsin, Brookfield held a supper and special program, and Rhinelander observed the day in the home of an isolated believer who received excellent publicity and the second best newspaper coverage on the occasion, next to Flint, Mich.

The Bahá'ís of Phoenix and Tempe and their guests held their observance of Naw-Rúz at the Phoenix YWCA, with over a hundred in attendance. A cross-section of the world was what the gathering became, as among the guests were members of the Indian community, those of Mexican and Spanish descent, as well as our Negro friends who mingled with great joy and fellowship from the cradle to the grandparents.

The evening began with the Prayer for Naw-Rúz. Dinner was shared by all, followed by an explanation and reading on Naw-Rúz with several musical selections. The program ended with group singing. Everyone left with a joyous feeling of unity and happiness.

Naw-Rúz in Navajo-land

The festival of Naw-Rúz, celebrated by the Bahá'ís and their friends of the Navajo Reservation at Píñon, Ariz., attracted 100 participants from Friday through Sunday, March 20 to 22. Twenty-three were Bahá'ís, the others included Navajo friends, some of whom travelled 100 miles to attend, and residents of Píñon.

Most of the meetings were held in a newly-completed Navajo Chapter House built by the Tribal council for the purpose of providing the Navajo people with a place to gather. When permission to use the house was asked, the Bahá'ís made it clear it would be for religious purposes, and assent was given without hesitation.

Friday evening's meeting was intimate and informal, with readings and a talk by Dr. Nasratollah Rassekh from Sedona, Ariz. Saturday night's dinner and talk, also by Dr. Rassekh, was attended by seventy-five, and was described by the Píñon friends as "beautiful in its simplicity, sincerity, and warmth." It began with the reading of a prayer by a Navajo believer. Each morning began with the sharing of prayers.

Guests from distant points were housed in the Amoz Gibson home in Píñon, and in the homes of neighbors who also work at the Navajo school there.

Bahá'ís on the Navajo Reservation, now numbering fourteen, and living in four separate locations, and the pioneer couple on the adjacent Hopi Reservation, continue to meet in their own groups for study classes and firesides, and together once a month, bringing their Indian friends with them to share hospitality, loving fellowship, and the Message of Bahá'u'lláh.

Manila Holds First Naw-Rúz Celebration

The Bahá'ís of Manila and four surrounding communities in the Philippine Islands were the happy hosts to a group of forty Bahá'ís and their friends at the Naw-Rúz celebration this year, the first of its kind to have been held in that city. Two of the four major daily newspapers carried announcements of the event and one of them so aroused the interest of the editor of the woman's page that she wrote a feature article, mainly about the Bahá'í calendar, which appeared on the front page of the following Saturday morning edition. She also spoke of the nature of the Naw-Rúz Feast itself, and of the extent of the Faith in the Philippines and its goals for peace in the world.

Second Philippine Summer School
Attended by Forty-Five Bahá'ís

Forty-five Bahá'ís attended the second annual Philippine Bahá'í Summer School at Solano on March 26 to 30.

"Each day seemed too short, and each hour too shallow for the eagerness and thirst of their souls," the chairman, William Allison, reported. "Our sessions began with prayers each morning and afternoon, led by the friends of Solano, Diffun, Gundaway, and Manila. The fact that four believers, including a newly declared member, came from Manila, was a great inspiration to the friends in this isolated community of Solano."

Classes included a study of The Dispensation of Bahá'u'lláh, and lectures on "How to Use Christian Scriptures in Teaching the Bahá'í Faith," "Bahá'í Responsibility in the New World Order," "The Role of Women in the Bahá'í Cause," "How to Teach the Bahá'í Faith in the Philippines," "Entrance into the Kingdom," and "The Bahá'í Era." These last two lectures were given in Ilocano and English.

The final afternoon session was devoted to "The Ten-Year World Crusade and the Philippines." Mr. Allison recalled the recent message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, emphasizing the urgency of the work to be completed and the short time in which it could be achieved.

Reports from the various Bahá'í communities of their activities were given, and the goals they would strive to achieve by 1960 were listed. Special consideration was given to the five goal cities selected for the formation of local spiritual assemblies by 1963, and to the completion of the translation of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era and of the pamphlet Bahá'í Answers into Tagalog. Incorporation of the local assemblies of Diffun, Gundaway, Santiago, and Manila is also part of the Plan.

In his report Mr. Allison paid special tribute to Felix R. Madella, the first believer in the Philippines, who first read about the Faith in a pamphlet left behind by Mrs. Loulie Mathews on one of her visits to the South Pacific, and later in an old newspaper. Before World War II Mr. Madella was the only Bahá'í in the Philippines. Now his community of Solano has more than one hundred believers, and has sent pioneers to three different regions in the Islands, where there are strong local assemblies. "Here is a perfect evidence," wrote Mr. Allison, "of Bahá'u'lláh's promise that His Words would arise in both the East and West with splendor and great glory."

Usumbura Secures Official Recognition

A shining light from the French-speaking territories is Usumbura, in Ruanda-Urundi, where the African community has carried on the work of the Faith without any pioneer assistance for some two years. Strong foundations were established here when Rex and Mary Collison lived for some time in Usumbura, and their work has borne wonderful fruit in the firm and devoted believers who now form the Usumbura community. The Usumbura Local Assembly has felt for a long time that the progress of the work has been severely handicapped by the lack of government recognition and the fact that they have no center. In an effort to rectify this state of affairs, the national assembly secretary, Philip Hainsworth, was sent to Usumbura to appeal to the authorities for recognition and for permission to purchase a Fázíratulláh-Quds. Accompanied by his family, he drove to Usumbura and was there given a wonderful welcome by the community. During the course of a four-day visit, many interviews were held with various government officials, including the Head of Native Affairs and the Director of African Housing. The result of all this consultation was that a letter was drafted, and approved by the Governor of the territory, which recognized the Bahá'í community in Usumbura. In addition, the Director of Housing proved most co-operative and went out of his way to help the Bahá'ís to locate a suitable house.

Intercalary Festival Attracts Large Crowds at Los Angeles Center

Nearly 700 persons participated in the Intercalary Days celebration held at the Los Angeles, Calif., Bahá'í Center on February 26-28, in accordance with the joyful spirit of this period.

The celebrations were given an enthusiastic start at a Proclamation Meeting on Thursday, February 26. Charles Wolcott, vice-chairman of the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly, gave a most inspiring talk, "Leaves of One Tree" before a heartwarming number of people.

On the next day the Center was astir with activity from 2:00 p.m. until well after midnight. Between the events, Baha'is and their guests admired the impressive and beautiful displays set up by the various committees.

The lecture on "Painting and Music," in the afternoon, pointed out the changing course of civilization as reflected in the works of great artists and composers.

Friday evening's program was one of pure delight and enjoyment, spotlighting the allied arts, including literature, drama, music, the visual arts, sand painting, and the dance.

On the following morning the Bahá'í children presented the Faith to their friends and parents in a program presented entirely by the members of the children's classes. This was followed by games, a picnic lunch on the back lawn, and gifts distributed to the children from a magic fish pond.

At 3:00 p.m. Baha'is and their guests were taken on a world tour through the magic of color slides.

After a devotional period at 6:00 p.m., at which prayers were read in nineteen languages, the festal board was set, and the international theme of the day was climaxed by a buffet dinner featuring foods from around the world.

How wonderful it was, to see the Center filled with the warmth and energizing devotion that comes from putting into practice the realization that "Ye are all the leaves of one tree...."

Monaco, Smallest Country in Europe, Shows Steady Growth of Faith

Monaco, a goal country of the Italo-Swiss National Spiritual Assembly, and the smallest country in Europe, covers an area of but three square miles along the shores of the Mediterranean Sea. It is famous for its semi-tropical climate, its sunshine, its Casino and villas, and no taxes. Prince Rainier, of the Grimaldi family, which became rulers of Monaco in 1351, is one of the few remaining absolute sovereigns.

In September 1953, when the Ten-Year Crusade was initiated, Mrs. Nellie French, then over eighty years of age, came to Monaco as a pioneer, and first introduced the Bahá’í Faith there at a meeting at the Hotel Royale in Monte Carlo. After only two months, in December of that year, Mrs. French passed away.

In February 1954 another pioneer, Mrs. Shamssy Navidi of Tihirán, with her two children, came to Monaco. She was followed shortly by Mrs. Kelsey and by Miss Florence Ullrich from the United States.

A year later, in April 1955, the first local spiritual assembly was formed. Since then some of the friends have moved away, but four new believers have been welcomed, so that assembly status has been maintained.

As in other countries whose government is Catholic, it is difficult to have public meetings. Monaco is allied to the Vatican by concordat. There have been, however, many private meetings with guest speakers and regular weekly firesides. A youth group is being formed, as well as a class for children.

On the occasion of the marriage of Prince Rainier to Grace Kelly, and when the first heir to the throne was born, gifts were presented to Their Serene Highnesses by the Bahá’ís of Monaco. In return, gracious acknowledgments were received from Prince Rainier.

It is to be hoped that, through the continued efforts and sacrifices of our pioneers and the Bahá’í friends, this beautiful little land of sunshine, with its worldly atmosphere of pleasure seekers, will gradually be lightened by the spiritual Sun of the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

First Bahá’í School in Tasmania

Held at Dilston in January

The first Tasmanian Bahá’í School was held on January 30 to February 1, 1959, at Dilston. The holding of a school was first suggested by Miss Glad Parke, one of the Tahiti pioneers, to the Regional Teaching Committee for their consideration.

Miss D. Kaiser, a Lilydale Bahá’í, graciously offered her home at Dilston, on the banks of the Tamar River eight miles from Launceton, for the school, and this was gratefully accepted.

At 9:45 a.m. on Saturday, January 30, the school was officially opened by the chairman, Miss G. Lamprill. Then followed a special prayer of Bahá’u’lláh, read by David Benson, aged eleven, the only Bahá’í youth.

Devotions were interspersed throughout the sessions, and were fittingly arranged to suit the subjects of the talks.

A tape recording made by the Australian Hand of the Cause, Collis Featherstone, was played by Maurice Wheeler, who donated the tape to the school. The message was a soul-stirring one, and a clarion call to all Bahá’ís to arise for the triumph of the Faith and the fulfillment of the beloved Guardian’s Ten-Year Crusade.

The Tasmanian Regional Teaching Committee stated: “In summarizing, we would say that it is very difficult to express in words the whole significance of such a school; its value is inestimable. In this, our first Tasmanian Bahá’í School, its inauguration, we feel, was fully justified by results. The spirit that pervaded the whole of the sessions was one of Bahá’í fellowship, and a sincere desire to consult together with the object of more effectively serving the Faith. The request to join the Bahá’í ranks by the only non-Bahá’í present seemed a fitting climax to the spirit of the school.”

—AUSTRALIAN BAHA’I BULLETIN
The Bahá’í Interracial Teaching Committee organized an institute to help in the teaching work of the Southern States at Durham, N. Car., on February 7-8.

The theme was the coordination of teaching methods and techniques in, and for, the South. The purpose was to develop plans that might be adopted generally throughout the South for increased teaching among the Negroes as part of the homefront campaign.

Readings were taken from The Advent of Divine Justice, and Paris Talks, presented by Louise McCorkle. "Teaching in the South" was discussed by Mrs. Beatrice Thigpen, who spoke on The Covenant, Preparation, Making Contacts, and Guidance.

On the second day a talk on "Teaching in Africa" was given by Grant Hadden. Fireside Teaching and Sacrifice were two of the main topics. Later Mrs. Marguerite Galle spoke on "How the Master Brought Racial Groups Together in Love and Amity."

Discussion brought out the following points:

1. Daily commune for personal reinvigoration. Acquire a thirst for spirituality. Read the Holy Books, especially the Utterances of Bahá'u'lláh. Take much time for prayer and meditation. Remember the daily obligatory prayers and the Prayer for the Southern States. Aim to acquire, one by one, the attributes of God.

2. Source material for teaching those whose approach is from the Bible point of view. Bible references: Bahá'u'lláh, the Glory of God; Báb, the Gate 'Abdu'l-Bahá, the Servant of God, the Branch.

3. Bahá'u'lláh's concept of justice. "The freedom of man from superstition and imitation, so that he may discern the Manifestation of God with the eye of Oneness, and consider all affairs with keen insight."

4. Suggested sources of contact: Offer volunteer services to the Girl Scouts, day nurseries, Parent-Teacher Associations, feed patients, write letters, read to patients, feed children, visit those who have no family, make friends at gas stations, laundromats, and super markets, comfort the bereaved, attend prayer meetings, read Bahá'í prayers, visit Negro churches, and read Negro newspapers.

Teaching Campaign in Shreveport

A splendid example of how a well-conceived and executed teaching plan will attract many new seekers to the Faith was given by Shreveport, La., on February 1-8, with the visit of Mrs. Florence Mayberry, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands of the Cause.

The Shreveport Bahá'í community arranged a program of activities that included news stories in eight newspapers, paid advertisements in three newspapers, four radio interview broadcasts, radio spot announcements for public meetings on five stations, two television interviews, book displays at the Shreve Memorial Library and the Margaret Bollinger Book Mart, five public meetings, five informal fireside meetings, three luncheon meetings, and a visit with the officials of the Shreveport Chamber of Commerce.

Paul R. Pettit, reporting on this campaign, stated: "It is generally felt that this intensive and concentrated type of teaching activity is most beneficial. Its effectiveness is very pronounced, and the results exceeded our fondest expectations.

"The newspapers stimulated attendance at the scheduled public meetings, and were probably responsible for most of the people there. A number of phone calls were received by Mrs. Mayberry and the Bahá'ís as a result of the newspaper publicity, requesting information on meetings, or on the Faith. . . . The most active contacts since Mrs. Mayberry's visit are the result of newspaper publicity."

Radio and television broadcasts were also responsible for the attendance of a number of people at the public meetings, and for inquiries on the Faith. A ten-minute interview on the "Party Line" program on radio station KWKH was the result of a request from the station for the Bahá'í view on reincarnation. This is a public service program in which the listener expresses his opinion on the subject under discussion. References were made to the Faith on at least two succeeding "Party Line" programs.

Television station KSLA-TV presented a fifteen-minute interview with Mrs. Mayberry on the "Dateline" program on February 3.

Mr. Pettit stated: "The response from the KSLA-TV program was tremendous, probably the most extensive of any particular proclamation effort. Three telephone calls for information were received while the program was still on the air, and many more were reported by the station later. Many people mentioned seeing this interview."
Through the assistance of a retired municipal judge, it was arranged for Mrs. Mayberry to speak on the Faith to over eighty Rotarians at their regular luncheon meeting on February 5.

"The response to the notice in the newspaper was most thrilling; the president announced that there were more guest Rotarians attending this meeting than had ever attended any previous meeting in the history of the Club," Mr. Pettit reported.

Other results of this intensive teaching activity included: a request for a Bahá'í speaker, at a future date, by the A. T. E. Study Group; a similar request by the head of the Centenary College Sociology Department to speak to a class on sociology; an invitation by Judge Louis Lyons to Mrs. Mayberry to attend a luncheon meeting of the Interclub Council when she is next in Shreveport; firesides are being held each Saturday evening with a local Bahá'í speaker; a study group is being held each Friday evening to study Bahá'í subjects desired by contacts; and social and personal gatherings will be concentrated on by the individual Bahá'ís to gain the confidence of the seekers.

"In summation," Mr. Pettit stated, "it can be concluded that the tremendous proclamation of the Bahá'í Faith in Shreveport and Bossier City during Mrs. Mayberry's visit literally had the residents of both these communities talking on the street corners and everywhere else about this 'new religion.' Without doubt, the fruits of this effort will develop for years to come, and long after the initial impetus has been dissipated."

Visit to San Antonio

On February 25 Mrs. Mayberry spoke at a public meeting at the St. Anthony Hotel in San Antonio, Texas. There were sixty-one persons present, including forty-four contacts. Almost 350 announcements of this meeting were mailed to clubs and organizations, and to personal contacts of the local Bahá'ís. Publicity included a paid advertisement and two free publicity stories in the newspapers, and spot announcements on the radio. Fireside meetings with the interested contacts are being held as a follow-up to this program.

Bahá'ís of Apia, Samoa,

Construct Haziratu'l-Quds

Last year the Bahá'ís of Apia, Western Samoa, set themselves a Two-Year Plan of achievement. Part of that plan called for the construction of a local Haziratu'l-Quds, in order that the growing number of believers might have a place to hold their meetings.

Today, these believers' hopes and prayers are being realized. The concrete foundations of their Center were laid in February, and an 18x36 foot rectangular building, fully screened, with a corrugated iron roof, now rises in Apia—a monument to the tremendous sacrifices of the Samoan friends, pioneers, and new believers alike, who, in love for, and gratitude to, Bahá'u'lláh, and out of their limited and meager resources, have added to the £100.0.0 donated by the Canadian National Spiritual Assembly for the building, almost enough money to complete the Haziratu'l-Quds—a "do it yourself" project, with everyone helping. All but £70.0.0 of the total cost of £400.0.0 has been raised, and it is hoped that this remaining sum will also be forthcoming soon.

In addition to the funds contributed by the friends, gifts of furniture, glassware, mats, and other items have also been received. It was expected that the building would be completed by Naw-Rúz.

The Canadian National Spiritual Assembly, in reporting this event at one of their World Crusade goals, stated: "Our hearts join in thanksgiving with our Samoan brothers and sisters at this time of glorious achievement in that region of the Bahá'í world so loved by our beloved Guardian."

Correction

The article on "The Guardian of the Faith," published in the December 1958 issue of Bahá'í News, was a report on an address by Hand of the Cause Leroy Ioas, taken from the notes of Mrs. Madge L. Featherstone of Semaphore, Australia, as recorded at the Singapore Intercontinental Conference.
Public Meetings in Switzerland
Bring Increased Recognition to Faith

Bahá'ís of Switzerland are inspired by the enthusiastic response they have had to a number of public meetings in recent months. Not only have the meetings been exceptionally well-attended, but they have brought additional notice from press and radio.

On January 30 the Bahá'ís of Lausanne presented Jean Sevin, Bahá'í pioneer to Tahiti for the past five years, to an audience of 110. Many came originally attracted by the subject: "Tahiti, Five Years Experience of a Bahá'í Pioneer." The history, customs, and actual problems of this region were beautifully illustrated by slides, reminding one of Gauguin's paintings in their exotic coloring. But it was the Bahá'í Faith itself, ably presented by Mr. Sevin, that drew the final unanimous and enthusiastic response.

The stock of literature was completely sold, much of it to the university students present. A good article appeared on the Faith in a Lausanne newspaper two days later, and Radio-Lausanne requested an interview with Mr. Sevin, the event so impressing the interviewer that he suggested a much longer period be given to the next Bahá'í guest speaker!

The following evening Mr. Sevin presented his program in Geneva to 170 people, there having been good newspaper and poster publicity given previously. Mr. Sevin's delightful way of presenting his subject again evoked interest and enthusiasm. Early the following month, the program given in Neuchatel and Vevey, two Crusade goal cities, awakened new response to the Faith.

In St. Gall, a Crusade goal in German Switzerland, a series of public talks brought forth an invitation for Fritz Semle, vice-chairman of the Italo-Swiss National Spiritual Assembly, to speak before the Bons Templers. The subject given to Mr. Semle by the Bons Templers themselves is "The Future in the Light of the Bahá'í Faith."

Guam Observes World Religion Day
With Broadcast and Public Meeting

Bahá'ís of Guam observed World Religion Day on January 18 by using two teaching mediums, a radio talk at 12:30 p.m. and a public meeting at 3:30 p.m.

Edgar A. Olson, who has had past experience with radio, spoke on the broadcast, and Robert Imagire addressed an audience of thirty people at the Guam Academy of Music, centrally located in Agana, Guam's principle village. Both speakers used the suggested theme of the oneness of religion.

These events were well-publicized with the placement of posters in prominent locations, many spot announcements on the radio, and five stories in the local newspaper.

Air Force Academy Accepts Bahá'í Books

The Local Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Colorado Springs, Colo., recently presented the Air Force Academy Library with a group of thirteen Bahá'í books in honor of Mrs. Loulie Albee Mathews, Bahá'í lecturer and author, who resides in Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Gladys Roberts (second from left), secretary of the Colorado Springs Bahá'í Assembly, made the official presentation to Lt. Col. George V. Fagan, Director of the Academy Library. Observing the ceremony are Mrs. Vivian Pooley, Mrs. Mary Creitz, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hill.

The land occupied by the Air Force Academy was formerly the site of the Temerity Bahá'í School, donated to the Faith by Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Mathews of Pine Valley, near Colorado Springs. The school, organized in 1940, was first known as the International Bahá'í School, whose primary purpose was to give special training in teaching to prospective pioneers to Latin America.

Many fine teachers have accepted invitations to teach at Davison this summer, and the following names are presently on the 1959 faculty: Fred Sudhop, Eunice Braun, Ruth Blackwell, Archie Tichenor, and Heather Stewart. Popular husband-and-wife teams who will serve again this year are the Wolfs and the Byers.

In addition to the regular courses, plans are made to conduct intensive study courses each weekend, and thus enable some students to have capsule courses when they are not able to attend for a longer period.

Complete announcement of all these classes will be found in the official 1959 Summer School Program.

Prospective students are urged to make reservations as soon as possible by writing the Registrar, Davison Bahá’í School, 3208 South State Road, Davison, Mich. Prices will be comparable to last year, and many improvements have been made in accommodations.

Parents contemplating enrolling for Family Sessions are reminded that special classes and entertainment will be provided for children while adult classes are in session.

If You Cannot Go Far—Then Go Near!

The Canadian Bahá’í News, April 1959, has published the following article, indicating clearly the dedication and loving service that brings results in these swiftly-passing, meaningful days of the World Crusade. Can this be the quality of devotion for which the beloved Guardian called in his message to the American believers of September 1957? He said: “It is upon the individual believer, constituting the fundamental unit in the structure of the Homefront, that the revitalization, the expansion, and the enrichment of the Homefront must ultimately depend.”

“Have you ever thought of teaching the Faith, as a special project, in a town near you? A place, perhaps, where an isolated believer is in need of help, a place where no other firesides are being held. Choose a place that is not a goal, for this teaching you plan to do is to be an ‘extra’ effort, over and above what you and your teaching committee are now doing. You cannot know, if you have not yet undertaken this type of teaching, the joy that floods in upon you, for such extra effort brings in its wake much extra joy.

“The most recent of such efforts that has come to our attention is from London, Ontario, where Bob and Dorothy Smith felt within themselves an urgency to do more, although they were already carrying a sizeable teaching and administrative load.

“Two friends, who had become believers in London last summer, moved to St. Thomas and were in need of experienced assistance. Prayer and consultation pointed the way. Remembering the shining example of Grace and Harlan Ober, the Smiths dedicated themselves to give weekly firesides at the home of Myrna and William Davis in St. Thomas.

“Filling the car with London Bahá’ís, they made the trips regardless of weather, and though at first there was, perhaps, disappointment, they continued their efforts. Now the results are showing, like crocus shoots through snow. Five persons are attending with promising regularity.

“The Smiths assumed full responsibility for the time, effort, and financing of this project, and to quote them, ‘We deem it a privilege and a loving service to the Cause of Bahá’u’lláh.’

“Will you make a decision to consult with your teaching committee to see if you too can render such a loving service to His Glorious Cause? This, too, is pioneering in a sense. If you cannot go far, then go near, but go! Dedicate a few extra hours of teaching outside of your immediate community. Open wide the flood gates of joy.”

Honolulu Bahá’ís Place Many Books in Schools and Libraries of Oahu

The Library Committee of the Honolulu, Hawaii, Bahá’í community, since February of this year, has been successful in placing two Bahá’í books, Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era and Prescription for Living, in all of the eleven public high schools on the island of Oahu. To date several gracious letters of thanks have been received from their librarians.

Since March of this year, the Bahá’ís have been given permission to place Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era and Prescription for Living in all eight of the private high schools on Oahu. Two of these, Maryknoll and St. Louis, are Catholic schools, three are non-sectarian, one is Congregational, and two are Episcopalian.

Seven of the branch libraries on Oahu have had the above books in their libraries since last year. Bahá’í books in the main library in Honolulu represent the largest selection of religious books in the library, over twenty in number. Last year the main library accepted Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, Bahá’í Prayers, and Bahá’u’lláh and the New Era in the Japanese language.

An African Pioneer Speaks

In the first five years only a small portion of the many great goals set for us by our beloved Guardian were accomplished. Now, in these fleeting months, we have yet the majority to achieve. How staggering and how heartbreakingly is it to realize that many of us are still asleep!

Only we can hear the call; we are under the All-Protection Tree. But are we listening? Are we not as heedless as those of past ages? Today the clarion calls are the appeals and the messages from the Hands of the Cause, the letters from the spiritual assemblies, the plans and programs of their committees. These letters and messages are not being written to entertain us; there's a job to be done!

Life was given for one purpose: to love; to obey, and to serve God by serving His humanity. It is but one stopover on our long trek into God's other kingdoms. What we have here on earth, this sack of gold, is too heavy to lift heavenward. Let us drop it!

It has been the same story down through the ages. The Prophets come, they call, and their Message leaves its heavenly vibration in the air for years and years. So few lift their heads to listen, but when those few have heard, they, too, go out, cup their hands to their mouths and echo the call. Have you listened? Have you heard?

Why do so few hear this Message? What has happened to our fellow-believers, that some do not hear the rumblings of this great flood, this spiritual challenge? Were they not deepened enough, or have they forgotten?

Bahá'u'lláh has been calling us for years, through our beloved Shoghi Effendi. Now He calls us through the entrusted Hands of the Cause. This is the call before the flood.

BAHÁ'Í IN THE NEWS

The National Geographic Magazine for January 1959 contains an article entitled “Station Wagon Odyssey: Baghdad to Istanbul” by William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court, and Mercedes H. Douglas. While in Tabriz he was encountered by a Bahá'í who gave him information about recent Bahá'í activities. The author then recounts the story of the public execution of the Báb at Tabriz.

The New International Year Book for a number of years has carried a brief statement about the Faith, with special emphasis on activities in America. Material has been supplied for the next edition, including reference to the completion of the Home for the Aged in Wilmette.

The newspaper entitled Novedades, published in Mexico City, reported on December 29, 1958, the marriage of Barbara Carson to Alejandro Cervantes Bustamente in a Bahá'í ceremony. A two-column photograph of Barbara Carson illustrates the article. This is the first reference to a Bahá'í marriage which has appeared in the Mexican press. “Mr. Canales read the marriage contract by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, which was profoundly moving and listened to with great interest by those present,” the article stated.

The school paper published by the students of the Inter-American University of Puerto Rico, entitled Polígrapo, reports an address delivered before the Department of Religion and Philosophy by a member of the local assembly. “Mr. Heath, a businessman from a Fomento industry, spoke of the foundations of Bahá'í and related some of his personal experiences in the religion.” This article appeared in January 1959.

The Toronto Globe and Mail for January 17, 1959, published an extensive article about the Faith under a four-column head “Bahá'ís Accept Messages of Eight Religions.” This article was based upon an interview with Mrs. Peggy Ross, secretary of the Canadian National Assembly, who during the autumn of 1958 completed a journey round the world, meeting the believers in each city she visited. A large photograph of Mrs. Ross, carrying souvenirs of her trip to Samoa, accompanied the article. Mrs. Ross is also a member of the Auxiliary Board appointed by the American Hands.

A real estate firm of Wilmette ran a page advertisement in Wilmette Life for January 22, 1959, with several illustrations of streets, houses, and interiors. The Bahá'í House of Worship appears at the top of the page.

The Asian Student, a weekly newspaper published as a service to Asian students in the United States by the Asia Foundation, published in its January 13, 1959, issue a detailed review of the book by John Ferraby entitled All Things Made New. “Each age requires a reinterpretation of human values relative to their divine or universal application. Such reinterpretations often takes place by God manifesting Himself to man in the form of the Founder of a religion that is both a renewal of former religions and the inspiration of its age.” The reviewer was K. Bhashara Rao.

Under the title “Portia, Teacher and NCNW Executive Director,” the Pittsburgh Courier on January 17, 1959, published an article about Elsie Austin accompanied by her photograph. “Attorney Elsie Austin of BAHÁ'Í GROUP OF ROSARIO, ARGENTINA, WHICH HOPES TO REACH ASSEMBLY STATUS AT RIQÁN 1958, THEREBY ASSURING THE MINIMUM NUMBER OF ASSEMBLIES NECESSARY FOR THE FORMATION OF THE NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY OF ARGENTINA IN 1959. A REGIONAL TEACHING CONFERENCE WAS HELD IN ROSARIO ON NOVEMBER 30, 1958, WITH THIRTY-THREE BAHÁ'ÍS AND SIX GUESTS FROM NINE ARGENTINE CITIES.

From law to teaching in India was not a short step, but an important one. It stemmed from her interest in the Bahá’í religion. (The reporter unfortunately substituted “India” for “Africa” in this reference to Miss Austin.)

A recent issue of New York Herald-Tribune carried a letter signed by Mrs. Diane C. Starher, Orleans, France, which clearly and forcefully sets forth the need of a return of the Prophet. “If we are to have this civilization, it is not necessary to have a universal religion, such as the Bahá’í World Faith, the only force capable of spiritually regenerating mankind and of providing the means by which this civilization can be attained.”

In one of a series of articles reporting on the lesser known religious groups of Akron, Ohio, the Akron Beacon Journal of December 13, 1958, dealt with the Bahá’í community and the Bahá’í teachings. Here there has been a small group for some fifty years. Their fireside meetings were described sympathetically and the Bahá’í teachings explained.

The State Convention of the Bahá’ís of New Mexico was briefly reported in the Santa Fe Scene for December 13.

Beloved Friends:

The U.S. National Assembly calls your attention to this important message cabled to our recent convention by the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land:—“IMPELLED APPEAL NAME BELOVED GUARDIAN TO AMERICAN BELIEVERS TO CONCENTRATE PARTICULAR ATTENTION ON THE URGENT NECESSITY TO RAISE A SECOND ARMY OF PIONEERS TO GO FORTH AND ESTABLISH NEW ASSEMBLIES IN EUROPE AND LATIN AMERICA, THE ESSENTIAL FOUNDATION OF THE FUTURE PILLARS OF THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE. CRUCIAL HOUR REQUIRES UNPRECEDENTED SACRIFICIAL OUTPOURING OF FUNDS ON THE PART OF THE CHIEF EXECUTORS OF THE DIVINE PLAN. LIKEWISE APPEALING TO FRIENDS GATHERED AT CONVENTION IN CRADLE OF FAITH TO RESPOND TO THE NEED THROUGH GENEROUS SUPPORT OF DEPUTIZATION PROJECT. URGE FRIENDS JOIN IN PRAYERS FOR SUCCESS OF THIS HISTORIC UNDERTAKING IN EAST AND WEST.”

This appeal is directed to every individual believer, every local assembly, every group, and every area teaching committee. It is to be pondered by every follower of Bahá'u'lláh in America, discussed at Nineteen-Day Feasts, and reprinted with appropriate comment in local and area bulletins.

What the Hands in the Holy Land express so vigorously in this brief text actually concentrates the essence of those passages in their written Convention message (enclosed with the May issue of Bahá'í News) pertaining to the American Bahá'í community.

1. “Impelled appeal... American believers to concentrate particular attention on urgent necessity to raise a second army of pioneers to go forth and establish new assemblies in Europe and Latin America as the essential foundation of future pillars of the Universal House of Justice.”
2. “Crucial hour requires unprecedented sacrificial outpouring of funds on the part of the chief executors of the Divine Plan.”
3. “Likewise appealing friends gathered in Convention at cradle of Faith (that is, Persia) to respond to the need through generous support of deputization project.”
4. “Urge friends join in prayers for success of this historic undertaking in East and West.”

Mission of the American Bahá'ís

That they followed their written message with this urgent appeal clearly indicates the urgency of our service to the Crusade at this time.

Turning now to the Convention message addressed to all annual Bahá'í conventions held this year throughout the world, we note these salient passages pertaining to the mission of the American Bahá'ís:—

“This past year has witnessed the steady onward march of the Cause of God in every field. When we recall how grievous and shattering was the blow we received in November 1957, we cannot but marvel at the evidences, so clear for friend or enemy to behold, of the indomitable strength of this Cause which the Guardian knit so firmly together, and the foundations of whose Administrative Order he laid so securely during his lifetime that the earthquake of his passing neither shattered the unity nor shook the confidence of the Community of the followers of the Most Great Name. Let us bow our heads humbly in gratitude to the Author of our Faith for His protection and manifold mercies showered upon us during these days of supreme test and suffering.”

“The number of countries, islands, and dependencies where the Standard of Bahá'u'lláh has been unfurled now totals two hundred and fifty-five, as a result of the settlement during the past year of a pioneer in Spitzbergen, the one remaining virgin goal outside the Soviet orbit. This feat, achieved by the Knight of Bahá'u'lláh Paul Adams, brings the total number of new territories opened to the Faith since the inception of the Ten-Year Plan to one hundred and twenty-seven. At the end of the sixth year of the Crusade the number of localities included within the pale of the Faith has reached the impressive total of over five thousand two hundred, fulfilling the wish of Shoghi Effendi, expressed in his last Ridván Message that "... strenuous efforts must be exerted for the purpose of multiplying the existing groups and isolated centers in all the continents of the globe, insuring thereby the early attainment of the goal of five thousand Bahá’í centers in the Eastern and Western Hemispheres. "Such a signal achievement represents an increase of almost seven hundred centers since his passing, centers referred to by him as pivots of Bahá’í teaching and administrative activity, and which have more than doubled since the launching of the World Crusade in 1953."

New National and Local Assemblies Formed

"The formation during the current Ridván period of the new National Spiritual Assemblies of Austria, Burma, and Turkey, and the Regional National Spiritual Assembly of the South Pacific, as specified by the beloved Guardian himself, brings the total of these forerunners and future pillars of the Universal House of Justice to thirty-one, sixteen of which are now incorporated, four having achieved this status during the past year. The total number of local spiritual assemblies established throughout the world, and constituting, in the words of our Guardian, 'the foundation of a rising Administrative Order,' is now nearly twelve hundred and seventy-five, almost two hundred more than the number reported in last year's Convention Message."

"The number of languages into which Bahá’í literature has been translated now totals two hundred and sixty-one, an increase of one hundred and seventy-two in six years, over ninety of which represent supplementary languages added since the inception of the Crusade.

"The acquisition of the Ḥażíratu’l-Quds in Caracas, Venezuela, and the endowment in Brussels, Belgium, during the past year completes the list of such properties originally specified as goals of the Ten-Year Crusade. In addition to these, located in the capitals and chief cities which are or will be the seat of the national and regional assemblies to be established by 1963, a significant number of Ḥażíratu’l-Quds have been acquired in recent years."

"The original Crusade goal calling for the acquisition of eleven Temple sites was fulfilled more than a year ago, with the purchase of the site of the future Ḥażíratu’l-Adhkär in Stockholm. In anticipation of the day when Bahá’í Houses of Worship will be built, not only in every continent, but in many different countries, the beloved Guardian included the purchase of additional Temple sites in the subsidiary Plans which he assigned to the new national and regional assemblies formed since 1953. Seventeen of these supplementary sites have now been acquired throughout the world, eight during the past year, in Colombia, Ecuador, Haiti, Honduras, Paraguay, and Uruguay in Latin America; New Zealand in the Antipodes; and in Tunisia on the northern fringe of the African Continent."

Evidences of Expansion of Bahá’í Institutions

"Throughout the Western Hemisphere, the Community of the Most Great Name now comprises over nineteen hundred Bahá’í centers. In Central and South America and the neighboring islands, where a total of twenty new national spiritual assemblies must be formed before 1963, there are nearly two hundred and forty centers, sixty-five of which have their own local spiritual assemblies. Since the beginning of the World Crusade, contact has been established with nearly sixty Indian tribes in North, Central, and South America, of which nearly thirty are now represented in the Faith. The steady advancement in this field, to which the beloved Guardian attached so much importance, is evinced by the formation of the second all-Indian Local Spiritual Assembly in South America last Ridván in Vilakollo, Bolivia. Among many other evidences of the expansion of Bahá’í institutions throughout the Americas during the past year may be mentioned the inauguration of the first Summer School in Alaska; the beginning of active publication by the newly-established Bahá’í Publishing Trust in Buenos Aires; the first dependency of the Mother Temple of the West, the Bahá’í Home for the Aged, was officially opened a few months ago, an event of undoubted historic importance exemplifying those institutions of humanitarian service which Bahá’u’lláh Himself specified should cluster about the Ḥażíratu’l-Adhkär in every city—and demonstrate the spirit of His Teachings."

"The last three of the five mighty Intercontinental Conferences, called for by the beloved Guardian at the mid-way point of the World Crusade, were held in Chicago, Frankfurt, and Singapore, and proved the vehicles for a communion of heart amongst the sorrowing believers the world over such as had never before been experienced in Bahá’í history. Over six thousand of the followers of Bahá’u’lláh attended these conferences."

"Although the work before us may be less spectacular than that already accomplished, there can be no doubt in anyone’s mind that upon its successful conclusion depends the ultimate triumph or failure of the entire Crusade. It constitutes no less than the bedrock of future Bahá’í activities for centuries to come, for upon it depends the erection, on a firm and lasting foundation, of those new national assemblies which are to be among the first pillars of that mighty institution of Bahá’u’lláh, the Universal House of Justice. The task is a two-fold one: In the republics of Latin America and the ten Goal Countries of Europe immediate action must be taken to reinforce and bring to Assembly status those groups which are at the present time the most promising nuclei for new assemblies, and without the multiplication of which the new independent national assemblies will lack the foundation the Guardian specified as pre-requisites for their election."

A Second Army of Pioneers Needed

"Careful consideration of the nature of the work facing the Bahá’í world during the coming four years reveals that the paramount need, one might almost say the sole need, is to raise a second glorious all-conquering army of pioneers, who will arise and go forth with the same rapidity, dedication, and zeal as did that first glorious army in the opening years of the Crusade, and this time conquer, not new territories and islands, but new cities, towns and villages in the Western Hemisphere, Europe, Asia, North Africa, and the Antipodes."

"This presents to each and every Bahá’í a tremendous personal challenge. Is he or she going to have a part, before it is too late, in the Guardian's Global Crusade, the purpose of which is primarily to lay that lasting foundation for the Universal House of Justice created in His Most Holy Book by Bahá’u’lláh? There is no longer time for hesitation, the sands of the Crusade are rapidly running out and with them each one’s own great personal opportunity, never to recur. Every single believer must hold before himself the goal of either personally being responsible for the attainment of these objectives, through arising to pioneer himself, or through assisting his fellow-Bahá’ís to do so, and thus be instrumental in insuring that by 1963 the followers of Bahá’u’lláh will be found in firmly grounded, well informed, actively functioning communities in every area where a national regional assembly exists, and in many of the territories and major islands where His Cause has been established during the World Crusade.

“It is, we firmly believe, the supreme duty of all national and regional assemblies to concentrate their undivided attention during this particular year of the Crusade on procuring new pioneers and settling them, with no delay whatsoever, in those spots where their presence in the chosen objectives abroad or in the goal cities of the various homefronts will enable new assemblies to be formed next Ridván. There can be no doubt that upon the success of such steps taken immediately depends the fortunes of our Guardian’s Crusade, a Crusade which in its world-embracing scope, has carried the Divine Plan of ‘Abdu’l-Bahá a mighty step forward in its unfoldment, and which must inevitably lead to the spiritual conquest of the entire planet.

“The financial resources of the Bahá’í world must be mustered and expended at this time for the attainment of this mighty purpose. We can do no better than appeal to each and every individual believer in the Guardian’s own words: ‘Let them resolve, instantly and unhesitatingly, to place, each according to his circumstances, his share on the altar of Bahá’ís sacrifice, lest, on a sudden, unforeseen calamities rob them of a considerable portion of the earthly things they have amassed.’”

Here we have before us the fuller exposition of this “Crucial Hour,” which carries the promise of Bahá’u’lláh Himself that the unification of mankind in one faith and one order is now to be achieved. The Bahá’ís advance through no pathless jungle of uncertainty to an unknown future, but stand in the very heart of victory. This we must realize with all our spirit, because without the sacrifice of the lower self to the spirit of faith, the irresistible force of that victory cannot inspire us. To manifest the spirit of faith, we must fulfill the Guardian’s Ten-Year Plan. There is no faith if there is no realization and no sweeping flood of joyous self-sacrifice.

Let the non-believing world continue its vain effort to create peace with the fabric of war, and to attain wealth by multiplying the sources of poverty and ruin. It is for every Bahá’í to fulfill his true destiny in giving his all to fulfill the destiny of a divine Cause.

Sincerely,
—U.S. National Spiritual Assembly

Indian Conference of UN Non-Governmental Organizations Stresses Need for Realization of Oneness of Mankind

The Second Indian National Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations on United Nations Information was held at Vigyan Bhavan, New Delhi, from April 3 to 5, 1959. This Conference was opened by the Prime Minister, Shri Jawaharlal Nehru, with an address advocating the idea of the oneness of nations of the whole world, thus attaining the federation of all nations.

He exhorted the people to live in peace, harmony, and unity, and to abolish all prejudices, and added that it is high time that mankind realize we are all basically one, and only one, in this world. We should think, plan, and work for each other’s welfare, he said.

The Under-Secretary of the UN, Mr. Subramaniyam, who represented the Secretary-General at the Conference, also stressed the significance and the importance of the oneness of all the nations of the world.

There were about one hundred non-governmental organizations of India represented at this Conference, which included political, semi-political, non-political, social welfare, trade unionist, and some religious organizations. The International Bahá’í Community of India was represented by Mrs. Shrin Fozdar, Dr. K. K. Bhargava, R. R. Williams, and P. C. Auplish.

The Conference was divided into three working groups: Information about UN, Teaching about UN, and UNO as an Instrument of Peace. Bahá’ís were represented in all three of these groups.

These working groups held discussion on their respective subjects, and placed their reports before the Plenary Session of the Conference on April 5, for discussion and approval by the full house.

Several resolutions regarding propagation and popularity of the UN principles were passed by the Conference. Through these resolutions it was recommended to the UN that every possible step be taken for publicizing the UN Charter and its principles enunciating the oneness and unity of mankind, and the methods to achieve lasting peace. The non-governmental organizations were requested to inculcate the UN spirit among the people they represented.

Among the most important resolutions passed by the Conference on peace, universality, military pacts, total disarmament, universal education for peace, and a world language, the Bahá’í delegates sponsored several resolutions that were also passed, including annulment of the veto clause in the UN Charter, UN recognition to the federations of peoples of different states as well as to their governments, and admission of all sovereign states to the UN, with other states that have not reached a sovereign status under direct trusteeship of the UN.

On the evening of April 5 a symposium on Peace was organized, and many speakers took part. They emphasized the need for a new world order and unity among all the nations to bring everlasting peace.

Dr. V. K. R. V. Rao, vice-chancellor of Delhi University, said that the time has come for the world to be united under one religion, since the old religions, due to their static and impracticable status, have become outdated.

This new religion, Dr. Rao said, should be based on the realization of the oneness of mankind, so that the problems of world peace might be solved, and there would come maximum understanding of each other through common bonds of love and unity.

Dr. Rao was immediately reminded of the Bahá’í Faith and its teachings given to the world by Bahá’u’lláh. The Bahá’í delegates presented the Bahá’í plan for peace to the speaker and to the audience. The Bahá’í Message was also given to the participants of the Conference, and it was fully commended by the other delegates.

All National Assemblies Endorse
United Nations Genocide Convention

Two representatives of the Bahá’í International Community, H. Borrah Kavelin and Mrs. Mildred R. Mottabedeh, presented to the President of the Human Rights Commission, Ambassador Gunewardene of Ceylon, an endorsement of the Genocide Convention by all its national and regional assemblies, representing more than eighty countries and territories, on April Representatives of the Bahá’í International Community greeting the President of the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations, Ambassador Ratnakirti Gunewardene, after presenting an endorsement of the Genocide Convention by all the Bahá’í national and regional assemblies.

10, 1959, in New York City. These endorsements came from Bahá’í assemblies located in North and South America, Europe, Africa, the Orient, Australia and New Zealand.

The Genocide Convention has been ratified by fifty-nine countries, the largest number of ratifications obtained by any Convention adopted under the auspices of the UN. Genocide is defined as the international crime of destroying national, racial, or religious groups.

Mr. Kavelin, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of the United States, made the following statement: “Mr. President, I have the honor and the privilege to present to you, as the keeper of the conscience of the United Nations and therefore of the world at large, documents which represent an act of conscience of my fellow co-religionists of more than eighty countries and territories.

“The resolution they have adopted reads: ‘Since the teaching and practice of the oneness of mankind is the cornerstone of the religion revealed by Bahá’u’lláh, His followers throughout our jurisdiction recognize the vital importance of the Genocide Convention for assuring the protection of small and helpless races and peoples.

“The Bahá’ís of the world have endorsed the Genocide Convention as an expression of their firmly-held conviction of the oneness of mankind and of the human race.

“Nations, races, and religious groups are called upon to enrich, through their own inherent gifts, the common treasury of civilization. Therefore the destruction of any one of them impoverishes the whole of the human race.

“Upon the preservation of this basic noble principle depend all the other efforts of the United Nations. By endorsing the Genocide Convention the Bahá’ís express, through us, the hope that all the nations of the world will rally around this great Convention.”

Ambassador Ratnakirti Gunewardene replied as follows: “Mr. Kavelin and Members of the Bahá’í International Community: I am greatly impressed by the endorsement of the Genocide Convention by eighty national and regional assemblies of the Bahá’ís, coming as they do from countries and territories from all over the globe. This is a most powerful expression of world opinion. It makes us feel that our work here in the United Nations is supported indeed, not only by the governments, but by the peoples themselves.

“The Genocide Convention is a treaty by the people and for the people. It has been ratified by an impressive number of fifty-nine parliaments for the purpose of protecting not the Governments but the peoples themselves. It is people who provide the backbone of human history, and by destroying them history itself is interrupted. Millions of innocent men and women perished from genocide throughout the ages, but death did not silence their voices. These voices have awakened and nourished our conscience. It is with the ink of their blood that the Genocide Convention was written by the United Nations. We have now in this Convention a meaningful compact between East and West for the preservation of mankind.

“The Genocide Convention has already made an impact on human consciousness. The world ‘genocide’ carries in itself a moral judgment which the world will not suffer to be circumvented or weakened. To weaken a treaty which deals with the protection of life would mean undermining life itself. It is for this reason that nations have been unwilling to let the Genocide Convention lose its forcefulness, by having its concept included in other documents which are not enforceable. We hope that more nations will ratify the Genocide Convention and will adopt domestic laws against genocide. Let us rededicate ourselves to an affirmation of our belief in this great Convention which is so basic to civilization.”
869 Delegates and Visitors Find Renewed Inspiration at Fifty-First U. S. National Convention in Wilmette

UNCONQUERABLE joy, zest, and resolution in the face of tasks still unfinished—this was the spirit that promptly enveloped the Fifty-First Annual Convention of the Bahá’ís of the United States as it opened in Wilmette on April 23, 1959, for four prayerful days of deliberation and inspiration.

Reverence tempered the eager excitement of delegates and visitors in the Temple’s Foundation Hall when Chairman Borrah Kavelin hallowed the convocation with the simple words, “May this Convention be inspired by the spirit of the beloved Guardian.” Then a quick climax was reached with the reading of the message addressed by the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land to all of this year’s thirty-one national conventions.

In this historic document the revered Hands summarized many recent and current advances and victories, including the formation of four new national and regional assemblies during Riqván. In contrast, they pointed out that the success of our beloved Guardian’s Crusade, and the consequent assurance of early establishment of the Universal House of Justice, still depended upon a triumphant conclusion. In this connection the paramount need, and the foremost challenge to every believer, is a “second army” of pioneers to conquer, not new territories, but additional cities, towns, and villages in the Western Hemisphere, Europe, Asia, North Africa, and the Antipodes.

To help implement this “mass migration,” the beloved Hands proposed, to the National Spiritual Assemblies of Iran and of the United States, a joint deputation project whereby Persian Bahá’ís, eager but hampered in going forth, can give financial assistance to North American believers able to reach the places so urgently in need of teachers and settlers.

Pioneers Urged to Remain at Their Posts

Heavily stressed, along with this great plan, were pleas that all present pioneers, abroad and on the homefronts, remain at their posts at all costs, and that, as implored by the beloved Guardian, believers everywhere place “on the altar of Bahá’í sacrifice” their share of the needed financial resources.

Singularly appropriate after the reading of the message was a brief address, by revered Hand of the Cause and secretary of the Convention Horace Holley, on the institution of the Hands. Particularly impressive was his reminder that, through one inspired sentence designating the Hands as “chief stewards,” Shoghi Effendi gave continuity to the Faith after his passing, when no national assembly could have taken the initiative in order to assure this.

The message from the Hands in the Holy Land brilliantly illuminated the theme that had been set for the Convention: “This Crucial Year of the World Crusade.” Further confirming the direction and tone of the Convention were two statements by beloved Hand of the Cause William Sears, who is functioning as an American Hand for the remaining Crusade years. First he appealed for that greater love, among ourselves and toward all mankind, that will transform the world.
Subsequently he added a ringing, energizing declaration: "We are the people; this is the hour," a slogan which permeated all the consultation that followed, and which gave the Convention a "wonderful spirit of action," as Mr. Sears himself later described it.

Exemplifying that spirit was the Convention's cabled acknowledgment of the message from Haifa:

CONVENTION DEEPLY GRATITUDE FOR MESSAGE OF HANDS OF CAUSE DEPICTING ONWARD MARCH OF FAITH AND PROVIDING BASIS FOR CONVENTION CONSULTATION AND ACTION. HUMBLED AND INSPIRED BY PROPOSAL OF JOINT DEPUTIZATION PROJECT UNITING EAST AND WEST. DEEPLY APPRECIATE ASSIGNMENT TO WESTERN HEMISPHERE OF HAND OF CAUSE WILLIAM SEARS WHO FIRES US WITH RENEWED LOVE AND ENTHUSIASM. AWARE OF VAST SCOPE OF UNFINISHED TASKS BUT PRAY AND BELIEVE WE WILL PROVE WORTHY OF SUPREME CONFIDENCE PLACED IN US BY OUR BELOVED GUARDIAN. UNITED WITH YOU IN LOVE FOR THE FAITH OF BABA'

In reply, the revered Hands reemphasized the original message's peak points applying to the tasks of the American Baha'is:

Self-Examination Reveals Shortcomings and Progress

Relating this newly depicted future to the recent past, the representatives of the American Bahai Community reviewed its shortcomings in a true spirit of self-examination. It became evident that if the last year had to be reckoned as one of meager general growth in the United States, this was at least partially offset by the definite and progressive acceleration of youth activities and enrollments. Furthermore, there were many other facets of promulgation that reflected notable advances or that gave promise for the near future. Among these were the earnest consideration and planning of expanded teaching among our beloved friends, the Negroes; the growing effectiveness of the teaching among the equally dear American Indians; the burgeoning activities of the College Bureau; the continued strengthening of relations with the United Nations on both national and international levels, in accordance with the beloved Guardian's wishes: the constant, outstanding advances in the field of child education; the further expansion of public proclamation through the press and other media, including new or recently revised literature designed to meet every need; the closer orientation of the summer schools to the Crusade goals; and the forward-looking reorganization of the significant audio-visual facilities.

Also to be counted as a positive factor was the encouraging response, among the believers themselves, to the National Spiritual Assembly's current homefront campaign to support our blessed Guardian's triple plea for "spiritual reinvigoration, administrative expansion, and material replenishment." Admittedly the response had not been far-reaching and fast enough to prevent, among other things, a considerable deficit in the past year's budget. However, a growing awareness of our responsibilities will probably improve the financial situation to the point of covering this deficit as well as the newly approved budget, somewhat smaller than last year's as a result of the completion of certain projects. Similarly, the National Spiritual Assembly's devoted and continuing efforts in the reorientation campaign will no doubt bear fruit in the other fields of our endeavor.

National Spiritual Assembly Elected

In the midst of its consultation the Convention paused, as always, for the solemn fulfillment of its other principal purpose: the election of the new national administrative body. The roster, following election of officers, stands as follows: Chairman, Borrah Kavelin; Vice-Chairman, Charles Wolcott; Secretary, Horace Holley; Assistant Secretary, Charlotte Linfoot; Recording Secretary, Edna True; Treasurer, Arthur Dahl; and Ellsworth Blackwell, Katherine True, and Florence Mayberry.

With this sacred duty prayerfully performed, the delegates resumed their consideration of the principal challenges that face the Bahá'í world, and particularly the American community, including those in Africa, Asia, and Europe.

First and foremost, obviously, comes the tremendous need and opportunity for 200 to 300 pioneers of the "second army" for Central America and Europe—100 of them needed immediately, in response to a special appeal from the Hands in the Holy Land. Closely coupled with this is a critical need for settlers to release other homefront Bahá'ís who can move to Latin America on a self-supporting basis. Both of these projects will serve the transcendent task of establishing, world-wide, thirty-four more national assemblies, of which eleven in Europe and twenty in the Western Hemisphere are the American community's responsibility. In addition, and despite these drains on their present numbers, the American believers must still form, or reconstitute, about 100 more local assemblies as soon as possible, to reach the needed total of 300, and must incorporate sixteen.

Highlights of Convention

All of the foregoing typifies a consultative ebb and flow that probably develops in every Bahá'í Convention: tasks accomplished versus things to be done; victories against reverses; poignant soul-searching followed by reviving joy. Over against recurring realization of multiple goals yet unattained stood the happiness of sending a message of gratitude and love to blessed 'Amatu'l-Bahá Rubiyth Khánum; the appearance before the Convention of the dearly cherished Hand of the Cause, Mrs. Corinne True; the joyous and arresting address given by William Sears as part of the intervening Ridván Feast; the radiant gathering of some fifty volunteers for the new "army," representing themselves and ten more; a notable talk by Miss Flora Emily Hottes on "Living the Life and the World Crusade"; the long-awaited news of government permission to build the Temple in Germany; the coming forward of Mrs. Charlotte Gillan, who helped to dedicate the Temple foundation stone in 1912 in the name of Alaska, and who in spite of her ninety years now wishes to pioneer there; the heartening messages from points far and near; the thrill of inspecting the recently opened Bahá'í Home, beautiful first accessory of the Maslı属'u'l-Adhkár; and the chanting of a prayer by a young Persian girl as she... and her fiancé made public announcement, before the Convention, of their betrothal.

Many were the inspirational and cogent phrases that rang in the minds of the 869 delegates and visitors as the great convocation drew toward its close: The rank and file must learn to teach. Go to the churches and study our competition. Don't send the children to church Sunday school; it only builds a foundation that will have to be torn up. Give full support and obedience to the administrative institutions; don't waste energy in wondering about their decisions. The present emergency, wholly spiritual in character, requires superhuman effort. We have been given all we need to carry out our tasks; draw on the Power. We must reach a state of universal love which rises above personality. To be truly integrated in the Faith, we must study daily, so as to really know the teachings and apply them to ourselves. Look to the Writings for inspiration, and to our fellow-believers for stimulation. Teach the soul as well as the mind. Concentrate on the power and help of prayer. There is strength only in unity! And, climaxing all, the Master's pearl of divine wisdom, "Spirituality is love in action."

Final Plea for Renewed Spirit at Home

With uplift outweighing regret, and dedicated resolve overshadowing all else, the fifty-first American Convention took its place in Bahá'í history; but not before Chairman Kavelin had voiced a final plea to "renew at home the spirit caught here," and beloved Hands Horace Holley and William Sears had offered their final strengthening words to everyone present.

Reluctantly each goes his own way, his inner eyes and ears still filled with sights and sounds. The warm vista of all the friends in Foundation Hall. The world's holiest House of Worship breathed in blending light and ethereal nighttime fog. The exaltation of the Revelator's prayer, Sweet-Scented Streams, sung by the choir in Charles Wolfe's undying music. And finally, a throbbing residue of sound that is almost silence. Is it a mental persistence of echoes from the Convention? Is it the departing wayfarer's own crowding pulse? Is it, possibly, a sensing of the first muted footfalls of the promised "troops," settling out at long last on their quest for their Lord?

First South Pacific Teaching Conference at Suva Precedes First Convention

The first teaching conference ever to be held for the Bahá'ís of the South Pacific took place in Suva, Fiji Islands, on April 22, 1959, as a prelude to the first annual convention of the Bahá'ís for that area, which was to follow during the next three days. Thirty-four believers from five island groups were present—Cook, Fiji, Samoa, Solomon, and Tonga—and from the national Bahá'í communities of Australia, New Zealand, and the United States of America. Among them were Hands of the Cause H. Collis Featherstone, five Auxiliary Board members, and five Knights of Bahá'u'lláh.

Mr. Featherstone acted as chairman of the conference, and Miss Margaret L. Rowling served as recorder and provided an excellent report from which this account has been prepared.

Miss Rowling reported that the spirit of the conference, which consulted on ways and means to carry forward 'Abdu'l-Bahá's Divine Plan and to complete the Guardian's Ten-Year Crusade, could best be expressed in the words of Bahá'u'lláh: "Verily, We behold you from Our realm of glory and shall aid whosoever will arise for the triumph of Our Cause with the hosts of the Concourse on high and a company of Our favored angels." (Gleanings, p. 39.)

Following opening prayers in English, Samoan, and Fijian, the program for the forenoon session included in addition to the greetings by Mr. Featherstone on behalf of the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land, from the Hands of the Cause in the United States, as well as from Mrs. Clara Dunn and himself as Hands of the Cause in Australia, greetings from Mrs. Margery McCormick on behalf of the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States and its Asia Teaching Committee, a stirring account by Mr. Featherstone of the rapid growth of the Faith in the South Pacific since the announcement of the World Crusade by Shoghi Effendi in October 1952, and reports of accomplishments from all of the island groups represented. These reports opened up the consultation that was to follow during the remainder of the conference on these subjects:

The best methods of spreading the Faith to island peoples; providing transportation to assembly meetings and Nineteen-Day Feasts for widely scattered members; translation of Bahá'í literature from English into the many languages spoken in the Polynesian, Melanesian, and Micronesian areas; incorporation of local spiritual assemblies; child education; establishment of Ḥazīratu’l-Quds; meeting the need for the stimulating effect of outstanding visitors and traveling teachers; handling the opposition of the sections of other religions that are established in the islands; finding employment for members who wish to transfer to other islands to establish the Faith; obtaining recognition of Bahā’ī Holy Days; providing good grounding for new believers in the spiritual teachings and administrative requirements of the Faith, so that they will not only be able to withstand the pressures brought to bear on them by other religious organizations, but also to enable them to teach effectively among their own people.

The afternoon session opened with the Bāb’s prayer for the removal of difficulties recited in eight languages: Hindustani, Kwaraae (Solomon Islands), Tongan, Rarotongan, Maori, Fijian, English, and Samoan.

According to Miss Rowling, a high note of enthusiasm was expressed in the consultation which followed on: “What is the best method of teaching the Faith?” “What books and pamphlets in English are most helpful in teaching the Faith in this area?” “What is the best way of having translations made?”

Mrs. Madge Featherstone, member of the Asian Teaching Committee of Australia, reported that, of the fourteen languages allotted to Australia by the Guardian for translation during the Ten-Year Crusade, thirteen had been completed and twelve additional translations had been achieved.

Mrs. Margery McCormick gave inspiring information and suggestions of teaching methods. She stressed the importance of visual aids, and illustrated certain types which she had personally found useful in the United States.

The conference adopted three recommendations to be presented to the first Regional Spiritual Assembly, which would be elected at the forthcoming convention, all having to do with the subject of translation and publication of teaching literature. One of the resolutions recommended a committee to simplify the language of the English text of certain widely-used basic pamphlets in order to meet the need of the less literate among the island peoples.

Many tributes were paid to the efficiency of the Asian Teaching Committee of the National Spiritual Assembly of Australia and the conference recorded its appreciation of all that had been done by this committee since the beginning of the World Crusade to help the pioneers in the South Pacific, including the monthly publication of Koala News which has been a constant source of inspiration and the means of keeping the pioneers and new believers throughout this vast region in touch with each other.

Other highlights were the references made to: the completion of the Ḥazīratu’l-Quds in Apia, Samoa, during the recent Fast period; the summer school held over the Christmas period in the home of one of the chiefs of Samoa—the first Bahā’ī summer school held in the South Pacific; and the establishment of Bahā’ī schools in their own school buildings in the Gilbert Islands and in the New Hebrides. “Perhaps the greatest highlight of all,” Miss Rowling stated, “was the thrilling account of the consecrated work of the Knights of Bahā’u’llāh and those who have carried out consolidation work in each of the goals of the Ten-Year Crusade, which has resulted in sufficient local spiritual assemblies being formed to enable the Regional Spiritual Assembly of the South Pacific to come into being during Ridvān 1959.”

The conference concluded with a social evening, including the showing of slides of the Holy Land, providing the friends from this vast area with still another opportunity to become acquainted with each other and with the elected delegates who would convene the following morning for the most important business of all, the formation of the first Regional Spiritual Assembly in the South Pacific.

Two Bahá’í Marriages in Malaya
Give Wide Publicity to Faith

The first Bahá’í marriage in the Federation of Malaya and Singapore was performed on October 5, 1958, with the wedding of Antony Fernandez and Miss Betty Monterio.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Capitol Hall, attended by the Chief Minister of State, the Secretary of State, local dignitaries, and over 500 other guests. Because of the great interest in this wedding, ‘Abú’l-Qásím Fáizi, Hand of the Cause, gave a talk on the Bahá’í Faith to the assembled guests.

The second Bahá’í marriage in Malaya was performed on December 20, 1958, for Leong Ho Chiew and Miss Lee Lan Choong. This wedding was also instrumental in giving publicity to the Faith in Malacca. Among the guests were Hand of the Cause Rahmatu’lláh Muhájjir and Mrs. Shírin Fozdar. Mrs. Fozdar was given an opportunity to speak about the Bahá’í Faith and its progress in Malaya, particularly in Malacca.

Correspondence Course on Bahá’í History in Central and East Africa Widely Used

The Teacher Training Committee of the Bahá’ís of Central and East Africa announced on March 1 a correspondence course in “Bahá’í History” for African believers with a good knowledge of English. A limited number of students was assigned to each of the English-speaking territories of the region.

The response has been much greater than expected. Over seventy-five students enrolled, representing eighteen places in Uganda, five in Tanganyika, six in Kenya, and Mahe in the Seychelles Islands.

The course consists of six lessons based upon the Teacher Training booklet An Outline of Bahá’í History, and about the same amount of additional material in the form of supplementary sheets.

Results of this first correspondence course have been so encouraging to the Teacher Training Committee that it plans another course on the “Teachings and Laws of Bahá’u’lláh,” to begin in a few months.

In order to help both the parents and teachers of Bahá’í children to arrive at a better understanding on how to teach children the Bahá’í Faith, the Child Education Committee of the Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Assembly conducted a three-hour Bahá’í Parent-Teacher Conference on April 19 which was attended by six of the Sioux Falls Bahá’ís. Following the opening address by the chairman, Mrs. Elnor Murray, who stressed the importance of religious education in the lives of children, the group consulted on nine questions. These questions included the following:

What basic Bahá’í teachings should be taught to the Bahá’í child?

Should there be a period of daily worship in the home?

Cablegram June 8, 1959

Beloved Bahá'í Friends:

This message addressed to the entire Bahá'í world through the Hands of the Faith and the national assemblies will quicken the heart of every believer.

What could be more encouraging than these words from the World Center of our glorious Faith? "Strong evidence Bahá'u'lláh's invincible hosts gathering forces preparation conquest remaining goals beloved Guardian's crusade" ... "confident total victory within reach if all hearts turn (to) Bahá'u'lláh ...

Adding the achievements reported in this cablegram to those enumerated in the Hand's Convention Message, we have not merely a statistical balance but the assurance of a new spiritual condition fulfilling the age-old hope for the redemption of the human race.

That condition begins with the formation of the Universal House of Justice, through which Divine law and order can be delivered to all races and peoples. In that body we will behold the consummation of the sacrifice of all the Prophets and Messengers since history began. It signifies a continuous expression of the Will of God in the guidance of the affairs of mankind.

What more noble privilege was ever proffered human beings than this provision added by the Hands; "if all hearts turn (to) Bahá'u'lláh supplicating His unfailing assistance ...

The Meaning of Faithfulness

In these crucial years of the World Crusade when we are immersed in the vital tasks which prepare the way for the formation of the Universal House of Justice, we must beware lest the immensity of the efforts blind us to the true nature of our Faith.

It is well to recall how many years the beloved Guardian devoted to an exposition of the Cause of Bahá'u'lláh and the significance of the Bahá'í community before he launched the first great collective undertaking, the Seven-Year Plan.

The Guardian's successive letters from October 1927 to July 1932, collected and published under the title Bahá'í Administration, raised up those landmarks by which a believer who had been Jew, Moslem, or Christian became a Bahá'í, qualified to serve the universal purposes of Bahá'u'lláh.

The generation of believers, who first followed these landmarks and constructed highways from the religious experiences of the past to that of the day of God, are passing away. It is no longer necessary to plead for the recognition of the local spiritual assembly and its committees, or the National Spiritual Assembly and the national committees it appoints from year to year. Nevertheless, even those believers who enter the Bahá'í community at the present time, while they are no longer pioneers who first trace a path and then build a highway, are actually compelled to achieve inwardly what their predecessors had to achieve in terms of a new concept of a religious society.

There is a world of difference between the new Bahá'í who accepts the institutions on the basis of how they happen to be administered when he enters the Cause, and the new Bahá'í who has traced the emergence of the institutions through the literature and can accordingly evaluate them in terms of the creative purpose rather than their temporary practice.

Since the formative passages of those letters of Shoghi Effendi are no longer brought to our attention in successive issues of Bahá'í News, it would be well to assemble at least a certain number of more significant passages in the hope that many individual believers will study them conscientiously and thus develop, beyond a mere passive acceptance, to the degree of inner understanding.

The following selections are all taken from Bahá'í Administration, sixth edition, published in 1953.

"According to the direct and sacred command of God we are forbidden to utter slander, are commanded to show forth peace and amity, are exhorted to rectitude of conduct, straight forwardness and harmony with all the kindreds and peoples of the world. We must obey and be the well-wishers of the governments of the land, regard disloyalty unto a just king as disloyalty to God Himself, and wishing evil to the government a transgression of the Cause of God." (p. 4)

"O ye beloved of the Lord! In this sacred Dispensation conflict and contention are in no wise permitted. Every aggressor deprives himself of God's grace. It is incumbent upon everyone to show the utmost love, rectitude of conduct, straightforwardness and sincere kindness unto all the peoples and kindreds of the world, be they friends or strangers. So intense must be the spirit of love and loving-kindness, that the stranger may find himself a friend, the enemy a true brother, no difference whatsoever existing between them. For universality is of God, and all limitations earthly. Thus man must strive that his reality may manifest virtues and perfections, the light whereof may shine upon everyone." (p. 9)

"Furthermore, 'Abdu'l-Bahá reveals the following: 'It is incumbent upon everyone not to take any step without consulting the Spiritual Assembly, and they must assuredly obey with heart and soul its bidding and be submissive unto it, that things may be properly ordered and well arranged. Otherwise every person will act independently and after his own judgment, will follow his own desire, and do harm to the Cause. "The prime requisites for them that take counsel together are purity of motive, radiance of spirit, detachment from all else save God, attraction to His Divine Fragrances, humility and lowliness amongst His loved ones, patience and long-suffering in difficulties, and servitude to His exalted Threshold. Should they be graciously aided to acquire these attributes, victory from the unseen Kingdom of Bahá shall be vouchsafed to them. In this day, assemblies of consultation are of the greatest importance and a vital necessity. Obedience unto them is essential and obligatory." (p. 21)

"Large issues in such spiritual activities that affect the Cause in general in that land, such as ... any periodical which the National Body may decide to be a Bahá'í organ, the matter of publication, of reprinting Bahá'í literature and its distribution among the various assemblies, the means whereby the teaching campaign may be stimulated and maintained, the work of the Mashriqu'l-Adhkar, the racial question in relation to the Cause, the matter of receiving Orientals and association with them, the care and maintenance of the precious film exhibiting a phase of the Master's sojourn in the United States of America ... and various other national spiritual activities, far from being under the exclusive jurisdiction of any local assembly or group of friends, must each be minutely and fully directed by a special board, elected by the National Assembly, constituted as a committee thereof, responsible to it and upon which the National Body shall exercise constant and general supervision." (p. 24)

"In order to avoid division and disruption, that the Cause may not fall a prey to conflicting interpretations and lose thereby its purity and pristine vigor, that its affairs may be conducted with efficiency and promptness, it is necessary that every one should conscientiously take an active part in the election of these assemblies, abide by their decision, enforce their decree, and cooperate with them wholeheartedly in their task of stimulating the growth of the Movement throughout all regions. Members of these assemblies, on their part, must disregard utterly their own likes and dislikes, their personal interests and inclinations, and concentrate their minds upon those measures that will conduce to the welfare and happiness of the Bahá'í Community and promote the common weal." (p. 41)
Grant Permission to Build Temple at Frankfurt After Six-Year Struggle

During the past Baha’i year, it seemed at times practically impossible to obtain permission for the Mother Temple of Europe, to be built at Frankfurt/Main.

In May the Landrat (district president) informed the National Spiritual Assembly of Germany and Austria that permission for the Temple would only be given if the Baha’is would build four roads leading to Langenhain (this is the very spot near Frankfurt where the Baha’i Temple is to be erected), a main purification plant and an enlargement of the water supply system for Langenhain. Fortunately the National Assembly was able to avert this decision.

After waiting for the permission for half a year, the National Spiritual Assembly received, in early December, the decision of the county council, which stated that the Baha’is were not allowed to build the Temple in this district because in this area there had never before been erected any building of this kind! After this the National Assembly, as well as the mayor of Langenhain, separately lodged a complaint with the Regierungs-präsident in Wiesbaden, and again all possible steps had been taken to further the project.

On March 25 the Regierungspräsident in Wiesbaden informed the National Assembly that the preliminary building application had been returned to the county council for revision, as the contested resolution of early December 1958 could not be maintained on the basis of the explanations given. The county council had been requested to decide again without delay.

On March 31 the National Assembly heard that the project would be decided upon again on April 2 in the meeting of the county council. On April 6 the National Assembly received word that the next day they could pick up the price and settlement permission at the office of the county council.

Finally the Baha’is had the papers in hand, and the National Assembly cabled to the Hands of the Cause residing in the Holy Land about the great achievement. Again on the same day the county council sent a letter that they had cancelled the negative decision of early December, and that the detailed building application could now be submitted to the Regierungs-präsident in Wiesbaden. The believers were extremely relieved that, with the help of Baha’u’llah, they were enabled to fulfill the desire of the beloved Guardian to have the Mother Temple of Europe built near Frankfurt/Main.
On Thursday morning April 23, in the sun-drenched city of Suva, Fiji Islands, the first Annual Convention of the Baha'is of the South Pacific was opened by the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly representative, Mrs. Margery McCormick. A total of sixty believers were present, including revered Hand of the Cause Collis Featherstone, five Auxiliary Board members, five Knights of Bahá'u'lláh, nine delegates, and visitors from the following countries and island groups: United States, Australia, New Zealand, Solomon Islands, Fiji Islands, Tonga, Cook Islands, and Samoa.

The first session opened with devotions in English, Fijian, Hindustani, and Tongan. The innumerable words of the Báb and Bahá'u'lláh, expressed in so many different tongues, constituted a tremendous spiritual experience, welding the assembled believers together with bonds of fellowship and love. At this moment, as at other times during the convention, consciousness of the privilege of being a Bahá'í and the honor of witnessing so striking an evidence of the power of this Faith to engender love and unity welled up within the heart, bringing a deep sense of longing to the soul.

In her opening address Mrs. McCormick conveyed the love and best wishes of the U.S. Bahá'ís for a successful convention, and expressed the regret of all U.S. National Assembly members at their not being able to be present to share with the assembled believers the joy of achieving this World Crusade goal.

The roll call showed nine delegates to be present, from Cook Islands, Fiji Islands, Samoa, Solomon Islands, and Tonga; with deep regret the Convention recorded the absence, due to transport difficulties, of the ten Gilbert and Ellice Islands delegates.

The convention proceeded to the election of Walli Khan as convention chairman and Mrs. Dulcie Dive as convention secretary. During the counting of votes, Mrs. McCormick read a letter of greeting from the U.S. Asia Teaching Committee. This inspiring letter reviewed the stupendous achievements of the last seventy months, pointing out how these victories provide yet another evidence of the power of the Hosts of the Supreme Concourse.

Message from Hands of Faith Read

High mark of the convention was the reception of the stirring message from the Hands of the Cause in Haifa. In this message, which was read by Mr. Featherstone, the Hands of the Cause enumerated the successive achievements, dating from the revelation of the Tablets of the Divine Plan, which have led up to the formation of the Regional Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the South Pacific. The formation of a supplementary Four-Year Plan was suggested, in order to consolidate and extend the historic work already achieved. The Hands stated: "You are now launching the barque of your own independent existence . . . Your destiny is in your own hands, the hands of the people of these islands who have become Bahá'ís, and who are the electors of this historic Regional South Pacific Assembly." The complete message follows this report.

Discussing the convention message, Mr. Featherstone called on the believers to arise and teach during this unique period in the history of the Faith. "Each Bahá'í in the Pacific is a foundation stone," Mr. Featherstone said. "Upon your efforts the Kingdom of God in the Pacific will be reared." "Not only have we become members of the world religion, not only have we arisen to teach the Faith, but also we have assumed the obligation of establishing the Kingdom of God on Earth, with its attendant world civilization." Mr. Featherstone concluded his moving address by appealing to every believer not to deviate one hairsbreadth from obedience to God's Plan for this age.

Following reception of the convention message, this cable was sent to the Hands of the Cause in Haifa:

"EIGHT COUNTRIES ONE HAND FIVE AUXILIARY BOARD MEMBERS FIVE KNIGHTS OF BAHA'U'LLAH NINE DELEGATES TOTAL SIXTY BELIEVERS ASSEMBLED CONVENTION SEND LOVING GREETINGS STOP DEEPLY GRATEFUL IN-SPRINGING ENCOURAGING MESSAGE GIFT ASSURE DEVOTION FULFILMENT GOALS BELOVED GUARDIANS PLAN”

Messages were also sent to the three island groups which did not have members of their community present at the Convention: Gilbert and Ellice Islands, New Caledonia, and New Hebrides.

Progress of the World Crusade

Mrs. Madge Featherstone, assistant secretary of the Australian Asian Teaching Committee, spoke next on “The World Crusade and its Goals in the South Pacific.” She summarized clearly and concisely the progress which has taken place since 1953 in each of the island groups of the South Pacific. Six local assemblies have been established, and the one assembly existing in 1953 has been consolidated; in addition, Bahá'ís reside in a further thirty-four localities situated in all the island groups specified for the Crusade, except the Loyalty Islands. Of the fourteen language translations specified as Crusade goals, thirteen have been achieved, together with an additional twelve translations. In Suva, the goals of purchase of a building to serve as a Hazíratu'l-Quds and of a Bahá'í endowment have both been attained. In addition, a Bahá'í school has been constructed in Port Vila, New Hebrides, and a Hazíratu'l-Quds in Apia, Samoa. Mrs. Featherstone concluded her address by appealing to the believers, one and all, to arise as never before to serve the Cause.

Building upon Mrs. Featherstone's address, convention delegates spoke on various aspects of the teaching work in their localities which might well have application in other South Pacific areas. This included discussion of children’s classes and of deepening classes for new believers.

Celebration of Ridván

Thursday night the friends gathered for the Ridván Feast. Prayers and selections from the Holy Writings were read in English, Samoan, Rarotongan, M'wala, and Tongan. Mrs. Elsa Blakely of Tonga spoke on “The Story of Ridván,” describing Bahá'u'lláh’s banishment to Baghdad and the events which occurred there prior to His Declaration. She pointed out how great was Bahá'u'lláh’s outpouring of Revelation during this period when He lived in conditions of extreme poverty. As Mrs. Blakely spoke of the Garden of Ridván and of the Declaration which has immortalized it, we felt almost overwhelmed by an awareness of the great spiritual forces released into the world at the coming of the Lord of Hosts.

Next, Tanuvasa Seniola of Samoa addressed the gathering on “The Declaration of Bahá'u'lláh.” Were any proof needed of the great spiritual capacity of the Pacific Islanders, this address would suffice. Speaking with deep sincerity he said, in part: ‘‘Were we to spend all our lives in meditation, the mystery of Bahá'u'lláh’s declaration would yet remain unravelled. . . . This is the Day for which countless generations through the ages prayed, the Day of the Manifestation of Bahá'u'lláh, the King of Days.” Mr. Tanuvasa concluded by referring to the Bahá’í Revelation in these words: “Bahá'u'lláh has given this most precious gift to us. It is ours to share with others. It is a living fountain to give to the people of the world who are so thirsty.”

Accomplishing Remaining Goals

Friday morning, the second day of the convention, opened with devotions in English and Rarotongan Maori.

A message of loving greetings was sent by the convention to the U.S. Convention, expressing deep appreciation at the assistance given by the American Bahá'ís during the last six years, and by the U.S. National Assembly representative Mrs. McCormick during the convention.

The morning session was devoted to consultation on how to accomplish the remaining Crusade goals in the South Pacific and on the best teaching methods for the people of this region. The delegates from each island group spoke briefly on the religious background of their people, on their teaching methods, and on possible aid which the Regional Assembly might give.

Delegates all praised the visual aids shown to the convention by Mrs. McCormick, and recommended that the Regional Assembly should distribute similar material to all island groups; it was felt that this material, is particularly suitable for teaching in this area.

The necessity for use of the administrative machinery to coordinate teaching activities was stressed. Bahá’ís should teach the Faith from its relationship to Christianity and the teachings of the Bible. Problems associated with the translation of literature and methods of deepening new believers were also discussed. Visitors from Australasia and the United States felt particularly humble at hearing the delegates quite matter-of-factly refer to up to four firesides and deepening classes being held in each local community each week.

Knight of Bahá'u'lláh Alvin Blum, who had travelled 4,000 miles to be present, said, upon invitation by the convention: “The power and the spirit of the Faith together constitute its greatest teaching medium. Wherever one Bahá’í exists, and the appropriate conditions are satisfied, a whole community will spring up around him. The Founders of the Faith have released great spiritual power; it is our duty to use it.”

Election of National Spiritual Assembly

Friday afternoon delegates gathered for the election of the Regional Spiritual Assembly. Before the election, three short talks were given on the Institution of the National Spiritual Assembly.

Hand of the Cause Collis Featherstone spoke on “The Spiritual Foundation of the National Assembly,” pointing out the uniqueness of this Revelation in all religious history in that it contains two distinct interrelated sections: the spiritual teachings and the administrative order.

Peter Khan, a member of the Australian National Assembly, spoke on “The Functions and Responsibilities of the National Assembly.” He enumerated the various functions of the National Assembly under seven headings, and spoke briefly on its responsibilities as representative of the national community.

Mrs. Margery McCormick spoke on “The Bahá’í Fund,” pointing out that it is one of the great institutions of the Faith, specified by Bahá'u'lláh. “We must all contribute according to our means,” said Mrs. McCormick, “It is the sacrifice that goes behind the giving that counts, not the amount given.”

After prayers had been offered for guidance, the election of the Regional Spiritual Assembly was held in an atmosphere of silent reverence. As the name of each island group was called, and its delegates came forward to put their votes in the ballot box, our thoughts turned to rememberance of the effort and sacrifice which had been the lot of those valiant and devoted servants of the Abhá Beauty who had translated this moment from the realm of dreaming and longing into that of reality.

The results of the election of members of the Re-
Regional Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of the South Pacific, and the officers elected by the Assembly are: Chairman, Alvin Blum; Vice-Chairman, Walli Khan; Secretary, Irene Jackson; Treasurer, Dulcie Dive; and Suhayl 'Aláí, Stephen Percival, Lisita Maka, Mabel Sneider, and Gertrude Blum. The Assembly includes members born in the United States, Australia, New Zealand, Persia, Tonga, and Fiji, and coming from backgrounds rooted in the Jewish, Christian, and Moslem Faiths.

Following the election, gifts were presented to the new assembly from administrative bodies, communities, and individuals all over the world. These gifts included a donation of $1000.00 as an inaugural gift to the National Fund from the Hands of the Faith, in the name of the beloved Guardian. Messages of greeting were received from the sister national assemblies of the world.

Late Friday afternoon a public meeting was held in Suva Town Hall, with an attendance of about 140. The meeting, chaired by Walli Khan, was addressed by Mr. Featherstone and Mrs. McCormick. The speakers were welcomed by Dr. Gopalan, a member of Suva City Council, who referred to the harmonious mixing of races in the Bahá'í communities as being evidence that Bahá'ís put their teachings of the oneness of mankind into practice.

Mr. Featherstone, speaking on the subject "What is the Bahá'í World Faith?" discussed the political, racial, and economic divisions which, in this troubled world, have set man against his brother. He showed that true religion, far from adding to the divisions of mankind, is the ideal solvent for the barriers dividing humanity. The Bahá'í teachings on the oneness of religions and the unity of mankind were then explained. Mr. Featherstone concluded his stirring address by stating that the coming of the Bahá'í Faith will bring about the unity of mankind and the birth of world civilization.

Mrs. McCormick, whose talk was entitled "Bahá'u'lláh, the Prophet for this New Age," vividly described the circumstances surrounding the birth of the Bahá'í Revelation in the Siyáh-Chál, and the historical details of the Ministry of Bahá'u'lláh. She explained the station of Bahá'u'lláh as the Promised One, leading on to show that a person entering the Bahá'í Faith fulfills rather than repudiates his former Faith.

Following these two speakers, Peter Khan addressed the meeting, at the request of a member of the audience, on the relationship of the Bahá'í Faith to Islam, and on the necessity in the present age for unprejudiced search after truth.

Concluding Events

Friday night over sixty believers attended a dinner given by Mrs. Margery McCormick at the Grand Pacific Hotel. Representatives of many races, some of whom had travelled thousands of miles to be present, gathered around one table and broke bread together in a universal and age-old expression of brotherhood.

On Saturday the entire day was devoted to consultation directed towards the subjects of teaching needs, teacher training, itinerant teachers, and Bahá'í schools, using the Convention Message from the Hands of the Cause as a guide. The newly-elected Regional Assembly, which had met until far into the previous night, presented ten lines of activity which it felt should form the basis for the supplementary Four-Year Plan suggested by the Hands. These ten points were discussed in detail by the delegates. The use of prayer as a necessary part of any teaching activity was stressed. Bearing in mind the fact that Islanders are more willing to listen to a visitor than to a member from their own locality, the convention recommended the exchange of travelling teachers between island groups.

In this session, as the convention drew to a close, the strength and vigor of the South Pacific community were seen reflected in the earnestness and creativity of the consultation, and in the love and harmony which bathed the entire gathering.

As the convention concluded, revered Hand of the Cause Collis Featherstone, whose presence was one of the special blessings given the convention, gave this last touching message: "This has been a wonderful, historic occasion. Future historians will regard these meetings as marking the turning point in the affairs of the South Pacific and as infusing new spirit into the area.

"We who come into this world have but a very short time in which to serve our Creator. Being given the privilege and the bounty of accepting the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh, we know that, while the physical body returns to dust, the spiritual being goes on to a glorious world in which it retains memory of its previous deeds on this plane. Let us arise and ensure that when we attain to the next world, we will not feel remorse at not having rendered greater service to our Beloved."

The convention has now concluded. Delegates and visitors have travelled thousands of miles to return to their homes. Although it may not be externally apparent, each one has been transformed. Each believer attending this Convention has carried back with him the memory of a gathering of many races upon which Bahá'u'lláh shed light and warmth. This memory is as a precious jewel of unfading luster, which will be a constant source of inspiration during the years of service which lie ahead.

Message from the Hands of the Cause in the Holy Land

To the First Convention of the South Pacific Islands

On the occasion of the historic formation of the South Pacific Regional National Spiritual Assembly, the hearts of the followers of Bahá'u'lláh are uplifted in thanksgiving for this great victory which testifies to the progress of His world-encompassing Faith and to the powers He has released in this age, which will inevitably enable mankind to establish the Kingdom of Heaven on earth foretold by the Prophets of God in past dispensations.

This latest achievement in the promulgation of the Divine Plan revealed by 'Abdu'l-Bahá himself, and set in motion by our beloved Guardian through successive detailed plans, cannot but release untold blessings in that area of the world so dear to his heart, and which absorbed so much of his attention during the last years of his life.

In the darkest period of the First World War, 'Abdu'l-Bahá called upon the members of the North American Bahá'í Community, in his Tablets of the Divine Plan, to "travel through the three great island groups of the Pacific Ocean, Polynesia, Micronesia, and Melanesia—and with hearts overflowing with the love of God—deliver the Glad-Tidings of the Manifestation of the Lord of Hosts to all the people." The first results of His ringing appeal were witnessed in the opening of Australia and New Zealand to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, the carrying of His Message to the Society Islands, and the formation of a strong community in Hawaii, thus establishing a bridge of centers stretching from San Francisco to Sydney, and paving the way for the tremendous victories which have been won in this area under the direct guidance of the beloved Guardian during the first six years of his Ten-Year globe-encircling Plan.

With the inception of this World Crusade in 1953 and the allocation amongst the National Spiritual Assemblies of America, Canada, Persia, and Australia of the major islands and island groups of the Pacific, the teaching work began to stride forward at a formidable pace. Pioneers from the older communities poured into the Pacific region, and it is primarily due to the dedication, perseverance, self-sacrifice, and initiative of these consecrated souls that this first Convention is being held just one year after the passing of the midway point of the Crusade. Great as is this fruition of their labors, we must not forget for a moment that the greatest achievement we are witnessing on this happy occasion is the fact that the delegates chosen to elect this first Regional Pacific Bahá'í Assembly are representative of the peoples of Polynesia, Melanesia, and Micronesia who have come together with the love of Bahá'u'lláh, embraced His Faith, and risen to establish it in their home islands. This is the glorious victory of our beloved Shoghi Effendi, the realization of his hopes, the consummation of his plan for this part of the world.

The extraordinary progress made throughout the Pacific region is evident to all, and must be a great source of pride and joy to those gathered together during these blessed Ridván days to hold their first Annual Convention. Let us recall some of the milestones that have led up to this crowning event: Your National Headquarters, the seat of your Assembly, has been purchased according to the beloved Guardian's own endowment, registered in the name of the Suva Assembly and likewise situated in Fiji, has been acquired as one of the goals of that same Plan; the rapid spread of the Faith in the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, which led to the establishment of the first Bahá'í School in the entire Pacific area, on land contributed by one of the Gilbert Islanders and built through the efforts of the Bahá'ís themselves; the founding of the second Bahá'í school in this region, which has recently completed its new building on its own land, in the New Hebrides; the construction in Samoa of the first local Haziratu'l-Quds of the South Pacific and the holding there of a Baha'i Summer School; the large and rapidly increasing number of spiritual assemblies, groups, and isolated centers which have been established in such widely-scattered areas as Tonga, the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, Samoa, the Solomons, the New Hebrides, New Caledonia, Cook Island, the Loyalty and Marshall Islands, and Fiji, all of which will now come under the guidance of their own regional assembly; the many translations of Baha'i literature into the languages spoken throughout these island groups—when we recall all these evidences of the onward march of the Faith, our hearts are lifted up in thanksgiving to Baha'u'llah Who made these victories possible, victories which bear eloquent testimony to the great spiritual promise this area of the globe holds for the future, and lead us to believe that ere long its peoples will contribute, in the World Baha'i Community, a particular, unique, and important share to its counsels and render it great services in both the teaching and administrative fields.

The words of the beloved Guardian, so often reiterated in the last years of his life, that the continent of Africa and the Pacific Islands were vying with each other for the palm of victory in the teaching field, are still ringing in our ears. We have recently seen during the visit of an African Hand of the Faith to that area how electric is the effect produced on the minds and hearts when a representative of a different race, from a distant land, travels amongst Baha'i communities of another region. It forecast that happy day when Baha'i teachers from the great ethnic groups of the Pacific will arrive and travel to the far corners of the world, teaching the people the Glad-Tidings of this Divine Message, exchanging visits with their African brethren and, like bees in a garden of flowers, pollinating the hearts of men the world over with the love of Baha'u'llah.

The New Regional Assembly of the South Pacific should, we feel, form a supplementary Four-Year Plan for the purpose of rapidly swelling the number of the adherents of the Faith throughout the area of its jurisdiction; consolidating the historic work already achieved in these newly-opened territories; markedly increasing the number of spiritual assemblies, groups, and isolated centers in the ten island territories which it represents; incorporating, whenever possible, those local assemblies which are firmly grounded; multiplying the translations of Baha'i literature in the languages spoken in that region; founding additional local Haziratu'l-Quds, Baha'i schools, and summer schools; purchasing the site of the future Mother Temple of the South Pacific to be erected in Suva; and inaugurating an independent National Fund.

Well knowing the difficulties that confront it and the enthusiasm with which its newly-elected members plan to carry forward the work of our glorious Faith in that promising area, we are placing at its disposal, in the name of our most beloved Guardian, the sum of One Thousand Dollars as an inaugural gift to its new National Fund. We feel sure this reminder of the constant love of Shoghi Effendi, of the high hopes he cherished for the future of the Faith there, and the rapid unfoldment of its institutions under the aegis of this new Regional Assembly, will serve to stimulate the friends to shoulder a greater measure of responsibility, to rise to fresh heights of service and self-sacrifice, and to prove worthy of all the blessings showered upon them by that wonderful being who served them with such selfless and self-sacrificing devotion for thirty-six years.

You are now launching the barque of your own independent administrative existence. Although the American National Assembly, your Mother Assembly, will always be ready to give you advice and assistance, and although your fellow Baha'is all over the world will surround you with their loving thoughts and moral encouragement, your destiny is nevertheless now in your own hands, the hands of the peoples of these islands who have become Baha'is, and who are the electors of this historic Regional South Pacific Assembly. We feel confident that, just as you have already produced from amongst yourselves many Baha'i teachers, you will in the future, with the help of the devoted pioneers who have come to live amongst you, ever increasingly carry on your own work, and teach this Faith to the people in hundreds of the larger islands throughout this area. Your activities will gladden the soul of our beloved Guardian, vindicate the confidence he placed in you and the high hopes he cherished for your future, and attract upon you the blessings of the Author of our Faith.

We can do no better than recall some of Baha'u'llah's gemlike utterances when He appealed to His followers to arise and teach His Faith: "Be unrestrained as the wind, while carrying the Message of Him Who hath caused the dawn of Divine Guidance to break. Consider how the wind, faithful to that which God hath ordained, bloweth upon all regions of the earth, being inhabited or desolate. Neither the sight of desolation nor the evidences of prosperity, can either pain or please it. It bloweth in every direction, as bidden by its Creator."

"O ye beloved of God! Repose not yourselves on your couches, nay, besit yourselves as soon as ye recognize your Lord, the Creator, and hear of the things which have befallen Him, and hasten to His assistance. Unloose your tongues, and proclaim unceasingly His Cause."

"Blessed is the spot, and the house, and the place, and the city, and the heart, and the mountain, and the refuge, and the cave, and the valley, and the land, and the sea, and the island, and the meadow where mention of God hath been made, and His praise glorified."

"Please God ye may all be strengthened to carry out that which is the Will of God, and may be graciously assisted to appreciate the rank conferred upon such of His loved ones as have arisen to serve Him and magnify His name. Upon them be the glory of God, the glory of God, that is in the heavens and all that is on earth, and the glory of the inmates of the most exalted Paradise, the heaven of heavens."

In the service of the beloved Guardian,

Hand of the Cause Dr. Grossmann
Visit Bahá’ís in Bolivia

The Master once said that the love of the friends drew him to America. It might well be said that the loving desire of the Indian believers in Bolivia brought to them a visit from a Hand of the Cause.

Two years ago, the friends in Vilakollo requested their National Assembly that a visit from a Hand of the Cause be made to their village. Their National Assembly was deeply touched with the request, and arranged for a visit from an Auxiliary Board member and later two visits from the National Assembly secretary.

On May 10, 1958, the revered Hand of the Cause, Dr. Hermann Grossmann, made the historic visit to the Indian village of Vilakollo, meeting eleven adult believers and many children. The friends, realizing that the strenuous trip and walking in the high altitude had physically affected Dr. Grossmann, offered immediate prayers in Spanish, Aymara, and Quecha. The believers were profoundly impressed to have their wish for a visit from a Hand of the Cause granted and his loving and encouraging words made them extremely happy.

Later, Dr. Grossmann visited the communities of Cochabamba and La Paz, in intimate meetings with the friends and close contacts. In Cochabamba he said that such was the spirit there “that he could not distinguish between those who were and were not Bahá’ís.”

His visit to Bolivia ended May 16, as he took off from the highest airport in the world in La Paz. The Bolivian friends closed their report on this memorable first visit from a Hand of the Cause with these words: “Jamás lo olvidaremos los Bahá’ís de Bolivia!” (Never shall the Bahá’ís of Bolivia forget him!)

U. S. United Nations Committee Explains Bahá’í View on World Refugee Year

A proposal for a World Refugee Year, to begin in June 1958, was adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on December 5, 1958, following the presentation of a draft resolution sponsored by the United States, the United Kingdom, and eight other governments. The stated aims of World Refugee Year are:

“a) To focus interest on the refugee problem and to encourage additional financial contributions from Governments, voluntary agencies, and the general public for its solution.

“b) To encourage additional opportunities for permanent refugee solutions, through voluntary repatriation, resettlement, or integration, on a purely humanitarian basis and in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the refugees themselves.”

World Refugee Year is envisioned as a “human year,” in contrast with the scientific emphasis of the recently concluded International Geophysical Year. It has been estimated that some forty million men, women, and children have become refugees since the end of World War II.

Over two million still need some form of assistance from the United Nations. They once had homes in parts of Europe, Algeria, Palestine, Tibet, or China, but are escapees from the horrors of war, revolution, and persecution. Too many seem to have reached a dead end in a camp in Austria, a barracks in Italy, a tent in Gaza, a shack in Hong Kong. Countless children have been born in these places and still live there. But once the conscience of man is aroused, as the world learned during the Hungarian crisis, miraculous rescues can be accomplished.

The Bahá’í U. S. United Nations Committee believes Bahá’ís should understand this worldwide movement, about which newspapers and magazines are carrying information. Authoritative pamphlets may be obtained for the asking by writing the “United States Committee for Refugees,” 11 West 42nd St., New York 36, N. Y.

It is clear that Bahá’í undertakings have first, if not total claim on any funds Bahá’ís are able to contribute to worthy causes, for we, under the guidance of Bahá’ulláh, are building a world order which will be the true refuge for all mankind. “That which the Lord hath ordained as the sovereign remedy and mightiest instrument for the healing of all the world is the union of all its peoples in one universal Cause, one common Faith.” Nevertheless we can advise our non-Bahá’í friends, who are not permitted to contribute to the Bahá’í Cause, about this opportunity to alleviate human misery and rid the world of some of its trouble spots. Furthermore, some of us are members of organizations that would be glad to concern themselves with World Refugee Year if they understood its purpose.

Permit Teaching on Alberta Indian Reservation

There are now eight Indian believers on the Peigan Reserve in Alberta, Canada. The Canadian Indian Teaching Committee reports there are several more studying the Faith, and they expect to form a local spiritual assembly there next April. This committee has received permission from the Indian Council to teach on the Reserve, and much interest has been aroused by their visits.

Annual Conventions Review Achievements of Past Year, Marshal Forces to Attain Remaining Crusade Goals

Alaska

At 11 a.m. on the opening day of the Third Annual Convention, following the reading of the message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land, the Bahá'ís of Alaska proceeded to the site of the future Mashriqu'l-Adhkár, eight miles out of Anchorage, for the dedication ceremony.

A short distance on De Armoun Road, off the Seward highway, and up a rather steep incline lies the hallowed spot, a setting lavishly endowed by nature and fashioned by the Hand of God throughout all eternity for the Mother Temple of Alaska.

Even the elements joined in the festivities of this eventful sacred mission. After an intermittent downpour of several weeks, the sun broke through fluffy white clouds. Snow-capped mountains smiled down from all sides, while below us the waters of Cook's Inlet, an arm of the Pacific Ocean, shimmered in the sunshine.

Silence fell upon the group of fifty people gathered there. It deepened into calmness as we revelled in the scenic vista around us, our hearts in unison with the wonder of it all.

A group of nine people gathered in a semicircle facing the assembled friends, while a deep peace, felt only on rare occasions, gave a realization that invisible forces were there.

Elmer Guffy, pioneer to Fairbanks in the World Crusade, made the introductory remarks, telling us how a gift of three acres of land was offered to the National Spiritual Assembly of Alaska by Evelyn and Vernon Huffman in 1957, and that this had the approval of our beloved Guardian in a letter of August 15, 1957, along with his appreciation.

The stillness was broken as Mrs. Huffman, secretary of the National Assembly, read from the Sacred Writings. Other readings were then given by Betty Becker, one of the first pioneers to Alaska under the first Seven-Year Plan; by Mrs. Janet Stout, the first believer in Alaska under the first Seven-Year Plan; by Robert E. Moul, pioneer to Ketchikan and Douglas under the World Crusade, and chairman of the National Assembly; and by Edgar Russell, World Crusade pioneer to Seward.

The "Prayer for Alaska," which is very close to the heart of all Alaskan Bahá'ís, was read by Arthur Gregory, one of the first believers in Alaska, who served on the first local spiritual assembly, and who is now pioneering in Homer. This was followed by readings by Mrs. Dorothy Taylor, delegate from Ketchikan, and by Mrs. Rose Yarno, first pioneer to Kodiak under the World Crusade.

Wallace Harrison concluded the dedicatory service by reading "The House of Worship." His wife, Agnes, is our first native believer in Alaska, of Eskimo, Indian, and Aleut descent.

One of the friends stated: "Pilgrims who visited the Holy Land during the lifetime of the Guardian have told us of his great joy and happiness when goals and tasks were accomplished. Surely his presence was with us on this very eventful occasion, and we trust that we have gladdened his heart, at least in a small measure, in fulfilling this goal of the World Crusade.

"Blest must be the city of Anchorage, to be the area chosen by our beloved Guardian for the first Temple of Alaska. This city is fast becoming the hub for intercontinental travel, the air crossroads of the world. Here people of all races, color, and creeds will find a universal House of Worship. We are looking forward to the day when the Mashriqu'l-Adhkár will diffuse its beams of unity through our great land of Alaska, and will bring about the fulfillment of its destiny, the oneness of its people."

During the convention sessions which followed, on April 25 and 26, the secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly enumerated the progress made to date on the World Crusade: (1) Inaugurating a National Bahá'í Fund, (2) Initiating local Bahá'í endowments, (3) Incorporating the National Assembly, (4) Purchasing a plot of land, and (5) Establishing a summer school.

Six challenging goals remain to be completed: (1) Maintain existing assemblies and increase their membership to 151, (2) Incorporation of active local assemblies, (3) Establish six new local assemblies by 1960, (4) Form seven groups, and (5) Multiply the number of Bahá'í centers. The National Assembly emphasized consolidation, rather than dispersal, this year.

Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay

The Third Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay was held in the beautiful resort city of Viña del Mar, Chile, with twenty-six delegates and forty-two visitors present, including a Persian, an American travelling teacher, a Bolivian Indian pioneer, and Juan Fernandez Island Bahá'ís attending their first convention.

After a two-day Pre-Convention School, the Convention met on April 30, May 1-2, 1959.

To the visiting friends, the region around Viña del Mar elevated the spirits with the Chilean panorama of mountains and ocean, vineyards and flowers everywhere.

The spiritual atmosphere of loving hospitality was provided by the host communities of Valparaíso, Quilpué, and the joyful, newly-formed community of Viña del Mar as they gave the reception for delegates and visitors in Hotel O'Higgins on April 27 and the Ridván Feast on April 28.

The presence of the revered Hand of the Cause, Dr. Hermann Grossmann, during this period widened our vision of the future of the Cause in this area, and gave a profound sense of the spirit emanating from the Holy Land. As a result, the convention was characterized by high resolve and serene faith.

Progress of the Faith was reflected in the report of formation of three new local spiritual assemblies: Rosario, Argentina; Viña del Mar, Chile; and the second all-Indian assembly in Bolivia, located in Jankahuyo. The goal of the purchase of the Paraguayan Temple land was reached, as well as the development and expansion of the Bahá'í Publishing Trust in Buenos Aires.

It was very heartening to learn that most of the population of Juan Fernandez Island is now receptive to the Faith, and to learn of several other large groups of Bolivian Indian believers, with continually growing statistics there.

Much consultation was given to the pioneers' needs to reach the minimum goals in Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, as both Argentina and Bolivia met their assembly goals this year. Four local assemblies need to be formed this coming year: Minas, Uruguay; Encarnacion, Paraguay; and Loncoche and Valdivia, Chile, to insure this triumph.

Many friends arose to offer their vacation period to teach in these places, although all agreed that permanent pioneers are urgently needed. The hope was expressed that the "wave of pioneers" called for by the Hands of the Cause will be realized soon. Special attention was called to the need for German-speaking pioneers in the Valdivia-Loncoche-Osorno area of Chile, where the goals have been set up.

No report on this convention would be complete without comment on the humble devotion shown by the Bolivian Indian believers in such expressions as: "Brothers, in our community we pray for all the assemblies, and we try to live together with open hearts."

Those elected to serve on the National Spiritual Assembly for the coming year are: Roberto Cazcarra, Salvador Torma, Athos Costas, Joe Mielenik, Fabienne Guillen, Ellen Sims, Roque Centurion, Alejandro Reid, and Carlos Martinez.

BRAZIL, PERU, COLOMBIA, ECUADOR, AND VENEZUELA

Nineteen delegates had the privilege of attending the Third Convention of Brazil, Peru, Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela. The Baha’is of Lima and Callao, Peru, hosts of the convention, graciously offered the hospitality of their homes to all delegates and visitors. The beautiful Hazratu’l-Quds in Lima provided ample rooms for public meetings and convention sessions, as well as a special spiritual atmosphere.

Continuing the custom of other years, there was a two-day school preceding the convention for the purpose of getting better acquainted, and to contribute a deeper understanding of the Teachings of our Faith. One period of the school program was given over to Irvin Thomas, who had just returned from a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

On the opening day of the convention, the message from the Hands of the Faith was read, giving the global victories won and the challenge, in words that we pray will be unforgettably engraved on every heart, the urgency to complete the Ten-Year Plan that our beloved Guardian left with us.

A special call was made for Bahá’ís to leave the communities where they could be spared, in order to go where goals had not yet been completed. It was recommended that national teaching committees of the five countries in this territory guard with vigilance the newly-formed assemblies and groups through the stimulus of a constant flow of teaching materials and visitors.

Though Brazil and Peru have met their goals as to the number of assemblies designated by the Guardian, there is always the ever-present need of fortifying and deepening them. One of the most urgent calls was made for pioneers to go to Ecuador, Colombia, and Venezuela to form the necessary assemblies.

In response to this call, three families and ten individuals offered their services. It was also announced that three members of the outgoing National Assembly were going to goal areas, two to remain in the territory of the national regional assembly of the northern part of South America, and one to transfer to the southern part.

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the past year is the purchase of the Hazratu’l-Quds of Caracas, Venezuela, thus completing one of the most difficult goals of the Crusade. The documents of the future Temple of Colombia were signed in March 1959. The land for the Temple in Brazil was donated by Mrs. Leonora Armstrong, and the site for the Temple in Ecuador has been purchased. Only two sites remain to be purchased.

The contribution of a tract of land by Muriel and Edmund Miessler has been given to the future National Assembly of Brazil to be used as a summer school. Mrs. Armstrong has given a tract of land in the name of the Local Assembly of Rio that will be transferred to the future National Assembly of Brazil. A plot of land was also donated by Heshmatullah Mehrain to the Local Assembly of Curitiba, Brazil. The Bahá’ís of Callao, Perú, are buying land for a future Center.

The newly-elected National Spiritual Assembly includes: Margot Worley, Dorothy Campbell, Gayle Woolsen, Edmund Miessler, Cyrus Monadjemi, Mercedes Sanchez, Djalal Eghrari, Rangvald Taetz, and Jamshed Meghnat.

Canada

The National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Canada for 1959-1960, elected at the annual convention, includes the following: L. G. Gardner, chairman; Rowland Estell, vice-chairman; Harold Moscrop, treasurer; Peggy Ross, secretary; Mrs. Audrey Westhauser, acting secretary; and Fred Graham, Miss Winnifred Harvey, Hartwell Bowsfield, and Allan Raynor.

Iberian Peninsula

The Third Annual Iberian Convention was held in the Hazrat’l-Quds in Madrid, Spain, on April 24-26, with the attendance of seventeen of the nineteen delegates representing the ten local spiritual assemblies. Two absentee votes were sent by mail. Two visitors from other communities were Senor Salem, vice-chairman of the Local Assembly of Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, who, during the session, recited the Tablet of Ahmad in the original Arabic; and Senor Candido Mateos Marina, the first believer in the town of Bejar, near Salamanca. Senor Mateos had been received as a believer only the day before, and great was the joy at welcoming this new member of the Bahá’í family.

Charles Monroe Ioas, member of the Auxiliary Board of the Hands, and chairman of the out-going National Spiritual Assembly, was elected permanent chairman of the convention, and Don Luis Ortuno Puche, its secretary.

As the convention message had not yet arrived from the revered Hands in Haifa, the great and urgent message of November 30, 1958, was read to the assembly, and at a later session its points were discussed and pondered.

The Teaching Report showed the dramatic result of an intensive spiritual effort in Portugal, with the sudden and unexpected bursting into life of a new local assembly in Portimão, fruit of two slow years of work by two Portuguese pioneers, Lydia and Armando Boucas, and the recent help of visiting instructors, most important being the fifteen-day stay of the Tifton sisters of Spain.

Although Spain had already reached its goal of eight assemblies, true to its promise, it has not stopped at these, but has produced a ninth local assembly this year at Hospitalet, near Barcelona. A temple site is still to be bought, and the difficult task of achieving the legalization (incorporation) of the Faith is still incomplete.

In spite of having to deprive some believers of the voting right, the number of believers on the Peninsula is 224. This year twenty-eight persons became believers in Spain, and ten in Portugal, making a total of thirty-six. The number of local assemblies in Spain is nine; Portugal three, with five more needed to reach its goal of eight. The number of groups in Spain is four; there are none in Portugal. The number of isolated believers is seven in Spain, two in Portugal.

A noteworthy effort, which is attracting new believers in Tarrasa, near Barcelona, is the formation of a Bahá’í choral group by Juan LleUART Casa, who has set verses and prayers to music and trained some thirty friends, the number of Bahá’ís there being forty-two. Several members of this Bahá’í choral group were present at the convention, and lent a much enjoyed musical note to the sessions.

On the afternoon of April 24, the members of the Third Iberian National Assembly were elected with the following result: Charles Monroe Joas, chairman; Francisco Salas, vice-chairman; Luis Ortuno, secretary; Sara Tiffon, recording secretary; Isidro Torrella, treasurer for Spain; Angelo Silva Carneiro, treasurer for Portugal; and Jose Lopez Monge, Romon Escartin, and Virginia Orbison.

During the Convention several important points were brought out and clarified, among these being the fact that the Bahá’ís must carry out the beloved Guardian's emphatic directives in regard to Bahá’í marriages, and the non-baptizing of Bahá’í children, even though such procedure might bring inconveniences upon the families who faithfully observe the laws of their Faith, thus cleaving forever the old order from the New. Some time was also spent on a discussion of the difference between Covenant-breaking and the various reasons for the removal of names from the voting lists. It was brought out that protection of the Faith is of primary importance.

The annual reports showed a real increase in the tempo of the teaching work, it being felt that the beloved Guardian is aiding from the Abhá Kingdom, and the Concourse on High is opening doors and making safe the path. The prayers of the revered Hands of the Faith and the visit of one of the distinguished members, Dr. Ugo Giachery, last January; the stimulus provided by the various summer school sessions and special teaching projects; the increased travelling and visits by the believers to various points of the Peninsula—all this has brought into being a deeper feeling of responsibility and the assurance that somehow the efforts of those who are devoting their time, means, and energy to the goals of the Ten-Year Plan will see all of these reached through the spiritual dynamics engendered by the Guardian's prayer for the believers of the Iberian Peninsula written by his own hand:

"That they may prove themselves worthy of their high calling, that they may excite by the quality and range of their achievements, the admiration of their brethren in all the continents of the globe, that they may hasten, by the very nature of their exertions, the advent of the day when they will have entered upon a still more exalted stage in their collective advancement on the high road of their destiny."

France

"UNDER PROTECTION OF OUR BELOVED GUARDIAN, SECOND BAHÁ’I CONVENTION FRANCE CONVENED APRIL 25. TWO AUXILIARY BOARD MEMBERS, 17 DELEGATES, ALL COMMUNITIES PRESENT. A SPIRIT OF DEVOTION AND ENTHUSIASM PERVADES THIS MEMORABLE GATHERING AIMING ACCOMPLISHMENT REMAINING GOALS OF CRUSADE IN FRANCE."

This cable to the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land conveyed the spirit evoked by the annual convention message from the World Center of the Faith, which contained the news of the many victories won in the great World Crusade in its sixth year, rejoicing the hearts of the friends.

Consultation focused on the ways and means by which France could help with the teaching needs of Europe, to aid in the accomplishment of the Crusade goals, by extending pioneer assistance, circuit teaching help, audio-visual material, and literature.

Mr. Navidi, Auxiliary Board member from Monte Carlo, appealed to each Bahá’í to make every effort possible, during the next three years, to fulfill the wishes of the Guardian for the propugation of the Faith. He pointed out that the failure of one country to achieve its goals was now the failure of all.

M. Pettit, secretary of the National Assembly, read the annual report of the collective activities of France during this first year of its stewardship. The achievement of the Crusade goal for the incorporation of the National Assembly, and the transfer of the deed of the Haziratu'l-Quds to that body, now in process, as well as the circuit teaching help which had been extended the various communities, especially the three circuits of Jean Sevin, were the highlights of the report.

!Seventh Annual Convention of the Baha'is of Italy and Switzerland, held at the Haqiratu'l-Quds at Bern, Switzerland, on April 25-26, 1959.

A large map of France indicated the present status of the Faith: seven assemblies, ten groups, and twenty isolated believers, with a membership of seventy-six French believers, thirty-eight Persian, twenty-eight American and eleven of other nationalities, and with nine new Bahá'ís enrolled during the year.

These reports were followed by the election of the new National Spiritual Assembly. Those chosen, and their officers, are: Joel Marangella, chairman; Sara Kenny, vice-chairman; Chahab 'Alá'i, secretary; Jacques Sognomonian, treasurer; Lucienne Migette, recording secretary; and Monir Derakhchan, Francois Petit, Florence Bagley, and A. M. Barafroukhteh.

Twelve national committees were called on for reports of their activities during the year. National Teaching Committee Secretary Alice Bernard reviewed the many teaching activities, and the Translating and Publishing Committee reported several new French translations of Bahá'í literature.

Mrs. Dreyfus-Barney, with a radiance and charm undimmed by the years, gave the friends word-pictures of Haifa and 'Akka when 'Abdu'l-Bahá was there. She spoke of her first visit to Haifa in 1901, and later of the early days of the Faith in France.

With such changes in the space of fifty years, in the progress of the Faith, it was clear that these next four years of the Crusade would also bear witness to the power of the Word of God in hastening the establishment of His Kingdom, through the achievement of the goals set for us by our beloved Shoghi Effendi.

Northeast Africa

On April 27, 1959, delegates representing nine territories of Northeast Africa assembled at the National Haziratu'l-Quds in Cairo, Egypt, to discuss Bahá'í affairs at their four-day annual convention.

The goals under the Ten-Year Crusade, as well as those under the Seven-Year Plan and the subsidiary goals, were all surveyed at full length. It was observed that there had been marked progress in some areas, but others were slow in developing.

The penitent looks of the members of the convention made one conscious of the fact that unless there is a greater upsurge of gigantic energies in the field, for the limited period of our active service as we press forward toward our goals, we are liable to be deprived of the privilege of following in the train of those who have been chosen as the standard-bearers of Bahá'u'lláh under the wise leadership of our most beloved Guardian.

It was, therefore, recommended that the Tablet of Ahmad be chanted, with a pause of three-minutes' silence for meditation and supplication with all hearts attuned to the Abhá Kingdom, so that the convention deliberations yield the tangible results envisaged under the Divine Plan of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

The convention was elated with the glad-tidings of the official recognition of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Asmara, Eritrea, as a religious body. Persecution, the arrest of friends, and inquiries by public security forces made the responsible authorities realize that the Bahá'ís had nothing to do with politics. The Central Government circulated this fact to all division officers in Eritrea.

The discussions, all through the convention, revolved around the orbit of the challenging words of Rúhíyyih Khánum: "The strength of the Bahá'ís is in each other. We feel lonesomeness except in meeting together, when our hearts are consoled. We love Shoghi Effendi now more than ever, and we find our happiness in doing something to please him."

The incoming National Spiritual Assembly was elected, and constituted as follows: 'Abdul Rahim Yazdi, chairman; Husein Amin Bikar, vice-chairman; Tewfik Muhammad 'Ali, secretary; Subhi Elias, treasurer; Mirza Badi Bushrui, assistant secretary; and Jamsheed Munajjim, Dr. Rawshan Yazdi, Seeyid Muhammad Azzawi, and Iskandar Hanna.

Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of France, held at Paris at the National Haziratu'l-Quds.
India

Our convention this year was unique in many ways. We were allotted ninety-five delegates from India only, with fifty-four delegates attending from all corners of the nation.

India as a country has been blessed with its variety of people, and this was greatly manifested among the participants who belong to different states and come from all walks of life: a gathering that was truly representative of the peoples of India. To crown it all, the Bahá’í spirit of consultation was maintained throughout, which added to the beauty of such an important gathering.

We were fortunate to be graced by the presence of our revered Hand of the Cause Tarázu’lláh Samandari, and our dear friend I. K. B. Bakhtiari, member of the Asian Auxiliary Board, at our Post-Convention Teaching Conference. They gave us valuable information about the formation of the National Spiritual Assembly of Burma at Rangoon, and stressed the need of greater efforts in trying to win the goals of our beloved Guardian’s Ten-Year Crusade.

The significance of the Feast of Ridván, “The King of Feasts,” and the need to celebrate the twelve days of Ridván in a most befitting manner was explained by Mr. Samandari in detail. He pointed out that all these twelve days should be considered as a spiritual springtime; we should feel elated and allow the divine blessings to work through us.

He particularly brought home to us the need for Indian women to rise up in greater numbers, and help spread the Cause with a renewed effort amongst the awaiting masses.

The conference ended with a keen note of enthusiasm, and there was a general eagerness among the participants to get back to their respective centers, to share their profitable experiences with those at home, and to strike out with renewed vigor in spreading the Teachings of our beloved Cause.

Visit to Temple Site Highlights Australian Convention

On May 3, 1959, Baha'is who were attending the Annual Convention in Sydney, Australia, visited the site where the Mother Temple of Australia is now being constructed. In the photograph below, the friends are shown as they inspect the progress of the building.

In the picture above, the Baha'is are gathered in front of the Sydney Haziratu'l-Quds on May 2, scene of the convention, encircling Hands of the Cause Clara Dunn (in chair) and H. Collis Featherstone (to her left).
Northeast Asia

The Third Annual Convention of the Bahá'ís of Northeast Asia (Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and Macao) was held in Tokyo from April 24 to 26, 1959. The meeting place, which had just been completed and opened a few days previously, as if in preparation for the convention, was the lovely Toshi Center, built by the Japan Association of Mayors as a national headquarters, and one of the most beautiful and modern public buildings in this rapidly-growing international metropolis.

Following devotions in Japanese, Chinese, Iranian, and English (due to tensions in the world of international politics, none of the Korean friends were able to attend), the convention was organized on the first morning with the election of William Maxwell of Seoul as chairman, and Mrs. Barbara Sims of Tokyo as secretary.

The spirits of all present were uplifted, and the tone of the entire convention period was set, by the reading of the inspiring and challenging message from the Hands of the Faith in Haifa. Although it had not been received soon enough for a Japanese translation to be prepared before the convention opened, some of the most thrilling sections reporting victories attained were given impromptu translation on the spot so that all the friends present could participate simultaneously in the spiritual exhilaration. A reply was voted, expressing appreciation for the Hands' message, and the newly-strengthened determination of the pioneers to remain at their posts.

In the Annual Report of the outgoing National Spiritual Assembly, some of the highlights were as follows:

1. The incorporation of the National Spiritual Assembly of Northeast Asia was completed in February 1959, thus fulfilling one of the goals of the Guardian's Ten-Year Plan and of Northeast Asia's subsidiary Six-Year Plan.

2. Four new local assemblies were formed on April 21, 1959: Ashiya, Nagasaki, and Sapporo, Japan; and Chonju, Korea. The formation of the Nagasaki Local Assembly consummated the Guardian's special hope that the people of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, in particular, should be afforded the bounty of receiving the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. (The Hiroshima assembly had been established previously.)

3. Translation and publication of pamphlets and writings into Japanese, Korean, and Chinese continued. The outstanding publication of the year was Paris Talks in Korean. The Bahá’í Geppo, or Northeast Asia news letter, was published every other month in Japanese, Korean, Chinese, and English editions.

4. Summer schools were held in 1958 in Japan, Korea, and Taiwan.

5. The first Bahá’í burial ground in this area was acquired in Ashiya, through the efforts and donation of one of Iranian pioneers.

6. A suitable Temple site has been found after long search, and negotiations are now under way which it is hoped will result in its purchase.

During the course of the convention, pledges were received insuring the establishment of three new Centers: for Hiroshima and the new community of Sapporo, by one of the Iranian pioneers; and for the new community of Nagasaki, by an American pioneer.

On April 26 the message from the Hands was explained in Japanese, and lively discussion ensued on this, together with remaining committee reports and recommendations to the new National Assembly. The convention closed with an opportunity for every friend present, whether a delegate or not, to express his feelings briefly; and the spirit of unity, harmony, and renewed dedication was so strong that no one remained unmoved by this tangible evidence that this infant community of Northeast Asia was ready to press on to victories which could hardly have been imagined even five short years ago.

Proclamation of Faith in France
Gains Great Impetus in Recent Months

The teaching in France has received a great impetus with the return visit of Jean Sevin, pioneer to the Tuamotu Islands and the only native Bahá’í who went out from France to answer the Guardian’s call for pioneers in the virgin territories at the beginning of the Ten-Year Crusade.

Because France had so few active native believers at this time, a few strongly advised him against going, but in response to Jean’s request for advice from our beloved Guardian, he was told that the work he could accomplish in France could not compare with what he would be doing for the Cause by pioneering in a virgin territory. Later the Guardian wrote to the Paris Assembly, promising them that his pioneering would prove to be a bounty for France.

Many of the believers in France felt that this meant that the sacrifice of one of its few native French believers to the pioneering work would enable France in her turn to meet her goals. With the arrival of a large percentage of the fifty American pioneers that the beloved Guardian had requested for France, as well as the pioneers from other countries, France is one of the European countries which is near to meeting all its goals of the Crusade.

The bounties in this Faith are usually doubled, and the case of Jean Sevin proves it once more. He returned with a large number of beautiful slides of Tahiti... and the islands. He took advantage of his stay to inform himself of the daily life, customs, and history of the natives, and therefore, under such titles as "Polynesia and the Dawn of a New World," and "Colored Slides of Tahiti" followed by a talk on "The Bahá'ís of Tahiti," he was able to attract large crowds in many cities to hear about the French colony and the Bahá'í Faith. The first half of Jean's program was devoted to showing slides and talking about Tahiti and the Polynesians, and the second half was devoted to giving the Message of Bahá'u'lláh, and the need of the islanders for these Teachings. His profound knowledge of his subject and excellent presentation enabled him to hold the attention of his audience throughout. Thus for the first time in France, the Faith has been widely proclaimed this year.

Opportunities appeared miraculously many times, and the National Teaching Committee quickly took advantage of them. A girlhood friend of a Bahá'í from Chateauroux offered to organize a meeting in Toulouse, and during ten days of the busy Christmas season, had posters printed and placed, advertised in the newspapers, sent personal invitations, and attracted an audience of 300 persons, one of whom had been looking for the Bahá'ís for six months. A pioneer has since moved to this progressive city to continue the work begun there.

The National Teaching Committee asked the only Bahá'í in Menton, an old lady new in the Faith whose sight is very bad, to arrange a meeting for Jean. She felt it was hopeless until she read in Baha'i Trust that this border city, with a warm and responsive audience of Baha'is nearby. With the aid of believers from Nice and Monte Carlo, a local theater was rented, and the largest and most successful meeting took place in this small seaside border city, with a warm and responsive audience of 400. At the request of some of those present, regular firesides are being carried on with the help of neighboring Bahá'ís.

All of the meetings brought excellent publicity, usually after personal interviews by the local newspapers, and often mentioning the Faith favorably. The best publicity appeared in Perigueux, where the only Bahá'í arranged two smaller but very successful meetings for Jean, and the local paper gave not only an excellent brief summary of the Teachings, but the address and time of a follow-up meeting. This comparatively new believer also arranged a moderately successful meeting at Bordeaux at the request of the National Teaching Committee.

Another new French believer came all the way from Nice to arrange a public meeting in Nancy, her former home and a goal city chosen by our beloved Guardian. This attracted an audience of more than sixty persons, including one who had heard of the Faith from Mrs. May Maxwell, Rúhiyyih Khánum's mother, years ago.

These are just a few of the meetings which were arranged for Jean Sevin, who worked indefatigably, traveling constantly from one city to the next during the months of his stay in France. He also made circuits in the neighboring countries of Belgium, Germany, and Switzerland.

Mr. Sevin summed up the results himself when he said, "If I had remained in France, I might have given the message to a dozen persons in the last five years, but because I went pioneering I have been able to give the message to more than 3000 in a few months."

The Bahá'í community of France has been especially blessed in having this impetus to the teaching work come to it during its first year as one of the national pillars in the Bahá'í Administration.

To Report Achievements to "Bahá'í News"

Some years ago Shoghi Effendi expressed his hopes concerning the international development of the U.S. Bahá'í News, stating his desire that it would "become the foremost Bahá'í journal of the world." (Bahá'í Administration, page 82.) The coming of the World Crusade and the International Ten-Year Teaching Plan further enlarged the world-wide scope of this journal, making it responsible for the summary of events marking the progress of this Plan as well as providing a stimulus to the achieving of these goals.

On October 20, 1957, the beloved Guardian wrote to the Bahá'í News Editorial Committee, and included a statement that he was taking steps to see that "more international news, fresh from the bodies concerned" would reach Bahá'í News. He gave instructions accordingly, so that the following letter was sent on his behalf by Leroy Ioas, on November 25, 1957, a few weeks after his passing:

"To all National Spiritual Assemblies:

Dear beloved friends:

Hand’s Convention Message Reveals Lack of Reports

A careful perusal of the recent convention message from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land reveals that many important events of the past year were never received for publication in Bahá’í News. Although it is understandable that some communities are unable to publish detailed accounts of certain events, a majority of these reports were apparently omitted through oversight.

It is therefore earnestly hoped that each National Spiritual Assembly, including the newly established ones, will follow the directive of Shoghi Effendi in ap-showing two believers seated in the Temple gardens. The interview dealt with the basic teachings and administrative principles of the Faith.

People and Places, September 1958, a magazine distributed through DeSoto dealers, is illustrated with a two-page spread showing the Temple, interior of the dome, and an internal and external view of the House of Worship. The text is apparently based on the book written by Allen McDaniel.

Norman Cousins, editor of Saturday Review, wrote the editorial entitled "Is God a Christian?" in the issue of February 28. "If we seek to do is to utilize the spiritual resources of men in meeting their problem at its largest, then those resources would have to come from Christian and Jew, from Moslem and Hindu, from Buddhist and Taoist, from Confucian and Baha’i."

Chicago Daily News of March 7, devoted a half-page to a large colored illustration of the "Great Dome Shrine of Báb... the first thing to catch your eye as you approach the city." The subtitle is "Wilmette Temple has a 'Sister' in Haifa." The accompanying text reports an interview with Ruhíyyih Khánum on the spread of the Faith during the World Crusade.

Greensboro (N.C.) Daily News for March 5 reported the pilgrimage to Haifa to be undertaken by a local Baha’i, Kimball Kinney. The article is illustrated with a portrait of Mr. Kinney and a picture of the Baha’i Archives on Mount Carmel.

A New York paper published in the German language reports on the showing of a film entitled "Israel Today" in Carnegie Hall, with oral comments by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. "The film showed pictures of Jerusalem, Haifa, Beersheba, the country of Abraham with its hyper-modern new buildings, the Dead Sea, Tiberias, Convents of Nazareth... the enchanting gardens of the Baha’is on Mount Carmel in Haifa... and much more."

The Milwaukee Sentinel on May 2 featured an article headed "Racialism Works in Hawaii," based upon an interview with the members of the Albin Kubala family who returned after five years of pioneering in Hawaii in order to attend the annual Convention.

The Jewish Digest, a monthly magazine, in its March issue published a condensation of "Baha’i Calls Israel Home" by Carl Alpert. "Half way up the slope of Mount Carmel, and separated by the beautiful Persian gardens from the surrounding residential district of Haifa, is the magnificent golden domed Shrine of the Baha’i Faith."

WORK has now started on the dome of the Kampala Temple and, with the ribs in place, it is possible to see the general shape of the building.

Below the dome, the solid concrete shell, reinforced with steel, with solid block in-filling, is complete. No wood is used anywhere in the structure, even the tiles being laid in mortar on the reinforced concrete roofs.

The dome, structurally designed in the form of a steel basket which carries the concrete, consists of six-inch reinforced concrete at the springing, or base of the dome, diminishing to a thickness of four inches at the top. The dome is being cast in-situ, with about a three-inch depth of well-tamped concrete laid at a time; as each three-inch section hardens, the next section is poured, so that the whole structure is self-supporting as it goes up.

Concealed electrical conduit has been installed throughout for future lighting when electricity is available.

The dome of the Temple will be covered in tiny, pale green glass mosaic, which will shimmer in the African sunlight, and the roofs will carry glazed pantiles of a similar colour. From the dome down to the higher of the two roofs the finish of the building will be in smooth precast stone, but below that the finish will be of plaster. This has been arranged in order to obviate the erection of expensive scaffolding in the future, which would have been necessary had a rougher, cheaper finish, requiring frequent cleaning, been used on the upper part of the building. The cleaning of the Temple below the roofs will be a much simpler operation.

Plans are progressing on the caretakers' house and service buildings, which are situated quite close to the Temple. These auxiliary buildings will not be visible from the Temple for they will be surrounded by trees and hedging.

Plans have been set in motion for the landscaping of the Temple grounds which, when finished, will be extremely beautiful. A great deal of work and consultation has gone into the preparation of these plans, and an expert has been consulted. The Temple is to be surrounded by a thirty-foot swathe of grass, unbroken by paths or flower beds, and around which will be built a low wall upon which people may sit. In the future it is envisaged that, beyond the wall, avenues of trees and shrubs will ray out from the nine entrances, each treated in a different way, with particular attention being paid to that facing towards Haifa.

The rest of the plot will be treated as park land, with shady trees and lovely flowering shrubs, so that the Temple and its surroundings will be a place of beauty for the joy of all who visit it.

Port Victoria Baha’is Achieve Incorporation of Assembly by Special Legislation

In June 1956, the Local Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of Port Victoria, Seychelles, adopted a subsidiary one-year plan, one of the goals of which was to incorporate the Assembly. This was ratified by the National Assembly and a letter of introduction and a copy of local assembly by-laws was sent from the National Assembly lawyers to a Mr. Thomas, Barrister-at-law, Port Victoria, who subsequently took a great deal of personal interest in the project. From the moment that Mr. Thomas was briefed in January 1957, it was clear that nothing less than a special ordinance would need to be passed by the Legislative Council through the Government of Seychelles. This became known as "An Ordinance for the Incorporation of the Spiritual Assembly of the Baha’is of Port Victoria (Seychelles)."

Mr. Thomas, a former Attorney-General of Seychelles, discussed the proposed bill with the Attorney General, consulted appropriate government officials, and drew up a draft based on the American by-laws approved by the beloved Guardian. Literature was freely given to interested officials. The initial fees for Mr. Thomas were raised by local contribution.

An effort was made to introduce a clause into the bill to facilitate the incorporation of other local assemblies, as and when they were formed. Simultaneously, investigations were made into the recognition of the Bahá’í Marriage Certificate.

In the early stages, it was Mr. Thomas’ desire to introduce a very short, simple bill, similar in form to that incorporating the Roman Catholic Mission, and omitting the main Bahá’í beliefs and the nature of the local relationship to the National Assembly and the Guardian. Mr. Thomas argued that these details could go in the by-laws and need not form part of the legislation, and by introducing a short bill along the lines already accepted by the Legislative Council, a quick and easy passage through all its stages might easily result.

The Local Assembly could not accept this, and insisted on the inclusion in the ordinance itself of the major tenets of the Faith. Again and again the lawyer maintained his arguments that lengthy legislation, which included matters of doctrine and administration, would meet with difficulties in Legislative Council and that once a law was passed recognizing the assembly as being the corporate body of a religious community, the assembly would be empowered to administer its affairs according to Bahá’í belief and practice. All the details were finally included in the draft Bill, which had become a most comprehensive document.

Petition Addressed to Governor

On May 25, 1957, a petition was addressed to His Excellency the Governor of Seychelles, praying for legislation. The petition noted the worldwide nature of the Faith and its principle of obedience to Government; it referred to the Canadian incorporation and the incorporation of the religious bodies in Seychelles. With the petition was a draft of the Bill and two volumes of The Bahá’í World.

Due to the comprehensive nature of the bill and the then strong Roman Catholic composition of Legislative Council, opposition was expected. Difficulty was, however, even encountered in approaching a member of Legislative Council to sponsor the Bill.

The Governor accepted the petition and passed it to the Attorney General who acknowledged receipt, saying that it was receiving the attention of the Government. On June 1, 1957, the Governor wrote through the Acting Secretary to the Government, informing the Local Assembly that the bill should be introduced by an unofficial member as a Private Bill, and also stating that no similar legislation had been considered by Legislative Council under its present constitution, which dated from 1948.

Then followed a delay of some months due to the dissolution of Legislative Council and re-election. Only after the new Legislative Council was duly elected was a serious study made of the standing rules of Legislative Council as they applied to Private Bills. The Clerk of the Council then demanded a fresh petition signed by the nine members of the Local Assembly. “Leave to proceed” with the bill was presented to the first meeting of the tenth session of the Fourth Legislative Council on August 6, 1957. All members of the Council, elected and nominated, were present and the hall was filled to capacity with notable citizens, heads of the Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Seventh-Day Adventist missions, diplomats, and senior government officials. The promoters of the bill were allowed to proceed after the petition was read and a majority voted in favor. There were a few abstentions and but one negative vote at this stage.

Shortly after this, the bill was published in a “Notice of Motion” sent to the Clerk of the Council. About the same time, a certain well-known citizen was speaking against the Faith and branding the Bahá’í community as communists.

The Attorney suggested that, as the Faith was not known among the members of Legislative Council, they might all be given an authoritative statement. A number of copies of The Faith of Bahá’u’lláh by Shoghi Effendi were sent for this purpose.

When the proceedings of the meeting of Legislative Council were published on August 10 in Le Seychellois, the opposition of Dr. (Mrs.) Stevenson Delhomme was recorded in detail. This prominent lady, wife of the French Consul, is also chairman of the Victoria District Council, and by her opposition gave much publicity to the petition and to the Faith. Great public interest was aroused and this was the first time since its introduction to the islands that the Faith was mentioned in the press.

The bill was printed and published by August 21, 1957, and subsequently printed three times in the official Gazette.

Preamble to the Bill Required

The first major difficulty was encountered when the bill was passed for the first reading, but before its second reading the Government had a special meeting to consider it, and it was found that according to Standing Rules and Orders of Legislative Council and traditions of Parliamentary procedure, such a bill required a preamble defending every clause of the bill and giving comprehensive information about the doctrines, beliefs, and intents of the Faith. The Government also objected to the clause which facilitated the incorporation by proclamation of each local assembly that in future came into existence.

While this delay occasioned considerable apprehension in the hearts of the Seychelles friends, it is seen in retrospect as a most advantageous step, for the preamble, which was then drafted and added to the bill, and which had to be published in full, drew added attention to the tenets of the Faith.

As the preamble raised some technical discussions within Government itself, it was not possible to introduce the amended Bill to the December session of Legislative Council, and it was deferred until March 1958, and was again published as a supplement to the Gazette.

During June 1958, the attorney, Mr. Thomas, visited Kampala and was entertained at tea by the National Assembly secretary, a personal contact which helped to clarify some details.

Legislative Council did not meet again until September. The bill was read but did not get through a second reading. Dr. (Mrs.) Stevenson Delhomme made the only speech—it was a most misleading statement—and a five to five vote was taken. The President did not exercise his vote, so the bill failed to get a majority.

The Local Assembly then went into action: a) the National Assembly was advised, with a copy of Mrs. Delhomme’s speech; b) letters of thanks were written to those who voted in favor; c) a letter was sent to the Governor, answering all Mrs. Delhomme’s allegations, quoting extensively from Bahá’í Writings, and seeking advice from His Excellency as to the next step.

The letter to the National Assembly was delayed in the post, but the following actions were taken: a) to call on the Local Assembly to take no step without consultation with the attorney; b) to ask the British National Assembly to write to the Governor; c) ourselves to write an appeal to the Governor; d) to send a statement on the Faith for submission to the local newspaper.

Again, due to postal delay, the advice to the Local Assembly was late. They had already received a reply from the Government, dated October 22, which asked for such information as names and dates of arrival of first pioneers to Seychelles; total numbers in Seychelles and what proportion were local people; relationship to the National Assembly and what disabilities or inconveniences were suffered by the community as a result of its not being legally incorporated.

The Local Assembly replied in detail, and on November 29, the Governor replied through his private secretary “that the legal position has now been con-submitted and would do all he could to see that it now first time and Mr. Bailey moved that the Standing Council again eighteen months after receipt of the original petition. The motion was carried six to four, and the official members voting as they felt inclined, seeing no objection to the bill on grounds of policy. He then criticised the objection of the only member who ever spoke against the bill, saying “I completely fail to see how any of these objections carry any weight at all on grounds of public policy.” Following with a brief statement on the aims of the Faith and listing the basic principles, he continued with an appeal to the members to keep aloof from prejudices and not deny the Bahá’ís the privileges already granted in law to the Roman Catholics and Seventh-Day Adventist missions. He ended his thousand-word speech “We, with our individual beliefs, can surely afford to be tolerant in this particular matter; let us be so, please, and so allow this Faith legal status in Seychelles.”

The motion was most ably supported by H. C. Gontier who, in rising to second it, referred to what he had studied in The Bahá’í World 1950-54, and called upon members to observe the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, quoting articles 17 and 18. The voting was then seven to four in favor, the bill was read a second time, and then referred to a Select Committee.

The paper Le Seychellois, having refused to publish a statement on the Faith, was obliged to publish a verbatim report of Legislative Council proceedings. The Select Committee met four times, made certain amendments with which the Local Assembly representatives concurred, but could not reach a decision on the most important Clause 3, which outlined some of the basic tenets of the Faith. While one faction wanted to see it deleted and the material drafted into the by-laws, the other side supported the Bahá’í view that it was of the greatest importance. The Committee therefore referred the amended bill, with the Clause still included (as Clause 4), to the Council. Order of the Day, No. 4 of 1959, February 27, 1959, carried the item: “The Secretary to Government to move that the bill entitled Bill of an Ordinance for the Incorporation of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Victoria, Seychelles, be referred to a Committee of the Whole House.”

In presenting the report of the Select Committee, the Attorney-General, speaking against the inclusion of the controversial Clause 4, said: “No legislation is required for any religious body to administer its own religious affairs. This is an internal matter for the religious body itself. Legislating for such religious matters would create a precedent and would place the religion concerned in the category of a state religion, a kind of established church. Evidence has been given before the Select Committee that legislation is not necessary for the formation of a Spiritual Assembly but that legislation is necessary for the Assembly to have certain legal rights. As a matter of fact the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Victoria has been in existence for four years and has been functioning during that time as a religious body without legislation.”

“Before closing my remarks, in fairness to the promoters of the bill and as Chairman of the Select Committee, I should draw the attention of this House to the statement made by the promoters when Clause 4 was being discussed in Select Committee. They said they would not find it possible to carry on with the bill if Clause 4 were deleted.”
Mr. Bailey Replies to Attorney General

In reply to the Attorney-General Mr. Bailey, in a speech of almost 900 words, demonstrated the reasons why all clauses should be left in the bill, and that already the Bahá'ís had made big concessions. He drew attention to the worldwide pattern of local assembly incorporation, and said:

"Paragraph (e) restricts the powers and jurisdictions of a local assembly as granted in the revealed writings of the Founders of the Faith; its importance for inclusion is self-evident.

"Paragraphs (f) and (g) are equally important as they empower the local assembly to do all necessary, proper, and advantageous acts to promote the complete and successful administration of the corporate body, and at the same time it is binding on it that the spiritual and administrative relationship with its National Assembly of East Africa must be maintained, as this is a guiding principle of Bahá'í administration all over the world.

"From this it is clear that Clause 4 not at all only expresses beliefs and doctrines, but essential administrative principles, and it is very necessary to have this clause in the law so that the purposes and objects of the Faith shall be known to all, and not merely to appear as it would in the objects and reasons of a normal government-sponsored Bill given at the end only, and to be lost sight of when such a Bill becomes law."

This he summarized by quoting the Guardian in the passage: "To disassociate the administrative principles of the Cause from the purely spiritual and humanitarian teachings would be tantamount to a mutilation of the body of the Cause, a separation that can only result in the disintegration of its component parts, the extinction of the Faith itself."

After this it was put to the vote that Clause 4 stand as part of the bill and the voting was six to five in favor. All other clauses of the bill were voted upon and carried; the bill was read a third time and carried by seven votes to four.

It then required but submission to the Secretary of State for the Colonies in London and signature by Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II.

The Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Port Victoria wrote: "We believe that this is the first time in Bahá'í history that, in the case of a local assembly, incorporation has taken place through specific legislation."

The National Assembly cabled Haifa, and receiving the following reply: "CONVEY FRIENDS SEYCHELLES QUOTE DELIGHTED IMPORTANT VICTORY APPRECIATE STEADFAST SERVICES."

The crowning joy was the receipt by the Local Spiritual Assembly of the Seychelles Ordinance No. 12 of 1959 dated April 27, 1959. "An Ordinance for the incorporation of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá'ís of Victoria, Seychelles," accompanied by Proclamation No. 13 of 1959 from the Governor of Seychelles.

American Hands of Cause Fill Vacancy on Auxiliary Board for Protection

With the lamentable passing of Jesma Herbert, a vacancy was created on the Auxiliary Board for Protection, and the Hands announce that Amoz E. Gibson has been appointed.

The American Hands take the occasion to express their grateful appreciation of Mrs. Herbert's years of ardent and fruitful service as a member of that Board. Her services to the Faith of Bahá'u'lláh, indeed, over a long period, evoke admiration and esteem on the part of the entire American Bahá'í community.

Mr. Gibson, known to and admired by Convention delegates and visitors during recent years, has been pioneering among the Indians in Arizona.

Second All-Indian Assembly Formed in Jankohuyo, Bolivia

In the village of Jankohuyo in Cancha Blanca (White Field), Departmento Potosí, Bolivia, the community of twenty-four believers elected their first local assembly on April 21, 1959.

About two weeks previously, from April 3 to 6, all work had been suspended for intensive study on the spiritual and administrative aspects of the Faith, given by Athos Costas, secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay; and by Eustanislau Alvarez, chairman of the National Indian Teaching Committee. That Indian school had confirmed twelve more believers, with three villages represented: Sakaka, Huancota, and Jankohuyo. The visitors left promising to return for the formation of the first local assembly there.

The story of the election of that assembly tells of a race against time and obstacles. As Sr. Alvarez had to return to La Paz for the election there, Sr. Costas was left alone, with no knowledge of either the Quecha or Aymara Indian languages, to try to return by the prescribed date.

His account is one of endless frustrations. Briefly, his return trip started on April 15, as he waited vainly for a whole day in Orure for an interpreter and guide. He had to start out alone the next morning on the only bus which would take him partway to get him there on time.

Staying overnight at Sakaka, again no guide could be found, nor anyone who knew Spanish, so early the next morning he started off for Chire, where he left the bus with knapsack on back to cross unknown mountains and terrain. That day he walked eighty kilometers, climbing and descending mountains until it was pitch-black night. An Indian child he had tried to talk to had burst into frightened tears at the stranger; an Indian youth had been able to say only “Yes, no, good morning” in Spanish; later several Indian farm laborers at the foot of a mountain through gestures gave contradictory and confused directions.

From midnight to daybreak he tried to sleep on the ground between two mountains, restlessly tossing while worrying about his mission, and recalling the warning that scorpions, poisonous snakes, and wild foxes abounded in that zone. He can still visualize himself precariously clinging to the mountainside as a condor circled and swooped about him as he called out The Greatest Name for protection.

Finally, at dawn, he realized that he had gone almost in circles for days on his solitary trip, and he decided to go back to Sakaka for help.

By then he was extremely fatigued, and had forced himself almost beyond his strength. He later said: “All during that trip, while eating, sleeping, and walking, in the depth of my being was raised a constant supplication to God to help me in this service to His Cause.

His story includes the finding, briefly, of an Indian believer, Patricio, whom he lost sight of in the milling groups on market day in Sakaka. He had walked for hours around the plaza, hoping to catch a glimpse of Patricio crossing the central square. That night, a Sr. Coca offered to accompany him, after having previously refused.

On the next morning, April 20, they started out with three little burros in tow. Again came the same mountain climbing, and finally on a height Jankohuyo could be seen far below. “My emotions were indescribable,” Sr. Costas related.

With a joyous welcome, the believers suspended all work for further study classes on the administrative and spiritual bases of the Faith, as well as details on the character of Bahá’í elections. Then, with sacred readings and prayers, the election of their first assembly took place “in an atmosphere full of spirit and emotion.”

To add to the happiness of that date, two Indians from Urimarca were present, who asked that a Bahá’í would come to give intensive study classes in their village, “as there were eighty Indians there who wished to enter the Faith.”

A little eighty-year-old rural school teacher, Crisologo Montesinos, had been waiting eagerly to enroll in the Faith after having used Bahá’í prayers daily from Communion With God, in which he said he had found “his highest inspiration.” He was the only person in the Sakaka region who could read.

The National Assembly secretary’s report closed with these words: “Those Indians are highly humble, affectionate, and spiritual. Again, and even more so than before, I can say that Bolivia is like Africa ... detached pioneers are needed, bestowing all their love and faith, their Bahá’í knowledge, their human understanding, and their loving consideration.”

During the coming year, Sr. Alvarez will live among and teach the Indians for a five-month period, while Andrés Jachakollo will devote the entire year as a pioneer among his Indian brothers. A young Indian believer, Sabino Ortega, chosen by the outstanding Indian pioneers themselves, will spend several months for teacher training in Santiago, Chile, and will return to teach the children of these villages, as well as diffuse the Faith in Bolivia, a country that has over two million Indians.

National Assembly Members for Australia, Burma, Italy-Switzerland Announced

Officers and members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Australia for the Bahá’í Year 116 are: H. C. Featherstone, chairman; W. J. Rodwell, vice-chairman; N. P. L. Walker, secretary; N. Bluett, treasurer; and P. J. Khan, J. Heggie, Miss T. I. Perks, P. B. Bird, and E. S. C. Bowes.

On April 25, 1959, the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Bahá’ís of Burma was elected as follows: U Ba Sein of Toungoo, president; Daw Hla Hla of Mandalay, vice-president; S. G. Murtaza Ali of Rangoon, secretary; U Ko Ko Gyi of Rangoon, assistant secretary; Sháh Alam Chowhuri of Rangoon, treasurer; U Doolman of Daidanaw; U Hamid of Rangoon; Daw Thong Khin of Mandalay; and U Thein Pe of Daidanaw. A photograph of this newly formed Assembly appears in the July issue of Bahá’í News on page 11. All nineteen of the elected delegates attended the convention, as well as a large number of Bahá’ís from the different centers in Burma.

Members of the Italo-Swiss National Spiritual Assembly, elected at the Seventh Annual National Convention at Bern held on April 25-26, 1959, include Dr. Ugo Giachery, Fritz Schaer, Dr. Alexander Bausani, Anna Kunz, Fritz Semle, Dr. Walter Ott, Mona Haenni, Elsa Steinmetz, and Marian Little.
The Fourth Inter-American Indian Congress was held in the city of Guatemala May 16-25, 1959, with delegates and observers from the United States, Central and South America, and the Antilles, totaling approximately 150 persons, and including directors of various National Indian Institutes, representatives of the Inter-American Institute in Mexico, social workers, anthropologists, language experts, and prominent Indians from Panamá, Costa Rica, Guatemala, and the United States.

In the latter delegation were Paul Jones and Clarence Wesley, chiefs of the Navajo and Apache tribes, respectively. Educators and representatives of international organizations, such as O.I.T. and UNESCO, also participated. The Bahá'í observers were the only official representatives of any religious group.

The Government of Guatemala acted as host, and President Ydigoras officially opened the congress and sponsored a reception.

Three official Bahá'í observers (Mrs. Louise Caswell, Mrs. Dee Worth Lamb, and Artemus Lamb) were privileged to attend through the sympathetic bond for the Faith which had been established with the Director of the Indian Institute of Guatemala, Juan de Dios Rosales. He has devoted indefatigable energies to dedicated, loving service to the Indians, and is deepy searching for ways to further their interests. One other Bahá'í of Guatemala, Máximo Enrique Chávez, also acted as observer, but for the University of San Carlos, Guatemala.

Deeply aware of their great privilege and responsibility, the Bahá'í observers adopted the policy of free and friendly association with all participants in the Congress, without making mention of the Faith except when asked directly. The Indians obviously felt the Bahá'í spirit, voluntarily seeking them out constantly, as naturally as children seek their father.

The atmosphere of the fourth congress was one of unusually deep sincerity, abnegation, and a sincere searching for ways to right the wrongs suffered by the Indians. There was a generally widespread disquieting realization of the defects of our so-called "civilization," and recognition of the noble qualities of our long-suffering brothers, and their great spiritual and moral contributions to past civilizations when given their opportunity. Both Indians and non-Indians appeared to be making great sacrifices for the congress. Many times the thought was expressed that what was needed most of all was a correction of the "non-Indians."

The observers established very friendly, even intimate, relations with the San Blas Indians, who offered their assistance in every way possible, and gave suggestions as to the proper way to introduce the Bahá'í Faith to their twenty-three Indian tribes. Official permission must be obtained from their governing council for the entry of any religious teaching, and through invitations issued to visit them, it is hoped... to make this official presentation in the very near future through the coordinated efforts of the National Spiritual Assembly of Central America and the Panamanian Teaching Committee.

Another contact is a member of the National Assembly (governmental body) of Panama; another is a member of the Chiriquí tribe, and most anxious to know the Bahá'ís in his locality. It was possible to give the Message to both Mr. Jones, the Navajo chief, and to Mr. Wesley, the Apache chief. Mr. Jones was also given a brochure in English-Navajo. Both asked many questions and were very impressed with the fact that there are no priests, pastors, or paid workers in the Bahá'í Faith.

The Bahá'í pamphlet in Maya-Quiché Indian dialect and Spanish was also presented to the two Indian representatives from Quezaltenango, at their request. The Director of the Indian Institute of Bolivia, after hearing an exposition of the Bahá'í Faith at luncheon one day, said, "I want to join this movement."

The Secretary of the Indian Institute of Guatemala said, after having read some literature: "You are giving me a problem. My entire thinking is being completely revolutionized."

A most careful follow-up is being arranged with all the names, either through their respective national spiritual assemblies, or the teaching committees of their countries. In Guatemala itself a great number of people of capacity are interested, including both the Director and Secretary of the Indian Institute, who are actively reading and studying.

There have been three former Inter-American Congresses, the first held in Pátzcuaro, Mexico; the second in La Paz, Bolivia; the third in Cuzco, Peru. The next, or fifth, will be held in Ecuador in 1963. This fourth congress, held in Guatemala, is the first in which Bahá'ís have participated.

To the observers, the spirit of Bahá'u'lláh is obviously working on a large scale in the Americas, and a new era of understanding and collaboration in the work with the Indians appears to have opened up with this fourth congress.

Third Benelux Convention at Brussels
Stresses Importance of Deeds

Fifty-one Bahá'ís from Holland, Luxembourg, and Belgium assembled in the Conference Hall of the Hague, Brussels, for the Third Benelux Convention, April 25-26, 1959. Roll-call of the delegates revealed thirteen present. The secretary of the National Spiritual Assembly received votes from the six absent delegates, making a total of nineteen votes.

The Convention chairman introduced our two Auxiliary Board Members, Louis Henuget (Teaching) and Jan Sijsling (Protection). Louis Henuget, addressing the Convention, called our attention to the words of Dr. Ugo Giachery spoken at the meeting of the Hands of the Cause and the Auxiliary Board Members, held in Brussels last December.

"The Hands of the Cause," said Dr. Giachery, "are very concerned over the progress of the Global Crusade. The year 1959 is a very crucial one. This Cause must go forward and it can only go forward because of the sacrifice of every believer. The Cause of Bahá'u'lláh will go down if we fail. This brings us to one essential point—Individual Teaching. In order to achieve the goals set for the Global Crusade, 394 assemblies must be established before 1962."

Continuing, Mr. Henuget said that for the Benelux countries the goal is three national spiritual assemblies by 1963, one each for Belgium, Holland, and Luxembourg. "This is a 'divine task' we have before us. We, with our weaknesses and frailty, must accomplish it. It depends on us. We must create a "divine institution." If we are not able to form these national spiritual assemblies, then the Universal House of Justice will not be established and the Cause will be retarded because of our failure. Our next Convention must be a convention, not of promises, but of action and results. This thought we must keep in mind every day throughout the coming year."

Jan Sijsling, in addressing the Convention, pointed out that modern man is no longer interested in words but in deeds. There is much quarreling and gossiping and so much poor organization to be found everywhere. Bahá'ís must be an example. There is protection for all of us, and that is in the Teachings of Bahá'u'lláh. From these teachings we can learn the great lesson of self-discipline. We can improve our own behavior if we faithfully follow the laws and ordinances given by Bahá'u'lláh. The results will soon come, and then we shall begin to attract others so that next year there will be many more delegates from new assemblies. If we truly love our Faith we shall protect it.

Hearing the magnificent message from the Hands of the Cause of God was the high point of the Convention. Mr. Henuget then summarized this Message and emphasized its important parts.

In summing-up the discussion on teaching work, Jan Sijsling said that it is easy to obtain material goals, but much more difficult to achieve those of a spiritual nature. We need more faith. We need financial support. The plan given in the message from the Hands of the Cause is quite drastic. It is interesting to note the natural capacities of these two nations, Persia and the United States. The Persians are giving financial support. It is natural for them to give and give, they have such generous hearts. The Americans, in turn, are asked to give the work.

Having recently returned from a business trip which included the United States, Mr. Sijsling observed that the American Bahá'ís seemed more open, more earnest; for most of them the Bahá'í Faith is their life, it is natural for them to pioneer. Speaking of organization and teaching, both are necessary, said Jan, but leave those who have the capacity to teach free to do this important work and do not bog them down with committee work.

The closing remarks of the chairman, Madame Lea Nys, brought clearly to us all our great responsibility as Bahá'ís. In the Bible, said Madame Nys, there is a parable explaining that when the master of a piece of land was going away he asked his inheritors to take care of the land and make it prosperous. We as Bahá'ís have our own Master, Bahá'u'lláh, Who has entrusted the whole earth to His disciples so that they bring prosperity to it. His dominion is the soil of the hearts. Therefore we are inheritors of this earth. Moreover Bahá'u'lláh has left to us the "sceptre du pouvoir"—His Covenant and His World Order. We have inherited also His Crown of Glory with all its jewels and pearls, His principles and wonderful teachings. We are more privileged than any other inheritors of the past because we have those three things which make one whole great future of this earth. We cannot leave this precious heritage without fruit.

The powers on high, the three great figures of our Faith, the Báb, Bahá'u'lláh, and 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and our beloved Guardian are watching us from the Abhá Kingdom. What could bring more happiness to them and to our devoted Hands of the Cause, who are making every effort in the Holy Land and all over the world to help us, than for them to witness this great spiritual conquest of the hearts of humanity thereby making a better and more harmonious world.

Latin Believers Arise to Pioneer at Central American Convention

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, was the scene for a moving and forward-looking Ninth Annual Convention for the Bahá'ís of Central America, Mexico, and Panama on April 23 to 27, 1959.

Twenty-three delegates and numerous believers representing Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Mexico met in what might well be the commencement of a dearly-needed, fourth-phase dramatic surge of activities and victories in this World Crusade.

The recent visit of Hand of the Cause Dr. Ugo Giachery had deeply prepared the believers to face the problems and tasks before them. His presence had evidently left a deep impression and had taught a valuable lesson, for both the spirit and fruits of the convention made it a truly unprecedented one.

Following a deeply-consecrated devotional period, the convention got under way with the election of Esteban Canales as chairman, and Salomon Escalante as secretary. Of outstanding interest was the reading of a letter by Dr. Giachery which defined the needs of the territory, and served as a stimulus to guide the deliberations of the convention.

Mrs. Katherine McLaughlin, member of the Auxiliary Board and secretary of the Western Hemisphere Teaching Committee, proved invaluable with illuminating commentaries regarding the contents of the letter, and, indeed, throughout the convention. Essentially this letter underscored the need for the Latin believers to arise and take the initiative, and that the spirit of love in the Faith must dominate administrative activities as well as our own lives.

Much of the consultation centered around three points: (1) Individual conversion, (2) Multiplication of centers, and (3) Contributions to the Fund, which would enable the believers to aid in the Temple construction in Frankfurt, Kampala, and Sydney, and to meet the needs here.

A dramatic call was directed to the native believers to arise as pioneers now that Latin America must play so vital a role in the Divine Plan. Responding to this call were seven dedicated Latin friends, a very moving fulfillment of one of the beloved Guardian’s dearest hopes, that the Latins would arise spontaneously.

Upon reading the message directed by the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land to all the conventions, it was learned that the seven countries of this territory must form their national assemblies in 1962.

The emergency goals here are the establishing of four local assemblies in Honduras, and one in Nicaragua. No existing assembly can be lost, and all those lost must be re-established. Should one country of the territory fail to achieve its national assembly, the others could form theirs. This creates a feeling of “all for one and one for all,” and keeps our vision from being limited only to our own country.

The newly elected National Spiritual Assembly consists of these members and officers: Esteban Canales, chairman; Luis Bouche, secretary; James Facey, treasurer; and Harold Murray, Artemus Lamb, Salomon Escalante, Armando Fonseca Duval, Edris Rice-Wray, and Donald Witzel.

With all the believers returned home renewed, resolved, and unified in a measure that exceeded expectations, it was felt that the greatest tangible result was the touching arising of such dedicated Latin friends to pioneer, some at great personal sacrifice.
Twenty-Three States Report Successful Race Amity Day Meetings

Speaker’s panel at the Race Amity Day meeting sponsored by the Duluth, Minn., Bahá’ís: William Maupins, representing the NAACP of Duluth; Dr. Robert Wolff, Bahá’í moderator; Francis LeQuier, American Indian; Mrs. Rodney Larson, Hawaiian; and Curt Ewing, Negro Bahá’í of Excelsior, Minn.

Race Amity Day meetings on June 14, 1959, have been reported from Florida, Delaware, North Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi, Idaho, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Utah, Oklahoma, Maryland, Kentucky, Colorado, California, Ohio, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, New York, and Washington.

The Bahá’í Interracial Teaching Committee states that, in almost every report received, the publicity (displays, radio, television, and newspaper coverage) and the Race Amity Day meetings were excellent.

Public meetings, generally, did not bring as great an attendance as did such functions as teas, dinners, and picnics. One community reported that last year seventy-five people attended a dinner, and this year the meeting, without a dinner, only drew forty-five persons.

In communities where invitations were sent out there seemed to be a greater response in attendance. The warm, personal, and human aspects seemed to bring more response. A great many of the seekers seem to be coming from the college level. Wilmington and Brandywine Hundred, Del., Assemblies reported that they held two follow-up meetings which brought forty-nine people. An isolated believer (a mother of five children) in South Dakota could not hold a meeting, but prepared a display which was shown in the public library for two weeks, and she writes that she uses baby sitters of different races in order that her children may know and love all races.

In some areas considerable progress was noted with respect to the increase of Negroes and non-Bahá’ís who attended these meetings. Some of the topics used were: "Interrelated Worlds of God," "Race Amity, the Key to Social Justice," "Foundations of Racial Amity," "Race Unity: America’s Security," and "Race Unity, The Pathway to World Peace." We were especially grati-

Picnic following the panel discussion program for Race Amity Day at Duluth, Minn. The gathering included thirty-two guests, among them Negroes, American Indians, Filipinos, Japanese, and Hawaiians.
Baha'is in Tennessee are very pleased with the Negro response to the Faith and to the Race Amity meetings. Nashville held a panel discussion led by a Baha'i and a non-Baha'i. Fifty-two persons were present, and twenty-nine were non-Baha'is. The topic was "World Brotherhood—Spiritual Ideal or Expediency?". There was a large turnout of Negroes, which was particularly encouraging. Sixteen people asked for further study, and this was followed up by this community. It is especially encouraging to read this kind of report coming from the south.

Louisville, Ky., reports that they had two speakers, one white and one Negro, who have traveled together, and they feel that more of this should be done to promote Race Amity in the south. Charlotte, N.C., had an unusually good response in the number of Negroes and youth who attended their meeting, held in a Negro church where they showed slides, "Palestine, Holy Land of Four Faiths." They were so well received that they have been asked to show the slides to the Bible Classes in this church.

Boise, Idaho, held a picnic dinner which attracted fifty souls. Their program was brief, though effective in terms of interest and contacts. A prayer was read, then words from the Baha'i World Faith; and some of the words of the beloved Guardian.

The friends of Quincy, Ill., held a two-day meeting which drew an unusually large group of non-Baha'is. A travelog was shown on the first day, which drew a crowd of 120 people, 100 of whom were non-Baha'is. On the second day a Youth Symposium and picnic were held, with a total of fifty people, and thirty were non-Baha'is. This kind of response is most heart-warming to us all.

Fargo, N. Dak., Baha'is observed Race Amity Day with a talk at the Baha'i Center by a visiting believer who is a teacher at the Fort Totten Indian School. Royal Oak, Mich., presented a panel discussion; speakers included John Lopez, Mexican, Ellis Brown, Negro School teacher, and Mrs. Lois Nachman, a Baha'i. This was an inter-community meeting, with Ferndale, Oak Park, Royal Oak Township, and Royal Oak participating. Invitations were sent to a selected list by these communities.

A picnic was given by Baha'is of Stockton, Calif., attended by forty-seven persons. A talk by William Hathorn, member of the Stockton Assembly, stimulated a lively discussion among the guests, and their many questions were satisfactorily answered.

New York City's observance of Race Amity Day received publicity in four newspapers that totalled over 4,000,000 circulation. The meeting, at the Baha'i Center, attracted eighty persons, with Negro and other minority groups making up half of the attendance.

A panel discussion was given in the YMCA hall on June 6 by the Burbank, Calif., Baha'is. Four faiths, Baha'i, Jewish, Hindu, and Christian, were represented by the speakers. Over eighty persons attended this Race Amity meeting.

Taking advantage of the presence of Miss Elsie Austin in their city at the time, the Baha'is of St. Petersburg, Fla., moved their observance of Race Amity Day forward one week. Their report states that Miss Austin addressed an audience of sixty-five on the evening of June 2, after which the National Council for Negro Women entertained her and the Baha'is at a reception and banquet at their headquarters. The day preceding the public meeting, Miss Austin visited a number of Negro leaders, and was taken on a tour of the city by the founder of the organization. Photographs were taken at the meeting for the Negro section of the local newspaper and excerpts from her talk were requested for incorporation in the newspaper's report of the meeting.

The Local Spiritual Assembly writes: "The whole period of Miss Austin's visit was vitalizing and helped us to enlarge our understanding of and friendship with all peoples."

Baha'i Press Service Reports on Publicity

The National Baha'i Press Service, in observance of Race Amity Day, made the following promotional material available to the friends: display posters in four colors, newspaper matrices of the poster design suitable for advertising, publicity releases, and copy with layout for advertisements.

The Press Letter, several months in advance, urged the friends to observe this special event and to avail themselves of the suggestions and assistance of the Interracial Teaching Committee.

At the request of the Baha'i Press Service, the National Reference Library Committee compiled quotations on the theme of "the oneness of mankind" suitable for reading at public observances, and these were offered to the friends through the Press Letter.

In addition to sending releases to the Baha'i press representatives, all leading Negro papers received copies of the releases, as well as the Associated Negro Press, the United Press International, and the Associ-
Some 2,000 pieces of mail were handled for this event.

Two hundred seventy-eight Race Amity Day posters were sold, and thirty-two Race Amity Day mats. Two weeks after the event took place, we can report having received publicity in twenty-eight states, representing seventy-four communities. We have received 132 individual press items.

The total circulation was 12 million, and column inches totalled 700.

Attain First Recognition of Bahá’í Marriage in Spain

An historic victory for the Bahá’í Faith has been achieved in Spain, with the first civil registration of a Bahá’í marriage.

Every effort had been made previously by the couple, Antonio Jiménez Gutiérrez and Parvin Vahid Teherani, to procure a civil marriage, as theoretically this is permissible. However, they found it impossible to attain, and went to Tangiers, Morocco, where they tried to obtain a civil marriage. Here they also failed, but had a Bahá’í marriage ceremony which they intended to be content with, and were prepared to suffer the consequences. This marriage was performed by the Local Spiritual Assembly of Tangiers.

When they returned to Murcia, where Antonio is employed in a bank, it came to the attention of the authorities that they considered themselves married, but according to the views of the police they were living “in concubinage.”

The newly married couple then began again to make petitions for a civil registration of their marriage. There then occurred a matter of great historical importance, for after much difficulty and discussion, the authorities finally granted them permission to have the civil registration of their marriage, thus making it legal to the State, if not to the Church.

This makes the marriage of Parvin and Antonio the first case in Spain of the legal recognition and registration of a Bahá’í marriage, and is the reward of obedience and constancy in the Faith of Bahá’u’lláh.

The Bahá’í ceremony took place on April 22, 1959, and the civil ceremony and registration took place in Murcia on May 14, 1959.

U.S. Sales Committee Members Retire from Service

Members of the Bahá’í community throughout the world who have been faithfully served for many years by Harry E. Walrath, chairman of the Bahá’í Sales Committee of the United States, will be sorry to learn that he and Mrs. Walrath have moved away from the Temple area and will no longer be able to continue filling orders for ringstones and other special items handled by that committee. Two of the other members who have served almost as long have been ill for several months.

The newly-appointed committee will make every effort to give the same prompt attention to orders. Until further notice, all orders for items handled by the Bahá’í Sales Committee should be addressed as follows: Bahá’í Sales Committee, 112 Linden Avenue, Wilmette, Ill.

The Education of Youth and Our Twentieth Century Dilemma

By Habib Taherzadeh

What is education? Education means the development of human faculties through training and instruction so that the individual may be fit to lead a happy and useful life. Education has two aspects, one moral, the other intellectual.

Moral education aims at building and purifying personal character. It directs and motivates human behavior. It is the essential factor for the advancement of human evolution. It prepares the ground for acquiring spiritual perception. It is the foundation of life.

Intellectual education, on the other hand, consists of acquiring knowledge and ability to adapt ourselves to the environment in which we live. It develops and refines our mental faculty. However, it is a blind instrument. It may be applied either for construction or destruction, for the elevation of mankind or for its degradation.

That is why the prophets lay so much emphasis in their ethical teachings on the need for moral training and the refinement of human conduct. Their object is to awaken and nourish the soul within us as a prerequisite of spiritual consciousness and as a step forward towards human evolution.

Unfortunately, in our modern life little attention is paid to moral education. Parents often neglect this vital duty of character formation and feel satisfied if their children observe certain superficial manners and keep up appearances in their social life. There is no deep down moral impulse to inspire and motivate their conduct.

Much less can be expected nowadays from school teachers in the way of moral education, since they consider themselves to be solely concerned with the intellectual training of children.

Our modern education is highly secularized. It has little to offer in the way of a philosophy of life and neglects those values and abstract properties inherent in human nature. It deals entirely with the study of the sciences of inert matter and the material side of life. Consequently this systematic development of material knowledge has led, within less than a century, to the phenomenal triumph of science and technology—a thing unprecedented in human history and experience.

Today machinery on a vast and new scale has revolutionized industry, creating a world of potential plenty and comfort. We have almost abolished time and distance. Our medical science has made an enormous stride in eliminating disease and in improving public health and hygiene. Our scientists have penetrated far into the depths of space. They have discovered the stupendous power of the atom, which is now available both for beneficial and destructive application.

What effect has the impact of modern life and civilization produced on human beings? What consequences have these momentous changes in the conditions of human life brought about? Do the acquisition and employment of the fruits of industry constitute a veritable advance in the course of human evolution? What is the price demanded for all those lavish and glittering gadgets that science has placed in our eager but clumsy hands? The answer to all these questions reveals a grim reality that would sound alarming to many of us. Yet the plain fact is that the same mighty impulse which enabled us to attain to such a high level of material progress has produced a paradoxical reaction which is exerting a baneful influence on the non-material aspects of our life. It has actually tipped the scales against us, and is driving us slowly down the path of degradation, simply because we have neglected the laws of our nature, because we have lost our sense of balance, because we have ignored the fact that material progress, if unaccompanied by a corresponding development in the moral and spiritual aspects of life, will eventually prove a source of evil and lead to human degradation.

"The civilization," is Bahá'u'lláh's grave warning, "so often vaunted by the learned exponents of arts and sciences, will, if allowed to overstep the bounds of moderation, bring great evil upon men... If carried to excess, civilization will prove as prolific a source of evil as it had been of good when kept within the restraints of moderation."

The question is: Are men really degenerating? A cursory glance at the world's advanced communities would reveal that in spite of the enormous progress made in the field of education, the intellectual standard, the mental caliber of the masses, remains very low indeed. We notice that multitudes of modern individuals are afflicted by a mental weakness, by nervous and degenerative diseases for which there seems to be no effective cure.

Meanwhile cases of crime, robbery, violence, delinquency, immorality, lawlessness, and terrorism have assumed alarming proportions. Our arts, our music, our literature—the fairest fruits of human intellect—have lost their true value and have been excessively vulgarized. Marriage ties and parental relationships, which constitute the warp and woof of human society, are being steadily relaxed. Modern people have become indifferent towards all those conceptions of decency and morality that at one time held sway over the hearts of men and directed their thoughts and actions.

All these vices, excesses, mental disorders, and disconcerting frustrations are but the outward signs of an internal affliction—the affliction of the soul. We are so hypnotized by the brilliant display of new gadgets, the vulgar attractions and pursuits of our time, that we seldom realize that the soul within us is atrophying, owing to insufficient nourishment.

We are being chastised for transgressing natural laws, for trespassing the bounds of moderation. We reluctantly note that man, who had gained mastery over matter, has fallen prey to his own lower nature and become a slave to his own handiwork. This grievous situation constitutes the real dilemma of the twentieth century.

What is the outlook for the younger generation? What is the position of youth in this challenging period? They find themselves in a world out of touch with God, and out of harmony with the exigencies and problems of the new life that science and industry have thrust upon us. They find school education lacking that creative impulse which is required to guide the behaviour of the individual, and unable to give a clear conception of the role he has to play in this new world in which human power and its scope are so greatly increased. They find doctrines that are inconsistent with reason and the established facts of science.

This sad situation prompts many young people of today to cut themselves off from the idea of God and religion, and to adopt a sceptical attitude with no genuine faith at all. In vain they search around them seeking a substitute for faith to fill the void and soothe the aching soul within. They try evasive doctrines and philosophies, and pernicious ideologies, only to find them hollow and unsatisfying. They turn to scientists, statesmen, and the so-called leaders of thought for enlightenment, only to be disillusioned.

Our youth are likely to grow desperate and dissatisfied. They find no calming influence, no soul-uplifting power, to direct their steps towards lofty and constructive goals. Thus it would seem a natural consequence that their sensitive subconscious minds should revolt in protest against the perversity and hollowness of our present way of life and should seek such gratifications that will at least momentarily relieve their sense of frustration.

This is the sad fate that our decadent social system presents to youth the world over today. There is no doubt that the effect of this grievous situation on the morals and psychology of the younger generation has been catastrophic.

How are we going to tackle the problem of child education? How are we going to train our children according to those lofty standards of Bahá’í conduct set up by Bahá’u’lláh and exemplified by the life of our Master, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá? Obviously we cannot bring our children up in a sort of egg-shell. We cannot isolate them from the rest of the world, of which we are all a part. We cannot shut them off from the gay but illusive social life that flows ceaselessly at our doors. Little, too, can we expect in the way of character training from our institutions of learning.

The Bahá’í Faith regards parenthood as a divine privilege, and at the same time imposes a colossal responsibility on it that cannot be shirked on any pretext whatever. A single child whose conduct is noble, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá says, is far superior to thousands of ill-mannered ones; the former would prove itself the crowning pride of a generation while the latter would be a source of shame and misery.

He further points out that this sacred and delicate task can in no wise be effectively fulfilled unless the parents set up, through the dynamic force of their own characters and conduct, through loving self-dedication, such a shining example that it will shed ample light of moral guidance on the path their children are destined to tread. This is the essence of His exhortation and constitutes the bedrock of character training.

Educators, as well as parents, ought to bear in mind that they should not remain content with gestures of morality, with a mere observance of a set of conventional codes of behaviour, which have no real value whatever. Rather they should aim at instilling noble virtues and qualities into their children’s natures, so that their thoughts and deeds, their whole attitude towards life, become the expression of the inner improvement; so that thus they may be able to lead happy lives far removed from the frivolous and sordid satisfactions of our age.

Let the following moral precepts gleaned from the writings of Bahá’ú’lláh and ‘Abdu’l-Bahá guide our steps towards the lofty goal of moral evolution, the attainment of which would usher in the Golden Age of human maturity and the dawn of Divine Civilization on this planet:—

"The companions of God," Bahá’ú’lláh declares, "are, in this day, the lump that must leaven the peoples of the world. They must show forth such trustworthiness, such truthfulness and perseverance, such deeds and character that all mankind may profit by their example."

"Be ye the stewards of God amongst His creatures," He in another passage admonishes men, "and the emblems of His generosity amidst His people. Let your eye be chaste, your hand faithful, your tongue truthful, and your heart enlightened."

"Be generous in property," is yet another counsel, "and thankful in adversity. Be worthy of the trust of thy neighbour, and look upon him with a bright

Impressive Baha'i Calendar

An impressive Bahá'í calendar has again been prepared by the Youth Committee of Alexandria, Egypt, and published by the Local Spiritual Assembly. The calendar is prefaced by an explanation of the Bahá'í calendar, adapted from Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era, printed in English and Arabic. Then follows the calendar proper, with a cleverly-conceived combination of Gregorian and Bahá'í months within a single ruled box. At the back of the calendar is a listing of all Bahá'í anniversary and Feast days, also in the English and Arabic languages.

NEWS BRIEFS

The Local Spiritual Assembly of Nagpur, India, has been registered under the government's Societies Registration Act, thereby achieving a goal of the Ten-Year Crusade.

A member of the Birmingham, Ala., Bahá'í community has given a book review of Dr. A. Powell Davies' The Meaning of the Dead Sea Scrolls before several clubs, Sunday school groups, and other organizations. Bahá'ís will find the Scrolls themselves shed much light on pre-Christian Palestine, and show close parallels with pre-Bahá'í Persia.

The Condition of Victory

Closing Remarks at the 1959 U.S. Convention
by Horace Holley, Hand of the Cause

Any of us who leave this Convention with the conviction that teaching and pioneering, while really magnificent projects, are not for us—those who have that inner condition will inevitably find that the conditions of the world are so arranged as to make the realization of these projects not only difficult but practically impossible.

We find every good reason to agree with ourselves, for example, that we simply can't pioneer—conditions make it impossible.

On the other hand, any who leave this Convention on the level of faith, with the pure intention, desire, and passion to serve Bahá'u'lláh by intensive teaching or by pioneering, no matter what conditions confront us at this time, they will inevitably change so that our faith will be justified.

This is the mystery of the world—that events, circumstances, and influences are so intermingled that they prove any thesis we wish to demonstrate.

There is a level on which the World Crusade was accomplished at the time it was announced. That is the level of the Will of God—the level we attain in a condition of pure faith.

Let us make the supreme effort to go forward, not thinking of our personal circumstances, our health, our degree of wealth or lack of it, our family circumstances or our business responsibilities. Let us not think of any of these conditions, but rather let us take into our hearts the spirit of the victory of the Manifestation of God, keep it there pure and undefiled, and go forward step by step on the path of victory.

Independent Investigation of Truth

"We must not look for truth in the deeds and actions of the nations; we must investigate truth at its Divine source and summon all mankind to unity in the reality of self." (PUP p. 81)

The universal religion of Bahá'u'lláh was presented to the west as the consummation of the independent investigation of truth. When 'Abdu'l-Bahá travelled through Europe and America, the western peoples had already achieved a large measure of that independence. For example, the mathematician was no longer conditioned by magic and superstition in dealing with numbers; the citizen emerged from the feudal association of kings and rulers with a divine will; and an increasing majority of religionists were unwilling to identify the power and authority of God with any man-made institution.

It was at this critical stage, between two irreconcilable concepts of the nature of society, that 'Abdu'l-Bahá unveiled the light of universal truth. On the one hand the individual surveyed the world into which he had been born—the world of ancestry and tradition; on the other he perceived a world in the process of creation—a world in which his personal responsibility had vastly increased. What the Bahá'í Message offered him was a final freedom—a spiritual freedom to rise above tradition and accept what was revealed by the new source of illumination.

"The knowledge of the Reality of Divinity is impossible and unattainable, but the knowledge of the Manifestations of God, for the bounties, splendors, and the divine attributes are apparent in them. Therefore as man attains to the knowledge of the Manifestations of God, he will attain to the knowledge of God. . . . Blessed are those who receive the light of the divine bounties from the enlightened dawning-point!" (SAQ p. 257)

Without knowledge of the will of God and the true nature of man, the people born into this age of mental and social freedom fall into the abyss of worship of material things or worship of the state.

"Ponder a while. What is it that prompted, in every Dispensation, the peoples of the earth to shun the Manifestation of the All Merciful? . . . . It is the veil of idle imaginations which, in the days of the Manifestations of the Unity of God and the Day Sprins of His everlasting glory, hath intervened, and will continue to intervene, between them and the rest of mankind. For in those days, He Who is the Eternal Truth manifested Himself in conformity with that which He Himself has purposed, and not according to the desire and expectations of men.

"Consider the Dispensation of Jesus Christ. Behold, of all the learned men of that generation, though eagerly anticipating the coming of the Promised One, have nevertheless denied Him. Both Annas, the most learned among the divines of His day, and Caiaphas, the high priest, denounced Him and pronounced the sentence of His death." (GL pp. 82-83)

Therefore we attain independent investigation of truth when we recognize Baha'u'llah as the Manifestation, and accept His Teachings. Our independence is fulfilled in that recognition and acceptance. The Bahá'í who, after accepting the conditions of membership in the Bahá'í community, consciously or unconsciously insists upon his right to make an "independent investigation of truth" in matters already covered in the Teachings or by the decisions of a local or national assembly, has fallen into grievous error. In the Cause of God independent investigation of truth is not a sanction for self-will, but a recognition of the value of obedience to higher will. As the Teachings state, true freedom comes from obedience to the Will of God.

Questions on Marriage, Guardian's Prayers
Answered by Hands of Faith in Holy Land

Replies received from the Hands of the Faith residing in the Holy Land to two questions submitted by the U.S. National Spiritual Assembly are quoted here for the information and guidance of the American believers.

The first, dated April 27, 1959, answers the question as to whether membership in the Faith can ever be restored to believers who have been deprived of their voting right because of violating the Bahá'í marriage laws regarding marriage. It reads:

"Regarding your question whether an individual deprived of the voting right because of breach of the Bahá'í marriage laws can ever apply for restoration of voting membership, the general principle applied by the beloved Guardian in such cases was that the mistakes must be rectified, even to the extent of divorce and remarriage according to the Bahá'í laws."

This instruction must surely impress upon all the believers the supreme importance of obedience to the laws governing the marriage of Bahá'ís.

The following is quoted from a letter from the Hands of the Faith dated July 9, 1959, answering the request that is frequently received for translations of prayers by Shoghi Effendi which are in the possession of Persian Bahá'ís coming to this country. It states:

"The beloved Guardian wrote some time ago that the Western Bahá'ís had sufficient prayers in the translations which had been made of Bahá'u'lláh's and 'Abdu'l-Bahá's prayers, and his own prayers should not be translated or published."

Importance of Sacrifice in World Crusade
Stressed by Mr. Samandari on India Tour

Following the Post-Convention Teaching Conference held in New Delhi, India, on May 1 to 3, reported in July Bahá'í News, Hand of the Cause Táhirih Samandari visited several cities in India where he gave public talks on the Faith and met with the Bahá'í friends. An extract has been taken from the Bahá'í News Bulletin of India concerning his appearance with the friends in Bombay:

"Mr. Samandari in detail explained the great importance of the remaining four years of the Crusade. He very clearly stated that whatever services we Bahá'ís want to render to the Cause, must be done during these years, and this is the time for a complete sacrifice. He warned friends that a very great catastrophe is awaiting humanity. We do not know when and in which form it will be, but before it is too late for all of us, let us arise and, forgetting everything, sacrifice whatever we have for the success of the Divine Plan. After four years, i.e. in 1953, if we would be alive on this earth, God is sure to compensate for all our sacrifices made in His Path. But, God forbid, if we would not serve the Cause as we should have done, our lives would be miserable even if we would be alive after that period. These are the years of our test, and everything depends on our sacrifice during these critical four years.

Bahá’ís from all over the world look to this revered Hand of the Cause with love and admiration. Though having attained a very advanced age, Taráqu’lláh Sámanábrí has travelled through many continents since the inception of the World Crusade, inspiring and admonishing the friends, with great vigor and appeal, to teach, pioneer, and win their share of victories for the Cause of God. He is a precious link with the Heroic Age of the Faith and the appearance of the Manifestation, for he was privileged to know Bahá’u’lláh and to look upon His face.

Two NSA-Sponsored Conference Series
Stimulate, Unify American Bahá’ís

When the National Spiritual Assembly of the United States launched its intensive homefront campaign on August 1, 1958, it announced that among the activities which the National Assembly itself would undertake would be carefully-planned conferences from time to time, to discuss with as many believers as possible the progress of the three underlying objectives of the campaign, namely “spiritual reinvigoration, administrative expansion, and material replenishment” of the American Bahá’í community.

Accordingly, the first series of such conferences was held simultaneously the last weekend of October 1958, at which the American Hands of the Cause, members of the Auxiliary Boards, and members of the National Spiritual Assembly met with some 2,200 believers in thirty-eight different cities, to explain the various aspects of the campaign and how each believer could relate himself to it.

To follow-up the call for “spiritual reinvigoration,” the National Assembly has already mailed to every believer in the United States four outlines for individual and group study and discussion on the following subjects: “What Every Bahá’í Should Know” (1) about the Covenant and (2) about Bahá’í Administration, and “The Bahá’í Way of Living;” (1) Our Inner Life and Private Character and (2) the relationship of the Bahá’í to others, in his own community and in the civil community in which he resides. Results are already apparent in the upsurge of teaching activity and the reduction in the number of personal and local problems coming before the National Spiritual Assembly. Additional outlines are planned to eventually cover all aspects of teaching activities, including individual and collective techniques for attracting and winning new souls for the Faith, looking forward to “mass conversion.” In this connection all national teaching and service committees have been requested to gear their work directly to the homefront campaign during the next several years.

The second series of National Assembly-sponsored conferences took place on June 27 and 28, 1959, in twenty-seven localities. Again these were conducted by the Hands of the Cause, members of the Auxiliary Boards, and members of the National Spiritual Assembly. In spite of the fact that the dates conflicted with other important Bahá’í events, such as the opening of some of the summer schools, some 1,600 believers were present.

The theme of these latest conferences was “This Crucial Hour,” which was also the central theme of the message to the 1959 conventions from the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land. Particular emphasis was given to the call of the Hands for a “second glorious all-conquering army of pioneers” to open new cities, towns, and villages essential for the formation of the remaining independent national assemblies in Europe and Latin America, and for the raising of promising groups on the homefront to “firmly grounded, well informed, actively functioning communities.”

How the individual could best play his part was seriously considered in light of the fact that “upon the successful conclusion (of the remaining goals of the Ten-Year Plan) depends the ultimate triumph or failure of the entire Crusade," which "constitutes no less than the bedrock for future activities for centuries to come."

Underlying all suggestions for the acceleration of teaching work was awareness that "the sands of the Crusade are rapidly running out and with them each one's own great personal opportunity, never to recur." In order that everyone might find his particular niche of service, five areas of individual action were outlined: (1) to pioneer outside the United States; (2) to assist another to go by supporting the deputation fund, or by moving to another locality where a potential pioneer is detained lest his leaving will jeopardize the maintenance of the assembly status; (3) to bring in new believers; (4) to map out and launch his own personal teaching program in accordance with the instructions of Shoghi Effendi as set forth in The Advent of Divine Justice (pages 42-44); and (5) to strengthen the entire American Bahá'í community by participating wholeheartedly in the homefront campaign of deepening in the fundamentals of the Faith, and by teaching.

There was much consultation also on the challenge facing the local spiritual assemblies, and their direct responsibility for arousing and aiding each member of the community to participate directly in one or more aspects of the World Crusade. The great responsibility and privilege of every existing Bahá'í group in achieving assembly status no later than Ridván 1961 was also emphasized, and many suggestions were made as to how neighboring assemblies and individual believers could help.

The afternoon session of each of the conferences was left open for the friends to ask questions about administrative principles about which they needed clarification, including assembly and individual responsibility with respect to the application of the obligatory laws, and the relationship of individuals to the local assembly and to the national assembly.

The seventeen conference leaders, most of whom conducted two meetings, are unanimous in their feeling that these two series of conferences have had a great unifying effect upon the American Bahá'í community; that they have brought the friends closer to the National Spiritual Assembly, and that all have a greater understanding of their individual and collective spiritual responsibilities and privileges in bringing the World Crusade to a triumphant conclusion.

This feeling is substantiated by many letters from host communities and individual believers, expressing appreciation of the inspiration and benefit they derived from the conferences and urging the National Spiritual Assembly to schedule further meetings of the same type in even more centers. Consideration is being given to at least one more series during the current year, and in the interim to call several in scattered areas which could not be included in the June series.

Public Schools of Two U.S. Cities Give Recognition to Bahá'í Holy Days

The Local Spiritual Assembly of Dayton, Ohio, reports that the Dayton public school system has informed the Assembly that Bahá'í children may be excused from classes on the Bahá'í Holy Days. This permission was granted in September 1958.

Faith of Baha’u’llah Reaches

TEACHING work in the Southern Cameroons, Africa, is being intensified this year more than ever before, Enoch Olinga, Hand of the Cause for Africa, has revealed. Many travelling teachers are busily engaged in the fields of mass conversion and mass consolidation, which entails journeying into the most remote areas of the territory through very dense and unsafe forests.

The following excerpts, taken from a letter from a devoted travelling teacher, Sampson Fochak of Mamfe District, reveals the rare spirit which seems to animate and guide these valiant battlers against the dark forces of superstition, ignorance, and unbelief:

"...Since the day my family released me to undertake traveling teaching, I have not remained home for a single day. The journey with Peter Oben Etchi has lasted two weeks, and we were able to open four new centers. I intend to open as many new centers as is possible within a short space of time. My next missionary journey will last two months, and I shall by all means visit places like Taiyor, Ekpan, Efumbe, Nyenaba, Basall, Bangang, Nkong, Mambo, and Ebenesoka. These villages are very remote, and are separated by great distances, indeed.

"I am really trying my very best, and with the greatest hope and trust in the Faith I love most, to open many, many centers, if Bahá'u'lláh Himself will grant me the strength. I shall not, and I do not hope to, be tired of this great undertaking of opening new centers to this great Faith. However, I want to stress that by my mentioning this I do not intend to display pride. Bahá'u'lláh knows this. The truth is, I have devotedly tendered my mind, my spirit, and my entire being for the wide spread of our Faith, and I hope and pray that I shall be enabled to withstand every trial, difficulty, and ordeal in His Service. As you know, we all are praying and working hard for the rapid progress of our Faith, so that it may reach all the virgin areas before the conclusion of the sacred Ten-Year Spiritual Plan of our beloved Guardian. For this reason I intend to extend my journeys to Bangwa . . .

"Every day and every night we are engaged in spiritual communion and prayer. Our thoughts and prayers are for all those that are now laboring in the same field of His Service . . ."
Carib Indians on Dominica Island

Receive Bahá’í Message for First Time

The Bahá’í Message was given for the first time to the Carib Indians on the island of Dominica, West Indies, on May 7, 1959, by Donald Corbin, pioneer to Grenada Island.

Mr. Corbin’s experiences there are related in the following excerpts from his report:

On my way to the Dominican Republic for the International Bahá’í School, I asked the stewardess to be sure that I knew when we passed by the island of Dominica (pronounced Domin-ee-ka in the West Indies). Just as we approached the island, she said the pilot had invited me to the cockpit so that I could get a better view of it as we passed. My whole purpose was to say special prayers, so that on my return island-hopping trip including Dominica, the doors would open enabling me to talk to the Caribs. From the information secured here in Grenada it was not known as to how I would be able to approach them, much less the Chief himself, and I had been given several names to work through.

On my arrival on May 5 in Dominica I seemed to be confused as to how to approach this important matter. . . . and felt I should go a little easy with the Bahá’í work, as I was informed that the island was 98% Catholic and tightly controlled. On the way from the airport to the capital city of Roseau we passed by the entrance to the Carib Reservation, and I told the taxi driver I was particularly interested in the Carib Indians.

He then opened up with a lot of information about them, and from this I decided that the best approach was to go directly to the Chief himself, unannounced. I arranged for a taxi and a guide to take us through the mountains. The following day, May 6, I was still undetermined whether it would be that day or the following day, Thursday, May 7. As it worked out, the taxi driver was unable to be with me the whole day Wednesday, so I told him we would leave early on Thursday morning and take all day if necessary.

On Thursday, May 7, the taxi driver, guide, and myself set out for the reservation. We had to leave the car on the highway and walk six miles over, up, and down in the Dominican mountains to reach the reservation. Enroute we found out that the Chief (known as the King by his people) was probably around 100 years ago a new light appeared in the world to bring peace, love, and true unity to the world; that the Bahá’í Faith is a world faith with world unity as its goal; that the Bahá’í Community was already a world community functioning in every part of the globe.

The matter was not referred to again, but I did sign his guest book and quoted “Blessed is the spot” by Bahá’u’lláh, so that there would be an official record of the visit.

He showed me his scepter and mantle of authority, and gave me a color picture of himself. The thought that went through my mind when talking to him was what would he do with this Message? He said, “You know, sometimes the priest doesn’t get here and I hold the meetings, and often 100 come to listen to me.” So I felt that the Message would be passed on to some of his people.

This is the only Carib Reservation in existence and there are about 900 on it, 100 of whom are pure Carib, the others mixed. The Chief himself is mixed. I have promised to return and take him fishing and talk to the school children on various subjects. I also promised his wife that Doris would make her a nice dress and send it to her.

The Caribs receive no support from the Government as it is an autonomous state and the Chief rules with a Council, which is elected. The Caribs live mostly on their own food products, and their main source of income is their banana crop. When the banana boat is in all the people, men, women, and children, carry the banana stocks on their heads up and down these same mountain roads which we took. He asked me to send him a West Indian cookbook.

The island itself is the most primitive of the West Indies, and is really under-developed. An air strip is now under way, so in a few years, as it develops its tourist trade, it will become an important island. It is, by the way, the only island that remains green the year around, having 366 rivers, one for each day, and the mountains are true rain forests, very lush. The main hotel, for example, contains only nine rooms, and the Government is anxious to develop the mountainous areas, selling land at ten and five shillings per acre. Although the official language is English, the street language is that of Patois.

Back in Roseau I met my friend, the newspaper reporter (contacted on Wednesday); I presented him with Baha'i literature and we had a nice little talk. He has asked that I send him more books to read and admitted that he was really open to the Message. It was a thrilling experience and the seeds planted with this ethnic group must surely grow.

Dr. Grossmann Speaks on Faith
In Many Towns of Finland, Sweden

During the month of May Hand of the Cause Dr. Adelbert Mühlschlegel visited many places in Finland and Sweden on behalf of the Faith, talking to interested people individually, and speaking at public meetings. The following information has been taken from a report in the German Bahá’í-Nachrichten:

On May 11 Dr. Mühlschlegel met with several people in Hyvinkää, a goal city of Finland where some teaching work has been done by the friends in Lahti. A meeting arranged in Tampere, an industrial city of Finland, publicized with advance newspaper articles, drew sixty people on May 17.

Another sixty people attended the meeting held in Lahti, and two reports were published in the newspapers. Dr. Mühlschlegel also spoke to thirty-five twelve-year-old children on the following day.

While in the Lahti-Tampere area, the revered Hand of the Cause met with a number of individuals, including an Esperantist who was happy to meet a German Esperantist; and the granddaughter of Dr. Forcl, who had received a Tablet from 'Abdu’l-Bahá.

On Sunday, May 24, a number of friends drove ten kilometers from Tampere to visit a man who lived with his wife and three sons in a very humble, tiny house with almost no furniture but very neatly kept, and who was earnestly studying Gleanings and using the prayers of Bahá'u'lláh daily in his desire to grasp the full significance of the teachings.

Driving north from Tampere, other points of contact were Lahti and Oulu in Finland. From there the party went to Haparanda and the university town of Uppsala, a goal city, in Sweden, arriving at the Ḥāżiratu’l-Quds in Stockholm on May 31.

Study Approach to Five Types of People at Second Annual Alaska Summer School

The Second Annual Alaska Summer School was held in Juneau July 4 to 10, 1959, with forty-seven registered for the class sessions. They came from Fairbanks, Tanana Valley, Matanuska Valley, Anchorage, Spenard, Seward, Ketchikan, Petersburg, Sitka, Barrow Island, Juneau, and Douglas. Canada was represented with Bahá'ís from Whitehorse, Yukon Territory. Teachers and visitors added New York City; West Hartford, Conn.; Chicago, Ill.; Tacoma and the Seattle, Wash., areas to the localities represented.

The school committee, composed of Thomas Haisler, chairman; Marian Johnson, secretary-treasurer and registrar; Donald Anderson, Herbert Johnson, Glenn Moul, and Robert Moul, arranged to have a display sign on the top of the bus which met Bahá’ís at the ferry port and the airport that read: “Bahá’í Summer School.” A desk was placed in the airport waiting room, announcing information and registration for the school. It was seen by hundreds of people arriving Saturday from all over the United States for the statehood ceremonies, and Bahá’í literature was also available there for those who requested it.

School sessions, which began Monday morning, included the following courses: Robert E. Moul, chairman of the Alaska National Assembly, gave a comprehensive account of “The Ten-Year Crusade and Alaska’s Six-Year Plan,” which provided excellent background material for new believers as well as a review for older believers. He traced the dramatic spread of the Faith since ‘Abdu’l-Bahá revealed the Tablets of the Divine Plan in 1916 and 1917. An excellent account of the history and development of the Institution of the Hands of the Cause was also given by Mr. Moul.

Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh of New York City, member of the Auxiliary Board appointed by the American Hands, conducted a course in “Deepening the Spiritual Life,” basing her material on Bahá’í World Faith, Gleanings from the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh, and Prayers and Meditations. Subjects discussed were “God’s Relation to Man” and “Man’s Relation to God.” It was recommended by Mrs. Mottahedeh that the believers learn one of Bahá’u’lláh’s Hidden Words each week and meditate on it all week. The last class period was devoted to a study of prayer.

Mrs. Betty Araujo from Yakima, Wash., led a well-planned workshop on “Teaching Techniques.” The student body was divided into five groups, with each group assigned a type of individual whom they would try to interest in the Faith. The groups themselves decided if they would function as a fireside, teaching committee, or appoint one person to present the ideas of the group. Subjects assigned were: the materialist, the humanist, the religious man, the mystic, and the practical man. Mrs. Araujo mentioned some of the qualities Bahá’ís must have to teach—humility, logic, wisdom, purity of heart, faith in the power of the Cause, and honesty with ourselves in a sincere desire to teach the Faith and not display our own ego. She urged a thorough study by each Bahá’í of The Advent of Divine Justice by Shoghi Effendi, particularly the section on Teaching Requirements, pages 37-48.

Mrs. Helen Wilks, who has taught many sessions at Geyserville School, and who is the Supervisor of Teenagers with King County Juvenile Court in Seattle, gave a most instructive course on “The Philosophy of Bahá’í Education,” as a basis for teaching children and youth. She emphasized that Bahá’u’lláh has told us teaching and learning are obligatory, and not of our choice. The object of our classes should be to teach the child to search, to think, and to choose. We can derive comfort in knowing that the Bahá’í teachings are like a compass—they point the way. Teachers and parents should set a goal and the tools will be found. Handicrafts, music, dramatics, art, and stories have a place in arousing a desire to learn.

Mrs. Wilks pointed out the importance of preventing unhappiness and disobedience in children, and reminded that on the question of discipline children will respect and obey if parents and teachers reflect the Bahá’í teachings in their lives.

Ellsworth Blackwell of Chicago, member of the National Assembly of the United States, gave an instructive course on the book Christ and Bahá’u’lláh, written by the late George Townshend, Hand of the Cause. He stated that if people will accept the reality of Jesus they can accept the reality of Bahá’u’lláh. Using the Kitáb-i-’Itiqad as the source of reference, the class was asked to look up the meaning of passages and terms from the Bible. In closing, Mr. Blackwell said that one Bahá’í can change a whole country by taking the Bahá’í teachings to it; but we should remember that we aren’t doing it—we are only a channel for the Spirit.

Other Events

A public meeting was held one evening on the topic, “The Fine Art of Being Human,” with Mildred Mottahedeh as speaker. Slides of Alaska were presented by Evelyn Huffman, secretary of the National Assembly of Alaska. Added to these events were periods of recreation, sightseeing to Mendenhall Glacier and other points of interest, and the happy fellowship that is so much a part of summer school activity.

Bahá’í Philosophy of Education Explained by U.S. Child Education Committee

In 1956 the U. S. National Bahá’í Child Education Committee sponsored a Teaching Seminar designed to acquaint Bahá’í teachers with more effective methods of teaching. Members of the committee, and teachers of the Sunday school classes at the Bahá’í House of Worship in Wilmette attended this seminar.

Professional teachers with public school experience were the discussion leaders. The challenge was made by a non-Bahá’í teacher that we were indoctrinating in the most reactionary way.

Carl Scheffler, at a later evaluation meeting, pointed out that the principle of the independent investigation of truth is the cornerstone of all education, according to ‘Abdu’l-Bahá. As references to this, two passages from Bahá’í Word Faith were cited: page 228, “The first teaching of Bahá’u’lláh is the investigation of reality”; and page 240, “God has endowed man with intelligence and reason, whereby he is required to determine the verity of questions and propositions.”

Out of the ensuing consultation the idea of a new approach for our new teaching began to develop.

The goal of the Bahá’í teacher is to discover ways to prove the unity of all existence; to teach the purpose of man’s existence, which he understands through the authority of the Bahá’í Writings to be to know and to worship God; and to show how man may attain this.

Our example of how to teach is ‘Abdu’l-Bahá, Who always taught of spiritual reality through physical evidence.

It is apparent that this philosophy of education cannot be offered in the form of a document. It is not a stereotyped plan, or a collection of material, but rather an attitude expressing the teacher’s understanding of the principle of the independent investigation of truth—divine unity.
Our Heritage of Baha'i Literature

When Baha'is today survey the published literature of their Faith, they find themselves confronted with a treasure house of books and pamphlets in the English language. Nearly two hundred items are currently available to them! These range from the Creative Word itself revealed by Baha'u'llah, to innumerable books and pamphlets that introduce and explain the teachings from many viewpoints to meet varying needs. This sizeable list of published and available works is not equaled in any other language in the world—not even in the tongue of the Revelator and Founder of the Faith.

Certainly any student, approaching the literature of this new world Faith for the first time, must be astounded at the extensive library of materials that are available for study and research. There are other religious bodies in America, with a considerably larger following, who do not have as comprehensive a catalog of literature. Compare this with the early days of the Faith, nearly sixty years ago, when the believers in America exchanged a few copies of typewritten prayers and tablets, using whatever available translating facilities they had at the time!

This was the situation in the early 1900's when the Faith was being introduced into the United States. Gradually, a few printed leaflets were added. A Board of Counsel was formed in New York around 1904 and a Baha'i Publishing Society was organized in Chicago prior to 1908, but as yet there was no centralized authority for approving, producing, and distributing the literature. In these first years individual Baha'is sometimes published pamphlets or books in an effort to make the Cause known. Then came the journeys to visit 'Abdu'l-Baha and the published accounts of these events. Each of these efforts represented a stage of growth and development in the literature of the Faith.

The Guardian Brings New Phase in Publishing

In the early 1920's the publishing work in America took a big evolutionary step forward. With the coming of the administrative order under Shoghi Effendi's guidance, the National Spiritual Assembly established the Baha'i Publishing Committee so that Baha'i literature could henceforth be efficiently and economically produced and distributed, and the authenticity of all literature be maintained. Functioning originally in New York City, the Publishing Committee was later transferred to the national administrative headquarters in Wilmette at the Guardian's request.

Shoghi Effendi wrote in 1923: "Vital issues, affecting the interests of the Cause . . . such as the matter of translation and publication . . . must be under the full jurisdiction of the National Assembly." (Baha'i Administration, 40) He cites an example of the Master, Who, after having corrected a translation Himself in His own handwriting, nevertheless submitted it to a Spiritual Assembly for approval. 'Abdu'l-Baha said, "This is so that things may be arranged in an orderly manner, for should it not be so anyone may translate a certain Tablet and print and circulate it on his own account." (Baha'i Administration, 23)

Shoghi Effendi, pointing to this instance, further emphasizes this as a "clear indication of the Master's express desire that nothing whatever should be given to the public by an individual among the friends" that had not been submitted and approved. "Not only with regard to publication," he writes, "but all matters without any exception whatsoever . . ."

At this time the National Assembly also appointed a Reviewing Committee to assist in maintaining accuracy in works scheduled for publication.

It is therefore clear that the National Spiritual Assembly is fundamentally responsible for all materials produced and distributed throughout the national community, and that in the case of literature the Baha'i Publishing Trust, which came into being at the direction of Shoghi Effendi, is the central agency. Moreover, each local assembly or group, school or national committee, has a responsibility to keep informed and to use its facilities only for such items as have been approved and to follow this basic procedure delineated.
by the Guardian over thirty-six years ago and in effect ever since. Bahá’í publications are announced in Bahá’í News, listed in the Literature Catalog, or announced by direct mail to the communities, either by the Trust or occasionally by the National Assembly. Thus every believer can and should be fully informed.

The above procedure does not inhibit or thwart any individual from purchasing independently such books as he wishes from commercial bookstores and agencies, including books that contain material on the Bahá’í Faith, but he does not impose these materials, or his personal ones, upon the Bahá’í community.

Neither does it prevent a Bahá’í from publishing books or articles with non-Bahá’í publishers, provided any Bahá’í material in them has the Reviewing Committee approval to assure an accurate presentation of the Faith.

Shoghi Effendi’s Translations and Approvals

The English translations of the Bahá’í writings made by Shoghi Effendi are an invaluable gift to the Bahá’í world. These have also become the basis for translations into many other languages. Cleanings, The Kitáb-i-Áqím, Epistle to the Son of the Wolf, Prayers and Meditations, The Dawn-Breakers, these and other works, indelibly rendered in English by the Guardian’s own hand, were among the first fruits of his Guardianship. Then came his own writings: The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh, The Advent of Divine Justice, The Promised Day is Come, and his matchless God Passes By. All of these were sent to the National Spiritual Assembly of the U.S. for their initial publication through its Publishing Committee, and were produced in their entirety as specified by him. Sometimes even details of format, arrangements of photographs and other aspects of design, as in The Dawn-Breakers, received the attention of Shoghi Effendi in his desire to make the editions do justice to their content. Thus the American believers were accorded a special privilege and responsibility in the initial publication of these volumes.

Many works, previously accepted as authentic, were examined and found by Shoghi Effendi not to be entirely accurate and were later discontinued. One example of this is ‘Abdu’l-Bahá on Divine Philosophy, which the Guardian stated did not represent an accurate account of the Master’s words. On some works he requested and approved a new translation, as in the case of The Secret of Divine Civilization, which replaced the earlier Mysterious Forces of Civilization. Many prayers had found their way into early compilations, which he found not to be the authentic writings of Bahá’u’lláh or ‘Abdu’l-Bahá and were eliminated entirely from future printings; others were gradually retranslated.

One thing is certain—the Guardian did not halt in this painstaking work until the believers had in their hands an accurate and authentic rendition of the Revelation of Bahá’u’lláh, and until the Bahá’í teachings were authentically presented and abundantly available to them. Thus came into the English language a storehouse of the sacred literature of the Bahá’í Faith, far exceeding in scope and volume the scripture of any previous religious dispensation.

Because of the Guardian’s directives, his years of effort spent upon the literature, and the initial responsibility given to them for producing these works, the National Assembly of the U.S. has a special obligation, not only in trying to maintain these standards in all materials issued by the Publishing Trust, but in all materials approved for distribution through its channels regardless of where they were originally published. There is also a recognized need for careful reviewing of materials, based upon these principles, to be carried on universally in the Bahá’í world in regard to publishing.

Wide Assortment of Teaching Literature

Building upon this foundation of authentic sacred and basic texts, there has come into existence a catalog of nearly one hundred and fifty additional titles—books, pamphlets, study outlines, and teaching aids—assisting the believers in assimilating the teachings and conveying them to others. Surveying these items, we find that many different committees and individual Bahá’ís have contributed their talents to the preparation of these various titles. They represent careful consultation and consideration of all suggestions that come from local assemblies, national committees, and state and national conventions where the believers have expressed their wishes concerning materials most urgently needed, and in relation to funds available to produce them.

They are continually being revised or replaced to keep a currently effective list. However, in spite of all this, it is not possible to please every individual taste or demand. To do so would be to unduly extend the literature which the Guardian himself warned against. It could also jeopardize the self-sustaining operations of the Bahá’í Publishing Trust, which was established in 1955 as a World Crusade goal.

Sometimes a manuscript for a pamphlet or book that is well prepared must be rejected or indefinitely tabled for the above reasons, or because it does not represent any urgent need in the literature. Considering the present-day scope of our literature, undoubtedly what every believer needs most to do is to become more thoroughly acquainted with it and to become keenly aware of all of the opportunities available for World Crusade, now past the halfway mark, moves toward its closing years with its responsibilities and privileges for leading others to the Creative Word. Our literature is much more than a “teaching aid.” It is the Creative Word itself, as well as a guidebook to that Word. This treasure house is open to each one of us to prepare ourselves to teach, and to offer the guidebook to others.

the Pines is indeed a place wherein God's Word is literally proclaimed from the mountain top.

The people who attend the services come from far and wide, not only to see the cathedral itself, but to listen to the services. This year nearly 500 attended the Bahá'í service, and afterward approximately 1,500 pieces of literature were distributed.

The speaker this year was Dr. Firuz Kazemzadeh, a member of the faculty of the Yale University history department. His subject was "The Oneness of Mankind." Mrs. Juliette Meade, secretary of the New England States Area Teaching Committee, acted as chairman and read from the Bahá'í Sacred Writings, including the Master's prayer for all nations. Mrs. Ruth Silva was the soprano soloist, and the organist was Mrs. Marian Craig, a non-Bahá'í.

The printed programs given to each person attending the service carried a quotation from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh.

Homefront Goal Requires Fifty New Local Assemblies This Year; NSA Lists Preferred Cities for Concentrated Teaching Activity

The homefront goal for the United States in the World Crusade is 300 “firmly grounded, well informed, actively functioning communities” by 1963. This requires the American Bahá’ís to bring into being fifty additional local spiritual assemblies in April 1960 and fifty more in April 1961, in addition to holding all those now in existence.

Such an achievement will leave but two brief years (1961-1963) in which to consolidate these new communities and to concentrate on the large task of bringing the Faith to the masses. Your National Spiritual Assembly is convinced that this can be done if every believer will arise at once and make teaching the Cause “the head corner-stone” of his Bahá’í life.

Order is the keynote of the Cause of God; thus we must approach this tremendous task in an orderly manner. The National Spiritual Assembly, after careful study and consultation with the American National Teaching Committee, has compiled the accompanying list of “preferred goals” on which intensive teaching assistance will be concentrated this year, with the aim of raising them to assembly status by next Ridván.

These particular groups have been chosen because, for the most part, they have a membership of five or more adult believers, are functioning in a unified manner, and have effective, sustained local teaching activities in progress.

The services of Auxiliary Board members, circuit teaching, extension teaching on the part of nearby local assemblies, and settlers will augment the efforts being made by the groups themselves. Also, the area teaching committees will lend all possible assistance to the larger groups that are already very near assembly status and to the smaller ones that may qualify for inclusion in the “preferred list” next year.

Here then is our specific goal—our great challenge in homefront teaching this year: to raise at least fifty groups to assembly status by Ridván 1960, whether on the “preferred list” or not! Which fifty will they be? This will be determined by the groups themselves, by the degree of their own unified, intensive teaching efforts, and their response to the services offered them by the American National Teaching Committee, their area committees, and neighboring local spiritual assemblies.

They cannot depend wholly upon settlers because of the priority needs for pioneers in Latin America and Europe. Furthermore 175 of the existing Bahá’í communities have fewer than fifteen members, the minimum required to safeguard their own assembly status. The main sources of pioneers and settlers for all purposes are the few large communities and the isolated Bahá’ís. The National Spiritual Assembly appeals to the believers in both of these categories to arise now and settle in a goal city.

In connection with moving, the National Spiritual Assembly pleads with the friends not to leave a preferred goal or small Bahá’í community without first consulting the National Assembly or the American National Teaching Committee. Even if a move becomes necessary for business or health reasons, please make the facts known before leaving, and if there is any freedom of choice as to location, please do give first consideration to the goal cities.

The National Spiritual Assembly has made the American National Teaching Committee responsible for the movement of settlers on the homefront; therefore all offers, as well as requests for settlers, are to be addressed to that committee in care of its secretary, Mrs. Velma Sherrill, 411 N. 7th Street, Suite 1311, St. Louis 1, Mo.

In January the National Spiritual Assembly will review the progress that has been made in all groups. How many will be “promising assemblies” by that time? It is possible that, based upon their own unified teaching efforts, others will be added to the “preferred” list to receive intensive assistance during the balance of the Bahá’í year.

Dear friends, this may seem a formidable task in light of the slow progress we have made in the past, but never before have we had the opportunity to mobilize so many forces and so much assistance for our own homefront objectives. Let us not dwell upon our past weaknesses and frailty, but rather recall the words of the Báb to the Letters of the Living: “... Fix your gaze upon the invincible power of your Lord, your God, the Almighty ... Arise in His name, put your trust wholly in Him, and be assured of ultimate victory.” Let us remember, too, the words of the beloved Guardian: “... we are in this day the chosen instruments of God’s grace, ... our mission is most urgent and vital to the fate of humanity, and fortified by these sentiments, arise to achieve God’s holy purpose for mankind.” Finally, let us take heart from these loving passages from Shoghi Effendi’s letter written to the American believers on July 19, 1958 (“Inestimable Prizes within our Reach”):

“The history of a century-old Faith eloquently leaves witnesses to ... unnumbered successes won, in both the Apostolic and Formative Ages of the Bahá’í Dispensation, in circumstances even more challenging than those which the American Bahá’í Community now finds itself.

“So magnificent a victory ... at such a time, in a country so vitally affecting the immediate destinies of mankind, singled out to play so predominant a role in the unification and spiritualization of the entire human race ... will, no doubt, exert not only a profound influence on the ultimate destinies of an entire nation and people, but will galvanize, through its repercussions, the entire Bahá’í world.”

“That the American Bahá’í Community may, in this one remaining field, where so much is at stake, and where the needs of the Faith are itself.

—their triumph, is a prayer which... the unification...galvanize through its repercussions...Bahá’í world.”

Anonymous Communications

Some individual, apparently a member of the Bahá’í community, is sending throughout the country an anonymous typewritten statement calling for an investigation of the fact that no picture of a “Black African Local Spiritual Assembly” has appeared in Bahá’í News, and inquiring whether Bahá’í books are being translated to qualify African Negroes for membership in local spiritual assemblies.

This communication is entirely erroneous as to fact, and moreover has been issued in direct contravention of the directive published in Bahá’í News many years ago by the National Assembly to the effect that anonymous communications are in opposition to the spiritual and administrative nature of the Bahá’í Faith, and therefore are to receive no attention.

It is not necessary for any local assembly to report such communications to the National Assembly, unless they can also report the name and address of the sender. The Bahá’í membership status of the sender of the present communication will be subject to question if the National Assembly becomes aware of him or her.

Distribute “Bahá’í Directory” Part II

With this issue of Bahá’í News each American Bahá’í will receive Part II of the annual Bahá’í Directory. We regret that it is so late, but there was unusual delay this year in receiving the acceptances from individuals appointed to the committees and the reports of the election of committee officers.
The friends are urged to make use of this directory for information about the services available to them from the various committees. The last page lists the committees that distribute teaching materials. All requests for these materials should be mailed directly to the committees and not to the National Spiritual Assembly. Also, please watch Bahá’í News for announcements of new materials that these committees have to offer from time to time.

Many Bahá’ís Respond to Plea for Pioneers;
More Volunteers, Contributions Needed

The U.S. National Spiritual Assembly and the intercontinental teaching committees are very grateful for the number of believers who have already responded to the appeal of the Hands of the Faith in the Holy Land for Bahá’í pioneers and settlers “to reinforce and bring to assembly status those groups which are . . . the most promising nuclei for new assemblies . . . as prerequisites for the election of their national spiritual assemblies.” A more complete report on the number of volunteers, and the areas in which they have settled, will be published in the next issue of Bahá’í News.

In the meantime every possible effort is being made to get approved pioneers to their posts with minimum delay.

There is still an urgent need for more volunteers, especially for Latin America and the homefront. A number of believers have been assigned posts, but cannot leave until they have been replaced in their communities, which might revert to group status without replacements.

A gratifying number of contributions, large and small, has been received for the joint deputation fund, but much more is needed to prevent the possibility of having to hold back pioneers because of lack of funds.

Your National Spiritual Assembly will endeavor to keep you informed frequently on the progress of the pioneer work.

New UN-Bahá’í Teaching Program Kit
To Be Distributed by U.S. UN Committee

A new type of United Nations-Bahá’í study and teaching program will be distributed to all U.S. local spiritual assemblies and some groups early in September by the U.S. Bahá’í United Nations Committee.

It is a kit of six separate sessions on aspects of the United Nations, with parallel Bahá’í teachings on each of the subjects. Appropriate UN literature will be included in the kit for further study, discussion, and reference.

This material can be used (1) as a series of six fireside programs; (2) as a panel discussion, with each panelist taking one of the subjects and the moderator using the parallel introductions; or (3) as a public lecture, by gleaning the highlights from each of the six sessions and the introduction. It can also be adapted in many other ways to suit local conditions.

The lessons of this kit are printed on standard loose-leaf sheets for insertion in a binder for permanent use. As the committee compiles additional sessions on other aspects of the UN and parallel Bahá’í teachings, these may be added to the binder.

This UN-Bahá’í kit contains ample material for use in the observance of United Nations Day on October 24, and Human Rights Day on December 10.

When the kit is received, the committee suggests that a thorough study be made at once, in order to determine how it may be used, particularly in connection with these two important special events for proclaiming the Bahá’í Faith to the public.

National Youth Committee Announces
Theme for Year’s Youth Program

The National Bahá’í Youth Committee has announced that the theme for the youth program for this year is “Youth, the Vitalizing Agent in the New World Order.”

The first National Bahá’í Youth Conference will be held in twelve areas of the United States on October 25-26, 1959. Topic for these meetings will be “The Function of Youth in the World Crusade.”

Conference cities will be chosen by the area youth committees. The National Bahá’í Youth Committee will send an agenda and program suggestions to these area youth committees in the near future.

New Radio Script Ready for Distribution

The Radio Service Committee announces publication of a new script entitled “God’s Plan For A United World.” This is a Bahá’í program in the form of a panel presentation, with three readers. Because of its fundamental beauty, power, and effectiveness, it could be used for many purposes such as a public meeting, a radio or a television program. It could also serve as a pattern for programs on other subjects, and for other needs and situations. The cost is 35 cents a single copy, or three for $1.00. A minimum of three copies would be needed for presenting the panel. Order from Mrs. Charlotte Keefrey, secty.; 2416 Waunona Way, Madison 5, Wis.

Press Service Requests Publicity Clippings

Would you like to save the Bahá’í Fund $600.00? You can, by sending in one copy of every clipping of publicity and advertising as they appear in your local papers to the Bahá’í Press Service, 434 Thomas Ave., Rochester 17, N.Y. Otherwise this committee will be obliged to subscribe for the services of a commercial clipping house at this price.

If you are not on the Bahá’í Press Service mailing list, and wish the promotion material for observing the special events, please write them immediately. Why not take this opportunity to appoint a press representative to receive their service regularly?

Birth of the Bab, October 20, 1819

The Bab, whose name was Siyyid 'Ali-Muhammad, was born in the city of Shiraz, on the first day of Muharram, in the year 1255 A.H. (October 20, 1819). He belonged to a house which was renowned for its nobility and which traced its origin to Muhammad Himself. The date of His birth confirmed the truth of the prophecy traditionally attributed to the Imam 'Ali: "I am two years younger than my Lord." Twenty-five years, four months, and four days had elapsed since the day of His birth, when He declared His mission. In His early childhood He lost His father, Siyyid Muhammad-Rida, a man who was known throughout the province of Fars for His piety and virtue, and was held in high esteem and honor. Both His father and His mother were descendants of the Prophet, both were loved and respected by the people. He was reared by His maternal uncle, Haji Mirza Siyyid 'Ali, a martyr to the Faith, who placed Him, while He was a child, under the care of a tutor named Shaykh 'Abid. The Bab, though not inclined to study, submitted to His uncle's will and directions.

Shaykh 'Abid, known by his pupils as Shaykhunâ, was a man of piety and learning. He had been a disciple of both Shaykh Ahmad and Siyyid Kâzîm. "One day," he related, "I asked the Bab to recite the opening words of the Qur'ân: 'Bismi'llahi'r-Rahmânî'r-Rahîm.' He hesitated, pleading that unless He were told what these words signified. He would in no wise attempt to pronounce them. I pretended not to know their meaning. 'I know what these words signify,' observed my pupil; 'by your leave, I will explain them.' He spoke with such knowledge and fluency that I was struck with amazement. He expounded the meaning of 'Allâh,' of 'Raḥmân,' and 'Raḥîm,' in terms such as I had neither read nor heard. The sweetness of His utterance still lingers in my memory. I felt impelled to take Him back to His uncle and to deliver into his hands the Trust He had committed to my care. I determined to tell him how unworthy I felt to teach so remarkable a child. I found His uncle alone in his office. 'I have brought Him back to you,' I said, 'and commit Him to your vigilant protection. He is not to be treated as a mere child, for in Him I can already discern evidence of that mysterious power which the Revelation of the Sâhibu'z-Zamân alone can reveal. It is incumbent upon you to surround Him with your most loving care. Keep Him in your house, for He, verily, stands in no need of teachers such as I.' Haji Mirza Siyyid 'Ali sternly rebuked the Bab. 'Have you forgotten my instructions?' he said. 'Have I not already admonished You to follow the example of Your fellow-pupils, to observe silence, and to listen attentively to every word spoken by Your teacher?' Having obtained His promise to abide faithfully by his instructions, he bade the Bab return to His school. The soul of that child could not, however, be restrained by the stern admonitions of His uncle. No discipline could repress the flow of His intuitive knowledge. Day after day He continued to manifest such remarkable evidences of superhuman wisdom as I am powerless to recount." At last His uncle was induced to take Him away from the school of Shaykh 'Abid, and to associate Him with himself in his own profession. There, too, He revealed signs of a power and greatness that few could approach and none could rival.

The days which the Bab devoted to commercial pursuits were mostly spent in Bushhr. The oppressive heat of the summer did not deter Him from devoting, each Friday, several hours to continuous worship upon the roof of His house. Though exposed to the fierce rays of the noontide sun, He, turning His heart to His Beloved, continued to commune with Him, unmindful of the intensity of the heat and oblivious of the world around Him. From early dawn till sunrise, and from midday till late in the afternoon, He dedicated His time to meditation and pious worship. Turning His gaze towards the north, in the direction of Tihârn, He, at every break of day, gazed, with a heart overflowing with love and joy, the rising sun, which to Him was a sign and symbol of that Day-Star of Truth that was soon to dawn upon the world. As a lover who beholds the face of His beloved, He gazed upon the rising orb with steadfastness and longing. He seemed to be addressing, in mystic language, that shining luminary, and to be entrusting it with His message of yearning and love to His concealed Beloved. With such transports of delight He greeted its beaming rays, that the heedless and ignorant around Him thought Him to be enamoured with the sun itself.

German Bahá'ís Meet Ruḥiyyih Khánum
On Her Visit to Frankfurt, Stuttgart

In June the National Secretary in Frankfurt received the information that 'Abdu'l-Bahá Ruḥiyyih Khánum would visit Germany in July. Details of the visit were discussed with Ruḥiyyih Khánum by the German representatives during the conference of the European Hands in Copenhagen, and her arrival in Germany was set for July 11. In addition to the consultation with the National Spiritual Assembly, she wished to visit the Frankfurt and Stuttgart communities. Meanwhile the news of the visit of Ruḥiyyih Khánum spread like wildfire and many friends expressed their wish to see her. After the two Local Spiritual Assemblies of Frankfurt and Stuttgart had discussed the program for the visit, a notice was sent to every believer in the jurisdiction of the National Spiritual Assembly, as well as to the secretaries of the European sister assemblies. At noon on July 10 a group of the friends gathered at the Frankfurt-Rhein/Main airport to greet Ruḥiyyih Khánum.

Saturday morning, July 11, Ruḥiyyih Khánum came to the meeting with the National Spiritual Assembly in the Haţıratu'l-Quḍa to discuss tasks of the Ten-Year Plan. The consultation lasted until late afternoon.

It had been arranged that Ruḥiyyih Khánum was to be the first to enter the large hall in the Zoo building in which the evening meeting was to be held, because she wished to greet all the friends who had come from near and far. She stood at the entrance of the hall and exchanged greetings, sometimes in German with her old German friends of former visits, or new German friends, or in Persian or in English. At long, decorated tables the friends took their places for the dinner. After a brief but warm greeting on behalf of the Local Spiritual Assembly of Frankfurt, Ruḥiyyih Khánum arose to address all the friends. She spoke in English, which was translated into German and then into Persian.

Ruḥiyyih Khánum began to speak of the Covenant, the great Covenant which God made with His people through His Prophets and of the lesser Covenant which Bahá'u'lláh made with His followers which is destined to usher in the time when “the earth will be the footstool of God” and for which our present service and our Ten-Year Plan are paving the way. She recalled the terrible blow which the Bahá'í world received through the unexpected passing of our beloved Guardian, truly the worst blow that could have been struck, which, as she said, many would probably never recover from. And yet, she continued, we have many reasons to be thankful because the unity of the Bahá'í world remains secure. So firmly did our Guardian lay the foundation of this world community, because he, in truth, after the passing of the Master, was the master builder. The Ten-Year Plan, she said with great warmth, is the heritage left to us by the beloved Guardian, and to serve this plan means to grasp the unrecurring last opportunity to fulfill a task which he laid upon all of us, which was so dear to his heart and whose realization through the friends constituted the joy of the last years of his life. This Plan is the responsibility of every single Bahá'í whose faith, whose willingness to sacrifice and whose deeds will bring about its realization which the institutions of the Faith can only guide, further, and regulate.

On Sunday Ruḥiyyih Khánum came for an hour to Stuttgart where about 250 of the south-German friends were gathered and were celebrating the Nineteen-Day Feast. The visit to the Temple site, a conference on the next steps to be taken, as well as the drive from Frankfurt to Stuttgart on this hot day, were a considerable strain on her. Without taking time for rest or recuperation, Ruḥiyyih Khánum hurried to the waiting friends. As in Frankfurt, her address dealt with the unfolding and fulfillment of the Ten-Year Plan.

The most important task of the German community, the building of the Mother Temple of Europe, it was hoped, could soon begin and be prosecuted with all speed. For this the financial support of the friends was needed. The second great goal, the establishment of twelve local spiritual assemblies could be accomplished with the aid of forty-four Persian students, young German believers, and the older ones, those having independent incomes. Naturally, the middle-aged should also make efforts to settle; where the sacrifice is greater, the reward will be richer. However grateful the German friends may and should be to their Persian brothers and sisters for the help they have given in the teaching work, and would give in the future, never would the German friends permit that tasks specially given them by the Master and by the Guardian would be carried out by other friends, but they would remember the great expectations entertained for them and attack the task energetically and promptly.

Her appeal to the German friends to arise in the Ten-Year Plan rang out with the cry with which the champions of the Faith in Sháykh-Tabārsí girded themselves for the last sacrifice—"Mount your steeds, O Heroes of God!"

In Stuttgart it would not have been possible to greet all the friends in the beginning because it was expected to be necessary to clear the hall at 22 o'clock, but later it was found possible to extend the time to 23 o'clock, and a recreation period was arranged during which Ruḥiyih Khánum insisted upon greeting the friends. The meeting closed with thanks and prayers.

Ruḥiyih Khánum Attends June Conference in Copenhagen Sponsored by Hands of Cause

The European Hands of the Cause invited the national assemblies of Europe and the Auxiliary Boards to a work-conference in Copenhagen. It was a great and happy surprise for all participants to have Ruḥiyih Khánum take part. Five Hands of the Cause and about twenty-eight friends met for the work-conference. The hours of consultation, interrupted only by the meals which the friends took together, and the travel to and from the meeting place, were hardly sufficient for the exchange of experiences, consultation and recommendations. It was again made evident how very much Europe has grown into a unit. The opportunity, through Ruḥiyih Khánum, to get into close touch with the thoughts of the Hands in Haifa, was particularly valuable and the real purpose of Ruḥiyih Khánum’s participation in the conference.

On Sunday evening many of the Danish friends came to the center, since they had there the pleasure and privilege to be with Ruḥiyih Khánum and to meet the other Hands of the Cause and the friends who had come from Belgium, Germany, Finland, Holland, Italy, Norway, Austria, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and Spitzbergen. Ruḥiyih Khánum told stories from the life of the Guardian, of his sacrifice, the tasks undertaken by him and the unremitting and untiring activity with which he followed these things to their realization and completion, and she told how happy she was at the achievement of every goal of the Ten-Year Plan and with how much sadness she struck from his list goals that were relinquished.

El Salvador Gov’t. Assures Bahá’ís of Freedom to Teach in Rectifying Expulsion of Pioneer

The Bahá’í Faith has been officially presented to the President of the Republic of El Salvador by the National Spiritual Assembly of Central America, Mexico, and Panama. This unusual event in Latin America was made possible through the efforts to resolve a very difficult matter in which a devoted Bahá’í pioneer was deprived of his permission to remain in that country due to false reports and accusations reported to its government by enemies of the Faith.

Last April Artemus Lamb, pioneer and member of the National Assembly of this territory, was forced to leave his post in El Salvador on order of the Salvadoran Government. No reason was given at that time for the attitude of the authorities, but after much investigation and legal activities it became evident that this pioneer was made the target of several serious accusations devised by certain vested groups. Partly due to legal procedures and partly to the prayers and efforts of the believers themselves, an investigation was eventually made by the Salvadoran Government which completely exonerated Mr. Lamb and the Bahá’í community from any doubt as to their conduct, honor, and principles. It was then made possible for the National Spiritual Assembly of the territory, represented by its chairman, Esteban Canales, to effect an official visit to the executive offices of the Salvadoran Government with some very positive results.

The president of El Salvador, Colonel José María Lemus, having reviewed this case, authorized the Secretary-General, Major Rubio Melado, to discuss it thoroughly with the representative of this National Assembly and to say in the name of the President and the Government of El Salvador that not only has the name of Mr. Lamb and the Bahá’í community been completely cleared from any doubt as to the accusations, but also that the Bahá’ís of El Salvador can be assured of complete security and freedom to realize their activities as the government and the constitution uphold liberty of creed and worship.

The long interview with the Secretary-General was sustained in an atmosphere of great cordiality, and Sr. Canales took the opportunity to present a portfolio containing a beautifully embossed printing of Bahá’u’lláh’s Message to the Presidents of the American Republics, together with some well-selected literature on the Faith. This was duly presented to the President and was received with much respect and gratitude. A gift in return was presented to Sr. Canales.

Several other high officials of the Government showed their sympathy to the case and to the Bahá’ís, who were alert to see the significance of some related events of the same day, July 13: At the very hour that the Secretary-General was discussing the matter with our representative, the President was receiving the official visit of Mrs. Golda Meir, Foreign Minister of the State of Israel. Also, a devoted Salvadorian believer, Srta. Amanda Mena, who had asked for an audience a month earlier, received her appointment for the very afternoon. In her interview the President reiterated that which the Secretary-General had told Sr. Canales, and added that he had the highest personal regard for Mr. Lamb and for the Bahá’ís, and that the Bahá’í Teachings are indeed very attractive to him.

Although there are still matters pending due to the vigilant jealousy of certain enemies of the Faith, who have unwittingly made possible this unexpected victory, the evidence is clear that Bahá’u’lláh works His blessings and victories so often in the mysterious ways of difficulties and obstacles.

North American Esperanto League Congress
Gives Friendly Recognition to Faith

Miss Roan U. Orloff, who attended the Seventh Congress of the Esperanto League for North America as the official representative of the Bahá'ís of the United States in St. Louis, Mo., July 9-12, 1959, reports that she and the three other Bahá'ís who were present were received in a spirit of real friendliness and appreciation by the delegates. This congress was also the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dr. Zamenhof, founder of the Esperanto language.

Evidence of the growing interest in Esperanto as a possible universal language was manifested by the impressive posters which were officially issued by UNESCO, and which provided a colorful background for the Esperanto literature on display. A section on religion included Bahá'í literature, and the Faith was mentioned in a very kindly manner by the guest speaker at the public meeting, Dr. Faruk S. Abuzahab.

The Bahá'í delegates were particularly pleased to meet a representative from Washington, D.C., who told them of his meeting with ‘Abdu’l-Bahá when He visited that city in 1912. All of the Bahá'ís in attendance took advantage of every opportunity to give the Message of Bahá'u'lláh and to answer questions about the Faith.

Bahá'ís of Three Countries Attend
First Addis Ababa Summer School

The first Bahá'í summer school in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, was held on May 2 to 8, 1959. On the opening day a cable was sent to Hand of the Cause Musa Banání, announcing this happy event and asking prayers for its success.

Three days later a cabled reply was received and read to the audience; it filled the hearts of all present with great joy and happiness:

"Congratulations memorable achievement school. News conveyed Holy Land, following response just received, quote convey loving greets attendants historic opening school, assure prayers shrines success vital teaching work. Hands faith, unquote. Love, Banání."

Six days were devoted to study classes, lectures, and film shows in morning, afternoon, and evening sessions. One day was allotted to a picnic outside the city, arranged by the Bahá'í Youth Committee.

On the afternoon of May 2, coinciding with the Twelfth of Ri'Án, a Feast was arranged.

The average attendance during the school sessions was twenty-five, and included many Bahá'ís of Addis Ababa and their non-Bahá'í friends and Bahá'í youth from the neighboring towns of Nazareth and Jimma.

Friends and pioneers from other centers who responded to the invitations, and by their presence and material and spiritual contributions helped make a success of this first Bahá'í summer school, included Dr. Mesbah, Dr. Farhoumand, Dr. and Mrs. Niederriter from Asmara, and Dr. M. Samandari from Mogadiscio.
Rama Cay Indians of Nicaragua Warmly Receive Baha'i Message

ON THE tropical eastern coast of Nicaragua, situated at the southern end of a long lagoon, lies the refreshing and remote island home of the Rama Cay Indians. Nestled amid a myriad of tropical flowers and fruit-bearing trees, these people carry on a quiet and humble existence in groupings of stick and palm frond shelters. The only imposing edifice is the frame church house of a centuries-old Protestant group that constitutes the sole center of their religious life.

Much to the advantage of an on-marching world religion, these clean souls, through contact with missionaries, speak a simplified English, and are acquainted with the basic teachings of the Revelation of Jesus Christ. Of further aid, the Protestants have always retained a clear distinction between civilized people and "whatever Indians are."

In pursuance of a call on the part of the beloved Guardian, "to stimulate the process of the conversion of both the Negroes and the American Indians," incorporated in the subsidiary Six-Year Plans given to the four Latin American interim regional spiritual assemblies in 1957, the Nicaraguan National Teaching Committee has sponsored a plan during recent months to open the Faith to Rama Cay in a series of weekend trips by the resident pioneer in Bluefields, Hooper Dunbar.

After spending the first weekends making friends, taking pictures of the many families who had never been photographed before, and being a guest in their homes and at their tables (the typical food served was smoked raw fish, boiled green bananas, rice, and fruits), an opportunity came through friendly contact with the lay pastor of the church to address the Indian congregation at their Sunday service.

The theme decided upon was "Spiritual Rebirth and the Oneness of Religion." Emphasis was also given to the fact that this day holds a great blessing for the original inhabitants of the Americas, based upon the statements of 'Abdu'l-Bahá.

At the close of the meeting, all present arose and shook hands with their new "brother," in the words of the pastor. From this precious event, the doors of close association have been opened between the Bahá'í pioneer and the Rama Cay people.

What a joy it is to report that some of these stick walls are now adorned with pictures of the Bahá'í House of Worship, that several of these hearts are now reciting the prayer-verses of Baha'u'llah, and that the Message of God is reaching more of those who, through the Divine Teachings, to quote the Master, "will become so enlightened that the whole earth will be illumined."

Five New Groups Founded Among Bolivia

THIRTY-ONE new Indian believers declared themselves in the Potosi region of Bolivia during the month of June, the National Spiritual Assembly of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay has announced.

Five new groups have been established: in Chaltuiri, Totorani, Janko Jaque, Pichata, and Jaka Chullpa; isolated centers have been founded in Kea Kea, Incuhuyo, and Jakahuma.

These developments are a further confirmation of the comments of Athos Costas, secretary of this National Assembly, following his visit to Bolivia in April (BAHA’I News, August):

"Those Indians are highly humble, affectionate, and spiritual... detached pioneers are needed, bestowing all their love and faith, their Bahá’í knowledge, their human understanding, and their loving consideration."

Estranisau Alvarez, chairman of the National Indian Teaching Committee, made the teaching trip in April with Mr. Costas, and has returned to Departamento Potosí for a five-month period. He, with Andrés Jachakollo, the native Indian pioneer, is responsible for confirming these new believers.

A vivid picture of the hardships experienced by Mr. Alvarez in his trips through the Bolivian Andes is recorded in his report to the National Assembly:

"We had to climb the loftiest Andes, which touched the sky, by narrow, perilous paths... there were moments when my feet could not take a single step forward, with the lack of water and a blazing winter sun which burned the skin, but gave no warmth.

"Only God could give me the physical resistance which is a privilege of the Indian. I had read a novel calling these Bolivian Indians the "race of bronze," but their strength is as a race of steel.

"We had to walk for hours, wading in icy winter water to the knees, in serpentine mountain streams. That was the only way to reach one place. Jaka Chullpa, where no missionary has ever gone."
Three Isolated Centers
Indians Since Last April

"The tall new believer in Inchuhuyo was a Christian evangelist for twelve years, and a teacher in the Indian villages, a Bahá'í of promise."

On July 9 the newly-formed all-Indian community of Jankohuyo had an impressive all-day memorial for the Bab. Although it was their busy harvest period, work was suspended for the day.

The entire morning was devoted to re-telling the story of the Bab's life, and of His martyrdom. Then the women of the community prepared food for all the Bahá'ís, including guests from other Bahá'í groups nearby.

In the early evening, overcome with emotion over the loss of the Bab, the Indians interpreted their own lamentations for Him on their plaintive-sounding wind instruments, the "Jula Jula," kneeling in reverence as they played for their Lord, the Bab.

Can there be any greater illustration of the spiritual readiness and understanding of our Bolivian Indian brothers than this? "Detached pioneers are needed."

Estanislao Alvarez, member of the National Indian Committee for Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, crossing a mountain stream on his teaching trip through Potosí Province in Bolivia.

Inspiring Talks, Review of Crusade Goals
Featured at Third Annual Nicaragua Congress

On August 1, 1959, believers from all of Nicaragua attended the third annual Teaching Congress at the Haikatu'l-Quds in Managua. The purpose and theme of this congress was to further deepen the friends in the “Spiritual Verities of the Bahá’í Faith,” to better fulfill the aspirations and goals of our beloved Guardian as manifested in the World Crusade.

After a few opening words by Chairman Pable Pérez, representing the Nicaraguan Teaching Committee, Hooper Dunbar gave an inspiring address on “The Ocean of Revelation,” outlining the major works of Bahá’u’lláh and their contents.

This was followed by interesting presentations by two new Bahá’ís, who are members of the National Teaching Committee. Orlando Ponce spoke on “Spiritual Tests” and Charles Miranda gave an uplifting address on “The Spiritual Springtime.”

In the evening Donald Ross Witzel spoke on the spiritual station of the Institution of the Hands of the Cause, illustrating his talk with a resume of the lives and experiences of Louis Gregory, the first Negro Hand of the Cause, and Siyyid Mustafa Rumi of Burma.

On Sunday morning a series of interesting classes held the attention of the friends. Julio César Hernández spoke on “The Reality of Man,” depicting the real spiritual value and purpose of humanity as a creation of God; Humberto Guevarra spoke dynamically on “The Presence of God,” in which he clearly cited Bahá’u’lláh and non-Bahá’í authors in their similar explanations on how to reach and practice this spiritual goal; and Miss Creadell Haley presented “The Bahá’í Attitude on Politics and Military Service,” a theme so necessary in Latin America today.

Armando Fonseca closed the congress after reviewing the uncompleted goals of the Ten-Year Plan. Afterward, the committee sponsored a banquet that was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

Anytown, Arizona, An Annual Youth Workshop.
Includes Study of Bahá’í Teachings

Anytown, Arizona is a human relations workshop for high school youth of diverse religious, social, racial, national, and economic backgrounds, held annually in the pine woods of northern Arizona. Anytown, Arizona has been in existence for three years; during the last two, several Bahá’ís, by invitation of the Advisory Board, have taken an active part.

This year Alton Thomas, director of the Phoenix Urban League, and Mrs. Nancy Phillips of Phoenix were two of the twelve advisors at camp, and Bob Phillips was one of the counsellors, who are chosen from the graduating classes of Arizona high schools.

Bahá’í public meeting held at Ibung Town, Nueva Vizcaya, Philippine Islands, on June 20, 1959.
More than ever before, the Bahá'í Faith was made an integral part of the program, through the listing of a representative in the Anytown brochure, by active participation in an afternoon question and answer period purely on religious subjects, and by a Bahá'í worship service in the outdoor chapel. This was patterned after those held in the Bahá'í House of Worship, and was accompanied by an explanation of the Bahá'í teachings on worship.

On these occasions, and throughout each day and evening, questions on the Faith came eagerly and spontaneously from the Anytowners. One hundred of the 140 present asked for literature, and subsequently twenty of the Phoenix group have attended a youth fireside in the Phillips home.

The Anytown program has become tremendously popular with Arizona youth. To the Bahá'í participants it seems to offer an ideal environment in which to demonstrate and speak of the Faith to receptive young people and adults.

Radio Broadcasts, Newspaper Publicity

Promulgate Faith on Kauai Island

The recent visit of Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh to the Hawaiian Islands opened the way for a further proclamation of the Faith on the outer islands. The forty-five hours she was on the island of Kauai enabled the Bahá'ís to schedule a public meeting and a fireside.

Invitations to 255 people representing a wide variety of businesses, professions, and cultural interests were sent out, a reasonable number in view of the population of less than 28,000. The Honolulu newspapers and the Kauai weekly paper gave excellent publicity, both before and after Mrs. Mottahedeh's visit to Kauai.

Although attendance at the public meeting on Saturday evening, July 18, in one of the public schools was disappointing, the resulting publicity was of inestimable value. The manager of the local radio station was present, and recorded Mrs. Mottahedeh's lecture, "Building a World Commonwealth."

The following morning a digest of the talk was given on the All-Island newscast, and later in the morning the talk was broadcast in its entirety. The manager received so many favorable calls that he decided to rebroadcast the recording at a later and better time, which he did the following Thursday evening.

The Sunday evening fireside was better attended, and was followed by a lively and penetrating discussion of the Bahá’í Faith.

Navajo Reservation Bahá’í Activities

Include Wedding, Many Fellowship Meetings

The weekend of May 29th to 31st was considered by the Bahá’ís on the Navajo reservation in Arizona to have been blessed by two events: the first was the wedding of Miss Sadye Joe and Vincent Vincente at the Gallup Bahá’í Indian Center on May 29. A member of the Navajo Reservation Bahá’í Group at Pinon Rock, Ariz., the bride is the first member of this tribe to be enrolled in the Faith.

Later the same weekend, Bahá’ís and friends gathered at Dodson Reservoir, near Tuba City on the reservation, for two days of fellowship, prayer, and consultation. Attending were Bahá’ís from Pinon, Window Rock, Tuba City, Flagstaff, and a number of Navajo friends, not Bahá’ís. The correspondent of the Tuba City Bahá’í Group wrote, "As the sun rose Sunday morning so did our prayers and the chant of the Greatest Name."

Monthly meeting for the reservation Bahá’ís and friends for June took place on the 20th and 21st at Window Rock, with good attendance, fellowship, and consultation. The July gathering was held near Flagstaff on the weekend of July 4 and 5, during the time of the All-Indian Pow Wow, which attracts Indian families from many southwestern tribes. This Bahá’í camping social attracted 65 Bahá’ís and friends from all over Arizona, and some from New Mexico and California.

National Youth Committee Conducts Workshops for Junior Youth at Davison Bahá’í School

Four workshop classes for junior youth were sponsored by the National Bahá’í Youth Committee on July 25-26 at Davison Bahá’í School, Davison, Mich., as a part of the Junior Youth Sessions from July 20 to 31.

Two class periods on "God, His Divine Messengers, and Man" were conducted by Miss Joanna Thomas of Wilmette, Ill. Dan Jordan of Chicago, Ill., presented a class on 'Abdu’l-Bahá. Both speakers jointly conducted the final class period on "Bahá’í Administration" and "The Functions of the National Bahá’í Youth Committee."

Organized games and community singing provided activity for the twenty-five junior youth that attended the workshop classes.

Special talks were scheduled for evenings, with Monday night open for guests and a question period. A special day was assigned to the children who included a short play on the unity of races in their program.

Know Your Bahá'í Literature

"Great Themes of Life"

This small volume can be read quickly, but nevertheless gives a clear, well-rounded view of the relationship of the Bahá'í Revelation to many of the most familiar passages from the Old Testament, and particularly the New Testament. Each chapter is based upon a familiar quotation from the Bible, beginning with a portion of Biblical scripture that sets the theme for the dissertation that follows.

The first chapter tells the story of the coming of the Messenger of God for this day as the fulfillment of the words of Jesus, "when He, the Spirit of truth, is come . . . " The next takes up Old Testament prophecies of the coming of the Lord of Hosts, of the time when God will "turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent." It speaks of the Everlasting Covenant of God and of the renewal of that Covenant.

A chapter on The Oneness of Mankind brings the teachings of Jesus on man's relationship to man into its fulfillment in Bahá'u'lláh's Revelation, with a challenge for personal decision and action. The World is Our Country discusses the problems of church unity among various Christian sects, as well as among the religions of the world, broadening the reader's viewpoint on the subject of religious unity. The final chapter presents the challenge that Jesus brought in His day as being repeated today in the coming of Bahá'u'lláh.

Each chapter was originally a lecture given in a Congregational church in Australia by Eric Bowes, an Auxiliary Board teacher, who was invited to give these talks by the minister during five Sundays in his absence. They are simply presented, in such a clear and direct manner that the Message of Bahá'u'lláh cannot fail to penetrate the understanding of the average Christian layman. Bahá'ís have long asked for a book of this type, and Great Themes of Life answers that need. The introduction by Horace Holley, and two photographs of the Shrine of the Báb and of the Temple in Wilmette further enhance the book. Bahá'ís who themselves do not have sufficient knowledge of the relationship of Biblical teachings and the Bahá'í Faith can also take a step forward in their understanding by reading this book. It is clothbound and jacketed. (Available from the Bahá'í Publishing Trust, at $1.50.)

BAHÁ'Í IN THE NEWS

"The Faiths That Compete for My Loyalty," by Dwight E. Stevenson, is a pamphlet issued by the Board of Education and Publication of the American Baptist Convention. Revised Edition, 1958. Under the title "American Manifestations of Islam" the author gives a very accurate summary of the Bahá'í teachings except that Bahá'u'lláh is described as brother to the Báb, and the fanatical uprisings instigated by Moslem leaders against the Bábís are attributed to the fanaticism aroused by the Báb and His followers.

In the question box conducted by William N. Enoch in the Lutheran Standard dated April 11, 1959, there is a statement prepared under the heading "What is the Bahá'í Religion?" After stating a few historic facts about the Báb, the author says: "But the all-important truths concerning man's origin and destiny have been revealed to us by our Maker in His holy word. There and there alone (i.e. in the Christian Gospel) we find the fundamental truths concerning man himself."

Peter Khan, a student in Sydney University, contributed an article on the Bahá’í Faith under the heading "Other Religious Groups," in a small magazine entitled Witness published under date of March 1959 in Sydney, N. S. W. This article is a brief but very attractive and accurate summary of the Bahá’í history and teachings.

"The Revelation Which, From Time Immemorial . . ."

LAUDED and glorified art Thou, O Lord, my God! How can I make mention of Thee, assured as I am that no tongue, however deep its wisdom, can befittingly magnify Thy name, nor can the bird of the human heart, however great its longing, ever hope to ascend into the heaven of Thy majesty and knowledge.

If I describe thee, O my God, as Him Who is the All-Perceiving, I find myself compelled to admit that They Who are the highest Embodiments of perception have been created by virtue of Thy behest. And if I extol Thee as Him Who is the All-Wise, I, likewise, am forced to recognize that the Well Springs of wisdom have themselves been generated through the operation of Thy Will. And if I proclaim Thee as the Incomparable One, I soon discover that they Who are the inmost essence of oneness have been sent down by Thee and are but the evidences of Thine handiwork. And if I acclaim Thee as the Knower of all things, I must confess that they Who are the Quintessence of knowledge are but the creation and instruments of Thy Purpose.

Exalted, immeasurably exalted, art Thou above the strivings of mortal man to unravel Thy mystery, to describe Thy glory, or even to hint at the nature of Thine Essence. For whatever such strivings may accomplish, they never can hope to transcend the limitations imposed upon Thy creatures, inasmuch as these efforts are actuated by Thy decree, and are begotten of Thine invention. The loftiest sentiments which the holiest of saints can express in praise of Thee, and the deepest wisdom which the most learned of men can utter in their attempts to comprehend Thy nature, all revolve around that Center which is wholly subjected to Thy sovereignty, Which adores Thy Beauty, and is propelled through the movement of Thy Pen.

Nay, forbid it, O my God, that I should have uttered such words as must of necessity imply the existence of any direct relationship between the Pen of Thy Revelation and the essence of all created things. Far, far are They Who are related to Thee above the conception of such relationship! All comparisons and likenesses fail to do justice to the Tree of Thy Revelation, and every way is barred to the comprehension of the Manifestation of Thy Self and the Day Spring of Thy Beauty.

Far, far from Thy glory be what mortal man can affirm of Thee, or attribute unto Thee, or the praise with which he can glorify Thee! Whatever duty Thou hast prescribed unto Thy servants of extolling to the utmost Thy majesty and glory is but a token of Thy grace unto them, that they may be enabled to ascend unto the station conferred upon their own inmost being, the station of the knowledge of their own selves.

No one else besides Thee hath, at any time, been able to fathom Thy mystery, or befittingly to extoll Thy greatness. Unsearchable and high above the praise of men wilt Thou remain for ever. There is none other God but Thee, the Inaccessible, the Omnipotent, the Omniscient, the Holy of Holies. (1)

Beloved Friends:

Certain passages in Gleanings seem to express the essence of the Revelation of Bahá'u'lláh. In them are concentrated truths which penetrate the dry husk of ritual and tradition and disclose the very purpose of man's creation.

The reading and rereading of these passages by the individual Bahá'í tend to create the "new mind and the new heart" distinguishing believers from the worldly. To love them and to turn to them in solitary devotion at frequent intervals can be regarded as a supreme privilege during these years of the World Crusade. This suggestion does not represent a new and different type of community study but rather a means of fulfillment offered the seeking soul.

Therefore the U.S. National Assembly is happy to reprint these passages in a convenient form so that each believer can determine for himself the degree of spiritual longing not fulfilled in community study, consultation or action. In submitting the following excerpts the Assembly has no thought of requesting reports to any administrative body. May the believer's own increasing sense of joy and understanding mark his progress on the path to God.

—U.S. NATIONAL SPIRITUAL ASSEMBLY
THEREVEALATIONwhich,fromtimeimmemorial, hath been acclaimed as the Purpose and Promise of all the Prophets of God, and the most cherished Desire of His Messengers, hath now, by virtue of the pervasive Will of the Almighty and at His irresistible bidding, been revealed unto men. The advent of such a Revelation hath been heralded in all the sacred Scriptures. Behold how, notwithstanding such an announcement, mankind hath strayed from its path and shut itself from its glory.

Say: O ye lovers of the One true God! Strive, that ye may truly recognize and know Him, and observe befittingly His precepts. This is a Revelation, under which, if a man shed for its sake one drop of blood, myriads of oceans will be his recompense. Take heed,
O friends, that ye forfeit not so inestimable a benefit, or disregard its transcendent station. Consider the multitude of lives that have been, and are still being, sacrificed in a world deluded by a mere phantom which the vain imaginations of its peoples have conceived.
Render thanks unto God, inasmuch as ye have attained unto your heart's Desire, and been united to Him Who is the Promise of all nations. Guard ye, with the aid of the one true God—exalted be His glory—the integrity of the station which ye have attained, and cleave to that which shall promote His Cause. He verily, enjoineth on you what is right and conducive to the exaltation of man's station. Glorified be the All-Merciful, the Revealer of this wondrous Tablet. (2)

THIS IS the Day in which God's most excellent favors have been poured out upon men, the Day in which His most mighty grace hath been infused into all created things. It is incumbent upon all the peoples of the world to reconcile their differences, and, with perfect unity and peace, abide beneath the shadow of the Tree of His care and loving-kindness.
It behoveth them to cleave to whatsoever will, in this Day, be conducive to the exaltation of their stations, and to the promotion of their best interests. Happy are those whom the all-glorious Pen was moved to remember, and blessed are those men whose names, by virtue of Our inscrutable decree, We have preferred to conceal.

Beseech ye the one true God to grant that all men may be graciously assisted to fulfil that which is acceptable in Our sight. Soon will the present-day order be rolled up, and a new one spread out in its stead. Verily, thy Lord speaketh the truth, and is the Knower of things unseen. (3)

THIS IS the day whereon the Ocean of God's mercy hath been manifested unto men, the Day in which the Day Star of His lovingkindness hath shed its radiance upon them, the Day in which the clouds of His bountiful favor have overshadowed the whole of mankind. Now is the time to cheer and refresh the downcast through the invigorating breeze of love and fellowship, and the living waters of friendliness and charity.

They who are the beloved of God, in whatever place they gather and whomsoever they may meet, must evince, in their attitude towards God, and in the manner of their celebration of His praise and glory, such humility and submissiveness that every atom of the dust beneath their feet may attest the depth of their devotion. The conversation carried by these holy souls should be informed with such power that these same atoms of dust will be thrilled by its influence. They should conduct themselves in such manner that the earth upon which they tread may ever be allowed to address them such words as these:
'I am to be preferred above you. For witness, how patient I am in bearing the burden which the husband­ man layeth upon me. I am the instrument that continually imparteth unto all beings the blessings with which He Who is the Source of all grace hath entrusted me. Notwithstanding the honor conferred upon me, and the unnumbered evidences of my wealth—a wealth that supplanteth the needs of all creation—behold the measure of my humility, witness with what absolute submissiveness I allow myself to be trodden beneath the feet of man....'

Show forbearance and benevolence and love to one another. Should any one among you be incapable of grasping a certain truth, or be striving to comprehend it, show forth, when conversing with him, a spirit of extreme kindliness and good will. Help him to see and recognize the truth, without esteeming yourself to be, in the least, superior to him, or to be possessed of greater endowments.

The whole duty of man in this Day is to attain that share of the flood of grace which God poureth forth upon men. Let none, therefore, consider the largeness or smallness of the receptacle. The portion of some might lie in the palm of a man's hand, the portion of others might fill a cup, and of others even a gallon­ measure.

Every eye, in this Day, should seek what will best promote the Cause of God. He, Who is the Eternal Truth, beareth Me witness! Nothing whatever can, in this Day, inflict a greater harm upon this Cause than dissension and strife, contention, estrangement and apathy, among the loved ones of God. Flee them, through the power of God and His sovereign aid, and strive ye to knit together the hearts of men, in His Name, the Unifier, the All-Knowing, the All-Wise.

Beseech ye the one true God to grant that ye may taste the savor of such deeds as are performed in His path, and partake of the sweetness of such humility and submissiveness as are shown for His sake. Forget your own selves, and turn your eyes towards your neighbor. Bend your energies to whatever may foster the education of men. Nothing is, or can ever be, hidden from God. If ye follow in His way, His incalculable and imperishable blessings will be showered upon you. This is the luminous Tablet, whose verses have streamed from the moving Pen of Him Who is the Lord of all worlds. Ponder it in your hearts, and be ye of them that observe its precepts. (4)

Pilgrim's Gifts to World Center

The U.S. National Spiritual Assembly calls the attention of the friends of the following request received from the Hands of the Faith in Haifa:

"At the beginning of the season of pilgrimages, the Hands residing in the Holy Land wish to request the friends who will visit the Sacred Shrines, and the believers generally, to refrain from bringing or sending food or other gifts for the World Center. No shortages exist in Israel, and we feel the friends can better express their loving thoughts through contributions to the all-important work of the Ten-Year Plan so dear to the heart of our beloved Guardian."

Bahá'í International Community Status
With United Nations Defined

In order to clarify the Bahá'í position internationally with the United Nations, the friends are asked to take note of the following information:

In connection with the United Nations the Bahá'í International Community represents the national spiritual assemblies all over the world. In order to have a clear differentiation from the International Bahá'í Council in Haifa, the branch of the work with the United Nations is called Bahá'í International Community. Some reports have appeared lately in the Bahá'í News listing us as the International Bahá'í Community, and this makes for confusion with the Council in Haifa. The friends are asked to be sure to use the name "Bahá'í International Community" when speaking of our international relationship with the United Nations.

The Bahá'í International Community is accredited to the United Nations' Office of Public Information. We have a permanent international observer who attends briefing sessions at the UN Headquarters in New York and other functions called for non-governmental organizations. When conferences of non-governmental organizations are called, each of these organizations, including the Bahá'í International Community, can send delegates.

Some Bahá'ís have asked why it is that sometimes we refer to our "observers" and at other times to our "delegates." We have both international and national observers at the United Nations. To conferences of non-governmental organizations in which our "Community" is invited to participate, we send the number of delegates allowed. These delegates may or may not include our permanent observers, depending on where the conference is being held.

As an accredited organization, we can also send observers to audit any conference given by the United Nations, but in this case they are there merely for the purpose of observing the proceedings and not participating in the discussions. This is the procedure we used at Addis Ababa when the United Nations called a conference of government officials to consider the economic development of Africa. In this case, we could not, of course, have delegates since they were all government officials, but we could send observers to the meeting. The friends have read the report of the results in Bahá'í News.

The United Nations is a very complicated structure, and we realize that it is not easy to understand our relationship to it. Therefore, this explanation is given so that the friends of the future can understand the reports submitted from different parts of the world.

Central America NSA Heralds Reign of "New and Powerful Spirit" in Area

So great was the unity and spirit that reigned at our Ninth Annual Convention, that a new and powerful life-giving spirit now reigns in our Territory. So powerful is the wonderful spirit generated at our Annual Convention that more than twenty native believers have become pioneers to serve in their native countries or in other countries of the territory.

The determination of the delegates and others attending the Convention was so firm and definite, that their solemn promise was "never to rest, never to fail" until all goals given by our Beloved Guardian in the Ten-Year Plan of the World Crusade be accomplished; until each of the twenty-four existing local assemblies in our territory be duly consolidated and function vigorously as Divine Institutions; until the five..."

local assemblies (four in Honduras, one in Nicaragua) be established; until the Local and National Funds be truly maintained, and until the seven national spiritual assemblies be simultaneously established in each of the seven countries in Central America.

This is the new and powerful spirit that reigns in our territory, and this is the spirit which moves our new National Spiritual Assembly of Central America, Mexico, and Panama. This is the greatest encouragement that we can send to all our dear brothers in other territories of the Bahá'í World Community, and most especially to the World Center of our Beloved Faith.

Alexandria, Egypt, Attains Crusade Goal with Purchase of Haziratu'l-Quds

At the dawn of an August morning in 1868, Nabil, author of The Dawn-Breakers, in a little prison cell situated on a rocky shore of Alexandria contiguous to the lighthouse that guided the ships to the harbor, uttered his morning prayer, supplicating for assistance in the unique mission of guiding the people to the haven of the world order of Bahá'u'lláh.

The beacon light on shore nestled miraculously on an Austrian Lloyd steamer anchoring in the harbor within the sight of the inmates of the prison cell, including Nabil. On board this very ship was the Blessed Beauty, accompanied by 'Abdu'l-Bahá, members of the family, and about four score of the faithful followers. They were bound, by order of the Sultan of Turkey and the Khalif of Islám, northward to the penal colony of 'Akka. Within this spiritual nebulae about ninety years ago, the nucleus of a Bahá'í community started emerging in Alexandria.

The pivot around which Bahá'í activities revolve being a Haziratu'l-Quds, the friends in Alexandria started contributions about a year ago to acquire a property as a Bahá'í endowment, thus achieving a goal under the Ten-Year Plan and at long last getting rid of the arduous task of renting premises for the usual Bahá'í meetings. Through the confirmation of Bahá'u'lláh and the guiding force of the beloved Guardian, this subsidiary goal has been realized. The preliminary contract for the acquisition of a building to serve as the Haziratu'l-Quds was drawn up and signed on July 31, 1959.

First International Youth Summer School Attracts 800 Students From Many Countries

The first International Bahá'í Youth Summer School, a significant development in youth activities, was held in Echternach, Luxembourg, on August 1 to 11, 1959.

Over eighty youth participated, representing many countries of Europe and many languages. A difficulty arose in the time-consuming translations of the talks and discussions into German, English, and French, and the necessity for a universal language became more than ever evident.

Special gratitude was expressed to Dr. Hermann Grossmann, Hand of the Cause, who conducted the discussions at all the sessions.

Speakers, besides Dr. Grossmann, included Dr. Boborg Hemmati (Germany), Earl Pickens (Sweden), Günther Haug (Austria), Sigrid Bauer (Germany), Ian Semple (England), Fernand Radar (Belgium), Rohsan Ghadimi (Belgium), Jerry Bagley (Italy), René Steiner (Germany), M. Pickens (Sweden), Lisa Becker (Germany), Ursula Kohler (Austria), and Paul Adams (Spitzbergen).

The subjects included an examination of the materialism of our age, the need for religion, the United Nations, and prayer. Talks on the Bahá'í Faith embraced the World Order of Bahá'u'lláh, the Universal House of Justice, the Guardianship, the Hands of the Cause, and the Auxiliary Boards.

NOT FAR from the heart of Port Vila, administration center of the New Hebrides group, a new Bahá'í property stands in a commanding, elevated position on the crest of one of the small hills which form a backdrop to the ranging, tropical township of Port Vila, and overlooking both the town and its picturesque harbor.

November 1958 saw the fulfillment of the dreams and vision of one of Bahá'u'lláh's Knights and pioneers, a dream inspired at the outset of the Ten-Year Crusade and followed untiringly during five years of selfless service, in the completion of the Bahá'í School building at Port Vila, New Hebrides.

One of the first of its kind in the southern Pacific area and, we may confidently hope, the forerunner of many similar institutions throughout the globe as the Light of Bahá'u'lláh's Revelation diffuses its regenerating influence, this school building, inspired by the loving encouragement of the beloved Guardian, nurtured by his constant guidance and prayers during its nascent years, was set in motion by his recognition in his last Ridván message to the Bahá'í world, of the Núr School of Port Vila, as an additional goal achievement of the Ten-Year Crusade. As with so many of the achievements of our Faith, this school owes its entire being to the penetrating foresight, to the wisdom and guidance, to the sacrifice of beloved Shoghi Effendi.

Plans advanced by the Asian Teaching Committee of the National Assembly of Australia and a generously supported appeal for funds in October 1957, resulted in the purchase of the Bahá'í property in March 1958, and the erection since of the building, to serve a dual purpose as Bahá'í School and Hazíratu'l Quds, as well as residence for the pioneer, Mrs. Bertha Dobbins.

The new building, a prefabricated steel-frame structure with asbestos cement walls, was shipped from Australia last June, and its erection commenced on June 29, three New Hebridean and two Australian believers sharing in the privilege of its initial construction. Soon offers of assistance were pouring in from many local residents, whose respect and admiration for the pioneer has engendered a comparable respect for the Faith and its ideals. Technical advice and needed tools were readily forthcoming, and at every turn the normal problems met in such a task, though amplified by the isolation of the islands, seemed to dissolve under the pervading atmosphere of guidance; truly God does "assist all those who arise to serve Him."

Many have shared in the fulfilment of this project, from the initial donation which stirred the idea, to the final cleaning up by the school children themselves. Now completed, the school building stands as silent testimony to the loving efforts and sacrifice of many. By no means the least of these have been the efforts of the New Hebridean believers themselves, aware as they are of the tremendous impetus the new building will be to their own teaching activities, and of its import and significance in the spiritual history of these islands. Truly the work of the building has been largely a New Hebridean contribution and a responsibility and privilege which the native believers, them-
Light to the New Hebrides

Starting work on the Nur School.

But the story of this school goes back beyond this—back to the early days of the Ten-Year Crusade. First of the Australian pioneers to enter her goal and among the first group to leave Australia for the Pacific islands under the Crusade, this Knight of Bahá'u'lláh spent many months in settling in, months with their joys and difficulties, until, lead by that Divine Hand Whose guidance has been felt by all pioneers, she was generously offered the lease of a small cottage by a local Chinese merchant, Chung Yuen (Wu Yut), whose daughter, Wu Yut Sim, later became the first Chinese youth believer in New Hebrides.

The home immediately became "Nur Cottage," and the venue for an increasing number of seekers and enquirers, particularly amongst the native peoples of Port Vila and from the far flung islands of the group. So widely did this new Message become known in these early days as to set a pattern of growth peculiar to this group, and which surely will have far-reaching effects in future years. Of the nineteen believers in New Hebrides, only ten, including youth believers, reside in or near Port Vila. Others, coming to Vila from the outer islands of this 400-mile-long group, have learned of Bahá'u'lláh's Message, been warmed by His Love, embraced His Faith, and then returned to their home islands, each to spread further the glad tidings. Some of these live on Aneityam, southernmost island of the group whose language translation is an ac-accomplished goal of the Ten-Year Crusade; others on Erromanga and Futuna, also islands south of Vila. Other seekers have carried the Teachings to northern islands, where a second language translation, Tongan, has recently been completed, an addition to Crusade goals.

Children came too, attracted by the spiritual warmth that radiated from this humble cottage. And from this, in small groups of native and Chinese youngsters, wishing to learn English and eager for education of any kind, has grown Nur School, or the Baha'i School as it is now widely known in Port Vila.

Of this school, the Guardian in his Convention message, Ridván 1957, said: "... the founding of the Baha'i schools in the New Hebrides Islands, in Mentawai Island and in the Gilbert and Ellice Islands... proclaim, in no uncertain terms, the splendid initiative and the dynamic power of the faith of the bearers of the Gospel of the New Day..."

At the close of last year when Mrs. Dobbins, relieved at her post by Bill Washington, returned home to Australia after four years for a long-needed and overdue rest and to attend the Intercontinental Conference in Sydney, the school had grown to an enrollment of thirty-two pupils and is now recognized as a school by the local government authorities.

Long before the new building was projected, and increasingly since, the school had been firmly established in the minds of the local people and in the hearts of those whom it directly serves. It is an achievement of which Baha'is can be justly proud, an achievement of human devotion and effort, and of human trust and love in return; an achievement which our beloved Guardian referred to in his last Convention Message and has spoken of in glowing and enthusiastic terms to pilgrims.

The school has played a major role in establishing the Faith here in the New Hebrides, and the respect and admiration which it has drawn from the local residents is, of course, reflected to a large extent on the Faith itself. Even those inclined, in their spiritual blindness, to oppose the claims of our Faith, cannot but recognize what it has achieved in this school and respect its sincerity of purpose and the devotion with which it inspires its adherents.

Comprising mainly New Hebridean children, drawn from three villages near Port Vila, a few Chinese, New Zealand, and Australian children, the school embraces ages from five to fifteen years. The advanced class of six students will this year commence on their final matriculation course—one of five years that will take them to university entrance standard. The ages of this class range from twelve to fifteen years, somewhat older than would be found normally in other schools.

But this is by no means a 'normal' school. The achievement of the children and their much-loved teacher can perhaps be more readily assessed, when one bears in mind that they are being educated in a foreign language, English, a tongue whose words four years ago might have been counted on the fingers, just those few expressions that may have been picked up in this bi-lingual (French-English) island. And yet, in these few years, the children have mastered sufficiently the English language to catch up on several years of lost education; even now their conversation while at play is largely in their own native language, while their English lessons are spoken only with that extra effort of thought demanded by a newly-learned tongue.

Apart from providing an excellent teaching medium for the Faith itself to both parents and children—the school's curriculum embraces a standard of education aimed to correspond with Australian department examinations. It has shown the native peoples the vast gulf existing between the education of the outside world and that education to date available in the islands. Its influence can be gauged by recent moves in nearby villages and other islands of the group to establish their own government schools. The crying need of the people here is for education, and with the recognition of this need, the native peoples are awakening to their own tremendous potential.

Many recognize that Port Vila has awakened from its habitual, tropical sleepiness, but very few as yet dimly suspect the real cause, that tremendous force of Baha'u'llah's Revelation, liberated in these islands by the devotion and untiring service of the pioneer, under that vast spiritual crusade of our dearly beloved Guardian.

Over 130 Guests Attend Public Meeting
Sponsored by Seoul, Korea, Bahá'ís

The Bahá'ís of Seoul, Korea, recently held their largest, and possibly most successful, public meeting. Scheduled on July 11 at the Korean Government's Central Information Center auditorium, the meeting attracted over 130 guests, many of whom had to stand.

Dr. David Earl, who was in Korea from Tokyo on an eight week teaching assignment for the University of Maryland, was the principal speaker. His talk, entitled “The Coming World Civilization,” attracted wide interest by newspaper stories and advertisements. Notice of the address was also posted on numerous government bulletin boards in the city. The press, business, government, and education was represented in the audience. (Only one woman, a Bahá'í, was present.)

After the hour-long lecture, with interpretation, more than sixty persons remained for a lengthy question and answer period. Underestimating the crowd, the Bahá'ís brought an insufficient amount of literature which was immediately snapped up.

Use of the auditorium located in the Information Center in downtown Seoul was promised to the Local Assembly chairman “anytime you need it in the future” by the chief of the Information Center.

Honolulu Assembly Distributes Bahá'í Books to Isolated Coast Guard Ships in Pacific

An excellent opportunity to distribute Bahá'í books to isolated Coast Guard installations in the Pacific Ocean has been reported by the Library Committee of the Honolulu, Hawaii, Local Spiritual Assembly.

Through Commander Anthony Flatt, Commandant of the area, and Captain Reynolds, Personnel Officer, the Honolulu Bahá'ís learned that there are twenty-six loran stations in the Pacific, each with a crew of from twelve to sixteen men, and that they are hungry for reading material. In addition there are ten major Coast Guard ships whose crews would also be happy to accept books.

As a result of this information, the Honolulu Bahá'ís are donating to each of the loran stations a copy of Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era and Great Themes of Life. To the ten major ships they are sending Bahá'u'lláh and the New Era and Prescription for Living.

The tour of duty for the men at the loran stations is from twelve to eighteen months. By making Bahá'í books available as a permanent part of their libraries, it will be possible to bring the Faith to the attention of many individuals.

Extensive Publicity, Well-Attended Meetings Attained for Board Member's Los Angeles Visit

Excellent press coverage and well-attended meetings resulted from the preparations made by the Teaching Committee of the Los Angeles Local Spiritual Assembly for a visit to Los Angeles, Calif., by Auxiliary Board member Mrs. Mildred Mottahedeh on August 3 and 4. Five members of the Los Angeles Bahá'í community and two from Beverly Hills participated with Mrs. Mottahedeh in a lively press conference the first morning, in which she discussed both the Bahá'í Faith and her activities as a Bahá'í observer and member of the executive committee of the Non-Governmental Organizations accredited to the United Nations.

On the first evening Mrs. Mottahedeh spoke to more than 150 Bahá'ís in the Los Angeles Bahá'í Center about the teaching activities in various parts of the world, including the homefront. On the following evening, August 4, she addressed a gathering of 174 individuals (74 of them non-Bahá'ís) on “World Search for a Common Denominator.” Great interest was shown by the entire audience. The library committee had literature on display, as well as for free distribution and for sale, and lists of firesides in the Los Angeles area were distributed to those wishing further information about the Faith.

Resolute Pioneer Establishes New Solomon Islands Group

It was not long after Collis Featherstone, Hand of the Cause, visited the Solomons, that Hamuel from Hau Hui came to the Center to hear more about the teachings of Bahá’u’lláh. He was interested right from the start, and we gave him literature to take back with him. Later we wrote how much he enjoyed it and was interested in becoming a Bahá’í. He came once more to Honiara and we gave him the fundamental verities of the Faith and The Bahá’í Community to read. He later signed his card and wrote of others wanting to become Bahá’ís. John Mills visited Hau Hui for a day and spent more time with him. Hamuel expressed the great need for sustained teaching work.

The neighboring area of Su’u had also been contacted by Hamuel, as he is a government dresser and has a wide area to cover. Many of the people of Su’u are called heathens, not belonging to any church and holding native customs. These people have written in and sent two representatives, Hohanemae and Michael, asking that a school be opened and a teacher sent, and that they were willing to give some land for this (it is difficult to give land in the Solomons as many of a line have to give consent to the government).

On June 25 I left Honiara and arrived in Auki, Malaita, the following day and was met by John Mills and Laurie Lake, who were about to complete building the bakery and theater. Auki is the government center where Ruhangis and John are going to live as soon as they find accommodations. The next day, John arranged for a native cutter boat to take us up the coast to Hau Hui, about eight hours by sea. It appeared that we arrived at the same time as the District Commissioner and the agricultural officer Hamuel, who owns the land on which the village of Hau Hui is built, was quite busy. As practically the whole village is of the South Seas Evangelical Mission Church, we thought of a good idea to teach the women and those interested, some cooking and baking as well as talking about the Faith. An outstanding member of that community, Mr. Jabin, expressed to John the wish to know more about cake baking, as he has a little bakery in his home and the only stove in the village. I came prepared with flour, sugar, etc.

They offered me the little guest Leaf House to stop in during my stay. Hamuel said that his daughter would be my companion while there. She is a lovely, young, accomplished girl, who completed a study course in midwifery and first aid, and was a great comfort to me while there. They have a charming village, a little dispensary and a house for maternity care. The river runs through the center of the village and the water is piped from the mountain stream. The grass growing so neatly, the people busy with their gardens, give this village an air of progress, much above the average village in the Solomons. This is in no small part due to our Bahá’í brother Hamuel.

In the morning we baked scones and cakes, and that evening Hamuel and family and Lazurus came to the guest house and we had a talk on the Faith. The following evening was the Feast, and I arranged for a chicken dinner to be held at the Hamuel home. This was nicely prepared by Mrs. Hamuel and daughters. Hamuel’s large family, neighbors, and friends came and later we spoke about the Faith. Hamuel translating into the Are Are language. The next day three came to Hamuel and said they wished to become Bahá’ís. For nearly two days we continued teaching the Faith. The last morning, Friday, nine lovely souls came into the Bahá’í family, including Hohanemae from Su’u.

It is wonderful to know that Ruhangis and John will be established in Malaita, making it much more accessible to visit this community and to strengthen them in the Faith. Hamuel has expressed a wish to give a portion of his land to have a Bahá’í school built. In the Su’u district they also want a school, but think that now with a community in Hau Hui, this would be the better place and the Su’u people could send their children to that school.

Before leaving I instructed them in the formation of a Bahá’í group by electing a chairman, secretary, and treasurer. Hamuel also spoke to me about the need for erecting a Ḥázíratu’l-Quds, as his home, which has a store in it, is a busy house and at the Nineteen-Day Feasts it would be hard to keep out the non-Bahá’ís. I encouraged him in this and gave a donation of £5.0.0.

We will have to send them Feast readings, and they want a simplified study course, a dictionary, and material for children classes. Since my return home and consultation with the Island Teaching Committee, we have sent them children’s books (The Deum-Breakers, A B C Book, Song Book, Child’s Prayer Book) Hidden Words, a picture of the Master, the Greatest Name, a Bahá’í calendar, a dictionary, Bahá’í World Faith. Bill Lang is sending them Feast readings for the next four Feasts.

range to have the mail sent to Bonani, a large plantation about two hours away from Hau Hui, where the chief of the village sends a messenger by foot to Hau Hui. Harmel is expecting to have an engine built for his ship by the people of Hau Hui, facilitating his getting around.

Gilbert and Ellice Island Pioneers Establish Schools, Centers

IN NOVEMBER 1953 Roy and Elena Fernie of Panama Canal Zone answered the call for pioneers in the Gilbert and Ellice Islands and embarked on their long journey across the Pacific Ocean, arriving at their post on March 5, 1954. (See Bahá'í News, June 1954.) The island of Abaiang was selected to be their home, and within four weeks plans were begun for establishing a non-denominational school on the same property leased for the building of their home.

Although they did not teach the Faith openly at first, the kindness, justice, courtesy, and love which these pioneers showed for their fellow men attracted the people of the island, and they were able to teach a few. It was a momentous occasion indeed when, in June 1954, Peter Kanare became the first native Bahá'í.

By September there was a staff of nine young men who, desiring to become teachers, worked and studied in order to attain their goal, building a permanent house for the Fernies as well as a school building. But by this time opposition and difficulties beset them, and they were finally forced to vacate this property, find another, and move the unfinished buildings. In June 1955 Peter was banished to another island as a result of these difficulties. On the day he was to leave a representative group of natives of the village of Tuarabu, deeply moved by the example of this believer, came to the Fernie home at three o'clock in the morning, stating that the entire village wanted to be Bahá'ís.

Now the teaching of the Faith was no longer suppressed, and Roy and Elena had eager audiences wherever they went. In September 1955 three hundred people on Abaiang gave their names to the government, stating they were Bahá'ís.

However, the difficulties were not ended. In November 1955 Roy Fernie was deported to Honolulu, and Elena remained alone several months, endeavoring to satisfy the spiritual hunger of the Gilbertese people. Every effort was made by the Asia Teaching Committee of Central America to find assistance, but now the Guardian sent word that no one else was to go to the Gilbert Islands for the time being.

In April 1956 the Faith was established in ten villages, three of them (Tuarabu, Tebero, and Kuria) having local spiritual assemblies. Although the government did not recognize Bahá'í marriage, a young couple, after having a civil ceremony, celebrated a Bahá'í ceremony which made a great impression on both Bahá'ís and non-Bahá'ís. Already the Local Spiritual Assembly of Tuarabu, Abaiang, had been registered with the government under "The Religious Bodies Registration Ordinance," and the Education Department of the Colonial Government had approved Elena and two native Bahá'ís as teachers for a village school, the first non-denominational school on Abaiang.

By this time the Guardian said someone could now go to the Gilberts to assist Mrs. Fernie. Mrs. Frances Hel- ler from the United States answered the call, receiving a glorious reception from the natives on her arrival on February 8, 1957. She picked up the work begun by the Fernies and carried on teaching, confirming, and consolidation until she became ill and was hospitalized for... some weeks. Although her health did not permit her to return to Abaiang, Mrs. Heller remained on the island of Tarawa until another could come to take her place, and by doing so was able to establish the first local spiritual assembly in the village of Betio on Rídván 1958.

Upon her retirement from her position in the Panama Canal Zone in June 1958, Miss Mabel Sneider, who had served on the Asia Teaching Committee of Central America and had been greatly interested in the progress of the Faith in the Pacific goals, set out for the Gilberts, arriving in October. She and Mrs. Heller soon decided that if the Faith were to be taken to all of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, it was important to establish pioneer headquarters on the island of Tarawa. In cooperation with the wishes of the government, the village of Bikenibeu was chosen, since it is the site of a secondary school for boys and a teacher training college, as well as the future location for a secondary school for girls. In this village also is the colony hospital where nurses are trained and later go to the various islands.

The Ḥazíratū'l-Quds was completed in April 1959, a small native-type of Gilbertese house. The pioneer's house of prefabricated metal, shipped from England, will soon be erected. In the village of Betio, Tarawa, a small guest house for pioneers and visiting Bahá'ís is being built, to be followed soon by the local Ḥazíratū'l-Quds. The Faith is being registered in the entire Gilbert and Ellice Colony under the "Religious Bodies Registration Ordinance," and as soon as an island has fifty adult believers and a local assembly it may also be registered.

There being no transportation available, none of the delegates from the Gilberts could be present at the formation of the first Regional Spiritual Assembly of the South Pacific, therefore they voted by absentee ballots. Joe Russell, however, who was enroute to the Gilberts from the United States, was able to attend and bring a report of the convention when he arrived on May 8, 1959.

Two summer schools are to be held the latter part of 1959—one on the island of Betio and the other on Abaiang. Every encouragement is being given the native believers to arise to carry the Faith to all the twenty-five islands in the group, and thus to reap the benefit and glory of being the future pioneers.

University of Chattanooga to Include Faith in Comparative Religions Course

The Bahá'í Faith will be taught at the University of Chattanooga in Tennessee this year as a part of the course on Comparative Religions.

This came about through the efforts of two members of the local group, Thomas L. Thompson and Stuart Bruce Duboff, who prepared for the instructor of this course a typed report, several pages in length, setting forth the vital statistics of the Faith. The focus of this report was entirely upon the reasons why the Bahá'í Faith needs to be viewed as a religion rather than a sect. No attempt was made to persuade the reader of the Faith's truth; in fact, anything of a subjective nature was scrupulously avoided.

This report was presented personally to Joe Elkins, instructor of the Comparative Religion course, with the explanation that since the Bahá'í Faith is a growing concern, both numerically and geographically, the local Bahá'í group felt a responsibility to acquaint him with its facts and its status, so that he would be able to answer accurately and completely any questions which might be put to him by his students.

The instructor's first reaction was to be impressed that such a full report had been prepared especially for him. Then, after reading the paper, he himself volunteered the information that Bahá'ís deserves inclusion in a comparative religion course, that he plans to incorporate it in his own curriculum this year, and to devote two or three days to it at the end of the current semester. He stated, too, that he would appreciate a member of the Chattanooga Bahá'í Group's appearance as a speaker to his class.

First Benelux Summer School Addressed by Hand of the Cause Paul Haney

On July 25, 1959, about thirty friends from Holland, Belgium, and France poured into little, friendly, medieval Vianden in the northeast section of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, where they were welcomed by the Luxembourg believers, among them a recently arrived Persian family, to attend the First Benelux Summer School.

After going to their assigned rooms or putting up their tents, all gathered for dinner in the large dining room of the Hotel Victor Hugo. After dinner all went to the school near the hotel, which the city council had graciously permitted us to use. The auditorium was on the third floor, but nobody seemed to mind climbing the stairs, as this quiet location with a beautiful view of the countryside and the skies contributed much to the atmosphere of the summer school.

The chairman of the Benelux Summer School Committee, Miss Suzette Hipp, welcomed the friends, expressing the hope that this school would bring inspiration, unity, and rededication to fulfill the goals ahead. Thereupon Louis Henuzet, member of the Auxiliary Board, brought us the greetings of the Hands of the Cause, who in spirit are always with us, whereas Paul Haney would come in person at the end of the school. Dr. Grossmann, Hand of the Cause from Germany, sent his special good wishes. Greetings from the European Teaching Committee, assuring us that their loving thoughts and prayers would be constantly with us, were read and a committee was immediately appointed to send a cable to the Hands of the Cause in Haifa, and a letter to the European Teaching Committee.

The program of the summer school had as its overall theme “Rededication,” starting with the spiritual prerequisites and ending with the goals ahead. The punctuality and also the large attendance of all, and the untiring interest shown was probably due to the long free afternoons, which provided ample opportunity to get together for a quiet talk, for a swim, to hike or to ride.

The program of the summer school had as its overall theme “Rededication,” starting with the spiritual prerequisites and ending with the goals ahead. The punctuality and also the large attendance of all, and the untiring interest shown was probably due to the long free afternoons, which provided ample opportunity to get together for a quiet talk, for a swim, to hike or to ride.

It was a happy crowd of believers who spent such beautiful inspiring days together, and their thoughts often went to the friends at home who could not share this joy and happiness. Nevertheless, by the end of the week the number of believers reached sixty plus ten children, among them two large Persian families from Nice and a Persian family of three who decided to settle in Luxembourg. One of the outstanding characteristics of this first Benelux summer school was indeed the attendance and participation of so many of the Persian friends which contributed so much to the success of the school and brought a better understanding and greater unity between the East and the West.

Actually all the friends contributed to its success, whether taking care of the physical arrangement, as speaker or translators.

Courses Offer Rich Spiritual Fare

Here is a brief outline of the program. Sunday: “Why and How to Pray.” Mr. Ghadimi gave an excellent introduction explaining this “conversation with God,” stressing especially the “listening part.” Honor Kemp­ton followed with a beautiful selection of quotations from the Holy Writings. In the evening session the consultation was continued, and questions on “Christian Subjects” answered.

Monday: “Why and how to deepen our knowledge of the Teachings” was introduced by Arnold van Ogtrop in French and English. “The Seven Valleys” was discussed in the evening by Dr. Kamran, who explained the history and various teachings of the Sufi, how and why Bahá’u’lláh wrote this work to their highest chief. Then Dr. Kamran pointed out the vehicles, conditions, and characteristics of this first Benelux summer school was indeed the attendance and participation of so many of the Persian friends which contributed so much to the success of the school and brought a better understanding and greater unity between the East and the West.

Actually all the friends contributed to its success, whether taking care of the physical arrangement, as speaker or translators.

Tuesday: “Being a Bahá’í” was introduced by Dr. Hans Teufel’s German translation of the chapter “Spiritual Prequisites” of The Advent of Divine Justice. As German was not one of the official languages he translated it into French, had it properly reviewed, and printed. Part of the Dutch translation was also available and the rest will follow soon, so that our countries will have the benefit of having these precious and important pages in their own language. After Dr. Teufel’s introduction based on these pages, Mrs. Genie Sijsling pointed out the many difficulties one experiences in trying to be a real Bahá’í. Genie gave in simple language, which went straight to the heart, a deeply spiritual talk on the practical side of being a Bahá’í, really a heart-rendering example of “walking the spiritual path with practical feet.” In the evening we had the joy of listening to Mr. Samli, who told stories from the lives of the Founders and heroes of our Faith. Many felt that these first two days could not be surpassed, but the following were indeed just as rich.

Wednesday: “A Bahá’í amongst Bahá’ís” was introduced by Amelia Bowman giving us the signs of immaturity and the way they could be changed into mature habits and attitudes so that we can become real unifiers. Jan Sijsling thereupon explained more in detail the activities of every believer in the Administration.

In the evening Dr. Teufel gave a short talk on the Bahá'í Faith in German, and Mr. Nys showed slides from Persia, the Shrines, and the Bahá'í Temple in Wilmette. The public was invited, and thirty posters were distributed by the Bureau d'Initiative but none could be discovered hanging, and those we put up at the school had disappeared the next morning.

Thursday: "Rededication" was the theme. Mrs. Marion Little opened this session by speaking on service, the source of spiritual growth and of joy and happiness. The progress of the Faith depends on sacrifice. Its history shows always this pattern: crisis, suffering, victories. Mrs. Amelia Bowman then showed us a visual picture of the development of our Faith: slowly in the beginning but with ever-increasing speed and extension so that now we have thirty-one national spiritual assemblies. In the three remaining years however, thirty new national assemblies, of which eleven are in Europe, must be established. These can only be built with devotion and sacrifice, sacrifice of self in order that we may become divine instruments. Honor Kempton gave a few thrilling examples of sacrifice of the Holy Family and of our beloved Guardian.

In the evening Paul Haney, Hand of the Cause of God, and his wife Margery Haney were heartily and gratefully welcomed. After a beautiful greeting to the assembled friends by Mr. Haney, the program of "Questions and Answers" started, in which Mr. Haney was kind enough to take a valuable part.

Friday: "The Global Crusade" was discussed by Louis Henuzet, who gave a short review of the previous program centered on the individual. Now we had come to the second phase: "The Divine Plan." Mr. Henuzet explained its origin and development up until today, explaining the institutions established by Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá, and Shoghi Effendi, and calling for the spirit of sacrifice of Badašt to fulfill the last and vital goals.

This intensely interesting morning was followed by the Feast of Perfection, and indeed it was a perfect evening, arranged by the Dutch community. Over sixty friends shared this deeply spiritual experience. Prayers and readings were said in French, Dutch, English, and German, and chanted in Persian. Mr. Haney addressed us during the administrative part and the Dutch friends were hosts at the social part of the Feast.

Paul Haney Speaks of Guardian

Saturday "Shoghi Effendi, the first Guardian of the Bahá'í Faith," was the theme. Mr. Haney brought our beloved Guardian still closer to us. Contemporaries cannot understand his station, therefore we should turn to what 'Abdu'l-Bahá wrote about the Guardian, not what the Guardian wrote about himself. Many people think that the Guardian just prayed and the spirit flowed easily through him. No, all his work demanded sacrifice. He indeed gave his life! Why the Guardian was taken from us will remain a mystery, but for him we know that it was a blessed release from the overpowering burden he carried. The essence of Faith is to believe that the Guardian did not leave the world one moment sooner than God willed.

"The Institutions of the Hands of the Cause and the Auxiliary Board" was explained by Louis Henuzet, who showed clearly how the Guardian had given us all the instruments to protect the Cause and to guide us to fulfill the Global Crusade.

On Saturday evening Mr. Haney and Mr. Henuzet continued to answer questions, one of which was asked three times during the summer school, namely, the Codification of the Aqdas. This means, said Mr. Haney, the collection of all writings pertaining to the Aqdas, not just one volume, and then the assembling of them. Furthermore, he stressed that we should be satisfied in the West with the laws we are asked to obey and not to seek more information from the Persian friends. The Persians, on the other hand, should not try to impose upon the Western believers the laws of the Aqdas which only they are obliged to obey. We should check our curiosity and put all our energy into obeying those laws and ordinances the Guardian said we could and should obey.

With hearts full of thankfulness for this wonderful week of prayer, study, consultation, and being together, and strengthened by the abundant love and unity we experienced, we bade farewell to Paul and Margery Haney. The school was closed that same Saturday evening, wholeheartedly confirming the words addressed to the Hands of the Cause in Haifa: "Grateful for presence of Hand of the Cause Paul Haney. Sixty friends at Benelux Summer School recognizing urgency of tasks, pledge rededication for fulfillment of the Crusade. Supplicate your prayers at the Holy Shrines."

Bahá'í Burial Ground Purchased in Western Samoa

Purchase of six plots in the non-denominational government cemetery as a Bahá'í burial ground has been reported by the Local Spiritual Assembly of Apia, Western Samoa. This is the maximum area allowed to each family, and all that could be afforded at the moment.
Formation of Whitehorse Local Assembly
Climaxes 43 Years' Teaching in Yukon

On April 21, 1959, the first local spiritual assembly of Canada's Yukon Territory, a World Crusade virgin goal, was formed by joint declaration in Whitehorse, the Territory's capital city.

In the summer of 1918, the very year 'Abdu'l-Baha revealed the first of His two historic Tablets of the Divine Plan to “the believers of God and the maid-servants of the Merciful in . . . the Dominion of Canada,” which specifically mentioned the Yukon as a place where “the believers of God must become self-sacrificing and like unto the candles of guidance become ignited in the provinces of Canada,” Mrs. Susan Rice travelled all alone to the Yukon and Alaska, leaving believers and interested inquirers at Fairbanks in Alaska and at Whitehorse and Dawson in the Yukon (Star of the West, Vol. VII, p. 162).

Three years later Mrs. Emogene Hoagg, responding to the same Tablets as well as to a cablegram of confirmation from 'Abdu'l-Baha, sailed from San Francisco with Miss Marian Jack for Alaska and the Yukon. They reached St. Michael at the mouth of the Yukon River on July 26, 1919, and continued by riverboat to Fairbanks, Dawson, and Whitehorse, actively teaching at many places (The Bahá’í World, Vol. X, p. 522).

A fourth early pioneer Bahá’í teacher in the Yukon was Orcella Rexford, who in the summer of 1922 entered the Territory from the south along the gold rush trail of 1898, gave talks on the Faith to her fellow-passengers aboard one of the old stern-wheeler riverboats, lectured to 550 people at the gold-rush capital of Dawson, and received many fine articles about the Faith in the Dawson Daily News. Writing in The Bahá’í World, Vol. IX, p. 919, she told of meeting many people who recalled having heard of the Message through Mrs. Hoagg and Miss Jack, but was disappointed not to find any who had embraced the Faith, “owing to the fact that these teachers could not remain long enough to deepen the consciousness of their listeners,” and added hopefully, “but some day others will follow in the footsteps of the pioneers, and nurture these seeds sown through love and sacrifice.”

First Pioneer Settlers Arrive

Many Bahá’í travellers to and from Alaska no doubt sowed further seeds in the Yukon over the years since 1922, but it was not until September 23, 1953, that the first World Crusade pioneer settlers arrived in the Yukon. At that time Ted and Joanie Anderson came from Chicago, his health being poor and employment opportunities being very limited. They prayed for many hours during those first few days, and within a week found a home and a job. After the first long, cold, and
